Consumer Report Security Freeze State Laws

12/17/2015

Heather M

Fifty states and the District of Columbia have enacted legislation allowing consumers to place "security freeze" on their credit reports. A consumer report security freeze limits a consumer reporting agency from releasing a credit report or any information from the report without authorization from the consumer. If a person suspects that he or she has been victimized by identity theft, a consumer report security freeze can help the person track whether an identity thief is using the person's information to set up bogus accounts.

Twenty-three states allow parents, legal guardians or other representatives of minors to place a security freeze on their minor's credit report.
