Your student loan is considered delinquent when your monthly payment is not received by the due date. If your loan continues in a delinquent status, you may default on your loan. Delinquency and default are very serious, and the consequences can harm your credit and hinder your ability to borrow money for future purchases.

State Loan Programs

If your state education loan becomes 180 days past due, you are legally in default. Upon default, collection activities will commence.

Federal Loan Programs

If your federal education loan becomes more than 270 days past due, you are legally in default. However, you have several options for resolving the default, including paying your loan in full and loan consolidation.

Consequences of Delinquency and Default

Delinquency and default are serious – that is why we will do our best to help you keep your account current. Failure to repay your loan may result in, but is not limited to:

- Adverse reports to consumer reporting agencies
- Loss of loan deferment rights
- Garnishment of your Alaska Permanent Fund Dividend (PFD)
- Denial of renewal of an Alaska occupational or professional license
- Transfer to an external collection agency
- Additional costs to you for collection and accrued interest
- Administrative wage garnishment
- Lien on property

How to Avoid Delinquency and Default

We're here to help educate you on how to make sound financial decisions. Even if you are delinquent on your loan, you can still avoid default. Don't wait until it's too late; contact us early so we can help you choose an option that best fits your situation.
