Senate Approval of the Hague Convention on the International Recovery of Child Support and Other Forms of Family Maintenance

Remarks Hillary Rodham Clinton Secretary of State Washington, DC October 1, 2010

On Wednesday September 29, the U.S. Senate approved the Hague Convention on the International Receivery of Child Support and Other Forms of Family Maintenance. The United States has been active in the Convention's development since negotiations began in 2003, and we were the first country to sign the Convention in 2007. This week we have taken another step toward rottlication, again reaffirming our commitment to protecting the welfare of children around the world.

Protecting our most vulnerable citizens, especially children, is one of the primary duties of any government. When a child and one parent are in one country while the other parent is in different country, recovering child support can be difficult and often impossible. The United States has a comprehensive system in place to establish, recognize, and enforce domestic and international child support obligations. The Convention requires that all treaty partners develop senter systems to facilitate the recovery of funds between nations. This will help more children around the world receive the support they need more expeditiously than ever before

The Department of State will continue to work closely with the Department of Health and Human Services as we continue toward ratification by the furl Senate and the United States becoming a party to the Convention

We look forward to working with the Hague Conference and other countries to implement this important Convention worldwide

President Obama Signs Implementing Legislation for the Hague Convention on the International Recovery of Child Support and Other Forms of Family Maintenance

Press Statement John Kerry Secretary of State Washington, DC September 30, 2014

I was the Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee when the Senate unanimously gave its advice and consent to railly the Child Support Convention

Back when I was a prosecutor, I saw how hard too many lamilies had to scrape and claw just to receive their just support and I saw how far the United States came in the last decades of righting that wrong. It was the right thing to do to help tamées in the United States and other countries get what is rightfully theirs. I am grateful to Congress for passing this important implementing legislation, it's a reminder of how the Administration and Congress can work together across party times to help lead the international community on Issues that really matter in peoples' lives.

The United States was the first country to sign the Convention in 2007. Protection of our most vurnerable citizens our children is fundamental to who we are. We stick up for kids. We protect the innecent. Every child deserves to be supported by both parents. We know that recovering child support when the child and one parent are in one country and the other parent is in onother is difficult and too often impossible. The United States has a comprehensive system to establish, recognize and enforce domestic and international child support obligations. The Convention just requires that all treaty partners have similar systems in place and as a result, more children in the United States and abroad wit be receiving more support, more expeditiously than ever before
