FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

STATE OF ALASKA
2019 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

This bill amends Alaska Court Rule 38.2(b), Alaska Rules of Criminal Procedure, by requiring, when the technology is available, in-custody defendants to appear by television for all hearings except for trial and sentencing.

Under AS 33.30.081, the Department of Public Safety (DPS) is responsible for transporting prisoners to and from the court having jurisdiction over the prisoner, and for delivering a prisoner to a correctional facility upon temporary or final commitment by a court, or upon transfer of a prisoner from one correctional facility to another either inside or outside the state. Additionally, DPS is responsible for return transportation to the place of arrest for a prisoner who is released from custody before admission to a state correctional facility.

Videoconferencing is currently in use between the courts and several correctional facilities across the state. Current court rules require misdemeanor defendants to appear by videoconference for arraignments, pleas, and non-evidentiary bail reviews. Felony defendants are required to appear by videoconference for initial appearance hearings, non-evidentiary bail reviews, and not guilty plea arraignments. This is only in areas where a videolink exists between the court and the correctional facility.

Should this bill pass, the number of pretrial hearings conducted via videoconferencing would increase, and there would be some decrease in the need for the physical transportation of prisoners. However, DPS transports prisoners for a myriad of reasons beyond pretrial hearings, often at the direction of the court.

While passage of this bill would result in improved efficiency of the criminal justice system including better allocation of manpower and resources for DPS, most of the costs associated with prisoner transportation are outside the control of DPS. Therefore, a zero fiscal note is being submitted.
