

Images from the Mountain View Thanksgiving Meal Drives

Source: Anchorage Daily News

Insook Baik serving meals in 2017

Volunteers serving meals at the Mt. View Shell in 2021

Image capture: Jul 2021 © 2022 Google

Photo of the Bragaw St. Overcrossing
Source: Google Maps

- LandmarkHunter.com

- Go to:
- Map
- Facts
- Latest Inspection
- Previous Inspections
- Element Data

Share:

BRAGAW STREET over BRAGAW ST OVERCROSSING

Anchorage, Alaska

Map

- Google Maps
- Bing Maps
- OpenStreetMap
- MapQuest.com
- USGS National Map
- Geo URI \(Android\)

Coordinates:

+61.22111, -149.80833

61°13'16" N, 149°48'30" W

Facts

Source: National Bridge Inventory. Information not verified; use at your own risk.

Name:	BRAGAW STREET over BRAGAW ST OVERCROSSING
Structure number:	2209
Location:	MILE POINT 1.6
Purpose:	Carries highway and pedestrian walkway over highway
Route classification:	Minor Arterial (Urban) [16]
Length of largest span:	127.0 ft. [38.7 m]
Total length:	235.9 ft. [71.9 m]
Roadway width between curbs:	50.9 ft. [15.5 m]
Deck width edge-to-edge:	84.0 ft. [25.6 m]
Vertical clearance below bridge:	16.4 ft. [5.0 m]
Skew angle:	27°
Owner:	State Highway Agency [01]
Year built:	2008
Historic significance:	Bridge is not eligible for the National Register of Historic Places [5]
Number of main spans:	2
Main spans material:	Prestressed concrete [5]
Main spans design:	Tee beam [04]
Deck type:	Other [9]
Wearing surface:	Bituminous [6]

Latest Available Inspection: July 2017

Good/Fair/Poor Condition:	Good
Status:	Open, no restriction [A]
Average daily traffic:	12,019 [as of 2016]
Truck traffic:	13% of total traffic

Deck condition:	Good [7 out of 9]
Superstructure condition:	Good [7 out of 9]
Substructure condition:	Good [7 out of 9]
Structural appraisal:	Better than present minimum criteria [7]
Deck geometry appraisal:	Meets minimum tolerable limits to be left in place as is [4]
Underclearances appraisal:	Equal to present minimum criteria [6]
Roadway alignment appraisal:	Equal to present desirable criteria [8]
Scour condition:	Bridge not over waterway. [N]
Sufficiency rating:	79.5

Previous Inspections

Date	Condition	Deck	Superstructure	Substructure	ADT	Suff. Rating
July 2017	Good	Good	Good	Good	12019	79.5
July 2015	Good	Good	Good	Good	10694	77.8
July 2013	Good	Good	Good	Good	11957	77.4
July 2012	Good	Excellent	Very Good	Very Good	17811	75.6
July 2011	Good	Excellent	Excellent	Excellent	17811	75.6
June 2009	Good	Excellent	Excellent	Excellent	14843	7.0
October 2008	Good	Excellent	Excellent	Excellent	18240	7.0

Element Data

Source: National Bridge Elements dataset, 2019 edition. This feature is experimental.

Element	Units	Quantity	1-Good	2-Fair	3-Poor	4-Serious
Superstructure
Prestressed Concrete Girder/Beam	linear ft.	3,260	3,132	128	0	0
Deck
Reinforced Concrete Top Flange	sq. ft.	19,810	19,805	5	0	0
Wearing Surfaces	sq. ft.	14,110	14,110	0	0	0
Concrete Protective Coating	sq. ft.	14,110	14,110	0	0	0
Substructure
Reinforced Concrete Abutment	linear ft.	180	162	18	0	0
Steel Pile	each	7	7	0	0	0
Steel Protective Coating	sq. ft.	790	790	0	0	0
Reinforced Concrete Pier Cap	linear ft.	90	86	4	0	0
Bearings
Elastomeric Bearing	each	56	56	0	0	0
Bridge Rail
Steel or Aluminum Bridge Rail	linear ft.	470	470	0	0	0
Steel Protective Coating	sq. ft.	2,830	2,830	0	0	0
Reinforced Concrete Bridge Rail	linear ft.	480	0	480	0	0

BridgeReports.com: National Bridge Inventory data

 [Locations | Search | Cities | About | Bridgehunter.com ]

© Copyright 2012-20, James Baughn

Disclaimer: All data is taken from the National Bridge Inventory and has not been verified.

This page's URL is <http://bridgereports.com/1001051>

Anchorage

Mountain View gas station hands out hundreds of free Thanksgiving meals to community members

By Tess Williams

Updated: November 25, 2021

Published: November 25, 2021

 Expand  Autoplay

1 of 7 < >

Mt. View Shell Station owner Insook Baik confirms how many free Thanksgiving Day dinners a person needs on Thursday, Nov. 25, 2021. (Bill Roth / ADN)

For more than a decade, Insook Baik has made Thanksgiving dinner each year for hundreds of people.

As the owner of the Shell gas station in Mountain View, she said she knows there are many people in the community who may not otherwise have a hot meal. And she wants to take care of her neighbors, so each year, she stocks up enough ham, turkey, corn, mashed potatoes, stuffing and pumpkin pie for the whole neighborhood.

Glen Ellis, who is a manager at the store, said he and his wife help prepare the food. This year, that meant about four days' worth of work, he said. A few volunteers, many of whom work nearby, dished up plates on Thanksgiving Day and passed them to people out of a walk-up window or drive-thru.

ADVERTISING

The number of people stopping by for a meal has steadily increased as the years have gone by, Ellis said. This year he expects they'll serve somewhere near 900 plates. Things during the pandemic have been hard, and a lot of people in the community have struggled to pay their bills.

"People that have homes are hurting, the money is running shorter this year and things cost a lot more," he said. "Anything given back to the community helps."

The best part of the tradition for Baik is just seeing joy on others' faces and hearing about their successes, she said.

"One man a couple years ago, he said, 'I was hungry, I moved here with no job, no car, no apartment, but you gave me food,' " she said. The man returned several years later and told her he was employed and had a place to live, according to Baik. He gave her money to help pay for more supplies for the next year.

On Thursday, Baik's face lit up as a regular customer walked in the doors with a saxophone and played a jingle for a crowd of volunteers in the kitchen.

As the music drifted through the aisles, she stepped outside and into the snow to show a man to the pickup window line where he could get his meal. Once she was back inside, Baik stepped to her side of the window, passing bags of warm food into the hands of others.

ADVERTISING

"Happy Thanksgiving," she said, the corners of her eyes crinkling as her face mask covered her smile.

---

Tess Williams

Tess Williams is a reporter for the Anchorage Daily News, focusing on breaking news. Before joining the ADN in 2019, she was a reporter for the Grand Forks Herald in North Dakota and previously helped cover the Nebraska Legislature for The Associated Press. Contact her at twilliams@adn.com.

---

Sponsored

Sponsored Links by Taboola

Jackie Kennedy's bodyguard exposed what she was really like

Scientific Mirror

20 Actors Who Turned Down Great Movie Roles For Horrible Ones

BleacherBreaker

If You Need To Kill Time On Your Computer, This Vintage Game Is A Must-Have. No Install.

Forge Of Empires

Sign Up

Anchorage

This Anchorage gas station owner didn't want anyone to go hungry on Thanksgiving Day

By Tegan Hanlon

Updated: December 2, 2017

Published: November 23, 2017

Insook Baik, the owner of the Shell gas station on Mountain View Drive, ladles gravy on mashed potatoes on Thanksgiving Day. She has served free meals at the gas station's convenience store for about eight years. (Tegan Hanlon/ADN)

Insook Baik knows what it's like to go to bed hungry.

She grew up in South Korea during the Korean War, she said, and her family didn't always have enough to eat. But things for her are different now.

ADVERTISING

"I got a lot of blessings from God," Baik said on Thursday as she ladled gravy on mashed potatoes in the crowded convenience store at the Shell gas station that she owns in Anchorage's Mountain View neighborhood.

For about eight years, Baik has bought enough food to serve hundreds of free meals at the store each Thanksgiving Day.

The Mountain View Shell station's sign advertising its free Thanksgiving meals from 12:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. (Bob Hallinen / ADN)

Sections

ALASKA NEWS POLITICS OPINIONS TALK TO US

Coronavirus • Alaska News • Politics • Opinions • Talk to us

"She's fallen in love with the community here. It's one of the few places where people will give their last dollar to each other," said Baik's son, Peter, who is visiting from California. "I think that pulls at her heartstrings."

[Thank-you notes from Alaskans for good deeds]

Baik said she sees immigrants in Mountain View, just like herself. She said she also sees people who look hungry.

ADVERTISING

Powerful data and insights for a new media world.

On Thursday, dozens of people stood in a line that snaked among the convenience store shelves.

Baik and a collection of volunteers, including her son, assembled to-go containers brimming with ham, turkey, mashed potatoes, gravy, corn, stuffing and pumpkin pie topped with whipped cream.

"I want everything perfect, so it looks like what I would feed my children," Baik said. Everything she purchased for the day, she said, was exactly what she would feed her family.

Glen Ellis, the manager at the Shell gas station in Mountain View, helped assemble to-go containers of free food Thursday. He said more and more people show up for the meals each year. (Tegan Hanlon/ADN)

Insook Baik and her son, Peter Baik, make mashed potatoes Thursday at the Mountain View gas station. (Tegan Hanlon/ADN)

Baik expected they would serve at least 600 people at the convenience store Thursday afternoon. Last year, she said, they gave out about 620 meals.

With the warm meal, each person in line also got a can of soda and a banana. If they asked for more than one container of food, they got it.

"I just feel so blessed," said one man who started to cry as he approached the front of the line. "This is such a blessing for me."

Another man, Harvey Koweluk, took his container of food outside and sat on the nearby curb.

"I'm very grateful and God bless the Shell," Koweluk, 57, said.

Insook Baik, owner of the Mountain View Shell station, talks about the free Thanksgiving lunch on Wednesday. (Bob Hallinen / ADN)

Baik said she has lived in Anchorage for about 35 years and has owned the Mountain View gas station for about a decade. She also owns another Shell station in Midtown.

On Thursday, she said, "I just feel happy."

The day before, she had picked up turkey for the Thanksgiving Day meals and as she drove with her car full of food, she said, "I cried, 'Thank you God.' I was hungry all the time and now I can serve."

---

Tegan Hanlon

Tegan Hanlon was a reporter for the Anchorage Daily News between 2013 and 2019. She now reports for Alaska Public Media.

---

Sponsored

Want to invest that bonus? Turn to the Nerds.

NerdWallet

Learn More

If You Need To Kill Time On Your Computer, This Village Game Is A Must-Have. No Install.

Forge Of Empires

Sign Up

Jackie Kennedy's bodyguard exposed what she was really like

As volunteers distribute free meals, Anchorage's giving spirit shines on a Thanksgiving unlike any other

Published: November 26, 2020

Coronavirus • Alaska News • Politics • Opinions • Talk to us

Slices of turkey, scoops of mashed potatoes, ladles of gravy, wedges of pumpkin pie and dollops of whipped cream — these

Thanksgiving dinner staples were shared by many in Anchorage this year thanks to the efforts of volunteers and community members.

Insook Baik, who owns the Shell gas station in Mountain View, on Thursday continued her decade-long tradition of passing out free Thanksgiving meals for community members.

Jacqueline Silook and her son Pulefano Mamona wait outside in line at the Mountain View Shell gas station in Anchorage for free Thanksgiving meals on Thursday. Silook has 11 children and was able to pick up a meal for each of them. She brought their birth certificates as proof, but gas station owner Insook Baik trusted her and just asked that the meals not go to waste. "She's such a sweetheart," Silook said. (Emily Mesner / ADN)

Insook Baik slides a bag of free Thanksgiving meals under a piece of plexiglass to a person waiting in line outside the gas station. (Emily Mesner / ADN)

Pulefano Mamona carries free Thanksgiving meals to his mother's car. (Emily Mesner / ADN)

Baik frantically ran across the store for more hand sanitizer one moment, stuffed bags with chips and drinks the next, and helped carry to-go meals to a woman's car. Unable to hug a customer who came to visit due to social distancing, Baik ran back inside to continue helping.

ADVERTISING

She and a team of volunteers, including Josh Kim, a former pastor at the First Korean Presbyterian Church, hustled as they handed out hundreds of free meals to a steady and growing line.

"This is something I have to do," she said while helping a customer from behind a plexiglass screen. "I'm gonna give my heart. I am happy."

Insook Baik, owner of the Mountain View Shell gas station in Anchorage, calls for the next person in line to approach for their free Thanksgiving meal. (Emily Mesner / ADN)

In Midtown, cars remained at a standstill in the east lane of C Street north of Fireweed Lane as drivers waited for their free Thanksgiving meal from the drive-thru at Kriner's Diner. Celebrations rang from inside the restaurant as they received donations from loyal patrons.

Vehicles on C Street wait to turn into the Kriner's Diner parking lot for a drive-thru free Thanksgiving meal. (Emily Mesner / ADN)

The Salvation Army also continued its annual tradition of delivering free meals to seniors and those in need as part of their Older Alaskans Program.

“I think that there is definitely a higher need due to the pandemic,” said Lessa Peter, communications manager for the Salvation Army’s Alaska division. This year, 150 meals went to individuals in transitional housing who are either quarantined because they have tested positive for COVID-19 or because they are waiting for their results.

Roughly 30 volunteers assisted on Thanksgiving Day, helping package, drive and deliver about 550 meals — an increase from last year’s 400 distributed meals.

ADVERTISING

“They choose to help out in the community and do something for somebody who’s in need,” Peter said of the volunteers. “Even though we’re in a pandemic, you’re still seeing people who want to help any way they can. They have empathy for those who are struggling in the pandemic.”

Volunteers work to box free Thanksgiving meals as part of The Salvation Army. 550 meals were delivered to seniors and those in need this year. (Photo courtesy of The Salvation Army)

Emily Mesner

Emily Mesner is a multimedia journalist for the Anchorage Daily News, National Park and Preserve and the Western Arctic National Parklands in Kotzebue, at the Cordova Times and at the Jackson Citizen Patriot in Jackson, Michigan.

Sponsored