

The National Park Service (NPS) and the State of Montana (Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks and the Montana Department of Livestock) announced today that they will begin preparing an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for a new plan to manage a wild and migratory population of Yellowstone-area bison, while minimizing the risk of brucellosis transmission b [...]

- Hunter, Bowhunter Education Instructors Needed in Region 3

Volunteer instructors are being sought for the Hunter and Bowhunter Education programs in Gallatin County. [...]

FWP's new 'Come Home to Hunt' program brings sportsmen back to Montana

◀ Back

Next ▶

Picture 1 of 1

Nick Schnabel looks out over a snowy landscape while elk hunting south of Bozeman last fall. Photo by Erik Petersen.

By BEN
PIERCE
Chronicle
Outdoors

Think it's hard to be away from home?

It's even harder during hunting season.

Fortunately, in 2009, the Montana legislature passed a measure aimed at making it easier for former Montana hunters that have moved out of state to return and hunt. The new law encourages nonresident hunters to come back home to Montana to hunt with siblings, parents and extended family members.

"We had people forever looking for ways to get family members back to Montana to hunt," said FWP spokesman Ron Aasheim. "There are people that get disappointed and frustrated when their family members don't draw or don't have the resources for the guaranteed licenses.

"(The 'Come Home to Hunt' program) gives those folks that have raised kids here or went through hunter ed here a chance to hunt with family."

The new law allows former Montanans who bought a resident hunting license in previous years, or received a Montana hunting education certificate prior to 2010, to be sponsored by a family member to obtain a nonresident combination deer or elk license.

Five hundred deer combination and 500 elk combination licenses have been allotted to this year's program. To date, 204 deer and 277 elk licenses have been sold.

The "Come Home to Hunt" initiative is designed to expand Montana's hunting heritage by encouraging sons and daughters to return to the Treasure State to hunt with family.

"When you go to and from the hunt, you might talk about things you might not talk about otherwise," Aasheim said. "Hunting is a way to do something away from the phone and the computer. It is a way to bond. It is a real emotional thing for a lot of people."

To be eligible for a license, the sponsoring family member must be a Montana resident and have a valid Montana hunting license. The sponsor must be a parent, step-parent, grandparent, sibling, step-sibling, child, step-child, spouse or in-law.

The license price for qualifying nonresident hunters is $338 for deer or $643 for big game combination. Licenses will be sold on a first come, first served basis.

Those nonresident hunters that receive a license through the "Come Home to Hunt" program must hunt with a licensed family member. Proceeds from the sale of the licenses will go toward FWP efforts to expand public hunting access to inaccessible public land.

"It is remarkable how long families will plan for the hunting season," Aasheim said. "The enthusiasm and the commitment to hunting, you have to be a part of it to really appreciate it."

Tweet  4

Related posts:

1. Controversy in the cross hairs: Initiative 161 stirs hunting debate in Montana
2. Powder Horn Montana: Hunter follows passion to produce national TV show

- 3. Montana PBS airs 'NOW' program on wolf controversy in the Northern Rockies
- 4. Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks to appeal recent district court wolf ruling

Tags: Come Home to Hunt, Montana legislature, Ron Aasheim

This entry was posted by Ben Pierce on Monday, September 27th, 2010 at 5:59 pm and is filed under Elk, Hunting, Montana FWP. You can follow any responses to this entry through the RSS 2.0 feed. You can leave a response, or trackback from your own site.

About The Author

Ben Pierce

Ben Pierce lives, works and plays in Bozeman, Montana. He blogs about the outdoors for Chronicle Outdoors. Catch him on the river, in the mountains or at bpierce@dailychronicle.com.

Comments

0 Comments Chronicle Outdoors

Login ▾

Recommend Share

Sort by Best ▾

Start the discussion...

Be the first to comment.

« Gallatin Valley Land Trust announces new executive director Penelope Pierce What next for wolves: As drama unfolds in courts, wildlife managers seek solutions »

• :: Search this site ::