Subject: Current status

2016 to present: Caregiver to my husband of 25 years, Vernon H Boyles, who had Diffuse Lewy Body Disease and the lack of expert medical care and professional knowledge here in Alaska, forced us to relocate near medical staff who understood this fast moving and difficult to diagnose disease that is often confused with Parkinson's and Alzheimer's. The support of the expert doctors at Banner Alzheimer's research in Phoenix allowed me to keep him home and care for him longer than the predicted time. He died of the disease that robbed him of so much every day and finally robbed me of him, April 1, 2019, 24 months after diagnosis.

Vernon and I lived in Interior Alaska all our adult lives and loved our home. My Lewy Body educational story is overwhelming, as is the caregiving, because that disease is devastating, dangerous, unpredictable, and medications available to control the symptoms are new and not yet developed. Alzheimer's disease like so many mental health diseases are epidemic and our home, the State of Alaska, must be prepared to address them.

My mentor, Dr. William Wood, told me more than once that our State is rich in land, resources, and brilliant strong people. If we do not develop and protect them, they will cost us more than money.

At this point I can afford the time and will do whatever I can to help our home, Alaska, in any way I can.

Respectfully,

Rhonda Boyles
