HURLEY: Mr. President, speaking on the proposed amendment, it certainly wasn't my intent to confuse the issue by putting the same thing back again. In fact, I would have probably voted against Mr. Barr's amendment because it, in my opinion, did not go far enough. My only purpose here is that it occurs to me that any federal act, including the act admitting Alaska to the union, must necessarily be complied with by the Territory, if it's applicable, and if the state desires to make available its benefits. The wording in this constitution seems to me to be useless, because that's what we're writing the constitution for. Insofar as the laws of the state are concerned, insofar as they are within the delegation of powers in this constitution, the natural resources will be developed accordingly. I realize that there was an intent on the part of the Committee, and they told me so, to point out to any Congressman that might be reading this that they intended to abide by any rules that they might set up for admission of Alaska to the Union, but I think that situation is evident in the wording of the proposal in general, where it provides for two different types of handling the resources as expected to be proposed by the federal law. I'm sorry to take the time of the Convention because I feel that it is simply cutting down on the length of the constitution, that including certain things here might be held to limit other things and it is not necessary to include these items in order to make it effective.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I don't believe I was present, I'm not sure, when Mr. Hurley appeared before the Committee, but there was another primary consideration in the minds of the Committee in using this language, and particularly in calling attention to the enabling act, and that is that one of the most controversial features that has been before the Committee since it first met was this floating provision, this floating situation as concerned Congressional thinking finally, in the enabling act as to the reservation to the state of minerals; and this is simply to call attention, this is simply to be hedged against whichever way Congressional thinking goes. Granted, we would be obliged to follow it whichever way, whether the state was enabled to give full patent to all minerals or whether the state was obliged to retain mineral reservations, but our thinking was simply to call attention to the fact that we were covered either way. Now, because it bears slightly on the same point, I would like to correct a suggestion left by Mr. Barr a moment ago when he said that I had suggested that the federal government might provide, in the future, some program of interest to us. Quite to the contrary; I'm speaking about the past and not the future. There may be measures, there are some measures. Mr. Taylor called attention to one: the Federal Power Commission provision which we could not escape. But I do not take particular issue with striking the last portion of this as concerns the Congressional provisions. However, I think that the retention of all of it strengthens it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Barr.

BARR: I'm going to support this amendment because without these words that are stricken by the amendment, it merely states now how the State of Alaska shall provide for the development of the resources. It makes no reference to Congress, or anything of the sort. I think it's simpler and more to the point. However, if we do say that we'll do it according to Congressional acts, we will continue any thing that Congress has put into force up to this point, such as land withdrawals, fish traps, or anything of that sort. We're still under the thumb of Congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion?

METCALF: Question.

TAYLOR: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hurley be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 12 - Barr, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McNees, Marston, Nolan, Peratrovich, Sweeney, White.

Nays: 39 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Collins, R. Rivers, Robertson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 39 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 2? If not, are there amendments to Section 3? To Section 4? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I'd like to call the attention to the Convention that I believe that the clock has stopped again. I have approximately 9:30, and with the bus coming in, what would be the pleasure of the Convention as to recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Convention as to recess or adjourning?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Another ten minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 4? Section 5? To Section 6? Are there other amendments to Section 7? Section 8? Section 9? Section 10? Section 11? Are there amendments to Section 12? Are there amendments to Section 13? 14? 15? Are there amendments to Section 16? Section 17? Section 18? Are there any other amendments to Section -- Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to give notice of my intention to ask for reconsideration of my vote on the Marston amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg at this time would like to serve notice of his intention to reconsider his vote on the Marston amendment. Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: I direct a question to Mr. Londborg, Mr. President. Do you have any objection to voting on the matter at this time, so that we can clear this and then send it through to the committee?

LONDBORG: Mr. President and Mr. McCutcheon, my reason for using this prerogative is to give a little overnight thought on the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you wish to reconsider now, that's fine. Mr. Londborg serves notice that he will reconsider his vote on the amendment. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 tomorrow morning. Are there committee announcements? Are there any committee announcements to be made at this time? If not, if there is no objection, unanimous consent has been asked, and the Convention stands adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 19, 1956

FIFTY-EIGHTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us Reverend Moore of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church. Reverend Moore will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND MOORE: Our kind heavenly Father, it is a privilege this morning to be able to call upon You again and invite Thy presence here. We would ask You to be with this group as they are working toward a constitution for our great Territory. We ask Thee to guide and direct them in every step as they divide into different study groups, into committees. We ask Thee to direct them. Help them to formulate plans which will be far reaching and which will prove a blessing to each one involved. We would ask Thee to be with the rest of the great nation. Help us to ever cherish the principles of liberty by which we are now a free and mighty country. We ask in Thy Holy Name. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. We will hold the report of the Committee to read the Journal until later in the day. Are there any communications from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Of select committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? Is there other unfinished business? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, as the President will remember, we had reports from the people who went out into their communities to hold hearings during the hearing recess, and at that time Mr. Nolan and Mr. Peratrovich were absent and it seemed to me we ought to bring the reports up to date by having a word from them about the progress of the hearings in their communities.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Peratrovich, would you care to report on any hearings you might have held in your community?

PERATROVICH: Glad to. Mr. Chairman, I was very fortunate in a way; I held hearings in two places, in my home town of Klawock and also Craig, and I had a good response, especially in Craig

I think I put it over so well they even had a little lunch for me after the meeting which was very encouraging. The great interest was in the matter of apportionment and I explained it the way we outlined it in our Committee and also emphasized the fact it was subject to approval on the floor, and it went over so well I think one of the men at Craig asked me if I could guarantee that this program would be adopted. I told him I could almost bet on it, and I was very fortunate it went through without much change. So, that particular angle which they were very much interested in, was very well received. The same holds in Klawock; they were very much interested. In their case, the representation that was recommended at that time, which is possible now I assume, was very agreeable to them, not because they had any political ambitions, but they could grasp the idea that they would be represented in the legislature in the lower house, which they thought was a very good thing, and I touched upon all the other committee reports as the best that I could, and it was well received. They seemed to be very much enthused over what we are doing here, and I am sure that in the end they will participate in its approval, and the school principals of both Klawock and Craig are making that part of their subject of studies in both their classes. They take it up in the history classes; they are following your activities here, and I have been forwarding some of the materials that I could pick up on the promise that I would, when I was there, and the students are much interested, also, just like the children up here in your schools; so, they are following it up pretty closely, and I know that the report that I gave will perhaps encourage a good many of you because you don't very often hear from the outlying districts, and contrary to the opinion of a good many people, they are showing a great deal of interest and I was very much pleased to see the reaction, the interest that was shown. That is about all I can give.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: I held a meeting sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce on rather a short notice. It included about 14 people I think representing most of the large groups in the town. The meeting lasted about two hours and a half. There was quite a bit of discussion. The people were very, very much interested. A number of people came to me afterwards and said they were sorry they could not attend it. Some of the people talked with me afterwards and said they did not quite realize the scope of the project of drawing up a constitution. They were unanimously in favor of electing an attorney general. I did not give them any help on it, either. They did not like the idea of a 60-member legislature at this time, and they did not like the idea of a third of the governor's salary being tied into the salary of the legislature. Of course, I explained to them that many of these things would probably be changed. I think I must have held a meeting at least once every hour all the time I was home because somebody seemed to be dropping into the store, and there were always questions that I was answering continuously. It seemed to me that, as Mr. Peratrovich said, the interest had picked up considerably, and the suggestion was made to me after this constitution is drawn that another meeting be held for me to try to explain some of the provisions in it; they thought that would probably be better than trying to digest the whole thing themselves. So I told them that if there were enough interested we would hold a meeting of that kind after we had finished, and when I got back home I would be glad to hold a meeting and explain it to the best of my ability. I would say, offhand, that the interest has picked up considerably in Wrangell.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Nolan. We have before us this morning Committee Proposal No. 6/a, the proposal on local government. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I have an amendment to 8/a.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You still want 8/a before us in the amendment process?

DAVIS: We have a reconsideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. He can make that reconsideration move any time before adjournment today.

HINCKEL: Proposal No. 8/a was never turned over to the Committee. I have an amendment I would like to make.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was not, Mr. Hinckel, because there was a move for reconsideration made, but the Chair had called for further amendments. This is a proposed amendment to the article on resources. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, page 5, lines 15, 16 and 17, place a period after the word 'law' and strike the balance of the section."

HINCKEL: I move the adoption of the amendment.

COOPER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper seconds the motion. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: My reason for offering this amendment is that I approached the Committee a couple of times yesterday to try and limit the areas that would be permitted to be leased or rather permits given for prospecting, and I did not get explanations that were satisfactory to me. I finally decided that I must be wrong and I would not offer them. But after sleeping on it, I decided in order to live with myself I would have to make at least one more attempt because I can feature Alaska being sliced up like a piece of pie and large corporations who will be given the exclusive right to prospect, and I just don't like it. The explanations offered to me was that this interpretation was supposed to be very narrow and only the companies who had the greatest integrity, or words to that effect, would be permitted to have permits. To me that makes it sound all the worse. The more I think about it -- apparently they mean that only big corporations, well-financed, etc., would be permitted to have such things. I can understand that possibly in exploring for oil or shale or some of these other things that they list, that it might be necessary to do that, and I don't want to interfere with the prospecting in the advancement of the state, but I don't want to see small people prevented from prospecting, and I cited to the Committee yesterday that over in Kodiak there has not been much prospecting for a long time. Over there right now, there is a small corporation of interested people, business people, and just individuals that reside there, that are interested in prospecting, that have formed a small corporation and are actively prospecting. If there is some interest by large companies over there, now when these large companies were able to go to the state and get a permit to prospect the entire island to the exclusion of everyone else, which would be possible under the phraseology of this section, it would just prevent anyone else from prospecting at all the way I interpret the thing. If somebody can prove I am wrong, I would like to have them explain it, but in any event, I wanted the body to understand how I interpret it, and that I object to such a thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I am very sympathetic to giving exploration rights for periods in certain areas in Alaska, and I am not worried about that sort of thing at all, but the way this is drawn now, I have very serious doubts if the legislature will ever implement, and I think that it will never be used, and my objections are similar to Mr. Hinckel's, but it says that exclusive right of exploration may be granted, and literally reading this thing that means an exclusive right for all mining purposes. In other words, it would include coal, oil

BOSWELL: Point of order, Mr. President. If I heard Mr. Hinckel's amendment correctly, it was not on this subject, whatsoever, that we are discussing. Could we have it read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment again. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think it has a very definite bearing on Mr. Hinckel's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, page 5, lines 15, 16 and 17, place a period after the word 'law' and strike the balance of the paragraph."

PRESIDENT EGAN: It refers in that, Mr. Boswell, to the exclusive right that is mentioned up above though on those like property and leases.

BOSWELL: Excuse me, I had the wrong page.

HELLENTHAL: My point is that these like permits are so impractical that they'll never be granted and the people who want them won't be able to get them. Now originally, I had thought there should be specific language included here that these exclusive rights would be subject to reasonable concurrent uses as to different minerals. In other words, I think it should be spelled out here that if you give an exclusive right of exploration to an oil company that the legislature may also provide for a similar exclusive right in the same area to another group, perhaps, for mineral exploration. I don't think it should all be in one hand, in the hands of one group. And then I was told that that was in there by implication. Since then I have found out it is not because we agreed yesterday in Committee that the right of concurrent use was limited to the water resource and if there is any question about it, I think that the right to concurrent uses in these areas where rights of exploration are given should be spelled out in this matter because as long as the legislature has any doubt about it, they are not going to grant any rights of exploration. They are not going to tie it up in one outfit for all purposes and that simple language included in there would make this thing workable. I am afraid it is not going to be workable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I am not sure whether I heard Mr. Hellenthal correctly or not. If I did, I think he made a misstatement in speaking of concurrent uses. I call your attention to new Section 9: "The legislature may provide for the leasing of any part of the public domain, or interests therein, subject to reasonable concurrent uses." The intent of the Committee was that concurrent uses applied where applicable to all resources and to all lands.

HELLENTHAL: Does it apply to permits?

WHITE: I certainly read that section as applying to permits. "Leases, and permits giving exclusive right of exploration for specific periods and areas may be authorized for exploration." There is nothing there that would prevent concurrent use of those lands where possible.

HELLENTHAL: May I direct another question to Mr. White? But you refer to Section 9. It says "...leasing of the public domain subject to reasonable concurrent uses." That is true, but here in this section regarding exclusive exploration rights, we are dealing with permits, also, and the permits don't have to be subject to reasonable concurrent uses.

WHITE: There is nothing that says that such land subject to permit shall not also be subject to concurrent uses through other permits or through leases.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I think there has been more or less a misunderstanding here between the Committee and possibly Mr. Hinckel. I, too, have given this some thought since we left here last evening, and I had thought that Mr. Hinckel's amendment might be somewhat different, although bearing on the same paragraph. Last evening he had submitted an amendment to the Committee, the submission of which I personally had encouraged and I had hoped it would come out on the floor. We discussed it under rather unfortunate circumstances late last evening in Committee, very hurriedly with the gallery jammed and not too much opportunity for undivided attention. That particular amendment would have sought to have stated or limited areas and for periods of time for which these exclusive prospecting permits or exploration permits might have been issued. It did not come out on the floor. I think it would still be appropriate. His amendment this morning would seem to me to go much farther but not to get right to the problem of limitation, and I, personally, not speaking for the Committee, but for myself, still think that consideration might properly be given to the thought which his amendment of last evening embraced in the nature of a limitation to be directed by the legislature as to both time and area. We have felt that while the matter is not covered in the constitution that the existing pattern of federal limitations would be inherited by the state, just by provisions of the enabling act whereby the state would take over existing leases. That might not be sufficient for the state's purposes or might not be sufficient to satisfy Mr. Hinckel's thinking in proposing such an amendment, should he do so. The only objection I had to his amendment as it came in was that it would have tied, as I recall, the state to the existing federal pattern, or I may be mistaken on that, it would have tied the state to the federal pattern, whatever it might be, without certainty on our part, and I thought to correct that, if we could place any reliance on the legislature to keep abreast of the times by giving them that directive, it might cure the situation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would be willing to read the proposal I made last night for the information of the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, would you desire a recess at this time for a few minutes?

HINCKEL: I don't think so. I talked to the Committee and I didn't get to first base.

SMITH: I was going to suggest we have a five-minute recess to discuss this and I will so move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith asks unanimous consent for a five-minute recess. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I just want to say there are quite a few of us here concerned about the same thing and we would like to have this written so it is spelled out that there is no exclusive right on prospecting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, then the Convention will stand at recess for the purpose of allowing the Committee and interested persons to be heard.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk may proceed with communications we have before us at this time. You may read that communication.

(The Chief Clerk read a communication from the Arctic Circle Chamber of Commerce, Kotzebue, protesting certain provisions in the legislative article.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed. If any delegate wishes to see the communication, he may. We have a few other communications, Mr. Hinckel, then we will proceed with your proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: Four telegrams from Anchorage, recommending the adoption of the Alaska Sportsmen Council provision in the constitution. They are signed by Ed M. Howell, Alaska Sportsmen's Council and Alton B. Cross, Alaska Range Association.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communications will be filed. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I wish to ask consent to withdraw my amendment with the understanding that the Committee has amendments that they wish to offer which will accomplish the result.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, the Committee has two amendments to offer and Mr. Riley, I believe, will offer the amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I will ask the indulgence of the body to give these orally if I may, they are both brief. New Section 9, page 3, line 16, after the third word "of" add the words "and the issuance of exploration permits to".

STEWART: I think that word should be "on", Mr. Riley.

RILEY: "On" would be acceptable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment using the word "on".

CHIEF CLERK: You mean strike the "of" and insert "on"?

RILEY: No, this is following "of".

CHIEF CLERK: Following "of" insert "and the issuance of exploration permits on".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: That should be read in conjunction with the next so I will make it one amendment. The second is on page 5, line 11, after the word "areas" insert a comma and add "subject to reasonable concurrent exploration as to different classes of minerals,". I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that the Committee amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Now on page 5, would the Chief Clerk read that sentence, down through the proposed new matter if it were adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Leases and prospecting permits giving exclusive right of exploration for specific periods and areas, subject to reasonable concurrent exploration as to different classes of minerals,".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that these amendments be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. The Chair notes in the gallery a large number of school students and their teachers and we are very happy to have you with us this morning and hope you enjoy the proceedings of the Convention. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 8/a? If there are no further amendments we will proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 6/a. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to have about a one-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for a minute or two.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may read Committee Proposal No. 6/a for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 6/a in its entirety.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chairman of the Local Government Committee desire a recess at this time for the purpose of allowing delegates to submit amendments or suggestions as is suggested in the rules? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I think the Committee would rather that we give an explanation of the article first and then ask for a recess for any amendments that might be proposed to the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog, do you desire to begin the explanatory process at this time?

ROSSWOG: Yes, I would, Mr. Chairman. I think before we go into a discussion of the proposal section by section, I would like to give the delegates here some of the thinking and the consideration that the Committee has given to this matter. In our proposal we have tried to keep it as simple as possible. In the local government setup, we often consider it is quite complex, but by setting up just the two classifications which would have authority and taxing power we have tried to keep it fairly simple. Other divisions of local government would have to fit into these two categories. We did believe that the problem in the older states has been where many different government divisions are set up, it has finally come to the point where it is almost impossible to understand them. In fact, the people in these states often know much more about their state government than they do about their local government. The Committee, being from all over Alaska, knowing its problems in the thinly populated areas and in the smaller cities and also in the larger cities, we tried to fit this proposal to each section, and I can say that right from the start the Committee has been in general agreement on this article. We have our members like Mr. Cross and Mr. Londborg from the very thinly populated and scattered sections; Mr. Lee and myself from the smaller towns; Mr. Doogan from one of the larger towns; and Mr. Rivers and Mr. Fischer from one of our larger cities. But we still agreed in general principle on this article. In considering what we would need, we thought of some of the nations of Europe where their local government is divided into many little districts. In those countries they seem to fit together and work, but we have quite a different problem here where our population is so scattered. The South American countries had somewhat the same setup as in our proposal but the people are not used to governing themselves on the local level. We felt that our people were able to govern themselves locally and that we should give them as much self-government as possible. We have tried to tie these two local government sections together because we found like in sections of Western Canada where they have set up a rural community and an urban community, separately, much of the section remains unorganized. In British Columbia, where it is set up in that manner, about 99 per cent of the area and 25 per cent of the population resides in unorganized areas, so we thought in our proposal we should tie both the cities and the boroughs together. We have a great opportunity here, and we can take advantage of the lessons that have been learned in the states, we believe, where they have gone through the process of building up a great many local authorities and now they are to the point where they are trying to combine them again. Going into the article, then, I would say that considering Section 1 we have tried to state our purpose in local government. We believe that we should just draw the outline of this local government structure; we should leave a great deal of it and will need a great deal of help from the state in setting up the exact boundaries and the exact laws and the rules under which they shall operate. The establishing of the two categories of local government as boroughs and cities we felt that that would keep it simplified as much as possible. The powers of boroughs shall be provided by law, and we felt that in order to have good local government in Alaska, the whole state should be divided -- we would not want to have loose sections here and there, and that in setting up this program the boundaries should be laid out. The powers of the boroughs would have to be left to establishment by the legislature to a great extent. We do think that the governing body of the borough should be outlined, and after establishing our boroughs or what the general plan should be, the areas or other government powers, such as service areas and other services that can be supplied, how they should be established under the borough program. In service areas we think that every section of service could be worked into this plan. Of course, we have school districts and power districts and other authorities, and they should be under the control of the assembly. In Section 7 we allow for the boroughs remaining unorganized until they are able to take on their local government functions. The cities will, of course, remain as much as they are today or with possibly slight changes. Section 9 allows for charters and how they shall be set up and also allows, in Sections 10 and 11, for home rule powers. This does not necessarily mean that they should all be under home rule but that the legislature can set up, of course, optional charters, and they will be subject to law. The boundaries, we think, are quite an important question and should be under some agency which can establish them along the proper lines. They should not be left to the local community; they should be established by a higher authority. We feel, in Section 13, we should be allowed intergovernmental relations. There will have to be times that powers can be transferred back and forth from the boroughs to the cities and also between the local government units. In Section 14, because this plan is left broad and flexible, there will have to be quite a bit of state help in planning and advice that will be necessary. Section 15 merely provides that the special services and areas that are now set up shall be integrated into this system. In all, we have tried, again I say, to keep the proposal simple, to keep it flexible, and to have it fit to all of the Territory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Rosswog. Do other members of your Committee wish to comment at this time or are you open for questions? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, following up the remarks of our Chairman on this matter, I wanted to outline a few of the things that have been of particular interest to this Committee in arriving at conclusions in regard to local government at the borough and the city level. The problem has been, of course, to try and prepare the way for our future State of Alaska and its local government units to avoid a great many of the problems that have arisen throughout the states. We all realize that in speaking of the intermediate areas of government in the states, the cities and the counties, that most or many of them were established a hundred years or more ago, a few of them less. However, the requirements of government, especially the intermediate government of counties, has changed a great deal in that time. In the older state arrangements we find that the counties are a potpourri of boards and commissions with overlapping functions and powers and duties. We find that they are not, rather that the counties as such, were established as more or less an agency of the state in administrative matters. We find that they are not governed by a policy-making body which can itself determine the policies under which they grow and proceed and become effective. As a result, I am going to quote a few words from a book entitled The American County Patchwork of Boards. This book is by Edward W. Weidner, who was a consultant with the National Municipal League and is now a professor of political science at one of our large universities. Our policy in arriving at the form of local government was to try and bridge that gap of 100 years or more in allowing our people to provide a form of intermediate local government at what we call the borough level so they can function effectively and efficiently as a government agency. I think it follows out essentially the pattern we have established in this Convention of allowing, from the legislative and the strong executive on down, a considerable flexibility but also an establishment of substantial authority within the hands of the people to decide and determine their own future. Our policy in this Committee, and it has been practically uniform since our early studies, has been that we would try and institute, or allow to be instituted, under this constitution an intermediate form of government by which the people could largely exercise a broad degree of power, except those especially reserved to the state. The old approach to county government was that they existed and had their authorities only in those specifically delegated to them and specifically spelled out to them by the legislature or by the constitution. The other approach which has been adopted and which has operated in a few states, approximately seven as I recall, particularly in Texas, has been called the Texas Plan, and there, under that plan, they allocate such powers to the intermediate tier of government and the cities as are not specifically reserved or eventually withdrawn by the state itself. They have a broad exercise of local authority much as our cities have today. That has been the matter of the choice -- whether we wanted to follow the old pattern in which the constitution and the legislature would delegate certain specific powers to the intermediate form of government, which often is called the county and which we have designated as the borough, or whether we would follow the plan of reserving powers to the state and letting the local government exercise broad general authority within the limits of those reservations. That is, as I see it the foundation of the plan of government for local government which we are presenting to you here now. So along that line, I just wanted to quote to you a few items from this particular book which is particularly appropriate for consideration at this moment. In the paragraph which I am going to read, it is under the heading "Old Confusion in a New Day": "Although county governing bodies are acquiring more and more functions of a policy-determining nature, they are still organized primarily as administrative and judicial instrumentalities of the states. This fact has important implications for the future of local government. Unless counties can organize properly to carry out modern local government functions, they are likely to find their duties gradually transferred to ad hoc or state agencies." It goes on to state in this article and quotes many excellent references, a number of which I have read, that the policy-making and determining power of intermediate stage of government and at the city level is an essential, not only to their performing the duties required within the local government structure, but also to their very existence. And then it tries to summarize and show a variety of the various powers and boards and commissions that have been allowed to be established under many of the state constitutions. It says it is difficult to designate a group of functions as those characteristically belonging to county governing bodies because of the many variations from state to state and county to county. It goes on further to say that in many ways the tendencies of the states have been similar, they have been patterned one after the other. It shows the lack of authority and control directly within any body in the county. It shows the various boards and commissions set up by the legislature to perform some one special function such as health, education, sanitation, roads, and they all overlap in their jurisdiction. There is no central policy-making body, they all have one function to perform, and as a result we have a multiplicity of confusion piled upon confusion. I will quote again: "Likewise, a county governing body frequently does not have control over policies affecting the county which are made at their own local level. Special boards and commissions and separately elected officers are frequently outside of the range of its effective control. The process of separation is made complete in many cases by the creation of independent units of government to perform special functions in the county. A county governing body with the large powers of home rule and of supervision over all county activities is difficult to find." Our approach to this problem has to be to try and establish at the intermediate tier of government a body which has broad general policy-making powers derived from the state, certain of which were reserved to the state but not to hamstringing them... with this multiplicity of boards, special commissions, special function groups, over which the group as a whole, or the governing body of that area as a whole, has no control. I am emphasizing this again because I am trying to point out the general basis of the thinking which went into this program which we are presenting today. Quoting again, "The best practice in cities has resulted from the council-manager plan under which council members do not administer the program. They formulate, but hire expert management for the task. Council members are responsible chiefly for over-all policy. In marked contrast members of county governing bodies usually exercise nominal control over a few matters of policy and some control over a variety of administrative detail but little effective control over either. A third of the county governing bodies in the United States have members who are accountable not only as county administrative and legislative officers but also as judicial and township, town, or city officers. There you have the overlapping of functions between the city and the intermediate tier of government level, and it has been done largely because it was the only way in which they could effectively handle and carry out the duties and the job which they had to do for the people whom they were employed by." I wanted to point out that while I have referred here to a Texas Plan, it does not mean it is limited to the State of Texas; it happens in some of their amendments the State of Texas chose to delegate to their intermediate tier of government those powers which were not those specifically enumerated but those powers which were not specifically withdrawn or reserved or withheld to the state, and it has proven to be an effective form of government at the intermediate tier level. Now, we have throughout the states a series of programs in which many cities have outgrown their boundaries, they have lapped over into their surrounding areas, we find a great deal of suburban development because of the increase in good quality highways, an increase of automobiles, and easy transportation to and from their businesses and their work, so we find a considerable number of counties throughout the states trying to consolidate the functions of the surrounding rural areas and the cities which occupy them. I don't believe there is any of us in this room that think that any one city or any one area exists by itself, independent and complete and sufficient unto itself, and all of us know that we live and must work with and do our business with our neighbors not only in the town but also in the surrounding area. We all know that the wealth and the prosperity of practically all of our cities in concentrated population groups springs from their association, their business, and their holdings with the surrounding areas which bring business to them and which in turn derive benefits and do business with them and from them. It cannot be held, I don't think soundly, that any one area stands by itself alone and for itself. We must give consideration to the interests of both groups and their interrelated interests, one with the other, and in this arrival at the plan we present to you here, it has been with the intent in mind that that would be one of our underlying purposes, that in allowing this form of government to be established locally rather than allowing a series of conflicts and confusion and unhappiness to exist which took great difficulty and struggle to unravel, we would allow it in such a way that we would base our plan of thinking upon cooperation of those elements, and in such cooperation that rather than spending time, money, and energy in conflict, they could spend the same time, money, and energy in cooperative growth and progress. I feel I speak for all the Committee when I say that has been our underlying purpose and we present to you here today the efforts of our most sincere thinking in regard to that approach. I don't want to take any more time. I have tried to give you some of the broad general attitudes which we have adopted. We have gone into great detail in this study. We have had consultants who have consisted of Dr. Bartley, Dr. Cooper, Dr. Ostrom, Mr. Bebout, and Dr. Kimbrough Owen. We have studied the best references in our legislative reference, our work presented to us by the Public Administration Service. We have gone into many, many volumes and handbooks in regard to the difficulties and problems of local government, and I feel the Committee has prepared itself well to present this plan to you and to help you resolve your thinking on the matters which it contains.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee statements? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would just like to very briefly point out the importance of establishing a good system of local government to the future success of our state. I think that fact can best be borne out by a few quotations from a report to the President and Congress by the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. This commission was established in 1953 by law of Congress. It consisted of a number of senators and representatives and governors of various states and heads of federal executive departments. The Commission concerned itself with the need for strengthening of state government and a decentralization of federal power. In this study they found that local government is an important factor in this process and I would like to briefly quote a few paragraphs. In discussing the strengthening of local government, the Committee says, "The objective of decentralization cannot be obtained by a readjustment of national-state relations alone. It will be fully achieved only when carried through to the lowest levels of government where every citizen has the opportunity to participate actively and directly. The strengthening of local government requires the activities that can be handled by these units be allocated to them together with the financial resources necessary for their support." Then the report goes on and draws a picture of the tremendous number of overlapping tax jurisdictions and separate local entities we now have in the state and goes on to say, "More or less hidden in this picture is a paradox that consistently plagues the state and bars any easy solution of the problem of achieving the decentralization of government -- too many local governments and not enough local government." That is one of the points that we have tried to meet here, not to establish too many local governments but those that would be established would be effective to carry out not only the local but also state functions as may be necessary. The report then goes on to say as follows: "The states have the constitutional responsibility for the future development of local government. This responsibility has two important aspects. One is to create local units of government that are efficient units for providing governmental services. The second is to maintain a system of local government that achieves the traditional American goal of extensive citizen participation in the affairs of government. The states must be alert to the reality that modern technology continually creates new techniques that give rise to new demands for public services and new methods for rendering them as well as new channels and patterns of communication in common action among citizens. These in turn alter the optimum size and shape of local units. Although the effects of these factors are not necessarily the same, they all point to the need for a bolder use by the states of their powers over the incorporation, annexation, elimination, and consolidation of units in order to promote both efficiency in citizen participation in local affairs." Now the article as proposed by your Committee on Local Government attempts to provide the kind of flexibility that is pointed to in this particular section as being necessary to meet the needs of a growing technology. In Alaska it is particularly important that we provide a local government system that will have the maximum amount of flexibility with the maximum amount of home rule, and at the same time with the maximum amount of state interest and participation in local affairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I move that we recess until 10:52.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that the Convention stand at recess. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: The Local Government will meet in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Local Government Committee will meet in the gallery immediately upon the recess. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet around Mrs. Hermann here on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet on the floor at Mrs. Hermann's desk.

BARR: That clock seems to be wrong. I have 10:40. I move that we recess until 11:00.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before we put the motion, Mr. Rosswog, do you anticipate that it might be better that we have a longer recess at this time? There might be many of the delegates --

TAYLOR: I was going to suggest that in view of the fact the Committee is meeting it might be better to enlarge the recess until 11:00 or later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Barr, we will say that we will recess until 11:00.

BARR: Will we be able to ask questions after the recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, but it is if the delegates might have questions, they might be cleared up during recess. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Before we go into a detailed amending session, I for one hope we can have a good broad general floor discussion after we reconvene.

ROSSWOG: Just a short recess now would be satisfactory.

ARMSTRONG: Could we find out if the young people are going to stay here until noontime. This is a half-hour here that they will probably wonder what they can be doing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the situation in the gallery. Are they planning to be here all morning?

SECRETARY: They will be here all morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That being the case, the Convention will stand at recess until 10:55.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Do any of the delegates have questions to ask of the committee members? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have two questions I would like to ask from any member. I don't particularly like the word "borough"; I don't like the sound of it, and I think it's confusing to some people; as a matter of fact, if they don't know how to spell it, they might confuse it with another kind of burro, which is a donkey. I have nothing against donkeys, I think it is a great American symbol myself, but I do believe in standardization and simplicity. I would like to ask what other words were considered as names for this local government and why could we not use the word "county" but still have our own form of county government?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Barr, this term and the name came under considerable discussion in the Committee. We did not come out with any name that we were completely satisfied with. We did think that "borough" was possibly the best we could come up with at this time, probably because of the definition which is a town or place organized for local government purposes. It did not hold it to any particular size. We had considered "county" and felt that the feeling against the general definition of "county" was bad, that most people did not like it. We did consider a lot of names and I would be glad to have them read here and the delegates could hear the different names that had been suggested.

HERMANN: Mr. President, they are all listed in the commentary, I don't think it is necessary to repeat them here.

ROSSWOG: I don't believe they were all put into the commentary.

BARR: I don't believe it is necessary to read all of them, but I would like to know which ones you seriously considered.

ROSSWOG: Well, we did go through these names and as we felt that they could not be used we cut them out until we had gotten down to possibly, if I can pick them out here, the last we considered were "county", "township", "rural municipality", "division", "district", and a few other names of that type. We thought that most of them had definite meaning in Alaska or a good many of them were used in other places in Alaska and would be confusing there. We finally settled down to "county" or "borough", and we decided upon the name of "borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I address a question to the Chairman of the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Rosswog, what has happened to the independent school district in this proposal?

ROSSWOG: Well, I believe it was the feeling of the Committee that the school districts should work into the borough government, that they should have their own possible governing body but it would be under the over-all supervision of the assembly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, I have several questions I would like to direct to the Chairman. In Section 2, "All local government powers shall be vested in boroughs and cities." In other words, in answering your question to Mr. Johnson that a school district would be a subdivision of a borough, an independent school district, is that the purpose, Mr. Rosswog?

ROSSWOG: Well, it was felt that the assembly could delegate powers to other boards, but as far as the actual governing --

COGHILL: The borough may?

ROSSWOG: Yes, but it would reserve, of course, your taxing power or over-all supervision.

COGHILL: In other words, the borough could not delegate a taxing power to a specific independent school district. Supposing your area is quite large and in one area you have an independent school district?

ROSSWOG: We do have a provision in Section 6 where the assembly may authorize the levying of such taxes, charges, or assessments within a service area as may be necessary to finance the activities.

COGHILL: That, Mr. Rosswog, was my next question, or a question I have is on that service area, but in other words, in your Section 2 that you say that boroughs and cities are the only ones that will be delegated the taxing powers, that is from the state level to that local government level, and the coordination between school districts and your executive branch of your state government would be and work through the borough assembly?

ROSSWOG: Yes.

COGHILL: And the borough assembly could promulgate rules and regulations not inconsistent with the state rules to take care of the local government school districts?

ROSSWOG: I think that is correct.

COGHILL: Further on in Section 3, I would like to ask you, Mr. Rosswog, on line 6 of page 2, "Each borough shall embrace, to the maximum extent possible, an area and population with common interests." My question here is directed to you to find out what the Committee's thinking was as to boundary areas of local government. Could you give us any light on that as to the extent? I know that you have delegated the powers to a commission, but you have said that each borough shall embrace the maximum extent possible. I am thinking now of an area that has maybe five or six economic factors in it -- would they come under one borough?

ROSSWOG: We had thought that the boundaries should be flexible, of course, and should be set up so that we would not want too small a unit, because that is a problem that has been one of the great problems in the states, the very small units, and they get beyond, or they must be combined or extended.

COGHILL: For instance, would Fort Yukon, Big Delta, Nenana, Fairbanks be in one borough?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Well, it would not seem to me that that would be a feasible arrangement. The matter of size is one that changes with time, and the trend in the states is as the population increases is to give larger areas and consolidate counties into larger groups. They had a great deal of trouble in the old days because they could not travel so very far and they tried to tie a county down to the size you could drive a horse to the boundary and back in one day. That concept has fallen by the board. The idea of how large these would be would have to be determined by the state advisory group in local government working with the people to decide as to what extent their boundaries should cover. That doesn't mean one type of economy; most any area will have a composite type of economy. You have a common interest in certain types of economic activities, and insofar as possible, it would be the determination to try to make an entity or an area that had common interests but would not be so big as to be unwieldy but would not be so small as to be too expensive. It is a matter of the exercise of judgment which has been left to the local level with the advice and assistance of the state department in connection with local government.

COGHILL: Mr. Rivers, I realize it is being left to a power, but I was trying to get the Committee's thinking as to how big they would be. Would they be about the same size as our election districts as set up by the apportionment board, or smaller?

V. RIVERS: I did some research on size and counties, Mr. Coghill, and the Texas Charter set up that the counties should be 900 square miles. Now, there are other areas that run up as high as

2,500 square miles, and that is in the nature of a large county, although in some counties they run as high as 4,000 square miles, but that is in isolated instances; but around the neighborhood of anywhere from 1,000 to 2,500 square miles seems to be about the average of the larger size counties.

COGHILL: That answers my question on that. On Section 6, Mr. Rosswog, on Section 6, you say "Service areas to provide special services within portions of an organized borough may be established..." That would be your independent and incorporated school district? Also your health areas, public utility districts -- is that the purpose of that?

ROSSWOG: It could be.

COGHILL: But the assembly has the full power to abolish a school district without the consent of the people that it is governing?

ROSSWOG: No, not necessarily as we have it set up. It would be according to law.

COGHILL: Subject to the provisions of law. I am trying to get the intent of the Committee so I can read between the lines on some of these things here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: If I may say something on that, the Committee spent a lot of time in trying to point down specifically how school districts would fit into this plan. Now at this time we have generally two types of districts: one is within the limits of an incorporated city, and the other type that is used in a number of places is the independent school district which covers a city and the surrounding area. Now, what we have tried to do was to leave the way open to independent school districts under the borough assembly. But at the same time, we could also visualize that in different areas you might want to constitute a whole borough a school district for the purpose of providing some form of self-determination to the people in the whole borough in the field of education, rather than have the educational system, as it is done in most places in Alaska now, directed straight from the state department of education to a specific school. In other words, get some decentralization at least on the policy level.

COGHILL: That was the thought I was following under this local plan, but the one curve that kind of threw me was the fact that the borough assembly could abolish or alter that plan, and it is provided by law, but the law still provides, according to the constitutional provision, that the borough assembly can do it.

V. FISCHER: The borough assembly could reconstitute an independent school district unless the legislature set up a prohibition against it, number one. Secondly, the legislature can very well, and they probably would, continue to have certain standards for school districts and the borough could not violate such standards if they are established by the legislature.

COGHILL: May I ask you one more question? Would an elected member of an independent or incorporated school district or city school district within the borough have any representation on the borough assembly along with the representatives of the city council?

V. FISCHER: We discussed that matter, also, at length. The problem that came up in that connection was that here we have a general local government and if a specific service like education is to be represented, then health should be represented, if we have a health service area; if we have a fire protection district they should be represented; and what we wanted to avoid in this was the specific seating of people with just one interest on the borough assembly. We prefer to keep this a general governing body so that everybody was interested in the general welfare of the whole borough. In connection with that, there would be no prohibition against the election of say a member of the school board to the borough assembly.

V. RIVERS: I would like to point out a little further on that, that at the present time the school districts and school boards do derive a lot of power from the legislature, they also, they derive a great deal of their revenue for operating expenses. They could under this plan still derive all the refunds under the tobacco tax to their school district. As these boroughs grow and go along there will be a gradual readjustment, but no upset or major change in the present plan until they incorporate and organize as a borough at which time there might be a gradual adjustment of the boundaries. The taxing power exercised by the school districts today is mainly limited to a taxing power for the development of the physical plant and for capital investments, as you all know. The main operating expense of a school district comes from and would continue to come from the state level as would the refunds of all the taxes. There is no design here to upset the school boards, their authority or their receiving of grants of power or money or anything else from the state level. It might eventually lead to a slight adjustment of their boundaries which would be the main change that might result from the establishment of a borough, but I imagine that in establishing it the local body would very well take cognizance of the existing boundaries of the school district and would probably try to embrace somewhat near the same area or include that area plus some more into a borough. This is not going to be an overnight transition. This might be a matter of five, ten, twelve, fifteen years before this adjustment is made, and I hope I am answering some of your questions in regard to our thinking in visualizing the place of the school board and the school district in the borough and in this type of government.

COGHILL: I think you are, Mr. Rivers, and may I further the conversation by asking you if we have an incorporated school district -- it has fiscal autonomy in that area to which it is incorporated because there is no city council there. Why should they be deprived a seat on the borough assembly when you have over here an incorporated town and they are serving a purpose where the school district is serving a purpose? Why should they not have an equal seat?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, the idea was that the general powers of government would lie with the general elected representatives of the people. Now as Mr. Fischer has pointed out, the special functions in regard to the use by one group for one special purpose such as health, education or anything else, the power to take the board and take its powers away, the powers of the boards would probably continue except for the taxing power being centralized in the one taxing agency which would then have its own appraising, its own assessing group, its own condemnations. The citizen would not be subjected to two or three different taxing agencies. As to the distribution of the income among the various functions in that borough, it would have to be worked out between the different groups that are participating and have needs, in relation to their needs and in relation to the over-all amount of tax which has been levied.

COGHILL: I see the point you are driving at, Mr. Rivers, but the point that I was trying to arrive at was the fact that we have two independent units within a borough, two independent units, both operating a function of basic government; the city is operating a basic function of government and so is this incorporated school district. And I have not yet got clarified in my mind the reason why an independent unit out here, operating and performing a basic function of government, shouldn't have equal right on the assembly of the borough assembly.

V. RIVERS: In the first place your local government has a multiplicity of functions to serve all the needs of all the people, both at the borough and the city level. The school district has one function, but I want to point out that the legislature or the charter of this home rule group could well provide if they so desire, that a member of a board or boards could be elected to both offices or could be assigned from that one school board or one health board to a seat on this assembly. We do not preclude that here. We do not say they cannot be elected to that board or that they shall not be seated concurrently; if the people in that area so desire it could well be done under this provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would just like to add something to that answer in connection with part of your question -- why the city representatives are to sit on the assembly. Our whole concept has been based, not upon a separation of the two basic units of government, the borough and the city, but as close an integration of functions between the two as is possible. It was felt, for instance, that we should not, definitely not follow the pattern that you find in most stateside counties where you have the exactly same functions being carried out separately at these two levels of government with their own hierarchy of officialdom and separate capital investment. It was our thought that wherever functions overlap that they should be integrated, and from that standpoint it was the Committee's feeling that if we can get the coordination between the city council and the borough assembly we would be able to achieve the maximum amount of cooperation because then each would best know what the other had to offer, they would realize what the problems of the other were, and you would force them, almost, into the cooperation that we hope to achieve in our local government.

COGHILL: Mr. Fischer, wouldn't this do the same thing? Let's take a hypothetical case and set up a borough. In one corner there is an incorporated town; in the other corner there will be an incorporated school district. The reason why those people have incorporated into a school district is because of the fact that they haven't got the taxing power to provide for a corporation. For other reasons they might think that their basic governmental functions at the present time would be to provide adequate schooling for their children; therefore, they have set themselves up as a taxing unit; they have elected their board members; they are running the complete business of that district as a school unit for one purpose -- for providing the most essential, that they think in their minds at the time, the most essential form of government is to provide their children with an adequate education. In the incorporated town they have more people, they have more industries, they have their own school district within their boundaries. The thing I am getting at is that in Section 5 you say that city council members will be on the board and additional members shall be elected by voters living outside the city. That does not give these people sitting over here the assurance that the money they are paying, the tax dollar they are paying to the borough government, is going to carry out the intent of their forming this district because they will not be fiscally independent. The only fiscal independent governmental structure you have now --

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I feel constrained to object to this process as I feel it is not true questioning. Many of the facts stated by Mr. Coghill in his questions I would like to take issue with, but I can't because these are supposed to be questions, not issues.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will come to that in the amendatory stage, Mr. Coghill. You will have ample opportunity to argue the question on any proposed amendment.

COGHILL: I was only trying to clarify the point. Only one other question and then I'll sit down. Mr. Rosswog, (if I may, Mr. President) Section 13: "Any city may, subject to such limitations as established by law or charter, transfer to the borough in which it is located any of its functions or powers and may similarly revoke the transfer of any such functions or powers." In other words, the city is actually a subordinate to the borough; the borough is the main part of government?

ROSSWOG: Well, in some ways, if the city should transfer functions, the borough assembly would be over those.

COGHILL: The city is not on an equal plane with a borough. The borough assembly is the governing unit of the whole area including the incorporated cities?

ROSSWOG: Those services that are within the city have been turned over to the borough, but not the over-all supervision of the city.

COGHILL: Their taxing unit is the only thing that would be different?

ROSSWOG: Yes, they can set up their tax rate for the services inside the city. The city can and also the borough can for what they need outside or for combined services.

COGHILL: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask a question, please. On page 5, in Section 14, in line 21, the term is used "charter drafting agencies". I don't find any place in the article on what a "charter drafting agency" is or if it is, I have overlooked it. I would like to know what is meant by the term "charter drafting agency".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Can the Committee answer that question? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, the intent of the Committee, as was pointed out previously, was to grant as much home rule as possible to boroughs and cities. The way that one of these units exercises home rule is through a process of adopting a home rule charter where they are authorized. Such a charter is generally drawn up by a charter commission, usually elected by the people, just like the Constitutional Convention here is drafting a charter for the State of Alaska. It is not the city council that drafts a charter for the city, just as it is not the legislature, and so that the charter drafting agencies referred to here would be this type of special charter commissions that will be preparing the home rule charter for either a borough or a city.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I wonder if I might direct a question to Mr. Rivers as he knows the area I am going to talk about.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, you may.

DAVIS: Mr. Rivers, I realize that under the article as it is written that the boundaries of boroughs are going to be set by a board established by the legislature. But I would like to pursue a little bit further the question that Mr. Coghill had asked about what the Committee's thinking is concerning areas that might properly fit into a borough, and since I am familiar with it and so are you with our own area, I thought I might ask somewhat of the thinking of the Committee in an area such as that. Would your idea of a borough for the Anchorage area comprise, say the area from Portage to the Knik Bridge or something like that including the greater Anchorage area and possibly Chugiak, or would it include the Anchorage area plus the Matanuska Valley, or would it be, say the Seward area and Anchorage and the Matanuska Valley all together? What is your thinking about the size of an area like that?

V. RIVERS: Mr. Davis says I am familiar with that area. We discussed various areas through the Territory; in our thinking, of course, we must allow for the changes that occur due to the changes required by time and the area which you first described would probably, from Portage to Knik Bridge, would embrace an area of probably 500 square miles or 400 square miles, and would be about what I would visualize as the initial borough, but I can readily see as 50 years pass by, where, under the consolidation plan some of them might consolidate and bring in the further area you mentioned. The first step would probably be not of a nature so large as to be too unwieldy. The next step, as transportation, communications, and roads develop, might well result in having it twice as large by a consolidation of one or more of these borough areas and their boundaries. Does that answer your question?

DAVIS: Partially. I was just leading up to other questions as you might have guessed. The area that I first described for the information of the other people here, contains now one city, one suburban area surrounding the city, one school district, and another school area which has a Territorial school. Also --

HELLENTHAL: You mean independent?

DAVIS: Yes, one independent school and one school that is run by the Territory. I am talking about Chugiak now. If we had an area such as that, it is all fairly well integrated outside of the fact we do presently have two different school administrations in the area, but if that area were to be expanded and I realize there is plenty of room here for changing boundaries, consolidating as the need may require, but if we took the second area I mentioned, then we would have the area I first mentioned, plus a second major town, a village, and another school district, independent school district now existing, and another school area run by the Territory. I don't believe Wasilla is presently an independent district. I am just wondering how in the world all these things are going to fit in. I am leading up to the fact, particularly on the question of schools; and I suppose I am more interested in that than some others because I have been working with the problem for some time. I don't see any reason at all why schools should not be able to fit into the borough setup as you have mentioned. But I am wondering as to whether it will be workable to have all the taxing authority in the over-all agency. Now, I am afraid I am getting down to making an argument but I think I must do it to get my point across. In the Anchorage area we have had some difficulty, friendly difficulties it is true, but some difficulties about finance, by reason of the fact that the school district and the city were competing for the same taxpayer's dollar actually and some of us have been a little bit worried about the fact that whatever the school district set for its budget was subject to final check by the city whose interests were quite different actually. They saw one side of the picture and we saw another. It appears to me under the proposition that you have now that you have not remedied that situation but in fact have compounded it and have put all the power in the over-all agency which is concerned in this and this, and the school is only one small part of it. That may be desirable but I would like the thinking of the Committee on that and with particular reference to one question. I will agree in a minute that it is foolish to have separate assessing tax agencies but I wonder why the Committee says that all the taxing power, and by this I mean levying power, should be in the one agency. I am wondering if it could not be worked out just as satisfactorily without upsetting your plan if school districts or cities, if there is more than one city or village in the area, why they could not each levy the amount of taxes they needed within their own area, within these service areas you call them, instead of leaving it up to the entire borough to say, "Mr. School District, you have got to get along with so much money." I know that has worked satisfactorily in the state where I grew up. We had the county which is not a good word here, but we had the county which actually assessed and collected all the taxes but each of the local units within that area levied their own taxes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I am very interested in Mr. Davis's exposition. I have lived in the Anchorage area and I am familiar with all these facts; everyone else is familiar with their own area where similar problems exist, but I think his argument should be confined to the time set for arguing. I love to listen, don't misunderstand me, I think it's brilliant, but it is out of place at this time.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I don't love to listen to myself but I want the facts and I don't know how else to get them. I'll sit down, thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, you may ask any questions you wish. The delegates may, if it is the wish of the Committee to hear the explanations at this time from the delegates, the Chair will take that under consideration.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, Mr. Davis did raise a number of questions in his presentation, some of which I would like to answer if I can remember them all. The point that was brought out about the city has actual fiscal control over the school district; that is quite correct and that is why the Committee has based its plan upon putting the school district under the borough assembly because we realize that the city within an independent school district has other interests, education being separate from the municipal functions. When you come to the borough though, the borough is interested in education. It will be one of the basic functions which it will be responsible for. It may be through school boards; it may be through other means. It is just like health; it will be responsible for health, and we realize the special needs of education, and at the same time we feel that education when it comes to the tax dollar, must compete with all the other necessary services that are required by the people of any area. It was felt that the borough assembly would best be able to say that so much, on the basis of presentation, say by these districts or boards, that so much can be afforded out of this tax dollar for education, so much for health, so much for police enforcement, etc. So that is the only way you can get a proper allocation fund. Secondly, I would like to point out, as was pointed out previously, the authority does exist to, I will just quote directly, on top of page 3, "The assembly may authorize the levying of such taxes, charges or assessments within a service area as may be necessary to finance the activities." In other words, one could well visualize that the assembly would say that here we have these separate school districts, say there is more than one within a specific borough. They can say, "Go ahead and tax up to ten mills; we feel that is a proper allocation; anything above that you have to justify." I mean, that is just one way that we could visualize that this could be done, but the Committee did not feel that an independent tax levying authority should be directly granted to school districts because then you leave the way open to granting the same thing to health districts. They have been working for that; we have a health district already established within the Territory now. Legislation has been prepared during recent years to establish fiscal independent welfare districts. Once you get started on that, each separate function could well justify an independent tax levying authority and then you are right back to the type of government that we are trying to avoid in Alaska, the overlapping of independent taxing jurisdictions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I rise to a point here and I want to say that I, as a member of the Committee and most of us, have desired to use the word "participate" in the tax dollar rather than "compete"; there are so many dollars that must perform so many services and I thought, I don't remember whether Mr. Fischer was present at that discussion; but we decided the word "participate" was much more descriptive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I ask Mr. Fischer a question please. Mr. Fischer, did the Committee consider the fact that so far as independent school districts are concerned, as they are now set up, they are independent corporations organized and existing under the law of the Territory; as such they are legal entities and maintain such legal entities under and by virtue of the laws as they now exist. Is it contemplated that these corporations will be destroyed or done away with or no longer exist by virtue of this proposal?

V. FISCHER: Mr. Johnson, it was not the intention of the Committee to do away with any existing school districts just by the enactment of this article. The intent was to leave them within a new framework of government. The way they are constituted now they are under the fiscal jurisdiction of municipalities. What we visualize is putting them under the general fiscal jurisdiction of the larger entity which includes all of the people within the particular school district. At the same time I definitely want to point out, and I am sure you will agree that none of us would want to say that just because we are a school district today we would want to preserve it in the same form for a hundred years. We can visualize, and I am sure you could, the expansion of existing school districts, the reconstitution, but we all know that the legislature does have the authority to create and abolish school districts just as they can create and abolish cities.

JOHNSON: I seem to misunderstand the situation slightly because Section 15 of your article, to me at least, indicates that if this article is adopted and this section is adopted, that when the borough is organized, it integrates every special district that then exists within the boundary limits of the borough.

V. FISCHER: That is right.

JOHNSON: Then I seem to be confused by your statement that you have no intention of disturbing school districts but by the same token you are integrating them into the borough. At least that is my understanding.

V. FISCHER: If I may answer that, the intent here is not to destroy the school district but fit the school district into the over-all government that we will be creating, and "integration" is the word that we used here because it would most directly express the intent that the school district becomes part of the over-all functions of the borough.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease a moment while the stenotypist changes her paper. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I just want to elaborate briefly on the last answer, and that was that the explanation lies in the first sentence of Section 15, "The legislature shall provide for the integration ..." There under that clause the legislature could and would take care of any means of integration in such a way there would not be a disruption of the program of both this form of local government and the school district's activities.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I will try and enlarge on this business of school districts quite a little since I was one of the members that was quite concerned with this and brought it in. In sitting as a member of the city council I found that the council has a certain amount of money to provide all of the functions within the city that is necessary, schools being one of them. When the cities had the chore of providing for schools entirely for themselves, the schools, of course, were a major problem. On the incorporation of a school district, the school functions were then, in a sense, taken away from the city and handed to the school district with the provision that the city council of a city within a school district could more or less sit on the budget of a school board. This, of course, created quite a little problem and, as Mr. Davis pointed out, some friendly discussion, but sometimes it was not so friendly. The school board would come with their budget that would say that they needed $300,000; the city in their budget could possibly only provide $200,000; between those two differences something had to be worked out so that it was satisfactory for everybody, and sometimes it wasn't friendly, and so since that time the school districts have tried in the legislature to get fiscal autonomy so that the council couldn't sit on their budget. The thing that is wrong with that fiscal autonomy is that were they allowed to set their own millage rate, collect their own tax dollar, etc., if they were not careful they could break any municipality within a school district. We put this section in here because, at the moment, some of the people represented here as delegates are quite concerned with schools. Unfortunately, there are many of the other functions that are provided in the cities, would be provided in the borough and provided in the state, that are not represented here quite so strongly. The thing that was tried to be pointed out in this article is that the borough assembly would receive a budget from the school district, would receive a budget for information purposes from a city. In the case of schools they would compare the two, they would try to work it out between them so that everybody would be happy because the borough, in a sense, then has to provide the same, or some of the same services in the over-all borough as the city has to provide within the city. Consequently, with the assembly having more than the one function of having schools, having many other functions and so many tax dollars, then would be able to distribute the funds as equitably as possible. It has been my experience, and I think the experience of a good many others, that sometimes these boards or commissions that have to do with one function get a little over-zealous in some of the things that they are trying to do, and it is for that reason, to make close cooperation between education, health, city, any other service that you want to provide, that we have tried to set up this plan. Now, in answer to Mr. Johnson's question about the integration of these districts, it is true that they are incorporated and that they are in a sense a little autonomous, but if the assembly of the borough, in integrating the school district with the borough, accepted the liabilities that the school district has, then it would be a very easy problem to integrate the school district with the borough I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I might mention right here that I don't think we should lose sight of the fact that the legislature would have the authority to state what types of school districts we should have but it is the tax levying authority which the borough would have, the over-all supervision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, a little more on the same vein, under Section 6 it is possible for the assembly to delegate, temporarily possibly, taxing powers to other jurisdictions or service functions, is it not? So that it is conceivable that if the people feel, as Mr. Coghill does, that education is a basic form of government, which I don't agree with, but if they do and that something close to present incorporated school district setup is best, and school districts should be fiscally autonomous, it is conceivable that people within the borough could run for the assembly on such a ticket and, if elected, could then delegate that authority to the school district and approximate as closely as they could the present setup within restrictions supplied by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I believe it could conceivably happen that way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Rosswog, if this article were adopted tomorrow and placed in effect in Anchorage tomorrow, the borough would then take the city council's place in approving or disapproving the school budget within the independent school district, would it not?

ROSSWOG: Yes, it would under the independent school district.

HELLENTHAL: The tax collecting and perhaps the assessing would be transferred to one central agency, namely the borough, would it not?

ROSSWOG: Possibly, yes, it would.

V. RIVERS: Yes, it would.

HELLENTHAL: The school boards would continue just the way they are today?

ROSSWOG: Yes, they would.

HELLENTHAL: There might possibly be a boundary change in the independent school district, but only possibly?

ROSSWOG: Possibly, or when it was decided upon.

HELLENTHAL: Now on the incorporated school districts, would there be any change at all if my premise were adopted and this article were placed in effect tomorrow?

ROSSWOG: No, I don't believe there would be.

HELLENTHAL: How many incorporated school districts remain in Alaska?

V. RIVERS: Nine, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Incorporated, not independent. I think there is just one in Nenana, isn't there?

COGHILL: We are a city school district.

R. RIVERS: Would Mr. Hellenthal yield for a moment to have me ask you to explain the difference between an independent school district and an incorporated school district? Would you just briefly state the difference between the independent school district and the incorporated school district.

HELLENTHAL: Frankly, I know about the independent school district and I am a little rusty on incorporated, but I know you know the answer on that.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think there is about one incorporated school district in Alaska. The independent school districts are composed of the cities and adjacent areas; and under an act of legislature the cities and the adjacent areas after a referendum within the district can get together for school purposes. A rural area which is in an unincorporated section of the country, such as Palmer used to be before it become incorporated, could form an incorporated school district, which is for school purposes only with tax levying power, without being merged with a city. It is simply an incorporated school district. There is about one of those.

HELLENTHAL: One more question only. If the legislature desires to continue the present plan of city-school district agreement on the budget which, under the assumption, would be city-borough agreement on the budget, they could continue that or they could discontinue it and set up fiscal autonomy if they saw fit, could they not, if this article were adopted tomorrow? Let me put it again. If this article were adopted tomorrow, the legislature, if it saw fit, could make the school districts fiscally autonomous as Ed Davis and Coghill suggested, could they not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I think the legislature could establish it so the borough could grant the fiscal independence, if we are all agreed upon the definition of the words "fiscal autonomy" or "fiscal independence". I think it is a power that could be granted under our section.

HELLENTHAL: I define "fiscal autonomy" as the power to collect and levy your own taxes and fix your own budget without the concurrence of anyone on a local level.

V. RIVERS: I think they could grant that power to the borough which would then in turn have to grant it to the school authorities.

HELLENTHAL: That's my question. Are you sure it would have to come from the borough to the school people if this plan were adopted tomorrow? Is it not still in the legislature to make that change?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Any right that the legislature of the state reserves to itself, of course, the borough couldn't have.

HELLENTHAL: Doesn't the state reserve that right under the constitution and under this article, if this article were adopted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, subject to any announcements, I am going to move for a recess. That clock is a little slow, by the way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet at 12:40 o'clock in the ping pong area.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet at 12:40. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Local Government will meet then at 1:00 o'clock in the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? If not --

BARR: I move then that we recess until 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that the Convention recess until 1:30 and asks unanimous consent. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may proceed with reading of communications.

(The Chief Clerk read the following communications: a letter from the Stikine Sportsmen's Association of Wrangel signed by Maurice S. Buness, Secretary-Treasurer, stating their recommendations concerning commercial fisheries and wildlife in the constitution; a communication from Harry S. Truman wishing success to the delegates in framing a constitution; a letter from the Nenana Hi-Lites, Nenana Public School paper, signed by Judith Leise, Secretary; Gloria Fredericks, Editor-in-Chief; and William C. Williams, Production Editor, expressing their gratitude for being permitted to attend the Convention and also requesting a thumbnail biography of each delegate for their special constitutional edition to be published February 22nd; an invitation from the Business and Professional Women of Fairbanks to attend the March of Dimes Benefit Ball to be held at the Elks Club on January 28, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication from Nenana will be referred to the Committee on Administration, and the President will see that a letter is written to the Nenana school group. The communications will be filed. Are there other communications to come before the Convention? We have before us Committee Proposal No. 6/a. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: May we revert to the reading of the journal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection we will revert to the reading of the journal at this time. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Journal of the 51st Convention day, Thursday, January 12, page 2, paragraph 7, insert "R" after Mr." Page 9, first sentence, after "Mr. Knight", change the word "objected" to "seconded." With those two corrections I ask unanimous consent that the journal be approved as corrected for the 51st Convention day, and I believe Mr. Knight has a journal to report on, also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan asks unanimous consent that the journal of the 51st Convention day as reported back to you by the special Committee to read the journal be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Knight, do you have a report?

KNIGHT: Mr. President, the journal for the 52nd day, Friday, January 13, has been reviewed and I do not find any corrections, and I would at this time ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight asks unanimous consent that the journal of the 52nd day be approved. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Is there any other business to come before the Convention before we proceed with Committee Proposal No. 6/a? If not, we now have before us Committee Proposal No. 6/a in the questions and answer stage. Does any delegate desire to ask a question at this time? Are there questions to be directed towards the Committee? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Fischer about the matter of there being more than one city within a borough. I take it from the general language that the council of each city would be either part of the borough assembly or be represented on the borough assembly.

V. FISCHER: That is what we have in mind. One example where you might have two cities within one borough would be Juneau-Douglas. I might say we had a specific communication from Douglas asking that provision be made so that in any such form of government they be given representation.

R. RIVERS: Then I want to ask with regard to the number of city council members and the representation from outside the city. At the hearing in Fairbanks one of the people who appeared spoke more or less from the standpoint of the REA and said they did not want the city to preponderate on the assembly because the city is usually in the utility business and might kind of reach out and take advantage of the rural utility service such as is rendered by the REA. What is your thinking on that?

V. FISCHER: Our thinking all the way through has been in terms of not giving anybody control of the borough. The city representation and the representation from outside of the cities on the borough assembly would be according to whatever standards are prescribed by law. It is our thinking that generally a system of apportionment would probably be set up by the legislature under which both population and area would be taken into consideration. Insofar as utilities are concerned, we have discussed that. We have heard from a number of REA cooperatives, and I think it is the unanimous opinion of the Committee that those matters can only adequately be dealt with by a state utilities control agency.

R. RIVERS: You think the state would very shortly come up with a utilities control agency, do you not?

V. FISCHER: I think we have a proposal to that effect.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, on page 2, Section 3, I would like to ask the Committee, on line 4, if the words "to the maximum extent possible" could be construed to mean the largest possible area?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I think that is the intent. It was pointed out here that these boroughs would embrace the economic and other factors as much as would be compatible with the borough, and it was the intent of the Committee that these boroughs would be as large as could possibly be made and embrace all of these things.

WHITE: Is it the thinking of the Committee that the largest possible area, combining area and population, with common interest, would be the most desirable type of borough?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Could I answer on that? I think that was the idea or the thinking of the Committee that they would have to be fairly large but the wording here would mean that we should take into consideration the area and population and common interest to the maximum extent possible because you could not say definitely that you were taking it all in, but as much as you possibly could.

WHITE: Section 4, Mr. President, could you construe the words "shall be conferred by law" on line 15 to mean that the legislature "must" confer all powers and functions appropriate to local government?

V. FISCHER: If I may answer that, I think the way that should be interpreted is that they derive their powers through law.

WHITE: I wonder if the words don't have a double meaning here.

V. FISCHER: I don't see how it could because I don't think you could force the legislature in any case to confer specific powers.

WHITE: One more question, if I may. I see the wording as to city council members has been changed from the original draft to make it clear now that not all city council members would be on the assembly. The "persons" and "members" being in the plural, I suppose that means two or more council members?

ROSSWOG: That is the feeling, I believe, of the Committee that it would not mean all of the city council members but the representation from the city would be from the city council, depending upon the composition of the assembly, would be prescribed, and they would, whatever they were entitled to, would come from the city council.

WHITE: I wanted to pursue that particular point a little bit and get the Committee's idea as to why people within a city who are not council members should not be eligible to serve on the assembly of the borough.

ROSSWOG: We felt that in order to get integration between your city and your borough, why it would be necessary to have members from the city that were authorized to represent the city. If we set them up as separate members you would have two boards and possibly the conflict between them.

WHITE: Elsewhere it is provided, I don't know the section offhand, but the composition of the assembly shall be provided by law, and that presumably would state how many council members should be on the assembly. In the light of that I wonder why it would not be advisable, also, to at least make it permissible for voters or individuals living within the city limits who do not serve on the council at least to be eligible to run for the assembly.

V. FISCHER: Still in answer to your first part of the question, and I will let the second question go to somebody else, the feeling was that one system that may well be established for the representation of the city on the borough would be if a city, say, were allocated two seats on an assembly, that two terms, when they expire, or two councilmen would go on the assembly and when they ran for election the people would know that those were the two that would also serve on the assembly. Of course, again we are not prescribing it that way. There may be reasons why it should be another way. I think Mr. Rosswog answered the other part in saying that the feeling of the Committee definitely was that the maximum amount of cooperation between the two will be achieved by the city representatives being also members of the council.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, if I may carry this just a little further, I still don't understand why, when you can provide for a city-borough coordination and cooperation through allowing city council members to sit on the assembly, and with the additional factor that those members will be limited, why you should preclude any possibility of members from the public at large within the city limits sitting on the borough assembly. There may be qualified people who don't want to take the time to serve on both bodies. I don't see --

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I believe that in the combinations that have worked out successfully it has been, or there are members of this city council or governing body that also sit on the other, such as county boards, etc. We could set them up separately but we feel you would not have the cooperation between the two that you could have under this plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I might just add a word in answer to that. I think that there you find, what we might say, the secret of success we hope to obtain, is in that very fact that only the city council members are eligible for seats on the assembly. If you have it otherwise then you will have a similar situation as we have in many of the city-county relationships where you might have an entirely different group on the county board as are on the various city councils and naturally they will be bringing in different interests and probably working at odds with one another; and, having only the city council members eligible when this assembly meets, you can be reasonably sure that the city interests are going to be upheld; and, also, when the city meets there is reason to believe that the assembly interests will be upheld because you have the certain ones that are serving on both the assembly and on the city council. I know that bears some discussion, but I think if we would attempt to do otherwise it would bring in this possible disharmony as far as the local government plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. Rosswog, that means then that the city representation is limited to members of the council? There would be no possibility of, say, two council members and a member at large representing the city on the assembly. Is that what you mean?

ROSSWOG: That is the proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, going back to Section 4, the matter has been mentioned many times about the possible thinking as to the size of the boroughs. I took occasion to check back into the criteria which would be used for the establishment of election districts. I find that except for two different words they are the same as the criteria that you use for the establishment of boroughs: population, geographic features, and the election districts say integrated socio-economic areas, and you say economy and common interests which I think means the same thing. Consequently, I might be led to the conclusion that your thinking could well be carried out by making election districts and boroughs contiguous or congruous, the same area, is that true?

ROSSWOG: It was thought this should be left very flexible. Of course, you would not say they should be the same as election districts because of rather unwieldiness for governing. It would more possibly, and should, take more study of whether the size should bear on whether your governing body would be able to supervise an area of that size.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. Hurley, I think we are unanimous in the opinion that many of these boroughs will be substantially the same as election districts but that is just the idea that we had in mind. Some of them won't be feasible, but in our thinking I consider that form of boroughs we felt they would be much the same as an election district.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Did any of you think that they might ever be greater than the election districts in size?

LEE: If that question is directed to me, we did not give it any consideration because actually we have not made any statement about the size. But in our thinking we didn't consider that thought, but it is certainly very possible.

HELLENTHAL: In other words, that the boundaries of the election districts could possibly be maximums governing the size of the boroughs?

LEE: It is possible. It is up to the legislature to decide.

HELLENTHAL: Would it be desirable to make them minimums?

LEE: That would take away the flexible portion which we wish to keep here.

HELLENTHAL: I gather then you would not desire to make them minimums but probably would have little objection to making them maximum.

LEE: I can't speak for the Committee. I would have no objection, personally.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I would like to ask Mr. Rosswog a question. I think it's along the same lines. I notice, Mr. Rosswog, in your first article on local government you said there would be three types of boroughs like you have here, and in that you defined that the "first shall", and the "second-class may" and you left out the third. Is it the Committee's intention that the first-class borough may or shall, will be the ones that are fiscally capable of taking care of their local government problems, and the other classes are ones that are unable to? Is that the reason why you placed the three classes in here?

ROSSWOG: That was our first thinking that they would be established somewhat along those lines, but we felt we could not set up exactly the class until it had been gone further into because three might not be a magic number or there might be some other classes.

COGHILL: But that was your intention?

ROSSWOG: Somewhat along that line, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to be asked of the committee? Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: May I ask the Committee a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: It is in regard to simple sales tax, probably Victor Fischer and Victor Rivers are more familiar with what I am trying to drive at. In the last several years we have been trying to put in a sales tax around the Anchorage area and the reason that I believe it has been voted down is that the school district is outside of the city which would have to have part of their money; for instance, you had two per cent inside of city limits, you could not have more than one per cent outside of the city limits. That was the reason it was voted down. Now, with this new system here coming in, would it be a standard of taxation so far as sales tax is concerned? Two per cent, for example, would go to the boroughs and outside of the city and two per cent so there is no discriminating against the people living inside of the city may go outside the city where there is smaller sales tax?

ROSSWOG: I could answer for the Committee, I believe, on that --

POULSEN: You are setting up three classes of boroughs and this borough you -- (Balance of question inaudible)

ROSSWOG: I believe a tax like that is set up by the legislature and they would put their rules on it. This would not make any difference whatever rules they decided on. That could be accepted by the district.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, are we on Section 5? Is it permissible to ask questions on Section 5 at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Smith, if you wish.

SMITH: To any member of the Committee -- the words, "The composition of the assembly shall be prescribed by law..." has me just a little bit puzzled. I know that the Committee has discussed this and I would like to know their thinking. I will ask first, was it the intention of the Committee that the legislature should prescribe the numbers of the assembly?

ROSSWOG: I did not get that question.

SMITH: The question was in using the word "composition" on line 17 of Section 5, where you say "The composition of the assembly shall be prescribed by law." Was it your intent that the legislature would prescribe the numbers of the assembly either from the city or the borough or from both?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Yes. I believe that was the idea that it should be left open because you may want different numbers or different representation on it which could be set up by the legislature or by the charter.

SMITH: Well, where you say "shall be prescribed by law", as I see it, that would have to be by general law applying to all cities, and it leaves a question in my mind as to whether it would be able to set up the numbers or the composition of the assembly by general law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I think our aim here is to try to make it flexible so that each situation can be met over the entire state. You will find in some of the state constitutions that they say there shall be so many county supervisors and, of course, then they are elected from certain areas and they redivide the county proportionately every so many years, so they have approximately the same number of people or area to represent, but I believe that Alaska is going to be such that there will be a varied number as far as the proportion between the city and the rest of the borough, and I believe that our aim here is to give it the flexibility, leave it up to the legislature. If they would say that there shall be nine on the assembly and they shall be divided according to area and population within each borough, then it will be up to the advisory board or whoever sets up the particular borough to say how many shall be from various cities and how many from the borough at large. And it will vary with each borough depending upon what per cent of the population comes from the city and what per cent comes from the rest of the borough.

SMITH: Can't you foresee difficulties here due to the fact that you will have large populations in some areas, maybe two or three cities, and in other areas you may have a very small population, and to set up by general law the numbers to be included in the assembly it would just appear to me it would not fit the over-all situation.

LONDBORG: Just one word on that. It would be an even greater injustice then for us to attempt to set it up here in the constitution, not knowing what the individual situation may call for. Leaving it up to the legislature they may prescribe that it shall be different in the different areas. They have the possibility of making it very flexible as far as that is concerned.

SMITH: My thought ran the other way, Mr. Londborg, to possibly leaving it up to the borough.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, did you have an answer?

McLAUGHLIN: I was interested to ask the Committee, and I think it probable would answer Mr. Smith's question, under Section 4 they refer to the powers and functions appropriate to the local government requirements of each class of borough "shall be conferred by law," and they refer to classes of boroughs. Isn't it a fact the Committee planned to follow what I believe, for instance, is prevalent in the State of New York -- the legislature would establish various classes of borough charters or boroughs which could be established then to suit the conditions and needs of large or smaller communities?

V. RIVERS: That is correct. Under the city plan of government in the Territory today there are different manners by which they can establish by law. I don't believe there are any charter cities in the Territory today. They could provide two or three optional forms of government by law or they could provide for a charter form which would then give the authority into the hands of the people of the borough to adopt their own charter and that I believe to be the intent of this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I would like to ask a question. I have a general idea but when it gets down to paying the taxes, I am a little dense. I wonder if Mr. Rivers maybe could help me. Just assume, for a hypothetical case, that the district of the entire Kenai Peninsula were made into a borough and I mention that, Mr. Rivers, because you are familiar with it, just as I am. Supposing, according to that system, there would be two councilmen from the city of Seward that would sit on the assembly, or more than one?

V. RIVERS: Well, I would assume, I would say it like this. I don't believe that this word "persons" implies that there shall be more than one. I think it could be any number but it would probably be proportioned upon the amount of the size of the borough there. You might have as many as two or three. You might have nine members in the assembly from the city of Seward; there might be two; Kenai might have one, Homer one, the balance from the sections of the assembly. When we talk about the Kenai Peninsula, I might say for the benefit of the members present, it is an area of about 9,000 square miles, about 3,000 square miles of which is mountainous and the rest of which is arable and very much usable land. I just try to put that across for the picture.

METCALF: How would, say the school in the village of Kenai, who would pay the taxes or how would that be maintained? How would that work?

V. RIVERS: Well, the city of Kenai is unincorporated. They now receive all of their school monies and all of their operating expense for schools from the government from the Territorial level. I don't know what percentage in an organized borough the legislature would desire to refund to the borough, but I can assume that if and when they are ready to organize into a borough they would have sufficient ways and means to come in under and be able to adopt the borough system of government based upon what the legislature had, by that time, established as the amounts they would give from the state level.

METCALF: Do you think the state would refund some to the borough assembly as they do in the cities now?

V. RIVERS: They do now, and outside the cities they carry 100 per cent of the cost of both operations and physical plant, so I am assuming that if the borough decided they were able to assume part of their burden, the legislature would have set up some precedents for the similar situations over the whole Territory by the time they organize.

METCALF: Then the schools in Kenai, they could either incorporate as a school district or be operated by the superintendent of schools for the borough?

V. RIVERS: Well, that gets down into detail that would have to be worked out. Now, I assume the borough being the over-all governing body would make provision for that type of school operation and government within their area. It would have to be done.

METCALF: Then, everyone in the borough, in the Kenai borough, would pay personal taxes and real property taxes?

V. RIVERS: I don't know how much they would pay. I don't know whether or not the borough would levy a tax. I assume it might, but that would be up to the borough assembly and their representatives as to whether or not they desired to accept that form of government.

METCALF: How about fish traps and things sticking out into Cook Inlet? Would they be taxable or not?

V. RIVERS: It would probably be taxable based upon what we understand to be value. We would have, as I understand it, the way you appraise the value of anything on that kind is based upon the replacement value depreciated plus the land value, plus the earning power of an element. Now it is entirely possible that if you have an asset that is that type of an asset that if the borough desired to set up a taxation program on real property that would also be taxed. It is my conception that it would be.

METCALF: That helps a little, I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to be asked of the Committee? Does anyone have a question with relation to Committee Proposal No. 6/a? Is it the desire of the Committee Chairman, if there are no questions at this time, that a recess be declared in order that delegates who might have possible amendments can submit them?

ROSSWOG: I think this might be a good time. I think as far as the last question asked of Mr. Rivers, we should keep in mind, though, that these detailed questions on taxes we also should consider that we are, as we progress and grow, we are going to have some type of rural government and whether we want it on a planned type or whether we shall just let it grow up as it comes along, we will have the same thing, but it might be quite a mess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Is the entire article open for questioning or are we going through it in order?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have been in this article just taking general questions.

BOSWELL: I wanted to refer to Section 12 and the local boundary commission. I wondered if that would be a statewide commission or would it be a commission within the borough?

ROSSWOG: That would be a statewide commission, necessarily, because if it were just on a local level then each one would be trying to get their part they wanted and not the others. It would have to be on a statewide level.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, if I may, I would like to ask one more question of the Committee for clarification, possibly to the Convention; it might clear up a couple of points that I was stressing this morning. Is it the intent of the Committee to set up a framework structure, leaving the working part of it to the legislature; that the legislature may prescribe school districts, health districts within that being brought about under the control of the borough?

ROSSWOG: Well, it was felt that it should be left flexible. Of course, we have the outline; the exact details would have to be drawn up by law.

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, what I was trying to bring out was that in formulating this proposal, you have in your Committee probably gone through all of this over and over again, and I believe that it is a fairly good article, except that it is just the understanding part of it, and what I am trying to bring out is, like on the school districts, the function of the school districts, the functioning of the health districts or of a statewide road program going through a borough, where the borough has to contribute to it, that are you planning to leave all of that entirely up to the legislature -- not to the borough assembly -- to the legislature?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, our purpose is simply to set up a framework here. The state would of necessity reserve to itself certain functions. Any functions that are not reserved to the state can be assumed by the borough, and even further on down, any functions that are not reserved by the borough can be taken by the cities. The state would of necessity provide certain basic functions. For instance, you take a health district; if in a borough there was nothing in the way of a health district setup, and the state wanted to provide over-all health services throughout the state, the state would do it. However, if in an organized borough there was a health district set up and we will say, for the purposes of clarification, that it was over the whole borough, the state then could very easily delegate whatever it wanted to do to the borough to work in conjunction with the health district already in operation.

COGHILL: Carrying that a little bit further, Mr. Doogan, then, in other words, the borough would have the power under the article to establish a borough department of health, or a borough department of education and be able to prescribe a particular division to head that in their borough?

DOOGAN: That would be true, but there is one thing you want to remember: that it is not necessarily the assembly that is going to do this. Any of these functions they want them to perform would necessarily be by referendum from the people within the borough.

COGHILL: They have the power to do it?

DOOGAN: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Do I understand correctly that there will be different classes of boroughs and that there could be a borough which would be comprised of an unincorporated area, and in that unincorporated area the state would of necessity have to set up certain functions and operating procedures, but if we have, on the other hand, an incorporated borough or a borough operating under charter, then the people would then assume their home rule, more or less, and set up their own procedures for handling their own affairs. There would be two different ways of doing things, the unincorporated area and the area that is incorporated under charter?

ROSSWOG: I think that is correct because of the divergence of different sections of the Territory, why, there would have to be several classes.

LONDBORG: I would like to elaborate just a bit on that because I have been naturally concerned about the functions out in what might be unorganized boroughs. I can't quite feature yet some of the areas out in our part of Alaska being organized, at least for some time. They are not ready for it as yet, but if you notice in Section 7, "The Legislature shall provide for the performance of necessary functions in unorganized boroughs." We hope to be included in the various functions that are necessary, such as education, policing, health, and many other functions; and inasmuch as they will be, perhaps, unorganized as they are now, the legislature shall provide, so that it will be a state function very much the same as it is a Territorial function right now, but this is a directive to the legislature allowing for a maximum of local participation and responsibility, shall we say, that is possible in each borough. Now, that is something that I think is very necessary; you can keep the borough from taking part at all to the extent where they, you might say, fall asleep and the time may come when they are ready and they will not have exercised any responsibility and not care to, and I think if the state, through their legislature, will make it possible for them to participate, share responsibility as much as possible, they are going to strive toward organization. By local participation I mean some method whereby the local villages or other areas may cooperate with the state police on a policing system. Perhaps, the state patrolman or the state police can have his men out in these areas elected by the various village councils to work with him, give them certain powers. The state may create an interest in operating their own schools by allowing for school boards to share responsibility of the schools, something that they are not allowed to do now. They have it handed down in a package deal now; that is, as far as the unorganized borough. The state will have to perform it because they will not be organized and able to do it but trying to create responsibility, like getting a child to walk and getting them interested in getting on their own feet. Then on the other extreme will be the first-class city or borough that can apply for the home rule charter. In between we read that the legislature can give a certain amount of home rule, probably set up in a package deal that will be more or less general over the state, that will allow for some participation in home rule in proportion to how they can share in the expenses of it. I thought I would mention that insofar as our interests in what may have to be unorganized areas for some time to come. We did think of leaving parts of the Territory outside of boroughs and just having boroughs where they could be organized, but we felt that would be a mistake because something may happen in a borough that is unorganized that would cause that borough to come into prominence, let's say overnight so to speak, and having the boundaries set up and some local participation they would be much more able and ready to organize and share their full responsibilities.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I had been interested in this particular section, Mr. Londborg, and happy to have the clarification you provided. But I am still somewhat fascinated by the words "shall provide necessary functions." Now, I assume that when different classifications of boroughs are set up that it will be up to the people themselves as to what kind of borough they wish to be. For instance, if the classification should be first, second, and unorganized, or something of that nature, I assume that the people themselves can choose what kind of borough they want to be. With that background who is to decide what are necessary functions? Haven't we here inducement to an area to remain an unorganized borough and to get the state to provide all the necessary functions?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will try to answer that. We thought that at the state level it would be the policy as it has been in the past to offer certain inducements to them to organize. Now, at the present time in incorporated cities there are certain refunds of taxes in the nature of license taxes, liquor taxes, and other taxes that are a percentage, at least, of which reverts back to the organized area. In the extent that the benefits that the legislature sets up will offset the added cost to the people, and the extent of their desire for home rule will govern how far they go in organizing these boroughs, but it was our thought there would be enough inducement for them to organize and exercise home rule so that as time went on they would gradually all become incorporated boroughs. That would take a great deal of time in looking at our map. The thought was that inducements to organize would be offered on the basis of the granting of home rule powers plus certain other inducements that would make it advantageous to them to be boroughs, as we now have that same program of inducement to organize communities.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: If I may add a little word to that, Mr. White, and the rest of the delegates, at present the cities that want to incorporate have to assume a certain percentage of their school taxes, and it isn't that they are not willing to do it, but they may find by refunds, etc., they are not able to, so therefore, you have no inducement to incorporate, and the very thing that you mention, they remain unincorporated for that very reason. We felt that it could be handled possibly different ways, but I will mention two: one is to have some state agency that would survey the whole thing and say now is the time you have to incorporate; there is no way you can get out of it; you have to organize. I believe the method that Mr. Rivers brought out would be the more desirable, by having skilled men that would study this matter and set it up so that it would come in the form of an inducement so that they can see that they are going to benefit, definitely benefit by organizing, by getting into the picture of local government. If we do it the other way and force it upon the people, I think you are going to have it taken with resentment and probably a lack of good local government. Now, as far as wanting home rule, I think you will find that that is a common interest. I think people, most citizens, most cities, villages, be they ever so small, really want home rule. They like to feel they are governing themselves, and by making it possible to share responsibility, to share in the work of the local government, even though they be not organized, and then as they see the financial picture where they will be able to do it, I think they will take the step. You may have a further question on that.

WHITE: No, I think I shouldn't take up more time. My question was whether including this line, if necessary could it be defined by the legislature or if necessary have some absolute definition used in this context.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross.

CROSS: Mr. President, I might refer to the functions that are now being performed in, we will say, in the unorganized districts. They would be police functions, some of the relief or public welfare functions, a certain amount of education; I might say that those functions considered necessary would not be desirable if there is any other way of getting at it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Does somebody else want to pursue this unorganized territory any further? If they do, I will yield.

LONDBORG: I would, Mr. President, just like to add another minute to this discussion. This thought of having the legislature set up for local participation, I think is going to pay off for the state and also make it possible that the particular boroughs will organize sooner, get into more participation. Let's just take the police setup as we have it now, the terrific cost of going out and meting out justice in the various outlying areas. If there would be some way, even now, for more local participation, some way that a local community could actually take their people into hand and mete out certain justice as they might see fit; it may save hundreds and thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money just to save the expense of the marshal traveling around, but as it is now, the city cannot incorporate due to the other burdens thrust on them and, therefore, they can't get the policing power that is given to a city, second class. These are some of the things we are trying to set up in making it possible and also directives to the legislature to accomplish that very thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to pursue a left-handed mention that Mr. Doogan made about relative priority of functions. Is it the intent of this article that the functions of government shall be first at the state level, those that the state does not take over would then be available to the borough, and those that the borough does not take over would be then available to the city, and those the city does not take over would then be available to the service areas, or is there a definite line of authority there?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I will try and answer that. If you look at this borough, the idea of it is that it is an unorganized borough, that it is a little state within a state, it might help to clear up some of this. As we know, the state is going to provide that certain basic functions throughout the state are going to be required. When you get into the organized borough you are going to have certain basic requirements for the whole borough required there. The city, in effect, in some sense is actually a combination of service areas within a borough. The borough, of necessity, in an organized borough to provide for its operation would probably have a certain basic tax to provide schools; if necessary, over the whole borough or portion thereof for health district, but when you get into high centers of population, you, of necessity, have many more services required by those people than you do in the lesser settled areas. That would be my thought on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I don't think that quite answers the question. I don't believe that we have a definite line of authority coming down. It is more the idea that your cities and your borough and your service areas should take on what they can handle and not be definitely loaded down with services. Was that your idea that it should come right down from the state level within each succeeding order?

HURLEY: What I am trying to find out is just where the city fits in this picture. Does the city decide what services it is going to render within the city regardless of what the borough has decided to render?

ROSSWOG: Certainly.

HURLEY: The borough, then, has nothing to say about the services that the city offers its own residents within its boundaries. Is that true?

ROSSWOG: Yes, the city should remain as much the same as today, or practically the same unless there are some gradual changes in the future. They can delegate powers back and forth but the borough would not tell the city that they had to supply certain services or couldn't supply certain services. That is why the two are set up as having the authority.

HURLEY: In essence, then, you have two local government units?

ROSSWOG: Yes, that is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to add a little bit more to that. You might have noticed that in the original draft of our proposal as submitted before the recess we tried to delineate the authority of the city and the borough. After working it over again we ran into some trouble. Here is what we tried to do originally: that the city has control over its internal affairs; that the borough has control over borough-wide affairs, everything including the whole borough, including the city, as well as jurisdiction over problems concerning the city and surrounding areas. Well, we ran into the same question that has plagued the courts for many, many years by trying to interpret constitutions in what are matters of internal concern to a city. It can be worded in various ways, but there is always a question over exactly what is meant. We realize that it is difficult to draw a line of demarcation and that has been one of the reasons why we feel it is so important that we provide for coordination of the two on the level of the governing body.

We, in drafting up this proposal, considered very seriously what the function of cities would be within the borough. We made up a list of questions, and possible alternatives even at one point, including among them the abolition of existing cities and reconstituting them as urban service areas under the borough. However, it was the opinion of the Committee that while that had very definite advantages of completely unified government, that it was too drastic a step to take at one point and to abolish those units altogether. In view of the large investment that they have set out, and in view of the experience of government over the more than 50 years that cities have been in existence in Alaska, since they were the first form of government that we had in Alaska before we even became organized as a Territory; at the same time we visualize the possibility that as the borough becomes a more definite unit of government over the years, which we hope it will, the scope better defined, that all the functions that can best be carried out on the unified basis be transferred over to the borough. There are functions now that are performed by certain cities, like health for instance, which could probably be much better carried on on the larger basis. We have left the way open to a flexibility of functions; we have not tried to say, "Here is the limitation upon one, and here is where the authority of the other one starts." The legislature has the authority to prescribe this boundary where it deems desirable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Section 13 provides for compacts, as it were, between boroughs and cities as they gain experience, does it not?

V. FISCHER: Yes, it does.

HELLENTHAL: And the legislature could require, if they saw fit, in certain fields joint action, could it not?

V. FISCHER: Yes, the legislature could require, and I might point out that even a city that adopts a home rule charter could be told by the legislature that you shall not perform the following function that is hereby declared to be a borough function.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to the proposal? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, it just occurred to me, in light of the last statement by Mr. Fischer, the legislature could only tell the borough a certain thing if it told all boroughs the same thing, is that not true? They could not point to any particular borough --

V. FISCHER: That is true, within a certain class of borough.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does any other delegate have a question? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It seems to me it would not be amiss to run down just a little bit the background of the city as we find it today. We are all familiar with it and living with it, but briefly I think it might help to clarify the picture if, I for one, from my limited knowledge just touch briefly on what has taken place through the centuries. We go back to the early formation of cities in their beginnings and we find the city grouping together, mutually as a group generally for defense and we find that fringe areas in which they had their farms, and rural areas seeking defense in the compact group or area that was able to defend. We find the Grecian nation as a nation mainly governed by cities. We find them excelling in many things within those cities, such as in sports and arts. Later on we find the Roman Empire, an empire of city-states. The city was the first element of local government other than the tribal government; and we find the Roman Empire with its great legions building an empire over the entire world. We see that empire fail over a period of some 600 years by reason of the fact that they were unable to integrate the area between the city government, which had worked quite successfully, and their empire-building government. They were not able to visualize an intermediate tier of government with the proper authority, so for the reason of their senatorial system and the method by which they governed for their Empire down through the intermediate tiers to the city, I think it is considered the basic reason why the Roman Empire as an empire failed. Then we go up through the feudal system where each king or knight or baron had his own area, generally grouped around a city with a rural area. We grew up through that period to where we had kingdoms and they were fairly strong, and we learned the methods of empire government, generally on a fairly small scale; but, then we transfer that picture to the United States, and we, as a nation, have succeeded largely upon the basis of the fact that we were able to recognize not only the national need at the national level but an intermediate tier of government called "states". We have always had the cities, and from the time of the city-state-national government that we formed we have had a great problem in the intermediate tier of government between cities and the state level. I think you will all agree that the state-national level through all these changing years has worked satisfactorily. Now we have outgrown, apparently, the period of which the city can solve the problems of the local area by itself. In the years of more rapidly increasing government we have a vacuum between the city level and the state level. We have tried in many ways to fill it with different forms of delegations of state powers and functions to counties, and similar things called parishes and boroughs, etc., which have been generally based upon a delegation of powers from the state to that area, specific powers. Now we find areas ourselves throughout the United States in chaos with that intermediate tier of government, and it lies with us here to be able to visualize a large enough picture and sufficiently visualize the needs of that intermediate tier of government to come up with a broad general framework that will help to solve it. We do not have here now established that intermediate tier as the states have in such a manner that it cannot be developed healthily. They have to not only undo what has been done through a number of years, but they have to reconstitute it in such a way that it will be workable. As our communications and transportation have increased in speed, and space and time have been narrowed down, the needs of this intermediate tier, if they are going to function properly, become more and more apparent. So, with this idea in mind, and with this approach, we in the Committee have thought, and I say we have thought -- we can't answer all the detailed questions -- those things will be worked out as each borough forms and as each borough goes through its experiences, as the membership of their governing bodies face and meet problems they will be worked out. It is my thought, and I think I speak for all of the Committee, we have considered every contingency we can imagine in detail, and have then tried to apply a general over-all framework, and in our problem here of being able to keep up with detailed answers to hypothetical questions, it is something that can only be proven in time and in the experiences of men in the solutions they arrive at. So, I give you this little explanation just as a layer of background by which you can judge what the problem is. We are now dealing with the problem of delegation back down from the empire level, which is the national level which has gone down to the state and then to the city. We are now dealing with that intermediate tier of government between the state and the city, and our visualization has been strong powers of local government at that level. We have the national administration with its presiding officer, the President and the administrative body and its departments. We have the state on the same pattern, the presiding officer, the legislative body and the departments. We have at this present time the city in the same manner with its mayor, council, and administrative departments. In between that tier we have provided for an area of government along a similar pattern, the presiding officer and assembly and the various departments to administer those problems. In a broad general framework here I think we have set up a pattern and it is not based entirely on what we think, but on what we have tried to derive from the experience of others. I think we have set up a pattern here that can be a model and framework for good government throughout the United States in helping solve some of our problems. I hope this helps you straighten out the thinking in connection with what the problem has been -- it is a mighty big one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I would like to add just a word or two that has come to mind now concerning the relationship of the city to the borough. I think it is entirely feasible to think of a borough where maybe five members from the city council would join two from the rest of the borough, making an assembly of seven. Such a situation would be in a relatively small borough where the city is probably taking over the larger portion of the area of that borough, or nearly so. However, I think if this board that shall have the authority to reorganize, consolidate, dissolve, or merge, if they use their wisdom they will see to it that a borough that has a large city in it will perhaps not be so large but what the city will really have interests out to the edge of the borough. I think you will find that true in many cases in the states where some cities have grown to where they take over nearly the whole county, and I would like to point out here that if that would be the case in our situation, where a city would grow to where its boundary would be the same as the borough boundary, it would be a matter very simple to either disorganize the city or the borough so you would come under one government instead of having the situation that you would have in some cities in the states where they have grown to take over the whole county. And right within the city you have a building called the city hall, you have a building along side, or they may share the same building, called the county government, city police, county police, all performing and competing as far as the same functions are concerned. We have provided here that that can be taken care of to eliminate such duplication of unnecessary activities. I think a lot of it is going to depend upon the ones who shall be given the task of setting up the original boundaries and also taking recommendations for future boundaries, so that only people with common interests, common economy, transportation problems, etc., shall be encompassed in a borough and the borough may, of necessity, be quite large and it may also, of necessity, be quite small.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I ask Mr. Londborg a question? Mr. Londborg, you could also visualize a situation in a large borough where the population outside the city might exceed that within the city, could you not?

LONDBORG: Definitely so, depending on who would set up the boundary and where.

R. RIVERS: I just wanted to bring out the balance and the emphasis. You can visualize a situation where there might be as many assemblymen from outside the city as inside?

LONDBORG: That is correct.

R. RIVERS: In other words, those things will all be adjusted under some proportion with area representation?

LONDBORG: That is the desire as far as we have set it up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be asked of the Committee? Does any delegate have a question to ask at this time? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would move that we recess until 3:30 for the purpose of conferring with the Local Government Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would that be satisfactory with the Chairman and the Committee? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Yes, Mr. President.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Style and Drafting will meet in the ping pong room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other announcements to be made before we have this recess? The Chair would like to have each delegate understand now that the Committee on Local Government is going to meet, and they will be available to answer any questions relative to any amendments you might have to offer. You may submit your amendments to them at that time. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Point of inquiry. Is this rule, or what I have heard announced as a rule, which presupposes the idea that we have to submit an amendment to the Committee and have them cleared with the Committee before they be presented on the floor. Was that actually adopted as a rule or simply a suggestion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, it was adopted as a rule one evening when we considered some of the proposed rules as submitted by the Rules Committee which were not adopted, but that is one that was adopted. However, as you noted last evening, the Committee Chairman seemed to be quite lenient in accepting proposals but it seemed that it does expedite the procedure. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, as a member of the Rules Committee, I would like to explain that clearing with the committee does not mean you have to obtain the approval of the committee. You simply present it and discuss it with them. If they like it and choose to make a committee amendment out of it -- so much the better. If they turn you down, you have at least presented it, so you may bring it on the floor yourself.

JOHNSON: That is a different interpretation than the word "clearing" with the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, it does not mean you cannot present your amendment later. Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: I would like to have a short meeting of the Ordinance Committee and any members here -- it will be short so it won't interfere with Local Government, but the members here who are particularly interested in the fish trap matter, we would like to have you say a word or two to us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Engrossment and Enrollment Committee has a problem. We still have Committee Proposal No. 14 in the Committee and we have been holding it up for the description by metes and bounds, or whatever you call it, on the districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, can you answer that?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, I conferred this morning with the people in the Mining Department with regard to a preparation of a schedule and they have gotten a little too ambitious. They were trying to make each district stand on its own feet, and as a result they were quite long in the schedule. So, they are revising the schedule so it will be complete in itself and each district will be described but it will refer from one to another for brevity's sake. They tell me it should be ready today or tomorrow.

SWEENEY: Would it be all right to hold back the report until that is received?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, the Chair feels that the report may be held until that is received. If there is nothing else to come before the Convention, unanimous consent is asked that the Convention stand at recess until 3:30. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 6/a? The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "By the Local Government Committee and Delegate Hellenthal: Section 1, page 1, line 7, after 'tax-levying' add 'jurisdictions and otherwise minimize the number of'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rosswog?

ROSSWOG: This amendment has been approved by the Committee, and I would like to ask unanimous consent that this wording be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog asks unanimous consent that the proposed committee amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed committee amendment once more.

(The Chief Clerk read the amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of this proposed amendment?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Please read the sentence as it would read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk read the sentence with this proposed amendment included.

CHIEF CLERK: "...and to provide a framework which will accommodate future development and prevent the duplication and overlapping of independent tax-levying jurisdictions and otherwise minimize the number of local government units."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, that might be all right with Style and Drafting to improve it, except I think the word "otherwise" doesn't fit in with the framework of the sentence.

ROSSWOG: I believe it was meant simply to clarify, and it would be satisfactory with the Committee, I'm sure, for Style and Drafting --

R. RIVERS: Could we say "minimize" without the word "otherwise" in there? Because we've already spoken. Mr. President, in that sentence we've spoken of providing a framework, preventing duplication, and overlapping of independent tax-levying jurisdictions, and -- but then, I'll leave it to Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I address a question to the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: Aren't the city and the borough, of necessity, going to be overlapping tax jurisdictions?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Well, I think we have made provision for that by stating that they each shall have the powers.

WHITE: They each have powers to tax, and they're overlapping units of government, so therefore, aren't they overlapping tax jurisdictions?

ROSSWOG: No, they're not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, that is the reason for that -- having the same men serve on both the city council and on the other -- is to take care of the fact that they do each have their own taxing power. And, you would, in that way, be able to have something to pull over. But you're doing away with all the other special service districts, each one coming into their own and overlapping.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection at this time to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of the committee amendment? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 1? If not, are there proposed amendments for Section 2? Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President --

PRESIDENT EGAN: There's a committee amendment, Mr. Hilscher. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "On page 1, line 13, strike the word 'only'. On line 14, insert the word 'only' after 'cities'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I move and ask unanimous consent that this change be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed committee amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: The way it originally read it may have meant taxing powers only, and the intended meaning was taxing powers to organized boroughs and cities only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I ask a question of the Chairman on that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question.

COGHILL: Does that preclude any organized district within an unorganized borough of taxing through the legislature?

ROSSWOG: No, it would not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the request for the adoption of the proposed amendment? If there is no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 2? Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, line 12, change 'boroughs' to 'province', and this change will be made throughout the article."

HELLENTHAL: Point of information, Mr. President. There are several amendments along this line on the desk. Some wish to change the name to "counties", some to "province", and other variations. I suggest, for the purposes of uniformity, of expeditiousness, so that we can get to the meat of the thing and then take the embellishments later, that we pass all matters relating to name until we're all through with the article, and then take it up then. And, Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that any amendments dealing with changing the name from "borough", or retaining it, or to any other name, be held up until after we have finished amending the sections of the article.

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent has been asked and it has been moved and seconded that we hold the matter of names until after we have adopted all other amendments. Is there any objection? Hearing no objection then, it is so ordered and the amendment will be held until that time. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: It will be too late. It will be cold at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 2? If not, are there amendments to be offered to Section 3? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question of the Chairman of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I'm wondering about the establishing of these boroughs according to such standards as the legislature may prescribe. I should think it would be according to such "patterns" or other words other than "standards". So I'd like to have that held over for a little further thought on that one point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be proposed for Section 3? If not, are there amendments for Section 4? If there are no amendments to Section 4, are there amendments to Section 5? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, at our meeting today we were not able to go over the amendments to Section 5. We have a little change in wording, and it's being studied, and at our next recess we will take them up. I would like to ask, and ask unanimous consent that Section 5 be held up, and we go on to other sections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog asks unanimous consent that Section 5 be held over until after the next recess. Are there amendments to Section 6?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee amendment to Section 6. Page 3, line 1, after the word 'law' insert 'or charter'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, this is a committee amendment, and has been approved by the Committee. I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that this change be made. This is simply to make the provisions by law or charter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed committee amendment. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I ask a question relative to this amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Rosswog, is it actually necessary to include the words "or charter"? Certainly the charter would come from the law, or be created a creature of the law. So it would be included in the word "law" I should think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Johnson, I do not feel that it is exactly necessary, but it was felt it might clarify it a little more there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment? If not, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 6? Are there amendments for Section 7? Are there amendments for Section 8? Are there amendments for Section 9? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May I ask the Chairman a question about Section 8?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. Rosswog, wouldn't "provisions" be a better word than "standards" in line 16?

ROSSWOG: What was the word, please, Mr. Robertson?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Wouldn't "provisions" be better than "standards" on line 16, page 3?

ROSSWOG: Well, I don't think it would make too much difference in that, Mr. Robertson, and we would be willing to leave it to Style and Drafting, if they wish to change it.

HELLENTHAL: Did Mr. Robertson ask unanimous consent?

ROBERTSON: No, I just asked a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be proposed for Section 9? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, one subject that I overlooked. May I ask Mr. Rosswog a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no objection, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Rosswog, in Section 9, why are the cities of first class pointed out in charters in amending and adopting home rule with priority over cities of the second class? Why can't cities of the second class have the same prerogative?

ROSSWOG: I would like to refer you to Mr. Fischer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: On this matter the Committee originally just had "cities". The feeling was that our classification laws probably need a substantial amount of overhauling. Since we have some cities of the first class that have a population of something like 55 people -- some even less than 40 people -- it was felt that home rule power should not be automatically granted to all cities; that the legislature should be able to prescribe the standards by which a city may elevate itself, or may be elevated into class 1 status. Now, the same thing was true for the boroughs of the first class. We didn't want to give a blanket home rule provision in there, but to leave some discretion and flexibility on this particular subject. And we don't necessarily mean that only cities of the first class existing now can adopt home rule charters. And, as you also will note, in the following section, the legislature may extend home rule to other classes of boroughs and cities.

COGHILL: Well, my question was, is that cities of the first class now, on Territorial status, or when you revise your code?

FISCHER: Of now, unless the legislature revises, and we have in mind that there probably should be some revision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 10? To Section 11? Are there amendments to be proposed for Section 12?

CHIEF CLERK: I have a committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, line 22, after the word 'proposed' insert 'local government'."

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, this is also a committee proposal, and has the agreement of the Committee. I would move and ask unanimous consent that these words be inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed insertion.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed insertion again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed committee amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments for Section 12? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question.

ROBERTSON: Is this local boundary commission supposed to come within the executive department of the government, or is it a separate commission?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Well, we felt that it could be a separate commission, but it would be under the executive department.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments for Section 12? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I reserve the right to discuss with the Committee an amendment that would place this under the executive department.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal.

ROSSWOG: Yes, the Committee would be glad to discuss that with you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments for Section 13?

CHIEF CLERK: I have a committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: This is also Local Government Committee and Mr. Hurley. "Page 5, line 11, strike the words 'for a' and substitute 'comma including'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, this change has the approval of the Committee, and I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that it be adopted. The wording before held it to "a cooperative and joint administration", and there is a possibility there would be other types of cooperation that should be included, so "included" would change it to all of them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, may I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may ask a question.

KILCHER: Mr. Rosswog, in Section 12, I see a commission is established by the legislature as the case is now, and it will act on its own motion or own petition. Could you conceive that a petition -- it would most likely come from some citizens from a borough? Don't you think that possibly the decision of the board should be brought to a referendum in that district instead of local self-government?

ROSSWOG: Mr. Kilcher, we have left that open if they should require a referendum. We felt that they should be able to petition, or the commission could start its own study on a change, but it was left open as to how they should require a referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 12? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: May I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

HINCKEL: I thought I understood this Section 13, but after changing this word in line 11 -- I'm not sure just what they mean by the word "cooperative".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will someone on the Committee answer that question, what is meant by "cooperative" in Section 13. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, in rereading the language I see there is a redundancy there. I might mention that it has been thought of by the Committee that since a similar inter-governmental cooperation provision is contained in the executive article, as we had in second reading, that probably the two would be combined. I realize there is some question about the wording there, but again we thought we'd just leave it over. The intent, generally, is clear to leave the way open for agreements of various types.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Meaning cooperation between various government agencies or other local government groups? You expressed the intent, that's what I want to know.

V. FISCHER: Yes, the intent is to provide for cooperation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I ask a question with reference to Section 13?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: The last sentence says: "That subject to such limitations as may be established by law or charter, the cities may transfer to the borough in which it is located any of its functions or powers." Now in this I would like to ask the Chairman what sort of functions or powers did the Committee have in mind in that respect?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Well, we felt there should be a transfer of powers between the city and the borough; and also a return of those powers. There are services of different kinds that might be worked together, and that the way should be open for that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does that answer your question, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: Well, I still don't understand just exactly what they had in mind. Do you mean police power, or health measures, or such things as the fire department, or --

V. FISCHER: Yes. Our thought was to leave the way open, for instance, to the transfer of health functions, sanitation inspection, transfer of the fire department to a consolidated fire department covering your whole large urban, and possibly, rural area; possibly road maintenance, both within and outside the city, could be put on a single level. Those are the types of services that we had in mind.

JOHNSON: Well, for instance, using Fairbanks as an example. We have a large urban area that is not at present, or at least, certainly not included within the services of Fairbanks City Fire Department. Would it be possible, under this, or is it your intent, under this, to extend the services of the Fairbanks Fire Department beyond the city limits, and to include all of the urban areas?

V. FISCHER: Our intent was that the way be left open, using your example, to establish a, say fire protection district covering the whole greater Fairbanks area; and that the city could transfer, on one basis or another, its fire fighting equipment to the district; and then the people of the whole district would then pay a fee for the fire protection service.

JOHNSON: How would this fee be handled? On taxation basis, or so much per call, or what?

V. FISCHER: That would be completely left open -- up to whatever organization was felt most desirable. It could be through a direct tax levy, through an assessment, through charge per call, or something.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, Mr. Fischer, this has to do with agreements between local governments. This means that the terms would depend upon what the city agreed to and what the surrounding area agreed to.

V. FISCHER: Yes, sir. This does not provide for compulsory --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Fischer, doesn't this phrase in Section 13 pretty well answer a lot of the questions regarding large school districts that would have a city within it? This would take care of that proposition, would it not?

V. FISCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments for Section 13? For Section 14? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move that in line 18 the word "shall" be changed to "may".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves that the word "shall" on line 18 in Section 14, be changed to "may".

McLAUGHLIN: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Has the Committee been consulted on this matter?

HELLENTHAL: That should be a point of information, I would think, rather than a point of order -- because he doesn't know the answer. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: A point of information, Mr. McLaughlin. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: The Committee was consulted on that, and we wish to stay with the wording in our proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I don't know whether that was seconded or not.

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves, and Mr. Knight seconds the motion.

HELLENTHAL: I hate to be "the skunk at the lawn party", but, as a matter of principle, I feel that, unless a grave, grave need exists, that no agencies, departments, commissions, or otherwise, should be set up in the constitution. Consistency dictates this. I listened avidly and with great interest to the arguments in the presentation of the executive article, and I was completely won over by those arguments. And the logic that compelled me to vote in upholding that committee proposal compels me to make this amendment. I don't like to. Now, I'm sure that the legislature, in its wisdom, will provide for this agency, and I see nothing wrong with it. I think it's very desirable. But, the word "shall" I think is poor constitutional language, and inconsistent with the policies that we have agreed upon heretofore in this constitution. Now, you say, "Well, there are some boards that are created, and are made mandatory." That is true. The board of apportionment must be a mandatory constitutional board; the board for fixing boundaries, that was set up in this article in Section 12, I think should be a constitutional agency of the executive department, just like this Section 14 board would be; but unless there is some very, very compelling reason given for including such an agency as proposed in Section 14 in the constitution, I think we're violating the principles and policies we've already adopted here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to argue with Mr. Hellenthal, but I'd like to give just a little of the Committee's thinking on this; which was that we are leaving the provisions of this article quite flexible, and there will have to be quite a lot of work done on it. We would like to see, particularly, that there should be some department in the executive branch that would take care of local government matters, in advice, and help in setting them up, etc.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, it occurs to me that with some 13 references to what the law or the legislature is going to do in this article, that the first state legislature, upon reading it, will hasten to provide an agency to take care of the problem. So, I don't think it makes much difference whether it says "shall" or "may".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: As I read Section 14, "Provision shall be made by law for an agency in the executive branch..." Could they not assign the secretary of state as the agency? Does it have to be a separate agency. They could assign it to the secretary of state, and if the amount of work demanded sufficient time and material, they could set up a subagency, or even a section of the secretary of state for that. It's immaterial to me. I think the word "shall" is perfectly all right.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment, as offered by Mr. Hellenthal, be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, by saying "no". The "noes have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. The Chair would like to state at this time that there will be pictures of the Juneau fire on TV at 7:00 p.m.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: What channel?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Channel 2, as the chair understands it. Are there amendments to Section 14? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I have a question. In view of my question this morning about what the charter drafting agencies meant, and your answer, does the Committee have any objection to inserting the word "their" before the word "charter"? To insert the word "their" in line 21, before the word "charter"? Do you have any objection to doing that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask for the adoption of that amendment, Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: What I wanted to find out -- I ask unanimous consent to do that.

R. RIVERS: I object, until I hear more of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson so moves.

HELLENTHAL: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Helleenthal seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I did it only because I wanted to hear the explanation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog, you care to --

ROSSWOG: No, I just wanted to say, at the moment I did not see any objection, but --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Line 21, before the word "charter" -- I asked Mr. Rosswog this morning what the term "charter drafting agencies" meant, and as I understood his answer, he said it referred to the charter drafting agencies of the local government. So I think we ought to add "their" in there, so it could be distinguished from something else.

R. RIVERS: I understood that the charter drafting service would probably come from the state, and that the local governments that are stepping up the ladder to complete the local -- or you'd call it home rule -- would be getting their charter drafting assistance from a state agency that assists local governments in solving their problems. And, it could very well be this agency, or subdivision of this agency, which assists the local governments. Now, I only wanted to be clear. I'd like to hear from Mr. Fischer on whether these charter drafting deals are within the local government, or whether that assistance is going to be obtained from the state, before I know how to vote on your amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to state that it was the intent of the Committee that these charter drafting agencies be within the local government units; and, therefore, "their" expresses fully the Committee's intent.

R. RIVERS: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers withdraws his objection. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I renew my motion for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? If there's no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Gray's suggestion that an agency need not necessarily be created to accomplish the purpose of Section 14, which suggestion I believe the Committee agreed, would suggest to me that the words "which shall" on line 20 might better be changed to "to". "To render assistance", and perhaps "to collect and publish information". Is there any objection to inclusion of that? Strike "which shall" on line 20, substitute the word "to"; and to precede the "collect" on line 22 with the word "to". If not, I'll ask unanimous consent that those changes be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Does the Chief Clerk have that? Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 20, delete 'which shall', and insert the word 'to'; and on line 22, insert the word 'to' before 'collect'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. Are there any questions relative to this? Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 14? If not, are there amendments to Section 15? If there are no amendments to Section 15 -- Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, at this time I would like to ask a question. May I do so?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

HURLEY: One of general intent. Is my idea correct that no organized borough will become effectuated without the voice of the people within the area?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you care to comment on that, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: The answer, I think, would be "no". The borough, as visualized here, is even more than just a unit of local government. It is also a unit for carrying out what otherwise are carried out as state functions; and when a certain area reaches a position where it can support certain services and act in its own behalf, it should take on the burden of its own government. As was explained earlier today, we don't actually visualize that the state will force boroughs to organize, since we feel that they should be set up on such a basis that there will be enough inducement for each one to organize. However, just as you have in school districts, the legislature has granted power to, I think, the board of education to incorporate school districts when they reach a certain minimum population so that they would assume their own load.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does that answer your question, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions at this time, or are there other amendments to Section 15? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I'd like to ask a question, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: In line with Mr. Hurley's question, I am again now confused, because I thought that I understood, but now I'm afraid that I do not, after Mr. Fischer's answer. If he had said that the answer was that the people would have the right to decide, why then I would have felt that I knew what was going on. My interpretation was that, up until such time as the borough adopted a charter, that they would operate under rules that would be set up by the legislature, and at the time that they decided to organize, why they would then adopt a charter, and that the people would, at that time, accept the charter by some sort of a referendum or something like that. Am I completely confused now, or --

V. FISCHER: No. I might not have made my answer completely clear. The legislature would have the authority to establish an organized borough. When it comes to adopting a charter, that is something that is up to the people. A borough does not have to adopt a home rule charter.

HINCKEL: Up until the time they do, though, they will operate under some sort of regulations that are set up by the state?

V. FISCHER: Under the general law of the state.

HINCKEL: But you would call that an organized borough?

V. FISCHER: Yes, and I might say that the legislature may very well see fit to provide that before a borough could be organized, that the people do approve it by referendum. The question

I was answering was whether we were definitely setting it up on a voluntary basis. But we're not. We're leaving it to the legislature whether a referendum will or will not be required.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I yield to Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I just wanted to follow that out a little bit, and ask Mr. Fischer why it was that the referendum idea was used only in the charter portion of the act -- the proposed charter and borough?

V. FISCHER: Well, as I tried to explain, there is some question as to whether or not the state would want to force the organization of a borough. There are reasons that the state may have for organizing a borough. However, when it comes to adoption of a charter, the people, in other words, set up their own form of local government at that time. I mean, they prescribe the rules, etc. That is something that is not of direct state concern, whereas, the organization of the borough, in the first place, would be, and so that is left up completely to the people, by referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, this was on a point of clarification. Mr. Fischer said that until a charter was granted, that they would operate under the laws or regulations promulgated by the legislature. That was the general intent, I believe, and I'd like to ask you, Mr. Fischer, if the legislature may not deal with an organized borough, and delegate taxing powers, and other powers, to an organized borough or city which has not applied for a charter?

V. FISCHER: Yes. Certainly.

R. RIVERS: Well, that's the point I wanted to make clear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: If someone else wants to speak, I've talked too much.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I'd like to ask a question. Did I understand Mr. Fischer, that the proposition of whether an area should organize itself into a borough is put before the people. Is that right? Or whether they vote "yes" or "no"?

V. FISCHER: It may or may not be, as the legislature sees fit.

METCALF: In case it should be -- legislature should see fit to let it out on referendum basis, I wonder if they would know how many representatives the rural areas will have on the assembly, and how many representatives the cities will have on the assembly?

V. FISCHER: Well, I'm sure that the organization of boroughs would be prescribed by general law before they start organizing the boroughs. They would have to have the system prescribed previously, so the people would know what the borough would be.

METCALF: Well, I'm wondering, again, supposing a borough should get into a tight fix, or should buy something it wouldn't like? Is there a way to appeal to get out of the fix?

V. FISCHER: That again is left up to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher has been attempting to get the floor. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. Fischer, if I may ask you a question, this charter which the people of an unorganized borough may ask to have applied to them, will they set up the charter themselves, with due assistance, legal or common assistance?

V. FISCHER: Yes.

KILCHER: Are there any standards set for that charter? Could you envisage these charters to change greatly from borough to borough, and yet be acceptable to the legislature?

V. FISCHER: The home rule charter could be quite different from borough to borough. I think that, for instance, the form of their administration may differ. Some may want a borough manager -- like a city manager form of government. Others may want to have the equivalent of a mayor as the chief executive. So, there could be various differences.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. Fischer, when I think of local self-government, I do not think of it mainly in terms of the executive, I think of it largely in terms of legislative and policing powers, too. In other words, two local self-governments. Now, do you assume that the state executive government and the legislature will be willing or reluctant to delegate their powers to boroughs, or do the boroughs have certain demands that they can make?

Constitutional demands? I would like to see something in the constitution that they may ask -- not be given. In other words, the Section 15 creates in my mind, and some others, that this borough -- this unorganized borough is also a well-domesticated borough. You said a while ago that you should be willing to take the burden. I begin to see now why the word "borough" may be a very good one. Now, you talked about inducements a while ago, inducements dangled in front of the borough. I'm not worried about what inducements -- how I might be induced of doing a thing. I would like to know what rights the borough might have.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I can see why you're putting your question in the way you do, since you're a coauthor of an amendment to change the name of this unit; but to answer your question, no right that the people within the borough would have would be beyond the reach of the legislature by general law. The legislature could deny the exercise of any right just as they can deny today within cities or any place else. However, unless the legislature denies a specific right, it will belong to the people within the borough.

KILCHER: Could you admit us more self-government, not in the administrative sense, but in terms of participation, in form of referendum, etc? To give you an example, Mr. Fischer, I'm living in a PUD, and dissatisfaction has been generally expressed with the Territorial PUD Act in my area; and some of the people down there, during the Christmas recess, had voiced the fear that the borough may be some sort of a super PUD with ramifications, more or less, but inasmuch as they are dissatisfied with the lack of provision in the PUD, there is referendum. The PUD is run, as you say, on a manager basis, on the board basis where the people have very little to do during the year -- practically nothing to say, except to choose their management.

V. FISCHER: May I answer your question?

KILCHER: Yes.

V. FISCHER: That is where the adoption of a charter comes in. The people of the borough will have the say in whether they will require a referendum for this and that, or whether a referendum will not be required. When they adopt a charter, they will get together, just as we're doing here, and write the constitution or charter for that borough. And they can put in referendum or they can leave them out. They can provide for initiative, recall, anything they want.

KILCHER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. Fischer, a little while back, you said there might be very good reasons why the state would want a borough to organize. Could you give us some of the reasons?

V. FISCHER: The general function of conducting elections, for example, is a state function. Where local governments are organized, the local government units carry out that function. Recording is generally considered a state function, supervised by the state. Where local governments are organized, they generally carry on recording functions. Otherwise, the state has to carry on those functions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: It was just pointed out to me that I apparently made an error in the statement I made before, and that was in saying that the board of education can force school districts to incorporate. They don't, apparently, force them. They just go to a school district when it reaches a certain size -- or they have authority to go to them and say, "We will withdraw high school services from your area unless you form a district." And that is pretty much the way the state can operate if it wants to establish these boroughs.

McNEES: Mr. President, Mr. Fischer's answer to Mr. Kilcher's question, the original question, raised a question in my mind. Will the unorganized borough have a charter?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: No.

McNEES: All right. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Emberg. EMBERG: I'd like to ask a question of the Committee in reference to Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Section 7? Mr. Emberg, you may ask your question.

EMBERG: I haven't any quarrel with the intent of this provision, I understand it fairly well, but I wonder if the language, particularly in reference to the use of the word "maximum", will accomplish what the Committee has in mind? If the legislature provides for the performance of the necessary functions in unorganized boroughs and the rest of that would be interpreted to mean that they would set a maximum for the local participation in, for instance, the police force, the maximum participation would still have to be 99 per cent. I mean, the flexibility, I don't think, is provided by the language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could the Committee answer that question? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I had a suggestion that might clear it up. Now, I hadn't had a chance to talk to the Committee about it. We may want to do that at a recess, but the thought was that the maximum of local participation responsibility possible in each borough. And it might be well to even put that in. That is the intent. Would that help at all, Mr. Emberg?

EMBERG: Well, it would clear up my objection. I was just wondering what interpretation the legislature will put upon that directive to set the maximum.

LONDBORG: I have been thinking about that myself, and we'll give that consideration when we have a chance for a recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Londborg, was it the intention that the legislature would set a maximum, or wasn't it simply the intent of the Committee that in providing for these functions that the legislature would try to provide for the greatest possible measure of local participation?

LONDBORG: I believe your latter is the correct intent of the Committee, that not to set a maximum, but to allow for all that they are able to assume.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other questions to be asked of the Committee at this time? If not, Mr. Rosswog, what is your desire with relation to a recess?

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask for a 15-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Your Committee on Administration would like to meet at that time for a short meeting with the President of the Convention attending upstairs in the committee room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Administration will meet immediately upon recess. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: The Rules Committee will meet immediately upon recess in the ping pong room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Rules Committee will meet immediately upon recess in the ping pong room. Are there other committee announcements? The Committee on Local Government will be meeting to hear any of the delegates at the rear of the gallery immediately upon recess. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning, and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: May I just make a statement? I won't object.

COGHILL: With standing committee announcements.

ROSSWOG: The Committee on Local Government is having the Section 5 mimeographed, so I think it would be a good idea for us to recess and come back tomorrow morning. Everyone will be rested and it will give everyone a chance to think this over.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements pending the motion to adjourn? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I have a very brief committee report on rules, which, if adopted now, might speed the operation in the morning. The Rules Committee, considering this matter of pending amendments as to the redesignation of "borough", submits this temporary proposed rule: "Before any amendment as to the name of the local government unit designated as 'borough' in Committee Proposal No. 6/a shall be in order, all names which are to be considered will be submitted to the Chief Clerk and read, that the proponent of each name be allowed not more than three minutes to speak in favor of his suggestion, that the Local Government Committee be given five minutes to defend use of the term 'borough', that the roll of delegates be called with each member to answer with his choice of all the names proposed including 'borough', that successive run-off roll calls be taken, dropping one name each time, until the Convention's first choice is determined." We submit that, Mr. President, in line with our experience on 20, 21, 19, etc., and I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the unanimous consent request by Mr. Riley. Does that mean, Mr. Riley, that any delegate can speak for not more than three minutes? On each word, if he so chooses?

RILEY: Any advocate of a particular name may do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: How about the other delegates?

RILEY: That wasn't covered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, you don't mean by that that after one name is dropped, they can start all over again and speak three minutes on another name of their choosing?

RILEY: One time around.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You've heard the unanimous consent request of the Chairman of the Rules Committee. Is there objection? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: One question, Mr. President. Mr. Riley, what about the coauthors? Can they speak their three minutes? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

RILEY: I personally would concede it. The Committee didn't consider it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Does this mean that we can start voting on 21 and then go down? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there objection to Mr. Riley's unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the proposed rule is ordered adopted. Are there committee announcements to be made at this time? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I'd like to report that the Style and Drafting Committee will have all of its subcommittees working this evening during the time that the Convention is not in session here on the floor; and those subcommittee meetings will be held in Fairbanks at various places. Since they are meeting in small groups, I don't think it's necessary to announce where, since it wouldn't be practical to have spectators anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, the Local Government Committee will meet on arrival here in the morning, and be at the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Local Government will meet upon arrival here in the morning in the gallery. Are there other announcements? The Chair wishes everyone well this evening. If there is nothing else to come before the Convention, unanimous consent is asked that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow. The Convention stands adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 20, 1956

FIFTY-NINTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We are happy to have Reverend John Stokes of the University Community Presbyterian Church with us this morning. Reverend Stokes will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND STOKES: Let us all pray. Almighty God, we are grateful unto You for this new day and the opportunities which You give us to fulfill the task to which we have been called. Give these delegates hope, wisdom, faith, and love, that the document they produce may give equality to all men, freedom and responsibility in the law of the new state and under Thy grace. In the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Six absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: If there is no objection, could we hold the report until later in the day?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the report will be held in abeyance until later in the day. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside of the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Reports of select committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? If not, is there any unfinished business to come before the Convention at this time? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to report, or introduce a committee proposal, if they have been distributed, on Style and Drafting for further consideration by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection we will revert to the introduction of committee reports, that is the Style and Drafting Committee's report on Committee Proposal No. 15.

MCLAUGHLIN: No. This is Committee Proposal No. 15 by Style and Drafting concerning miscellaneous articles.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 15 for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 15. GENERAL AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS." I think we probably ought to read the report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you want to read the letter?

CHIEF CLERK: "Your Committee on Style and Drafting submits herewith a proposal for consideration by the Convention. The proposal covers the subjects which the committee chairmen asked this Committee to consider. It would be appropriate for the Convention to consider this proposal in conjunction with Committee Proposal No. 12 on 'General and Miscellaneous Provisions'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 6/a, in the amendment stage. Do we have any committee amendments before us as this time, proposed committee amendments? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, we passed by Section 5 in going through this the first time, and at this time we have an amendment to Section 5 that we would like to propose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption of the proposed committee amendment, Mr. Rosswog?

ROSSWOG: Yes, I will. I think it should be read first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 5 and substitute the following: 'Section 5. The governing body of the organized borough shall be the assembly. The composition of the assembly shall be established in accordance with law or charter provided that each city of the first class and each city of any other class designated by law shall be represented by one or more persons who shall be members of the city council and that the additional members of the assembly shall be elected from and by the qualified voters living outside such cities.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that this change be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed committee amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I object temporarily.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The subject is open for discussion. Is there discussion on the proposed committee amendment? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, this amendment just came before me some 30 seconds ago. I have been concerned with this particular section as I think a great many other people have. I think the amendment offers a very substantial improvement over the original as far as indicating a composition of the borough assembly. The thought has occurred to me, and I have expressed it to other people, that it might be desirable in setting up these local governments, or establishing for the people in an area, in establishing their local government, to provide for some other method of electing their representatives based upon the particular problems in the area involved. As I say, it is very difficult for me to argue this thing very sensibly because of the short time in which I have had to look this thing over. I have prepared an amended article myself, and the more I look the two over they say practically the same thing. Now, may I ask a question, if this amendment now is adopted, does it then preclude any amendments to Section 5, or the second time around do we have a chance to amend this Section 5?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. It could be amended again.

HURLEY: I withdraw my objection then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed committee amendment? Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I inquire of the Chairman of the Committee when they say "qualified voters living outside such cities", does he intend that living outside would be the rough equivalent of residency?

ROSSWOG: Yes. That would be the intention, that it would be the residents outside of the cities that would be able to represent their representatives on the assembly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Committee a question. Is it possible under Section 5 that the city council complete would also be complete in the assembly? Is it quite possible?

V. FISCHER: I think that would be possible only if the borough was the same size as the city, or if the legislature provided that the people outside of the city shall have no representation.

GRAY: It could be so?

V. FISCHER: I could not imagine it happening.

GRAY: I could imagine where you have, we'll say, 95 or 99 per cent of your people within the city limits and with a large land area, unpopulated land area around the city -- you know, a very, very small fringe. In a case like that would you conceive that the city council would also be the borough assembly, identical?

V. FISCHER: I guess in a case like that it would have to be, if there is such a situation where no one lived outside of the limits of the city.

DAVIS: Mr. President, may I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I am wondering why the Committee put the word "from" in the next to the last line. The reason for the question is that it appears to me that while it might be proper that the folks outside the city have the vote that they might very well want to elect somebody on the assembly who actually lived in the city.

LONDBORG: That was just the intent of the Committee, to preclude that possibility, because the representative of the people outside of the city should be one of their own and also elected by the residents of the city. There was quite a bit of discussion on that yesterday and objections were raised to the original writing. In other words, it would say that the qualified voters outside the city might vote on this for those in the city and this was to draw the dividing line so that they would have their own representatives elected from, among, and by the qualified voters living outside such cities.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, would it be possible to set up the election machinery on such a basis that the borough would elect, instead of throughout the borough as a whole, would elect from districts in the borough? Is that what you have in mind?

V. FISCHER: That was our general intent, that those elected outside of the city would probably be apportioned according to some method of districting, especially if you have a lot of individual communities out in the outlying areas.

HELLENTHAL: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other committee amendments to be proposed? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: There are two other committee amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed committee amendments.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, line 13, change 'a maximum' to read 'the greatest possible measure'.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I would move and ask unanimous consent that this amendment be made. The reason is to explain the meaning of the word "maximum" or to make it clear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Are there other committee amendments?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes. Section 8.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, line 16, change the word 'standards' to the word 'provisions'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: This is also a committee amendment and I would propose and ask unanimous consent that it be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves and asks unanimous consent that this proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments?

CHIEF CLERK: No more committee amendments here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If not, then we will proceed with the second time around on amendments to Committee Proposal No. 6/a.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we may have a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to reading of communications at this time.

(The Chief Clerk read telegrams from Vernon Haik, President, Isaak Walton League of America, Anchorage; Luther Dillon, Anchorage; Tom Moore, President, Alaska Guides Association, Anchorage; A. W. Boddy, President, Alaska Sportsmen Council; and Wm. L. Paul, Grand Master, Alaska Native Brotherhood, asking the Convention to reconsider the action taken on the resources article in not providing for separate commission plan for management of wildlife and commercial fisheries.)

CHIEF CLERK: Telegram from Delegate E. L. Bartlett:

"William A. Egan, President

Constitutional Convention

College, Alaska

Following message from me is based upon many and repeated requests I make public my position regarding Tennessee Plan and I transmit it to you because it is my understanding Constitution Convention is giving consideration to Plan:

"Many times during the last several months I have been asked to give an opinion as to whether Alaska should adopt the so-called Tennessee Plan in an effort to promote the cause of statehood.

"My reluctance to state that opinion until this time has been based upon a number of reasons. Chiefly, perhaps, I desired to make at least a preliminary estimate of statehood attitude in the Second Session of the 84th Congress in conjunction with the President's 1956 State of the Union message.

"Further, I wanted additional time to make a reasonable evaluation of the Tennessee Plan's chances of success in the mid-20th century, remembering that many, many years have gone by since it was last used. Whether or not it can be translated to these times with equal effectiveness is, of course, that which only the future will definitely disclose.

"A more positive statement can be made as to the probabilities of attaining statehood now by the traditional approaches. Those prospects are bleak. No hopeful sign has presented itself from any source since this session of Congress began earlier in the month and he would be an optimist indeed who would predict favorable action soon.

"So the cause of statehood is not advancing now. Indeed, there are those who suggest that interest is tending to decrease rather than increase and that unless a stimulating factor is added Alaskans may have to wait long before coming into the day when statehood is attained.

"The Tennessee Plan could provide that stimulating factor; its impact could jar the nation and the Congress from lethargy. The election and sending to Washington of two United States senators and a representative in the house might provide the fulcrum needed to jar statehood from dead center, or to use another metaphor, might be the instrument to remove the key log creating the jam.

"After talking with many members of Congress, after making a very careful analysis of the situation in general, I am convinced that if Alaska were to adopt the Tennessee Plan practically all statehood supporters in Washington would welcome this active demonstration of Alaska's determination to win a rightful place in the union of states; and whatever resentment at this bold, but certainly not unique, approach which might be felt, or expressed, would be far more than outweighed by the benefits.

"In summation, I am bound in candor to state that without the Tennessee Plan a combination of circumstances, not at this time to be readily foreseen, will be needed to bring statehood soon.

"If the Tennessee Plan is adopted it might well shorten the long road to statehood. I can see distinct possibility of gain; I see only remote possibilities of loss.

"The Tennessee Plan has elements of the daring and the imaginative attractive to the people of a frontier land as has been made apparent to me by the many expressions of support from Alaskans for the proposal.

"It is my understanding that the Tennessee Plan is before the Constitutional Convention now in session at the University of Alaska. If adopted there, it will be presented to Alaska voters for final determination in April. As one who through the years has had an abiding conviction that statehood more than any other one thing is essential for Alaska for its own sake and for the sake of the nation, I am bound to support any just and reasonable and American way to hasten statehood's coming. The Tennessee Plan is such a way.

"With the above statement of my own position, I desire to add that if the Constitutional Convention and the voters in April decide to try the Tennessee Plan, it will have my continuing support."

Signed/ E. L. Bartlett

(Applause)

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the communication from Delegate Bartlett be spread upon our journal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the communication be spread upon the journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. The communication will be referred to the Committee on Ordinances. Are there other communications?

CHIEF CLERK: I have none.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If not, we will proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 6/a, Section 1. Are there amendments to Section 1? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Is there a compelling reason for the retention of the last sentence in the section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, we were advised by our committee consultants that due to the fact that in the past courts have very frequently, or rather generally interpreted the powers of local government very strictly under something called "Dillon's Rule", or something like that, that a statement to this effect was rather important, particularly in connection with the local government provisions of the article to make sure that it would be interpreted to give it the maximum amount of flexibility that we desire to have in it and to provide the maximum powers to the legislature and to the local government units to carry out the intent of this article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Is there not other language, clear language, in your article which upsets the normal rule applicable to municipalities, that they are creatures of delegated power and which clearly and unambiguously changes the traditional rule? Is there not?

V. FISCHER: I don't think I could give an unequivocal "yes" or "no" on that. I think there are provisions in here, that if strictly interpreted, not only strictly but restrictively interpreted, could defeat the purposes.

HELLENTHAL: Is that not true of any other article of the constitution?

V. FISCHER: Yes, except that this rule has generally been applied, I think exclusively, to powers of local government units.

HELLENTHAL: In your opinion does it not weaken the balance of the constitution to make this provision with regard to this article only?

V. FISCHER: That I could not say. I am sure that the Committee would not object to having this provision pulled out of this particular article and made generally applicable to the constitution, provided that the article itself was not weakened by it.

HELLENTHAL: Now I refer to Section 11. Doesn't Section 11 clearly reverse this rule that you refer to as Dillon's Rule?

V. FISCHER: That would apply to home rule cities and boroughs, but the point is that there may be a lot of local government units in Alaska over the years that may not be granted the home rule authority by the legislature and it may not want to adopt a home rule charter.

HELLENTHAL: Thank you. In accord with Mr. Fischer's suggestion then I move that this sentence of Section 1 be transferred for consideration in connection with, I think it is Proposal 12 that was read for the first time this morning, or 14.

CHIEF CLERK: Fifteen.

HELLENTHAL: And considered with the miscellaneous provisions. I ask unanimous consent.

METCALF: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move?

HELLENTHAL: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal so moves. Is there a second to the motion?

H. FISCHER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Fischer seconded the motion. Now, the motion was, Mr. Hellenenthal, that the sentence --

HELLENTHAL: That the last sentence of Section 1 be transferred.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I certainly don't qualify as a constitutional lawyer, but it occurs to me that there may be a difference between the various proposals that we come out with here. I have in mind particularly the proposal on resources in which I recall a statement which I recognize was after it was somewhat amended, that it was the intent of the Committee that this particular section be narrowly construed. I don't know how many other sections of this constitution are going to have the same idea behind it. I certainly would have no objection to the inclusion of this particular sentence as a miscellaneous provision if all of the committees were satisfied that this particular statement should apply to their proposals, but I simply raise the possibility that that might not be true. I think it very definitely is true in this matter of local government because they have been extremely vague, pardon the expression, as to how these things are going to be carried out; and I think it is essential that the legislature and the courts that may be confronted with the problem do construe it liberally so as to effectuate a good strong home rule local type of local government. So I am not sure in my own mind, if the matter comes to a vote now I probably would vote against it on the grounds that it should be given consideration as it applies to each article rather than at this time be placed in the miscellaneous section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I made this motion because I think we are weakening our entire constitution by including this provision in this article, without giving careful and long thought to the entire constitution. Now, if this Committee, and when we focus our minds on the one problem and the whole constitution, if we decide that this should remain in this article it can be put back, and that is the way it should be considered. This should be considered in the light of the entire constitution. Now, I say it weakens the constitution. If we leave this this way, it means that we may have intended that the remaining portions of the constitution be strictly construed but that this one be liberally construed. Frankly, as a lawyer, and I am speaking of a highly complicated and technical legal point here, as a lawyer I don't think this is necessary in this article. This article, as Mr. Rosswog said in his opening remarks, is simple, flexible, and it fits the Territory. It is a framework -- this is a beautiful article because it is a framework -- you can drive trucks in and out of this framework but it is a framework in the true constitutional sense. All right, if it is a framework, there is no question of construction. Now, if this were legislation, then the sentence might belong in the article because the problem is one of legislation. You either construe legislation strictly or liberally. These words apply to legislation, they do not apply to framework language. They are not necessary; they are going to weaken the rest of our constitution. That is my main point. Now, frankly, when the question comes of whether such a rule should be included as to the whole constitution, I certainly have some definite opinions on that, but at this same time, this does not belong here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I don't feel I would be ready to vote to move it to the general provision article because, as Mr. Hurley said, we would have to consider how it would affect each and every proposal that has been submitted and passed through on the floor thus far. I mentioned yesterday that this particular proposal on local government is almost equal to a separate constitution for local government units throughout the state. In that way I think you can see that the local government proposal is unique in that sense. The other articles are statewide in concern. For instance, the executive, the legislative, judicial, etc. -- this one is the article that is going to set aside certain areas in their various patterns of local government. You might say it is the same as writing little constitutions for each one instead of giving them complete independence as little unions within the state; we are setting up the pattern of local government throughout the state, and I think that with that in mind you can see that there could be an exception to this particular proposal having a clause in there such as this and that this interpretation be for this proposal and not necessarily affect the rest of the constitution or the rest of the proposals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I am inclined to agree with the Committee. I think that if this type of clause is left in the constitution at all, it might better be left with reference to a specific article rather than as a general provision applying to the whole constitution because this matter of construing delegated powers was settled many, many years ago by Chief Justice Marshall of the United States Supreme Court in a case that is now famous, to all law school students anyway, known as McCulloch v. Maryland, in which the court at that time said that any delegation of power must be construed in the manner most beneficial to the people and that principle, so far as I know, has never been changed, and that line of reasoning has been followed ever since. So any inclusion of a clause of this kind, to me at least, is not necessary and if we are going to leave it anywhere, I think it is better to leave it where it is rather than putting it in the general provisions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I go along with Mr. Johnson's statement that the courts have already established the basis for construction of constitutional matter; and I go along with Mr. Hellenthal when I say that this is a declaration of purpose and to have a liberal or strict interpretation of a declaration of purpose is absolutely out of place. I wouldn't want it in the entire constitution because that would throw the complete approach and all the established law with regard to interpreting constitutions. It will do less harm here than it would in a general clause pertaining to the entire constitution. But it shouldn't even be here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I frankly would not know how to vote on this motion. Mr. Hellenthal moved that this be transferred to the general section, so that if we vote either "yes" or "no" we are voting on whether it belongs here or someplace else. I agree with Mr. Rivers that it doesn't belong in the constitution at all, and I think Mr. Hellenthal's whole argument went to that, that it doesn't belong in the constitution and I wonder if he would agree to amend his motion to have it stricken rather than to have it moved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I certainly would because I feel it does not belong in the constitution at all. Maybe I was trying to be too tactful or something, but frankly it doesn't belong there, and I will so amend my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Hellenthal's request? Is that what you are asking, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, my motion be to delete the sentence; "deleted" is a much more tactful word.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is then that the last sentence in Section 1 be deleted from the section. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: Actually it is a new amendment.

NORDALE: Does that mean it is to be stricken forever from the whole constitution? Is that the whole idea now?

HELLENTHAL: I wouldn't think so. If good reasons existed for it being in the miscellaneous provisions it could certainly be inserted there by amendment when we consider the miscellaneous provisions.

NORDALE: But could now never come back to this article?

HELLENTHAL: It could if the miscellaneous provisions read that all provisions of this constitution shall be construed as worded except the article on local government; then Style and Drafting could put it right back here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, did you ask for unanimous consent to withdraw your original amendment?

HELLENTHAL: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the original amendment be withdrawn.

HELLENTHAL: I move that the last sentence of Section 1 of Committee Proposal 6/a be deleted.

AWES: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes seconds the motion. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe that that sentence should not be in the constitution. The Committee has brought forth an article which I think is very plain and concise and would not be difficult of construction either by the legislature or by the courts. And the reason that this would be dangerous is the fact that if it is left in here and there were 60 persons in the legislature of the state, you would have 60 opinions as to what would be liberal construction if there was a law drawn to implement this particular article. That statement is so broad that I don't believe that an agreement could be reached as to what was a liberal construction. Now, in the case of McCulloch v. Maryland, the courts have set -- that was a long time ago -- what their duties were in regard to the constitutional provision or a law enacted by any legislature or by Congress, that in the construction of that law why the reasonable evidence should always be as to what is the greatest beneficial effect. Now, regardless of whether that is written in here, it still is the law. That law of McCulloch v. Maryland has never been abandoned by the courts and if it ever becomes necessary for construction of any act that is apt to be passed by the legislature regarding this particular article, they would use that construction which is obligatory upon the courts as it is the law of the land and established by a precedence of the Supreme Court of the United States. As I say, the difficulty of saying what is a liberal construction would be a nullity, I think. Leaving it in there is practically a nullity. If you are going to construe one article of the constitution liberally, you have got to construe them all liberally and I don't believe they should be construed liberally, I think they should be construed strictly according to the wishes of this constitution, this Constitutional Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, and the Chair would like to ask at this time that all delegates express themselves when voice votes are called for. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, before we take a vote on this, I think I should say that the feeling of the Committee was that this particular article should be given a liberal construction. Of course, I don't know the legal aspects of it altogether, but we did feel that a lot of work would have to be done to implement this section and that we did not want it too strictly applied exactly, the words that we are using.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?"

ROSSWOG: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 25 - Awes, Barr, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Knight, McNealy, Marston, Nerland, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 26 - Armstrong, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, V. Fischer, Harris, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Sweeney, Walsh.

Absent: 4 - Buckalew, Coghill, Robertson, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas, 26, nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to be proposed for Section 1? If not, are there amendments for Section 2? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, you may submit your amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 1, line 12, after the word 'in' add words 'school districts, ' ; and line 14, after the word 'organized' add the words 'school districts, '."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I suppose that this may be in the nature of a little waste of time but I feel very strongly on this matter of school districts. I have been connected with the Fairbanks school district ever since it was organized.

HERMANN: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: It seems to me we adopted a rule yesterday that we were going to establish a definite method on voting for the names of these units of local government and that all motions leading to a change in name were to be considered under that rule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This isn't for the name, Mrs. Hermann. Is that correct, Mr. Johnson? This just applies to school districts, it isn't the name of the --

JOHNSON: I didn't offer the amendment as a change in name, it was offered as an addition.

HERMANN: Added to the other?

JOHNSON: Yes.

HERMANN: Excuse me.

JOHNSON: As I say, I have always felt very keenly about this school district business; we have had the experience in Fairbanks of having had the confidence of the people; the school boards have always operated to the best interest of the people. I am not on the board, so I can say this without impunity. And the system that has been developed under our present law --

EMBERG: Point of order. I would like to ask a question of the mover of the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This is on a point of order?

EMBERG: Yes. You mean that all local government powers should be vested in school boards?

JOHNSON: No.

EMBERG: Wouldn't your language lead to that?

JOHNSON: No more so than all local government power should be vested, as the article now provides, in boroughs and cities. I simply want to add to that the words "school district" so that under the provision of the amendment it would permit school districts to operate on a fiscal and independent basis. As I say, the purpose for it is that we have been operating on that basis for a long time. The school system in Alaska is strong and probably as good as you would find anywhere and it is developed because of its independent setup. The only matter now which prevents complete fiscal independence of school districts is the fact that under the present laws school boards must submit their budgets to the city council for approval. That is in the independent school district, but I believe that if we are going to delegate taxing power and local government powers to boroughs and cities, then we ought to, in addition, provide that if the legislature saw fit they could also delegate local taxing power to school districts and keep them intact and operating as an independent unit and that is the purpose of the amendment.

KILCHER: Mr. President, may the Chief Clerk please read the amendment again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 1, line 12, after the word 'in' add the words 'school districts, '; line 14, after the word 'organized' add the words 'school districts,'."

KILCHER: May I ask a question of Mr. Johnson.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, you may ask your question.

KILCHER: I think in your last statement you just said that you would like to see the local government powers of taxation be also vested in school districts. Now, if that is the case, you should amend your motion to insert the word "only" on line 14 because only in the second sentence is taxation explicitly mentioned.

JOHNSON: I don't quite understand your question, Mr. Kilcher, but I simply intended to add to boroughs and cities the organized school districts as they now exist.

KILCHER: What I am driving at, Mr. Johnson, is the section has two sentences. In one sentence it is a question of all government powers, and in Section 2 it is only a question of taxation. Now, would you want to apply the school district to both sections, as your amendment says?

JOHNSON: That was my intention, yes.

KILCHER: In other words, powers beyond taxation should also be vested in the school districts?

JOHNSON: Well, those powers that now are generally vested in school districts by law, such as operation and maintenance of the school system. That was the purpose of putting it in the first part of the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to amend Mr. Johnson's motion, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have an amendment to submit, Mr. Taylor?

The Chief Clerk may please read the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 12, page 1, Section 2, after 'boroughs' add "public utility districts, public improvement districts, health districts'."

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy seconds the motion.

JOHNSON: Point of order. Is that an amendment to the amendment or is that additional language which doesn't have anything to do with the amendment? Actually, it looks to me like it is a separate amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The original amendment was an addition and this would be further addition to the original amendment. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Point of order. I believe if the amendment would carry through then the amendment of Mr. Johnson's would be divisible, into separate questions again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for a couple of minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Taylor, the Chair will hold that the proposed amendment to the amendment is not germane to the amendment as before us. The amendment to the amendment would be in order at a later time but at the present time it is not germane to the proposed amendment. Is there further discussion on the proposed amendment? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I would like to oppose that amendment. If that amendment passed I would necessarily have to vote against the inclusion of this article in the constitution. I think the purpose of this article is to simplify our governmental procedure and also to prevent an overlapping of government functions. Now, we have two governmental functions set up here, the cities and the boroughs. I think that is plenty. They can provide for everything including the schools. So now, if the camel gets his head in the tent by adopting this amendment as proposed by Mr. Johnson, he probably will be all in the tent, bringing with him the amendments that establish public utility districts, health districts, public improvement districts, and we will be right back to our old method of numerous taxing bodies which we want to get away from. Now, with the borough and the city I don't believe that there is any reason at all but what the taxing purposes for schools can be set up something along the same lines as it is now. I don't feel that we are gaining what we expect to gain if we allow such amendments to go through. I know Mr. Johnson is very sympathetic towards the school district -- he has been an attorney for the school district for many years and he possibly feels that that method as has been pursued, is the best, but I believe that the purpose of this article being drawn as it is is to prevent the imposing of one taxing district on the other, so I am going to oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I am going to speak on this now and then forever hold my peace. I was right in the middle of an impassioned argument yesterday on this thing when I was shut off, but for what it may be worth, I want to say that I think that we will regret the day, so far as our schools are concerned, if we do not give the schools some sort of taxing power, independent of the other agencies that are working on the other phases of government. I have been close to this problem I will admit it, and that is probably why I feel so strongly on it, but I have seen so many times where needed things that the city wants, needed things compete with needed things that the school district wants, and it is just a matter of emphasis, so far as I am concerned; if it comes down to a point of educating our children as against having more paved streets, I am going to take the schools. Now maybe it won't come to that point, but if it does that is my idea, and it seems to me that we could accomplish exactly what this Committee wants to accomplish by giving the school district independent taxing power. Of course, they would have to do as they do in the states, something about putting a limit on the tax because school districts could run wild the same as anything else, but I can't see any reason at all why the school districts should not have a power to tax within certain limits just as it thinks it needs. Certainly it is not up to a borough or a city or any other organization to say, "Mr. School, you only need so many teachers", and that is just exactly what has happened in our area, in the best of faith I know. But somebody said we need paved streets and admittedly we did need them, but they thought we needed them more than we needed more teachers or more than we needed more schools. It has been mentioned in the Committee here that we are setting up a referee between the city and the school districts by having the borough pass on it. To me that is not so. The borough actually is just a bigger city. It has all the functions that the city has plus some others. Now, in this article as written. we are giving the city specific taxing power which to me seems to absolutely defeat, or could absolutely defeat what the Committee says they want. They want only one taxing district yet we are going to let the city tax, but under the article as written we are not going to let the school districts tax. I think it is wrong.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I hardly can compete with some of the previous speakers probably in putting over my point, but I served with the school district; I have served on the city council; I have been mayor of a city, and I am against turning the taxation over to a school district, direct. I think that for a school district to do anything other than to make up their budget and submit it to the city or the borough, the same as any other department would submit a budget, it will throw the economy of the city and borough completely out of tune. I think it would be a very, very bad thing. I don't know just exactly what kind of trouble the school districts in Anchorage had. I didn't follow it too closely, but I know that we had a little difficulty over on the Island but we resolved it without too much trouble and we have gotten along very well, and I think it can be done without destroying -- I think you will destroy the cities by permitting this to happen. Taxation can get completely out of hand. I oppose it very strongly. I know I haven't expressed myself as I would like to but I can't ask that you give this too much consideration. It is a very, very important thing, and it would be very bad for the cities and very bad for the boroughs or whatever we decide to call them, and it would be bad for Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, had you been attempting to get the floor?

HERMANN: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Bearing on this particular subject, a conversation I had last year with an editor of a paper in the State of Washington, a city of about 15,000, he informed me that they had 11 taxing jurisdictions in the particular area in which he lived and if I remember some of them, they were welfare, hospitals, sanitary, harbor, and even a trunk sewer system, and he said that was the one thing that was causing them the greatest worry of all and that was the spread of the taxing power. I am against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have spoken on this same subject a number of times, and I am going to repeat some of the things here that I have said before but I don't think all of you have heard them, because it was not in this body. It has been in bodies of the Territorial legislature, since 1941 when this problem first showed up. The question here, I think, is a basic one of government, and the taxing powers, and the question is whether or not you shall delegate taxing powers to bodies of certain special purposes for one special purpose. Now, you could very well have taxing powers in special districts or school districts, health districts, welfare districts, public works districts, sanitary districts, and every other kind of district, and as Mr. Hilscher just said, that does happen and has happened in many of the state subdivisions of government. Now, the intent of course, and the thought of the Committee was there would be no limit upon the ability, upon the type and class of schools and their ability to perform their functions, but the requirement here would be that they would have to correlate their activities with all the other activities of government, through some central body, which they now do, as you know, through the city council. The idea of this fiscal autonomy and fiscal independence has been before our legislature since, as I say, since as I recall it in 1941, and the complete separation of the school budget from all other functions of government has never been recognized nor allowed by that body within the limits of their authority. Now, we have had this suggestion in many agencies, and I don't say only the school districts. Many agencies of government like to have a little sphere of government set up for themselves in which they start at the top of their governing body, have their administrative groups, have their taxing power, their collections, and their dispensing of budget, entirely separate government for some one department or function of government within the other structure of government for one purpose only and considering only the one use. Now, that is the problem we face, it is not to say that we don't want better schools or more money for them, it is that their functions be interrelated and co-related with the other functions of government so there can be a fair participation in the tax dollar and in the school income. In the United States they have what they call the American Assembly, it was set up under the President a few years ago, and they gather the great scientists there for discussions on some one subject every year, and I have a paper here which was put out by the Eighth American Assembly and in touching on this point I want to read to you their quotation. It says in part, and I am not going to read it all -- I have asked that the mimeograph section mimeograph this entire article and place it on the desk of each delegate, as it has a lot of very valuable information in addition to what I'm going to read you. "To endorse autonomy for agencies as a general principle would be to deny that state," they are talking about the state here, "that state activities have interrelations and that they need coordination in the general public interest." I repeat that: "To give this autonomous power to special agencies would be to deny that there is an interrelationship and co-relationship between the various functions of government and that must necessarily include schools." Now, I know that we have in this body men who have sat on city councils, been mayors, sat on school boards and been board presidents, board attorneys, we have a broad cross section here, and I know their interests are conditioned largely by their activities and their environment. I know they are entirely sincere but I am trying to separate just the idea of schools and trying to hold to the principles as to whether the principle of the disbursing and the approvals of budgets shall lie in the body of one general governing body of government or whether you shall have an autonomy without any correlation between the other activities of government -- whether you shall have an autonomy in just one function and one activity of government. I think that that covers what I have to say except that on the broad principle, I think you can have better government at less expense by correlating the taxing activities and channeling them through one body with one set of appraisers, one set of collectors, one set of condemners and tax sale experts, and having that money go into one fund for distribution by a general body elected by all of the people no matter what level of government we operate at. In the national administration the budget goes to Congress; they are the representatives of the people, they approve it. In our state legislature, as we have it set up -- and I know that schools do not and have not suffered -- the same situation takes place. The budget goes to the legislature and they approve, and very liberally approve, funds for all the needs of our schools, and the same situation has existed in regard to the school districts operating under the approval power of the city councils. I know we have not gained all the steps we want to gain all at one time, but I know that our policy has been good; our schools have been healthy, they have progressed; and I see that we are not in this instance deciding upon whether we have good schools or not; I know we are going to have good schools. The question is just how will the money set up be budgeted and approved for schools in relation to all of the other costs of government, so I for one feel that we must maintain within the general governing body the power to approve budgets and that is what we do here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: May I ask Mr. Davis a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. Davis, could you explain to me how the consolidated school districts operate out in the states in their relationship with the county and city governments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I can only speak for one state, only the state where I grew up. In that state the county assessed all taxes, and incidentally I want it understood I am not suggesting, as Mr. Rivers mentioned, that we have more than one assessing agency, I think that is silly. One assessing agency, one collecting agency is all I have in mind. But in the state where I grew up, the county assessed the taxes; the county collected the taxes. The various governmental units in the county, each one told the county board how much taxes they needed. They set the mill rate for their own tax. When the tax mill comes out it has on it so much for this agency, so much for that agency, so much for the other agency, but it is all one tax bill, and so help me I can't see that is bad. It is true there are lots of agencies but each one is assessing only for its own particular need, which is exactly what this Committee is talking about when they are talking about service areas. I would like to see the school budget, the school tax, kept separate and apart from the taxes for other needs. That is what I am trying to say.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Davis a question through the Chair. Under those circumstances, assuming we have, as Mr. Hilscher has reported, in one county in Washington, 11 various taxing agencies, what agency equalizes the taxes? Assume that your school district wants eight mills, and the public improvement district needs nine mills and the sewer district needs 14 mills and somebody else needs two mills, is there a limitation on the tax that can be applied, and if so who equalizes when these various authorities that require the money get to jockeying one against the other for their participation in the total tax dollar? How does that balance out?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I will try to answer this. In the first place, they don't compete for the total tax dollar. The total tax dollar is the sum of what all the various agencies ask. Who equalizes it? In the state where I grew up the board of county commissioners; in this case no doubt the borough assembly. As to whether they can be limited, in Idaho they were limited by law. A school could not assess or could not levy more than a certain mill rate without a special vote of the people. In special cases, with special vote they could levy still more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to say a few words on this, feeling that each one is entitled to express his opinion. I have gone along with the Committee in their general thinking of trying to get rid of this overlapping of taxes and has been mentioned, 10, 12, 15 different agencies, each with a blank check to write all they wish to write on it. This is one place I personally would make an exception. When we talked about it in the Committee, there didn't seem to be any other ones who felt the same as I did, so I did not express myself too much there. However, I did say that I would not put in a minority report on this. Now, I think that it all boils down to just how much we are willing to take a stand on any particular issue. We hear about the fact that there is going to be 10, 12, 14, 20, 30, 50 different taxing districts all the way from street cleaning up to the school districts and health districts and everything else. I think it depends on where we want to place the emphasis here. If we want to use the expression, "Let in the head of the camel and the whole camel will crawl in", that depends on whether we want to make it positive that only the head gets in, if you want to call it that. We hear a lot about the fact that a school district is going to break the municipality. I think it is the people that are voting on that; they are the ones that are going to pay the bill, and if they want to break themselves, they are going to break themselves, that is all. If we have a dollar to spend it is foolish to say we are going to buy something for one dollar and fifty cents. It all depends on what the people want. I think the greatest danger on something like this is to put the schools under the absolute control. Now it isn't just taxing powers as it got written in the last day, it was all powers shall go only to municipalities, such as boroughs and cities. That means the running. Of course, they can delegate the power by setting up a school board if they wish, but I can visualize the schools coming under a very strict political control, and I have seen that very thing out our way with the Alaska Native Service and the political control of the schools. They have the final say-so; they practically come to the point where they dictate as far as voting and things of that kind. That is one thing that I would like to see is the schools be absolutely free of any party politics and things of that kind. I think we are running into a danger when we subject our children and grandchildren and future generations to coming under political controlled school districts. I know if we allow this amendment to go through then the pressure, as we have seen from the telegrams, will be to set up game commissions, to be to set up health districts, and all of that, but it all boils down to how much we are willing to take a stand and say schools are different from these other things, and I believe they are different. These other special districts are special; they are for a certain area. Schools are universal; schools are a state institution and they belong in the state as such. Education is general, and as far as the strength of the school district, I think that they should have the control to say and do as they please, not just tax and get their dollars but to have the complete control and I have seen them operate out in the states; in my home state they operated very much the same way as Mr. Davis mentioned. There was a general assessment and if the people out in one corner of the county or borough, if we would call it that, decide they want a little better school district, hire better teachers, raising their pay and being able to get better teachers that way, that was their business. They knew how much it was going to cost them in taxes for their farms and other things, and they raised their levy and they built better school houses and they hired better teachers and I think you will find that states like that have probably some of your best standards as far as schools are concerned. I think it is a lot like banking. We have a fear of two people working for the same dollar. Maybe it is like the joint checking account between a man and wife. In one sense they are one and they can trust each other. Well, this is going to be the same people to a great extent, and yet there is a freedom. The school district doesn't have to come to the borough or the city council like a wife begging if she can't have a dollar now to buy something, but have a little freedom to go and buy and spend as she sees fit. I think that this should be given due consideration. I hate like everything to make a break from the general policy in the Committee, knowing that it leaves the gap open for other districts, and yet I can't help but feel that we too can take a stand and say that schools are schools and that these other things are minor in importance. The game commission doesn't feel that theirs is minor, but I still think that the education of children is more important than looking after the game around the country.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I move for a 20-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper moves that the Convention stand at recess for 20 minutes.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

LONDBORG: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded. The question is --

ROSSWOG: May I announce a meeting of the Local Government Committee in the gallery for any questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Local Government will meet in the gallery where any questions may be asked. Are there other committee announcements? If not, the Convention will stand at recess until 10:55.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson. Is there further discussion? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of the Committee if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: In the opinion of the Committee, is there anything in Section 2 which would prohibit the borough or the city from delegating to school districts taxing power?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, would you care to answer that question?

V. FISCHER: No, because Section 2 specifically grants the assembly the authority to authorize the levying of taxes within the service area and the school district would be considered a service area under this concept.

SMITH: That answers my question. I wanted to get that clear in the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to ask a question if I may. Your interpretation of Section 2, also, that the borough in an organized borough would probably be the one and only taxing authority? That is, they would handle all of the taxes, and only in unorganized boroughs would the state tax? Would that be the way to expect the thing would work out?

V. FISCHER: Yes. We would assume a consolidation there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I dislike very much ever having to take the other side of a question than that taken by Ed Davis. I have the deepest respect for his judgment. I know he is absolutely sincere in everything he does and says, but as he said he has been very close to this problem, and I suggest that he has been so close to it that he may see the trees rather than the forest. I think that if we leave the article as it is that the ideas of the people who are interested particularly in schools, and I have a great deal of sympathy with them because I do feel that schools are important and will always be expressed in the government of the borough or in the government of the city by people such as Mr. Davis, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Coghill, Mr. Dafoe and others who have spoken with us or communicated with us on this subject. When I heard Mr. Londborg speaking of what he considered abuses in the way that the Alaska Native Service schools seem to operate independently and without consultation with the public -- I thought he was making an argument against the point of view which he was expressing which seemed to be that he felt that the schools should be thus independent. I think the abuses which he is speaking of, if they are abuses, are brought about particularly and specifically by the fact that the Alaska Native Service schools are completely removed from the control of the people of Alaska, and that if we adopt Mr. Johnson's amendment we would tend to be making the school districts within our cities and boroughs within the State of Alaska, at least in a sense, independent of the people of Alaska as they consider the other responsibilities and functions of government. So I hope that the amendment will be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may we have a roll call, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" Would the Chief Clerk please call the roll.

Yeas: 9 - Cooper, Davis, Johnson, Londborg, Laws, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Walsh.

Nays: 43 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Coghill, Robertson, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 9 yeas, 43 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 2? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: At this time I would like to ask unanimous consent that we return to Section 1. The Committee has an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will return to Section 1. The Committee has a proposed amendment. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Prior to doing that, in view of the sentiment expressed by the body, I would like unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has not been really before us, Mr. Taylor. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed committee amendment to Section 1.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, page 1, lines 8 and 9, strike 'provisions of this article' and substitute 'powers of local governments'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that this substitution be made, that this committee amendment be approved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves and asks unanimous consent that the committee amendment be adopted. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

ROSSWOG: Could we have the whole sentence read.

CHIEF CLERK: "A liberal construction shall be given to the powers of local governments in order that these purposes be achieved."

V. RIVERS: I understood that the word "liberal" was to be stricken and a "broad general interpretation" was to be inserted on this as we talked over, and I believe it was the suggestion of the original mover to strike this motion and those words would cover it. I don't know where we get this particular thing because I for one on the Committee have not yet seen it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for a couple of minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would like to ask the indulgence of the Convention for a moment on personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rosswog.

(Mr. Rosswog spoke on a matter of personal privilege at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent to withdraw your original request?

ROSSWOG: I would ask unanimous consent to withdraw our original amendment and propose a new one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, line 8, strike the remainder of the sentence after word 'the' and substitute 'powers of local governments'."

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I might explain that this was our intention to have a liberal construction on the powers of local government. As it was written it would have covered the whole article, and we believe this explains the wording and the intention of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the committee amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 1 or 2? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: May I ask the Chairman of the Committee a question please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, you may ask a question.

TAYLOR: It is to the placing of this amendment which was just adopted, or offered. Would it not be better to strike that last sentence in paragraph 1 and apply that to Section 2? Because that section only deals with the powers being vested in boroughs and cities; and I think there is where the question is, as to the liberal construction of those powers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, actually this sentence applies to more than just Section 2 and possibly in the revision of this article, Style and Drafting in the rewriting, they may see fit to place this sentence as a separate section which might be the more proper way altogether.

TAYLOR: I think, Mr. Fischer, if you will read that particular section, it only applies to local government being vested in the boroughs and in the cities, that the construction that you want placed upon those powers should be in that particular section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: It would be equally appropriate to put it in Section 11.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be proposed to these sections? Mr. McNeese, were you attempting to get the floor?

MCNEESE: Are they still going to delay the consideration of the word "borough" or other names?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is to be delayed until we have a second go-around on amendments. Are there proposed amendments to Section 3?

R. RIVERS: Point of information. Is this the second round?

PRESIDENT EGAN: This is the second amendment round. Are there amendments to Section 3? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I had an amendment there to Section 2 awhile ago, but I will ask unanimous consent to withdraw it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: To Section 3, are there amendments? To Section 4? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I think this was brought up yesterday, but I have sort of forgotten what was said. It is just a question. On line 4, page 2 of Section 3, there was some discussion of the wording, "Each borough shall embrace to the maximum extent possible an area and population with common interests." Does that mean to the greatest degree it shall be a group of people with common interests? Nothing to do with the area -- I mean the square mile?

V. FISHER: What it means is that wherever possible, "Each borough shall embrace an area and population with common interests."

NORDALE: Yes. Then "the maximum extent possible" refers to the common interests, not to the area, the size?

V. FISCHER: No, that is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 3? Are there amendments to Section 4? Mr. Laws.

LAWS: Mr. President, should that not be a period there after "law" on the last line, 15?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that the comma be changed to a period?

LAWS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Are there amendments to Section 5?

TAYLOR: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

CHIEF CLERK: This is an amendment to the amended Section 5. "Line 7 strike the words 'from and'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: In line 7 of the new Section 5 that was adopted this morning.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Would you read that again, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, there is still some question in the Committee minds as to the final resolution of the intent of this section. We would like to ask that it be submitted to the Committee for further discussion before this is adopted. There are two or three other delegates that have a few questions. Would you object to that request?

TAYLOR: I have no objection to holding it to later, but I do want to bring it up because I think this amendment is very important.

V. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent that we withhold the consideration of this until we have had a chance to discuss it in Committee further, and with Mr. Taylor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the matter will be held until the Committee has had a chance to discuss it with the delegates. Are there amendments to Section 6? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 3, line 9, delete the comma, insert a period and strike the balance of the section."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

MCNEALY: I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy seconds the motion. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I realize that this section is, to a large extent, of a recommending nature rather than a directive nature, but yet I feel it could be construed as a directive, and a limitation on the functions of the borough assembly. I also recognize that we have a problem presently in the Territory in the matter of making it desirable for cities to incorporate and to take in suburban areas into their incorporated area, but I think what seems to be a relatively unimportant amendment goes to the basis of this whole concept that is being brought forward here on the matter of local government. The very fact that we previously had an amendment concerning the school districts indicates to me that the question is one of deciding where the relative powers of this borough are going to be. I think the whole article is fairly inconsistent in its acceptance of cities themselves. In other words, they have agreed that it is undesirable to have school districts separately organized; it is undesirable to have public utilities separately organized as taxing units; it is undesirable to have various other districts; yet they say it is desirable to have cities. They go further and provide in this section that in the event an area needs a particular public service that it shall not have it if it can meet the qualifications of incorporating as a city. I think it tends to destroy the desirable, in my mind, function of the borough to govern the area in the most desirable manner. I think it sets up a stumbling block. Now I can recognize that those people that have had problems of city incorporation are going to be very suspicious of this amendment, but I submit by leaving these words in we are, in effect, putting a stumbling block in front of the effective operation of our borough government. I also submit that there is nothing in my mind that a service area within the borough cannot do that a city can do, so, in fact in my mind a city is no more than an organized service area, and I think if we make it possible to, over the years, lose our old-fashioned concept of the city, we will eventually be better off. Now, the adoption of this small amendment is not going to accomplish all that, but in my opinion it is going to remove a possible stumbling block to more efficient administration of borough affairs and I hope that you will see fit to adopt the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment?
Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I had the same amendment written out, and being a little slow, I appreciated the fact that Mr. Hurley has submitted this amendment, and I feel obliged to speak on this particular subject, taking it in conjunction with Section 1 of the article to which this particular section refers to. Now, contrary to statements that have been made on the floor about all of the elected representatives to the legislature being from within the city of Fairbanks, I reside outside of the city of Fairbanks and I also, I believe, on two occasions, however, voted in the area in which I live to become annexed to the city, and in both cases it was voted down, so when I speak I don't speak from a personal standpoint, but my thought in regard to this is I have seen this happen before. Bills have been offered in the legislature in an attempt to force annexation. There has been a continuous movement in the Territory over the years. I remember years ago being on the school board down at Seldovia and we were told if we did not incorporate the town they were going to take the high school away. Incidentally, we incorporated the town and in that instance it did not do any harm, according to the latest reports that I have. I see in this, written in here, a way of at least a backdoor attempt of forcing cities, small areas, to either incorporate or forcing areas to become annexed to the city, because under the borough system of government here, the county system or what you will, we state in the first paragraph that the liberal construction shall be given to the power of local government; and reading that in conjunction with this particular section here, it is going to give the assembly, certainly, the right to construe this paragraph here that they have, say that an area outside the city, for example, if it is necessary to have the health district to protect not only the health outside the city but inside the city, and they want to reach out and encompass this area outside the city and they can use that as a whip to hold over the people in this outlying area, and say if you don't become annexed and come into part of the city the assembly is not going to give you this service here. You may be paying taxes out here but you are not going to get anything because this is a simple way to do it and bring you within the city. Or they can go to a small community, say within 10 miles of the city, if that is within this prescribed area, and the assembly can say we are giving you nothing out here because the better way for you to be is to set up a small corporation out here. I think we all know a lot of these small incorporations don't work out because there isn't the money there for the taxation in that particular area to support a small town. I feel on this. I could talk on it possibly for an hour. I remember speaking on it in the legislature. I am not going to take up the time. I am glad Mr. Hurley advanced this here because of the fact that we should consider that the areas outside the city should not be controlled and dominated by a larger group of people within the city. I believe the American way of life gives us the right to incorporate if we want to; to become annexed to a city if we want to; or if we don't want to, to maintain the status quo where the only ones that are actually affected by it to a great extent are those outside the city itself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I have experience along that same line that has just been presented here, and the area where I live we tried twice to get into the city and some people opposed it and we did not get in and now there is a group that have felt they have been forced, coerced by the bigger body and they have backed up on it. You can't coerce people or groups to come in. It is wrong to try to hold it over the outlying districts, a threat, because they will not come in by a threat. When it is advantageous to come in they will come in, and if this is a threat over them, I'm going to be for the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I might speak for the Committee on this section; it is just as the Committee feels, and they may vote as they choose. Our main intention was to try not to have a lot of separate little districts set up, you know, handling only one problem and try to combine them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, on this section, the thinking of the Committee, as I interpret it, was that you will notice in this section there is no limitation on taxes in the amounts of assessed evaluation or the amounts of rates, and we had visualized a situation where a city had grown up with certain services, where there was a fringe area that needed certain services, but not all of the services, so the fringe area could annex the city on a differential taxation basis for such services it may desire, such as a fire protection for one. It was also visualized that out in an area where a service area had enough functions, where it stood by itself, where it got big enough to incorporate as a city under this section, it could then do so. There was no intent or thought in the Committee's mind that there was any possibility of putting pressure on to get them to do certain things. The thought was it would still be their own choice and selection as to whether or not they would be better served by entering a fringe area as a suburban area with the differential of taxation, or the choice of remaining as a part of the unorganized borough and furnishing those services for themselves. It seems to me that the section does no harm; it seems to me that it has considerable value there and is not intended to coerce, as the word has been used, anybody into joining something they don't want to join or receiving services that the majority of the people do not desire to receive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Rivers, if I may. Has the Committee arrived at a compromise in this article in recognizing the city as a special unit with special rights, or has the Committee possibly considered that there should be no definite line between city and borough?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I can say for the Committee this isn't a compromise, it was figured that it was simply a little direction to the assembly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: It seems to me, Mr. President, that historic outline Mr. Rivers gave us yesterday about cities in general was partly to the point and then again it wasn't. The city of old, as I know, has often been only a limited rallying point for defensive purposes, where the citizens flowed forth and back to the surrounding countryside. The name "city" itself means tribal dwelling. That is the name of the city. It means that a tribal dwelling, that the tribe once in awhile met in a defensible place, and it is only later that the city legally became a distinct unit, and whenever that happens, hand in hand with this development, went the subjugation, often the exploitation, and the bossing of the surrounding countryside when surrounding countryside became dependent upon the city, economically as well as politically, rather more so politically. I just wondered if we could not give consideration to the idea that Mr. Hurley opened up that the city may not be considered anything more than a point of density in a borough and that there should be no parallel police power, for instance, within a city and without it, that there should be possibly no differentiation at all between the city and the whole borough. When I first heard about this concept weeks ago and the discussions with people during the holidays, we understood what the radically new idea would be that there exists practically no difference between city and borough, except a lessening of density to which the outlying areas of the borough, and I wonder if this idea could have been spelled out better or whether it might have been desirable or whether the Committee considered it undesirable to follow this idea. I am for the amendment, of course, but I don't think it solves the problem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I think practically everybody who has spoken has been in favor of the amendment but in their statements I don't believe they have taken full cognizance of the contents of the paragraph which they seek to change. Now, I can visualize what a service area may be and possibly could be, as Mr. Rivers says, for fire protection; it might be an area that was not near a city but could be near another service area that was already established, and then this particular area would then attempt to incorporate themselves or organize themselves into a service area. We should not lose sight of the fact, also, that this area is represented, or the people in this proposed area are represented in the assembly. They have the representative there, so when this matter is brought up to the assembly they have the right to protest, or to propose that they be organized as a service area for a particular purpose such as to require equipment, or it might be for some sewer lines, or for some better roads, or for any one of the numerous improvement districts that can be organized under our present law. Now, when this matter is brought up to the assembly it may be that members from outside of the city would realize the problems that this particular area was facing so then under the wording of the present article in there, there are four things that they could do. They could allow this area, if it was not near another service area that they could be served from, or if it was not near a city where by annexation they could secure the same service from the city, or they could then be required, if the assembly saw fit to, to affiliate with an adjacent service district, receive the services that they want to do for themselves, or they could incorporate as a city if they had sufficient population, or they could be annexed to a city. Now there is no forced annexation in this matter as I can see it, so there is a wide choice. They can be either a service district or those functions can be performed by an already existing service area. They can incorporate as a city or they can be annexed to a city. It is up to the body in which they are represented. It is the American way of doing things that that body decides, that it be for the best interests of this area. The body can decide that it would be possibly to the financial betterment of the people in that area if they did incorporate another service district or if they incorporated as a city. So, I think it should be left in here so that that body, the assembly, could meet and consider all factors and recommend as to whether they could organize as a service district or whether they could secure the same service from an adjacent service district or whether they could incorporate as a city or whether they could be annexed to a city that is already incorporated. It is a wide latitude that they are given and I think that in an assembly in which they are represented and are a part of that body, I think they would receive proper consideration. I think the amendment should be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, do you desire to close? Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? If not, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: This will be very short, Mr. President. I simply urge that we look at this amendment with the new concept of our borough assembly and I submit that, in my own thinking at any rate, that the adoption of this amendment would not preclude the borough council from doing that which Mr. Taylor says they might want to do. I think it does not do that, it simply improves the situation in my mind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hurley be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, might I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I would like to refer back to line 24 on page 2. The words I am wondering about are "portions of" in the middle of that line. We have talked about schools and I don't have schools on the brain; it is just an illustration this time. We have talked about schools being a service area. It seems to me that it might be that we would wish to have a school district cover the entire borough. We might not, but it seems to me if we struck those words "portions of" that you would have the same thing and still allow, if it was wise, still allow a service area that would cover the entire borough. I wonder what the Committee might think about that.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. Why doesn't this amendment and similar amendments that arise quickly be referred to the Committee when they meet in connection with Section 5, as they have announced?

COOPER: Point of order. Mr. President, this was not offered by an amendment. It was a question that was asked by the delegate to the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was a question of the delegate to the Committee. Mr. Rosswog, would you care to answer the question?

ROSSWOG: I believe it was our intention that service districts could be set up in either portions or covering the whole borough. Now, as I see it, it would not make any difference whether the words were stricken. It would still leave the same intent. It could be set up over portions or over the whole area.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I also agree with Mr. Davis. He has a good point, but possibly the best way, so as not to create the question as to whether portions of boroughs would have service areas, would it not be better after the word "within" to insert "the whole or"?

DAVIS: That would be all right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair wonders, Mr. Davis, inasmuch as the Committee is going to review Section 5 at a recess if that matter might be taken up at that time? Would that be satisfactory?

DAVIS: That is all right with me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Or is it the wish of the Convention that an amendment be offered at this time? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: On behalf of the Committee, I will offer the following amendment: On page 2, line 24, Section 6, after "within" insert the words "the whole or". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Would the Chief Clerk read the amendment once more.

HINCKEL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard to the unanimous consent request. Do you so move, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer so moves. Is there a second?

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers seconds the motion. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 2, line 24, after the word 'within' insert the words 'the whole or'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I object for reasons of information. My idea of a service area was something that would permit a differential in taxation between one portion of a city or a borough and another. Am I wrong?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I think in our presentation yesterday we did point out that in some cases the whole borough might be constituted as a service area. For example, in an outlying district somewhere, in an outlying borough that is generally sparsely populated, the whole borough may be constituted as a school district, or as a health district, and this actually is only to clarify committee intent. This is not to force that but to authorize the creation of the service area in the whole borough.

HINCKEL: What would the object be? I still can't see it. If the school district covers the entire area, then where would the difference come? If it covers the whole borough then the whole borough as a borough would have the same rate of taxation to support the school district, would they not?

V. FISCHER: Yes, that is correct.

HINCKEL: Then why would you make it a service area? It would just be the general taxation of the borough would it not?

V. FISCHER: Your point is correct from that standpoint. However, it was the intent of the Committee that when you establish a service area you could say, establish a separate school board, for instance, to supervise the school functions. I don't think it is too material, one way or the other. This is just for clarification actually.

HINCKEL: I still don't see it and I think I am right, but I will withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am going along with Mr. Hinckel. I think this is anything but a clarification of the entire approach to this subject. This talks about organized boroughs. If they weren't rendering some services they would not be organized in the first place. Now, how a service district in an organized borough can fit into this picture along the lines of creating a school board with jurisdiction over the whole borough which already has an organization is more than I can see. The whole thought of service districts is that there be something less than the complete service rendered in different zones, and I think that it would be perfectly all right, as Mr. Davis first suggested, to say "special services within organized boroughs may be established".

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Is Mr. Rivers offering an amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, but we have an amendment before us, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Whose amendment, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is the amendment offered by Mr. Fischer and seconded by Mr. Victor Rivers. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I have a point of order. Our rules provide that amendments at this stage of the enactment of an article are to be considered by the committee, and that implies that others interested can be there. This is a committee amendment, and I think the committee should deliberate and listen to it and listen to others concerned and not take the time of the whole body here while they go through their labors.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, the rule says that the committee may waive that right of hearing.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order. I don't think that one man on the committee can stand up and say: "Unless I hear somebody object this is the committee amendment." They have to meet and discuss it. That can be abused terribly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, the Chair will still hold that it is up to the committee. If the committee chairman gets up and makes a statement saying that he would rather have it come before the committee at a recess, it would comply with the rule and he would have that right, but that hasn't been done. Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to straighten Mr. Hellenthal on the rule. The first section by section round must be cleared with the committee.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, point of order.

R. RIVERS: I have the floor on a point of order.

MCCUTCHEON: I believe it is the Chair's prerogative to direct --

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you asked for the floor at this time on a point of order, the Chair did not understand that. Mr. Ralph Rivers, then you have the floor on a point of order with relation to the rule then until you have stated your --

R. RIVERS: Which says that on the first reading for amending purposes, section by section, each person with an amendment to propose must consult with the committee, but on the second round they may be offered without such consultation with the committee. I just want Mr. Hellenthal to get straightened out on the rule. This thing is in order as I see it. I am speaking to the amendment. I am speaking on the intent involved. Mr. Davis started this thing going; Mr. Fischer wanted to change it, so he changed it. I said Mr. Davis's proposal seems to fit into the general intent and purpose and that is that naturally service areas may be established within an organized borough. Well, "within" doesn't mean the whole borough necessarily or part of the borough, but when you start pinpointing or flagging the proposition that a service area may be set up within a whole borough, you are talking about organized boroughs and naturally they are service districts or they wouldn't be boroughs. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I think it is approaching 12:00 o'clock and I move now that we recess until 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m. Are there committee announcements? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: The members of the Administrative Committee will remember that they have a luncheon meeting right at 12:00 and I would like to also announce that Engrossment and Enrollment will meet at 1:00.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Administrative Committee will meet at luncheon at 12:00, and Engrossment and Enrollment will meet at 1:00. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Upon recess the meeting of the Ordinance Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Ordinance Committee will meet upon recess. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Rules immediately upon recess, very briefly in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Local Government Committee will meet at 12:45.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Local Government Committee will meet at 12:45. If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, may we revert to committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will revert to committee reports at this time? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: A report of the Rules Committee, two proposed additions have been circulated. I believe there is a copy on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as suggested by the Rules Committee.

CHIEF CLERK: "Rule 16c. Insert after second sentence: 'Proposals containing more than one article or which in the Committee's judgment contain subject matter properly divided into more than one article, shall, by the committee, be separated into appropriate articles and may be reported back to the Convention article by article.'

Rule 44. 8a. The reading of a proposal incident to Style and Drafting's report, if said report be accepted by the Convention, shall be deemed to be the proposal's third reading before the Convention, whereupon the proposal shall be before the Convention for final passage."

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent, and might add these are both proposals that have originated in Style and Drafting as a means of expediting work in the closing weeks.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent. The Chair would like to state before we put the question with respect to Rule 44, 8a, that the rules were not exactly clear as to what would happen, whether we would have to read the proposal for the third time in its entirety twice or not, and this would just clarify the fact that we will read the proposal in its entirety when it comes to us from the Style and Drafting Committee, and then in third reading we will read it by title only, and it will then be open for debate. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I am not quite clear on the import of the proposed Rule 44, 8a. If Style and Drafting makes a change which might be considered to be a change in substance rather than in form, will it require a two-thirds vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will under the existing rules, Mr. Hellenthal, require a two-thirds vote, that is correct.

HELLENTHAL: In other words, then it will take a two-thirds vote to upset any decision reached in Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was speaking of an amendment to the proposal at that time. We can accept or reject the whole report by a majority of vote.

HELLENTHAL: Any portion of it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Whether we can do it under the rules as to any portion of the report, perhaps Mr. Riley can --

RILEY: As long as Style and Drafting follows the suggestion set forth in Rule 16c of dividing its proposals into the appropriate articles, action in accepting a given report would be had on the entire article, and for purposes of third reading an article should be read in its entirety if it is to be deemed third reading purposes of going on final passage, but if a Style and Drafting Committee report is objectionable to the membership, if they feel there has been substantive change, they simply won't accept the report, they will refer it back to them.

HELLENTHAL: Why can't you object to one phrase, one word, or one section, if you deem that a departure has been made from the jurisdiction of the Committee?

RILEY: That is what I would expect to happen.

HELLENTHAL: Is it possible for that to happen under this proposed change?

RILEY: It is possible to object to anything, as I see it, if I understand your question.

HELLENTHAL: Is it possible to do that within the rule?

PRESIDENT EGAN: To make a proposed change, Mr. Hellenthal, under our existing rules -- do you so move the adoption of this report?

RILEY: I have, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

DAVIS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis seconds the motion. The understanding of the Chair is that under the existing rules as they are right now and will be, even if this new rule is adopted, that when we read the Style and Drafting Committee's report in its entirety, you could offer amendments at that time, but it would take a specific amendment at that time which would take a two-thirds vote, Mr. Hellenthal. It would take a majority vote to reject the whole report.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, that was certainly not my understanding of the prerogatives of Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: The only purpose of the proposed rule here is this: Under the rules, the third reading must be a full reading. Now Style and Drafting figured that it would be better for everybody concerned, more understandable for everybody concerned, at the time they brought in their report to have a full reading at that time, so if there were any changes people could catch them at that time. Then, assuming that the report is adopted, there wouldn't be much point in a full reading again in third reading, so we wanted that reading at that time to be considered as a third reading if the report was adopted. That was what we had in mind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Davis a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Then, Mr. Davis, say, to make a specific illustration, say the requirement that residence be actual and bona fide is omitted in the Style and Drafting revision of the suffrage requirements. Could someone make an amendment that it be included and that the original language in general be used, and would it take but a majority vote for that to pass?

DAVIS: I don't believe I can answer your question. Certainly you could refuse to accept the report on that ground that Style and Drafting had not done its job. They left out something or changed something of substance -- what vote it would take I cannot answer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, the Chair can answer that, that under the existing rules and this argument came up in the beginning of the session, also, under existing rules if you wish to offer any type of amendment now when the Style and Drafting Committee brings in their report, it will take a two-thirds vote. It will take a majority vote to reject the whole report.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I want to be heard on that subject.

I participated in the original debate, and, frankly, my understanding was different. When a Style and Drafting Committee was picked from among our members in the same manner as any other committee it was not my intention and I don't think it was the intention of anybody here to confer upon that small group the right to make a change of substance in an article and to require a two-thirds vote in order to upset that change, and I think Mr. Sundborg has the same feeling and he is nodding his head in agreement with me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I think maybe I can throw some light on the topic, which Mr. Hellenthal brings up here, which I don't think is exactly on what is proposed here in Rule 44. Yours was a little different kind of a question, but he asked could we adopt a report here by a majority vote if it made substantive changes. Our rules say that the Style and Drafting Committee has no authority to make any change in substance. If Mr. Hellenthal, or any member, when a report from Style and Drafting comes back on the floor, thinks that we have made a change in substance, that member has a point of order against our report and he should put the point of order to the President, that our report in such and such a particular is out of order because it has made a substantive change. If the President should rule that that is correct we would have to take the report back or else we would have to get a two-thirds vote of the body for the adoption of the part of the report which had been ruled to be a change in substance.

HELLENTHAL: Say the President, whom I have great respect for but is fallible like the rest of us, say he made an error in ruling on a point of order, would it take a two-thirds majority to overrule his decision?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it takes a majority vote, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think we've made this clear then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels that it is very fine that this question has come up right now before we have started this discussion and the Chair also feels, Mr. Riley, if you are in agreement, that it would be well to have a recess of five or ten minutes at this time and have the Rules Committee and the delegates, any delegate who is interested, come before the Rules Committee, and we will attempt to spell that out in the rules so that there is no doubt in the minds of any delegate. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, if I may first, it might provide further clarification while we are all here. The process goes even further, as I understand it, than outlined by Mr. Sundborg. If for example, Mr. Hellenthal, you object to a phrase or a word in the belief it is a substantive change, you need only muster a majority to reject the report and there is no place for it to go but to Style and Drafting who has been made aware of your objection and its nature. Then later, if because of defect, an oversight, or something that occurred to no one, you wished to amend it specifically, that and that only is where your two-thirds comes in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann has been attempting to get the floor.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I think I can settle Mr. Hellenthal's worries by referring you to Section 8 of Rule 44, not Section 8a. But it says, "Action on report of Committee on Style and Drafting and action on amendments as to phraseology only."

PRESIDENT EGAN: As the Chair recalls, all the discussion that took place earlier in the session, the Rules Committee definitely stated that any amendment that would be offered at the time the Style and Drafting Committee brought back their report would have to be made by a two-thirds vote.

HERMANN: That is amendments as to substance, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: May I suggest that the report from Style and Drafting be referred back to the floor by way of the committee. That might save a lot of time before it's over with, too.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: By way of what committee?

MCNEES: The committee for the original article.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in every event, as I have said here on the floor previously, Style and Drafting has cleared with a representative nominated by a substantive committee before it has brought its article back on the floor. We don't feel that we should refer them back through those committees. In fact, our rules do not provide for that. This is a report of the Style and Drafting Committee, and it has to be our report and be acted upon by the Convention, and not by the substantive committee, because many amendments have been made here on the floor, and we know the proposal is no longer the chattel of the substantive committee. They may have been changed in many ways, and they have been in almost every case, and I believe it is up to the Convention to accept or reject the report of the Style and Drafting Committee and not up to the committee which may have drawn the bones of the article in the first place. It has been threshed out here on the Convention floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Point of information here. Isn't this proposed report 8a trying to combine 8 and 9; 9 mentions specifically third reading and it says here in 8a that this "shall be deemed to be the proposal's third reading..." So we would have to have an amendment to No. 9, I believe, on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: This is to merge two readings in one, to save the time of the third reading, as you would recall it, which is provided for in 9.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair still feels that it might be well to have a Rules Committee meeting at this time and each delegate who has any questions, and including the President, attend that meeting and we will come up with a real understanding of what we are going to do. If there is no objection the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent on the part of the Committee to withdraw the proposed Rule 44-8a.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of the Chairman of the Rules Committee? Hearing no objection the proposed Rule 44-8a is ordered withdrawn. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: My earlier motion for adoption now extends only to Rule 16c.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the new proposed Rule 16c be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the proposed rule change is ordered adopted. Mr. Riley, did you have anything else?

RILEY: In the way of explanation if it is necessary, Mr. President, it was simply felt that rather than chance need to review this procedure, to explain it perhaps several times a week, the consensus was that we will go ahead and read measures in their entirety when Style and Drafting makes its report as well as in a formal third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any communications at this time? If not, we have before us Committee Proposal No. 6/a. There was an amendment. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask unanimous consent to withdraw the last amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent to withdraw the proposed amendment that was offered by him before the noon recess. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered withdrawn. Are there other amendments to Sections 3 or 4? Mr. Rosswog?

ROSSWOG: I believe there is a committee amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: For Section 6?

CHIEF CLERK: We are on 3 and 4. Section 6 is where we left off.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are amendments to Section 6 would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 24, Section 6, strike 'portions of'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: This is a committee proposal and I would move and ask unanimous consent that this amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed committee amendment be adopted. Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 24, page 2, strike the words 'portions of'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adoption? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 6? To Section 7? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, line 12, strike the words 'necessary functions' and substitute the words 'services it deems necessary or advisable'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption. I might say the Committee has concurred with me on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I would object for a matter of information. What difference does it make, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: The point was made yesterday that where it says, "the legislature shall provide for the performance of necessary functions," and somebody said, "Who decides what is necessary?" and the Committee said it would take it under advisement. I pursued the point a little bit and drafted this language, "for the performance of services it deems necessary or advisable". In the first place, it specifies that the legislature is the one who shall use its discretion; it clears up that point and also improves the context a little.

GRAY: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I had a question to ask. Earlier in the day, on line 13 --

R. RIVERS: Let's have a ruling on this other one first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are referring to this amendment?

COOPER: Yes, sir, and this has a bearing on it. Line 13, it was "the greatest possible measure"? Was that the amendment? (Answer not audible.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to have the section read as it will read now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the section as it would appear if Mr. Rivers' amendment was adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7. The legislature shall provide for the performance of services it deems necessary or advisable in unorganized boroughs allowing for the greatest possible measure of local participation and responsibility."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the proposed unanimous consent request?

COOPER: I have to object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers so moves for the adoption

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. White that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have to apologize for not being here yesterday when this was very likely discussed. However, the way I see it it says "shall provide for the performances of the services" -- is that the intention?

R. RIVERS: Speaking of unorganized areas where they don't have any self-functioning. Here the state would perform those services that the legislature deems necessary or advisable until such time as the area does get organized.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I would like to ask Mr. Rivers a question if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Isn't there quite a difference between the words "services" and "functions"? Wouldn't the functions of an unorganized borough be completely different than the services that the legislature would provide for it? Wouldn't the unorganized borough have a definite function?

R. RIVERS: The unorganized borough does not function period. All the functioning is at the state level or through state operations and, therefore, it is only certain social services that the state performs in the unorganized areas. So I think that the word "services" is better than "functions", but I don't mind leaving in the words "functions as it deems necessary or advisable", but I mean it is more realistic that certain state services that are performed in an unorganized unfunctioning area.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 7? If not, are there amendments to Section 8? To Section 9? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I have considered placing an amendment on the classes of cities. With the privilege of the Chair I would like to ask a question of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Coghill, you may ask your question.

COGHILL: We went over this to some length yesterday and still, after thinking about it quite a bit, I still can't see where the city of the first class should be discriminated against the city of the second class. I wonder if I could get an explanation from the Committee as to why they have left out the city of the second class.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could the Committee or any member of the Committee answer that question? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I will try and answer it. In any borough, organized borough, you would have, almost of necessity, a city of the first class, a fairly substantial city, whereas when you get into classes of cities that are second and third-class cities they are incorporated, it is true, but sometimes have very small population, and their representation on the assembly would be out of proportion to, if you are using population as a figure, would be out of proportion to the people that they represent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I don't want to try and argue, but I am trying to get it clear, not to the point of the outlying areas. Now, you take a city of the second class which will have a population of 500, and you might have 3,000 or 4,000 in the outlying areas immediately surrounding this small service community that might be out there, and I think that in the constitution, leaving it just to the city of the first class, that it might tend to discriminate against that particular incorporated unit to the point that they couldn't grow or become elevated to the first class.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, perhaps Mr. Lee has the answer to your question. Mr. Lee.

LEE: Well, we figured this would be the most advanced type of city. We haven't put anything down here as to the second class, third class, fourth class or fiftieth class of cities which possibly the legislature might set up. So we have in a later section that the legislature may extend home rule to other classes of boroughs and cities; it is left to the legislature, not to the constitution. I don't know if that answers your question, but that is the way I look at it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, if I may answer, along with Mr. Lee, I believe it states here that a home rule charter, and a home rule charter is where they have their own commission set up their own charter, but it wouldn't necessarily mean that the other cities couldn't have charters, there might be charters supplied under general law that they could accept.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, my purpose in asking the question is that I know that the legislature can provide for other cities but why then adopt a procedure for the first-class city?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: At the present time we all agree that the municipal code needs amending but at the present time a city of the first class can be organized by 250 people or over; a city of the second class by 40 people or more; and a city of the third class by five people or more. If they would amend the code in such a way that the city of the second and third class will come up to a reasonable population quota, then under this they could adopt their own charter if the legislature so provides.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The purpose in asking this question is not only the clarification of the first-class city but also to the point where that cities of the second class or third class might be well discriminated upon in their place in the borough assembly where they would be the principal community within that borough. You have protected for the first-class city but not for the other classes of cities on the borough organization, and I believe that it should be left just cities, not cities of the first class, and then leaving the legislative procedure still in there, they could still provide for the charter part.

DOOGAN: The answer to that is that there probably would not be known as what is known as a first-class borough unless it definitely had a first-class city as some substance of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, if I may contribute. Cities will act either under grants of power without home rule charters, or they will act under home rule charters. But that will have nothing to do with the representation on the borough assembly; whether it has got a home rule charter or not doesn't affect its share of representation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments for Section 9?

COOPER: I have an amendment I would like to present orally to Section 9.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may read the amendment.

COOPER: The sentence in Section 9, beginning on page 4, line 2, beginning with the word "in" and through the word "charter" on line 7, strike that sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper, do you so move?

COOPER: I move the adoption of that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper moves that the sentence beginning with the word "in" on line 2 and ending with the word "charter" on line 7 of Section 9, page 4, be deleted from the section. Is there a second?

TAYLOR: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor seconds the motion. Is there discussion? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, my amendment would provide for the legislation or the law to accomplish by a uniform procedure the various preparations, approvals, or rejections that are set forth in that sentence. This sentence merely treats the subject in the event there is no such legislation. By striking this sentence it would automatically be mandatory upon the legislature to set a uniform procedure to provide for the accomplishment as set out in the sentence, and it would be uniform throughout the first-class cities, second-class, and on through any class city or borough.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to explain why this particular sentence is here and why it is needed. The Constitutional Convention in Pennsylvania before the turn of the century adopted an amendment to the constitution authorizing home rule to cities. At that time they outlined what powers home rule cities would have at great length and did everything except provide the method of the adoption of a charter. That was left to the legislature. I think it was only about three or four years ago, if it has been done as yet, that Pennsylvania, that the legislature ever got around to authorizing, to providing a means of adopting a home rule charter. In other words, the authority was there but it couldn't be exercised. You will find that as you study provisions for home rule in the various constitutions that, I think in all but two cases, a self-executing clause like this is provided. The preferable case is, of course, that the legislature do it. This is an escape clause in case the legislature does not act. If you will look in the model state constitution, if you look in other constitutions, they go into this matter at great length. They would have more than a page, maybe two pages, covering the procedure. The Committee felt that one sentence was worth putting in, to make sure that these boroughs and cities that have the qualifications that are deemed necessary to be a class one city or borough would also have the authority to adopt a home rule charter. If the legislature acts there is nothing to prevent the people then from following the process set up by the legislature. It is only an escape clause which is necessary and has proven necessary through experience in a number of states.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Fischer a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

COOPER: In lieu of the power of the initiative and referendum, how long do you believe the people of Alaska would allow the legislature to go without acting on a question such as this?

V. FISCHER: That is impossible to answer, of course, but we feel that this sentence is necessary and is justified here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, the Cooper amendment is actually the heart of the question to which I was speaking on, and it seems to me that the Local Government Committee in their home rule have done a very good job as far as the cities of the first class are concerned, and they have provided that they can set up their charter without any legislation, go right down the line and adopt it, but when it comes to we people that live in the small communities, they come down in the next section and say the legislature "may" extend home rule to other classes of boroughs and cities, but they don't say they "shall". They have given the cities of the first class the prerogative to have home rule charter; they have set them up in the constitution to provide for the home rule charter without the legislature acting, but to the people that are in the smaller communities they have given nothing, and they haven't even provided that we will have home rule. They have said that the legislature "may" provide home rule, and with the cities of the first class they have set them up in the constitution to do it. I think the amendment is fine.

V. RIVERS: Point of order. I don't think the argument is germane to the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I direct a question to Mr. Fischer or some member of the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I may have overlooked it but you use the phrase "borough of the first class and city of the first class", and I don't find any definition of what you mean by borough of the first class or city of the first class. Is that in the article or have I just overlooked it?

V. FISCHER: That is not in the article. The article gives the legislature authority to classify, and the assumption is that there will be first-class boroughs as well as first-class cities.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I wish to close. In striking this sentence the legislature would then prescribe what would be a first-, second-, third-, or fourth-class city and also the procedure of the preparation, approval, or rejection of any charters in any type of class cities, and I think the uniform procedure should be established so that there will never be any discrimination in the home rule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to suggest again if there is a roll call vote that all delegates participate with their view one way or the other.

COGHILL: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Cooper be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 12 - Armstrong, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, H. Fischer, Hurley, King, Laws, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, Stewart, Taylor.

Nays: 39 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh,

White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Buckalew, Hilscher, Knight, McNealy.)

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 39 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of passage. The Chair made an error in speaking of, in asking the delegates to make their wishes known when he referred to roll call. He meant when a voice vote is being called for. Are there other amendments to Section 9? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Yes, I have a small amendment if I may offer it. On line 24, page 3, that "first class" be stricken and "any organized" be put ahead of the word "borough" so that it may read "the qualified voters of any organized borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The word "organized"?

KILCHER: The word "organized" be put ahead of the word "borough" and "of the first class" be stricken, page 3, line 24.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You move the adoption of the proposed amendment, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

CHIEF CLERK: I don't understand that.

KILCHER: Strike the words "of the first class" on line 24.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Strike the words "of the first class" on line 24.

CHIEF CLERK: Then it reads "the qualified voters of any borough organized."

KILCHER: And insert the word "organized" in front of the word "borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

HINCKEL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel seconds the motion. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think when reading over the original

Article 6 and comparing it with 6/a, that there must have slipped in some small inconsistencies of which I think this is one. As Mr. Fischer said awhile ago, there is an assumption there might be boroughs of the first class, etc., but that assumption, I think, derives from Article 6 which is now abandoned, and there is no other mention in the article of first-class boroughs ahead of this section, but there is mention of organized and unorganized boroughs, so I think to be consistent with the article so far, we should speak here of the "organized borough" on the one hand and of "city of the first class" on the other.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Committee if you put "organized borough" in line 24, how would a borough become organized in the first place? Doesn't that take a charter to form an organized borough? Section 9, the charter is to organize a borough, isn't that the purpose of it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: That would be one way or they might adopt two or three options set up by general law. They could be organized either under general law or by charter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, could I ask somebody on the Committee what the Committee thinks of Mr. Kilcher's proposed amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I think I can speak for the Committee that we feel that organizing by a home rule charter should be for the highest advanced in each case, and you may set it up by law, a charter established by law, which would not be to the advantage of maybe your lower classifications. If you should force them to go into a home rule charter in order to organize, it might be that you are discriminating against them rather than helping them along.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: In trying to read in this amendment here, I don't suppose, as far as I am personally concerned, that it would hurt the purpose of the whole article; on the next page it says "in the manner provided by law" and they can provide for it then. I can see one point there that was brought up by Mr. Coghill awhile ago. If they are going to classify this on account of population, you may have 50,000 people that are just as capable of home rule as a city of 100,000, but just because they don't have the population wouldn't get to have a home rule charter, or it might be 5,000. I can see a discrimination there when we don't know what the legislature is going to set up for standards of the first class.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I might go a step further on that in explaining the reasons for using "first class" after borough. When boroughs will first be established it will be a new form of government to Alaska. It was, in part, the Committee's thinking that when they are first established there may be no first-class boroughs until, say for a few years, until they have organized to the point where they have assumed basic functions and you may put it in terms of learning how to operate as a government. Then the legislature may provide for a reclassification or there may be an automatic reclassification into first-class boroughs and then they would be able to adopt home rule charters rather than automatically opening the way up to the adoption of home rule charters before the people of a particular borough know exactly what the form of government is that is being imposed upon them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I am still a little confused on this. Mr. Rosswog in answering a question a minute ago, if I understood you correctly, you said that the Committee did not want to force a borough to adopt a charter in order to become organized. It doesn't seem to me that this amendment does that. It merely says that an organized borough may adopt a charter, but the borough could become organized without adopting a charter even should this amendment carry. Isn't that correct?

ROSSWOG: Yes, except that it states here that they may adopt a home rule charter which is set up by their own commission.

WHITE: I meant to say home rule charter -- so if the Committee opposes this amendment we must assume that the Committee doesn't feel that a borough of less than the first class should, in any event, be able to adopt a home rule charter?

ROSSWOG: Yes, unless the legislature should provide as in the next section.

WHITE: I see. But it does seem to me that this particular amendment is getting at what Mr. Cooper had in mind with his amendment earlier.

KILCHER: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor

KILCHER: Roll call, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

RILEY: Mr. President, I missed the debate and wish to announce I am abstaining from voting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 12 - Coghill, Cooper, H. Fischer, Hurley, Kilcher, Londborg, Marston, Peratrovich, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, White.

Nays: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Buckalew, Hilscher, Knight, McNealy, VanderLeest.

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 37 nays, 5 absent and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, may I address a question to the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

ROBERTSON: In line 3, on page 4, in the sentence that was the subject of Mr. Cooper's amendment, I would like to ask, do the words "of the first class" -- are they intended to modify "borough" as well as "city"?

V. FISCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, pursuing the same thought that Mr. Robertson had, I find on page 2, the first paragraph, that the "legislature shall classify boroughs and provide the methods by which they are organized, incorporated, etc." I can't find anything in here which says the legislature shall classify cities; it may be here but I can't find it.

V. FISCHER: The Section 8, page 3, lines 21 and 22.

R. RIVERS: Oh yes, "or classified". Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 9? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to ask a question of the Committee. It is not quite clear in my mind yet as to why it is necessary to say in Section 9, line 24, "borough of the first class". Would it not be possible just to say that qualified voters of any borough or of any city of the first class may adopt, etc. Is it absolutely necessary that you qualify it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, could you answer that question?

V. FISCHER: Yes, it is quite necessary because the purpose of a system of classification to start with is to separate communities or areas of varying sizes and economic means according to their ability to support government. The legislature and the constitutions generally, then, confer powers upon such units of government according to the class into which they fall rather than devolving the same powers upon all the various classes; just as we now have three classes of cities in Alaska, each with a different scope of power and authority.

HINCKEL: May I ask another question, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes.

HINCKEL: If the borough or community felt that they were capable of self-government and wished to adopt a charter, shouldn't they be permitted to go through the form at least requesting that their charter be approved? It might not be that the legislature would get around to classifying them in this group of first-class communities which would permit them to do this, and I feel that unless you can show me otherwise that it might be very possible, as time went on, that the legislature might be a little lax and the community might advance to the point that they were willing and ready to assume these obligations before somebody got around to saying that they were classified.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, there is no motion before the floor. We are hearing an argument on a point that has been discussed at least four different times during the past two days. There has been no attempt apparently to take any amendment before the Committee on this matter. I think we are going too far, and if we are not violating our express rule, we are certainly violating the tenor of the rule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair felt Mr. Hinckel was going to ask a question on that matter.

HINCKEL: I am not quite as smart as Mr. Hellenthal is, and I was asking a question, and it just did not soak in, possibly as fast as it did in his mind. It is not clear in my mind yet, and I am still asking the question of the Committee, and I would like an answer.

V. FISCHER: The Committee had in mind all the way through that local governments are not to be divorced from the state, that the state will exercise a certain amount of interest as well as control over the affairs of local governments. That was one of the underlying reasons that a provision has been included for an agency within the executive which can help and keep track of these matters. Now, when it comes to a community that reaches a level where home rule can be exercised as it grows, the general method of classifying communities, be they just small areas or large, is that certain standards are set up, population possibly, assessment, area inclusion, and then as a city reaches a larger population class, it can automatically go from one class to the other so that there would be no dampening effect upon the community's powers even if it grew.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Fischer?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: In Section 3, Mr. Fischer, which provides for the classification of boroughs among other things, your direction to the legislature seems to be mandatory since you say "The legislature shall classify boroughs." Now in Section 8, which you cited a moment ago with respect to classifying cities, I notice you used the word "may" which indicates a permissive regulation. Was there any reason for differentiating between them?

V. FISCHER: No, there was no intentional differentiation between the two. Insofar as classification is concerned, we want to be sure that boroughs are classified. Cities are classified already.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I am still not satisfied on this either.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there an amendment to be offered?

WHITE: No, I want to ask a question, Mr. President, of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: It appears to me that what is bothering people here is the fact that there may be boroughs of less than the first class which may desire or may be entitled to some measure of home rule, but apparently under this section they can't get it. Now, the provision is made for classifying boroughs as cities and if I understood you correctly, Mr. Fischer, you just mentioned population, assessment, and areas as some of the matters that might be taken into consideration. However, these are all quantitative factors so that it appears that a borough will have to grow in population, or grow in total assessed valuation, or grow in area before it is able to rise from one class to the next. Now, in listening to the discussion, it appears to me what is bothering people is that there may be boroughs of a lower quantitative standing in these matters which is, although small, still well able to assume some measure of home rule. Now, did the Committee ever take into consideration the fact that home rule might be extended to individual boroughs within a class without extending it to the whole class?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: No, we have not and in Section 10, we do, however, provide that the legislature may extend home rule to other classes of boroughs and cities but not by special legislation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 9 or 10? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: If I may ask a question which will kill the necessity of making an amendment, Mr. Fischer, who sets up the class standards for cities and boroughs? The legislature?

V. FISCHER: Yes, the legislature.

KILCHER: Then, Mr. President, I have an amendment. Section 9, page 3, strike on line 24 "of the first class", and on line 25, also, "of the first class", so that it will read: "the qualified voters of any borough or city may adopt".

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was the previous amendment on that?

CHIEF CLERK: It was to strike "of the first class" on line 24 and insert "organized" before "borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, what is your pleasure regarding this?

KILCHER: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor seconds the motion. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, since the legislature has yet to set up the classes for cities as well as boroughs, and since the legislature, as it says on page 4, line 1, will provide by law, the legislature or initiative will set up the home rule charter provisions; since we have no classes the legislature has to establish them, why not let the legislature set up the whole system. Let the legislature decide what the first-, second-, or third-class city or borough consists of, what specifications it has to meet and then in what case they should get home rule charter or not. This article is the framework. It establishes principal rules that the borough should be a combination of city and borough. The city, it says is a part of the borough, which is a very good idea; it also gives in Section 1, the general principles by which a borough should be established, and the rest I think should purely be left up to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion?

MCCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 10, page 4, line 13, change 'may' to 'shall'.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move for the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

COOPER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper seconds the motion. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I know that this is hopping from Section 9 to Section 10. However, it is providing that the legislature "shall" extend home rule to other classes of boroughs and cities. If the borough is entitled to home rule, they will be organized; if a city is entitled to home rule it will be organized, and I believe that this will assure the small communities of some sort of a home rule charter. It can be limited, that the legislature will do the extending; they will make the provisions, and I believe that this here will solve the problems that we of the small communities are concerned with here in the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak on this. I think there should be discretion left to the legislature, that it should have some control over our local government. I don't think that the delegates realize that possibly under home rule chartering a lot of local government is given to the community or the city or the borough, and they could set up as many officers as they wanted to under their charter and there should be some supervision so that they would not go overboard. I think myself that the word "may" gives the right that the legislature can decide if they are ready for it, but there should be some supervision over them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Coghill be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "yes", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 12 - Coghill, Collins, Cooper, H. Fischer, Harris, Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Peratrovich, Reader, Taylor, White.

Nays: 35 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 8 - Barr, Buckalew, Hilscher, Knight, Londborg, McNealy, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 35 nays, and 8 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments for Sections 9 or 10? If not, are there amendments for Section 11? For Section 12?

CHIEF CLERK: I have a committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, page 4, line 20, after the word 'commission' insert the words 'in the executive branch'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that this amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment once again.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the proposed amendment?

KILCHER: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to the motion?

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to have the Committee explain its change in its stand.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog, would you care to explain?

ROSSWOG: I think it was in the discussion yesterday, Mr. Chairman, and it was felt that by asking for a boundary commission which we thought was very necessary in establishing your local government boundaries that it should be under some branch of the government and it should necessarily be under the executive branch.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there still objection?

KILCHER: No.

TAYLOR: May I ask a question? Mr. Rosswog, is that local boundaries commission, is that a commission organized in each borough?

ROSSWOG: No.

TAYLOR: A state commission?

ROSSWOG: It would be statewide because you could not leave it just to the local unit to set up its own boundaries. There should be some supervision or someone setting them up.

TAYLOR: Then one other question, in line 22, the article says, "The commission may consider any proposed boundary." That would necessarily imply that that is a proposed borough boundary, is that right?

ROSSWOG: There is an amendment in local government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I would like to ask the Committee a question. Does this commission in the executive branch that they have pointed out now, was there consideration given to the fact that that could be an additional duty of the apportionment board?

ROSSWOG: Yes.

COOPER: And that is what you have in mind?

ROSSWOG: Yes, we have in mind that it could be combined with some other --

COOPER: Yes. Then, would the words, "The legislature shall establish" -- would that have anything to do with it because the apportionment board now would be established by the governor?

ROSSWOG: My belief is that they could designate the same board if they wished or one might be appointed by the governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Rosswog.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may ask your question.

R. RIVERS: The way this would read that "The legislature shall establish a local boundary commission in the executive branch and regulate its activities." It sounds as though the commission is going to regulate the activities of the executive branch. What you should say is, "The legislature shall establish within the executive branch a local boundary commission." So, I would ask you if there is any objection to changing your language over to the front of line 20 instead of where it is now and saying "within the executive branch".

HELLENTHAL: What is wrong with having the executive control the executive?

COOPER: May we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will have a one-minute recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I would like to ask for the floor on a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Cooper, you may have the floor on a point of personal privilege.

(Mr. Cooper spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments for Section 9 or 10? Sections 11 or 12? Do you have an amendment for Section 12?

CHIEF CLERK: It has not been acted on yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I think I can safely say that the question brought up by Mr. Rivers can be handled by Style and Drafting.

R. RIVERS: I so consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I want to ask a question of the Committee. In answer to a previous question, I believe you stated that the Committee took into account that this could become a part of the apportionment board set up in another article. I was wondering if the use of the word "commission" here would preclude that. In the apportionment article it says, "There shall be a nonpartisan board of reapportionment."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I believe that it would not stop them from being the same commission, but I did not think at this time that we should tie them up together, forcing them to be the same board. It should be left to a decision at the time because this local boundary question will be a very controversial question and will need a lot of study to set it up, and even with these words they could be grouped together if it was found necessary.

WHITE: Mr. President, in the resources article we had quite a discussion on the difference between a commission and other types of regulatory boards, and it occurred to me that using the word "commission" here means something entirely different than using the word "board". I didn't mean to suggest that they be forced to be one and the same.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion on the proposed amendment?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, lines 20 and 21, Section 12, insert the words 'in the executive branch' after the word 'commission'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. The Convention will come to order. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I haven't had time to write this out but I have an amendment to Section 12, line 20, after the word "commission" insert "or board".

HELLENTHAL: Do you ask unanimous consent?

WHITE: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 20, page 4, after the word 'commission' insert the words 'or board'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. White, would you also include that same wording on line 21?

WHITE: Yes, I certainly would.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection that will become a part of the amendment. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of the proposed amendment?

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move.

WHITE: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White so moves

COOPER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, I believe the motion should also be extended to the word "commission" on the following page, page 5, line 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that acceptable to the maker of the proposed amendment?

WHITE: It is acceptable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing none that will become a part of the proposed amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I ask a question? Would you think a commission or board could also be called an agency?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I think the word "agency" would cover all types of boards, commissions, boroughs and other things.

KILCHER: I would like to ask Mr. White, in that case, if you might not substitute both for "commission" and board [the word] "agency", because in Section 14 we have also provision for an agency in the executive, which may well end by being the same agency.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, in answer to your question, this is as far as I intended to go, Mr. Kilcher, merely because the Committee said that they took into consideration that this organization might be combined with the apportionment board, and the word used in the apportionment article is "board".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as it is before us at the present time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, page 4, lines 20 and 21, page 5, line 3, insert the words 'or board' after the word 'commission'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: May I ask another question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question if there is no objection, Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Did I overlook a discussion on how this legislature was going to regulate this executive branch board or has that been answered?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could the Committee answer that question?

HINCKEL: I thought there were two separate branches.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The way it reads the legislature would establish it; it would be contained within the executive; and the legislature would regulate it; but the intent was, and I speak for the whole board, the intent was that the legislature would establish such a board or commission by law and it would function and lie within the executive department to more or less direct and regulate its activities. That was the intent. I can see here, as I saw it before you mentioned it, the dual possible interpretation, and I hope that this will be noted for the benefit of Style and Drafting Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 12.

HURLEY: I have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment by Mr. Hurley.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, line 25, page 4, strike the words 'at the end of' and line 1, page 5, strike 'the session unless disapproved,' and insert therefor the words 'when approved'."

HURLEY: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

RILEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley seconds the motion. Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I detect a sleepy feeling on some of the parts of the delegates on this matter, but I think this is a crucial one and one of which I recognize there are good arguments on both sides, but I feel that I should bring the amendment before the group to determine what the feeling of the group is. There is a very distinct difference between the wording as it was before and the wording as it is now. At least, I intend that there be a distinct difference. The wording as it was before was a self-executing proposition where the board made a recommendation and if the legislature didn't by resolution accept it, it became law. Now, I am reactionary enough, I guess, to think that is kind of a bad thing. I can recognize also that the matter of swapping around local government boundaries is a tough proposition and one that is hard to get through if it is going to affect somebody's constituents. Still, at the same time, it occurs to me that the initiative should come from the legislature in passing the law, and that I am very much afraid that we will have a rule by a boundary commission rather than by the legislature where silence means acquiescence, and it occurs to me that it would be much better that if the boundary commission were also charged with the duty of explaining their project to the legislators and getting their support in putting it into effect, by passing the bill of their own initiative through the channels of the Congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I am going to take exception to Mr. Hurley's remarks. The reason that it was put in like this was that many times between local government areas they will, by agreement, make boundary changes. These changes, as it is written of necessity, must have the approval of the commission and then again must be presented to the legislature. In all cases, any changes that are made must be submitted to the legislature but in the press of business in the legislature sometimes they may not get around to consider such little things as a minor boundary change, and it isn't the intent of this ordinance that any of these minor boundary changes take up much time of the legislature. Anything that becomes a major change is, of necessity, going to take up plenty of time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I wish to speak against the amendment. This is going to kind of hurt a lot of local home rule because you find that people with their own problems are not interested in your particular problem. The adjustment of a boundary may be very important to a little place like Livengood, but it would be lost in the midst of the great affairs of appropriations, and I can see very well where this little boundary adjustment will go from session to session and not because it would be approved, but because they won't have the time to make it approved. Now, if one of these adjustments are wrong, then it will be disapproved, but I would guarantee, I won't live that long, but I will guarantee that 99 per cent of these little boundary adjustments will be O.K.'d just because they are not disapproved.

Otherwise, they will be held up. I really think that this amendment will do more harm than it will do good.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: It seems like you are taking the negative approach to an enactment of legislation. In this way you are approving or passing something without any action at all by the body that should act on it. That is the legislature. I, for one, am in favor of the amendment because I have not yet, in the number of times I have been in the legislature seen that you can enact legislation by inaction, and I think Mr. Hurley's amendment is all right. I didn't get it all, but I think it should be amended to read that any such change shall not become effective unless approved by a resolution concurred in by a majority of all the residents. Mr. Gray says he would guarantee that no minor boundary changes would ever be taken up by the legislature. If they are so minor that the legislature wouldn't even consider a resolution that might be introduced by some member of the legislature from the locality or from the borough, or from the election district in which it is located, it certainly must be a minor matter if they don't want to force it, and all it would need would be a report from the boundary commission. So, I don't think his argument is sound, I don't believe we should enact legislation by inaction, by not doing something; I think we should take the affirmative action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe we did exactly the same thing and provided the same method of adoption of what amounts to law in the case of the judiciary article where we said that the supreme court may draw up all the rules of procedure, etc., and unless rejected by the legislature they shall become the law, and we did the same thing as I recall in the executive article where we said that the governor may regroup the agencies and assign them any way he wants to and unless rejected by the legislature that has the force of law. There isn't anything novel to this, and I believe it is all right the way it came out of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to point out to Mr. Sundborg that in the case of the executive and the judiciary, it's a matter of general readjustments. This is a matter of specific legislation. Quite a difference. In other words, I think this is the next best thing to the referendum of the people. They have at least a voice in it through representatives. It is a special case and not a general adjustment to come under the major departments so I think there is a difference there, and I am in favor of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hurley be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, H. Fischer, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, Nolan, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, Taylor, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 32 - Awes, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, White, Wien.

Absent: 6 - Barr, Buckalew, Hilscher, Knight, McNealy, VanderLeest.)

LONDBORG: Mr. President, may I change my vote to "yes"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg changes his vote to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 32 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I move we recess until 3:50.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before we put the motion, the Chair would like to announce a luncheon meeting of all committee chairmen tomorrow afternoon at 12:30 in the luncheon room upstairs. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: If we may revert to committee announcements, that the Committee on Administration will have a dinner meeting this evening in the dining hall upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Administration will have a dinner meeting this evening. If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 3:55.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to Section 12 or 13? Is there a proposed amendment for Section 10?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment for Section 10.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, line 14. Strike the words, 'classes of'."

WHITE: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves the adoption of the amendment.

COOPER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper seconds the motion. Is it your amendment, Mr. White?

WHITE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, it seems to me that this amendment might solve a lot of the problems that have arisen here and then shown in other amendments that have been offered. In starting their presentation the Committee on Local Government pointed out that we have here a golden opportunity to set up a brand new system of local government that we have never had before. It put forth as one of its cornerstones the extension of as much local government as possible to all people throughout the future State of Alaska, which certainly is an admirable aim. Now, it appears to me that the questions that have arisen here have come about because when you classify boroughs, or cities, you almost have to classify them according to quantitative standards -- standards of population, standards of total assessed valuation, standards of area, or other quantitative standards. With that as background it may well be that we will have a city or a borough of small population that cannot rise from one class to the next, but may well have a well-integrated and healthy economy and may be well entitled to some measure of home rule. So, if this amendment is adopted, Section 10 would read: "The legislature may extend home rule to other boroughs and cities," which would mean that a deserving borough or a city, let's say, within the second class, would at least be eligible for some measure of home rule should its economy and population -- type of population and type of economy -- warrant it. I think there can be no objection to this provision, at least there is none that I can see, where the legislature retains the power of decision, the basic power of decision. Now, it might be said that this would be in the nature of local or special legislation. I would call your attention to Section 18 of the legislative article which says: "The legislature shall pass no local or special act in any case where a general act can be made applicable and whether a general act can be made applicable shall be a matter for judicial determination." It seems to me that here is a pure case where special legislation might well be appropriate. In any event the court could pass on whether it would be appropriate or not. This would merely leave the way open to the extension of home rule to a borough or a city of less than the first class, should such extension be proper and appropriate. Now, most of us live in larger cities, but I hope that this, leaving the door open for the smaller cities will receive serious consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I had hoped that I for one of the Committee, wouldn't have the need to speak on the matter of the word "classes". This motion is to strike the word "classes". Now, early in the history of the Territory the legislature selected and adopted the idea of using cities of different classes -- one, two, and three. I think they did wisely because in the states you have had this problem where in individual states they have adopted the titles of cities, towns, and villages, and at one time a city or a community would incorporate as a village and it might grow up bigger than the town next door to it and still be a village; or the town may adopt the terminology of town and grow bigger than the city next to it, or in one state you had cities of one classification and villages of another. We have tried to keep within the bounds and the limits of the idea of a classification of one group rather than the terminology of many groups; that is the reason why we have tried to stress the idea that the classification system of boroughs and cities would continue. Now, I cannot agree with Mr. White that we will have this problem of not being able to visualize in the boroughs because of the size of the population, the difference in what classification they should be entitled to. I can visualize rather a small area of a borough that is rather heavily populated and potentially wealthy being a borough of the first class, as well as I could also visualize a borough, we will say, out in a rural area that has quite a substantial population, rather scattered, with a large area, still being a borough of the first class. I wanted to amplify just a bit further the thinking as I visualize it on boroughs. We have a country that is potentially wealthy in raw material and I can readily see that if some of these materials are brought into production in the form of coal, gas, and oil, other minerals, radioactive metals, those things; that, as those are separated from the state patrimony that they will leave a certain residual royalty or severance tax as you may wish, to call, which will go into the state treasury, will probably some portion of it, revert to the area from which it came. I can visualize very wealthy semirural types of boroughs here, but I don't see why the legislature in its wisdom in all probability would set up limitations on classes, such that boroughs that were potentially wealthy and fully entitled to home rule could not get it; so I oppose this amendment. I want to say further that the concept of home rule as we mention it here is not the idea of a borough incorporated in the first class under general law or a city under the same means, it is the idea of the borough sitting down, or the city sitting down, and drawing its own constitution which they call a charter as we visualize it here, and as we are sitting here in this Constitutional Convention. I agree with the secretary of this Committee, Victor Fischer, that in order to achieve that purpose of best adopting a charter they should have some background of experience in operating the form of government they are going to adopt, and know what is best to write into their charter; so it will give them the best opportunity to get the best for their purposes with the least amount of later amendments. I favor holding the word "classes" as we have adopted it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I'd like to close just briefly, Mr. President. There is no intent here through this amendment to eliminate the idea of establishing classes for boroughs or cities. The only intent here is to make it possible to extend home rule should the legislature or appropriate boards see fit -- to a borough or a city in the class less than the first class should that borough or city have an economy that would entitle it to it. It's merely to allow an exception to the rigidity of the class system here where home rule is under consideration. Now, it may well be that we could have a borough or a city, small in population, that because of the standards of classification that have been set up cannot rise from the second -- let us say to the first class, but it might have a very well-integrated and healthy economy. It may well have a long background of experience but it will not be able under this section, unless amended, it would not be able to have home rule because it couldn't rise to the first class on account of population or other factors.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 10, 11, 12, or 13? Are there amendments to Section 14? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question. What happened to line 18, provisions "shall" or provisions "may"?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: "Shall".

HURLEY: Provisions "may", is that the way it should read?

CHIEF CLERK: No, "shall".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 14?

TAYLOR: Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I'd like to propose a question to the Chairman of the Committee if I may?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Taylor, if there is no objection.

TAYLOR: Mr. Rosswog, here recently we had a setting up of a board or a commission first, and then you broadened it to a board, and I see now it has provisions made for an agency. Now, is this the same agency, board, or commission that you were talking about before?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, if I may answer Mr. Taylor. We felt that it was not necessarily the same agency, that this agency was to assist and help the local government units, and could possibly be in some other department of the executive branch, but would be a continuing agency where the boundary commission or board would possibly be set up and work just at certain times; that they have two separate functions, and they could be possibly combined but not necessarily.

TAYLOR: Well, wouldn't it be all right then if we amended this by having an agency, board, or commission so that they could all be used -- the same one, the same board could be used?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I don't know whether I speak for the entire Committee, but I think I do. We went over this quite thoroughly and I think, and most of the Committee thinks, that the success of this plan of local government lies largely in its being coordinated with the balance of the state government, and as you will notice the powers of this board are to render assistance and advice; to collect and publish information relating to local government on a statewide basis; review the activities of local government, and perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law. We have not in our constitution a set tax limitation upon the bonded or indebtedness of the entire state, nor in our local government have we said to any local government, "You may bond yourself only to 10 per cent of your assessed evaluation." But, in the proper approach to it there must be some coordination between state and local government, and in order to properly represent the state in the matter of local government affairs it is proven to be a fact in the states and in other countries that some sort of a rural and urban administrator who would sit and advise with them as to what their debt burden and obligations should be, based upon their total assets or resources. Things of that nature were of vital importance in a government of this kind where we do not establish these debt ceilings and that is one of the functions along with the organizing and establishing of the governments -- the local governments -- and the changing of classifications and other things which they would be advised by this agency. I hope that I have answered, in part, your question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you offering an amendment?

TAYLOR: No, I'm not offering an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 14? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I'd like to ask the Committee a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

COGHILL: Is it the intent of the Committee, Mr. Rosswog, that this provision, Section 14, will set up more or less of a clearing house in the executive department for the League of Alaskan Cities, or such things as that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Well, I'm sure that that wasn't the intention of the Committee. It would be an agency that would be of assistance and as we now have laws of the Territory concerning cities, why they would probably suggest it and direct it.

COGHILL: As I read it then, if I may, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may read it.

COGHILL: As I read it then the assistance and advice to local governments and their charter drafting agencies, that local governments could mean any type of or any particular section of their government?

ROSSWOG: Well, it could be your cities, your boroughs, or even your service districts.

COGHILL: Would it then be the same thing as our Legislative Council, in lots of respects as far as agencies? I'm trying to clarify the point, Mr. Rosswog, as to just the intent of the Committee as to the function of this government agency. Will they be available to the health, welfare, education, municipal leagues of a borough, or a city?

ROSSWOG: Well, it would depend upon the law of what their duties would be. We could not say now that they should advise every district or every section of the local government. I believe you have a Department of Health, a Department of Education, and those things set up and they certainly would not be stepping in on that.

COGHILL: You think then it's legislative material?

ROSSWOG: Not necessarily legislative material. It would be more in directing and helping the local governments like the cities and boroughs, such as in drafting charters, that is not an easy job to take on, and they would have to help out in that and possibly in many other ways in directing your local governments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 14? If not, are there amendments to Section 15? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have a question which I think needs to be asked here for the purpose of clearing our record. It was mentioned when we were discussing Section 12, that there was a possibility that the same commission or board could establish local boundaries as would serve as a board of apportionment, and I would like to ask the question, since this says that the legislature "shall" establish a local boundary commission and since my recollection of the apportionment article was that the board of apportionment should be appointed by the governor with no hand in its creation, appointment, or confirmation by the legislature; whether there is any possibility that the legislature could get its hands on the apportionment board by trying to combine the activities of the two boards. I direct that question either to the Chairman of the Committee on Local Government or to the Chairman of the Committee on Apportionment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I think there is a very great possibility of it in the composition of the board as set up.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Hellenthal, wasn't it clear in the language of our apportionment article that the board of apportionment would be appointed by the governor and that there was no manner, at least in the wording of that article, by which the legislature could touch it in any way?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

SUNDBORG: Now, you fear that through something we may have written in here, in the local government article, that we may be opening the way for the legislature to get hold of the apportionment board?

HELLENTHAL: It is possible if the two boards were combined; although not probable, I say a possibility of it. You catch me by surprise. I haven't thought of this question as you see it.

SUNDBORG: We certainly don't want the legislature to be saying how the state should be apportioned for purposes of electing legislators, do we?

HELLENTHAL: Frankly, I think that there is a chance -- say that the legislature determined and passed a law to the effect that the boundary board would be combined with the apportionment board, it might very well be that the apportionment board could go to court and resist that attempt because it seems to be the clear intent of the apportionment article that they be left alone, but I don't think that is a very desirable situation to create.

SUNDBORG: If the legislature should do such a thing as you suggest, and say that the boundary board should be combined with the apportionment board, wouldn't there still be a constitutional provision in the apportionment article which says that the members of that board have to be appointed by the governor?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

SUNDBORG: And that there is no provision anywhere for the members of that board to be confirmed by the legislature or controlled by the legislature in any manner?

HELLENTHAL: That was studiously avoided by the delegates.

SUNDBORG: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments or discussion, for the record, relative to the intent? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 5, I believe, on that -- it's the amended section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, as amended, line 7, strike the words 'from and'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers seconds the motion. Is there a discussion? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: The reason for that amendment, Mr. President, is the fact that all persons living in a borough should have a right to run for the assembly -- the borough assembly -- irrespective of the fact that some of the assembly members will be members only by virtue of the fact that they are councilmen of the city or of cities in that borough. So, it is a discrimination, I think, against the residents of the borough, of any resident of the borough from being a candidate for the assembly. Another reason is that it may be that the people in an area outside of the city may prefer some person or persons not living in that particular area, or not living outside of the city or cities of the borough, to represent them in the assembly. For that reason I believe that the citizens -- any citizen -- except members of the council, should be allowed to run for the assembly and that the people residing outside of the city should be allowed the right to choose who they want to represent them in the assembly. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, may I ask a question of Mr. Rosswog?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Rosswog, I understand that this amendment has the support of the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Well, excuse me, Mr. Hellenthal, but could I have this amendment read again? I didn't have a copy at the time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 7, Section 5, is amended, strike the words 'from and'."

TAYLOR: Read it as it would be then.

CHIEF CLERK: "The composition of the assembly shall be established in accordance with law or charter, provided that each city of the first class and each city of any other class designated by law shall be represented by one or more persons who shall be members of its city council and that the additional members of the assembly shall be elected by the qualified voters living outside such cities."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, this amendment was discussed with the Committee and we decided that the members should vote as they saw fit because the suggestion was made that possibly the members outside of the city would want to elect someone inside as long as only the qualified electors outside were voting on the man, and we left it open to each member.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: Mr. President, this is, in my opinion, a last blow to rural residents. Now, I recognize that it wasn't introduced for that purpose, in fact the way I read it -- the way it is now -- if we should strike from there, it looks to me like only the people, the qualified voters outside of the city are going to elect the people from inside the city. I don't think that is what they intend, but that is what it seems to my way of thinking, but aside from that the statement has been made that, and as far as I can see the whole basis for this amendment is that there might be some person or resident inside of the city whom the people outside of the city want to vote for for the borough assembly. Well, I think that probably can be true. It can also be said the same thing of our election districts under our apportionment schedule. I might have somebody over in Valdez I'd like to vote for too, but I can't do it, I've got an election district there. What I'm trying to do is to guarantee that a candidate will be put up for that assembly from outside of the incorporated city. Now, I think we can find satisfactory candidates outside of the city to put up for this borough assembly. Now, I also recognize that the people inside of the city should have a right to elect people to this borough council, but bear at it from a different angle. You folks worry about the city, I've got to worry about the people outside of the city, and if this amendment is adopted, in my opinion, it puts a very difficult situation in front of those people. Now, it is true, and I'll admit that, if we have a benevolent legislature that is interested in these problems, as I am sure they will be, they can provide that candidates can file from any place they want to -- outside or inside -- if this amendment is adopted. But, it is also true that if we have made an exception here in the case of cities where we say they are guaranteed one, I think we should do the same thing outside, and say that you folks outside are guaranteed one, too. Now, I think this amendment should be defeated, I don't think it is going to help anything except a possible situation where all the people outside don't have anybody to run for that assembly that they want to vote for so they want to go inside the city and take a resident there and say, "You are our boy, we'll elect you to this council." But, I think they will find them outside, and I think it ought to stay just the way it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: This amendment, to me, Mr. President, points up one of the defects in this thing. We are going to have a borough, but the members on that borough are going to be representing interests and not the borough. We are going to have people there that are there for the specific purpose of representing the city.

We are going to have other people that are there for the specific purpose of representing the people outside of the city. Besides that we are going -- unless this amendment is adopted -- we are going to make it still worse by saying that only people from outside of the city can run for representation outside of the city -- no matter what the voters outside might want. Now, it seems to me that there certainly shouldn't be any harm in letting the people who are going to vote outside of the city pick whoever they may want, whether he lives in the city or lives out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I brought up the opposite of that. If a man moves outside of the city -- across the boundary line -- he might still have his business in the city, he might still be interested in the city, but I am informed that the law states that he can't be a member of the city council because he doesn't live in the city. He might be just as interested in the city as anyone else. Well, I feel the same way. I think that if it is good to make a law that way then it is good to say in an election that Juneau can't elect someone from Anchorage to be a senator for them or something of that nature, we ought to provide for a little security for the outside of the city area, as far as our borough is concerned and if the day comes when there isn't anybody that will represent the assembly, there isn't anybody to run, then they'd better leave it in an unorganized state, but if they are ready to be part of an organized borough they are certainly entitled to representation. If we adopt this amendment then you can see maybe seven out of the borough assembly will be from the city as probably council members, as they are in Baton Rouge, and then if the other two are also people from within the city you have a one-sided affair entirely. This is to insure some representation by the people and for the people outside of the incorporated cities and the boroughs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I ask somebody on the Committee a question? We went to a great deal of trouble, Mr. Hellenthal's committee, to establish a method of apportioning representation. Can't that be -- that's on a Territorial level -- can't that be done at local government level so that everybody has a fair share according to numbers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, we suppose and hope that the legislature in setting up the general laws will do that and further than that, in setting up the home rule charters where such are set up, that that will be taken care of also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I'd like to speak against the amendment. I might answer Mr. Metcalf's question by saying that setting up a system of apportionment doesn't enter into this question at all. As the section now stands it's a residence clause for candidates within these service areas, outside the city. If you live in service area number 1 -- I mean if the people are going to elect a representative on the assembly from service area number 1 they have got to elect someone who resides in their service area; likewise, with service area number 2 and service area number 2. If you delete the words "from and," as Mr. Taylor suggests, then the people that are in service district number 2 could decide that they want to elect a high-powered lawyer in the city, or something like that. They don't lose any part of their representation; they simply have the privilege of reaching out and electing somebody outside the city, or I should say outside the service area from which they are to elect a representative. Well, our whole structure of government is based on the fact that the candidate must reside in the area or the election district which he is going to represent. It runs all the way from the senate districts through our representative districts through our city setups; and, I think you should have someone living in a service area represent that area and carry out and be consistent all the way through.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, for once I'll have to agree with the Committee on Local Government on the proposed amendment. I believe that speaking against amendment to the amendment that "from and" will preserve the right of representation of the people living outside the cities. The question was brought forward here several days ago: how large were these boroughs going to be? Well, nobody knows. We might have five or six villages surrounded maybe by 60 to 100 miles from a large city; this will allow those people in those villages to muster their votes and get representation to the borough assembly. I think it should stay as it's written.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, shall the -- Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I'd like to close, I believe I have the right to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If no one else wishes to discuss this, you may close.

TAYLOR: Well, I was trying to do the same thing that Mr. Hurley claims that he is trying to do. I'm an out-of-towner and I think that over the quite a few years that I have lived in the vicinity of Fairbanks, I don't think there is anybody that has brawled and feuded with the city government as much as I have, and I'll mostly likely keep it up as long as I'm here. I live out of the city -- that's one reason I'm proposing this amendment. Now, another thing that this article as it is drawn -- now, I'll give you an example -- say just taking Fairbanks for example, we have a population of approximately 25,000 or 30,000 people; well around, in and around Fairbanks, we maybe have a population of 10,000. Those people in Fairbanks, the 25,000 or 30,000 in Fairbanks have no vote for members of the assembly, they are deprived of their vote, because somebody picks a man or two off of the city council.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I'll call for a point of order on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: I think Mr. Taylor is not speaking to his amendment because his amendment will not accomplish a vote for people in the city for the borough assembly.

TAYLOR: That's just what I was setting up. The people inside the city don't have the vote. They are being deprived of a vote. What I'm trying to do is to let the people outside of the city, if they are a considerable distance away from the city and the headquarters of the borough, that if they want to elect somebody from some other place, regardless whether it is inside of the city, that they should have the right to vote for it if they believe that this person would represent them well in the assembly.

LONDBORG: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 8 - Davis, Hellenthal, Hermann, Marston, Nerland, Riley, V. Rivers, Taylor.

Nays: 39 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 8 - Buckalew, Hilscher, King, Knight McNealy, Nolan, Peratrovich, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 8 yeas, 39 nays and 8 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed to pass. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, may I ask the Committee a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: In the new Section 5, where it says, "the members of the city council and that additional members of the assembly," was consideration given to "an equal number of members of the assembly shall be elected without the city"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. Cooper, we have written this article about 50 times so far and we have thought of trying to set up some basis of apportionment and we decided that with the many different situations that are going to be in each borough that the only thing we could do is to have apportionment set in some other manner than through the constitution but we thought of many different possibilities.

COOPER: May I direct this question to the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

COOPER: Then there is a possibility that the city council or the city represented on this assembly can possibly be in the majority or a possibility of the outer borough can be in the majority?

LEE: That is correct.

COOPER: And that is to the thinking of the Committee, that it was best?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I'd like to clarify that a little. It was not the thinking of the Committee that it was best. It was the thought of the Committee that there should be representatives from all factions of society in the areas of this group and that they would have balanced representation. That, under the apportionment plan, which they might adopt, that at least one member of the city council under this would sit on that assembly, but it is also thought that in considering their plan of apportionment they will try to do as we have done here guaranteeing equal and proportionate representation; and, as our thinking goes we did not try to spell it into this constitution. It is my opinion, at least, that at least seven members would compose this borough assembly as a minimum; and that it might possibly run to nine, or it might possibly run to more depending upon the size and the composition of the borough in relation to its different interests. I do not see how, under this, there could be disproportionate representation unless the people themselves so elect to have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments for Committee Proposal No. 6/a? We have held in abeyance the name question. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, perhaps we could have a recess before we get through with the name routine, and I would like to speak to the Committee once more about Section 15.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If no objection the Convention will be at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 9, has compared it with the original, finding it correctly engrossed and the first enrolled copies will be placed on the delegates' desks in short order. I move the acceptance of the report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves the acceptance of -- asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, Committee Proposal No. 9. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Committee Proposal No. 9 is referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, under this heading your Committee on Style and Drafting presents a report which is on the Clerk's desk and asks that it be read now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

CHIEF CLERK: "Your Committee on Style and Drafting herewith presents its redraft of the article on the judiciary for consideration by the Convention."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article will be assigned to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Are there other reports to come before the Convention at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, with Mr. Cross's consent I'd ask for the report of the Committee on Resolutions and Recommendations be read. It's never been, has it?

CHIEF CLERK: That's already been read and referred to the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That has been covered, Mr. Robertson. Is there a report at this time from the special Committee to read the journal? Mr. White, do you have a report from the special Committee to read the journal? Is the Committee on Local Government still busy? If not, the Convention has been called to order. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Are we on the order of business now, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: The proposal before us on local government?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us the Committee Proposal No. 6/a. The Chair recalls that the question relative to that, was held in abeyance relative to the suggestion of names, but we are in the amendment process, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I move that the Convention's action on line 14, page 4, Section 10, respecting the striking of the words "other classes" be rescinded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was on a motion made by Mr. White, was it not?

HURLEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley has moved that the Convention rescind the action taken in voting down the proposed amendment that had been made by Mr. White with relation to striking the words "other classes". Is that correct?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

HURLEY: "Classes of".

PRESIDENT EGAN: "Classes of". In order to rescind our action it will take 28 votes. Is there a second to Mr. Hurley's motion?

TAYLOR: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor seconds the rescinding motion. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, is this a debatable motion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, it is a debatable motion. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I won't take part of the Convention's time to discuss this motion. I did bring it before the Committee briefly. I don't think they had time to reach a decision, so I presume it would be unfair to call on the Chairman for an expression of opinion. I do think I would be fair in stating that at least some members of the Committee are in favor of the adoption of this motion to rescind. I spoke to one of the consultants that has been with the Committee and I believe he is in favor of such a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind the action taken when it voted down the motion that had been made; the proposed amendment that had been made by Mr. White?" Mr. Gray.

GRAY: If it is a roll call I wish to abstain because I wasn't present during the discussion of the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, if you'd care to --

WHITE: I request a roll call vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will have to be a roll call vote. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to make a statement against this. I say that this section doesn't preclude any other class of city other than first class from getting home rule. I maintain that the legislature by general law can set up standard specifications so that when any village reaches a certain point that they can call themselves a second-class city, third-class city, or whatever they choose, and they are such that when they reach the point of meeting the specifications set out by the legislature, or set out by law, they can also attain home rule. The reason I oppose the amendment is that by leaving the word "classes" in there, when the legislature makes law or a borough of a certain class, or a city of a certain class they mean all boroughs or all cities. By taking the word "classes" out, it would leave the way open for special legislation for a certain city or a certain borough. We know that, for instance, in Pennsylvania there is one city of the first class, which is Philadelphia; there is one city of the second class, which is Pittsburgh. When the state legislature chooses to do something for one or the other, they say this law applies to all cities of the first class or all cities of the second class, and that I am opposed to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment that we are about to attempt to rescind our action on.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 10, page 4, line 14: strike the words 'classes of'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I rise to support Barrie White's motion -- or I should say this matter of reconsideration -- rescinding the action previously taken. If we read that -- if it says that the borough -- "the legislature may extend home rule to other boroughs and cities," that leaves it open for the legislature to deal either through general legislation or through a specific grant to a particular town. There is no particular objection to special legislation in cases of this kind, and that's why our legislative act says that there shall be no special legislation when it can be controlled by general legislation, but when a particular setup doesn't afford coverage by general legislation, it can be done by special legislation. Well, I can see a little community with a qualitative value, such as Barrie was trying to point out, that might be in line to be given home rule. Well, the trouble is if you start classifying and you draw up suitable classifications, then you have to start changing those classifications because the pressure is on to give home rule to "Podunk", so they have to change the whole classification to include "Podunk", and in doing so they probably include some others that are not ready yet. This gives more flexibility to the legislature. The legislature may restrict itself to general legislation or it may give home rule to a particular locality that might need it without changing its classification system, so there is some merit in Mr. White's thoughts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, the Committee is on its own on this and I would just like to say that I'm going to vote in favor of the rescinding action, taking out the words "classes of", would still permit the legislature to act by classes; however, if an exceptional case comes up, as Mr. Rivers points out, the legislature could then act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I address a question to Mr. Ralph Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Rivers, wouldn't our provision in the article on the legislature requiring legislation -- general legislation, wherever that can be used, still prevail even in the case of the extending of home rule to boroughs and cities?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I say, yes, that is true. It may be construed, however, that to grant home rule to a particular locality cannot be handled by general legislation because it wouldn't be appropriate to set it up for all the reasons that I previously stated, but, that in the legislative article does govern.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind its action with relation to the proposed amendment that had been offered by Mr. White?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 34 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Awes, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Hellenthal, Knight, McCutcheon, Marston, Nerland, Poulsen, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog.

Absent: 7 - Buckalew, Hilscher, King, Nolan, Peratrovich, Stewart, VanderLeest.

Abstaining: 1 - Gray.)

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I would like to vote "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray wishes to vote "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 35 yeas, 13 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I would raise a point of order merely to clarify it in future times and that is if a member gives notice of abstaining from voting because he has not been here can he, before the vote is announced, include his vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, your point of order is well taken. If before the roll call is announced -- before the Chair announces the result -- the Chair will instruct the Secretary to scratch the name of Mr. Gray on this vote.

CHIEF CLERK: 34 ayes, 13 nays, 7 absent and 1 abstaining, is that it?

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Don't those abstaining have to give notice before the roll call is started?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was given before the roll call was started. The Chair forgot that Mr. Gray had asked for roll call and was thinking that he was changing from one vote to the other. That was before roll call.

GRAY: If it would help any I would withdraw.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the proposed -- the rescinding action has carried. We now have the proposed amendment by Mr. White before us. Mr. White.

WHITE: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a discussion? If not the question is -- Mr. Gray.

GRAY: This is the vote that I wish to abstain on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 33 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 14 - Awes, Cross, Doogan, Knight, McCutcheon, Marston, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Buckalew, Hilscher, King, Nolan, Peratrovich, Stewart, VanderLeest.

Abstaining: 1 - Gray.)

CHIEF CLERK: 33 yeas, 14 nays, 7 absent, and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 6/a? Mr. Ralph Rivers. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 15, page 6, line 2, after the word "integration" insert the following, ',consistent with the provisions of this article,','."

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

DOOGAN: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan seconded the motion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

RIVERS: Mr. President, the language in Section 15 seemed to me a little bit vague. It is actually talking about existing incorporated districts like school districts and public utility districts, which exist at the present time and which will be in existence during the transition period before the boroughs are organized, and then when a particular area is organized, these existing districts are to be integrated, which means brought together according to various interpretations of the word "integration". Well, rather than let the courts look up the definition of "integration" and take all the various shades of meaning, it's better to clear this up by saying that that integration shall be consistent with the purposes, I mean the provisions of this article, so I do this after consulting with the Committee and after the persons interested agreed that this was an acceptable amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I oppose a lot of unnecessary words being put into the constitution. It may not be clear to some people but it's clear to me and I'm sure it will be clear to others.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, the stenotypist could not hear what you said. Could you say that again, Mr. Barr.

BARR: That's what he is. I thought he was taking oxygen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr.

BARR: It gets pretty thick around here sometimes. I said that this is an example of a lot of unnecessary words being put into the constitution. It's perfectly clear to me without those words and I don't think they are a bit necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Would it be constitutional for the legislature to provide anything inconsistent with the provisions of this article?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Well, when it says, "they shall provide for the integration of," that's kind of a blanket business. There are complications unless you clarify this and the consultant and the Committee members agreed with me that there was a point there, so I think probably we could rewrite the whole section, but this was the simplest way at getting at the point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 25 - Armstrong, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Londborg, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 24 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Davis, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Sweeney, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - Buckalew, King, Nolan, Peratrovich, Stewart, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas, 24 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "ayes" have it, and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 6/a? Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I'm not sure just how correct that time is, we've got all kinds of different times here. I'm wondering whether it might not be a good idea when we adjourn tonight to adjourn until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning. We've had quite a high degree of absentees this afternoon, and I believe that the delegates having worked these weeks each night, except for last night, I think they have come to a place where they might be a little bit rum-dum and it might be good for us to have another night off and put in a full day tomorrow. I honestly believe that it would do some good, so I would like to move at this time, subject of course, to any committee announcements, or other announcements, that we adjourn until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, are you requesting that we do that now, or should we consider this question of names first -- the amendment that we have held back?

SWEENEY: We won't be able to adjourn until probably tomorrow morning if we start considering them now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The only thing the Chair thought would be that we would be here another 30 minutes anyway. The Chair would also like to ask about the lunchroom upstairs, have they been notified that we are not going to eat here tonight, Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: They haven't. I told them we would meet every night unless otherwise notified. However, there are not too many eating here in the evening.

SWEENEY: Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Perhaps we can go on with the names and work on until maybe 6:00 or 6:15 and take the 7:00 o'clock bus in, but I hope the delegates seriously consider adjourning until tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking unanimous consent at this time, Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

SWEENEY: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney so moves. Is there a second?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Moves what?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That we adjourn until 900 a.m. tomorrow.

SWEENEY: When we adjourn tonight.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair understood that you meant that we adjourn right now.

SWEENEY: No, I meant that since we are expected to eat upstairs probably it might be better to just keep going now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves that when the Convention adjourns tonight that it adjourns until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow. All those in favor of that motion will signify by -- Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. Adjourn until 9:00 o'clock in the morning when we adjourn in the evening?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right.

MCCUTCHEON: What is the issue then?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mrs. Sweeney meant that we would not have the night session but would adjourn until 9:00 a.m. in the morning, without having a night session.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, Mr. Coghill seems to think that we do not have to eat upstairs so if that is the case I renew my original motion that we adjourn now until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow. Is there a second to the motion.

KNIGHT: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Knight. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow?" All those in favor of adjourning until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow will signify by saying "aye", all those opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 6/a. Are there amendments to Committee Proposal No. 6/a?

CHIEF CLERK: Well, it is my understanding that these are to be read all at once, are we on that yet -- the names?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, who said we would read them all at once?

CHIEF CLERK: Isn't that the ruling?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was it the rule that we read all these names at once?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read all the names.

SUNDBORG: If we are going to go on to that order of business now, I believe it is in order to call for the submission of all names that will be considered -- I'm not sure they are all in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does everyone who had wished to submit a name have that name on the Chief Clerk's desk at this time? Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that we stand at recess until 7:00 o'clock this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves that the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 o'clock this evening.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mrs. Hermann. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m.?" All those in favor of standing at recess until 7:00 p.m. will signify by saying "aye", all those opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it then. The Convention is in session. Are there other names to be presented to the Chief Clerk? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I was going to ask one question. I believe you have amendments on the Secretary's desk and the sponsors aren't here, what are you going to do about those?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the sponsors --

CHIEF CLERK: They are here.

SWEENEY: They are here?

CHIEF CLERK: They are here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We can't hold up the business of the Convention because -- the Chief Clerk may read -- if the members are not here to support their names, someone else might do it. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed names that are available.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. McNealy proposes changing the word "borough" to "county" throughout the proposal. Mr. Kilcher, change "borough" to "canton". Mr. Hilscher, Mr. Marston, Mr. McNees propose changing "borough" to "province". Mr. Boswell proposes to change the word "borough" to "division", to be prefixed by principal city or geographic feature of the area included. Mr. Hellenthal proposes to change the word "borough" to "canton". Mr. Laws proposes to change the word to "county". Mr. Barr proposes to change the word to "county".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that all of the names?

CHIEF CLERK: That's all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal..

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I favor calling the unit of local government the "canton". The canton is the name of the local government units in Switzerland and it has a definite accepted terminology. It is the unit of local government that has been in existence there for centuries. The word is a foreign word, in a sense, although it has crept into the English language but is no more foreign than the word "senator", which is Latin; and the word "democracy", which comes from the Greek; nor the word "republic" which comes from the Latin; in fact most of the words that we use in connection with local government are from foreign sources. Now, I think that this word is particularly desirable to Alaska. "Province" implies large land masses, it has a Canadian familiarity and hence I do not think that it quite fits the bill. "Borough" for reasons that seem to be quite apparent, is rather inappropriate, probably because of the puns that it lends itself to. "County" has a significance that I think we should avoid because this creature that we have erected here is not a county -- definitely not a county, and I see no reason why we should call it that, and counties have grown in wide disrepute. Now, the Swiss canton is generally regarded as the cradle of freedom, of liberty, and of democracy. When we think of democracy we think of the ideal democracy, or the Swiss democracy, and with the use of this word we would gather the connotations that go with it. The connotation of freedom, democracy, and liberty; and those are things that should not be overlooked in our country. Now, I think that the word would lend itself -- have the canton of Cordova, the canton of Kodiak, the canton of Anchorage, the canton of Seward, etc. I think it would meet with popular favor. Then there is another point that should not be overlooked and that is that Swiss geography is that of mountainous terrain, valleys, and great mountains, and our country is much like Switzerland in its geography and I think that, although advertising should not be the sole consideration, it is a very important consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, your three minutes are up.

HELLENTHAL: And, for that reason, and of course, other reasons, I believe this name should be adopted.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McCutcheon.

DOOGAN: Point of information. Is the name "borough" automatically included in that list?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would feel so since it is in the article. Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Mr. President, may I ask the word "district" be added to the list.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen adds the word "district" to the list. Is there further discussion? How did the Rules Committee say we were to proceed on this?

BOSWELL: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Just one three-minute talk on each name, is that right? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I have proposed the term "division". Here are some definitions of the term "division". One: "Anything partitioned off or separated". Two: "A sharing or apportioning." Three: "A separation into groups for voting." Four: "Anything that divides." Five: "Partition." Six: "Boundary." Seven: "Department." Eight: "Compartment." Nine: "Section." Ten: "Segment." Now, at the time the Committee considered the name for this local government they did not have the term "division" available to them because we had our four judicial divisions. We have now changed that by naming these four judicial divisions into the various Southeastern and Southcentral, Central, and Northwestern Alaska; so this term is now available and is not used anywhere else in our constitution. The term "division" is familiar to Alaskans in its defining a definite area for specific purposes, which is a sort of term we are seeking for local government. If we turn down the committee proposal for "borough" I fear that we will come back to the term "county", which I think would be unfortunate as the term "county" does not fit into the new concept of local government we now have. If we prefix the divisions with principal city or geographical features of the area it will help to locate the area in anyone's mind that knows his Alaskan geography. I believe it will sound appropriate to speak of the Anchorage division, the Denali division, the Juneau division, or the Homer division. I have read this term into the committee article and it reads well. I'll read Section 2: "All local government powers shall be vested in divisions and cities. The state may delegate taxing powers to organized divisions and cities. Section 3. "Divisions shall be established according to such standards..." etc. It sounds appropriate to speak of division assembly, or division court or division police. I ask you to give this term "division" serious consideration. I think it is appropriate, dignified, and Alaskan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I'd like to ask him a question, but does that take up my time if I ask Mr. Boswell a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes.

HILSCHER: I won't ask the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anyone else wish to speak at this time on their particular name proposal? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. Chairman, well, I suppose I'm a little oldfashioned and conservative but I am going to have to speak for the word "county". It's a good old American name and isn't adopted from any peculiar situation. It has only one connotation and that is county as it is known in law. It is easy to be understood by the court and the fact that this article here of local government certainly sets up, it wouldn't make any difference what it might be called, it still has the same form of government. I think that removes any connotation as to county government. Like a great many of you I have lived in the states and there is, I think, in counting up there are probably more counties that work successfully than those that don't. I grant there are difficulties in matters in Chicago and Los Angeles Counties -- Cook County in Chicago, and those where there has been a good deal of difficulty, but the county form works, has worked, and is still working very well in the areas, especially in the less populated portions of the state. I am not going to belabor the point, but I think that we should put something in our constitution, be a little conservative. I don't care, particularly, for the adopting from other countries which to me -- "boroughs", "cantons", and "provinces" -- apply to countries other than our own, and in the matter of the "division" I fear that it brings us back in line with our old judicial divisions again, and the courts might hold that that connotation attaches there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, I'm going to speak for the committee choice of the name "borough". You have all heard the definition of the name "borough" stated here on the floor. It means an area of local government, it also applies to city government, it came to us originally from England. It has a much less unfavorable connotation both from the point of view of its origin and also from the point of view of its practice and use in the United States. I read from a small booklet here published by the National Municipal League, an article entitled The Chaotic County. "The county was inherited from England where it was originally a convenient geographical area for administering the king's business, such as the collection of taxes and the administration of justice. The first county officer was an agent of the king known as the sheriff. King Richard I, who ruled from 1189 to 1199, had some doubts about the integrity of these sheriffs so he appointed coroners to keep an eye on the sheriff." It goes on to say that many of these sheriffs left the counties, but there you have the pattern upon which the county government has been formed. It has been formed on the old concept -- the British concept of a few appointed officers in that county, and they have been named in our constitutions in the American counties to follow that pattern of the sheriff, the coroner, and the others. Now, we have broken away from that in our concept and we have a broader sense and a broader concept of boroughs. I can visualize the boroughs named, not after the cities they embody perhaps, but such as the Chugach borough in the Anchorage area; the Kenai borough; the Gastineau borough; and similar applications of a broad and geographical nature to cover the area they include. Therefore, I endorse and support the name of "borough" as we have adopted it in the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I'm going along with Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, now before we discuss this, the rule that we adopted yesterday said that the Local Government Committee can be given five minutes to defend the use of the term "borough". Now that was the rule that we adopted with relation to the word "borough", so if Mr. Victor Rivers used up two minutes there are three minutes left, if the other members of the Committee desire to utilize that time in the defense of the word "borough", according to the rule that we adopted yesterday.

TAYLOR: I'll take about a minute.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, unless the Committee designates you as one of their group to defend it -- Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: We would like to use up the other three minutes, but possibly later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee would?

ROSSWOG: The Committee would, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, with relation to the word "borough" the rule left that up to the Committee to defend its choice for five minutes. They have three minutes left.

TAYLOR: They defended the name "borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. Taylor, that wasn't in conformance with the rule that we had adopted.

ROSSWOG: If Mr. Taylor would like to speak on the word "borough" we would like to allot him one minute of our time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, you may have the one minute, then.

TAYLOR: Well, I was just going to say that I believe as Mr. Rivers does that the designation of "county", it brings to mind mismanagement, political mismanagement. "Canton" brings to my mind the tinkling cymbals or the Chinese dancing girl, the pagodas, and chop suey, and the fact that the name was so popular that the Chinese adopted it and named one of their cities the name of Canton.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is the one minute. Now, the Committee has two minutes left on "borough". The Convention will come to order. Does anyone else wish to speak on his choice or who submitted a name?

POULSEN: Mr. President, I would. At our Anchorage hearing over Christmas, the word "borough" was discussed quite a bit and it seems like the majority didn't like that word or that name. Now, in regards to the word "canton" I think it is too foreign sounding. In regards to Mr. Boswell's "division", he pretty much outlined the way, and that word sounded pretty good to me. If that were not adopted I would like to see the word "district" -- Anchorage district, Spenard district, or whatever area they're in. It would be much easier sounding to everybody. I would either support "district" or "division".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a defense of any other name that has been submitted by the person who submitted it? Mr. Marston, was your name submitted by you and Mr. Hilscher?

MARSTON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then you may have a minute and a half apiece.

HILSCHER: He may have it all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I would like to see the word "province". Now, they have said it is too large, but I would like to come from the Northwest province, District One, Two, Three, or Four. I'd feel much better than saying I came from Borough, One, Two, Three, or Four. If I said I came from Northwest Province, District One, Two, Three, or Four, or Central province -- and I like that. If I can't get following for that I'd like to go for "canton" or, if I can't get that I'm going to go for Boswell. I hope that we don't have a decision on this until after dinner. I move that we do not vote on this until after dinner.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston moves that --

SWEENEY: Point of order. We are arguing on the names now. We are not in a position to move.

MARSTON: Well, when we are through arguing I want you to not vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the other names? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, the only other name that is left is "borough". The pronunciation is "borough", not "burro" despite the pictures that have been drawn. We picked the name "borough" because we arrived at a place in our thinking and working on local government that we had to pick a name and in so doing we tried to pick a name without any connotation, without any undesirable elements about it, so that we could continue our thinking in a clear manner all the way through this article. We presented the name "borough" to this body so that we could give them a clear picture of what we were trying to do in local government without their thinking being clouded by any names with undesirable connotations on them. We have got to go further than this, we have got to carry this article on to the people, clear and uninhibited without any undesirable connotations on it. That's the reason that I hope we keep the name "borough" not "burro".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee has about 40 seconds left. Is there anyone else who wishes to speak on the name that they have submitted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I was also a proponent of the word "province". How much time do I have left?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, you have about a minute and a half, Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: The word "province" comes down to us from early Roman history, and it means a country or region, more or less remote from the city for administration purposes, but surrounding that city; an administrative district or division of a country; an important administrative unit of a country or any territory or area that is for the time being administered by any local government; a region of country, a tract, or a division. In Roman history it had a range of power rather than the connotation of a subjugated district. It also means a department of knowledge or activity; a portion of a country, especially one remote from or outside of the capital or largest city; any division of less rank than a region. Inasmuch as we have determined four major geographic regions or areas for our Territory I do feel that it might be important to consider the name "province" for the administrative areas of the local level.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, is there any time left for the good old American word "county".

PRESIDENT EGAN: How much time?

CHIEF CLERK: McNealy spoke on "county". He didn't speak three minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels that there is about a minute and a half left on "county".

BARR: I will only use one minute. The chief thing here against "county" is the form of government or the way the government has been conducted in some counties. We are a new state and I believe that we should use a word that is recognized all over the United States, and understood by all of the American people, and use our own form of government and show to the people down south what a good county government is. I don't favor the word "borough", it is long and cumbersome. We aren't familiar with it, and I wouldn't want anybody to think I was a rabbit because I came from a "burrow". "Division" is a good word and so is "district". "Division" is my second choice, but I think that county is better understood by the American people and I favor the word "county". Let us show them how to run a county.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seems that all the time has been used up. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I believe we have 40 seconds left for the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's about right. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: On this 40 seconds I would like to say that I don't think the name "borough" has such an awful sound. We have names in Alaska, such as if we had the borough of Tolovana, the borough of Chandalar, the borough of Denali, borough of Kantishna, borough of Katmai, borough of Iliamna, that does not sound too bad to me.

KILCHER: Mr. President, point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, your point of information.

KILCHER: How was the actual voting going to take place?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll and each delegate will answer when his name is called using the word for the name of the unit of government of his choice, and we will go until there is a majority of the delegates that are present for one word.

KILCHER: Another question. There were two sponsors, separate sponsors, on "canton" and they had three minutes among themselves?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's right. It says here, Mr. Kilcher, that the way the Chair interpreted it: "That the proponents of each name be allowed not more than three minutes to speak in favor of the suggestion."

KILCHER: Then I misunderstood. I was under the impression that if there were coauthors that they were each given three minutes. I understood that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair recalls that you asked that question, and it was not answered at that time, but in reading this today, which is what they read from yesterday it says that --

KILCHER: All right.

BARR: Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I wasn't here when this method of voting was decided on. You say that voting will continue until there is a majority?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If we don't get a majority on the first one, Mr. Barr, we will drop the one that has the lowest number of votes.

BARR: I was going to propose that we take a second vote on the two highest. I do have a second choice.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "What name will we have for our unit of government within the state?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll and each delegate will answer with his choice after his name has been called.

(The Chief Clerk called the first roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Borough - 21; Canton - 7; County - 16; Province - 1; Division - 3; District - 2; and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I'd like to change my vote from "canton" to "borough".

MARSTON: Mr. President, I'd like to change my vote from "canton" to "borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is too late now. No, you can as the Chair has not announced the vote.

METCALF: I'll ride with "borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I'll change to "borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher changes to "borough".

AWES: I'll change mine to "borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes changes to "borough".

LONDBORG: I'll change to "county".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg changes his to "county".

HINCKEL: I'll change from "canton" to "borough".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel changes to "borough".

BUCKALEW: I change from "canton" to "province".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I'll change from "division" to "borough".

HURLEY: Wouldn't it be possible to get unanimous consent for "borough" and get this thing over with?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, not at this time. Not until the Chair announces what the vote is, Mr. Hurley.

CHIEF CLERK: Borough - 26; County - 17; Province - 2; Canton - 1; Division - 3; District - 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: How many were present and voting altogether?

DOOGAN: Fifty present.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If that is true and if there were 50 votes -- Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I wonder if it wouldn't be easier for Katherine if those who changed to "borough" would stand so that she --

CHIEF CLERK: I think I have got it. Those who changed are: Awes changed to "borough"; Buckalew changed to "province"; Hellenthal to "borough"; Marston to "borough"; Metcalf to "borough"; Hilscher to "borough"; Londborg to "county"; Hinckel to "borough"; Robertson to "borough"; 27 votes for "borough" and "county" has 16.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And by your vote you have, by majority vote, adopted the word "borough" as the unit of government within the state. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, would it be in order to make it a unanimous vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees moves that the Convention cast a unanimous vote for the word "borough". Is there objection?

BUCKALEW: Objection.

BARR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. There is no motion. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 6/a? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I move that the Convention recess until 7:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves that the Convention stand at recess until 7:30 p.m. Is there objection? Is there a second to the motion?

MCCUTCEHON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before we put that question up are there committee announcements? The question is, "Shall the Convention --

COGHILL: It is 6:00 o'clock now, I don't know whether we will have time to have our committee meeting at this hour. There will be a supper meeting of the Administration Committee.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, before you cast a vote will you announce the disposition of this article, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 7:30 p.m.?" All those in favor of standing at recess until 7:30 p.m. will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 36 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Absent: 6 - Hellenthal, King, Nolan, Peratrovich, Stewart, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 36 yeas, 13 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and so the Convention will stand at recess until 7:30 p.m.

RECESS

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order and may the record show that the Second Vice President is presiding because the President and the First Vice President are absent this evening because of compelling reasons. We have before us on the calendar, which is available, Committee Proposal No. 11. It is in second reading. The Chief Clerk will proceed with the second reading.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 11 for the second time.)

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any amendments to be offered? to this proposal? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I believe that it has been the practice to have the chairman of the committee explain the proposal and I wonder if it would be possible to follow that procedure?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: I am entirely agreeable. I overlooked it. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Well, as Chairman of the Executive Committee I will give you my comments upon this particular item. It is the first election and can take place any time, provided, of course, that the terms for which the elected are elected begin, or rather end, upon the first Monday in December of the next even year following a presidential election. It was decided in the Committee on the Executive in the matter of when the governor should hold his term of office in relation to that of the Presidency, that, it would be better to take a year in which it was not a presidential year for the reason that you would have more attention and more interest given to the state affairs, and they might not be influenced or distorted or attention taken away from them by the broader national picture. So, you have before you the proposal which covers an election at any time in the interim of a four-year period, but must end on the even-year period when there is no presidential election. We think that outside of setting up the machinery of the actual election, it covers all the constitution needs to say about the election of the first governor and secretary of state.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any questions? Are there any amendments to be offered? Mr. Boswell? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I'd just like to make one further comment, and that was, in the article which I have placed on your desks this morning, this matter is dwelt on, or dealt with, very briefly and it says, this is the article from the National Municipal Review, you have a copy of it mimeographed on your desks. In connection with the off-year election of governors it states: "Yet another step is needed, state elections should be disentangled from national elections. Important issues of state government are too frequently obscured by the drama of the national contest. The American Assembly recommends that state elections be held in nonpresidential years." We had adopted that policy in Committee prior to this information, or this comment being available to us, but I present it to you as the thinking of the Eighth American Assembly, which is a top body in the various fields in which they are commenting each year, and this particular Eighth Assembly was commenting on the political science aspects of the American scheme and form of government.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this article.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair considers that that is not a necessary motion, inasmuch as it goes on its regular course without the motion, if unamended. I would like to declare a one-minute recess to consult with the Rules Committee.

RECESS

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention is back in order. If there are no amendments the Chair will refer this proposal to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. It is so ordered. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 12 offered by the Executive Committee.

CHIEF CLERK: This has already been read the second time.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: As you will all note this is a group of miscellaneous provisions and I'll try to discuss them briefly one by one. Excuse me, that's not been read.

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, it has been read.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: You may proceed with your comments. It has been read, unless it is the pleasure of the delegates to refresh their memory, should we read them again? Perhaps that would be a good idea. If there is no objection we will read it again before we start the comments.

(The Chief Clerk then read Committee Proposal No. 12.)

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, as Chairman of the Committee I will try to give a brief description of each article. Section 1 provides that the legislature shall set up and provide for a system of employment on the merit principle of state employees. The question was brought up the other day as to how wide the term "employment" went in regard to appointive officials and elective officials. They are officers of the state and it was generally held by our consultants that the term "employment" covered up to what the necessary level of executives that the legislature desired to set, that we did not have to qualify "employment" to specifically exclude elective officials, appointive department heads, or executive officers of boards or commissions, so I state that for the record and for the information of all the delegates. In Section 2 we have employees' retirement systems and they will be inviolate in their contractual relationship with this clause in the constitution. There was fear expressed, by one group in particular, that some of the established employees' retirement funds might at some time or another, under the legislative powers, be terminated; and under this clause they could not terminate the contractual obligations under those retirement plans to which people have paid into for many years, and which could be repealed by the legislature if they were so minded. While we assured the individuals that we could foresee no such circumstance, they felt, and the Committee, after the discussion, felt, that such a clause would be desirable, so it is presented for your consideration. Section 3 is the standard clause which states that no person who does not agree with our ideals and our institutions, and our form of government shall attempt to overthrow the government by violence or support any organization or association which advocates such overthrow. Now, while it is easy to say those things, it is very hard to determine, as you all know, by actual practice what would be considered either subversive or treason, so the clause, however, is the one that is mandatory and required in the constitution. The other one has to do with the oath which follows along with Section 3, which states the oath which they shall take before becoming employees or public officers. Now, a question has been asked as to what we mean by public officers, whether we mean all employees of the state and its subdivisions, and I believe that the legally trained people in the Convention should state as to whether or not they feel the term "public officers" covered the required number or scope or whether it is too broad. In Section 5, we come to a section which was discussed at some length in one of the other sections or other articles of the constitution, but which we transferred to this miscellaneous set of articles, and it has to do with the state's relations -- its political subdivisions, cooperating with the United States national government and with other states and their political subdivisions in matters of mutual concern and common interest and to the extent consistent with the laws and Constitution of the United States with foreign nations. The reason for this is that it sets up specifically here that the legislative bodies may appropriate sums for this purpose. There have been some decisions in the states in which it has been held that the legislatures could not appropriate for state functions which went outside of the state, and because of that narrow interpretation of the legislative power in the matter of other intergovernmental relations, and it was decided that this clause should be included in the constitution. In the last line it says, "The governor shall act as the agent of the state involving all intergovernmental relations." I've stated before, but I will restate that, in that matter when we become a state, the governor will have to receive, for the state of Alaska, vast amounts of equipment, road building equipment, fisheries equipment, and other things, which the organizations charged with the custody of that equipment will have to have some way to receive it and there has been a question raised on this as to whether or not the governor could delegate this authority to some properly authorized representative to sign and act for him in that matter as an agent of the people. That clause should be given some consideration. I think that covers it.

CHIEF CLERK: There is a new section about the University, which I should read.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: We will proceed with the reading of this additional section.

(The Chief Clerk then read Section 6.)

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, you have heard the reading of this article and it was considered important that in the constitution there be included an article of this type. It gives the University, as a corporate body, the authority to receive and hold property which will be granted to them under the enabling act. It also gives them the authority for administering and disposing of that according to law. It sets up the board of regents and the governing body of the University, and I think the main point this article has is that constitutionally the University of Alaska shall be the only state university in Alaska. Now, the effect of that statement is to point out to you that even though the University of Alaska should establish eventually a number of diverse branches they would all be under the one head of the University of Alaska. We have situations that occur in the states, such as in the State of Washington, you have the University of Washington on the West coast and Washington State University in the Eastern part of the state. They are operated separately and compete in the legislature and other places for funds. Now, in the situation in California where you have a unified university setup, the University of California and they have the University of California as the main branch and the University of Southern California in the southern part and the University of California at Los Angeles in the southern part -- all of which are operated under the same and the one head, under similar policy, and one group of appropriations. So, the extent of this article to be considered is that it unifies the university system in the state. I believe that covers the subject.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, may I ask if this particular section has been reviewed by Dr. Patty of the University?

V. RIVERS: I personally have not seen Dr. Patty, but I'd like to ask Delegate Boswell.

BOSWELL: Dr. Patty has reviewed this and has had it reviewed by other members of the faculty and they believe it covers everything that is necessary so far as they are concerned.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Miss Awes.

AWES: Could we either get that mimeographed or have it read slowly enough so that we can copy it?

CHIEF CLERK: It was distributed three days ago.

AWES: I don't have it. Are there any copies left?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I think that this is the first time that this amendment has been before us and I would ask unanimous consent that it would be considered a part of the proposed miscellaneous articles.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any objection?

MCCUTCHEON: I didn't hear what he said.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: The request is that this section pertaining to the University be considered as part of the miscellaneous appropriations. It has already been given the -- or, you want it to be given the section number of 6?

HARRIS: Yes.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: That it be given the section number of 6 in miscellaneous provisions. Are there any objections? Section 6 of Proposal No. 12. Are there any objections to having this action on this request?

V. RIVERS: For the record, Mr. President, I will ask unanimous consent that this amendment, Section 6 of Proposal No. 12 be included and incorporated in Proposal No. 12, as Section 6 thereof.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any objection? If not it is so ordered. Now, we should have about a two-minute recess so we can all find copies.

RECESS

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Is the article open now for questioning to the Committee?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: That is correct.

COGHILL: Does the Chair wish to take it by section, or could I ask a question of the Committee Chairman on Section 5?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: I think we should pursue the procedure of taking it up section by section. I'll ask if there are any questions to Section 1? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Rivers, is there any reason why the provision in Section 1, the first line, where it says "shall", is there any reason why that could not be made permissive instead of mandatory?

V. RIVERS: I'll refer that question to Delegate Nordale to answer that. We discussed it at some length.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I'm not sure I recall all the discussion, however, there have been a good many attempts to get a merit system or some kind of civil service system established for Territorial employees, but each time that the legislature has met there actually hasn't been time to make a very thorough study of it. I think the general feeling among most people connected with the Territorial government is that there should be something established in the way of a civil service system, so I think that the reason that we put the "shall" in was to allay some of the fears that have been expressed when the Territory moved into statehood, all of the employees might lose their jobs, or be subjected to political influence, the good old spoils system, and that type of thing.

JOHNSON: Do you know of any real reason why the matter could not be made permissive, so far as the legislature is concerned? In other words, we leave most things to the legislature.

NORDALE: No, from my personal standpoint, I think "may" would do equally as well, but I think our thinking was that we didn't want to frighten all the Territorial employees to death, so we put "shall" in there.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions to Section 1? Section 2? Are there questions to Section 3 or 4? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I had a question on Section 3. Is there any danger that in qualifying "employment" under Section 1, you will also have to similarly qualify "employment" under Section 3. In other words, if you limit the meaning of the word "employment" to certain persons under Section 1, could you then have the word "employment" apply to all persons under Section 3? Do you follow what I am getting at?

V. RIVERS: Yes, you have a good point. There is different scope of meaning of the two words "employment".

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, may I just inject a word? You will notice that Section 3 applies to any "public office or employment", whereas the first section is just "employees".

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions of Section 3, which we have backed up to? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: There was one question brought up, I believe it was brought up by Delegate Johnson. The question was whether the oath should read: "I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States," or the "Constitution and laws of the United States." Was that yours, Maurice?

JOHNSON: Yes, I had asked that question.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: That might be brought up. I think it was answered at that time, and that can be brought up under amendments if desired. Does anyone else have a question to Section 4? We now come to Section 5. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in Section 5 where we have "intergovernmental relations", what I was concerned about was the matter of a borough assembly, or a city government making a contractual arrangement with the federal government. Is that permissible under this section?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Yes, it is considered and intended that it should be permissible and that the areas and local governments such as the borough and the city, through their proper officers could participate in different federal programs, such as federal grants-in-aid, and federal assistance programs of various types. This subject might properly bear a little discussion. We think in the Committee that it covers that type of cooperation.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The purpose of asking the question, then the boroughs under their charter or the cities home rule under their charters would have to adhere to a state law regarding the minimum and the maximum standards of bonded indebtedness and such stuff as that?

V. RIVERS: Mr. Coghill. I'm happy to say, in this particular constitution so far, we have not set any maximums on bonded indebtedness, and the intent was that the situation in each city or each borough would be studied as to their ability to assume certain debt burdens in relation with cooperation with the federal government, not exceed that ability. Now, I might point out also that, in these relationships with the national government, the national government itself would also make and ascertain the feasibility and economic feasibility of the communities supporting the burden that they desire to assume.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions? I now come to Section 6, which is about the University, are there any questions? Miss Awes.

AWES: I was about to ask a question on Section 5.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Miss Awes is recognized on Section 5.

AWES: I was wondering, "The State and its political subdivisions may cooperate... to the extent consistent with the laws of the United States, with foreign nations." I don't have the United States Constitution here, but I thought that the federal government had the exclusive right to cooperate with foreign nations. Just what did you have in mind there?

V. RIVERS: Delegate Awes, I'm trying to recall just what took place in connection with the committee amendment. We had one here the other day and were discussing it at the time this article came up and I do not believe it was submitted.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Delegate Harris, do you wish the floor?

HARRIS: I might clear up a point here. In a committee meeting the other day the Committee met and agreed to delete the words "with foreign nations". It should have been pointed out.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: That will come up in due course.

HARRIS: It was all of line 12, up to and including "foreign nations" in line 13.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Let us specify that when we get to the amending process. Any other questions on Section 5? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I'd like to know if the Committee has a special preference, for some reason, for that statement about the "respective legislative bodies may appropriate". Is there some particular reason for expressing it that way?

V. RIVERS: Mrs. Hermann, at times the legislative body of your city or your borough may desire to authorize certain funds for expense in getting cooperation with the national administration on some grant-in-aid project and they are specifically allowed to so do under this terminology, or these terms, "respective legislative bodies".

HERMANN: Then your're not limited then to the legislature, but to the legislative body of boroughs?

V. RIVERS: Yes, that's correct.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Does Delegate Hermann have in mind the expression "governing bodies" or some other?

HERMANN: No, I thought they meant the legislature and I wondered why they didn't say so.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Style and Drafting will take note of that problem. Are there any other questions on this Section 5? If not, we will proceed to Section 6. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I ask a question of Mr. Rivers?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: You may.

WHITE: Mr. Rivers, in Section 6, the sentence beginning on line 6 says: "... and shall have title to all the real and personal property, now or hereafter set aside for ... which shall be held in public trust". Now, I wonder if the Committee considered the occasion that might arise when an individual would want to leave some money to the University to be spent, let's say, immediately for some capital improvement, but that his money might be in the form of securities and if he is forced to sell the securities and give the money to the University he has to pay a capital gains tax on those securities, whereas if he gives the securities directly to the University and let them sell them they are not taxable.

V. RIVERS: Following your thinking, Delegate White, it would appear to me very desirable that we consider inserting in there something in regard to just such benefits that may come to the Territory in some form that covers real and personal property, and "personal property" might cover that, but the words "shall be held in trust" may have to be enlarged upon a bit here as we go through the amending process. I'm going to give it some more thought and, if necessary, I speak for the Executive Committee when I say we would be glad to meet on this particular point with anybody that has questions.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions on Section 6? If not we will start the section by section consideration for amendatory purposes. Is there any amendment to be offered to Section 1? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, isn't the procedure provided for by our rules, doesn't it require now that a recess be taken and amendments submitted to the committee?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: That would be the procedure unless it is the desire of the delegates to waive. If there is no expression in regard to waiving that recess, we will -- Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President. I ask for unanimous consent that we waive this ruling.

V. RIVERS: Speaking for the Committee we have no objection.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any objection to waiving the recess and going on with the section by section reading and the amendatory process? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Yes, I object. I have a matter or two that I would like to discuss with the Committee.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Would you indicate about how long a recess you would like?

JOHNSON: I have no idea, a few minutes.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: All right, let us recess then for 10 minutes if there is no objection.

RECESS

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the amendatory period as to Committee Proposal No. 12. Are there any amendments to Section 1? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, we have one amendment to Section 1, and the Secretary is now bringing it to give to the Chief Clerk.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, line 1, delete the word 'shall' and insert the word 'may'."

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: What is your pleasure?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I move unanimous consent for adoption of the change as recommended by the Committee on this amendment.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, I'll object for clarification.

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Seconded by Mr. Knight. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, the intent of the section was that the legislature would provide a merit-principle system. Now, it has a merit in allowing it to stay in there with the word "may", it has a merit of appearing as a directive to the legislature from this Constitutional Convention. The use of the word "shall" there originally instituted making it mandatory, some felt would possibly impose an undue burden on the legislature early in their statehood activities. There was another statement made in the Committee that there had been some opposition to a merit system by various department heads who preferred to have the freedom of pirating the various employees from the different departments at will. I'm going to ask Delegate Johnson to mention his comments on this, also.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, it occurred to me that this problem of setting up a merit system in Alaska has been with us for a great many years and the legislature so far has never been able to come up with a sound solution that would pass, and it is, I think, an extremely difficult thing to work out on a short-notice basis. I think that if the legislature were, or if it were suggested to the legislature to, set up as soon as they can a workable civil service system, then they might take steps toward creating a legislative council or some other method to go into all of the ramifications concerning it and then over a period of time, after studies had been made and so on, they might successfully design a system that will be workable and usable. If you put in the word "shall" it seems to me that then they are confronted with the necessity of doing it right now and not getting a good system. To me they are going to do it anyway. I don't think the section actually needs to be in the constitution, because I believe that is one of the things that the legislature can do and will do as soon as possible, but if we do want to make some mention of it I don't think it ought to be mandatory.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any other debate? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I feel that it should be mandatory. I don't think anyone would insist that the legislature hurry its work, if it were possible to take the time to set up a good principle, and I have in mind, the fact that it is difficult, might indicate that the legislature might keep putting it off just as they have in the past. I also recall that the people of California finally had to provide a civil service system through the initiative due to the fact that their legislature kept putting it off. Therefore, I think that the word "shall" should be left in as it is.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, the Legislative Council is making a study now with the intentions of having a bill introduced at the next session.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: That is correct, and it may or may not pass. The study would be helpful in any event. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, we do have a modified system of the merit system in effect at the present time. All those Territorial agencies who handle government funds like ESC and the Health and Welfare Department with federal matching funds, they must have a merit system; so there are a lot of employees, Territorial employees, that come under the system now. I think possibly it could be enlarged to take care of the balance of them.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. President, just one little thought. I personally prefer the word "may". I visualize possibly, if it is left mandatory, that after Alaska becomes a state, possibly some discharged employee might bring suit against the State of Alaska in violation of its constitutional right.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any other debate? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, I have one question. Does that mean all the persons employed, even if employed for one day, is there any limitation on that? Is it broad enough to differentiate between temporary employees and permanent employees?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will be at recess for a few moments.

RECESS

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. We are off the stenotype performance but we are on the tape. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move, inasmuch as our stenotypist seems to be ill, I move that we stand adjourned until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

GRAY: Point of order. I wonder if I could have an answer to the question I just put?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: I will have to rule on the point of order. I presume a motion to adjourn is always in order and would overrule the point of order. Mr. Johnson, there has been no second, so you may yield. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will ask Mrs. Nordale to answer the question for the purposes of the record.

NORDALE: First, I would like to say that with reference to the merit system that Mr. Taylor referred to, there is no law on the books of the Territory that takes care of that. That is a requirement of federal law and applies only to certain agencies. As far as the working of a civil service system, there are always exempted positions such as part-time employment and various types of employment that usually, I imagine, are always exempted; and it does not ordinarily apply to elected or appointed officials and there is a certain group at the top level of government that are completely exempt from the operation of a civil service system. Many others are classified, and there are the other exemptions at the lower level.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I think the question that Delegate Gray was asking was, would we have to classify all the employees. The first sentence says "the legislature may" so it would be up to them to set it up.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, may I have the floor on a point of personal privilege?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any objection? If not, you may have the floor, Mr. Cooper.

(Mr. Cooper then spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: I will have the Administration Committee give an estimate on how much transportation there is. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Thank you, Mr. President. Well, there are eight hands up, so that is eight cars. We could group the people together and what we haven't got for cars, we could probably get a couple cabs out here and it would only cost $3. We could get six people into a cab.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I move that we adjourn until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

COGHILL: I'll second the motion.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Are you ready for the question? All in favor say "aye"; opposed, same sign. The "ayes" have it and the Convention is adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 21, 1956

SIXTIETH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning Captain Hill of the Salvation Army. Captain Hill will give our daily invocation.

CAPTAIN HILL: Our Heavenly Father, we come to Thee at this time, first with gratitude for Thy many blessings to us, and O Lord Thou hast given us so many things for which to be grateful. We do want to express gratitude at this time. We also Lord, want to pray on behalf of those who gather here to frame a constitution for this Territory of Alaska. We ask that Thou wilt grant them wisdom. We do rely upon Thee at this time to give us guidance and direction as we prepare for the future of this great country. Have Thy way in all things that are said and done. In Thy name bring honor and glory to this group here. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, Mr. Hellenthal will probably be out a little later.

SWEENEY: Mr. Coghill and Mr. Fischer are detained in town on business of the Administration Committee and will be a little late.

KNIGHT: Mr. VanderLeest is ill today.

WHITE: Mr. Riley is here.

CHIEF CLERK: Five absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, reporting on the journal for the 53rd Convention day: Page 3, paragraph 2, insert a comma after "Burnette"; page 3, paragraph 5, insert quotation marks after "election" on line 6; page 7, paragraph 4, on third line insert "On line 17" before "delete". With those corrections, Mr. President, we ask unanimous consent for the approval of the journal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the approval of the journal as corrected by the special Committee to read the journal of the 53rd day. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? If not, the journal of the 53rd day is ordered approved with the corrections as noted by the special Committee to read the journal. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, reporting on the journal for the 55th Convention day: Page 1, third paragraph from the bottom, insert "Section 15" before the paragraph starting "The Attorney General"; page 5, fourth paragraph, insert "be included" after "Mr. Riley" on line 9; page 8, first paragraph after recess, insert quotation marks after "state" on line 6; page 12, first paragraph, insert "s" after "subdivision" on line 3. Mr. President, with those corrections we move and ask unanimous consent for the approval of the journal for the 55th Convention day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the approval of the journal for the 55th Convention day with the proposed corrections as noted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the journal is ordered approved. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to inquire as to the source of this anonymous article we have on our desk this morning, "Juneau as the State Capital".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: If Mr. Hurley had not arisen so fast he would not have had to ask the question. I was just going to make an announcement that I have distributed a pamphlet here, "Juneau as the State Capital". It is self-explanatory. I think everyone will have a truer understanding of the situation of what a capital is and what it means to Juneau if this is read. If the situation comes up, it will behoove everybody to read this little pamphlet.

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question. I would like to know whose thinking it represents, the Committee or an individual or what?

GRAY: I first started out informally as being a member from an independent community, not related to Juneau, namely Douglas. I just wanted to help distribute this, but this pamphlet was prepared by the Juneau Chamber of Commerce.

HURLEY: I would like to ask the policy of the Convention in distributing material such as this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The policy, Mr. Hurley, it seems to be that it is just the policy of the delegates to distribute it. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: My inquiry then, is it proper for any delegate to distribute anything that they think would be of value or interest to the Convention, on the desks?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a minute or two.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there is no objection, the Chair will refer the question asked by Mr. Hurley to the Chairman of the Rules Committee who can make a report on the matter at a later time.

RILEY: Mr. President, let it be noted, I am also not from Juneau. No prejudice.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: For the record, Mr. Chairman, I wish to say this did not come out of the boiler room. This came at no cost to the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there communications or petitions from outside the Convention? If not, are there reports of standing committees? Of select committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? Is there any unfinished business to come before the Convention at this time? If not, we are on the amendment to Committee Proposal No. 12. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: It has been moved and seconded, "Section 1, line 1, delete the word 'shall' and insert the word 'may'."

JOHNSON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

RILEY: Might it be stated again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, line 1, delete the word 'shall' and insert the word 'may'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment be adopted?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 25 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 22 - Awes, Barr, Collins, Cross, Emberg, V. Fischer, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Riley, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Wien.

Absent: 8 - Buckalew, Doogan, Hellenthal, McNealy Reader, Rosswog, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

COLLINS: I wish to change my vote from "yes" to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Collins changes his vote from "yes" to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas, 22 nays and 8 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 12?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, line 14, delete the words 'or employment' and insert 'of trust or profit under this Constitution.'"

V. RIVERS: That is a committee amendment and I believe self-explanatory, and I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Before you put the question, I would like to ascertain whether or not the militia or any of the armed services of the state would take this particular oath or would they take a different type of an oath, because in some other article in our constitution it states that our militia or the armed services of the state does not constitute an office of profit. If that were the case this wouldn't be applicable or binding.

V. RIVERS: This says "of trust or profit". The other covers profit only as applies to the militia and the national guard, and this is the identical wording with the exception of the last few words of the enabling act. The last few words had to be changed because there was some extraneous matter in regard to the State of Alaska. We referred merely to this constitution instead, but the rest of the wording is that of the enabling act and is one of the requirements. I think as Delegate McCutcheon has asked, any employment of trust or profit under the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of the amendment? If not, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk will please read the other committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, line 11, insert a period after the word 'interest', delete the remainder of the sentence."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Insert a period after the word "interest" in line 11.

V. RIVERS: I will move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed committee amendment. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Would you repeat it again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

KILCHER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

V. RIVERS: I so move.

JOHNSON: I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, as you will note there we are striking the words "and to the extent that is consistent with the laws and the constitution of the United States, with foreign nations." Now, we believe that with this stricken we will still have the same amount of authority in the hands of the government and also believe that it may be waving a red flag at some of the Congressmen who are going to approve this constitution and who will have considerable to do with whether or not we become a state. We feel that we would like to, at times, have direct relations, perhaps, with Canada in the sense that if we were invaded and wanted to have refuge for our people, doubtless our governor would immediately take action and negotiate with some of the provincial governors so our people could go through Canada or even be given refuge there. Such a thing might occur, but we believe that in view of the fact that the power will still remain in the chief executive for such doings, there was no intention of the Committee to abrogate the national treaty-making power when we put it in. We believe it will be done better and with less disturbance if we leave it out, so we recommend striking it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: May I ask a question. You brought up an emergency factor here where such cooperation with Canada might take place, but have you given consideration to the fact that if this hydroelectric project goes in along the Yukon River there might be a peacetime negotiation there and would this possibly prohibit that?

V. RIVERS: No, we don't foresee that this would prohibit any intergovernmental relations allowed under the constitution and laws of the United States.

KILCHER: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher withdraws his objection. Is there any further objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing none, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Before we proceed further, Mr. President, to Section 6, I would like to ask the question of some of the legal minded individuals here in regard to the last sentence in Section 5. It says, "In all intergovernmental relations involving the state, the Governor shall act as the agent of the state. We have in our general constitutional provisions that we are considering some clause by which we allow the governor to delegate certain of those powers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I will take a try at it and see how far I get with my colleagues of the bar. The chief executive can and has implied authority to carry out all proper functions through the assistance of subordinates and aides.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, line 5, delete the remainder of line after the comma up to and including" the word 'purposes' on line 6." So the sentence would read shall have title to all the real and personal property now or hereafter set aside for or conveyed to it, to be administered and disposed of according to law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that a committee amendment, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: That is also a committee amendment and I move and ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed committee amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be offered? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, may I indulge the Convention by asking a question of the Committee on this particular point?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

HURLEY: Beginning on line 7, "There shall be a board of regents of the University of Alaska, the members of which shall be nominated and appointed by the Governor," etc. Would that sentence then restrict the governor from being a member of the board of regents?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: We think it would. This is the method at the present time at which members of the Board of Regents are appointed, and I feel that it would restrict the governor from being a member of the board, morally if for no other reason.

HURLEY: I simply mention the matter because of my knowledge that four of the most famous state universities do have the governor as a member of the board of regents.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed amendments to Committee Proposal No. 12?

CHIEF CLERK: I have one on the desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: By Chief Laws, "Section 3, line 11, strike the comma."

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent, Mr. Laws, for the adoption of the amendment?

LAWS: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 12? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to propose that on the first page of this we put in a title in capitals, "General and Miscellaneous Provisions," just ahead of line 1, and that would make this uniform with other articles and proposals we have had. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert the title 'General and Miscellaneous Provisions' in capitals before line 1."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adoption of this proposed amendment? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I move and ask unanimous consent that Section 1 of the proposal be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin asks unanimous consent that Section 1 of the proposal be stricken.

NORDALE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

MCLAUGHLIN: I so move.

EMBERG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I voted against changing "shall" to "may", but as long as it is "may" now we are merely directing the legislature to do something it has the authority to do anyway, and it is merely a pious and, in a sense, an insulting expression in the constitution about the merit system, and under those circumstances I believe it should be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 20 - Awes, Barr, Emberg, V. Fischer, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNeas, Marston, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Stewart, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 27 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White.

Absent: 8 - Buckalew, Doogan, Hellenthal, McNealy, Reader, Rosswog, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

MCNEES: Mr. President, I change my vote to "yes", please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees changes his vote to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 20 yeas, 27 nays and 8 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like at this time to give notice that I intend to move at some future time to rescind our action taken on the committee amendment which changed "shall" to "may" in line 1 of Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg serves notice --

SUNDBORG: While I am on my feet I also would like to give notice that I intend to move that we rescind our action taken on Committee Proposal 8/a in striking Section 5. That was the one dealing with the commission or commissions for the regulation of administration of fisheries and wild life.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are going to move to rescind at some future time?

SUNDBORG: Yes, at some future time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Point of order. I would like to ask for a ruling at what point we can -- rescinding is more or less terminated. Is it after it leaves second reading? Where does the amending process stop?

PRESIDENT EGAN: So far as the rescinding is concerned, Mr. Victor Rivers, on a motion to rescind, the Chair does not believe that the time comes when the body could not rescind an action, but the Chair would like to state that with relation to the article, Article 8/a, which is the article on resources, that it has never been officially sent to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment for the reason that the Committee members had some discussions that they were pursuing among themselves in research, so that the article that Mr. Sundborg is referring to is actually still before us, the article on resources. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: As a matter of fact, Mr. President, it appears to me that the giving of notice will freeze whatever article is before us in its position and it cannot advance to any different status than it is on the day that the notice was given, so that when we make an indefinite statement, such as "at some future period", the matter is frozen in its current allocation to committee or whatever position it is in. It cannot advance. Nothing else can be done to it until that reconsideration is handled.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, in the mind of the Chair, a rescinding action would not necessarily hold. It would be up to the individual to move. It is not the same motion as a motion to reconsider. Now whether the previous notice on a motion to rescind would freeze a proposal in that position after the day is over, the Chair is not quite clear on that. The Chair does not feel that it would.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, my contention is this: that Mr. Sundborg seeks to give notice so that even in the third reading, before final consideration, that a bare majority could make a change in the document, and that is not the intention of the rules, I am sure. It would appear to me that any of us here could give blanket notice that we are going to move to rescind so it would require only a bare majority to make the change we endeavor to make, and that is an unfair imposition on the balance of our group here, especially in view of our short time left.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I am sure that wasn't the intention of the rules, and I don't think it could be done under our rules that way and that certainly was not my intention. My intention in giving notice on these matters was to comply with a requirement in Robert's which is our rule on this matter, that a motion to rescind requires only a majority vote if notice is given. If notice is not given it requires either a majority of the members to which the body is entitled or two-thirds of those voting, and my purpose in giving the notice is to bring this up just as soon as we have most of the members present. I noticed on roll call today there were numerous members absent. Just as soon as we do have close to the full membership here, I will bring the motions up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I must be confused. I notice we have some rules saying that notice to reconsider or a notice to rescind must be made within one hour after the vote taken.

2812

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does it say "rescind"?

BARR: Yes it does.

RILEY: Mr. President, the rule was not adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was one of the rules that was not adopted, Mr. Barr.

JOHNSON: Point of information. The rule which was stated by Mr. Sundborg regarding the notice of a motion to rescind -- does not Robert's Rules of Order also provide that a notice to rescind in order to obviate the necessity of more than a majority vote, doesn't the notice have to be given on the same day that the action was taken?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It does not say that so far as the Chair recollects, Mr. Johnson, with regard to the motion to rescind. If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 12? If not, the proposal is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, what was the ruling of the Chair on the point of order?

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was the point of order, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: I did not make a point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A rescinding action cannot hold anything beyond tomorrow, that is certain in the rules. Mr. Sundborg, could, if he so desired, later in the day bring the matter up and it would take a majority vote. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, by tomorrow, you mean the next day on which we have a session? In case we do not meet tomorrow it would be in order Monday?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be, Mr. Sundborg, the next meeting. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 15. The Chief Clerk may read Committee Proposal No. 15 for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 15 in its entirety.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Committee have a statement to make with relation to this proposal? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, as stated in the covering letter, these are all matters which were assigned to the Style and Drafting Committee by the committee chairmen; we have consulted a number of other constitutions and we have consulted technical advisers here, and we propose this language. I think each of the sections speaks for itself. We don't consider any of them terribly important, but this is material which is included in most constitutions among the miscellaneous provisions. I think that it could be contended that without, for instance, Section 2, that the constitution would be so construed anyway, but we feel it would be better to have it in the constitution so there would be no doubt about it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that the sections in this proposal be added as sections of Committee Proposal No. 12, general and miscellaneous provisions, and that the section number instead of being 1, 2, 3 and 4, as they are in Committee Proposal No. 15, be renumbered 7, 8, 9 and 10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that Committee Proposal No. 15 become a part of Committee Proposal No. 12 and that the sections become Sections 7, 8, 9 and 10. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Committee Proposal No. 15 be referred direct to Style and Drafting for which the rules will have to be suspended and that Committee Proposal No. 11, last evening which was referred to Engrossment also without any amendment or change, be referred direct to Style and Drafting under suspension of the rules. It would be re-referred in that case.

V. RIVERS: Point of information. This ties 15 into part of 12.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, and 12 has already been referred, Mr. Riley, to Engrossment and Enrollment.

RILEY: My comment will then be only on 11 so as to save floor time on reporting out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee Proposal No. 12 is now in the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee unless by unanimous consent, Mr. Riley, you would make your request. Are you talking about No. 11 now?

RILEY: Yes, it would simply go to Style and Drafting -- it was not amended in any respect.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any objection to referring Committee Proposal No. 11 directly to Style and Drafting? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Now as to your request with relation to Committee Proposal No. 15 --

RILEY: I understand.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You understand now? Committee Proposal No. 15 has been adopted as a part of Committee Proposal No. 12 and is also referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to make that addition. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Might I inquire whether there are other committees that will be bringing in miscellaneous provisions? If so, I think it would be wise to hold this proposal before the Convention and to add the others to it so that when we have an enrolled copy we will have all the provisions in it and it won't be coming out in short takes. Now there may be no other miscellaneous provisions contemplated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Referring back to the second requirement of the enabling act, which refers to the disclaimer of right and title to lands and property belonging to the United States and held in trust for Indians and Aleuts, etc., I remember that that section was referred to the Committee on Ordinances and Transitional Measures, and there is a question in my mind as to whether or not that might not also be included in the article containing the miscellaneous provisions. I realize now that it probably would have been better to have let that provision go through in the legislative article and then leave it to Style and Drafting to place it where it belongs, but since that question is still open, I wonder if it might not be better to leave the article on miscellaneous provisions open until that matter is disposed of.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, it will be so ordered and the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment will then not report the article back to the body until we are certain that all the miscellaneous provisions have been considered on the floor. Now, it would seem that we have before us only, or we could possibly have before us the Style and Drafting's report on the Committee of the Judiciary. Is there objection to proceeding with the article on judiciary at this time? It has been in the possession of the delegates for better than 24 hours, is that right, Miss Awes?

AWES: I just have a question. We have a report on our desks of the Committee on Resolutions and Recommendations suggesting that we adopt a resolution. I was wondering when we took those things up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to proceeding with this report of the Committee on Resolutions? Mr. Riley, as Chairman of the Rules Committee, do you have anything to say?

RILEY: I discussed the matter with the author yesterday and also the secretariat. I know of no reason for not taking it up now. There had been some feeling expressed that it be later on the calendar, but I think in view of the fact the calendar is relatively open, we might just as well consider it now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection then, we will proceed with the report of the Committee on Resolutions and Recommendations, in second reading at this time. Would the Chief Clerk please read the report. Mr. Marston?

MARSTON: Mr. President, Dr. Sady suggested that that be held for some time at a later date. He felt it would be more important. I would like to call on the suggestion of Dr. Sady and ask unanimous consent that we wait until he clears it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the report will be held in abeyance until a later time. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I mean, what does Dr. Sady have to do with it? Point of information. Why does Dr. Sady want it held?

MARSTON: It was my idea -- I wrote it up and took it to him, and he put the expert's touch to it and suggested that at a later date it might be more important coming at the end of this Convention than right now. I was hoping to go out before Christmas, but now that time has passed I am following Sady's suggestion and that is all.

BARR: I see it needs a little amending.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to rise on a point of information, while the subject of a resolution came up. I have been wondering for some time now exactly what the purpose of the Convention resolution is, what the procedures on it would be, what scope they would follow, what effect they would have. In the same question as to ordinances, we have had a number of ordinances suggested in the past; people have talked about various ordinances. What effect does an ordinance have upon this state and what effect does it have upon the legislature? If this question is in order now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Riley, would you care to answer the questions?

RILEY: Mr. President, I think it would be more appropriate, if I may, for a member of the Committee on Ordinances reply in that respect. As to resolutions we have had two types, those that simply affect our organization and procedure here, statements of policy, and others that have been introduced which are more the nature of a memorial to some other agencies, as I would expect this of Mr. Marston's to be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair notes that the Chairman of the Ordinance Committee is not present this morning.

CHIEF CLERK: He is upstairs.

HURLEY: Mr. President, the question is a loaded one in that there is considerable difference of legal interpretation of the word "ordinance". However, I might say this that it is fairly uniformly held that an ordinance is a transitional measure or having the force of law during the period when the constitution takes effect and is carried into being. There is a period there, as we all realize, that adjustments must be made; and the ordinances are presumably the part of the document that the Convention has decided are necessary in order to effectuate that transition with as little difficulty as possible. The word "schedule", or the title "schedule" and the title "ordinance" and the title "transitional provisions" have been held in at least three cases which I am familiar with, to be synonymous in their effect, not in their context, so that I think in my opinion and the opinion of the Committee the term "ordinance" is a generic term applied to one of the items in a schedule or a group of transitional provisions. That is, of course, a different legal meaning than the term "ordinance" in itself, which we know as a law rather than a transitional provision. Now, I may have confused the issue more than cleared it, but maybe I could answer a question correctly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: If I may follow up slightly, does each and every ordinance adopted by this Convention have to be ratified individually by the voters?

HURLEY: That probably goes to a matter of opinion, but it is the opinion of the Committee that the answer is "no", that all of the ordinances may be approved at the same time the constitution is approved. Now I might say in that connection there has been more than one method used that in some cases the constitution itself has been ratified with the feeling on the part of the court that the ordinances themselves were necessary provisions to put the constitution into effect, and it did not require the separate or even the conjunctive approval of the voters. In other cases, the constitution and the ordinances and transitional provisions have been submitted to the voters for their approval at referendum. It is our intention, if I am not getting ahead of my story a little bit of what the Ordinance Committee intends to do shall I go into that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: To provide that both methods, that the constitution and the ordinances will be approved by a referendum of the voters and besides that, that one or two, I think at the present time we will recommend that two ordinances be separately approved at referendum, so I think the answer to the question is that it is a matter of choice of the Convention as to whether or not they desire to have separate approval on the particular ordinances or whether they desire to have, as has been expressed, a package deal, but I do think this, that the Committee is very desirous that the referendum be applied to the constitution and those ordinances which do not particularly take a separate way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I address a question to Mr. Hurley?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Hurley, can any ordinance take effect before Congress passes an act admitting Alaska as a state of the union?

HURLEY: You have got into a proposition in which both Mr. Buckalew and Mr. McNealy have put in a great bit of study. Generally speaking, I might answer the question as "no", but I have to make a reservation in that courts have also held that where the matter is submitted to referendum that you have a situation of vox populi, that the people in voting on that referendum have expressed their approval of it, and since we recognize that the government arises from the people, courts have held that if that ordinance is approved by a majority of the voters that it does then have the effect of law, even in the interim period. Now that, I might say, is not a uniform opinion but it is a possibility.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Hurley, I asked this with special reference to the proposal that we adopted, the so-called Tennessee Plan, and I am wondering whether we can carry that into effect, if we have any authority to carry it into effect without action by the Congress admitting Alaska as a state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I might say that when this matter is presented to the floor, which it will be in an ordinance from the Ordinance Committee, that a much fuller explanation of those ramifications will be made at that time. I hesitate in the absence of my two brethren here to go into it too deeply because they are presently making a further study of the matter and will be prepared at that time to give a complete explanation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before we proceed with Committee Proposal No. 2, as it has been reported back from the Committee on Style and Drafting, the Chair would like to ask the Sergeant at Arms to ask any delegates in the building to be present during this reading of the proposal. If there are any delegates upstairs, please suggest that they come down. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I would request a ten-minute recess prior to the reading of that so I can consult with the Judiciary Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for ten minutes.

MCLAUGHLIN: The Judiciary Committee will meet in the rear.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Sergeant at Arms will see if there are any delegates upstairs. The Convention will be at ease. The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting on the judiciary article in its entirety at this time.

(The Clerk read the report at this time by Style and Drafting on Committee Proposal No. 2.)

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, there is only one question that arises in my mind; in Sections 1, 2, --

DAVIS: Just hold it, I will take care of that in my explanation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, with relation to the rules, did you have a statement to make at this time?

RILEY: Mr. Chairman, if I follow the question, are you perhaps speaking of this brochure?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, the Chair understood from Mr. Davis that you had a statement to make. If you do not, Mr. Davis, do you have a statement to make with relation to the article? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to suggest that Mr. Davis, who was the chairman of the subcommittee of Style and Drafting that did most of the detailed work on this article, give a brief explanation of just what was done and why it was done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, would you give that explanation at this time?

DAVIS: Mr. President, in a general way, since this is the first matter to come back from Style and Drafting, I think I might make some statements to tell how Style and Drafting has been operating. In the first place, we divide ourselves into subcommittees of three to consider various articles which had been given to us. That was for two reasons: first, a nine-man committee is unwieldy to work on something of this kind; second, we had a good many articles that were dumped into our laps at the same time, and so we felt that the subcommittee method worked best. The subcommittee as such worked on this particular section. The matter was then taken up with the Judiciary Committee which originally brought in the proposal. After checking with that Committee the matter was checked with the consultants we have here; Mr. Bebout we have particularly for the purpose of telling us whether we have left out anything that we should have put in, or whether we have put in anything we should have left out, and Dr. [J. Kimbrough] Owen on the matter of general style and language. Following that then, the entire Committee sat down with Dr. Owen and went over the article section by section and some changes were made that way. After that was done the matter was again taken up with the Judiciary Committee. That is the way this thing worked. Now yesterday it appeared that there seemed to be considerable fear expressed on the floor here that Style and Drafting was rewriting these articles in such a way as to change the intent of the body in adopting the article in the first place. I want to state on behalf of Style and Drafting that that is not our intent unless we tell you so. There are some places where we feel it is necessary to make certain changes that might be substantive to fit in with other articles. When that happens we will tell you so, and so far as this article is concerned, we have checked and double checked it and have checked it with the Committee and we believe that we have retained all of the substantive matters in the original article and we do not believe we have made any additions of substance. Now, any person, of course, or any committee is fallible, and we may be very well shown to be wrong. So for that reason we want each member of the Convention to carefully go over this and if they feel any change of substance has been made or anything added that should not have been added, we want to be told, but we want you to go at it with understanding that to the best of the ability of the rule of the Style and Drafting Committee the matter has come out with the same intent that it went into our hands, and any changes that have been made are certainly inadvertent on our part if any such occurred.

V. RIVERS: Point of information. May we have the names of the three on the subcommittee who worked on this?

DAVIS: Yes. Mr. Hurley, Mr. Fischer and myself, on this particular article. As I said, the entire Committee went over the article as well.

MCLAUGHLIN: Point of information. Did any member of the Judiciary Committee work on the subcommittee, and is it the policy of the Style and Drafting Committee to permit any member of any committee who produced a bill to work on the bill in subcommittee?

DAVIS: No member of the Judiciary Committee worked on the subcommittee, and Mr. McLaughlin made it clear at the time we started consideration of this article that he wanted no part of styling this particular article so that it could not be said that the substantive committee was handling this matter. Is that clear? At the outset the subcommittee here took this judiciary article to pieces and put it back together in several respects. For that reason you cannot take this article and read it against the enrolled copy without reading both of them completely because a hurried reading of the Style and Drafting copy would indicate that some portions have been left out, where in fact, that is not the case. As a quick resume on that, if you were to read this article in a hurry, you would see right away that the enrolled copy said that the judicial council should consist of six members, where the Style and Drafting Committee says the judicial council shall consist of seven members. Now, the reason for that is that a reading of the article will show, the enrolled copy will show they actually intended seven members all the time but they were worried about how they were going to get the supreme court justice on that committee when in fact he had not been appointed at the beginning. We have taken care of that by a separate section at the end, Section 18, which we have separated out of the body of the judicial article and which we intend to have go into a transitional ordinance. We believe that since the staggered terms of judicial council will only happen once, I mean the setup of it will only happen once, after you once get the council appointed, the terms will be staggered and thereafter the problem does not arise, so we believed it was not either necessary or desirable to keep the language about staggered terms in the body of the constitution, and for that reason we have made a separate section which we intend to lift out of the body of the judicial article and put it in a transitional measure. The same thing is true in a different manner as to the question that a service in the armed forces is not an office of profit. You will remember that that appears in one position in the present judicial article. Now, it has already come out on the floor in at least one other article and probably will come in others, and we figured that that matter could best be handled by a general provision in the constitution that service in the armed forces is not an office of profit as provided in the constitution, and for that reason once again we lifted that language out of the particular section and set it up in a separate section at the end of the judicial article. I think that is Section 17, as I remember it, with the intention that that section will be taken out of the judicial article and fitted into the proper place in the entire constitution. Now, to get to Steve's problem here. He has got his whole copy marked up on the side -- "initiative, initiative" -- and he started to ask a question, and that is a good question. As quick as we started working on this article, we found that we had used interchangeably, the terms "by the legislature" or "by law". You will remember at the time the judicial article was considered by the Convention we had not yet considered the initiative, and I am satisfied in my own mind, and I think that the Judiciary Committee agrees with me on this point, that at the time the article was before the Convention that we meant exactly the same when we said "by law" or "by the legislature". After we adopted, at least tentatively, an initiative article of course it was obvious that the terms "by the legislature" and "by law" are no longer synonymous. They might mean two different things because the initiative initiates laws. For that reason in order to try to keep the thinking of the Convention in our first draft of this matter we kept the terms all the way through just as they were in their enrolled copies. Wherever it said "by the legislature" we left it that way; wherever it said "by law" we left them that way. Then, in order to try to resolve the problem -- I should back up just a minute -- there is considerable feeling by some people, and I might say that I am one of them, that the setting up and the jurisdiction of the courts is something that should properly be handled by the legislature and not left to the initiative and for that reason in an attempt to find out where we were going on this thing, we held a combined meeting of some members from Style and Drafting, some from the Judiciary Committee, and some from the Initiative Committee, to find out how it was best to handle this problem, and the result of that meeting was that most members, I think we had only one dissent, but most members felt in that bunch that the courts should be something that should be handled by the legislature and not by the initiative, but it was not unanimous, and we do not know how the body as a whole feels, but as a result of that meeting we agreed that probably the best way to handle this thing would be to change the judicial article to provide "by law" in each case, and then to request the body to make a further exception in the initiative article when it came before the body to exempt the jurisdiction in the make-up of the courts from the initiative article. With that in mind then we did in our next and final draft change all of these provisions to read "by law" wherever it had said "by law" or "by the legislature". We changed them except in two instances here where it is obvious we couldn't have meant anything but the legislature. One of those instances is where the legislature by a vote of two houses, of each house, must approve any change of the rules. The other was in connection with the confirmation of members of the judicial council; once again it was so written we couldn't have meant anything but "the legislature" so with that in mind we went through the article and changed everywhere it said "by the legislature" or "by law". With those two exceptions we changed it to read "by law". That, then, was the purpose for my question at the time we started the resources article. I asked as to whether, when you say "legislature" do you mean "legislature" or do you mean "by law", and the answer by the Committee was that when we say "legislature" we mean legislature, not initiative. It occurs to me and to some of the others that have been working on this, that if each article that comes in is going to have things that they feel should be limited to action by the legislature, that then we are going to make the initiative article as long as a sled track and completely unworkable if we say, "The initiative shall apply except, except, except, except", and so we have thought it would be best if the Convention wishes to limit some of these things to action by the legislature, to adopt a general miscellaneous provision to the effect that when the article says "legislature it means just that, and when it says "by law", it will mean action by either the legislature or by the initiative. If we adopt that approach, then the article which we have prepared here is wrong to that extent if the body decides that they want the courts to be set up by the legislature and not by the legislature and the initiative. Now that is something we will have to decide here, but I think, Steve, that answers what you were asking. I think that I have pretty well covered the matter here. I do have between my draft of the enrolled copy and my copy, my original copy of Style and Drafting, I believe with a little work I can tell anybody where a particular article came from or where a particular article went in the final draft. Now I don't have it in too good shape, but I think I can find it. One thing further I wish to state, that the article has been checked by a member from the Judiciary Committee, and by the Judiciary Committee as a whole, and I believe that they have no exceptions or objections to it except in the question of whether the courts are going to be set by the initiative or not, and that point is before the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Point of information, Mr. President. Mr. Davis said the rule-making power or the changes in rules must be approved by a two-thirds vote of the legislature. I do not read it that way. Did you so state just a moment ago?

DAVIS: I think I did, Mr. Rivers, but what I meant was -- I wasn't, of course, talking about that particular section except as an illustration. The section itself will control, and what it says is that it will stand unless disapproved.

V. RIVERS: I still don't read it that way.

DAVIS: All right, I will read it then.

V. RIVERS: I was just checking the enrolled copy to see. Mr. President, I merely wanted the record straight. It does not say "shall be approved by a two-thirds vote of the legislature", it says that "it may be changed by a two-thirds vote of the legislature". That is an entirely different action.

DAVIS: I heard, although I did not attempt to read that particular section, Mr. Rivers, I was only using it as a matter of illustration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: To confirm what Mr. Davis has said, we had a representative of the Judiciary Committee present and I believe it is the unanimous agreement of the Committee that there have been no substantive changes made by Style and Drafting, unless those substantive changes on the matter of "provided by law" or "provided by the legislature", which in substance will be left to the body except upon motion of amendment by Mr. Robertson.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Section 1? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Amendments are not up now, are they?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are in the process of accepting or rejecting the report of the Style and Drafting Committee.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. McLaughlin, the Chairman of the Judiciary Branch Committee, if it is not true that the Judiciary Branch Committee when submitting this proposal did not intend in Section 1 that where the words "by law" are used, it means "by the legislature"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: You place me in an awkward position, Mr. Robertson, because frankly I don't know what we intended. We hadn't discussed the initiative and I cannot speak for the Committee, but we did use in many instances "legislature" interchangeably with "law", although that might not be the viewpoint of many members of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, point of inquiry. Must we not settle, first of all, before we can proceed upon the suggestion of the Committee on Style and Drafting as outlined by Mr. Davis, because Mr. Davis said that should that suggestion be accepted, then in some instances here the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting as to this particular article must be changed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it the wish of the body that at this time that a motion be made on that subject from the floor and we discuss it and settle it before we go section by section? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, since the thought of the initiative was not clear when this article was first adopted in second reading, I think that each section should be viewed in the light of the initiative. I don't think it would be wise to either reject or adopt a motion that includes or excludes initiative for the whole article. There may well be instances where matters should be left to the legislature and there may be a few instances where the initiative might get due consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I wanted to rectify a statement to the embarrassment of Mr. Robertson. I did not mean it that way, but when he says "Did the Committee intend it to be the 'legislature'", I would say by elimination "yes"; where we said "by law" we thought in terms of the legislature because of the fact we were not even thinking of the initiative, and "by law" we did in fact treat it in terms of the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I served on both committees, both the Initiative and Judiciary, and it was my own personal thought that we said or used the phrase "by law" we meant the legislature and not the initiative or the referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: In order to have something before us, I move that in Section 1 wherever the words "by law" are used that they be changed to read "by the legislature", and I move that the rule be suspended.

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves that the rules be suspended and that the words "by law" wherever they appear, be changed to read "by the legislature" in each case where those words appear in Section 1. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would suggest that if Mr. Johnson is agreeable that that also apply to Section 2, Section 3, Section 4, Section 9, Section 11, and Section 13.

JOHNSON: I certainly have no objection. However, in light of Mr. Kilcher's observation I thought that in order to expedite it, it might be better to proceed section by section. However, I am perfectly willing to include the other sections because they certainly apply.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it your wish that the other sections be included?

JOHNSON: It is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then the motion will include the words wherever they appear in the proposal.

ROBERTSON: No, only in those particular sections I mentioned.

V. RIVERS: I will ask Mr. Robertson if he included Section 11 there?

ROBERTSON: Yes, I mentioned Section 11 and Section 13.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I would like to ask the proposer of the motion a question now in order to get the thinking; if we vote on the question I want to know what we have done. Mr. Johnson, by proposing this motion is it your intention that if the motion passes, that by using the word "legislature" that we have meant that we have limited the operation to the legislature and the initiative does not apply in those instances? Is that your intention?

JOHNSON: That is my intention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I fail to see any great threat anywhere throughout this article, and I read it carefully last night; I spent a little better than two hours on it last night comparing it with the enrolled copy. I fail to see any threat whatsoever to the judiciary article by leaving the words "by law" remain in the article where they are found. The basis of constitutional law is that certain rights are reserved, certain reservations are made within the constitution and all other laws are left up to the legislature and to the people. Inasmuch as this body has gone on record as favoring the initiative, I do not feel that we should relegate it to a position of second-or third-or fourth-class nature in the formation of the statutory laws of our new proposed state. I have heard many discussions, informal on this subject this morning, and I think that we are probably being faced by some bugaboos that actually are not there. I am a firm believer that the initiative is something that belongs in our constitution just as much as I feel that the legislature belongs in our constitution. I don't feel that we can separate them and say that one law is going to have greater value or greater realm of power than a law stemming from some other source. I would heartily oppose any effort here to say, carte blanche, without serious discussion and study on the part of every delegate in this room that we can go through and say Section 1, 2, 3, and with the exception of Section 11, we are going to change the words "by law" to read the "legislature". I don't feel that that would be the will of this group; I certainly do not feel it would be the will of the people who elected us here. I think we must give much more consideration to it than that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to state that ordinarily the motion to suspend the rules is not debatable, but inasmuch as within that motion to suspend the rules the proposed amendment was included, that it is permissible to discuss the question before us. Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: As Chairman of the Committee on the Initiative, Referendum and Recall, I would like to ask Mr. Davis if this move would not take the power of the initiative out. The initiative is a law itself. Of course, we have provided in the initiative for Section 3, "The legislature shall prescribe the procedure to be followed, the exercise of the power and initiative and referendum except as herein provided." I am just wondering if it would not take the power of the initiative away. Our Committee would firmly stand by the initiative. Mr. Taylor is not here, he is Vice Chairman of this Committee. I am sorry he is not here, but before a move is made I would like to have the opinion of the Committee, my Committee on the Initiative and Referendum. I think it is very vital at this point. If they endeavor to take away the power of the initiative I oppose it, and I want the backing of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Collins, in my opinion to answer your question, in my opinion, if we adopt the motion which has been proposed we have taken away the power of the initiative as to the subjects covered in these particular articles.

COLLINS: Can you make that exception?

DAVIS: I don't see why not. I intended, if this carries, I intended certainly to provide somewhere in here a miscellaneous article in the constitution to the effect that when we have used the words "the legislature" as distinguished from "by law", that action then was limited to the legislature in those particular places. To further go ahead with what you mentioned, you will remember that we held a committee meeting which included members from your Committee. I don't remember whether you were there or not, but Mr. Taylor was there.

COLLINS: I was there.

DAVIS: At that time it was proposed, I think without dissent so far as that committee of committees was concerned, that we would offer an amendment to the initiative article to specifically eliminate, to specifically exclude the setup and jurisdiction of the courts from the initiative article. That is what we had agreed to do at that time, but this other thing has come up since. That is why we have the problem now, that apparently other committees are talking the same position and if they do we will have more exceptions in the initiative than we have initiative. That is the point I was trying to get at awhile ago. Now it is purely a matter of policy here as to whether the body itself wants to exempt the jurisdiction and the make-up of the courts from the initiative. So far as I, as an individual am concerned, I do favor that, but that is something that the body itself has got to decide; neither Style and Drafting nor either of the substantive committees can decide that point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, to carry this forward to what seems to me to be a logical conclusion, I wonder if the makers of the motion would be willing to hold it in abeyance until we decide the more basic question as outlined by Mr. Davis. It seems to me we have to decide that basic method of procedure before we know what we are going to do when we change or don't change the words in this article, "as prescribed by law". It wouldn't affect your motion, Mr. Johnson, but don't you think it might be better to settle the basic procedure first?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I assume what Mr. White has in mind is perhaps a division on the question and we vote --

WHITE: I have in mind, Mr. Johnson, if you would agree to hold it in abeyance and move in line with the later suggestion of the Committee on Style and Drafting that a miscellaneous provision be adopted by the Convention as outlined by Mr. Davis.

JOHNSON: I beg your pardon, I have no objection to that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it appears to me that this is the basic question right now. The proposal that Mr. Johnson has offered is the basic question. It does not only apply to this particular article but it can apply and may apply to all other articles and we are now at this time arguing a differentiation between "by law" and "by legislature", so it seems to me that the point could be argued very clearly at this time.

WHITE: That is correct, but Style and Drafting has changed this article in some respects to read "as prescribed by law". In doing so they intended that at first that under the initiative an exception be made for the judiciary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Point of order, Mr. President, I think that is a misstatement of fact. The Style and Drafting Committee, in my opinion, has no right to recommend a change in the substance of the whole constitution. I recognize that Mr. Davis, in presenting this thing, did the best he could and probably did it right, but the fact of the matter is that any decision that was made was a decision that was improper in itself, and it was simply, our job is to point this problem up and not to recommend a solution to the thing.

WHITE: Mr. President, in answer to Mr. McCutcheon, I maintain that settling the basic method of procedure at this time would not affect Mr. Johnson's motion or any discussion of it that may ensue. The only thing it would do is clarify what our procedure is going to be in each case. If Mr. Johnson agrees to hold his motion in abeyance as he had agreed, then I am prepared to make a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Has Mr. Johnson agreed then that his motion will be held in abeyance and will not be before us at this time? Do you ask unanimous consent that it be held in abeyance?

JOHNSON: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to that request? Hearing no objection then, the motion as has been made by Mr. Johnson will be held in abeyance until a later time. Mr. White still has the floor if he has a motion.

WHITE: Mr. President, I move that it be the policy of the Convention to adopt a miscellaneous provision which shall say that when the constitution says "the legislature" it means the legislature only and that when it says "by law" it means by the state or by the legislature. I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

MCNEES: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees seconds the motion.

MARSTON: Is it open for discussion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: May I ask a question of Mr. Davis? What position has Style and Drafting taken on the initiative where it says "by law or "by legislature", have they also done the same thing on the initiative powers going into the legislature?

DAVIS: Mr. Marston, Mr. Hurley had the right idea awhile ago when he said that Style and Drafting cannot decide that. I do not agree with Mr. Hurley when he said we shouldn't propose a solution if we had one because I think somebody has got to do it, but at the minute in working on the initiative article this point doesn't come up. Had this matter been limited to the judicial and had the body wanted to limit action on the judiciary to the legislature we could have then proposed an amendment to the initiative article which would have taken care of that, but so far as I see, the action taken now won't have any effect at all on the initiative article as such. It will, certainly if adopted, take certain things away from the initiating power that might be given unless the motion were adopted.

Have I answered your question?

MARSTON: I understood, I have heard that where we say "by law" in the initiative, you say "by legislature". If that is the case, why then we have no initiative.

DAVIS: Style and Drafting up to the present time has not completed its work on the initiative at all. I don't think that point has even arisen in connection with that article. The only one we have completed and the only one we have dealt with on this question is the one before us now, the judiciary.

MARSTON: The decision to make this "by legislature" or "by law" in the judiciary, would that affect the position of the initiative when it comes up to do the same thing?

DAVIS: No. The fact of the matter is, if we can be sure where the Convention wants to go here, then we will know what to do when some of these other articles come up. That is the reason for bringing it up at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I feel that as Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee I should point out that it is not the recommendation of the Style and Drafting Committee that there be a miscellaneous article such as Mr. White has proposed here. We have discussed it in our Committee, but I am sure we have taken no action to recommend that as a committee action to the Convention. Is that correct, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: That is absolutely correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I feel that the issue with Mr. White's motion is clear cut. The question is simply whether or not we want to leave it to the recommendation of each committee to decide whether or not the items within the proposal shall be or shall not be subject to the initiative. If they feel they shall not be subject to the initiative all they will have to do then is to put the word "legislature" in there and it will take care of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Point of inquiry of Mr. White. Is his motion broad enough? That is, he distinguishes between two classes. He says where they said "legislature" and where they say "law", "legislature" means that you are immune from the initiative and "by law" means that the provisions are subject to the initiative, but unfortunately most committees have used it so indiscriminately that they provide in the same sentence the expression "legislature" and "law". I will read from page 5, line 6, of the resources article that we have just approved. It says "The legislature shall provide for the issuance, type and terms of leases, etc., as may be prescribed by law," so that the legislature provides for the issuance under that theory and yet by the initiative they can change the number and type of minerals that are subject to it, so I think perhaps, maybe if Mr. White asks for a five-minute recess maybe something can be worked out, something generally.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to state too, Mr. White, if your motion is, in effect, a suspension of the rules and would take a two-thirds vote because we do not have the subject of miscellaneous provisions before us at this time, if the motion were to be voted upon at this time it would take a two-thirds vote unless such a motion were made at such a time when miscellaneous provisions were before us in their regular order.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would then withdraw my motion and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended so that we can consider this matter at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent to withdraw his motion previously made. Is there objection?

MCNEES: I will withdraw my second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now Mr. White moves that the rules be suspended so that we can consider the question of miscellaneous provisions.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Point of information. If Mr. White's motion to suspend the rules should carry, would that suspension of the rules include the motion that I had previously presented?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it would not, Mr. Johnson. It would include no other motion except the delegates know that then Mr. White could offer the motion that he previously made and it could be carried then by a majority vote. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended so that Mr. White may make a motion to include in the miscellaneous provisions an extra provision in the miscellaneous provisions?"

WHITE: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Is there objection for the suspension of the rules? If not, the rules are suspended and Mr. White, you may make your motion at this time.

WHITE: Mr. President, I now ask for a five-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Sergeant at Arms will please locate the absent delegates. The Convention will be at ease.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, a point of information. In our rules, is there a call of the Convention?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The only mention is that the Convention may provide for a call of the members, and we have not done so.

COGHILL: The reason why I mentioned this is that those discussions we had on those last articles that as we get them prepared to submit them into the constitution, I believe that all the delegates should be present while that is going on, and if we have a call of the Convention, supposing we have a member of our group that is out of town or something, what would be the procedure on that? Would everything stop?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, Mr. Coghill, usually in other assemblies, that is handled just on the basis of judgment, that the person or the assembly will waive if there is some real reason that a person is absent, such as, if he were called away because of illness or something like that, either by unanimous consent or suspension of the rules --

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if the matter is likely to come up, I suggest that the Rules Committee might be asked to draft a rule on call of the house. If somebody tries here within the next day or two, or week or two, which is all we have left, a call of the house, we really do not have any provisions covering it; and Robert's does not have a specific provision. It just says that "Bodies may adopt procedures such as the following..." and gives suggested ones for call of the house and there are several alternatives in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention is at ease right now, we are waiting for the absent delegates. The President will call the Convention to order.

COLLINS: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Collins moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30. Are there committee announcements?

COLLINS: And that contact be made with all the absentees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That all the absent members be contacted in that time. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, not an objection but a committee announcement. The Committee on Administration will not have a luncheon meeting but we will meet immediately upon recess in the large committee room upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Administration will meet immediately upon recess in the large committee room upstairs. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Do I remember that you announced a meeting of the committee chairmen for this noon?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Sundborg. There will be a luncheon meeting of the committee chairmen at 12:30 in the luncheon room. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I wish to object to the unanimous consent. I see no reason why we should not go ahead.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard to Mr. Collins' unanimous consent request.

COLLINS: I so move.

MCNEES: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded by Mr. McNees that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 24 - Awes, Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McNees, Marston, Poulsen, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney.

Nays: 21 - Boswell, Cooper, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, Sundborg, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 10 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal, Hilscher, McNealy, Reader, Riley, Rosswog, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 24 yeas, 21 nays and 10 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: May I suggest that the Sergeant at Arms be instructed to contact the absent members during the luncheon hour and give us a report on our reconvening at 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees requests that the Sergeant at Arms be instructed to contact the absent members during the luncheon hour and give the Convention a report during recess. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Style and Drafting will meet immediately at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention is at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of communications. The Convention will come to order.

(The Chief Clerk read a telegram from Cyrus E. Peck, Grand Secretary, Alaska Native Brotherhood, Juneau, urging that the action taken by the Convention which voted down the amendment regarding native lands in Committee Proposal No. 8/a be sustained.)

The Chief Clerk read a telegram from Arthur Skinner, Juneau, urging the Convention to reconsider its action on Section 5 of Committee Proposal No. 8/a, pertaining to fish and wildlife.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other communications? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: May I ask who is Arthur Skinner?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, he owns a sporting goods store in Juneau and is very active in the Territorial Sportsmen, which is the local sporting fraternity there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Did he say what politicians wanted to grind their axes?

NERLAND: Was that addressed to an individual or to the Convention?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was addressed to the President of the Convention. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to have the privilege of the floor for just a very short time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith, you are granted the privilege of the floor.

(Mr. Smith spoke under a question of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I am sorry I did not speak before. I wonder if I can ask unanimous consent for the introduction of Committee Proposal No. 16 at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection we will revert to the order of business of introduction of proposals at this time. Mr. McNealy asks unanimous consent for the introduction of Committee Proposal No. 16 at this time. Would you tell us what the proposal relates to?

MCNEALY: The disclaimer as to Native lands which was taken from the legislative article almost intact, and there is a consent to the enabling act and possibly this body has passed upon the committee proposal in regard to the University and if so that could be struck out of this one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean, Mr. McNealy, that this particular proposal had been before us and then referred from the floor to your Committee?

MCNEALY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the introduction of Committee Proposal No. 16 at this time? Hearing no objection, the Clerk may read the Committee Proposal No. 16 at this time for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 16, introduced by the Committee on Ordinances and Transitional Measures, 'GENERAL AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I renew my motion made before the luncheon recess and withdrawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed motion offered by Mr. White.

CHIEF CLERK: You withdrew a motion.

WHIIE: I know. Now I offer it again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Had you actually offered the motion at that time or had we just voted on the suspension of the rules?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may offer the motion. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed motion.

CHIEF CLERK: "That it be the policy of the Convention to adopt a miscellaneous provision which shall say 'when the constitution says "The legislature" it means the legislature only, and that when it says "by law" it means by initiative or by the legislature.'"

WHITE: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves the adoption of the motion. Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seconds the motion. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, this is one of these dilemmas we get into that is very difficult of solution. I proposed the amendment to provide a policy under which we can work that I feel we could all understand and we can proceed from there knowing what we are doing each time we come to one of these matters in each of the articles. I would suggest that a vote "yes" on the motion should mean that the Convention is in favor of differentiating between a case where it wishes a matter to be in the hands of the legislature only or whether it wishes it to be subject to the initiative. A vote "no" should mean that the Convention wishes to have every such item subject to the initiative. If this motion is voted down it is my understanding that somebody else will propose a like motion that will say a miscellaneous provision should be adopted stating that the words "by law" or "by the legislature" could be used interchangeably throughout the constitution.

V. RIVERS: Will you have the Chief Clerk read the motion again? I want the exact wording of that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the motion again.

CHIEF CLERK: "That it be the policy of the Convention to adopt a miscellaneous provision which shall say that 'when the constitution says "the legislature" it means the legislature only and that when it says "by law" it means by initiative or by the legislature.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, we have reached a very fundamental question, and we are going to be making a very fundamental decision. If we distinguish between the meaning of the words "by law" or "by the legislature" we are raising a substantive question in every case where those words appear. I have talked to various committee people and most of them say that they did not have the distinction clearly in mind when they drafted their proposals. They used them more or less interchangeably without stopping to think of the distinctions. If we are going to raise a substantive question on the meaning of those words, then we get into the problem of whether all these articles should go back to their standing committees for decision on that fundamental substantive question which is involved or else we will just keep them on the floor here and we will fight it out every time one of those terms arises as to what we mean by it. Of course, only the body can make the final decision. As far as the Judiciary is concerned, the members of that Committee were thinking only of the legislature. Ours was among the first out and we didn't stop to think about the distinction. We used the words interchangeably. However, the Judiciary is pretty well constructed right in the constitution. The initiative power does not extend to changing the constitution. We have our courts with the main jurisdiction defined and the judicial council and everything we have written in here; the initiative could not touch it. However, we have said "by law" with regard to about seven points, as Mr. Robertson pointed out this morning. One is that inferior courts could be established by law, and the salaries of justices and judges could be changed by law, and the number of justices of the supreme court may be increased, but only upon request of the supreme court, so that would not apply. And then additional qualifications are prescribed by law for judges. I am perfectly secure as far as the judiciary article is concerned. I don't think the public is going to concern itself by initiative, whether it is going to change the salary of judges or create an inferior court. We have the broad question before us and that is what I am speaking to. The Judiciary raised this because we think those are not proper subjects for the initiative. Neither are they subjects that the public is going to be interested in from the standpoint of the initiative, and I feel if we go through with the distinction that Mr. Barrie White would establish here -- I really fully approve of having him raise the point at this time -- I feel that every proposal that comes before us from now on in third reading is before us on a substantive question as to what we mean by those particular terms and I doubt that the remaining 14 days is long enough for us to fight that battle out every time we come across those terms. So, in the interest of the entire Constitutional Convention, I am willing to let the Judiciary take a chance. I am not speaking for any of my colleagues on the Committee. I am willing to let Judiciary take a chance, and I am willing to say that let the initiative apply wherever it would ordinarily apply without making that distinction, because if we start giving an initiative which we have done, and then say, "except this, except this", and take every proposal and treat that as a matter of substance, for the rest of this Convention during the third reading, I am afraid we are just about wrecking the operation, so if the Convention votes this down, Mr. Barrie White's amendment, I am going to propose one to the effect that those words may be used interchangeably wherever applicable insofar as the initiative is concerned. If we take that decision now we can go ahead and wind up this Convention. Otherwise, I don't see where we are coming out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I agree entirely with Mr. Rivers that we will be spending the rest of our days worrying as to what exactly the meaning of each of those words is. It seems to me that in the passing of the proposed article on direct legislation, we made a decision in this particular matter; we said as follows: "The initiative and referendum may not be used as a means of earmarking revenues for making or defeating of appropriations of public funds or for local or special legislation." We specifically exempted those. I don't think it is right for us as an afterthought to start going through the whole constitution and add additional items that are not subject to the initiative. I personally am not a believer in the initiative; however, if you have it, let's be honest about it; let's be above board about it. If you believe that certain items should be exempted let's put them into Section 5 of Article 3 and specifically exempt them from the initiative instead of going through each article, section by section, and by hidden meanings prevent the people from exercising the initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I agree with Mr. Fischer that we adopted the initiative with certain exceptions which appear in that article. The proposal that is before us now was decided before we adopted the initiative, so I think the problem is with it, and it seems to me that Style and Drafting acted very properly when they used a consistent term "by the law", the one they chose, and I think in this case we should decide the matter as a substantive matter. The other proposals where we are concerned with it, I think all came up after the initiative was adopted, and therefore, I think the Style and Drafting should continue to use the term "by law" and I think then it would be understood that the initiative did apply to it. If there is some case where it is felt that the initiative should not apply, as in this proposal, then I think we have a duty to consider it. Otherwise, it seems to me we should just assume it because we all knew the initiative had been adopted and we presented our proposals. For that reason I approve of the idea of Barrie White's motion. I think that the constitution "by law" should mean that we can adopt it either by the legislature or by referendum; and I also agree that "by the legislature" means by the legislature only. However, I disagree when Mr. White says if we vote no on his proposal that we vote against that meaning of the terms because I agree with his idea, and I agree that is what the terms should mean in the constitution, but I think it's obvious, and I don't think we need a section in the constitution that says so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I was going to add my voice to that of Mr. Fischer and Mr. Rivers. Yesterday, when I asked a question relative to the possibility of these various articles coming back from Style and Drafting to the still standing substantive committees, I had that very idea in mind. Mr. George Sundborg very improperly, I thought, answered my question rather than allowing it to come from the Chair or the floor in general. I went to the Rules Committee later in the afternoon, but due to the lack of time did not get a chance to be heard. I feel that this question before us now is one of substantive matter. I do feel that the floor has definitely gone on record in favor of the initiative, and we have hamstrung the initiative far enough in the article itself, so I do not feel now that time will permit our going ahead and treating each article as we come to it. Therefore, I do feel we have to resolve this question now, and in a sense I do not feel that Mr. Barrie White's present motion is the proper answer to it; but I do think we are going to have to keep this constantly in mind as we face the various articles as they come up, and I think that properly that could best be handled by referring these articles back to the substantive committees prior to presentation to the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I believe we had an agreement here that one member should be appointed from each committee to work with Style and Drafting to help prevent any material change being made in the article. Now, if that is done, that member could inform Style and Drafting as to whether or not the committee meant "legislature" or both the initiative and the legislature. If he is not quite sure about it he could check with the rest of the members of the committee to tell him, and then when that proposal is reported out on the floor by Style and Drafting we would know that it would agree with the committee report and it would not delay these proceedings another two weeks or more.

I don't see any possibility of that except perhaps with this one we have before us. Now, in deciding whether or not we should change this one so that we have the initiative on everything in the judiciary article, there are two things we must consider here. One of them, is it right, is it morally right to make exceptions to the initiative after we have adopted it; and the other thing is, is it desirable and necessary? Now, as far as the right or wrong of it is concerned, we must remember this: The initiative is only one part of this constitution. The judiciary article is another part. When a law is passed or enacted by the legislature consisting of several sections, one section is usually interpreted in connection with and working in conjunction with all the other sections of the law. That is the way I look at the initiative. The initiative is operating under the constitution, not under the initiative alone, but under the constitution, and there are other sections to the constitution. If it is desirable and necessary to have a few exceptions to the initiative, that the reason for it is just as strong as the reason for the initiative. Now, I can't see where there would be many exceptions. On finance and taxation I believe the people should have a say about everything connected with it; on the report of the executive branch, setting up the framework of our state government, I can't think of anything that should be kept from the people -- they should be able to change a form of government if they want; in the judiciary there might be two or three things that would not be quite proper to have the people use the initiative on, because I can't see where they should be able to abolish a court or to change the boundaries of a judicial district. They are amply protected by the recall in case there is some judge that is not performing properly and they think he should be dispossessed, they can recall him; that seems to be enough.

of order. I think Mr. Barr is arguing the proposition of pro or con of the initiative. I don't think that is the subject material that is before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr seems to be arguing on the proposed motion of Mr. White's.

BARR: If this amendment would carry, it would make quite a difference on the way in which the thing works, whether it would encompass everything or only a part. I believe that we should have the two terms distinguished one from the other and that when we refer to the "legislature" we should mean laws by the legislature only, and when we say "initiative" mean initiative, and when we say "by law" we mean one or both, and there are few cases where I believe it is more proper that we say "by the legislature", but I will say that 98 per cent of the time the initiative would apply.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Pursuing Mr. Fischer's position on the initiative and the several references to its adoption, I think it should be noted that the initiative has not been adopted and that the whole problem will vanish if appropriate action is taken when it is in third reading and on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I think the Judiciary who brought this up are split 50-50, if I have been advised rightly, on bringing this issue up. I observe the two men who started this were opposed to the initiative and referendum on the floor, and I am still believing that you can trust the people and you seem to be again afraid of the people. I think it is the checks and the balances and the people have a right to set up the legislature, to have a check and balance on them, and if we continue this line of chain action you will destroy the initiative and referendum, if that is what this body wants to do I am for this body. I saw artful maneuvering the other night, the will of the people thwarted, and I don't like to have an issue destroyed indirectly. If we are going to destroy this referendum let's come out in the open and vote against it. I think this is a chain reaction that would destroy the effect of the initiative and referendum and we would just be kidding the people if we continue this course. Where the initiative and referendum says "legislature" it means legislature; where the initiative and referendum bill says "law" it means law, and I would like to fight it on those grounds on my own position. I am for the initiative and referendum, and we are on a nice way of destroying it by artful maneuvering.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to state again for all of the delegates, all of us, it is not becoming in the opinion of the Chair to refer to any other delegates or actions of other delegates in a derogatory manner or impugn in any manner the reasons for actions of any other delegates on this floor. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, could the Chief Clerk read Mr. White's resolution, or motion, very slowly so we could copy it so there would be no misunderstanding?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed motion.

CHIEF CLERK: "That it be the policy of the Convention to adopt a miscellaneous provision which shall say that 'when the constitution says "the legislature" it means the legislature only, and that when it says "by law" it means by initiative or by the legislature.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross.

CROSS: Mr. President, when we were writing this constitution and these articles we made no distinction between "legislature" and the "law". I am opposed to going ahead and making that distinction now. I can foresee hours and hours of debate on that. Let's get back to the question and vote this down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I won't feel badly at all if this motion is voted down. I merely proposed it as a means of clearing the air and establishing basic policy. Whether or not we agree with Miss Awes that we do or do not need such a provision, I think if you want to exempt a number of things from the initiative we do need such a provision, because there seems to be some doubt among the delegates as to what we have meant in the past when we say "by the legislature" or "by law", and I propose it only as a means of clearing the air.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I was delayed in arriving here and I would like to be allowed not to vote on this subject because I have not heard all the debate. I ask to abstain.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask to abstain? The question is, "Shall the proposed motion as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?"

METCALF: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 18 - Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, McCutcheon, McNealy, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Taylor.

Nays: 34 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Hellenthal, VanderLeest.

Abstaining: 1 - Rosswog.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief

Clerk is tallying the ballot.

CHIEF CLERK: 18 yeas, 34 nays, 2 absent, and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed motion has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I ask on a point of information. The rules were suspended so we could vote on Mr. Barrie White's motion which was to help us arrive at a policy in regard to the use of the terms we were discussing. I have a motion to submit. Does it take, on the same subject but approaching it from the other end, that is to the effect that the words may be used interchangeably wherever applicable as far as the initiative and referendum is concerned. Does that take another suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, if there would be no objection to your so making a motion and having it carried as a majority vote, it would be all right. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order. Didn't this last vote make it perfectly clear how it is to apply? They are actually interchangeable, and I think that is what Mr. White predicated his motion on, was to make it perfectly clear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, your point of order to that point would be well taken, but Mr. Ralph Rivers has raised the question, as the Chair understood his statement, that without some statement such as he proposes, it might not be clearly understood in the constitution. Is that not right? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Point of order. This morning when I had a motion before the Convention it was laid aside pending action on Mr. White's motion. Now, do I not have the right to renew that motion before anyone else does?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, you certainly do, and the Chair forgot.

R. RIVERS: I rise to a point of order, too. The Chair announced when he made his decision that Mr. Johnson's motion was suspended to be acted upon later, he did not say immediately after Mr. White's motion, and once more we are on the immediate question, and I think Mr. Johnson's deferral, I should think, would go until we have arrived at a result.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for a minute or two.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Ralph Rivers, it would take a suspension of the rules at this time, even if there were no other motion.

R. RIVERS: In that case I will not offer my motion or ask to suspend rules and will yield to Mr. Johnson.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed motion as offered by Mr. Johnson.

CHIEF CLERK: "That in Section 1, Section 4, Section 9, Section 11 and Section 13, wherever the words 'by law' are used they be changed to read 'by the legislature'."

JOHNSON: I believe Section 2 was included.

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, Section 2. Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 11 and 13.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That motion included the suspending of the rules and that this amendment be adopted. Mr. White.

WHITE: May I ask Mr. Johnson a question? Mr. Johnson, what does this mean?

JOHNSON: Well, if the motion carries, it would mean that so far as the judiciary article is concerned, it would be subject to change only by action of the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and the proposed amendment of Mr. Johnson be adopted?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

MCNEES: I don't feel the members of the floor have had a chance to peruse these articles as outlined here in 15 or 20 seconds.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees, there had been considerable debate before, no one arose. You may be heard, we have not started the roll call.

MCNEES: I just did not feel we could skip over and say that this wide variety of all articles could be all-inclusive in a vote at this moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair recalls that you were heard on this this morning. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Point of order. We are just voting now on the suspension of the rules. We are not voting on the main question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, Mr. Johnson included this morning in the suspension of the rules his amendment.

COGHILL: His amendment is also a part?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is part of the question before us. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: If I understand this motion correctly, every place it says "law" in here it means "the legislature", is that right? Is it "by law" or "law"?

ROBERTSON: Just in those particular sections that are included in the motion 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 11, 13.

DOOGAN: Is it "by law" or wherever it says "law" that you want to change it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "In Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 11 and 13, wherever the words 'by law' are used they be changed to read 'by the legislature' and move that the rules be suspended."

PRESIDENT EGAN: This is the same motion that was debated at some length this morning. Perhaps that is the misunderstanding that some of the delegates thought it was a new proposed amendment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, my study of the draft convinces me that these are the only sections in the judiciary article where the term "by law" is used, so it would be throughout this article, in every reference, it would be "by the legislature", if this motion carries.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: While I support Mr. Johnson's motion, I contend that Section 11 and Section 13 need not be changed because they are predicated upon a monetary situation, and according to the initiative as it is written at this time they cannot initiate in a monetary fashion, or on monetary subjects.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: It excludes initiating appropriations but it does not exclude legislation which would spend money.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I do not profess to be a parliamentarian, and I would like to raise the question of having a dual motion such as this to suspend the rules and to approve an amendment. I would like to know --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, if Mr. Johnson moved to suspend the rules, 37 votes then would put the question back to where he could then make his proposed amendment and have it carried by a majority vote, but the motion as made by Mr. Johnson was all-inclusive that the amendment be acted upon at that time. Of course, in all fairness, the Chair would state to Mr. Johnson often times you can get a suspension of the rules, whereas if the question is included in that suspension of the rules you might not get the suspension; it is up to you to decide, the Chair would feel, whether or not he wishes to include that.

JOHNSON: In view of the statement of the Chair I have proposed a division of the question and would request that the matter be submitted on the suspension of the rules first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the question would be then on the suspension of the rules first. The question would be, "Shall the rules be suspended in order that Mr. Johnson may offer his proposed amendment?" Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, did you rule on Mr. Johnson's request that the question be divided? He requested it I realize, but did you say --

PRESIDENT EGAN: There was no objection. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order. Again, it is my contention on the point that there is no suspension of the rules required on this matter because it is a change in terminology and not necessarily in substance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, the Chair would feel that it changes the substance definitely for the reason that if Mr. Johnson's amendment he proposes to offer, if the suspension carries, if his amendment carries, it will limit it to being an act of the legislature rather than a possible act also of the initiative and referendum, so it would be a change in substance. That would be the ruling of the Chair. The question is "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

Yeas: 33 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Johnson, King, Laws, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 20 - Coghill, Collins, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McNeese, Marston, Peratrovich, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, White.

Absent: 2 - Hellenthal, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 33 yeas, 20 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rules have not been suspended. Are there other questions with relation to Section 1? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my motion, that is the remainder of the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson asks unanimous consent that the motion be withdrawn. It actually should not have been before us. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I will try it again. I asked for unanimous consent to the suspension of the rules so that I may introduce a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of information. I would like to hear the matter of the motion before I rule on that, or whether I would object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, would you inform the body.

MCLAUGHLIN: It is my intent, if the rules are suspended, to introduce the following motion to be adopted by the Convention or rejected by the Convention: "That it is the intent of the Convention that all provisions of the constitution which include the words 'by the legislature' or 'the legislature', unless clearly inapplicable or unless specifically excluded from the initiative and referendum by the article on the initiative and referendum, shall be subject to the initiative and referendum."

HERMANN: I think the motion ought to be submitted to Style and Drafting. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin asks unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules in order that he may introduce such a motion. Is there objection?

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Did you so move, Mr.

2847

McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 6 - Buckalew, Coghill, Marston, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Hellenthal, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 6 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and the rules have been suspended. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Do I now move, Mr. Chairman?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you submit it to the Chief Clerk please.

TAYLOR: May we have five minutes to look that over, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin.

CHIEF CLERK: "That it is the intent of the Convention that all provisions of the constitution which include the words 'by the legislature' or 'the legislature', unless clearly inapplicable or unless specifically excluded from the initiative and referendum by the article on the initiative and referendum, shall be subject to the initiative and referendum."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Point of order. The other day a rule was adopted in addition to the other rules that we had which said that any amendment that was long would have to be mimeographed and I would like to ask to have this mimeographed.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, may I point out this is not an amendment to anything. It is merely a statement of intent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you still raise your point of order?

COOPER: No, I will withdraw it.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. McLaughlin a question if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Harris, if there is no objection.

HARRIS: Mr. McLaughlin, if the words "by law" are stated I guess that would also apply to the initiative and referendum as well as the legislature?

MCLAUGHLIN: Yes, that is clearly the understanding of this body at the moment that "by the law" makes it subject to the initiative and referendum, if I may speak on this, Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may speak on this, Mr. McLaughlin, but did you so move?

MCLAUGHLIN: I so move.

BARR: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves, seconded by Mr. Barr.

MCLAUGHLIN: Regrettably this is wordy, but the wordiness is necessary so that we cover in most of the problems that confront Style and Drafting. All we are asking is that the Convention notes immediately that where we use in any article, have used in any article the expression "by the legislature" or we have used in any article the proposal, the words "the legislature", unless those things obviously are inapplicable they are subject to the initiative and the referendum unless they are otherwise specifically excluded from the article on the initiative and referendum. What do I mean by that? I mean by that this: where we say "the legislature shall provide", automatically on the adoption of this constitution, Style and Drafting can say, we can substitute the words "by law". It means that where we say "further provision shall be made by the legislature", Style and Drafting upon adoption of this can say they mean "according to law", or "by law" because we automatically have then confirmed, in a sense, the article on the initiative and referendum and said unless you are specifically -- you have been specifically exempted by the article on the initiative and referendum, this section of the constitution where the expression "the legislature" is used is subject to the article on the initiative and referendum and it means "by the law". You have a "yes" or a "no". We don't intend to insert anything in here in the constitution. It is a statement of intent, but it means that now and hereafter Style and Drafting has a clear directive from the Convention. What do I mean here by "unless clearly inapplicable"? I will give you the best example; it has been used before. Certainly we wouldn't intend, where you read in the article on the judiciary that the supreme court may adopt rules which may be, in substance, disapproved by two-thirds of each house of the legislature, because it was obviously meant from that context that that couldn't be subject to the initiative, and so we are clearly indicating here that where we use the expression "by the legislature" or the expression "the legislature" we mean completely, thoroughly and wholeheartedly know that it is subject not only to the initiative but to the referendum, and where it is clearly inapplicable, even 55 idiots would agree that it was inapplicable. That is not a reflection upon the body, Mr. Chairman, if it is, it is upon myself alone. Thank you. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I am afraid I haven't anything witty to say.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson has the floor.

JOHNSON: I would like to point out that while normally I am in agreement with our distinguished Judiciary Chairman, I am afraid here that his motion isn't going to help us a great deal because it certainly does not resolve the problem we are faced with in this judiciary article, and I don't know how to solve that; I tried by a motion but that failed, rather the suspension of the rules failed, and as I said before, I don't see how the adoption of Mr. McLaughlin's motion is going to help us in solving the problem that still, I believe, exists in the judiciary article. The McLaughlin motion may help the Style and Drafting Committee in the future -- I don't know about that -- but certainly so far as the judiciary article is concerned, I don't think that it has resolved the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to support the motion. If it is adopted it will facilitate the work of Style and Drafting, immeasurably. Beyond that I say there is a solution for Mr. Johnson, and the solution is, if he doesn't want the judiciary article to be subject to action by the initiative or referendum, the way to state that and state it unmistakably is to write it in as one of the restrictions on the use of the initiative in the initiative article, and if the body wants to do that, that is the place to put it. I am sure, and I think every man and woman here will agree with me, that as we considered these matters on the floor we did not stop to think each time that the use of the term "by the legislature" or "by law" was used whether we were distinguishing between whether a thing would be subject to the initiative or not. We did use those terms interchangeably. I know they were used interchangeably in my own thinking at least as we looked at the proposals before us. There is one other alternative still before us, and that is when we get around to it we may not even adopt the article on the initiative and referendum. I myself am in favor of it; I think it ought to be in the constitution, but to let Style and Drafting get on with its work it would help greatly in that work if we adopt Mr. McLaughlin's motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: This is a logical sequence and only logical sequence to voting down the motion that I made previously.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, may I ask a question of Mr. McLaughlin?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

COGHILL: On your proposed amendment, let's just take for an example in your local government article on boroughs would the legislature that provides for the performance of services to unorganized boroughs, would that be "the law shall provide"?

MCLAUGHLIN: That would be "it shall be provided by law".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: May I ask a question of Mr. McLaughlin? It wasn't your intent to preclude the Committee on Style and Drafting to occasionally use "by the legislature" just for variety, was it?

MCLAUGHLIN: It was not, but if intelligence conflicts with variety I would say that variety would have to go by the board. Mr. Chairman, I might answer one of the objections that came from Mr. Johnson. If Mr. Johnson, after the adoption of this, wants to raise the question immediately as to whether or not the judiciary article is subject to the referendum, he need merely move to strike all the expressions "be established by law" and substitute the word therein "legislature".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed motion as offered by Mr. McLaughlin be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed motion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed motion is ordered adopted. Are there questions with relation to Section 1? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, in view of the action that has just been taken by the body, I will move that the judiciary article be sent back to Style and Drafting for further consideration in drafting.

TAYLOR: I second the motion and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the judiciary article be sent back to Style and Drafting for further consideration in drafting.

SUNDBORG: Is this debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Recommit, is that your motion, Mr. McCutcheon?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, that is what it amounts to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Recommit is debatable, yes, it is, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: We don't want it back. We have already labored over this for more than two weeks. We have inserted in here "by law". If we get it back that is all we could do, as I can see it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, it just seems to me that this should be recommitted to Judiciary Committee because they know what they mean in each case, and then it should come out on the floor for adoption. They could consult with Style and Drafting, perhaps.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: When the initiative and referendum article finally comes before us, Mr. Barr, I am quite sure our Committee is going to move an exclusion of the formation and jurisdiction of the courts in the judiciary article, but I think we ought to go ahead and clear this and get it into third reading and take the other up in due course.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting on Committee Proposal No. 2 be recommitted back to the Style and Drafting Committee for further consideration?" All those in favor of recommitting the proposal to the Style and Drafting Committee for further consideration will "signify by saying aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposal is before us. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I move that it be recommitted to Judiciary Branch Committee.

MCCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves that Committee Proposal No. 2, seconded by Mr. McCutcheon that the proposal be recommitted to the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Point of information. I would like to ask Mr. Robertson why.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, in answer to Mr. Fischer's question, I submitted the first proposal on a judiciary formation, formation of a judiciary and in it I used the words "by the legislature" and "by law" interchangeably, meaning all the time "by the legislature". The Committee adopted the proposal after we had Mr. Davis and Mr. Taylor, and some others made suggestions, and the Committee here today has assured you that it all meant "by the legislature", not "by the law" and in writing in some places we used "by law" instead of "by the legislature". If it is referred back to the Judiciary Committee I am quite confident that in at least 10 instances, as embodied in Mr. Johnson's motion, we will write in the words "by the legislature". That is why I ask for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I submit that under the rule just adopted a minute ago, Mr. McLaughlin's motion, that no matter whether the Judiciary Committee did write "by the legislature" in there it would have absolutely no effect on the thing because the body has now adopted a rule that when we say "by the legislature" or when we say "by law" we mean exactly the same thing, so it would be absolutely worthless to commit it back with that in mind. Let's get the show on the road and get this article passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I think another reason why it should not be sent back is this proposal came out of Committee and it was adopted by the body. Well, it wasn't adopted by the body, but the body passed on all these sections and evidently approved of them, they quit amending anyway; and I think it has lost its identity with the Committee, and I don't think it should be sent back to them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: You would have to have a motion to suspend the rules to return it to the Judiciary Committee because it is no longer in second reading so far as the Judiciary Committee is concerned.

It is as far as Style and Drafting is concerned.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, you have a point there. The motion to recommit ordinarily takes a majority vote. However, in all good reason that would mean to recommit to its proper committee. Now if the original motion was to recommit it to the Committee on Style and Drafting which would be proper, and it would only take a majority vote. When the floor received the proposal originally and acted upon it in second reading it took its regular course to the Style and Drafting Committee; that motion would have taken a majority vote. The motion that has now been made to return it to another committee would take a suspension of the rules, and the Chair would rule that your point is well taken. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to say that Mr. Robertson --

PRESIDENT EGAN: A suspension of the rules, Mr. Taylor, a motion that entails a suspension of the rules is not debatable. We have to vote, and in voting on this motion it would take a two-thirds majority vote to send it back. In order to carry this motion it is, in effect, a suspension of the rules. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of inquiry. I understand that the purpose for recommitting is to change the "law" to "legislature". Was that referred? Well, we have already acted upon that in our assembly here and voted that down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is all the more reason, Mr. Coghill, why it would take a suspension of the rules to recommit, but the motion to recommit is in order, but it takes a suspension of the rules.

ROBERTSON: Mr. Chairman, I appeal the decision of the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson appeals to the ruling of the Chair. The question is, "Shall the ruling of the Chair be sustained?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

BARR: Point of information. Which ruling of the Chair -- that it takes a suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Barr. The Chief Clerk will call the roll. The question is, "Shall the ruling of the Chair be sustained?"

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 49 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson,

Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg,
 McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston,
 Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich,
 Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 3 - Hinckel, Robertson, Taylor.

Absent: 2 - Hellenthal and VanderLeest.

Abstaining: 1 - Mr. President.)

CHIEF CLERK: 49 yeas, 3 nays, 2 absent and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the ruling of the Chair has been sustained and the question is, "Shall Committee Proposal No. 2 as reported out to the floor by the Committee on Style and Drafting be returned to the Committee on the Judiciary?" The question on the sustaining was whether it takes a two-thirds majority vote to send it back, in effect. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 13 - Barr, Collins, Johnson, Laws, McCutcheon, McNealy, Marston, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Taylor, White.

Nays: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper,
 Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer,
 Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley,
 Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin,
 McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley,
 R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart,
 Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Hellenthal, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 13 yeas, 40 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposal is still before us. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move that the rules be suspended and that the Committee on Style and Drafting be instructed to write in as one of the restrictions in the initiative article the matter of establishment and operation of the courts.

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed motion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Question. Mr. President, is not the motion just a suspension of the rules at the moment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, if Mr. Sundborg moved that this motion be adopted it would take two-thirds or he could move to suspend the rules. Is there objection to the suspension of the rules?

V. RIVERS: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Sundborg, that the rules be suspended?

SUNDBORG: I did move. This is the whole motion, do I understand it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, just the motion to suspend the rules. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, now could we know for sure why we are suspending the rules? What is the purpose?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, would you state your purpose for suspension?

SUNDBORG: My purpose is to have the body instruct the Style and Drafting Committee to write a substantive change into the article on the initiative and referendum; that change to be that the manner of establishment and operation of the courts become one of the restrictions to which the initiative and referendum may not apply.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I would like to have about a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to ask unanimous consent to withdraw my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that his motion for the suspension of the rules be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I will ask unanimous consent that the article we are considering now proceed through the regular channel of business and be referred to the Rules Committee for assignment on the calendar in third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, Style and Drafting has two or possibly three specific amendments that we wish, and there may be other specific amendments, we haven't gotten to that point yet. No one has offered any. We have a couple of amendments of changing a word here and there ourselves.

V. RIVERS: I withdraw my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 1, relating to the substance of Section 1? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Does the body desire me to tell where these sections came from or is everybody thoroughly familiar with them?

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the desire of the Committee? If there are questions on any of these sections you may direct your questions to Mr. Davis, and he will attempt to answer them. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of information. Are we going to question him now purely on the form and the style and drafting involved?

PRESIDENT EGAN: In each section, if you have any question relating to substance or phraseology.

R. RIVERS: I don't think that we are questioning about the substance of these things. I think we are asking him about phraseology unless we wish to challenge them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Right. Mr. Davis, it seems to be the wish of most of the members that as we go through these sections, if they have questions they will ask you. You did very well in the presentation of the whole article this morning. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, it occurs to me that as a member of Style and Drafting, having attended a meeting that we had during the recess, that it might be well for Mr. Davis, on behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee, to present the two or three minor amendments that the Committee felt should be included and get those out of the way. It ought to expedite things.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would that be your feeling, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I intend to do that except I was going to wait for the particular section, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us at the present time Section 1. Are there any other questions relating to Section 1? Are there questions relating to Section 2? Section 3? To Section 4? To Section 5? Section 6? Does any delegate have a question relating to Section 6, or Section 7? To Section 8? Are there questions or objections to Section 9? To Section 10? Section 11? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, there is one question that arose in our hearing on the now Section 10. They wanted to know what the term "incapacitated" might cover. That would cover a multitude of sins, and I would like to ask the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee if he would give a brief explanation of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Coghill, in the course of your inquiry you have already described what "incapacitated" covers. It is a multitude of sins and it was deliberately devised that way because of the fact that in most states you discovered that nobody likes to take a removal proceedings on specific grounds where there is a taint of incompetency, or criminality attached to it, so we used the broad general expression, "incapacitated", to take care of all the ills and evils to which judges, like other mortals, are subject. It is a gracious way out of it.

COGHILL: In other words, by this phrase "so incapacitated" he could be incapacitated for being a Republican judge under a Democratic administration.

MCLAUGHLIN: That would not be incapacitated. It might be as someone suggested, bad judgment. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there objections or questions relating to Section 11? Section 12? To Section 13? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, it occurs to me that Sections 13 and 14 are inconsistent. Section 13 says the justices will be paid and 14 says they cannot be paid. Line 16 says that they shall not hold any office of profit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: We have got that taken care of, Mr. President. Are we on Section 14 now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We might consider them both together inasmuch as Mr. Hinckel raised the question.

DAVIS: Section 14, the Committee proposes adding the word

"other" in line 16 after the word "any" and I ask unanimous consent for the insertion of that word.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I so move.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, my objection is that I don't think there should be any ambiguity in this whatsoever. It says that they cannot hold an office in the political party, or hold any office or position of profit under the United States -- being a state judge is not holding an office under the --

DAVIS: The difficulty is the next word -- the "State".

TAYLOR: It says "while holding office".

DAVIS: Mr. President, I might say that was why it was left out at first. We figured that if a man was holding office obviously he was holding office and we did not need the word "other". But on going over it again since there was a possible ambiguity we thought the "other" ought to be put back in.

TAYLOR: I will withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of Mr. Davis? If there is no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, in the same section, in line 19, the Committee proposes to add the word "another" at the end of the line so it would read, "Any Supreme Court justice or Superior Court judge filing for another elective public office..." Now the reason for leaving it out in the first place was that we felt that, strictly speaking, these offices were not elective positions. It is true we held elections to determine whether they were retained or not, but they were appointments in the first place, so we felt there was no ambiguity, but after discussing it with some of the other committee members again, we felt that to make assurance absolutely sure here that the word "another" should be inserted, and on behalf of the Committee I ask for unanimous consent to place the word

"another" at the end of line 19.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection?

R. RIVERS: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I so move.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson seconds the motion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to state the grounds of my objection. We based this on the Missouri Plan which is the nonpartisan appointment of judges. Since they are appointed in the first place through a screening process, through the judicial council, an appointment by the governor, with the confirmation by the senate; they go to the people for either rejection or approval for another term, but I don't think we can refer to them as elective positions. They are not in partisan elections. I think it makes the ambiguity worse if we stick the word "other" in at that point.

CHIEF CLERK: The word is "another".

R. RIVERS: I just don't think the judges are in another elective position or in any kind of elective position at all. They are under the nonpartisan appointment of judges. The Missouri Plan runs through here, and we actually had the title "nonpartisan appointment of judges", and Style and Drafting knocked it out because they thought it was so self-explanatory in the article they did not want to take up a line for that kind of a heading, so I object. I think we just don't want to throw the implication in here that they are elective offices.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Would the word "any" satisfy your objection, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: I think so. Wait until I think -- where are we here? "For any elective position" would certainly make it all right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I am opposed to Mr. Davis's suggested amendment because I think it gives the implication or the courts to construe occasion where it might consider the supreme court justices and the superior court judges elective positions, and I don't think we should put in the word "another" there.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Robertson, would it be all right if we said "any elected"?

ROBERTSON: Yes. I would agree to "any".

R. RIVERS: Would that be all right with Style and Drafting?

NORDALE: What are you going to do when he files his declaration of candidacy for judge?

R. RIVERS: That is approval or rejection; that does not make it an elective office.

DAVIS: There is nothing in the section that says he cannot file for another partisan election. Now I agree with what both

Mr. Rivers and Mr. Robertson said, this is not an elective office. However, since there seems to be a possibility of ambiguity, certainly it must be because the Committee was unanimous in saying the word ought to be there. For that reason I move its adoption. Along that line, if I understood Mr. Rivers correctly, I thought he said that judges were approved by the legislature. Now if I misunderstood him, I shouldn't raise it. If I did not misunderstand him, that is not the way things work here.

R. RIVERS: I may be mistaken about that. It is just the screening and appointment by judicial council and the appointment, is it not? I am sorry I was in error on that statement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there any other questions or suggestions for Section 13 or 14? Is there objection to not having had a roll call on these particular amendments? Prior to this time there had been no objection, but it should be by roll call to show a two-thirds majority, but if there is no objection for the adoption of any amendment at this time --

DAVIS: These are amendments for style only Mr. President. I doubt that they require only a two-thirds vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You consider them for style only?

DAVIS: Yes. A matter of phrasing only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions or suggestions for Section 15? For Section 16? For Section 17? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, Section 17, as I pointed out this morning, is put in at the end of this article so it can be considered elsewhere, and on behalf of the Committee on Style and Drafting, at this time I would request that Section 17 be referred to the miscellaneous articles and taken from the judicial section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent that Section 17 be taken from this proposal and placed in the miscellaneous provisions. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the Section 17 will be included in the miscellaneous provisions that are now in Engrossment and Enrollment; is that what you would desire, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I think we preferred that the matter come back to Style and Drafting again because this is going to keep coming up in connection with other proposals, and we want to get the language the same in all of them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then, if that is your desire, your unanimous consent request would include that the section be sent back to the Style and Drafting Committee.

DAVIS: Apparently I was in error. The Secretary and Chairman both tell me we intended this to go to Engrossment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to sending it to Engrossment? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I was just going to ask a point of information, and that was on Article 12 which we acted on last night, which was a miscellaneous provision. I wonder if in referring that to Engrossment and Enrollment we might not have held it open for such miscellaneous provisions. Did we do that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, as the Chair remembers our action this morning, the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee was instructed by the body to hold that in their possession until all these provisions would be in their hands so they could include it in their final report from Engrossment and Enrollment.

V. RIVERS: That answers my question, and I understand there will be three or four perhaps, of just such items.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the number of Section 17 be changed by the Enrollment and Engrossment Committee to an appropriate number in order in that miscellaneous provision article. I might say, too, that all of these will come back to Style and Drafting because after that article is out of Engrossment and Enrollment it comes to us next.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will take its regular course to Style and Drafting. Are there other questions with relation to Section 18? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, so far as Section 18 is concerned, we intended that as a transitory provision. We intended, also, to lift that from the judicial section and, am I correct, we want this to come back to Style and Drafting? I would move then at this time that Section 18 as written be taken from the judicial article and be transferred to the committee concerning or considering transitional measures.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that Section 18 be taken from this article and referred to the committee that is handling the transitional measures. Is there any objection? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Point of information. Mr. President, where an article is so transferred, the substance has been passed and approved, and I understand that it then does not come up for reconsideration by the body. Do they do any changing in ordinance and transitory provisions?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, now the question there would be when it is sent, as Mr. Rivers raises the question, it is referred to the committee handling transitional measures, and it will come back to us among the proposals that they will present for our consideration here, but can they change this? We are sending the proposal to that committee for its consideration. Mr. Victor Rivers has raised a question. We have already acted on this in second reading. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Could I make a suggestion? Possibly this could be referred to Engrossment and Enrollment to hold until the remaining transitory provisions reach that Committee.

V. RIVERS: I can see a question in connection with the limiting or not being able to change it somewhat in transitory provisions because they might want to consolidate two or more slightly different points. I will withdraw my request for information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: All right, Mr. Rivers, then if there is no objection the section is ordered referred to the committee considering transitional measures. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Point of personal privilege for just about 15 seconds.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. McNealy.

(Mr. McNealy spoke on personal privilege at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. What is the pleasure of the body as regards Committee Proposal No. 2? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, unless there are some objections I would move that the report of Style and Drafting on the Judiciary Proposal No. 2 be approved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves for the approval of the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting. Is there objection? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Just momentarily, the rules say after a proposal is "accepted" instead of "approved".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair has been looking for the rules. He does not have the proper wording there if it is "accept".

DAVIS: I will change it to "accept".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent that the Convention accept the report of the Committee of Style and Drafting. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Point of information. Does that prevent the amendment of these words "by law" to "by the legislature" either directly or by implication through another provision such as Mr. Sundborg a few minutes ago suggested?

DAVIS: Mr. President, as I understand it now, the next step is third reading where that provision can be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. When we get into third reading, Mr. Robertson, the proposal will be open for direct debate on any portion of it by any delegate and a motion for specific amendment could be made in third reading for sending it back to second reading for specific amendment. If any delegate wished to do so, it would take a two-thirds majority vote at that time of course, to return it to second reading for specific amendment. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I will now move and ask unanimous consent that we adjourn until 9:00 o'clock Monday morning subject to committee announcements.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention adjourn until 9:00 o'clock Monday morning subject to committee announcements.

COGHILL: I object.

V. RIVERS: I so move.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

COGHILL: Mr. President, if I might have the floor on personal privilege for a moment, for a couple of minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Coghill.

JOHNSON: Point of order. There is a motion before the house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are correct, Mr. Johnson. Committee announcements are all that the Chair can allow you.

COGHILL: Under committee announcements your Committee on Administration is coming out with a proposal in regard to the closing ceremonies of the Convention, and we had intended to bring this before the body after our coffee break this afternoon, and that is the objection for the adjournment at this time. It is being prepared.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: In the event the motion carries, the Committee on Ordinances will meet immediately upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: In the event the motion carries, the Committee on Ordinances will meet immediately upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon adjournment, if we adjourn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Are we to understand that we are through with Committee Proposal No. 2 and that it has been referred to third reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will automatically move into third reading if we adjourn, Mr. Doogan; it is the understanding of the Chair. Mr. Davis made a motion to accept the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting; it was never voted on. He asked unanimous consent and Mr. Robertson objected, then Mr. Victor Rivers asked a question; and then a motion was made for adjournment. We have the motion for adjournment before us. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: If this motion should fail, is there any work before us available for the rest of the day?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have the report from the Committee on Administration or further action on this report, but because of the fact that Mr. Davis's motion would still be pending and we have not accepted the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting, Committee Proposal No. 2, we would still be in this same position when we would convene on Monday morning if the adjournment carries. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. on Monday?" All those in favor of the adjournment motion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. We have before us the motion by Mr. Davis to accept --

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting with reference to Committee Proposal No. 2 be accepted by the Convention?" All those in favor -- Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, much as I respect Mr. Davis's good judgment, I hope that the delegates will turn this down. I think this is a very important matter to get straightened out before we get into third reading as to whether or not this court system is going to be nonpartisan, nonpolitical, and I can't believe but what we are injecting the initiative and referendum into it, that we convert away from being an independent, nonpolitical judiciary. I hope they turn it down for that reason so we can think it over until Monday morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I think Mr. Robertson's concern is in regard to a substantive change, and as far as the Committee on Style and Drafting is concerned, it has no authority. It will still be in the position of being subject to change by the whole body on a substantive matter and will have to be returned to second reading to do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I might be inclined to agree with Mr. Robertson but it seems to me that regardless of whether we say "by law" or "the legislature" through this article, as matters stand now, it makes no difference whatsoever. The place to correct it is in the article on the initiative and referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, in supporting Mr. Davis's motion, I want to point out, too, that I expect to support a motion to exclude the creation and the operation of courts from the initiative and referendum when that measure comes before us, Mr. Robertson.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did we not vote on Mr. White's motion that would accomplish that? We voted it down.

R. RIVERS: I know, but we took Mr. McLaughlin's expression of intent and saying that if we do decide to exclude anything from the initiative and referendum we will so state in the article on the initiative and referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposal of Style and Drafting Committee with relation to Committee Proposal No. 2 be accepted by the Convention?"

POULSEN: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the question.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 48 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Kilcher, McCutcheon, Nolan, Poulsen, Robertson.

Absent: 2 - Hellenthal, VanderLeest.)

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher changes his vote to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 48 yeas, 5 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting with relation to Committee Proposal No. 2 has been accepted by the Convention. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, before we have any more motions for adjournment or recess, I would like to address a question to the Chairman of the Rules Committee, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

V. FISCHER: I wonder what is next on the calendar before us, aside from the report of the Administration Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: This afternoon we have only Ordinance 16 which was referred to Rules a few minutes ago and Style and Drafting Committee Proposal No. 2 is now in third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do we wish to proceed with the report of the Administration Committee at this time? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, it would be better I think if we had a coffee break recess, because I don't think the boiler room is done with our report, the mimeographing of it yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Should we continue with this proposal in third reading also? What is the pleasure of the body? If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 3:45.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, we have with us today Mr. H. G. Pope, who is Executive Director of the Public Administration Service which produced our constitutional studies, and Mr. Pope is here at the invitation of the Alaska Statehood Committee to confer with them at their meeting tomorrow, the Executive Board meeting, in regard to studies and with regard to transitional government and I would like to have Mr. Pope come forward and meet the group and have a few words to say to us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Pope, would you come forward, please? (Applause)

POPE: It is, of course, a great pleasure to be in Alaska, and it is, of course, a particular privilege to observe a constitutional convention, a first constitutional convention, the kind of meetings that happen rather infrequently nowadays. It occurs to me that you might be interested in a couple of the staff members who were here before and from whom I have very specific instructions, and that apparently all of you ladies and gentlemen that were very kind to them when they were here. You may remember that we suffered a couple of casualties in connection with our service here. Both John Corcoran and Joe Molkup returned to the office for work this week after their long disabilities and both asked very specifically to be remembered to you in terms of their deep appreciation for the wonderful experience they had for you and their great respect for the work that the Convention was doing and their very best wishes in connection with this. Now if you will allow me, I will go back and observe how this works.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Pope. (Applause) Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, at this time, I would like to ask that we revert to the report of committees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to the order of business of reports of committees. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration, for the past two or three days, has been considering the program for the signing of the document and for the closing ceremony. We have arrived at two or three of the basic things that we will have to consider and at this time I would like to report to the Convention on them and for their consideration. First of all, the Committee on Administration took up the proposition of what time we should have the ceremonies and it was tentatively arrived at that we should set 2:00 p.m., Sunday, February 5, as the time for the ceremony to take place. We are recommending to the Convention that the place be the University gymnasium. We believe for the reasons that the gymnasium is larger than our Convention hall here; that we opened the Convention at the University gym; it is on the campus; we do not believe that we should leave the University campus for the signing ceremony; and we thought that the balcony would afford a better view for television cameras, radio, and press coverage. The Committee on Administration has recommended that a letter be sent to each of the 50 governors, the 48 states, Hawaii and Puerto Rico, inviting them to attend our ceremonies. We recommend that a formal invitation be printed in the number of 3,000, that this invitation be sent to all Territorial and Federal department heads and public officials and that they be distributed individually among the delegates to the extent of 10 to 25. Now we have many reasons for these three items being pressing; one being that time is of essence as we only have two weeks left; the other is that there is program planning; planning in the University faculty to provide for the gymnasium, and the Fairbanks daily paper is contemplating a full edition to the Constitutional Convention at that time. These things, I feel should be settled today so that we can start the program working over the weekend. So with the pleasure of the President, we would like to submit first, the time of the ceremonies and get the approval of the Convention as to 2:00 p.m., Sunday, February 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Convention with relation to the time as recommended by the Committee on Administration? Is there discussion of the proposed time? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: What exactly will we be signing? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

V. FISCHER: Will the whole document be finished by that time? Is that guaranteed?

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration has absolutely no control over that. We are taking the interpretations of the law that provides that one original and four more originals be signed by this Convention. We hope to have six documents signed, five of them will be in type and one will be in scroll on parchment. We felt that these three essential programs would be set up now and by Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, we should be able to line up the whole program.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before we proceed, would the Sergeant at Arms find out if there are any other delegates in the building. Mr. Coghill, you may proceed.

COGHILL: That is all, if that answers the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move that we accept the recommendation of the Administration Committee as to the time and that the ceremony for signing the document be held on Sunday, February 5, at 2:00 p.m.

HERMANN: I'll second that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved by Mr. Sundborg, seconded by Mrs. Hermann, that the time for signing the document be set for 2:00 p.m. on Sunday, February 5. Is there discussion of the proposed motion?

R. RIVERS: I'll ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that that be adopted as the time that the Convention will meet for signing the final document. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, to expedite the program, I will move and ask unanimous consent that the University gymnasium be the place of the program.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the University gymnasium be the place where the ceremony will be held. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I will object, temporarily. I would like to ask Mr. Coghill whether further consideration of this was had by his Committee following this afternoon's meeting of the committee chairmen where an alternate proposal was discussed.

COGHILL: No, it was not. We had talked about the gymnasium in town, we had talked about the gymnasium out here at the University, and we had talked about our Convention room here in the plenary session hall. However, we felt that this room was too small to get adequate coverage, not only by the public but by the press, television cameras, and radio.

SUNDBORG: I do object then. I feel it should be held here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill so moves. Is there a second to the motion?

KILCHER: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Kilcher that the ceremony be held in the University gym. Is there further discussion of the subject? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I feel that the place to hold this ceremony is in this building, preferably in this chamber and if not here, in one of the rooms upstairs. One reason that I feel that this is the appropriate place is that this is the familiar surrounding in which we have worked and drafted this constitution and it seems only appropriate that we have it here. Further than that, there is a movement on foot to name this building Constitution Hall and I believe that we should sign the constitution in this hall. I also think that if we held the ceremony right here we could accommodate several hundred people in the ping pong room, and some hundreds in the gallery here, perhaps others in the rear of the room. We don't have to have the tables; definitely, we won't have them if we meet in the gym and if we moved them upstairs and move the delegates forward a little bit, I think we could possibly get several hundred right in the confines of this room. In addition to that, this room was all wired for sound it would be possible to take care of probably several thousands in the room upstairs who could hear if they could not see the ceremonies, in case there should be that many on hand. I really think it is a more appropriate place than the gymnasium.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I am just a bit worried about Mr. Sundborg's estimates of hundreds in here and hundreds in there and thousands up there. Are you referring to the little people?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there further discussion of the subject? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I am in a way leaning like Mr. Sundborg does and probably the proper place to sign this document is here but I got to thinking about it and I believe that the larger space on the campus should be utilized and I think that probably the gymnasium should be the place and this is the reason: we have been sent here by the Territory of Alaska and when we get through I think that as far as the people of Alaska are concerned, this is going to be quite a momentous occasion for them and I feel that many of them would at least like to be in on the signing of it, at least the witnessing of it, anyhow, and there is not going to be too many of them that are going to be able to get in here to watch it and to many people it is going to mean quite a little and though I feel that we have done all our work here and that this will possibly be named Constitutional Hall, I think that we should give some consideration to the public on the day that the document is signed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, maybe it would satisfy Mr. Sundborg if we came over here and signed at least one copy in this building. Had anyone thought of that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, it seems to me that this hall can still be called Constitution Hall by the fact that we have worked here, regardless of whether we signed the constitution here, but I believe as Mr. Doogan does, and of course as the Committee felt, that we should have the place that could hold the most people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Walsh.

WALSH: Could I ask Mr. Coghill if he conferred with the President of the University about whether he had any suggestions that he might make?

COGHILL: The President of the University has extended his desire to the Convention that any of the services that the faculty can render or provide for the closing ceremonies are at our command which has been throughout the Convention, as such. Does that answer your question?

WALSH: Yes, thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, it was suggested at the chairmen's meeting this noon that there might be an engineer or somebody connected with the University that could give us a reasonably close estimate as to how many people we could seat in this area if there was some rearrangement. Has anything been done about that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Not yet, no.

AWES: I think if we had some idea of how many we could get in here before we vote on this --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I can get those figures. If I may, the Committee on Administration was not sold on the idea of not having it here but the reason why we suggested the University gymnasium: it would still be on the campus; we felt that we had our opening ceremonies there; we could accomodate more people over there; with the visitors that are coming to Fairbanks to see this historical occasion could witness it and there would be plenty of room over there for accomodations, where here they would be crowded and a lot of them wouldn't be able to be an eyewitness of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Should the plans of the Administration Committee be approved and an important outside speaker come from the states for this particular occasion this would hardly be a large enough room. That was not definitely discussed today but should that occur I know that there are going to be hundreds of people from town that will want to come out, not only for the signing ceremony but to hear that speaker. We have a responsibility to the people that sent us here and there are going to be a lot of people who will want to see this thing and I don't believe that even crowding people into these facilities will help the situation, much less to handle radio, television and the press.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, might I inquire who the outside speaker will be, or who they have contacted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could you answer that, Mr. Hilscher? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Before he answers that, I would like to make a statement that I don't care who the outside speaker is. This is not an occasion for an outside speaker. If we are going to have a speaker, it should be somebody from Alaska.

COGHILL: Mr. President, there has been no definite program set up as to outside speakers and the Committee on Administration has not decided one way or the other about having a speaker. The program has been mulled around in the Committee but we have not definitely settled on anything like that yet, so I don't think that has any bearing on the fact of the place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I will withdraw my objection to the place as suggested by the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? The question is, "Shall the University gymnasium be the place where the Convention will hold its closing ceremony?" All those in favor of the University gym as the place for the closing ceremony will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" seem to have it. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, the third thing that the Committee on Administration would like to have aired, and approved or disapproved if it is the will of the Convention, is the fact of the printing of formal invitations; and the Committee has tentatively agreed that there should be 3,000 of these invitation cards printed and we suggest to the Convention that they be sent to all Territorial and Federal department heads in Alaska and to the states and all public officials and for the use of delegates for sending to their constituents in their areas and, also, to each congressman and to each senator. Now, that would take about 3,000 printed invitations and we would like to get the views of the delegates on that matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the delegates as to that suggestion? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I move that we accept the report of the Committee in that respect.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves that the report of the Committee be accepted in that respect. Is there discussion? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Before we vote on this I would like to hear a little more discussion on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. McNees, I'll yield to you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I was just going to make a referral of cost on the invitations, the printing cost. The cost of the invitations to us would be less than $150.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. White.

WHITE: I can't think of any better way to spend $150.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I might add that we have gone to the Commercial Printing Company down at the News Miner and they will print 1,000 of these cards and they are very nice print and they will look very nice -- for $60 per 1,000. That is for 1,000 but I imagine that they will decrease by getting 3,000 and this will allow each delegate to have from 10 to 25 for their own personal use to send to friends and neighbors.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I don't object to the 3,000 invitations or the cost, but there is one thing that comes in here and maybe I'm sticking my neck out. I can see inviting the governor and his assistant but as to sending out a formal invitation to all Territorial officials to be here, it would appear to me that that is setting them apart from the general public and is not quite the right thing to do; and it seems to me they would be included other than the governor and his secretary, would be included in the general provision for the public to be here. After all, they are the servants of the people, such as we happen to be at the moment, and I don't believe they should be set apart any more than the general public is. One other question, though I have no objection to the invitations being printed by the Commercial Printing Company, I just want to ask the Committee, was the other firm considered so that we will get no repercussion on that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: We have not contacted any company as to ordering them yet. We just had to have some sort of price. We went to them because the other company had printed the stationery and we thought that would be a good division point. I might also mention that a public invitation will be in the paper for the public to attend. It is not going to be just exclusively to the people that receive the invitations. It will be a blanket invitation and will be placed in the newspapers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the acceptance of that part of the Committee report that deals with the invitations being sent out? Hearing no objection that portion of the report is ordered adopted. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: One more phase and then we are through. The Committee on Administration thought that it would be nice to send each of the governors of the 48 states and the two territories a letter, not an invitation, just a plain formal invitation, but a letter inviting them to attend our closing ceremonies or our signing of the document. We have that form letter now placed on the Secretary's desk and if this is approved, those letters will go out Monday morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of that part of the committee report? Is there discussion? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Could we have the letter read?

EGAN: Is the letter available at this time? Will the Sergeant at Arms get the letter? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Is there any expense involved in this matter?

COGHILL: There would be about 50 air mail stamps, 50 pieces of stationery, 50 envelopes, and possibly two or three hours time of one of the typists.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to that part of the committee report? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I guess I'm really getting into this. It appears to me that invitations to all of the senators, all of the governors, though it is quite proper, if something were to happen and all of them were to show up here, we would probably have to take this ceremony to Eielson Field in order to include everybody. I am just wondering how far you are going to go with this. Though I can appreciate the impact in inviting the governors and the senators, let's not forget that this ceremony is for Alaska and the people that sent us here. Let's be sure that we give them proper consideration before we expand this thing to the magnitude that we can't handle it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I might assure Mr. Doogan his fears are not alone -- I had the same -- but after talking it over with the Committee and with Tom Stewart, the Secretary, with the time so short, why I don't imagine we will have too many of the Congressmen or the Senators showing up and it is a matter of spreading good will from Alaska throughout the states, people that we are going to have to look to to admitting us to the Union.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would like to take this occasion to speak on the question before us but in a little broader terms. The reason for holding a constitutional convention is to prepare the way for statehood. The correlation of that is to hasten the day when we will obtain statehood. It has concerned me very much since the opening day of this Convention that we have possibly been overlooking a golden opportunity for promoting the cause of statehood because of the occasion of this Convention. And it appears to me that anything the Administration Committee or anyone else can come up with in this connection that will impress upon the people of the United States our desire for statehood, make them aware of what we are doing, is all to the good, and I hope that they will take this merely as a starting point and go on from there. Should all the 48 governors see fit to show up, all the United States Senators and the Congressmen, up to and including the President, I think it would be the best thing that could happen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, could I inquire if the President of the United States has been included in that? I haven't heard him mentioned this afternoon.

COGHILL: Yes, he would be included, not in the letter, but just in the printed invitations.

LONDBORG: I see. I was wondering if it wouldn't be fitting to send him a letter, also. Sort of follow up that telegram that was sent awhile ago.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, may I direct a question through the Chair to Mr. Coghill?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: In light of Mr. Doogan's objection, would the Committee consider sending these out by regular mail, three-cent stamps and they will receive -- (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Do I have to answer that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Convention as regards to these letters?

COGHILL: I have the letter, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you please read the letter, Mr. Coghill.

(Mr. Coghill read the sample letter that was to be directed to the governors of the 48 states and two territories.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: This is a small matter but I am slightly puzzled by that "humility mixed with pride". I wonder if --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, the Chair would like to say that he didn't write the letter. (Laughter) Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I didn't raise an objection to anything that the Administration Committee has done. The one thing that I am concerned with is that this thing doesn't get to the point where we can't handle it. I have been mixed up in a few clambakes myself, and I have seen them get to the point where they have reached the exclusion of the people that are most concerned with it, and that is what bothers me; and if you fix this ceremony up so that you exclude the general public of Alaska, not by not inviting them, but by having so many other people here that they can't get in and see what is going on, you are going to cause a great deal of resentment. I have seen it happen before; I would hate to see it happen here because we need all of the support we can get from the people of Alaska to make our position strong before the Congress of the United States.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, may I say that we still have several copies to sign and we can go through in shifts if we get that many people. I think it would be wonderful.

HURLEY: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention adopt that part of the committee report that seeks to send a letter to the 50 governors in the United States and its territories?" Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, it comes to my attention that since Congress is in session these days, I wonder whether it might not be shooting too high or bordering to the ridiculous, almost, to send these invitations?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor of adopting that part of the committee report signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and that part of the committee report is adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to suggest that on the end of the letter that the President will send, that he request that these governors, if they intend to come or are going to come, to notify us so that we can be prepared and will know how many are coming and can make some publicity use of the fact that "Governor so-and-so" will be here. My own belief is that we will have very few, if any, governors and we will certainly have no Congressmen here, but I believe it is a good public relations effort which you have outlined.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I suggest that before the President signs the letter that he submit it to Style and Drafting and strike "humility".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection it will be referred to Style and Drafting. (Laughter) The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, that is the extent of our committee report at the present for the closing ceremony. We will have the remainder, possibly by Wednesday of this coming week.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, subject to committee announcements, I move that we adjourn until 9:00 o'clock Monday morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell moves that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. on Monday. Are there committee announcements? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon adjournment at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon adjournment in the gallery. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the Committee on Ordinances will meet immediately upon adjournment, just long enough to set a time for a meeting tonight and tomorrow afternoon, and I want all the members of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Ordinances immediately upon adjournment. Are there other committee announcements, if we adjourn? The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. on Monday?" All those in favor of adjournment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying no. The "ayes" have it and the Convention stands adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 23, 1956

SIXTY-SECOND DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning Major Robert A. Wood of the Air Force at Ladd Field. Major Wood is a member of the Presidency of the Fairbanks branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Major Wood will give our daily invocation.

MAJOR WOOD: Our kind and gracious Heavenly Father, we come before Thee at the beginning of another week full of opportunity for the delegates at this Constitutional Convention, and we pray, Father, that Thy guiding Spirit will be with them, that the spirit of friendship which prevails here this morning will prevail throughout the remaining days of the Convention. It is likely, Father, that in the course of conducting the important business before this Convention there have been words said which have cut into the hearts of some of those present. We ask, Father, that those who have been hurt be struck with the true spirit of forgiveness and that they be moved to dig a grave deep in the depths of their soul, a spot where they can bury these hurts never to become forward again. We pray, Father, that we have Thy blessing on this meeting, and we do it in the name of Thy Son Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew is here; Mr. Kilcher is here; Mr. McLaughlin is here; Mr. Emberg is here.

CHIEF CLERK: Four absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Mr. Fischer is here. A pen has been found in the faculty lounge upstairs. If it belongs to any delegate they may come up and get it. Are there any communications, petitions or memorials from outside the Convention?

(The Chief Clerk read a telegram from Mr. William L. Paul, Grand President of the Alaska Native Brotherhood, opposing deletion of Section 5 from the resources article.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed.

(The Chief Clerk read a letter from the Tanana Valley Sportsmen's Association, Fairbanks, expressing objection to and recommending corrective action in the case of certain constitutional matters. The Chief Clerk also read a letter from the University of Alaska Wildlife Club, recommending the inclusion of provision for wildlife administration in the constitution.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communications will be filed. Are there other communications? Are there reports of standing committees? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, your Style and Drafting Committee would like to report to you that it needs more time in which to work on the many proposals which are now in that Committee. We worked throughout the weekend and we are about ready to report two or three more proposals to the floor, but we will need possibly five or six hours today, probably, in order to do that, and I was wondering if we could establish a schedule for the Convention for the plenary session that would let us have that time in which to proceed because, as I see our calendar, until the Style and Drafting Committee can get some more proposals out on the floor, there won't be too much for the Convention as a whole to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, if the Chair may, are there one or two proposals in the boiler room at the present time?

SUNDBORG: There is one in the boiler room which should be out before noon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was wondering if it might be -- we have in third reading Committee Proposal No. 2. If we could proceed with Committee Proposal No. 2 in third reading, then if it would be your wish to recess, say, until 1:30, and the other proposal would then be ready for our consideration in third reading. Would that help?

SUNDBORG: It would. It has been the policy of the Rules Committee that after a proposal is reported by the Style and Drafting Committee that there be an overnight period for consideration of it by the delegates before it is actually taken up on the floor, so we had in mind that if we could have, say, six hours today we could have possibly three others besides the one which will be ready at noon, and they could all be reported to you today and that would clear them all for consideration in the plenary session tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have a meeting scheduled for tonight, also, Mr. Sundborg. The Chairman of the Rules Committee is not here at this time.

SUNDOBRG: I haven't looked at the calendar. I don't know just what is on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It shows Committee Proposal No. 2 and Committee Proposal No. 16. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I am the Vice Chairman of the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Vice Chairman is present then. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. Riley was ill yesterday and probably was not able to make it this morning. He had rather a severe cold.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, what is wrong with recessing now until 7:00 o'clock? That will give the Committee all day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is anything else that can be accomplished by the delegates, the Chair certainly doesn't feel that, unless it is absolutely necessary, to recess all day, why if there is anything else we might consider BUCKALEW: Well, Mr. President, from what Mr. Sundborg says if we don't recess today and give them time to get these proposals in order, we are not accomplishing anything.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a minute or two.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there any resolutions to come before us at this time? If not, we have Committee Proposal No. 2 as reported to the Convention by the Committee on Style and Drafting before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will read the proposal.

(The Chief Clerk read the entire proposal at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee Proposal No. 2, the judiciary article, is now before us in third reading and open for debate prior to the vote that will be taken on its final passage to become a part of the constitution. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I am going to vote "yes" for the adoption of the Committee Proposal No. 2. Personally, I fear very much its rejection by the people and also by Congress due to the failure of the Convention to change the words by law" to "by the legislature" in accordance with Mr. Johnson's motion of last Saturday.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further debate? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, this isn't debate. I merely want to ask if in Section 4 licensed to practice law" means the same as "admitted to the bar"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: That was a change made in Style and Drafting. It was generally agreed that it meant the same thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does any other delegate desire to be heard on this proposal? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Robertson a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, if there is no objection.

SMITH: I would like to know on what you base your fears. Has any such action been taken in the past?

ROBERTSON: Well, I answer that question, Mr. President, by stating that is my personal thought on the matter, but I can't believe that Congress is going to agree to a proposal that submits to a mass vote the question of jurisdiction of the courts. That is a matter of scientific investigation and you can't campaign on that kind of an issue before the people. That is something that a small group of people, of men and women like the legislature, should give very careful thought and consideration to and decide entirely on a nonpolitical basis.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am going to certainly vote for this. I think this article is a very fine coverage of the judiciary and represents the best in thinking and experience. Along these thoughts expressed by Mr. Robertson, I propose to advocate something under initiative and referendum whereby the jurisdiction of the courts shall not come under the initiative or referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, I could probably talk for two or three hours and there is ample material to talk against this bill for two or three hours or two or three days. I am going to be brief and I hope that the proponents of the bill will find a way in their speaking so that they can be as brief as I intend to be. In fact, I could sum up all I have to say in two words, "no good". I do want to just hit a few of the high spots in this matter, though. It has been amusing to me to hear delegate after delegate come on the floor and talk about the rights of the people. They want to give the people this right; they want to give them the initiative and referendum; when it suits the purpose of the delegate speaking, then he is interested in the rights of the people. When it doesn't suit his purpose, then he doesn't believe the people should have the right. I think that is a foregone conclusion that in the Convention here, which has served its purpose not only in this, but in other matters that have been before the body. Now, if we are going to give the people any rights, we have gone along under this appointive judge system as far as Alaska is concerned since the beginning of the Territory; we want to give the people some rights; then give them the right to elect these judges because after all these judges are the people who are going to judge the people. This way the people, in no way you read it, or no matter how you state it, this article does not give the people any rights in regard to appointing these judges. The most ridiculous thing would be statements of the proponents of this bill that while these judges have to run against their records and the people have something to say. Well, it is an old maxim among lawyers that judges never die and seldom retire, and so you are not going to get rid of them that way, and when they run against themselves the greatest way to get them elected would be a little bit of opposition by a group. Supposing the bar association, the attorneys, knew that a judge was bad and wanted to get rid of him. If I were a judge, just before I was ready to run for re-election or to run against myself I would get the bar association good and burned up at me and ask them to come out in the papers against me and then the general public would vote me back in by probably the biggest vote that was ever cast in that particular type of election. We get into a matter that they say is nonpolitical. It is nonsense to say it is nonpolitical. It is the most political situation and fraught with all sorts of elements which make for politics here. You start out with three laymen appointed by the governor. Now, regardless of the governor, what party politics he has, he is going to certainly name the three laymen that are friendly to him, and in addition they are obligated to the governor for his appointment or for their appointment. Then when it comes to nominating the various judges, don't think the governor is not going to have something to say with these three laymen. Then we get down to the four lawyers, etc. Now these four lawyers are going to make it a nonpolitical situation -- maybe that is the idea -- three lawyers chosen by the bar association. I am a member of the Alaska Bar Association; I should say that all are hearts and flowers in the Bar Association; no politics are going to be involved there. I hesitate in belonging to this closed corporation of union of attorneys, I don't want to comment too much on the politics that does and can go on within that body. But if you think that politics isn't going to be played with the Bar Association -- I grant the fact that the Bar Association is not going to stand for picking out some ignorant and inexperienced attorney and putting him up as one of the representatives. They are going to undoubtedly pick out good men, men with knowledge of law, but lawyers have politics, too, you know. They are Democrats and Republicans, and while the law is a jealous mistress, politics is also a jealous mistress, and any attorney who is a Republican and there is a Republican that he can see is going to be nominated and put in as a judge, he is certainly going to work toward that end. We get into the situation where you are going to have four lawyers including the chief justice controlling this judicial council, and I say this to you laymen in all fairness, that in my opinion four lawyers should be able to control this judicial council; but let's remember the chief justice is going to owe his appointment to the governor. He is going to owe obligations to the governor. All the governor is going to have to do, if he can control the chief justice and the three laymen, he makes all the appointments; if the bar association can control the chief justice and the three lawyers on this judicial council, they are going to make all the appointments. I sincerely hope that this judicial plan, as we have here, is considered seriously. The elective plan of judges has worked successfully in the states, all reports not to the contrary. We have had an offer here of something new, something different from the Committee, and, I am sorry to say, the lawyers have been carried away with the plan. My main purpose in speaking against it now is not because I believe that anything that I say is going to influence one single vote upon this floor, but I do want the members of this Convention, when you see politics in future years to come, if this constitution goes into effect, I want it remembered at least that I made the statement here when you see politics mixed up in your judges and the possibility of a Pendergast machine being set up here in the Territory, this Missouri Plan we have certainly makes it very possible, and at that time I will want to always remember, and thank the delegates for this, that they made it possible to amend this constitution fairly easy, at least within ten years after it is adopted, we will have a chance to amend this Missouri Plan out from the body of an otherwise good constitution. I would hope against hope that this judicial article would be forced to crawl back into the burrow from whence it came.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further debate? Does any other delegate wish to be heard on this subject of Committee Proposal No. 2?

McCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If not, the question is, "Shall Committee Proposal No. 2, the article on the judiciary, be adopted as part of the Alaska state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes. Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 6 - Coghill, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Poulsen.

Absent: 2 - Buckalew, Riley.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I change my vote from "no" to "yes", please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon changes his vote from "no" to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 6 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the article on the judiciary has become a part of Alaska's state constitution. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I am wondering, in accordance with our rules is that now referred back to Style and Drafting for placement in the final constitution?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Sundborg. Mr. Sundborg, did you wish the floor at this time?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I desire to bring up now and move that we rescind our action with respect to Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 12. I gave notice on Saturday that I would make this motion, and the specific action which I moved that we rescind was that in which we changed the word "shall" to the word "may" in Section 1 which refers to the establishment of a merit system for state employees. I now move we rescind the action taken when we adopted that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves that the Convention rescind the action taken when it considered the amendment changing the word "shall" to "may" on the first line of Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 12. Is there a second to the motion?

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind its action taken in adopting the amendment referred to?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, is the article debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: A motion to rescind is debatable, yes, Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: It seems to me that if we change that to "shall" we are actually writing in here legislation, very definitely so. I think one of our purposes, and I think the mover of this rescinding action has reminded us of many a time, that we are to have this constitution as simple as possible and leave legislation out. Now the other day we failed to pass an amendment to the resources article to legislate in favor of a certain group of people known as the Natives of Alaska, because it would sort of protect a certain few people. We wanted to keep from showing partiality. I don't know what this does to put this mandatory in the constitution but legislate for a certain few people. They are employees, the same as probably the majority of the people here at this Convention. We go out and work on a job; we work at the pleasure of the one that hires us. If they don't want our services any more they can fire us. It is up to us to produce. Here we intend to legislate the writing in our constitution that the legislature must set up something. I think the legislature will take care of this anyway, but to write it in here that they must do it is setting up a sort of protective wall around a certain group of people that happen to be working for the state government. It is called a merit system, but very often it doesn't work that way. A man gets into office and he can have a whole staff under him that aren't even sympathetic with his ways and views. They know the ropes, the ins and the outs, and they can work often very contrary to his wishes, make things pretty hard for him. He can't fire them, he can't replace them; he is stuck with them. But here in our constitution now if we rescind our action we are putting a protective wall around a certain group of people. We didn't do it the other day, I don't see why we should do it today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, if I remember correctly, the other day we had a vote on deleting this section altogether from the proposal. That amendment was defeated and the section was left in. It seems to me that if we have something like this in the constitution, if we use these three lines we should keep the word "shall"; otherwise, we are just wasting three lines in the constitution altogether. The word "may" doesn't mean anything. The legislature has the power anyway. As long as we have in there that makes it completely senseless. If we believe in the merit principle we should put in "shall". Otherwise, this has no meaning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I would just like to say that I think there is no intent to favor any small group of people. To me it is merely a matter of stating that we do not believe in a spoils system for our Territorial employees. And I think we would be very wise to rescind our action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I don't think anybody is, in principle, opposed to the merit system. The merit system is incorporated into the federal scheme of things through the civil service. It is a system by which persons who are to be employed by the state are employed on the basis of their ability rather than who they might know or what pull they might have or how they voted in a recent election. I have had some personal experience with the merit principle as it is made to apply to three agencies in our Territorial government which it must do in accordance with federal law for such agencies as participate in federal funds. I was for a year and a half the supervisor of the Alaska Merit System, and I know that it can work and it does work. Persons who desire employment are treated alike. They are given written and oral examinations to determine whether they are qualified for the positions to which they aspire. There is a regular integrated program of salaries as between various positions so that not the legislature, not the head of an agency, can say that this person shall get so many dollars per year and that one so many, without any reference to what the person is doing or what he is producing. The converse of the merit principle is the spoils system, and anyone who doesn't want to have a merit principle incorporated in our state government system must, I think, be in favor of a spoils system. I agree with Mr. Fischer that if we are going to say "may" we might as well drop that section entirely from the constitution because it is meaningless if the legislature already has the power to provide if it desires to do so. I would hope that instead of that we will direct through the constitution that the legislature "shall" provide such a system so that the state government in Alaska will be one in which all of the people who are working are people with ability and people who are entitled to hold the positions they have on the basis of their merits rather than on the basis of their politics.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart?

STEWART: Mr. President, is this broad enough so that it includes not only commissioned officials in the Territory, or does it include laborers or anyone who works for the state in any capacity?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, could you answer that question?

SUNDBORG: Every merit system, including the United States Civil Service, is set up so as to have certain exceptions from it. For instance, there is an exception usually for the top man, that is the head of each department. The governor, in the case of that man, can say who it is he wants because that is a man who is making policy and his policy should conform to that of the chief executive. There are usually also exceptions for those who work by the day, for those who have only temporary employment, and sometimes for the secretary or chief assistant of the head of the agency. The answer to Mr. Stewart's question is that in any such system there are exceptions, but the exceptions are governed by a system. That is, it isn't up to the agency head himself to say "I want this one governed by the merit system and this one not. It is set up so it is the same for every agency of the government, and I know it is workable; I know that it does not saddle any agency with people who are not able to perform their duties. On the contrary, it insures that those who are employed will be qualified to do the work for which they are being paid.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I disagree with the answer that Mr. Sundborg just gave. I think that if you change the word to "shall" it becomes mandatory then for the legislature to provide a merit , principle system under which we have the employment of persons by the state. Now that means everybody employed. There is no differentiation between one class of employees or the other. It covers person employed by the state. I think we ought to vote "no" on this rescind motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Just to bring this question to a decision, I will move to amend it by saying employment other than temporary".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, in writing the article on the executive branch the Committee always used the word "employees" meaning those employed under the department heads, and whenever they meant an appointed department head they said "public officer or "officeholder", and this merit principle is supposed to apply to the employees, meaning to permanent employees. I agree entirely with what Mr. Fischer said as to the necessity of this article. The Committee originally said the legislature "shall" provide for a merit system because they thought it was to the best interests of the public and to the employees. Mr. Londborg says that we are legislating for a select few. Well, I would like to point out this is an executive article and it deals with a select few. It is setting up a framework of government for the state and it is dealing with the employees and the officers of the state only; and it was felt that it would be better to have a merit system to keep the employees out of politics. It was recognized, of course, that the governor should have his appointees serve as department heads, so he could work with his own team.

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, your point of order.

McCUTCHEON: How does Mr. Barr substantiate his assertion that this is keeping employees out of politics? I don't see anything in here that prevents employees from getting into politics clear up to his neck.

BARR: It keeps his position out of politics --

McCUTCHEON: You are not inferring that this is a small Hatch Act?

BARR: No, no, no. I meant that the security of his position is kept out of politics. He couldn't be fired for political reasons. It won't keep him personally out of politics. In fact, it is impossible to keep anybody out of politics that want to get in it, but his position is secure. The legislature can provide for any kind of merit system; it depends on how they write it. I do not defend the type of merit system where an employee cannot be fired if he is inefficient, or if it takes a year to hold hearings in order to discharge him. That is not the proper kind of a merit system but we don't have to have that kind. We do want a merit system whereby a man's position is secure if he is efficient and does his work, and that will provide the state with experienced employees. It isn't a complete change of employees every time new governor gets in. I believe that we should use the word "shall"; it is to the benefit of the public and the benefit of the employees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: There is no question in my mind that if the word "shall" is not included in it you might just as well throw it out. It is useless. I was largely responsible a number of years ago for the introduction of a merit system bill in the house. It passed the house and went to the senate and was amended there to appropriate $2,000 or $2,500 to make a study. The study came back in which, as I recall, it was said there was a good reason to have a merit system in the Territory. At present the three largest departments we have in the Territory are under the merit system. It does work a certain hardship on those people due to the fact that other departments can pay higher salaries. Now, the Legislative Council, at the present time under instructions from the last legislature, is making a very thorough study of the merit system with the idea of introducing a bill at the next session of the legislature to take care of that, and therefore, if the word "shall" is deleted and the word "may" put in you might just as well throw it out, because you are just taking up space in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to speak on the point of law: would this necessarily cover temporary employees. Mr. Stewart is quite concerned about this and would it cover all employees? This language speaks only of the establishment of employment by a merit principle. Now, I regard that as a general directive to establish a merit system, but all the details would be spelled out by the legislature, and I want the record to show that if I vote for the word "shall" it is not on the theory that every temporary employee is going to be under the merit system. It is going to be on the theory that the legislature has the power to spell out the details.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would like to speak in favor of retaining the word "may" because regardless of how we speak in the record here, I read this section as saying that the employment of persons, all persons by the state shall be governed by the merit principle. I don't think that means a system that will allow large and varied exemptions. I think that was pointed out in debate the other day, and I think that is one reason why we voted to insert the word "may". I think the other reason we voted to insert the word "may" is that it was pointed out that passage of such a system has proven difficult and lengthy in the past and may well prove difficult and lengthy in the future and that in the meantime employees of the state could come back to this section and say, "Look here, I am supposed to be employed under the merit principle, and I am not so employed." I think, contrary to some of the debate here, that if the word "shall" is inserted, then we should vote to strike the section. I think, although the section is powerless with the word "may" in it, it serves a useful purpose in indicating to the future legislatures what the feelings of this body were as regards to the merit principle. It shows that we recognize the difficulty in dealing with it in the constitution. For that reason, and that reason alone, I feel that it serves a useful purpose as it stands with the word "may".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a couple of minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the motion to rescind our action on the amendment to Section 1. Is there further discussion? Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I would concur in the statement made by Mr. Sundborg as to the merit principle. If we substitute here the word "shall" all we are doing, in substance, is providing that we won't be under a spoils system. I think, perhaps, there is a misapprehension in the Convention as to what the merit principle consists of. The merit principle, in substance, merely determines that political considerations will not be the determinant for the selection, and all we are doing is repudiating the idea of the spoils system. From somewhat limited knowledge, I know in most states of the Union, not only do they have, if they so desire, if you adopt this can you have a large exempt class, but you can have many varieties of what they call classifications and not necessarily even that. But you can have classifications classifying all applicants for service into various categories, some of them not requiring examinations, some possibly limited, but you can adopt the merit principle without examination, and it is certainly not my intent when I vote for "shall" to blanket in any large group of individuals permanently into the civil service. Another problem that has arisen is the question many people complain about embedding public employees into their jobs. You have poor civil service systems and you have good ones. That is something that should be left entirely to the legislature. When you vote for "shall" you merely vote for the principle that you are opposed to the spoils system, and if you are in favor of some method of selection whereby you won't have on your payrolls people whose only obligation to government is to vote for those in power on election day. They shall be secure in their jobs, and not subject to political dismissal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, you've had the floor once, is that correct?

WHITE: I want to ask a question of Mr. McLaughlin.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. McLaughlin, if we reinsert "shall" here and it takes, now let's say for the sake of argument, two sessions of the first state legislature to pass such a system, will any employees of the state who may have been discharged prior to the passage of such a system have any complaint against the state under this section?

McLAUGHLIN: I would normally say "no"; that they would not have as long as it was not by political consideration. I think that we have committed ourselves far more by having adopted Section 2 than we would ever commit ourselves by adopting Section 1. We have bound ourselves now by contract to these retirement funds under Section 2. We bind ourselves to very little under Section 1.

WHITE: Mr. President, the retirement system is something that now exists, is it not?

McLAUGHLIN: Yes, but the retirement system as it now exists can be repudiated, but we, by adopting this, as soon as it goes into effect, have, in substance, made it a contract which the state cannot break and cannot impair and, hence, we are stuck with it forever because we have made it a contractual relationship which the state cannot change. So, actually, we have gone for more, without the "may" in Section 2, and I agree with the action of the Convention, than we ever would by changing "may" to "shall" in Section 1. In fact, the other day I voted to have Section 1 stricken as it read because I frankly believe that it is just excess verbiage in the constitution, and I still believe that if you don't adopt "shall" the whole thing should be stricken as a mere pious exclamation meaning nothing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Nolan a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question.

LONDBORG: You mentioned a little while ago that they have at least a partial merit system and that the Legislative Council is working on a merit system now. Is that correct?

NOLAN: That is correct.

LONDBORG: Does it seem that within the next year, or two or three years, that there will be a merit system in the Territory?

NOLAN: As far as I can judge the sentiment in the legislature seems to be going that way, stronger all the time.

LONDBORG: In other words, whether this was in or not, you feel that with the growing sentiment that we will have a merit system?

NOLAN: Eventually I think we will by action of the legislature, but whether it will be at this session or the next one it is hard to tell.

LONDBORG: I think that is fine and that further substantiates the fact that I think this is legislative material here then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I ask the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. McLaughlin, a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Under this Section 1, where we insert the word "may" for "shall", would that then bind the article that we have just passed on the judiciary on the incapacitation of the judges to the point of the merit system?

McLAUGHLIN: Definitely no. Definitely no, no more than it binds the government to provide a pension for the governor of the Territory, particularly after he is impeached. The merit principle does not necessarily mean retirement. It is merely the nature of your employment, how you secure it and how you hold it, and it is a repudiation of the Jacksonian theory that "To the victor belongs the spoils." And when you say "shall" you repudiate the theory that the spoils belong to the victor in terms of jobs in the government.

COGHILL: In other words, you feel then that in order to protect the future employees of the state we should have "shall" in there?

McLAUGHLIN: In order to protect the state itself we should have "shall" in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I close, briefly? Mr. President, I think practically everything that can be said about this has been said. I can say definitely that it is in language which I think is identical with this or at least is very similar to that of the three agencies which now operate on the merit principle in our Territory which were ordered to do so by the federal government, and that system, the Alaska Merit System does provide exemptions of all temporary employees, all part-time employees and the heads of agencies. I want to say that to my knowledge there has been discussion in the Alaska legislature, at least since the 1941 session, which is now 15 years ago, of shouldn't we have a merit system, and most of the members seem to think we should, but they never get around to doing it. They have not got around to doing it yet, even though they are making a study of it, and it's well advanced. I would like to see us direct that the legislature "shall" establish such a system so there will be no doubt about it. On this matter of perpetuating in their jobs, people who will not be sympathetic or will not be able to do the work as the heads of the agencies desire, any employee under a merit system can be discharged for cause. A man isn't frozen into his job permanently just because he is hired under a merit system. If he isn't working in the way that the head of the agency and the merit agency of the state requires, according to job specifications, he can be relieved of his responsibilities in very short order, and that is as it should be. I will move, unless we do change "may" to "shall", I will move to rescind our action on having this in the constitution at all, because it is absolutely meaningless as it stands. If we put "shall" back in, it is meaningful, and I think, speaks for the best aspirations and best standards for a good state government which we hope we are going to have in the future.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Could I ask Mr. Sundborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

COGHILL: Mr. Sundborg, the merit principle, is there a legal definition for it like you take in our apportionment plan we have a legal definition for the plan that we prescribe. Is there a legal definition or a given definition through government circles on the merit principle, or is it something that the legislature will devise themselves?

SUNDBORG: I believe there is a well-recognized meaning for this term "merit principle". I am not able to say what it is here in just so many words, but it is the principle of people being employed according to their merits, and the legislature would have wide discretion, I would say, in exactly what it shall include in the way of provisions in the system, but it would have to set up a system which would be governed by the merit principle.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you vote "yes" on this motion to rescind you will return to Section 1, line 1, the word "shall" to that section; if you vote "no" you will retain the word "may". The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind its action taken in changing the word "shall" to "may" in line 1 of Section 1?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight. Lee, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Coghill, Cooper, Hinckel, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, Marston, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, White.

Absent: 2 - Buckalew, McNealy)

CHIEF CLERK: 40 yeas, 13 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the Convention has rescinded the action on the amendment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, under notice which I gave Saturday, I would now like to move that the Convention rescind the action taken in striking Section 5 from Committee Proposal No. 8/a which is the article on resources.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves that the Convention rescind the action taken in deleting Section 5 from Committee Proposal

No. 8/a. Is there a second to the motion?

BOSWELL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Boswell. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I want to say and announce now that if we rescind the action, I will move to amend the section to strike the words "and administration" from line 10. As the section read before we struck it entirely from the article, it said: "Regulation and administration of the commercial fisheries and of the wildlife, including game fish shall be delegated to a commission or to separate commissions under such terms as the legislature shall prescribe." I will move to strike "and administration" so that we would say: "Regulation of commercial fisheries and of the wildlife...shall be delegated to a commission or commissions." I mention this because I think there are many here, perhaps a majority, who feel that in accordance with the provisions of our article on the executive that the administration of any agency should be integrated into the whole state picture and should not be allowed to run on its own; whereas, I think there is no one here who would contend that the regulation of such things as the fisheries and the wildlife should be done by a single individual or by an agency which would not have a commission.

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: What is the debate now? Are we discussing the motion to rescind or are we discussing an amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, Mr. Sundborg was explaining that if the motion carries what he will do.

KILCHER: I think he is out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You might have a point there.

SUNDBORG: I will drop that line of argument then and simply say that I do feel strongly, as I said the other day, that a section such as Section 5 belongs in our constitution. We do have wonderful fisheries and wildlife resources. They are not matched by any other area in North America. I believe they are in jeopardy unless we have a section such as this included in our constitution. We have been asked by representatives of thousands of the citizens of the Territory to include something of this nature. I might say I don't care one bit what the Alaska Native Brotherhood, or the Alaskan Sportsmen's Association, Mr. William L. Paul or Mr. Boddy or anybody else who has communicated with us wants us to do, except insofar as I feel that the thing they ask us to do is right. I do feel that in this case the thing they are asking for is right and that this has a place in our constitution and that we are probably letting our sons and grandsons down if we do not include something which will insure that the wildlife heritage of Alaska will be perpetuated under the state government. It has happened in state after state after state. They have seen their wildlife and their fisheries exploited and decimated to where there was little left and then they have written something like this into their constitutions. In the case of Missouri they called a Constitutional Revision Convention just for the purpose of writing something like this in. We have the unique opportunity here of having it in from the beginning and seeing that we do not place these wonderful resources, one of the things that makes Alaska unique, in position where they might be destroyed. Now, I can't think of any other way that you could regulate such resources except by a commission or board. I can't foresee that we would ever want to place it in the hands of one man the right to say that the season on grouse shall be "such and such" and king salmon may be fished for in "such and such" inlet between these certain dates. I think you need a commission in order to administer wildlife of that kind, and I think it is being done everywhere, where it is being done successfully, by a commission. Why not write it right into the constitution since I think it is what we are going to have anyway, and see that we are protecting this invaluable resource.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, it was my thought that we had made certain amendments or adopted certain committee amendments to that Section 5 which Mr. Sundborg didn't read. I wonder if the Clerk would read us the section as it was before we struck it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the section exactly as it was at the time the move was made to strike the section from the proposal.

CHIEF CLERK: I don't have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Had there been any amendments? There were many amendments offered but had there been any of those amendments adopted, Mr. Davis?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

DAVIS: I am sorry. I thought they had.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to rise on a point of order and find out when a motion to rescind is out of order on a particular proposal. It seems that this one should have passed from second reading about two or three days before notice of intention to rescind came up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg, a motion to rescind can be made after the time for a motion to reconsider has gone by. A motion to rescind can be made at any time that something has not been done that cannot be undone, and it would seem to the Chair that there are very few things that the Convention can do that could not be undone. Those things might arise but the motion to rescind would be in order prior to the time that a proposal had actually been adopted into the constitution.

LONDBORG: Is there anything we can do that we can't undo?

PRESIDENT EGAN: In this Convention, just offhand. the Chair cannot think of anything that we could do that we couldn't undo, no. If it would be the desire of the body, unless we had taken some action, ordered the Sergeant at Arms to go down and bring a delegate to the Convention from town, we could not undo that action if we brought the delegate here.

LONDBORG: I was just wondering, because if that is the case, it is clear that we can move to rescind anything all the way up, including and through third reading, because there is nothing actually that is being done that we can't undo. Is that right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be the feeling of the Chair. If it is the wish of the body to rescind an action that is possible to rescind, why, it could be done at any time.

LONDBORG: I just wanted to have it clear because I know some of us were going on the assumption that when it passed from second reading officially on into Style and Drafting or Engrossment and Enrollment, that your moves for reconsideration and rescinding were passed then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Reconsideration after the time it passed, but there is nothing in our rules that says -- Robert's Rules doesn't apply to the rescinding motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I don't always agree with Delegate Sundborg, but today I am in complete agreement because I believe that we have made a very serious mistake, and I think it is indicated pretty clearly by the fact that we have had a great many communications to that effect. While it may be true that these communications might be considered in a sense pressure, I still believe that they represent a great many people who one day will vote either for or against the ratification of this constitution when it goes before the people, and certainly if we could remove their objection now, which they have indicated very clearly by these communications, I think that we have taken a very great step forward in insuring the ultimate ratification of the constitution once it is submitted to the people. I am going to offer an amendment, if we rescind our action. I am going to offer a similar amendment that I did the other day which at that time I withdrew, but I certainly feel that this is a serious mistake and if we don't rescind our action the consequences might be considerable.

V. RIVERS: If we rescind on this action, is the matter then open for amending?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is. It would be. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information, Mr. President. Is Proposal 8/a in second reading now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the Convention votes to rescind the action, then it would be back in the amendment stage in the opinion of the Chair.

R. RIVERS: Point of order. I don't think that this article has been sent to Engrossment yet. I think it is still before us.

LONDBORG: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This particular article, the Chair, unless it was directed on Saturday, the Chair had not directed that it be referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, Mr. Kilcher, but if the motion to rescind carries, it then brings that legislation, or that proposal, back before us in the position that it was at that time.

KILCHER: If it has never been declared out of second reading, the whole proposal is in second reading yet in that case right? And amendable as such?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, Mr. Kilcher. The Convention will be at recess for two minutes. If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess until 10:50.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may read the communications that have been received.

(The Chief Clerk read the following communications: a telegram from Senator Marcus Jensen urging reconsideration of the action striking Section 5 from the resources article; a telegram from Reuel M. Fleming, Secretary of the Juneau Vessel Owners, expressing their view that there should be inserted in the constitution an article setting up a commission for fisheries; a telegram from Louise Juhnke, Secretary of the Anchorage Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America, asking for the inclusion of submitted fish and game management proposals in the constitution; a telegram from Albert S. Davis, President, ANB Camp No. 1, Sitka, recommending a commission to govern fish and another to govern game be inserted in the constitution; a memorandum from the Director of the Alaska Department of Fisheries on behalf of the Alaska Fisheries Board, submitting the Board's recommendations regarding fish and fisheries provisions in the constitution; a memorandum from the Director of the Alaska Department of Fisheries on behalf of the Alaska Fisheries Board, submitting the Board's recommendations regarding fish and fisheries provisions in the constitution.)

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, these letters to my recollection have been read before.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This letter, the Chairman of the Resources Committee has requested that it be read.

HELLENTHAL: I wondered, but now the wires, are they current?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The wires are all wires that have been received this morning, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Except for this letter?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes. The communications will be filed. At this time the Chair will refer Committee Proposal No. 12 to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee. That is the proposal that the first rescinding action was taken upon this morning. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, speaking on the Section 5, I voted the other day to delete it and I felt at the time that no reference to any board or commission should be in the constitution, as we have not provided for a health board or a health commission or an educational board or an educational commission; we have left it up in the executive article to a given pattern. However, I feel that in the regulation of our resources that these people that are members of gun clubs, of conservation groups, and dedicated to the preservation of the wildlife in the Territory, that has become a great concern to them. I know that we in Nenana have a rod and gun club that we call the Moose-Goosers, and we practice conservation within our area and we are very proud of the fact that when we have a problem that the board lends a sympathetic ear. I don't make it a habit to change my vote very often on a particular issue, but I hope that the people of the Convention will reconsider this and do as I do -- vote for it. I think that by having this board for regulatory purposes would not particularly infringe upon the administrative part that would in turn hurt the strong executive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Some weeks ago we had Mr. Gabrielson here who spoke to us at length about the problem of wildlife management. If you will think back to that time you will remember that he discussed the establishment of commissions for the purpose of managing the wildlife of the state. During his formal presentation, as well as during the questioning period afterwards, he brought out a number of points in regards to the commission. One of the points that struck me more than anything else, in view of all the pressure that was even then being brought to include a provision in the constitution to establish separate commissions, was his statement to the effect that in states where constitutional provision is made for management, they have good administration and in other states where no constitutional provisions are contained they also have good administration. In fact, he brought out, if I remember correctly, that some of the best states in this field are those that do not have any provision in the constitution. It seems to me that this issue has been thoroughly distorted. The charge is continuously being brought that if we provide for a commission in the constitution it will be nonpolitical, if a commission is set up by the legislature it will be political. I see no protection in Section 5 that will prevent this commission or commissions that would be set up from being completely politically dominated, being political footballs and being completely ineffective. The only way to make this matter subject to good management and regulation is to have the legislature behind it, to make sure that good laws are enacted. I don't think that Section 5 does that in any way. I think that the sportsmen of the Territory, certainly those in Anchorage, have not given this any thought. When we were home during recess I spent some time with the president of the Sportsmen's Association. He never even broached the subject; it didn't seem to concern him. Certainly, individually, if they have been given the impression that if the commission is not provided for in the constitution, it certainly seems to me that they have been given the wrong impression if they have been made to believe that our wildlife will be mismanaged under the state. I don't think that has anything to do with it. I think that there is no need to provide for it and I think we will probably have better administration of management under the state if we leave it to the legislature. Another point I would like to bring out is that we have had a lot of concern on the subject of fisheries. Where has been the greatest amount of abuse of natural resources in the history of the state? It has not been in the field of wildlife; it has not been in the field of fisheries; it has been in land management and forest management. If we want to be sincere about it, and if we believe that commissions are the solution, that is where we should provide for commissions, because anyone who reads the history of the states can look at the tremendous land steals that were perpetrated, the tremendous desecration of the forests, that is where the real mismanagement occurred. I think if we are to be consistent the whole matter of resources must be treated as one broad over-all subject and as such be left to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I cannot agree with Mr. Fischer. As Dr. Gabrielson also pointed out the necessity in the states for a commission, and under this we merely set up this or something similar -- if Section 5 is reinstated -- we merely set up a directive to the legislature to act on it, and I certainly feel that the sportsmen and commercial fishermen in the Territory are entitled to that. It was brought out on the floor before, early in the session, that when the Federal Constitution was drawn it was drawn in secret session to prevent anyone from presenting their views or from any of the news of it leaking out; but we have adopted, and even under the bill enabling this Convention to be held, provided for public hearings. Now, if on the one hand we provide for public hearings; and incidentally in the public hearing, at least in Fairbanks, the organized sportsmen requested an even stronger section in the constitution than this Section 5, but if we provide for public hearings and want an expression of the public, then we certainly shouldn't object when the public expresses their opinion and supports something of this kind in the constitution. To me it isn't any matter of pressure or anything of the kind, it is simply an expression of a large body of people as to their desires, and I, for one, feel that it is up to me to vote now to rescind our action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: After the war, back in 1946, I made many pictures of the Arctic Alaska game. I showed them to the National Geographic Society, 3,400 people, and I found the whole 165 million people out there much interested in the game of Alaska. They're not coming, only a few are coming, but they want a dream of a land where there are moose, caribou, sheep, ducks, and geese and bear, and it would be a sad world if we didn't have it. I understand Sweden has only seven moose left. I think it is a sad story; and these 165 million people want a dream of this land where there are populated forests, and I hope they always have the dream, and if by putting this in the constitution they can keep that dream alive, I am for it. I also found those same people, and I want to tell the mover of this motion, Mr. Sundborg, they were also interested in the Native people and their lands and the ground they had. I am for this move that Mr. Sundborg makes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would also like to support the people, and I am always interested to hear their views on any subject; I don't feel that we have been subject to undue pressures here, but I would remind the delegates that if you have listened carefully to all the communications that have been read to us, a lot of them are contradictory. Also a lot of them, most of them, go way beyond Section 5 as it was originally in the resources article, and I submit to you that Section 5 does not solve the problem so far as the Alaska Sportsmen's Council or any other organizations are concerned. As it came out, it merely stated there would be a commission or commissions without the rest of the plan that these groups are supporting, and that, as such, I do not think it necessarily represents their current opinion. When you strip their plan of everything except the mention of the word "commission", I don't think that you can say that Section 5 represents what the Sportsmen's Council or any other group wants to see in the constitution. Now, Mr. Sundborg mentioned the revision of the Constitution of the State of Missouri. You will all recall before we came here we had addressed to us a letter enclosing those sections of the Constitution of the State of Missouri, and if you want to go all the way toward supporting the views of these groups you should insert all these sections in our constitution because it is a complete plan of which the commission idea is only a small part. And I think if we are to consider their views fully, I think I will read these sections of the Constitution of the State of Missouri. Section 40 says: "The control, management, restoration, conservation and regulation of the bird, fish, game, forestry and all wildlife resources of the state, including hatcheries, sanctuaries, refuges, reservations and all other property owned, acquired or used for such purposes and the acquisition and establishment thereof, and the administration or all laws pertaining thereto, shall be vested in a conservation commission consisting of four members appointed by the governor not more than two of whom shall be of the same political party. The members shall have knowledge of and interest in wildlife conservation. The members shall hold office for terms of six years beginning on the first day of July of consecutive odd years. Two of the terms shall be concurrent, one shall begin two years before and one two years after the concurrent terms. If the governor fails to fill a vacancy within thirty days, the remaining members shall fill the vacancy for the unexpired term. The members shall receive no salary or other compensation for their services as members, but shall receive their necessary traveling and other expenses incurred while actually engaged in the discharge of their official duties." Section 41. Commission may acquire by purchase, gift, eminent domain, or otherwise, all property necessary, useful or convenient for its purposes, and shall exercise the right of eminent domain as provided by law for the highway commission." Section 42. "The commission shall appoint a director of conservation who, with its approval, shall appoint the assistants and other employees deemed necessary by the commission. The commission shall fix the qualifications and salaries of the director and all appointees and employees, and none of its members shall be an appointee or employee." Section 43. "The fees, moneys, or funds arising from the operation and transactions of the commission and from the application and the administration of the laws and regulations pertaining to the bird, fish, game, forestry and wildlife resources of the state and from the sale of property used for said purposes, shall be expended and used by the commission for the control, management, restoration, conservation and regulation of the bird, fish, game, forestry and wildlife resources of the state, including the purchase or other acquisition of property for said purposes, and for the administration of the laws pertaining thereto, and for no other purpose." Section 44. "Section 40-43, inclusive, of this article shall be self-enforcing, and laws not inconsistent therewith may be enacted in aid thereof. All existing laws inconsistent with this article shall no longer remain in force or effect." Section 45. "The rules and regulations of the commission not relating to its organization and internal management shall become effective not less than ten days after being filed with the secretary of state as provided in Section 16 of this article, and such final rules and regulations affecting private rights as are judicial or quasi-judicial in nature shall be subject to the judicial review provided in Section 22 of Article V." Section 46. "The commission shall supply to all persons on request, printed copies of its rules and regulations not relating to organization or internal management." Now you see how far we are removed from that plan and that plan is what they want, and moreover it has been indicated here that if we reinstate Section 5 we are going to get further removed from what they want and remove the words "and administration" from the article. I think that we have taken the proper action, that the state is going to need a department of natural resources, that all natural resources should come under that department, and that if in the study and review of the entire subject, a commission for the purpose of regulations is found to be necessary under that department it will be established. And I think that if the sportsmen, with all the support they obviously have, including my own, are as strong as they have indicated, that there will be no abuse of the management of the fish and wildlife in Alaska. But I do not think we are helping them any by reinserting Section 5 and that we may be unnecessarily restricting the study and the properly setting up of the whole subject of resources under the future state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, most of what I had intended to say has been said. I can agree with Mr. Sundborg that both game fish, wildlife and commercial fisheries lend themselves to the commission type of regulation. The only question is, in my mind, is it necessary that those commissions be established in the constitution? I would like to point out that we have, under our Territorial government at the present time, an Alaska Fisheries Board and an Alaska Game Commission. Under the transitory provisions those commissions will be carried forward into the new state government. It would take action by the legislature to set up any other type of regulation. I am convinced, in my own mind, that whether we take this action in putting these provisions in the constitution or whether we do not, we are going to have both our commercial fisheries and our game fish and wildlife regulated by commissions. Now, I stretched my conscience just as far as I could in not dissenting in the committee report which provided for the establishment of a commission or commissions in the constitution, for I could foresee that if this provision were retained, when I go home and talk to the people, especially those dedicated to the cause of education, labor, health, and other things, the first question they were going to ask is, "Why did you refuse to establish in the constitution those various departments and then put in a provision in the constitution providing for commissions for game fish and fisheries?" The only honest answer that I could make would be: "We submitted to the pressures brought by a special interest group," and to have been compelled to make such an answer I am sure would have taken something from the pride and the satisfaction which I have had in the work of the Convention to date. Now, I think probably, being as so much has been said on this subject, that it might be well to go a little further. I think again that the appropriate answer to the criticisms aimed at the delegates and at the Convention would be to say, "Forgive them for they know not what they do." The demands of this group have been founded largely on the theory that constitutional establishment of a game commission would remove that commission from the reach of political pressure groups. Nothing could be further from the truth, as has been clearly demonstrated in the State of Florida. Florida had a situation somewhat similar to that which exists in Alaska. They attempted, by constitutional action, to set up a commission which they thought would be free from politics. They went much further than the sportsmen in Alaska have asked. The rulings of this commission were beyond the reach of the legislature and they really thought they had set up a commission which was beyond the reach of political pressures. After a few years, according to Professor Ernest Bartley of the University of Florida, this commission has become one of the greatest political footballs in the history of the state. Actually, in my opinion, what the leaders of the sportsmen group want is not complete freedom from political pressures, what they want is freedom from political pressures other than their own. From my observation of this Convention I would rate it as completely free and an independent body insofar as political pressures are concerned. Yet the leaders of the sportsmen's group are very unhappy that this body is independent. Now, would it not follow that if by some magic method they could establish a game commission free from all political pressures, they could find themselves in a very similar position in connection with the very amendment they had created. Apparently the sportsmen's leaders have based their arguments for the establishment of separate commissions by constitutional provisions on the fact that such a provision appears in the Constitution of the State of Missouri and that this commission, as so provided, has done a good job. They apparently have ignored the all-important fact that conditions in Missouri do not bear the slightest resemblance to those in Alaska. Missouri has no appreciable commercial fishery, and apparently insofar as I have been able to determine, and this is only from a superficial examination, they have not had the conflicts of interests between the game and the game fish advocates and the representatives of other resources such as oil, timber, water, etc. Now, those things have occurred in other states. Louisiana, just very recently, in fact, is embroiled at the present time in conflict between the game people and the oil interests. Arizona has had problems in connection with its water resources and game resources, and the point that I would make here is that the very thing which most of us favor, the establishment of an over-all resources commission and conservation commission, wherein there can be full and complete coordination and cooperation between all of the administrators of the resources, is the desirable end. Game commissions, like all other commissions, are made up of people; and people, however they may be selected, are susceptible to political pressure. The delegates have shown time and time again that their one concern is to protect the interests of all the people. They have resisted, time after time, pressures brought by what could only be termed special interest groups, and I should say here in using the term "special interest groups" I refer to those groups who have concentrated all of their thoughts in connection with the constitution on one interest. Here we have had to look at all of the interests as a whole, not as any single entity. I think I have pointed out the main things which have been in my mind. I have regretted the fact that the various statements made have created what could be a very serious breach between the commercial fishermen and the sports and wildlife advocates. I hope that we can all look at this thing from our individual standpoints, both as our conscience dictates, and I hope that everyone will, after the vote is taken, accept it in good grace as the majority thinking of the group, and I can assure you that that is exactly how I look at it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I also feel constrained to speak on this subject. I was in the legislature when we established the existing department of fisheries and we established it as a department. It seems to me we have a parallel situation here, very close to that of the department of education and other departments, and we provided in the executive article for multiheaded departments. Now, I have heard a number of discussions here in connection with the problem of conservation and of fish and wildlife in the various states. It seems to me that they hold small parallel to the situation in Alaska. I have heard the situation of Missouri compared with Alaska. There they have a state with an area of approximately 100,000 miles, most generally, characteristically a prairie state; they have no shore line; they are in the agricultural and agrarian economy, which takes and uses a lot of land. Their problem of getting proper conservation of game by getting an amendment into their constitution was probably because the problem of conservation of fish and wildlife and game was not of great enough importance to the general public. But here we have a situation with 28,000 miles of shore line, 586,000 miles of area where I cannot help but see that we have a problem that is greater than any probable five or six states combined. It is an asset and a resource that I consider to be one of the most, if not the most, important resource that all the people in Alaska will have in Alaska for all time. And it is my desire to see that resource administered to the benefit and to the best interests of all the people so that it will grow and expand and be a source of economic wealth, prosperity, and happiness to all the people. Now, I feel that here we have heard a great many interesting arguments and discussions and debate that represent the honest opinions of each individual speaking, but I for one, and I am a sportsman, and have been a member of two sporting associations, and have hunted in Alaska and fished in Alaska as a sportsman since I was a boy, feel that we would be doing a grave injustice to all the people if we set up a commission which would be dissevered from all of the other resources of the State of Alaska in the handling of this one resource. The argument that a commission is the ideal form of government for this resource might apply in the states. It might also apply in Alaska. We have provided for multiheaded boards to head departments and I believe that this department should be nothing less than a full department of government and not a commission of the third grade hanging off on the fringe. I believe that this department should have a voice in the policy-making and in the budget-making problems of the new state, and if the resource, as we now have it, is as valuable as it is now and gets more valuable, that is more and more reason why all of the people will have a firm interest in seeing that it is administered to the best interests of all the people by representatives of all the people. So, I come then to this matter of similar problems that have arisen in this Constitutional Convention. We had a considerable discussion, and I personally discussed this matter as a Chairman of the Executive with the Commissioner of Education, and he wanted to know for sure that the constitution would provide for a department of which could be headed by a multiheaded group or a board which would have overlapping terms for members and which would insure continuity of policy and which would insure the least possible intervention by any one political group, and in that section on multiheaded departments we provide for just that. So, as we look at this picture we have here one of the prime, or the prime resource, one of the most important parts of the state patrimony now to be administered by a commission if we put this matter into the constitution. I for one want to see it in a most important place as a full department, and if this rescission motion carries, I am going to fight hard to get into that word "commission", [the words] "multiheaded department of government", because I don't think it should be anything less. Now, we have heard the voice of a small group of people interested, and wholly interested and sincerely interested, in a resource. But that does not mean that their interest is the over-all picture: as Delegate White read to you, the so-called Missouri Plan includes a whole department of conservation, and I do not see how, under a commission regulating sport and game fishing and commercial fishing, they could have the proper coordination with the agencies such as the forestry group, and the fire prevention group, and other groups, in order to properly insure the protection of the game and wildlife unless they were a full department. I for one feel that we have made the provision in the constitution and the people of Alaska will desire and the representatives of the legislature will carry out a program which will make this department of our fish and wildlife and conservation probably the most important and probably the largest and most powerful commission on that same subject of all the states, or of any five states combined. I want the delegates to note that in the Enabling Act, HR 2535, that half of the proceeds from the Pribilof seal fisheries will come to the new state. It is inevitable, I believe, that amount is now approximately $1 million in slightly over a year, it is inevitable in my opinion that that money will be diverted and handled in the manner of preservation and development of our fish, game, wildlife, and our fur. It seems to me that as the situation improves out there that that money itself will increase. They will soon begin to take sea otter and half of that money will come into this department on conservation. I believe it will be not only one of the most important departments of government, but I believe it will also be one of the best financed, with the licenses that could be earmarked under the present setup into this department; with the appropriations of the legislature; with the vast interest in both the commercial, the fish and wildlife interests; and with the other related interests such as the tourist trade, the outside hunter and fishermen groups that come in, the protection of the forests, the protection of the forests by fire protection. It seems to me that we must not lose sight of the fact that this is one part of a great big picture that means a great deal to all of the people of Alaska, and I am perfectly glad and will be happy to meet with any sportsmen's group and express my views and state the reason why I oppose freezing into this constitution a commission. I have looked up the interpretation of commissions. An interpretation of a commission is something that generally operates something. A board is generally something that regulates something, but a department of government has the full power to do all of those things and also to approach the governor and his cabinet, to be a part of that cabinet, to approach the board of the budget, to approach the legislature as a full department of government, and I think we would sell the people of Alaska terribly short if we don't allow this conservation department to be a full department of government, and I can readily foresee it will doubtless be a multiheaded department.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to ask Mr. Victor Rivers a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

R. RIVERS: I have been thinking that if this went through, the commission -- it is still in the hands of the legislature to decide what kind of commission it would be, or commissions it would be. Would this language, as it is, prevent the legislature making the commission a multiheaded group, or a multiheaded department is what I mean, and would you object to this if we did substitute the words "multiheaded department" instead of the word "commission"?

V. RIVERS: I would still object, Mr. President, to freezing it into the constitution but I think it would be much preferable. If we say "commission" we doubtless mean "commission"; if we say "department of government", we doubtless mean that. I would think it would be much more acceptable as a multiheaded department, but to my way of thinking that should be a matter of legislative and executive prerogative so they could adjust and change as the condition and need arose. Does that answer your question?

R. RIVERS: Yes, thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. King.

KING: Mr. Chairman, the eloquence here of the greatest orators in the Territory of Alaska has impressed me very much; also the fact that the political winds have been blowing. I want to say here that I am not running for anything, the political winds haven't affected me any. In this department business, talking about departments in the Missouri Plan, now Section 5 to me, the one we are trying to rescind or the deletion of it, I don't see anything about the Missouri Plan in that. The Missouri Plan was read in great detail; it doesn't say anything about the Missouri Plan at all. Now the exceptions taken here -- of course I will have to take exceptions to what Mr. Fischer said because I don't believe Mr. Gabrielson talked in those terms -- the exceptions here, nobody seems to believe in the Hoover Commission which was 12 members, the federal government, nonpartisan, who definitely stated that they wanted a division of commercial and sport fishing interests. The Pacific Fisheries Conference which is represented on the Pacific Coast, including Alaska, also went on record for a division of commercial fisheries and game and wildlife. The reasons for that, of course, are many. Commercial fishing is purely commercial; that pertains to the sea; that is the sea. Land mass pertains to wildlife and sport fish; that is completely separated. One is social; has aesthetic features, has economic features; the other one is purely economical. Now as you know, Mr. President, the last tax returns in 1955 show fisheries, the sport stamp tax alone brought into the Territorial treasury $65,000; $65,000 against $45,000 from the mining industry. Commercial fisheries at its lowest ebb last year brought in $2,300,000 worth of tax money. Now we are talking about a resource that is valuable to the people of Alaska. These people of our tundra, one of our delegates talked so much about his 30,000 people -- that is not only aesthetic to them -- that is social.

They use that meat in the Arctic to eat; they use that ivory to carve; that is their livelihood. Now, we are not talking about light things here, Mr. President, we are talking about something very important. It was important enough to the Pacific Fisheries Commission to ask that a separate assistant secretary of the Department of Commerce be appointed to take care of fisheries alone. That is how important it was. I am not a very good orator, Mr. President, but my timidity here has been overcome by my conscience. I feel very deeply about this. I am not talking only about the sporting association either; I am talking about a background of five years on fish traps, owning my own seine boat, gill netting, and I am at present a registered guide. I am not talking out of mere technical aspects, I am talking from experience and I believe the proper place to put the regulation of these departments, to make it successful, is right into the constitution. That is the will -- now we have been talking about pressure here all the time. Pressure from what? Pressure to me is a man going and sticking a gun in my back and saying, "King, you had better vote this way." Or the storekeeper says, "King, if you don't vote this way, I'm going to stop your credit." That's pressure to me. What I am seeing in telegrams is the wishes and will of the people. If that is pressure, I certainly don't understand pressure, and that has been explained to me in great detail by the great orators of this Convention. I just want to say further that the Missouri Plan as we talked about here, has nothing to do with Section 5, it doesn't say anything about it. It still leaves the power with the legislature. There is no quarrel with the governor appointing this commission or these commissions. There is no quarrel with that. They are also going to be approved by the legislature. The members of the commission are going to be approved by the legislature of our new state and they will provide the rules to work under in that commission. I don't think I have to say anything further on this. The arguments against it, Mr. President, have been very inconsistent all the way through and certainly a lot of them are not statements of fact.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I rise to make my usual speech in favor of the legislature, which I have made many times before on the floor of this Convention. I am not opposed to one commission or two commissions or three commissions or even five commissions or a hydra-headed board for the administration of our fish and wildlife. I am opposed to putting it in the constitution of the new State of Alaska. I think the power resides in the legislature, and I am going to say again what I have said many many times before on the floor of this Convention: we who are writing the Constitution of Alaska must have some faith and trust in the future legislatures of Alaska for we are not going to be able to ride herd on them from the vantage point of this Convention hall any time at all. Now, I was among all of the rest of you who heard Dr. Gabrielson speak and who greatly enjoyed hearing him speak, and one sentence that Dr. Gabrielson said has stayed in my memory ahead of everything else that he said, and that was, "This is undoubtedly legislation but you are probably justified in putting it in the constitution." Now, if it is legislation, if it is statutory law that we are expected to set up here, it does not belong in the constitution. I am unable to understand this fear of the legislature that is constantly voiced in this assembly. Nineteen members of this group have been members of former legislatures and every one of them should feel a deep resentment at that expression of distrust. There are doubtless 19 other people or more, who are planning to be members of a legislature in the future, and rightly so, and I hope that they too feel that feeling of resentment at the distrust that is here being manifested in the legislature. I have never been a member of the legislature but I know pressure when I see it. I have observed enough sessions of the legislature to be fully conversant with that topic and I have never seen a better organized system of pressure than has been applied to this Convention to get what the Sportsmen Association wants, or thinks it wants, or thinks it wants, into this constitution. When you get telegram after telegram and letter after letter saying: "We endorse the program that the Alaska Sportsmen's Association proposes; we endorse the plan that has been adopted and promulgated by the Alaska Sportsmen's Association; we have 20,000 members," or 10,000 members; or whatever number it is, "We control so many votes and you are in danger of not being ratified if you don't give us what we want." I don't believe that the Alaska Sportsmen's Association is going out and vote against ratification because they may lose one little point that they are especially interested in. That is neither the part of good sportsmanship or good citizenship and I hope that they will vote for candidates for office and vote for ratification on the basis of the merit of the candidates and the merit of the constitution and not on personal grudges. I do not believe further, and I may say it with all due respect, that William L. Paul can control 2,000 votes in the Alaska Native Brotherhood, and I am telling that here and I am sure Mr. Peratrovich who has himself been a grand president of the Alaska Native Brotherhood knows that the Alaska Native Brotherhood does not control votes as has been indicated. And if they do, what does it matter? At a recess here a few moments ago we had active lobbying on the floor of this house, this Convention hall, this side of the gallery by members of the Sportsmen's Association. I could point them out to you and I can tell you who they talked to, and I know what they said because I was near enough to hear some of it. That is what we have to guard against. Whenever, in the balmy days of the legislature, have

I seen a more flagrant piece of lobbying on the salmon industry than we saw here this morning on this floor. I don't say they control the votes; I don't say they influenced any member on here, but I do say that the attempt was being made, and that is something that I resent. My resentment to the legislature, when I have criticized it in the past, has been because it was amenable to these pressure groups. My resentment at the lobbying that has been done here, both by telegram and letter and by personal solicitation, goes to the same point. We have had several people here say very eloquently today that they did not feel that they were able to put everything in the constitution that the department of education wanted, that other departments of government wanted, and naturally we cannot, but I want it clearly shown here that my objection to the inclusion of this section in the constitution which has been proposed by the Resources Committee is due to the fact that I think it belongs in the legislature, the power to determine those things belong in the legislature, and we can do no greater disservice to this country than to abridge and curtail and disparage the rights of the legislature to make the laws for the State of Alaska, and I shall be opposed to it not only because it belongs in the legislature, but because such a tremendous effort has been made, and as I said before, blatantly made to take it out of the hands of the legislature, and as Mr. McCutcheon said the other day, "enshrine it in the constitution". I shall vote "no" to rescission; I shall vote "no" to any effort at this time or any other time to include in the constitution of the State of Alaska material that is properly legislative functions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I find that I am in this particular position, much like the attorneys. We have some 14 attorneys here and we find them lined up in a multitude of fashions from time to time. Their thought is split -- they interpret in this fashion and another fashion. I am not sure how many registered guides there are in this room, but I am one, and have been for several years, and I find perhaps myself in opposition to this matter to Mr. King over here whom I admire a great deal. Mr. King has observed that the licenses that came from the fishing stamps and amounting to some $65,000 had been put in the Territorial treasury. What he failed to state was that that $65,000 worth of money, as I remember, unless the law has been changed, was particularly earmarked for the propagation, generation, stream clearance of sports fish. There is no question in my mind that when our new state government is set up with the type of department that we visualize at this time for natural resources and other particular arms of the government, that ample and adequate administration will be provided by a governor who will be sensitive to the wants of the sporting groups. He will also be sensitive to the wants of the fishing groups who earn their livelihood in that fashion. There is one thing that rather impresses me in this matter and it is a fact that we have in our public school, 21,940 little natural resources, the men and women of our future State of Alaska; and we have dealt with them in this fashion under our Health, Education and Welfare Committee Proposal No. 7, "The state shall establish and maintain by general law a system of public schools which shall be open to all children of the State and may provide for other public educational institutions." If we can influence the destiny of our future citizens in such a fashion, with one broad sentence, left and place the responsibility upon the legislature to create an entire educational system which may be different than the one we have, which may as some have said, be subject to political pressures, then certainly I don't see why the game animals and the game fishes or the commercial fishes of this great new state are in any different position than our future citizens. I think that our legislature will provide amply, not only for the game but for our future citizens, and consequently I am opposed to rescission.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I thought the other day when we were arguing this matter that I had said all I could say on it, and I was very glad to see that this article or this section of an article was chopped out, not because I do not believe in game conservation, for I do, but I did not believe and I do not now believe that this Convention should set up in the constitution a particular section establishing a commission for the conservation and the regulation of fish and game. Now, I think Mrs. Hermann has very aptly expressed her sentiments on this, perhaps more articulate than I can, but I will say that my sentiments are the same as hers. Mr. McCutcheon has given you a very good example or illustration of how we treated perhaps the greatest problem confronting us of the future of our children, through the Health, Welfare and Education. We do not set up any commission for those children. Now, throughout the years we have had a number of boards and commissions in the Territory. We have had the Board of Education; we have had the Board of Health; and the Board of Welfare. Well, I have not heard anybody who has talked and wanted this particular section in the constitution say that those boards were inefficient, that they were not conscientious, because it would be an untruth if they did say so. Those boards have been very conscientious; they have done a good job; and they were boards that were set up by the legislature and the personnel of those boards were appointed by the governor. Now, also, I believe that practically every one of the speakers has referred to the unique position of game in Alaska. I think we have the greatest fishing and hunting potentials of any state in the United States, or perhaps many of them put together. We have a great variety of game; it is a resource of incalculable value. We want to preserve it, but I don't want to preserve it by putting into the constitution that we must establish a commission or two commissions or three commissions. I think, as Mr. Rivers believes, Victor Rivers, that this should be a department of resources, and they will have control of all the resources, such forest lands as we get, such game and the fisheries, and the clam beds, and every other thing which is going to affect the economic value of Alaska and to the recreation of the people through fishing and hunting. Now, I might say that being in agreement with Mrs. Hermann in her statement that this is a pressure group, ostensibly our sportsmen are supposed to be sportsmen. Well, now are these sportsmen who are pressuring us, are they potential members of this board that is going to be set up? Do they want to be the board? Do they want to control the fisheries? Do they want to say that certain licenses and taxes are going to be put under their control? They know that if this commission is not established by the constitution it will be established by the legislature, so what have they to fear? Perhaps the same persons, if we could look into the future, who will possibly be on a game fish or game commission, game fish commission, would be the same persons who will be appointed by the governor as they would be appointed under this commission basis. Now, I can say that from several of the speakers who have talked here, and maybe they have been subjected to pressure, and now I might say in substantiating the statements of Mrs. Hermann, that the day following our action upon Section 5, I was approached by one of the leaders of the pressure group, and he was in a very irate manner, and he berated me for my stand on this question and also upon my vote on this question. Also, he threatened me that if I run for the legislature I would not receive one vote from the sportsmen. Those are sportsmen? Because a person conscientiously worked for something they are going to take it out on him by not voting for him. I told the man it was one of my principles; I was not in favor of boards unless they were necessary. I didn't want a board set up blindly by the constitution. I felt a board similar to the Alaska Game Commission board would be a necessity, and if I went to the legislature, I would work for such a board, a good efficient board, manned by men who know the game and fish problem. It may be that I, possibly, if I run for the legislature, I maybe will lose by the fact that these people in the game commission, or the game associations, are going to vote against me. Well, that is well and good. If I do not go down there I am just not going, and it doesn't make a bit of difference to me one way or another, but it will be because I have taken a stand antagonistic to the game bodies for a matter of procedure, not for a matter of substance, because I believe in the conservation of the game. I have been here 47 years, and I have always felt we must conserve our game and fish. I think my reputation in the legislature will indicate that. Now, from some of the remarks by other members of the body and possibly those same threats have been made to them because it appears to me that they have hit for the hurricane cellar, going to change their vote upon this matter. I don't know whether they are going to run for the legislature or not. It appears that possibly they are. I feel that we should hold up and maintain our previous stand on this question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: Mr. President, I notice the noon recess is approaching, so I will be brief. I am a commercial fisherman by trade and I didn't come here to lobby for the commercial fisherman, but I tell you, fellow delegates, I believe if we yield to this lobby, if we bring this matter back on the floor where it will be open to further amendment by a lobby group, then I am going to have to submit two amendments to take care of the commercial interests of the fishermen in Alaska as I see it. I believe, as Delegate Hermann has said before, that we can trust the legislature. I am willing to go along on that basis, but I am willing to fight, too, if it is necessary.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, would you care to take the Chair for a moment before you close?

(Mr. Sundborg took the Chair.)

CHAIRMAN SUNDBORG: Mr. Egan.

EGAN: Mr. President, I would like to say that I voted to delete Section 5 from this proposal. I would also like to say that I don't believe that there is anyone else in the Territory who could be more interested in the conservation of the commercial fisheries or the game fish and wildlife of the Territory than I am, or as are all the members of this Constitutional Convention. But it is my sincere feeling that those people who have caused this great deluge of telegrams, letters, and pressure, if you may, upon this Convention, to come upon us, have not properly digested what is contained in Proposal No. 8/a with the deletion of Section 5. It appears to me that Section 5 is only a repetition of the basic principles that are laid out in other sections of Committee Proposal No. 8/a. I just have the feeling that many of these people have not even properly perused Committee Proposal No. 8/a. In Section 3, as it remains in the proposal, it says, "Forests, fish, wildlife, grasslands and other replenishable resources belonging to the State shall be administered, utilized and maintained on the sustained yield principle." And I ask you, Mr. President, how that could be done if the people of the Territory, the Sportsmen's Association, the commercial fisheries organizations through their legislature, Mr. President, how that could be done unless through their legislature, the establishment of a particular procedure with relation to departments or commissions would cause the sustained yield principle with relation to these natural resources, be they game fish, or game wildlife, or commercial fisheries, how that could be done without the establishment of the proper agencies? Also, in the new Section 5, originally it was Section 6, it says, "Facilities, improvements and services may be provided to assure greater utilization, development, reclamation and settlement of lands, and fuller utilization and development of the fisheries, wildlife, and waters." To me that is adequate provision, and it will also give the groups who are vitally interested, the sportsmen's group, the commercial fisheries groups, the right, and over a sufficient period of time, to come up with a proper and fine method of administering these important resources of our great state-to-be. I think that this whole question has been nothing more than poor judgment on the part of some in causing the question to become one of such great proportions, and I hope that we properly look at this proposal in its proper perspective and vote the motion to rescind our action down.

STEWART: Mr. President.

CHAIRMAN SUNDBORG: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: In connection with this subject in which I was deeply concerned, I wired Delegate Bartlett after adjournment the other day and asked him his position on the matter. I got a telephone message back in which he expressed thorough disapproval of putting into the constitution this clause which we are now discussing, and he authorized me to quote him to that effect. He had written a letter on the subject which I think is now in the hands of Mr. Smith and which he authorized me to have read before the Convention in this connection, and he authorized me over the phone to quote him as being thoroughly opposed to putting this provision into the constitution under the circumstances that it should be left as a part of our legislative process, and he authorized me to quote him to that extent.

CHAIRMAN SUNDBORG: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. President, I too was one of the 34 who joined here on the floor the other day to vote for the striking of Section 5. In the days that have passed since that time I have had many approach me, laymen as well as organized members of our resources division in the Territory at the present time. The principal reason that I had for striking Section 5 in my own thinking was the fact that it was legislative law. I made many pledges during the summer and fall months, both to organized groups as well as to individuals, that within my power I would do everything I could to keep legislative law out of the constitution. I well recognize the fine line that can be drawn between legislative and constitutional law. Many times it appears quite broad. I think most of us in our thinking are just as sincere in feeling that we are trying to write an ample and adequate constitution for the new State of Alaska, whether we voted with the 34 to strike No. 5 or whether we voted with the 21 to retain it. I think it is quite indicative of the feeling of this group, judging from the fact that the entire body was present at that particular vote, I think they are all present here this morning. In order to be true to the convictions that I came to the Convention with, knowing full well that the many friends I have in the audience this morning, as well as the many friends on the floor, certainly could not appreciate my sincerity or my stand if I were to take a reversal upon the position that I held the other day. Therefore, I urge that we vote down any rescission of Section 5, the matter under discussion this morning.

CHAIRMAN SUNDBORG: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I move that we stand at recess.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No.

CHAIRMAN SUNDBORG: Mr. President, would you resume the Chair?

(The President took the Chair.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if no one else desires to speak, I would like to close and I will do so briefly. I think that we have heard here in the last hour some of the finest debate we have ever had in the session of the Alaska Constitutional Convention. I listened with particular attention to the eloquent pleas of Mr. Smith. I think his speech was a great speech, and I know it was given with complete conviction. I listened with equal attention to the fine remarks of Mrs. Hermann who does not speak often here but who, when she does, has something to say and says it well, and she said it well on this occasion and I think she expressed, perhaps, perfectly the point of view of those who are against the recision of our action taken in striking Section 5. Of course, I listened with great attention to the remarks of our President, who I think on only two other occasions in the entire Convention has felt called upon to relinquish the Chair in order to have his opinions heard in a matter before the Convention; and I was reminded as I listened to him that probably we have been deprived of a great deal of expression of wisdom by the fact that he has occupied the Chair rather than be free on the floor to let us have the benefit of that wisdom. Although, of course I think I speak the words, the feeling of everyone here when I say we are fortunate indeed to have had him presiding over the Constitutional Convention. Now, it has been said we could leave this matter to the legislature and we could. Mrs. Hermann has said that she has time and again urged that we leave matters to the legislature. I think she has done that except perhaps in the case of a library board when she was urging that we should write into the constitution a provision that a board of that kind would be desirable. I submit, of course, I don't think I even have to submit, that a board to regulate the fisheries and game of Alaska would be somewhat more important and somewhat more deserving of a place in our constitution than a library board.

HERMANN: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I did not advocate a library board, I advocated a Territorial library service. Nothing was said about a board.

SUNDBORG: I stand corrected, Mrs. Hermann. I'm sorry if I misquoted you, but at least you did want to write into the constitution something about a matter which I think many of us felt was rather frivolous. I think none of us feel that this matter of the regulation of the fish and game of Alaska is frivolous. We differ on the means by which we should get to the desirable end of seeing that those resources are perpetuated. If we leave it to the legislature it is altogether likely that the legislature would set up a commission or commissions which is altogether likely again would meet with the desires of the sportsmen and of the commercial fishermen, but what a legislature can do at one session, the legislature at the very next session can undo, and we have seen that time and again through our Territorial history. Unless we have some clear lines drawn in the constitution which tells the legislature what kind of a system we want set up for the regulation of our fish and game, we are just throwing it out blindly, trusting to the future when we know not what that future may be. Now, the Missouri constitutional provision about fish and game was read to us here and it was a very long one. I might mention to you that the Missouri Constitution is a long constitution, and the fact that we do not propose putting in the Alaska constitution quite as much as they have about fish and game is only consistent with our desire that we don't have as much about anything in our constitution as they do. I believe it runs about ten times as long as the Alaska constitution will run, and I could mention to you that we have done a little computing in Style and Drafting and it appears that our constitution will be one of the shortest of any state. It will be shorter than Hawaii by a little bit, shorter than New Jersey by a little bit, but still I feel it will be the finest constitution, whether or not we have Section 5 in the resources article, that has ever been drawn by any state. Mr. Fischer mentioned that at the hearings held in Anchorage there was no desire expressed to have a provision of this kind written into the constitution. I wasn't at the Anchorage hearings, but I was at the Juneau hearings and everyone who participated in those hearings from this Convention I think will bear me out when I say that fully one-half of the statements which were made at that hearing were on this very matter, and the exact language which was incorporated in the report of the Resources Committee as Section 5 was proposed by the sportsmen themselves. This is what they want; they have said it again and again; they are saying it in telegrams to us; they are not saying they want a whole article in as the Missouri Constitution would have it; this is what they want. Now, it would not be unique for us to provide, at this point in the constitution, that a commission or commissions should be set up for this very desirable purpose. We have written into the constitution already in three or four other places, to my knowledge, provisions that there shall be commissions and boards of one kind or another. None of them I think were quite as important in what they would do as the commission that would regulate the fish and the wildlife. Education has been mentioned as another subject where we did not provide for a commission or board in spite of the fact that some of the members were urging that we do so. I think education is an entirely different kind of problem from fish and game regulations. There is no regulation required at all in education, and I might say also that we have a background in Alaska of a board of education. We have no such background, we have no precedent in the field of fish and game management. The Alaska Game Commission which has been mentioned here time and again, is not a Territorial body, it is a federal body. It will not be continued under our state system. The problem will be up to us entirely then. We will then have the entire management and regulation of the fish and the game which we have never had and the Alaska Fisheries Board, the Alaska Department of Fisheries which we have now, has not one iota of authority to regulate the fisheries as I think most of you know. We are striking out into a new field here and as we strike I think that we should see we are setting up a proper type of government in which to regulate this very important field of resources. Now, I want to say that I have not been in contact with those sports people. I have not tried to stimulate any barrage of wires. Following the meeting of last week when we struck Section 5, I wrote a circumstantial account of exactly what happened, what Section 5 provided, and what the vote on it was, and I sent that to one individual who had written to me about it. I think I should say, too, in fairness to our President, and perhaps in fairness to myself, that the resources proposal was not held in second reading in order to accommodate me, or anyone else, on a motion to rescind our action with respect to fish and game commissions. It was held up, as I understand it, on the request of the Committee which has some amendments of its own which they desire still to propose for incorporation in that proposal. I am not ashamed to bow to pressure when it is pressure from the people. I am proud to bow to such pressure. This is not a blatant attempt or a selfish attempt or an underhanded or a shady attempt to do something which is wrong. These people in my judgment are only asking for something which is right, they want good government. This is a wise provision and we should consider it in that light rather than in whether we have been asked by this or that many to be for or against this thing, but I would point out that until it was mentioned here a few moments ago that Delegate Bartlett had urged that we do not include something such as Section 5, I think we had not had a single communication, I think not a single member of the Convention had been approached by any individual asking us to leave out Section 5 as a provision. All of the wires and all of the desires --

SMITH: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: My point of order is that there have been quite a number of wires opposing the inclusion of Section 5, and I think if Mr. Sundborg will refer to the record he will find that that is correct.

SUNDBORG: I stand corrected if that is so, but at least the great preponderance of them have been in the other direction; and we have had wires from both commercial fishermen and from fish and wildlife and sports people asking us to include Section 5 which takes care of both sets of interests. Now, I know that from the standpoint of pure theory it isn't good to have something like Section 5 in our constitution. The people who sit in an ivory tower and look at our constitution will say, "It would have been better if you had left this out, boys." But we are not drawing a constitution in an ivory tower, we are writing a constitution which will deal with realities on the Alaska scene. I submit there is no better way of dealing with this particular reality, that of fish and wildlife management and regulation, than by putting back into the resources article the provision incorporated in Section 5, and so I hope that I will have a number of delegates go along with me who will vote "yes" to rescind our action taken last week in this matter.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now, on this motion that will now be placed before the Convention if you vote "yes" you vote to restore Section 5 to Committee Proposal No. 8/a. If you vote "no" the section will remain deleted from the proposal. The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind its action taken when Section 5 was deleted from the proposal?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 20 - Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, H. Fischer, Gray, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McNealy, Marston, Nolan, Peratrovich, Riley, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 35 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, White, Mr. President.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order while the Chief Clerk tallies the ballot.

CHIEF CLERK: 20 yeas, 35 nays.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed motion has failed of adoption. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Subject to committee and other announcements, Mr. President, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 1:45 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: For a point of information, first, will the Committee on Ordinances and Transitional Measures meet before the action on their report? And secondly, is this five-minute rule on talking in effect at the present time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it is not.

HELLENTHAL: When is it supposed to go into effect?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing before the Convention on a five-minute rule. Mr. McNealy, do you have a Committee announcement?

McNEALY: A meeting of the Ordinance Committee; I believe we will hold it in the gallery here at 1:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The committee on Style and Drafting will meet at 1:00 o'clock in the ping pong room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Style and Drafting in the ping pong room. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I spoke to you earlier this morning concerning bringing out the engrossed copy of Committee Proposal No. 14. I believe that you are in favor of having it brought out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that the proposal on apportionment?

SWEENEY: Yes, sir. The metes and bounds description is going to take a little while, and I just don't like to have it kept in the Committee and you did not seem to have objection to it, so I would like your permission to bring it out at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Engrossment and Enrollment Committee want to release that portion of their report, they have completed their work. Do you have objection, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: We have no objection. The other portion will be ready this afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I would like to bring it out and then I'll bring that out when we have a chance. So, Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 14 have compared same with the original and find it correctly engrossed and that portion of it which is ready has been mimeographed and the first enrolled copies will be placed on the delegates' desks immediately, and the balance will be brought out as soon as it is through the Committee, and I ask unanimous consent that the report be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney asks unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Are there other committee announcements to be made at this time? Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, is there a meeting of the committee chairmen this noon?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is a meeting scheduled at 12:30, Miss Awes, of the committee chairmen. Are there other committee reports? The Chair would like to state before putting the question for recess that the Ordinance Committee has scheduled having Mr. George Lehleitner at the Convention this evening at 7:00 p.m., in order that all delegates would hear Mr. Lehleitner. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I rise to a point of information. It seems that at the outset of our plenary session this morning the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee had made a request for about six hours of time. I thought maybe that we might be able to use this afternoon instead of in plenary session, I know the Apportionment Committee has work to do, and I am quite sure all other committees would be busy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have Committee Proposal No. 16, a proposal on ordinance and transitional measures, that is before us, is it not, in second reading at this time? There is another proposal from that Committee, Committee Proposal No. 17 that is not yet before us. Is that right, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: That is right, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it the wish of the body to come back after recess and continue with Committee Proposal No. 16 or would you desire a longer recess? What is the feeling of the delegates? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: As to Committee Proposal No. 16, I believe that should be passed, maybe in five minutes time. I think the only one we are concerned with here is the disclaimer of public lands, which is a necessary part of the constitution, and I believe the other two -- one clause there is probably not necessary, and I believe the other regarding the University has already been passed on so it shouldn't take over five minutes of the Convention time.

SUNDBORG: In view of that, Mr. President, I would like to withdraw my unanimous consent request made earlier and to request that we recess now until 7:00 o'clock this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: The Apportionment Committee will take about five minutes, so I don't want to leave the impression here that the Apportionment Committee wants to stand in the way of continuing progress. It will take five minutes during a recess for us to do what we want to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m. Mr. Sundborg, if the Chair may, what is going to be the situation tomorrow? Are we going to be able to have several proposals before us from the Style and Drafting Committee, in order to utilize our full day of time?

SUNDBORG: Dependent upon the speed with which the boiler room can produce mimeographed copies of what we will be feeding to them, I would say that it is certain that we can have at least three proposals mimeographed and back on the desks of the delegates by this evening's session, which would let us handle that many of them tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, I am sorry I should have mentioned this before. If there would be a possibility of adjourning for the benefit of the Rules Committee, I would like, if I am not out of order, I would like the possibility of getting in order to introduce Committee Proposal 17 and if that can be assigned under the calendar I assure the Convention that it will take up some time because it covers the state capital, Delegate Buckalew's fish trap proposal, and at least those two items are involved in this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, if there is no objection, are you offering Committee Proposal No. 17 to be read for the first time now? Is there objection to receiving Committee Proposal No. 17? If not, the Clerk will read Committee Proposal No. 17 for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 17, introduced by the Committee on Ordinances and Transitional Measures, SCHEDULE."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. If we do recess until 7:00 p.m. it probably will not be necessary to have the committee chairmen's meeting this afternoon. We could schedule that meeting for tomorrow afternoon at 12:30 p.m. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: If we adjourn to 7:00 o'clock tonight, would this Ordinance Committee have its 1:00 o'clock meeting, because I want to meet with it again?

McNEALY: The Ordinance Committee will meet all afternoon in fact.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Ordinance Committee will begin its meeting at 1:00 p.m. Unanimous consent is asked that the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m. Is there objection?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move?

SUNDBORG: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg so moves.

COGHILL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill seconds the motion. The question is. "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m.? All those in favor of standing at recess until 7:00 p.m. will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" seem to have it and the Convention stands at recess until 7:00 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. It is not often we Alaskans have an opportunity to extend our gratitude to one who has so unselfishly dedicated a considerable portion of his life's endeavors towards fulfillment of a principle and purpose solely for us. Such, however, is our good fortune this evening for with us on this rostrum is a young man who over the past few years has expended a considerable part of his time and personal fortune in an unyielding determination to secure a rightful place in the brotherhood of states for Alaska and Hawaii. This man is recognized as one of the most successful and outstanding personalities of the business field in the entire South. Because of his devoted interest to our statehood cause, one of the committees of our Convention and your President extended to him an invitation to appear before us. Traveling at his own expense he arrived in Fairbanks three days ago. We are fortunate indeed to have him with us. I deem it a great honor as an Alaskan and as a delegate to this Constitutional Convention to present to you George H. Lehleitner of New Orleans, Louisiana.

(Standing ovation)

(Mr. Lehleitner then delivered his prepared address, a copy of which may be found in the Appendix.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Lehleitner. We really enjoyed and appreciated your presentation. The Convention will be at recess for ten minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 16 in second reading. The Chief Clerk will please read Committee Proposal No. 16 for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk read Proposal No. 16 for the second time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chairman of the Ordinance Committee have an explanation or any remarks to make at this time regarding this proposal? Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, the Committee has a committee amendment to offer to this, and if the Committee amendment is adopted it will then leave simply the language that is contained in the enabling act of Congress, and this section, incidentally, was transferred to the Committee on Ordinances from the Committee on the Legislative, and it was lifted out in its entirety also from that section. It is one of the requirements of Congress that it is necessary that this be in. I do wish to speak -- Mr. Hellenthal presented the Committee with a very shortened version of this which the Committee took no action upon and thought if Mr. Hellenthal so desired, he could present it to the Convention. Mr. President, might I offer at this time a proposed amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are offering an amendment that you wish to become a part of Committee Proposal No. 16?

McNEALY: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may present the proposed amendment, Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: I see that we made an error in writing out the amendment. I could give it orally on page 2, line 11.

McNEALY: "After the word 'alienation' delete the semicolon, insert a period and strike the balance of the section."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move the adoption?

McNEALY: I so move, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

McCUTCHEON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Is there discussion on the proposed amendment? Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, with this deletion the language then contains the same language as in House Bill 2535 and no other language. It is merely the required language that Congress required us to set out in the constitution. As to the items stricken, possibly Mr. McCutcheon or someone from the Legislative Committee could explain why they were there. The explanations were given to the Committee this afternoon. We propose under this amendment to only retain the language required under the enabling act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, insofar as from line 16 on. "The foregoing ordinances," etc., "shall be irrevocable." I don't recognize that type of terminology in the legislative act. I do, however, recognize the terminology that "Nothing in this section shall prevent this state from accepting any payments in lieu of taxes, and I don't see why it would be necessary to strike even that particular section of this particular section here, for the reason that it may be that in some date in the future, taxes, or payments in lieu of taxes, will be provided by the United States for these certain lands, and we wish it to be specific that the Territory or the new State of Alaska, rather, is not in any way proscribed from accepting such payments in lieu of taxes, and I feel it might be prejudicial to the new state to strike this particular sentence. Insofar as the sentence that begins on line 16, page 2, of Section 1, I am not concerned necessarily with that particular sentence, but I do feel that it might be essential that we retain the previous sentence to that for the benefit of the new state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Yes. Mr. President, the insistence upon the language that would authorize payments in lieu of taxes is based, in my opinion, upon a misconception of the reasons for the language in the Act of Congress or rather in the bill pending before Congress. The reason why Congress requires that the new state does not interfere with the lands or other property including fishing rights, title to which is held by Indians, Eskimos, or Aleuts; that is the first category, or the second category which is land held by the United States in trust for the Natives. The reason why Congress in this bill requires that no disposition be made of those lands is simply because Congress wants to give those lands to the people for whom they have held them all these many years. Congress has no intention of keeping those lands in a tax-exempt status or in holding the title forevermore. The bill merely enunciates the old principle that Congress desires to take care of the Indians and Aleuts and Eskimos itself. That is the reason for the language. So this language about accepting payments in lieu of taxes is out of place in this section, completely out of place. It isn't necessary anyway in the constitution, but its use, coupled with the bill and the language of the bill, shows clearly that we have misconstrued and have not read the Act of Congress and do not understand its intention. Therefore, I think the Committee acted very wisely, very wisely in deleting the last seven lines of Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: All the things that Mr. Hellenenthal said may be true, but if he or someone else can show me that it is not necessary for that language to be in there, or that it is in the wrong place, that is quite all right. I am not able to say whether it is in the right place or not, but I do know that this particular section says that "No taxes shall be imposed by the State upon any lands or other property now owned or hereafter acquired by the United States or which, as hereinabove set forth, may belong to said natives," etc., and I do know that in Kodiak we have Indian reservations all through the town, so to speak, right downtown on the main street, business property, etc., which is exempt from tax, and I was the one that asked that this be put in -- this section when the article on legislation was being drafted, and upon advice of consultants who were with us at that time, we put it in, and the language was theirs and not mine. I only want to be assured that if the time comes that the United States decides that they should compensate small communities in Alaska in some way for the taxes that they are not permitting them to collect right downtown, in the business sections of the town in particular, I would like to be able to have the various communities accept it and not just because we have made a disclaimer be unable to take advantage of any advantage that is offered us, so if somebody can show me where that is taken care of someplace else, then I withdraw my objection to it in this particular place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Hinckel, I don't know whether I can explain it to you or not, but the reason that language is unnecessary in my opinion is in line 8, speaking of Congress, it says "...except to such extent as the Congress has prescribed or may hereafter prescribe." If Congress changed the law and provided that they would make refund payments, there is the language that will do it, and there is no necessity for language in here which looks like the state is going to accept the money, because if Congress so passed an act and said that they could give the money to the city of Kodiak, I am sure that the city of Kodiak would accept it, and the language in my opinion is unnecessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I find myself at difference with Mr. Hellenthal and Mr. Buckalew on particularly this two and one-half lines to be found here in lines 13, 14, 15 of Section 1 on page 2. I feel definitely that this should be included as part of the constitution. I join with Mr. Hinckel in his observation that if you can show us where it is adequately covered otherwise in the article on ordinance and transitional measures, or otherwise in the constitution itself, I too would withdraw my objection, but I do feel it is a very important part of the present measure. I will address that to you, Mr. Hellenthal, as a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you care to answer that, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, Mr. President. Now, we are dealing now with the requirement in the enabling bill that reads as follows: "No taxes shall be imposed by the State upon any lands or other property now owned or hereafter acquired by the United States," that is the first class of property; then the second, "...or which as hereinabove set forth, may belong to the said Natives,"

-- two classes of property. Now, as to the first, it does not take any language whatsoever in the constitution to authorize the new state to accept the payment in lieu of taxes; no language is necessary at all to accomplish that purpose: if Congress decides to make us a payment in lieu of taxes, which the 48 states have been trying to get Congress to do for the last 25 years in connection with federally owned properties within the states, and which Congress for 25 years has refused to let get out of committee. So that isn't much of a problem. Now, as to the second class which are the Native lands, and the Native fishing rights and the Native properties; in Mr. Hinckel's case those Native claims are protected by a treaty. It is because of the treaty with Russia that the city of Kodiak cannot tax the Native lands in Kodiak, and that was the subject of a recent decision in the Third Judicial Division, and this language in here, permitting the state to accept a payment in lieu of taxes, certainly wouldn't give Kodiak any consolation, and it is unnecessary anyway, because if Congress decides to give it to Kodiak or to the new state in lieu of taxes, we can always accept it and we don't need anything in the constitution to permit it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Hellenenthal. We have various parcels of land around throughout the Territory in which there are reservations and these reservations have been set up for the Native peoples and they have accepted title to them and they are tax-exempt, but I know of some cases in which they would like to participate in municipal activities. Now, in the fact that they live on and reside on tax-exempt lands, they cannot be taxed. Could they accept or pay, if they expressed a desire voluntarily in lieu of taxes, the payments that would be proportionate we'll say to the taxes in that area, and then participate in the government as full citizens? The problem arises there that they do not want to be discriminated against, and I was thinking that the line and the words "here exempt" or the words "that may be authorized by Congress" might well be stricken because that might limit the payment in lieu of taxes to action taken by Congress where there might be a desire on the part of the people themselves to make payments in lieu of taxes so they can participate in their local government.

HELLENTHAL: What property situations do you have in mind, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I have a number of small reservation areas up around in the Second Division, up near Unalakleet is one and farther on over to the Westward in the Northcentral part of Alaska, there are some in that area.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Do you know of any situation where there is a Native reservation in Alaska within the confines of a taxing authority, a property-taxing authority?

V. RIVERS: Not at the moment, but our thought is that there will be, and they do not want to be excluded by such language we might adopt here.

HELLENTHAL: Another question. Who is going to create them?

V. RIVERS: Doubtless the State of Alaska. We have provided for it in our local government.

HELLENTHAL: For the creation of Indian reservations?

V. RIVERS: No, for the creation of local government units within which will lie Indian reservations that want to participate in the local government.

HELLENTHAL: Well, if that is a form of a question, I think it is highly improbable and I don't think it presents any problem at all. If someone wants to make a payment in lieu of taxes they can always do it, and it does not require any constitutional language to accept it.

V. RIVERS: Of course we have constitutional language here that says "may be authorized by Congress." They might have to take an act of Congress under this wording before they could do so.

HELLENTHAL: That is why it should all be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, another point here is that this says "The state may accept such payments in lieu of taxes as Congress may authorize." This says nothing about the political subdivisions of the state, and it says nothing about individual Natives paying something in lieu of taxes for fire protection or other services that the individual Native might want. I think that any sovereign state has the authority to accept money which is granted to it by Congress in lieu of taxes, so I support the Committee's amendment, and this is not necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I feel I speak at least for the majority of the Committee. It says in the first three lines of this article, "The State of Alaska and its people do agree that they forever disclaim all right and title to any lands or other property. etc." We felt that in the face of that absolute disclaimer, because there were two different categories of property set up in this particular section, that it would be necessary for us to make some sort of provision whereby the state could accept, in the event that Congress saw fit to make such payments to the state, because otherwise we had agreed to forever disclaim any right or title, any right as far as our Committee felt might be some sort of a payment in lieu of taxes. Now, in face of the argument, I, as the Chairman of the Committee, am still not convinced that this committee amendment should carry. It may be that they are in all justice, correct, but I feel constrained to vote against it because as far as I am concerned, we must make some sort of provision to abrogate this disclaimer in the event that the agency of the government may feel that because of certain circumstances and because of the ownership of the government in certain state lands, or otherwise, that they may wish to make a certain type of a payment in lieu of taxes, that we must have some sort of a situation here which will permit the state to accept it in the face of this absolute disclaimer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: I consider this a closing speech --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any other delegate who wishes to be heard?

McNEALY: I would like to waive the right, if any other delegate after I speak wishes to speak, this will be my closing speech. Mr. McCutcheon, it was not the desire of our Committee to substantially alter your committee proposal, and I am only going to read this in line with what Mr. Buckalew stated, and if you and if the Convention feel that the Ordinance Committee interpretation of this is wrong, then we certainly would have no objections to this particular sentence, "in lieu of taxes", remaining in the article. As to this particular proposal, starting at the semicolon on line 4, page 2, and just reading the highlights here, "...and that no taxes shall be imposed by the State upon any lands or other property now owned or hereafter acquired by the United States or which, as hereinabove set forth, may belong to said natives, except to such extent as the Congress has prescribed or may hereafter prescribe," and the thought of the Committee there simply, in offering this amendment, was that Congress could prescribe payment, or taxes, hereafter if they so desired.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee on Ordinances be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 30 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 22 - Armstrong, Barr, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Hinckel, Johnson, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh.

Absent: 3 - Riley, Robertson, VanderLeest.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

CHIEF CLERK: 30 yeas, 22 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it, and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other committee amendments to be proposed for Committee Proposal No. 16? Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, we have a committee proposed amendment to Section 2.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, strike Section 2."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. McNealy?

McNEALY: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

BARR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to ask a question of the Chairman of the Committee if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. McNealy, did the Committee propose to substitute a new Section 2 after the deletion of the present Section 2?

McNEALY: There was no proposal as such by the Committee. Our thought -- we couldn't arrive definitely at a decision in the Committee, and in this matter I want to bring the matter out on the floor for discussion.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question if I might. After this section is deleted, it would be possible to introduce an amendment for a new Section 2, would it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Smith. Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, in the Committee and with the consultants today -- however, I believe they came in after the Committee had fairly well decided whether it was advisable for us or not to attempt to approve something that wasn't in existence, and the purpose of the Committee preparing this in the first place comes from House Bill 2535, and it is one of the required provisions that Congress called for in this enabling act under Section 5 which reads as follows: "That all the provisions of this Act reserving rights or powers to the United States, as well as those prescribing the terms or conditions of grants of lands or other property made to the state are consented to fully by said state and its people." Now, Mr. President, your Committee realizes that if we were drawing this constitution under the enabling act then we would have no problem, we simply would write in the provision out of the enabling act. But in the section we have adopted we have given a carte blanche approval here -- if this section is not deleted we would be giving carte blanche approval to any enabling act that Congress might write -- and they could very well, say, write up a bill there, partitioning Alaska and putting the Second and Fourth Divisions in the military reserve and granting statehood to the rest, and then at least we up here would be opposed to statehood under those terms. That may be a little farfetched, but there may be other matters which Congress could write in which we would not want to approve in advance. The Committee felt under the language here that if we wrote this in we would be buying a "pig in a poke" possibly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Smith.

SMIHT: Perhaps I should wait until this proposed amendment is acted on. I had intended to ask 8 question, but it would not be pertinent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment?
Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I agree with everything that Mr. McNealy says. This section right here is a blank check for all future enabling acts. Now, we can't say we will obtain statehood this year or next, and this says that we agree to accept all conditions imposed upon us by any enabling act written within the next 50 or 100 years in case we don't have statehood by that time. It is not necessary in this constitution because, as you know, every committee in writing up their proposals, their committee reports, have continually looked at the present enabling act and have written up these different articles and different sections to agree with that enabling act, so we have conformed to all the conditions imposed on us by the present enabling act. We have done that in the constitution, so this is merely restating the same thing, but it is holding us to the same conditions on all future enabling acts, and I don't propose to write any blank checks like that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I have an amendment to offer as a new Section 2 to Committee Proposal No. 16.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith, the Chair would first like to inquire of the Chairman of the Committee whether the Committee has any other proposed amendments to the proposal before we accept amendments from the floor. Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, we do have to the committee proposal if the Chair would care to pass on to Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, on Section 3, Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I would like to make it orally; it is very brief. "Strike Section 3."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves that Section 3 be deleted from the proposal. Is that a committee amendment, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: That is a committee amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seconds the motion. Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, this was drawn prior to the time the proposal was on the floor with regard to the University of Alaska, and since the other proposal has already been passed by this body, why we should ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request that the amendment be adopted? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McNealy, would you wish a recess at this time or are you willing to accept the other proposed amendments now to the proposal?

McNEALY: If we could, Mr. President, have just a one minute recess, so I could talk to Mr. Smith.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Smith.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2. All provisions of the Act admitting Alaska to the Union which reserves rights or powers to the United States, as well as those prescribing the terms or conditions of the grants of lands or other property made to Alaska, are consented to fully by the State of Alaska and its people."

SMITH: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith moves the adoption of the proposed amendment, seconded by Mr. Johnson. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, this amendment contains the exact wording of the latest enabling bills. The omission of this provision in the Hawaiian Constitution has resulted in the fact that the people of Hawaii are going to have to amend their constitution before it will be acceptable to Congress. Now, this has been referred to as merely an enabling bill and it has been intimated that this wording may be changed. However, this exact wording has been carried forward in every enabling bill presented to Congress since 1950, and I feel that if we are going to meet the requirements of the enabling acts that this provision must go into our constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, unfortunate as it may appear, I am inclined to disagree with Mr. Smith. I don't believe that Alaskans should accept statehood under any circumstances. There are some conditions under which I don't believe we should bow down or stoop so low as to accept statehood. Statehood isn't the only thing in this world. We have survived some 70 or 80 years as a territory. Unless we can have some respectable type of offer from Congress we shouldn't just bow our heads and say, "O.K., we will take statehood under any circumstances." Consequently, I am opposed to this type of thing. It is possible there can be some kind of terminology worked out whereby Alaska is willing to concede that we are asking for statehood and that we shall accept it, but to say that under any circumstances, after we have adopted this constitution, we will accept whatever Congress gives us, I don't think is a fair offer to our own people, and consequently, predicated on those arguments, I am inclined to oppose this particular section as it is stated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I am wondering if there is not a way out where we could eventually adopt this section but not grant a blank check to Congress. If you consider the time schedule for statehood, the constitution will be ratified, we may elect two senators and a representative. The next step is up to Congress; Congress passes an enabling bill. Under that bill before we actually become a state we will have to elect a governor and the members of our legislature, and their election will have to be certified to the President of the United States, and then he issues the proclamation under which we actually become a state. Would it not be possible to leave this provision out of our constitution, out of the schedule of ordinances, and provide that an ordinance of this type be submitted to the voters of Alaska after Congress passes the enabling bill, and be up for ratification at the same time that we vote on the governor and the members of the legislature, which will be our final action prior to becoming a state?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anyone know the answer to that question? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would like to rise in support of the same vein of thought that Mr. Fischer was developing here. I think we not only have to strike Section 2 such as we have done, which in effect was signing a blank check, but it appears to me that we have got to reserve some way of passing on an enabling act that might be passed in the future and that the method Mr. Fischer suggests might be one way of doing it. In the case of Hawaii, Hawaii left out a couple of things that Congress thought ought to be in there and Congress merely provided that at the time of going through their voting procedure they would vote on two items that Congress felt should be in the constitution, and should those items be passed the constitution would be deemed amended and everything would be O.K., and it says, "In the event the foregoing propositions are not adopted at said election by a majority of the legal votes cast on said submission the provisions of this Act shall thereupon cease to be effective." It appears to me we might be well advised to retain some way of voting directly on whether we like the enabling act that might be presented to us sometime in the future or not. There is one other objection I have to the inclusion of Mr. Smith's proposed amendment, and that is throughout the Territory of Alaska today many people object strenuously to the provisions in the current enabling act requiring the state to retain titles to all the minerals, and the only answer we have been able to make is, "It is in the enabling act; there is nothing we can do about it." But I feel by including the language of Section 5 of HR 2535 here, we are going a little further than we ought to indicating to the Congress that we like that provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, are you suggesting, perhaps, we defer action on this question that Mr. Smith now has before us until a later time in which, perhaps, all the interested delegates could confer with consultants or others who might have an answer to this problem? Is that your suggestion?

WHITE: In my opinion, Mr. President, that would be the best method of procedure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And would you have objection, Mr. Smith?

SMITH: I would have no objection, Mr. President. This matter was discussed rather thoroughly by the Committee and some of the consultants, and I merely put this amendment before the group to bring out the very discussion which is taking place. The wording if this provision is not radical, it is not new; it has appeared in several state constitutions, but I don't know of any other states who have drawn constitutions and ratified constitutions before the passage of their enabling acts. I have not the history of any states that might have followed that procedure, but if Congress followed the same procedure in the case of Alaska as they have followed in the case of Hawaii, then I would favor leaving this section or some requirement out of the constitution for the very reason that Mr. White has pointed out. So, it is a matter that this group will have to decide, and I will say again that my reason for presenting this amendment was to bring out the very discussion which has taken place, and I have no objection to further discussion with the Committee or on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Here is my thinking on this, Mr. President. Congress could make us take statehood whether we wanted it or not because we don't have control over our destinies at all. If Congress wanted to divide it up into six states and so did, I guess we would be divided into six states. The only thing we could do is holler about it, maybe refuse to go ahead and function as a state, but we would be six states if Congress so directed. And I wondered if we could pass a resolution, and in the resolution memorialize Congress, and direct our Senators and Delegates that we won't accept statehood on any terms unless they are substantially the same as in this house bill and then we could instruct our Senators to tell the Congressmen if they give us less than this last house bill, we won't take it. I think that would probably cure the problem and it wouldn't be a blank check because the Senators would say. "We won't accept it." Now, we wouldn't have the authority to do it but it would certainly show Congress and our elected representatives under what terms we would take statehood, and it would probably save us the trouble of going back to the people. I don't think that Congress is going to pass any enabling bill that is less generous than the one they have had on the books. The tendency is to give us more as we go along. I don't think we have any real danger and if we passed a resolution I think our elected representatives could protect us enough. They could certainly tell Congress that the people in Alaska are not going to take it. Of course, it wouldn't mean anything because we would have to take it if they gave it to us. As a matter of fact, I don't think that language is operative anyway, because I believe Congress could shove anything down our throats they want. They might give us an elective governor bill and never give us statehood. If that is what they decide to do, I guess we'll have to take it; and we have decided that we are not going to secede, or anything like that, or issue butternutgray uniforms, so I think we are sort of stuck.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President. I suspect that we are, perhaps, exhibiting not humility but $300,000 worth of gall when we suggest that we are not going to consent to the Act of Congress admitting us, and that it will only be on our own terms. The whole debate here during the past three months has been how to get in rather than how to stay out. We have obligingly, under one of the current enabling acts, we have obligingly conformed because the said Convention has provided, first, that no law shall be enacted respecting establishment of religion; second, that we have a disclaimer in there to the properties of the United States, we have abided by that; and we have said the state will assume the debts and liabilities of the Territory. We have made provision for an establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools, and we have assured them that the lands and other property belonging to the citizens of the United States residing without the State will never be taxed at a higher rate than lands or other property belonging to the residents thereof, and then on the most vital condition and requirement in this act we blithely say, "Well, no, we have to see what they are offering us." Frankly, Hawaii made the mistake and it will probably cost them $300,000. And what the answer is, possibly Mr. White's solution is an excellent one. I would recommend, under the circumstances, rather than possibly fall into a $300,000 boner, that we put the matter over and discuss it further.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection this proposed amendment will be held in abeyance until a later time and perhaps after adequate discussion -- Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have one question I would like to ask Mr. Smith.

LEE: May I have the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: I don't have very much to say. I concur with Mr. McLaughlin. I would like to quote a classic statement made by an eminent advocate of statehood some years ago. He said, "We will cut the pattern to fit the cloth," and he also said. "If we can't eat steak we will eat beans." Is that correct? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I suggest we have a two-minute recess at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for two or three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Mr. Smith's proposed amendment. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the consideration of this motion be put over for at least 24 hours.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request made by Mr. McLaughlin? Miss Awes.

AWES: I don't want to object, but would it be in order for me to make a comment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Miss Awes, you might make a comment.

AWES: I was just thinking that it seems to me that certain other states must have met this same problem. I should think that all of those who have gone in under the Tennessee Plan that we heard tonight must have gone in before an enabling act was passed, and I should think that before we decide what to do, that somebody ought to look into the matter of how it was handled by the other states.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, then is there objection to the unanimous consent request to hold this over until tomorrow evening?

HERMANN: May we have it read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2. All provisions of the Act admitting Alaska to the Union which reserves rights or powers to the United States, as well as those prescribing the terms or conditions of the grants of lands or other property made to Alaska, are consented to fully by the State of Alaska and its people."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. McLaughlin's unanimous consent request? If there is no objection, the proposed amendment will be held over until tomorrow evening. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, to put that off for 24 hours will be 9:18 o'clock tomorrow night.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will you remember that, Mr. Taylor, please. The Convention will come to order. (Laughter)

EMBERG: May I request we be furnished mimeographed copies of that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk will furnish all delegates with mimeographed copies of the proposed amendment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I have permission to make a comment on this same matter?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I believe we should perhaps give a little attention to something that Mr. Buckalew said a moment ago and review it because I am sure it was not correct, and that was that Congress, whether we wanted to be a state or not, could force statehood upon us. I know that in the history of the United States, statehood was never forced upon any territory. A state can only be formed by the people of that state. All Congress can do is pass what is called an enabling act. The enabling act is an act which permits the people, if they desire to do so, to become a state. Congress could not force statehood upon us on their own terms. We would have to consent to those terms. We, the people of Alaska, would have to form the state. It could not be formed for us by anyone else.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would like to make a brief comment, too. I would like to point out that we have already departed from the Act of Congress that I hold in my hands, in connection with the provisions of Mr. Smith's Committee with respect to mineral lands. Nowhere in the natural resources article that we adopted did we follow the language of the house bill as contained on page 39 where it is required that, "...all grants of mineral lands be made upon the express condition that all sales, grants, deeds, or patents shall be subject to and contain a reservation to the state of all of the minerals in the lands so sold, granted, deeded, or patented." If we are going to get consistent we should then change the natural resources article, and it is for that reason that I think this unanimous consent request was very wise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, do you or your Committee have other amendments to offer to this proposal?

McNEALY: No further amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have objection to other amendments being offered from the floor, if there are any, at this time?

McNEALY: No objections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 1? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves that the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder if Mr. Johnson would consent to withhold his motion so that we might revert to the topic of committee reports, briefly?

JOHNSON: I will be glad to, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will revert to the order of business of introduction of committee reports at this time. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, your Committee on Style and Drafting reports back to the Convention two articles which were referred to us. One is the article embraced in Committee Proposal No. 3 having to do with the initiative, referendum and recall. The other is the article embraced in Committee Proposal No. 1 on the subject of suffrage and elections. We would suggest, Mr. President, that our report, which has been placed on the desk of each delegate, be referred to the Rules Committee for a place on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The reports of the Committee on Style and Drafting are referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Are there committee announcements or other reports of committees to be made at this time? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I should like that the description of election districts consisting of nine pages, numbered 2 to 9, inclusive, be considered in first reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read Committee Proposal No. 14 for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: It is just the description part. The proposal is just the description of election districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal itself was read for the first time?

CHIEF CLERK: It is in Engrossment and Enrollment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The description of the election districts, could you read those titles for the first time? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if I may, I believe the proposal itself was read for the first time and referred, the whole proposal has been read for the second time with the exception of this schedule, and I believe that what is in order now is the reading of this in second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Have these titles been read previously?

CHIEF CLERK: This part has, you see. It is just the description that hasn't been read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then the description of election districts is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Is this section in first reading now or must it go on to second reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will be in second reading when the Rules Committee assigns it to the calendar, yes, Mr. Rosswog. Are there other committee announcements to be made at this time?

McCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Well, I guess I can't tell because I don't know when we will recess, so I can't make my announcement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, it appears that the maker of the motion to adjourn is about ready to renew his request. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I will adjourn if that is what you want, but I was going to make a committee announcement. Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow morning. Are there committee announcements to be made prior to that time that the question is put? If not, the question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention stands adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 24, 1956

SIXTY-THIRD DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning Reverend Gurr of the Pentecostal Church of God. Reverend Gurr will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND GURR: Gracious Heavenly Father, we come unto Thee this morning, thanking Thee for Thy goodness and Thy mercy to all mankind, praying unto Thee, O God, as Solomon prayed of old, that, mighty God, this morning Thou would grant unto this body of people, God, wisdom and understanding, God. God, be with them, Lord God, in each one of their meditations and decisions. Help them, O God, in each one of their decisions. Lead them, mighty God, that they might be able, God, to do something, Lord, that will edify Thee and to edify all mankind. God, we pray that Thou will guide them, Lord, in every act that they do. Be with them, Lord God, throughout this Convention. Help each one, O God, to be a brother to his neighbor. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Four absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: Reporting for the journal's 56th day and not finding any errors or omissions, I ask unanimous consent that the reading be dispensed with and the journal be approved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight asks unanimous consent that the journal of the 56th day be approved as read by the special Committee to read the journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Are there any communications or petitions from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Select committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? If not we will proceed with our calendar. Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Mr. President, I might call attention to two matters on the calendar which the members might note. The calendar was in the boiler room last evening before Committee Proposal No. 14 had been ordered to the calendar -- that is the election district descriptions -- which might be entered now under second reading for consideration today. Also, Committee Proposal

No. 16, after this calendar was published, was put over for 24 hours, last evening, so it may be out of order as it appears here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have Committee Proposal No. 17 before us then at this time. Is that right? Initiative and referendum? Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: In order that we can get Committee Proposal No. 14 all together again so that it can be considered in its entirety in the Style and Drafting Committee, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that we now consider in second reading the portion of Committee Proposal No. 14 that was reported to the Convention yesterday by the Committee on Apportionment; that is, the descriptions of election districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent request; is there objection? Mr. Nolan?

NOLAN: There is one item in here that I would like to check on the map first, unless it comes back up again for second reading for change later on?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you care to hold that over?

SUNDBORG: I'll withdraw my request, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If not, then we will have the proposal relating to initiative, referendum, and recall at this time. Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: A point of inquiry. Did I understand you to say we were to begin on the initiative and referendum?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is what the calendar shows, Mr. Johnson, at the top of the page. The Chair did not note that originally. What number is that on the enrolled copy?

CHIEF CLERK: It is headed "Style and Drafting Report".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposal. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder if we may have our report read since it relates directly to the proposal.

(The Chief Clerk began to read the report.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you wish to read the whole report?

CHIEF CLERK: Oh. Initiative and referendum, I'm sorry.

(The Chief Clerk then read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting concerning Committee Proposal No. 3, initiative, referendum and recall, in its entirety.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe the covering letter points out most of the changes which have been made since this article left the floor. I wonder if we may take it up section by section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: And I would be willing to answer questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Section 1, are there questions relative to Section 1? Does any delegate have a question in relation to Section 1?

SUNDBORG: I might mention, Mr. President, that from the enrolled copy we have combined Sections 1 and 2 therein, into Section 1 of the Style and Drafting report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Shall we put it this way? Is the referendum limited to only the acts of the legislature?

SUNDBORG: That is my understanding, Mr. McNees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I just wonder if it was necessary to combine those two. The language that was used by the Committee and approved on the floor here is the same language that is used in practically every constitution that uses the initiative and referendum. It is practically a standard definition and reads well and sounded good to practically everybody. The new language as used by the Committee on Style and Drafting, personally, doesn't appeal to me anywhere near as much. I just wonder if Style and Drafting isn't, for the sake of brevity, condensing our constitution to the point where it doesn't sound or look good.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Our thought on that and our decision was based on the fact that in the enrolled copy, Sections 1 and 2 both were concerned with a reservation of power by the people, or to the people, and we were able to reserve that power, covering both of these situations in a section which is shorter than even the referendum section alone as it appeared in the enrolled copy, and one of our desires throughout has been not to condense, necessarily but to express the ideas of the constitution succinctly and without unnecessary words in order that it won't repeat itself and go on at great length. We have no strong feelings in this matter but this thing that we have done, combining Sections 1 and 2 of the enrolled copy into a single section here, which we think is clear and we couldn't possibly misconstrue it, is just typical of the sort of thing that Style and Drafting has been doing throughout the proposals which it has been working on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions?

SUNDBORG: There is no substantive change that has been made and we do feel that Section 1 in our redraft does read well.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, there is a substantive question here that is not a change by Style and Drafting that I think, specifically, Mr. McNees's previous question brings it into my mind, that we might have overlooked something. In the first place, namely, that the referendum can reject acts of the legislature only. How about rejecting a law that has been initiated two or three years before? Is it our intention that such a law shall not be subject to change by referendum at a later date?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Kilcher, I believe it was the intention of the Convention, if we will look at what is Section 5 in our draft and what in the enrolled copy was line 14 on page 2; I will read from the enrolled copy. It says, "Referendum petitions shall be filed within 90 days after adjournment of the legislative session at which the measure was passed." Now, I think that ties us down definitely to make the referendum apply only to acts passed by the Legislature, and it also said in Section 2 of the original enrolled copy that, "The people reserve the power to require, by petition, that laws enacted by the Legislature be submitted to the voters for approval or rejection.

KILCHER: I realize that, Mr. Sundborg. I said that a substantive question that does not arise from your Committee's changes, but that generally, I think, whether it has been given enough thought in the first place. I would like to maybe ask the committee chairman of the substantive committee if that idea has been given sufficient thought. I, for one, do not know how technically a law enacted by initiative could be changed and by whom. By the legislature? If not -- if somebody has the answer I would be pleased to hear it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Although the question wasn't addressed to me, Mr. Collins, may I attempt to answer that?

COLLINS: You may, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I believe the remedy there, Mr. Kilcher, would be for a new initiative to be introduced. That is, something which has been put on the books by initiative could be repealed or changed in any respect by another initiative, which would simply change its language or saying that, "Section so-and-so of the laws are hereby repealed." That would go through the initiative process and be accepted and adopted by the people; that law would then go off the books.

KILCHER: In other words, you think it might be possible by another initiative to strike, delete, or amend any law?

SUNDBORG: I am certain of that Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I think Section 6 answers Mr. Kilcher's question on line 19. Beginning on line 19, "An initiated law is effective 90 days after certification, is not subject to veto, and may not be repealed by the legislature within two years of its effective date." And following is the part which I feel answers the question, "It may be amended at any time."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson? Mr. Barr?

BARR: In Section No. 1, on the second line it says, "... and approve or reject acts of the legislature." Now, of course, that word "acts" means two things. It means an action or it may mean a law enacted that is called an act afterwards. Now I took this to mean a law "may approve or reject laws passed by the legislature". Was that the intention of the Committee? Suppose they did not pass a law? In other words, they took action against a bill, then could that be referred or initiative taken on it? It seems to me "action" would be better, which would include both passage or defeat of a bill.

SUNDBORG: I think it is probably clear from Section 5, where the detailed procedure is discussed, that it could apply only to laws. It says there, "Referendum petitions may be filed only within 90 days after adjournment of the legislative session at which the act was passed."

BARR: Now that is what concerns me, because if the legislature fails to pass a law that the people think is necessary, then they should have the power to initiate that law. That is not an act that is passed, that is an act that failed. It isn't an act; it is a bill that failed.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Barr, they do have the power to initiate such a law under the initiative. There is nothing that says they can't.

BARR: How about on the referendum? The legislature wouldn't, if it failed, naturally they wouldn't refer it to the people.

SUNDBORG: That is right. Then it would have to be initiated.

BARR: It would have to be initiated.

SUNDBORG: There was, as I remember it, a proposal, I think it was in the proposal on the legislative, where there was a provision for acts which had not been passed, or something of the kind, to be referred. Is that correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees?

MCNEES: I have that here, Mr. Sundborg. It is something I have been checking on. Section 21 in the original legislative article.

BARR: Well, that answers the question pretty well.

SUNDBORG: And it was deleted, was it not, by the Convention?

MCNEES: Not to my knowledge. That was the reason I was raising the question.

SUNDBORG: How does it read, Mr. McNees?

MCNEES: Section 21, "Any bill failing of passage by the legislature may be submitted to referendum by order of the governor either in its original form or with such amendments which were considered by the legislature, as he may designate. Any bill which, having passed the legislature, is returned thereto by the governor with objections and, upon reconsideration, is not approved by the majority as required by this constitution, may be submitted to referendum by a majority of all the members sitting as one body." Of course, that would lead to legislative action.

SUNDBORG: I believe that the whole thing was deleted by action of the Convention because it does not appear in the enrolled copy of the act on the legislature, Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I know it does not appear in the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, do you recall?

SWEENEY: I was just looking for it. I don't recall right offhand.

SUNDBORG: I know we have been working in our Committee on the proposal on the legislature and it does not contain it in the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, do you know or do you recall what happened?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, Mr. President. That particular section of our article was deleted by amendment on the floor.

BARR: The entire section?

MCCUTCHEON: The whole thing was struck.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Section 1? Are there questions on Section 2? Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: In line 10, Style and Drafting has said, "Denial of certification is subject to judicial review." The enrolled copy in Section 4, line 16, it says that "certification shall be reviewable by the courts". Now it seems to me a "denial of certification" is different than "certification", and if it is, at least there ought to be an allowance or denial that certification is reviewable by the courts.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I wonder if Mr. Robertson is looking at the enrolled copy or is he looking at the report of the Committee before it was amended on the floor? My enrolled copy says on line 15, page 1, "Denial of certification shall be reviewable by the courts."

ROBERTSON: I beg your pardon -- I was looking at it.

SUNDBORG: I think we have preserved that same idea exactly in our draft.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to Section 2? Mr. Gray?

GRAY: If I may refer back to Section 1 in that "reject act", is there any reason why you did not use the same words and say "reject laws"? You say the people "may propose and enact laws" and in the other "approve or reject laws". Is there any difference between "laws" and "acts"?

SUNDBORG: When Mr. Barr raised that question I did feel and I do now feel that there may be a difference. It might be better to say "and approve or reject laws enacted by the legislature by the referendum". Of course, a law is not enacted by the legislature; it is enacted by the legislature with the approval of the governor, and it can be vetoed by the governor. If the Convention feels it would clarify anything I am sure our Committee would not object to putting in "reject laws enacted by the legislature".

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have been through that mill. Bills or proposals in the legislature are called bills. After the legislature passes them they are called acts, and any of the special actions are covered by resolutions or memorials or house joint resolutions or concurrent resolutions. This can only refer to a law. As Mr. Sundborg said, acts are also subject to approval of the governor; so to say "acts enacted by the legislature" then you should also stick in "and approved". I think this is perfectly good the way it is.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, "acts" is much broader than "laws". If you enact a law it is an affirmative act; it is an affirmative thing done by the legislature, but an act might be an action of the legislature which repealed some former law. That is still an act. There is a difference between a law and an act. It could be a repeal or putting a new law on the books, but if a law was the only thing that goes on the book, when you repeal something you haven't passed a law. You have passed a repeal. "Act" is much the better term.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I am sure the word "acts" meets Mr. Gray's objections but I wonder if thought was to the congressional method which was to capitalize the "A"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I can answer that directly by saying that thought was given to capitalization, and the decision of our Committee, subject to review here, is that we will capitalize nothing in this constitution except "United States", "State" when used as a noun, and proper names. We are not going to capitalize "governor", "legislature", "senate", "house of representatives", and that is in line with the modern trend in constitution writing as well as elsewhere.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: You know the distinction we make to overcome Mr. Gray's objection; the Congress of the United States always, when referring to an act of Congress, capitalizes the "A".

SUNDBORG: If the Convention wants to do that in this case, I think our Committee wouldn't object. What is the thought here? That the word "acts" might be confused with "actions"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I don't believe the lawyers here confuse it but I believe that the layman might when he reads this constitution. There are a lot of people that don't even know that a bill that is passed is called an "act", and when they read this, they think that you are talking about an "action" of the legislature.

SUNDBORG: Relying on what Mr. Rivers and Mr. Taylor said, I would feel that it was our intention here to make not only the actions of the legislature, the acts which had put new law on the books but also such actions as the legislature might take, say, repealing a law, subject to the referendum. For instance, the next legislature might go to work and repeal the entire law having to do with employment security. Well, if the people didn't like that and wanted to take that up as a referendum, I believe they should have the right to do so, even though what the legislature did might have been expressed in just half a dozen words, that "Chapter so-and-so of Session Laws such-and-such is hereby repealed."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions in relation to Sections 1 or 2? If not, are there questions with relation to Section 3? The Convention will come to order. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: It would appear to me that there is some validity to this discussion. As far as an act of the legislature is concerned, an act of the legislature could be a concurrent resolution, a joint memorial, a memorial by either house, or some other type of act, which would not have the force or effect of law necessarily, and which would not be subject to either the governor's approval, or initiative by the people; and yet it appears to me that in this particular instance either they should go beyond the word "acts" because an act cannot become a law without either the overriding by a substantial majority in the houses or else the approval of the governor. At least that is the way it appears to me. So, it would appear from that argument that the word "acts" is not necessarily applicable in this instance, primarily because there are a number of actions which can be taken by the legislature which would not be subject to initiative, or referendum, as a matter of fact, because they may only apply to the legislature itself or be of a transitory nature which would not have the effect of law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President and Mr. McCutcheon, those resolutions and memorials are labeled resolutions and memorials, and every bill is entitled "a bill" or "an act". So, I believe that the titles that are hooked on would answer Mr. McCutcheon. Those are actions to be sure, but they are not acts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to the first three sections? If not, are there questions on Section 4? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, there is a change which we have made in Section 4 which may be substantive. I will read the language first from the enrolled copy. It says, on lines 9 to 13: "The petition may be filed with the attorney general, who shall prepare a ballot title or proposition, designating and summarizing the substance of the proposed law which proposition shall go upon the ballot as hereinafter provided. You note that the "attorney general" which we have changed to "secretary of state", he has the duty of preparing the ballot title, designating and summarizing the substance of the proposed law, but he does not have the duty under that language to put it upon the ballot and neither does anyone else. It simply says that it "shall go upon the ballot", and we have changed ours to fix that responsibility for seeing that the measure gets on the ballot on the secretary of state. We have said, "The secretary of state shall prepare a title and summary of the proposed law and shall place them on the ballot..." which we felt tightened it up and made him subject to mandamus if he failed or refused to do what we believe was the intention of the article as it passed the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Sundborg, who prepared the proposition?

SUNDBORG: The original bill?

HELLENTHAL: The proposition that you vote on.

SUNDBORG: The secretary of state, that is, the proposition, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Where does it say that?

SUNDBORG: Well, what you vote on is what is on the ballot. It says, "The secretary of state shall prepare a title and summary of the proposed law and shall place them on the ballot." Now, that "proposed law", is that what you are asking about?

HELLENTHAL: Would you think that "title" or a "summary" is identical with "the proposition"?

SUNDBORG: That is just "a title and summary of the proposition". The proposition itself is handled here in Section 2 where it says, "The application must contain the bill to be initiated." It might be a bill or an act, Mr. Hellenthal, which might be pages and pages long such as the banking act which has been considered at several sessions of the legislature and has never made it though. Now, some group of bankers might wish to get that enacted by the initiative, and it runs to something like 200 pages. You couldn't possibly put that on the ballot, but it should be contained, word for word, of what the law would be in the initial application and then it would be the duty of the secretary of state to summarize that and give it a title and have on the ballot enough description of it so the people would know what they were voting on.

HELLENTHAL: Well who prepares the proposition?

SUNDBORG: The sponsors.

HELLENTHAL: I don't think it's clear there at all. I think the original language was far better.

SUNDBORG: Well, let's compare the two. The original language says --

HELLENTHAL: "... who shall prepare the ballot title or proposition." Now, frankly, I don't think that the two names are synonymous at all, but this language makes them, at least in light of the constitution, but I think the proposition should be referred to, and I think it should be clearly referred to in Section 4, or rather 5.

SUNDBORG: You are speaking of the new Section 5?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. The reason I say that is that the lawyers here that have worked on municipal bond issues know how difficult it is to prepare a workable proposition, and that is one of the greatest arts of the legal profession, and a lot of lawyers fall on their face in that connection, and I think this proposition should be clearly distinguished from the ballot title or from the summary. They are just different things, that is all.

SUNDBORG: As you used the word "proposition" is that the language that goes on the ballot?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. Proposition 1, proposition 2, proposition 3. They are usually questions, "Shall a law be passed authorizing the voters to bond for capital improvements necessary to construct a dock?" That is a proposition, and it is quite an art.

SUNDBORG: That is the same thought that we have here. Now if you will look at the enrolled copy it says, "The attorney general shall prepare a ballot title or proposition ..." which would seem to indicate that they are synonymous.

HELLENTHAL: They are not synonymous, though.

SUNDBORG: I mean he could put, under this language, either one, on the ballot.

HELLENTHAL: But in your new Section 5 you don't even use that language.

SUNDBORG: No, but don't you think we cover it when we say first, referring to Section 2, that "The application must contain the bill to be initiated or the act to be referred." That would have to be complete. Then in Section 3 we say that, "The secretary of state" -- wait a minute.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for two or three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may read the communications that are before the Convention.

(The Chief Clerk read the following communications: a telegram addressed to President Egan from Mirth B. Sarvela, Northern Fishing Vessel Owners' Association of Sitka, requesting fisheries management policy be set forth in the resources article of the constitution; a telegram addressed to Delegate Awes from Jean A. Blanchard of Anchorage, urging provisions be made in the constitution for fish and wildlife; a telegram addressed to Delegate White from Jess Morrison of Anchorage, criticizing the omission of the provisions for fish and game in the constitution; a telegram addressed to Delegate White from A. W. Lond, Secretary, Anchorage Sportsmen's Association, stating that only by incorporating the Alaska Sportsmen's Council recommendation into the constitution will the fish and wildlife be safe from mishandling; a telegram addressed to Delegate McCutcheon from Howard Houtz, Anchorage, criticizing the omission of provisions for the fish and wildlife in the constitution; a telegram addressed to President Egan from the members of the Anchorage Sportsmen's Association, criticizing the delegates for not specifically providing for the fish and wildlife in Alaska, in the constitution.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other communications? If not we will proceed with the proposal on initiative, referendum and recall. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to offer a committee amendment. "Section 4, page 2, line 2, at the end of the line change the word 'title' to 'proposition'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the introduction of this amendment at this time?

SUNDBORG: It would then say "The secretary of state shall prepare a proposition and summary of the proposed law and shall place them on the ballot ..." etc.

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Just for the purpose of clarification I think that that should read "a ballot title". "A ballot title and proposition" should go in there because the ballot has a title, and the proposition which the people are voting on. It's a combination of the ballot title and proposition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it "ballot title, and proposition," is that the way you would say it? Or "ballot, title, and proposition"?

TAYLOR: No. "Ballot title". "Ballot" is the descriptive word of "title"; "ballot title and proposition of the proposed law". "The summary of the proposition" is what it, should be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I wonder if I could --

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for a couple of minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment which I proposed a few minutes ago on behalf of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment he proposed a few moments ago. Is there objection? If there is no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would now like to propose a committee amendment. "On page 2, lines 2 and 3, strike 'title and summary of' and insert in lieu thereof 'ballot title and proposition summarizing'." May I correct what is to be deleted? It should say "title and summary of". No. Excuse me. It was right the first time, so that it would read "The secretary of state shall prepare a ballot title and proposition summarizing the proposed law and shall place them ..." etc. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed committee amendment. Is there objection? If there is no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to move that the same change be made on line 12, so that it will read "The secretary of state shall prepare a ballot title and proposition summarizing the act..." etc. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, how will line 12 read where the word "act" is used whereas in line three the word "law" is used?

SUNDBORG: Mr. Robertson, that is intentional. Section 4 deals with the initiative, and it is a proposed law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Section 5 deals with the referendum and it refers to the act of the legislature which is being referred.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Metcalf?

METCALF: May I ask Mr. Sundborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask the question, Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: On the first page, line 16, you use the phrase "general election" and then on line 4, second page, you use the phrase "first statewide election". You meant "general election", either "primary" or "general", did you not, sir?

SUNDBORG: No, Mr. Metcalf. Those both come directly from the language of the enrolled copy; and in the first case we are talking about a required number of people who may sign the petitions. It was the intention of the Convention to refer that, to relate that, to the number who signed, or rather, who voted in the preceding general election. Now, that is a different matter entirely from what we have here in Sections 4 and 5, which is that, after all the requirements have been made and the petition has been filed, it is placed on the ballot at the first statewide election, whether it is a primary election, a general election, or a special election. That was an amendment made on the floor, and it was explained at that time that the desire was to get it on the first statewide election of whatever character.

METCALF: Then to save money we wouldn't have to call a special election every time some group of people decided to have an initiative? Was that the intention?

SUNDBORG: That was the intent, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Sections 4 or 5? If not, are there questions relating to Section 6? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I note what appears to be an inconsistency here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. White.

WHITE: It is not any doing of Style and Drafting but I would like to direct a question to the Chairman of Style and Drafting to find out if they discussed it. In Section 6, Mr. Sundborg, "A majority of the votes cast on the proposition is necessary for the enactment of an initiated law or for the defeat of an act referred." I refer to the words "defeat of an act referred". Now going back to Section 1 we say "approve or reject acts of the legislature by the referendum". Now if I understand referendum correctly it would say something like, "Shall such-and-such an act of the legislature be approved by the voters, yes or no?" So that it appears to me that perhaps a substantive change is necessary here in third reading. Did that come up in Style and Drafting?

SUNDBORG: I don't think that the particular question has been raised, Mr. White. Of course, the original says just what we say now in our draft. In Section 6, we say "A majority of the votes cast on the proposition is necessary for the enactment of an initiated law or for the defeat of an act referred." The second case there covers a law which is already on the books and in effect, and the only change that could be worked by the voters would be to defeat it. If they approve it, nothing happens, really. They are confirming what the legislature did.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, the referendum [two words not audible] on an existing law, it carries the burden of rejection. The burden isn't the burden of rejection; it takes a majority to reject. Now they could use the word "rejection" here instead of "defeat" if that would help any but I think it is perfectly clear the way it is. That all fits in with the idea of a possible veto by the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: If no change in substance is necessary here, then I would merely suggest that it be merely a matter for Style and Drafting because the two sections do not read the same, Section 1 and Section 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I believe that if we drop the words "approve or" from line 2 of page 1, we wouldn't really be dropping anything because if the people reserve the right to reject acts of the legislature, it is really the right which they wish to reserve; they don't necessarily want to reserve the right to approve them because they are in effect and will remain in effect whether they take them to the referendum or whether they do that and approve them. There is no difference. We could make it read, "The people may propose and enact laws by initiative" -- wait, no -- "The people may propose and enact laws by the initiative and reject acts of the legislature by the referendum."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I think though that that word "approve" should be left in there because sometimes we will have an act of the legislature that has been submitted and in it is that the thing be referred to the people for approval or rejection. Now, we have had in our legislature in Alaska here, we have referred acts, or propositions, to the people. We had one on the fish traps, we had one on the blanket primaries, and it was approved. Those things were approved and so we felt that that should be in there because many times in the states the legislators will pass the buck to the voters. It might be unpopular in certain quarters so the legislator says "Well, we will refer this to the people for approval or rejection," so I think the word "approval" has to be in there.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in view of that, and if the Convention agrees, I think on page 2, line 18, after the word "the", which is the fourth word on the line, that we insert "approval or" so that the sentence would read: "A majority of the votes cast on the proposition is necessary for the enactment of an initiated law or for the approval or defeat of an act referred."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Yes. I ask unanimous consent.

TAYLOR: I would like to ask a question. Do you not believe it would be better if it be before the "rejection or approval of the act referred"? Rejection, it says it can be rejected.

SUNDBORG: "Rejection" is all right but I believe the order ought to be "approved or rejected" as it is in Section 1, or else the order ought to be reversed in both cases.

TAYLOR: Yes, that is so, but so they would be consistent.

SUNDBORG: You would prefer, Mr. Taylor, "approval or rejection"?

TAYLOR: Yes, I believe that would be --

SUNDBORG: I have no objection to that, and I will include that in my request for unanimous consent, that we strike on line 18 the word "defeat" and insert in lieu thereof "approval or rejection".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to refer back to Section 5. Was it not the intent of the Committee to change "120" days which comes in line 14; to change that to "180" days?

SUNDBORG: That is correct. But our Committee did not offer that as a committee amendment, but we suggested it as something which was sensible and I believe the reason is set forth in our covering letter. What this says is that, "A referendum petition must be filed within 90 days after adjournment of the legislature..." And it has to go on the ballot of the first statewide election held more than 120 days after adjournment. Well, there is a difference of only 30 days between the time when the thing has to be filed and the time it may have to go on the ballot, which time, 30 days is not at all adequate for preparing the ballots and distributing them around the state, and having them ready for the election. Our suggestion was that the "120" on line 14 be changed to "180".

TAYLOR: Our original draft -- our original proposal as submitted by the body was "180" days. We had that up in the Committee and felt it was a difference of opinion as to the time. Some of us felt it should be "180", and I think it came out as "180" as I see it in the original draft here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent for that?

TAYLOR: Yes, unanimous consent that that be substituted for "120".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

R. RIVERS: I object solely for the purpose of furthering the discussion a little bit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Taylor? TAYLOR: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor so moves. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: A point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: This is an amendment as to substance and the motion should be to suspend the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right if there is objection to the unanimous consent request.

R. RIVERS: May I have the privilege of commenting?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Ralph Rivers, you may have the privilege.

R. RIVERS: And then perhaps I'll withdraw my objection. The Committee's covering letter indicates that legislatures have ended their labors some time in the latter part of March. The year around legislature we are talking about is not necessarily going to do that. It may run on until around the first of May and then you wouldn't have 180 days left over until the next general election. Our communications are speeding up all the time, the printing and distribution of the ballots doesn't take as much time as they used to in the dogteam days; and if you are going to have a legislature that runs quite a while and you put in 180 days you are going to miss the next general election. Now I like 120, and I think our facilities are such that they could get on the ball and get out those ballots in 120 days. Now that is the only reason I am objecting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I know it is physically impossible, no matter how much we speed up the printing, etc., from the time a petition is filed with the secretary of state, to have the proposition on the ballot at an election only 30 days afterwards, which is what this provides. It says they have to be filed within 90 days after adjournment, but they may have to come up at an election only 120 days after adjournment. Now, I don't care when the legislature adjourns. I believe that there should be a longer length of time than 30 days for the secretary of state to check these petitions and see whether the people who sign them are qualified voters, to call for bids on the ballot, to summarize the proposition, etc., to get them printed, which is a big job here because we have the requirement that the names have to be rotated on the ballot and it is a very slow process in any printing shop and can't be done entirely by machinery. It entails a lot of hand work; and then to distribute them throughout the state and get them into these polling places just can't be done in 30 days.

R. RIVERS: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers withdraws his objection. Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Did you give a thought to changing the "90" to "60" on line 10?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Do we have a proposed amendment before us at this time? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe it has been proposed that in line 14, page 2, the word "20" be changed to "80", and as I recall it, Mr. Hellenenthal had objected to Mr. Taylor's unanimous consent request for adoption of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded.

HELLENTHAL: I had not objected, I was just inquiring.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection there would be no need to suspend the rules because that would amount to the same thing. If there is objection it would be necessary to suspend the rules in order to attempt to adopt this amendment. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Will the Secretary please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 14, page 2, change '20' to '80'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent request for the adoption of the amendment? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other proposed amendments or questions with relation to Sections 4, 5, or 6? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I think I should explain that in Section 6 a number of changes have been made, or they are proposed by the Committee. The first one occurs in line 16 where we say "a majority of the votes cast on the proposition". The enrolled copy said only "a majority of the votes cast is necessary" and it might have been misinterpreted as being "a majority of all the votes cast in the election" whether on this matter or not. I believe it was the intent of the Convention that it should be "a majority of the votes cast" on the particular thing under consideration. Then we have added here what was not in the enrolled copy at all and there appears on lines 18 and 19 the sentence, "The secretary of state shall certify the election returns." There was no reference to that in the enrolled copy but we thought it was a desirable amendment. Then we have provided, starting on line 19, for the effective dates, "An initiated law is effective 90 days after certification," and then we have kept in what was in the enrolled copy, "... is not subject to veto and may not be repealed by the legislature within two years," and we have added: "of the effective date". The enrolled copy said that it could not be repealed within two years but it left it very much up in the air when you start counting the two years. Does it count from the time the original petition is filed, from the time the legislature is held, or the time the law goes into effect? We suggest the period of 90 days in the case of the initiative because that is the same length of time it requires an act of the legislature to take effect after adjournment. In the case of the referendum, it was our feeling that if some law has been found not desirable by the public they should not have to live under it for a whole 90 days after they have rejected it but that 30 days would be enough. We felt that time should be provided after certification because it might be that it would be a very close election and it would be decided by only a very few votes. The people of the state would not know right up to the very moment the secretary of state certified, whether the matter had been approved or rejected and we felt that some time should be allowed so that all citizens of the state would have some warning of a law that was then on the books becoming void. I think nothing else has been changed in this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion with regard to Sections 4, 5, or 6? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to ask Mr. Sundborg one question. I don't have the enrolled copy before me but on the last line of page 2 you shortened it up quite a bit. It says "Additional procedures for the initiative and referendum may be prescribed by law." Now did the Committee on Style and Drafting have in mind that the procedures of initiative and referendum could be further changed by the initiative or referendum or should they be changed by the legislature? I know we had that before us in the Committee and we felt that that should be by the legislature; that further procedures for initiating a proposition or a referendum should be prescribed by the legislature in addition to what is prescribed here by the constitution.

SUNDBORG: I am sure our Committee would have no objection to saying instead of "may be prescribed by law" to saying "may be prescribed by the legislature", but I feel that under the action taken here several days ago where we agreed that whether it says "by law" or "by the legislature" it could be done by the initiative as well as by the legislature. It doesn't make any practical difference.

TAYLOR: I know it was the intent of the Committee when we referred that out to the Convention that the legislature could prescribe further, that is, to implement the act they could prescribe further procedures.

SUNDBORG: Well, I would say under the action we have taken it doesn't make any difference and if the Convention wanted to prevent the procedures on initiative and referendum from being set up further by the initiative, they should write that in as one of the restrictions on the initiative in Section 7. I don't see that it makes any great difference. I can't think that there would be very many initiative propositions that would seek to change initiative procedure although there conceivably could be, and I don't know that it would be bad if the people wanted to change the method of doing this since they have reserved the power to do it, and what they have proposed to be consistent with the constitution, I think they should have that right but that is certainly a substantive matter which is not up to our Committee.

METCALF: May I ask Mr. Sundborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection you may ask, Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: You did not include Section 3 from our enrolled copy did you? It says, "The legislature shall prescribe the procedures ..."

SUNDBORG: In our thinking, Mr. Metcalf, the exact thought is covered at the end of Section 6. Now as it appeared in the enrolled copy it said, "The legislature shall prescribe the procedures to be followed in the exercise of the powers of initiative and referendum except as herein provided." And then, in effect, we spell out what the procedures will be anyway. Now what we have said after telling what the procedures are, we said, "Additional procedures for the initiative and referendum may be prescribed by law."

METCALF: You changed the word "shall" to "may"?

SUNDBORG: Well, since it is additional and it is questionable whether any additional ones are required, we thought that "may" covered the situation better than "shall". Now, if we said additional procedures "shall" be prescribed by law the legislature would have to rack its brains and try to think of something else and we don't think anything else is necessary.

METCALF: Well I think something else is, in connection with my experience with some of the petitions for liquor licenses. Oftentimes misunderstandings and arguments have developed about whether signers have been bona fide residents in a community, and I can see that is one thing I think the legislature should prescribe, a little law of procedures on. In fact, in my original draft of a proposed initiative and referendum I had provided for that. I would prefer the word "shall" just exactly as the Committee and as the enrolled copy shows.

SUNDBORG: I think we can get to that but as far as the matter of the voters is concerned we say that it has to be signed by "qualified voters" and elsewhere in the constitution we define "qualified voters", so I don't think it is necessary to write in any further restrictions here or to require the legislature to do so. It is already defined in the constitution. Now, if we accepted your suggestion I take it we would say on the bottom two lines of page 2, "Additional procedures for the initiative and referendum shall be prescribed by law." I would think that would have to carry "if necessary" or something of that kind because I don't know why --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: May I have Mr. Metcalf's idea? The intent as I received it is that the authorization is for the legislature to create additional procedures but "shall" is a mandate. Now it may not be a necessity. The intent of the whole thing is authorization and the "may" seems to me to give the legislature the authorization. I think you gain nothing by the word "shall".

METCALF: That is only in the enrolled copy and it was the Committee's thinking on the matter that it should be "shall". There is no doubt there would have to be some little law passed governing and regulating the use of initiative and referendum procedures and there has been lots said about those two little words of "shall" and "may" and personally I still prefer "shall".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two or three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other questions with relation to Section 6? If not, are there questions relating to Section 7? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I should explain here what we have done in Section 7. Let me read first what the enrolled copy said. It said, "The initiative and referendum may not be used as a means of earmarking revenues, for making or repealing appropriations of public funds, or for local or special legislation." That applied to both. Then it went on to say, referendum shall not be applicable to such laws as are necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety, and laws making appropriations for the current expenses of the State government, and for maintenance of public institutions." What we did, we tried to take apart from that section what it was that the Convention intended that the initiative should not apply to and set that up in one set of restrictions, and then in a separate set of restrictions say what the referendum may not apply to, and we have developed the language which appears in our Section 7. It says, "The initiative may not be used to dedicate revenues, make or repeal appropriations, or enact local or special legislation. The referendum shall not be applied to dedications of revenue, to appropriations, to local or special legislation, or to laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety." Now, analyzing again from the enrolled copy, the first thing it said was as a means of earmarking revenues". Well, obviously, I think, the referendum could not be used as a means of earmarking revenues because the referendum can only approve or reject laws which have been passed by the legislature. Now, we have used instead of "earmarking" the term "dedicate revenues" because I believe after a study was made of this, that the dedication of revenues is really what was meant instead of the earmarking thereof and our advisers were unanimous on that, and if anyone would like a little further discussion of that subject, Mr. Hurley, who is a member of our Committee, is able to give it -- the difference between "earmarking" and "dedication" -- and I am sure that it was "dedication" that was intended as a restriction here. "Earmarking", in addition, is sort of a slang phrase and I don't believe it occurs in very many constitutions. If there is any doubt on that I would like to have Mr. Hurley explain it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the delegates care to have Mr. Hurley explain it? Mr. Hurley, would you care to explain the difference between "dedicating" and earmarking"?

HURLEY: Mr. President, I was kind of dealt a low blow because I didn't know that I was the one who had to defend this. I might say to start with it did create some problem because the Finance Committee also refers, in their enrolled copy, to the matter of "earmarking" revenues. I don't think it is an extremely serious problem; one as serious as the Chairman may have indicated, but in pursuing the other constitutions and the definitions of "earmarking" as revealed in various dictionaries and other word descriptions, it appeared that the term "earmarking" might also be applied to the allocation of revenues appropriated by the legislature to a given department; appropriated, for example, $500,000 to the Fish and Game Commission and earmarking within that a $100,000 for the propagation of salmon, whereas the term "dedicating" appeared to be starting from the beginning of the process, that they were prohibited from the start; and it was suggested that situations did arise and that perhaps the word "dedicating" would better express what we had in mind that these funds were not within the realm of the legislature to appropriate out of the general fund. Now I might say that the word is not sacred and if someone has a better idea I am sure we will be glad to listen to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I would like to ask Mr. Hurley if he found the words "dedicated funds" in any other legal documents or constitutions.

HURLEY: Yes, we did. And I might carry it one step further and that we did also find the term "earmarking" used in other connections other than "dedicated funds" so it was just a balance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I am sure that the Finance Committee has no objection to that definition but it seems to me that dedication could be interpreted in the same way. One point I do wish to make here, though, is that I hope when Style and Drafting comes to the finance article they will retain the idea of dedicating of taxes. It may or may not be important here but there is a difference between earmarking or dedicating taxes and the earmarking or dedicating of revenues. I just bring it up here for the consideration of the delegates. In my own mind I don't think the distinction is important in this particular instance but it is later on in the finance article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President and Mr. White, I take it you mean "revenues" could include taxes but it might also include other things; for instance, licenses, fines, etc., might be included in the term "revenues" whereas taxes would be only taxes.

WHITE: The reason that we made the distinction, Mr. President, is because all proceeds coming to the state are revenues really, and you have to dedicate or allocate revenues to special purposes, whereas what we are trying to get at is the allocation or dedication or earmarking of the proceeds of a particular tax to a particular purpose. That is the distinction we made. I just bring it up for consideration here. As I say, in my own mind I don't think that distinction is too important in this particular case. Somebody else might disagree with me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I just have a word. I think that the word "earmarking" can be used as we use the term "line appropriations" in our own parlance in our own legislature, but a revenue is dedicated from the time it is collected. That is what this meant.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Section 8? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The next item in the enrolled copy was "making or defeating appropriations of public funds". We felt "of public funds" was not necessary because the only appropriations with which the state could deal are public funds anyway; and then we said, "or enact local or special legislation" which is the same as it was in the enrolled copy. Now it went on to say over again we thought in some cases that the referendum "shall not be applied to laws making appropriations for the current expenses of the State government and for the maintenance of public institutions". We have already said in the first sentence that, "The initiative and referendum may not be used as a means of earmaking revenues, for making or defeating appropriations of public funds" and we believe those appropriations would have to be included --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

SWEENEY: The enrolled copy is in error in that last portion of that sentence, the material after "health and safety", beginning with the word "and" to the word "institution" should not have been on the enrolled copy. Through the mechanics of engrossing and enrolling in the early stages this was an error that we did not pick up. I have just checked the enrolled copy and also the journal and for those who wish to check they will find that on December 17 all the words after "safety" were stricken and they should not have been shown on the enrolled copy. So it is probably not in order even to discuss that motion, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we proceeded in our Committee without knowing that. After analyzing it, those words were redundant and unnecessary, and they are not included in our draft because we figured they are covered fully by the word "appropriations" on line 2 of the page 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: A point of information through the Chair as to the question by Mr. Sundborg. Mr. Sundborg, on that "local or special legislation", would that refer that the legislature could not refer to the people any legislation under the referendum, on say, a bonding issue, a Territorial or statewide bonding issue for a specific purpose, or referring to them a road project as to taking part in, perhaps, a national road program that would revert to the state.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President and Mr. Coghill, I believe that the restriction here is upon the referendum; the referendum as defined in this article which requires the filing of an application, the preparation of a petition, and the obtaining of a lot of signatures to get a proposition on the ballot. Now, I think there is nothing in this, and nothing elsewhere, that would prevent the legislature from simply saying in the law that, "This law shall become effective after it has been approved at the general election of such-and-such a date." That is not really the referendum as it is described in this article which is one on direct legislation initiated by the people. I am sure the legislature has that power without any reference to what is in this article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Section 7? Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Sundborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Would you have much objection, Mr. Sundborg, to inserting the word "earmarking" as it was in the old copy before? That is a word that pretty nearly everybody understands and knows what it is all about. This other one I am doubtful about.

SUNDBORG: You mean in place of "dedicating"?

POULSEN: Yes.

SUNDBORG: Well, I feel we would object because it has a different meaning. Now "earmarking" means any time you say that an appropriation or any other thing shall be for a specific purpose. The example that was used by Mr. Hurley would be that it would be earmarking part of the appropriation to the Fish and Game Commission, to say that a $100,000 of it should be used for the propagation of salmon, and we think that was not what we intended as a restriction on the initiative here. I think that what was intended was that we should not interfere with what is a "dedicated" revenue. A "dedicated" revenue, for instance, is the idea that tobacco taxes are used for school construction or maintenance. That is a "dedicated" revenue right from the time it is collected. It can't be used for anything else. Now it was our belief that that is what the Convention had in mind when they wanted to remove a certain class of legislation from being touched by the initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: I don't believe that is the case here. We have a certain amount to be earmarked that cannot be touched but this is set up so there can be no more earmarking of any kind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Poulsen, did you understand though, that "earmarking" had more than one meaning. When the legislature appropriates a $100,000 for a particular purpose that is "earmarking" and we don't want to prohibit the legislature from appropriating.

POULSEN: Well, I call that appropriating.

R. RIVERS: With two meanings to the word "earmarking", "dedicating" talks about the origin of the money and it can't be earmarked, you might say from the beginning, when at the time it is collected, so I think we must say "dedicating".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Where will the additional exceptions to the initiative and referendum be placed? In this article 7 under restrictions, or is there going to be a section at the end of the constitution?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I don't know what Mr. Cooper means by the additional exceptions. There aren't any, to our knowledge, that are before us at this time. Now some might be proposed.

COOPER: That is just exactly what I mean. If we adopt this now, there are other exceptions that are certainly going to have to come from this floor that the initiative and referendum will not have any effect on, and will they be placed in Section 7 with restriction or will there be a special article of just exceptions?

SUNDBORG: My belief is, Mr. President, that they would be inserted in Section 7 of this article as additional restrictions of subjects which would not be subject to the initiative and referendum, and any such additions as are made, of course, would take a two-thirds vote anyway, if it is something that has not yet been considered by the Convention in second reading, and I believe everything now has been except a few ordinances, etc. So, the procedure in case anyone should wish to remove some class of legislation from the action of the initiative and referendum would be to propose an amendment to Section 7, writing in that class or subject as an additional restriction.

COOPER: Do I understand then, Mr. President, that any exception now, inasmuch as this rule of Mr. McLaughlin's was amended -- the motion was adopted last Saturday, then it would take a two-thirds vote to get an exception put in Section 7 now with the restrictions?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would Mr. Cooper; yes, if it was something that had not been considered up to this time.

COOPER: I had in mind, in the legislative article it said, "The legislators or elected officials shall receive a salary and compensation as prescribed by law." Now, under the terms of this adoption of the motion last Saturday, I can right well see where a public would get very mad at their legislators, and immediately circulate a petition in which their pay would be $1 a year and the expenses would be half of that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

COOPER: It very possibly could be done and I think that the salaries of the elected officials of the state, that the public or the initiative and referendum should have no right in adjusting or cutting out such salaries.

SMITH: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I believe we have before us the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting and the question is whether or not we accept this report, subject to whatever changes the body might make. Any amendments would necessarily come up when this approved report comes before us for third reading.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Amendments can be made now, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Amendments can be made now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes. A new amendment would take a two-thirds vote. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, before we open this up to additional amendments, aside from those made by the Committee, I wonder if we could ask that the committee report be adopted. I mean, I would ask you to have that order of business before we open it up to general amendments. It could still be amended by a two-thirds vote but I would like to have our report, which would embody the changes we have made, adopted by the Convention before we try to work in any additional amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that the proper procedure? We only adopt or reject your report, Mr. Sundborg, along the lines that we have been proceeding, that if you have made some substantive amendment and the delegates felt that it was a substantive change and desired not to accept that, they have been discussing those changes. It isn't necessary, we don't move to adopt your report.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe our rules set forth, as one of the steps in the workings of this Convention, that there shall be a report from the Committee on Style and Drafting and then the next order is the acceptance, or consideration of the report of Style and Drafting and, it says, "action on amendments which are changes in phraseology only."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there is no further discussion, I move that the Convention accept the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting as it has been amended on the floor this morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the acceptance of the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: A point of inquiry. Have we had questions on the last section? I don't remember hearing that come before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair called for questions but no questions were asked as yet. Before this motion is put, if anyone has a question -- Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: There was some question raised when we discussed the judiciary proposal as to whether any exceptions to the jurisdiction and formation of the courts would be made in the initiative and referendum. I wonder if that was still intended?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe that would still be in order after the Convention accepts the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

MCCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon seconds the motion. That is right, Mr. Nolan, it would take a two-thirds vote though to put such an amendment in. Mr. Robertson did you have something?

ROBERTSON: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention accept the report of the Style and Drafting Committee? It relates to Article XI, the article on initiative, referendum and recall." Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: As a member of this Committee I want to compliment the Committee on Style and Drafting for the work they have done. I think they have improved and clarified it and I am very happy with it. I see no reason why we shouldn't accept this report at this time and I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the report be accepted. The question is, "Shall the report be accepted by the Convention?" All those in favor -- Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Since, by the admissions of the Committee itself, substantive changes are required here, I think as a matter of good policy we should take a roll call on this, because, in effect, we are suspending the rules, because they say they have made changes of substance which, of course, we all approve but let's get the record right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the Convention accept the report by the Committee on Style and Drafting. Is there objection?

POULSEN: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Hinckel, Laws, McCutcheon, Poulsen, Reader,

Absent: 3 - Davis, Hilscher, McLaughlin.)

MCNEES: I ask that my vote be changed to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees changes his vote to "yes". The Convention will come to order.

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 5 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the report has been accepted. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I ask that the rules be suspended and, that Article XI be returned to second reading for specific amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon moves that the rules be suspended and that Article XI be returned to second reading for specific amendment. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: A point of information. Will this be for one specific amendment and are we to know before we vote what the specific amendment is?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, will you state the purpose for the request to return it to second reading? Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to Section 7, line 2, to insert the words following "appropriation," to insert the words "to create courts, define the jurisdiction or prescribe the rules thereof," in line with our discussion here Saturday on the judiciary article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended for that purpose. Is there objection?

KILCHER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

MCCUTCHEON: I so move.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon moves, Mr. Taylor seconded the motion. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?"

R. RIVERS: Is this debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is not debatable, the motion to suspend the rules, Mr. Rivers. Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information?

HURLEY: Is this just to suspend the rules for that one particular thing?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Hurley, under the motion that the rules be --

MARSTON: May I ask a question Mr. President? My vote on this will be determined on how many more are going to come in here. If I could find that out, I would like to know some way. Is that a fair question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: At this time -- Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: My point of order is that I have asked for the suspension on a specific amendment. I didn't say for "amendments", I said "a specific amendment". Mr. Robertson, it is for one specific amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. It is for that one amendment at this time. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If we suspend the rules, the specific amendment would still be subject to a vote of the body, is that correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: So, all we are voting on is, shall we suspend the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A suspension of the rules. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended in order that the proposal may be sent back to second reading for specific amendment?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Coghill, Emberg, Kilcher, Londborg, Peratrovich.

Absent: 3 - Davis, Hilscher, McLaughlin.)

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 5 nays, 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it, the rules have been suspended and Article No. XI is now before us in second reading for specific amendment. The Chief Clerk may please read the proposed amendment. The Sergeant at Arms will place the amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, line 2, after the comma following the word 'appropriations' insert 'create courts, define the jurisdiction or prescribe the rules thereof,'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, what is your pleasure?

ROBERTSON: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of such amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: May I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Buckalew, you may ask the question.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Robertson, wasn't it your intent to prohibit the use of the initiative at all, as far as the judicial article is concerned?

ROBERTSON: That is my personal desire but I took the position that this particular amendment doesn't go that far, I don't think, because I thought that the delegates as a whole would agree with my view and I believe, with the members of the Judiciary, that creation of courts, and the defining of their jurisdiction and prescribing their rules should not be left to the initiative. For that reason my amendment doesn't go as far as your suggested question.

BUCKALEW: My thought was and that is what I thought Mr. Robertson was going to do was to except the judicial article from the initiative. I would like to hear from Mr. McLaughlin if it is in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, my proposed amendment is calculated to simply except from the initiative the creation of courts, the defining of their jurisdiction, and the prescribing of the rules, which I believe is self-evident. It is a good thing and shouldn't be left, as I stated on the floor Saturday, to a mass vote because those things are all highly technical. If you are going to do those things you need witnesses before a legislature. You don't need campaign orators on the subject. Furthermore, it avoids the possibility of a group of dissatisfied litigants, if a judge renders some particular decision that they feel is contrary to their best interests, of getting out and starting an initiative to create a new court by which he will be deprived of his jurisdiction. I believe that the amendment should be carried. I sincerely hope it will. I am perfectly willing to admit that, myself, I would be in favor of exempting the judiciary system entirely from it but I don't claim that my amendment has that extent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Robertson's unanimous consent request? Mr. Marston?

MARSTON: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Robertson a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: If this is granted, your request here, will you not go further with more attempts to finally do what you want to do to delete from the initiative? If I get that answer I will know how to vote on this. I think that is a fair question.

ROBERTSON: I am perfectly willing to answer so far as I am concerned -- that is my agreement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This is the only amendment we can possibly make at this time, Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: If this continues, I'll say now that I am going to oppose with all my power any further changes. I will go along with this, but this is the end of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, are you objecting to the unanimous consent request?

MARSTON: I'm going along if there are no more amendments from the floor of this sort.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: A point of information. Will the Committee on Style and Drafting have an opportunity to check the language on this after it is adopted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No. Even after we pass the article, if we do adopt the article, the Style and Drafting Committee will have an opportunity to look it over. If there is no objection Mr. Coghill.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Robertson, do you so move the adoption of the amendment?

ROBERTSON: I so move.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved by Mr. Robertson, seconded by Mr. Taylor that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: A point of information and may I address the question to the Chairman of the Judiciary?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The prescribing of the rules of the court, what does that take in?

MCLAUGHLIN: Unfortunately, I have a different viewpoint on the subject than Mr. Robertson does. On the question of these rules, we have given the rule-making power to the supreme court for all courts, and I frankly don't think under the "55-idiot rule", if I may -- (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin has the floor.

MCLAUGHLIN: I don't think actually, by the initiative, that the people would be able to reach change the rules of the courts, largely because we have provided in the judiciary article that the supreme court can adopt the rules for all courts and those rules will remain in effect until reversed by two-thirds of the elected members of each house. So under what is known as the "55-idiot theory" -- Mr. Chairman, I know this is objectionable -- no 110 idiots would ever suggest, under the wording of the judiciary article, the rule-making power, that, by the initiative, could we change the rules of any courts. I see, personally, no objection. I am in favor of the initiative - I see no objection to Mr. Robertson's amendment as such. I will refrain from speaking a very personal intimate opinion of the thing. I don't think it affects the judiciary and I don't think it affects the initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, may I further the question? The deletion, or the part of Mr. Robertson's amendment here, would not actually be in reference to law, would it? It would be up to the supreme court and up to the judicial council.

MCLAUGHLIN: Possibly. The prescribing of rules thereof would be subject. I believe, to the supreme court and couldn't be reached by initiative, but as to the creation of courts and defining their jurisdictions, that I feel, that is, other than your constitutional courts, could be reached by the initiative. I am quite sure that I know what Mr. Robertson's concern is. There is also a popular and happy belief that if you have a problem, let us say of juvenile delinquency, all you have to do is create a new court and as soon as you get a new court the problem disappears or is the responsibility of the court if the problem doesn't disappear. That is a blatant fallacy but Mr. Robertson, I suspect, is fearful that the people might become sufficiently stirred up over the dog problem in the Anchorage area, or the juvenile problem in the Anchorage area, and create a special dog court or a special juvenile court on the ballot. Can it happen? I suspect it could happen under those circumstances. It would be a unique case, but under this rule all Mr. Robertson is preventing is the creation of courts or defining their jurisdictions; that is, he is fearful that there might be popular press to establish a great number of courts as each individual popular problem arose, the public would decide the way to solve it is to create a new court. If the divorce rate goes up they would feel a domestic relations court will automatically send it down; if juvenile delinquency increases, a juvenile court will solve the problem. I think that that is his concern, that is, the creation, jurisdictions, and multiplication of courts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, the reason for the questions, I refer to Section 4 of the judicial article which says that the qualifications will be prescribed by law for other courts such as your justices of the peace, commissioners' courts, or such as that, and I am in question as to whether this amendment would refer to that.

MCLAUGHLIN: That definitely would not refer to Section 4 because this is a prohibition against creating courts or defining the jurisdiction, not defining the qualifications of the judges of those inferior courts. What this would attack -- what the initiative can reach -- Section 1, "courts established by law" that is, the initiative could create courts under Section 1, and could define the jurisdictions of those courts under Section 1, but it cannot touch the qualifications of the judges. That is left to the legislature, and very wisely so, because you don't know the availability of personnel under the circumstances. It is not intended to and obviously doesn't reach the qualifications of personnel.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: If I may address a further question to Mr. McLaughlin, I am still getting a little more confused now, the further we go. This amendment would not prevent the passage of a law by the initiative which might say that, "No left-handed judges by the name of Jones shall be qualified to serve on the bench."?

MCLAUGHLIN: That would not prohibit it, Mr. White.

WHITE: Then I don't think it accomplishes Mr. Robertson's purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: First of all, I might point out that special legislation would prohibit that, but I would like to ask Mr. McLaughlin whether it is not true that in Missouri the initiative was used to adopt what we call the Missouri Plan, the judicial plan, after the legislature would not change it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin could you answer that question?

MCLAUGHLIN: It is my understanding, in spite of Mr. McNealy, it is my understanding that in fact in Missouri, the Missouri bar plan was not a concoction of the attorneys or the bar associations. It was something that was created by initiative by the people and it was actually intended to be a buffer against that Pendergast machine which Mr. McNealy insists it was a "pot of [word inaudible]"; that is, it was a defense weapon against a political machine and it was created by the initiative; and I think that that expert on constitutional law and on the Missouri court system, Mrs. Hermann, will concur with me on that statement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: May I ask a question of Mr. Robertson? This is in the interest of the Style and Drafting Committee. Section 19 of the judiciary article says that, "The supreme court shall make and promulgate rules governing practice and procedure in all civil and criminal cases, which rules may be changed by the legislature only upon a two-thirds vote of the members elected to each house." In that case, that takes care of court rules doesn't it?

ROBERTSON: Yes.

NORDALE: So, if Style and Drafting decided that prescribing of the rules was unnecessary, we could remove it couldn't we?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: But don't do it. (Laughter)

ROBERTSON: I would have no objection to that, Mr. President. I inserted "and prescribe the rules thereof" largely at the suggestion of some of the delegates to me that it should include that. My original amendment was simply to exempt the creation of courts and defining their jurisdictions, but I think the rules are created by the supreme court and are subject to revision or amendment or repeal by a two-thirds vote of the majority members of the legislature under our present judiciary article.

NORDALE: And that is the only way they could be changed?

ROBERTSON: That is right.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, your point of information.

HELLENTHAL: That only qualifies the word "legislature", or rather qualifies the word "two-thirds"; and I think Mrs. Nordale has read it incorrectly. It can be changed by the legislature but only upon a two-thirds vote. That is the way I understand it but the legislature can't change the rules. Therefore, Mr. Robertson's restrictions in the proposed amendment is very sound. I don't read that to mean that only the legislature, and not through use of the initiative, may the rules be changed. It means only by a two-thirds vote; no other way, a two-thirds vote, but it doesn't mean the legislature to the exclusion of the initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, we passed the judiciary article yesterday in third reading. It is now a part of the constitution as I understand it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: And the section, as I read it, which has reference to rules, doesn't use the word "only". In fact, it says "shall make and promulgate rules", referring to the supreme court, "... shall make and promulgate rules governing practice and procedure in civil and criminal cases in all courts, which rules may be changed by the legislature by a two-thirds vote of the members elected to each house. There is no "only" in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe Mr. Hellenthal is right. I think it would be dangerous to leave out. The rules are not rules for fighting but they are as an important a part of the judicial system as the law itself, and if you have the rules that are subject --

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: The rules are a very important part of our legal system of jurisprudence and I don't believe that anybody should have the right to change them unless it is the bar, the judicial commission, or the courts had a chance to explain to the persons who are going to change them what the importance is, so I don't believe you could do it under the initiative and referendum. I think all parts of the amendment as proposed by Mr. Robertson should be retained as it is for the protection of the people and the protection of the courts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I am quite of the opinion that we are adding just ten extra words to the constitution here that really have little or no merit and I am still going to vote against this amendment unless I hear more arguments and better arguments to the contrary than I have heard.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question.

KILCHER: If I follow correctly, the article on the judiciary already specifically states that the rules only can be changed by the legislature. The word "law" was not used there for this specific purpose, wasn't it? It was one of the exceptions so that, I think, definitely takes care of the prescribing of the rules. This part of the amendment is unnecessary and redundant, if I am correct.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Kilcher, I might answer, I think that has already been rather ably answered by a member of the Style and Drafting Committee; that if we determine in our ultimate wisdom that it is unnecessary it will be stricken out in Style and Drafting. And in my ultimate wisdom I am speaking only for one-ninth of that Committee. I think it is unnecessary and possibly it could be deleted more easily in Style and Drafting.

KILCHER: Now as to the two first demands of the amendment, creating courts and defining jurisdiction, Mr. McLaughlin, is it not your opinion that the major courts, the superior courts and the supreme court, are, as it is, already immune from the initiative?

MCLAUGHLIN: The supreme court is immune from the initiative; the supreme court is immune from the initiative except in its chief justices -- that is, if the supreme court requests an increase in judges and the legislature refuses to give it, you might be able to get the increase on a request of the supreme court through the initiative. In the superior court the number of judges, which would not affect the jurisdiction, could be changed by the initiative as it now stands.

KILCHER: Upon demand by the supreme court?

MCLAUGHLIN: No. It could be changed without the request of the supreme court. You will notice the word "immune ". Now you do have the possibility of an intermediate appellate court, between the supreme court and the superior court which could be created to take care of a tremendous increase in volume. That court's jurisdiction could, at the moment, be changed by the initiative.

KILCHER: Could it also be created by the initiative?

MCLAUGHLIN: As it reads here it could be created by the initiative. That is correct.

KILCHER: Thank you. One of the arguments, Mr. President, in favor of the amendment was that inferior courts, special courts, might be blindly, as it were, under the effect of mass hysteria, demanded, but I think that the article on special legislation would take care of that. Any court, to take Mr. McLaughlin's words, a juvenile court or a dog court would be a special problem and I doubt very much that a special problem in a special area could get any backing under our present initiative rules from 10 per cent of all of the districts in Alaska. It is impossible so actually, practically, what the initiative would amount to if it were permitted to be used in connection with the judicial article is this: if a general need should arise in the state, a general need for a general type of inferior courts or possibly a superior court, a general need like was felt in Missouri to adopt an entire new system -- a system that, as Mr. McLaughlin says, we have to be thankful to the initiative, to its operating. If such a similar situation should arise I think we owe it to the initiative to grant it the right to function in these rare and historic moments. I do not see where the initiative could possibly, or would possibly, be abused for any special or local interests. It would be prohibited from being used for these purposes and I can't see where a whole state can get hysterical about a pack of dogs or a local juvenile problem and back up an initiative which is a lengthy process, a complicated process, and a process that is safeguarded with enough time, a long enough term for everybody to think it over coolly so I think this amendment is not necessary, I doubt if the initiative ever would be abused, and I see where it possibly could be put to good use and I oppose this amendment on that grounds. I think that anybody that believes truly in the initiative should agree and vote that amendment down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I don't know whether I am for or against this amendment yet but I would hate to see it get so muddied up that we don't know what we are voting on and I wish that this Convention would understand for once and for all that whether or not it is an "idiot rule", we are operating under a motion adopted by this Convention that says when we say "by law" or "by the legislature", we now mean one and the same thing, so that any time those terms are used, they are currently subject to the initiative. If I am wrong I will stand corrected but that is my understanding of the motion that we are operating under and we keep getting that question muddied up and we shouldn't do it because it confuses the votes. To further clarify my own mind I would like, with the permission of the Chair, to address a question to Mr. Taylor. Mr. Taylor, as seconder of this motion, I would like to ask if in creating courts, defining the jurisdiction or prescribing the rules thereof, if that covers all the abuses that you feel might be made of the initiative in connection with the judiciary article. It seems to me that this amendment deals only with the creation of additional courts. It doesn't deal with such matters as "the number of judges shall be prescribed by law", "the jurisdiction of the court shall be prescribed by law". It doesn't deal with any of those other matters in the judiciary article so as far as I am able to understand; it deals only with the question of the creation of new or additional courts.

TAYLOR: That is right, Mr. White, it doesn't. In regard to the creation of the courts and the jurisdiction -- the defining of the jurisdictions is quite technical and the rules thereof; the adoption of that amendment will clarify the issue. In the judiciary article they have put in "the changes as provided by law". Well, this way we want it so the law would be only the legislature and not through the initiative and referendum. There are other matters connected with the judiciary article that are not so important and if they were subject to the initiative, of which I am doubtful -- I don't agree with everything that Mr. McLaughlin says -- I doubt whether they would be applicable then, but this will take care of everything that I think we are particularly interested in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Is this intended to read: "to create courts and define the jurisdiction thereof"? In other words "define the jurisdiction of courts created". Does it apply to the jurisdiction?

TAYLOR: It does not create the courts or define the jurisdiction thereof. They are prohibited or restricted from it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: May I ask the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. McLaughlin, a question? Did I understand you to say, Mr. McLaughlin, in your opinion as head of the Judiciary Committee, that Mr. Robertson has in the initiative and referendum right now the protection he requires under this amendment?

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Marston, you did not understand me as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. When I speak, I speak personally. First of all, there seems to be an impression in this Convention that whenever you render an opinion, it has to be partisan and what I am trying to do is present both sides of the question in terms of my own emotions and my intended vote. I intend to vote for Mr. Robertson's amendment although I disagree with his opinion and Mr. Taylor's on the rule-making power.

MARSTON: You feel there is protection now?

MCLAUGHLIN: I feel no great emotional necessity for it.

MARSTON: I want to speak on this just a moment here before we get to it. I am not opposed to it and I told Mr. Taylor that but I am afraid we will go over the fence here and go into a big hassle and I would like to avoid it. I have a feeling that they are going to try to destroy this whole thing pertaining to the courts and then somebody else steps in, and I have the opinion now that I am going to oppose the whole thing, but I'd like to go along with Mr. McLaughlin.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. Marston, you realize that there has to be, under a suspension of the rules, any further amendments would take a two-thirds vote. I suggest for one amendment it would take a two-thirds vote to suspend the rules.

MARSTON: If I can get a stronger opinion here that there will be no more attempts here to destroy it, I will go along with it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I don't think the delegate should endeavor to abridge the right of any other delegate here to present some other matter. After all, there are 55 delegates here and we all have various opinions, and it seems to me that anyone could present his opinion and we have to vote on the subject at issue.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: There are several questions to this article that refer to the judiciary article and I would like to get them clarified before voting so I move we recess until 1:30 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill asks unanimous consent that the Convention recess until 1:30 p.m. Are there committee announcements? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to announce a meeting of the Committee on Resources at 12:50 in one of the rooms upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Engrossment and Enrollment at 1:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other announcements? Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: There is a map in connection with the election districts which will be in Room 404 of the Mines Building between 1:00 p.m. and 4:00 p.m. this afternoon and if anyone has any questions or suggested change with regard to the election districts, we suggest they go there and talk to Ernie Wolfe or Bruce Thomas. Room 404 of the Mines Building. The reason we make that request is that they have detailed topographical maps there that show watershed boundaries and it is much easier to answer any questions there than it would be here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I would like to ask, Mr. Hellenthal, does that mean that they can change the boundaries there if they wish to?

HELLENTHAL: No, but they can answer any questions which you may have with regard to the application of the map to the written language as it has been distributed to each delegate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I may give the added information that Mr. Thomas is from Livengood.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Thomas is from Cordova. If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Mr. Robertson's proposed amendment. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment -- the Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, Section 7, line 2, after the comma following the word 'appropriations' insert 'create courts, define the jurisdiction or prescribe the rules thereof,'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 10: Coghill, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hilscher, Kilcher, Knight, McNees, Peratrovich, VanderLeest.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Barr, Hurley, Londborg, Nolan, Walsh.

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 10 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other questions or proposed amendments for Article XI, the article on initiative and referendum? If not, there is no motion for advancement on the calendar. The proposal will be referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Does that move it on into third reading now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It does, Mr. Doogan. It will take its regular course and the Rules Committee will put it on the calendar in third reading. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that the article on initiative, referendum, and recall be advanced to third reading and final passage, be read by title only, and placed on final passage at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks, moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article XI, the article on initiative, referendum and recall be considered engrossed and advanced to final passage. Is there objection?

WHITE: I object.

COOPER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to the motion?

TAYLOR: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and Article XI be advanced to third reading?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Cooper, V. Fischer, Hilscher, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, Metcalf, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, White.

Absent: 2 - Barr, Nolan.)

CHIEF CLERK: 40 yeas, 13 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the rules have been suspended, Article XI is now before us in third reading and open for debate. The Chief Clerk will please read the article.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article XI, Initiative, Referendum and Recall. Section 1. The people may propose and enact laws by the initiative and approve or reject acts of the legislature by the referendum --

TAYLOR: Point of order. I think that the motion was that it be read by title only, in third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. Mr. Sundborg, did your motion include that?

SUNDBORG: That was part my motion, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That it be read by title only?

SUNDBORG: If that is in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, under the suspension of the rules that can be done, that is correct. If there is no objection then, the article is now before us and in third reading and open for debate. Does anyone wish to discuss the article on initiative, referendum and recall? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I am constrained to vote against this article for the reasons I stated on the floor of the Convention when it was first introduced. I think we are doing a disservice to the people of Alaska in adopting an initiative and referendum instead of doing them a service, and I think it might have been well exemplified by the experience in California with initiative and referendum and also in the State of Washington. I also feel that the limit of the denial of certification alone to judicial review instead of both the allowance and the denial also makes the article very defective. I believe there will be many more cases of where the certificate in allowing it, than where it would be denied, because I can't believe the secretary of state is going to deny very many certificates; I think he'll constrain himself, or whoever passes upon them, to allow them. For that reason I advise and announce that I shall vote against the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further debate? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I take a view opposite that from Mr. Robertson. I feel that it is a good article; it is well drawn. It gets away by its language from the abuses which did make the initiative unsavory in some respects in California and some other states. I believe we have in here safeguards, both to the principle, and most of our legislation will be enacted by the legislature, and also the principle which I believe is equally sound, that the people, after all, are those who have the real say in what we should have as our laws. The point that Mr. Robertson makes about denial of certification is the only thing that will be subject to judicial review, I think is not an important one because the only thing that the secretary of state is called upon to certify anyway is whether the petition or the application is in proper form. He cannot certify as to its content; all he can say is that it has been presented correctly and therefore you may go out and get your signatures on a petition. If he should turn it down and say the form is not correct, then, that would be subject to judicial review and I think that is proper. I think it's a good article and I hope it will go into our constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I think it's a good article; I think it's well written, if we feel that we must have initiative and referendum in the constitution. I personally am not in favor of including this article in the constitution. I don't think the initiative is actually a view of the people as a whole, of the individual Alaskan. Initiative lends itself only, almost exclusively, to use by pressure groups. The people who want good government go to the polls once; they elect their representatives. We have developed an excellent system of apportionment for our legislature. We will elect those people. The average Alaskan will vote for that person and they will have faith in him to enact the laws that he wants. The initiative will be a tool of pressure groups, such pressure groups as we have seen work upon this Convention. I don't think it will actually be in the interests of good government or of the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I don't think at this time that sovereign people are going to abrogate their position as sovereign people. We are going to remain a sovereign people and the history of the initiative and referendum does not prove out what Delegate Fischer has just said; it has proven good more often than it has bad. The legislature makes good and bad laws; the initiative and referendum has done the same but it has better laws on the whole than the legislature has. I cannot see how this body can go against this initiative and referendum bill we have before us. We would be disheartening to the people who are supporting us here. They have accepted it and it is in the law now, or soon will be, and I believe we will put it in there. There are 40 mavericks in this organization here. I know Mr. Maverick of Texas, lives on an island and his cattle aren't branded, and I believe we are going to go through and take care of them.

Those "holy cows" we had this morning to protect on the Judiciary -- well, it is all right if we have to do that but there are 40 mavericks here who are regular cattle and they will go according to their own thinking and I believe we will have the initiative and referendum on the laws in the State of Alaska, and I sincerely hope so and I am going to vote for it.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, does it take a motion to adopt this as part of the constitution or is this up for final passage?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is up for final passage and the roll will be called on it, on the question.

DOOGAN: I call for the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon has been attempting to get the floor.

MCCUTCHEON: I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate McCutcheon moves the previous question.

DOOGAN: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Doogan. The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the previous question is ordered. The question is, "Shall Article XI, the article on initiative, referendum and recall be adopted as a part of the Alaska state constitution? The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 43 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 10 - V. Fischer, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Walsh.

Absent: 2 - Barr, Nolan.)

CHIEF CLERK: 43 yeas, 10 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and Article XI, the article on initiative, referendum and recall has become a part of Alaska's state constitution. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may we revert to the order of business of committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will revert to the order of business of reports of committees.

SUNDBORG: The Style and Drafting Committee has reviewed the work remaining to the Convention and we desire to report that by the action just taken we have up to this time adopted two articles for the constitution. They total 10 pages. When we total up all of the articles which have passed second reading, which I think is practically the entire body of the constitution, all of that constitutes 67 pages, so we have passed 10 out of a probable 67 or thereabouts, pages which will be in the constitution; that is speaking of the typed copies in the form in which we work on the proposals here. Now we have reported from Style and Drafting to the Convention one other article which is only two pages in length. We have in our Committee, about ready to report out, one additional article which will be six pages in length; but a great deal of work remains which our Committee hasn't even looked at yet or considered; a total of about seven articles comprising altogether something around 50 pages out of a total of 67 which will go into the constitution. I call this to your attention because I would like to ask that we again adopt a procedure such as we followed early in the Convention of holding only brief plenary sessions, at least for a few days, so that the Style and Drafting Committee can handle a great many of these proposals and get them in shape to bring to the floor, or else the floor will soon have nothing else to do, and until we do that there is no possible way of finishing up our work of drawing up the constitution and adopting these things in third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, if the Chair may, the Chair would like to suggest that perhaps the plenary session might yield to the Style and Drafting Committee to the extent that some part of the morning hours would be left open for a few days to the Style and Drafting Committee and we could continue on with our work in plenary session, if necessary, until late at night and through the afternoon; but if those morning hours could be left available to Style and Drafting it should give them time to work when they would be in a fresher mind. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, as an observation on that point, I think that most will agree with me that if we have less than two hours at any one time we are really wasting our time; not wasting it, but not as great an advantage as when we have a fairly long period of time. We get more done than when we have little periods of short time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. Hurley, if the Chair is not being presumptuous, if for the next few days we would call our plenary session into session at 1:30 p.m., as we did earlier in the session for a considerable length of time, in order to attempt to accomplish this work, would that suggestion be in line with what the delegates might be thinking? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: As a member of the Style and Drafting Committee and also the "nagging wife" of the Constitutional Convention, I wish to remind the Convention that the other committees had approximately five weeks of committee work at which time they were working most of the time during the day, the plenary sessions being very short both morning and evening. The volume of work that confronts Style and Drafting Committee at this time is, I would say, equal to that which confronted any of the other committees during the period that they were drafting the articles that they have. It is a different kind of work, it is true, but we can't accomplish what we have to do without liberal allowances of time between now and the end of this week; and it is my understanding that we have to complete this and have it ready to be made into a final document by the end of this week if we are going to accomplish all we have to do before final adjournment. I think we should have, certainly a five-or six-hour period daily at one time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: From 7:00 in the morning until 1:30 in the afternoon would be, wouldn't it?

HERMANN: It's broken up somewhat in that respect, and we worked yesterday from 1:00 o'clock until 7:00 o'clock with only a coffee break at 4:00 o'clock and we didn't accomplish what we had promised you, Mr. President, that we would, and which we honestly thought we could do. Now, we are going to have to speed up our work, there isn't any question about that either, but we need long periods of time to devote to this work for the next three or four days, at least, and I think we are entitled to it. I think we are entitled to the same break on this matter that the other committees had in preparing the original articles.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: As a member of the Style and Drafting Committee I agree with Mrs. Hermann. However, I feel that if we use the early hours of the day, say from 9:00 until 1:00 for the rest of this week, that in all probability we can catch up with the work that must be done and from my personal point of view that would be the better way of handling it. We still could get a bite to eat or something between 1:00 and 1:30, and if it is in order, Mr. President, I move that we adopt as a policy of this Convention that for the balance of this week our plenary sessions convene at 1:30 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves, is there a second?

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal seconds the motion. The question is -- Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, I have the bus schedule here and it might be well to look over what time the bus leaves town to the University, and there is a bus that leaves the depot at 12:30 and arrives here at 12:50, and also the next bus is at 2:30 and arrives here at 2:50. This 12:30 bus would be the one then that the delegates would wish to come out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If I may follow up that point of information, it occurred to me that the bus company has accommodated us up to now by furnishing a special bus daily and I am sure if we tell them we would rather have that special bus leave at 1:00 in the afternoon instead of at 8:30 in the morning, they would be glad to do that. There is a regular bus leaving each morning from the bus depot at 8:30 and the Style and Drafting Committee could use that one if it desires to hold its meetings out here instead of in the city.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, if this motion carries, will you see that the bus company is notified?

COGHILL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: There is a motion before the house which is amendable, I believe, is it not? It is a motion to adopt a policy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no reason why it shouldn't be amendable.

COOPER: With the consent of the mover of the motion, I would like to amend it to convene at 3:00 in the afternoon. The majority of the Style and Drafting that I have heard talk here have asked for at least six hours uninterrupted, and during that time there would be a lunch hour, and 3:00 in the afternoon would give us roughly six hours, less the dinner hour, before we had to be back in plenary session. I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion didn't say that Style and Drafting would meet at 9:00, Mr. Cooper. They could meet earlier if they wished.

TAYLOR: For the benefit of the Style and Drafting Committee I might say there is a bus that leaves the depot at 7:30 a.m. and that would give them a chance to put in an hour or two extra.

2996

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, the Johnson bus leaves at 8:30 a.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to hear an expression from a majority of the members of Style and Drafting as to what would be the best suited to their purposes. It seems to me that we should more or less conform to what they feel would be the best way of carrying out this rather heavy load of work.

V. FISCHER: I move a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: May I have the privilege of the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Doogan, you may have the privilege of the floor.

(Mr. Doogan was given the privilege of the floor.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall it be the policy of the Convention for the next few days to meet in plenary session at 1:30 p.m.?" Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Did Style and Drafting reach any decision or do they have any suggestions because I, too, want to be amenable to their wishes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we did have a meeting during the brief recess and it is agreeable to Style and Drafting Committee to proceed on that schedule, at least for the next few days until we see if it does give us enough time.

HELLENTHAL: What is the schedule?

SUNDBORG: The schedule would be that the plenary sessions would not meet until 1:30 o'clock daily and that Style and Drafting Committee would have the entire morning in which to work.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: May I address a question through the Chair to Mr. Sundborg?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Sundborg, had you given thought about increasing the size of the Style and Drafting Committee and possibly breaking it up into three subcommittees so that you could turn out more work? There are a lot of committees that are not doing anything and have no work and possibly their services could be utilized, possibly four committees for that matter, and cut the time in half.

SUNDBORG: We have considered that. Our Committee is one of nine members which is one of the largest in the Convention. We have divided it into three subcommittees of three members each and we find that the greatest amount of time which we are taking is not taken in the subcommittees. They seem to run along pretty smoothly. It is when we get their reports before the full Style and Drafting Committee that we run into greater delays and I think delays which it is well that we have because it brings more minds to bear on the problems. I feel personally that if the size of the Committee was increased it would slow down the process rather than speed it up, at least in that process where we are considering the reports from the subcommittees. I believe it is working very well right now but you have to realize that we haven't had anything to work on until about a week ago and then we have had everything which we have to do in a period of about two weeks.

TAYLOR: Well, Mr. Sundborg, then in following your remarks out to a logical conclusion, if you cut the two of your subcommittees off, then you would still speed the work up more? Is that right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wouldn't want to cut the committees off. I think three subcommittees are about right number to handle the proposals that are before us but the thing that takes time is when all nine members come together to consider the report of the subcommittees. Yes, answering you very frankly, I think if we would cut the full committee down at that point to four or five members we would go faster but I don't think it would result in as good or as carefully considered language or parts of the constitution as we have been reporting. There is a lot more to this Style and Drafting than considering whether you say "but" or and or whether you put in a comma. We have had to go over the entire constitution and see that it is consistent in the manner in which it treats the times in which certain things are to happen and the expressions of how large a majority is required; for instance, we want to be sure the same language is used when the same thing is meant. Otherwise the constitution will be open to construction which was not intended by the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: If we should pass this motion for the first half of the day what will the members who are not serving on Style and Drafting be doing. Can anyone tell me that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be up to them, Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Well, my friend, I am very guilty -- I feel very guilty in that case. As I said once before here a couple of weeks ago, I am apprehensive that we are not going to get done on this thing and I, for one, would like to volunteer, I think we should volunteer some of our help in some way or other to Style and Drafting to hurry up and expedite this thing, and at least have it done this week.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if I may comment on that, we have been through in Style and Drafting a long period of preparation for the work we are doing and it is preparation which has been in process ever since this Convention met. Style and Drafting has not been idle even though we have not had articles on which to work. We have been working up our policies and understandings and style determination, so all of which would be just "Greek" to many people who would be added to the Committee at this time and I am afraid it would take us more time to try and indoctrinate them and to get them abreast of what we are trying to do than we could possibly save for utilizing their talents.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention make it a policy over the next few days of convening the plenary session at 1:30 o'clock p.m.?" All those in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the motion has been adopted as the policy of the Convention. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, also arising from our Style and Drafting Committee meeting held during recess, I would like to move that as for today that the Convention continue until approximately 5:30 p.m. This would be the policy and then adjourn at that time, until 1:30 tomorrow. In other words, have no night session tonight so that Style and Drafting could have the evening hours in which to work today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the proposal as offered by Mr. Sundborg for the policy as of today and for today?

DOOGAN: I object.

SUNDBORG: I so move.

2999

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Sundborg so moves. Is there a second?

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers seconds the motion that it be the policy of the Convention for today to adjourn the session at 5:40 and convene again at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, who objected -- Mr. Davis?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan. All those in favor of adopting Mr. Sundborg's motion as the policy of the Convention for today will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed motion has been adopted. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: While we are still on committee reports I would like to report that your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 6/a, local government, has compared same with the original and find it correctly engrossed. The first enrolled copies will be placed on the delegates' desks within a short time. I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney asks unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment is adopted. Mr. Taylor, the Chair notes that it is not 21 minutes after 8:00 p.m. but will we be able to take up Committee Proposal No. 16 which was held in abeyance, at this time?

TAYLOR: The one that was held in abeyance until 9:18? Yes, I will withdraw that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us Committee Proposal No. 16 and the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Smith, which has been mimeographed and is on all the delegates' desks. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I did not have an opportunity to attend the meeting of the Ordinance Committee today and I wonder if it would be permissible to ask the Chairman of that Committee if this matter was discussed at their meeting today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President. The only discussion, Mr. Smith, was with just a portion of the Committee and there was nothing definite arrived at except that the Committee had considered earlier in the ordinances, why we had provided an ordinance there that the legislature might amend or supplement the transitional provisions and there was some talk about then reinserting an article which we had taken out, or to offer it to the Convention, for in addition to merely the transitional measures, we would add to that particular ordinance there by amendment, as I said, for Convention consideration to provide that the legislature by a two-thirds majority of each house could make such an amendment comply with any constitutional provision. Now, that would be an argumentative matter in any event but while the Committee was divided on it, a portion felt that that would be a better proposition, in effect, to write out more or less a blank check. That was the only consideration given.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. McNealy. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I gave this thing considerable thought last evening and I would like to call your attention to the provisions of House Resolution 2535 and especially to the contents of Section 203. Section 203 provides for the holding of a constitutional convention and it sets up the things which that convention shall do. We have referred to those things as the requirements as set forth by House Resolution 2535. Now there are only two questions involved here as I see it. One is, are we going to make this provision in our constitution now or are we going to wait and let Congress do it for us. One or the other I am certain is going to be done. I base that certainty on the report of the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. In their action in considering the Hawaiian Constitution they set up the requirements of HR 2535 and along side of those requirements they set out the sections of the Hawaiian Constitution which met those requirements and I feel in my own mind that Congress will follow exactly that procedure in connection with our constitution when it comes up for approval. Now, I realize that this is merely an enabling bill. We don't know what the final act admitting Alaska as a state will say. However, this particular provision has been in every enabling act since 1950. Now I do not say that we must, of necessity, follow the exact language of this provision but I do feel that we must make the intent here very clear and I think the only safe way that we can do that is to follow the exact language of the enabling act. Therefore, I am convinced that the sensible thing to do is to approve this amendment as offered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, this language has indeed, or a language similar to it, been in every enabling act since 1950 but there is one thing we have got to remember and it is the governing factor to me in this consideration and that is we are now in the process of drafting and we hope adopting a constitution prior to the passage of an enabling act. When this section as written into HR 2535 and other enabling acts, it was contemplated by the drafters of that act that the enabling act would be passed first and then the people of Alaska would hold their Constitutional Convention, adopt their constitution and it would go to the Congress of the United States. That is exactly backwards from the way we are doing it now. Under the normal procedure, if you want to call it that, the enabling act is passed first and the people draft their constitution and then it goes to the voters for ratification. If the voters do not like the enabling act they turn down the constitution. There is provision, and there also has been in enabling acts for another constitutional convention then to be called; if the voters still don't like the enabling act, they turn down the second constitution. That is the end of the route. It goes without saying that when you read these enabling acts, that Congress can then have the option of writing a new enabling act or not. Now approaching this matter the way we are and writing and adopting our constitution first, we have, so far as I can find out, no check on any future enabling act except insofar as we provide those checks. Now, this particular section here, adopting paragraph 5 in the enabling act says, "All provisions in the Act admitting Alaska to the Union which reserve rights or powers to the United States as well as those prescribed in the terms and conditions of the grants of lands or other property made to Alaska are consented to fully by the State of Alaska and its people." Now of all of the hundreds of people I have talked to about the terms of HR 2535, I can count on something less than one hand those who like the requirement that the state will have to retain title to its minerals and may only lease them. Our answer to them as delegates to the Convention, as members of the Resources Committee or any other Committee, has only been able to be one answer and that is that it's in the enabling act that we can provide for any future change that might take place but we can't change the enabling act unless Congress does. But I think we would be ill-advised to write in here -- this section -- saying that we consent fully to those terms. Of course we may eventually have to; we may eventually want to, but I think that by leaving this out we are going to put ourselves in the same situation Hawaii got into when they left it out and I don't know that they didn't leave it out deliberately and Congress came back at them, has come back at them, in the terms of their new enabling act and said to the people of Hawaii, "You must now amend your constitution to put this section in," but that is a simple procedure. The enabling act for Hawaii, title 1 of this bill, merely provides on page 12 that this particular article be put to the people at the same time they go to the polls to elect their governor. If they adopt it the constitution is automatically amended and if they don't adopt it, "the provisions of this Act thereupon cease to be effective." In other words, the people of Hawaii by leaving this very section out have the final say-so on whether or not they want to adopt an enabling act that may be passed sometime in the future, the terms thereof they know not at present.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, yesterday the proposed Section 2 in the committee report said that the State of Alaska and its people consent to, all and singular, the provisions of the enabling act as it may be passed by Congress. That was a blank check, to be sure; we didn't like that so we struck it. We now come to a proposal for a new Section 2. That new Section 2 is limited only to saying that we would agree in advance to such terms or conditions regarding the grants of lands or property made to the state. Now we are only talking about that we consent in advance to the terms and conditions regarding the grants of lands. Well now, Congress is going to allow us a certain amount of land. Maybe it will be a 100 million acres. There is no reason to think that the amount of land that they are agreeing to allow the new state is going to be reduced in the future Congress. It has come up every time with each successive enabling bill. I think we have to put in something tantamount to Mr. Smith's proposal as a new Section 2. Otherwise, we are not eligible to have an enabling act put through Congress. Congress says, "Very well," to Hawaii, "You can have a referendum here that will pass upon the question of whether you consent to our terms and conditions or not," but the thing is I can't get it clearly through my head that Congress is going to pass the enabling act until the people of Hawaii have expressed themselves at the referendum, and how do the people of Hawaii know how much Congress is going to amend their act after they have rendered their consent by referendum. In other words, they won't give us an enabling law until you have consented in advance so we might just as well consent in advance here because this is not an unreasonable request on the part of Congress. They are asking us only to consent only to the terms and the conditions of the grants of land which will be made to the new state. I don't want to see us get into a "pickle"; I don't want to see this thing delayed by Congress pointing out that you people haven't complied, because here in the new enabling bill now we have got something the same as we had in the previous enabling bill, you people had it called to your attention -- you had fair warning that that would probably be in there, and you have chosen to disregard it. Then we are at the mercy of Congress to spell into an enabling act an authorization to have a referendum which would be regarded as an amendment to our constitution. We might get ourselves in the position of having to call another constitutional convention in order to make up for this deficiency. So, I firmly believe in this particular amendment offered by Mr. Smith. I have this to say though: I was trying to interpret Mr. McNealy's reservations about forever being bound by such consent. Did you have in mind, Mr. McNealy, that we would follow this language up as proposed by Mr. Smith by saying something to this effect, "subject only to changes as are subsequently authorized by Congress", in case Congress later liberalizes the restrictions?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President. No, that wasn't the thought behind it. The only thought we had was if this body saw fit to trust the legislature by a two-thirds majority vote of both houses to comply with some requirement of the enabling act. We were referring only to the state legislature.

R. RIVERS: Well, how could there be one until we had an election?

MCNEALY: The Territorial legislature -- it refers to the Territorial legislature.

R. RIVERS: The Territorial legislature -- oh, I see. Well that would be something to consider. I understand that now, but I also say that it might be well to add "subject only to such changes as are subsequently authorized by Congress". May I ask Mr. Smith a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Smith, what is your reaction to that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Well, Mr. Rivers, again I would say that I hesitate to argue a point of law, constitutional law if you want to call it that, but in this reservation of power I feel certain in my own mind that Congress can only deny us those powers which are denied to other states. When a state is admitted to the Union, it is admitted on an equal footing with the other states, and Congress, with all its power, cannot deny us any rights which are granted to the other states, so I don't think that the addition is necessary.

R. RIVERS: I am afraid you didn't get the point. Now a consent under certain conditions might be regarded as forever binding. If, 10 years after that we are a state, Congress wishes to liberalize the restrictions regarding the lands that is turned over to us, then we would take advantage of that liberalization, would we not? Do you think now that it is more palatable to the people here if they are consenting to the conditions laid down by Congress subject only to such --

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Is Mr. Rivers arguing an amendment to this proposal?

R. RIVERS: Well, I assume under the guise of a question I might be leading up to introducing an amendment. I perhaps wandered a little. It may be that that is implied. Some of the others can comment on that. It suits me the way it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I don't know whether you are laughing at me or what, Mr. President. If you are, I will take exception to it. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, you have the floor.

BUCKALEW: Thank you, Mr. President. I think we are being unnecessarily cautious on this and I have heard the expression, "We are giving Congress a blank check". Well, I don't think that is really an accurate statement of the position we find ourselves in now. We haven't got anything. We have got an appointed governor and we have a Territorial legislature. Now I can't see that we have got anything in our credit balance. We can't lose anything by consenting to this. It is certainly going to be better than what we have got now and it seems to me that it would be better to go ahead and accept statehood and I think that we are going to get better bills as we go along anyway, and if there is something that is not exactly satisfactory to us we will have two United States Senators down there in Washington which would certainly be more effective than the people back here saying, "Well, there is one provision in this act that we really don't think is just quite right." Now, I would rather adopt an amendment and trust it to our senators, and Congress is confined by the Constitution in certain fields and if they came out with a wholly inequitable bill I am sure that our delegates and our Tennessee senators under the Tennessee Plan would certainly raise an objection.

MCCUTCHEON: I move the previous question.

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon moves the previous question. Mr. Metcalf seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I thought it was said here that it was our policy not to cut off debate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Anyone can move the previous question at any the Chair has no jurisdiction over that. The question is "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll. The Convention will come to order.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Awes, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Doogan,

H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hilscher, Hinckel, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Nays: 27 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, Hellenthal, Hermann, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, McNealy, Nerland, Poulsen, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - Hurley.)

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 27 nays and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the previous question has been ordered.

CHIEF CLERK: It's a tie.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was it?

CHIEF CLERK: 27 to 27.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Oh. Then the "nays" have it and the previous question has not been ordered. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It seems to me, I, for one, want to state that this question had inevitably tied itself up with the so-called Tennessee Plan which we listened to last night. It seems to me, if we are going to view ourselves as a state, we must have this general clause in the constitution before we can do so. I have read the wording of the enabling act, HR 2535 and the enabling act of the proposed Section 2 and they are identical and they do reserve merely the rights that Congress reserves to itself and we agree to the land grants and the reservations in regard to the lands that Congress makes. Those two things, as Mr. Smith has pointed out, the first one is bound up by the Bill of Rights and by the Constitution of the United States and the second one is entirely within the jurisdiction and the judgment of Congress and I am sure that that judgment is not going to alter appreciably at any time in regard to what the final enabling act consists of. It seems to me that we would do well to consider that if we adopt this amendment in its present form that we are in a position then to go ahead with such a plan, if we so decide, as the Tennessee Plan. If we do not, it would also seem to me that we are thereby not in a position to consider ourselves a full state upon the election of our senators and the establishment of our state government, so therefore I favor the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I am in favor of the amendment, also. Your Committee on Ordinances is considering right now and has under preparation another section to be added to Proposal 17 which we think will take care of the situation somewhat along the lines that Mr. Ralph Rivers mentioned awhile ago, that differences that will arise between the new enabling act and the one we have used here as a pattern can probably be amended in a satisfactory way and so I move again the previous question on this present amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, this is an extremely critical and serious matter we are discussing here and I don't think we should limit ourselves too severely in the debate. It would make good sense if the house resolution which has been quoted here were the act admitting Alaska to the union, but we have no assurance whatever that it will be, or the act which does admit Alaska to the union or will resemble that in any particular. What does the proposed amendment say? It has some conditions in lines 2, 3, and 4, but what it says is expressed pretty well in the first line and last. It says, "All provisions of the act admitting Alaska are consented to fully by the State of Alaska and the people."

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No, no.

SUNDBORG: All right, the lines in between say "which reserves rights or powers to the United States." I don't want to give that up, as well as those prescribing the terms or conditions of the grants of lands or other property made to Alaska. I don't want to give those up without having a look at them. I think that if we adopt this amendment we are indeed signing a blank check and I think the whole problem could be taken care of in another way which would meet both the requirements of Congress and would show the good sense, which I think Alaskans should show whenever they are entering into another form of government. Now I think the whole thing can be taken care of in a transitional measure which would permit the people of Alaska at the polls to adopt such differences as there might be between what is expressed in our constitution and what is required by the Congress in the act which finally admits Alaska. I wonder if I may have consent to read what I would suggest might be included in such a transition measure and which I think would meet the entire problem.

MCCUTCHEON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

MCCUTCHEON: Are we speaking to the point of the amendment here? We are speaking either on the adoption or denial of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Then Mr. President, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the language of the proposed amendment and substitute the following: 'Section 2. Provisions of the act admitting Alaska to the Union which should require consent by the people of Alaska to any condition, or inclusion in the state constitution of any language, not expressed in this constitution shall be presented for ratification at the first general election at which a governor is chosen. If ratified, such provisions shall be incorporated in this constitution as though they were an original part hereof.'"

SUNDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment.

HERMANN: A point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Since the proposed amendment completely destroys the sense of the original amendment, hence it is not acceptable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Hermann your point of order is well taken. The proposed amendment to the amendment is not in order at this time. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I asked that we hold this over until today because I wanted to study it and I have studied it and I am entirely satisfied with this amendment. I don't share Mr. Ralph Rivers worries because Congress can remedy the situation and when we become one of the sovereign states we will be able to present our grievances to Congress like any other state and we must abide by their decision. We can't dictate the terms of our admission, we just can't do it. We are not a sovereign state like Texas was. Texas did it but they were sovereign and they got away with it but there was some question about whether they could even get away with it but since we are not sovereign to start with we just can't dictate the terms and I feel that this is a proper amendment and I therefore support it upon reflection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: May I ask Mr. Hellenenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

HINCKEL: What if the proposals of the enabling act were entirely out of line and they were so bad we just couldn't accept them, what would be the procedure then? I know that when we go to explain to the public why we put this in, we'll have to have a logical answer and I don't have one right now.

HELLENTHAL: One, I am sure, would be this, Congress wouldn't provide probably for ratification of the enabling act by the people. Another way of showing our disapproval would be failure to organize the state government. There are many, many ways that the disapproval could be recognized and I am sure Congress wouldn't want to shove sovereignty down our throats, and there will probably be some provision for ratification of the enabling act, but better still, they will adopt our constitution without any reservations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I recognize that there are several advantages in including this amendment; advantages working toward statehood, but I just can't bring myself to vote for it. Mr. Buckalew said there is no reason why we shouldn't write a blank check since we have nothing in the bank. Well, I will grant you that we have nothing in material things. We have no land or anything of that sort to lose but we do have rights as American citizens and if we voluntarily give up all those rights then we are bankrupt. Now I don't know whether the inclusion of this would do harm or good. It depends on the enabling act, of course. For those of you who want to vote for it I will say it might do some good in that when President Eisenhower sees it, he might remove his objections to statehood because then he could make a military reservation of everything north of the Yukon. It removes all of our objections to that, and it might advance the cause of statehood. We might get statehood four or five years sooner that way but my conscience just won't let me vote for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: It occurs to me that HR 2535 is still before the Congress. I don't believe it was killed last session. As I recall it, it was referred back to a committee, so it is still, so far as this session goes, a live piece of legislation and might continue in that respect throughout the balance of this session. At least it might be subject to further consideration. Now if we are going to pursue the so-called Tennessee Plan, and should we go ahead with that type of operation then if we go to the Congress with a constitution that has in it this provision as covered by Mr. White's amendment, or rather Mr. Smith's amendment, then it seems to me that we would stand a better chance of having our constitution adopted because we are then in conformity with the enabling act as it is now pending in the Congress and which could very well be acted on at that time. So I believe that the amendment is good and ought to be passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, in answering Mr. Hinckel's question in part, I had some of the same reservations that he had. In looking further into it and reading the report of the Interior and Insular Committee in the House, that is report No. 80 on this particular enabling act in the hearings they had, this enabling act has been built up through a series of studies extending over a period of some 20 years and on that committee in the House we have men like Engle, Sisk, Saylor, and a number of others. Some of the letters which you read last night, we have our watchdogs there in Congress. In the Senate we have men like Knowland, Neuberger; men like Magnuson, Clinton Anderson, Earle Clements, Murray from Kentucky, others like that. They are not going to go back through all the stages and reverse this picture of development of this enabling act. I can see there might be some minor revisions but I cannot see any major upset to SB 50 and HR 2535 essentially as they now are before the Congress. I would venture to say that with only minor or slight revisions, if and when we get statehood, this or even a better enabling act will be what will pass the Congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNeese.

MCNEESE: Mr. President, I agree almost wholeheartedly with what Mr. Rivers just said. I also recognize the reservations in the minds of many of the members on this floor. I approached Mr. Smith here a few minutes ago with regard to a certain suggestion and I am going to throw it out on the floor now for its merits, whatever it might have. If this were to be modified, striking the words "of the Act" in the first line and inserting "of acts to date of this constitution" what that might do to it in appeasing the various members on the floor and still not hurting the value of the article. In the house bills and senate bills to date there has been a certain pattern set up. Practically all of these provisions have appeared in every statehood bill within recent years. Furthermore, our constitution will be a dated article. I am not going to spend any more time talking about it but it does seem to be a possible loophole that might give us a near unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: We seem to have proceeded in many of our debates here on the assumption that we can't trust people. That assumption has gone through every argument we have had. It has been checkmating the legislature, the executive power, this, that, or the other thing. We all stand here as American citizens. We sometimes refer to ourselves as "second-class" citizens but I don't like that term because I believe we have chosen to stay here in the Territory, and if we don't like it, we can get out; but on the other hand, if we trust these men who will vote for statehood, then let us trust that under these words they will give us the best possible type of provisions. I believe we will show trust, we will be saying to these men that we want statehood, not on any terms but on the best terms we know you will provide for us. And, Mr. President, I don't feel this is a blank check. I feel that, if we go ahead as I feel we will, for the Tennessee Plan to send our senators and representative there, we have this provision. We will not only be knocking on the door, we will be ready to walk in when the door is opened and I for one will support this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I believe I have the right to close unless someone else --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith, you have the right to close.

SMITH: I don't have a great deal to add but I would ask each of you to ask yourselves this question. With all the difficulties that we have faced in persuading Congress to vote in favor of statehood, can anyone doubt that if we do not like the enabling act that we could persuade enough Congressmen to vote against statehood? I have no such doubt. I don't think I will go further into the technical questions involved except to point out one thing: that the land grants as provided in this act when it is finally passed will be a contract between the United States and the state. They will continue in effect regardless of any act by either party or the other without the consent. In other words, it would have to be by mutual consent before the terms of those land grants could be changed in any way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Smith a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith closed the argument. If there is no objection, you may ask your question.

COGHILL: There is one thing I would like to get clarified here in this amendment that you propose, Mr. Smith. Do you propose that the people of Alaska consent fully to a partitioning plan?

SMITH: I do not. I think that that situation is taken care of very well in our boundary provisions. If Congress decided to divide Alaska our boundary provision would no longer apply. There would be a direct conflict between our constitution and the enabling act and if the people of Alaska refused to ratify an amendment to the constitution, to bring that boundary provision in to line with the enabling act, then I am sure that we would not be granted statehood on a partial basis.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Smith be adopted by the Convention?"

V. RIVERS: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 46 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 7 - Barr, Coghill, Cooper, King, McNealy, Sundborg, Sweeney.

Absent: 2 - Hurley, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 46 yeas, 7 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. White.

WHITE: May I rise to a point of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may have the floor on personal privilege.

(Mr. White spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White serves notice that he will reconsider his vote on the proposed amendment just voted upon. Under those conditions we just might as well forget this proposal until tomorrow.

JOHNSON: A point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: Is Mr. White's notice of reconsideration good while he has the floor on personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: He should have stated that his point of personal privilege had expired before he served notice. The Chair assumes that that was his intention. Is that correct Mr. White?

WHITE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I move that the rules be suspended and that Mr. White's notice for reconsideration be brought on at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves that the rules be suspended and that we consider Mr. White's reconsideration at this time. Is there a second to the motion?

METCALF: Second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Collins, H. Fischer, Hinckel, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Taylor, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 36 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, White, Wien.

Absent: 2 - Hurley, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 36 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed motion has failed of adoption. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 17. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, a point of inquiry. I am not sure of the method which to follow here but due to the fact that at the time the ordinances from Section 2 to Section 20 were drawn, none of the proposals had passed the house in final form, and some changes had been made. In going over it, the consultants with the Committee, felt that there should be some definite changes and the Committee also felt that it should apply and not in any way conflict with the proposals that have already advanced through second reading on the floor, and for that reason and in order not to lose the time of the Convention, we placed upon the desk Proposal No. 17/a which contains Section 2 and Section 20 of the Committee's proposed ordinances. Now these are incorporated in ours, word for word, with those in Proposal No. 17/a. If you have some kind of a rule so these could be submitted at this time and the others held in abeyance until we complete our work on them tonight, these Sections 2 and 20 are ready, which cover the state capital and fish traps.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In other words. Mr. McNealy, you are asking that Committee Proposal No. 17/a be brought before the Convention at this time and Committee Proposal No. 17 be held in abeyance? Is that right?

MCNEALY: Yes, Mr. President. I would ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that you submit to the floor of the Convention for second reading of Committee Proposal No. 17/a? Is that correct? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Could I ask Mr. McNealy a question? Don't we want the proposal that is on the desk now withdrawn? If we hold it in abeyance we are never going to bring it up.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, in answer to Mr. Buckalew I will say that until we find out what our final draft of the other is, I would prefer to wait and withdraw it tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the introduction of Committee Proposal No. 17/a at this time? Hearing no objection the proposal will be accepted by the Convention. The Chief Clerk may read Committee Proposal No. 17/a.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 17/a, introduced by the Committee on Ordinances and Transitional Measures, resolved that the following be agreed upon as part of the Alaska State Constitution: SCHEDULE."

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Is this the first reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is, yes. Do you ask unanimous consent that we proceed with the second reading at this time, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I do ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and Committee Proposal No. 17/a be advanced to second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? If not, the Chief Clerk may read --

ROBERTSON: I want to ask a question first. Why did they leave out Section 19 of the Proposal No. 17?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there is no objection Committee Proposal No. 17/a will be read for the second time. Is there objection? The Chief Clerk may proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 17/a.

(The Chief Clerk then read Committee Proposal No. 17/a for the second time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section No. 2? The Sergeant at arms may bring proposed amendments up to the Secretary's desk. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment (from Mr. Hurley).

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, line 2, page 1, change 'Juneau' to 'Palmer'."

HURLEY: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there a second to the proposed amendment?

MCCUTCHEON: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I do this in all seriousness, recognizing the many ramifications of the problem. I would like, however, to take a few minutes of the delegates' time to explain my reasons for introducing this motion and urge your serious consideration to it. The matter of a capital city of a state is an extremely important decision, one that basically should be geared to the economy of that state, one that must be considered in the light of present circumstances as well as future circumstances. I think that, in all sincerity, Palmer is an ideal location for the capital of Alaska. It is centrally located insofar as area and present population is concerned and it would appear within our knowledge in projecting population that it will continue to be relatively near the center of population as our great State of Alaska continues to grow. I call attention to the fact that it is accessible by all means of transportation with the possible exception of water. We have rail service; we have excellent paved highway service; we have an airport capable of handling DC-3's, and within a very short time will be served by a scheduled airline. It is presently the center of many important governmental administrative agencies. They have made the decision purely on a basis of saving administrative costs and placing their personnel in the center of the area within which they work. Four of the federal government agencies and two of the Territorial agencies have headquarters in Palmer. I call attention to the conclusion that as our state grows we will follow the tendency of more and more cooperative efforts with the federal government. To that extent I feel the location of our state capital at Palmer will result in a greater liaison and cooperative work with the federal government. I call attention to a matter which I think is extremely important. At the present time and in the foreseeable future it is one of the two areas of our Territory which can be self-supporting. We may, in the event of being cut off from supplies from other parts of the United States, have to forego some luxuries but our population would be able to subsist in a very satisfactory manner with the foodstuffs and materials that we can produce right in the area. I call attention to the fact that it is probably an average climate for the Territory of Alaska. We have available the cheapest fuel in the Territory of Alaska per unit of heat. We have, even at the present time and are improving all along, excellent community facilities in the way of schools and hospitals. In all respects in my mind, it has the advantages which are desirable for the location of a seat of government for a state which has the future that I feel that Alaska has. Now I certainly recognize the many problems inherent with such a move but I feel that the facts will demonstrate that where the capital is located in the State of Alaska it will stay, and the dollars and cents that enter into the argument must be computed on a longtime basis. I am sure that the savings to the State of Alaska and to the people of the State of Alaska as a result of having the capital located in Palmer will far offset the immediate and temporary loss that may accrue to those people whose businesses presently depend upon the capital being in Juneau. I also think that another consideration which I have given much thought to, I know, is the matter of ratification of this constitution. Certainly I put that ahead of any personal feelings, but after a thorough consideration I am convinced that the constitution will be ratified with a substantial vote should my amendment be adopted, as it would be without. I recognize that there are people who will vote against the ratification if this matter is included. But I also feel that as many people will vote in favor of ratification with my amendment adopted, as would vote against it if the amendment was not adopted. I ask the delegates to consider this matter in a long-term way. If you do not, you are not making the proper decision for your state. We have gone through this Convention in the days that we have been here in what I think is a wonderful manner of cooperation and putting aside of local interests, and I hope that you will not feel I introduced this amendment purely as a local interest matter, granted, of course it involves local interest, but yet I think it is more important that we consider the matter from a long-term basis. So keep that in mind and whatever decision we arrive at will be the proper one, just as it has in the case of considering other proposals. I ask that you give my amendment your most serious consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

V. FISCHER: Of the Chairman of the Ordinance Committee. What does it mean when we include the statement, "The capital of the State of Alaska shall be at Palmer," or Juneau or wherever it may be? Does that mean it cannot be changed, it can never be changed? How could it be changed?

MCNEALY: Mr. Fischer, the question is a good one and in all fairness should be brought before the Convention in regard to its legal implications. The schedule or ordinances are simply transitional measures and the definitions of them by the courts are that they only serve the purpose of putting a constitution in operation of a change from Territorial government to a state government and once that has been accomplished to the fullest extent, then any of the ordinances underneath this schedule are no longer to be considered as laws. If you want to put it frankly and openly here, it would leave it in this respect: after the state became a government, under the ordinance here it would be possible to change the capital by method of the legislature or it would even be open to the initiative and referendum. The Committee considered a number of proposals there, and considered them very thoroughly, and this was certainly a committee compromise.

V. RIVERS: I would also like to ask a question. It says nothing about this being an ordinance. It says Committee Proposal No. 17/a, "That the following be agreed upon as part of the Alaska State Constitution". Where is any qualifying clause that sets this up as an ordinance in this?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, you will notice the asterisks there.

It leaves out Section 1 and we also leave out the wording. There is a preamble to the schedule which is in the schedule which is in Committee Proposal No. 17 that will be withdrawn, but it will head this article at the time when it is finally all before us and, in effect, no inconvenience may result because of change from a territorial to a state form of government. It is "declared and ordained" and the reason for the use of that language was because it is language recognized by the courts in interpreting ordinances under the schedule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I feel compelled to rise and speak against this amendment. I feel this is more or less just like the apportionment act and a lot of other things that when we have to draw a fine line, and I believe that Juneau was well-established within the Territorial departments. We have got several million dollars worth of the property down there that would be turned over to us. I think that if the amendment for Palmer should be adopted, why it should then be amended that Nenana or Fairbanks or Kodiak or anyplace else would get it. I think we have got to draw the line that we have established in the Territory a capital and that it should stay there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: May I direct a question to the Chairman of the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. McNealy, you once set before us Committee Proposal No. 4 and I note that your report on Committee Proposal No. 4 that it was considered and rejected in favor of other handling of the capital in the schedule. Committee Proposal No. 4 in the outline provided that the seat of government should be Juneau until or unless changed as provided in Committee Proposal No. 4, and then the proposal went on to set up a study of the public advantages that might accrue from different locations and then to submit the locations chosen by such a committee to a vote of the people. I wonder if you could give us a little of the background of the Committee thinking in withdrawing that committee proposal and substituting the one we now have before us.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, there was a division of thinking, of course, as there is in all committees on that particular committee proposal. Even as a member of the Committee, we were not satisfied with this one here but it was the nearest thing that we could arrive at to get any degree of unanimity, and it was felt that the actual talk in the Committee and the feeling was and I believe the members when it appeared before the Committee, if we spelled it out, there definitely had to be a referendum within a period of 10 years, that it would be spelled out there so plainly the feeling would be, especially of the property owners and others in Juneau and in the Southeastern area, that they wouldn't have any measure of security except on a 10-year basis and I grant again, being frank, that there isn't any guarantee of security in this. The only guarantee of security is if this were in the body of the constitution, which of course then could still be reached by constitutional amendment. But to answer your question, the major reason was that they felt that if it were spelled out or required an initiative that there would be a stalemate at the capital city and everybody would say, "What is going to happen in 10 years," because it is there in the constitution for them to read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess until 3:50.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the amendment as proposed by Mr. Hurley. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I have an amendment to Mr. Hurley's amendment on the desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'Palmer' strike period and insert the words: 'whenever the town of Palmer shall be able to provide a capitol building and other facilities comparable with the facilities and buildings available at Juneau.'"

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, the Chair would have to hold the amendment is a facetious amendment and is not germane to the question.

TAYLOR: Mr. Chairman, that is not a facetious amendment at all. Juneau has the facilities and I thought that Palmer should offer the same facilities if they expect to be the capital.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will still hold that the amendment to the amendment is not in order. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hurley be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 12 - Davis, H. Fischer, Harris, Hurley, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, White.

Nays: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Buckalew, McLaughlin, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 40 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees, you may submit your amendment to the Chief Clerk.

R. RIVERS: I have one on the Clerk's desk and would like to have it follow Mr. McNees's.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Ralph Rivers. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as proposed by Mr. McNees.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 2."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. McNees?

MCNEES: I move the adoption of the amendment.

MARSTON: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved by Mr. McNees, seconded by Mr. Marston. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Well, it is felt that this is again a matter of legislative law even though many times it is written into constitutions, so is much legislation. Furthermore I feel that many of the allayed fears of the people who feel that the capital should remain in Juneau, should be alleviated by this expression or this amendment inasmuch as it would not call for moving it. I think the capital should remain at Juneau. I think it would remain at Juneau under this provision. I do not feel that we can seriously, from an economic standpoint, consider moving the capital but neither do I feel that we should tie ourselves to definitely retaining it as a part of the constitution.

SUNDBORG: May I address a question to Mr. McNees?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Your suggestion would be that we have this nowhere in the constitution? Neither in the body thereof nor in an ordinance?

MCNEES: I feel that is the way it should be.

SUNDBORG: You feel that the matter could be taken care of by, as you say, legislative law?

MCNEES: If necessary. I don't see that it would require even legislative action.

SUNDBORG: That the legislature could?

MCNEES: I think so, yes.

SUNDBORG: Where would the first legislature meet?

MCNEES: I would say definitely in Juneau.

SUNDBORG: How would that be provided? How would they know that?

MCNEES: By custom.

SUNDBORG: By custom they just --

HURLEY: Mr. President, point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I think we should address the Chair before we proceed.

SUNDBORG: Excuse me, Mr. President. Those are all the questions I have for Mr. McNees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of this proposed amendment? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I think that this matter of the capital has been long in the minds of many people. It is a very important one to all of Alaska. To my way of thinking it should not be treated lightly, with levity. I know it is serious with all of us. I think practically everyone has a fairly strong conviction in their minds but I believe that eventually the location of the capital should be left to the majority vote of the people after a reasonable interim for studies to be made and proper consideration to be given. I don't believe that in the essence the legislative and executive removal from Juneau would do the things that they say it would do in upsetting their economy. They have the physical plant and equipment there and they would doubtless be the service area and the government headquarters for the services rendered in the First Division, as is now Anchorage and Fairbanks in the areas in which they are located. I don't see a major upset in the economy of Juneau if the legislative and executive departments of government moved out. Now last February I visited in Olympia, Washington, I visited in Oregon, the Oregon State capital and in Seattle and Portland. In Olympia and in Salem they have very little activity of government. If you want to go where the activities of government are the state highway offices, the BPR, public health offices, welfare offices, you go to Seattle or Spokane in Washington. You go to Portland or one of the eastern cities such as La Grande in Oregon. Now it seems to me that the center of the executive and legislative being forever established in Juneau would be a grave injustice to all the people of Alaska, because there is doubtless coming a day in the not too distant future when this whole vast area of the interior of Alaska might well have a heavy population. They are entitled to be able to attend the meetings of the legislature; to have ready access to the governor; they are entitled also to have ready access to the policy-making departments of government, and it has been the experience of a great many people in Alaska that with Juneau as the capital, that has not been the case. We all realize that the economy of Alaska grew up first along our shorelands and our waterways. We had a maritime economy and for that reason the coastal areas are the oldest in development. But it has only been in recent times since roads, railroads, and airfields have opened the interior, and in that time it has begun to grow and it is growing, and growing rapidly. I, for one, do not feel that an immediate change should be made from Juneau but for them to tell me that if this constitution sets up a referendum or sets up a location by popular vote to decide on the capital after all the facts are known does not to me make sense. This matter of the location of the capital has been discussed, and has been the subject of considerable comment and understanding on the part of a lot of people for a long time. I sat in one legislature in which we decided that we would build through the Territory in different locations certain government buildings that were badly needed in the centers of these service areas. There were to be buildings located at Fairbanks, Anchorage, possibly Nome, and also in Southeastern. We appropriated $600,000 which was basic money for what is now the Territorial Building in Juneau. It said that at first in that bill that was presented to the legislature, it first said that the building which was to be built would be located west of the Gulf of Alaska. After the bill was finally amended and adjusted the $600,000 appropriated was spent on the Territorial Building at Juneau. I have sat through many occasions in Juneau when I realized the grave disadvantages of having it for a capital. First and foremost is the difficulty in access and travel; secondly, of course, is the fact that it has very limited area in which to build and expand; thirdly, of course, is the fact that it is responsive more to the voice of the Fifth Division than any other part of Alaska. We have had a great deal of difficulty in getting the voice of the people of Alaska as a whole heard in Juneau as the capital. Now, those are things I think are basic in the consideration of all of our people. I have seen government agencies located in Juneau that spend more for travel than they spend for the actual cost of operating their offices. I refer to the FHA which had a very limited amount of capital operations in the First Division, very small amount of building under Title 608 of the FHA Act, and they were paying out $64,000 a year to transport their people back and forth to the areas where they were doing 90 per cent of their building -- the Fairbanks and Anchorage areas, the Central Alaska areas. They were paying out more for that travel than they were paying out for the actual cost of operating their entire office per year in Juneau. Now we have similar patterns and parallels in such organizations as the Alaska Road Commission. The Alaska Road Commission has its main offices and its design engineering and supervisory staff in Juneau. They have no functions to perform in or around Juneau or in or around the First Division. Roads in the First Division are built by the Bureau of Public Roads and are maintained by them as they are in all national parks and all national forest areas, but there we have sitting a fairly large organization doing the planning, doing the engineering, doing the supervising of an organization which does practically all of its work throughout the balance of Alaska. Now that travel expense alone and that added cost of getting to and from their work, the work which they must necessarily perform, is a great one every year. I don't know what it is now; I know what it was in earlier years; and it was a great expense. They are far away from the actual work which they design and which they supervise. Those things are all considerations that any good study group should give in arriving at a future location for the site of Alaska. If this proposal fails I intend to submit an amendment or submit a proposal to take its place that will allow for a referendum by the people in a certain period of time, will provide for the legislature to make suitable studies of the most possible or likely sites in the Territory of Alaska, upon which a majority of the people voting on the question can then decide where the capital shall be. I can see that in our government, as government goes these days, the big function of government is the services which have an actual field function. It is not the sitting of the legislature and the chief executive, it is the services that are performed in building highways, operating schools, health and welfare. Even though the actual legislative and executive seat of the capital is moved from one spot to another it does not necessarily disrupt that flow of activity of government in the area which is being served by those services. Where they have a field service, the field service supervision must necessarily be close to it. I point out to you that there are extremes in this matter of moving the capital. I think it is the State of North Carolina that has, by popular vote, moved their capital 14 times. However, that is an exception; it does not ordinarily happen. Once it is established as it was done in the national government, in an undeveloped area somewhere near the center of population at that time, they selected Washington, D. C., employed a planner named Major L'Enfant, a French city planner, and from that he developed the outline of the city of Washington, and it is largely as we see it today. The plan has not been deviated from. That has been the selection of a capital of the nation of the United States. It was not picked in Philadelphia because Philadelphia happened to be at that time the seat of the government as we set up our national government. So I say, therefore, it is my opinion that this is a matter to which all of the people should eventually have a voice and that we here should not foreclose them from having such a voice.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I fail to see any basis for all the fears that Mr. Victor Rivers has expressed because, as has been pointed out, this Section 2 which is now sought to be stricken is a part of the schedule, and if I understand it correctly, and understand Mr. McNealy's explanation correctly, the very first state legislature that meets could either change the capital from Juneau to some other place or do anything it saw fit to do with regard to the capital. I can see no reason at all why the matter should be stricken. Certainly there is just as much argument in support of Juneau as the capital because on the standpoint of expense alone it seems to me that the new State of Alaska is going to need all of the money we will have for other purposes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I was the one before who asked Mr. McNealy about the possibility of changing the site of the capital if it is included in the schedule as now worded. I have looked into it a little bit more and I don't want to question the authenticity of Mr. McNealy's opinion but the point is that it is an opinion. In Section 8 of Schedule 17 you will find the following phraseology: "Until otherwise provided by" law the seal of the Territory shall be the seal of the State. In other words we say, we qualify this fact that the seal of the Territory shall be the seal of the state by saying "until otherwise provided by law". The thing is that each one of these provisions stands by itself. We have a provision for citizenship of the state; that provision cannot be changed by the legislature if the legislature wanted to change it. I am beginning to have very grave doubts as to whether we could change the capital if it's provided in here as currently proposed in Section 2 unless we have a qualification similar to that in Section 8 "until otherwise provided by law" or "until otherwise provided by vote of the people of Alaska at a referendum". It seems to me that we have no right to tie ourselves down and freeze the location in one particular place. I voted against Mr. Hurley's motion before because I didn't feel I could sit here and say Palmer is the proper place. I couldn't vote to put it in Anchorage or Fairbanks or Glennallen -- Glennallen, by the way, if anybody bothers to study the map of Alaska, is located in the exact center of Alaska if you split Alaska, taking Tongass in the South and Point Hope in the Northwest. Be that as it may, I think that we can't freeze the location because there are cost factors involved, as Mr. Rivers brought out, and I certainly will not vote to sustain the provision as we now have it in Section 2, and I am in favor of Mr. McNees's motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I find myself in this situation, and I started to say something about it before. I don't completely agree with Mr. McNealy. I think his basic statement was probably an accurate statement of the law. In my opinion there is extreme danger that this language would permanently fix the capital at Juneau, looking at this section of the schedule with other sections of the schedule and looking at the language itself, I think that in all fairness to the delegates here that it would be safer and wiser to meet the question head-on and insert such language as suggested by Mr. Fischer. Since I have been at this Convention, one expert says it's temporary; another expert says it's permanent; and another expert says, "I really don't know but it could be this or that", and in view of some of the cases I have read I think it would be safer to specifically provide either by law or by referendum or whatever is the desire of the people here assembled. But I will say that I think Mr. McNealy is probably right but I think the way it is drawn now that the courts would sort of waver between first one way and then another and if we might have a judge from the city of Juneau he might find more strength in the decisions that would hold that this would be a permanent provision.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, any statements that I make in regard to the law are not my own opinion. I have heard opinions of both legal and laymen on this floor handled very loosely and for that reason any statement I make is not an opinion, it is the law. Now I have no objection, particularly, to Mr. Buckalew's suggestion. There is no pride of authorship in the majority of articles that are going to be offered here on this schedule because we have lifted the language or backed it up by court decisions. Now, in reference to the statement there in regard to law and the state seal was lifted out of another constitution, verbatim, so to speak, as to the statement that I made, it would only take but a couple of minutes if I could read this to the body in the case of Mann v. Osborne --

MCCUTCHEON: A point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I fail to see how Mr. McNealy's comments at this particular time are justifying the contention that we should either adopt or deny the adoption of the amendment before us. Mr. McNealy is justifying an opinion which has been given, others challenged it. Consequently, it has no point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. McNealy, why should we retain this Section 2 as you have stated it here in this article?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, it should be retained, first, that there be a seat of government named in the constitution as mentioned here, so the legislature will at least know where to have a place to meet, and with reference to the fact here as to its permanency and to answer the objections for which I understand this amendment was offered to strike this section, I will read from a leading case, Mann v. Osborne (S.C. Oklahoma) page 48, "Ordinances and schedules appended to a constitution as distinguished from the permanent and fundamental law embodied in the constitution itself are temporary enactments for the purpose of effecting a transition from the old government to the new and of putting the provisions of the new constitution into effect." At the heading of this final schedule will be these words, "In order that no inconvenience may result," the words are substantially this, "by reason of the changes out of the adoption of the new constitution, it is the custom to adopt a schedule which will set forth temporary regulations covering the interim before the new machinery of government is thoroughly established. The only office of a schedule is to provide for the transition from the old to the new government and to obviate confusion which would otherwise arise during the transition period and this fact may be material in determining the construction and effect to be given to the provisions contained in the schedule." I submit that all of the answers are supplied in the committee proposal here; that the words that it offers will meet the tests of the courts in deciding on this particular point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. King.

KING: I would like to rise to correct what I think is a misstatement of facts. I admire Delegate Rivers very much when he talks about the jurisdiction of the BPR and ARC, and where their jurisdiction is. I live in a district where the ARC does all the road building, Skagway is also in the same district. The area in which I live is 45 minutes by air from Juneau and much of the Road Commission equipment and everything goes through the area from which I come. I think we should be very careful about stating facts when we are talking about something as serious as this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, a point of information. Under national law, road building in national parks and national forests is done by moneys of and operated under the Bureau of Public Roads.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I would like to ask a question through the Chair of anyone who cares to answer it. It is my understanding that right now Juneau is the legal capital of the Territory, that the laws will carry over unless they are changed. Automatically Juneau is and will be unless we change it here, the capital of the state so I can't see there is any difference between whether we retain this language or not, provided that this language is subject to legislative action, because that is what the other course would lead us to, too.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What Mr. Emberg is asking is, does anyone have a positive answer as to whether or not the seat of government would still be at Juneau until changed by an act of the legislature if this Section 2 were deleted from this proposal? Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I can answer to this degree, that there have been other states who, in their constitutions, have not named a capital of Alaska and the perpetuation has gone on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

MCNEALY: I believe, if memory serves me correctly, the Territorial capital is named at Juneau through the Organic Act which is a law of Congress and a law of the United States rather than the law of the Territory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anyone wish to answer the question as asked by Mr. Emberg or does anyone have the answer? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think Mr. McNealy pointed to the answer and that being federally enacted and part of the Organic Act, which is going out of existence, there could be a question as to whether it carries over or not.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McNeas be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 2."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll. The Convention will come to order.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 9 - Cross, V. Fischer, Hurley, Kilcher, Laws, McNeas, Poulsen, V. Rivers, White.

Nays: 44 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Marston, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 9 yeas, 44 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, the President had assured Mr. Ralph Rivers that his amendment would be read next. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I wonder if it is in order to assign seniority to amendments?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, what had happened was when the President recognized Mr. McNeas's amendment, Mr. Ralph Rivers already had an amendment on the desk and at that time asked if we would recognize his amendment next.

KILCHER: Very often there are a lot of amendments on the desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, if you raise the question, you have the floor and are recognized, your amendment will be read next here.

V. RIVERS: May we have a five-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to ask the Chairman of the Committee if these proposed amendments have been cleared with the Committee or have been brought to the attention of the Committee as provided by the rules.

MCNEALY: The only one I had seen is the proposed amendment by Mr. Rivers shown to me as Chairman of the Committee and not to the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Committee itself have any amendments it would like to offer with relation to this section before we get into it?

MCNEALY: The Committee has no amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Committee object to hearing amendments?

MCNEALY: We have no objections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, do you wish that your amendment be read at this time? You have the floor.

KILCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, line 2, change the period to comma and add 'unless decided otherwise by law.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

POULSEN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen seconds the amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, there seems to be some doubts and it certainly might create trouble in the future if we leave Section 2 as it is. It might well be that it would take court action to decide whether or not the capital could be changed by simple legislative action or not. This small addition, I think, would remove any possible doubt, trouble, and expense, and would be in accordance with other transitional measures like the one where the seal is involved, and I therefore think that the adoption of this amendment would clear the air and satisfy all contending factions in the issue.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher -- " Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: May we have it read again, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, line 2, change the period to comma and add 'unless decided otherwise by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 20 - Collins, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hurley, Kilcher, Londborg, McNees, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 31 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Robertson, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor.

Absent: 4 - Buckalew, Coghill, Marston, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 20 yeas, 31 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I will now offer the one I had on the desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2. Strike the section and substitute the following: 'Unless otherwise determined as hereinafter set forth the capital of the State of Alaska shall be at Juneau. Within five years from the admittance of Alaska as a State of the Union, the legislature shall establish a capital site survey commission to study the merits and demerits of potentially suitable sites for the permanent capital in line with the best interest of the people of the whole state, to be followed by a report to the legislature and to the public; and a referendum by the people at a statewide election or series of elimination elections until a majority of the voters voting on the proposition have concurred on a particular site, after which the seat of government shall be changed as rapidly as feasible to the new site.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, what is your pleasure?

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

HINCKEL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, that speaks pretty well for itself, subject to its being improved by Style and Drafting. I wrote that out; it's clear; it needs better sentence construction. It would still leave it to the legislature to set up a commission. There is nothing said about how long that commission would take to make the study and report back to the legislature and the public. After the report is in, then, of course, the legislature would be relied upon to set up suitable referendum procedure and either at a particular referendum or series of referendums at which through an elimination process, you would finally get a majority for a particular site. Now the people wouldn't be voting in the dark. They would be cognizant of the report as to the location of the various sites; their closeness to the centers of population; their accessibility by rail, or train, or air, or both, or road. They would know something about whether the foundation ground was adequate for big buildings; what the water supply was; what the weather was like, and all that sort of thing. Now you just can't pick a site out. You might pick a site out in the dead center of population and find its on permafrost or glacier that you couldn't put buildings on. In other words, a site study commission would have a big job to do, operating within certain general criteria of where they might think the capital should be, and then you have got something before the people. You are leaving it in the hands of the people of Alaska as a whole to make a determination, which would take quite a few years, but which would be an orderly approach to a solution of the problem. I am also cognizant of the fact that there might be some delay after the referendum, as to what the word "feasible" would mean. "Feasible" would take into consideration the financial condition of the state, the cost of new construction, what bonding would be required, and other considerations that would be taken into account not to disrupt the orderly processes of government, so I think that as a sound approach for the present Constitutional Convention to take, subject to a little style and drafting, that they could well adopt the approach and policy which is contained in this proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I am against that amendment mainly because it is too long. I think the same thing could be said in a few words, that a referendum be provided in a certain number of years and that all of the legislation that happens to be in that amendment could be taken care of very well by the legislature and not be in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I move to change the number from five to two.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. The amendment is quite long.

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent that we allow that to be mimeographed so we can see it more clearly before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the proposed amendment will be ordered mimeographed.

V. FISCHER: May I ask Mr. Ralph Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask the question, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Would you possibly like to withdraw this and rewrite it and have that mimeographed for introduction tomorrow.

R. RIVERS: Is Style and Drafting going to meet for a little bit this evening?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross has been attempting to get the floor. Mr. Cross.

CROSS: Mr. President, I would like to say that that proposal that is now before us is very similar to the one that was unanimously adopted by the Committee on Resolutions. Our resolution was somewhat longer than the one that is proposed there and also the time element is longer. Otherwise it is practically the same thing as we arrived at after several weeks of study.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that the amendment be held in abeyance until after it is mimeographed and available for all of the delegates. Is there objection? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I would like to speak on a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Gray, you may have the floor.

(At this point, Mr. Gray spoke for a few moments on a point of personal privilege during which Mr. Victor Rivers rose to a point of order that a delegate cannot debate under personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Objection was heard to the unanimous request to have the amendment mimeographed. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I wasn't speaking on Mr. Rivers' unanimous consent request.

R. RIVERS: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves that the proposed amendment be held in abeyance until it is mimeographed and placed on each delegate's desk. The question is, "Shall the Convention adopt the motion as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers?" All those in favor of adopting the motion of having the proposed amendment mimeographed before it is again brought before the Convention will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" seem to have it. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Point of order. As I understood that, the question was whether this thing would be mimeographed or not. Did everybody understand the same?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right.

HURLEY: Mr. Victor Rivers stated that motion, not Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Victor Rivers asked for unanimous consent and never followed it up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers made the motion, that is correct. The decision was that the "nays" have it. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, point of order. We have a rule, do we not, that any long amendments be mimeographed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, you are correct, and it would take, then a voice vote and a two-thirds majority to vote down such a motion. However, under the rule it would be possible for the Chair to just simply state that it be mimeographed, but the Chair does not know if this particular amendment is long enough that it should be mimeographed. The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the question of having this particular amendment mimeographed. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Is suspension of the rules debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Suspension of the rules would not be debatable.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 15 - Barr, Boswell, Cross, Doogan, Gray, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Smith, Walsh.

Nays: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nolan, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Marston, VanderLeest.

Abstaining: 1 - Buckalew.)

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Before the result is announced, as I understood the question it was a suspension of the rules, but in the matter of requiring that it would be mimeographed, does that require a suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will have to admit, Mr. Johnson, that there has been a slight error made here in putting of the motion as it were. The Chief Clerk may read the results.

R. RIVERS: I want to change my vote to "no".

DOOGAN: I will change my vote to "yes".

SWEENEY: I change my vote to "no".

ROSSWOG: I change my vote to "no".

WHITE: I want to change my vote to "no", I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

V. FISCHER: I change my vote to "no".

MCCUTCHEON: I change my vote to "no".

GRAY: I change my vote to "yes".

HURLEY: I change my vote to "no".

HARRIS: I change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I move we rescind our action on the vote just taken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would not be in order until the Chief Clerk reads the result of the vote; then it would. The Convention will come to order. The Chair will admit that it's the President's fault that we are in this predicament.

CHIEF CLERK: 15 yeas, 37 nays, 2 absent and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it -- but what is the result of the vote? The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I ask unanimous consent that we rescind action on the vote just taken.

PRESIDENT.EGAN: Mr. Barr asks unanimous consent that we rescind the action just taken.

PERATROVICH: I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I believe that the motion is out of order because you can still reach that on reconsideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are correct, Mr. Peratrovich. It is out of order at this time because it could be reached by the motion to reconsider. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: The "no" votes, I voted wrong thinking we were voting on whether we could send it to the boiler room or not, then it occurred to me that we were voting to suspend the rules, so I changed my vote to "no", as far as suspending the rules is concerned; then the various other delegates saw the light and also voted not to suspend the rules. Now I contend that the 37 is a vote for not suspending the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The motion has failed of adoption and the Chair will refer the amendment to the boiler room for mimeographing, under the rule that we have as one of our permanent rules. Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Is it in order to speak to the amendment now? To speak on the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The amendment is referred, Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to speak on personal privilege for a minute.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Robertson.

(Mr. Robertson then spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The amendment of Mr. Ralph Rivers is on its way to the boiler room for mimeographing and will be placed on each delegate's desk. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, at this time I would like to file a notice of reconsideration on the amendment that was made by Mr. Kilcher adding the words "as provided by law" after the period on line 2.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris serves a notice of reconsideration of his vote on the amendment that had been offered by Mr. Kilcher. That would hold Section 2 before us until tomorrow. Mr. McNealy, do you have a statement to make relative to the section that appears as Section 20 in this proposal as Chairman of the Committee?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, there is only one statement. The Committee, if I remember, the vote was five to four in the affirmative of reporting this out on the floor in this particular item. I believe I speak pretty well for all of the Committee. I don't believe there are any that are opposed to the abolishment of fish traps but the minority had some qualms about the language in it. In view of the fact that I voted on the minority I would like to have Mr. Buckalew, who spent a great deal of time on this, I would like to have him make any explanations that he could.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, this particular proposal came into life when we got a proposal from Delegate Lee. He had submitted a proposal and it eventually got to the Ordinance Committee and we prepared this particular proposal. Mr. McNealy stated once that it was Buckalew's proposal; that was inaccurate because it is a committee proposal. The purpose of this particular provision is to abolish fish traps the instant we become a state, and the proposal has the effect of taking care of that void period in the transition between the time the governor takes his seat and the legislature gets around to acting on the particular subject. It is not a part of the body of the constitution; it is strictly a transitional measure and that is the reason that you find it in the schedule. Now it was the feeling of the majority of the Committee that the trap question was of such prime importance that the state should make every effort to abolish the traps as soon as possible. It is common knowledge that there is economic distress among the individual fishermen in Alaska and Douglas McKay, our present Secretary of the Interior, has so admitted in his latest proposal on the fish trap problem. Now this ordinance will, as I say, have the effect of abolishing traps the minute we become a state. Now I think it is a proper transitional measure for the reason that it will take care of that interim period, and it depends upon when we are admitted. It might be that the traps will be able to operate at least 20 days after we were admitted to statehood and I am sure that none of the delegates would be in favor of such a mishap as that. Now it serves many purposes. One of the collateral purposes that it serves, I don't know whether all the delegates are familiar with the latest letter that McKay sent down here, or the latest fish trap legislation that is now pending in Congress. Now in the information he put out to the congressmen, his bill provides for an elimination of the fish traps over a 10-year period and in the statement of his case he says that the people of Alaska have agreed to this in a referendum. Now if we adopt this ordinance it would, of course, repudiate that statement. Now we all know that the position taken now by the Department of the Interior is misleading because 10 years ago the referendum was voted on and it was a compromise referendum anyway. It was an addition added that the traps wouldn't be abolished except over a period of 10 years. Now I think it is necessary, in addition to taking care of the transitional measure, it would serve the purpose of showing to the Secretary of the Interior that the people of Alaska want to abolish traps immediately. Using Secretary McKay's reasoning, he claims that the people of Alaska agreed to abolish traps over an 18-year period. Now it has some other effects, too. I don't think this particular act is going to affect us nationally. It is going to affect the cause of statehood adversely and I think we probably owe it to the fishermen of Alaska to protect them even during this small period. We all know that we have had the same problem with the Department of Interior, and I don't want to confine my remarks to Secretary McKay because that isn't accurate. We didn't get any better treatment in the 20 years preceding McKay's taking over of office so our cause can't be attributed to any political party. Both major political parties have treated the issue the same way. They have neglected the need of necessary legislation. Now it seems to me that this is the first time the people of Alaska have had an opportunity to abolish fish traps. We are sovereign, I mean when the constitution comes into effect we can abolish fish traps and I think we have a duty to abolish them at the instant we can exercise our sovereignty. That is the essential purpose of the act. Now, I am not an expert on fishing matters but some of the other delegates that are can certainly, I am sure, convince all the delegates here that the language that was used in this particular provision is certainly adequate and accurate, and from the people that I have talked to, they have advised me that unless the state takes over the instant they can, that they will be materially damaged, and that's the main reason for the ordinance. You can see from the ordinance that the people of Alaska state that the salmon are a part of the public domain. The ordinance further states that we are trying to provide fair competition among the individual fishermen. To make the ordinance workable we had to put a violation clause in, and we have provided for confiscation. The reason that we provided for an individual vote on the ordinance is to insure its complete validity, because it gives the people a chance to exercise their sovereignty again. They are voting "yes" or "no" to abolish fish traps the instant they can exercise their sovereignty. I had a couple of other notes I wanted to use. Now some might argue that this isn't a proper subject for the constitution. Our position is that it is not in the main part of the constitution so it takes care of that objection. I think there is a real necessity to have such an ordinance; I think that it will serve a useful purpose; I think that its legality can be upheld; I think it will have the effect of a larger turnout to vote on the constitution itself. It points out to the individual voters that if they want to abolish fish traps they have to first become a state, and that is the only way they are going to get rid of fish traps unless they are going to wait another 10 years. That's about all I have to say on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I direct a question to Mr. Buckalew?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Buckalew, I am not particularly concerned about fish traps as such but do you think the language as used in this proposed ordinance would cover fish wheels and if so, would it make an operator of a fish wheel amenable to this provision by a fine of $5,000?

BUCKALEW: Well, we have better experts than I am. I would say no. It is confined to traps used for the commercial taking of salmon.

JOHNSON: Well, a fish wheel is a device, I don't know whether you would call it a trap or not, but it is a device for the taking of commercial fish, and you say, "Fish traps for taking salmon for commercial purposes are hereby prohibited in all waters of the state unless otherwise provided by law." Now there are many fish wheels in operation on the Yukon and Kuskokwim and other rivers in the interior of Alaska, and they take the fish for commercial purposes.

BUCKALEW: Well, Mr. Johnson, I don't think you can cover it, but if there was any doubt in your mind I wouldn't object to adding an exception.

JOHNSON: I don't think they should be covered but I don't see that they are excluded in this.

BUCKALEW: I think Mr. Emberg could probably answer that question better than I can.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg, if you would.

EMBERG: I would like to answer that question. The definition of a trap is in Section 101.14 of the laws and regulations for the commercial fisheries of Alaska. It defines the trap as any "fixed device operated for the purpose of or resulting in the impoundment of live fish", and your fish wheel doesn't do that. It takes and dumps them in the box and they are no longer live fish.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I have seen a fish wheel operating for years out here on Chena Point and the fish are caught in the wheel and they drop into a box and they stay alive for varying periods of time but they aren't dead. I've bought fish out of the box when they were still alive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill has been attempting to get the floor.

COGHILL: I would like to ask a question of whoever might be able to answer it, probably Mr. Emberg. A fish trap is considered a stationary unit and a fish wheel would be mobile by the river current. It would be a moving unit, so therefore would not come under the provisions of a fish trap.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I wish to move to amend the proposed Section 20 by deleting lines 8 to 14 inclusive on page 1, line 1 on page 2, and the words "state legislature" on line 2 of page 2 and that a capital "T" be substituted for a small "t" in the word "the" on line 2; further that the last two sentences be deleted so that the indented portion is retained; further that the last two sentences be deleted, so that the indented portion of Section 20 will read --

JOHNSON: Point of order. Is this matter before us now subject to amendment? I thought it was simply open for discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: At this time your point of order might be well taken, until the Committee indicates that they are ready to have amendments proposed to this section. That would be the proper time Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I will withhold my amendment until that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If we are still in the process of questions and answers Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I would ask Mr. Buckalew when the waters of Alaska became the public domain of Alaska as stated in line 12, page 1?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, could you answer that?

BUCKALEW: I thought they were the public domain of Alaska now.

ROBERTSON: I don't think any legal definitions includes the water as public domain.

BUCKALEW: I'd say that the waters in and around Alaska would certainly belong to Alaska. They don't belong to Russia.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there further questions to be asked of the Committee at this time? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask Mr. Emberg a question. I think it was Monday of this week, Mr. Emberg, that in the Fairbanks News Miner there was quite a large picture of a fish wheel, presumably on one of these nearby rivers in which it stated that the picture was to the effect that no longer logs were being used but empty oil drums. Now aren't those fish wheels used to catch commercial fish? Don't they sell fish from them?

EMBERG: I would like to qualify my statements, of course. To start with is the fact that I don't believe there is anything that you can call an expert on fisheries. I have been dealing in fishery problems for a long time, personally, and as a representative of the fishermen, and am in a way a specialist in fishermen's troubles. I have had no experience in the commercial fisheries here on the Yukon River. I do know the commercial fisheries on the coast, particularly those in the Bristol Bay area. I think someone else will have to answer your question whether there is actually a commercial fishery that is based on fish wheels. I think that Mr. Coghill's information or objection is true, that the fish wheel is mobile gear; it can be moved. The trap and set net are fixed gear; they cannot be moved. They fall into different classifications.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill has indicated that he can answer your question.

COGHILL: I can probably answer your question as to the fish wheel. I would say that 90 per cent of the value of a fish wheel is commercial; that is, dog salmon and king salmon and all the salmon strips, the putting up of dog salmon that is sold to the traders along the Yukon River, the Native people use that as a form of economy. They store their fish and sell the excess part that they wouldn't use for their own teams. It is in a sense to them a commercial unit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Is it not true, Mr. Coghill, that in the sense of the utility of this particular section here, that the only commercial fisheries on the Yukon River, or down at Kwiguk or Alakanuk, and all the fish that are caught there are caught by gill nets, not by fish wheels?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson had indicated that he had another question when he had the floor.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask Mr. Coghill, is your position, Mr. Coghill, then, that a fish trap must be a stationary fixed appliance in order to become condemned under this proposal of Mr. Buckalew's?

COGHILL: I have never seen a fish trap as they propose in here and in inquiring about it, that is what I had in mind, that a fish trap was one of stationary purpose and a fish wheel wouldn't be under that category.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask the question then, do you know that Judge Folta a year ago this spring held that drifting gill nets used over near Yakutat at the mouth of the Situk River were fixed and stationary appliances; that they couldn't be set any closer than any other stationary gear?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I think that was done in a different definition. I would like to ask Mr. Emberg, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Are there any fish traps in Alaska located on rivers or are they all out in the Territorial waters?

EMBERG: They are all out in Territorial waters.

V. FISCHER: If that is so, would it not be possible to remove any question about fish wheels by just defining the waters a little bit more?

EMBERG: I should think that would be possible if there was any doubt; I don't see how the fish wheel can be, unless it is further reclassified - included in a class with fixed gear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: If I can make an effort to answer Mr. Robertson's question, I think that the attorneys here, if they were willing to speak, would assure us all that there is ample information about what a fish trap is. It has gone through the courts and there are stacks of decisions that high, to my knowledge, and I think Mr. Robertson is familiar with that fact, also. I think we can have ample proof by just using the general term "fish trap" we can surely decide exactly what it is because in the court decisions that have been handed down often to the various fishery states, the term "fish traps" has been used as applying to the salmon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I don't like to have to go to court for a definition if it isn't necessary. We spoke of fish wheels, but I have also seen fish traps operate in very small streams. Natives use them to catch salmon. They are very small traps made out of willows, they look something like a woven basket with wings extending out. I don't imagine that those would be held to be fish traps under this but why not define fish traps? It seems to me, in many cases I have seen these traps referred to as pile-driven traps. We could say that, or if there are other types we could say "traps operated in coastal waters" or some such thing. A simple amendment it seems to me, could fix the whole thing up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, of course this only applies to the commercial taking of salmon and the traps you probably have reference to are family-used.

BARR: Well, all of the Natives sell their fish. They may eat a few of them but if they get enough they will sell them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 1:30. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Is that excepting announcements of committees?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any announcements of committees at this time?

COGHILL: Your Committee on Administration will meet tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock in Apartment 1012 of the Polaris Building.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Administration tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock in Apartment 1012 in the Polaris Building. Miss Awes.

AWES: I just wanted to ask a question. Is the bus going to be at the Nordale at 1:00 tomorrow?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you find out anything about that, Mr. Coghill? The bus will be at the Nordale at 1:00 tomorrow afternoon, so says the Chairman of the Administration Committee. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the Committee on Ordinances will meet immediately upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Ordinances will meet immediately upon adjournment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon adjournment in the gallery and will be here meeting all tomorrow morning until the time of convening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon adjournment and all tomorrow morning. Mr. Knight, did you have something? Or are there any other committee announcements or is there anything else to come before the Convention before we adjourn? Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: I have received another shipment of these Alaska reports on the White House Conference on Education and have enough for all the delegates so those who did not receive a report if they wish to have one, if they will contact me I will be glad to give them one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the announcement made by Mr. Coghill. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: May I make a suggestion before we adjourn?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may make a suggestion, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: It seems to me that we are going to have a great many amenities to take care of before we adjourn here and thank you's to various people and things of that sort, and some of these people who are through with their work and want to be busy for awhile, might be assigned as a special committee to take care of that. That is just a suggestion. I don't make it as a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We might keep that in mind and tomorrow or the next day appoint such a committee. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The Committee on Administration has already started considering that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 25, 1956

SIXTY-FOURTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us today the Reverend James Gamble of the Pentecostal Holiness Church. Reverend Gamble will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND GAMBLE: Almighty and eternal God, whose glory is in all the world, we commend this session of this momentous Convention to Thy merciful care. May it be guided by Thy great hand of Providence. May weary bodies be strengthened and grant that the minds of these leaders who have wrestled with each part of this constitution these many days receive new quickening from Thee at this hour; may these who serve here on behalf of the people move with fear. Through Jesus Christ, Our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you. At this time the Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk then called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Two absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. At this time the Chair would like to announce that the Secretary has a sheet that he would like to have each delegate sign. It will be in the order -- the signatures will be in the order that you will sign the final draft of the constitution. The Fairbanks Daily News-Miner plans to put out a special edition with relation to the Constitutional Convention and its closing ceremony. We would ask that the delegates sign this sheet in order, so that the printers might have all your signatures and be able to have them engraved or cut, as they have had to do, to expedite the work at the paper in preparing for this edition. So if the Chief Clerk will call the roll of the regular roll call and as each name is called if the delegate will come forward and sign his or her name; Mr. Stewart has the pen here, then as that person signs the sheet the next one in line will be called. The Convention will be at ease.

(The delegates signed the sheet as requested and indicated in the preceding statement.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I had a committee amendment to Sections 20 and 21.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, we will go down the order of business first. Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question, if you please. As I understand, we are signing our names for the purpose of publicity in this edition of the Fairbanks Daily News-Miner that it expects to get out?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, yes, the publisher of the paper desires to print in that edition the entire constitution along with the names as they will be signed by each delegate. In order to accomplish that in time for this edition, it is necessary that he have the names so that he can make his cuts.

ROBERTSON: If that is true then, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this time that it be the policy of the Convention that when we adjourn, we adjourn in honor of Judge James Wickersham, one of our foremost Alaskans, and the man who introduced the first statehood bill in Congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are asking that that be the --

ROBERTSON: Unanimous consent, when we finally adjourn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: When final adjournment is made? Is there objection? Hearing no objection -- Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to say that I think we should add the name of Anthony J. Dimond, and would ask the consent of the mover in making it in joint honor of the two men who have been outstanding characters in our political lives.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you have objection, Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: I have no objection. I thought we adjourned our recess in honor of Judge Dimond is why I confined it to Judge Wickersham, Mr. President.

V. RIVERS: If that was the case, then I will withdraw my suggestion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, if memory serves me, we observed Anthony J. Dimond Day, the day following the day set by statute, but I do not believe that we recessed in his honor.

ROBERTSON: Then I agree. I was a great friend of Judge Dimond, too.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then your motion would be asking unanimous consent that the final adjournment of this Convention be in honor of Judge Wickersham and Judge Anthony J. Dimond? If there is no objection that will be the policy of the Convention. Are there any communications or petitions from outside the Convention? The Chief Clerk will please read the communications.

(The Chief Clerk read the following communication: telegram to Herb Hilscher from Cliff Webber of Anchorage, criticizing him for neglecting to put in fish and wildlife provisions.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The telegram will be referred to an informal committee the Chair has appointed, composed of Mr. Smith, Mr. White, and Mr. Boswell, who will attempt to answer each and every message that we have received relating to this subject. Are there reports of standing committees? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to report that the Committee on Resources has several minor amendments to offer to Committee Proposal No. 8/a, and I ask that consideration of these amendments be made the first order of business this morning in order that this report may be referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the request of Mr. Smith? Then, Mr. Smith, when we come down to the order of unfinished business, we will take that up. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, your Committee on Style and Drafting reports to the Convention its redraft of the preamble and the declaration of rights, and also reports to the Convention its redraft of the article on the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read the reports of the Committee for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Your Committee on Style and Drafting herewith presents its redraft of the preamble on the article on bill of rights for consideration by the Convention."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The report is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar.

CHIEF CLERK: "Your Committee on Style and Drafting herewith presents its redraft of the article on the legislature for consideration by the Convention."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The report is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Committee on Style and Drafting worked until 11:00 o'clock last night and worked from early this morning until the time of convening of the session and should have several additional articles to report to the Convention tomorrow. In order that the delegates may have a better understanding of some of the things we are trying to do in the Committee, I wonder if we might ask the permission of the Convention to have Mr. Kimbrough Owen, who has been here as an adviser to our Committee for the past week, speak very briefly to the entire session to point out some of the matters with which we have been dealing. I really feel, Mr. President, that this would be beneficial to everybody to know about the care with which many of the questions which are going to come up through the years with respect to the constitution are being considered in detail now. I would like to ask unanimous consent that we grant the privilege of the floor to Mr. Owen to make a brief statement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent request? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have no objection. I think in view of the fact that we have had a rule to the effect that we do not have consultants appear in person, that this rule should be abstained from or withheld, because Mr. Kimbrough Owen will be speaking not of substance but of composition, style, and drafting, and I, for one, would be very much in favor of hearing him.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, Mr. Owen, will you come forward and favor us with a few brief remarks as to the work being done by the Style and Drafting Committee?

OWEN: Mr. President and delegates, I think it is not unusual for the work of a style and drafting committee of a convention to be either ridiculed or regarded with great suspicion, but I think that the document when it is finished will not be interpreted in terms of one article alone but will be regarded by the court as a total document, and it is the opportunity of the Style and Drafting Committee to regard each article in relation with all the other articles of the constitution. It is not the purpose of the Style and Drafting Committee, of any style and drafting committee, to make a constitution pretty. Some people consider it as sort of an embroidery process whereby pretty words are substituted for plain words or words are just deleted. The purpose of a style committee is to see that the desire and intent of the convention is reflected as clearly as possible throughout the entire document. In order to do that, there are certain rules which are generally followed. One of those is that terms should be consistently used from article to article to express the same intention. I would just like to give you a few examples of that. One of the most common that you find in constitutions is a reference to the voting of the legislature. For example, you are talking about a two-thirds vote of the legislature, you can read it generally referred to as "two-thirds of the members", "two-thirds of the membership", "two-thirds of the house", "two-thirds of the members to which it is entitled". Now I think that any one of these expressions or combination of them can be used, so we must be careful to use the same expression when we want two-thirds of 40 as when we want two-thirds of 20, that the same expression should be used; in the same case if we mean two-thirds of those present, assuming that you have a majority, then another expression should be used. Since each article is drafted by a separate committee, it is quite possible that two committees mean the same thing and yet they will use a different expression which would be interpreted by the courts differently than the intent of the framers. So what we have attempted to do is to take the expressions that are commonly used throughout the constitution and see that they are used uniformly so that the intent will not be misunderstood. There are several expressions in the constitution in addition to voting; for example, the use of the expression, "the qualified voter" or "elector". We attempt to use, throughout the constitution, wherever we think "qualified voter" is meant, the expression "qualified voter" rather than "elector", because "elector" is not defined in the article on suffrage and elections but "qualified voter" is. Now, the same way in terms of residence requirements; if the residence requirement of the governor is expressed in one way, and the legislators in a different way, the courts can imply that a different type of residence is involved. The Louisiana Constitution is about the poorest example of a constitution in the country, but I would like to cite you an example of poor drafting in the Louisiana Constitution. On one page there is the requirement, for example, that constables be able to read and write, and two pages later there is a requirement that justices of the peace be able to read and write correctly. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

OWEN: Now that expression was in the early Louisiana Constitution, but it has had to be carried along in every subsequent constitution because the framers felt that if they deleted the word "correctly", it might be interpreted as reducing the requirement of one office, and if they added it to the other it might be considered as increasing the requirements of the office. You have such a wonderful opportunity here in this first constitution, because from now on out, every time you adopt another constitution, if you delete a phrase, then the court will interpret it that you meant to change something, so you have an opportunity to start out fresh. Not only do we try to use terms consistently with the meaning of the framers but also we attempt to arrange subject matter logically. We are following the principle that every section of the constitution should be confined as much as possible to one principle thought so that if the constitution has to be amended it would be very easy to amend a particular section of the constitution. Similarly, we have tried to make each section self-sufficient without reference specifically to other sections, so that the amendment of another section of the constitution will not necessarily affect that one. We attempt then to take the sections and arrange them logically so that they will read, not easily, but that they will read at least in terms of the consecutive thoughts involved. We attempt to clarify the meaning of the constitution even when it means rearranging the words. For example, there is one expression about, "The legislature shall meet on the fourth Monday in January unless otherwise provided by law." The question is: does the "unless otherwise provided by law" affect only the month and the day or does it affect the meaning of the legislature in annual session. If there is any question about it, it should be stated so that it is quite clear that what the legislature is supposed to change is the day and month rather than the year. In some cases we have attempted to make the meaning more specific and less ambiguous than it was in the original draft. It is a unique opportunity because we have here all of the drafts at their latest stage, and we are constantly going through to see how one article of the constitution affects another; how the use of one word in one article could be used to interpret another article in a sense different from that intended. It is not an easy process, I assure you. We have here on cards almost every important word that is used anywhere in the draft, with the meaning of it, so that we can be sure that we are getting a consistency of expression throughout the constitution, and the point is not, as I say, to make it pretty or to sound good, but to be sure that the meaning of the document is exactly what you want and it will be so interpreted. Thank you, Mr. President. (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Owen. The Convention will come to order. Are there reports of special committees? Does the special committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White.

WHITE: No report at this time, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That report will be held in abeyance. Are there any motions or resolutions? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, at this time I would like to re-offer this resolution, "Friendly Relations with Canada", if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You wish to offer the resolution?

MARSTON: Re-enter the one that I had entered here and it went through channels and ended here and was taken back for a little correction.

RILEY: May I interrupt?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have the floor, Mr. Marston. Your question, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: The original resolution is still in the Rules Committee for placement on the calendar, and I thought it had been understood that it was to have a place on the calendar after some of the substantive matters were cleaned up.

MARSTON: We have done that now.

RILEY: We are not speaking of that particular resolution, Colonel Marston, but it would seem appropriate that when the resolution is entered on the calendar that that could properly come in as an amendment to the resolution, or certainly the Rules Committee would have no objection to your withdrawing your earlier one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, what Mr. Riley is saying is that they have the original in the Rules Committee for placement on the calendar. It might be proper either that you withdraw the original and offer this as a new resolution, or offer this as an amendment to the resolution that the Rules Committee will place on the calendar.

MARSTON: I will offer this as an amendment to the one they have on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: When that resolution comes on the calendar then, it would be more properly handled at that time. If there are no more resolutions, we are now down to our regular order of business, which is Committee Proposal No. 17, was it?

CHIEF CLERK: It's on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I don't have a calendar.

SMITH: Mr. President, did we pass over unfinished business?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are down to unfinished business now, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Well, under the heading of unfinished business, I would like to ask unanimous consent to revert to consideration of the Committee Proposal No. 8/a, for amendment purposes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to referring to Committee Proposal No. 8/a at this time for committee amendment purposes? If not, we have before us Committee Proposal No. 8/a at this time. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Riley to present the committee amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, there are several committee amendments which are on the Clerk's desk. I might preface the reading of those by pointing out to the Convention that Article 8/a was retained in second reading only because we felt obliged to have an interpretation from some of those who had worked in assisting the Committee, as to the full implication of the various amendments made on the floor. We have received that information and in addition we have a few of our own to offer, simply to clarify the meaning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are these amendments in the order as you wish them read?

RILEY: Yes, they are.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the first proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 10 --"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Page 1, line 10? Mrs. Hermann.

MRS. HERMANN: I think many of the delegates haven't found 8/a yet. I am still looking madly for it and I notice several others are.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do all the delegates have their copies of committee proposal on natural resources -- Committee Proposal No. 8/a?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess.

TAYLOR: Are you referring to the enrolled copy?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, the old copy, the original copy of 8/a. The Convention will be at recess for two minutes while the Sergeant at Arms brings down some of the copies.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 10, strike 'now'; line 11, strike the period and add 'upon the date of ratification of this constitution by the people of Alaska'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment as read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for adoption of the proposed committee amendment as read. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed committee amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed committee amendment again.)

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I rise to a point of objection only to discuss the matter. We have said in our constitution we shall establish no ex post facto laws, laws after the fact. Now, in this constitution, we are intending to adopt something that is based upon ratification by the people. Ratification does not mean that it is in actual effect. It seems to me that the only way we can do that is to say "on the effective date of this constitution". I, for one, do not believe that on the day of ratification by the people it will abrogate any act of the legislature that may take place between now and the time we become a state. I think "upon the date of ratification by the people" is actually enacting within this constitution an ex post facto law and I do not believe that it could be considered to be effective unless we say "upon the effective date of this constitution", and I, for one, do not believe the words "upon ratification by the people" mean that it can be effective until such time as the constitution is actually a constitution of this state, it is not so until such time as we actually put it into effect.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, do you ask for a two-minute recess?

RILEY: I don't think it is necessary, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move the adoption of the amendment?

RILEY: Yes, I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the proposed committee amendment. Is there a second?

WHITE: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. White. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, the whole purpose of this substitution of language is the word "now" relating to the present Territorial boundaries. The present Territorial area is not fixed as to time and we seek to accomplish no action by ratification; we seek only to set the time when the known and fixed territorial limits, or boundaries, shall be defined; and that is the whole purpose of this particular amendment. We have adopted it elsewhere with respect to the minerals section of this article, minerals subject to the federal mining laws as of the date of ratification of this constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of this? Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I add that my comments on "effective as of the date of ratification" applied to all uses, not just this one, because I do not believe, for one, that we can make it effective until such time as the constitution is effective.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think this is a golden opportunity for the attorneys. I think this is probably the only occasion that all the attorneys will agree that ex post facto only applies to the criminal law. Maybe we ought to poll them, but I think Vic's fears are unfounded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed committee amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk will read the next proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Pages 1 and 2, Section 2, strike lines 15 and 17 on page 1, and strike through the word 'state' on line 1 of page 2."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the proposed committee amendment. Is there a second?

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White seconds the motion. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I might state first that I have meanwhile made my peace, as it were, with Delegates Barr and Hurley, who sought various ways to accomplish this purpose when it was first considered in second reading, and for a number of reasons, the Committee has adopted the thinking expressed by several of the delegates that evening. For one thing, we still have before us Mr. Smith's proposed amendment of yesterday, having to do with our consenting to the terms of the enabling act. That is before us today on a reconsideration, perhaps. In any event, some action of that nature may be taken. Another thought in the Committee's mind is that the use of this language was pretty much a gesture to the Congress, not wholly necessary but an indication to the Congress that we were mindful of certain limitations which might touch on resources in the enabling bill. We think it is superfluous, that the law will be the law, and we will be bound by whatever it says or whatever mention we give it here. The third point the Committee had in mind was to remove all possibility of confusion of the nature suggested by Mr. Sundborg, having to do with pending legislation in the Congress, whereby fish traps might be terminated over a 10-year period. We do not feel that there is any hazard there, except a hazard of misunderstanding, a hazard of confusion whereby the ratification of the constitution might be damaged through a campaign of distortion, shall we say. And for that reason the Committee recommends the striking of this language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? The Chief Clerk may read the next amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 6, change the period to a comma and add 'subject to preferences among beneficial uses'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the amendment.

STEWART: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart seconds the motion. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Originally, in one of our earlier editions of this article, that language, or language substantially resembling it, was included. The Committee itself had stricken the language thinking that it appeared elsewhere in enough places to cover our purpose. However, it has been brought to our attention by more than one specialist in the field that it has particular application to the sustained yield principle, and that without the language we have just suggested, that the sustained yield principle mentioned becomes somewhat meaningless and ineffective.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 6, change the period to a comma and add 'subject to preferences among beneficial uses'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other committee amendments? The Chief Clerk may read them.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 8, strike 'as defined by the legislature' and insert the same language on page 6, line 2, following the word 'state'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, this might properly be a matter for reference to Style and Drafting, but to make it more certain I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment once more. The Convention will come to order.

CHIEF CLERK: This was an amendment which was adopted, so it might not be in your copy but I have it on mine. It is on line 8, it should actually be on line 7. It was on mine, Mr. Riley; it was after the word "waters".

RILEY: Yes, change that reading to line 7.

CHIEF CLERK: On line 7 after the word "waters", there had been inserted "as defined by the legislature" and they want it taken out of there and inserted on page 6, line 2, after the word "state".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley has moved and it has been seconded that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I might say, Mr. President, that this language "as defined by the legislature" in its present placement on line 7 of page 2, was responsive to the request of Mr. Poulsen and various others of the delegates, and the Committee did not object to its inclusion. But we feel that, in a sense, it muddies the waters when placed in the general reservations section and, as I say, we think this could be corrected by Style and Drafting, but we prefer to have action on the floor whereby it shall be placed in the access section as against the general reservations section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying 'aye'; all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other proposed committee amendments?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, lines 1 and 2, strike 'or interests therein'."

RILEY: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment as read.

STEWART: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the amendment, seconded by Mr. Stewart. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: That is simply a redundancy. It appears in a subsection and it appears earlier on page 3 in the language qualifying the subsection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley has moved, it has been seconded that the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: May I ask Mr. Riley again where it appears before that?

RILEY: On page 3, Mr. Hurley, on line 24.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other committee amendments?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, line 20 --"

RILEY: I would like to suggest to the Clerk that the word "the" might help the sense of that amendment. Shall I read the amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: On line 20, we had, by action of the Convention, inserted, "except mineral and medicinal waters". That particular insert should, under this amendment, follow the word "shall" instead of the word "use". It was adopted following the word "use", but in the judgment of the committee, it would better follow the word "shall" for clarity of, meaning -- "except mineral and medicinal waters" inserted after the word "shall" and set off by commas. I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I am not objecting; this is just for information. Mr. Riley, did your Committee, in considering this amendment as to mineral springs or mineral and medicinal waters -- is that the definition as given in the Bureau of Land Management regulations?

RILEY: I would say that it is not full, but representatives of BLM in town, in Fairbanks that is, suggested to us that it would satisfy the point raised by you and others the other evening.

TAYLOR: That is right. I think that was my amendment and I wasn't sure whether that was as it was set forth.

RILEY: Yes, that is right. I am sorry I didn't check with you before.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Riley, I take it this is a matter of substance or we wouldn't be asked to pass on it.

RILEY: I would say it is a matter of substance.

HELLENTHAL: How is it a matter of substance?

RILEY: As I read it now, Mr. Hellenthal, it states, "All waters reserved to the people for common use except mineral and medicinal waters..." which would suggest that mineral and medicinal waters may not be reserved to the people for common use; but, if it is read following the word "shall": "All waters reserved to the people for common use shall, except mineral and medicinal waters, be subject to appropriation." There is a prospect there of misunderstanding, we feel, of a substantive nature. The point of the whole sentence is that these waters with that exception shall be subject to appropriation. We don't want to suggest that all other waters except mineral and medicinal waters are subject to reservation. The reservation applies across the field.

HELLENTHAL: Style and Drafting can still work on it after this amendment?

RILEY: I am sure, but with this to clarify our meaning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, by saying "no". The ayes have it, and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other committee amendments?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, line 24, strike 'of' and substitute 'among'."

RILEY: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

MARSTON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston seconds the motion. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: The Committee feels that the substitution of the word "among" in that instance ties in more clearly with the concept of concurrent use. That, too, might have been a Style and Drafting change but we feel that it does touch on substantive matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention? All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments?

CHIEF CLERK: "Transpose Sections 7 and 8, page 3."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Transpose Sections 7 and 8. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Here, Mr. President, I would waive the motion to adopt, thinking it would serve the purpose to call the matter to the attention of Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments for Committee Proposal No. 8/a?

R. RIVERS: May I address a question to Mr. Riley?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Riley, I refer to page 3, first to line 7, which I have marked down as a new Section 8, and it speaks of "lands and interests therein". The same question applies to new Section 10 on line 24, "or interests therein", and I would like to know what that means: "or interests therein"?

RILEY: I should like to ask for a five-minute recess and refer various correspondence to Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection this Convention will be at recess for five minutes.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I want something in the record as to the meaning of those terms and I don't understand myself what it means.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You would rather have it explained in session then?

R. RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Riley.

RILEY: There is a duality of meaning, Mr. Rivers, as the Committee regards "or interests therein". Initially, the language was adopted with a view to its including or being confined to the cover and the content, you might say, of the land, the resources themselves. The question has arisen from time to time throughout the Committee consideration of that language, and we have recognized at times that it would also cover the leasehold itself, the documentary evidence of an interest in the land, but clearly the Committee intends by "lands and interests therein" to cover the entire resource field, embraced by the land itself.

R. RIVERS: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other proposed amendments to Committee Proposal No. 8/a? If not, the proposal is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, are we still under the heading of unfinished business?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, under that heading, I would at this time move for reconsideration of my vote on the amendment by Mr. Smith yesterday, proposing a new Section 2 to committee Proposal No. 16.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves for reconsideration of this vote on that amendment. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I ask for a one-minute recess so that the new Section 2, which I propose and which has been mimeographed, can be placed on the members' desks, because I feel that in order to discuss this thing intelligently we should have that before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. White moves for reconsideration of his vote on the amendment to Section 2, Committee Proposal No. 16. Is there a second to the motion?

MARSTON: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate Marston seconds the motion which puts us back to the question, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted?" Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, yesterday I referred to the action taken on this matter in somewhat heated terms. I hope that the members will accept that as a measure of my interest, and not as a censure upon the members individually, or collectively. I do think this is a matter of the greatest importance and deserves further consideration by the Convention. Now, initially, I will agree that, eventually, we must accept such a section in order to obtain statehood. I will also agree that, if we should put such a section into our constitution as proposed here, there is probably another way around the matter of accepting an enabling act we don't like. We could probably refuse to set up our state government, as has been suggested on the floor. I think this approach that I suggest is a more direct and a more -- perhaps "honest" isn't the word -- but a better approach to it. Now why does the question arise at all? It arises because we are holding our Constitutional Convention before the passage of an enabling act. Should we be doing it the other way around, the enabling act would be before us; we would know what it says, and we would write our constitution, present it to the people of Alaska for ratification, and should the people of Alaska not like the enabling act, or not like the constitution itself, they could reject it. Most of the enabling acts have made that provision; moreover, they have made the provision that, in that event, we could call a second constitutional convention, and should the people turn the second constitution down, there would be no more conventions held under that particular enabling act. That method has always left up to the people of the State of Alaska the final say on whether or not they want to accept statehood under the terms of a particular enabling act, but we are now in a position of drawing our constitution before an enabling act is passed. We have no way of knowing what that enabling act will finally say. That is why the question arises. Now we have already dealt with this matter on two other instances. First of all, the original Committee Proposal No. 16 came out, it had a Section 2 which read. "The State of Alaska and its people hereby consent to all and singular the provisions of the enabling act that is passed by the Congress and approved by the President for the admission of Alaska into the Union of States." We all, or the great majority of us, agreed that that was a blank check that we should not, and in clear conscience on behalf of the people of Alaska, could not sign until we struck that section. We have, just a few minutes ago, taken a similar action in relation to the boundaries of the future State of Alaska. Why? Because we cannot sit here and say we will accept any boundaries. So that in our resources article we have defined the boundaries as the boundaries of the Territory of Alaska existing upon the date of ratification of the constitution. That will give us the option in the future, should a partition plan be proposed, to say "yea" or "nay" to that partition plan. Now this matter before us is merely the same thing all over again, albiet perhaps a lesser degree. Section 2, as proposed by Mr. Smith, that we adopted yesterday, reads: "All provisions of the act admitting Alaska to the Union, which reserve rights or powers to the United States, as well as those prescribing the terms and conditions of the grants of lands or other property made to Alaska, are consented to fully by the State of Alaska and its people." Now I will agree that, under certain sections of the constitution, we cannot be discriminated against as a state and that we have certain protections under the constitution. I am referring here primarily to the "terms and conditions of grants of lands or other properties made to Alaska." Now the question arises; is there harm in adopting this section as we have adopted it? I say there is harm. It was pointed out yesterday that improvements in statehood bills have been won over a period of many years by dint of hard work, and I would suggest that further improvements are not necessarily impossible, but here we deliberately say we consent to the terms and conditions of the grants of lands, whatever they may be, and in so saying we suggest to congressmen that we are not interested in further improvements in statehood bills. We suggest to them in writing that, if they wish to make the terms more restrictive or less attractive, that we are not going to object. For example, the Resources Committee, in considering the great problem of handling our resources, has felt, I am sure unanimously, that a period of 25 years is not sufficient to intelligently and thoroughly study the problem and make the selection of our 100,000,000 acres of land. We would like to see Congress change that to, say, 50 years. Why suggest here in writing that we are satisfied with the enabling act as it stands? More seriously, I feel that in adopting this section we tie our delegate's hands. We remove from him what little bargaining position he has and we have to go back to less than a year ago, if you recall, the withdrawal proposal that was made, or several withdrawal proposals that were made. Those withdrawal proposals, even among those of us who were working hard for statehood, wanted statehood badly, wanted to accept it under almost any terms, threw us into consternation for a period of time. Perhaps some of us were willing to accept the withdrawal proposals immediately. Perhaps, after a week or two of consideration we were willing to accept it, but the fact remains that there was doubt passed; the fact remains that our delegate to Congress initially, did not know what to say to some of these proposals that were being made until he heard from the people of Alaska. And I say to you that if we put this section in the constitution, unnecessarily, we are tying his hands and removing from him what little bargaining position he has in trying to get for Alaska the best statehood enabling act that he possibly can. Even worse for us here, I feel that the insertion of this paragraph gives to whatever opposition there may be to the ratification of our constitution, an ideal, ready-made platform on which to stand. Earlier, in urging the committee members on the resources article, Mr. Riley referred to a campaign of distortion, and I say to you, that this Section 2 which was adopted yesterday provides the grounds for the greatest campaign of distortion that you have ever seen. Now in the current statehood enabling act there is a provision that the state must retain title to all its minerals. Those of us here may or may not like that provision. We may or may not agree that it is going to be there whether we like it or not. I will be the first one to agree that there appears to be very little chance of ever getting that changed, but I would also like to point out that, of all the matters contained in the enabling act, that is far and away the most unpopular among the people of Alaska and not necessarily just among the mining industry. It is unpopular among the homesteaders, the man in the street, and everyone I have talked to, and I think that for us to sit here and deliberately, in writing, accede to that and cut the ground out from under individual Alaskans or groups of Alaskans who hope to go to Congress and try and get that changed, would be folly of the highest order. It would be the simplest thing in the world for people who are opposed to the adoption of the constitution to embark on a campaign of distortion and say that the delegates to the Convention are willing to accept statehood, if the Congress gives us one acre of land, or if they are going to propose withdrawal programs in the next statehood enabling act, they won't withdraw just 40 per cent of an area north of a certain river, but will withdraw the whole State of Alaska. There is a serious question under the current withdrawal provision as to the rights of the people living within that area. Now I might be willing to accept that and you might be willing to accept it but how easy it is going to be for opponents of statehood to go to the people and say, "Maybe that one is all right but the next one is going to be worse and do you want to accept that?" Now, the question arises: is it necessary for us to put this provision in the constitution now, and I feel that it is not necessary. I cannot conceive of a single congressman or a single senator, taking into consideration the fact that we are adopting our constitution prior to the passage of an enabling act, being offended by the fact that we have not inserted such a section in our constitution. It seems to me that a reasonable congressman or senator would admit to himself that that was merely the straightforward, businesslike approach for the people of Alaska to take, that the people of Alaska want to see the wares of Congress before they buy and I submit that there is nothing unusual about that. Now, the question has arisen that if we do not insert this section, will it delay statehood? I submit that it won't delay statehood five minutes, whether we go by the Tennessee Plan or by some other plan. In any event, we are going to have to have an enabling act, and in any event, we are going to have to set up our state government. Now the amendment that I have had drawn and placed on the members' desks takes from HR 2535 the provisions that have been applied to Hawaii. You will find them on page -- starting at the bottom of page 11 and continuing to pages 12 and 13 of HR 2535. Suppose Hawaii left this section out and Congress has merely said to Hawaii "You must, at the time you elect your governor, submit to the people this proposition for a vote by the people -- yea or nay. If they vote 'yea' this proposition will be deemed a part of the constitution. The constitution will be so amended and you are on your way." There is no delay there at all. They have to go to the polls to vote for their governor and state officers anyway. I have read, in my interest in statehood, hundreds and hundreds of pages of the Congressional Record and I have yet to read one reference -- one derogatory reference to Hawaii because they left this provision out of their enabling act. I suspect they did it deliberately and I say we should do it deliberately. Now, as I say, the amendment which I have drawn here, I think would cover the situation, would show Congress that we haven't forgotten to put this in our constitution, that we have it in our minds, but that we are not willing, as American citizens, sovereign citizens of the future State of Alaska, to sign a blank check. There is nothing unreasonable, there is nothing that anyone, in my mind, could ever criticize about that action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, this is a proposed amendment you desire to offer after we vote on this particular reconsideration?

WHITE: Yes, Mr. President. If the section, as it stands, were deleted, I would propose to offer this new Section 2. Now, I, along with all of you I am sure, have worked hard for statehood for many years, much less than most of you, and I am willing to accept statehood under almost any terms, but I feel that this is a blank check again, even be it a smaller blank check than the one we talked about before, but it is a blank check all the same and it is one which I cannot, in clear conscience, sign. I feel it is undignified, unnecessary, and un-Alaskan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment that the Convention will be voting upon when we consider this reconsideration motion. It was Mr. Smith's.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2. All provisions of the Act admitting Alaska to the Union which reserve rights or powers to the United States, as well as those prescribing the terms or conditions of the grants of lands or other property made to Alaska, are consented to fully by the State of Alaska and its people."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now the Convention adopted that particular amendment, is that correct?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the motion made by Mr. White is carried, if the vote is "yes" on the reconsideration motion, it stays in; if you vote "no" on the motion to reconsider, you are voting to delete the Section 2 that had been adopted yesterday.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No, no.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I voted yesterday for Delegate Smith's Section 2, but I admit I did it with some doubts in my mind. I publicly debated and wrote a thesis on statehood some 10 years ago and I have always maintained that Congress be very liberal in giving us our natural resources. In fact, I have often been appalled at the enabling act and I am not at all satisfied with it and I think that Mr. Barrie White has a very good point here and I believe it should be considered, so we can have an opportunity to consider his amendment and I don't think his proposed amendment, if I may mention it, contemplates that we have to actually vote on the constitution again, it is just a question of whether or not we include this particular provision in the constitution. So I hope we do vote favorably on Mr. White's motion for reconsideration of this matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Smith?

SMITH: If I shared for a minute Mr. White's fears, I would certainly withdraw my amendment in favor of his, and I would say, too, that I have never doubted Mr. White's sincerity and his beliefs. Now I simply cannot bring myself to the point where I share the fears expressed by Mr. White. The Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution reads, "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." This means that Congress has only those powers expressly delegated to it by the Constitution. This Constitution is the supreme law of the land. This Constitution would certainly govern or supersede any provisions written into the act admitting Alaska into the union or any matter written into the constitution of the State of Alaska. Therefore, what we are consenting to in this section under discussion is the reservation of rights and powers which Congress has under the Federal Constitution. It is not a blanket grant; it is only those rights which Congress has. As to our consent to the terms and condition of the grants of lands or other property, this consent is necessary for these grants are in the nature of a contract and can only be charged at any future time by and with the consent of the state and the United States. Under Article IV, Section 3 of the United States Constitution, Congress is empowered to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the Territory or other property belonging to the United States. Under this authority Congress can make any disposal it might see fit to make of any lands owned by the federal government in Alaska. In this connection I hope that no one here is under the delusion that Alaska will assume ownership of 103,000,000 acres of land on its admission into the union. Alaska will not assume ownership of even one acre of land other than that owned now by the Territory and the land on which the Federal Building and jail in Juneau are now situated. What Alaska will receive is the right to select, within 25 years, 103,500,000 acres of land and if the land provisions in the latest enabling bills are carried forward, the land so selected will become the property of the state only after the state has made its selection and the land has been surveyed and patent issued. After patent is issued to the state the lands are then, of course, beyond the reach of Congress, they are the property of the state. Until patent is issued, however, all the lands within the state boundaries, I should say with the exception of submerged and tidal lands, will still be the property of the United States and will still be subject to any reservations that the federal government might want to impose. Actually, I don't feel that we are in any manner or in any form signing a blank check by saying we consent to the reservations of powers because I think that Congress already has those powers and that those powers are limited by the provisions of the United States Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, what we are trying to do here, and have been since the beginning of this Convention, is to adapt our constitution to an act of Congress which was not written with the thought that a constitutional convention would ever be held before the act itself was passed. I am sure that if Congress were drafting an enabling act which would have been passed after the Constitutional Convention of Alaska had been held and after the Alaska constitution had been ratified, they would not have required in the enabling act that the people of Alaska would have to consent in advance to whatever they might write into an enabling act. I think if we should, upon reconsideration, again write into our constitution the language proposed by Mr. Smith, we would be raising a real question in Washington in the minds of many members of the House and Senate as to our sanity and to our good judgment because we would be consenting in advance without any knowledge of what the act might contain, to the provisions of the act. I can hear it now, the clamor that is going to be made throughout Alaska, when we come down to the ratification election with respect to this section alone, and it is going to be said, what kind of people are we Alaskans that we will crawl on our bellies to Congress and say we will take statehood under any circumstances and any kind of conditions you want to lay down." It will be said that Congress need not give us a single acre of land, a single dollar of money, and that it can impose upon us all kinds of conditions which are not in the latest enabling act but which Congress could do, I am sure, if we adopt the language proposed by Mr. Smith. I spoke yesterday on this and I feel just as I did then about it today, after more reflection. I cannot, in conscience, vote to put a thing like this in the Alaska constitution. Now I think that if we do it, we will be cutting the ground from under Delegate Bartlett and others in trying to get any change in the mineral leasing provisions of the latest enabling act. Whenever the Delegate would go to any committee of Congress to talk about that subject, the committee would very rightfully say, "Well, what is the use of our listening to you? The people of Alaska have already agreed to anything we would do here and they did it with specific reference and when they had before them the enabling act which was the one that was before the latest Congress." I really think that the way to handle it is the way that Mr. White would propose and that is that at an election to be held after the passage of the enabling act by Congress, we would consent to the conditions in that act. Now I wonder if everyone here understands that we don't get statehood anyway and we do not become a state until after we have elected our governor; that is, after we have held the first full election under statehood and after the enabling act was passed. That is set forth very clearly in the enabling act. We don't become a state until upon issuance of a proclamation by the President of the United States which it says in the act, he will not issue until after we have certified to him the results of the election of our state officers, etc. So, I contend that that election is the time, after we have had an enabling act, after our people have had a chance to see what is in it, that we should consent to its conditions and not one minute before.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew had been trying to get the floor.

BUCKALEW: I will yield, if it is permissible, Mr. President, I will yield to Delegate Awes.

AWES: Well, I wanted to raise a question on Barrie White's proposed amendment. Is this the time to do it or are we supposed to vote on the reconsideration?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, that amendment is not before us, Miss Awes, at all. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Point of order on that. I think the amendment has been discussed so thoroughly it has a direct bearing on the way we are going to vote on this particular item and, if necessary, I ask unanimous consent that we be allowed to talk on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is the unanimous consent -- if there is no objection, Mr. Hurley, it can be done, but the amendment is not before us. Miss Awes, if there is no objection you may ask a question with relation to the amendment that is not before us.

AWES: Well, I have serious doubt as to the validity of this last sentence. Maybe Mr. White has considered it but it says, "In the event that the foregoing proposition is not adopted..." etc., "the Act of Congress admitting Alaska to the States of the Union shall cease to be effective." Well that, in effect, says that the people of Alaska shall vote to void an act of Congress. I don't think we have the power to do any such thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, do the delegates wish to argue this amendment that is not before us? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would attempt to say that that language could not be improved. It may be subject to some question but we would here merely be inserting on our own behalf, the exact language that Congress has inserted in the Hawaiian Enabling Act, in behalf of Hawaii. Since we are the ones taking the action, we are the ones now, if we adopt my amendment, who will have to say something about it. I read from the Hawaiian Enabling Act: "In the event the foregoing propositions are not adopted at said election by a majority of the legal votes cast on said submission, the provisions of this act shall thereupon cease to be effective. Congress has granted that right to Hawaii and there is no reason to assume that Congress would not similarly grant the same right to Alaska. Moreover, as this Act intended when it was written, we would have the same option in voting to adopt or not adopt our constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection to arguing this amendment that is not before us, Mr. Johnson, you may argue the amendment.

JOHNSON: Well, in connection with Miss Awes' point I had the same question and in looking at the Act which is HR 2535, I believe Mr. White has misunderstood the meaning of the language which appears at the top of page 13. I think the Congress here intends that its own Act shall be ineffective if Hawaii should turn down the referendum. It doesn't mean that Hawaii would have the right to make this Act ineffective, but the Act itself would be ineffective by reason of this negative vote on the referendum, so it is still an Act of Congress. I think some other provision should be made or would have to be made with reference to the last sentence in Mr. White's proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. If it appears that we should strike the subsection, that is, strike Section 2, and then it should appear thereafter when Mr. White's proposal is submitted, that the proposal contradicts an article in the resources, which has already been adopted by the Convention, would that take a two-thirds vote to amend something which has been adopted by the resources, that is, the resources article?

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your question, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: If it appears upon, let us assume that Mr. White's amendment is before the body, and if it appears that that amendment contradicts or amends an article of the Resources Committee that has already been adopted, would that take a two-thirds vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. McLaughlin, the proposed amendment of Mr. White, if it ever gets before the body will be subject to amendment itself with a majority vote at any time while it is before us.

MCLAUGHLIN: What I am concerned about, sir, is if it does amend the resources article now, would it require a two-thirds vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If it amended the resources article or if it conflicted with the resources article, then if you wanted to go back and amend the resources article, it would take unanimous consent or a two-thirds vote under suspension of the rules; but under those circumstances, the Chair couldn't feel that there would be much of an obstacle.

SUNDBORG: May I rise to a point of order?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: My point of order is that no part of the resources article has been adopted by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, but it would take, after it goes to Engrossment and Enrollment to make any substantive change, a two-thirds vote. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: If I understand this correctly, I believe that anyone who is opposed to statehood should heartily endorse Mr. Barrie White's amendment and I wish to carry this line of reasoning on just a bit to show how that would apply. Number one, we are going to ask the people of Alaska to ratify our constitution in April. Let's assume that they do, that they ratify the constitution. Let's assume that they go for the Tennessee Plan. Then we will send our two senators and representative back to Washington, and suppose then, as a result of their good hard work plus our own propoganda, plus the aid of the American people, we are admitted to the union. Then we have to come back to Alaska, and the people of Alaska then have to hold another election to agree to this proposition in Section 2 and what a marvelous opportunity at that time, for the second time or the third time, that the antistatehood people would have to "unsell" the people of Alaska on statehood. I think it raises a very serious situation. I know that Mr. White is ardently in favor of statehood but I think this raises a very serious problem and I, for one, shall not favor it unless it can be shown otherwise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now, the Chair considers that by virtue of the fact that there was no objection that you have suspended the rules and are allowing debate on this particular amendment that is not before us. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to say that I am in favor of Mr. Smith's motion, not because I think that Mr. White's motion would open the door to anti -- statehood opponents, but I think, under Mr. Smith's motion we are not going to harm ourselves, but on the other hand we may expedite our cause. I think this might have been pointed out: if we adopt Mr. Smith's motion we will be telling Congress, "You have drafted a bill and passed it and the people of Alaska have already said they are willing to accept it." I think that will be a strong asset right there. I am not worried at this point about a blank check. One might ask oneself why has Congress provided all these grants of land in HR 2535. They have done so not because Alaskans have demanded those; not because Alaskans would not have accepted statehood with 20,000,000 acres. They have done that because they felt that the success of the state requires that 100,000,000 acres be granted; that the facilities of a road commission be turned over; that grants-in-aid be made for road construction. They have done it, not at our request, they have done it because they felt it was necessary. I feel that if somebody comes to Congress with a just cause for removing restrictions on disposal of mineral rights, if Congress feels that it will be necessary for the success of the state, that it will not be against the basic principles previously stated by Congress, that Congress would include that even if the people of Alaska already accepted what is in there now. I don't think we will be done out of anything. I think that it may help statehood much sooner and I am for Mr. Smith's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: We are considering two possible amendments here. One would, as we have been saying, give a blank check; the other one would submit the question to the people after an enabling act is passed. Now, with the adoption this morning, or this afternoon, of Mr. Riley's amendment, or the committee amendment, we have taken out any reference so far to agreement with future enabling acts. And I believe that is just the way the constitution should stand, and with Mr. White's amendment here it will be submitted to the people; but I am afraid that this is somewhat a complicated question to submit to the people. I fear that the first time they will be confronted with the question is when they will walk in and see it printed on the ballot and this has many ramifications -- this question of lands and rights, etc. It takes in the tidewater question, the tidelands questions; it takes in the reservation of mineral rights to the state, as well as the land given to the state by Congress; and it also takes in the withdrawal of large areas of land for possible military reservations, such as suggested by President Eisenhower. It is just too much to make a snap decision on when you walk in to vote. The other amendment, by Mr. Smith, says it will agree to anything Congress wants us to agree on now and in the future. Mr. Armstrong made an eloquent plea yesterday for us to trust everyone, to trust Congress, they would do what was right by us. Governor Gruening's speech, that he made on the first day to us here, has been printed and I would suggest that Mr. Armstrong obtain a copy of it and read it. It gives a long list of grievances. It gives a long list of discriminatory acts perpetrated on the people of the Territory of Alaska by the Congress of the United States. Now, perhaps that was because we were only a Territory; maybe they will reform, maybe when we are admitted as a state we will be taken into their camp as one of their brethren. But I don't know, I am a little skeptical. I believe that, as our constitution is written now, with the acceptance of Mr. Riley's amendment, where we do not bring the subject up at all, it is much better for us. If Congress has any doubts as to whether or not we agree to the present enabling act, all they have to do is read the constitution and they will see that we do agree to it. We agree to their proposition of reserving mineral rights to the state; we do not particularly like it but we agree to it so I don't think that there will be any thought in their minds of rejecting this constitution on those grounds.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I voted against Mr. White's amendment yesterday and I feel as Delegate Sundborg -- excuse me, Mr. Smith's amendment -- and I believe that Barrie White's amendment is very fine. I would like to remind the people of the Westward part of Alaska that this is an insurance that when we have to sell the ratification of the constitution to the people that we are not taking a blank check; that we are, in effect, asking the Congress to provide us with a good enabling act, and it is not selling the people a partitioning plan which has been brought out and which might very well be brought out again. I think that the people from the Westward part of Alaska should consider this proposition real well before they vote on it. I think that Mr. White's reconsideration is well taken and the people should vote for voting down Mr. Smith's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I rise to this question of the amendment to which Mr. White is proposing. I gave this serious consideration and the question, as I analyze it, is whether or not we place our faith in Congress and their desire to do the right thing by us in the enabling act, and from all indications in the past it has been that they would. They would not turn us loose without first giving us the chance to properly survive under the American system of free enterprise and of government by the consent of the governed; and again I have the other thought: first, should we approve, in advance, the acts of Congress, taking them at their face value and in good faith, or should we reserve that power to the people? That has bothered me and I appreciate the earnestness and sincerity and the honesty that goes into this effort and on the part of both the proponents of the Smith amendment and of this Barrie White amendment. Now, it seems to me that, we have a choice to make here and the majority will decide, but it seems to me that Mr. Smith has taken the identical words that Congress would ask us to approve in advance of their act. Mr. Smith has taken the identical words which Congress prescribed for Hawaii to take in obviating the lack of that same provision in their Constitution. I must frankly admit that I am in considerable doubt as to the best approach: should we approve it in advance by the people or should we resubmit it to the people for approval as it is drawn out and passed by Congress? I hold with Miss Awes' question, both in regard to the last line "cease to be effective" and also in regard to the use of the words "Enabling Act" which she did not bring up. I think we have, more or less, tacitly agreed that it should be considered an act of admission, rather than an act of enabling us to become a state, there may not be any particular question. I, for one, am now of the opinion that I will rescind my position and go along with Mr. Smith's thinking that we should allow the people to approve the congressional act after the enabling act rather than before.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston has been attempting to get the floor, Mr. Buckalew.

MARSTON: Thank you. I, strange as it may seem, am going along with Barrie White today. It's a strange position I am in and I am not happy with the Smith proposition. I am not sure just where I am but I am not happy with that Smith proposition, but

I would like a chance to get out and get on firmer ground. I think we are gaining nothing by drawing out that so-called blank check. I don't think we will get paid for it and I think we are in a better position to go along with some of the ground that Barrie White has brought up here and I hope we get a chance at it before we close this thing up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, an awful lot has been said here about a blank check. I would like to point out that when you give a check, blank or otherwise, it assumes that you have got something to dispose of. So far as these lands are concerned we don't have anything to dispose of; the lands all belong to the United States. It is just a question as to whether or not we will accept what they want to give us. It is like saying, "I am not going to let my grandfather make a will because it may not give me as much as I would like to get when he does." Now, so far as I can see it, and I appeared on this particular question before Congress in 1950, before the Senate subcommittee, and I know, I think, pretty well how these senators look at something like this. Each one of them, and a good many on that committee were people that were favorable to statehood for Alaska; some were not. At that time Senator Butler was not. But most were favorable to statehood for Alaska. But each one was examining the thing in the light of what his own state had, and I think we might as well remember that the present act gives Alaska many times more land than the most liberal provision of the previous enabling acts and, as was pointed out by somebody else here, that wasn't because of anything that Alaskans did. That was because the folks in Congress thought that we ought to have that land to make the new state work. They also had in mind that their own states, particularly in the Western states, are burdened with a large part of the public domain being held by the federal government rather than by the states. I feel just as Reverend Armstrong felt yesterday when he said that this is something over which we are not going to have any control, anyway. It is something that we are going to have to take, whatever Congress may prescribe so far as these lands are concerned. Now we hope it will be liberal and there is no reason at all to believe that it won't be liberal but it seems to me that unless we adopt a provision, such as is provided in Mr. Smith's amendment, we have left a very grave question to our friends in Congress, and it seems to me that we have provided a much better system of ammunition for those who might be against statehood than we will if we say, "Yes, we are going to abide by the laws of Congress and we are going to accept whatever our friends in Congress are willing to give us."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have heard a lot of talk here, Mr. President, at this Convention about taking bold, new steps and I am in favor of the Tennessee Plan but Mr. White is just a little too bold for me. It even scares me. Now if we look at this proposal he has drawn, we go back to Senator Calhoun's doctrine of nullification. Now that was settled during the Civil War and I don't see how you can draw this proposal that he has got without nullifying an act of Congress. Now I don't know how that is going to sit with the congressmen, but I think it will embarrass the people here in Alaska, because I don't think we are in a position now to nullify any acts of Congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I am sorry to take up the time, Mr. President, but I would like to enlarge upon those who have spoken in favor of Mr. Smith's amendment and against the reconsideration vote on the matter of putting our trust in Congress. I think if we consider that our friends in Congress have had quite a free rein in drawing bills for statehood -- if we didn't know it before I think we had a good exposition the other night as to why we are not a state, and it is not a matter of the gifts or the grants to the new state, but a matter of strictly political balance within the Congress of the United States. Now I think that we can be fairly sure that all bills enabling Alaska to become a state that may be introduced in Congress will be as liberal or more liberal than the one that we have now, because the opposition is going to be based on a preservation of the cloture rule and not on how nice a bill is for Alaskan statehood. I am willing to put this matter into the constitution now and depend on the future to bring what it may. I am one of those who, as Delegate White said a while ago, is willing to take statehood with only an acre of land because I feel that once I get that position, I will have two senators and a congressman to give me back my other 595,000,000, or however many there are left over. I favor keeping things as they are.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard before Mr. White closes? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I would like to ask a question. I believe the article as is, with the consent to whatever Congress may decide to do in the way of an enabling act, if we are accepted as a state, are we bound then to go ahead or can we still back out?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking the Chair that or the Chairman of the Committee?

METCALF: Well, I'll take any of the chairmen of any of the committees -- whoever --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf, there have been states who have not accepted the enabling act and they had such as boundary disputes and for reasons of other disputes, have not accepted the enabling act and Congress has gone back and changed the enabling act. Does that answer your question?

3074

METCALF: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I ask that this body stand at recess until 4:05 o'clock.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. McNees?

MCNEES: I so move.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees so moves. Mr. Johnson seconds the motion. Miss Awes.

AWES: Is it all right to make committee announcements?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements at this time?

AWES: I would like to call a meeting of the Bill of Rights Committee for just a few minutes immediately upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Bill of Rights immediately upon recess. Are there other committee announcements? The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 4:05?" All those in favor of standing at recess until 4:05 will signify by saying "aye"; opposed, by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. The Convention will come to order. Are there others who wish to be heard before Mr. White closes the argument? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I don't want to be heard at length but I do want to stand up and be counted as one who approves of the Smith amendment in preference to the Barrie White amendment and to say that I, too, was a witness at the hearing in 1950 of which Mr. Davis spoke, and well recall that after the long discussion had been heard on what lands should be given to Alaska, Clinton Anderson rose up and said, "We don't have to follow the approved pattern of giving lands to Alaska. Why can't we be bold and strike out on a new trend. I propose that we give the State of Alaska 100,000,000 acres of land to be selected from any place without the public domain that they can find." I can't say his exact words but I do know that that was the attitude of Mr. Anderson at that time and it has been included in every enabling act bill since that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: May I close the argument?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may close the argument. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Aren't we voting on Mr. Smith's amendment? Mr. White has already spoken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, under these circumstances, Mr. White made the motion that brought the question before us again. It is sort of complicated but it is the opinion of the Chair that while it is Mr. Smith's amendment, that Mr. White made the motion that brought it before us, and the rules say that the maker of the motion that brings this subject before us has the last say. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I will try and be as brief as I can. Mr. Smith, in discussing the retention of his motion, spent most of his time discussing the reservation of powers and rights of the United States. With that part I have little or no quarrel at all. I have granted, from the beginning, that the Constitution of the United States probably takes care of that. Most of the rest of the argument in favor of the retention of the Smith amendment has been in the nature of expressing pious hopes as to what the Congress has done and will do in the future. I feel that the proponents of the amendment have not answered the question; that this would result in a campaign of distortion at the time of ratification of this constitution; that leaving the section in would cut the ground out from under the feet of our Delegate to Congress and that it would cut the ground out from under the feet of the individual or groups of Alaskans who wish to go to Congress and have further redress of their grievances, or have listened to further proposals on their behalf that they would like to see included in statehood enabling acts. Now I would agree with Mr. Davis and Mrs. Hermann that the present treatment of Alaska in the enabling act is generous, but I also recall Mr. Davis saying that most congressmen approach the subject having in mind the treatment that their own states had gotten, and being fully conscious of the fact that Alaska is getting far more generous treatment. In effect, what I would do is to keep Congress in the same position and not say to them that should some senator get up and say in committee, "By golly, they are getting far too generous a treatment. Let's cut them down a little bit." That is possible when we say in advance that we will accept anything Congress wishes to do. I merely wish to preserve the status quo and, if possible, to improve it. Mr. Buckalew has raised the question of the legality of all of this and I can only point out again that if my amendment should go in it is no more and no less than Congress has already granted to the people of Hawaii in which they provide that the people of Hawaii shall vote on a similar proposition and they go on to say: "In the event the foregoing propositions are not adopted in said election by a majority of the legal votes cast on said submission, the provisions of this Act shall thereupon cease to be effective. In answer to a question awhile back, the Chair answered that other states have turned down their enabling acts and I would point out that in those instances, the people, the citizens of those states, had not said in advance, "We will accept any enabling act you wish to give us." Therefore, the way was open for them to have a further redress of their grievances. Now Mr. Hilscher has said that my stand is an ideal stand for the antistatehood people because it gives them another crack at the subject later on. That is true, it would give them another crack; but Mr. Hilscher is a salesman and I would suggest to you that it is much easier to sell a given product than it is to tilt at windmills, as we will be tilting at windmills at the time of ratification when people wish to embark, as Mr. Riley says, on a campaign of distortion. That kind of campaign is very difficult to answer. I think you and I and the other delegates here could go out today and sell the current enabling act because there we have something positive to work on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will now be voting on the adoption of the Smith amendment. The Chief Clerk will please read Mr. Smith's proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2. All provisions of the Act admitting Alaska to the Union which reserve rights or powers to the United States as well as those prescribing the terms or conditions of the grants of lands or other property made to Alaska are consented to fully by the State of Alaska and its people."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Smith be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May we have a roll call?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 31 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 22 - Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cross, Gray, Harris, Johnson, King, Laws, Londborg, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Robertson, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White.

3077

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

STEWART: I wish to change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart changes his vote from "no" to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 31 yeas, 22 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Inasmuch as we have transacted some business, I again move that we recess this body until 4:10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 4:10. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 16. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 16?

V. FISCHER: Point or order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: According to the calendar the next business is Style and Drafting reports.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. Fischer, that is correct, but it is the recollection of the Chair that we were on, as unfinished business, Committee Proposal No. 16. Then Mr. White made his motion, or served notice of reconsideration and that brought Committee Proposal No. 16 back before us in, its original position. If there are no other amendments we could have it on its way to Engrossment and Enrollment quickly; that is the only feeling the Chair had on it.

V. FISCHER: I don't want to be the one to delay this matter, but I have a question on the first section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it would be before us, the proposal. That reconsideration brings it back in its original status at that time before the body.

V. FISCHER: May I address it to the Chairman of the Ordinance Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: The section deals with a disclaimer to property held by the United States and the property claimed or owned by Natives of Alaska. The language followed is that in House Bill 2535. Has the Committee taken into consideration the fact that, the Senate, in its enabling bills, has considered a different section covering this matter and that there has been very strong disagreement between the two houses, the Senate not being willing to yield to the House version.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, could you answer that question?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the Committee had considered that particular point and our thought and purpose of containing the language of the house bill was due to the fact that the house bill is still in the House of Representatives as it is. This particular house bill wasn't defeated; it was sent back to the committee and our only thought of it on that point was that since it was back to committee and there was even a possibility of that same bill coming out or the same bill being reintroduced at the next session of Congress or, if by any long chance, that that bill should be reported out of committee again this year, why then it would be the exact language of the house bill which, in effect, isn't completely dead, although it is pretty well buried in Committee. It was, of course, impossible for us to set up two alternatives, we more or less figured the lesser of the two evils.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I was wondering whether Section 2 might not possibly -- Mr. Smith's amendment which we adopted as Section 2 -- might not possibly cover the reservations of rights to the federal government and other matters covered?

MCNEALY: Well, that is possible. It is certainly very broad language in there. We felt, however, in adopting this other language out of the house bill and, if you will remember, it was the Committee that came on the floor with the recommendation then to strike Section 2 because we felt that it was almost a duplication.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I have an amendment before us on the desks that I think solves the problem. It is an amendment that proposes to delete Section 1, and I move that Section 1 be deleted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "That Section 1 be deleted."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, do you so move?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The adoption of the amendment --

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Taylor. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: The reason that I make this amendment is that Mr. Smith's proposal clearly covers the subject matter of Section 1. There is no question about it. This is purely a matter of Style and Drafting and I have consulted with the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee and he feels that way too, but because of the fact that it is a quote from the house bill he believes it should be put before the body, but there is no ulterior motives, no designs, no nothing. This is just merely an effort to delete some 28 lines from the constitution that are totally unnecessary. The house bill lists five things that in the House's opinion should have been in the constitution. The last of the five is the Smith amendment and the Smith amendment treats of two things: provisions of the enabling act reserving rights or powers to the United States, and provisions of the enabling act prescribing terms or conditions of the grants of land or other property. Section 1 deals with precisely those things, nothing more, nothing less. It deals with the reservation of rights or powers in the United States and it deals with the prescribing of terms or conditions of grants of lands, so when the Smith amendment was adopted the necessity for the Section 1 was entirely obviated; and I have talked to Mr. Smith about it and he also agrees with me, and our sole purpose here is to prevent redundancy and to keep our constitution brief.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I fail to see any valid reason for using the Style and Drafting Committee as an excuse for striking a section which I believe is entirely proper. This section deals with the disclaimer as to Native lands and fishing rights and certainly isn't covered by Section 2, which is known as the Smith amendment. I believe it is a necessary article to have in the constitution and I think that the amendment should be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. Hellenthal, if you feel that that is absolutely unnecessary, why do you suppose Congress put it in the act? It says, "The Convention shall provide in said constitution the first, second, third, fourth, fifth." This is second and the Smith amendment is fifth.

HELLENTHAL: Now, the fifth said that all provisions of the act reserving rights or powers to the United States, as well as those prescribing the terms or conditions, are consented to fully. Well, the condition of disclaimer, which we presume will be carried forward into the enabling act, if it is carried forth in the Smith amendment, we say that we consent to it fully. There is no out that the Smith amendment covers it and covers it very, very clearly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I think that section should be read in its entirety. It says, "... as well as those prescribing the terms or conditions of the grants of lands and for other property herein made to the state."

HELLENTHAL: Do you infer by that that I gave it a twisted meaning?

V. FISCHER: No. No, I think it could be misinterpreted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, if it is the official statement of the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee that he saw no reason for it to be in there --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, please, I am sure I never said such a thing to anybody.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

HELLENTHAL: And I didn't say that in my remarks.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin has the floor: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, we have, after much debate, put into our constitution every requirement as set forth in the enabling act. We have provided that no law shall be enacted respecting the establishment of religion; we have provided that the debts and liabilities of the Territory shall be assumed by the state; we have provided that provision will be made for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools; we have put in specifically -- we have put in the Smith amendment; and we have provided that mines and other property belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the state shall never be taxed higher than the lands or other property belonging to residents thereof. We have had quite some debate on very controversial issues. Now when it comes down to adding 28 lines which, in substance, might be critical or essential, merely because it adds 28 lines to the constitution, I don't think is any argument for ignoring it. I frankly believe it should be in there; that if the assertion is that it merely adds 28 lines, as an individual member of Style and Drafting, much opposed to our art, I would prefer -- no matter how inartistic it is -- that it be in there verbatim.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. Hellenthal did talk to me yesterday about this and I stated that I did believe that the second section covered the requirements of this particular section, but on the other hand I wonder if Congress would look at it in that manner. I have before me the Senate committee report referring to this section which says that, "Special attention is directed to the disclaimer clause which is set forth as a section in that part of Section 3 which lists the provisions that must be in the Alaska state constitution." It goes on to say, "The requirement of a disclaimer clause is the customary feature of the acts providing for the admission of new states into the union." Now I have checked on quite a number of the constitutions of the Western states in particular, and they do in every instance, contain a clause similar to this one. I simply could not vote for Mr. Hellenthal's amendment merely to eliminate the wordage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 1?

HELLENTHAL: I had an amendment where I wanted to abbreviate it to four lines but I withdraw that now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to the proposal? If there are no other amendments to the proposal, it is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. The proposal is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. We now have before us on our calendar -- Mr. Sundborg, does the Style and Drafting Committee have reports on the legislative branch, the bill of rights, and suffrage and elections -- do you wish that carried over and go on with the rest of the calendar?

SUNDBORG: We are ready to proceed any time the Convention wishes to do so, Mr. President, and my understanding was that the Rules Committee had purposely put them at the head of the calendar so that they would be cleared.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, then, the next item of business is the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting on the legislative branch. At this time, before we proceed, Mr. Coghill, as Chairman of the Committee on Administration, have you made arrangements for supper upstairs tonight or notified them? Is it the understanding of the Convention that we will be in session this evening? We have a full calendar to go through as yet. Then Mr. Coghill you might take care of it. The Chief Clerk may read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee, on the legislative branch for the second time.

(The report was then read by the Chief Clerk.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, do you or some other member of your Committee wish to explain the Style and Drafting Committee's work on this?

SUNDBORG: This article was redrafted by a subcommittee consisting of Mr. Davis, Mr. Fischer, and myself; and after the redraft was prepared, it was given to the Committee on the Legislative Branch which reviewed it and reported to us that no changes in substance had been made in our redraft and that everything of substance which was in the enrolled copy had been included in our redraft. It was then reviewed by our full Committee and is here reported to the floor. We have asked Mr. Fischer to explain the changes that have been made and to answer any questions that delegates may have with respect to the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: As Mr. Sundborg pointed out, no major changes were made. We did, in Section 1, reinsert the number for the membership of the senate and the membership of the house, as previously agreed when those were deleted. While on Section 1, I would like to explain the use of the term "membership" in Section 1. As Mr. Owen pointed out earlier this afternoon, one of the important jobs that has faced the Committee has been the establishment of uniformity in terminology, and that has been a particular problem when we have come up against different wording for the various types of majorities required to approve or disapprove certain measures. For sake of uniformity we have adopted the following rule: when the term "membership" is used, it means the total number of legislators to which each house is entitled or to which the legislature is entitled. To be exact, it means 20 senators, if we speak of the senate, 40 representatives, or 60 legislators. When the term "members", "senators", "representatives", or "legislators" is used in reference to a specific vote, that refers to the number affected, actually holding office and alive; not necessarily voting, but all of the members who are in existence. When we use the term "of the house", for instance, "two-thirds of the house" or "two-thirds of the senate", that refers to the number actually voting on a particular issue, and that terminology is followed all the way through. We have, in no case, changed the original intent in applying these three categories. We have always followed the original language, insofar as intent was concerned, using the standardized language. The only other point that I would like to bring out concerns Section 2. We have run into a conflict which is substantive. In line 8, in lines 8 and 9, we refer to "resident" for a certain period immediately preceding his filing for office. In the executive article the language is similar except it refers to "immediately preceding his election to office". It is the feeling of the Committee that this matter should be decided by the Convention; we did not feel it within the scope of the Committee to make any substitution. However, it was pointed out that there are three categories which could be used in here. First of all, "immediately preceding his filing for office", "immediately preceding his election", or "immediately preceding the taking of office". Now, the last one is not used in a single instance, so far. It is the law, by the way, that governs the Constitutional Convention, that the qualifications apply as of the time that members were sworn in. Insofar as the filing is concerned, it was pointed out that there is a certain vagueness in the term because there is no specific date, as such, upon which filings are made. They can be made a year in advance of a certain election, whereas the actual election is a definite term. However, this is a matter which we left to the Convention to decide. I will be glad to answer any specific questions. We have rearranged a few of the sections so as to follow more logically the content of the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be asked of the Style and Drafting Committee? Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to ask, on page 2, lines 9 and 10, where the contents came from?

V. FISCHER: Those lines refer to, "This section does not apply to employment by or election to a constitutional convention." That comes from Section 5 of the enrolled draft which says "This section shall not apply to positions of employment in or election to any constitutional convention."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I would like to ask for a one-minute recess to discuss something pertinent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Cooper, did you have --

COOPER: No. My question is answered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I just wondered if there were any more questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to be directed to the Style and Drafting Committee? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Are we on any particular section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No. The Chair feels that we should begin with questions relating to Section 1 first.

R. RIVERS: I have a question pertaining to page 4, line 15.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, the Chair will ask if there are questions relating to Section 1 first; the Chair should have done that previously. Are there questions relating to Section 1? With relation to Section 2? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to have the Style and Drafting Committee explain the difference and why they have switched from the words "have resided" to being "a resident of". I wonder if there is any difference.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, the Committee looked into this particular matter. The word "resident" is used throughout the other articles; it is used in the article on suffrage and elections. If we had used the word "resided" in this case, as Mr. Owen pointed out, it could have raised all sorts of legal questions. We then looked into the difference between "resided" and "resident" and from a legal standpoint we were advised that there would be no difference; that "resided" is the same thing as "resident".

LONDBORG: Well, it would seem to me that if you were residing some place, you are actually living there; you are keeping a home there; you are maintaining your habitat, etc., whereas, being a resident, you are merely a resident in name; you can live anyplace else that you want to.

V. FISCHER: Well, apparently the term "reside" means about the same thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Section 2? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent that in place of the word "be" on line 5, the words "have been" be inserted and the words "who has been a resident" on line 6 be deleted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, perhaps before we accept amendments, we will proceed, under the rules, through the section by section questioning and then come back for any proposed amendments.

HELLENTHAL: I thought this was the time when such amendments would be in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: What decision has been reached during this recess as to whether we are going to have this "immediately preceding his filing for office" or "immediately preceding his election to office"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: To my knowledge, Mr. President, the informal meeting of the Committee was on an entirely different subject, not related to this question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Section 2 at this time? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I was wondering about the deletion of the words "and shall otherwise be a qualified elector".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: In line 5 we say, "a member of the legislature shall be a qualified elector" or a "qualified voter" -- excuse me. Again this is a matter of standard use of nomenclature. We defined what "a qualified voter" is. There is no definition in the whole constitution of what a "qualified elector" is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Section 2? If not, are there questions relating to Section 3? Section 4? Are there questions relating to Section 5? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I have one. In one other article, I forget exactly what it was, I believe it was the executive, it said service in the state armed forces did not apply to a position of profit. Does that apply in this case, also?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I think it was previously pointed out that the intention was to include that particular provision in the general and miscellaneous article where it would apply to all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Section 5? To Section 6? To Section 7? The Convention will come to order. Are there questions relating to Section 8? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: In Section 6, is a legislature a tribunal?

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, that, first of all, is language from the enrolled copy. Secondly, I think, and some of the attorneys might correct me, that that is standard language used for this particular provision in most, if not all, constitutions and possibly in the federal Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, if the Chair may, isn't that the language, Mr. Hellenthal, that is used in the Organic Act, with relation to that subject?

HELLENTHAL: I don't have the Organic Act committed to memory to that extent, but even if it does, I don't ordinarily think -- this makes the legislature a tribunal because it treats of the classification with other tribunals, and is questionable.

V. FISCHER: I would say that the legislature is a tribunal for impeachment cases.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I might just suggest that where the language is the same as it is in the enrolled copy, that we are wasting our time on the Style and Drafting report to go into the matter of the use of words, where we have the same words as we have here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, did you desire --

HERMANN: Mr. Davis said it better than I could.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Sections 6, 7, or 7? Are there questions relating to Section 9? Section 10? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Referring back to Section 9, I didn't have the question worked out. I ask this question merely because this is a different procedure. In Section 9, where you are calling a special session by a canvass of the legislators, now as I recall before, we had reference to using the term "members", if you used this, then it would be a majority, but, of course, in this case there is no session so it would be two-thirds of all of them, is that right?

V. FISCHER: That is correct; that is, the members who are alive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Sections 9 or 10? Are there questions on Section 11? On Section 12? The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: On line 2, page 4, it says, "... but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day and may compel attendance of absent members." Such a use of the word "adjourn" as against "convene" bothers me.

DAVIS: Once again the language is exactly the same as the enrolled copy, Mr. President.

R. RIVERS: Do they adjourn before they convene or do they convene and then call a session? The use of the word "adjourn" there might deserve some consideration, I thought.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is the language that appeared in the enrolled copy as it left the --

HELLENTHAL: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, your point of order.

HELLENTHAL: Is it not entirely proper that anything can be questioned at this stage of the proceedings, or must we confine ourselves to a certain type of mistakes?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. Hellenthal, we are now -- of course, what Mr. Davis meant, as the Chair understands it, is that we are now reviewing the report of the Style and Drafting Committee. Now, when we go back through the article again in its amendment stage, it will be possible to make such changes as you might think are necessary by a proposed amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information. Are we now reviewing what the Committee on Style and Drafting have changed, or what it also might have overlooked in making the changes?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have some questions that you felt -- if any delegate has a question that he wishes to ask the Style and Drafting Committee in relation to, "Why didn't you change this?" or something --

KILCHER: (Statement inaudible.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: A point of inquiry. With reference to the question that Mr. Victor Rivers asked regarding the use of the word "adjourn", it occurs to me that if there isn't a quorum present, that they couldn't convene, so the only procedure left would be to adjourn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 12? Section 13? Section 14? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I will renew my question regarding line 15. Line 14 says, starting on line 13, "No bill may become law unless it has passed three readings in each house on separate days, except that any bill may be advanced from second to third reading on the same day by concurrence of three-fourths of the house considering it." I know that in practice the Alaska legislature had the first reading by title only, second reading in full, paragraph by paragraph, for purposes of amendment, and then it is only read by title in its third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, the Chair does not mean to -- if the Chair may -- it is the recollection of the Chair that this subject came up for discussion at the time we had the legislative article before us, and there were amendments voted on at that time just on the particular subject that you are raising.

R. RIVERS: I wanted to ask Mr. Fischer if it is unnecessary to say that any two of said readings may be by title only, or is that unnecessary?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, we could not go into that question since that was not subject for our inclusion in this particular section. It was previously included and we felt that anything in that range would be substantive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, if I recall, when this proposal was on the floor, the Committee announced that it had been the intent of the Committee that the procedure for the reading of bills would be the same as it is now, with the title first, the second reading to be section by section, and the third reading by title again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair does not recall exactly what it was, but I do remember that there was some discussion. Are there other questions in relation to Sections 13 or 14? If not, are there other questions relating to Section 15? Section 16? Are there questions relating to Section 17? To Section 18? To Section 19? Are there questions relating to Sections 19 or 20, or 21? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, if there are no further questions on the committee report, I move and ask unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting be approved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee, with relation to Article II, the article on the legislature be accepted. Is there objection? If there is no objection it is so ordered. Are there more proposed amendments for Section 1? Mr. Sundborg, what is your pleasure?

SUNDBORG: I wonder if we might have a recess for several minutes so I can ask the Committee to consider a proposed amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 5:15.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there any committee amendments to be proposed? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: No committee amendments, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be proposed for Section 1? Section 2? Are there any amendments to be proposed for this article?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would just like again to call attention, as Mr. Fischer did, to the inconsistency which exists here in Section 2, and between it and the article on the executive, where it speaks here of the man having to be "a resident immediately preceding his filing for office" and in the other article, "immediately preceding his election to office," and I would like to suggest that that be resolved one or the other way in both cases, or the third alternative, which Mr. Fischer mentioned that "immediately preceding his taking office"; and I don't have the amendment myself to offer on that, but I should think someone here would, to make them all uniform.

HELLENTHAL: I propose that the word "election" be substituted for "filing" and so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves that the word "election" be substituted for the word "filing" on line 8 of Section 2. Is there a second to the motion?

HERMANN: A point of order. Would it require a suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: On your point of order, it would require a suspension of the rules.

HERMANN: Yes, unless he asks unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that amendment, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: No.

DAVIS: I had a point before he does. It seems to me that if you were going to use the word "election" at that point, it would have to be "preceding his election, period", strike the "for office" or else say "election to" in the next line. It would require one or the other to make sense.

HELLENTHAL: I would prefer to amend my motion to make it "election to" in substitution for the words "filing for".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there a second? It will take a two-thirds vote to carry the proposed amendment.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion.

HINCKEL: I ask unanimous consent.

METCALF: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the intention of the Committee, and I think we were unanimous in this respect, was that a person should be a full resident at the time they put their name on the document which declared them for office. Obviously, there is a technicality here which we didn't consider. There is a point, however, which can be made in favor of our terminology here, but they may still require an amendment. Our idea would be that the cutoff date on filing should be utilized. For instance, I think currently it is February 1 and that they shall be a resident for a full period of term prior to the cutoff date of filing. Now a man may file the last minute, or he may file three months ahead of time. I can see that there is an inconsistency in that, but it was the intention of our Committee that the person shall be a full resident of Alaska prior to the time that they file for office. Now, I can't speak for the whole Committee inasmuch as they haven't had a meeting but I think it makes little difference to us actually which way this is accomplished, for purposes of consistency in the constitution, but our intention was that before you could file for office that you had to have the complete qualifications, and that you could not run on a basis of incomplete qualifications, assuming that if you were elected, you would be qualified to hold office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I ask the Chairman a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Well, Mr. McCutcheon, if you use the cutoff date of February 1, that wouldn't solve the problem, would it, because somebody could file before February 1 who might not be qualified at the time of filing?

MCCUTCHEON: Well, Mr. President --

JOHNSON: He might file, or was it your intent, or was it the Committee's intent, that at the time he filed his declaration of candidacy, at that time he must be a citizen? He might not be until February 1; then he would be having a gap in there. At least that occurs to me.

MCCUTCHEON: I grant that there is a point where it would require further amendment if we assume the cutoff date at the end of filing would be the period, but, as I say, I don't think the Committee has any objection to using the terminology that has already been used elsewhere in the constitution as it has been adopted so far. It was just a matter that we dealt with in one fashion, another committee dealt with in another fashion, and I don't think there is anything to hassle about at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to point out that as it stands here and without being amended, it would be perfectly possible for me to file tomorrow for election to the legislature at the 1966 election, to move outside and live in Seattle for 10 years and still to be qualified under this article. Now, I believe we ought to tighten it up somewhat more than that; and I favor the suggestion of Mr. Hellenthal that we fix it, both in this article, and in the one on the executive, to the date of election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: A question, Mr. President. Doesn't the terminology "election" include filing, running, being elected, being certified? Wouldn't the term "election" cover it from the date of actual closing of the filings? "Election" would actually consist of the whole process as I visualize it, and as we discussed it briefly in the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I, frankly, have no preference as long as it is a fixed date, but an election isn't completed until you are elected and the votes are counted, and I don't see how you could say that an election would be completed with filing. It would be the complete election. In other words, the counting of the ballots -- that is your election. I favor "election" just solely for this reason: that there is a matter of discretion in the candidate, if you tie it in with filing, and he can adjust as he sees fit, but if you tie it in with election, it is more fixed and it is more involuntary than the other amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe that the present wording should be retained for the reason as advanced by Mr. Victor Rivers, the fact that a filing is a part of the process of being elected. If a man wishes to file prior to the first of February why he can do so, but he must be of the legal age, 21 years for the representative and 25 years for the senator. Now following the reasoning of Mr. Sundborg, which I was unable to see in the same light, a person residing outside could not be elected. He couldn't file, because I don't believe Mr. Sundborg read the article which said that he must have been a resident for at least three years in the Territory and in the district in which he seeks to be elected for one year preceding his filing for office. Now how could he be out 10 years and come back and file because he wouldn't be a resident in that district? So I think that this should be, if he files on February or whether he files on January 31, I think he should be of age when he expects to be elected, because he is coming in then and trying to do something when he hasn't reached the age.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

KILCHER: I wish to abstain from voting because I was not here for all of the discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You wish to abstain, Mr. Kilcher, because you were not present?

KILCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, there is one more observation I would like to make here before we finally get the balloting on this. The question arises in my mind is: when is a person actually elected? We assume that a person is actually elected when they have received, from the secretary of state or some such other official, a notice of certification that the election has been accomplished. Now, that date could be variable by as much as two or three weeks, depending upon how the precincts were coming in in their final counting. Consequently, it is possible that you could have someone filing without proper qualifications who may assume that the final returns won't be canvassed and the certificates elected until a month after the election, and he may be counting on that. It may be that the votes are finally canvassed and the certificates are issued only three weeks after the election, and consequently, he would then be one week short of actual qualification in running here. So, it seems to me that if there is going to be a change made from this, it is going to have to be more specific than just a plain "election to" because a notice of election is a variable situation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I succumb to Mr. McCutcheon's compelling logic and withdraw the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I move that the Convention be at recess until 7:00 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m. Are there committee announcements? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Legislative Branch Committee will meet in the rear of the gallery immediately after recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Legislative Branch Committee will meet immediately upon recess in the rear of the gallery. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: Committee on Referendum, Initiative and Recall will meet at 6:45 in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Referendum will meet at 6:45 in the rear of the gallery, and what else was that, Mr. Collins?

COLLINS: Full attendance of the Committee is requested.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Collins requests a full attendance of his Committee. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Committee No. VI will meet at 6:45.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee No. VI, Committee on Suffrage and Elections will meet at 6:45.

HELLENTHAL: Upstairs in one of the rooms.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Upstairs in one of the committee rooms. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the Committee on Ordinances will meet in one of the committee rooms upstairs at 6:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Ordinances at 6:30 in one of the committee rooms upstairs. Are there other announcements? Mr. Kilcher? If there are no other announcements, the Convention -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the subcommittees of the Committee on Style and Drafting will meet throughout the dinner hour.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Subcommittees of the Committee on Style and Drafting throughout the dinner hour. If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 7:00 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to be proposed? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may we revert to the business of reading the journal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to the order of business of reading the journal at this time. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, the Committee to read the journal reports the journal of the 57th Convention day, Wednesday, January 18, without any recommended changes and the journal for the 58th Convention day, Thursday, January 19, without any changes, and ask unanimous consent for their adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent that the journals for the 57th and 58th Convention days be adopted as read by the special committee to read the journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the journals are ordered adopted. Is there other business to come before the Convention before we proceed with the legislative article? If not, do we have a pending amendment to that article? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, point of inquiry, if not a point of order.

On what basis are amendments before us?

PRESIDENT EGAN: They are before us on the basis of substance. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Has the article been returned for specific amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article is not in third reading. The report of the Style and Drafting Committee has been accepted, Mr. Riley. Substantive amendments would necessarily take a two-thirds vote.

RILEY: That is what I am asking. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. Mr. Barr, it was the understanding of the Chair that the Legislative Committee had several amendments to offer. Would it be in order to have them propose their amendments first?

BARR: I would rather have them do so first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, then, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, your Committee met and considered some of the discrepancies that appear in the legislative article. We wish at this time to submit an amendment. Page 2, Section 5, line 4, beginning of the section, insert ahead of the word 'during' this material: 'No legislator shall hold any other office or position of profit under the United States or the State'." I will ask unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules and the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, Section 5, line 4, begin the section with the following by inserting ahead of the word 'during': 'No legislator shall hold any other office or position of profit under the United States or the State'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection?

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I will say, before objection is made, that it was the intent of the Legislative Committee that there should be no dual office holding from the standpoint of a legislator, and it was drawn to our attention that our article, Section 5 at least in the article, wasn't entirely clear that dual office holding was prohibited. So this terminology has been offered in order to clarify and fortify that point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: A question, Mr. President. Is this a complete sentence, Mr. McCutcheon?

MCCUTCHEON: No, it is not a complete sentence. It continues on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read that first sentence then as it would appear if this amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "No legislator shall hold any other office or position of profit under the United States or the State during the term for which elected and for one year thereafter, no legislator may be nominated, elected or appointed to any other office or position of profit which has been created, or the salary or emoluments which have been increased while he was a member."

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Would the Chief Clerk then please read the proposed amendment. Mr. McCutcheon, is it your desire there be a period after the word "state" and "during" remain as the beginning of another sentence? The Chief Clerk will please read that sentence.

CHIEF CLERK: "No legislator shall hold any other office or position of profit under the United States or the State."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent has been asked for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, may I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

NORDALE: Mr. McCutcheon, this would exempt anyone holding an office in a political subdivision of the state, would it not?

MCCUTCHEON: That is true; it wouldn't prohibit them from holding an office somewhere down the line, like a mayor of a city, or some such thing as that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other Legislative Committee amendments? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, on this same Section 5, beginning on line 9, we strike lines 9 and 10 and insert the following: "This section does not prohibit the election of any person as governor, secretary of state, or member of a constitutional convention, or the employment of any person by a constitutional convention."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. McCutcheon?

MCCUTCHEON: This section does not prohibit the election of any person as governor, secretary of the state, or a member of a constitutional convention, or the employment of any person by a constitutional convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent for the adoption?

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I ask that the rules be suspended and that unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I will object for purposes of inquiry, if I may address a question to Mr. McCutcheon through the Chair. Mr. McCutcheon what, in your judgment, would the application of this section be to a legislator who sought to run for Congress, either house of Congress?

MCCUTCHEON: Well, it would appear to me personally that, inasmuch as the state had no concern with the emoluments of the office of Congress, it would not prohibit him from running for Congress.

RILEY: That is because it is a federal situation?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes. The reason for this additional material here is that it was felt that it was not desirable, necessarily, to prohibit a legislator from advancing to the office of governor or secretary of state. The absolute prohibition might involve restraining a number of persons who might otherwise be valuable to the state, as the governor or secretary of the state.

RILEY: But your language, if I may continue just a moment, states: "No legislator shall hold any other office or position of profit under the United States or the State." And your specific exemptions creates a question in my mind -- should not the Congress be mentioned?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: As a point of clarification, the Committee would include in the amendment offered, the words "or election to the Congress". I think that makes it specific.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then the sentence would read -- would the Chief Clerk read the sentence then, if those words were added.

CHIEF CLERK: "This section does not prohibit the election of any person as governor, secretary of state, or member of a constitutional convention, or the employment of any person by a constitutional convention, or election to the Congress."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me that that language then would make it possible for a legislator to be both a member of the legislature and a representative to Congress if the exception applied to the whole section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean the way the sentence would be worded? Mr. McCutcheon, do you have anything to say?

MCCUTCHEON: The point is that if there appears to be a conflict in it, the intent is that we are not prohibiting a person from running for Congress. Obviously, if they are elected to Congress, they can't sit in the state legislature. I am sure that Style and Drafting will have that drafted up, and I venture to say they will take out "election to Congress".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, just a question on procedure. Does Style and Drafting get this back now that a good many amendments have been made?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting will get this back, as the Chair understands it, after this article is adopted by the Convention as a part of the constitution, not until then.

SUNDBORG: And we can change it at that time? That was not my understanding of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That isn't the understanding of the Chair either, that Style and Drafting can do the work that they have done up to this time, after the third reading procedure has been accomplished on the floor.

SUNDBORG: The simplest manner might be for Style and Drafting to request that after we have finished making these amendments that it be recommitted to Style and Drafting for their consideration of the amendments which have been made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That could be done if there was no objection.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have a question to address to the Chairman of the Legislative Committee. Mr. McCutcheon, would this section, as it is now written, prohibit a member of the legislature, say the president of the senate or the speaker of the house, from succeeding to the office of governor, if the salary of the governor might have been increased while that legislator was in the legislature? I notice you have said "prohibit the election of any person as governor". How about the succession to the governorship from one of those top positions in the legislative branch?

MCCUTCHEON: It appears to me that in the line of succession as it is set up by the executive department, making specific provision for that, that that would carry the automatic exemption. Now, I may be in error in my opinion, but it would appear to me that the president of the senate, despite the fact that the governor's salary may have been increased, would not be prohibited from advancing to that position in case the circumstance came about.

SUNDBORG: Mr. McCutcheon, as I recall our action here, I think we deleted on the floor the specific succession and we just left that up to the legislature; that is, after the secretary of state who succeeds, anyone who might succeed after that, would be provided for by the legislature, so there is no specific provision in our constitution saying that any member of the legislature might succeed to the office of governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, would it be advisable that we have a two- or three-minute recess at this time and consult with Mr. McCutcheon and others interested to delve into this question?

SUNDBORG: It would be all right with me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, this Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, in order to satisfy in the point of the possible succession to the governorship in the case of death or accident of some nature, the Committee has found it advisable to insert after the word "election" in the proposed amendment offered, "appointment or succession". This offering is predicated on the theory that it will permit the president of the senate or the speaker of the house to advance to the office of governorship, in case it becomes vacant or it would permit, in the case of a vacancy, the United States senators or congressman for appointment to the national Congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McCutcheon with the addition.

CHIEF CLERK: "This section does not prohibit the election, appointment, or succession of any person as governor, secretary of state, or member of a constitutional convention, or the employment of any person by a constitutional convention, or election to the Congress."

MCCUTCHEON: I will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

The Convention will come to order.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment which is tantamount to the suspension of the rules. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the Committee has another amendment to offer on page 2, Section 6, line 12, after the word "made" strike the words "or action taken" which continues on line 13.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Strike the words "or action taken".

MCCUTCHEON: After the word "duties" add "while the legislature is in session". I will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection?

MCCUTCHEON: The Committee thinking behind this matter is that it was the idea of the Committee that a legislator should be given proper immunity for any of his actions during an active session of the legislature, but that that immunity should not continue to any investigative interim committee where he might utilize that immunity to the detriment of others. That is the reason why the Committee asks unanimous consent for the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: On page 4, Section 12, line 4, the Committee asks unanimous consent to change the word from "may" to "shall".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection?

HELLENTHAL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you move?

MCCUTCHEON: I so move, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, do you move then that the rules be suspended?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes. I will ask a suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon moves that the rules be suspended. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I think the motion should be that the rules be suspended for the introduction of this specific amendment, not for general purposes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right -- the rules be suspended so that this specific amendment can be voted on. The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the suspension of the rules in order that this specific amendment may be offered.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time with the following result:

Yeas: 53 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Robertson, VanderLeest.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

CHIEF CLERK: 53 yeas, 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it, and the rules have been suspended. You may offer your amendment if you so choose.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, "Section 12, page 4, line 4, change the word 'may' to 'shall'." I move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

MCNEES: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. McNees. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I voted to suspend the rules because I don't want to insist on a two-thirds vote. I think this should be debated like anything else and I don't want to take any advantage of the Committee. Now, I want to be heard just briefly on it. As a matter of principle, I see nothing wrong in all lobbying. Lobbying by citizens' groups is to be encouraged. The word "lobbying" in itself has no nasty or evil connotation. It is a good word, but, if we put the "shall" in there, we are adopting, I think, rather the juvenile principle that lobbying is a dangerous thing in all cases, and I don't want to do that. That is the first point. The second point is, I trust the legislature. I think that they are going to regulate evil lobbying, but I don't want to tell them to do it. I think that they have good sense. We debated this on the floor once, and we reached the conclusion that it should be "may". I think "may" is healthy. This is some more of that old organic-act thinking, where we have boogiemen in the closets. We are grown up and don't have to worry about it. We are going to have a legitimate, decent legislature, and I don't think we should start leading them around by the nose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment, as offered by the Committee, be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it, and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there any other questions or proposed amendments to the article? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: "Page 5, Section 16, beginning on line 4, strike the words 'and bills dealing with taxation or affecting expenditures'; insert in lieu: 'and bills to raise revenue'." Mr. President, the Committee will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee, Mr. McCutcheon asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

TAYLOR: Just for the purpose of getting the Committee's thinking on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: To set forth some of the Committee thinking on this matter: arguments have been presented to the Committee that the words "and bills dealing with taxation or affecting expenditures" was too broad a term and that virtually any bill could be construed, in effect, to, in one fashion or another, be affecting expenditures or dealing with matters of taxation. The matters might only be of an administrative nature not actually affecting the rise or the fall of the revenue. So, consequently, it was the Committee's desire to include the words "and bills to raise revenue" which makes it more specific. The thought in this matter was that, inasmuch as we have a strong executive arm who shall propose a budget and, in the event he has an increase in budget, the governor shall indicate to the legislature the areas in which the revenue should be derived in order to substantiate his increase in budget; that, by including the words, "and bills to raise revenue", would be of direct application to those things affecting the actual increase of the burden upon the citizen. Consequently, therefore, it should be submitted to the three-fourths veto override rather than two-thirds.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of the Committee for the adoption of the amendment?

TAYLOR: I withdraw my objection.

JOHNSON: May we have the amendment read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment once more?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, page 5, beginning on line 4, strike the words 'and bills dealing with taxation or affecting expenditures'; insert in lieu thereof the following: 'and bills to raise revenue'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I have a question. The way she read the last time, are the words "items and" still left in?

CHIEF CLERK: ". . . or items" is in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read it again?

HINCKEL: Read the whole thing as it would be.

CHIEF CLERK: "Appropriation bills or items or bills to raise revenue, although vetoed, become law by affirmative vote of three-fourths of the membership of the legislature."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I believe, if I may ask Mr. McCutcheon a question, I believe that was to read "and the bills to raise revenue". That is the way I picked it up in Committee, anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that correct, Mr. McCutcheon, the word "and" instead of "or"?

MCCUTCHEON: That is possible that it is.

HELLENTHAL: I have a question. What does the word "items" mean as used here?

MCCUTCHEON: In a general appropriations act, it could be an item pertaining to one particular department.

HELLENTHAL: Do you think it says that here? Do you mean appropriation bills or items of the appropriation bill?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, items of the appropriation bills.

HELLENTHAL: I think that should be made clear then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: It is referred to in Section 15 and this is just a further reference to it. In Section 15 it says "he", meaning the governor, "may by veto strike or reduce items in appropriation bills. . ." and this just follows to tell what happens when he sends his message back, and I believe it is clear and refers to those items.

HELLENTHAL: It will undoubtedly be clearer when you get through with it in Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Committee ask a unanimous consent that this amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I didn't get it. Is that supposed to be "and bills" or "or bills"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, it is supposed to be "and bills", is that correct? Does the Chief Clerk have that as "and bills"? Will the Chief Clerk read it as it is now.

CHIEF CLERK: The sentence?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes.

CHIEF CLERK: "Appropriation bills or items and bills to raise revenue, although vetoed, become law by affirmative vote of three-fourths of the membership of the legislature."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: On page 5, Section 18, it appeared advisable to make an adjustment there by striking the whole section and inserting the following terminology: "Laws passed by the legislature become effective ninety days after enactment unless otherwise provided by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent?

MCCUTCHEON: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 18, page 5, line 18, and insert the following: 'Laws passed by the legislature become effective ninety days after enactment unless otherwise provided by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the device of Section 18 was instituted originally because of a section that was stricken from the original bill which had to do with the setting out to referendum by a bill lost in the house either by veto or by the legislature, whereby either the governor could send a bill out for referendum, or the legislature, on failing to overcome a veto, could send a bill out for referendum; and it was necessary under those circumstances, to set up a specific cutoff date. Inasmuch as that particular section of the legislative article was stricken, it was felt that, under those circumstances, that we set forth a 90-day effective period and let the legislature establish such terminology as they wished for the emergency act, if it were required, or to establish any other period of time for some reason or another that may be necessary for a law to become effective. I think a quite similar practice is currently being followed in our Territorial legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Yes, I object to that because the procedure that Mr. McCutcheon refers to is provided for by our Organic Act, and I think it ought to be in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move for the suspension of the rules, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: No.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I move for suspension of the rules to entertain this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves that the rules be suspended.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Taylor, so that this specific amendment might be considered.

WHITE: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment can be placed before us for consideration.

MCCUTCHEON: I move for adoption of the amendment. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon moves for the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

MCNEES: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees seconds the motion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I sat in there during committee deliberations for a while this evening, and part of the objection to Section 18 or part of the point discussed in connection with Section 18 was that this says ". . . effective ninety days after adjournment of the session at which enacted." That is the language we have in Section 18 now. Well, with a legislature that has employment the year round, Mr. Bebout says that sometimes his state legislature worked all year with intermittent recesses, and, in that case, a bill wouldn't become effective until 90 days after the next year started, and that under our present Territorial Organic Act, bills become effective 90 days after passage and approval - that is, of the passage of a specific act. Now, I don't think we can leave it in here the way it is. We don't want to say that with indefinite terms like our legislature will be going through under the new setup that we should wait until 90 days after the adjournment of a legislature before a particular law is going to go into effect. We wouldn't know, after the law was passed, within a period of months, perhaps, when that law was going to become effective, and nobody could figure out an exact time or plan accordingly. So, whether there is objection to this proposed amendment or not, we can't leave Section 18 in there the way it is, I don't think. Now, as to this proposed amendment, "Laws passed by the legislature become effective ninety days after enactment unless otherwise provided by law." That would call forth only one possible criticism, and that would be the meaning of the word "enactment". Our Organic Act now says "passage and approval", but every once in a while, an act becomes the law without the signature of the governor in case he just lets it become law without signing it, which he sometimes does during a legislative session. So if you say "ninety days after passage and approval", then you have to say "except when an act becomes the law without the governor's signature." So, instead of that, the Committee has just stuck in here "unless otherwise provided by law." Now then, the legislature can plug up the hole as to what happens if the governor does not sign a bill, and the legislature can, also, without monkeying with the emergency clauses, say, fix any other specific effective date for a particular enactment, such as, July 1, to coincide with the fiscal year, or "thirty days from date hereof", or "effective immediately upon passage and approval" -- so this actually, in short language, covers the whole subject, and I think it coincides most closely with what we have now under our present procedure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I disagree. I think that striking the entire section, particularly the part that refers to the enactment of emergency legislation, is a dangerous thing. At the present time, we have that covered by our Organic Act, and my objection is to the fact that the amendment which they have offered does not go far enough. They should have reinserted the provision provided in the last four lines of the present Section 18. If they had wanted to strike the first four lines -- that is all right, and then substitute the language which they have offered. I would have had no objection, but I see no reason for doing away with the emergency process.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, would you have objection to a two- or three-minute recess at this time?

MCCUTCHEON: No, I have no objection, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Did you so move the adoption of the amendment?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded. Is there further discussion?

HELLENTHAL: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment -- Mr. Kilcher?"

KILCHER: I am opposed to this amendment, unless it can be amended under the same suspension of rules that we are dealing with in this section now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your question, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: If this amendment that is on the floor now is subject to amendment under that same suspension?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That question has never come before the Chair before. The question is, now that we have suspended the rules, put it in this position for specific amendment, can there be an amendment to that amendment offered at this time? The Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The opinion of the Rules Committee is that you cannot -- we arrived at this point by suspending the rules to consider a specific amendment, and that it cannot be amended. The proposed specific amendment cannot be amended at this time. That would have to be the ruling of the Chair. Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: Mr. President, in that case, I have to ask another question. Can this question be divided? I think it should. There are two substantial amendments in this one amendment, and I wonder if it could not be divided in that case?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question when we suspended the rules was, "Shall we go into this procedure in order to introduce a specific amendment?" Now the specific amendment is before us, and the Chair would have to hold that, at this time, the only way we could reach that, Mr. Kilcher, would be after this action that we are about to undertake here is completed, that by a same motion for suspension of the rules, we would go back either by unanimous consent or suspension of the rules, that we would consider another amendment.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I intend to show that this amendment consists of two definite parts and I am going to explain what I mean and then ask the Chair again if it couldn't be divided; namely, I fully agree to the first part of the amendment that changes the word "adjournment" essentially to "enactment" and some other small changes that are merely a matter of grammar. Since we don't know how long our sessions will be, it is logical that "adjournment" be changed to "enactment" -- "ninety days after enactment". This is a substantial amendment, I think, and, personally, I am in full agreement with it. But then, in the last two sentences, from line 21 on to 24 there is a substantial part of Section 18, which has nothing to do at all with the first part of Section 18, with which change I agree fully. In the last part we say that deviation from that 90-day rule, be it 90 days after adjournment, or, as we have it here in the amendment -- "90 days after enactment." A deviation from that rule shall be arrived at only by a concurrence of two-thirds of both houses, and I think this matter is entirely divisible and we should vote on one amendment first and then on the other amendment -- two amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, in answer to your question, Mr. McCutcheon read the specific amendment that he was going to offer before we suspended the rules to go into this, to come to the point where we are now, where we were to consider that specific amendment. If there was any question, it should have been raised at that time, and the whole question in the mind of the Chair seems to hinge around, not the fact that this whole question is one question, but there is the question there -- whether, in some of the delegates' minds, whether or not it should be left to the legislature by law to provide that length of time, or whether it should be specifically stated by a two-thirds majority, or whatever you would have. The Chair would have no other ruling it could make other than to say that the proposed amendment is in order and that it was offered as a specific amendment; the rules were suspended for that purpose.

KILCHER: A motion to divide the question would not be in order, in other words?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would have to be the opinion of the Chair because we arrived at this point to consider this specific amendment.

KILCHER: Well, Mr. President, in that case I have to talk against the amendment as a whole. There is another amendment -- I hope the first part of this amendment will come up on its own behalf. I really think that we should give it due consideration before we change a matter that has been given a lot of thought in second reading. The first part of this amendment is all right. However, since the second part is too substantial a change for our previous thinking, I think the whole amendment should be voted down and you give way to a partial or a different amendment. I do not think that the house with the regular majority as this here would imply if the amendment were adopted, -- that the house with a regular majority should at will be allowed to name an act an emergency act, even if the emergency doesn't even say any more than the new Section 8, being if this amendment passes that the emergency should be expressed in the act. It doesn't even mention "emergency". The word "emergency" is gone. It doesn't even have to be an emergency act any more if Mr. McCutcheon's amendment is adopted. It will just simply say "laws passed are valid ninety days after enactment" unless the legislature decides different; unless they say the laws will be in effect tomorrow or six months later. Whether it is emergency or no emergency, the legislature here is actually being given carte blanche to do as they see fit, and this in in contradiction to our entire previous way of thinking where for emergency measures it would take two-thirds of the house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I wanted to speak again unless someone else wants to be heard ahead of me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have been heard on this, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS? Yes, but I want to be heard again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would just like to say that I agree with Mr. Kilcher. I think the matter is two very different subject matters and I, too, am very sorry, but I will have to vote against the amendment because of the fact that I feel the last two sentences should definitely be in our constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I feel the same way. There are often times when bills are enacted that they are real emergencies and they should become effective immediately. There are other times when bills are enacted when there is time needed for preparation by the people to take into effect, to learn about the law and to put it into effect. They say that ignorance of the law is no defense. They should at least, however, have the 90 days in which to accustom themselves to and prepare themselves to follow the law that we set up. Now, if we adopt the amendment as Senator McCutcheon has submitted, it would mean that by the simple majority by which the bill was passed, it would also be made operative, if they so desired, and, in the heat of the legislative activities, I can readily see that there will be practically all bills effective immediately. Some grave injustices might be done to people by reason of their not being able to prepare for the law as passed, and they would therefore perhaps be in violation and might even be held for certain violations because of this. I think, actually, that the waiting period on everyday laws, with the exception of emergencies, is good and I am merely restating here now some of the original committee statements made in defense of the measure at the time we adopted that part. I would much favor the amendment if they would only leave the last two lines in.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I wonder if we could have a two- or three-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, before the question, I would simply like to state that I think that the last three speakers, namely Mr. Victor Rivers, Mr. Hurley, and Mr. Kilcher, have indicated pretty well what I believe to be the thinking of the group, and, in the event that the pending committee amendment is voted down, I am sure that one will go in, -- or that a suspension of the rules will be sought to enable a specific amendment to accomplish that purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 18 - Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Taylor.

Nays: 33 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Londborg, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - McLaughlin, Nordale, VanderLeest, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 18 yeas, 33 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other proposed committee amendments? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The matter has been brought to the attention of the Committee which would provide for a transitional provision which relates to Section 5. This provision would read: "The provisions of Section 5 of Article II of this constitution shall not prohibit the appointment of any member of the legislature first organized under this constitution to any state civil office or position created by this constitution or created during his first term."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: Is it an amendment?

MCCUTCHEON: Actually, Mr. President, it would be an addition to the article as a transitional matter relating to Section 5. It would have to be a transitional matter inasmuch as it only relates to the first term of our state legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, would that then be more proper in the article on transitional measures?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, it would.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would it be in order that it be referred to the Ordinances Committee for possible inclusion in the transitional matters? Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, at this late date we would be very happy to see that it gets in as part of the ordinances, but when that particular matter comes out on the floor, if the Committee doesn't understand the ramifications and background -- if Mr. McCutcheon will agree to explain it at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, that matter is referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

HERMANN: Parliamentary inquiry.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your parliamentary inquiry, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Just how many amendments can a substance committee introduce at this stage of the game?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, that is entirely up to the committee and the body as to whether they accept or reject the amendments. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The Committee has no further amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, in line with my last remarks, I have an amendment to submit, and I ask suspension of the rules, unanimous consent for purposes of this specific amendment which has already been described.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, lines 18 and 19, strike the words 'except general appropriation acts, do not'; line 19 strike 'until'; line 20 substitute 'enactment' for 'adjournment'; place a period after 'enactment' and strike the balance of the sentence."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that section now as it would be if this proposed amendment was adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Laws passed by the legislature become effective ninety days after enactment." Then the rest goes on, isn't that right? "The legislature may by concurrence of two-thirds of . . ."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was that your amendment, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Yes

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I have an objection and I ask for a 30-second recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for 30 seconds.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Riley, do you have anything?

RILEY: Nothing further, Mr. President.

STEWART: Mr. President, may we have it read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the section as it would be if the amendment was adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Laws passed by the legislature become effective ninety days after enactment. The legislature may, by concurrence of two-thirds of the membership in each house, provide for an earlier effective date in case of emergency. The emergency must be expressed in the Act."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I have an inquiry I would like to address to Mr. Riley.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. Riley, do you think that word "earlier" might better be "another effective date" rather than "an earlier effective date"?

RILEY: I certainly wouldn't object to your suggestion.

HERMANN: It isn't a suggestion. I am asking for information, but in view of Mr. Rivers' statement that it is sometimes necessary to have additional time to prepare for effective dates, it would seem to me that it might be that "another" might fill the purpose better than "earlier".

RILEY: I think it is constructive in allowing greater latitude.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Generally, when they want to say "This act shall become effective six months from now", there is no emergency. That is something that reaches out for the convenience of the public. I would rather have it "earlier" than "another".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I ask a question of Mr. Riley?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

KILCHER: In the same line of thought with Mrs. Hermann, I had also a version of this amendment where I supplanted "earlier" with "other" and made a period after "effective date"; drop "in case of emergency" on the last sentence. Forget about "emergency" -- just have it read ". . . legislature may, by concurrence of two-thirds of the membership of each house, provide for another effective date."

ARMSTRONG: Point of order. It seems to me, Mr. President, that Mr. Riley has the floor with his amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection -- Mr. Riley.

RILEY: We may be at an impasse here, Mr. President, by reason of the rules being suspended for specific amendment only and, perhaps, if all concerned have not gotten together --

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess.

HELLENTHAL: I object. (To a suspension of the rules.)

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention is in session. Objection has been heard. Do you move, Mr. Riley, that the rules be suspended?

RILEY: The motion is well stated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves that the rules be suspended. Is there a second to the motion?

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor seconds the motion. The question is --

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I would like to be heard.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion to suspend the rules is not debatable. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended in order that Mr. Riley may offer a specific amendment?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 50 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 4 - Helleenthal, Hinckel, Laws, McNees.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 50 yeas, 4 nays and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, do you desire to offer your amendment at this time?

RILEY: I have one amendment, Mr. President, on the floor and Mr. Helleenthal objected to a recess -- and at this point, to give effect to the motion just passed, I will ask for a three-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the three-minute recess at this time? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I confess to having been under a slight misapprehension as to the unanimous consent when first asked. The amendment as originally proposed is the one under consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, lines 18 and 19, strike the words 'except general appropriation acts, do not'; line 19, strike 'until'; line 20, substitute 'enactment' for 'adjournment'; place a period after 'enactment' and strike the balance of the sentence."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Riley be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: May we have it read so it makes sense?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the section as it would appear if the amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Laws passed by the legislature become effective ninety days after enactment."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Read the remainder of the section.

CHIEF CLERK: "The legislature may by concurrence of two-thirds of the membership of each house provide for an earlier effective date, in case of emergency. The emergency must be expressed in the act."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Riley be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it, and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be proposed for Article II or is there further discussion? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, page 5, line 1, after the word 'message', strike the comma and the balance of the sentence on lines 2 and 3 and substitute the following: 'The house receiving it shall immediately reconsider its passage, and, if passed, shall transmit it to the other house without delay.'"

SUNDBORG: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: This very amendment was offered when the thing was in second reading, originally, and was rejected.

BARR: Would you like to quote me that amendment that was offered before, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I know it was a provision to provide for consideration of vetoes by both houses separately rather than in joint session, and it was rejected.

BARR: This amendment of mine now describes the procedure when the vetoed bill is received. It describes how it shall be received, how it shall be acted upon, and how it shall be transmitted to the other house without delay. It does provide for action by both houses, that is true, but it is not like any other amendment that has been submitted before.

SUNDBORG: I renew my point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, the Chair recollects that this matter had been open for considerable discussion at the time the legislative article was before us but cannot recall whether -- Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Is there anything properly before the house now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing properly before the house now except Mr. Sundborg's point of order on Mr. Barr's being able to attempt to offer his amendment, and the Chair is in doubt as to whether or not such an amendment was previously offered. The only way we could determine that would be to have the Rules Committee go back through the records and check that point. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, did Mr. Barr seek to have the rules suspended to have this amendment proposed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: He has not as yet.

BARR: I propose doing that, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: But it is always in order that the amendment be read -- an objection was heard on a point of order. If there is no objection, the only thing the Chair can do is ask the Rules Committee to go through the record and determine if such an amendment was previously offered.

JOHNSON: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Inasmuch as this would have to be acted upon under a suspension of the rules, I do not think Mr. Sundborg's point of order is any good, because if the rules are suspended we can act on any sort of proposition. If he asks to suspend the rules for a specific amendment and the rules are suspended for that purpose --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, your point of order would take precedence over Mr. Sundborg's point of order. That is true, if Mr. Barr asks that the rules be suspended. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that this amendment be considered under a suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that the rules be suspended and that he be allowed to offer this specific amendment if the rules are suspended.

COGHILL: I object.

BARR: I so move.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr so moves, seconded by Mr. Johnson. The question is "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 21 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Harris, Hurley, Johnson, Knight, Laws, Londborg, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 33 - Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, White, Wien.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 21 yeas, 33 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has failed and the rules have not been suspended. Are there further amendments? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have an amendment, and I hear groans.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment that is to be offered.

R. RIVERS: There are two parts and they are both the same amendment.

3118

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 18, lines 22 and 23, change the word 'earlier' to 'another'; line 23, put a period after the word 'date' and strike the balance of the section."

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move that the rules be suspended?

R. RIVERS: I move that the rules be suspended so this may be brought before the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves that the rules be suspended and that the amendment might be offered as a specific amendment. Is there a second to the motion of the suspension of the rules?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like the privilege of stating in just a few words the purpose involved so --

JOHNSON: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

R. RIVERS: I am asking the privilege -- I am asking that I may state the purpose of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking the privilege of the floor. Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Well, if that would be the way. If I could justify -- just before they decide whether to suspend the rules and vote on that, I would like to be heard for a few moments. That is my purpose.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, does he have to state the reason that he is asking? What is he asking for, a personal privilege?

R. RIVERS: No, it is not. It is the privilege of the floor so I can state my purpose before the vote is taken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

BARR: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I believe there is a motion before the house now. Is it in order to grant privilege of the floor while there is a motion before the house?

PRESIDENT EGAN: On a motion to suspend the rules it is not debatable and the question should be put.

R. RIVERS: I hesitate to take advantage of the rule of asking for personal privilege. I ask unanimous consent to be heard for a moment as to the purpose of my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Ralph Rivers being heard on his reason for asking for suspension? Is there objection to this?

DOOGAN: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

DOOGAN: Point of order. If he wants to speak on it he can ask for the privilege of the assembly.

R. RIVERS: Then I ask for the privilege of the assembly and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent for the privilege of the assembly. Is there objection?

BARR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

BARR: When the rest of us have to go through the motions of suspending the rules here --

HELLENTHAL: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I don't think this is debatable. The objection speaks for itself.

BARR: It certainly does.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard, Mr. Ralph Rivers. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll -- for the purpose of specific amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 38 - Armstrong, Boswell, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 16 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Johnson, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Robertson, Taylor, White.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 38 yeas, 16 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the rules have been suspended. Mr. Ralph Rivers, do you offer your amendment?

R. RIVERS: I now move the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Would the Chief Clerk please read that amendment? Is there a second to the motion?

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann seconds the motion.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 18, lines 22 and 23, change the word 'earlier' to 'another'; line 23, insert a period after the word 'date' and strike the balance of the section." So that last sentence reads, "The legislature may by concurrence of two-thirds of the membership of each house provide for another effective date."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, this is not a frivolous effort on my part; otherwise I wouldn't be making the effort. We have all been working hard in the interests of getting this thing straightened out, and I want to point out a little bit from the standpoint of legislative experience. The present Organic Act says that bills when enacted shall become effective 90 days after their enactment, unless an earlier effective date is fixed by the legislature by a two-thirds vote of the members of each house. This gimmick that they used in the legislature for many, many sessions was to say when Mrs. Jones was being reimbursed $50 because her dress burnt up in the schoolhouse, and they wanted to give her money now instead of making her wait 90 days, that an emergency is hereby declared to exist and this act shall become effective immediately upon its passage and approval. Jack McKay, of Legislative Council, of which I am a member, used a different format in drafting bills for the last session. He cited the Organic Act which said that you could state an earlier effective date for many minor matters, or for any matter, without stating, "An emergency is hereby declared to exist." The purpose of saying that the legislature may provide another date makes sense when you do not have to hook in this emergency business, but you cannot say "An emergency is hereby declared to exist and this bill shall become effective six months from date hereof." If it was such an emergency -- I mean, if it was an emergency, it would not become effective six days from date hereof. It is because of the convenience of the public and the planning that is required that in many instances the legislature will make something effective six months from date hereof to give everyone a chance to get organized, or upon the commencement of the next fiscal year, or for some suitable purpose. As this thing now stands, unless we doctor it up, every bill will become effective 90 days from date hereof unless an earlier date is brought about by declaring an emergency. Now, if we take it the way that I have put it, it would be exactly the way it is now under the Organic Act. Bills do become effective 90 days from time of enactment unless an earlier date is established by the legislature in that particular act. Also, the legislature has full power, under the present Organic Act, to say an act shall become effective six months from date hereof, and we do not have to declare emergencies under the present practice and procedure under the Organic Act. So, I submit, ladies and gentlemen, that we don't want to compel our legislature to declare an emergency on every little thing where they might, in all equity, want to create an earlier effective date than 90 days and we don't want to block them off from making something become effective six months later instead of 90 days later. I also point out that this creation, forcing every little thing to become an emergency, rather crosses us up on our referendum article. Our referendum article states that everything may be submitted to the people except emergencies, but they say "involving the public peace and safety", or something like that. If we are going to compel the legislature to express an emergency in every little act that they want to speed up the effective date on, we are then going to have to spell out the special kind of emergencies for affecting the peace and safety in connection to make any sense with regard to our initiative article. Now then, I certainly appreciate the vote of confidence which I know you were buying what you might call a blank check.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Question of Mr. McCutcheon. Do you, as Chairman of the Legislative Committee, do you concur with this amendment?

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. Hellenthal, the only question I wanted to propose through the Chair to Mr. Rivers was whether or not he insisted on retaining that two-thirds business in there.

R. RIVERS: Yes, by all means, that is the present rule. They can only shorten that effective date by a two-thirds vote in the present legislature. I know the sentiment now in regard to that two-thirds vote. I am leaving that untouched. I am only trying to state we don't have to declare an emergency to change an effective date by a two-thirds vote.

MCCUTCHEON: I have no objection to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, our legislature has been operating up to this time under a very cumbersome and illogical procedure in this matter, as Mr. Rivers has pointed out, and I believe that now is the time to correct it. We have the opportunity and we should correct it forever by adopting Mr. Rivers' amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other proposed amendments to the article? If not, Mr. Sundborg had asked unanimous consent that the article be referred back to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Is there objection? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Will it be open again to amendments when it is reported back by Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is another question, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: All right.

HELLENTHAL: It would appear to me it would be referred back for the specific purpose only of working on the amendments that were made here this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that in your motion, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: That was my wish, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That it be referred back for the specific purpose as stated by Mr. Hellenenthal. Then, when it comes back, could Style and Drafting report it directly to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar in third reading? Is that the intention? This is an unusual procedure.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, my thought would be that we would report it again with the report of our Committee to the floor and that that report would be subject to acceptance, but it would not require reading the whole act again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The only thing to be done at that time, would be to be certain that the Style and Drafting Committee had not made any further substantive change. However, whenever it is on the floor, by suspension of the rules for specific amendment, you cannot stop anyone who desired to make such a move from attempting such a move, but it is referred back to Style and Drafting, if there is no objection, for the specific purpose of checking the amendments that were made on the floor. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I wonder if I could be permitted to address a question to Mr. McCutcheon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. McCutcheon, did your Committee consider the question of the date from which residence should date in the case of those who are filing for office?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The Committee discussed the matter, and it was our conclusion that one who files for office must have had full residence before filing their papers for office.

SUNDBORG: So you favor the use of the word "filing"?

MCCUTCHEON: Correct. Yes, sir.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I then move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that the Committee on Style and Drafting be instructed to insert the words "filing for office" in the executive article in place of the language now there, which is "prior to his election". That covers the case of the governor and the secretary of state and that would make that article harmonious with this one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the unanimous consent request of the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the Style and Drafting Committee is authorized to make that change in the executive article. We have before us then, the article on the report of the Style and Drafting Committee, the bill of rights, preamble and declaration of rights article. The Chief Clerk will please read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting on Article I and the preamble.

(The Chief Clerk then read the report of Style and Drafting Committee in its entirety.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, does your Committee have a report to make on the work it did on this proposal?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the article on preamble and bill of rights was redrafted by a sub-committee consisting of Mrs. Hermann, Mrs. Nordale and Mr. Hurley. It was then submitted to the substantive committee and we understand that it was their opinion that we had not changed any matter of substance in it. It was then reviewed by our full Committee and it is now reported to the floor, and Mrs. Nordale will explain such changes as has been made and will answer any questions by the delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale, will you offer that explanation at this time?

NORDALE: We made very few changes. In some instances we returned to the exact language of the Bill of Rights in the federal Constitution because we were advised that those had been construed and the meaning was very clear. A lot of the original enrolled article was, of course, part of the federal Bill of Rights, but where it deviated, except for additions that were made to sort of modernize the thoughts, we did return exactly to the United States Constitution and Bill of Rights. The preamble we rewrote, shortened slightly. The thing we removed was "government by consent of the governed", but we did introduce that thought in another section. It just seemed that it read more smoothly if we didn't have quite so much in it, and we did add the phrase "in order to secure and transmit to succeeding generations our heritage" because we felt that that actually gave more point to the preamble than it had had before. In the first section, I think there is just very little. We did rewrite one sentence but we didn't change the meaning. Section 2 is changed considerably, but I think if you look at it carefully you will see that we did retain the thought. Obviously, the second sentence wanted to say that "government is of the people, by the people, and for the people," so we said that, "Government derives from the consent of the governed," and there is where we introduced that thought, "and exists solely for the common good." The arrangement has been changed, and there are more sections, as you note, but that is because the federal Constitution, the federal Bill of Rights in many respects has just one item, and we thought to correspond and conform with that that we would separate those rights that were separated in the Bill of Rights. Then we regrouped the sections which dealt with capital offenses and criminal -- things relating to criminal laws -- and put the civil provisions toward the end. You will notice that, in Section 11 of our draft, we have -- in relating to criminal prosecutions -- there was no mention of how the jury could be changed. In the enrolled section it said that "An impartial jury of twelve, except in courts not of record, the jury may consist of not more than twelve or less than six persons." Immediately the question arose, who is to say that the jury may consist of less than twelve? So, we added the same language that had already been put into the section on civil cases, after consulting with a former United States Attorney and several other attorneys as to just how that could possibly be changed. They told us it could be changed by law in the very same manner that the jury in a civil trial could be changed. So, we inserted the same thing here; that was in order to cause no difficulty in interpretation of the two sections. Except for its rearrangement, I believe that is the only comment I have to make at the moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to the Committee with relation to the preamble? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I would like to address one question to Mrs. Nordale regarding the matter she was just speaking of about the jury. I didn't quite understand your remarks on that, Mrs. Nordale, as to jury of six in a criminal case.

NORDALE: The original section dealing with criminal prosecution is Section 12 of the enrolled article, and it says "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused has the right to a speedy trial, by an impartial jury of twelve, except that in courts not of record the jury may consist of not more than twelve nor less than six persons." Then Section 13 said, "In suits at common law. . .the right of trial by jury of twelve is preserved. . ." I am speaking from the enrolled copy. You see, we did rearrange it, so if you will refer to your enrolled copy --

TAYLOR: What section is that? That is what I have -- the enrolled copy.

NORDALE: No, you have the report of Style and Drafting. Go back to your original enrolled copy. It is Section 18 in this one. One section deals with criminal prosecutions and the other deals with suits at common law. Now, the enrolled section dealing with suits at common law said that said that the legislature may provide for a jury of not less than six. With reference to criminal prosecutions it said that the jury must consist of not more than twelve or less than six, but it didn't say how you would arrive at a jury of less than twelve.

TAYLOR: I was going to say that could easily be clarified. You could leave it the way it is because under the Constitution of the United States you are entitled to a jury of twelve and it is only the defendant who can waive less than a jury of twelve.

NORDALE: I understand that the Constitution doesn't say a jury of twelve. I was advised that it was a matter of common law. Maybe Mr. Buckalew could help us.

TAYLOR: A common law was a jury of twelve -- that is a common law jury and only the defendant can give his permission to be tried by less.

NORDALE: These two sections were reviewed by someone who had never seen them before. Immediately the question arose -- "How do you get a jury of less than twelve?" So, we made inquiries of some of the attorneys and they said that you get it by law.

TAYLOR: No, you get it by the defendant waiving the jury of twelve and consenting to be tried. We do it all the time. It is standard procedure in the courts that if the defendant wishes, he can be tried by a jury of less than that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, do you have a question there?

AWES: I would like to make a statement on that. If it were just a question of a jury of less than twelve, when the defendant waived a larger jury, then you wouldn't have to put it into the constitution. The defendant has the right without any constitutional consent to do it, but as far as trials by the state courts go, the state constitution can provide what kind of a jury trial we reserve or save for them, and it was definitely our intent that the legislature could, in certain cases, provide a jury of less than twelve, and it has been done by other states in their constitutions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to the preamble? With relation to the work the Style and Drafting Committee did on the preamble? If there are no questions on the preamble, are there questions with relation to the work that the Style and Drafting Committee did on Section 1? Questions relating to Section 2? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think I can make my point at a later date.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Section 2 or Section 3?

HELLENTHAL: Section 2, yes. Frankly, I think that language, "Government derives from the consent of the governed," is to say the least, archaic and curious. I wonder where it came from.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale, could you answer the question?

NORDALE: The preamble did say that we "reaffirm our belief in government by consent of the governed," and I think that is an accepted American view. The word "derives" means to arise and go from, and so the thought there is that government is an outgrowth of the consent of the people, that is, their will; it originates with them if it derives from them; it is founded on their will because it is on their consent; and "exists for the common good" means that it was instituted for the common good, for the good of the people as a whole. We felt that we had included all the thoughts that were in that second sentence.

HELLENTHAL: Has that language ever been used before in any bill of rights -- the word "derives".

NORDALE: Excuse me, I am not sure.

HELLENTHAL: You are aware that the original language is, "All government originates with the people, is founded upon their will only," are you not? You think that this is preferable to that?

NORDALE: Well, this is what we decided to use.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew has been attempting to get the floor.

BUCKALEW: Mrs. Nordale cleared this provision with only part of the Committee. I know she talked to Delegate Awes and myself and we didn't see anything wrong with it. I have seen this very language in other bills of rights. I don't know that the word "derives" is archaic or not. My only comment is it is in English, and part of the Committee didn't have any objection and we thought it was an improvement.

HELLENTHAL: What bills of rights use that language?

BUCKALEW: Mr. Hellenthal, I could go back up there and find them, I guess. My only comment is I have seen the language before. It is not new or novel or anything strange about it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 2? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I ask Mrs. Nordale a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mrs. Nordale, that language mentioned by Mr. Hellenthal means government is based upon the consent of the governed. -- More plain words, is that what you mean?

NORDALE: Our thought was that government really is an outgrowth of the will of the people. That was more the idea that we were trying to convey. It originates and grows out of the will of the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 2? If not, are there questions relating to Section 3? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask what the sentence, "The legislature shall implement this section. . ." means in Section 3, or the breadth of it or the scope of it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale, could you answer that?

NORDALE: The original enrolled section said -- the first sentence is the same. The next sentence was, "The legislature shall provide appropriate legislation in accord herewith. We took it to mean that it was the desire, that the Committee intended that the legislature should implement this by passing legislation prohibiting discrimination. That was the only way we could interpret it, and we thought we had said that in this. I don't think it is particularly good language, but I think it is better than the other. That is my personal opinion.

HELLENTHAL: Another question. Why were the words "the enjoyment of" not included in Section 3?

NORDALE: Because we felt that this should not deny the right. -- that it is the right you are preserving, not the enjoyment of a right.

HELLENTHAL: Did you consult with any advisers or attorneys in connection with eliminating the words "the enjoyment of"?

NORDALE: Yes, we had two attorneys from your Committee who had no objection to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: The Committee consulted with Mr. Buckalew and with me on that particular section, and we raised no objection to it at that time.

HELLENTHAL: I have another question. Why were the words --

BUCKALEW: Mr. President --

HELLENTHAL: Why were the words in Section 1, "This constitution is to promote the general welfare of the people," -- why were those words deleted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Our feeling was that it was not quite necessary to say it in just those words, that the constitution speaks for itself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I think perhaps we could save time if Delegate Helleenthal and Delegate Nordale could get together and they could crossexamine each other in the next five minutes and then we can get back to work. I move that we recess for five minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves that the Convention stand at recess for five minutes. Is there objection?

ROBERTSON: I object.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Victor Rivers. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess for five minutes?" All those in favor of recessing for five minutes, will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. Are there other questions relating to the preamble, Section 1, Section 2, or Section 3? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: If I might direct a question to Mrs. Nordale through the Chair, as a member of the Bill of Rights Committee and also one of the members not consulted in regard to change of language, was it the thought of the Style and Drafting Committee that in these Sections 1, 2, and 3 that the language is preferable, that is the language of Style and Drafting was preferable, or was it done for the purpose of cutting down a few words in each section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale, could you answer that question?

NORDALE: I think it was perhaps a little of both, although it was really more of an effort to smooth the language than it was to eliminate words. As you read the thing out loud it seems to me every once in awhile a sentence sort of comes out of the bill of rights as it originally was written, that doesn't seem to quite fit the tone of the rest of the article, and we were attempting to smooth the language as much as possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I ask Mrs. Nordale a few questions through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, if there is no objection.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mrs. Nordale, did you consider the possibility -- or would you consider it awkward, under Section 3, to say "No valid or bona fide person is to be denied any civil or political rights." Would that be silly?

NORDALE: I don't think it would sound quite appropriate in a bill of rights.

MCLAUGHLIN: Then, under Section 4, would you consider "No valid or bona fide person" or "no valid or bona fide law" -- would that sound silly?

NORDALE: Well, again, it seems to me that, the bill of rights is supposed to be --

MCNEALY: Point of order, Mr. President. I don't find those words, "no bona fide person".

MCLAUGHLIN: It is merely to style, and I think it will arise later in another article, Mr. President, and I wanted to make the point clear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

(Mr. Hellenthal spoke on the question of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: May I just say that actually the United States Constitution guarantees rights, not the enjoyment of rights.

HELLENTHAL: I beg to differ with Mrs. Nordale.

MCLAUGHLIN: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: The point of order is, Mr. President, that the comments should be addressed through the Chair and they are limited to questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You're correct, Mr. McLaughlin. Your point of order is well taken. Are there other questions relating to Sections 1, 2, or 3? Are there questions relating to Section 4? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, may I ask a question through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mrs. Nordale, Section 4 says, "No law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion. . ." Do you mean "of religion" or do you mean "of different kinds of religion"?

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. That is the identical terminology that came out of the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If that is the wording in the enrolled copy, Mr. Barr, that, of course, wouldn't be Mrs. Nordale's place to answer it.

BARR: Later I will ask Mr. Hellenthal that question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: On Section 4, may I address a question to Mrs. Nordale?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Section No. 3, excuse me -- "The legislature shall implement this section. Is that a legal terminology for the same meaning in Section 3, "The legislature shall provide appropriate legislation in accordance herewith."?

NORDALE: As far as I am concerned, I don't know that it could be called legal terminology. "The legislature shall provide appropriate legislation in accord herewith" didn't sound -- well, to us, it just didn't sound very good, but obviously the intent was -- I don't know what "legislation in accord herewith" would be unless it were legislation to carry out the idea, and so that is the way we interpreted it and that is the sentence we came up with.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Is it then the belief of the Style and Drafting Committee that the word "implement" would substitute, that the intent of Section 3 will be carried out to the letter and no deviation will be made from it?

NORDALE: I believe you are not supposed to deviate from the Bill of Rights.

COGHILL: I realize that but will the word "implement" take up the "appropriate legislation"?

NORDALE: My idea of this is, the statement is there. Frankly, I don't think the laws are needed probably, but obviously the committee that brought out this article wanted some type of legislation which would carry out the idea that no person may be denied the enjoyment of any right because of race, color, or creed, etc. So obviously, that is what they meant, and it must have been a directive to the legislature, so we thought that they meant that the legislature shall implement civil rights by legislation so that we will have them both in the constitution and on the statute book.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, a member of the Committee, has been attempting to get the floor for some time. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to point out that material in this was not only considered carefully by the subcommittee of three but was also considered in detail by the Committee of nine upon which sit three very capable attorneys. These matters were considered in the light of their legal implications, and I would like to further point out that the matter was submitted to the representative of the Bill of Rights Committee in accord with a ruling of the Chair and the suggestion of the body that each committee delegate one of its members to consult with the subcommittee on these matters. These matters have gone through their proper channels and, as far as the attorneys are concerned, they have been confronted by at least five attorneys, whom I consider all very qualified. I am not disparaging the question; the question is a good one, but the point I am trying to make is that these things have been considered in their legal light and if they are not, why we will be glad to accept an amendment on the part, but the matters have been considered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: In this civil rights bill originally, we were cognizant of the fact that in our present Session Laws of Alaska, there has been an attempt on the part of the legislature to provide for civil liberties. We also realized that it was impossible to spell out all the civil rights in a section in the declaration. We realize, too, that in the future there would have to be clarification of civil rights. It would have to come into being by further definition on the part of the legislature of the new state. What this is saying is that we want a retention of the bill that is on the record at the present time; that at any moment in the future there has to be further implementation of these standards that our legislature have the right and it is a mandate that they would carry it out. I feel, as a member of the Bill of Rights Committee, and also, knowing the discussion of Style and Drafting, their intent was to take from the past the best and to project into the future our prayers and hopes for the best in civil rights for Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, that word "implement" has a strict legal meaning, and it is used in law a great deal. We hear it bandied around here considerably about implementing an act. Now, section 3, as it stands without the last sentence there, would be high-sounding phrase of which we might be proud, but unless the legislature passed an act making that workable, making it enforceable, by legislation with the penalty for violation there, that is all that would remain until eternity -- would be a high-sounding phrase with no meaning whatsoever, so when they use that word, "The legislature shall implement this section," that means legally that they shall enact legislation enforcing the terms of that and providing the penalty. So I would leave it the way it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I disagree with Mr. Taylor but since we're confined to asking questions, I am unable to answer him.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I don't like to belabor this point -- and the only reason I ask the question, is to possibly avoid offering an amendment later, but I would like to address either the Style and Drafting or an attorney on that Committee who used the words, "The legislature shall implement this section" -- now, in drafting and drawing of papers, the question is this: does it mean there, that we will implement and add to or change or enlarge upon this particular section in the constitution, or will the legislature be implementing the content of the section?

TAYLOR: Make it workable and forceable, Mr. McNealy -- provide a penalty.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the question is, do the words "implement this section" mean implement the content of the section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: The word "implement" as used in here is intended to mean exactly that: to complement, or add to or carry out the desire of the section. Admittedly, this matter gets into a legal argument. The word is hard to find in a legal dictionary. However, In Webster's International, there is no question of its meaning, it is very plain; and that is what is put in there -- there is no pride of authorship. If Mr. McNealy can find a better word -- and I submit that the word that was in there before, "shall provide appropriate legislation in accord herewith", does not say any more than "implement" -- and we think it says a little bit more by saying "implement".

HELLENTHAL: May I ask Mr. Hurley a question through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Hurley, were you familiar with the fact that Mr. Elliott from Columbia, who came here and worked with the Bill of Rights Committee, rejected the use of the word "implement" in that section?

HURLEY: Mr. Hellenenthal, I was not familiar with that fact, but I was familiar with the fact that the material was submitted to the Bill of Rights Committee and was not criticized and on those grounds we accepted it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 3 or 4? Are there questions relating to Section 5? To Section 6? To Section 7? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, it is growing close to our evening adjournment, and due to our rules, I am forced at this time to move that my reconsideration of my vote yesterday is taken care of at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris moves the reconsideration of his vote -- was it Mr. Kilcher's proposed amendment, Mr. Harris?

HARRIS: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That proposed amendment was to Ordinance No. 17. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and the matter be allowed to be taken up in the morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that the matter be allowed to be taken up --

HURLEY: At the beginning of the next plenary session, I should have said.

PRESIDENT EGAN: At the next plenary session meeting. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Didn't Mr. Hurley mean as the first order of business? Did he mean any time during the day?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, did you mean that as any time during that session, or as the first order of business?

HURLEY: I would say the first order of business, if that is desirable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley includes in his request that the matter of Mr. Harris' reconsideration of the vote on Mr. Kilcher's amendment -- that the rules be suspended and that that matter be made a first order of business at the plenary session tomorrow. Is there objection to that unanimous consent request for suspension of the rules and the consideration of this matter tomorrow? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may we revert to the order of business of committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to the order of business of committee reports at this time.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, your committee on Style and Drafting reports to the Convention its redraft of the article on health, education, and welfare.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The report may be read for the first time by the Chief Clerk. Do you have a copy of that report?

CHIEF CLERK: "Your Committee on Style and Drafting herewith presents its redraft of the article on health, education, and welfare for consideration by the Convention."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The report is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to revert to the business of introduction of motions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to the order of business of introduction of motions at this time. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, Mr. White, you may. --

WHITE: Mr. President, it appears to me that some confusion or slowing up of our process may be due to a gap in our rules. When we are in the matter of considering the report of Style and Drafting, technically, that is what we are supposed to be doing. Now we have drifted into the practice of allowing committee amendments of substance to be submitted at that time, I suppose on the theory that, those are well-considered amendments, they will be noncontroversial, and it will generally enhance procedures if their introduction is allowed at that time. No delegate feels that his amendment of substance is frivolous, and, frankly, I would like to vote with consistency at any one time as to whether I am going to consider such an amendment or not. I think that is one matter that might be considered by the Rules Committee. The second matter is that it appears to me it might speed processes considerably, now that committees have time to meet, that the final report of the Committee on Style and Drafting be submitted to the full substantive committee to avoid further waste of time on the floor. So, Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that those two matters be referred to the Rules Committee for consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection those matters are referred to the Rules Committee for their consideration. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I would ask unanimous consent to revert to the introduction of committee proposals. The reason for it, Mr. President, is so that the Rules Committee can assign this to the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. McNealy, you may submit your proposal.

MCNEALY: Committee Proposal No. 17/b.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read Committee Proposal No. 17/b for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 17/b, SCHEDULE."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Are there other committee reports to be made at this time? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Meeting of Committee No. VI at 1:00 tomorrow afternoon or as soon as the bus unloads upstairs. In the room where we met at this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of Committee No. VI, the Committee on Elections and Suffrage, tomorrow afternoon at 1:00 upstairs. Miss Awes.

AWES: There will be a meeting of the Bill of Rights Committee tomorrow at 1:00.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A meeting of the Bill of Rights Committee tomorrow at 1:00. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: A point of inquiry. How long will the Convention be holding their session when they are starting their plenary session at 1:30? Could the Chairman of Style and Drafting answer that? The rest of this week?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, what is your opinion?

SUNDBORG: I believe under our motion it was that we do it for the next few days. I might say, Mr. President, that we have had not nearly enough time today, even though we utilized the whole forenoon and even though we worked last night after an early adjournment, and, if we should be continuing in plenary session for the length of sessions that we have had today, I am afraid that we are going to fall far behind in Style and Drafting on the work which we must do. So, I would have to answer the question by saying that we are going to have to continue the arrangement of not having plenary sessions, at least for the balance of this week, in the morning.

COGHILL: My point of inquiry was for the bus schedule, for the transit company.

SUNDBORG: That is up to the Convention to decide and not for us. I am just expressing the desire of the Style and Drafting Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to ask a question that possibly the Rules Committee might consider along with this motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection you may ask your question, Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: For these proposals, when Style and Drafting are through with them and return them to the substantive committee, I would like them to set a period of time, preferably short, of how long the substantive committee can hold them before reporting them out on the floor. I would like them to specify a period of time in a matter of hours or a day or something so that it can't get back into the substantive committee and be tied up there. Time is becoming of the essence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are offering that as a suggestion to the Rules Committee when they consider this matter?

DOOGAN: Yes, I am.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee reports? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to announce a meeting of Style and Drafting Committee immediately upon adjournment tonight.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee immediately upon adjournment tonight. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Rules will meet tomorrow just prior to the plenary sessions convening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Rules Committee will meet tomorrow prior to the convening of the plenary session. There will be a meeting of the committee chairmen at 12:30. Let's see -- being that some of the chairmen might not come out until the 12:30 bus comes, it might not be too well to call it for that time. Well, we will have to arrange a meeting of the committee chairmen some time during the day tomorrow. The Chair will not announce it at this time. Are there other committee announcements? If not, the Chair will entertain a motion for adjournment. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I move that we adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon. Is there objection?

DAVIS: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Londborg?

LONDBORG: I so move.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved by Mr. Londborg, seconded by Mr. Doogan, that the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow?" All those in favor of adjourning until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow, will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

YEAS: 28 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, King, Laws, Londborg, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White.

NAYS: 26 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Sundborg, Wien, Mr. President.

ABSENT: 1 - VanderLeest.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 27 nays and 1 absent. *

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the Convention is still in session. We have before us -- Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask a question, through the Chair, of Mr. Sundborg?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

HELLENTHAL: I notice that the members of the Rules Committee voted against recessing. Is there any reason for that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: You Mean Style and Drafting. We hadn't conferred with one another, Mr. Hellenthal, but I will tell you what my own ideas on it are. We are just now about halfway through the second item on the calendar for today, and there are a half dozen items on the calendar and we are very fearful -- or at least I am -- that unless we continue these plenary sessions nightly until such time as we clear the calendar, as long as more material is coming on it each day, we are never going to finish this Convention on time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I take it then, that the "we" that you refer to is the Committee, and that the Committee no longer desires time in the morning to do its work.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Hellenthal, that is not true; we desire not only the full morning time but are going to be obliged to work evenings after the plenary sessions, even if they go until 1:00 in the morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, as one member of Style and Drafting. I would just like to say that I personally realize the amount of work that still remains, not only in Style and Drafting, but on the floor. We have a tremendous amount of work to do, and at the rate we have been going today, we haven't got a chance of finishing on time. I think, if necessary, we should put in an extra two hours every day, and in the evenings if necessary; otherwise, we will be working 24 hours straight during the last week of the session.

*See page 3147 re correction of the announcement of the roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Let's get at it. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. Inasmuch as the session is still in plenary session, I think it is in order that Mr. Harris' reconsideration be given at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is in order, but it was unanimously agreed it be held over to the plenary session tomorrow, Mr. McCutcheon, so it still is alive.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I dislike arguing with the Chair, but the matter was held over because of the imminence of adjournment. Since adjournment isn't about to be had, I think it would be proper and fitting to take up at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It wasn't stated that way, although you are probably correct, that is probably why the request was made. If it is the desire of Mr. Harris or the body to have that heard at this time --

V. RIVERS: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: When the motion to reconsider comes on the floor, it does not take preference over something that was already on the floor. It merely takes its place after that particular item is finished. It came on in the middle of this particular item.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us Article I, the article on the declaration of rights as it was reported to us by the Style and Drafting Committee. Are there questions with relation to Section 5, or Section 6, or Section 7? We had asked about those sections before. Are there questions with relation to Section 8? Or to Section 9? To Section 10? Are there questions with relation to Section 11? The delegates will please remain in their seats in the hall of the Convention. Are there amendments to Section 12? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I forgot to mention something here. Section 12 of our committee report is Section 9 -- oh, part of Section 9, and then there is one sentence, the last sentence of the old Section 10. That is, of the enrolled Section 10, which says, "The administration of criminal justice shall be founded upon the principle of reformation as well as upon the need to protect the public." Our feeling was that, that sentence logically belonged up with, "Excessive bail shall not be required, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted. . ." because it related to punishment. However, we found when we moved the sentence up, it was called to our attention that it was found in the judiciary article that the same expression had been used, "the administration of justice", and we consulted with the originating committee, and their feeling was that they didn't mean exactly the same thing that was intended in the article establishing the judiciary branch, so they gave us exactly what they had in mind, and we substituted this language and put it into the same section that also relates to punishment, because their feeling was that it was penal administration that they wanted to call attention to, not the administration of justice, as we had used it in the judiciary article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be asked with relation to that subject? If not, are there questions relating to Section 13? Or to Section 14? To Section 15? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, Section 15 -- I don't find that in the original proposal.

NORDALE: It is Section 10 of the enrolled copy.

BARR: Oh, Section 10. Well, I have a question to ask but it is in the original, so I will have to wait and ask Mr. Hellenthal about it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 16? To Section 17? Are there any questions relating to Section 18? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I ask Mrs. Nordale a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Rivers, if there is no objection.

R. RIVERS: Mrs. Nordale, the last three words on line 12 refer to common law suit. Does that mean the same as civil suit at law?

NORDALE: I understand that it does, Mr. Rivers. If you recall, the original section began with the phrase, "In suits at common law". Then, there was an amendment added which said "in civil causes". It just said "in civil causes", if you recall. I think it was amended on the floor. The problem arose again of interpreting the constitution. We start the section by saying, "in suits at common law", and we wind up by saying "in civil causes". There was the chance that it might be interpreted that we meant two different things because we had said it in two different ways, but we were advised that it would be far better to stick to the first subject that we had introduced as a section; and that, also, was referred to the originating committee and they saw no objection to it.

R. RIVERS: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: A question, Mrs. Nordale. Was the Committee aware that that precise question had been decided by precise amendment by this body after a floor discussion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Yes. I realize that, but you see our job, as Mr. Owen told us, is to try to avoid the implication that we are talking about two different things when we use different terms, and at the risk of sacrificing the style, we had to use the same terminology.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Question, Mrs. Nordale. Perhaps when we changed that wording at the one point, we intended to change it at the other and inadvertently did not do so. Could we have a chance to consult with the Committee, perhaps tomorrow, before we start the amending process? Or are we going to consult with them tonight, the Committee on Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I might suggest, in those particular cases, I think it would be very desirable to consult with the substantive committee, and I am sure we will be acceptable to anything they decide as long as it's consistent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Would it be proper to have me make a brief statement at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to having the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee make a brief statement at this time? Hearing no objection, Miss Awes, you may make a brief statement.

AWES: I just wanted to make a statement about this proposal. The proposal was made by the Bill of Rights Committee and came out on the floor in due course and was referred to the Style and Drafting Committee. I was told, or made to understand, that when the Style and Drafting Committee worked on a proposal they asked to have one member of the substantive committee come before them and consult with them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That subject came before the Convention, Miss Awes, and was agreed to.

AWES: It is also my understanding that it was the duty of the Bill of Rights Committee to draw up substantive provisions, that it is the duty of the Style and Drafting Committee to put it in the proper language so that it sounds well, that it fits in with other proposals and so that it complies with the will of the Convention. So when the Style and Drafting Committee informed me that they would like to have me or some other member of my committee before them, I went before them, and also asked Mr. Buckalew if he would come. The two of us appeared before them and passed on certain sections which they put before us, and also answered certain questions as to intent, etc. There were certain changes which they made which I did not necessarily think had to be made, or the wording that I particularly didn't like as well as our own, but I didn't feel that the Style and Drafting was what I was concerned with. I felt that I was only there, and I think Mr. Buckalew felt the same way, that he was there to answer questions they had as to substance and meaning. That is what Mr. Buckalew and I tried to do. Now, I am not saying we may not have made a mistake, either or both of us, but we did try to answer the questions as they went, to substance, and we tried to conscientiously do that. As to style and drafting, we didn't feel that that was any of our business. I make this statement just so the body will understand how we proceeded and what was done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 18? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I ask the Chairman again when you are meeting tomorrow?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Tomorrow at 1:00 p.m.

TAYLOR: Just for a matter of explanation to save unnecessary meetings -- that Section 18 is worded -- it cannot be improved upon and I will touch briefly upon what a suit in common law is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, the purpose at this time -- is there any objection to having Mr. Taylor explain that -- is to ask questions of the Style and Drafting Committee.

R. RIVERS: I would rather reserve the article until tomorrow because we are going to do something about this.

TAYLOR: I never heard of anything being referred to any committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, it has not been referred to any committee, but at this time, we are in the question process, and at the time that any proposed amendments might be offered, at that time, they could be debated. The Chair has probably allowed unnecessary argument at this time or during this evening. The manner in which we are proceeding is that we are asking questions of the Style and Drafting Committee. If you have questions or anyone has questions, or if the body unanimously agrees to hearing a statement -- that is up to the body.

TAYLOR: I will change my statement. I will move that we adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

SWEENEY: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves that the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow. Is there a second?

POULSEN: I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow? All those in favor of adjourning until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is in session. Are there questions relating to Section 18 to be asked of the Style and Drafting Committee? Are there questions relating to Section 19? To Section 20? To Section 21? Are there other questions relating to this article to be asked of the Style and Drafting Committee? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there are no further questions, I move and ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with reference to the preamble and the article on the bill of rights be accepted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with reference to the preamble and the article on the bill of rights be accepted. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, where will it be then? It will not advance to third reading. Will it be subject to amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, it could then be subject to specific amendment for substantive purposes, or subject to regular amendment from a standpoint of phraseology if it does not include a substantive change. Is there objection? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, in Section 2, the language in Section 2 --

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. Have you declared on the unanimous consent?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No. Mr. Kilcher, are you asking this question before you are allowing the unanimous consent request to go through?

KILCHER: Yes. With a majority only could we make amendments here that pertain to Style and Drafting? I mean, to language only?

PRESIDENT EGAN: For phraseology, yes.

KILCHER: I am afraid, of course, that would take a good bit of time, but I would like to express my opinion that several of these sections, specifically two, the wording is not very lucky. On the other hand, I don't presume that I could sit down and do it better in two minutes. I think ten minutes would do it. I would have to agree with Mr. Hellenthal that Section 2 "government derives from" -- that is unlucky wording. It doesn't sound good and is not logical.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, are you objecting to the unanimous consent request for acceptance of the report?

HINCKEL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I so move.

RILEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved by Mr. Sundborg, seconded by Mr. Riley, that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted. All those in favor of accepting the report will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the report has been accepted. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the article be placed on the calendar in third reading and up for final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended?

DOOGAN: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Point of order. I don't think the rules have to be suspended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The rules would have to be suspended. That is the only way you can get it into third reading at this time.

LONDBORG: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I think they would have to be unless there are no amendments as to phraseology.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg, they would, in any event, have to be suspended at this time to move it into third reading. Is there a second to that motion of Mr. Doogan's?

MCCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon seconded the motion. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and the article on preamble and declaration of rights be advanced to third reading and placed in final passage?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Does this mean then, that it would be passed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, Mr. Armstrong, it would mean that if this motion carries, then that this article will be in third reading, open for debate, and when that debate is completed, the vote would be called for final passage.

HINCKEL: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information, Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: It also means that everything would take a two-thirds vote to amend it instead of a majority?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, it would take --

HINCKEL: Because we could not have changes in phraseology right now without that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, it would take 37 votes to suspend the rules at this time and place the article in third reading. If, in third reading, an amendment were to be made of substance, a substantive amendment, there would be no change at all. I mean, it would take a two-thirds vote at this time to make a substantive amendment. It will take a two-thirds vote to send it back to second reading for specific amendment -- rather, substantive amendment -- at that time. Now, whether or not phraseology amendments could be made in third reading, there is nothing in the rules as the Chair recollects that allows any type of amendment to be made in third reading. If this motion carries it would take a two-thirds vote to do anything in third reading to change this article.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information, Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I understood and I believe some others of us understood that the committee meeting tomorrow was so that we could get together with representatives of Style and Drafting to try to ease out some of these matters expeditiously without doing it from the floor.

KILCHER: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilchcr, your point of information.

KILCHER: As the situation appears now that last motion that carried, will that still leave this amendable for phraseology on a majority?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Not as the Chair sees it -- if it goes to third reading. The motion has not carried yet. If this motion carries, in order to make any change whatsoever to the article, as the Chair views the rules, it would take a two-thirds vote to send it back for specific amendment, even if it was a phraseology amendment.

KILCHER: If the vote does not carry, then tomorrow we could make --

PRESIDENT EGAN: You could make phraseology amendments with a majority vote, in the opinion of the Chair. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and the article on preamble and declaration of rights be advanced to third reading and placed on final passage?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Boswell, Cross, Doogan, Gray, Harris, Johnson, King, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, Metcalf, Nolan, Riley, Robertson, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh.

Nays: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 37 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed suspension has not been adopted. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I move we have a 15-minute recess to allow the Bill of Rights Committee to meet.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves, seconded by Mr. Doogan, that --

V. FISCHER: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the Convention have a 15-minute recess in order to allow the Bill of Rights Committee to meet. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Before that question is put, Mr. President--

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is not debatable.

TAYLOR: I would like to ask of the Chairman of the Administration Committee if any arrangement has been made for a change in the bus coming out and picking up the delegates?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: No, there hasn't, Mr. President, but as soon as I get the schedule here from my able assistant -- the next bus will leave the University at 6:50 tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess for 15 minutes in order that the Bill of Rights Committee may meet?" All those in favor of recessing for 15 minutes will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention is at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Sergeant at Arms will inform the delegates that the Convention has come to order. The Chair would like to inform the delegates that the Chief Clerk had sent a note up to the President, and the President did not turn the note over, and it was after business had been done, following the original first motion for adjournment, and the note said that the actual vote instead of being 27 to 27 had been 28 in favor and 26 opposed. However, it was one of those things where something had been done that could not be undone because we had proceeded with the business of the Convention, but the Chair would like to correct that matter for the record. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I would like to have a few minutes on personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hinckel, you may have the floor on personal privilege.

(Mr. Hinckel spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I speak on the matter of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg, you may.

(Mr. Sundborg spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I think maybe it would speed up matters a little if I made a report as to what your committee did during the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Miss Awes, you may make a report as to what your committee did during the recess.

AWES: All members of the Bill of Rights Committee were present and there were also three members of the Style and Drafting Committee, and in addition to that, one member of our committee is also a member of Style and Drafting Committee. Several individual members brought up several suggested changes in style and drafting which we discussed. I think there were two made, and in both cases the committee decided not to make any recommendations on the floor. Then, when it was time to convene again, a motion was made as to style and drafting, that the committee accept the proposal as brought out by Style and Drafting and that proposal, or that motion, I should say, was adopted by a vote of four to two, so as to style and drafting, the committee is not going to make any amendments. Of course, any amendments that are made by individual members will be made by them as individuals rather than as this committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees, you had been attempting to get the floor.

MCNEES: I was just going to repeat some of the remarks that Mr. Hinckel made, and the only reason I hadn't made them earlier was that I was going to reserve that until tomorrow -- I will not take the floor session tonight, I will reserve the remarks for tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us the article on preamble and declaration of rights. That has not yet been referred. Mr. Sundborg, its status right now is that it is still before us, is that right? It has been accepted.

SUNDBORG: As far as we are concerned, Mr. President, we are all through with it, but it is still before the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed amendments to the preamble of this proposal? Or, I mean, are there proposed amendments to phraseology to the preamble of this proposal? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Before we send this on I would like to ask the chairman of the substantive committee a question because I want the answer read into the record. Miss Awes, in Section 18, where we speak of suits at common law, on line 6 and on line 12, does the Committee mean "suits at law" as distinguished from "suits in equity"?

AWES: I think perhaps the best way to answer that is to say that Section 11 dealt with criminal suits, and then Section 18 we wanted to refer to civil suits as opposed to criminal suits, and by "common law" we mean just those suits that you are entitled to a jury at common law, so, as a matter of fact, it would be law as opposed to equity because at the common law you never were entitled to a jury in equity.

V. RIVERS: You are aware that the common law in Alaska in several matters is only retained insofar as it is not in conflict with the rules of civil procedure, notwithstanding that, when you say "at common law", you mean any civil case in which a person would be entitled to a jury. Is that what you mean?

AWES: That is right.

V. RIVERS: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any proposed amendments to the preamble? Mr. White.

WHITE: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the preamble in Style and Drafting report and reinsert the preamble from the first enrolled copy."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, what is your pleasure?

WHITE: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

TAYLOR: I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe the first preamble has been stricken and this one put in. I think it would be out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, Mr. White's motion, as the Chair heard it, states that the preamble as it appeared in the enrolled copy, would be the exact preamble as it left the Convention to go to the Style and Drafting Committee. Is that not correct, Mr. White?

WHITE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then the amendment would be in order and it would be only an amendment of phraseology. Is there a second to Mr. White's motion?

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Metcalf. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I will not take much time on this. I just feel that the preamble as it left the floor in second reading had received a thorough and detailed consideration of a large number of the delegates, I forget how many names were appended to that preamble -- it was a good preamble and I particularly am unhappy to see the deletion of the words "reaffirm our belief in government by consent of the governed within the Union of States." I think that has point and pertinence in our preamble of the constitution of the State of Alaska at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: It would seem to me that if that is the only reason that Mr. White would want this original preamble or the enrolled copy to be back, that he should move to insert those words into this. I think there is evidently some other reasons why he doesn't like the reshifting or the work of the Style and Drafting. That is my opinion and I think that with their inserting this down below that Style and Drafting has taken care of the work in fine order. If it is a matter of just that one phrase, "reaffirm our belief in government by consent of the governed", that could be inserted in place here in the Style and Drafting copy, but I can't see that they have done any harm to the preamble.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I rise to, I believe, a point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

RILEY: Whichever thinking goes in, or is agreeable to the body, it will have to be under specific suspension of the rules, suspension of the rules for a specific amendment, and if Mr. Londborg sees fit to seek to amend an amendment he will have to proceed in the same manner that the amendment is --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Not as to phraseology, Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I believe this goes beyond phraseology, does it not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, in the opinion of the Chair, if Mr. White's amendment does not add anything that was not in the original preamble, it couldn't be a change in -- a substantive change.

RILEY: Even apart from that, Mr. Londborg, I believe, should seek to amend the amendment, rather than discuss at random what the approach might be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You probably have a point there, Mr. Riley. Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: One of the things that I spoke on before, that 55 delegates or thereabouts, -- I think we were pretty near all here at the time this preamble was decided upon. It was argued at length on the floor -- there was a lot of thought given to it. It doesn't even resemble the same preamble now. I think Mr. White is right in asking that the original preamble as written and amended and discussed on the floor here by the delegates of the Convention should be used and not just changed over to suit the will of a small group.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes has been attempting to get the floor. Miss Awes.

AWES: I will vote against Mr. White's amendment. I think I voted against adoption of the preamble as shown in the enrolled copy when it was presented. Mr. White says that the preamble shown in the enrolled copy was duly considered in being drawn up, and Mr. Hinckel says it was considered on the floor. Well, I suppose that is true, but that is true of everything that is adopted, but it still goes to the Style and Drafting Committee, and I personally think that the Style and Drafting Committee has considerably improved the preamble. I think it reads much more smoothly, I think it still embodies the thought. If there is a certain phrase left out that Mr. White disapproves of, then like Mr. Londborg, I suggest that he amend to that phrase, but I don't think that it is right to just say let's throw out the work of the Style and Drafting Committee and go back to what we had before. The thing to me is a question of information, if we went back to the preamble that we had before, then wouldn't it go back to Style and Drafting again, and what would they do with it then?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross.

CROSS: It seems to me Style and Drafting has done an excellent job here, and I would like a chance for the body to adopt it as it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to the proposed preamble or to Section 1? Are there amendments to be proposed for Section 2? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Chairman, this is the only amendment that I am going to make.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it an amendment of substance, Mr. Hellenthal, or phraseology?

HELLENTHAL: No. No, it is an amendment of phraseology -- at least that seems to be the consensus of opinion. I could see on these matters where unanimity would be quite difficult. I regard it though as a matter strictly of style and that is the way that Style and Drafting must have regarded it, or they wouldn't have made it. I move that Section 2 in the committee report be deleted and Section 2 of the enrolled copy be inserted in its place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves that Section 2 of the committee report be deleted and Section 2 of the enrolled copy be inserted in its place. It has been seconded by whom?

BUCKALEW: I seconded it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seconded the motion.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked.

DOOGAN: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I make this motion. I realize it is a matter of style, but style is rather important or we wouldn't have these committees on style, and I am familiar with the words "government is derived from the consent of the governed," and the word "derived" is sometimes used in our constitution, and I believe it was used in the Declaration of Independence, and I have studied the bills of rights of the 48 states, and I like to encourage novelty, but, at the same time, I am not familiar with this usage, "Government derives from the consent of the governed". I have never heard it before in any constitution. I have never heard it in common language before. It is a word -- I think that you just fall all over it when you read it. Now the language that was originally adopted by this body and which I think is stirring language and good language -- brief and it is excellent -- "All political power is inherent in the people. All government originates with the people, is founded upon their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the people as a whole." That is the kind of language that sounds good. That is the kind of language I would like to explain to my son, but I don't want to go and tell him, "Son, government derives from the consent of the governed."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I will be brief and frank and tell you my position on this. Mr. Hellenthal said this was the only amendment he was going to offer. He is an honorable man, I relied on him, I seconded it, and I would like to get Mr. Hellenthal's language in there, and he can play the Battle Hymn of the Republic and he can read it to his boy.
(Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I am on the Committee, and I too don't want to take up time at this late hour, but I do hope, because it is late, that the body won't pass this over hurriedly because actually this Section 2, our platitudes were put in there, the thought of the Committee was a nice sounding thing, and I say this without any criticism of Style and Drafting in having some recognition of their work, but if the language as proposed of the government deriving something, if that is to be left in, then I would much prefer that we would strike out Section 2 entirely because it is a platitude, and if we are going to have that in the constitution, something for the people to read -- I don't know whether my boys will ever read it or not -- but on the other hand, others might read it. I like the words there, the words that "the government originates with the people."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, you've had the floor, have you not?

AWES: This is one of the things that the Committee decided not to take official action on, but speaking as an individual, I also intend to vote for Mr. Hellenthal's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Having received the assurance that Mr. Hellenthal will not be heard again on the article, I am prepared to desert the Style and Drafting Committee and vote in favor of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I hope Mr. Hellenthal is heard from again, and I am going to vote for this motion of his right now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of Mr. Hellenthal's amendment.

NORDALE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Mr. President, I feel the same thing, that Mr. Hellenthal should be heard from any time that we can. He comes up with a lot of constructive ideas.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I will go further than Mr. McLaughlin did, Mr. President. I deserted the Style and Drafting and some of their work two or three days ago. I feel this is an issue that we are going to have to face up to sooner or later, and I intend to be heard from again on this subject. I am going to support Mr. Hellenthal's amendment here, primarily because I know this floor spent hours, at times, debating some of these subjects and at a time when we had months left. We now have less than weeks left, and I don't like to see it hurried through in minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Davis, you have the floor on a point of personal privilege.

(Mr. Davis spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

(Mr. McCutcheon spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I should like to withdraw my amendment rather than raise what I consider to be a false issue as has been raised by the last speaker.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?"

HELLENTHAL: I ask permission to withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent?

HELLENTHAL: I think the harmony of this group is...

POULSEN: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard to the unanimous censent request. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?"

JOHNSON: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Emberg, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, White, Wien.

Nays: 27 - Armstrong, Coghill, Cross, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 27 nays, 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I wish now to announce a reconsideration of my vote at the next plenary session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did Mr. McNealy vote "no"?

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. McNealy voted "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then Mr. McNealy serves notice of a reconsideration of his vote on this amendment. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I have an amendment to Section 3, Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf may offer his proposed amendment to Section 3. Mr. Metcalf, is it a substantive amendment?

METCALF: Change back to the original section in the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for about three minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may read the amendment proposed by Mr. Metcalf.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 3 of the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting and insert in lieu thereof Section 3 of the enrolled copy."

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I move for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

BARR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr seconds the motion.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Metcalf be adopted by the Convention?"

MCNEALY: May we have a roll call, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 18 - Barr, Collins, Cooper, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Kilcher, Laws, McNees, Metcalf, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Taylor, White, Wien.

Nays: 36 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill,

Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, V. Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk is tallying the ballot.

CHIEF CLERK: 18 yeas, 36 nays and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I wish to give notice at this time of my reconsideration on this vote at the next session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy serves notice of his reconsideration on his vote on the amendment. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I move and ask unanimous consent that we adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow.

LONDBORG: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to the motion?

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow?" All those in favor of adjourning until 1:30 tomorrow will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "nays" have it and the Convention is still in session. Are there amendments, other amendments to be offered? Mr. Barr.

BARR: May I have the privilege of the floor for one minute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may if there is no objection. Mr. Barr.

(Mr. Barr spoke on a matter of privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to the article?

TAYLOR: Other than the fact Mr. McNealy moved his reconsideration at this time --

PRESIDENT EGAN: He served notice of reconsidering his vote which holds it over until tomorrow on this amendment, Mr. Taylor. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Point of inquiry. Are there other amendments to the article or to the section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The sections other than those we have considered so far, beginning with Section 4, I believe it is.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I don't have it written out, but to save time, I move to substitute the words from the enrolled copy, taking the Committee copy of Section 18, and from Section 13 of the enrolled copy, the last words in the line, the last words are "in a common law suit", and I propose that the wording of the enrolled copy "in civil causes" be substituted for "in a common law suit".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could you write that amendment out, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: Yes, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease, not at recess. The Chair would like to announce that the temperature is now about 40 degrees below, and, if the delegates have their cars out there, they probably should start them in order that they will start. There has been a sudden drop in the temperature - outside. (Laughter) The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I move that the rules be suspended and that we take up Mr. McNealy's reconsideration on his vote on the Metcalf amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves -- Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: Point of order, Mr. President. Under a point of order --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I wish to state -- Mrs. Sweeney got to the floor before I did, but the point is that I would like to state this, if Mrs. Sweeney will withdraw her motion, it is my intention to at this time ask to have Section 2, the reconsideration at this time, and then I will ask unanimous consent to withdraw my motion for reconsideration on the implementing section and will also ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment I proposed to Section 18.

SWEENEY: I will withdraw my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves that his reconsideration of his vote on Section 2 be placed before the Convention at this time. Is there a second to the motion?

SUNDBORG: Point of order. I simply want to inquire, inasmuch as we have a motion before us, is Mr. McNealy's motion in order? There was a motion by Mr. McNealy to amend a different section. It had been seconded and --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent to withdraw that motion, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY? I hadn't moved the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It hadn't been read? Is there a second to Mr. McNealy's amendment? It will take a two-thirds vote to consider the reconsideration at this time. Is there objection to the suspension of the rules in order that the reconsideration can be taken at this time? Hearing no objection, then the rules have been suspended and the question before us then, on the motion -- Mrs. Sweeney? The rules have been suspended.

SWEENEY: All right, but what I want to know now is, is it a simple majority since --

PRESIDENT EGAN: The rules have been suspended --

SWEENEY: I mean on the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And it will be a simple majority on the question, that is true, Mrs. Sweeney. Mr. McNealy has moved that the reconsideration take place at this time. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will please read that proposed amendment. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, before the vote is taken on this I would like to explain my vote. I intend to vote for the enrolled copy, not because I have anything against our Committee on Style and Drafting; I think they have been doing a wonderful job. But it so happens that Section 2 in the enrolled copy appeals to me more than Section 2 in the other one, and I am not voting on the fact that it might be good style or good drafting. I am a simple country boy and I am voting for what appeals to me. So, I don't want my vote to be construed as being a vote against the Committee, I think they have done a wonderful job.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Likewise, Mr. President, I am going to vote for the amendment not as a vote of nonconfidence to the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I believe that I should mention, too, that in this I have given a little sober and serious consideration to the Section 3 I moved to reconsider on, and I am of the opinion now that the language satisfies my thought there, and so I am going to withdraw that, but I do feel like this, that while I have respect and I have said nothing derogatory or even by implication to any of the Style and Drafting Committee, but like Mr. Harris ably expressed it, I like the language a little better in that section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I hope that each and all of the delegates will vote on this motion according to what they think should go in the constitution, not to show confidence in the Committee or lack of confidence in the Committee. Vote according to your convictions on this motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 34 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, White, Wien.

Nays: 19 - Coghill, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - R. Rivers, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 34 yeas, 19 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: At this time I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that I might withdraw my notice of reconsideration to Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves and asks unanimous consent that he be allowed to withdraw his notice of reconsideration on the amendment to Section 3. Is there objection?

BARR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy so moves. Is there a second to the motion?

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan -- Mr. White?

WHITE: I just wanted to object for a question, Mr. President. The reason I voted previously to return to the original language was because I was impressed by the arguments of some of the committee members that, if I understood them correctly, the deletion of the words "enjoyment of" weakened the section. I would like to ask Mr. McNealy if that is the point he has been satisfied on through further consideration. Is it, in your opinion, the section now as strong as it was previously?

MCNEALY: You are referring now to Section 3?

WHITE: Yes, I am.

MCNEALY: Well, I find myself in the position hard to support my own motion. I believe I can answer the question this way. The only reason that I moved to reconsider there was because of the fact that we had a colored lady appear before the Committee here and asking for very strong language and quite lengthy language, and to avoid the lengthy language we attempted to spell out -- we didn't attempt -- we did spell out the correct wording for directing the legislature there. I don't like the way it ended up with the "herewith" on it, but nevertheless we thought it made it a little bit stronger language for the parties interested, especially in civil rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to give notice of my intention to ask that we rescind our action on Mr. Barrie White's amendment taken this evening, and ask that my notice be entered on the minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Which amendment was it?

V. RIVERS: It has to do with the replacement of the original enrolled preamble.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That motion did not carry, did it, Mr. White?

CHIEF CLERK: No, it did not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have a motion before us at this time, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I just gave notice, Mr. President. I am not making a motion, I asked that it be entered on the minutes. I will bring it up tomorrow.

WHITE: I don't know if I was the only one that objected to Mr. McNealy's motion or not. Anyway, I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr had also objected. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I believe that the original wording was very good, but I especially object to the word "implement". The only thing it does is to shorten that sentence, but it does a lot of other things to it. That word "implement", regardless of whether it has been in long legal usage or not, it came into general use some time during the war when we frequently found that in long verbose government directives, in the middle of a sentence that was a page long, written by some new bureaucrat who had gone into government service, and they always seemed to use it when they couldn't think of any other words to use. I do not think it is the right kind of word to use in the constitution. Constitutions should be clear and simple, something that everybody could read, know what it means, and sounds good to them, and I prefer to go back to the original wording on that last sentence of the section, not because it is a little longer, but because it is simple and clear. I don't believe that word "implement" has any place here at all. There are a lot of other like words such as this "and/or" which has no place in the English language, but people who like to appear learned use it when some other shorter word could do it as well. Therefore, my principal objection to this present wording of the section is on account of the word "implement", and I will go along on the original wording of the first sentence also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I speak further on this section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may. You can speak to the motion as to whether or not to allow Mr. McNealy to withdraw his notice, and in doing so you, of necessity, have to speak to the section.

METCALF: I feel like Mr. Barr, that this section here should be clear and simple for eighth-grade civics students. I prefer the original section in the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will take a two-thirds vote, it seems to the Chair, to order the withdrawal of the notice of reconsideration inasmuch as objection was heard. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I think that the Style and Drafting has done a very good job on this particular section. I was the one that raised the question on "implement", and all I was seeking was to get a legal definition of the word "implement" as to uses in law. After looking it up in the dictionary and asking some of the learned attorneys of our group, we find that the word "implement" is used very extensively in defining treaties and other governmental documents. I think that it is very fitting and very fine the way Style and Drafting came out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I feel apologetic to have to get up and speak on this, but my objection is to the word "denied" as to the words "denied the enjoyment of". "Denied" to me means -- I get this feeling and sense from this: "denied the minimum of civil and political right". When I read the enrolled copy it says "denied the enjoyment" which to me means the full enjoyment. I would like to have this be reconsidered properly; "denied the enjoyment" which to me would give any and all the full right, the full enjoyment. Leaving the word "enjoyment" out of Section 3 as it now appears to me is only offering the very minimum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, may I speak on behalf of the subcommittee that put this word in there. Referring to both these sections, I am sure if the subcommittee had known there was as much antipathy towards the use of these words, they would not have used them. As I say, our only recourse was to the Committee, and evidently we didn't understand the reaction of the Committee. Speaking for myself as one of the three, I certainly don't think it is going to kill the constitution one way or another whether this is in there or not in there, and I sincerely regret that we have caused all of this difficulty. Had we known we were going to cause it, I am sure that we would not have made the changes because we didn't feel they were substantive changes, we felt that, perhaps, stated a little more clearly. We were not on the committee, we did not have the benefit of all the arguments, and therefore we were not as well prepared as the Committee was, but I think the matters are relatively insignificant, and I for one have no objection to either reconsidering or not reconsidering this motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to ask a question. We have been debating here now for about 15 or 20 minutes whether Mr. McNealy should be allowed to withdraw his motion for reconsideration. I was just wondering, do we accomplish anything by it, because if we force him to let it stand, he is the only one that can exercise that option tomorrow, isn't he, so if he doesn't want to reconsider, he still doesn't have to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, that would not be quite correct. Any other delegate could move the reconsideration. It is not the Chair's understanding of rules governing reconsideration that it is only the person who serves the notice. After he has served the notice, any other delegate may move before adjournment tomorrow. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I agree with Miss Awes that we are wasting a lot of time on something of no importance whatsoever. I would like to ask unanimous consent of the Convention at this time to let Mr. McNealy's motion for reconsideration be put right here and now, and I will waive -- as far as I am concerned, I would like to have unanimous consent that we waive the two-thirds rule so it can be handled on a simple majority.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent that we do reconsider the vote on the particular amendment at this time. Do you object, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: I have no objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection then, the motion to withdraw has been superseded by a unanimous consent motion or act of the Convention to reconsider the vote on the amendment offered by Mr. Metcalf at this time. And the question is -- then the rules have been suspended and the question is, "Shall Mr. Metcalf's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will read that proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 3 and insert Section 3 of the enrolled copy."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: You meant Mr. McNealy, did you not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, Mr. Metcalf offered the amendment, as the Chair recalls it, Mr. Davis. Is that correct?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann:

HERMANN: Isn't the vote on whether Mr. McNealy may withdraw his --

PRESIDENT EGAN: No. By unanimous consent, which is a complete suspension of the rules, Mrs. Hermann, by unanimous consent and without objection, including no objection from Mr. McNealy, we suspended the rules in order that the reconsideration of the vote on Section 3 may come before us at this time. That suspension of the rules allowed the reconsideration and placed before us the original question. The question is, "Shall Mr. Metcalf's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I wish to abstain from voting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann wishes to abstain from voting. If there is no objection, Mrs. Hermann, you may abstain. The question is on the adoption of Mr. Metcalf's amendment proposing to delete Section 3 and insert the Section 3 that appeared in the enrolled copy of the article. The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the adoption of the amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 19 - Armstrong, Barr, Collins, Cooper, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Wien.

Nays: 34 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hilscher, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.

Abstaining: 1 - Hermann.)

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote from "no" to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley changes his vote from "no" to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 19 yeas, 34 nays, 1 absent, and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, at this time I move that the Convention discharge its Committee on Style and Drafting and appoint a new committee so that the business of the Convention may go forward.

JOHNSON: I will second that motion.

BARR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Chair will hold that such a motion is out of order.

DAVIS: May I explain? Normally, I would have to speak on the motion afterwards. May I give my reason? Mr. President, it is obvious to me that the Committee has not the confidence of very nearly 50 per cent of this Convention. Under those circumstances it is going to be impossible to do any business. We have a very short time to complete the business of this Convention. So far as I personally am concerned, I do not wish to be responsible for acting as a member of Style and Drafting if Style and Drafting has nothing to do, and it is obvious that many, many people here feel that that is the case. Now, I don't mean to say that people should not vote their convictions. I said that a while ago and I meant every word of it, but I am thinking of the fact that it is entirely clear here that many people feel that Style and Drafting is going too far with their work, and it is equally clear that anything that is done from here on out is going to be continually harassed with amendments by people who feel that the language that they used first was much better than the language finally used. And for that reason, it would be much better for everybody concerned that this Committee be discharged and a new committee be appointed, a committee in which the Convention can have complete confidence, so that we can go ahead and get the job done and get this constitution written.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to speak. I am Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee that drew up this original proposal. So far as I know, this is the first proposal to which amendments of this type have been proposed in such a wholesale order. I don't pretend to know the reason for it. The Committee as a committee made no such amendments. I, as a person, have confidence in the Style and Drafting Committee. I think they are doing a good job. Like the rest of the committees, they are not infallible. I voted in favor of Mr. Hellenthal's amendment. It is the only amendment of that type that I have voted for so far, and it is the only amendment of that type that I am going to vote for on the bill of rights proposal -- I can't say anything about the others coming up. But I do think it is going to be impossible to have a constitution unless the Style and Drafting Committee continues its work; and I think that we have some of the most competent people at the Convention on that Committee; and I think that they have shown their competence in what they have done so far; and, if such a motion as Mr. Davis has proposed comes to a vote, I think that the Convention should use it as a means of giving a vote of confidence to the Style and Drafting Committee, and I think we should stop and hesitate a long time before we continue to make motions such as we have made this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I think that all of the committees have had to stand on this floor and defend their best efforts and their best thinking. Now I personally believe that this motion is not a motion that is in order. We all have to stand up and take the final agreement of 55 members of this body and I for one feel that we have all been subjected to the same thing, and we have all had to accept at times certain revisions in our thinking, and I feel that this bill of rights is one of the highly controversial issues and was worked on thoroughly on the floor. There are strong convictions on it. I feel this is the one exception perhaps to the time in which the Style and Drafting may perhaps, have their final judgment questioned. I don't think that in the final analysis, however, that the motion should be entertained by the body or voted on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: It doesn't make any difference to me, one way or the other, as to whether our final judgment is upheld or whether it isn't. That isn't important. After all, we are perfectly capable of standing up here and taking all the slings and arrows that anybody can throw. Of course, the other committees did that and we should too. The point is that we have got to get ahead here. Now, in the last two hours, we have considered the preamble; we had a motion to strike it; we voted it down by a rather close margin; we have considered one, two, three other sections of the bill of rights. Of those, at least two, I think all three, have had motions to strike the Committee's work and to replace it with the original as it went off the floor. On those, the votes have been close. Two of them have had votes of reconsideration. The matter of the preamble has a reconsideration. Those things all have to be taken care of, and as long as that is going on we can't move. The point I am trying to make is that if we are not doing what the Convention wants, it is time for us to step down and let somebody else do what the Convention does want.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I don't think we should get too excited about it. I was on this Committee, and the Style and Drafting Committee called Miss Awes and they tried to get ahold of other members of the Committee, and probably we consented to things that we should have talked to other members of the Committee on, but I have seen occasions, when I was on the Bill of Rights Committee, and I think that two tigers in a rain barrel would have probably gotten along better than John Hellenthal and Buckalew at one time or another during the course of some of our debates. We have been working hard and our nerves are a little shattered and we're getting tired, and things sort of disagree with us a little, but I think that is the cause of this whole furor, and I don't think it is any lack of confidence on the part of anybody in this Convention. It is just one of those things that go with too much work and too much heat. We will probably get a little more excited as we go along, but we are going to get finished, and I don't think that there is anybody that has lost any confidence in Ed Davis or anybody that are members of his Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Is a motion to adjourn in order?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is in order, but the Chair would state again that the motion as made by Mr. Davis is not in order. The Committee on Style and Drafting is a permanent committee of this Convention. And a motion to adjourn is in order.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I move that we adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves that the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow. Is there a second?

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

DAVIS: I wonder if I could ask Mr. McLaughlin to hold his motion for one minute. This has nothing to do with the present matter. I would like to ask, Mr. President, that the Style and Drafting Committee be allowed to make substantive changes in Section 18 of this bill of rights article, and I think that I can guarantee that we will come out with something that people can agree on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Davis's unanimous consent request. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and you have that authority, Mr. Davis. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, before we act on the matter of adjournment we should arrange something about transportation -- a show of hands as to who has cars and how many can go with those cars. We will have to order out cabs and that will take about 15 minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would those delegates hold their hands up who need transportation? Does everyone have their hands up that need a cab? (A count was taken of those having cars, and those needing cabs.)

METCALF: May I make a motion that Mr. Davis's motion be postponed until February 5. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the motion has been carried and is ordered adopted. If there is no objection the Convention will stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 26, 1956

SIXTY-FIFTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have with us today Reverend Shepperd of the First Church of the Nazarene. Reverend Shepperd will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND SHEPPERD: Our Heavenly Father, we pause to give Thee grateful thanks for these men and these women, the framers of the constitution for the future State of Alaska. We thank Thee, our Father, for all their abundant labors, their selfless interests and devotion to duty they have felt and answered and especially for those aims for which they have labored, many of which have been realized as of this good day. Recognizing, O Lord, that all good government is ordained of God, we would pray Thy blessings upon this group as they come to the consummation of this great document and indeed upon the document itself, that it may find recognition among those in positions of high authority, that we may take our proper place as a sister state among those in our great republic of which we may be justly proud and for which we give Thee grateful thanks and thus we pray Thy blessings on these men and these women in the days ahead and indeed that all mankind may be vitally interested in perpetuating good government. This we pray. In the Lord's name we pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Eight absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. The Chair would like to introduce to the delegates Marguerite Pederson who is here taking stenotype notes with no expense to the Convention and for her own pleasure. We are happy to have you with us, Mrs. Pederson. The Chair also notes in the gallery, the seventh grade of the Main School of the Fairbanks public school system. We are very happy to have you with us this afternoon and hope you enjoy the proceedings. Does the special committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: Mr. President, I would like a continuation of that report later in the day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That report will be held until later in the day. Are there communications or petitions from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Reports from special committees? Are there any motions or resolutions to come before the Convention? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that the prayer by the chaplain today be spread upon the journal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that today's prayer by the chaplain be spread upon the journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Is there any unfinished business? If not, we have before us Committee Proposal No. 17/a. I believe your calendar will show Committee Proposal No. 16, but that is in error. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I believe the first order of business is to take up the reconsideration notice as served by Mr. Harris.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan, you are correct. That was set over as the first order of business.

CHIEF CLERK: That is what that is -- 17/a is the -- PRESIDENT EGAN: Is Mr. Harris here? (Mr. Harris was not present.) If there is no objection, that matter will be held in abeyance until Mr. Harris arrives. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: If 17/a is before us, I have an amendment on the clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, it was before us for the reason that we had decided unanimously to take Mr. Harris' reconsideration up as the first order of business. Inasmuch as Mr. Harris is not here at this time, we might hold it if it is agreeable.

R. RIVERS: What I have to offer will come up, then, when 17/a is brought back?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will, yes, Mr. Rivers. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege for about 60 seconds.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hilscher, you may have the floor on personal privilege.

(Mr. Hilscher spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does everyone have the election district schedule before them? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENENTHAL: Mr. President, before the reading of the election district schedule --

DOOGAN: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: If I recall correctly, we have the bill of rights before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the way the calendar is set up at the present moment -- Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: The Style and Drafting Committee requested that this matter go ahead of finishing the bill of rights for the reason that acceptance of this report, or second reading of this report, will affect another report the Style and Drafting Committee wants to make later in the day or tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection -- Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Before the reading begins, on behalf of Committee No. VI, I ask unanimous consent that the descriptions which will be read, that in the description for Election Districts 20 and 21, the word "Kuparuk" be substituted for the word "Toolik". That is K-u-p-a-r-u-k.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Which one is that?

HELLENTHAL: In descriptions for Election Districts 20 and 21, "Kuparuk" be substituted for the word "Toolik". The word "Toolik" is T-o-o-l-i-k. In other words, strike "Toolik" in both descriptions and substitute "Kuparuk".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Walsh.

WALSH: This is on page 8 and it carries over to page 9.

HELLENTHAL: Both changes are on page 8 of the district descriptions. This change merely ties the boundary in with the tributary. The Toolik is apparently a tributary of the Kuparuk, and the designation should have been "Kuparuk". It does not alter the boundary at all. Then the next and last change is in Election District No. 2. That would be on the first page of the description, the Ketchikan Election District on the first page of the description, which is page 2 of the paper. Now here we strike the following words: "Clarence Strait and Ernest Sound". They appear in the second and third lines of the description. Strike the words "Clarence Strait and Ernest Sound" and substitute these words for them? "Burroughs Bay and the east side of Clarence Strait". I will repeat: B-u-r-r-o-u-g-h-s, "Burroughs Bay and the east side of Clarence Strait"; and then a little further on in the same section, strike the words "that area drained by Bradfield Canal and its tributaries". I will repeat: strike the words "that area drained by Bradfield Canal and its tributaries" and substitute "Lemesurier Point"; and I will spell Lemesurier. It is L-e-m-e-s-u-r-i-e-r. And this change--

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Is that Lemesurier Island?

HELLENTHAL: Lemesurier Point. Now these changes in Election District No. 2 merely make the line that was on the map conform to the actual reality. They were prompted by an observation made by Senator Nolan, checked by the Bureau of Mines people. They are no deviations from the lines that were shown on the map that was before you when the matter was discussed. Now, in connection again with this report, there are spelling errors in the description and I ask that those errors be brought to Mr. Sundborg's attention. He has a list of most of them already, and I think that you can do it informally, rather than from the floor, to save time, and it will be checked then by Mr. Sundborg with the atlases to be sure that the spelling is correct. It will not be overlooked, in any event, so I make the following motion: that I have described here and ask unanimous consent that those changes be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That they become a part of the report of the Committee? Is that correct, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to that unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the amendments are ordered adopted to become a part of the committee proposal. Has this schedule been read? The Chief Clerk will please read the proposal for the second time.

CHIEF CLERK: The first page has been read; it is just the description.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Please read the description.

(The Chief Clerk then read Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 14, Schedule, Election Districts, for the second time. Section 2 had been read previously.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed changes to Section 1 of this schedule? If not, are there proposed changes for the description, the No. 1 District? The No. 2 District? To the No. 3 District? To the No. 4 District? Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: I suggest that a check be made on page 3 at the end of line 1. I believe that must be K-r-u-z-o-f instead of -g-o-f.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that right, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: I think it is, Mr. Stewart, and I think it is one of the points Mr. Sundborg has a note on, but I will make sure that it is checked.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions or suggested changes for No. 5? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, for purposes of the record, I would like to ask whether or not it is the understanding that Stephens Passage extends southward to a line drawn from Cape Fanshaw across to Pybus Bay? I have been assured by several individual delegates that it does, but it has not been my understanding of local geography.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would like to refer that to Mr. Gray, who is far more qualified to answer that than I am.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Yes. Generally that is quite true. You have two sounds; you have Chatham Straits on the north and you have Frederick Sound on the bottom, and Stephens Passage is the inlet from Chatham to Frederick Sound. Now Cape Fanshaw is an actual point; you can call that a division. Now, on the other side, if you follow over there where the territory is rounded, just where is the dividing line is very hard to say, but Pyhus Bay looks to me to be more a part of Frederick Sound. Above Pyhus Bay -- Gambier bay, and so on is definitely a part of Stephens Passage. And I believe that that follows pretty much. The Pyhus Bay people are all Petersburg people, and there used to be a few farms, but I don't believe there is anybody there now. In the north, Point Retreat is definitely the break-off between Stephens Passage and Chatham Strait or Lynn Canal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I'd like to ask another question. It says, "...including Douglas and Shelter Islands and other smaller adjacent islands". There is quite a group of islands in there, in Lynn Canal, including Cohen Island and Benjamin Island. Benjamin Island is quite a distance north of Shelter Island. The few people residing on Benjamin Island, I think, come into Juneau for trading purposes and various business purposes, but I don't know whether you would call Benjamin Island adjacent to Shelter Island or not. It is quite a distance up there. Is that the idea -- that Benjamin Island should be included with these other smaller adjacent islands?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: When you get to Benjamin Island, it gets to be a point one way or the other. Now, actually, it is getting to be like Livengood -- which one does it belong to? We have a few -- not a few -- there probably are a great many cases where it is a question, but I am really not too concerned about the particular Benjamin Island. There is the reapportionment board, and if there are any individuals there, they can request the reapportionment board to place them in one district or the other. In general, I would say Benjamin Island falls in the other district -- the Yakutat-Icy Bay-Lynn Canal District -- that is, everything above Berners Bay. Everything below Berners Bay would fall into the Juneau district, but everything above Berners Bay would fall in the other district -- just in general.

ROBERTSON: I might say, Mr. President, I feel quite sure Benjamin Island is in the voting precinct within the Juneau recording district at the present time.

GRAY: Could be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. President, one other small item -- I notice Berners Bay is spelled B-u-r-n-e-r-s. It is B-e-r-n-e-r-s.

HELLENTHAL: I believe Mr. Sundborg has it on his list. Also, Mr. Sundborg, do you have a "z" in Kruzof in the description for No. 4?

SUNDBORG: Yes, Mr. Hellenenthal. it is Kruzof Island on page 3, and Berners Bay; and farther down on that page, Yakobi should be spelled with an "a" -- Y-a-k-o-b-i, the next to last line in Election District No. 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: May I direct a question to Mr. Gray?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. Gray, don't you think that, perhaps, in order to avoid confusion that might arise, to put the idea of a line being drawn from Cape Fanshaw to Pyhus Bay, if you think that would encompass the area you mean here, because I know Frederick Sound has no definite boundaries, and it is going to be awfully indefinite if we leave it in this manner.

GRAY: Well, now, that can very well be done. How many people do you think it would affect?

LEE: Well, at the present time, it wouldn't affect more than four or five people, that is all, Mr. Gray. I mean, for a matter of a definite boundary, because Frederick Sound will eventually have to be identified with certain boundaries. At the present time, it isn't.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Rosswog had a question of a technical nature as to the location of a boundary with regard to the Chitina matter. Chitina is included in District No. 8, and there is no question about that, but it is of the location of the actual boundaries, purely a geographical matter; and perhaps we could consider this when we consider Mr. Rosswog's problem. He is over now with these geographers checking on it, and I suggest that we take up that matter of the line at the same time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: I have a question in regard to Section 7. Is that, on the second line, C-h-i-t-n-a? It is that way on my copy. I wonder if that shouldn't be Chitina?

HELLENTHAL: Chitina is correct, Mr. Stewart. That is my understanding of it, but the name is used in both senses on the maps. The maps are not uniform like in many other cases in Alaska with local names, but we are going to check it with whatever official designation of names and areas the geographers come up with.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Sections 5, or 6, or 7, or 8? Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I believe the Committee should also check on the spelling of the Chokosna and the Gilahina. I think that should be Chokotna. I don't think there should be any "s". And I don't think there is any "a" in the Gilahina. It might be a typographical error, or it might be that the geography is different from the accepted spelling in that part of the country.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee will look into that. Are there questions or suggested changes for No. 9? For District No. 10? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, you passed No. 9 and I was busy. May I ask Mr. Hellenenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. Hellenenthal, I looked this over the first time, and my thinking that it included the former Talkeetna, Palmer, and Wasilla recording districts, and I had some conversation with you regarding that, and you said that that was true, but that they were subject to change, but I didn't pay too much attention to it from then on out, but I notice now that there is a whole area that is excluded by this description, which would be on the area that drains into the Knik River from the north, above the highway bridge. This stops at the highway bridge and leaves it in sort of a no man's land in there. Would it be possible for me to offer an amendment at the end there and say, "and the drainage on the north side of the Knik River"?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, although I think it is included there, because we discussed that point. I did myself, Mr. Coghill, I, with Mr. Wolff and the other gentlemen, the geographers, and they said the language, "on the west side of Knik Arm", by the use of that language, "the drainage on the north and east side of the river", was definitely included in the district, in their opinion. Now, they may be in error on that.

HURLEY: Well, I would, but it says "to the highway bridge" and then it ends.

HELLENTHAL: It certainly was not the intention to exclude that area; we expressly thought it had been included. But could you go over with us again and we will look at the map?

3175

HURLEY: O.K.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to District No. 10? District No. 11? District No. 12? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I address a question to Mr. Hellenthal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may address a question, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I am sorry that I haven't had time yet to go over with the geographers, but from my memory of the lines drawn on the maps we worked on here, I see a diversion there I don't understand. It ties in with your No. 10, the Anchorage district. You are including in the Anchorage district both sides of Turnagain Arm, the south side as well as the north side?

HELLENTHAL: Do you mean Knik Arm or Turnagain Arm?

KILCHER: The area around Turnagain Arm.

HELLENTHAL: Up to and including Placer Creek, but no farther.

KILCHER: Where is Placer Creek exactly?

HELLENTHAL: Just beyond Portage.

KILCHER: That's where it goes around?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

KILCHER: Then, there is the Hope area; where is that included?

HELLENTHAL: It is my understanding that the Hope area is included in the Seward district.

KILCHER: It should but I don't think it is plain from the description of the Seward district.

HELLENTHAL: I asked the geographers that question pointblank, and they told me that it was included in that description, and that is all I can tell you.

KILCHER: Well, it says here, "That area of Kenai Peninsula drained by streams flowing into Cook Inlet and Turnagain Arm, from but not including the area drained by Chugach Bay..."

HELLENTHAL: Well, I suggest that you go over and raise your question with those specialists, because I am getting way out of my field here. If this language fails to accomplish what we think the intention is we certainly can correct it.

KILCHER: I think there could be some deviation, because the Kenai River flows from right behind Seward and this includes all the drainage in Cook Inlet.

HELLENTHAL: We'll go over it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I believe that Mr. Hellenenthal is correct there, that when we went over the Anchorage district that was also brought into consideration on the Seward district, that Hope was in that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to District No. 12? Are there questions with relation to District No. 13? To District No. 14? To District No. 15? Are there questions relating to District No. 16? To District No. 17? District No. 18? District No. 19? Mr. Barr.

BARR: I promise not to mention Livengood. I notice here it mentions Clear Creek on the west side of the Tanana. Actually, there is another Clear Creek, also, farther upstream, and it is on the west side, that is, above Big Delta. It seems to me that it should be pinpointed a little more than it is here so that there will be no confusion. Of course, we are faced in Alaska with duplicate names; we have whole herds of Caribou Creeks and the like, and it seems to me it should be a little more specific.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, could you answer that?

COGHILL: I think that I will agree with Senator Barr that there are a dozen. I know of seven or eight Clear Creeks on the Tanana River itself. However, the Clear Creek that is mentioned here would not in any way be mistaken when you tie it in with the part of Goldstream that includes Nugget Creek and Spinach Creek. It is directly across from it; that Clear Creek is the one that is down here beyond the Chena Bluff.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does that satisfy your question, Mr. Barr?

BARR: Well, not quite, no, but -- it doesn't confuse me, but it might some other people. It seems to me that if that said "Clear Creek in the Wood River area", or something like that, it would clear it up.

HELLENTHAL: Would "near Chena Bluff" solve it?

BARR: Something on that order, locate it as to the area.

COGHILL: It's the only Clear Creek that is on the --

HELLENTHAL: When we take up the other three parts, we will put some language in there so that it will be unmistakable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to District No. 20? With relation to District No. 21? District No. 22? Are there questions relating to District No. 23? Mr. McNeese?

MCNEES: Mr. President, I think there should be a correction in spelling there -- Chamisso with a "C" instead of an "S".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, did you get that - with a "C"? In District No. 23, Chamisso. The Convention will come to order. Are there other questions or suggestions relating to No. 23? If not, are there questions with relation to Section No. 24? Are there questions or suggestions relating to Section 2? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: There will be, and they have been unanimously agreed upon at a conference between representatives of the Style and Drafting Committee and the Committee No. VI. We have already decided upon -- unanimously -- on two nonsubstantial changes and additions, purely for clarification, to make on Sections 1 and 2, which are now referred to Engrossment and Enrollment, and we shall ask unanimous consent later, when this comes out again for discussion on the floor, to make those clarifying suggestions. I merely make an observation so that we will not be considered as waiving them by not making them at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Point of information. Is it necessary to refer this to Engrossment and Enrollment and have the whole thing mimeographed? Or would it be possible, under suspension of the rules, not to have it mimeographed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I would rather not have it. I don't know what I would have to check it with, and I see very little sense in having it mimeographed; there are just a few errors in it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Could I ask Mrs. Sweeney a question through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may if there is no objection.

HELLENTHAL: Mrs. Sweeney, could you make a proper motion to accomplish that purpose, because I don't know how to do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, before any such motion is made, the Chair would just like to pass over the proposal until later in the day in order that Mr. Rosswog might be here. Mr. Kilcher has a question --

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Robertson, Mr. Eldor Lee, and Mr. Kilcher --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Those people who have raised questions should talk to the geographers as Mr. Hellenthal suggested to them.

HELLENTHAL: And also Mr. Barr. I think I have covered them all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So, if there is no objection, the proposal will be held in its present position until a later time. We have before us the Style and Drafting Committee report on the legislature, the report from the Style and Drafting Committee on the amendments to the legislative article. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, it occurs to me that we haven't actually made this report under the proper order of business, so I now offer the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with respect to the amendments made on the floor of the Convention last night on the article on the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee for the first time.

(The Chief Clerk then read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee concerning the amendments to Article II, article on the legislature, which had been committed to the Style and Drafting Committee the previous day.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we would be glad to answer any questions about the report. I think, definitely, we have made no change in substance. You will notice in -- speaking first of Section 5 -- the only thing we would change in that would be the last sentence. We haven't touched the other two sentences. The last sentence we have made it into two sentences saying, "This section shall not prevent any person from seeking or holding the office of governor, secretary of state, or member of Congress. This section shall not apply to employment by or election to a constitutional convention." We feel that that carries out and probably clarifies the language which, on the floor, was amended to read: "This section does not prohibit the election, appointment, or succession of any person as governor, secretary of state, or member of a constitutional convention, or the employment of anyone by a constitutional convention or election to the Congress." Now, there is one change in it which may be looked upon as substantive, and that is in the language as adopted on the floor, it speaks only of "election to the Congress", and we have said, "This section shall not prevent any person from seeking or holding the office of governor, secretary of state or member of Congress." This would permit a legislator to be appointed to Congress by the governor in event of a vacancy, if that would be the desire of the governor. I believe that was the intention of the Convention, simply taking an office in Congress, whether appointed or elected. There is one other change which we have made which we think was in line with probably, what the Convention intended. In the earlier part of the section, it says, "No legislator may be nominated, elected, or appointed..." and then, in what was added, it says, "This section does not prohibit the election, appointment, or succession..." It doesn't cover the fact of nomination, so, as it was amended on the floor, we would feel that none of these people could be nominated to any of these offices while we have, in our redraft, it simply said that "No person may be prevented from seeking or holding the office..." which means the nominating, the filing, the election, or occupying the office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does any member of the Committee, the Legislative Committee, wish to ask a question or questions of the Chairman of Style and Drafting Committee? Are there any questions relating to this report? If not -- Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted by the Convention. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Is that the amendment to Section 5?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the whole report, Mr. Robertson, would include the other items, too. If you have other questions with relation to the report, the Chair will not put the question. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: We haven't suggested any other changes at all except in Section 16, and there we have simply reversed the order of appropriation bills or items on the one hand, and bills to raise revenue on the other hand. We just think it reads a little clearer to say "bills to raise revenue and appropriation bills or items" than to say it in the other order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee? Hearing no objection, then the report is ordered accepted by the Convention. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I now move that the rules be suspended, that Article II, the article on the legislature, be advanced to third reading, that it be read by title only, and be placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article II, the article on the legislature, be advanced to third reading, be read by title only, and placed on final passage. Is there objection? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Sundborg made a motion that the report of the Committee be accepted. Is that equivalent, Mr. President, to adoption of the recommendations of the Committee? If not, I think the motion should have been that the report be accepted and the recommendations of the Style and Drafting Committee be adopted. We have not adopted those recommendations yet, we have accepted the report is all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, you have a point there. When you are actually suggesting changes to your original report, Mr. Sundborg --

TAYLOR: I mentioned that for the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. Yes, accepted and adopted as a part of the article on the legislative. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would just like to point out that, in that connection, the only motions, or the action, that has been taken here when the Style and Drafting Committee reports have come in, although they might have redrafted the article considerably, was that our report be accepted, and I understood that that would carry with it the adoption and the carrying into the articles of the language such as was contained in the report. My belief was that the same thing applied with respect to this supplemental report which we make, of course, only because there were some amendments made on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This was sort of an unusual circumstance in that the article was referred back to the Style and Drafting at that time in order to allow Style and Drafting to study those amendments. Isn't that true?

SUNDBORG: That is true. My intention, of course, was that the language suggested by the Style and Drafting Committee with respect to each of these amendments be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: As a part of the report. Then it might be better then, under the circumstances, Mr. Sundborg, if you will withdraw your unanimous consent request for suspension at this time in order that we will be perfectly in order.

SUNDBORG: I will do that, Mr. President, and include in my earlier unanimous consent request the adoption of our suggested changes as well as acceptance of the report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent to withdraw his request to advance the article at this time, and he now moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted and adopted as a part of Article II, the article on the legislature. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and the report has become a part of the article on the legislature. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I now renew my unanimous consent request to advance the article to third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article II, the article on the legislature, be advanced to third reading, read the third time, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Mr. McNeese.

MCNEESE: I don't want to object, but, for the sake of the record, I am going to point out that, in spite of a six-and-a-half hour argument that took place on the floor here one day with a vote finally being taken relative to the two houses meeting in joint session on four different items in the legislative article, that only once has that been retained in the final draft. I will admit that the referendum article was removed from the legislative article, so that would be one, leaving three other places in the legislative article where that was mentioned, and the retention has been made only in the case of the veto by the governor.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we absolutely deny that we have changed in any respect, or left out or altered the manner in which the legislature should act in considering anything.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask Mr. McNeese a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer, you may ask your question.

V. FISCHER: Mr. McNeese, would you please point out where the Style and Drafting Committee has omitted a reference to any action taken jointly by the two houses.

MCNEESE: That was not my accusation, Mr. Fischer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in view of the statement made by Mr. McNeese, I took occasion during the recess to get from the stenotypist, and also listened on the recorder as to just what it was that Mr. McNeese said, and what he said was that "...for the sake of the record, I am going to point out that, in spite of a six-and-a-half hour argument that took place on the floor here one day with a vote finally being taken relative to the two houses meeting in joint session on four different items in the legislative article, that only once has that been retained in the final draft. I will admit that the referendum article was removed from the legislative article, so that would be one, leaving three other places in the legislative article where that was mentioned and the retention has been made only in the case of the veto by the governor." Now, my statement to Mr. McNeese is that I believe that it is a misstatement that he made. I wonder if he would try to show us exactly what were the two that we left out.

MCNEESE: I don't think I said, in any case, Mr. Sundborg, that Style and Drafting did leave it out, did I?

SUNDBORG: Well, certainly that was the inference which I took from it. If you weren't saying that we did, were you accusing some other committee of leaving something out?

MCNEESE: No. I was drawing a point there that where in a debate on the floor it was definitely decided here that in these four instances that the joint session was to apply, and I was drawing attention also to the floor now that, in spite of time spent on that and the final decision of the floor, in the final legislative article that that has not been retained.

SUNDBORG: Mr. McNeese, did you mean to say that we had decided on the floor in those four instances to retain it?

MCNEESE: I thought very definitely, and in fact I am convinced that that was the decision of the floor that day.

SUNDBORG: Do you find those places which you say are now missing in your enrolled copy?

MCNEESE: No, I do not.

SUNDBORG: Then it must have been something that happened, if it did happen, before it ever reached Style and Drafting.

MCNEESE: As I said, Mr. Sundborg, again, I was not pointing my finger at Style and Drafting. I was calling attention to a point in fact.

SUNDBORG: I wonder if Mr. McNeese could be entirely mistaken and that there were not four places that the Convention approved where that procedure was followed, but maybe they were discussed and the amendment was rejected. You are either saying that the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee has left something out, or that we have, and I want to know which, because I don't want to have that hanging over our heads because --

MCNEESE: It is merely a matter of a change of language but I do recall here very definitely one day, and I have pinned it down to the 39th or 40th journal by number. That is not the 39th and 40th days, however, that is the journal number, where this debate took place, and it will take me some time to follow through on it, but I would like to discuss this further with you, but I see no reason to hold up the proceedings on the floor at the present time. Certainly my quarrel was not with Style and Drafting on this particular item though.

SUNDBORG: I appreciate that, but if it is with anybody and we are leaving out something here --

MCNEES: Nor is it with Engrossment and Enrollment.

SUNDBORG: -- on which action was taken on the floor, it certainly ought to go back in before we adopt this article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Fischer.

H. FISCHER: Mr. President, for the record, I think if Mr. McNees will look under the executive article, he will find those places under which meeting in joint session are mentioned.

MCNEES: I am very much aware of the one that is retained in the legislative article; also the one that is in the executive article, Mrs. Fischer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended, that Article II, the article on the legislature, be advanced to third reading, read the third time, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended, and Article II, the article on the legislature, is now before us in third reading and open for debate. The Chief Clerk will read the article by its title. Included in the motion by Mr. Sundborg was that the article be read by title only in its third reading. The Chief Clerk will read the article by its title only.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article II. The Legislature."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I have no complaint. I just merely want it clarified on the floor that, in Section 16, upon receipt of a veto message, the legislature shall meet immediately, and I would like to have the word "immediately" clarified so at a future date it will be clear to both parties -- the governor and the legislature -- as to just exactly what "immediately" means.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there debate on that question, or is there clarification at this time on the meaning of the word "immediately"? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I have no doubt but that the legislature in implementing this article will spell out what the word "immediately" means. It will be "as soon as possible".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there debate on this article? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I am constrained to vote against this article. Not that I don't respect the wonderful work that the Legislative Committee and also the Style and Drafting Committee have done on it, but I still believe, as I have said before on the floor, that you are adopting a system of having the senatorial representation based entirely upon geography instead of partly upon geography and partly upon population; it is a departure from the bicameral system.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I imagine that I will vote for every article that comes before us even if I don't agree with certain provisions within it, except this legislative article. I cannot in good conscience vote for it because the things that I disagree with are, in my mind, very serious. In the first place, I think we can get along with a smaller legislature at the present time, and when we become a new state, I believe we should operate very economically for the first few years. Not only that, but a smaller legislature makes for more efficiency. We can see here on this floor that it takes a long time to get a few amendments through. If we have a house of 40 members in the legislature, and a bill comes up, and 40 people each have amendments, and each of the 40 wants to debate on each amendment or put amendments to the amendment in, it might go on for days. A smaller number, of course, would promote efficiency. Now, I do agree we would have to have a little larger house than we have now to have proper apportionment. I disagree on adopting a unicameral process in acting on a veto when a bill is returned by the governor. We have gone on record here for a bicameral legislature by a large majority, and then we become inconsistent and turn right around and provided for the unicameral process in acting on a veto. I disapprove of that. Then, with 40 members in the house and 20 in the senate, when they act on a veto -- of course, the house can override anything that the senate wants to do. In other words, if a senate bill is being reconsidered, the senate might have no say in it. I believe that if a bill is originally considered in one house, they should also be able to reconsider it, and not turn it over to a joint session, and in the case of a senate bill, the senate would be left out in the cold; the house has full control. I also agree with Mr. Robertson in what he says. I believe these things are so serious that I just cannot vote for this article. On other articles, where they are not so serious, I will vote for them, of course.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further debate? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I, too, would like to say that I cannot vote for this article for the reasons stated, and also because of the changes in the impeachment process. I feel that the process should be as before, the proceeding brought in the house and the hearing in the senate, and this has been reversed in this bill. So, for that reason, and for reasons of the change in the veto process in joint sessions, I cannot vote for this bill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I voted against the judicial bill and I voted against the initiative bill and I will probably vote against other bills possibly that are offered on the floor in third reading but I am going to cast my vote, for what it is worth, for the legislative bill. I think it is an excellent piece of work and will make us proud that we have this in our constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I am dissatisfied with a couple of matters in this proposal -- article. One is the method of impeachment. I am against that method of impeachment in which the charges are made by the senate and it is tried by the house, but the majority voted for the inclusion of that. The majority also voted to override a veto that both houses would meet in joint session and vote to sustain or override the veto. That has been adopted by an overwhelming majority. Mr. Barr didn't point out to the members, though, that that vote by the joint session of the house and senate must be by a three-fourths majority, where ordinarily a two-thirds majority was sufficient to override the veto. I am going along with the will of this body who has adopted into this article those matters that I was not in favor of, because, if you vote against the article, you are voting against the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think that the democratic process involves the consolidation of the opinions of many. Now, I also have some feelings in regard to various articles of this bill. We have adopted them, and by a majority of the thinking vote of this body, and I think it represents the best judgment of this body collectively. If you recall, I tried to amend the term of the members of the house to four years. My thought was that they would have greater continuity and the value and benefit of greater experience in the house. The argument in reply to that was that the house elected by itself every two years would be more responsive to the will of the people. The question there was: did they desire immediate responsiveness, or did they desire experience and continuity of policy. The body here decided to accept immediate responsiveness. Now, there are other items. I, for one, would have preferred to see additionally, four senators at large to balance off some of the geographical discrepancies, perhaps. But those things are all things that I feel have been resolved by the majority will of this body; those are all things that come out of the democratic process. No one of us can have his own way entirely in any or all of the articles which we adopt. Therefore, it is my opinion that we have here before us an entirely and completely workable and, I think, a very effective legislative proposal. I, for one, intend to vote for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson had been attempting to get the floor. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I am not going to say very much. At the outset, let me assure the delegates that I intend to vote for the article. However, I am keenly disappointed, and was at the time that it happened, that the veto procedure was changed from the traditional two-house method to the method of using a joint session of the legislature. I have always felt that when the veto message was acted upon by each house separately, as I believe it should be, that it afforded an additional check and balance that very frequently was the only protection that a minority could have in a legislature which was over-balanced, one way or another, by one political party or the other. Now, I understand fully the reason why many members in this assembly desire to dilute the strength of the senate, and it stems from experience that they had in the last session of the legislature, but I daresay the time will come when they will be in the position of being in the minority and they will have lost, then, the chance of stemming the override of a veto in one house when they could not do it in a joint session. And it seems to me that that one little deviation from the traditional method of operation could well spell difficulty for those who some day may be in the minority, as some of us have found ourselves on many occasions. Now, Mr. Victor Rivers says that no one of us can have his way all the time. I certainly agree with that, and, from experience, I can say that I probably have had my way less in this Constitutional Convention than all the rest of the delegates put together. But I believe that we are here to write the best constitution possible, and I think the legislative article, by and large, is a fine piece of work, but, and I am not complimenting Style and Drafting Committee of which I am a member, but I think the principal work was done by Mr. McCutcheon's committee. But I still feel that we have set up a rather paradoxical situation which may someday be to our regret, although we do have, or will have, methods of correcting that by way of amendment. Otherwise, I certainly feel that the article is good and sound and American, and I support it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I move the previous question Mr. President, and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the previous question and asks unanimous consent. Is there objection.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Taylor that the previous question be ordered. The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question --

COOPER: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 21 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, Lee, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Taylor.

Nays: 29 - Armstrong, Boswell, Cooper, Davis, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Nolan, Nordale, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Coghill, Doogan, Harris, McLaughlin, Riley.)

CHIEF CLERK: 21 yeas, 29 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the previous question has not been ordered. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I ask for a five-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there further debate on Article II, the article on the legislature? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Robertson through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith, you may direct a question to Mr. Robertson.

SMITH: Mr. Robertson, do you believe that if this body rejected this article at this time, that a better article could be prepared in the time left to us?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I don't anticipate that my one vote is going to beat this article. I imagine it is going to be overwhelmingly accepted. But I maintain that I have the right, on any item that comes up for final passage if I don't agree with the theory of it, that I have the right to vote against it. I don't think possibly this body would have the time to redraw a new article, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Thank you, Mr. Robertson.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further -- Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, while I agree that probably 75 per cent of the article is as well written a one as could probably be produced, I intend to vote against the article mainly on the provisions pertaining to the veto, impeachment, and the yearly sessions. The yearly sessions are one that bother me particularly, due to the fact that I think a lot of good people in the Territory that would probably run for the legislature will not under those conditions just simply between campaigning and then their terms down there without any limitation upon them at all would take away a lot of good people from the legislative halls.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: That last remark of Mr. Nolan voices my sentiments on it. I think what we are doing here, we are setting up a legislature that is going to be only for professional legislators. We are going to preclude the possibility that a lot of good men that have businesses and other interests whereby they make their living from ever running for the legislature. Because of the yearly sessions and the fact that there is no end of the session, a man filing for office isn't going to know how many days he is going to be away from home. Not just one year, but two years in a row -- every year. I think that alone is enough to cause opposition to this article. Outside of that I am perfectly reconciled to go by what has been said, by the wishes of the majority.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have been interested in that in the last two reasons given -- about people hesitating to run. I raised that when the thing was considered. But it seemed that, outside of the first two or three years when we would really be busy getting the state organized, that it would pretty well level off to about 60 days a year. We now have 60 days every two years. I believe that after a few years have gone by -- and we're writing this for the long pull -- that that timing will fairly well work itself out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Article II, the article on the legislature, be adopted as a part of the Alaska state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 46 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 6 - Barr, Londborg, Nolan, Reader, Robertson, Sweeney.

Absent: 3 - Coghill, McLaughlin, Riley.)

CHIEF CLERK: 46 yeas, 6 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it, and the article on the legislature has become a part of the Alaska state constitution. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move that the rules be amended to provide that remarks on third reading in the nature of explanations of votes be confined to one minute, or, in the alternative, that each delegate be given an opportunity to present a written statement to become a part of the permanent record if they have objections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal so moves. Is there a second to the motion?

KILCHER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Kilcher. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed motion. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Is that an alternative, submitting a written record? It wouldn't be on the tape then, I understand?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Under the manner in which Mr. Hellenthal stated the motion, Mr. Barr, it would not be on the tape, no. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Is such a motion in order at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Such a motion would be in order. It would take a two-thirds vote, Mr. Johnson, to carry the amendment to the rules. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Hellenthal moves that the rules be suspended, and that, in third reading, in explanation of the vote, the delegates be confined to one minute (each), and that, in the alternative, they be given the opportunity to present a written statement which will become part of the written record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, didn't you move that the rules be amended?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Instead of suspended.

NOLAN: Does that include debate? In other words, you would limit debate to one minute?

HELLENTHAL: No. I limit it to explanatory statements of their vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: With the consent of the second, I should like to withdraw the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal asks unanimous consent that the motion be withdrawn. With the consent of the second, the motion is ordered withdrawn. We now have before us Article I, the article on the preamble and declaration of rights, the report on amendments. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, last night, at my request, the Convention suspended the rules and authorized Style and Drafting to redraft Section 18. That has been partially done. A proposed draft has been shown to a good many of the delegates but it is not ready at this time. Accordingly, I would like to suggest that we consider, since we already have suspended the rules in that respect, consider the article without that section, and then we will present that at a later date when it is ready.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent that we consider the article on the preamble and declaration of rights without the consideration of Section 18 at this time. Is there objection? It would mean, Mr. Davis, that we would have to hold up the article in any event, would it not? Perhaps would it be better if we just passed the article until you have Section 18 ready for consideration?

DAVIS: My thought was, Mr. President, that the article -- this particular article -- was to be reworked without reference to substantive matter. That is what I thought we adopted last night, and, therefore, I thought we could actually pass that article at this time and Style and Drafting could put in the article as finally written.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean after its final adoption into the constitution?

DAVIS: Well, after the amendment process, at any rate. It may very well be that we will have that ready by the time we reach Section 18. I don't know. We have a draft now but I think it should properly be written and mimeographed so the delegates could see it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it seems to me that last evening, that the first order of business this morning was the reconsideration of Mr. Harris' vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. We held that in abeyance pending the arrival of Mr. Harris. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I finally made it, and I will be glad to have it taken up at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have, then, before us at this time -- was there objection to Mr. Davis' request with relation to holding Section 18? If there was no objection it will be so ordered, but, at this time, we will revert to the consideration of Mr. Harris' reconsideration. Mr. Harris, what is your pleasure?

HARRIS: Mr. President, at the time the vote was taken on this particular section, there was quite a bit of discussion of whether the words were surplus, whether they were needed, or if the intent of the article would be the same regardless of whether the words "as otherwise provided by law" -- I believe that's the way it read, you can correct me if I'm wrong -- were needed or not. I believe Mr. McNees stated at the time that the intent of the article was that it was a transitional ordinance, and that it could be moved "as provided by law," either initiative or referendum, or by some process through the legislature. Since that time I have talked to some other of our legal brethren, and they have informed me that there is a good possibility that, if the article goes in as it is now written, there is a possibility that the people could not move the capital of Alaska without making a specific amendment to the constitution. I am not particularly interested in seeing the capital moved in the next 10 years or 15 years or 20 years, but I am interested in the fact that, if the time should arise in the future when the people of Alaska would like to have --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris, the Chair does not wish to interrupt but have you moved the reconsideration?

HARRIS: If I didn't, I do now. I am sorry.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris moves the reconsideration of his vote on Mr. Kilcher's amendment, Section 2 of Proposal No. 17/a.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seconds the motion. Mr. Harris, you may proceed.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I am not going to take up a lot of time with it. Mr. McNealy has stated the intent of the article, and, if that is the intent of the article, I can see where no one would have any objection to adding these three words for a matter of clarification. There seems to be a difference of opinion between our legal staff here as to whether the intent would be the same with or without the words; therefore, I am heartily in favor of adding these three words to the constitution. I don't think they make too much difference in the long run.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, of course this is just my own opinion on the location of the capital. I would prefer myself that it be in the body of the constitution and that is it. But in order to allay the thoughts of any of the members that might be in disagreement with the Committee on this, I know the Committee is right and, knowing that the Committee is right, certainly no harm can be done by adding the words which are suggested in this amendment, because it will mean exactly the same then as it does now in this particular place where it is located in the ordinances. So I think I speak for at least the majority of the Committee that we certainly would have no objections to those words being added.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher.

CHIEF CLERK: "Proposal 17/a, Section 2, line 2, change the period to a comma and add 'unless decided otherwise by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: As one member of this Committee, I wish to go on record as saying that I was not in favor of those words. I was in favor of putting the section just as it is worded here in the body of the constitution; no additional words; no provision for a referendum. I think there should be compelling reasons why a move of this kind should be undertaken. They must be compelling because of the disruption that would occur by reason of any such intent. The capital has been at Juneau for 50 years or thereabouts. There has been no difficulty with regard to having it as the capital; it has served well. I urge all of you to consider very, very carefully any move that will bring about an uncertainty as to where the capital is during the next five, ten, or fifteen years, and I would prefer very much myself to see it in the body of the constitution. The constitution can be amended; there are provisions for that. If, over a period of years during which the state is being formed and we are going through the initial stages, there is no reason why the constitution can't be changed after a period of years if it is shown and shown conclusively and compellingly that there is a very good reason which offsets those against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think I am also talking for our Committee on Ordinances, and in our Committee on Ordinances, we have given this question a lot of consideration, and I think there, also, we have reached a compromise between the stand that Mr. Stewart now has so ably expressed, and between a whole variety of positions whereby the capital at Juneau right now might be put some other place, or whereby the capital at Juneau, the capital of Alaska, should be decided in a referendum immediately upon attainment of statehood, and a whole variety of intermediate positions were taken. This Section 2 here was accepted as a committee compromise with a majority intent clearly expressed that the capital should be in Juneau, but this statement should not be embodied in the constitution itself. It should be as an ordinance to make it amendable by law. That was clearly the intent, but this little amendment of mine here is only serving the purpose of making that intent clear beyond any doubt. There have been opposing views as to whether the intent of the Committee compromise is clearly worded, and, in order to erase any possible doubt in the minds of the delegates here and in the minds of future Alaskans, I have introduced this little amendment to implement or more clearly express the Committee's intent on this compromise. In other words, what it boils down to is this, fellow delegates, do you want to see the capital site question embedded in the body of the constitution, including this here Section 2 as it is, do you want to possibly interpret it that it is embedded in the body of the constitution and not amendable by legislative action, or do you agree that possibly we should leave the capital in Juneau as it says here, subject to law? I think this little amendment would clear the air. It is a simple question. Shall the legislature have something to say about it or not? I think it should.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I believe that, as sincere as Mr. Kilcher is, that he has drawn a wrong assumption in saying that in voting against this inclusion in the article would be freezing this into the body of the constitution.

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President. I have not made such a statement, Mr. President. I said there is serious doubt as to whether it might or might not, and I have advocated to erase the doubt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I am sorry I can't take back what I said, but I think the assumption is correct. Mr. President, I certainly don't pose as one who knows all the problems of Alaska, but I have traveled greatly and I have had all of Alaska on my heart. I have lived in Fairbanks, I have lived in Anchorage. The embarrassing point of living in these different cities is that people will come occasionally and say, "Which town do you like best?". It is not a fair question, it is a natural question. I have heard of divisions of people pulling things from Anchorage to Juneau; things from Juneau to Anchorage, and to Fairbanks. And all of the time, I have tried to say that many of these tensions and provincialisms are not pressure groups. It isn't a case of robbing one place to satisfy the economic needs of another, but I think I can fairly estimate in my own heart that we do a grave injustice at this stage of our Constitutional Convention to include this intimation at this time which I think is rather unfair. I think that Mr. Stewart is correct that this constitution can be amended at periodic intervals.

KILCHER: Mr. President, point of order. Is Mr. Armstrong debating from the assumption that Section 2 as it is will freeze the capital in Juneau, or is he debating as to the necessity of the amendment to clarify the intent of the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, we will have to wait and see --

ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I would make it very clear at this time that I will vote to retain the language in the original article as proposed by the Committee, and I ask you with clear heads to think what this means clear on through in our life as a Territory, to vote for the retention of the language as originally proposed by the Committee. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, we'll all admit that we think that the legal implication of putting "The capital shall be at Juneau" in the ordinance in the schedule is that it is a temporary measure. In other words, it can be changed by the legislature or by the initiative or referendum or however you want to state it. I think in all fairness to the people of Alaska we should spell it out because the average man is not going to know whether that is permanent or whether it is transitory in the sense that it can be reached by the legislature or by initiative. If it means that, I think we ought to write it in there so that everybody that reads the constitution will know exactly what the Committee meant. I don't see that it will do any harm, and I think that it might help the judge or the court if it ever comes down to judicial determination. I will agree with Mr. McNealy; I think he is probably absolutely right. But I still think that there is room for doubt, but I think the main reason that we should include this language is that I think, in fairness to the people of Alaska, we ought to spell out exactly what we are doing on an issue of this nature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to remind the delegates that you already have the initiative and referendum, and, no matter whether Mr. McNealy's theory of the law is correct or incorrect, under the initiative and referendum, if any demand or need develops for the changing of the capital, the people themselves, by initiative, can call the constitutional convention and change it. So, it doesn't even have to wait ten years, which is a very short time, and it seems to me we ought to retain the language as reported by the Committee.

KILCHER: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: A point of rather correction. I think that Mr. Robertson is mistaken. There was an amendment that would have made the initiative operative for constitutional amendment or for calling --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, Mr. Robertson is entitled to express his opinion, and it does not involve a point of order. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I can well understand and sympathize with the views of those who feel the capital should be where it is now period. But I have been in serious doubt in listening to the debate in the two occasions it has taken place as to whether it is clear under the current Section 2 that the capital could be changed by law, and I think that, if any doubt exists, that those who wish to so provide should vote for this simple amendment. In reading my Juneau Independent today, I notice that it says, "Juneau as the capital of the State of Alaska, with no ifs, ands, or buts. The constitution would say, if the Ordinance Committee recommendation is followed, that the capital is established at Juneau," -- skipping a few words, "with no modification except by the process of constitutional amendment." Now, if it is possible for us to misunderstand each other here as to the intent or the meaning of a certain section in a certain article and some words are found desirable to clarify it, I think, if we are in favor of the clarification, we would be well-advised to adopt those words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Could I ask Mr. Robertson a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Robertson, in legal or constitutional effect, do you see any difference between the language of Section 2 in Proposal 17/a, namely, "The capital of the State of Alaska shall be at Juneau," and in the language in the proposed amendment, "The capital of the State of Alaska shall be at Juneau until otherwise provided by law."?

ROBERTSON: Yes, I do, Mr. President. You immediately, by adding those words, you immediately develop the uncertainty that the very first legislature, and, after all, you must realize that we are heavily outvoted by the proposed legislature we have just set out, they could immediately change it without any necessity whatsoever existing therefor. I think it is to the people themselves when you leave the language as it is, to leave it plain and certain, except for what Mr. McNealy's examination of the legal decision has on the effect. This immediately says that the very first legislature might change the capital. There is no stability; there is no certainty whatsoever to the proposition when you add those words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Robertson a question. Do you think then that leaving them without those words does leave a doubt as to whether or not the legislature or other methods of law could act? Is that right?

ROBERTSON: I will answer that by saying that. I have not investigated this section as Mr. McNealy has as to the legal effect of having it in a measure that is termed a transitional measure as having it in effect in some other measure, but it seems to me that, in answer to Mr. Victor Rivers' question as I already have, that the initiative and referendum specifically authorizes the people by constitutional amendment to change this any time they want to call a convention, and you are bound under that initiative and referendum, if I remember correctly, to have a constitutional convention every ten years.

V. RIVERS: Another question, Mr. President. You keep referring to the initiative and referendum only for the purpose of calling a constitutional convention, not for actually amending the constitution, is that right? I understand that our initiative does not extend to amendments directly to the constitution.

ROBERTSON: No. That is true.

V. RIVERS: Your position is that, if we were to amend this out of ordinances, you would have to call a constitutional convention to amend it that way?

ROBERTSON: That is my understanding.

V. RIVERS: That is your interpretation?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, on the question of law, today, I ask the permission of the floor on a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may have the floor on a point of personal privilege, Mr. McNealy.

(Mr. McNealy spoke under a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask Mr. McNealy what the effect is of the preamble that appears as shown on Committee Proposal No. 17/b, which would relate to Section 2, that has been under discussion here, and I am asking that question because he made some very pertinent remarks which may very well be the basis of many votes, and those remarks weren't on the record as he was speaking as a matter of personal privilege, and I would like to have him repeat for informational purposes, in brief, what that statement was. What would be the effect of the preamble on this section as discussed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. McNealy, you may answer the question.

McNEALY: As I had stated, it is almost a unanimity of opinion and decisions of the courts in regard to ordinances and whether they are permanent or whether they are merely transitory in nature that, where these words are used in the preambles of the ordinances, the courts refer back to those stating that the only purpose of the ordinance then is merely the direction of an orderly transfer of a territorial to a state form of government, and it is merely the transitional period and, strictly speaking, what it means with the capital in here, and with the wording we have in the preamble to the section here, it means that the capital has been orderly transferred from the Territory to the state. And, in conclusion, I will state again that as soon as the state government comes into effect, the entire schedule that will be offered by the Ordinances Committee will drop away from the Constitution and no longer be a part of it.

V. FISCHER: Then once the transition has taken place, Mr. McNealy, the initiative provisions would apply as well as the authority of the legislature to amending the location?

McNEALY: Mr President. That is correct, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I think we are making a mountain out of a molehill here. It makes absolutely no difference whether we leave the words in or whether we leave it as the Committee brought it in or put the words in as suggested by the amendment. Now we must not lose sight of the fact that when we adopt any particular article of this constitution or any particular section of any article, we are not casting it in a mold from which it cannot be taken. Everything that we do here is not bound to be that same until eternity, because we cannot bind future legislatures, nor can we bind the people not to do something in regard to changing it. So, regardless of the fact of whether or not we adopt this amendment, if we put the capital to be at Juneau, it doesn't mean it is there forever, because it can be changed by law when the people want it to change. It is only natural that this Committee, which I think did the right thing in drawing it in its present form, should be left there, because we have to have in our transitory provisions some designation of where the capital is going to be until the people by a referendum at some future date want to amend the constitution and name a place where the capital is going to be permanently located. So, regardless of whether we adopt the amendment or not, I think it makes no difference. I think we have just wasted a lot of time here, because those words are implied in the article itself, regardless of whether they are there, so what difference does it make whether we have the amendment or not? Leave it just at Juneau because it is going to be there anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you closing the argument now, Mr. Harris?

HARRIS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris, you may close the argument. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of order, or rather a point of information. I went through the article on referendum and initiative, etc., and I didn't find any indication that the people, by the initiative, could call a constitutional convention. This is not the case; the people cannot call a constitutional convention. It is only the legislature by two-thirds vote or then it be automatic by referendum every ten years. Those are the only two ways to call a constitutional convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris has the floor.

HARRIS: I don't want to belabor this point or take up any more convention time. The only reason that I reconsidered my vote was that the type of discussion that we have had here today was the fact that many of us here disagree on whether it is the intent that it can be changed by law, or it cannot be changed by law; whether it takes a constitutional amendment, or whether it doesn't. I would like to have it clearly defined in our constitution whether this capital site shall be frozen, or whether it shall be subject to the people to change by initiative or referendum or by the legislature. That was the only intent that I had in making my reconsideration of Mr. Kilcher's amendment. If there is any further doubt in your mind whether this can be changed by law, then I would urge you to vote for the amendment. I hate to have anything hazy or not clearly defined that could bring up an argument, could bring up a lawsuit, could bring up a lot of things in the future. Let's have it one way or the other. If we are going to be able to change it by law, let's state it so that everybody can understand. I don't want to see the newspapers -- as Mr. White has already told us, one paper came out and says it cannot be changed. I have seen another press release from an Anchorage paper that says if it goes in the way it is, the people can change it anytime. The newspapers don't agree; we don't agree. Let's have it one way or the other -- make it a clearly defined statement. The Committee says the intent is that it can be changed by law. Therefore if that is the intent, I see no reason why there should be any objection to the words we are adding.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, line 2, change the period to a comma and add 'unless decided otherwise by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" Mrs. Sweeney.

V. RIVERS: Roll call.

SWEENEY: Just a matter of information. Now in order to leave it the way it stands here, we should vote "no"? Is that right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, Mrs. Sweeney, we are voting again on the proposed amendment of Mr. Kilcher. The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 16 - Buckalew, Cross, H. Fischer, Harris, Hurley, Kilcher, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 38 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, and Wien.

Absent: 1 - McLaughlin.)

LONDBORG: I wish to change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg changes his vote to "yes".

3200

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 38 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "Nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I move that the Convention stand at recess for 20 minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements?

AWES: Meeting of the Bill of Rights Committee immediately upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Committee No. VI will meet upstairs immediately following recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, could I ask you through the Chair, if there is no objection, if there is to be a meeting of the Executive Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: We are going to have a meeting of the Executive Committee but I don't think we have time to cover it in this period of time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? If not, the Convention is at recess until 4:15 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, now that we are on Committee Proposal No. 17/a, specifically Section 2, I move the adoption of an amendment to Section 2 which is on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2. Strike the section and substitute the following: 'Unless otherwise determined as hereinafter set forth, the capital of the State of Alaska shall be at Juneau. Within 5 years from the admittance of Alaska as a State of the Union, the legislature shall establish a capital site survey commission to study the merits and demerits of potentially suitable sites for the permanent capital in line with the best interests of the people of the whole state. Upon completion of its studies, the commission shall report to the legislature and to the public. The legislature shall then provide for a referendum by the people at a statewide election or series of statewide elimination elections until a majority of the voters voting on the proposition have concurred on a particular site, after which the seat of government shall be retained at Juneau or changed as rapidly as feasible to the new site, as the case may be."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of this amendment. Is there a second?

POULSEN: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen seconds the motion.

SUNDBORG: Point of order. Is this really before us according to the calendar?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, as you will recall, the first thing on the calendar was the pending reconsideration of Mr. Harris' notice of reconsideration; he was not here. We held that over and then, after he arrived, we proceeded with that matter. The moment that is done it places the proposal before us in exactly the same position it had prior to the time that the reconsideration motion was made.

SUNDBORG: In other words, even though the calendar says that the only thing in this order of business is the reconsideration, it brings the whole matter back?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It does bring the matter back. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: In that case, 17/a is before us and we are now dealing with Section 2. You have heard this read. The purpose of this amendment is to spell out an orderly procedure for the expression by the state over a period of years as to the site of a permanent capital. Mr. Robertson expressed the fear this morning that, if it were left up just to the legislature, that you did not know what the first legislature could do or would do. Just the legislature can change the capital, or the capital can be changed by law; that is the position we are in right now. The Chairman of the Committee said that to put the specification that "Juneau shall be the capital" in the transitory provisions merely says that, to avoid inconvenience during the transition period, the capital shall be at Juneau; that leaves it wide open for the legislature or other ways of enacting laws to go into effect. Our not putting those words in this afternoon doesn't change that situation. It now reads "unless changed by law". Well, this would give something definite and specific; it would refer it to the whole people in the entire state on a fair basis without our making up their minds. It would outline a framework for the legislature to follow. If there are only two really outstanding sites, then you could have one referendum, say between Juneau and one other place, but if there were three or four suitable sites, that would be before the consideration of the people. Then you could have some elimination elections. They would set up a capital site commission to study such things as the land conditions, transportation facilities, weather. When I mean land conditions, I mean foundations, water supply, drainage, and the various factors that would enter into picking a permanent site. That should be set up by the legislature within five years. It would probably take another four or five years for that site commission to explore, prospect the foundation conditions, and study the various sites that might be under consideration. After that, the legislature would provide for a referendum or series of referendums. After that, Juneau might win the referendum and the capital would remain. If Juneau didn't win, then it would be moved as rapidly as feasible which would postulate a period of years, because, as you know, you don't just move away from an established setup and build another one overnight. That, I think, is a fair proposal. I have no great heat in the matter. I just thought it was something that should be brought before the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I am against this amendment for a couple of reasons. One is that it is legislation that we are writing into the constitution again. The other is that it sets up a commission and we just got through throwing all the commissions out the window after much debate. There is nothing in this section that isn't already provided for; there is nothing in this proposal that the legislature can't take care of. They can set up a commission to study all of the things that were mentioned. We still have the initiative and referendum proposal that we have adopted, and I am not an attorney, and I maintain that if the capital of Alaska is to be moved or wants to be moved, there are many ways, devious if necessary, that it can be put before the people without writing legislation such as this into the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I agree with Mr. Doogan, and the thing that concerns me primarily is that we specify a five-year period and then the people have to decide. I can very well see that for five, ten, fifteen, twenty or more years there may be no desire to move the capital at all. There may never be a desire. I think that, as long the legislature has the authority to initiate the move of the capital, or the people have the authority to do it through the initiative, that the matter best be left until the actual need arises rather than, five years after we become a state, go through this process of trying to decide right then and there whether -- not just whether -- but where the capital should be moved, because this provides for a definite referendum. It implies that it will be within five years, and that at that time people will be given the choice of at least two sites to vote on, and I would much rather leave it to action of the legislature or the people when the need arises.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees has been attempting to get the floor.

McNEES: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Doogan a question, if I may. Is it not true, Mr. Doogan, that Proposal No. 17/b here is all interim legislation?

DOOGAN: I think it is.

McNEES: I was much in favor of the more brief amendment submitted earlier, but in view of its having been voted down, I am going to support Mr. Rivers' Amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, as Secretary of the Ordinance and Transitional Committee, we held what you might call an open meeting for the members to express themselves upon the location of the capital on January 13. Seventeen persons expressed their views on the matter. Our Committee held this meeting in order to save time, in order to speed the action of this Convention, and now we come up to amendments, new ideas, etc. I feel that this subject has been adequately covered, and for heaven's sake, let's leave something to future generation Alaskans to perfect. Our work is without question marvelous, but there must be something that the legislators and the future citizens of Alaska can perfect that we just haven't made absolutely perfect. I am constrained to vote against this, and I say let's get on with our work. We have less than 255 hours left until 10:00 a.m. on the 6th.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I wish to speak against this amendment for the reason that here we are setting up a special referendum provision machinery. I don't see how we can do that in this assembly here, to go for that after we have set up an initiative and referendum procedure in the constitution. If we do, in effect, we are telling the people of Alaska that we have no confidence in what we have done here in this other article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, are you closing?

R. RIVERS: I shall close unless anyone also wishes to be heard. If not, I rather object to Mr. Hilscher's statement or implication that this is not part of the work of the Convention. This is worth considering and turning down if you don't like it. I don't care whether it's five years that the legislature is allowed in which to set up a site commission, or 15. This is the framework; that could be changed and if the public has no desire to change the capital in five years or after they get a report from the site commission, then they could vote in favor of Juneau and leave it there. This is something that I think is a fair way of getting it before the people and having the people of Alaska guided in the matter, and I just submit it to you, that is all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?"

SUNDBORG: I would like a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 11 - Cross, H. Fischer, Harris, Hinckel, Hurley, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers.

Nays: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McNealy, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Hellenthal, Kilcher, McLaughlin, Metcalf.)

CHIEF CLERK: 11 yeas, 40 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "Nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 20 on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments first, Mr. Boswell, to Section 2? If not, we will proceed to Section 20. The Chief Clerk may read Mr. Boswell's proposed amendment.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I wonder if Mr. Boswell would consent -- the Committee has amendments to Sections 20 and 21. Would you consent to the introduction of the Committee amendments first?

BOSWELL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell consents. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee. The Convention will come to order. Do all of the delegates have a copy of that proposed amendment before them?

JOHNSON: Point of information. Are we working on 17/b?

PRESIDENT EGAN: 17/a, Mr. Johnson. Would the Sergeant at Arms please bring Mrs. Hermann a copy of Committee Proposal No. 17/a; Mr. Collins needs one also; and the amendment that is being offered by the Committee to Section 20 of Committee Proposal No. 17/a. If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We now have the amendment to Committee Proposal No. 17/a, Section 20.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Sections 20 and 21 and substitute the following: 'Section 20. If this constitution shall be accepted by the electors and a majority of all the votes cast for and against the proposition to abolish fish traps shall be cast for adoption of the proposition, then the following shall become effective: As a matter of immediate public necessity, to relieve economic distress among individual fishermen and those dependent upon them for a livelihood, to conserve the rapidly dwindling supply of salmon in Alaska, to ensure fair competition among those engaged in commercial fishing, and to make manifest the will of the people of Alaska pending the establishment of the first state legislature, the use of fish traps for the taking of salmon for commercial purposes is hereby prohibited in all the coastal waters of the State until otherwise provided by law. Violations of this section shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed $5,000.00 and by confiscation of the fish traps. The police power of the State shall be used to the extent necessary to enforce this section. Section 21. Each qualified voter who offers to vote upon this Constitution shall be given a ballot by the election judges which in substance shall contain the following proposition:

Shall the proposed constitutional provision	_____
prohibiting the use of fish traps for the taking	YES
of salmon for commercial purposes until otherwise	_____
provided by law, become effective?	NO."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: I so move.

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew so moves, seconded by Mr. Knight. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I very much object to the words on the first page in the second line from the bottom, "until otherwise provided by law", and the same language in the proposition to be put on the ballot. I think that it is unnecessary language, first of all, in view of the fact that Mr. McNealy explained this is going under the preamble of the schedule of ordinances. But even aside from that, I feel that it is undesirable language because it implies that it may be a year after we get statehood, it may be two years after we get statehood the legislature may provide for fish traps. I don't think that is desirable language, Mr. President, and I would like to amend the amendment by striking the words "until otherwise provided by law" in Section 20. May I do it for both sections at the same time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, the Committee doesn't have any objections.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. I am Secretary of the Committee and I don't think I have a copy of the amendment that Mr. Buckalew is calling a committee amendment. I think it is the Buckalew amendment. I fail to find any.

BUCKALEW: We had a meeting of the majority of the Committee, Mr. President, and it was adopted. I don't know where Mr. Hilscher was. He is kind of hard to find sometimes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I move that the words "until otherwise provided by law" should be deleted in Sections 20 and 21.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves. Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment as proposed by Mr. Fischer. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: May I ask Mr. Buckalew a question? I would like to know just how one would go about confiscating fish traps.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: You mean the mechanical process?

HERMANN: Yes.

BUCKALEW: I imagine you would confiscate it the way you would a boat or a seine or anything else. It would probably be a little difficult. I imagine you would just tear the rigging out so the traps would be inoperative. I don't think the state would pull the pilings out. If you confiscate it, you would put it in such condition that it couldn't fish anymore.

HERMANN: Is that what "confiscate" means?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to elaborate on it. We have two types of traps; that is, a large trap with what they call a floater, put together with logs, and towed to and from the site where it is set out for the summer, and it can be confiscated the same as any other thing. The other matter of confiscation would be merely a matter of prohibiting the use of it, and in time, the weather and elements would take the piling out and there would be no fish traps there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: May my amendment be read now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell, we have the pending amendment before us.

BOSWELL: I thought that was the unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, that was just for the adoption of the deletion of those words, Mr. Boswell.

HURLEY: I rise to a point of order. I believe Mr. Boswell seeks to amend the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, he has a separate amendment. If he desired to amend the amendment, he would be in order, but that isn't the Chair's understanding.

BOSWELL: My amendment is to strike the entire amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that your amendment, Mr. Boswell? Whether or not that would be -- it's sort of hard to feel that that would be an amendment to this amendment. You will be in order though when this --

BOSWELL: Their amendment replaced their original section, and Mr. Buckalew asked permission to put it in before my amendment and that was granted. I take it that that is in now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it isn't in now, Mr Boswell. When we act on that, your amendment will certainly be in order. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I direct a question to Mr. Buckalew?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may direct a question, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: In Section 21 of your proposed amendment, the proposition as suggested to be placed on the ballot contains the language, "shall the proposed constitutional provision prohibiting the use of fish traps", and so on. Now the thought that occurs to me is, if this amendment carries and becomes a part of the schedule, will this language be correct? Is it a constitutional provision?

BUCKALEW: Yes, it is a constitutional provision, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Well, I was under the impression that the schedule was not a part of the constitution.

BUCKALEW: It would be a constitutional provision; it would remain in effect until the legislature acted on this subject. It might remain in effect forever, but it would still be a transitory measure.

JOHNSON: If it is not in the constitution, how could it be a constitutional provision? That is the point I make.

BUCKALEW: Well, it's just the language. What else could you call it? It is a provision in the schedule and the schedule is part of the constitution. That is the only terminology I have seen used -- "constitutional provision".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I ask Mr. Buckalew a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question.

R. RIVERS: Could you say "constitutional ordinance"?

BUCKALEW: Well, Mr. Rivers, there is a technical distinction; it's not too well defined between an ordinance and a constitutional provision. The reason I used this language is because of the type of provision it is. If I used the word "ordinance", it might be subject to attack on the grounds that it wasn't a pure ordinance in the strict sense that we know of other ordinances that you find in the constitution, and the cases that I have read; in similar situations, they used the expression "constitutional provision".

R. RIVERS: Mr. Buckalew, you spoke of action by the legislature which you say might never happen. This is set up to be a self-executing ordinance, is it not?

BUCKALEW: That's right.

R. RIVERS: The legislature wouldn't have anything to do with it, would it?

BUCKALEW: The reason that the matter is put in the schedule is that, if the legislature ever wanted to act on the subject, they could act on it. If you put it in the body of the constitution, perhaps it would be abolished forever and the legislature could never legislate on that subject unless they amended the constitution, and the purpose of this provision is to only insure the immediate closure of the traps the instant the state receives her sovereignty. The minute they are admitted the traps are outlawed, and that would cover the time from the instant we are admitted until the time that the first legislature meets. It might be three weeks; it might be a month; it might be two months. But, if it happened during the fishing season, it is possible the traps could fish for another whole season. That is the reason the ordinance is in there -- to cover that situation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I am still going to stand with these particular sections, 20 and 21, whether they should be adopted or stricken. What happens to Section 19, then, and the original Proposal 17, which is still left in? Does all that take the same effect then?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, what happened to Section 19? Is that still in Proposal No. 17/b?

MCNEALY: There was different numbering. Mr. President, I want to explain on this, it comes out as a committee amendment without any objection on my part. The original ordinance, as I understood it to be, was voted on by the Committee. At that time it had another number, and the Committee vote was five to four on it, and we reserved the right to talk as we saw fit. But now as to the section numbers, Mr. President, they will have to be either arranged by Style and Drafting there on our consideration, that is, the full Committee consideration was given under different numbers, but I believe this is substantially along the lines.

BUCKALEW: Well, now, as I recall it, when this proposition came up, we voted eight to one to put the ordinance in the schedule, and the vote was five to four to put the fish traps in the body of the constitution. Wasn't that the vote?

McNEALY: Mr. President, if I remember correctly, the original vote was eight to one in Committee in favor of the abolition of fish traps and was based upon a proposal given the Committee by Mr. Lee, which simply stated in just about two lines that "fish traps shall be abolished". And then, an amended version and a longer version was first brought on the floor here, was voted on, Mr. Buckalew, and the vote was five in favor of putting that particular ordinance in the constitution, or provision, as you call it, and I believe that you and I talked over this amendment here and I don't know what other conversations you had with the others on the Committee, but it was five to four on the longer version. I believe that should be in the Secretary's record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, the Chair was wondering and perhaps Mr. Robertson was wondering where these other sections went between Section 2 and Section 20. He specifically asked the original question with relation to Section 19.

BUCKALEW: The thing is, we have a whole schedule, and we wanted to get the capital and the fish traps out because they were finished. Now the 1 to 19 is on the desks of the Committee, it has been introduced.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Section 19 will still come before the Convention? Is that correct?

BUCKALEW: What is Section 19?

COOPER: Point of information. Isn't Committee Proposal No. 17 automatically withdrawn by being superseded by Committee Proposals 17/a and 17/b?. If so, there would be no Section 19, there would be no other sections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was that the action taken last Saturday by the Convention?

COOPER: I don't know, sir. I am asking you. Isn't 17/a and 17/b superseding Committee Proposal No. 17?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: My recollection is that Mr. McNealy or some member of his Committee asked the Convention's permission to consider these two sections, which are really three sections, before they considered the whole Proposal No. 17, and that permission was granted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent to withdraw Committee Proposal No. 17.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves and asks unanimous consent that the original Committee Proposal No. 17 be withdrawn at this time. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, Committee Proposal No. 17 is ordered withdrawn, and we have before us Committee Proposal No. 17/a. Is there further discussion regarding Committee amendments? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information?

HURLEY: It is my understanding that Committee Proposal No. 17/a, Section 20, to be in accord with 17/b, should be numbered 24 and 25. In other words, 20 should be changed to 24, and 21 to 25; and then we'll be, I think, in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Committee have objection to renumbering in their proposed amendment Section 20 to read Section 24, and Section 21 to read Section 25? Is there objection? Do you ask unanimous consent, Mr. Buckalew, that that be included as a part of your proposed amendment?

BUCKALEW: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and the renumbering is included as a part of the proposed amendment. If there is no further discussion with relation -- Mr. Smith?

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Buckalew a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: On line 1 of page 2, where you say "pending the establishment of the first state legislature", is it your thought there that this ordinance shall only be effective until the first state legislature is established?

BUCKALEW: My thought was that the first state legislature -- they would be abolished from now on; if the first state legislature didn't act on the subject, they would still be abolished.

SMITH: Well, do you think this language says that?

BUCKALEW: I think it does, but I think we could make it clearer than that. Now that I read it, I see your question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask for time to make that change, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: Well, I ask for a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee, Sections 24 and 25 of Committee Proposal No. 17/a -- Mr. Lee?

LEE: Mr. Chairman, I don't know if all the people here -- are we voting on the adoption of this amendment or changing it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be on the adoption of the proposed amendment that we have before us here, Mr. Lee.

LEE: I would like to say a few things, not very much, if this is the time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It isn't the final vote, Mr. Lee.

LEE: Oh, that's what I wanted to know.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This is a vote as to whether or not to adopt this proposed committee amendment to Committee Proposal No. 17/a.

LEE: All right. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?"

V. RIVERS: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

METCALF: May I abstain, sir?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask to abstain, Mr. Metcalf?

METCALF: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Metcalf, you may abstain. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, maybe I misunderstood you, but I thought you said a moment ago that we were voting on whether or not this amendment would become a part of the committee's report, and then I thought the last time you put the question you said, "The question is whether or not we should adopt this amendment." There is quite a difference.

PRESIDENT EGAN: As a part of the committee report. Mr. Hilscher?

HILSCHER: As a member of the Committee, may I ask what we are voting on now? Is it to include this in or out or what?

PRESIDENT EGAN: This vote that you are going to be voting up on now, Mr. Hilscher, is on the question whether or not to adopt this proposed committee amendment as a part of Committee Proposal 17/a.

HILSCHER: And then it becomes Sections 24 and 25?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I am just rising to a point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, your point of information.

TAYLOR: Is it permissible to offer an amendment to this now in the event it is adopted and goes in as 24 and 25 --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, amendments can be offered at that time.

TAYLOR: At that time, not this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course you can offer amendments to the amendment, if you so desire, Mr. Taylor, but if it would be adopted, other amendments could be offered for the adopted section. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I am only rising to a point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information.

HINCKEL: I would like to speak in favor of this or some similar article, but I just don't understand when.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, you could speak to the adoption of this proposed amendment if you desire to do so. You could also, then later, speak to it in third reading, to the whole proposal, if you so desired.

HINCKEL: Maybe I'd better speak now, first. I haven't a great deal to say except that I think that everybody here understands pretty well what a fish trap is and what the disadvantage of their continuance in use is. They also understand how the fishermen all feel about it. I come from a part of Alaska where a great many of the people are fishermen and depend upon their fishing for their livelihood. The people over there have sent me no ultimatums or anything in particular up to now regarding the constitution, but they have asked me to support anything that would get rid of fish traps. I have also seen in the paper the last few days where the Alaska Department of Fisheries held hearings over there in Kodiak. It was on the 23rd of the month. And you probably noticed the items that the people over there voted that they wanted immediate abolition of the fish traps. They were not satisfied with the proposal of the Department of the Interior; neither were they satisfied with Delegate Bartlett's five-year plan. They want them out, and out now. This amendment that is offered here now, one of the main things about it is that it is asking for them to be gotten rid of immediately upon the acceptance of the constitution, and it's for the good of the people, to relieve economic distress, and believe me, there are parts of Alaska where there is economic distress due to these fish traps. I ask you to do anything that you can, either in accepting this amendment or getting the section into the ordinances, or whatever it is that can be done to make sure that we will eliminate or abolish fish traps as soon as possible. It's for the good of the people of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would just like to ask a brief question of Mr. Buckalew. Is this amendment designed to eliminate any questions about fish wheels or any other gear used by Natives in rivers or any place else?

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I will just take a few minutes. It's confined now to the coastal waters of Alaska, and all the questions that were raised on the floor I feel confident have been cured. I should explain one thing to the body, Mr. President. The reason that this thing is so lengthy is that, after spending four days' research on ordinances and constitutional provisions, on a matter such as this, you have to show the reason for including it in the schedule. You have to establish that it is in there for a purpose. You have to show that there is an emergency, and you have to show that you are trying to take care of that transitional period, from the time you receive your sovereignty until the time that the legislature has a chance to work. Now Mr. Smith is a little worried about a question. He says it only abolishes traps up until the time the legislature is formed; well, that is not true. The thing reads, "...to conserve the rapidly dwindling supply of salmon in Alaska, to ensure fair competition..., and to make manifest the will of the people of Alaska pending the establishment of the first state legislature..." fish traps are abolished. Now, if the legislature never acts on them they are still abolished, but we are trying to take care of that interim period, and I feel that all of this language is necessary because I suspect that if the ordinance is ever in court, I want it to stand up, and I feel a little fearful if any of the language is stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I rise to a point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information.

R. RIVERS: I think there is still some confusion in the minds of the delegates. I am not too clear on it. This is offered as a committee amendment to what is now known as Sections 24 and 25. If we adopt this amendment, do we still have Sections 24 and 25 before us for further action?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I might say I support this amendment, although I propose to oppose the main proposition later, after we get it in the form we want it in. This improves the previous draft, so let's get it in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall this proposed Committee amendment be adopted?" Mr. Lee.

LEE: It's inconceivable to me that any representative of the people of Alaska could think about barring any change to eliminate the fish traps. It has been a burden upon the people of Alaska for my entire life and, prior to that, on other people, and I can't see how you people can fail to include this in your constitution. The people have always shown they have wanted them out, get rid of them, they have never had any power. If that same power can work on a body like this as it has on others, and we neglect to take care of the people of Alaska in this problem, I, for one, will be greatly disappointed. Now, in '48 we had a referendum on it. Eight to one they voted to abolish the fish traps. What better argument could we have for getting ratification of our constitution? People want the fish traps out, it has been proven. Now, if this is in our constitution, the people are going to go and vote to get the traps out, and there are going to be many of them that will vote that otherwise would never have voted before, and they will vote to ratify our constitution, and that, of course, will work to serve our purpose here. I don't know if all of you people are familiar with the operation of a fish trap. A fish trap is a huge piece of equipment, bigger than -- it covers as much area as this building. It is fastened from the shore; it has piling going out from the shore; it has a long lead -- they call it a lead. I couldn't find the length that is the limit on them. I should be corrected -- I think it is 500 yards -- a thousand feet -- that it can project out into the sea, and that has a huge structure that works like a maze, and the salmon follow in through and they go around through the different compartments of the trap until they come to what is called the "spiller", and there they bunch up until they are gathered into a boat and taken into town. Now, a salmon comes in from the sea; it is a free fish; belongs to all of us people. It comes in, and it works its way in toward its stream from which it originated; it falls with the tide, and goes and hits this lead that is projecting out there 24 hours a day except during closed period. It hits the lead and it doesn't get away; it follows and goes in there and is caught. Of course, fishermen can't fish within a certain area of that trap because it is not permitted, that is, with regular gear that is handled by Alaskans, and this trap is designed so that it catches fish no matter what way they go. A fish travels with the tide -- a salmon -- and it continues toward the stream and each time, after it goes a certain distance, on the outgoing tide again, it will drift back a certain distance; then the trap catches it from the other side. A trap, of course, doesn't select what fish it catches. You talk about conservation of salmon. This also applies to a great number of other types of fish -- snappers, trout, king salmon, halibut, codfish, and many other fish that operate in the same way. They lead along any type of lead. This lead projects way down to the bottom, and the trap itself has a bottom. The fish can't get out after they once get into this maze. Now, we have a certain number of these traps that have been there for many years. I can't get one. I couldn't afford to get one, in the first place, and they won't give me any either. The trap sites that are occupied now are the only ones that can be had. That's un-American, un-Alaskan, indecent, and that is what we are living under now. I used as a comparison the other day in my argument before the Committee, I compared a fish in the sea to be very like a caribou out on the tundra. You people aren't faced with a problem where a certain group has permission to set up a huge corral and catch the migrating caribou as they come by for their exclusive use, and then not permit anybody else to set up that type of trap. Now that is the thing we have facing us in the fisheries. I hope I have convinced you. It is a desperate situation, and we will lose a great deal of the faith of the Alaskan people if we fail to vote to include this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted as a part of Committee Proposal No. 17/a?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 49 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Nays: 2 - Laws, Robertson.

Absent: 4 - Collins, Kilcher, McLaughlin, Stewart.)

CHIEF CLERK: 49 yeas, 2 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment has become a part of Committee Proposal No. 17/a. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, may I introduce my amendment now? It will have to be changed to conform with the new numbers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment of Mr. Boswell, including the section number changes.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Sections 24 and 25."

BOSWELL: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

COOPER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper seconds the motion. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: In proposing this amendment, I seek to strike to the heart of this problem and possibly save some Convention time. I think the first thing we must decide is whether this should be a part of the constitution as an ordinance, and if we can arrive at that proposition, we will save a lot of time amending the amendments. We have wasted about 40 minutes now discussing this matter; we argued around the other evening a half-hour, trying to decide whether a fish wheel was a fish trap; so I was interested in trying to save some time. The problem that faces us, as I see it, is not based on the faults or the merits of fish traps, but is, rather whether an ordinance is a proper approach to the problem. For the past 20 years, legislatures have been passing memorials to Congress to abolish fish traps, and it's inconceivable to me that the first state legislature wouldn't do this as a matter of course, and they would do it in an orderly manner. The danger of this ordinance, as I see it, is that it gives the trap interests some very strong ammunition for opposing statehood and for opposing ratification of this constitution. It also might mean the temporary loss of important revenues to the new state by the action taken on Mr. Buckalew's ordinance. I am going to call this Mr. Buckalew's million dollar ordinance, because it could very easily cost the new state a million dollars if this should happen at the height of the fishing season or at the beginning of the fishing season. Now, as I understand it, the abolishment of fish traps will require a lot of boats and a lot more fishermen, and how are we to know when these fishermen are going to have to step into the breach and take up the place of the fish traps. If this should happen on some day during the height of the season, the traps close down, there would be many cannery workers out of work because the boats wouldn't be in the proper place at the proper time; they couldn't possibly be. So, the inevitable result would be a serious dislocation of the entire industry and the loss of the revenues, perhaps for that entire season, and that could be a very sizeable sum. We studied this matter in the Resources Committee. It was not a unanimous decision, but it was a majority decision that we could reach this proposition better by a resolution from the Convention to the first state legislature, and it seems to me that that is a better approach. I think we should strike these sections because I think they are dangerous, and I think they might result in a serious temporary dislocation of the fishing industry and perhaps a great loss in tax revenues.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think that I can remember all of the points that Mr. Boswell made, but the first point I would like to take up is, he spoke of the enemies of statehood and how they are really going to come after us if this ordinance is in there. Well, they have been fighting us for years anyway. Their battle lines are drawn, and it is not going to give them any ammunition, because they have been fighting us all this time anyway, and this just points out to them that, when we get to be a state, they have had it. And it's certainly not going to cause us to lose any friends in Washington, because Alaskans have been going back there for years and years, yakking about these traps, passing memorials and referendums and what not. Now let's be logical about this -- Buckalew's million dollar ordinance -- I would like to call it Mr. Lee's million dollar ordinance because he sent it to the Committee. I don't know whether that would improve my credit to have an ordinance referred to as Buckalew's million dollar ordinance; it might improve my credit; I don't know. Now, when we get ready to be admitted to statehood, the salmon industry is going to know as much about that as anybody in Alaska. They are going to know approximately what date the state is going to be organized.

They can tell you within a day what date the state will be able to strike the traps. Now, they will make arrangements to take care of themselves. Now, as far as the individual packers are concerned, I hope there will be enough fish left, but I think the individual fishermen here in Alaska will be able to catch enough fish out of what is left of the run to get along, and I don't think there is going to be any inconvenience at all. Now from what I have heard from Delegate Emberg, Delegate Smith, Delegate Peratrovich, the situation with the salmon industry and the salmon run is critical. Now, they have advised me that, if things keep going like they are, and even if there is a period in there where the traps as they are now set up, they could fish another season, they claim it depends upon when we are going to be admitted, and we don't know. So we might as well forget about it because there are not going to be any fish left anyway. So we don't have to worry about these people in the canneries, because in a few years there aren't going to be any canneries anyway because there aren't going to be any fish. And that is what we are trying to do -- we are trying to step in and save our heritage at the first possible moment. And this million dollar amendment, whichever amendment it is, or ordinance or proposition, has merit. It's strictly a transitional measure. Now we are trying to stop up a void in Mr. Boswell's resources thing. I will agree with Mr. Boswell. I don't think it should go in his resources article, but I do see that there is a big gap in his ordinance. He claims in his ordinance that we own all the fish of Alaska. Well, who is going to protect those fish until the first legislature is convened? We have got to do it, and that is what we are trying to do, and that is the purpose of the ordinance. It is not going to cause inconvenience; we are not going to lose any friends in Washington. The battle lines are drawn anyway, and I don't think any of his arguments have too much merit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to state that I would have to disagree with Mr. Boswell on his vote -- deletion of this. I believe that we should have something in our ordinance. I admit that I thought this over quite a while before I decided that it should be in the constitution, someplace. I think this is such a serious matter to so many people in our Territory that an ordinance like this would have a good effect, particularly lately, since there has been talk in the government and in the newspapers that Alaskans were willing to wait for ten years to eliminate traps. I think a statement at this time, or when the constitution is adopted, would be of great help.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I would like to refer to some of the statements made by Delegate Boswell. He referred to this as a "million dollar ordinance". I am going a little further than that. To the best of my knowledge, since the fisheries were started and were developed in Alaska, they have produced about two billion dollars worth of salmon. The question is now, how long are we going to have salmon as a resource? I would call this a "billion dollar ordinance" and would be proud to be associated with passing it. I would like to make another comparison in regard to fisheries. Delegate Lee mentioned that he compared the salmon with the caribou as a resource. I would like to compare it with mining. I know there is no one in the Territory of Alaska, or the State of Alaska, who would be satisfied with a mining law that said only the operator of a dredge could hold a property right in minerals. Then you raise the question of competition of the little man. That is what we are up against in fishing. I am not going to ask that question of Delegate Boswell because I know what his answer would be to that sort of a proposition without asking him. Then there is one more thing I would like to bring to your attention about this. As long as traps are legal fishing gear in Alaskan waters, the Fish and Wildlife Service, the administration agency, has the alternative course, when the fisheries are depleted to a certain extent, to close down a fishing area for four years, five years, if necessary, to bring the salmon back. They can do that because traps are legal. I don't believe the industry is worried much about depletion, because they figure, when it is carried far enough, the fishing areas are closed down three, four, or five years, the small fishermen are starved out. And when the area is opened up, who will be there? The trap men and the canneries. I say that if we can -- and I feel that it's a legitimate function of this body -- to legislate through ordinance, I think we should provide this. This is very, very essential to the future of Alaska.

Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I might make it a little clearer, a person being in the legal profession, that we talk about fish traps, but it happens to be that I lived for 29 years in one of the best fishing areas in Alaska. I have been on traps, and I have been on fishing boats, and I have been around canneries, and I know quite a bit about them. In fact, I had an opportunity, or it was a necessity of making a study one time when I was in the legislature when there was a bill regarding an attempt to tax fish traps out of existence. At that time, there were something like 500 traps in Alaska. They have since been reduced a little bit. And it was felt by a survey by fishermen and men who were supposed to know that it would take 3,000 fishing boats to do the work that these 500 or 600 traps were doing. Figuring at least four men to a boat, which would give you about 12,000 men working and who, in all probability, the fact that these boats are not large, would become residents of the Territory of Alaska. They would have their families here; they would become a part of the Territory; and with that number of men working in addition to the fishermen we have now, with their own boats, it would be a $10,000,000 ordinance instead of a $5,000,000 ordinance. In addition to that, it means money for the Territory; it means more business; it means boat building shops; it means ship chandlers; and the nets and other things that goes to making up the fishing industry. I think this is a necessary ordinance. Now, we have good authority that the traps are the destroyers of the fish. We have the figuresto show, and right in the paper today, the smallest catch of fish in Alaska in 50 years was in 1955; and we have it upon good authority that the traps were responsible for that depletion of the fish, because Mr. McKay, Secretary of the Interior, has recommended to Congress that a ten-year elimination period for fish traps be put into effect. Where did Mr. McKay get his information that he could make that recommendation to Congress? He got it from the Fish and Wildlife Service in Alaska here, and they know that the financial ruin of thousands of people in Alaska can be attributed directly to the unrestricted use of traps over the years. And as long as we have the traps, we are going to lose more fish until, as Mr. Emberg says, finally they will starve the small man out and the canneries will come back. I don't believe, as Mr. Boswell says, that this is a million dollar ordinance; it's a ten million dollar ordinance. It means ten million dollars more a year to the people of Alaska, if not more, and it will mean also that in the years we can build up, by proper protection and propagation of the species, we'll get the fishing industry back to where it was years ago, and the money derived from the fishing industry, to a great extent, will go to those people of Alaska who go out and wet their hands and their nets and their boats, pull that harvest out of the sea and take it to the canneries, and we get some benefit of it, and I think this ordinance should be there. I feel very keenly about this. I saw the distress and want of many of the villages of Alaska by reason of when the fish were running heavy, the traps were full. What happened? Did the fishermen get any benefit? No! The canneries said, "We can't take your fish because we are getting so many in the traps we can't handle them. You come on in and work in the cannery here and we will give you $1.25 an hour." The fishermen didn't get any benefit from the run, and I think if everybody is on the same footing, he has his fishing boat and he goes out, it is going to mean a great deal of prosperity to the entire coastal waters of Alaska. I think Mr. Peratrovich and Mr. Emberg can bear me out in the statements I made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: Mr. Chairman, this is such an important question, I am compelled to rise and say what I have against the amendment proposed by Mr. Boswell. I know this question, perhaps, is not understood by, I would estimate, 40 per cent of you here. By that, I mean you don't realize how vital it is to us people down from the Southern Division of Alaska. As Mr. Taylor has related to you, and other speakers here, this attempt of doing something about this unfair competition of fishing with traps has been carried on for years. We have gone to the legislature, and I have been a part of the legislature where an attempt was made to memorialize Congress. In most cases we were successful in doing so, but those of you that are familiar with the proceedings of the legislature are aware of how meaningless memorials are to Congress. You can memorialize all that you want to on any issue you want to, not only fish traps, but that is as far as it will go. You never get any action on it in Congress. Now, I can't say that it was exactly the fault of the legislators that we memorialize Congress to do something about the traps. We had no other alternative under the Organic Act; that was the only way we could approach this vital question, but we made several attempts as I stated. Now, in drawing this constitution, we are very much concerned with our natural resources; we made provisions for one of our major resources -- mining -- and I was satisfied to abide by the people that were familiar with this type of work. I do feel that fisheries is a very important resource to Alaska, too, and it has come to a point where those of us that are willing to live in Alaska and know of no other place, are going to live here permanently, I think it is our duty to try to do something about it. And it is with that thought in mind that I feel that I am compelled to stand here and try to help do something about this unfair competition if I can. Now, it was brought out here that, if this sort of provision is put in the Constitution, it is going to cost the Territory a million dollars. That may be so, but I ask you which is cheaper for us people here to decide. Is it best to lose this approximate figure of a million dollars or else perhaps expend five million dollars to support the people who depend on this type of work? And right today, your welfare departments are taxed to death and, I might add, it's not only the Natives; you have white families as well as the Natives who depend on the welfare departments. The fishermen, they have no way to turn; their resources are depleted to a point where they can't even pay interest on their boats. They can't go to other towns to secure work because they have their own problems also. So I feel that we are going to evade the issue here if we don't make a provision in this constitution. I don't think anybody is going to condemn us for it, and I don't think the canned salmon industry is going to persuade enough people to defeat our constitution just on that ground. Whatever the consequence may be, I think we owe it to the people of Alaska to take care of this resource. Mr. Taylor related that approximately 12,000 people are dependent on this resource. I venture to say it is around 20,000, because, instead of having four men to a boat, you have to have seven now. That is what the seiners are doing also to take care of themselves. They can very easily get along with perhaps four, but there are men with families that need work, consequently they take on extra, and every boat that you see now fishing has approximately seven men on it. Now, that is the situation that exists today, friends, and I think we are evading the issue if we don't take a stand here one way or the other. I urge you to retain such a provision in our constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, subject to committee and other announcements, I move we stand at recess until 7:00 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent. Are there committee announcements to be made at this time? Mr. Victor Rivers.

SUNDBORG: I renew my unanimous consent request for a recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 7:00 p.m. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Mr. Boswell's proposed amendment. Mr. Boswell, are you rising to speak on this?

BOSWELL: If there is anyone else who wishes to speak on this --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to speak? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to say a word or two on this. Mr. President, I would like first to simply endorse almost entirely the things which have been said here before. However, there is one other thing which should be said. I know that there are some of you who wonder whether this issue is basic enough or fundamental enough to justify action by this Convention. I can say in all sincerity that it is my opinion that this one issue is the thing which gave the greatest impetus to the statehood movement which resulted in the calling of this Convention. This issue is so basic and so fundamental that I simply cannot conceive of any written history of Alaska without a full and complete coverage of the history of the impact of the fish traps on one of the greatest natural resources ever known to man. This impact has been so great that this resource is much closer to final destruction than most of us realize. It will probably be said, as it has been said in the past, that we should give the trap operators ample notice before taking any action; that there should be some time element written into the provision whereby we would be sure that the coming of effect of this ordinance would not disrupt the fishing industry in the middle of the season. I submit to you that, when the people of Alaska ratify this ordinance, first notice will have been served. Passage of the enabling act will be the final notice, but even then, there probably will be another period of grace pending the final formation of a state government. The question of the effect on Congress will be raised. The people of Alaska have never made any secret of the fact that, when they achieve statehood, the traps will go. They have abundantly made it clear that this will be so, and they have made it clear for a long number of years. Bills to accomplish this purpose have been before Congress every year for at least 15 years. Alaska is going to face a long and difficult task in rebuilding the salmon run, and the longer present management policies continue, the longer, harder, and more expensive this task is going to be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, in view of the fact that no other delegate has spoken in favor of Mr. Boswell's amendment, I feel constrained to speak in favor of the amendment, and for these reasons, but very briefly and not particularly strongly on it, because I feel that those of us residing in the Second and Fourth Division realize that this is an Alaskan problem and the vote here would be overwhelmingly to abolish fish traps. But I believe the greater problem lies with the First and Third Divisions. Now, at the outset and to explain my reasons for supporting the amendment as offered, the Committee had agreed almost unanimously -- I believe it was eight to one -- supporting an ordinance as offered by Mr. Lee which was short and concise and to the point and said fish traps would be abolished and that we provide for a referendum. Then and at the time I felt, and several members felt, that it was a legislative matter, but we didn't urge the point too strongly until the amendment came out in the Committee with the $5,000 fine and various other sundry things which, to a blind man, spells legislation. Now, I trust that anything I may say will not be taken personally against me by those who are so strongly in favor of the fish trap ordinance, and I felt quite strongly the other day and was somewhat disappointed in speeches on the floor by a great number now who are supporting the fish traps in regard to the game commission, and I am sure that we took that with a smile when it failed to carry the body, and I am sure that those of you who are so strongly in support of this fish trap ordinance as it stands should give me the same consideration. I was disappointed at that time and a little hurt by some of the speeches that were made here against the sports fishermen. Some of them I considered very inappropriate and so, therefore, you may also consider some of my remarks inappropriate as to the fish traps, but I feel here that it is a legislative matter. I can't conceive of any legislature going to Juneau, and the first legislature sitting in Juneau but what a bill would be proposed, and probably one of the first bills before the legislature to abolish fish traps. The state would have a sovereign power to abolish them, and I can't imagine any representative or senator voting against the abolition of fish traps unless he was intending to move on to Seattle right after the session was over. It is, in my opinion, strictly a legislative matter. As my personal feeling goes, I am for the abolition of fish traps. And in the last term of the legislature, every bill that came out in the house that in any way opposed the canned salmon interest I voted for it, and a good many of the bills carried my name along with Mr. Stanley McCutcheon whom I am sure most of you present know how his feeling is in regard to the fish traps. In closing, only this one thought: when we thought of legislative matters it was along this line, that in writing it in -- I simply throw this out for consideration -- there have been any number of states who have written in provisions of certain types that the Congress or some of the members of Congress didn't want to accept and, therefore, they sent the constitution back to the people to change. This was discussed in Committee and that is all that it's worth as to its weight -- that there would be a possibility if the ten-year graduated trap elimination law would be passed by the Federal Government, some of the Congressmen and Senators might raise the point and say, "Well here they have gone contrary in the constitution to the wishes of Congress", and strictly in the face of this federal law, and they might get enough support to say, "We will agree to admit them providing you send it back and have it taken out of the constitution." That has happened in Arizona in the recall of state judges; it has happened in Puerto Rico in the welfare clause; it has happened in Michigan and in 14 or 15 other states in little items that Congress sent the constitutions back. Now, whether that has any point in it or not, I do not know. I still feel -- I still am in favor of the abolition of fish traps, but on such premise as I have spoken, I believe it is a legislative matter, and regardless of this federal law, once we became a state, the first state legislature could exercise its state sovereignty and abolish the traps forthwith, and on that I will close and whichever way this amendment might go, I do hope that if the amendment remains on as part of the article here, that it is substantially changed. In its present form, I believe it is quite dangerous to possibly even the chances of immediate statehood.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I merely wish to ask a question. I have been under the impression, and maybe I have been wrong, that an ordinance is more nearly in the nature of legislation than it is in constitutional law, and I would like to be informed on this fully, whether or not this amendment is legislation in the sense that we know legislation or if it is being put in an ordinance embodied in the constitution. I was of the impression that the ordinances were temporary measures and were not an integral part of the constitution, and that by their nature they were temporary legislation. I want to know.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I think Mr. McNealy will agree with me that the schedule is not a part of the constitution, it's not an integral part of it, and it is strictly a transitory measure. Isn't that right, Mr. McNealy?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: That is right, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Mr. President, I feel like this is my duty as a delegate to let my views be known; how I feel about this issue since I have been connected with the fishing industry for the last 23 years, both as a fisherman and also a little in the packing end of it in the later years. I have fished in Bristol Bay; I have fished with gill nets; I have fished over on the peninsula around Chignik; on boats with gill nets; seining and on traps. I have also fished over on Kodiak Island, and I also know that the traps are not all of our ills. We need to regulate other gears as much as traps. Now, I will clarify that a little bit. I doubt very much if there are very many that are more against traps than I am, but I don't know if an ordinance of this kind is the right thing. I was very much for Mr. Lee's idea to put in the constitution just a few words, "There shall be no fish traps", or something to that effect. But if this is the only way that we can get something in, or that is within the law and that is workable and not be a political football afterwards, I am going to vote for this ordinance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I ask Mr. McNealy a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Did your Committee consider putting this question in the form of a resolution to the first legislature?

McNEALY: No, that wasn't -- as I remember it wasn't considered, at least not to the Territorial legislature. There was talk about a resolution to the Congress.

R. RIVERS: I am speaking of the first state legislature.

McNEALY: Oh, the first state legislature -- I believe not. I think all members of the Committee felt that the first state legislature would abolish them; the feeling was quite strong, Mr. Rivers, on the Committee. I think my answer to that is that possibly a referendum would be a good thing. There may be others on the Committee -- I see that Mr. Hurley has an intelligent look on his face and he might have the answer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I guess this is one of the few times I do have an intelligent look on my face. My understanding, Mr. McNealy, was that there were definitely considered three methods of handling the matter when I was referred to us. It was, as I understand, referred to us with the recommendation that there might be a resolution, but we considered the matter as to whether it should be a resolution, whether it should be in the form of an ordinance, or whether we should report it out at all. And when I voted on that eight-to-one question, I was voting that it shouldn't be a resolution but should be in the ordinances.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, so there is no misunderstanding on my position on fish traps, I just wish to refresh the memories of those who have lived in Alaska since 1948. I handled the campaign for the fishermen against the fish traps, and, as you remember, that vote was eight and a half to one. Therefore, my sincerity, my interest in the elimination of fish traps I trust will not be questioned. Mr. President, the method as recommended by "Governor" Buckalew for the method of handling the elimination of fish traps I think is highly ill-advised, and, in case that the matter before us at the present time results in the defeat of that measure, then I shall introduce or request someone to introduce an amendment or substitute amendment which shall be in substance: "The first state legislature is hereby directed to abolish fish traps for the taking of salmon for commercial purposes in the coastal waters in the State of Alaska." This is a legislative matter; it is a highly emotional thing; it is 100 per cent political. I know how the people of Southeastern feel; I know how Frank feels, and I know how the rest of you feel, and I feel just as deeply about it as they do, but let's do this thing in an orderly manner. Let's do this thing -- everything else we have done so far we have done in a logical manner. Now, let's not be carried away by this. We can accomplish this just as quickly, just as sensibly, in fact a lot better. Now, I should also like to point out that if we entertain Mr. Buckalew's present amendment, we will be complicating our job in Congress, and I must repeat again we have an end product to sell and I think that is terrifically important to us. Now let's not complicate our problem in Congress. We know very well that it would be political suicide for anyone to go to that first legislature and not be in favor of the immediate elimination of fish traps. This, I am sorry to say, I feel, is much of a gimmick. It is a swell publicity deal. I do not question the sincerity of the fishermen and of everyone else to eliminate fish traps, but let's do this thing in an orderly manner, like we are doing everything else.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I feel constrained to talk on this question. I think, in order to reach the heart of the question, we must review slightly what we have before us. I think the question before us should be whether or not we favor including in the constitution a clause actually eliminating fish traps. Now I have studied this matter of fish traps, and the last time was in 1949. At that time, there were 455 fish traps in Alaska. They were owned by 138 owners, practically all residents of the Pacific Northwest. At that time, they were taking between $80,000,000 and $100,000,000 a year in fish out of Alaska waters for a total catch, approximately one-half of which was caught by fish traps. They have, as we all know, seriously depleted the resource, but the question comes to my mind as to whether or not we are justified in taking an action here on this floor in this manner. I believe that it is not constitutional matter and I am going to try and tell you why. I have stood with -- firmly in the matter of putting in the constitution what we thought was basic and needed. I know something of the struggle that went into getting the control of the fisheries under our constitutional act placed in the new state, and I am very fearful that if we do this -- if we pass this in becoming effective immediately upon the acceptance of the state enabling act by Congress, that we will, in all probability, have one of two alternatives. They will either take the fish and the administration of the fisheries out of the constitution; they will either delay it maybe eight or ten years until their ten-year law, if they have one, goes into effect, or else in all probability they will set up some kind of a commission upon which we will have some kind of representation to administer the commercial fisheries. That is the problem as I see it. Now I have voted for the elimination of fish traps; I have worked hard for it; but in the same breath I do not want to see us upset the possibility of statehood and the control of the fisheries by having in here some clause that possibly would be very difficult for the Congress to accept. And I can see as you can see that, if we get statehood, if we get the power of the fisheries, we have the absolute control of the fisheries within our state. Then we can take the action. But now, if we put this up them as a red flag before they give us statehood, I think we are asking them to take the fisheries out from under the new state and in that manner I am sure that the constitution would not be acceptable to the people of Alaska. I know the things are true that have been said here, and I appreciate the sincerity of every man that has said them, but in the same breath I feel that we should put the strongest form of words we could into a resolution, state our position, and pass it on to the first state legislature. I think we are approaching a problem here that will determine whether or not we can arise above the immediate emotions of the moment and act in such a manner that Congress will trust us, or whether we are going to allow our emotions to govern us to take an action which we will regret for a long time. I sincerely feel that; I feel that we should give this matter full thought; and as I said before, I don't think the question is one of whether we are for or against fish traps. The question is: do we want to put it in the constitution, do we want to make the constitutional ratification election a referendum on a law prohibiting fish traps as soon as we get statehood? To my way of thinking, it is an impossibility for those men sitting in Congress, 5,000 miles away, to view anything of the criticalness of the type of problem we have here and not to lean back and say, "Before these people get statehood they are starting to abuse the power." I feel that is the issue. It doesn't seem to me, and I feel sure that the men who have spoken here feel as I do, we know that the fish trap is an obsolete form of monopoly. We can look back and compare it to the old ranch days when they had thousands of acres of range land under their control and a few owners owned all of it and bred their cattle there. They had a grand monopoly on a large piece of grazing land and every year they took advantage of that, and as the time came when it became necessary to spread that resource out among more people, they had to limit the size of their pastures. They had to fence them. They had to raise higher grade cattle to get more beef so more people could participate, and that is what we all want. But I fear gravely that, if we do take this action, that we are going to strike a serious blow at statehood and, if we do take this action, I fear we are going to strike a serious blow at the control of the fisheries, which we now have in our enabling act. So, therefore, I must oppose this amendment -- or this ordinance rather -- coming on the floor, and support the amendment to strike it. I want to say this in closing, that I will go for a good strong resolution to the first state legislature to get busy. Now if we put this ordinance into effect, what happens? It says the police power of the state shall be used to enforce it.

There is a $5,000 fine. How are we going to effectuate it? We have no administration within a department; we have no floating gear to get around to these traps and enforce it. The thing is inoperative, unworkable. It's a wonderful expression of an intense opinion on all of our parts, but I don't think it strikes at our problem and I fear if we put it in we are going to do ourselves a great deal more harm than good.

SMITH: Mr. President, might I ask Mr. Victor Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may ask your question.

SMITH: Mr. Rivers, do you think the Congress can enact any law affecting our fisheries which will be binding upon the state after admission?

V. RIVERS: I don't think so. I don't think that Congress will infringe upon our rights once they grant it to us. I am talking about the original enabling act, the act of admission, where they very well could. We had a definite struggle to get in that act the control of the fisheries. We now have it in the act and I fear that there is a very grave chance that this would be the reason for striking it or withholding statehood.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask consent, being as I have spoken once on this, to read just one sentence from the Senate report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection, you may read it.

SMITH: The Senate report says, "Under Supreme Court decisions, control over the fisheries and wildlife within its borders passes to a new state upon its admission as an incident of statehood."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to comment on the question. I endorse quite fully Delegate Boswell's view on this question. I don't speak on the merits or the demerits of fish traps, but I do think sincerely that this is not constitutional matter. I think it is entirely legislative matter and I have little doubt, relying upon the views of the delegates here tonight, that the first state legislature would abolish fish traps but they would also make some provisions for it -- how the fish trap owners would be compensated, if they are entitled to compensation; some period of time as to when they would be closed, and I think this matter ought to be left up entirely to the legislature.

LEE: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Robertson?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee, you may ask the question if there is no objection.

LEE: I wonder if you are familiar with any payments ever being made to any fishing boats that have been closed out of fishing areas?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I know this, Mr. Lee, and I believe that you and Mr. Peratrovich will agree with me, that the great competition among the fishermen, the purse seiners, of Southeastern Alaska today, is not so much the fish traps but the purse seiners with the big boats come up from Ketchikan I mean from Puget Sound, and they even come up from California, and today it's the amount of mobile gear in our waters that is destroying the catch of the local fishermen. They fish more intensely than many of our local fishermen do. They have bigger outfits and we have no protection against them at all --

LEE: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

LEE: I am sorry to interrupt you, Mr. Robertson. I know you are familiar with the law that states that no boat over 50-foot keel length is allowed to fish in Alaskan waters.

ROBERTSON: That is right, but they still come up with all these boats and they fish there. They are fishing out of Mr. Peratrovich's country in the summertime; they are fishing up in Icy Straits; they are fishing up in Chatham Straits. We have got so many boats down here, I understand -- of course I am not familiar with it in Cook Inlet -- but today a local fisherman barely has a chance, and I have no doubt that is one of the troubles over in Mr. Emberg's country -- in Bristol Bay. They have too many boats with too much mobile gear.

LEE: Well, the point I was trying to get was that you mentioned that they brought up so much bigger boats from the states.

ROBERTSON: Well, probably the word "big" might be mistaken, they are better equipped and they are more efficient in their fishing and they do fish harder. You know that, Mr. Lee.

LEE: No, sir. I question anybody ever fishing any harder than I do.
(Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I just want to clarify a statement Mr. Robertson made there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: It is true that we are getting some of their larger boats for outside fishing, off Cape Addington and Icy Straits, but I will also add that they don't find it profitable. They are there about a week and then go back South. Why is that? They can make better money there for the simple reason that they were farsighted enough to eliminate their traps about 15 years ago and have built up their run. Some of our boys, those that can afford it, even have to go down there now to make a living. They can't do it up here. That is the reason we would like to get the traps out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Buckalew through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Buckalew, could you differentiate for me, and others perhaps, the schedule provisions with the constitutional coverage per se, constitutional matter as we normally think of it. How does that differ from a schedule provision? I think you touched on this earlier, but I think the ensuing discussion might warrant its mention again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I think, in fairness to the Convention, Delegate Lee and some of the other members on the Committee discussed for many weeks whether it was a proper subject to even put in a schedule. We rejected the idea that it was proper to go into the constitution itself, and after an examination of the law and the various types of ordinances that have been provided in other schedules, this seemed to be more than proper to put it in our schedule here in Alaska. It is not a part of the constitution; it is an appendage that is added to it and just takes care of the transitory or transitional measures, and I don't think you could say in any wise it's a part of the constitution. I don't know whether that answers your question or not.

RILEY: Thank you. One other question, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

RILEY: Assuming that the pending amendment is defeated, there is every possibility is there not that the language which may be objectionable in your amendment might then be corrected or changed?

BUCKALEW: I'd hate to see much of the language stricken, but if that is the will of the body, I guess it has to be done.

RILEY: It's certainly in the amendment process though?

BUCKALEW: It's in the amendment process, certainly, subject to amendment.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask Mr. Riley a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Do you have amendments to propose?

RILEY: It wouldn't be in order at the moment, and I have none now, no.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? If not, Mr. Boswell, you might close.

BOSWELL: Well, in closing, I wish to make it perfectly clear that I have no brief for fish traps and I certainly will agree with anything Mr. Lee, Mr. Emberg, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Peratrovich have said regarding the abolishment of fish traps. The only thing that I do feel rather strongly about is that this is not the proper way to go about it. I would much rather see this handled as a resolution by the first legislature, and, barring that, if we do have something like this, I would like to see it set up in a way that it would be done in an orderly manner so we will not find ourselves in a bad position when we become a state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Boswell through the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. Boswell, do you have a resolution prepared on this matter?

BOSWELL: I have not.

McNEES: May I ask Mr. Boswell a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

McNEES: Would you prepare such a resolution, Mr. Boswell?

BOSWELL: I would be glad to work on one.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment --"

LEE: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Sections 24 and 25 of Proposal 17/a."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. The delegates will please refrain from speaking when a person's name is called.

ROSSWOG: I though we were voting on his motion to strike the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 19 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Hilscher, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Metcalf, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 30 - Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Emberg, H. Fischer, F. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Sweeney, Taylor, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - Collins, McLaughlin, Nolan, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

HERMANN: I wish to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann changes her vote to "no".

McNEES: I would like to change my vote to "no" also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees changes his vote to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 19 yeas, 30 nays, and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "Nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, since we don't have numbers on the amendment, but one, two, three, four, five, six lines up, I would like to strike the language, "pending the establishment of the first state legislature" and retain the comma. I ask unanimous consent.

SMITH: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: On the copy that I have it is on line 1 of page 2.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The amendment that was adopted -- as offered by Mr. Buckalew -- is on sixth line from the bottom.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. Could we refer to it as the amendment of January 25? I think then we will know what everyone is talking about at all times.

BUCKALEW: That is perfectly agreeable with me. The amendment of January 25, then. Mr President, sixth line up, starting with the word --

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is the 26th, so you can change the date. It says on the amendment the 25th, but, it is the 26th.

BUCKALEW: Then, six lines up, strike the language, "pending the establishment of the first state legislature", and move the comma back up to Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. I have been working here with an amendment dated January 25.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It says January 25, but this is the 26th today.

BUCKALEW: He was referring to the date on the amendment, Mr. President.

HELLENTHAL: I should like perhaps to have the delegates refer to the date on the paper so we will all know what paper we are talking about, and that is the 25th.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, it has become now a part of Committee Proposal No. 17/a. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I ask unanimous consent that the language be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I'd like to ask you, why did you do that?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I'll raise objection, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

EMBERG: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Emberg. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: The language -- when I first started working on the proposal, I was trying to tie it in with the Tennessee Plan, and then subsequent changes in the preamble of the schedule makes the language unnecessary, and it is confusing. That is the reason why I wanted it stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: It appears to me that by striking this terminology we, in effect, make it a part of the constitution. Despite the fact that this may appear to be a transitory provision, it certainly doesn't make anything transit of it when it states there is an absolute prohibition. There is no "pending the first state legislature" or anything else.

BUCKALEW: Mr. McCutcheon, it is in the schedule, which means it would be a proper subject for the legislature to handle. If it was in the body of the constitution, you would have to amend it, so it is a transitional measure in that sense.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, if I recall Mr. Buckalew's statement correctly during the argument on the Boswell amendment, I recall him saying that the purpose of this proposal was to prevent the use of fish traps after we became a state, and, if the first legislature did nothing about it, that then this matter would still stay in full force and effect, which is vastly different to my way of thinking than what he says now, that as soon as we do become a state, this language would no longer be effective because it is in the schedule and under the transitory provisions. I, for one, would like to know what position he expects to stand on.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I don't think I am standing in an inconsistent position, because the state legislature can still act on it and there are certain transitional measures that are in the schedule that will probably be in effect for years and years and years, and as I understand the law, if the legislature never acted on this, fish traps from then on would probable be abolished by this transitional measure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, in line with the discussion on the proposed amendment, I wonder if Mr. Buckalew would explain here -- on all the other transitional provisions or ordinances in effect, and that others are termed "by ordinance" or were in Committee and here, this is called a "proposed constitutional provision". Does the use of the word "provision" have any effect on a "provision" as differentiated from an "ordinance"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: As I recall from the cases I have read, using the term "provision", you have broader latitude in the subject matter that you can handle in a schedule, and I was a little fearful that if I used the term "ordinance", it might be grounds for attack in court. And I suspect that, depending upon when we are admitted, this particular ordinance will probably be subject to a lot of litigation. I just wanted to be sure that it would stand up. In this form I think it will serve the purpose for which it was drawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 26 - Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Cross, Emberg, V. Fisher, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, Wien, Rosswog, Mr. President.

Nays: 24 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Londborg, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Sweeney, Walsh, White.

Absent: 5 - Collins, McLaughlin, Nolan, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did the Chief Clerk get Mr. Stewart's vote?

STEWART: I believe not. I vote "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: He was absent when I --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart votes "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 26 yeas, 24 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask unanimous consent for a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Section 24 of Committee Proposal No. 17/a? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President. I would like to offer one more amendment and then I will be through. Looking at the amendment of January 25, 1956, at the bottom of the line, strike "by a fine not to exceed $5,000 and", so that it will read, "Violation of this section shall be punishable by confiscation of the fish traps."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: I so move the adoption and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the adoption of the amendment and asks unanimous consent. Is there objection?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Could we have it read again, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Last line on page 1, strike 'by a fine not to exceed' and on page 2 strike '$5,000 and', so that the sentence reads, "Violations of this section shall be punishable by confiscation of the fish trap.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 24? If not, are there amendments to Section 25? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Is it in order to make amendments to Section 24?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I move and ask unanimous consent that the last sentence of Section 24 be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves and asks unanimous consent that the last sentence of Section 24 be stricken. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment, the sentence that is to be deleted.

CHIEF CLERK: "The sentence, 'The police power of the state shall be used to the extent necessary to enforce this section.' shall be stricken."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of Mr. Kilcher?

DOOGAN: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I so move, Mr. President.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves the adoption of the amendment, seconded by Mr. Knight. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I think the language is superfluous. If we want these fish traps confiscated, there certainly will be somebody there to do the job, and it makes the ordinance longer than necessary and uses language that I think is too strong for sensitive nerves.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I certainly will support the amendment and I think we should try to make the best possible language and sense out of these things. I voted on the opposite side of this, not because I was not in favor of the action, because I felt there was a different route to accomplishing this, but this is now becoming amended to the place where I think it isn't as offensive as it was. I certainly will support deleting this sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to know why Mr. Buckalew or whoever wrote this put that in there.

KILCHER: Point of order -- that is not the question at hand.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. Sundborg asked --

SUNDBORG: What is the purpose of having that in there?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, if there is no objection, you may ask the question.

SUNDBORG: It was put in by some member of the Committee or by the Committee. Is it necessary or is it superfluous?

BUCKALEW: I probably got carried away with myself, Mr.

Sundborg. I think that the language can be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All of those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments for Section 24? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I ask Mr. Buckalew a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Buckalew, in connection with the first part of this section where it says, "If this constitution shall be accepted by the electors," are you referring there to the election which will be held in April of this year?

BUCKALEW: Yes.

JOHNSON: And if the majority should adopt the constitution -- or ratify it -- and adopt the referendum which we propose, do you say that "the following shall become effective", do you mean immediately after this election that this language will become effective?

BUCKALEW: It will become effective when the President issues his proclamation.

JOHNSON: Well, then, why do you say that "If this constitution be accepted by the electors, the following shall become effective..." How do you propose to bring that about? That is what I am interested in.

BUCKALEW: Well, the constitution would have to be accepted by the people.

JOHNSON: But that doesn't make it effective.

BUCKALEW: No, it won't become effective until the President issues a proclamation authorizing us to become a state; that is when this ordinance will become effective.

JOHNSON: Then we would have that power anyway, wouldn't we?

BUCKALEW: That is true -- that is true.

JOHNSON: Then what is the purpose of this?

BUCKALEW: The purpose of this ordinance -- as I said before -- the minute the President issues the proclamation the traps are illegal. We don't have to wait 30 days, 40 days, or six months for the legislature to get around to acting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other proposed amendments for Section 24? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would like to ask this question of Mr. Buckalew. Mr. Buckalew, would you object to using the language "ratified by the people" rather than "accepted by the electors" in Section 24?

BUCKALEW: I can't see that it makes any difference, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I notice that the Enabling Act, Chapter 46 of the 1955 legislature, uses the words, "ratification of the constitution by the people".

BUCKALEW: I figured Style and Drafting could probably take care of it but I wouldn't have any objection to it.

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent that the word "accepted" be stricken and the word -- if you feel, Mr. McCutcheon, that this is a matter for Style and Drafting, I withdraw my motion.

MCCUTCHEON: I will propose a question, Mr. President. I would ask whether or not the Style and Drafting Committee had been discharged yet or not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Style and Drafting Committee is a full-functioning Committee as it will be until the time that this Convention adjourns sine die. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask Mr. Sundborg a question? Do you feel that that change would be a proper subject for your Committee?

SUNDBORG: I feel it would be a proper subject for us to consider. I can't say what the Committee would do; we will consider it, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: You wouldn't regard it as a matter of substance?

SUNDBORG: No, I would not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: May I ask permission to ask Mr. Buckalew -- ?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. McNealy, you may ask a question.

McNEALY: Mr. Buckalew, what would you say is the benefit, if any, of the words in the indented part there, starting out "as a matter of immediate public necessity" and down to the second time "Alaska" is used? What is the purpose or necessity for the words?

BUCKALEW: The only reason that language was inserted, Mr. McNealy, is to justify the use of the proposition in the schedule, and it set out that it is a matter of immediate public necessary and that is the reason the language should be left in here. Otherwise, if it wasn't a necessity, we could wait until the first state legislature, and I think the language serves a necessary purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I direct another question to Mr. Buckalew?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Buckalew, we have, I believe, in some other part of our constitution some language which says that no property shall be taken from a citizen without just compensation. Do you believe that some provision should be made for repayment for the taking of these traps under this proposal?

BUCKALEW: I certainly do not, Mr. Johnson, because the courts of Alaska have ruled time and time again that there is no property right in fishing, that it is an annual privilege; and I don't know of any legal question that could be raised, because you don't even have a right from year to year in a trap site. I think even Judge Folta has held that it is an annual privilege. I believe Mr. Robertson will bear me out on that.

JOHNSON: I thought I understood Mr. Eldor Lee to say that he couldn't even acquire a trap site because they were all held by other people.

BUCKALEW: I advised you of what my understanding of the law is and I think it is settled. Now, if you want to ask Mr. Lee about that, I don't know anything about it.

JOHNSON: Well, this is your amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: If I might say a word on that, the trap sites are held by the parties who hold them under a series of regulations which make it impossible for any more than a certain number to hold those sites. They are actually open to anyone. It's the economic feature which prevents anyone from going in and taking over those trap sites.

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. What is the matter at issue?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, there is no matter at issue. A question was asked and the delegates have been attempting to answer it. Are there other amendments for Sections 24 or 25? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, it seems to me like we have been talking about an ordinance, and in looking this over, it seems to me that we have a constitutional referendum instead of an ordinance -- a referendum will be taken on this subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, are you offering an amendment?

TAYLOR: I am going to offer an amendment. I am going to move that the last five lines be stricken and the following inserted in its place: "Shall the proposed constitutional ordinance prohibiting the use of fish traps for the taking of salmon be adopted?" Striking "for commercial purposes until otherwise", as I feel that it would be superfluous because nobody would ever build a fish trap for pleasure. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will please come to order. Mr. Taylor moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

MARSTON: I second that motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Marston. Mr. Lee.

LEE: I ask unanimous consent that we have a one-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the amendment as proposed by Mr. Taylor. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Shall the proposed constitutional ordinance prohibiting the use of fish traps for the taking of salmon be adopted?"

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded. Wasn't it moved and seconded?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I thought Mr. Marston seconded. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: What was that clause?

CHIEF CLERK: (Answer not audible.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us the motion as it was presented by Mr. Taylor.

HERMANN: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Wasn't it a motion to strike and substitute?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the last five lines on page 2 and insert the following: 'Shall the proposed constitutional ordinance prohibiting the use of fish traps for the taking of salmon be adopted?'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, is his new amendment amendable right now or not? I would like to move that the words "for commercial purposes" be inserted in there.

TAYLOR: I would include the insertion of the words "for commercial purposes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the words "for commercial purposes" are not being deleted under the amendment. The Chief Clerk will now read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the last five lines on page 2 and insert in its place: 'Shall the proposed constitutional ordinance prohibiting the use of fish traps for the taking of salmon for commercial purposes be adopted?'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I favor this amendment. Our handbook here which contains a copy of the act of the last legislature says, "The Constitution and proper ordinances or such ordinances as the Constitutional Convention adopts may be referred to the public for ratification." So I would rather have this called a constitutional ordinance than a constitutional provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I ask unanimous consent the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I have an amendment to Section 24. The last line on page 1, starting with "violations of this section shall be punishable by confiscation of the fish traps" -- strike that sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher moves. Is there a second to the motion?

ROBERTSON: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Robertson, that the last sentence in Section 24 be deleted. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I am sure --

HILSCHER: May I say something?

BUCKALEW: Go right ahead.

HILSCHER: Do I have the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may have the floor, Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: "Violations of this section shall be punishable by confiscation of the fish traps." The objections that we will hear probably are that we have to have that in there in order to take care of the police powers of the state. The police powers are already inherent in the state and by the elimination of that language it will ease the job that we have to do to sell statehood to Congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: If I may speak before Mr. Buckalew closes, and that is, the only thing you can confiscate is contraband. You can't confiscate property. Now those traps might have some salvage value. I am afraid we are getting into trouble if we talk about confiscating those fish traps so I am going to support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: I am not familiar with the problems that would be involved in the legal matter concerning this, but I do know that if a fishing boat violates a law, his equipment is susceptible to being confiscated immediately, and it seems that this would be similar, I don't know. Maybe there is something I can't see about it, between a trap and a seine or something like that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Well, if this amendment carries, we might as well forget it because it's meaningless. There would be no point in putting this ordinance out for a separate vote of the people. That is the purpose of sending it out to the people, so that we can get the authority to exercise the police power. Now, if you are not going to provide for confiscation, it wouldn't have any force or effect at all. It would be useless and a waste of time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: You could provide for confiscation by an action in rem in the courts, and you also can confiscate the fish that were in the traps. They would be contraband because they were caught unlawfully with the traps, but they can't take a boat and say "this is ours now". The government can't do that and the state can't do it because that is taking property without due process of law. If you catch one, shackle the gear out in the water and the illegal fish -- it is only 50 yards long, you have still got to bring an action in rem in the district court, which is a libel action, to take that piece of gear and keep it and sell it. You cannot take it and say this belongs to the government or to the state. They can take and hold them all right, just the same as when you catch anybody committing a crime or a felony and hold them until they get released. You can put up a bond and get your boat released.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Taylor, with this language, you still have to use the courts. You still just can't go out and grab them.

TAYLOR: It's a word I don't like to use too much but the legislature could implement this. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I personally do not see eliminating this language unless we substitute something else in lieu. This provision is designed primarily to take care of the period from the time we become a state until the time that our first legislature could meet and pass the necessary legislation. Unless we declare this a felony or have some fine provided or do something, the rest of it means exactly nothing, so they are illegal. The point is we have a governor established; we have an executive who has the executive powers. This would provide for violations, I mean this would still say that the taking of salmon is prohibited. It doesn't say what kind of a violation it is or anything. To me, strictly as a layman, that section would mean nothing and I certainly would want to have a very thorough explanation of what powers would be left if nothing else is substituted for the sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr has been attempting to get the floor.

BARR: May I ask a question of Mr. Buckalew?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. Buckalew, I am working for the state here and there is a question in my mind whether it's desirable for the state to confiscate the fish traps. Now, after the state takes it over, what becomes of it? Wouldn't they be obliged to go to a lot of expense to pull the piling as a navigational hazard?

BUCKALEW: Mr. Barr, that is really not the problem. The only thing the state would do would be to see that the traps cease fishing and probably just leave the piling out there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask Mr. Fischer a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Fischer, do you think that if provision were made that violations of the section -- or could it be possible to say, "Adherence to this section shall be enforced by injunction, mandatory injunction, restraining orders" -- would that remove your objections?

V. FISCHER: I don't know if that would be sufficient. I have a feeling that it should be equivalent to a law for this interim period to provide the actual means and charge under which somebody could be taken to court, fined, or some kind of penalty imposed. I may be completely wrong, but that is the way it seems to me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: May I answer Mr. Fischer's question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Fischer, we have a very adequate remedy for cases like that. Now, according to the ordinance, it would be prohibited to operate a fish trap. If the trap was operated or operating, the owners of the trap can be taken into court, and an order can be issued restraining them from operating the trap. If they violate the injunction, then they can be brought for contempt of court and given a jail sentence or a fine. You have the method of punishment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I am firmly of the opinion that "confiscate" is not the word that should be used there, and I don't think it is possible to confiscate, in the literal meaning of the word, confiscate a fish trap, and I think that some better language had better be worked out. You can destroy it certainly, but there is a property value there even though the man never owns a trap site. There is a property value in the trap itself, and the investment he has in it, and the money he spends to build it and to equip it. I think all of that would be subject to compensation, and I don't think you can confiscate it, and what would you do with it if you did? You can't haul it away; you can't sell it; you can't fish with it because trap fishing is being barred. It's a very poor provision in the act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: May I ask Mrs. Hermann a question? Mrs. Hermann, is a gun property?

HERMANN: Certainly.

SMITH: I know it for a fact that the Fish and Wildlife Service has made a practice of confiscating the guns used in the illegal taking of game. How is that accomplished?

HERMANN: Well, that is accomplished by confiscating the gun, but try and confiscate a fish trap that is the size that we have agreed they are.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal has been trying to get the floor.

HELLENTHAL: I just want to say that I think our difficulty here is that we are trying to legislate in a constitutional ordinance, and I ask for a recess of a couple of minutes to see if we can approach it from another angle.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have Mr. Hilscher's proposed amendment before us at this time. Is there further discussion? Does anyone else want to be heard? If not, Mr. Hilscher, you may close the argument.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, a great deal of legal discussion has gone on in this last recess on what should be done in case that last sentence is stricken. Now, it is doubtful that we can arrive at a full and complete settlement of this matter at this time. Yet I would like to point out a couple of items which should be under consideration in whatever action we take on this amendment. As I understand it, the principal value of a fishing location is not the fish trap itself, but it is the location of the trap at a particular point, a particular cove, or at some location where salmon congregate. That location has a definite value. How you are going to confiscate that location on the map of Alaska is a question which must be settled. Now, if the members here are agreeable to arriving at a better wording of this amendment that will result as a result of my withdrawing my motion, I am perfectly agreeable to withdrawing the motion, provided that an attempt will be made to arrive at a better understanding of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent that your proposed amendment be withdrawn, Mr. Hilscher? Is that your desire?

HILSCHER: May we have a 30 second recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for 30 seconds.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

HILSCHER: I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher asks unanimous consent that his amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered withdrawn. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, in view of the amendments that have already been adopted and offered by Mr. Taylor, I would ask unanimous consent in line 3, to strike the word "proposition" and insert the word "ordinance"; and in line 4, to strike the word "proposition" and insert the word "ordinance"; and then to further clarify the matter, in line 4, I would like to add this language: after the word "effective" add "upon the entry into force of this constitution", and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "On lines 3 and 4, change the word 'proposition' to ordinance'; and on line four, after the word 'effective', add the following words: 'upon the entry into force of this constitution'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that your wording, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: That's the wording, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure?

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the adoption of his amendment. Is there a second?

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I don't know what that language means.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to Mr. Buckalew's motion?

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Knight. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: What date is that?

BUCKALEW: I can tell you the time that it would take place. The constitution would enter into force after the governor was elected and the legislature was elected and the President issued the proclamation. You would have your governor and the legislature and the returns would be certified and I think the minute the governor certifies the election then the constitution goes into effect.

HELLENTHAL: Then would there be any need for this if it is going to be after the first legislature is elected? I thought that you had been telling us that this was for the period prior to the election of the first legislature.

BUCKALEW: No. Your governor is going to take his office prior to the time the legislature convenes. You have all your state officers. The elections would be certified to cover the time from the date the proclamation is issued until the state legislature convenes and acts on the subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: That would be about one month in the middle of the winter.
(Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I ask the privilege of the floor for discussion on this matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers, you may have the privilege of the floor.

(Mr. Victor Rivers spoke for a few moments under privilege of the floor.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: In my opinion, this Convention wouldn't have the authority to put a referendum on fish traps out to the people, because it wouldn't be a necessary part of the Convention. This is part of the schedule. This is a subject which is within our authority. We have no authority to require the governor to put another referendum on fish traps on the ballot. I mean, they can strike it before we got started.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question before us is the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention? All those in favor of adopting the amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: In Section 25, where it states, "shall the proposed constitutional ordinance", I move and ask unanimous consent that the word "proposed" before "constitutional" be stricken. It will not be a "proposed ordinance" if it is adopted by this Convention. It will be an "ordinance".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy asks unanimous consent that the word "proposed" in the first line of the question that will be on the ballot be deleted. Is there objection to deleting the word "proposed" in that question? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Sections 24 or 25? Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I thought there would be an amendment after Mr. Hilscher withdrew his suggestion on confiscation of fish traps. I thought there was to be additional words that would be brought in, and that was why you withdrew your amendment.

HILSCHER: That is correct.

ARMSTRONG: Does anyone have the wording that you suggested?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there such an amendment to be offered at this time?

HILSCHER: May we have a two-minute recess and see if we can resurrect it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments for Sections 24 or 25? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, we seem to have a disagreement here on the violation provision. I would like to ask unanimous consent to put this over until a time certain, and give us a chance to work the penalty provision out that would be acceptable to the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew asks unanimous consent --

V. RIVERS: I rise to a question on that. I'm wondering if the Committee, if they do have this time certain, will consider the fact that all these fish traps are governed by the leased land which is part of the upland, and I wonder if, when the Territory becomes a state, not having jurisdiction over any lands and that part not being withdrawn, just exactly how far our jurisdiction would extend? In our clauses here, we have accepted all these lands subject to existing leases and so forth. I am wondering what the immediate effect would be, and I hope the Committee will keep that in mind when they start working out their enforcement clause.

BUCKALEW: We will keep that in mind, Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, at the point of saving time, I wonder if I might direct a statement through the Chair to any of the legal members here, if this is carried over until tomorrow, Mr. President, to consider that the only right that we have to draw ordinances in this Constitutional Convention and which has been considered by part of the Committee is under the enabling act calling this Convention, and, if the attorneys and others are interested, before tomorrow we will consider this legal proposition very seriously, because the language of our Act says the Convention shall have the power to make ordinances and take all measures necessary or proper in preparation for the admission of Alaska as a state of the Union, and I can read nothing into that, and it was based upon that particular section, Mr. President, that we will probably attempt to advance the Tennessee Plan because that will advance statehood. If it can be read into this that the fish trap ordinance will advance statehood, then the ordinance will be legal. But I wish those members interested would consider it overnight. It is a serious legal proposition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Buckalew's unanimous consent request that the consideration of Committee Proposal No. 17/a --

METCALF: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Did you move, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew so moves. Is there a second?

EMBERG: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Emberg that the proposal be held over until a later date. All in favor of holding the proposition over until a later time will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposal is ordered held over. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: At this time I would like to give notice of reconsideration, having voted on the prevailing side on the Boswell amendment, giving notice of reconsideration of my vote tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You voted "no" on that?

McNEES: Yes, I did, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees serves notice of his intention to reconsider his vote on the Boswell amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 8/a on resources, has compared it with the original and find it correctly engrossed. In enrolling it, there were two sets of enclosing commas that were inadvertently left out but I made note of those for the enrolling committee rather than send it back to the boiler room, and I hope that will be acceptable to the delegates in that fashion. The enrolled copies will be placed on the desks this evening, and I move the adoption of the committee report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves the adoption of the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Is there objection?

RILEY: I second the motion.

SWEENEY: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley seconds the motion. Unanimous consent is asked. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee is now ready to make the report which we passed over earlier on our calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, before you proceed, Committee Proposal No. 8/a is referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting is now prepared to make the report on amendments to the preamble and declaration of rights which we passed over earlier.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Article I, Article on Preamble and declaration of rights.

SUNDBORG: The report, Mr. President, is on Section 16, which by unanimous consent -- Section 18 -- which by unanimous consent was recommitted to our Committee last night with instructions to bring out new language, and the proposed new language is on the desk of the Chief Clerk and copies are being distributed now to delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the committee report.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 18 and substitute the following: 'In civil cases where the amount in controversy exceeds two hundred fifty dollars, the right of trial by jury is preserved to the same extent as it existed at common law. The legislature may make provision for a verdict by not less than three-fourths of the jury, and in courts not of record, may provide for a jury of not less than six or more than twelve.'"

SUNDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I second the motion.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: We don't have them in the back.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We'll hold that motion up until we have them in the back. Something must have happened to the President's copy of Article No. I -- not the amendments, but the article itself -- Style and Drafting report. What is your pleasure, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move for the adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee on Style and Drafting be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: We have two additional committee amendments to Article I which we would like to move at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, page 2, line 1, after the word 'denied' insert 'the enjoyment of'."

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Hellenthal.

JOHNSON: I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Is there another amendment? The Chief Clerk will please read it.

CHIEF CLERK: "In the preamble, fourth line after the word 'liberty' add the words 'within the Union of States'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the amendment. Do you ask unanimous consent, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I will ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I ask that the record show that I do not approve of either of these amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You offered no objection but you just wanted the record to show it?

HERMANN: I offer no objection.

NORDALE: I'll join Mrs. Hermann in those sentiments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann and Mrs. Nordale wish the record to show that they do not approve of these two amendments but they offer no objection. Are there other amendments or questions relating to Article I, the article on the preamble and declaration of rights? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I will move and ask unanimous consent that we consider at this time my motion to rescind our action on Mr. Barrie White's amendment to the preamble.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves that the Convention at this time rescind its action on the amendment offered by Mr. Barrie White to the preamble of this article. Is there a second to the motion?

COOPER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Cooper. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I bring this matter back on the floor because we spent some two-and-a-half hours on that. The original preamble was authored by 12 members of this body jointly; there is no individual pride of authorship. It was voted for by 49 of the members of this body, and 4 absent, and 2 dissenting. I feel that in context there has been a material change in the body -- or rather, in the intent, at least, of this body by the amendment offered by the Style and Drafting Committee. For that reason I move this rescinding motion at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now, would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment that had been offered by Mr. White.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the preamble in the Style and Drafting Committee copy and insert the preamble from the first enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I was one who voted in favor of the preamble as it was offered in the enrolled copy, but immediately upon looking at it, I said publicly here to delegates here that certainly this will have to be dressed up by Style and Drafting. I don't believe that any of us ever vote on a particular formation and coupling of words together. We always vote knowing that there has to be some changes to dress the thing up. Therefore, I will oppose this move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I also have no particular pride of authorship. I was a member of the subcommittee that broached the redraft which was accepted by the full committee without changes, I think Mrs. Nordale and Mr. Hurley served with me on that committee and we were advised by our technical advisers. However, I wish to say this: that the original amendment as offered by Mr. White is even faulty mechanically. It lacks some fundamental things that belong in any well-written preamble. It states no purpose in writing a preamble. The Constitution of the United States reads as follows -- I am not sure I can give you all the -- exactly the order in which the provisions fall:

"We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, and promote the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain this Constitution." And I am not quoting it exactly, but I am giving you the substance of it. In other words, every well-written preamble to a constitution has that phrase - "in order to do" something. In this preamble which we wrote, we have "In order to secure and transmit to succeeding generations our heritage of civil, political, and religious liberty". That is the phrase which gives us the reason for writing the constitution -- "In order to transmit to succeeding generations our heritage of civil, political, and religious liberty, we do ordain and establish this constitution for the State of Alaska." There is nothing whatsoever in the original constitution, even if it was written by 12 people and subscribed to by the whole dozen, that says "in order to do" anything. It is a collection of words -- high-sounding, nice words, with God in the middle instead of up front where he belongs, and it in no sense says "in order to do" something. Now I don't mind having my own phraseology changed, but I hate to be one of a Style and Drafting Committee that turns out on the world a preamble, which is probably the only part of the constitution that will be read by hundreds and thousands of people, that isn't even mechanically correct in its structure, and for that reason I am going to oppose the rescission motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, noting that many of the delegates do not have both copies before them, I would ask unanimous consent that the Chief Clerk read first the preamble which appeared in the enrolled copy, and next the preamble which is in the Style and Drafting Committee report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk will please read first the preamble as it appears in the enrolled copy, and then the preamble as it appears in the report by the Committee on Style and Drafting.

CHIEF CLERK: "We the people of Alaska, conscious of our heritage of political, civil, and religious liberty, faithful to God and to those who founded the nation and pioneered this great land, reaffirm our belief in government by the consent of the governed within the Union of States, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Alaska."

CHIEF CLERK: "We the people of Alaska, grateful to God and to those who founded our nation and pioneered this great land, in order to secure and transmit to succeeding generations our heritage of political, civil, and religious liberty within the Union of States do ordain and establish this constitution for the State of Alaska."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now if you vote "yes" on this motion to rescind you will be in effect -- you will be substituting the enrolled copy of the preamble as it appears in the enrolled copy, for the preamble as it appears in the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting. If you vote "no" on the motion for rescinding, the preamble will remain as it is in the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I am sorry this has to be such a long drawn out procedure but I would just like to take a minute. It was inferred last night, I think, on the floor, and again tonight, that one of my motives in moving this substitution was the fact that the word "God" may appear somewhere near the middle of this first draft and it is way up front in the second one. That is not my objection; I think it's fine way up front. My objection primarily was that the Style and Drafting draft left out the words "reaffirm our belief in government by consent of the governed within the Union of States," which I think is a very happy phrase to have in our preamble. As the report came out from Style and Drafting Committee, that phrase did indeed appear way down in Section 2, but you will recall that we have now replaced Section 2 with the old Section 2 so this phrase now no longer appears anywhere in the bill of rights. Secondly, "in order to secure and transmit to succeeding generations" doesn't appear to me to be a very strong or happy phrase for our preamble. It may mean to some people to give up something we now have and hand it on to future generations, but I don't think it is a very well-worded phrase. For those two reasons I preferred and I felt that a lot of the other members preferred and I am sure -- at least I was so assured by several members of the Committee on Style and Drafting -- the original preamble.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind the action taken in voting down Mr. White's amendment?" Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: A roll call, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: The way you placed that statement --

PRESIDENT EGAN: "Shall the convention rescind the action taken in voting down Mr. Barrie White's proposed amendment?" If you vote "yes" you are voting for Mr. White's amendment; if you vote "no" you are voting in opposition to Mr. White's amendment. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 8 - H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Kilcher, Laws, Poulsen, V. Rivers, White, Wien.

Nays: 41 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - Coghill, Collins, McLaughlin, Marston, Nolan, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 8 yeas, 41 nays, and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the Convention has failed to rescind its action. Are there other questions or proposed amendments for Article I, the article on the preamble and declaration of rights? Miss Awes.

AWES: I have a committee amendment but I think it goes to substance. Is this the proper time for it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it would be the proper time, Miss Awes, it would take a suspension of the rules. Would you care to read the amendment?

AWES: The amendment is on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 19, page 5, strike 'except in case of absconding debtors' and substitute: 'this does not prohibit civil arrest of absconding debtors'."

AWES: What do I move, to suspend the rules so we can vote on this amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now the question is, is that a change in substance or is it a change in the method of accomplishing the same thing? The Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair will rule that the proposed amendment is not a substantive amendment; it is a clarifying amendment and consequently is just a phraseology amendment. Miss Awes, do you move the adoption?

AWES: I move the adoption and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves adoption of the proposed amendment and asks unanimous consent. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other questions relating to Article I? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there are no further amendments, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that the preamble and the article on declaration of rights be advanced to third reading and final passage, be read by title only and placed upon final adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves -- Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Did Mr. Sundborg make his motion [to include] "in case there are no amendments"? I have an amendment to offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have an amendment to offer to the -- what section, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: Section 19, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: An amendment in substance and consequently will take a two-thirds vote, I realize that.

TAYLOR: I am going to rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

TAYLOR: The point is that it comes too late, that Mr. Sundborg had made another motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, in effect, Mr. Kilcher's rising at that time constitutes an objection to the unanimous consent request for the purpose of submitting an amendment, and the Chair has no other way that the Chair could rule. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I move the rules be suspended and the amendment in Section 19 be adopted, namely, to strike the rest of the sentence after the comma and make a period out of the comma -- "except in case of absconding debtors".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the rules be suspended. Is there a second to the motion?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Isn't this the same amendment that was offered when this was in second reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was this amendment ever presented to the Convention previously? If it was, it is out of order.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Kilcher has asked for a suspension of the rules. I think under a suspension of the rules that he would be in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, if Mr. Kilcher could get a suspension of the rules, you are correct.

HERMANN: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: The sentence has been amended by the amendment offered by Miss Awes, and consequently he is asking us to strike the wrong thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Isn't there a comma there anymore, Mrs. Hermann?

KILCHER: Yes, change the comma to a period, but strike the rest of the sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher's motion now is, "Shall the rules be suspended in order that he might submit this amendment?"

HERMANN: May we have read how the rest of the sentence is now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read how Section 19 reads at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: "There shall be no imprisonment for debt but this does not prohibit civil arrest of absconding debtors."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 15 - Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, V. Fischer, Harris, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, Londborg, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Riley, Stewart, Sundborg.

Nays: 35 - Armstrong, Awes, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Coghill, Collins, McLaughlin, Nolan, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 15 yeas, 35 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rules have not been suspended. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the preamble and the article on declaration of rights, under suspension of the rules, be advanced to third reading, be read by title only, and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the preamble and Article I, the declaration of rights, be advanced to third reading, read the third time by title only, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the article on the preamble and declaration of rights is now before us in third reading and open for debate. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, because I hear that the coffee shop closes at 10:00 o'clock or soon thereafter, I now move that we have a 15-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the mover of the motion would agree to extend it 10 minutes. I should like in any event to call a meeting immediately of the Committee No. VI, Suffrage and Elections and Apportionment, upstairs following the recess --immediately following the declaration of recess.

BARR: I will amend my move then for a recess until 9:50.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate Barr moves that the Convention stand at recess until 9:50. Unanimous consent is asked. Is there objection?

McCUTCHEON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I wanted to ask Resources Committee to get together for about two minutes immediately upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: When recess commences, Resources Committee will get together for about two minutes. Are there other committee announcements?

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I move that we advance the bill in third reading and read the bill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was there a second to Mr. Barr's -- the Chair did not hear a second.

McCUTCHEON: He did not move for his adjournment, Mr. President.

BARR: I asked for unanimous consent. I will now move for a recess. Some of us are getting a little short-tempered. It's time we had some coffee.

McCUTCHEON: Objection.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that the Convention stand at recess until 9:50, seconded by Mr. Doogan. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 9:50?" All in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention stands at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

COGHILL: On the desks of the individual delegates they will find a package that has 25 of the invitations for the closing ceremonies for use of the individual delegates. There will be invitations sent to all the Territorial officials, the members of the last legislature, and to the cabinet members, as well as the President and all of the national Senators and the House of Representatives.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us Article I, preamble and declaration of rights, before us in third reading and open for debate. Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Has the article been read yet by title?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the Article.

CHIEF CLERK: "Preamble, Article I, Declaration of Rights."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. President, may we have Section 19, as amended by Miss Awes, read again, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the article or Section 19, as it now reads.

CHIEF CLERK: "There shall be no imprisonment for debt but this does not prohibit civil arrest of absconding debtors."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a discussion or debate on Article I, the declaration of rights and preamble? If not -- Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: A question has been bothering me. I have asked this of one member, but I wonder about this final passage business; this reading by title only. I am wondering if it wouldn't be better for future legal interpretation if we avoided this reading by title only and read the article in its entirety.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan, that would be up to the delegates of course, but it is the definite feeling of the Chair that it makes no difference as far as future reference is concerned. There is nothing in the Act that set up this Convention that would make suspending the rules and reading the article for the third time by title only, illegal. It is a procedure that is adopted in other bodies. The question is, "Shall the article on the preamble and declaration of rights be adopted as part of the Constitution of the State of Alaska?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 44 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 0

Absent: 11 - Collins, V. Fischer, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 44 yeas and 11 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it, and the article on the preamble and declaration of rights has become a part of Alaska's state constitution. We now have before us Article V, the article on suffrage and elections. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask permission to revert to the order of business of committee reports.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will revert to the order of business of reports from standing committees.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Committee on Style and Drafting is now reporting to the Convention its redraft of the article on the executive. Copies are now being passed out to the delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you wish that that article be read at this time and referred to the Rules Committee?

SUNDBORG: For placement on the calendar I think the usual procedure is not to read it but just to assign it to the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the article on the executive is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. We have before us Article V, the article on suffrage and elections. The Chief Clerk may read the report of the Committee.

(The Chief Clerk read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Committee on Style and Drafting have a report to make at this time? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, just before we give our oral report, I would like to have a committee amendment incorporated in the draft as if it were an original part thereof. I will ask the Chief Clerk to read the committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, line 6, after the word 'year', strike the article 'a' and insert the following: 'an actual, bona fide, and continuous'; at the end of the same line, after the article 'a', insert the word 'like'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent that the amendment just read be incorporated in the draft as if it were a part thereof at the time of its being submitted to this Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the amendment just read become a part of the report.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: May we have it read again, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk then read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Is it then the intention of the Style and Drafting Committee to arrange the other articles of the constitution already adopted to have like terminology as this?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, could you answer that question?

SUNDBORG: Mr. McCutcheon, it is not, and we are offering this as a committee amendment only because it was argued to us by the Chairman of the substantive committee which handles this article that that language had been in the enrolled copy and that therefore our striking it amounted to striking a matter of substance, or changing a matter of substance. Now, we have put it back in, feeling that it was our duty to do so, but we do not feel bound as individuals or even as a committee to vote in favor of leaving it in. We believe as reported back to the floor it should be in there for such consideration as the Convention wants to give it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Sundborg?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

RILEY: Did I understand you to say a moment ago that you are presenting it now as a committee amendment or do you simply wish to incorporate it in your report as it comes out?

SUNDBORG: We wish to incorporate it in the report as it comes out.

RILEY: Still subject to amendment?

SUNDBORG: Subject to amendment.

RILEY: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to ask a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

BARR: Mr. Sundborg, in your opinion when you use the word "continuous", does that mean that a man should actually be in Alaska for the previous year? If he went on a vacation in July and went to the states, then he couldn't vote in October?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I should say at this point that this redraft was the product of a subcommittee of the Style and Drafting Committee consisting of Mrs. Hermann, Mr. McLaughlin, and Mr. Johnson, and that we have asked Mrs. Hermann to answer such questions as there may be with respect to this article, so I wonder if Mrs. Hermann would take over the fielding of the questions from this point on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Well, our usual procedure has been for the chairman to explain the changes that were made in general, and then have a period of questioning on each section, and I would prefer to handle it that way.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I wonder if we might not have this incorporated in our report, and then we would be glad to answer any questions about it or deal with it in any way that the delegates desire.

BARR: I will defer my question then until after the whole thing has been covered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are asking unanimous consent, Mr. Sundborg, that it be incorporated at this time? It does not preclude amending it later, Mrs. Hermann. Is there objection to incorporating the proposed committee amendment at this time to become part of the report? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg, do you wish that an explanation be made of your work on this article?

SUNDBORG: Mrs. Hermann will give such an explanation, Mr. President.

HERMANN: Mr. President, members of the Convention, you will note, if you will refer this to your enrolled copy, that we have taken the first section of the enrolled copy which was one sentence, and made it into several sentences. We have not eliminated anything from Section 1 and since putting in the amendment which Mr. Sundborg just read, we have practically made no change except for purposes of condensation and shearing off some unnecessary words. The first section sets up the qualifications of voters. I might say, in that connection, that if you accept this first section as it is written, containing the expression "actual, bona fide, and continuous resident" etc., you will be at variance with the residence requirements that are set up in the legislative article and also in the executive article. Section 2 of the legislative article provides that the qualified voter has been a resident of Alaska for at least three years and of the district from which he is elected for a year immediately preceding his filing for office. There is nothing said in the legislative article about his being an actual, bona fide, and continuous resident. He merely is a resident. We thought the words "actual, bona fide, and continuous" were very redundant, and if he had been a resident for the period stated next preceding the election, he had all those qualifications without their actually being set down. In the residence requirement that is set up under Committee Proposal No. 10/a, which is for the executive department on which you will probably be acting on tomorrow, the residence requirement is that he shall have been a resident of Alaska seven years next preceding his election, and that, also, there is no reference to his being an actual, bona fide, and continuous resident. In that respect, there is a lack of uniformity in the residence requirements as set up in the suffrage and elections article and in the legislative and executive articles, and, of course, one of the things which Style and Drafting always seeks to undertake is to have uniformity of language through all the sections of the constitution. It will, of course, be up to the body here to determine whether they want to make that exception in this case or not. We moved up Section 2 from a place which was toward the end of the original article and put it next to the section on qualified voters since it sets up the disqualifications. Under Section 3, we have combined several sections, including a new one that had been placed at the end which included secrecy of voting shall be preserved. I believe there has been no change of substance in any of these. We have only five sections of the entire article. It's brief, and we shouldn't have to spend the next week arguing. I would also call your attention to the special voting provision which appears at the bottom of the page and is labeled Section 6, and that refers to the exemption that was made for voters who voted in November, 1924, and we believe that that does not belong in a permanent article in the constitution and that it should be transferred to the transitional section, and will make that request at the proper time. Now, if there are any questions, I will be glad to answer them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg, do you have a question?

LONDBORG: As I read this report of Style and Drafting Committee which includes the words "actual, bona fide, and continuous resident", that sets up the qualifications for a person to be an elector, is that right?

HERMANN: Yes. An elector or a voter. I might add here that no place in any of the articles have we used the word "elector", because we have set up qualifications for voters and from here on, we will call them "voters".

LONDBORG: A "qualified voter" -- pardon me.

HERMANN: Yes.

LONDBORG: We would call them a "qualified voter", and in both the legislative and executive article, the candidates seeking office, as our adopted report stands, must also be qualified voters, so I would think that you have complete harmony then with the other two articles because in order to file for either the governorship or member of the legislature, they must be a qualified voter, and you look back here, and it says they must be an actual, bona fide, and continuous resident, so I think you have harmony.

HERMANN: That is not a question but I am glad to have the expression of the opinion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be asked of Mrs. Hermann? Mr. Barr.

BARR: No, my question hasn't been answered yet, Mr. President. I want to know if this would bar a man from voting if he took a 30-day vacation in California before the election. It says here he must be a continuous resident for the previous year. Now just what does that mean?

HERMANN: I think that is exactly what it does mean; that he couldn't vote if he were not here continuously for the year previous.

BARR: He and a convicted criminal, then, could not vote? That must be a criminal act. I don't think I would go for that.

HERMANN: He could vote absentee, of course.

BARR: But he's not a qualified elector.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mrs. Hermann two questions. You say that the definition of a "qualified voter" is contained in other articles?

HERMANN: No. The definition of a "qualified voter" is limited to this article, but, in the other articles, they say he must be a qualified voter but they set up residence only as a requirement. They don't include those words "actual, bona fide, and continuous", just a resident. I might say that before we worked over some of these articles, some of them said 'who has resided in the Territory or state' for so long, and others that were residents of the state for so long, and in order to get the uniformity which we feel is essential in the constitution as a whole rather than in the separate sections, we tried to put all of those residence requirements in exactly the same language.

TAYLOR: Then, I cannot see, Mrs. Hermann, why it must be an "actual, bona fide, and continuous resident". You say a person goes outside and that breaks the continuity of their residence. What would be the use of giving him an absentee ballot, because they're not able to vote?

HERMANN: Probably -- I think the word "continuous", as well as "actual and bona fide" and so on, limit the meaning of the word "resident", myself.

TAYLOR: Does the Committee that drew this up give any thought -- I think this is the article in which a legal voter should be described.

HERMANN: The qualifications were set up here on the floor at the time this article was considered as a committee proposal. The only thing we have done to them is to group them into sentences instead of leaving them in a long sentence that covered a whole page in which they were originally presented.

TAYLOR: Have you given any thought to making a separate sentence out of this: "A legal resident shall have had such yearly residence in the Territory and 30 days in the precinct."

HERMANN: Well, I think we have made a separate sentence out of it.

TAYLOR: And then you could refer to him as a legal voter -- a legal resident.

HERMANN: Well, of course, I think when they are qualified to vote, they are a legal voter. We have given no thought to any change in the language beyond what was absolutely necessary to move it into this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, may I ask Mrs. Hermann a hypothetical question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, if there is no objection.

METCALF: Under this section with the new language, Mrs. Hermann, if I should, ten days before the general election, travel from the Seward precinct to the Anchorage precinct for a couple of days business, would I be allowed to vote under this, because my presence in the precinct would not be actual?

HERMANN: I personally think that unless you were living in the other precinct that you could vote. Making a trip I don't think would make any difference at all. If there is anybody on the Committee who wishes to enlarge upon that, I would be very glad to have them put in their two bits worth.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I don't know whether I can enlarge upon that or not, but I take an entirely different view of this thing from what Mrs. Hermann has just explained, if I understood her correctly. I believe that a resident remains a resident whether he is physically present at his place of residence at all times or not. I can think of many instances where the law allowed a person to be physically absent and yet retain his residence. One of them, the most common one in this country, is military service. A person neither gains nor loses residence by being elsewhere in military service; he keeps his residence. He is still a resident of the place where he was when he went into the military service. Another instance that is commonly recognized by the courts, as I understand it, is where a person goes to the states from Alaska for medical attention; he may be gone for ten days or two months or even five years, but he hasn't intended to change his residence. He is still a resident of Alaska -- a continuously and actual, bona fide resident even though he may not be physically present. That is my understanding of it. On top of that, as I understand it, the term "residence" in law requires a concurrence of two things: one, physical presence; two, intent. Now a person can be a resident and not be actually physically present if he intends to maintain his residence at that place. On the other hand, he may be physically present some other place and he does not gain residence unless he has intent. Now the intent is where we usually have trouble in the courts, because intent, of course, is in a person's mind; and he may say, "Yes, I intend to live in Alaska", when in fact he doesn't. Well, then you look at various things he does to indicate whether he has that intent or whether he doesn't. We run into it continuously here in the matter of divorce cases where the present law requires you to be an actual resident -- I don't think they use the word "actual" -- but you have to be a bona fide resident and inhabitant of Alaska for two years before you can file for divorce. Now we have many, many cases where people are physically present in Alaska, but they haven't formed the proper intent to be a resident and accordingly they cannot gain the residence requirements. Once again, the most common example of that is the military service. We have people who are sent up here by the military; they are physically present in Alaska all right, but they did not have the required intent because they were sent here by the military, and, at least in our courts, we have taken the position that in order to show anything, they had to do something that would separate them from the ordinary run of military people. They had to live off of the Post; possibly pay taxes; they had to have resident fishing and hunting licenses. I don't mean to say they had to have all those things but those are all indications of intent. That is my understanding of this word "residence".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I should like to be heard on this. As the Chairman of the Elections and Suffrage Committee I gave it considerable thought.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: There is nothing before the Convention at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing before us unless there is a question directed --

DOOGAN: May I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to ask Mrs. Hermann this: if this language, "actual, bona fide, and continuous" was left out, what would be the position of a person that left one election district and went to another for the purposes of taking a job for a period of anywhere from 30 days to two years, moved his family, but still wanted to vote by absentee ballot in the precinct or election district where he came from.

HINCKEL: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

HINCKEL: I think the questions are being directed to the wrong committee chairman. They didn't change the substance; they put it in just exactly the way it came from the Committee. I think if they want to argue about it they had better direct their questions to the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That question could be properly directed to the Chairman of the Committee on Suffrage and Elections.

V. FISCHER: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I think Mr. Hinckel's point of order in part was that this is a report of the Committee on Style and Drafting, the report concerns only the language. The question should be, should there be any changes in language to keep the intent of the original article as it was in second reading. It seems to me that we should first take care of this Style and Drafting as a --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, you are entirely correct.

DOOGAN: All right, I will withdraw my question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The questions should be directed to anything that the Style and Drafting Committee may have changed.

HELLENTHAL: May I say on behalf of the Committee that we agree fully with the Committee version of the Suffrage and Elections report. The Committee has gone over it as a whole and they have no objection to it whatsoever.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, may I ask a question of Mr. Davis and Mrs. Hermann? The same question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

NORDALE: I would like to know if there is any difference between a resident, an actual resident, a bona fide resident, or a continuous resident. I would like to have both of you answer the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: That is one of those loaded questions, Mr. President, like have you stopped beating your wife. In my opinion, for what it may be worth, the words "actual, bona fide, and continuous" add nothing to the language -- "a resident". It means the same thing. Now, that is my opinion; it is not Mr. Hellenthal's opinion. That is the way I look at it. On the other hand when you say, is there any difference between an "actual resident" and just "a resident", there could be. If you say, is there any difference between "a bona fide resident" and "a resident", there could be. A resident might be somebody who was here and who claimed he had an intent, but he wasn't. He didn't have a good faith intent. That is what "bona fide" means, after all, is good faith; continuous also, there is certainly a lot of difference between "resident" standing by itself and "continuous resident". I can be a resident of Alaska today; I can move to Seattle tomorrow with full intent to make my home in Seattle tomorrow. I can move back to Anchorage the next day with intent to live in Alaska from there on, and certainly it couldn't be said that I had had continuous residence in Alaska. It's a matter of intent, and, as I said awhile ago, that is something that is in a man's head and you have to show it by proof of some kind or another when you get down to these points. Now we can argue here a long, long time about this, but I suspect that we are not going to come to any very satisfactory conclusion because the law books are full of cases -- you can stack them up to the ceiling on cases on residence, and you wouldn't ever get all the cases -- all the variations of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, there again we are --

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I want to support Mr. Fischer's point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair recognizes that, Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: I think it is incumbent upon the Chairman of the Committee on Style and Drafting to move for the adoption of his report so we can proceed to other matters here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, you are correct. The questions at this time should be directed only to matters that the Style and Drafting Committee had before them. The enrolled copy contained the words "actual, bona fide" and also the word "continuous" and that line of questioning is not in order at this time.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I apologize, but my point was that as a matter of style, I thought it sounded all right just to say "a resident" and I wanted to clarify it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to the report as it has come from the Committee on Style and Drafting? Now comes the question as to whether it is better to withhold the motion to accept the report until after we have considered any possible amendments and then have the Committee ask for the adoption of the report as amended. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, it seems to me it would be more orderly if there are amendments as to style to make the amendments now. As far as substantive amendments, I think we would do better to do it after the report has been adopted, if it is adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any amendments to be proposed as to style or phraseology? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Has it been decided that this "actual, bona fide, and continuous" as distinguished from the word "resident" alone is a matter of substance or a matter of style?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it could very well be a matter of substance.

R. RIVERS: I understand that Mr. Hellenthal regarded it as a matter of substance, so I will make my motion to strike that later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I might state, Mr. President, that that is the reason it is in here, because it was considered a matter of substance and we had left it out, and Mr. Hellenthal called it to our attention and we felt that he had properly called it to our attention, and we put it back in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Davis. Are there amendments to be offered to Section 1 with relation to style? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I'm going to take a chance on this. I think I have an amendment as to style.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you state the proposed amendment, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: "Strike 'continuous, bona fide' and strike that other word too, and insert 'resident and inhabitant of Alaska'." I think it means the same thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you read that again, what you are attempting to strike, Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I will withdraw that if it is all right to talk to Mr. Hellenthal. I am sure there would be an objection to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other proposed amendments as to style on Section 1 and Section 2? Are there proposed amendments to Section 3? Section 4? Or 5? Now, does this provision come out of here -- Section 6? Is that going to be your recommendation, Mrs. Hermann?

HERMANN: In Section 5, we made a slight change there by adding "the month and day may be changed by law" instead of "the date may be changed by law". I think that is style entirely but I thought I had better call it to your attention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions relating to Section 5, or Section 6, or is this section to be recommended to the Committee on Transitional Measures? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that Section 6 be referred to the Committee on Ordinances for incorporation in the transitional section of the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that Section 6 be referred to the Committee on Ordinances with instructions that the section be included in the provisions for transitional measures. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May that be called "miscellaneous provisions" instead of "transitional measures"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the feeling of the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, as we have outlined our tentative thoughts on how the constitution would be arranged, we would have the transitional measures set out separately from the miscellaneous provisions, although that, of course, is a decision which we and the Convention will still make some time in the future. But I believe I stated my motion correctly in the first place, and that was that it be referred to the Committee on Ordinances for incorporation among the transitional measures.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing none it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Now, Mr. President, if there are no amendments as to style or phraseology, I move and ask unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting be accepted, and that the changes which have been made in language in the article on suffrage and elections be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

HERMANN: I will have to object for the purposes of propounding an inquiry.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your inquiry, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: If that isn't accepted as Mr. Sundborg stated, does that bar us from asking that all that surplusage of "actual, bona fide, and continuous" be eliminated?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It does not bar you, Mrs. Hermann, but at this time, or after this motion of Mr. Sundborg's would be adopted, it would take a suspension of the rules to accomplish that.

BARR: After we adopt it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Or at this time, it would also.

BARR: At this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes.

HERMANN: For substance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: For anything that is not strictly style, anything that contains substance.

BARR: This is already in the other committee report, as I understand it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, will I, on behalf of the Committee, have an opportunity, prior to any request for suspension of the rules, to give the background of these words that we feel definitely are not surplusage?

McCUTCHEON: He would have to have something at issue before we could get at that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Or if Mr. Hellenthal would choose to ask for the floor and ask unanimous consent to be heard and no one object, he could give that explanation. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I am Chairman of the Committee and I speak in their behalf; we have no desire to impose on the body, but I do think it would certainly clarify things if we could give a brief explanation of the nature of this setup.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest to Mr. Hellenthal that the words he wants in are now in. Unless and until somebody moves to take them out, then they stay there. There is no need for an explanation. If somebody moves to strike them, certainly he can explain in connection with his vote or with his motion.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. If the motion is to suspend the rules, then we cannot be heard until after the vote on the motion to suspend the rules, because I understand it is not debatable.

McCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded -- Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have a request because of that matter, to at this time, and I believe it will expedite matters, to give the explanation of this --

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I had asked consent to have our report accepted and the amendments which we have made adopted. Now is there objection to that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent?

HERMANN: I had objected temporarily but I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption -- acceptance of the report and the adoption of the changes that were made by the Style and Drafting Committee? Is there objection? Hearing no objection the report is ordered accepted and the changes adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I might suggest to Mr. Hellenthal, if I may, that the language is now in. I suspect there will be a number of requests for suspension of the rules for specific amendment, amendments identical or nearly so, and perhaps it would save a little time if we had a recess so Mr. Buckalew and Mr. Hellenthal could get together. Certainly, if the rules are suspended, there will be opportunity for Mr. Hellenthal to be heard; if they are not there will be no need.

HELLENTHAL: I hoped that the members would be able to know what they were voting on when the request for suspension was made. That is the only reason I asked for it.

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, for a few minutes' recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended to return Article V to second reading for the purposes of specific amendment. I believe the Clerk has a number of identical or nearly identical amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read the proposed specific amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 6, strike 'an actual, bona fide and continuous'; strike 'like'; insert the article 'a' after 'year'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Who was that by?

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Riley.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended in order that the proposal can be returned to second reading for specific amendment?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Is there objection to the suspension of the rules for the specific amendment?

HELLENTHAL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

RILEY: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley so moves.

McCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. McCutcheon that the rules be suspended. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 36 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Coghill, Davis, Gray, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Rosswog, Walsh.

Absent: 6 - Collins, McLaughlin, Nolan, Robertson, Stewart, VanderLeest.).

HERMANN: Mr. President. I wish to change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann changes her vote to "yes". The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: I wish to change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Wien changes her vote to "yes".

TAYLOR: I change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor changes his vote to "yes". The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk is attempting to tally the vote.

CHIEF CLERK: 36 yeas, 13 nays, and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rules have not been suspended. It takes 37 votes to suspend the rules. Are there any other proposed amendments to Section 1 or Section 2? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would like privilege of the floor for five minutes to explain this, if I may have it. I don't want to take your time unnecessarily, but I do think it might clarify it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

McCUTCHEON: I object. Yes, I object, Mr. President. The rules have not been suspended and there is no use wasting the time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Are there other amendments to be proposed. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. Hellenthal is the Chairman of the committee and I think we owe him the courtesy of hearing him. It doesn't matter about rules or anything else. We have always been willing to hear the chairman of a committee on any subject that the committee has dealt with, and I think we should hear him.

HELLENTHAL: I will be happy to talk to each of you individually at any time on this, but I can assure you that you will be interested.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to be proposed to Sections 1, or 2, or 3? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I move at this time to rescind our action on that last amendment, on the suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is a motion to suspend the rules rescindable? It is the feeling of the Chair that it is not. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: In any case, Mr. President, the motion for reconsideration is still open on this particular vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You can't reconsider a motion to suspend the rules; the Chair is certain of that. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I move that Mr. Hellenthal be given the privilege of the floor for five minutes for the purpose of explaining this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that Mr. Hellenthal be given the privilege of the floor for a five-minute period for the purpose of explaining this election section.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall Mr. Hellenthal be given the privilege of the floor for the purpose of explaining the section?" Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The point that I would like to make is, why is it necessary to take up the time of the Convention with an explanation on one side only, when there is no argument that can be heard from the other side? The question is patent here. It is in the act that we have adopted or are about to adopt and there is no question about it at all. If the delegates were desirous of having the rules suspended to hear these points of argument on both sides, then they should have voted for suspension.

LONDBORG: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I can agree with Mr. McCutcheon on that, but it seems that, at the same time, the suspension of the rules is for the protection of the minority and I think the minority hung onto that, because once they would give it up, then it would come to a majority vote, and I think there might be some of the minority that would yield to the suspension of the rules if they heard the argument a little bit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves -- Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I voted "no" on suspension of the rules and I did it for this particular reason: the thing that Mr. Hellenthal wants is in here now. If the rules had been suspended, then it would have become necessary to explain this thing. Since the rules have not been suspended, and since, at least at this time, the section stands the way Mr. Hellenthal thinks it should stand, it seems to me we are wasting time of the Convention to make any explanation. It stands that way -- just the way that he wants it, as I understand it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: What Mr. Davis has said is true, but some other member here might get up and make a motion to suspend the rules for a specific amendment which applies to this section, so it is still open to amendment in a way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that Mr. Hellenthal be granted the privilege of the floor for five minutes. All those in favor of granting Mr. Hellenthal the privilege of the floor for five minutes will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it. Are there amendments to Section 3? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I would like a citation to the rule that says a motion to suspend the rules cannot be rescinded. It takes a two-thirds vote, whatever it was.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was that, Mrs. Hermann? Mr. Doogan asked -- or moved that the Convention suspend -- or rescind the action taken on the suspension vote, is that right?

HERMANN: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that what you were referring to?

HERMANN: That is what I mean. I would like a citation to the rule that covers that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it would be in Robert's Rules of Order. It is impossible to reconsider a suspension of the rules, you cannot reconsider. Now, whether or not it is impossible to rescind -- the Chair will declare a two-minute recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Doogan, the Chair will rule that the motion to rescind does not apply to a suspension of the rules, and the reason for that is that, if the motion to rescind did apply to a suspension of the rules, then any delegate any time a suspension of the rules was voted down could override that vote by a vote of 28 delegates, because it only takes 28 votes to rescind an action.

DOOGAN: Is it in order then, to ask for suspension of the rules again for the same specific amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You might be able to do it at another meeting tomorrow but under Robert's Rules it isn't possible at this time. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I would like to move that we adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves that the Convention adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon. Is there a second to the motion.

KNIGHT: Second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Knight. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow?" Are there committee announcements? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Last evening, I went in with the back seat vacant. I would like to pick up three or four delegates. I don't think there is a need of calling a cab.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I don't believe in sitting on each others laps.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I believe that if we take a vote to adjourn and if it is a majority vote, then we should stay seated and arrange for transportation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If this vote carries would the delegates stay in their seats and decide about how they are going to get to town. Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: If the vote carries, then I would like definitely to have all members of the Ordinance Committee here by 1:00 tomorrow, and if some come earlier, that will be well, too.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements?

SUNDBORG: Style and Drafting will meet here immediately upon adjournment, whenever that is tonight.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Committee on Finance will meet very briefly immediately upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Suffrage and Elections at 1:00 tomorrow afternoon in the usual room upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Suffrage and Elections 1:00 tomorrow, upstairs. Are there other announcements? If not, the question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow?" All those in favor of adjourning will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: If I may have the floor upon personal privilege for a moment?

(Mr. Riley then spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

RILEY: As a matter of fact, Mr. President, in view of the change in time in that suggestion, I move now that we stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow. Is there a second?

DOOGAN: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

DOOGAN: We just had a motion for adjournment.

BUCKALEW: Not until 9:00 a.m.

COGHILL: I believe we had. Mr. Riley --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley was talking in between on what constituted business. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Knight. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9:00 a.m.?" All those in favor of adjourning until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention is adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 27, 1956

SIXTY-SIXTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Reverend Londborg, would you care to give us our daily invocation? Reverend Londborg will give our daily invocation.

REV. LONDBORG: Our heavenly Father, we pray that You be with us today as we further deliberate. We ask that You bless us. Help us that we might think clearly and act wisely. We pray that You bless each of us. In Jesus' name. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk then called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Seven absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: The journal of the 59th day, Friday, January 20, we did not discover any errors or omissions. I request that it be approved by unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight asks that the journal of the 59th day be approved as read by the special Committee to read the journal. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: It would seem that the roll call on our vote on Committee Proposal 6/a should have been listed also, as well as any other roll call. That was the one pertaining to the name of the local government unit. All that we have here is just the tally.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In the journal of the 59th day?

LONDBORG: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there is no objection, the approval of the journal of the 59th day will be held in abeyance. Are there any communications or petitions from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Special committees? Are there any motions or resolutions to come before the Convention? If not, we have the article on suffrage and elections before us. Are there any other proposed amendments to the article? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK (submitted by Mr. Ralph Rivers) "Page 1, line 3, following the word 'article' strike 'and not barred by any other provision of law'."

R. RIVERS: Following the word "article".

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, this is a matter of substance, I believe, and so I will move that the rules be suspended for the purpose of bringing forward this particular amendment, and there is very good reason which is based on study which has been made overnight.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves that the rules be suspended.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Might I observe at this time that this matter was taken up by the Committee on Suffrage and Elections yesterday, and they unanimously agreed that the deletion should be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" Do you ask unanimous consent? Unanimous consent is asked for suspension of the rules. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to explain.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption?

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann seconds the motion. The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 3, following the word 'article' strike 'and not barred by any other provision of law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, we say in Section 1 that every citizen of the United States who is at least 19 years of age, qualified to vote under this article, may vote in any state or local election. That is the way it would read if these words were deleted. If we say "and not barred by any other provision of law" that would mean we have undermined our suffrage section, because that would throw it open to the legislature to attach property qualifications to all voters and things like that, such as has occurred in certain states. Now, the purpose of saying "and not barred by any other provision of law" was to allow for local governments to put on property restrictions in local bond elections. That was the only purpose of it. If this is a general article on suffrage, then, obviously, the legislature could hook on conditions to everybody being able to vote. But, if we look to our section on local government, and right in that local section, we say "property restrictions may be imposed on bond elections", and, if in our article on finance -- in there we would have to take a look -- and put this business about property restrictions to vote in bond elections in local governments, then we haven't done any harm. We know that the restrictions can apply only to those particular situations and we wouldn't undermine the general right of suffrage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: May I ask a question of Mr. Hellenthal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. Hellenthal, is there any conflict in your mind when we say in one place in the constitution that you may vote if you are so and so, and in another place it would say that you can vote differently?

HELLENTHAL: No. The reason that this language was included is that the language was adopted before the body adopted the local government provision. In the local government provision, accent is placed on the charters of the local government and the -- Dillon's Rule, if you will recall, was reversed to a large extent. In other words, the cities now have the powers that aren't taken away from them, so the necessity for this is no longer needed since we have adopted local government. Another very good illustration of it is registration. This was in, primarily, so that local governments could adopt registration without any constitutional hurdles. Now that local governments have all the powers that aren't taken away from them, it is no longer needed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: May I ask Mr. Ralph Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: You mentioned that in the local government article they could put on certain restrictions. Is that right?

R. RIVERS: Yes.

LONDBORG: Would that not run into a conflict then here? It says, if they are 19 years of age and meet the other qualifications, they may vote in any local election.

R. RIVERS: In any state or local election, that is the general rule. Then your specific exceptions are pinpointed as specific exceptions. If you put it under the general rule though, then our legislature could start throwing exceptions on all voters generally.

LONDBORG: Well, I see that, but here it gives them a specific right to vote in any local election regardless of any specific thing that might come under the local government article. I am just wondering if that wouldn't be a conflict?

R. RIVERS: Well, exceptions can be allowed to any general rule, and I know the exception is a modification of the general rule where this Constitutional Convention specifically pinpoints the exception.

LONDBORG: Well, what I was getting at is, if you can bar them through some provision in the local government, then it is not true that they can vote in any local government election as it says here.

R. RIVERS: Well, you might say "except as otherwise provided by this constitution", but you can't say "except as otherwise provided by other provisions of law". You see my point? Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Londborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

R. RIVERS: If one were to say "and may vote in state or local elections"?

LONDBORG: I was merely raising the question. If any of the legal minds can see any possibility of conflict I thought it should -- it really doesn't matter to me.

R. RIVERS: May I ask for a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer has been attempting to get the floor. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: In the finance article we have a sentence, "Additional requirements and qualifications of voters may be provided by law." That is a specific qualification of this general authority to vote.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: On bond elections?

V. FISCHER: Yes, that would include bond elections. I do doubt whether cities could prescribe registration under this; that is something else. But there is no problem on bond elections. That is taken care of.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, did you say you wanted --

R. RIVERS: I wanted a one-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: If I may have the privilege of the floor for a moment before I ask for consent to make a correction in this amendment.

(Mr. Ralph Rivers then spoke for a few moments under personal privilege.)

R. RIVERS: My amendment includes those additional words at the end of the sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent that his amendment include the addition of the words as he just stated them. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment if these words were included.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 3, following the word 'article' strike 'and not barred by any other provision of law'; line 4, change the period to a comma and add 'subject to any other qualifications imposed under this constitution'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to having these words become part of Mr. Ralph Rivers' proposed amendment?

AWES: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, perhaps this could be for Style and Drafting, but after the word "age" on line 2, we have to insert the word "and" and strike the comma. I ask unanimous consent. Style and Drafting Committee might want to use the word "required" instead of "imposed" or some little change like that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now, how will it read when the word "and" is added in there? Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed section as it would be if the amendment with the suggested change of Mr. Ralph Rivers becomes a part of the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Every citizen of the United States who is at least 19 years of age and qualified to vote under this article may vote in any state or local election subject to any other qualifications imposed under this constitution."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that this new wording become a part of the original proposed amendment.

AWES: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Ralph Rivers, that these words become a part of your original amendment?

R. RIVERS: I asked unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection was heard.

R. RIVERS: Yes, I so move. I think perhaps that word "imposed" ought to be studied a little and maybe a better one used, but I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers so moves. Is there a second?

V. RIVERS: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Victor Rivers that his proposed amendment be amended by inserting these additional words. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I am going to have to vote against it because I think it should be studied now and not later, because this is our final roll call on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers do you have objection to a recess at this time?

R. RIVERS: No objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There being no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there is no objection, we can go ahead with the rest of this article until some decision is made as to what will be offered here on the amendment that is pending. Are there other questions or proposed amendments to this suffrage article?

BARR: I have an amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 6, strike the words 'actual, bona fide, and continuous' before the word 'resident' and insert the word 'legal' before the word 'resident'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, during the past eight days, I have submitted two amendments, and we all realize that they have been floating around here like snow flakes. They were both turned down. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

BARR: I only submitted two because I could only think of two that were important enough to submit, and I wasn't allowed to even speak on one of them. I am going to try it again. I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for the purpose of submitting a specific amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that he might submit a specific amendment. Is there objection?

MCNEALY: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Barr?

BARR: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr so moves, seconded by Mr. Knight, that the rules be suspended. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 38 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, V. Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Nays: 12 - Coghill, Davis, Hellenthal, Londborg, McNealy, Nordale, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Collins, Nolan, R. Rivers, Stewart, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 38 yeas, 12 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the rules have been suspended. Do you so move, Mr. Barr?

BARR: I move for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves for the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 6, strike the words 'actual, bona fide, and continuous' before the word 'resident' and insert the word 'legal' before the word 'resident'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I and quite a few other people are not quite satisfied with these words. They are unnecessary and sound a little bit awkward. The idea has been advanced here that they are in the Organic Act and they haven't caused us any trouble; therefore, they should be in our constitution. Now, our Organic Act was designed to restrict and govern us as a Territory. We are going to be a state, and the reason we are here is to write a constitution to replace the Organic Act. There is no reason on earth why we should adopt anything from that Act. We should write something new, something to suit our new state. The reason I ask to put the word "legal" in front of the word "resident" is this: we have heard from our attorneys here how the word "resident" is really not very definite, that it is subject to interpretation by the courts and has caused a lot of trouble. If that word "legal" now, if we adopt it to modify the word "resident", we would merely mean that it would still be subject to interpretation by the courts, but I hope that our legislature will put through an act defining the word "resident", and if so, then the word "legal" would have a definite meaning. It would mean a resident as defined by the legislature. The people are stuck with me for one more session in the senate, and, if no one else initiates such a bill, I think I will do so myself. I think it is high time that we have that word "resident" defined properly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I think Mr. Barr is certainly on the right track, but I don't think he has quite reached the goal yet, and I think inserting this word "legal" raises the same kind of questions as are raised by the words that are now in there. If we do it, it raises the question, can the governor -- can a candidate for governor be an illegal resident -- where we just say that he must be a resident for so long. Can a candidate for the legislature be an illegal resident for so many years? What does "legal" mean? It doesn't mean anything. I think that what we want is "for one year a resident of Alaska" and not "legal", not "actual", not "bonafide and continuous" -- just "one year a resident of Alaska".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I was going to say that I believe Mr. Barr's amendment should be amended. If he is only taking out "actual, bona fide, and continuous" he is leaving in the word "and" and it wouldn't fit in properly before the word "legal". I think we should take out the whole thing and put in "a legal".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: The word "legal" is not necessary in there in the present form of the article. It needs a definition of what a "legal resident" is. To merely say a "legal resident" imposes that certain restrictions or certain qualifications or certain definition would be put on it and we have it in there. We have "a resident of Alaska for one year and for thirty days a resident of the precinct". That is the definition of a "legal resident" so the word "legal" is not necessary. Neither are the words "actual, bona fide, and continuous", and I don't think the word "legal" should go in but the other words should come out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I would just like to ask a question about procedure here. I don't like the word "legal" there, I don't think it adds anything. But I don't like the words "continuous, bona fide, and actual" either. Now, if this amendment -- is there any way this amendment can be either amended or, if it is defeated, can we again bring up the question of just striking those three words?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, there can be no amendment offered at this time other than the specific amendment before us, unless by unanimous consent which would take -- the unanimous consent naturally would carry a suspension of the rules with it. The question under a suspension of the rules, for just plain striking the words, could be made. The move for suspension of the rules in order to do that would be in order if anyone wished to do so. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I have a proposal of division of the question -- that we vote separately on the striking of the words "actual, bona fide, and continuous". Separate that from the word "legal"; have a separate vote on each one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, it would take a move first to suspend the rules. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment to the amendment. I move we strike the word "legal". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question came up the other day, twice, as the Chair recalls it, and it was his opinion that once you go in for specific amendment, that amendment is the only thing that can be acted upon, the specific amendment that was placed before us. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, it is my understanding that anything that is pertinent to the main question is amendable, whether it is under a suspension of the rules or not. This is pertinent to the main question, whether we use the word "legal" resident, "bona fide, continuous, actual, conscientious resident", or whether we strike all those words and just use the word "resident".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, at the time that it occurred the other day, the Chair declared a recess, spoke to members of the Rules Committee, and was informed that you could do nothing but adhere to the specific amendment under which the suspension was called for, and that was the ruling of the Chair twice, day before yesterday, and there was no objection. It isn't a matter of the Chair's feeling on it, it was a matter of the rules. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Is it not a fact, then, that matter that came up the other day, that it was striking a particular part of an article and inserting something in its place. In this case, it is not. It is a striking of the five or six words, but put another word someplace else; not in its place, not inserting something in lieu of it. It would actually be two separate amendments. It couldn't be anything else.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, the Chair recalls one of the cases. One of them was when Mr. Kilcher merely asked to have a division of the question before us after we had gone in for specific amendment. There was vigorous objection on the floor from many of the delegates, and the Chair called a recess, talked to some of the delegates on the Rules Committee, as the Chair recalls it, and came back and ruled that it could not be done. It was the ruling then, it will have to be the ruling now that when we went in for specific amendment, it is for that specific amendment as it was stated, unless the rules --

TAYLOR: I believe then that we should take a recess and submit this to the Rules Committee, because it looks to me like --

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the withdrawal of my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr asks unanimous consent to withdraw his amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, now I ask unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules for submission of a specific amendment which seems to correct the discrepancy of the first one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that he may submit a specific amendment. Is there objection:

LONDBORG: I object. I would like to hear the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the specific amendment that would be offered.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, line 6, strike 'an actual, bona fide, and continuous'; insert the article 'a' after 'year'; and at the end of line 6, strike 'like'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that he might submit this specific amendment. Is there objection?

MCNEALY: I am going to object again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

BARR: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves, seconded by Mr. Knight, that the rules be suspended. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Wien.

Nays: 11 - Coghill, Cross, Davis, Hellenthal, Londborg, McNealy, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Collins, Nolan, Stewart, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 40 yeas, 11 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the rules have been suspended. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, for the good of the Convention, I move and ask unanimous consent that the debate be closed at 9:55 and the question be put.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves that the question on the adoption of this amendment be put at 9:55. He asks unanimous consent. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I agree to that and hope it is closed before that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I don't want to object, but I do want an opportunity to explain the position that the Committee has held on this, and frankly I don't think it can be done in five minutes, but I don't want to be the one to hold up the progress of this Convention.

BUCKALEW: I'll object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Coghill moved -- who seconded the motion?

DOOGAN: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan seconds the motion that the Convention agree to close the debate and vote on this question at 9:55. Miss Awes.

AWES: For the reason that it is only five minutes, the first person up can take the whole five minutes giving his side of the story and we have no time left for rebuttal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: Would it take a two-thirds vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would take a two-thirds vote; it would be a suspension of the rules.

KILCHER: May I address a question to Mr. Coghill?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

KILCHER: I am afraid, Mr. Coghill, that we are losing more time with this roll call than you would save. I think there would be a short debate, anyway, and I think you ought to withdraw your motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I would suggest that inasmuch as we are going to have a roll call on this, that will take some more time, that the five minutes run from the time that you announce the debate was open on the question, rather than setting a specific time; and that the two sides be allotted two and a half minutes apiece.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, is that the understanding in your motion, Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: Mr. President, since we have discussed it, I move and ask unanimous consent that my motion be amended to read 10:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the vote be put on this question at 10:00 o'clock.

ROBERTSON: Is there a motion before the house to amend?

COGHILL: A motion to limit debate, Mr. President, has to be put after the main motion is on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the main motion is not on the floor then, because Mr. Barr did not move adoption of this proposed amendment yet. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I will, Mr. President, I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

AWES: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Miss Awes.

COGHILL: Now, Mr. President, I move for my motion to limit debate on the question until 10:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves that the question be put on this proposed amendment at 10:00 o'clock -- by this clock. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 18 - Barr, Coghill, Doogan, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hilscher, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Metcalf, Peratrovich, VanderLeest, Wien.

Nays: 33 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Collins, Nolan, Stewart, White.)

BOSWELL: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell changes his vote to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 18 yeas, 33 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rules have not been suspended. The motion is open for debate. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr President, I think, if anybody reads this, it is obvious why those words are unnecessary and who they sound awkward. Now, I am sure that other people will talk for this amendment. I know that some of the attorneys agree with me and some of the committee agree with me, so I am not going to talk very much. I am going to allow Mr. Hellenthal to use most of my time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have looked into this, and I follow the school of thought expressed by Mr. Davis, that the word "resident" interpreted by the courts means the same with all these adjectives hooked on to it. And I am very concerned about having the qualifications for governor and members of the legislature say just "resident", which is a term that the courts are well able to interpret, and have these extra adjectives stuck into this particular one on the subject of voters. We want the governor to be a qualified voter, and we want the legislators to be qualified voters, and for the sake of uniformity, let us knock out these adjectives.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I tried not to bring this debate upon us, and I don't feel responsible for imposing on your time to discuss this matter, and I shall try to be as brief as possible. Now, first of all, this is not an argument between lawyers. Some lawyers take one side, other lawyers take the other side. Now, I happen to know among this group here, for example, Mr. Robertson. Mr. Collins, myself, feel that these restrictions and these requirements should be continued in force in the constitution. Others, on the other hand, think that the word "resident" alone should be left in the constitution. Reasonable men differ. Now those who advocate the use of the word "resident" alone, they may be correct. Among them, Mr. Riley, Mr. Barr, Mr. McLaughlin, some of the other attorneys have straddled it a little bit, but they feel that the word "resident" is synonymous with the words "actual, bona fide resident". I hope that they are right. I sincerely hope that they are right. I do that for my sake as a taxpayer, because, if they are wrong, we are going to be forced into litigation throughout the new State of Alaska, and I shall try to briefly explain to you why. I sincerely hope those men are right. That is why I say it isn't a dispute, I agree with them. I hope they are right. If a case comes up and they are on the side asserting the viewpoint that "resident" is synonymous with the term "actual and bona fide", if I have the opportunity I will help them in that case because it means an awful lot to me as a taxpayer. However, if a client comes to me and offers to engage my services on the other side of that case, I shall be very, very happy to take his position because I am quite sure I will prevail. Now let us see what we are doing here. First of all, this was not explained yesterday by Mr. Barr, Mrs. Hermann, or anyone else here. This law that the committee reported out and the words that came out of Style and Drafting, "actual, bona fide, and continuous", are exactly, identically the words that have been in effect for Alaska for 55 years without change. They are not in the Organic Act; they preceded the Organic Act by a good 20 or 15 years. They were in the Act of June 6, 1900. We have lived with them, we know what they mean. I have never met a single man in Alaska who said that those words were unnecessary, or who criticized our voting laws as they are interpreted. Mrs. Hermann told me last night that, in answer to Mr. Barr's question, she made a mistake. She thought that Mr. Barr had asked her, if a person moves Outside, does he lose his voting residence, and her answer to that question was correct. It was "yes". But, if a person goes Outside temporarily, "no" is the answer, and she will agree with me. Now, some of you old-timers will remember this: one of the first cases that came up was one similar to the question posed of Mrs. Hermann. It was the Bill Holzheimer's case. Holzheimer, who many of you knew personally, lived in Ketchikan and was sent to Nome to be the judge, and in 6 Alaska 681, that case is written up, and there the words "actual and bona fide" were tested one of the first times. There were many other times. In that case, the court ruled that Holzheimer did not lose his residence, either local residence or Territorial residence in Nome, by moving temporarily to Ketchikan. Bob Bartlett has lived under this law and held office under this law and lived in Washington continuously, and under that law, Bob Bartlett is a resident of Alaska and a resident of the Juneau voting precinct. That is well settled. But under the proposal that Mr. Barr gives us, doubt, uncertainty, we don't know, but we know with these words. Now let me go a little further. In my practice of law, I can recall two outstanding cases where the words "actual and bona fide resident" and "continuous resident" were interpreted by the courts. One time in Girdwood, it was about five or six years ago, a fellow by the name of Bob Dorf had a saloon there. They were building the Whittier road. There were several hundred construction workers there. They were also building a railroad. Hundred is a modest estimate -- there were maybe a thousand or more. Dorf had the only saloon in Girdwood. Some competitors came along, and Dorf hired me and my partner to see to it that the census that was taken by his competitors in their petition for a liquor license was knocked out on the grounds that the census did not represent actual and bona fide residents of the Territory of Alaska. The construction workers had all signed it. They were all on the census and they in turn had signed the petition. The church people also joined with Mr. Dorf in financing the case, and in that respect it was a little unique because it shows how people sometimes line up on these problems of residence. Judge Dimond considered it carefully, and Judge Dimond ruled that all of the construction workers who had signed the petition and who had in turn been entered on the liquor census were not actual and bona fide residents of Alaska, although many of them had been in the Territory three and four years. Some of them had actually got divorces here. Let's not get confused -- the divorce residence requirement is still another thing. That reads, you must be "a resident and inhabitant" of the Territory of Alaska. So some of those people were not qualified voters, though they could get a divorce, they could doubtless have a hunting license, they could doubtless have met other residence requirements. But remember, the word "resident" is a word of variable meaning; it has shades of meaning; it is one of the most subtle words known to lawyers. This is what separates the men from the boys in the legal profession -- words like "resident". I might observe, too, that just merely picking up Webster's Dictionary looking for the definition of the word "resident" will not solve any residence problems. If the practice of law were that simple, I would not have bothered to go to law school nor would any of the other lawyers in this room. Now let us go on. The next case we had came down from a cannery. Some fly-by-night cannery operator down at Sanak had a company store and he had the business down there and he decided that he wanted a liquor license during the canning season, and so he got out the census. The census was the cannery employees. They were, most of them, Seattle people; they were not the residents of the area. He signed it; his buddies signed it; it was presented to the court. Our firm was engaged by the school teacher, some of the church people, and some of the responsible cannery people in that area, and -- I might add -- that is the only time I have ever been engaged by a cannery. They engaged us to see what could be done about that census, which was supposedly a census of actual, bona fide, and continuous residents of Alaska. Judge Dimond ruled in that case that those people, although they had been physically present in many instances for well over a year, were not voters of Alaska, and the words that prevented it were the words "actual, bona fide, and continuous". So there is another case, I can cite others. One of the most famous cases is the case of the soldiers at Valdez, Fort Liscum. Some of you oldtimers will remember that. It's in the Sulzer-Wickersham -- the election contest. They threw the soldiers in and voted them; the question was, were they residents. The courts said they could have been residents if the word "resident" had not been qualified by the words "actual and bona fide"; so, you see. Now, I am not saying that this is going to happen if the word "resident" merely is included in this constitution, which I am proud of and which I will be proud of even if it is unqualified. Now, I am not going to say that that is going to permit the construction workers to vote and to sign applications and censuses for liquor licenses. I am not going to say that it is going to permit soldiers to vote. But it might. Now if you want that, and not one of the proponents of this amendment has suggested it, if you want that, if you want to give me a lot of good fees, and I am only human, stick that word "resident" in there all alone. But if you want to consider this as citizens of Alaska, if you want to consider it objectively, if you want to make the best constitution you can, don't leave that word dangling in there. Now let's go a little bit further. When I was a young lawyer --

BARR: Point of order, Mr. President. I believe Mr. Hellenthal has spoken over five minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no time set, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Under our general rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No.

HELLENTHAL: I will beg your indulgence for just a few moments. When I was a young lawyer, and I don't like to admit I am old, but that was 18 years ago. When I started practicing law with my uncle, Jack Hellenthal, who was a pretty fair lawyer in Juneau, I was going to toy with words occasionally and improve things and would say "Uncle Jack, it would be better if we eliminated those unnecessary words. After all, let's streamline this thing and let's just forget those old words." And he would say, "John, if your client and you want your names on a leading case," and you all know what a leading case is, "go ahead and eliminate those words." But he said, "The average client that comes in my office, he doesn't want interminable litigation and notoriety for his attorney. He wants stability; he wants certitude in his business affairs. He doesn't want to be a leading case." Now that is exactly what we are doing here. We have everything to lose by throwing out the words "actual, bona fide, and continuous", everything to lose and absolutely nothing to gain -- absolutely nothing to gain. Now, as I said before, I hope that Mr. Riley is right and I hope Mr. Barr is right. I hope Steve McCutcheon is right in his conclusion that the word "resident" is the same as "actual, bona fide, and continuous". I hope they are right, but why take a chance? When I came here to write this constitution, I felt that, if it were to be a good constitution, that it should be a document of certainty so we would know where we stood, and so the people of Alaska would know where they stood. For 55 years they have had the election laws and the identical wording that this document contains. No one has complained. Stability, economic stability, political stability have been achieved. We are happy. There has been no criticism of our election laws because of residence requirements, none whatever. Why abandon that certitude? Why abandon those 50 or more judicial decisions that have grown up? Why abandon those all for the sake of brevity or for the sake of something that sounds better, unless there is a good reason? And I have heard nobody advance any reason for changing the law as to residence. Now, I talked to Mr. Clasby, a lawyer in Fairbanks, yesterday about this matter. He told me that not only would it affect political stability, but that it would have a very, very grave effect on tax residence matters if we were to change the old trusted, tested, and tried residence laws that have guided us so sensibly for 50 years. I respect his opinion. Now, there has been some talk about the fact that the governor will have to be changed if we don't make it easy and just use the word "resident". Now -- and I am quoting from memory -- the present article that we have on the governor says that he shall be a qualified voter and resident for five years. If "resident" means the same as these words mean -- and everybody has told you that it does -- why don't we just say that he shall be a qualified voter for five years? Bob Bartlett has been a qualified voter ever since he first voted in Alaska. What are we afraid of? No one has told me anything that we are concerned about. Why should we make this change? Now I could go on; I am not going to go on. It is just simply this: on the one hand you have a certain rule that has guided us for 55 years with great beneficial results -- on the one hand. There are many, many judicial interpretations of that language that have grown up and become a part of our custom and our heritage; that is on the one hand. On the other hand is uncertainty -- the problems regarding liquor; the problems regarding taxes; problems in every field where residence is a factor, because the term "resident" in tax matters is always correlated with the term "residence" in divorce matters, the term "residence" in voting matters. We have certainty on the one hand, although maybe we do use a Latin word, but we have certainty. On the other hand we have possible chaos, disruption of our status quo. I don't want to take your time, I don't like to take your time, but I think this thing should be fully delineated to you and I think I can, if you have any questions. And I want to tell you this is one of the most subtle fields of law. If you have any questions, I shall be happy to try to answer them. But don't give up, don't promote this uncertainty that no one has given a good reason for promoting. Keep to what we've got, and that which works.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I haven't had advantage of those long years of experience, particularly in matters of voting, but since apparently this question might be determined on the question of who is the expert on what, I now speak, not as a member of the bar, but merely as the only special master ever appointed by a district court in Alaska to sit on hearings on liquor petitions. And my recollection distinctly, not as a lawyer but as a special master, first of all is that the liquor laws of Alaska, either existing prior hereto or as amended to date, have nothing in them concerning actual and bona fide residence. There is nothing in it. It merely says "residence". I might point out that there is an inconsistency. If we put this thing in, we and Louisiana, I believe, will be somewhat unique. We will be the only two states of the Union that have "actual and bona fide" in them. It might be a little bit embarrassing to insist it. But what it is used for in Louisiana is keeping down the Negro vote. That is the only reason why it is in there. Some people cannot say that because of embarrassment, but that is actually a fact why it is in the Louisiana Constitution. But we will be unique, we will have it, and Louisiana will have it. We might use it well. Actually, what does it mean -- actual and bona fide? Bona fide, as every first-year high school student knows, means in good faith. It is just the equivalent of the English -- "in good faith". Residency, whenever the courts read anything, they read good faith into it, because residency is a matter of intent and good faith is of necessity implied in intent. There was something here suggesting there were 50 cases. I cannot find them. "Actual and bona fide" means nothing. You can qualify everything in the constitution, as was brought out here the other night when Mrs. Nordale was being questioned. You can insert actual and bona fide" in front of every word, "resident" in the constitution, and you will arrive at nothing more. The liquor laws, in fact, are not affected by it. Where is your difficulty? Your difficulty is in this: your difficulty is that you are saying, "actual and bona fide resident" in one part of your constitution, and in other parts, you are using the word "resident" and you are not so qualifying, and if there is going to be confusion and lawsuits, that is the way to develop them, because the courts are going to look at the instrument as a whole, as they always do, and they will say, "Now, if the governor is supposed to be a resident and the legislators are supposed to be residents and the only people who can vote in municipal elections or in borough elections, in certain types of elections, are residents, then it must be intended that these residents are different than the voting residents, and that these people don't have to be actual and bona fide." That is the point; that is where your litigation is going to arrive, because the court is going to read into that "actual and bona fide", of necessity, something that isn't there. They are not going to say, "Well, they left it in there as a concession to one man's opinion; or certainly they didn't leave it in there as a concession to history." They are going to say, "That had some valid, perfect meaning which distinguishes 'actual and bona fide resident' from 'a resident' alone." If we keep qualifying these things we shall, in fact, cause the confusion that we are trying to avoid. It would be just as absurd to suggest that, by way of compromise, that we add "actual and bona fide resident" to qualify the governor's qualifications and apply the same thing to the legislators. That does not apply. There has been a suggestion here that there are 50 cases. I have not, in fact, seen them. No one else has seen them. That "actual and bona fide", when it is cited -- it is cited in the law, they cite the whole section. I notice that here on the desk we have one of the latest cases on it -- the Bowden case -- and in there, there is no emphasis applied at all. It was distinctly on another matter.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I arise to a point of order. I brought this book down to Mr. Bebout solely so that he would discuss the residence -- the registration requirements of the Bowden case, not for actual and bona fide residence.

MCLAUGHLIN: I have still to hear -- there is an insistence that there are these 50 cases. I haven't seen them. I feel sure -- possibly, I haven't been here long enough -- but I am sure that in the next 20 years I will not be able to discover them. The fact is that decisions on residency are always strong and always numerous. Does this protect anyone -- this question of adding "actual and bona fide"? Nothing at all. As a matter of fact I notice some gentlemen in this room are perturbed about the fact that if we don't keep it in there, the voting practice of one individual, who constantly runs for the legislature, will be encouraged by dropping out "actual and bona fide". It hasn't prevented him from doing it in the past; it won't prevent him in the future. The words are useless and meaningless, and if we drop them out, it isn't a question of form. We are dropping them out, and then we don't have any legal problem. We are conforming to the 47 states. The only one that has "actual and bona fide" is not a common law state. The State of Louisiana is based -- its law is based upon the Napoleonic code, as most of you gentlemen know. So actually we are conforming, if we drop them out, to the 47 states that have common law codes. There is no point in keeping those words in there. I am just as violently opposed to substituting the word "legal" because "legal" means nothing as such, but if you put it in, then the courts will say, "They meant something different than ordinary resident when they added the word 'legal'." Anything that you add to the word "residency" is mere surplusage and it can lead to the trouble that Mr. Hellenthal is trying to avoid.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, we have heard both sides for more than five minutes. I now move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves the previous question.

V. FISCHER: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the previous question be ordered. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the previous question has been ordered. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk then read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Isn't the word "actual"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk again read the proposed amendment.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 35 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Wien.

Nays: 17 - Coghill, Cross, Davis, Hellenthal, Knight, Londborg, McNealy, Marston, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Collins, Hinckel, Nolan.)

CHIEF CLERK: 35 yeas, 17 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent to withdraw my first attempt at amending Section 1, with the idea of substituting some better phraseology. Unanimous consent request on Section 1, knocking out --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Oh, that is pending. Unanimous consent is asked by Mr. Ralph Rivers for the withdrawal of his proposed amendment to Section 1. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: And now, I move the new wording, which is the result of our boiling it down and consulting with three of the consultants for phraseology.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you intend to offer this amendment if the rules are suspended? Is that right, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Well, Mr. President, they were suspended for this purpose, and I ask unanimous consent -- well, I ask unanimous consent that the rules now be suspended so that we may attempt the same purpose with this new phraseology.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed specific amendment.

JOHNSON: Mr. Chairman, has the new amendment been mimeographed?

R. RIVERS: No. It is about three or four words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read it first. Then it will be determined if it should be mimeographed.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, lines 3 and 4, after the word 'this' delete the following 'article and not barred by any other provision of law', and substitute the words 'constitution and laws enacted pursuant thereto'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask first, Mr. Ralph Rivers, unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, is that right?

R. RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that this specific amendment can be offered. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended. Now, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Now I move the adoption of this amendment and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed specific amendment and asks unanimous consent.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to the motion?

NORDALE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale seconds the motion for adoption. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: If I could direct a question to Mr. Rivers through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Except for the change of wording, what difference is there between the amendment offered, Mr. Rivers, and the present language?

R. RIVERS: Will the Chief Clerk please read it as it would be if the amendment were adopted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the sentence, if the amendment were adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Every citizen of the United States who is at least 19 years of age, qualified to vote under this constitution and laws enacted pursuant thereto, may vote in any state or local election."

R. RIVERS: Mr. McNealy and Mr. President, I will now answer the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: By striking the word "article" and substituting the word "constitution" you haven't changed the qualifications of voters. The "and laws enacted pursuant to this constitution", Mr. McNealy, pertains to residence requirements which local governments might, by ordinance, require in bond elections or for the registration of voters within cities. So you see, instead of having it so broad here as to be in conflict with those provisions in finance and local government, this now adjusts it so that everybody may vote as qualified under this constitution and laws, those local laws that are made under this constitution, so it actually irons out a conflict.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I don't think it irons out anything. In fact, I don't think it changes the meaning. It changes it to "any law enacted under this constitution" or anything like that. Well, every law passed by the state legislature has to be enacted under this state constitution or it is unconstitutional and void. So I think it means just exactly the same thing as it says right here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: In a general clause of this kind you have got the general rights to vote; everyone may vote. The only place in our constitution where these qualifications could come in would be under local government and under finance as pertains to bond elections, there is no other place. So that laws made pursuant to this constitution can only be those specific authorizations with regard to bonds and registrations or such as that. So you see, this doesn't allow them to change the basic qualifications, although we are on a state level, or anything like that. I think the distinction is there, and it meets with approval -- as far as clearing up the problem, it meets with the approval of three of the consultants, and, if I cannot get this amendment through, I am sorry.

DAVIS: Mr. President, it is obvious that we are getting into a hassle here that I think we need not get into, and I wonder if I would be in order here to request the same kind of a thing that I requested the other night, to ask unanimous consent to suspend the rules to send this back to Style and Drafting with the idea of ironing the thing out and presenting language that -- I know we are all trying to get to the place here. It's just a matter of using the proper language. I think that it might save the time of the floor and get the job done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent that we hold this article in abeyance while Section 1 is referred back to Style and Drafting?

DAVIS: If I may, I'd like to go ahead with the rest of the article and pass it, subject to getting this thing straightened out. I am sure that there will be no difficulty if we can sit down for a few minutes and take care of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I wonder if it is proper to refer it to Style and Drafting. I just wonder what cap they would be wearing when they passed on the questions of law.

DAVIS: I withdraw my suggestion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis withdraws his suggestion. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess for 15 minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection we will recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to announce before we entertain any business that the News-Miner photographer would like to get group pictures of all committees sometime during the day if possible. We felt that it would be fine to have the photographs, rather than on a division-wide basis, to have them of each of the committees. Is it possible that this afternoon sometime we could arrange to have that done, or on some other day? What is the feeling of the delegates?

DOOGAN: Do you want a motion that this be done at some particular time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You might, Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: All right. I will move that it be done this afternoon then, and get it out of the way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What time, Mr. Doogan?

DOOGAN: About 4:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to notifying the photographer of that?

METCALF: Can it be done some other day of the week?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, if it is your wish that we drop it -- the Convention will come to order. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to revert to the business of reading of the journal. The journal for the 60th Convention day, Saturday, January 21. It has been checked and is O.K. I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan asks unanimous consent that the journal of the 60th day be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to put out for consideration the fact that the Chair take under consideration the possibility of excusing the Style and Drafting Committee, or the subcommittees that are not actively engaged in reporting an article on the floor, during the plenary session of the Convention, so that they might get on with their work. In view of the action that was taken a few days ago, we were to convene at 1:30 so that they could work, and now it has been changed so that we convene at 9:00 o'clock in the morning, with the possible idea that we adjourn sometime in the early part of the afternoon, and I have watched particularly Mr. Fischer and Mr. Davis operate as a subcommittee of the Style and Drafting Committee, and it seems to me they have operated in a very efficient manner, in that they have retired to the gallery to do their work. Somehow, they seem to be able to pay attention to what is going on while accomplishing their work and be present when their vote is needed, particularly in a roll call. I think that it might speed up and expedite matters, even if it were necessary during general discussion of many of these items, that the whole Style and Drafting Committee be excused to carry on their work.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you make a motion, Mr. Doogan?

DOOGAN: Yes, I so move.

METCALF: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves, seconded by Mr. Metcalf, that subcommittees of the Style and Drafting Committee or, if it is deemed necessary at times, for the whole committee to be excused in order that their work might be more quickly accomplished. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: As a member of the Style and Drafting Committee, I want to object to being moved around according to other people's wishes. I want to be present at the plenary sessions. There are many things coming up here in the closing days of the session that I consider extremely vital to the State of Alaska and the future, and I want to have a part in, and I don't think that this Convention or any other group should ever tell any of its committees that they have to get off the floor and go to work.

We are doing the work and catching up with it in spite of the limited time that we have. If Mr. Fischer and Mr. Davis want to go back there and work, I have no objection to their doing it, but I think it should be left entirely optional with the people on the committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I might point out that Mr. Doogan's intention wasn't to force the committee to go out and work, but under Rule 18, "No standing committee may hold meetings during the sessions of the Convention without permission of the Convention." Under this motion, if it passes, when and if the Style and Drafting Committee saw fit to hold a meeting during the Convention, if something is up on the floor which did not demand their presence, the committee could be excused without each time asking permission of the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I might add that it is also quite desirable that we be here, or at least some of us, during the argument on the floor, because it is through that argument that we get the intent of the body, and it isn't always possible to find it through any other medium.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seemed to the Chair that what Mr. Doogan meant was that, mainly, if a subcommittee wished to work during the plenary session until such time as a vote might be called, if they wish to work in the back of the room, it would then be their prerogative without engendering any ill-feeling from the other delegates in the Convention. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, this is not an unusual procedure. I know in the legislature during the last stages, when the Finance Committee or the Ways and Means Committee are working on the appropriations bill, they are absent from the floor quite a bit of the time, and, if they have some particular piece of legislation coming up that they are interested in, they always arrange to have a friend call them to come in in time to vote or to take part in the debate, and here it is very handy. If the subcommittee meets in the rear of the gallery, they are easy to contact, and I don't see anything against it at all. Of course, we don't want to force them to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I don't object to this at all, and I think what Mr. Doogan meant was that we be given permission to hold meetings during the plenary session at such times as we would desire to do so. I might mention that it is a little different from a legislature in that, as Mr. Barr said, if a member has an interest in some particular piece of legislation, he comes back on the floor. Well, the difference here is that every single thing the Convention does has to go through us, eventually, and if we are not here when it is being discussed, as Mrs. Hermann said, in many cases, we don't know just exactly what it was that the Convention intended. I want to mention something else, and that is that our subcommittee work is pretty well finished. We are right up to the Convention and the subcommittees are just awaiting the Convention getting some more work off the floor and in to us, and the meetings that we have to have are full committee meetings with all nine members going over subcommittee drafts. Now, that is rather a noisy procedure, and we would be glad to go back and do it, but I am afraid it would inconvenience the people in the gallery and that they would probably hear a good deal more from that rear table than they would through the loudspeaker from this room. I don't object to that, but I just say it might inconvenience the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is "Shall Rule No. 18 be suspended in order that the Style and Drafting Committee or its subcommittees might use its own judgment in leaving the floor for committee meetings?" Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, this is not a suspension of the rules; this is permission under Rule 18. A simple majority, I think, will do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the rule states that you have to have the consent of the body, does it not? Actually, it would be a suspension, Mr. Fischer. Is there objection to the request? If not, it is so ordered. Is there a pending amendment to the article on suffrage and elections? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, the proposed language is going to be a rewrite of the entire section. Mr. Davis and I spent the recess with the consultants, and we ask that that be kept in abeyance now until we get it mimeographed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed amendments to other sections of Article V? If not, Article V will be held on the calendar until Section 1 is reported back from the Style and Drafting Committee. We have before us Article VII, the Article on Health, Education and Welfare. What number is that in the Style and Drafting Report?

SUNDBORG: Article VII.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Article VII. The Chief Clerk will please read the committee report. Mr. Robertson needs a copy of Article VII; Mr. Armstrong needs a copy of Article VII; Mr. Knight, Mr. Marston need a copy, Mr. Kilcher. The Convention is at ease.

(The Convention was at ease for a few moments while the needed copies were obtained.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

(The Chief Clerk then read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on its redraft of Article VII, Health, Education and Welfare.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the committee have a report to make at this time, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, this article was redrafted by a subcommittee consisting of Mrs. Hermann, Mrs. Nordale, and Mr. Hurley, and it has been discussed with and, I believe, agreed to by the substantive committee, the Committee on the Bill of Rights. We have asked Mr. Hurley to explain what changes have been made and to answer any questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, the Committee on Style and Drafting made very few changes in this particular article because they found it, I might say, unnecessary to do so. The first change from the enrolled copy embodied the second word in Section 1 in which the enrolled copy said that the "state" shall do something, and we have suggested that the term "legislature" be used in order to pinpoint it to a particular division of the state government with the thought that the state is a combination of the executive, the judicial, and the legislative branches. It was felt the intent was that the legislative branch was the one that should make the provisions. The same carried down to Section 2 and the same should have carried down to Section 3; I can explain Section 3 a little bit later. I think there were no changes other than that in Section 1, other than perhaps reversing the order of one or two words. Section 2 appears precisely as it was in the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions to be directed to Mr. Hurley regarding this article?

HURLEY: Shall I go on to Section 3?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Section 3 had considerable discussion, and, because of the feeling that we had as to the intent of the Convention and the possible conflict of the wording as it appeared in the enrolled copy with the intent of the body, we called it to the attention of the substantive committee, and I believe that they are prepared to suggest a committee amendment to that particular section. So, I would be glad at this time to answer any questions that anyone may have, if I can, concerning the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Hurley, I notice the phrase "which shall be" on the end of the second line, and the third line of Section 1, was omitted. Do you think that that dilutes the meaning of the enrolled copy or not?

HURLEY: Which words were eliminated from the enrolled copy?

METCALF: The phrase "which shall be" which begins at the end of line 2 and again on line 3 of Section 1. I notice that has been omitted.

HURLEY: Yes, Mr. Metcalf. I find your question now, and it is our opinion that it not only was not necessary, but if anything, it probably is stronger now than it was before. We feel that the schools are -- that the intent of the group is that the schools be open to all children in the state, and it is not even mandatory, it is something that we expect. It didn't seem to add anything or subtract anything so we felt it was better to leave it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Barr.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I might answer the question directly by saying, no, I don't think it dilutes anything.

BARR: Mr. Hurley, in Section 3, "The State may provide for public welfare". That word "welfare" was in the original section, I presume?

HURLEY: Yes, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Did the committee consider any other word? Now, in asking that, really "welfare" has a very broad meaning. It is accepted generally as meaning a dole or assistance, and so forth, but in our Constitution of the United States, it says "to promote the general welfare" which means many, many things. Now, I think there ought to be a better word than that -- consistent.

HURLEY: I might say that part of our suggestion on that was that the legislature would not actually provide for public welfare but would provide a framework of government within which public welfare work would be carried on, and we had the suggestion that it was, in reality, a program of public welfare, but that will probably be embodied in the amendment that may be offered, and it may solve the problem you seek to solve. If it doesn't, perhaps at that time you might discuss the matter. I see your point, however.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions on the article -- Section 1? Or Section 2? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I want to talk about Section 3. May I ask a question of Mr. Hurley about Section 3?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Hurley, I see the wording "a standard of living compatible with health and human dignity" were left in as originally, I believe, approved by this body. There was a big argument about how are you going to keep a millionaire in his proper dignity if he should go broke. Has that matter been taken up?

ARMSTRONG: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

ARMSTRONG: I think if Mr. Rivers had been following Mr. Hurley's intent, that this would be up for discussion when the amendments come in from the substantive committee.

R. RIVERS: You are right.

HURLEY: Mr. President, if there are no further questions on Sections 1 and 2, we might perhaps go into the amending process by the substantive committee and perhaps this matter could be taken of then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other questions? Miss Awes.

AWES: I have an amendment to Section 3 if it is all right to submit it at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have a committee amendment?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I am just wondering, isn't Miss Awes, your amendment in the opinion of your committee, one which changes the substance or is it just a change in phraseology?

AWES: Well, I would say we changed it to clarify it.

SUNDBORG: In other words, it is just a change in phraseology?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk can read the proposed amendment.

SUNDBORG: I was going to say, Mr. President, if it is a change in substance, it is not in order at this time; if it is a change in phraseology, we would like to have it considered before our report is accepted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 3 and substitute: 'The State shall provide for public welfare.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now is that a substantive change or not?

AWES: I think I might say that the Committee feels that this clarifies it in that it expresses the intent better of the Convention, but it might be a matter of substance. The reason we are changing it, we were afraid of the interpretation that might be placed on it as it stood.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Could we have a recess for a minute or two?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a minute or two.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The feeling of the Chair on this particular amendment -- the personal feeling of the Chair is that it isn't a substantive change. However, the Chair knows that there are many delegates who feel that it is a substantive change. It is one of those questions on which it is pretty hard to draw the line between, and it might be better to ask for unanimous consent for suspension of the rules, or something of that sort. Miss Awes.

AWES: I ask for unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and the amendment be considered at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes asked unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that the specific amendment might be offered.

METCALF: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Miss Awes?

AWES: Well, I don't know. I think there were only a few words changed in this and I think maybe, if Mr. Sundborg would ask that it be approved as the report of Style and Drafting, then I'd make my amendment. It might save going through a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Has the motion or request for unanimous consent been withdrawn?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection was heard, so the --

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there are no further amendments as to phraseology only, I now ask that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting on the article on health, education, and welfare be accepted, and that the changes in wording which appear in our draft be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent request -- Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I object. I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is this an amendment for wording?

METCALF: It's a return to the original wording of the enrolled section, that's all. Is that an amendment to phraseology?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that in Section 1?

METCALF: Yes, sir, it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may offer your amendment. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, on line 2, after the phrase 'public schools' insert the phrase 'which shall be'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf, what is your pleasure?

METCALF: I move for the adoption of the amendment. That is the same phrase which is used in the enrolled copy. Personally, we spent many, many hours working on the enrolled copy. I like it just a shade better than the one here. That is my own personal opinion. I'd like the opinion of the Convention on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other phraseology amendments to be offered? If not -- Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I now ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on the article on health, welfare, and education be accepted and that the changes incorporated in our draft be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting -- Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: That doesn't include the amendment of Delegate Awes, does it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it does not. Be accepted and the changes made by the Style and Drafting Committee be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Miss Awes.

AWES: I wonder if one word in that amendment could be changed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean the proposed amendment that you have?

AWES: Yes. I said, "The State shall provide for public welfare", and in the other sections Style and Drafting changed it to the "legislature", and I would like to change it to, "the legislature shall provide for public welfare", and I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, you would first have to ask for suspension of the rules.

AWES: I move that the rules be suspended and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second?

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Doogan. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: In the Style and Drafting copy that I have, it says "The state may provide for public welfare for persons unable..."

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. Mr. Cooper, that is part of Miss Awes' amendment which she changed -- that the word "state" be changed to "legislature". No, it isn't changed yet; it is in the amendment that she seeks to offer as a specific amendment. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as proposed by Miss Awes if the motion to suspend the rules carries.

CHIEF CLERK: "The legislature shall provide for public welfare."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Point of inquiry. Did the Committee on Health, Education, and Welfare appear before the Style and Drafting Committee on this, and what was the action of the Style and Drafting Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, could you answer that?

HURLEY: Mr. President, I think it was the other way around. The Committee on Style and Drafting appeared before the Committee on Health, Education, and Welfare, and at the time and the number of people there, as I recall, the action was unanimous to introduce this particular amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 42 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 9 - Cooper, Cross, Harris, Kilcher, Laws, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Reader, Taylor.

Absent: 4 - Collins, Hilscher, Hinckel, Nolan.)

CHIEF CLERK: 42 yeas, 9 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the rules have been suspended. Miss Awes.

AWES: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves the adoption of the amendment.

ARMSTRONG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Armstrong. Miss Awes.

AWES: The committee originally adopted the section as it appears in the Style and Drafting Committee provision -- copy. When it came out for argument on the floor, as I recall, there was some question about whether it might be too liberally construed. I remember an argument about providing for millionaires or something. Since it has been adopted, there have been many who have seriously questioned the fact that it might be too restrictive in that it might be interpreted by a court to mean that we could only provide public welfare under this provision in the sense of the old-fashioned dole, and that these new programs like unemployment insurance and things of the nature of social security would not be allowed under this provision. The state, I believe, even without a provision, would have the authority to take care of the public welfare as necessary, and all that we intended to do and we believe that the Convention wanted to do was set forth in the constitution that that power was reserved to the state, and we believe that the amendment proposed so states -- and won't cause any of these difficulties that have been anticipated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I want to say this: that I was one who defended the inclusion of these words because they seem to set forth a basic philosophy; but long before we took our Christmas recess, it became evident to me, the more I consulted with people who knew our intent, that we had definitely damaged the cause of public welfare instead of helping it, and I certainly would recommend that we delete these words as recommended by the committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: May I ask Miss Awes a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

HERMANN: Miss Awes, in changing from "state" to "legislature", did you mean to limit that to the legislature or use it interchangeably with "by law"? Could it be provided by initiative or referendum?

AWES: I understand that "legislature" and "by law" are used interchangeably, and the only reason I changed it to "legislature" was so that it would conform with the other sections as revised by Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention? All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be proposed by the Committee? Are there other amendments to be proposed by the Committee? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, inasmuch as I made so much noise on that last vote, may I have the floor now on personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may have the floor, Mr. Cooper.

(Mr. Cooper then spoke briefly under the point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other proposed amendments? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there are no other proposed amendments, I now move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article VII on health, education, and welfare be advanced to third reading, be read by title only, and placed on final adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article VII, the article on health, education, and welfare, be advanced to third reading, be read by title only, and placed on final adoption. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the rules have been suspended and Article VII is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk may read the title of the article.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article VII, Health, Education, and Welfare."

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article is open for debate. The question is, "Shall Article VII, the article on health, education and welfare, be adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 48 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 4 - Coghill, Laws, Londborg, Metcalf.

Absent: 3 - Collins, Hinckel, Nolan.)

CHIEF CLERK: 48 yeas, 4 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and Article VII, the article on health, education, and welfare, has become a part of Alaska's constitution. We now have before us Article III, the article on the executive, the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting. The Chief Clerk will please read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

(The Chief Clerk then read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee, dated January 26, 1956, Article III, The Executive.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, does the Style and Drafting Committee have a report to make?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, this article was redrafted by a subcommittee consisting of Mr. Armstrong, Mrs. Hermann, and Mr. Hurley. Our redraft has been reviewed by the Committee on the Executive, and we understood that it is their feeling that we have not changed the substance in any particular and that they approve of this draft. We have asked Mr. Armstrong to explain the changes that have been made and to answer any questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, your subcommittee on Style and Drafting met with the entire Committee on the Executive and found them most receptive to this article, and I believe that they would concur in that we have not changed intent. The major thing that was done was breaking paragraphs down into subsections and rearranging them to give them sequence, and to give a picture of what would be executive authority, limitations, succession, compensation, and the other features that would have to go along with the authority in setting up of the various executive departments of the article. If any one is in question, I believe we can give the cross-referencing of where the material comes from various sections. In very few places has the wording been changed and, if it has been changed, it has been only to keep it in context with other sections of the constitution. I believe, sir, that there is probably only one amendment that will be proposed by the committee, and I will leave that for the Chairman, Mr. Victor Rivers. I believe this is all of the explanation that is necessary unless there are questions, and I believe that you would be free to hear from Mr. Victor Rivers if he wants to speak to this and our work with his committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, as you have been told, the entire Executive Committee scanned and went over the draft of the Style and Drafting Committee, and we agree, there has been no change in substance. There has been a slight rearrangement in composition in order to derive the most effective wording, arrive at it, I shouldn't use that word "derive". Anyway, there are one, and possible two, small substantive amendments, one of which would have to do with becoming effective after the adjournment of the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: They are substantive?

V. RIVERS: They are in that sense, because they will have to be made to conform with the article we adopted on the legislature. There is one other small possible amendment clarifying the succession of the secretary of state if he fails to qualify, which is being studied by one of the consultants and which may or may not be entered by the committee. It is not a matter of major substance; it is a matter of clarifying the entire section. So those two possibilities exist as to being submitted by the Committee on the Executive. I do not yet have the draft which we asked for in connection with Section 23. The way it reads now, "Where these changes require the force of law, they shall be set forth in executive orders which shall become effective at the close of the next regular session of the legislature, unless otherwise disapproved by a resolution...", etc. Now, we are going to add in there the words, "unless disapproved by the legislature within 60 days or the adjournment of the legislature if it takes place sooner", but we haven't got the exact wording ready yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, if there are any questions, I will be glad to try to answer them for the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions to be directed to the subcommittee of the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to phraseology in the article on the executive? If there are no questions -
-

ARMSTRONG: Mr. Sundborg, the Chairman of the Committee -- I would turn this back then to our Chairman for the usual motion to accept the report of the committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I would like to call attention to a misprint on page 6, line 6, in the spelling of "legislature".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will Style and Drafting see that this is taken care of? Mr. Sundborg, there seems to be no question with relation to the work that Style and Drafting has done on this article.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on Article III, The Executive, be accepted, and that the changes in wording proposed by the Style and Drafting Committee be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on Article III, The Executive, be accepted, and that the proposed changes in wording be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Are there any substantive amendments -- would the committee wish to offer any substantive amendments?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I request that this be held over until after the noon recess, and we will then have possibly only one minor substantive change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that the article on the executive be held over until after the noon recess. Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: A point of inquiry to the Chairman of the Executive Committee. To which section is that, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: That was Section 23, which would make it then conforming with the legislative article that we adopted earlier. We have set up here "effective after adjournment", but the fact came out, of course, that we have a continuous session, so we will have to modify that to conform with the article on the legislative.

COGHILL: Does that hold the whole article over then, we can't act on any of it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, if there are other amendments by the delegates to be proposed to sections, it would be in order now. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in that light and to pursue the matter further, I would like to propose a substantive amendment, and ask that the rules be suspended, to Section 26, page 7, strike the comma and add a period and strike the remainder of the last sentence, line 3 and 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chief Clerk have the wording of that amendment? Now, you moved that the rules be suspended? Is that correct, Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill so moves, that the rules be suspended.

COGHILL: I ask unanimous consent.

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second?

LONDBORG: I will second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg seconds the motion that the rules be suspended in order that this specific amendment might be offered. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: It seems to me this identical amendment was offered on the floor at the time we were discussing this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was it, at the time --

LONDBORG: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

LONDBORG: The suspension of the rules takes care of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct -- if the rules would be suspended, Mrs. Hermann, it would suspend all those rules. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will point out that this amendment was offered on the floor. The tendency of it would be --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, the motion on the suspension of the rules is not debatable.

COGHILL: Is it in order to clarify the proposed amendment or do we have to wait until the rules have been suspended?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, only to read the proposed amendment. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 3, page 7, strike the comma and insert a period and strike the remainder of the sentence."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 13 - Coghill, Cooper, Hurley, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 36 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - Collins, Davis, V. Fischer, Hinckel, Nolan, Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 13 yeas, 36 nays, and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rules have not been suspended. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I have the personal privilege of the floor for three minutes?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Coghill, you may have the floor.

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

HERMANN: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Don't our rules provide that a member may have the privilege of the floor at any time whether there is objection or not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, Mrs. Hermann, but if objection is heard -- the Chair thought of that last night -- if objection is heard --

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I will withdraw my objection if it is only going to take three minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

(Mr. Coghill then spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: It is just about noon and I will ask unanimous consent to recess until 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan asks unanimous consent that the Convention recess until 1:30 p.m. Are there committee announcements?

ARMSTRONG: The subcommittee on the resources article would like to meet at 12:45 and would request that Mr. Riley meet with the committee, and Mr. Boswell, with the subcommittee on resources at 12:45 in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: The Committee on Apportionment had announced a meeting for 1:00 o'clock, but we would like to call it for 12:00 o'clock, and I should like to ask Mr. Kilcher, Mr. Stewart, Mr. Metcalf, Mr. Hurley, and Mr. Cross to be present if they want to pursue their suggestions any further, and any others that might have suggestions with regard to the descriptions of the election districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Committee on Ordinances at 1:00 o'clock in the committee room upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Ordinances at 1:00 o'clock in the committee room upstairs. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, there will be a brief meeting of the Judiciary Committee right in the rear here upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Judiciary Committee in the rear of the room upon recess. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Style and Drafting immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration will meet just briefly just prior to the plenary session this afternoon, and we are prepared to bring in a report on the closing ceremony or the signing ceremony, at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Administration will meet just prior to the plenary session this afternoon. If there are no other reports, the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have the article on the executive, Article No. III, before us at this time. Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: Mr. President, may I have the privilege of the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Knight, you may have the privilege of the floor.

(Mr. Knight spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well done, Mr. Knight. Are there proposed committee amendments of a substantive nature? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have the amendments here that constitute the redraft of a couple of sections and they are now being mimeographed in the boiler room. I would like to have them read. I think they will be down by the time we get to acting upon them. So, I will ask at this time to submit an amendment covering Section 10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment to Section 10.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 10 and insert the following: Section 10. If the governor-elect dies, resigns, or is disqualified, the secretary of state-elect shall succeed to the office of governor for the full term. If the governor-elect fails to assume his office for any other reason, the secretary of state-elect shall act as governor and if the governor-elect does not assume his office within six months of the beginning of the term, the secretary of state shall then succeed to the office.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, do you ask unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules?

V. RIVERS: I will move and ask unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules for purposes of introducing this committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules for the purpose of introducing this amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, would it be asking too much to have it read once more?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read it once more?

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for suspension of the rules? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I think I am going to object for a moment. I want to ask a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of an information purpose?

HERMANN: Yes. Is that purely an amendment in phraseology, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: No. I might say there is a gap filled in there in case the governor-elect does not qualify. It was felt to be a blank in the article and it adds an additional provision. I checked it with the committee yesterday, and in substance we agreed that was a subject we should cover on the floor, and I asked the Style and Drafting through their consultant to draft this measure up so we could give it consideration.

HERMANN: May I ask just where that is inserted?

V. RIVERS: It takes the place of Section 10, covers the same subject matter, but the matter of the governor-elect failing to qualify or to accept office was not covered, and that covers this contingency only. It does not alter the intent of the committee.

KILCHER: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Is this not a very long amendment not to be available in mimeographed form?

V. RIVERS: It is being mimeographed, and I thought it would be here by the time I brought it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the suspension of the rules? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended.

V. RIVERS: If you will look at the present Article 10, you will see that it does not cover the case of the governor-elect actually failing to take office; we have provided if he fails to do so within a period of six months for any reason whatsoever -- such as health, indisposition, bankruptcy, or anything of that nature, then that would cause him to fail or lack the desire to take office, automatically the secretary of state succeeds him to that office and fills and serves the term. That is the only matter covered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, do you move the adoption?

V. RIVERS: Yes, I'll move and ask unanimous consent.

LONDBORG: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I just want to ask Mr Rivers a question. Section 11. Is it a fact that the provisions of Section 11 to a certain extent are included in the amendment that you were offering?

V. RIVERS: If you will look at it, it does cover another contingency. In Section 10 at the present time, it says, "In case a governor-elect fails to qualify and assume office for any reason, the person elected with him as secretary of state shall succeed to the office of governor for the full term." Now, if he were temporarily away and could not assume it immediately, the question at law would arise, when should the secretary of state take over the office of governor if the governor-elect fails to qualify? So, we put that same six-month period in there that appears in the other part of the article. It covers a contingency and sets a time limit where this present clause does not set a time limit as to when the secretary of state shall actually become governor. It was felt to be a lack in the article after going over it with the consultants and the committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to ask one question. I don't object to the amendment but in place of such a long amendment, I wonder if inserting the word "or" in place of "and", between "qualify" and "assume" wouldn't cover most of the things that you are trying to arrive at?

V. RIVERS: It would still not give a time as to when the governor should be considered under law to have failed to qualify or have failed to assume. The only thing we do is set up the period in which he will have been considered to fail to qualify or fail to assume office. We set it very liberally at six months.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I direct a question to Mr. Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Rivers, did I understand you to say in discussing this proposed amendment that bankruptcy of the governor would be a disqualification?

V. RIVERS: He might feel it was -- morally he might feel -- I just used that as an illustration. I didn't intend to assume it would actually be. He might feel in his own mind, though, that his business affairs would not allow him to take office under those circumstances. That wasn't intended to be one of the causes by which he would fail to qualify.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I would like to point out that by action taken this morning, I don't think anybody will ever be bankrupt in Alaska now. The public welfare will take care of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, the people that you had consulted with evidently haven't taken the material to the boiler room yet to have it run off.

V. RIVERS: Mrs. Nordale assures me they have.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a couple of minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent to hold this until the mimeographed copies are ready for the members.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent to hold this proposed amendment until mimeographed copies are available. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr President, if there is no objection, I would ask unanimous consent that we at this time take up the suggested amendment to the article on suffrage and elections which has been placed upon our desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will revert back to the article on suffrage and elections. You will recall Section

1 was referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting for a redraft. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, that work has been done and mimeographed copies are being put on the desk. If anyone wants one, there are some available. I now ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment which I offered this morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You had a pending amendment, is that right, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the withdrawal of the amendment as proposed by Mr. Ralph Rivers. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, at this time I would like to move an amendment to Section 1 of Article V, the amendment to be the amendment striking Section 1 as it now appears, and substituting the mimeographed draft which has been passed around. I should point out now that this mimeographed draft says it is a draft by the Committee on Style and Drafting. Actually it is not. Style and Drafting hasn't seen it. It is a draft that was prepared by Mr. Rivers and myself and the three experts upstairs and George McLaughlin. We all got in on the act. But if you will look at the mimeographed copy, you will see that there is a change in the third line of the mimeographed draft to the effect that says "who meets registration requirements which may be prescribed by law". Then the rest of Section 1 remains as it was in the Style and Drafting copy as amended this morning. We have added a new sentence at the end of Section 1 to read as follows: "Additional voting qualifications may be prescribed by law for bond issue elections of political subdivisions." Mr. Rivers and Mr. McLaughlin and I thought that that covered what we were trying to do this morning, and I might mention I have showed it to several of the delegates and apparently it seems to meet the need.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, do you ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that you might submit this amendment?

DAVIS: I think the rules were suspended this morning in connection with Mr. Rivers' amendment. If they were not, I ask for unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules and for the adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing none, the rules have been suspended. Mr. Davis, do you move the adoption of the proposed amendment?

DAVIS: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

HERMANN: I second the motion.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann seconds the motion. Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: State your question.

NORDALE: What might be the registration requirements prescribed by law? Would they add to these basic requirements to be a qualified voter?

DAVIS: They would only add to the basic requirements the necessity of being registered and of course we have already taken care of that in Section 4 of the draft as we have it. The only reason for putting it in here is so there couldn't be any possible conflict between Section 1 and Section 4. Does that answer the question?

NORDALE: Yes. If no system of registration ever were established, then that would have no effect at all.

DAVIS: That would have no effect at all. It is only "as may be prescribed".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adopting the amendment? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be proposed to Article V, the article on suffrage and elections? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, if there are no further amendments, I move that the rules be suspended, and that Article V be advanced to third reading and up for final passage and be read by title only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves -- and asks unanimous consent -- did you, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That the rules be suspended, as to Article V, the article on suffrage and elections, that the article be advanced to third reading, read the third time by title only, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules are suspended and Article V is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will read the title of the article.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article V, Suffrage and Elections."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there debate? The article is open for debate.

R. RIVERS: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no discussion, the question is, "Shall Article V, the article on suffrage and elections, be adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 46 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 4 - Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Reader.

Absent: 5 - V. Fischer, Smith, Sundborg, White, Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 46 yeas, 4 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the article on suffrage and elections has become a part of Alaska's state constitution. Mr. Victor Rivers, would it be your wish that we pass the executive article for the time being and come back to it later?

V. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection then, we have before us Committee Proposal No. 14 the proposal on the election districts. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I ask the indulgence of the body to offer some 10 or 11 minor changes in the description of election districts. We debated having them redone but determined that it would be best to dictate them from the floor and that in the long run it would save time, and so I ask your indulgence, and I should like to take them up one at a time in connection with the election district to which they refer. These have been approved by the committee after meetings with delegates who offered them. Some were considered; some were rejected; some were accepted in part or in whole. May I, unless there is objection, then, proceed with the first change other than those we gave you a couple of days ago. It is in Election District No. 3, page 2, third line, after the word "north" add the following: "and partly bounded on the north by a line drawn between Cape Fanshaw and the north side of Pybus Bay". I ask unanimous consent that that change in the description be incorporated into the description for Election District No. 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal asks unanimous consent that the incorporation of this change become a part of the description of Election District No. 3. Mr. Hellenthal, is that correct?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to ask a question. Is there some other word you could use other than "partly because that denotes indecision.

HELLENTHAL: No other word can be used.

DOOGAN: I think it ought to be straightened out a little further and for that reason I'll object because --

HELLENTHAL: May I explain to you why the word "partly" is used, and I think Mr. Nolan who is very interested in this area will confirm it. It is not the complete boundary, but it was one that Mr. Robertson wanted. It is impossible to outline -- under the method we have pursued in all these election districts, we do not give descriptions of code; we use watersheds or areas. We have not attempted to close the boundaries. It would take a detailed survey to close that boundary we have in mind, but this does cover the area described on the map fully and completely with no omissions. Does that help, Mr. Doogan?

DOOGAN: It doesn't straighten out the "partly" as far as I am concerned, but if everybody else is willing to go along with it, I will withdraw my objection.

HELLENTHAL: Afterwards, if you will come and look at the map with me, I think you will agree that it is all right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment for Election District No. 3 be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

HELLENTHAL: Now, in Election District No. 5, the description consists of seven lines. In the sixth line, delete the second "and"; the word "islands" stricken; insert a comma after the word "Douglas". After the word "Shelter" insert a comma and the words "and Benjamin Islands,". So that it will read, "...including Douglas, Shelter, and Benjamin Islands, and other small adjacent islands."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that proposed amendment?

HELLENTHAL: I do, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Hellenenthal's unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent that in the description for Election District No. 6, Yakobi be spelled Y-a-k-o-b-i rather than Y-o-k-o-b-i.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of the amendment? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I was going to ask about the spelling of Berners Bay. Isn't that B-e-r-n-e-r-s?

HELLENTHAL: I think we made that correction at the last gathering, Mr. Taylor.

CHIEF CLERK: It was just to be Style and Drafting -- it was not adopted.

HELLENTHAL: Then I ask unanimous consent that in the description of Election District No. 5, Berners Bay be spelled "B-e-r-n-e-r-s.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have another unanimous consent request here on Yakobi. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of Mr. Hellenenthal on the spelling of Yakobi? Hearing none, it is so ordered.

HELLENTHAL: And I likewise ask unanimous consent that the spelling of Berners Bay be changed to read B-e-r-n-e-r-s.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. President, was any action taken on the spelling of Kruzof in Section 4?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There again, that was left to the Style and Drafting Committee, but if Mr. Hellenenthal wishes to do that at this time?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. I move and ask unanimous consent that in the first line at the top of page 3 with relation to the description of Election District No. 4 that Kruzof Island be spelled K-r-u-z-o-f.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? If not, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: Now, Mr. President, in the description of Election District No. 7, with relation to the first line on page 4, I ask that, beginning with the word "including", strike the balance of the section and substitute the following: "not including the Tiekel River on the west; and up to and including the Chitina River on the east." Tiekel is spelled T-i-e-k-e-l, and Chitina is spelled C-h-i-t-i-n-a.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, is Tiekel on the map spelled T-i-e-k-e-l?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. Mr. President, we just checked it a moment ago.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Might we have that amendment again?

(Mr. Hellenthal then repeated the amendment to the description of Election District No. 7.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, would you --

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent that the suggested amendment with regard to District No. 7 be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, if the Chair may, I wonder if the Chair might ask a question of Mr. Rosswog. Mr. Rosswog, that means that the Copper River would be the boundary? That would be the only change, bringing it out to the Copper River. Is that right?

ROSSWOG: Yes, that would be it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of information, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Hellenthal, there is a semicolon after the word "west".

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

R. RIVERS: Well, now, is this up to and including the Chitina River -- is that within the exclusion or is that something after the exclusion ends?

HELLENTHAL: "Not including the Tiekel River on the west; and up to and including the Chitina River on the east." Frankly, I think the semicolon is not necessary, but the mapping people thought it was.

R. RIVERS: That is within the exclusion then, is it?

HELLENTHAL: No, it is not within an exclusion. It is "and up to and including the Chitina River on the East."

R. RIVERS: Then the semicolon would be necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: But that would not include the town of Chitina?

HELLENTHAL: It does not include the town of Chitina.

R. RIVERS: No objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing none, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: In Election District No. 8, a similar amendment must be made. We move and ask unanimous consent that in the description of Election District No. 8, in the fifth line, beginning with the word "but", strike the balance of the sentence and insert the following: "and including the Tiekel River on the west, and above but not including the Chitina River on the east." I will repeat it. Beginning with the word "but", strike the balance of the sentence and insert the following: "and including the Tiekel River on the west, and above but not including the Chitina River on the east." I move and ask unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the following change be made in the description of Election District No. 9: the sixth line, after the word "including", insert the words: "the area draining into the". After the word "River", insert the following words: "from the north and from the south". And I repeat them again: "from the north and from the south".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read how that would read following the semicolon.

CHIEF CLERK: "...and that area draining into Knik Arm from and including Fish Creek and its tributaries on the west side of Knik Arm to and including the area draining into the Knik River from the north and from the south to the highway bridge."

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this amendment.

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Objection is heard. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I object for the purpose of information. I believe that the highway bridge, I think it should designate what highway that is.

HELLENTHAL: There is only one highway bridge on the Knik River.

TAYLOR: What highway is that?

HELLENTHAL: That is the one this side of Palmer.

TAYLOR: What is the name of the highway?

HELLENTHAL: Anchorage-Palmer. I think.

TAYLOR: Why isn't it in here?

HELLENTHAL: They thought it was not necessary, and for the sake of brevity, they follow this method. I think it is pretty clear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: The next amendment is to the description of Election District No. 10, and it is in the last two lines of that description. I move and ask unanimous consent that, in the last two lines of the description of Election District No. 10, the following words be stricken: line 6, after the word "tributaries", strike the balance of the section and substitute the following: "to but not including Beluga River on the south." The insertion, I will repeat it again: "to but not including Beluga River on the south." I move, Mr. President, and ask unanimous consent that this change be adopted. I might add that this change merely illustrates the line that was on the map in words. It definitely includes Tyonek in the Kenai Election District, which had not been too clearly done in the first draft.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Objection just for clarification.

HELLENTHAL: It is to exclude Tyonek from the Anchorage district. Your next amendment will include it in the Kenai.

KILCHER: May I ask another question of Mr. Hellenthal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

KILCHER: On the third to last line, "Beluga River" should be stricken -- "and Beluga".

HELLENTHAL: Yes, that on the third line from the end, following the comma after the word "Theodore", the two words "and Beluga" should be stricken, and I ask that my previous motion in asking for unanimous consent, that those two words be included in it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to including that? If there is no objection then, Mr. Hellenthal asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: The next is in Election District No. 11. I move and ask unanimous consent that line 2, the words "and including Chugach and Windy Bays" be stricken, and that the words "Gore Point" be substituted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

CHIEF CLERK: How do you spell Gore?

HELLENTHAL: G-o-r-e.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that, in the same description of Election District No. 11, at the end of the sentence, that a semicolon be substituted for the period and the following words added: "and to and including the confluence of the Kenai and Russian Rivers on the west".

(Mr. Hellenthal then repeated the proposed amendment.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does that mean where they meet?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, Mr. President, that is a fancy word meaning where they meet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, this amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: The next is in the description of Election District No. 12, line 2, after the word "into", I move and ask unanimous consent that the words "the Gulf of Alaska" be inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: What was that last?

HELLENTHAL: "...the Gulf of Alaska" comma.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: Then, in the same second line of the same description of District No. 12, the words "but not" be stricken, and the word "and" be substituted in their place. I move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: In line 4 of the same description for Election District No. 12. I ask that the words "by Chugach Bay" be stricken and the words "into Port Dick" be substituted; further, that after the word "south", that the words "to Gore Point" be inserted. I so move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: In line 4 of the same description of Election District No. 12, I move and ask unanimous consent that the word "Creek" be substituted for "River".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

NERLAND: Mr. Hellenenthal, will you read how that section will sound under the amendment?

HELLENTHAL: I have two more and then I hope to read it all and see if we have it right. Was there objection to it?

METCALF: Mr. Hellenenthal, I am not sure, is that the one that comes down to Hope, is that what you mean?

HELLENTHAL: That is the Resurrection Creek near Hope.

METCALF: Does that say "Creek" or "River"?

HELLENTHAL: "Creek". We checked it specifically with that in mind. Was the last amendment adopted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Not yet. Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment changing the word "River" to "Creek"? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

HELLENTHAL: On this same line 4 of this same Election District No. 12, following the semicolon after the word "north", I move and ask unanimous consent that the following words be inserted: "and the area east of the confluence of the Kenai and Russian Rivers and". I further move and ask unanimous consent in connection with line --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, you didn't move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that last amendment. Is this to be included?

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent that it include the words: "and the area east of the confluence of the Kenai and Russian Rivers and" be inserted following the word "north", fourth line of the description of Election District No. 12.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adopting the amendment? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, for information, the semicolon, I think, should be stricken; it adds confusion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is what you wished, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. I move and ask unanimous consent that the semicolon in the fourth line of this same description of Election District No. 12, be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the semicolon is ordered stricken and the amendment adopted.

HELLENTHAL: Now, Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that in lines 6 and 7 the word may I correct that? In Line 6 only, the word "Chakachatna" be stricken and the word "Beluga" be inserted in its place, and that the comma be changed to a semicolon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? If there is no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: The last amendment in the description of Election District No. 12 is in line 8, and I move and ask unanimous consent that in line 8, the words "Chakehamna Lake;" be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, it has been drawn to my attention that someone has misspelled the name "Resurrection". I didn't have my Bible here but Webster certainly has a different version of it. Strike one of the s's.

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that --

McLAUGHLIN: And add an extra "r".

PRESIDENT EGAN: First, we didn't -- there was no objection though to the amendment that had been offered by Mr. Hellenenthal striking the words "Chakehamna Lake" was there? If there is no objection, that amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the word "Resurrection" in line 4 of the description of Election District No. 12 be spelled correctly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the word "Resurrection" be spelled correctly. Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information.

R. RIVERS: I wonder what happened to the semicolon after "Chakehamna Lake".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was that included in your amendment?

HELLENTHAL: I thought I took that out in the motion.

CHIEF CLERK: No, you just said "Chakehamna Lake". Do you want the semicolon left, or the comma after "Rivers"?

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I will read it all to see if we all have it right, as requested by some gentleman here. "That area of Kenai Peninsula drained by streams flowing into the Gulf of Alaska, Cook Inlet, and Turnagain Arm, from and including the area drained into Port Dick on the south to Gore Point, to but not including Resurrection Creek on the north and the area east of the confluence of the Kenai and Russian Rivers and that area west of Cook Inlet drained by all streams flowing into Cook Inlet from Cape Douglas on the south to and including Beluga River; including Elizabeth Island and adjacent islands in Cook Inlet." If that conforms with the rest, I ask that the word "Resurrection" in Section 11 likewise be corrected as to spelling, and I so move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the correction of the spelling. If there is no objection, so ordered.

HELLENTHAL: Now, if you will turn to the description of Election District No. 19. In that description, in the second line, I move and ask unanimous consent that the description of Election District No. 19, in the second line thereof, following the words "Clear Creek", be amended by inserting a comma and the words "near Blair Lakes," -- B-l-a-i-r Lakes, plural.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent that, in the description of Election District No. 22, in the second and third lines thereof, the words "but not" and "Buckland" be stricken and the following words, respectively, inserted in their place: first, "and" in place of the words "but not"; and secondly, in line 3, strike the word "Buckland" and insert the word "Goodhope".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: In the description of Election District No. 23, I move that, in that description of Election District No. 23, in the third line thereof, the word "and" be stricken and the words "but not" be inserted in its stead. I so move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Cross.

CROSS: Would you read that section again, Section 23?

HELLENTHAL: Read the third line or the entire amendment?

CROSS: The change.

HELLENTHAL: That, in the third line of the description of Election District No. 23, the word "and" be stricken and insert in lieu thereof the words "but not".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have it, Mr. Cross?

CROSS: That word "Buckland" should be changed.

HELLENTHAL: Yes, that will be the next amendment, Mr. Cross.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: I move that, in the fourth line of the description of Election District No. 23, the word "Buckland" and the word "and" following "the word "to" be stricken and in lieu thereof the word "Goodhope" be substituted for "Buckland", and the words "but not" be substituted for the "and".

HERMANN: Which "and"?

HELLENTHAL: Following the word "to".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HELLENTHAL: I move that the references to the Pastolik River in the descriptions of Election Districts No. 23 and 24 be corrected so as to spell it with a "k" instead of a "c", and ask unanimous consent to accomplish this purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

HELLENTHAL: I observe parenthetically that Chamisso was corrected the other day to begin with a "C". Now, in the description of Election District No. 24, in the second from the last line thereof, I move and ask unanimous consent that the words "but not" be stricken and the word "and" be substituted in their place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Does the Committee have other proposed amendments, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: May I have a half-minute's recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, the Committee has two other amendments which will be mimeographed. They are not substantial, but they are lengthy and they involve the use of letters, numbers, and designations; and both are matters of form. One is to correct an obvious mathematical error, and the other is to group for purposes of designation only, and we will present them -- unless it is out of order, we will present them tomorrow morning when we consider the body of the article rather than merely the election districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, haven't we considered in second reading the legislative apportionment part of Committee Proposal No. 14 already in second reading? We have already had that before us as the Chair recalls.

CHIEF CLERK: It has even been returned from Engrossment and Enrollment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, it has been to Engrossment and Enrollment. Now, are these amendments to that?

HELLENTHAL: They are to Section 1 of the schedule; they both relate to Section 1 of the schedule.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I think it goes to Style and Drafting now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, now, the procedure is that those are now on the way to the Style and Drafting Committee or in the Style and Drafting Committee, that section of Committee Proposal No. 14.

HELLENTHAL: Mrs. Alexander suggested that we mimeograph them and hand them in, but I think that in five minutes I can explain them and perhaps we could save time. Style and Drafting, as a matter of fact, have them and are using them already.

V. RIVERS: I would object to unanimous consent on that. I understood that John had approximately ten amendments. We have gone through about 50, and I think we have about ten pages of journal on it now. I would rather see them mimeographed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, it would be proper that Style and Drafting would bring that back -- could incorporate it in the report and bring it back to ask our acceptance of the report, Mr. Hellenthal. It would not be proper for them to do that?

HELLENTHAL: There are many ways that it can be done, and I want to accommodate everybody.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If they would do it that way, it would probably be the easiest way to accomplish it, if you work with the Style and Drafting Committee, and then, when they bring the report back, those necessary changes could be included.

HELLENTHAL: We shall do that then. Might I observe at this point that the number of amendments was due not -- it was just due to the natural order of things. People think of these things at the last moment and bring them in at the last moment. Some of them we had never heard about until this morning, so I do apologize for the matter, but I think we are speeding things along this way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels the delegates recognize that. It is not the fault of the Committee. That is the fault of the delegates themselves. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: What is before the house at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Right at the moment the Chair is about to refer this description of election districts to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. If there is no objection, that description of election districts, a portion of this report, is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I would like to have about a three-minute recess for the Committee on Administration to meet in the ping pong room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Committee on Administration can meet in the ping pong room. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration would like to revert to the order of committee reports.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will revert to the order of committee reports at this time. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration has met and has prepared the following program for the occasion of the signing of the constitution for the new State of Alaska and recommends its approval by the Convention. The program will be -- the opening -- "Star Spangled Banner" by the University band; convening of the Convention in session by the President; invocation by the Reverend John C. Stokes; roll call of delegates; address by the Honorable B. Frank Heintzleman, Governor of Alaska; then the signing of the constitution by the delegates; a prayer of dedication will be given by the Reverend R. Rolland Armstrong; followed by an address by the Honorable William A. Egan, President of the Alaska Constitutional Convention. After that there will be the singing of the "Alaska Flag" by the Ladd Field men's chorus; benediction will be given by the most Reverend Francis D. Gleeson; and adjournment until February 6, that is Monday. The University has offered, if it is the pleasure of the Convention, to entertain the delegates and their family members present in Fairbanks with a supper and short novelty program of entertainment at the University dining room, 6:30 p.m., Sunday, February 5, 1956. The University would appreciate an expression of the delegates with regard to this invitation, which is given with the understanding that the Convention may feel free to decline if the occasion should not be convenient. Your committee proposes the printing of 100 copies of the constitution on parchment or high-grade paper. The pages would be 13 by 18 in dimension, and the text would be printed in double columns, and the pages would be encased in a suitable cover. Five of those copies would constitute the official copies provided by the Convention Rule No. 51. These copies would be signed at the ceremonies on February 5 and, in addition, the signature page of a copy to be written on parchment by hand. The balance of the printed copies would be distributed to each delegate, and otherwise as the Convention may determine. Mr. President, this is our report for the close of the program. I move and ask unanimous consent that it be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the report for the close of the Convention program.

DOOGAN: I object for a moment. I think that adjournment you speak of on February 5 should be recess.

COGHILL: We usually adjourn until the following day. That is not to adjourn sine die.

DOOGAN: That doesn't make any difference. February 5 is supposedly our last day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is still February 5 until 10 o'clock a.m. on February 6 so far as we --

DOOGAN: That's right, so it should be "recess" rather than "adjourn".

COGHILL: Excuse me, "recess".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I don't know whether I should say anything about this subject or not, but I don't want to give my unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I think it should be discussed by the delegates.

COGHILL: I so move.

DOOGAN: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the discussion is open.

BUCKALEW: I realize that perhaps it is wise to have an address by the Chief Executive of the Territory, but I would be inclined to favor someone else other than the governor for many reasons. He is an appointive official. As you well know, he came out with the plan of dividing Alaska, and it doesn't seem quite proper to me.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, point of information. I suggest that any changes that we might have, and I know I am toying with a few myself, we take before the committee for their action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, any discussion relating to things like that might be taken before the committee. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I don't wish to take up any time of the plenary session, but we are going to have to have programs made and these programs are going to have to go all over the Territory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess. The committee will meet again and anyone who has suggestions might -- Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I object to these meetings during plenary sessions. We have a limited time today and it won't be very long before we will adjourn, and then the committee could meet and hash it out and hear the witnesses.

POULSEN: President Egan, I think we should adopt the committee's report, if we have to, and let us vote on it now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill asks unanimous consent for the adoption. Was there objection?

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew objects.

COGHILL: I so move.

H. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill so moves, seconded by Mrs. Fischer, that the report of the committee be adopted. The question is, "Shall the report of the Committee on Administration with relation to the signing ceremony be adopted by the Convention, be accepted by the Convention?" Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Just for a matter of information, if there are to be any changes made or accepted, does this bind us so there will be none?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would not allow, if we accepted, or adopted, this motion, it would not allow any changes without the consent of the body, but as Mr. Coghill said, it is necessary that they have that information as quickly as possible and get it to the printer.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the report of the Committee on Administration be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor -- Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Is this debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is.

SUNDBORG: I was wondering, Mr. President, as I heard the report, whether it would not be more fitting if the signing of the constitution should not be the climax of that ceremony -- that is, not come early and enter in the middle of it to be followed by speeches, but to be the final action at the ceremony, just as at a commencement -- there are plenty of speeches but the thing that happens last, and the thing the people are really there to see is the awarding of diplomas, etc.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. There will not be any lengthy speeches, Mr. Sundborg. The only one is to be a short address by the governor of Alaska, and there will be a short address by Mr. Egan, our President of the Convention. They are the only two speakers on the program.

SUNDBORG: I am aware of that, but my point, Mr. Coghill and Mr. President, was that I feel that, whether the speeches are long or short, they should be given before the constitution is signed, and the signing of the constitution should be the thing that is really the climax and the end of that ceremony.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Fischer.

H. FISCHER: We followed the program used in New Jersey, am I not right, at the ceremonies? And we thought that your speech, Mr. President, a very short one after we had signed the document, (laughter) pardon me, would be most fitting to have it in that place.

V. FISCHER: Could I ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

V. FISCHER: Is the short speech for the President written already by the Committee? (Laughter)

COGHILL: I don't have to answer that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, it seems to me that, if we have the speeches and then have the various delegates go up four at a time, as I understand, the audience might get a little restive and start moving out on us, whereas, if they know there is a speech or two to come afterwards, we might be able to hold them all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of this subject? If not, the question is, "Shall the report of the Committee on Administration be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the report will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the report has been adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am a little bit concerned about that invitation for dinner on Sunday night. May I ask Mr. Coghill a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: About when would the signing ceremony and the short speeches end? What time of day?

COGHILL: We have it planned for 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon to start, and I imagine it would probably take about two or two and one-half hours to go through the program. This dinner will be upstairs in the cafeteria at 6:30 in the evening, and we will be the guests of the University and their faculty.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, there is going to be about a two-hour lag in there after the ceremony is over and before the dinner. That, of course, raises a situation that perhaps half of the delegates and their parties are going to have other arrangements and perhaps will be leaving the campus, and then it raises the question as to how many of them are going to come back to the campus for that cafeteria dinner, and I think we owe them the courtesy, though, of letting them know whether we accept as a body or whether we should have a show of hands and indicate to them how many would be availing themselves of that invitation. I don't think I will be available to come out here that night, but would make it a first order of business if this body is obligated to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, as I understand it, "Operation Statehood" is coming in a plane load from Anchorage sometime on Saturday, and there is a desire to either meet with this body or some sort of an occasion on Saturday evening, and, until that is definitely settled, I believe that we have an out as far as the Administration Committee's report is to find out whether we would be available on Sunday night. Incidentally, the Administration Committee does want to make it perfectly clear the University is not going to be offended if we do not accept their invitation. I just talked to Dr. Patty this morning and he is very anxious to extend any courtesy to us. It would cost them several hundred dollars to put on this dinner but he said they would not be the least bit offended if we did not accept.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to make it clear, though, at this time there is no indication but that we might be working late on Saturday night. We have nothing to go on now that would indicate otherwise. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: My feeling on this matter is that the University has done everything in their power to help us perform the function that we were sent here to do. I think that it would only be common courtesy that, after the document is signed, they have kept out of our hair this long, they would like to show us some appreciation for the service we have tried to do and we in turn should do all in our power to show them appreciation for all the things that they have tried to do to help us, and I think it should be a mandate that this body attend their function on Sunday night, the entire body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you moving, Mr. Doogan, that we accept the University's invitation?

DOOGAN: I'll so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan so moves. Is there a second to the invitation?

KILCHER: I second the motion, Mr. President, and I would like to speak on it at the same time. I fully share the sentiments of Mr. Doogan. I think that, one way or the other, Sunday evening, either here or if somebody has a better program, the Convention should meet in a body, in a farewell, informal farewell party of their own, and I hope sincerely that the Convention will not break up immediately after signing into various little groups, and previous commitments should not be taken. I think the cohesion of this body should last all through Sunday and, accordingly, steps should be taken to meet here or to meet in town, but I really would like to remember this part of the Convention as having been a cohesive effort and a harmony that lasts to the last day, all of Sunday, and I would hate to see a breaking up into small little groups with individual allegiance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, there is no doubt in the mind of the Chair that the Convention will still be cohesive on Monday morning. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I am somewhat concerned about the optimism that seems to pervade the Administration Committee as to the work that we still have ahead of us and as to when we will be finished. I don't think that we can be thinking in terms of taking Saturday night off, of taking all day --

COGHILL: I rise to a point of order. There is nothing said about Saturday night. The Committee on Administration has not planned anything until 2:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and we have left it completely clear to the Convention that, until 2:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon, we have not planned a thing because we didn't want to stand in the way of the Convention work.

V. FISCHER: I stand corrected on that point, but I still am concerned, because I think we may possibly be working through the night, Sunday night, and I think we should be aware of that possibility. I go along with Mr. Doogan. I think it would be very good to have a final supper session here with the University, with the understanding that it not be an all-night affair, that, if there is work to be done, we come right back here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves, seconded by Mr. Kilcher, that we accept the University's offer of the entertainment they planned for us if we accept on Sunday evening at 6:30 p.m. in the cafeteria upstairs. All those in favor of accepting the University suggestion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and Dr. Patty will be so notified.

COGHILL: One other proposition, Mr. Chairman, is the 100 copies of the constitution, and I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that part of our report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Wasn't that a part of your report?

COGHILL: Yes, but it was not a part of the schedule, nor the dinner part.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that that part of the report that dealt with the printing of 100 copies of the constitution on the style of paper that was referred to and the bindings that was referred to be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I had a question to ask. That invitation from the University -- is that just for the delegates, or delegates and wives?

COGHILL: For the delegates and their family members present in Fairbanks.

HINCKEL: I would like to ask a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

HINCKEL: Has any provision been made for a reserved section for any out-of-town guests that might come on the invitations that were sent out or that any members might send out?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: We had planned on meeting tomorrow, the Committee, when we had time, and we were going to go over at that time the setting up and seating arrangements of the gymnasium, and we will take that into consideration at that time.

HINCKEL: I am informed that Admiral Craig and part of his staff at Kodiak intend to come here for the ceremonies. That is the reason that I was particularly interested.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: If I understood correctly, when this discussion came on the floor before, that there would be no seating arrangements other than the necessary seating arrangement for the delegates so that they would be in a body, but that there would be no other seating arrangement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would seem to the Chair that, if the Chair may, it might be very difficult in the building where it could very conceivably be that there won't be enough room to really reserve seats other than for the delegates. I don't say that that should be that way, but that -- Mr. Lee.

LEE: If I may address a question to Mr. Coghill, these people that were invited were the delegates and their families, members of the families that are in Fairbanks, that is correct? Are they the ones to be invited?

COGHILL: Yes.

LEE: I think that since we have had our staff working with us all the time, I think it would be nice if they were also invited.

COGHILL: They are also invited.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It should have been so stated. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Have the military properly been invited and other public officials of the Territory been invited to this Convention?

COGHILL: Yes, they have.

MARSTON: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I was wondering if one of the signed copies was going to be available for the University museum?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: In the last section that we just adopted, there will be 100 copies, and five of those were the official copies so set forth by Rule 51. There will be 55 of those copies, one for each delegate, and there will be 40 left, and the feeling of the Committee on Administration is that the Convention should determine where those will go. We can have the signatures printed on those copies such as from the signatures that we took the other day for the newspaper article, and they could be distributed to the universities, the high schools, and some of the other organizations throughout Alaska. However, we did not feel that this should be brought up on the floor at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I was just thinking that if it wouldn't be much trouble to sign an extra copy, or if one hasn't been planned for the University, it would be a fine thing for their museum, and we could show our appreciation for all they have done for us by providing a signed copy for the University.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I move that we sign an extra copy, not necessarily at the ceremony, but any time, and that it be presented to Dr. Patty at the dinner he gives for us Sunday evening.

TAYLOR: I second that motion.

STEWART: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been seconded. Unanimous consent is asked that that be done. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I would like to include in that something which I think the Convention has already done, but we may have forgotten, and that is that the official gavel which you have is to be presented to the University, and perhaps it could be included with the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Johnson. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: May I suggest to the Committee that this here fine pen and walrus tusk that was given back from President Taft to the museum be used at the signing of this document, or be there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Marston, I think we are probably taking up a lot of valuable time, and anyone who has any ideas that they wish to have brought before the committee, that we will be meeting tomorrow afternoon and they can appear before us at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I want a little information. To whom or to where or to what do the signed copies that are personally signed go?

PRESIDENT EGAN: To whom do the signed copies that will be signed go? How will they get there?

COGHILL: That is one of the items that the Committee on Administration is going to have to figure out tomorrow afternoon at their meeting and to consult with the President of the Convention and then bring it before the Convention for their adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I still have a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to that motion that a particular copy, a special copy be made of the constitution with all the signatures attached and presented to the University? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, one of these copies, one of these five originals could very well be one of them that will be placed in the museum at the University, and I would like to see you hold that in abeyance until we act upon this tomorrow afternoon at our meeting, and I will certainly bring it up, Senator Barr.

BARR: Mr. Coghill, I heard you say a while ago that these copies with printed signatures would be distributed around to various people, and I was afraid one of those would be given to the University, and I think it should have original signatures on it, and it should be presented during this dinner to Dr. Patty; that is why I made the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Why couldn't seven copies instead of six be signed at that time? It can be worked out by the Administration Committee. If there is no further discussion then, the Administration Committee will have its meeting, and those delegates who might have suggestions for the Administration Committee at that time are free to make those suggestions. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, is there anything before us?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing before us right at the moment.

WHITE: Mr. President, I rise to a point of inquiry of the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of inquiry.

WHITE: Mr. President, I was absent from the Convention floor a short time ago on Convention business and with the express permission of the Chair. During that time the article on suffrage and elections as I understand was passed in third reading. I would very much like to have my vote reported in favor of that passage. I suppose I am not alone in this situation, but I think the question should be raised and that is my point of inquiry.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article was passed, adopted as a part of the constitution. You want the journal to show, Mr. White, that your vote would have been "yes" on the proposal, is that right?

WHITE: If that is the proper procedure, that is my desire, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk may show Mr. White's vote as being "yes". Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, may I make the same request?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith makes the same request that the record show that he would have also voted "yes" for the article on elections and suffrage. At the present time, Mr. Victor Rivers, have your mimeographed amendments to the executive article come back yet?

V. RIVERS: Yes, they have, and they have been distributed to the members.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will have before us the Style and Drafting Committee report on the article on the executive. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would also like to ask unanimous consent to be shown as voting "yes" on the adoption of the suffrage and elections article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, it will be shown that you would have voted "yes" on the passage of the suffrage and election's article. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I was also absent from the Convention floor at the time the vote was taken and I wish the record would show that if I had been present I would have voted "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg also wants the record to show that he would have voted "yes" on the article. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: In the mimeographed copies on your desk you have the amendment to Section 10. I previously asked unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules and consideration of that section. The order of business was held over until you could get the mimeographed copies. The Secretary or Chief Clerk has already read the amendment as submitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment again? The rules had been suspended, isn't that correct, and it is before us as an amendment? The Chief Clerk will please read it.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, Section 10, strike the section and insert the following: 'Section 10. If the governor-elect dies, resigns, or is disqualified, the secretary of state elected with him succeeds to the office of governor. If the governor-elect fails to assume office for any other reason, the secretary of state elected with him shall serve as acting governor and succeeds to the office if the governor-elect does not assume his office within six months of the beginning of the term.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers has already moved --

CHIEF CLERK: No, but this is different so would you withdraw the other one?

V. RIVERS: I will ask to withdraw the other one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that he be allowed to withdraw his original amendment. Unanimous consent is asked that this new amendment take its place. Is there objection?

HELLENTHAL: Are there copies of this amendment?

V. RIVERS: You have them on your desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Sergeant at Arms have another copy for Mr. Hellenthal? Is there objection to Mr. Victor Rivers' request?

SWEENEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

SWEENEY: Just so I can ask a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your question, Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: In the old Section 10, there is a statement on the last line, "will succeed for the full term", and that is not in this new section here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, would you care to answer that?

V. RIVERS: It was implied that he would continue out the term. He was then actually governor and took the place of and succeeded the other governor.

SWEENEY: Why would you put it in the first place? It seems to me it should be in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers asks unanimous consent to substitute this amendment for the original amendment. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Point of inquiry. After these amendments are adopted, these will go back to Style and Drafting for consideration?

V. RIVERS: These were prepared with the help of Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: They would not go back to Style and Drafting until after final passage in third reading, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: After then they can have no changes made?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: There is one word I think should be changed, if it isn't going back to Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, under the circumstances where there have been two or three people who have asked questions, do you think it would be wise to have a recess so you might confer with these delegates? It might save time under the circumstances.

V. RIVERS: All right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, inasmuch as the amendments are not ready, I move that we have our afternoon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 3:55.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will please read the communication.

CHIEF CLERK: Telegram from Mayor Charles W. Wilson of Palmer: "The people of Palmer express their thanks for your efforts in framing a constitution and congratulations for the excellent results."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, we have this amendment on the Clerk's desk, and the copy you have on your desk -- there are in the first amendment three slight changes. The amendment to Section 10 has three slight changes to conform to the request of Delegate Sweeney and the Drafting Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you wish to offer those now, Mr. Victor Rivers, and ask unanimous consent?

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules to offer these amendments. They are not substantive. In line 2, after the word "him", insert the word "shall" and strike the "s" on "succeeds". "The secretary of state elected with him shall succeed to the office of governor." After the word "governor", strike the period and add the words "for the full term." Line 3, the line will then read, "If the governor-elect dies, resigns, or is disqualified, the secretary of state elected with him shall succeed to the office of governor for the full term." Then down in line 5, after the word "and", strike the word "succeeds" and add the words "shall succeed". The line will then read, "the secretary of state elected with him shall serve as acting governor and shall succeed to the office if the governor-elect does not assume his office within six months of the beginning of the term." I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that these proposed amendments become a part of the original amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and we have the proposed amendments to Section 10 before us at this time.

V. RIVERS: I think, Mr. President, the amendment is self-explanatory. It amplifies the original Section 10. I therefore move and ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered -- Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I will object just for a moment for clarification. On the third line of Section 10, as we see it, with the addition of "for the full term", is the committee satisfied, Mr. Rivers, that there is no uncertainty there as to the full remaining term or the full unexpired term?

V. RIVERS: I brought that point up and "for the full balance" or the "full remaining" was discussed, and we were satisfied this covered only the full time for which the governor-elect had been elected and failed to qualify.

RILEY: Or "in the event of death that remaining..."?

V. RIVERS: Yes.

RILEY: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment? Hearing none, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The next amendment is on the same mimeographed sheet. It is to strike Section 13 on page 3, and add the words of the section which we have provided here. The Chief Clerk has the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 13, page 3, strike the section and insert the following: 'Section 13. Provision shall be made by law for succession to the office of governor in the event that the secretary of state is unable to succeed to the office. Provision shall also be made for a person to serve as acting governor in the event that the secretary of state is unable to act as governor. No election of a secretary of state shall be held except at the time of electing a governor.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I will move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: We have one other amendment. Section 23, page 6, line 4, and the Chief Clerk has the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 23, page 6, line 4, insert a period after the word 'orders', strike the balance of the section and substitute the following: 'These orders shall become effective after sixty days of a regular session of the legislature have elapsed following their issuance or at the close of the next regular session, whichever is earlier, unless disapproved by a resolution concurred in by a majority of the members of the legislature in joint session.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I want to call to the attention of the delegates the word "shall" has been inserted before the word "become", as you have it on your desk. The word "sooner" has been changed to "earlier". That is the way the copy was presented to the Chief Clerk. I will now move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this addition to Section 23.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of the amendment? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Did he say, "Put the word 'shall' in there"?

V. RIVERS: On the mimeographed copy you have, after the words "these orders" insert the word "shall" and "whichever is sooner," change "sooner" to "earlier", and it will be correct, Mr. Stewart.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have other committee amendments to propose, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, that is all the amendments the committee has to offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to be proposed to Article No. III, the article on the executive? If not -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, do I understand that the only amendments which have been made in the report of the Style and Drafting Committee are the three which have just been adopted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, these amendments have been reviewed by most of the members of the Committee on Style and Drafting, and we feel they do not require any further consideration by our committee. I hear some dissent from some members, so I will not move to advance the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This could not go back to Style and Drafting until after its final passage, isn't that correct, unless by suspension of the rules?

SUNDBORG: We recommitted an article the other night where there had been some amendments so we could look at them. Is it the understanding of the Chair that the Style and Drafting Committee still has authority to change wording of articles even after they have passed third reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The understanding of the Chair is not too clear as to just why the article is referred to Style and Drafting after it goes to third reading, under the rules. But it isn't the opinion of the Chair that Style and Drafting can change any wording, it is just that the Style and Drafting Committee can arrange the constitution. At least that is the opinion of the Chair as to the only purpose of the article going back to Style and Drafting.

SUNDBORG: That was my belief, Mr. President, and I believe our rules set that forth. In view of that, I would not want to advance this article until after Style and Drafting has looked at the amendments.

TAYLOR: They are by Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We don't have anything else on the calendar, but we did have Proposal No. 17/b that was never considered in second reading. There is a motion for reconsideration on 17/a, but, of course, that can be made at any time before adjournment and the motion would not be lost, but the Chair was wondering, Mr. McNealy, would it be your desire that the Convention consider Proposal No. 17/b now, or what is the desire of the Convention?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I understood that 17/b was referred back to the committee and that they were going to do certain specific studying and possibly present some amendments, and I think it is now in order if they are ready.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I don't remember which --

PRESIDENT EGAN: The fish trap was 17/a. The other portion of your ordinances was under 17/b, isn't that correct?

MCNEALY: It has never been read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: For the second time it hasn't been read?

MCNEALY: That's right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it the pleasure of the Convention that we read Committee Proposal No. 17/b for the second time, now? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, before we do that, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that those portions of the article on general and miscellaneous provisions which have been in the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee be forwarded by that committee to Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean in order to facilitate the Style and Drafting work?

SUNDBORG: So that we can get to work on them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, are you just holding those matters in order to receive the rest of them, is that right?

SWEENEY: The Chief Clerk is holding them for me. I don't have them.

SUNDBORG: We recognize there will be others, Mr. President, very likely, but we would like to get the ones that are already through second reading so that we can start to work on it because we are running out of work.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the transitional measures that are in -- Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I am afraid you can't take them out of Engrossment and Enrollment, we don't have them yet; unless we have time to work over them and get them out --

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was the understanding of the Chair they had been referred to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee to be held there pending the action upon other transitional measures. At least that is what the Chair intended to do.

CHIEF CLERK: We have been holding them to follow the numbers, and she hasn't checked them yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Those articles will be referred to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee at this time. The Chief Clerk will proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 17/b.

(The Chief Clerk at this time read Committee Proposal No. 17/b in its entirety.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 1? Section 3? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I have a committee amendment to Section 3 on line 8, to strike the words "not inconsistent" and insert the word "consistent".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, do you ask unanimous consent?

MCNEALY: I'll ask unanimous consent on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection?

HARRIS: May we have the amendment again?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, line 8, strike the words 'not inconsistent' and insert the word 'consistent'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be proposed for Section 3? Section 4? Are there amendments for Section 4? If not, are there amendments for Section 5? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Question. Is it the feeling of the Chairman of the Committee that the words "local subdivisions" includes health districts?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, this particular section was given to us very late in the day and I believe, in conjunction with Mr. Ralph Rivers, was prepared by one of the experts, and the Ordinance Committee had no intention of including it, and I believe Mr. Ralph Rivers felt it was essential.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, can you answer the question?

R. RIVERS: Yes, Mr. President. The general clause that, until the constitution was put into effect, existing measures, etc., could be carried out, didn't quite serve the purpose. After the constitution goes into effect, there will be some lag, maybe as much as a couple of years, before the reorganization takes place which will result in the new forms of local government, and your school districts and your public utility districts at the present time have the taxing powers, and under our finance article, the taxing power can be extended only to cities and boroughs. Well, I didn't want the public utilities districts and the school districts to be out of conformity with the finance article by trying to continue to exercise taxing power for two or three years before the boroughs were organized, and so I merely took it up with the committee on the subject of saying "pending adoption of measures" to carry out the provisions of local government. Those adoptions of measures would be action by the state legislature and ordinances set up on the local scene to create the new city setups under boroughs. Pending that organization, the existing public utility districts and school districts could continue to tax as they are now allowed to tax for the purpose of meeting their bonding indebtedness and other obligations. So, I didn't realize I was causing any difficulties on the procedure here.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question.

HELLENTHAL: Health districts, as you know, have the taxing power, too, and I have an interest because we formed the Anchorage Health District, and I am sure they will feel discriminated against. Would you object to saying "school districts, health districts, public utility districts"?

R. RIVERS: I overlooked the fact that there was an incorporated health district with taxing power, and I will be very glad to have "health districts" included. That was my purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, do you offer such an amendment?

HELLENTHAL: I should like to, subject to the committee's --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have objection to that, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: I have no objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent that the words "health districts" be inserted between the phrases "school districts" and "public utility districts" in line 9, Section 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? If there is no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

R. RIVERS: With a comma after the word "districts".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 5? Section 6? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I have a committee amendment to Section 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 2, lines 15 and 16, strike the words 'performing functions vested by this constitution in the State' and insert 'of the Territory or under its laws,'. On line 18, delete 'those' and insert 'their'."

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

STEWART: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Stewart. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: The purpose here, this is one of the places where the committee fell afoul of an expert and we were merely reinserting the original language. And after the expert had included this when it hit the boiler room, calling his attention to the fact that it didn't match the court decisions and didn't convey the meaning, why, he also agreed that the original language should go back in. As the language was, it would only allow the Territorial officers performing functions vested in the constitution in the state; in other words, there would be that period when the state came into the Union. Just one example would be, there would be no attorney general, at least until the governor appointed a legal officer, and there would be a vacuum there that Jerry Williams wouldn't be able to operate for a short period of time there, so we thought it was very essential. Incidentally, the language used here, there is no pride of authorship. A number of the schedules of constitutions which have stood the test of cases in court, and we have the cases -- deciding cases as in Oregon and Arizona where they have used the same language, that the cases stood up in court with the language offered in the committee amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: The word deleted should be "these" rather than "those".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White states that the word to be deleted should be "these" rather than "those". Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I ask Mr. McNealy a question? Was it "all officers of the Territory or under its laws," -- wouldn't the "or" be an "and" instead?

MCNEALY: Well, we used the exact language on that particular phrase from the Oregon Constitution and the courts had interpreted that with the "or" in it.

R. RIVERS: The "or" meant "and" then, didn't it? Why don't we say "and"?

MCNEALY: The court didn't say anything about "or" meaning "and", so we left the "or" in.

R. RIVERS: Will this go to Style and Drafting?

MCNEALY: Unless an exception is made.

R. RIVERS: I shall back away.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection then to the adoption of the amendment? Mr. McNealy, you asked unanimous consent?

MCNEALY: I will ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments for Section 6? For Section 7? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, I don't believe many of our committee had an opportunity to take this up with Mr. McNealy as yet, but we have a similar section to Section 7 in the finance section, Section 15, and originally we had assumed that this would be handled by our committee and transferred into transitional measures. But we have been informed by the consultants that this should be retained as part of the permanent constitution because debts and liabilities of the Territory, and also assets, might crop up and become apparent and obvious for many, many years to come, and consequently, it seems logical that this should be in the permanent part of the constitution. I will therefore move and ask unanimous consent that Section 7 of Committee Proposal No. 17/b be stricken and that the matter be handled under Section 15 of the finance article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is such a section in the finance article now? Is that right?

NERLAND: Would you care to have me read the two sections, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That might be well, Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: "Section 7. The debts and liabilities of the Territory shall be assumed and paid by the State, and all debts owned by the Territory shall be collected by the State. The State shall succeed to all property and records owned or held by the Territory, or any agency thereof." Section 15 of the finance article reads, "The debts and liabilities of the Territory of Alaska shall be assumed and paid by the State of Alaska, and debts owed to the Territory of Alaska shall be collected by the State. Assets of the Territory of Alaska shall become assets of the State."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland moves and asks unanimous consent that Section 7 be deleted from Committee Proposal No. 17/b. Is there objection?

V. RIVERS: I rise for a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your question, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I wonder if Delegate Nerland feels the word "assets" would cover "records"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland, could you answer that?

NERLAND: I would think it would, yes.

V. RIVERS: Cover records, property, etc.?

NERLAND: I would think so.

HELLENTHAL: "Claims", would that be included in "assets"? Unliquidated claims?

NERLAND: Yes.

HELLENTHAL: Where there's no debt involved?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: This goes more to Mr. Rivers' question. I am a member of the Finance Committee, and it was my intention, if this section was deleted, to propose in committee meeting that the phrase "and records" be added to the finance provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be possible by specific amendment even yet, Miss Awes. It would be the general understanding. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, if that article appears only in the finance section, would the word "records" relate only to financial records? It seems to me that this word covers a little broader field, or is this dealing only with finance?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It deals with everything that might be debts, liabilities, or assets. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It is my thought, Mr. President, that if the first sentence of this section were stricken, the finance article would apply in full to everything else; and if we retain this last sentence, we would accomplish what we desire. Would that be agreeable to the Chairman?

NERLAND: That would be agreeable, and I will so change my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland, then you would ask unanimous consent that your original motion be withdrawn?

NERLAND: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Then you would move that the first sentence of Section 7 be deleted, is that right?

NERLAND: Yes, that could be handled in Section 15 in the finance article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland moves and asks unanimous consent that the first sentence of Section 7 be deleted from Committee Proposal No. 17/b. Is there objection? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I am not objecting, I just have a point of inquiry. Will the last sentence then in Section 7 of this Committee Proposal 17/b remain in this committee proposal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right if this motion carries, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: If I may address another question through the Chair, it seems to me that, if there is to be a transfer of all property and a succession of all property, that that should properly be a part of the constitution just as much as the matter of debts and liabilities; and I still don't understand why the remainder of the section should not be transferred to some part of the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, it seemed from the statement that Mr. Nerland made that there is this fear that debts might show up later, but that the transfer of all property and records could be accomplished in the transitional period, easily. That seems to be the reason for offering this amendment.

JOHNSON: It was my understanding at the time Mr. Nerland offered his original amendment that the reason for it was that this transfer of property might not be effected immediately; it might take some time, and for that reason, the provision should be in the constitution rather than in the transitional measures.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, I think the idea was more that for many years to come it might be likely that the different debts and liabilities of the Territory, as well as assets that hadn't become apparent previously would appear; whereas, such property and records as are owned and held by the Territory should be fairly obvious at the time of the transition to statehood.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Well, I understand now what Mr. Nerland had in mind, although it seems to me that there is still further amendment that should be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Nerland has asked unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, there still seems to be quite a little uncertainty as to just how this should be handled. It might be advisable to pass this over due to the fact that we won't get through the rest of this anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will pass the proposed amendment to Section 7. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. President, in view of the progress that's been made this afternoon and what's ahead of us, I move that we adjourn until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was that, Mr. Stewart? Do you move that the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock?

STEWART: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart moves that the Convention adjourn until tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock.

LEE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Lee. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I have a reconsideration of my vote pending on the Boswell amendment of yesterday.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be proper at this time even though a motion to MCNEES: Either that or carry it over until the question is reopened by the committee. They have those two sections -- 24 and 25 -- committed to them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking unanimous consent, Mr. McNees, that you be allowed to bring up that reconsideration at the time that Committee Proposal No. 17/a might be placed before us?

MCNEES: I had intended to delay it only until 17/a came back on the floor, so I would like that consent, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for suspension of the rules in order that Mr. McNees could be allowed to reconsider his vote at such a time as 17/a would be before us for consideration? Is there objection? Hearing no objection then, Mr. McNees, you will be allowed to offer your reconsideration motion at that time if you so desire. Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to withdraw my second on adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee asks that his second to the adjournment motion be withdrawn.

TAYLOR: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor seconds the motion for adjournment. Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, I --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is this a committee announcement?

AWES: No, just a point of information. I know that a motion to adjourn is not debatable, but would it be out of order to have the Chairman of Style and Drafting state what the wishes of their Committee are in this matter?

PRESIDENT EGAN: I believe that the Style and Drafting Committee Chairman will tell you that they can use all the time that is available, Miss Awes. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Didn't I understand the Chairman to state that they were running out of work?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That seemed to be the statement of a few minutes ago, but I believe that he meant that possibly some of the subcommittees were running out of work because there are, I think, Mr. Hinckel, five proposals to come back yet. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we are running out of fresh material from the Convention floor for consideration by subcommittees of our committee, but we have quite a backlog of work which has been done by our subcommittees and which now must be reviewed by our full committee, and we do need time for that. We have been working, those of us who have been able to, most of today in short snatches, but it is the kind of work that can't be done unless we have long, uninterrupted sessions. It would be a convenience to our committee if the Convention could adjourn at this time and give us throughout the night or until a very late hour tonight to bring some more of our reports back to the floor, which we could do in the morning if we could have our full committee work on them from this time on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow.

STEWART: The reason I made this motion at this time is, there is a bus at 5:10, and, if we adjourn at this time, that bus will be available.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in view of the facts presented by the Style and Drafting Committee Chairman, I ask unanimous consent.

DOOGAN: Object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Just one announcement -- I would like to ask the Fairbanks delegates to meet for one or two minutes after the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper asks that, in the event of an adjournment, that the Fairbanks delegates will meet with him immediately upon such adjournment. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: The Finance Committee will meet immediately upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Finance Committee immediately upon adjournment. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I would like to inquire of the Chief Clerk if the boiler room is working tonight whether we are here or not?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The boiler room is working tonight. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon adjournment at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting immediately upon adjournment in the rear of the gallery. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Engrossment and Enrollment will meet immediately upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Engrossment and Enrollment immediately on adjournment. Are there other announcements? If not, the question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow?" All those in favor of adjourning until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 38 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, McNealy, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 10 - Doogan, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Barr, Davis, V. Fischer, McLaughlin, Nordale, Robertson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 38 yeas, 10 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and the Convention stands adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 28, 1956

SIXTY-SEVENTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning Father Boileau of the Catholic Church. Father Boileau, will you give us our daily invocation.

FATHER BOILEAU: Grant, almighty God, to us that that which we have begun in humility, courage, and charity may be prospered by you and brought to a happy conclusion for the good of our country and Your glory. Through Christ, our Lord, Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Six absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: Mr. President, going back to the journal of the 59th day, page 14 has been corrected and I now ask unanimous consent for it to be passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the journal of the 59th day. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the journal of the 59th day is ordered adopted. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, reporting to the Convention for the 62nd Convention day, Monday, January 23, page 1, at the bottom of the page, change 1955 to 1956. On page 4, third paragraph, second line, change the "C" in "Chair" to a small "c". With those corrections, Mr. President, we ask unanimous consent for the approval of the journal of the 62nd day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent for the approval of the journal of the 62nd Convention day, incorporating the corrections by the special Committee to read the journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Are there any communications or petitions from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting reports its redraft of Article No. IX on finance and taxation, and Article No. XIII on amendment and revision, copies of which have been distributed to the delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there reports of special committees: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 12, has compared same with the original and find it correctly engrossed. Enrolled copies are being placed on the delegates' desks, and I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg, did you ask that that report be referred?

SUNDBORG: I ask that it be referred to the Rules Committee for assignment on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, but under the regular order -- but you had asked yesterday that it be referred to....

SUNDBORG: I am sorry, Mr. President, I was still talking about the reports that I made to you and which I don't think you referred.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, because it was not officially before the Convention.

SUNDBORG: Now we would like to have Mrs. Sweeney's report referred to Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, it is so ordered, and Committee Proposal No. 12 is referred to the Style and Drafting Committee. Are there other reports of standing committees? Are there reports of select committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? Is there any unfinished business? We would have before us, then, in second reading, Committee Proposal No. 14. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Each delegate has before him two papers that were handed out last night entitled "Committee Amendments to Committee Proposal No. 14". Each consists of a schedule describing, on the one hand, election districts by their name, number, and by the number of representatives they will have based on the 1950 census, and the other paper represents the composition of the senate, giving the name of the senatorial district, the composition of the district, listing the election districts comprising it, and showing the number of senators from each district. The members will recall that during the discussion it was determined through amendment on the floor that a distinction would be made between the election districts at large, in the sense that they were combined, there being four such districts, and the paired senatorial districts, and the one amendment does that. You will notice that they refer to the Ketchikan-Prince of Wales Senate District; the Wrangell-Petersburg-Sitka District; Juneau-Yakutat; Cordova-Valdez; Seward-Kenai; Fairbanks-Fort Yukon; etc. That is new matter. The remaining new matter in the other committee amendment is to change an error in mathematics in the application of the method of equal proportion that was mentioned during the floor discussion when Committee Proposal No. 14 was adopted, with regard to Sitka and Juneau. The paper that you have before you now shows the number of representatives from Sitka to be two; the number of representatives from Juneau likewise to be two based upon the method of equal proportions in the 1950 census; and that error must be corrected. So with that point in mind and the naming of the paired senate districts, I move first that the amendment to the apportionment schedule....

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, first, in order that the record would be clear, the Chair feels that the rules be suspended.

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended to consider the two schedules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the suspension of the rules? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I now move, Mr. President, that the amendment to the apportionment schedule be adopted. This amendment is the one dealing with election districts, their names and the number of representatives.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the apportionment schedule be adopted.

ROBERTSON: I object.

HELLENTHAL: I did not ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you just so move, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

HINCKEL: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the apportionment schedule be adopted?" Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I will admit I have been misled by this. I was going by the schedule which shows the Juneau precinct is entitled to three representatives and, in my opinion, it is very unjust to the Juneau recording district to reduce the number to two. It puts it in the same category in representation, although we all know the population is much larger, as Sitka, Nome, and Kodiak. And I don't believe the people of Juneau district are going to be very well pleased with that representation. I was satisfied to go along with three, but I am not satisfied to go along with two, based upon what I think is entirely a theoretical apportionment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Robertson, I believe, was not here the evening that the application of the method of equal proportion was explained, when the Committee Proposal No. 14 was adopted in second reading, and, at that time, it was shown that the application of the method of equal proportion indicated clearly that Juneau was to receive two representatives based on the 1950 census and Sitka, two. It was also shown that in 1960, or following the 1960 census and the first reapportionment, that Juneau would be the second most deserving. In any event, it would be the second most deserving, and if anyone was entitled to an extra member of the house, Juneau would be considered first after one other election district -- I forget the name of that district -- and that if Juneau's population remained the same as it is now and there were no further sensational growths elsewhere, that Juneau would probably get two or three more representatives. That same rule will likewise apply to other districts, and I can assure Mr. Robertson that Juneau is not being singled out and is not being given any treatment other than any of the other districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion on the motion for the adoption of the apportionment schedule? If not, the question is, "Shall the apportionment schedule be adopted as a part of Committee Proposal No. 14?"

ROBERTSON: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 43 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 7 - Collins, Johnson, Laws, Nolan, Robertson, Sundborg, Sweeney.

Absent: 5 - Doogan, Riley, Rosswog, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

COGHILL: Mr. President, may I change my vote to "yes"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill changes his vote to "yes".

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent....

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, the Chief Clerk hasn't tallied the vote.

CHIEF CLERK: 43 yeas, 7 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment has been adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the spelling of "Wrangell" in the amendment to the apportionment schedule as just adopted be corrected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered and the spelling will be corrected.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I now move that the amendment to Committee Proposal No. 14 with regard to senate districts be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves that the proposed amendment to Committee Proposal No. 14 with regard to senate districts be adopted.

COOPER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Cooper.

HELLENTHAL: Again I invite the attention of the group that the only new matter in this is the lettered designations of districts and the naming of the paired districts. Now, as a matter of local pride, some people here might have suggestions that weren't presented to the committee when they chose these names for the paired districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May I have a copy of that? I don't seem to have a copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: May Mr. Robertson have a copy of the proposal relating to senate districts? The Convention will come to order. Is there discussion on this proposed amendment? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: My objection to that is the same as I have heretofore made that the apportionment is based upon both geography and population as I understand it, which I think is a departure from the bicameral system of the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, there was some discussion that met with some support, I know, that the name of the Central district be changed to I think it was the North Central or something like that. May I ask that there be a recess for one minute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think this matter was discussed and I doubt if there are any amendments along that line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there other discussion? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I wonder, Mr. President, these are long names because of local pride, seem to me to be very cumbersome. I wonder if the Committee gave any thought to trying to make one name for every district. I can just visualize the speaker of the house getting up and saying, "The Chair recognizes the gentleman from the Wrangell-Petersburg-Sitka-Southeastern Alaska District".

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: It's nothing like that.

V. RIVERS: Well, you have got to recognize them from some area; you wouldn't want to use any local name. It looks to me like these names should be shortened considerably. It seems to me that they are just about as convenient and efficient as a pocket in your underwear.
(Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The question is, "Shall the amendment relating to the senate districts be adopted by the Convention."

ROBERTSON: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 45 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Barr, Laws, Nolan, Robertson, Sweeney.

Absent: 5 - Doogan, Riley, Rosswog, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

LAWS: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Laws changes his vote to "no". The Convention will come to order.

CHIEF CLERK: 45 yeas, 5 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that in the name of Election District No. 9, the name "Palmer-Wasilla-Talkeetna" as shown on the amendment be adopted rather than its original designation of "Talkeetna-Palmer-Wasilla".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to say that the Style and Drafting Committee will probably shortly be considering this schedule and, if any delegates have suggestions as to changing these names, particularly in the senate districts, we would be considering that along with the rest of the schedule; we would be glad to have such suggestions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no other amendments to the schedule, this part of the schedule with relation to the election districts -- Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, if I may say so, if Mr. Rivers is serious about his suggestion, we could call it the "Pa-Wa-Ta" -- that would be Section 9, And "Ke-Co" would be Kenai-Cook Inlet. That would shorten things up nicely, and we could have a lot of fun.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there are no other amendments to be offered, the schedule with relation to the election districts is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to become a part of that part of the schedule which relates to the description of election districts, which is already in Engrossment and Enrollment. If there is no objection, it is referred to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, your Committee on Style and Drafting wishes to report its redraft on Article VI on legislative apportionment. Copies either have been or will shortly be distributed to delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Article VI is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment on the calendar -- but the Chair notes that it is already on the calendar. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 17/b. The proposal has been read for the second time and it is in the amendment stage. At the time we left this proposal yesterday, an amendment as offered by Mr. Nerland was pending, was it not?

CHIEF CLERK: No, we passed over it and went on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We passed over it and went on, then. Mr. Nerland, did you wish to renew your request for adoption of that amendment at this time or what was your pleasure?

NERLAND: The Finance Committee met yesterday and had considerable discussion on this subject, and it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that there was a variance -- a wide variance of opinion as to just what the status of these transitional articles would be. One school of thought seemed to be that they were just for the period until the Territory was converted into a state, and others felt it was something that would go on for perhaps many years, and the Committee felt that some clearer understanding or statement by the Convention should result for the record in that matter, and it would largely influence our recommendations as to whether this particular section should be left in the ordinances and transitional measures or transferred over to finance. Our present thinking is that it should be transferred over to finance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you at this time, then, ask to pass it over again, or what is your desire?

NERLAND: Perhaps for the time being, it might be just as well to pass over that and let the delegates give some thought to the whole matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 8, then? Section 9? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I might state to the Chair on Section 9 and Section 10, it was suggested to the committee by possibly two or three delegates that these sections be included. I think that all of the members of the Convention realize that they are not essential to be included since they are presently a part of Territorial law, but we put them in. If any delegate or if the Convention desires to strike those two sections, it will cause no harm.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. Chairman, may I address a question to the Chairman of the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. McNealy, what happened to the bird and the song?

MCNEALY: Our answer to that is that we are going to be consistent.

The willow grouse might also be included here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, did you wish to offer an amendment to preserve the song, as it were? (Laughter)

WHITE: (answer inaudible)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move that Sections 9 and 10 be deleted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal moves that Sections 9 and 10 be deleted. Is there a second to the motion?

MARSTON: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Marston. The question is, "Shall Sections 9 and 10 be deleted from the proposal? Is there discussion? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I make this motion solely to be consistent with our expressed desire to make the constitution as brief as possible and to omit anything that is considered unnecessary, and if the Committee feels this is unnecessary, and I do myself, I think we should delete it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, that is just as consistent as a statement that was made on the floor here the other day that, unless we specified where the capital would be, the legislature wouldn't know where in the world it was supposed to go. I think it would be better to be left in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Which law is it, Mr. McNealy, that carries over in regard to retaining the flag and the seal?

MCNEALY: I forget the section about the...

R. RIVERS: Was it in the Territorial code or an Act of Congress?

MCNEALY: It could be in...

R. RIVERS: I think it ought to be left in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, I think what you meant -- that what law is on the statute that would say that the seal becomes the seal of the state and the flag, the flag of the state.

R. RIVERS: There is an act that says such and such will be the flag and such and such will be the seal, but what law is there that is going to change the word "Territory" to "State", and in both of those deals unless we have one that says in all the laws of the Territory of Alaska, the word "state" shall be substituted for the word "Territory". Will we have a transitory measure like that?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Section 3.

MCNEALY: We didn't spell out the words "transfer from Territory to state"; that would be a side matter, and if this were stricken -- in other words, it would leave it up to the first state legislature in due time to adopt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, my understanding of Section 3 is that it obviates the necessity of a whole series of provisions changing the word "Territory" to "state", and that a law dealing with the seal or the flag under the provisions of Section 3 that we have adopted so far would continue in force until altered or repealed. That is why I think that 9 and 10 are unnecessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: In the last two months, we have gone over these matters and compared them with other constitutions, and, in each one of them, we have found a reference to the seal as well as to the flag, and I, for one, think that -- this is a complete surprise to me that it should be suggested to be stricken. So far, it has always been considered essential for the state to have it here subject to change by the legislature, if they so see fit, and I certainly think they should be in here like in all other constitutions and I am in favor of leaving Sections 9 and 10 in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: This pins it down. However, it pins it down for the interim period, and would maybe constitute a directive to the first state legislature, but once the state comes into being, as I have mentioned before, these particular sections here, 9 and 10, of course, would be no longer operative as ordinances. Then the first state legislature could change the flag or make any change in the seal as they saw fit.

KILCHER: Pardon me, I didn't quite understand Mr. McNealy's explanation. Do you mean to say, Mr. McNealy, that if Sections 9 and 10 stay in there they would, like any other ordinance or transitional measures, be subject to change by the legislature?

MCNEALY: Yes, Mr. Kilcher, that is correct.

KILCHER: Thank you. In other words, that is the purpose of most of these amendments which are in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments for Sections 9 or 10? Section 11? Section 12? Are there amendments to be offered to Section 12? Do you have an amendment, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: No, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be offered to Section 13? Section 14? Are there amendments for Section 15? Section 16? Section 17? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I ask the Chairman a question on Section 16?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

V. RIVERS: Was it determined that the third day of January in an odd-numbered year is the regular date of expiration of all of the regular terms of the Senate and the House of the United States?

MCNEALY: The day slips my mind for the moment. It was either on that day or the day after that that Congress convenes in the new session of Congress.

V. RIVERS: This is in conformity with the expiration of their terms as you understand it, is it?

MCNEALY: Yes. If the Chair will permit, Mr. Rivers, we included the words there "to be determined by the authority of the United States" on lines 19 and 20 so it would not conflict with any rule of the Senate regarding an election of a third of them every two years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 16, or amendments? Section 17? Section 18? Section 19? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, the election which is contemplated in Section 14 and thereafter will be conducted under Territorial laws -- is that the intention of the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the election there will be conducted, actually, under the provisions of the constitution as nearly as possible, with the Territorial laws making up the difference, for that part of the constitution that can't be applicable at the time of election will be supplemented by Territorial laws.

HELLENTHAL: Do you anticipate there might be some difficulty

there where under the constitution you have 24 election districts and considerable changes from the time-honored custom, with thought given to making it quite clear so that it would avoid the possibility of, perhaps, litigation or controversy over the exact method and manner of holding that election?

MCNEALY: If I might ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

MCNEALY: Was the thought, Mr. Hellenthal, did your question include the election of state officers as well as for the purpose of ratifying the constitution? If it is for ratifying the constitution, that is the Territorial laws. The first election -- that is, the election of the state legislature would come under the election districts as provided in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think that answers my question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 20, or amendments? Section 21? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I address a question to Mr. McNealy?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

R. RIVERS: On line 13 of page 7, Section 21, we find this thought: "within thirty days after the legislators are elected if a regular session of the legislature would not normally fall within that period". This refers to the convening of a special session of the first state legislature by the governor. Does "elected" mean the day they are certified by the canvassing board to have been elected?

MCNEALY: That was the intent, Mr. Rivers. Now whether that is clear enough or not -- I remember this, there was some discussion on that in the Committee. It was left in this way because of brevity. Now if the interpretation there is a place where possibly an interpretation of the "elected" is not sufficient, it might be deemed to be "elected" upon the very date that they received the largest number of ballots, is from the election date.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to propose an amendment from the floor. After the word "are" on line 13, page 7, Section 21, insert "certified to have been"; and I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment and asks unanimous consent. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I address a question to Mr. Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: What would happen in case there is some contest in the election and some of the legislators are not certified at the same time? I mean, say the certifications are different?

R. RIVERS: Well, under our present practice, if the canvassing board has any doubt it just goes ahead and certifies them and lets the house or the senate decide the argument in deciding upon the membership of its own body, and they complete their canvass before they issue their certificates, and under our existing law, which will carry over, they will certify them all on the same day. If there was one stray that the canvassing board wouldn't certify, then his case might go to court, but they would still certify the rest of them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to ask for a one-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there objection to Mr. Ralph Rivers' unanimous consent request. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I will object for the purpose of having an opportunity to speak.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to Mr. Ralph Rivers' motion?

COOPER: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper seconds the motion. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the members of the Committee called my attention to exactly what the conversation in committee was on this and the reason for not putting in the certification, and since we had realized that, in setting up the state government, it was important that the legislature get into operation as soon as possible, and, when we spoke of the certification, we thought it very possible that it might take 20 or 30 days, even for the legislators to be certified, and, if we included the word "certified", then it would mean 30 days after that before under this wording; at least it would be 30 days after that before the legislature could be convened and there would be a lapsed time of possibly 60 days, then, from the date of their actual election, and it was our thought that, at that time, it was very important for the state government to get the show on the road just as soon as possible. That is the reason it was left out, as the members of the Committee refreshed my memory on it.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

R. RIVERS: Is it your thought, then, that it would be 30 days from election day?

MCNEALY: We had assumed that they would be certified within 30 days from election day.

R. RIVERS: Wait a minute. I am talking about the language in your section here. Shall the governor call them into session 30 days from the election day, or 30 days from the day they are certified?

MCNEALY: The Committee's thought was 30 days from the date they were elected, and assumed that they would be certified within that 30 days, so it was the election date they had in mind.

R. RIVERS: I see. Now, if the canvassing board doesn't complete its canvass within 30 days from the election date, then could you convene the legislature before they are certified?

MCNEALY: It was the thought that this canvassing board would be pretty much on their toes during that period, too.

R. RIVERS: Well, would it be all right with you if we left them on their toes and said "thirty days from date of certification"?

MCNEALY: The Committee felt that that would carry it over for possibly too long a time; it would maybe result in a stalemate in government for possibly 60 days.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, now that we are pinning this down, my contention being we should state a certain period of time from the date of certification, I would like to ask Mr. McNealy another question. Would it be all right if we shortened the period of time to two weeks, for instance, after date of certification, or one week after date of certification? But let's get them all certified, at least, before you call the legislature together.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you, Mr. Ralph Rivers, like to have a short recess to talk this matter over?

R. RIVERS: I believe so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

MCNEALY: I believe, Mr. President, that Mr. Rivers has an amendment to offer to his amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to include in my amendment a change on line 12 of Section 21, page 7, change "thirty" to "ten" and I ask unanimous consent for changing my proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be amended to change, on line 12, "thirty days" to read "ten days". Is there objection? Mr. White.

WHITE: A question. What does this now mean? When are they elected?

R. RIVERS: Well then, I am retaining my former amendment, and it would be ten days after certification.

WHITE: Oh, I see.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Could we hear how it reads:

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that section as it would read if Mr. Ralph Rivers' present amendment is adopted with the suggested change.

CHIEF CLERK: "The governor shall convene a special session of the first state legislature without limit as to duration within ten days after the legislators are certified to have been elected if a regular session of the legislature would not normally fall within that period."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request to change "thirty" to "ten" in line 12?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

STEWART: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart seconds the motion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to clarify the matter now. I would like to ask unanimous consent to change "thirty" to "ten". That would be all we are voting on at this point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, you have now moved that the "thirty" be changed to "ten", Mr. Ralph Rivers, and that is the question. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I object to that because the section says "the governor shall convene within thirty days" and it would now say "shall convene within ten days". I think if he called a session within 10 days he would be doing good, but I am not too sure he could convene a session within 10 days. It seems to me it says "within thirty days". If this governor is on the ball, and I expect he will be, he will probably call it the second or third day after he takes office, and he has authority to do so within this thirty-day clause. To me, convening a session within 10 days doesn't quite all add together in my way of thinking.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I had more or less overlooked the fact that it said "within thirty days", but the point is that the thinking -- "within thirty days" was written when they used the word "elected". The Committee was thinking of 30 days after election day. We are trying to change this to be more specific to say within a certain time after the legislators are certified to have been elected. Well, if you say "within thirty days" -- Mr. Victor Rivers' point is well taken, but the Committee wanted me to agree on 10 days. May I hear from the Committee on that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I believe Mr. Victor Rivers probably stated correctly that if the governor is actually on the ball and wants to get things moving, he could call it in 10 days even though we left in the word "thirty". I see a point. The Committee felt it should be tied down rather specifically -- not to allow too much time. It may be that we should have greater convictions here so as not to hold up time on the floor, but the important thing is that the first legislature get started in passing laws here, but, if it is the contention of the body here that the governor will actually do it and do it as soon as possible, then, of course, the words "thirty days" -- we have no particular objection to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Inasmuch as it says "within thirty days", I withdraw my motion to change the "thirty" to "ten".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent to withdraw his motion changing the proposed amendment to the amendment from "thirty" days to "ten". Is there objection?

KILCHER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. The question is, "Shall the "thirty days" be changed to read "ten days"? All in favor of the adoption of the amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I renew my request now for unanimous consent for the adoption of my original amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was so moved and seconded, but if you wish to ask unanimous consent -- Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Does the Committee go along with this thinking?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I hesitate to speak for the other members of the Committee on this. I do know that we all feel that there should be no chance of a time lag. I say, personally, I have no objection, but there are other members of the Committee who are more or less positive in their feelings on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it has been moved by Mr. Ralph Rivers and seconded by Mr. Cooper that the proposed amendment be adopted. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to be proposed for Section 21? If not, are there amendments for Section 22? Section 23? The Chair notes an amendment -- a mimeographed amendment. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the Committee has an amendment to offer to Section 23.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed Committee amendment for Section 23.

CHIEF CLERK: "delete Section 23, page 8, and insert:

'Until Alaska is admitted as a state and the courts provided for in the judicial article are organized, the courts, jurisdiction, and judicial system in the territory shall remain as at present constituted until otherwise provided by law or this constitution.

'When the state courts are organized, new actions shall be commenced and filed therein, and all pending causes in the present constituted courts brought under or by virtue of territorial law shall be transferred to the proper state court, or agency, as though commenced, filed, or lodged therein at the first instance, subject to applicable acts of Congress.'

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Buckalew seconds the motion. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the purpose of offering the amendment here is that Section 23 as it is constituted there in the article represents the work of one of the experts here, which we feel did not take into consideration fully the fact that we have a different situation here in the type of court system that we have, and it would be safer for us to pattern after, so far as possible, those states which had a federal -- were under federal jurisdiction at the time the transfer was made over to the state court. The language we have adopted here in the first paragraph as to court jurisdiction and judicial system will definitely leave the present constituted courts open for both civil and criminal actions without any question, and, further, the language providing for the filing of new actions in the state courts and then the transfer of actions as though commenced, filed, or lodged therein, the language is carefully taken from that of other jurisdictions. I won't take the time on the floor, unless it is necessary, to name the states or cite the cases in which the courts held that this was an orderly procedure in all instances. There have been some very involved matters come up in state courts concerning this transfer of legal procedure, and the language that we propose in the amendment has, without fail, been upheld in the supreme courts of the other states. And then, of course, we have had at least two leading cases in West Virginia and Idaho where the courts of those states have held and stated in their opinion that it is the general law that, where the constitutional ordinances containing the same language is upheld under one jurisdiction, then, under the principle as the attorneys know as stare decisis the same language and ordinance will be upheld in another state. There are two very good opinions written on that in the courts of Idaho and the courts of West Virginia, which are the controlling cases, and we feel that under this section here we would be taking no chance, and also where we stated in the first paragraph "unless otherwise provided (provided) by law" and in the second paragraph "subject to applicable acts of Congress". I think most of the delegates are familiar with page 57, and going along for two or three pages under H.B. 2535 where the Congress spells out in detail in lawyers language, the transfer in which we actually incorporate herein "and subject to applicable acts of Congress". I think this amendment will take care of the judicial system in very good shape.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, can I ask a question of Mr. McNealy?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

HELLENTHAL: "At present" in the first paragraph of the proposed amendment, by the words "at present", do you mean, in effect, on the date of ratification by the people?

MCNEALY: That is correct, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Had you given thought to using that language rather than the unqualified use of the words "at present", which remind me of B. D. Stewart's story of the French Canadians on the riverboat but is not to the point here. (Laughter)

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the language here was taken, as I remember and construed from cases in California, Arizona, and New Mexico. The language is not original, as is practically nothing in this article or anywhere else in the ordinances. We adopted language that the courts had passed on, and there is no pride of authorship throughout these ordinances.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I address a question to Mr. McNealy? Mr. McNealy, in the act of Congress, does it specially provide for cases where the trial has already been had but the proceedings and judgment haven't been entered to retain those in the courts that conducted the trial and not transfer them to another court so that the court in which the trial was conducted could complete his proceedings?

MCNEALY: Yes, Mr. Rivers. The act provided that, if a case shall continue to judgment in the district court -- if a case is in process of trial or has been tried, then it shall continue in the district court of the Territory until final judgment. And then it also provides further that an appeal from that judgment can be taken to the Ninth Circuit Court and continued on; or, if after judgment transferred to the state court, it can be appealed within the state court, or if we left it open, it can also be taken to the Ninth Circuit.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, in that case I support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. McNealy a question? In plain language, all the cases, the backlog in the district courts, would that be an expense of the state when they take over the judicial -- would you take over all those cases?

MCNEALY: It would depend, Mr. President, upon the act of Congress that is passed at the time of admission. There is provision under H.R. 2535 -- putting it this way -- that those actions that are not too far along would be transferred. They speak about pending cases in the house bill. With your permission, Mr. President, I might read: "That all causes pending in the District Court of the Territory of Alaska at the time of admission of Alaska as a state which are of such nature as to be within the jurisdiction of the District Court of the United States shall go to the United States District Court, and all other causes pending at the time of admission shall be transferred to the appropriate state court." So I fear, except that where they are in the process of final judgment, that the state would have to take over those cases; that is under this enabling act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: If I may add to the question -- it is, however, provided, or most likely will be, that several million dollars for such and other purposes will be made available to the future state by the federal government, so actually we won't have to pay for them.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, this same bill we are talking about provides $17,000,000 the first year.

PRESIDENT EGAN: For courts, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there other discussion? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have another question of Mr. McNealy. The enabling act that we have been guided by to a large extent here says that "pending cases at the time of the admission of Alaska as a state", and don't you feel that the words "at present" are intended to mean cases pending at the time of admission of Alaska as a state?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I believe that I would stand corrected on that because the constitution would have no effect except for the purpose of starting the process of bringing the state into being; until such time as it was actually admitted, none of these transfers can be made or attempted -- until such time as there is the proclamation of admission.

HELLENTHAL: Isn't it likewise your intent that the organization and judicial system shall remain constituted the same as it was on the date of admission unless otherwise provided by law, or do you mean it to remain constituted as it will be on April 26, 1955, or April 24, 1955? There is quite a lag there -- or could be.

MCNEALY: I don't quite --

HELLENTHAL: I am trying to decide what the Committee meant by the use of the words "at present".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, would you object to having our morning recess now? Perhaps the attorneys might be able to confer on this.

HELLENTHAL: Not at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess until 10:45.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I ask for the privilege of the floor for a moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hilscher, you may have the privilege of the floor.

(Mr. Hilscher then spoke under personal privilege of the floor.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have an important communication, and the Chief Clerk -- if the Chief Clerk needs assistance, she may call upon one of the delegates. Mr. McLaughlin, you might read the communication.

(Mr. McLaughlin read a letter addressed to Mr. Doogan from the Chief of the Editorial Department of the New York Daily News regarding the various pronunciations of the word "borough".)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication may be filed. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask unanimous consent that this communication be mimeographed and copies be made available to all delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, it is so ordered.

BARR: Wouldn't it just be a lot simpler to do away with the word and simply call it "division"? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the committee amendment to Section 23 of 17/b. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, after discussion with some of the attorneys here I would like to at this time move an amendment to the amendment. In line 4 of the first paragraph, strike the words "at present", and after the word "constituted" at the end of the line, add the words "on date of admission".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

MARSTON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Marston.

TAYLOR: I'll ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read part of the section as it would read if the amendment were adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Until Alaska is admitted as a state and the courts provided for in the judicial article are organized, the courts, jurisdiction, and judicial system in the Territory shall remain as constituted on the date of admission."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, the remaining last line is still a part of the amendment, is it not?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, in that connection, I move further the adoption of the amendment to the amendment: in line 3 of the second paragraph, strike the word "present", and after the word "courts", add "on date of admission".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption of the amendment?

MCNEALY: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "When the state courts are organized, new actions shall be commenced and filed therein, and all pending causes in the constituted courts on date of admission" etc.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment be adopted?" All in favor of adopting the amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted -- the amendment to the amendment. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention? All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment as amended will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments for Section 23? If not, are there amendments for Section 26? Are there other amendments to be proposed for Committee Proposal No. 17/b? Miss Awes.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 10, line 1 --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Before we proceed with that, I wonder if I may ask the Chairman of the Committee a question with relation to Section 26?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, you may ask a question with relation to Section 26 before we consider this proposed amendment.

JOHNSON: Mr. McNealy, as I understand Section 26, it says that "the Territorial legislature shall enact" etc., "measures designed to give effect to the provisions of this article". Now, if this provision becomes effective, it cannot be until after we are granted statehood, as I understand it. And upon the granting of statehood, would the Territorial legislature still be active or have any power?

MCNEALY: The Committee thinking on that, Mr. Johnson, was that should there be some necessary act required to, in any manner, supplement these transitory measures -- do something that we had overlooked there, that this section would give the Territorial legislature the authority to enact a law to supplement or to speed up the transitory period. Right offhand, I can think of nothing there, and the background for this may not be of the best. I think it is similar but it doesn't go quite as far as the language set out in the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution, and it was merely a safeguard, as I say. I personally can think of no situation right at the moment. There may be other members of the Committee that could speak more fully upon that, but it was put in there in the event that some matter would come up that these -- some little additions or some little supplement was needed to really make these articles effective during the transitional period; that is, from the date that Congress first voted to admit us to the union until we finally became a state, it would leave that power in the hands of the legislature.

R. RIVERS: May I ask a question of Mr. McNealy?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I think Mr. Johnson has brought up an important point. The way it is written, it sounds as though most of this article is not self-executing. It is self-executing after we obtain statehood. We are creature of the Territorial legislature; we are not telling them what to do. We are laying down the law for the first state legislature and subsequent state legislatures. We know that the Territorial legislature is going to be confronted with a few problems, but I don't think it is up to us to put in this particular schedule any such language to the Territorial legislature. Do you think we need it?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, frankly, noticing the word "shall" in there -- that the Territorial legislature "shall" enact a measure I think is improper. My own opinion is that, if we insert the word "may", then it wouldn't mean any more than if we didn't have it in there, and I think it's a matter that was brought out here mainly for the consideration of the body and I question whether it is necessary. The only constitution that I have ever found it in is that of Puerto Rico.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Johnson's point is excellent. The language there preferably should be either entirely stricken or, if a vestige is to remain, the word "may" should be substituted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there an amendment to be offered? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that Section 26 be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves that Section 26 be deleted. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I was wondering if we couldn't get around that by striking just the word "Territorial". Whatever legislature is in effect at the time would be the acting body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I have the privilege of answering that question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Then, under this wording, this whole thing would not be in effect until the legislature took some action, Mr. McNees. This is a self-executing document.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to Mr. Johnson's motion?

METCALF: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. The proposed amendment is that Section 26 be deleted from the proposal. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, very briefly, it occurs to me that, as Mr. Ralph Rivers has pointed out, that the entire document is self-executing, or should be, and these transitory provisions in particular, and it looks to me like we would be running into loggerheads with the Territorial legislature if we attempted to retain any power in that organization because, once we are granted statehood, then certainly the authority of the Territorial legislature would cease, and it doesn't strike me that it lends itself or adds anything that we do not already have.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, the thought of the Committee has been that, not knowing exactly when statehood will be achieved, it may well be that the Territorial legislature will be in session at that very time and certainly, as we view the mechanics of the other sections in this article here, we can see that a considerable amount of time will elapse from the first proclamation to the smooth functioning of the first newly elected state legislature.

Now, it is the very nature of these transitional measures to take care of all possibilities, and it has been the thought that the whole Territorial government -- that is the executive as well as the legislature -- will have to act as a sort of transitional provisional government; and as such they have to fulfill their past duties and such duties as are necessary by the very act of transition. And that is why this article is in here. There are certain things they shall have to do. So I think the article has a very good place in here, and it should not be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment by Miss Awes to Section 10.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 10, line 11, after 'flag' add a comma and words 'official song and official bird'; line 12, after 'flag' add a comma and words 'official song and official bird'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seconds the motion. Miss Awes.

AWES: When we voted on whether to delete Section 10, I voted to delete it. I don't think it's necessary, but as long as the body wants it, then I think since the Territory has adopted these three things they should all be mentioned to be consistent. Otherwise, there is an implication that we tend to reject the acts of the state legislature on these two things.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Didn't the Territory also adopt an official flower?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, it has. The Convention will come to order.

Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: There'll be an amendment covering the flower in a moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, the Committee has given this matter some thought -- that only matters that have an immediate need and use should be mentioned in the article on the transitional measures. Certain acts will have to be committed in the transitional period where a seal is needed, and certain acts will be committed. Occasions will arise where a flag is needed, and the other matters will be decided -- should be decided by the legislature. Most likely the same thing will come up. Maybe a contest will be held for other emblems -- the smaller ones. We shouldn't be tied too much in those respects, we thought, except for things that are outstanding and actually needed. We need the seal and the flag.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, it seems to me that we are getting pretty far off the job here. We have on our calendar today four of our substantive provisions. Now, this may or may not be necessary, but, if it is necessary, we should take care of it after we get the work of the Convention done. I will vote "no" on this amendment and any further amendments along this line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Miss Awes be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 17/b? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: The Committee has an amendment to offer to Section 21.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may please read the proposed Committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 13, strike the words 'the legislators are certified to have been elected', and insert 'the President's proclamation announcing the results of the elections'."

MCNEALY: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Buckalew. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment once more.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I am sorry the Committee has to take up this time on the floor, but it was called to our attention during the recess, and rightly so, that these words should have been in there originally because it relates back to the election of all the officers of the Territory. And under the Enabling Act of House Bill 2535 where it states that, "When such state and other officers and members of the state legislature, a representative and senators in Congress, shall be so elected and the returns thereof made, canvassed, and certified as herein provided, the governor of the Territory shall certify the results of said election to the President of the United States, who thereupon immediately shall issue his proclamation announcing the results of the election", and it goes on, "Alaska being admitted as a state"; on that basis, I would ask that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

RIVERS: May we hear how the section would read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read that section as if the amendment had been adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "The governor shall convene a special session of the first state legislature without limit as to duration within thirty days after the President's proclamation announcing the results of the elections if the regular session of the legislature would not normally fall within that period."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I admit I haven't given this the thought that the Committee has, but I have here the act and I don't see any reference to the President's proclamation in it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of the United States?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, the President of the United States. I don't see any reference to a proclamation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It's the federal enabling act.

HELLENTHAL: Now, this is taken care of in Section 16 of the Territorial Act of 1955, and it speaks there of, "There shall be an election" where you elect state officials and the representatives and senators to Congress. Now I just wonder about the wisdom of tying it in with a house bill again. If the legislature didn't see fit to do that in 1955 why should we do it now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Well, Mr. Hellenenthal, historically the same procedure has been followed. The returns are submitted to the President of the United States and then he issues his proclamation, and you wouldn't call your first state legislature together until after the proclamation was issued. It has been done the same way for years -- I mean, our bill wouldn't have any effect on it.

HELLENTHAL: That is what your bill says: "Persons elected hereunder shall assume their offices and the state government shall become in effect" -- now they don't tie it in with the proclamation -- they say "at the time and in the manner that the Congress may provide in the enabling act."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: Mr. President, in the enabling legislation it states, "When such state and other officers and members of the state legislature, and a representative and senators in the Congress of the United States shall be so elected, and the returns thereof made, canvassed, and certified as herein provided, the governor of said Territory shall certify the results of said election to the President of the United States who shall thereupon immediately issue his proclamation announcing the results of said election so ascertained, and upon issuance of said proclamation by the President of the United States, the State of Alaska shall be deemed admitted by Congress into the Union by virtue of this Act', etc."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I direct a question to the Chairman with reference to Section 12?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. McNealy, in the proposition which you have set out, there is no mention as to the date of the Constitutional Convention and I am just wondering whether or not that might be necessary. For instance, the enabling act says that "this Convention shall convene and assemble at the University of Alaska on the 8th day of November, 1955". In other words, is the official title of this convention "The Alaska Constitutional Convention of 1955" and should that be mentioned in this proposition or is that necessary?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, we have stated that the ballot shall in substance contain that wording. This wording was suggested, I believe, by Mr. Bebout and the Committee we didn't do a great deal of talking on that. Originally the Committee had the words in there "For the Constitution" and "Against the Constitution" was the thinking of the psychological effect and that was the only words the Committee had in, but it was stated that New Jersey used the same language here in adopting their recent Constitution. I have no opinion as to whether the use of the word "1955" is necessary or not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions or proposed amendments?

Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have given some thought to Section 7 about debts and liabilities and records. I talked to two or three people about it and have concluded in my own mind that that subject matter could better be handled in the finance and taxation article where the Chairman says they might make specific reference to records in there to cover the whole subject, so I move that we strike Section 7 and renumber the remaining sections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, there is a pending motion on that -- or was it withdrawn?

CHIEF CLERK: Unanimous consent was asked--

PRESIDENT EGAN: Oh, that's right. You never moved and got a second on that motion, is that right, Mr. Nerland?

NERLAND: I don't recollect.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then your motion would be in order.

R. RIVERS: I so move.

NERLAND: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves that Section 7 be deleted from the proposal, seconded by Mr. Nerland. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Rivers a question. Did you intend that this whole section be stricken, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Yes, I did, because we speak about records here. That isn't justified where a slight amendment to finance and taxation can include those. They might change the word "assets" to "property", and they might say "claims and records"; so whatever adjustments we make to cover all of these points I think should be in the one place. We don't need any part of this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be understood that Style and Drafting -- that Mr. Nerland would take that matter up with Style and Drafting with relation to the finance article.

NERLAND: Mr. President, we have the Style and Drafting report but it is the intention of the Finance Committee to change this last sentence something along this line: "Assets and records of the Territory shall become the property of the state."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted? All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be proposed for Committee Proposal No. 17/b? If not -- Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have no amendment but under the privilege of the floor I would like to say --

(Mr. Victor Rivers spoke for a few moments under privilege of the floor.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I would like to ask a question here. It seems to me that we are abusing the privilege of special privilege. I think you are supposed to state your privilege when you stand or rise, and you state your privilege, you request, and you are supposed to talk on that alone. Now, Mr. Rivers called somebody on that the other day -- on the very same thing he is doing today. I think it is time we clamp down on those things.

V. RIVERS: I asked for the privilege of the floor which has to do with the good and interest of the entire body. I did not ask for personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, the Chair has been allowing, on previous occasions, persons, and the Chair does not recall just the number of people who have raised a point of order when people have had privilege of the floor. If they had some point of order that was a point of order, most of the time there was no point of order, but there never had been any objection to that previously. Whether or not. when a man has the privilege of the floor, another delegate can rise to a point of order is questionable. However, the Chair feels that Mr. Peratrovich has a point in saying that a delegate should state what he wants the privilege of the floor for. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it appears that a question of privilege is designed to obtain the attention of the Chair at once -- to ask a question or to attend to some matter of business that cannot wait. In this particular instance, Mr. Kilcher was perfectly in order because there was a discrepancy between the record on one side and the record on the other side in this matter of privilege, and I think he arose under a proper point. However, it will be a matter for the Chair to decide, I am sure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In this case, Mr. Kilcher was probably in order in raising a point of order if he so chose to do, as many delegates have done in the past. Are there other proposed amendments for Committee Proposal No. 17/b? If not, the proposal is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. We have before us Article III, the article on the executive. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe the only reason we have Article III before us is so that the Style and Drafting Committee can report on three substantive amendments that were adopted at the last moment and after our report has been accepted, these amendments being requested and moved by the Committee on the Legislative Branch. Now, we are not ready and will not be until after the noon hour to give you our report on these amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will hold it over until later in the day when Style and Drafting is prepared later in the day to submit a report. Then, we will have before us the article on finance, Article No. IX. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information.

MCNEALY: As I remember, there was a matter of reconsideration on Sections 20 and 21 of the Committee Proposal No. 8/a, and there was something said about taking that up when it came up under Sections 24 and 25 today; the reconsideration should have been made yesterday.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it was agreed yesterday that Mr. McNees' reconsideration could be taken up at a later time, at such time as the Proposal No. 17/a would be before us. Now, 17/a does not appear on the calendar and if you wish to go through the calendar and then bring that matter up -- Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I believe that it was decided two or three days ago that these various items in the 17 series were presented severally, were fairly severable, and would be considered as separate items. I don't believe that those sections are before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Riley, they are not before us at the present time. We have the article on finance before us at this time. The Chief Clerk will please read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

(The Chief Clerk read the report of Style and Drafting on Article IX.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee have a report to make at this time? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the article on finance and taxation was redrafted initially by a subcommittee consisting of Mr. Johnson, Mrs. Nordale, and Mr. McLaughlin. It has been presented to the Committee on Finance and Taxation and we understand it is their belief that we have had no changes in substance. We would like to have such changes as we have made in language explained by Mr. Johnson who will also answer questions of delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, as Chairman Sundborg has said, the subcommittee and the full Committee on Style and Drafting has made some changes; however, certainly nothing of any substantive nature; and all of the changes that were made in wording have been cleared, not only with the representative of the Finance Committee assigned to the subcommittee, Mr. Barrie White, but also the full Finance Committee. I don't know that it would be necessary to go through the entire article and point out exactly what changes have been made in wording. Those of you who have your enrolled copies will note that on many sections no change has been made at all, and we believe that in those sections where there has been some rearrangement that the Style and Drafting Committee report puts it in a little better form and makes it more readable, and makes it conform to other articles that have already been adopted in the constitution. I am referring specifically to Section 9. There were some changes made there. The wording was rearranged somewhat from the enrolled copy and cut down, but, if you will read Section 9 in the Style and Drafting report and compare it with Section 9 of the enrolled copy, I believe that you will find that all of the substance is contained in the proposed Section 9 -- that it does read, I think, more smoothly. In Section 11, there has been some change with reference to the last exception, which is, if you look on your enrolled copy, on page 4, line 9. You will note after the semicolon the words "or special assessments". The Finance Committee had prepared and delivered to the Committee on Style and Drafting a proposed change there which we have included in our report. And our report, now, in Section 11, which appears on page 3 at the bottom of the page, beginning on line 23: "The restrictions do not apply to indebtedness to be paid from special assessments on the benefited property nor do they apply to refunding indebtedness of the state or its political subdivisions." As you can see, there has been some change in wording with reference to special assessments. In other words, we have added "on the benefited property". These words were suggested by the Finance Committee. They had intended making this as a committee amendment, but Style and Drafting Committee felt that it could just as well be included in this report and save the time of the Convention in the amending process. If there are any questions that I can answer, I will be glad to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions to be directed to Mr. Johnson?
Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Are we going to retain Section 12 about the governor's budget in this, or are we going to strike it? I think it would be retained in the executive.

V. RIVERS: No, in the legislative.

R. RIVERS: Or in the legislative.

JOHNSON: That I cannot say; the Finance Committee didn't indicate one way or the other about it. We felt that, if it ever should become necessary to remove it from this section and place it in the executive section, that when the Style and Drafting Committee makes its final rearrangement of the entire constitution, then we could, under the rules, move the section from one place to the other. We left it here for the time being.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: May I ask for a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a time.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, it has been called to my attention that I forgot to explain that, in Section 9 of the Committee on Style and Drafting report, some words that were contained in the enrolled copy, namely "additional qualifications and requirements of voters at these elections may be prescribed by law" were left out of the Style and Drafting report. Now I forgot to mention that that was done purposely because that same language in reference to this same type of election is contained in Section 1 of the article on suffrage and elections, which we have already adopted, and the Committee felt that it wasn't necessary to duplicate that language here because the point was already taken care of in the suffrage and elections article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, did you have a question to ask of Mr. Johnson?

WHITE: Mr. President, I wanted to ask two of them; that clears up one. The second had to do with Section 3, page 3, line 2, where it now says, "The state may by law contract debt for the purpose of repelling invasion". The words "by law" are a change from the Style and Drafting substantive report since the last time I saw it, which the report said, "The state may without ratification contract debts for the purpose of repelling invasion". Now the words "without ratification" conveyed the intent of the Finance Committee in this matter. My question is, do you feel that the words "by law" convey the same intent?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, would you care to answer?

JOHNSON: I wonder if I might ask Mr. Davis to explain that particular matter, because it took place at a meeting when I was absent from the Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I will try. As I remember it, this matter came from one of the experts who was with us last night who pointed out that since in the first part of the section we had required ratification for certain types of state debts, that then, if we went ahead and said in the next section that the state debts of the kind there intended could be provided by law, that the words "without ratification" were surplusage, and that is why it was done that way. Now that is my remembrance of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would then address a further question to Mr. Davis. Mr. Davis, in Section 8, we not only provide for ratification in the first instance, but we specify capital improvements. Now couldn't it be -- the second sentence -- couldn't it be construed to be that this is an exception to capital improvements rather than an exception to the ratification process? If that construction could be put the sentence, had we not better put back in "without ratification"?

DAVIS: Well, I might state, Mr. President, in answer to Mr. White's question that, so far as I am concerned, I have no objection at all to putting "without ratification" back in. The Committee, after the talk with Mr. Owen last night, felt otherwise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg has been attempting to get the floor.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, there is another matter at issue here. I believe. In the first sentence of Section 8, we say that the state debt may be authorized by a majority vote in each house of the legislature, and then ratification. Now, a majority vote in each house of the legislature is not equivalent to passing a law, because it does not require the signature of the governor, and it does not require conformance with the provisions of this constitution and the provisions of such laws as will be passed under it with respect to the procedure in enacting a law. So, when we say in the second sentence, "The state may by law", we are saying that that law must be passed by the legislature in the manner that is required by the constitution and the statutes, and either signed by the governor or passed over his veto or become law without his signature in the manner provided in the constitution, which we felt was the real intention of the body rather than merely requiring that the legislature by a majority in each house and without adhering to any of those other restrictions and without any reference to the governor could contract debt on behalf of the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Sundborg a question? Mr. Sundborg, would you object to saying, "The state may by law without ratification contract debt"?

SUNDBORG: I certainly have no objection to that. I think the question should be addressed to the Committee on Finance and Taxation rather than to us.

HELLENTHAL: Your remarks were addressed to the retention of the words "by law"?

SUNDBORG: That is correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I don't think you incur debts by law. You incur debts by contract through your administrative setup. You might authorize the incurring of debts by law. You don't contract by law either. You contract administratively after the legislature has authorized such a contract. So I would like to see the words "by law" knocked out of there and "without ratification" or something that fits in with the facts of life go in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a group here who would like to get together and discuss this matter? The Chair notes that it is noon right now, and it might be advisable to have a recess and this subject be taken up by the Finance Committee and other interested parties. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I think one of the reasons for knocking off at 12:00 rather than 12:30 was that there was a big backlog upstairs or something. Does that reason still exist now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, one of the other reasons is that, very often and almost every day, committees do have important questions to come before them during that extra half hour and it seemed to be a profitably spent time, and now in this instance here, it might be. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that we stand at recess until 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate Johnson moves that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30. Are there committee announcements to be made at this time? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery, and we invite any delegates who may be interested in this particular question of the "by law" or "without ratification" to meet with us at that time and we also invite members of the Finance and Taxation Committee to meet so that maybe we can resolve this before the delegates come back from noon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting at the rear of the gallery immediately upon recess. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: I would like members of the Finance Committee (Committee) to make themselves available for that meeting with Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The finance Committee will meet with Style and Drafting Committee immediately upon recess. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Committee on Administration will meet at 3:30 this afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Administration at 3:30 this afternoon. Are there other Committee announcements? If not, the Committee will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have Article IX, the article on finance and taxation before us. The Chair recalls that we were on Section --

CHIEF CLERK: I have an amendment now. Are we ready for them?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the -- no, we are not ready for amendments as yet; we are still in the question period.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I might announce now that the Style and Drafting Committee will have two committee amendments at the proper time, which I think will clear up the questions that were raised just before the noon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are they substantive amendments, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: No, Mr. President, they are only amendments as to phraseology.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That will come though before you move to adopt -- to accept the report. Are there other questions to be directed to the Committee with relation to the work done by Style and Drafting on this article? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Only by the work done by Style and Drafting or by substance?

PRESIDENT EGAN: At the present time we are only dealing with the work done by Style and Drafting. If there are no other questions, are there amendments to be proposed as to phraseology? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, before we start on that, if I could have about one minute I think I could present the Style and Drafting Committee's amendment as to phraseology and then we could get the report adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Style and Drafting Committee submits an amendment to Section 8, page 3. I have submitted it to the Chief Clerk, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, page 3, line 2, strike the words 'by law' and substitute 'as provided by law and without ratification'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The sentence would then start "The state may as provided by law and without ratification contract debts" etc. I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like an explanation; I would like to know what the necessity of it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

HERMANN: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann seconds the motion. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: It was pointed out to us on the floor this morning, Mr. President, and during the recess at a joint meeting between the Finance Committee and the Style and Drafting Committee that the enrolled copy did carry this thought, that the debt which could be contracted for the special purposes of repelling invasion, etc., could be contracted without ratification of the action of the legislature, and the reason it is necessary here is that we have divided what was formerly one sentence into two, and "without ratification" is necessary in order to keep the substantive idea which was expressed in the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Another question, Mr. President. In other words, the administration -- in this case the state -- the administration may raise money in an emergency? Is that the idea?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, that is correct. They can do it as provided by law and without ratification by the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves. Do you ask unanimous consent, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I will renew my request for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: We have an amendment to Section 15 on page 4, which I will ask the Chief Clerk to read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "On line 26, page 4, after the word 'assets', insert 'and records', and on line 27, strike the word 'assets' and substitute 'property'."

SUNDBORG: I am sorry, Mr. President, I left out the word "the" in the last insertion. Strike "assets" and insert "the property". The sentence would then read "The assets and records of the Territory shall become the property of the state." I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection. the amendment is ordered adopted. Does the Committee have any other phraseology amendments? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, it might have been a typographical error, but I believe the word "benefited" in the last line of page 3 is not properly spelled. They put two "t's" in there. I think there is only one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent that that correction be made, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: Well, I thought Style and Drafting might want to check on the spelling of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting won't get this back again. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: May I ask the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. Sundborg, was it the intention of the Committee in Section 6, after the word "levied" on line 10, and after the word "made" on line 11, that there should be commas? Would that express the intention of it?

SUNDBORG: I think it would be exactly the same meaning if they were in there, and just as one individual, I might say I think it would be preferable if there should be commas in the two places you indicate. I don't think our committee is any member of it would object if you should want to ask that those commas be inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Line 10, on page 2, after the word "levied", insert a comma; line 11, after the word "made", insert a comma. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Do you also ask unanimous consent to change that word "benefited" to be spelled properly?

SUNDBORG: I don't feel sufficiently sure of my spelling prowess. I would like to refer to the dictionary.

TAYLOR: I did look that up, Mr. President, it didn't look right to me the way it was and I went and looked it up, and there is only one "t" in there.

SUNDBORG: In that case, Mr. President, on page 3, line 25, I ask unanimous consent to drop one "t" out of the word "benefitted" so that only one will remain.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Hearing no objection it is so ordered. The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments, phraseology amendments to the article? If not -- Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I have failed to clear with the Style and Drafting Committee on this, but we have discussed it with the Finance Committee and, as I see it, it is mostly a matter of phrasing; it doesn't change the meaning. I have an amendment to offer. On page 2, line 6 -- it simply involves inserting the word "possessory" after the first word "other" on line 6. I had failed to catch that when we were first considering the finance article. It has some bearing on the resources article. I think all of you will recall that Delegates Vic Fischer and Ralph Rivers raised the question -- perhaps others did too -- as to what the resource article meant by "interests in land". At that time I had not noted this mention of "interests in land" in the finance article and would not care to have, in the future, the sense in which "interests in land" is here used applied to limit the use of that phrase in the resource article. By inclusion of the word "possessory" here to qualify all of the "interests in land" concerned in the finance article, I think we correct any possible misconstruction in the resource article, and I ask unanimous consent that that be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

BARR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second?

STEWART: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Stewart. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I am not certain just what change this will make, but it seems on the face of it that possessory interest would not include, for instance, timber on the land. Here we are speaking of taxing interests on land, on federally owned lands. Now is that a possessory interest?

RILEY: Well, you would have a contract, would you not, for the timber?

BARR: I assume so, yes.

RILEY: Well, contracts are covered. I feel that the word "possessory" is consistent with the rest of the language in this section, Mr. Barr, but my fear is that because of the mention of "interests in land" in Section 5 of the finance article we run into a little difficulty in the resource article for the very reason you mention. In the resource article, we think not only of the possessory interests which are evidenced by an instrument of some sort, but we think also of the physical interests in the lands themselves, the resource, the content of the land and the cover of the land. I should not care to chance this narrower use of the phrase being taken to limit the use of the phrase in the resource article.

BARR: I disagree with you in that I think the word "possessory" narrows it quite a bit, and I am afraid that, if we use that, we might cut out the possibility of taxing some part of this land that is not necessarily a contract or an interest in the land itself.

RILEY: Mr. President, may we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, it appears that there are those who feel this is a matter of substance and, consequently, I will withdraw my motion until the proper time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that his amendment be withdrawn. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Are there other phraseology amendments to be proposed to the article? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If there are not, Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on the article on finance and taxation be accepted and that the amendments made by the Committee be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to Article IX, the article on finance and taxation, be accepted, and that the changes as made by the Style and Drafting Committee be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, the Finance Committee has an amendment to offer which may or may not be one of substance. It will take care of any eventuality, and we will ask that the rules be suspended so that we may be able to offer the amendment which is on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment that would be offered if the rules are suspended.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, page 2, lines 23 and 24, strike 'a majority vote in each house of the legislature' and insert in lieu thereof the word 'law'."

WHITE: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, was that just the word "law" to be inserted in there?

WHITE: Well, it is qualified by the word "by". We left the "by" in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that the Finance Committee might submit this specific amendment. Is there objection to the suspension of the rules? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended. Mr. White you may offer your amendment.

WHITE: We now offer the amendment just read, and ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed Committee amendment may be adopted. Is there objection?

GRAY: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

3413

GRAY: I object to a point of what difference has been made, Mr. White?

WHITE: I'm not sure that any difference has been made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. White?

WHITE: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Knight that the amendment be adopted.
Mr. White.

WHITE: I am not sure that any difference is made, Mr. Gray, except that it was stated on the floor this morning that when you phrase it this way, it may mean without the approval of the governor. That, of course, was never our intent in the first place. As this came from the Committee originally, it said "by law", and, if you recall, we got into a long amendment which involved a two-thirds vote of both houses -- or a majority vote of both houses and ratification by the people. In that sense this wording made sense and was necessary. Once that amendment had been amended, it no longer made sense, and it may be away from our intent. And this amendment will shorten our constitution.

GRAY: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: A point of inquiry. Did that withdraw the "a" in the last word in line 23?

WHITE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now would the Chief Clerk please read that sentence with the amendment in it.

CHIEF CLERK: "No state debt shall be contracted unless authorized for capital improvements by law with ratification by a majority of the qualified voters of the state who vote on the question."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, there is one question which occurs to me. There might not be much basis to it, but it seems to me that, if we would adopt this amendment, we would be opening this question up to a decision by an initiative, because if you put it "by law", it can be an initiative matter, where in our initiative and referendum, such a method is not allowed. I think it would make an inconsistent matter in the constitution. I think, to be on the safe side, we should leave it the same as it is. I am not arguing the motion because it is not before us yet because there hasn't been a suspension of the rules, but I --

PRESIDENT EGAN: There has been a suspension of the rules, motion is now before us.

TAYLOR: Pardon me, but I just thought that I would bring that up, that we may have an initiative put out where I don't think it would be proper to have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President it occurs to me there is no conflict between this act and the initiative and referendum because, as I recall it, the initiative and referendum exempts any such procedure as this, so it wouldn't apply in any event, and I think adding the words "by law" strengthens this section because it could be that, if the wording were left as it is, that other than an actual law passed by the legislature, some other method might be used to create the indebtedness to begin with.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I would also like to point out the meaning is fairly clear here when we say "by law with ratification" because, if we would hold an initiative election, we would have to turn right around and have that ratified again, so this must mean "by the usual process of law", meaning the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor -- Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: One question before we vote on this. I think we ought to give it a little more consideration to make it clear. I think probably the language in other bills would probably take care of it. I just thought of it this minute, that would indicate approval by the governor, but I don't know what this means -- whether the governor has to approve it or not. It doesn't make sense to me. Maybe I am not following the discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: If I may help, Mr. President -- the usual process of making laws includes the approval by the governor or it becomes a law without his approval. So, when you say "by law", you take in all those steps. The way it was before though, it might have been argued that you meant to exclude the governor, so I think this improves matters and would like to see it pass.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that sentence in Section 8 as it would read if the amendment was adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "No state debt shall be contracted unless authorized for capital improvements by law with ratification by a majority of the qualified voters of the state who vote on the question."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I would like to ask one question regarding this. If the governor vetoes this, would that necessitate three-fourths to override that on appropriations?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it. and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there any other amendments to be proposed for Article IX, the article on finance and taxation? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: This would be an amendment of substance. Would I have to have a suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent for a suspension of the rules to present an amendment and then discuss it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you read the amendment that you would then propose.

V. RIVERS: Lines 19 and 20, page 2, I would change "upon the date of ratification" to "upon the effective date of this constitution" and strike the words "by the people of Alaska".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

V. RIVERS: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers so moves. Is there a second?

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 42 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays 9 - Barr, Cooper, Hellenthal, Johnson, Knight, Laws, Londborg, Taylor, White.

Absent 4 - Coghill, V. Fischer, Metcalf, VanderLeest.)

ROBERTSON: I will change my vote from "no" to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson changes his vote from "no" to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 42 yeas, 9 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the rules are suspended. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have just been advised that is the most effective argument I have made yet. (Laughter) Now, this matter of whether or not we can make the retroactive date of earmarked funds effective on the date of ratification, I mentioned once before. I have done a little work on it --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption?

V. RIVERS: I move the adoption. On lines 19 and 20, strike the words "date of ratification" and put in the words "effective date of this constitution period" and strike "by the people of Alaska".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

R. RIVERS: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The question of whether we can earmark funds and make the prohibition of earmarking effective on the date of ratification is one I have given some thought to. I checked this and discussed it with some of the committee chairmen including Mr. McNealy, who had a number of legal opinions upon the effective date of when a constitution took effect. I am just going to mention some of them. One of them is in reciting the instances regarding one case in the State of Utah in 1895. It says, "Under all circumstances it seems to be the unanimity of the authorities that it is absolutely necessary that Congress expresses its assent before a state can enter the Union; that a state does not come into existence until such assent is given." Another one is referred to, a case of Scott v. Detroit Young Men's Society's Lessee, 1 Douglas, Michigan. "The question is to when a state -- a territory ceases to be such and becomes a state and as to when the constitution and governmental machinery of a new state go into operation as one upon which even courts and constitutional lawyers are not agreed. One theory is that a territory continues in all respects a territory until admitted into the Union by Act of Congress; but until such Act of Admission, the proposed state constitution cannot take effect nor any part of the machinery of a state government go into operation." Retroactively, we would be putting into operation a law here prohibiting actions -- nullifying actions taken by a territorial legislature while it is still the only government body of this Territory under the Congressional Acts of the United States which established this as a territory. Now, it is my opinion that the ratification date does not extend back to nullifying any laws passed by that Territorial legislature until such time as the constitution becomes effective, not upon its ratification date. Therefore, I move this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, in one section of the constitution, we have said that residents or persons who voted in the election, I think, of 1924 may vote. We have, in other words, backdated something. It seems to me that, if we adopt the provision as it now stands without the amendment, all we are doing is saying "dedicated funds existing as of April 1956"; that is all we are saying. We are not passing any ex post facto legislation or anything. The constitution can't annul acts of the Territorial legislature, I don't think there is any question about it, when the constitution goes into effect. To me it seems vital that this existing language be maintained or that some other language be put in which would freeze the existing earmarked funds. Otherwise, we are opening up ourselves, and not just ourselves but the people of Alaska, up to a race for earmarked funds prior to the date of ratification, and that would seem a most dangerous thing to do. I see no reason why we cannot say, "as of such and such a date, any funds existing can continue".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, this matter has been argued continuously on this floor. In substance, the effect of Mr. (Victor) Rivers' amendment would be that, until the time that we received statehood, that the legislature can go ahead and continue to earmark funds, and all of those earmarked funds then would, in substance, be exempt under the constitution of the State of Alaska and could be exempt. We would be in the identical position of these states that have 90 per cent of their funds earmarked. The intent of this section -- and it is clear and patent and only a sophist could insist that it is something other than what it reads -- is that sometime this year, in the spring, at that date, at a precise date on which this constitution is ratified, that earmarked funds or dedicated funds existing at that time will at least be permitted to continue under statehood, and it means in substance that if at that time no limited funds are earmarked, that that is the cutoff date. It defines in here "upon the date of ratification of this constitution by the people of Alaska" refers specifically to a specific date that can be determined. Sometime. I presume, in April 1956 is the cutoff date. There will be no more earmarked funds, and earmarked funds which are created by the legislature in future years will not be subject to the provisions of this article. If we substitute the words "effective date", it means that the whole validity of Section 7 is done away with, because the legislature from year to year to year can and will dedicate more and more funds and, eventually, by the time that this constitution becomes effective, the section will be completely ineffective. Insofar as I am concerned, I am sure that this expresses an exact date, an exact time, and the intent of the article would be destroyed by the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr has been attempting to get the floor.

BARR: Mr. McLaughlin and Mr. Fischer both have stated the exact facts as to the reasons why we must have this language in here. Now I would also like to say that Mr. Rivers' fears are entirely ungrounded. There is no retroactive law stated here whatsoever. It merely says that the continuance of these earmarked funds shall not continue, meaning shall not continue after the date this constitution goes into effect -- the date we become a state. Then the question is, what earmarked funds shall not continue? That is why we put this in here -- the ones that were in effect on the date it was ratified. There is no question of a retroactive law whatever.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, were you attempting to get the floor?

AWES: All that I wanted to say has been said by other delegates.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have heard some oratory here that seems to me to be entirely without foundation of facts -- it's a matter of an opinion. It is my opinion from what I have been able to read that this constitution, ratified by the people, does not become effective until also ratified by the Congress and the President of the United States; and that anything that is not effective then, until that time, must be reaching back by this very clause, and I venture to say that, if this clause is adopted, that it will lead to a number of law suits in connection with the actions of the legislature between the time this cutoff date is set up and the time the constitution is ratified. I have heard a number of men say here they are sure. I, for one, am not sure, and I am pretty sure there would be a number of others that are not sure. I also believe it would be a matter for the courts to decide. I don't believe that, even though we leave the clause in, that it is going to be an active or effective clause, because I am pretty sure that the preponderance of opinions are that we are still a Territory, and that, as such, our people are not able to legislate for the state. We are not able to cut off what the legislature can do. We are not able to postdate what effective actions this constitution will be. We are not able to backdate the time it becomes effective to when the people ratify it. It has no force and effect of law until such time as the Congress and the President of the United States ratify it. For that reason, I think it is probably opening the way to considerable litigation to leave the clause in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers was closing. Did you --

KILCHER: May I ask a question of Mr. Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

KILCHER: Do you think, Mr. Rivers, your fears could be resolved by putting in a specific date, say April 26, 1956?

V. RIVERS: I don't think so. I think it has no effect or value until such time as the constitution is actually operative -- when it takes effect as my amendment reads.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, the schedule that we have says that all laws --

HELLENTHAL: Point of order. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg --

HELLENTHAL: The argument has been concluded on this subject in accordance with our rules, if they are to be adhered to.

LONDBORG: Point of order. The rules state that no one shall speak twice unless all the rest have been heard that want to be heard, and if they are closing, they state they are closing. I don't believe Mr. Rivers stated that he was closing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair felt that Mr. Rivers felt he was closing, but it wasn't so stated. Do you wish to ask a question?

LONDBORG: No, I just wanted to bring out here, if I have the floor --

V. FISCHER: Point of order, Mr. President

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I think Mr. Rivers was closing, and I don't think we should extend the debate any further.

LONDBORG: Well, I will be glad to withdraw as far as that, although I do feel I have the right of the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will have to admit that he didn't ask Mr. Rivers if he was closing.

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Londborg be permitted to express his views.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Londborg, you may express your objections.

KILCHER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. All those in favor of allowing Mr. Londborg to be heard will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it. Mr. Londborg, you may be heard. The Convention will come to order.

LONDBORG: I believe according to our schedule that all laws are in force that are not inconsistent with the constitution, and to feel that any law passed according to this, after the date of ratification, that that law wouldn't be -- couldn't be annulled or, as he mentioned, the constitution retroactive. I think that it would mean that any law passed from now on by the legislature could supersede the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, if you would wish to make a closing statement, you may have the floor.

V. RIVERS: I have no other comments. What Mr. Londborg refers to are the ordinances and transitory provisions, and what I am talking about is in the body matter of the constitution. I don't think there is any bearing on the question in regard to the point Mr. Londborg has made.

KILCHER: I would like to explain my lone "no" vote. I was of the opinion that Mr. Londborg, in the first place, had the right to speak and did not need unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, by saying "no". The "noes" have it, and the amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to be proposed to Article IX? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask for a one-minute recess. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Riley.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments? Mr. Riley. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I have the floor for just a minute on a point of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

(Mr. Johnson then spoke briefly on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley, did you have something?

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask for suspension of the rules to introduce a specific amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you state your amendment?

RILEY: The amendment will be to strike the word "other" on line 6, page 2, and I wish to state, simply for the record, that the purpose in striking the word "other" is to avoid any limitation of the meaning "interests in lands" as it appears in the resource article, which will come out later from Style and Drafting and in which article that phrase appears a number of times.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended. Mr. Riley, you may offer your amendment.

RILEY: Mr. Chairman, I move that on page 2, line 6, the word "other" be deleted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves for the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments for Committee Proposal No. 9? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have a question I want to ask of Mr. Nordale for purposes of the record and to assist Style and Drafting in a possible clarification. Mr. Nerland, I mean. In Section 11, where the Committee deals with the nonapplicability of the restrictions on debt, in the case of revenue bonds issued by public corporations of the state, first; public enterprises of the state, second; and thirdly, any political subdivision. Does the Committee mean by that language that any political subdivision can issue revenue bonds either through a public corporation or through a public enterprise, or directly, like the City of Anchorage did with its Eklutna project; and in the event that they choose to issue them directly without employing the device of the public corporation, will those bonds be exempt from the restrictions applicable to debt?

NERLAND: That was the intention of the Committee, Mr. Hellenthal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be offered for Article No. IX? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If there are no amendments, Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article IX, Finance and Taxation, be advanced to third reading, read by title only, and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended as to Article IX, the article on finance and taxation, the article be advanced to third reading, be read the third time by title only, and placed on final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended and Article IX is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will please read the article by title only.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article IX, Finance and Taxation."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article is open for debate. Is there discussion? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I just wondered if there were some members who are out who would like to be here on this final vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, Mr. Doogan, Mr. Marston, Mr. Coghill -- did the Sergeant-at-Arms go upstairs to see if any of them were in the committee rooms? The Convention will be at ease for a minute. The Convention will come to order. Is there debate on Article IX, the article on finance and taxation? Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I was not here the day you voted on Section 8 of this article, and I would just like to register that, if I had been here. I certainly would have voted for the inclusion of a two-thirds vote of all the members to which each house is entitled to be included in that, because I think it is a serious mistake and one that will prove to be a liability as we go on through in the building of our state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Article IX, the article on finance and taxation, be adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution?" Mr. Barr.

BARR: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information.

BARR: I would like to set Mr. Armstrong's mind at ease before he votes. It is true that it has to pass the legislature by a simple majority, but it has to be ratified by the people after that. It was the feeling of the Committee that we should only allow the state to go into debt if the people say so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I'm sorry, but I go on the theory that, when you send a person to the legislature, you empower them to act for you, and you send them there with the complete trust, not only for your social life. but your economic life and your general well being; and that if we can ever come to the place where we can get two-thirds of either one of these houses to agree on a major issue for capital improvement, then that would be something that would be out of this world. I'd say that, if you could get that kind of agreement. you should certainly have the improvement for the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: May I ask Mr. Armstrong a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Miss Awes.

AWES: You mean that you would have approved of the amendment that was suggested that would allow a debt to be incurred with a two-thirds vote of the legislature without ratification?

ARMSTRONG: That is correct, Miss Awes.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Article IX, the article on finance and taxation, be adopted as a part of the Alaska's state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 51 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 0 -

Absent: 4 - Coghill, Doogan, Marston, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 51 yeas and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it, and the article on finance and taxation has become a part of the Alaska state constitution. We now have before us in second reading Article XIII, the article on amendment and revision. The Style and Drafting Committee report will be read at this time. The article had been read for the second time previously.

(The Chief Clerk read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on Article XIII.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the redraft of the article on amendment and revision was prepared initially by a subcommittee consisting of Mr. McLaughlin, Mr. Armstrong, and Mr. Johnson. It has been discussed with the Committee on Direct Legislation, Amendment, and Revision, and we understand it meets with their approval. There are one or two substantive amendments, or maybe even more than that. We understand Mr. McLaughlin, who is going to explain the article and answer questions, says he will undertake to convince everybody they are wholly desirable. I will now turn the floor over to Mr. McLaughlin to tell what has been done to this article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, as the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee says, the Convention may put its mind at ease on the subject of style; we haven't changed much of it; we've only made changes in substance in the article. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

MCLAUGHLIN: The necessity for the changes in substance, which were agreed upon or may not be substance, but we point them out as substance so the Convention can do its will upon the article, were agreed upon by the substantive committee as representing their intent at the time. I might point out that under the enrolled copy -- actually under the literal reading of the enrolled copy -- it turns out that the legislature could prevent the automatic calling of a constitutional convention because of the fact that they can provide for a constitutional convention; and additionally to that they may provide otherwise provisions counter to those of the law providing for the Alaska Constitutional Convention of 1955. It was the intent of the substantive committee to make sure that there could be a constitutional convention every 10 years. As it stood, the legislature could, by making a limited call for a constitutional convention, limit it to certain subjects, and, limiting the convention powers as expressly set forth therein, could, every nine years, call for a constitutional convention with very limited powers and thereby block the automatic calling of a constitutional convention on the 10th year. In order to overcome that, certain additions were made. In addition, in Section 2, provision was made for submitting by ballot title by the attorney general. By general consent of the Convention, the words "secretary of state" were substituted for "attorney general", but, in the subsequent section, Section 3 of the enrolled copy, the burden was then passed upon the governor. In order to make it uniform, the Style and Drafting Committee made the one individual responsible, the secretary of state. In addition, they put the duty upon the secretary of state to make the call. The reason for that is that, as we recognize, that you cannot mandamus a whole legislature, and you have to have some one that you can impose the will of the courts on to compel the issuance of the call. I shall point out just, section by section. where the new phrases, clauses, or substantive changes are, so that the Convention will know. On line 4 of Section 1, we have added the words, "and proposition summarizing". We took that phrase from the initiative and referendum; we are making them conform. And on line 8, we added the words, "Unless otherwise provided in the amendment, it becomes effective thirty days after the certification of the election returns by the secretary of state". We added that for the obvious reason that it now conforms with most other provisions that we do have in the other portions of the constitution. It means that, on the night of the general election, there might be a very radical constitutional change -- let us say, abolishing the legislature or abolishing the judiciary, and no one would know, possibly for a week, in Alaska, whether or not the courts or the legislature had been abolished. I am using an extreme example, but it points out the difficulty. We want to make it effective 30 days later, but we have not changed the intent, because the legislature, if it so desires, can designate the effective date of the amendment and can literally say, "on the night of election". We just wanted to put in a cautionary note there if the legislature should happen to forget when it became effective. The next change was in Section 3, page 2, line 1. We substituted "secretary of state" for "governor". As you recall, I said, in Section 2, in the enrolled copy, the governor had had the original duty and we figured that we should make -- the secretary of state had the original obligation on constitutional amendments, and we decided that we should make it uniformly the responsibility of one man, the secretary of state. On line 6, we used the expression "statewide election" -- "statewide" was added; and then we put parenthetically "unless the legislature provides for the election of the delegates at a special election". On line 8, additionally added was "The secretary of state shall issue the call for the convention." As I said, that was so the courts would have some one to mandamus. I think the only expression in your constitution permitting the mandamus of the governor is to be found in your apportionment article. The secretary of state, the duty is imposed upon him to make the call. We have added Section 4. These changes are with the consent of the substantive committee. "Constitutional conventions shall have plenary power to amend or revise the constitution, subject only to ratification by the people. No call for a constitutional convention shall limit these powers of the convention." We had to put in a blanket statement such as that to prevent these limited calls by the legislature, which would normally block and completely block the desire of the people to secure a complete constitutional convention. For that reason, it was set forth that the constitutional convention would have plenary power and that there could be no limitations upon that power to review the constitution. Mr. Chairman, I was wondering if there were any questions on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions to be asked of Mr. McLaughlin with relation to this? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, first, I want to compliment Mr. McLaughlin on an excellent job, and then I want to ask him, in line 2, page 1, where you say. "Amendments to this constitution may be approved by a two-thirds vote", where I think, in the original draft, it said, "amendments to this constitution may be proposed by a two-thirds vote"; and I notice down below on line 5, you have reference to the amendment as a proposed amendment. It would appear to me that it might not be entirely clear as to the intent in line 2.

MCLAUGHLIN: I think that we changed the wording because we wanted to use distinct words and to make the processes clear. Where originally we said they may be "proposed", we changed that, I believe, to "approved" because we wanted to make, then, the language on line 4, "the proposition" as used in the initiative and referendum -- we wanted it indicated, then, that that was the approved measure for the ballot and that we were conforming on line 4 -- "the ballot title and proposition summarizing each proposed amendment" would conform to the initiative and referendum.

SMITH: One more question, Mr. McLaughlin. Where does this amendment originate?

MCLAUGHLIN: There is no indication in the first enrolled copy where it originates. Apparently it can originate in either house. We have not changed the wording on that at all.

SMITH: The thing that was in my mind was this: you say here that amendments to this constitution may be approved by a two-thirds vote, where actually what they are doing to begin with is they are approving proposed amendments. Isn't that true? They are not amendments until they are ratified by the people.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I request a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I move and ask unanimous consent that the word "approved" on line 2, page 1, be stricken and, in place thereof, the word "proposed" be substituted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: On line 2 -- you are offering that as a committee amendment?

MCLAUGHLIN: That is a committee amendment. For the word "approved" substitute the word "proposed".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, would that be a substantive or a phraseology amendment?

MCLAUGHLIN: That, unfortunately, is the first style amendment suggested. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: It wouldn't actually be a substantive change, would it?

MCLAUGHLIN: It is not. It is merely a change in style. Regrettably, as I say, Mr. President, it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I did mean to mention to you -- I just noticed, on page 2, line 18 -- originally, the enrolled copy made some provision about the claim on the general fund of the state treasury. Since we have no reference, I believe, in our constitution to the general fund, we made it as a first claim on the state treasury, the theory being that it would be a broader claim and merely return it to the general fund.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to Mr. McLaughlin with relation to this article? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I apologize to Mr. McLaughlin because I have had this before me for several days, and this has not occurred to me. In Section 3, the language is, "If during any ten-year period a constitutional convention has not been held," and so on, the question is placed on the ballot. Now, what if the question is placed on the ballot and the returns of the election are, "No, we don't want to have a constitutional convention"? Does it go on the ballot at the next general election, also, and at every general election until we have one? Under this language, there would not have been a constitutional convention in the ten-year period; there would have been a referendum, that is true, on whether the people wanted one, but if they vote negatively, what happens?

MCLAUGHLIN: Is this on Section 3?

SUNDBORG: Yes, sir.

MCLAUGHLIN: There is only one call; there is only required under this one call for a constitutional convention in any ten years, and the secretary of state is required -- Section 3 refers specifically where no constitutional convention has been held -- we didn't say called -- where it hasn't been held within the ten-year period -- then the secretary of state must place it on the ballot at the next general election. Now, if they vote it down, then you don't have it for another ten years.

SUNDBORG: You don't have another referendum for another ten years?

MCLAUGHLIN: That's right.

SUNDBORG: Under what language?

MCLAUGHLIN: Under the language that it is only required to do it once; that is, the whole implication is that he does it once.

SUNDBORG: That may be the implication, but it says, I think, "If during the ten-year period a constitutional convention has not been held".

MCLAUGHLIN: May we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. The convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I have a proposed amendment, and I know it will be subject to objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you going to move -- at this time, until there are no further phraseology amendment, we should be considering --

MCLAUGHLIN: This might prove to be an amendment in substance, and there is some dispute on what was intended by the Committee at the time they first presented this on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may state your proposed amendment.

MCLAUGHLIN: The amendment which I propose is on line 3, page 2, after the word "convention", insert the words, "if the vote is in the negative, the proposition will be placed on the ballot ten years thereafter."

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be the proposed amendment that you would wish to offer? Is that Correct?

MCLAUGHLIN: I offer it, not on behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee; I offer it merely, Mr. Chairman, to point up the difficulty before the Convention. Actually, as this language now reads, that is unamendable. As the language now reads, it means that, if there is no call by the legislature and the proposition is put on the ballot and fails, that is the people by referendum don't want a convention, then technically, the succeeding year it would again be put on the ballot and yearly thereafter, that is at general elections, until such time as the people would vote for a constitutional amendment. As I say, it is a substantive difficulty because some in the Convention say that it was their intent that it should recur yearly to be voted upon by the people, and others say that was not, that they wanted to give the people every ten years an opportunity to vote on the question of whether or not they wanted a convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, the Chair feels that it is a substantive amendment. The Chair does not recollect that there has been any real discussion on this particular question at the time the article was before us in second reading, and therefore, we will have to go by the statement contained in the first sentence as it is in the article and, consequently, the amendment would be one of substance.

MCLAUGHLIN: I will withdraw it; I merely presented it to point it up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be in order to present that amendment later if you so choose. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, does the intent of the members of the Committee mean anything in arriving at conclusions as to whether this is substance or phraseology?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, if the Chairman of the Committee would like to make a statement with relation to your question --

HELLENTHAL: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Might it be possible at this time to refer the matter back -

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is a matter of substance, the Chair ruled.

HELLENTHAL: -- to the Committee and proceed on with another article so that we don't have to make up our minds on the floor and can be guided by the Committee's thought on the matter?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, the Chair has ruled that, at this time, that amendment is not in order because it is an amendment in substance. Are there other phraseology amendments? Are there questions to be directed to Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: I hope, Mr. President, that Mr. Sundborg has no further afterthoughts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, do you have any other questions?

SUNDBORG: No, sir, Mr. President. If there are no more questions as to phraseology, I move and ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on Article XIII, Amendment and Revision, be accepted, and that the amendments made by the Style and Drafting Committee be adopted, and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on Article XIII, the article on amendment and revision, be accepted, and that the amendments made to the article by the Style and Drafting Committee be adopted. Is there objection?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I should have included in that motion a suspension of the rules since there have been substantive amendments to this article.

KILCHER: I object. One thing at a time, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, in order that the body could accept, there would have to be a suspension of the rules. Now, do you want it to just be included as a suspension of the rules, or do you wish to vote on the suspension of the rules separately?

KILCHER: Can't we adopt the report as such?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If we adopt the report in this case where substantive charges have --

KILCHER: No substantive changes have been made so far as what they have here -- there are some proposed in the future.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, in giving his explanation, stated in several instances that substantive changes had been made. He explained all of those instances. This question that he just raised a moment ago was one of --

KILCHER: I withdraw my objection then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves that the rules be suspended and asks unanimous consent that the Style and Drafting Committee report on Article XIII be accepted, and that the amendments as contained in that report be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the report with the amendments is ordered adopted. Now, are there substantive amendments or amendments for Section 1? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have one question. I notice that the certification of election returns shall be made by the secretary of state, who is the same person who prepares the proposition and ballot title. I had been told that that was not in the enrolled copy, and I raise the question of the chairman of either committee or anybody, is that not rather a legislative matter and is it not possible that certification might be made by some other officer of the government? I know now the Director of Finance makes certifications under the reorganization. I wonder if that is a constitutional matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

JOHNSON: I believe that that question is moot now since the Convention by unanimous consent has adopted the report of the Style and Drafting Committee, which included this additional language as a substantive change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: In that connection, no. The decision of the Chair was that we approve the report only as to matters of style. I don't care at all, but --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, that was the question raised by Mr. Kilcher, and the Chair asked just what Mr. Kilcher was objecting to, and it was explained that Mr. Sundborg asked for a suspension of the rules and unanimous consent was granted that the report, including the amendments, was adopted. The report was accepted and the amendments adopted.

HELLENTHAL: That may be very proper.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, now is the time, though, when we may come in with substantive amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, and Mr. Hellenthal, if he desires to offer a specific amendment, could ask first for the suspension of the rules and then offer his amendment.

HELLENTHAL: I could ask for the deletion of that. That is why is it proper to ask a question as to why it was included now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, that would be proper if there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Well, that was my question. Is there anyone who would care to answer that?

SUNDBORG: I think Mr. McLaughlin would be best able to answer that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: It is true, as Mr. Hellenthal states and as I have stated, that was added on by the Committee, that is, making the effective date 30 days after the certification of the election returns by the secretary of state. What we were trying to do was make the duties in an important thing like a constitutional amendment, which would presumably rarely occur, particularly in view of the fact that it requires a two-thirds vote of each house and ratification, we felt that the duty should be imposed on someone to make the certification, and it wasn't legislation in a sense, because it was something that was sufficiently important that the duties of the specific individual be referred to in the constitution, making one man, in substance, responsible mechanically or ministerially on amendments and revisions and calls of the conventions. Whether or not it is legislation is a matter, of course, for the Convention, but, as I say, that was the reason for its insertion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If I may add to that, I believe there was one other consideration by the Committee and that was that it desired to make this as nearly as possible self-executing so that the legislature, if there were a gap in it. could not prevent the working of this process of getting a constitutional convention if the legislature didn't want one, which probably the legislature would not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions or proposed amendments for Section 1? Section 2? Are there amendments to be proposed for Section 3? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I move a three-minute recess, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess. Perhaps we should take our -- for three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Fischer, did you have a question? Are there proposed amendments for Section 3? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I know that there will be an amendment, and during the recess, I have had an opportunity to confer with Mr. Collins, the Chairman of the Committee on Direct Legislation, Amendments, and Revision, and he suggested that the Style and Drafting Committee take a hand in the matter of preparing an amendment which would fill the hole which most of us feel exists, and which Mr. McLaughlin was trying to fill by proposing an amendment. But I think that probably should be done after a little study and off the floor. I don't like to ask that this be returned to the Style and Drafting Committee now, because there may be other questions relative to it, and we would like to have the benefit of discussion on other questions so, if there are to be other changes, we can do it all in one session and not have to keep coming back to the floor with it; but, at such time as there are no more questions, I will ask to have it recommitted to the Style and Drafting Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions or proposed amendments for Section 3? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I see we are asking for questions now; we started on the amending process.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right; we are on the amending process, but, if there are questions that might clear up a possible amendment, it would be in order. Are there amendments for Section 4? Are there other amendments to be proposed for Article XIII? Does any delegate have another amendment to propose for Section 13? If not -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Article XIII on amendment and revision be recommitted to the Committee on Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that Article XIII, Amendment and Revision, be recommitted to the Committee on Style and Drafting.

KILCHER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

SUNDBORG: I so move, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg so moves. Is there a second?

BOSWELL: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Boswell.

KILCHER: Is a unanimous consent request debatable? There is no change of the rules is it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is a motion to commit it. In this position, it just came from the Committee on Style and Drafting, therefore, it would take only a majority vote to send it back to the committee it actually came from. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to know the specific purpose. As far as I can see here, it has been accepted and it is perfect. I would like to know what the reason is to go back to Style and Drafting. Is Style and Drafting dissatisfied with it, Mr. Sundborg?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin could you answer that?

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I believe that I had pointed out here when the question was raised by Mr. Sundborg that there is a patent ambiguity in this, and I know that there would be in all probability some amendments offered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, isn't it the intention, Mr. McLaughlin and Mr. Sundborg, that if you get it off the floor -- Mr. Kilcher, the Committee, and other delegates who might be interested in this question could work this problem over and come to the solution and find out what the general intention was.

KILCHER: I was also worried about the propriety of committing it back to the Committee on Style and Drafting. There seems to be a substantial conflict and not a conflict of phraseology, so it would be just as proper to send it back to the original committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, as I attempted to explain when I made the motion, I have checked with the substantive committee. They say they prefer that the Committee on Style and Drafting work on it. We would again bring it to the floor and, if delegates don't like what we report, they would then have the opportunity to reject our proposed language. If it is language of substance, we would have to have the rules suspended even to propose the change in language, so I don't think Mr. Kilcher has anything to be afraid of.

KILCHER: I was never afraid, Mr. Sundborg, just a little worried once in a while. (Laughter)

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I see it is the hour of 3:30 and near our afternoon recess, and I was going to suggest that, when we do recess, I will announce a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee at the rear of the gallery, and the members of the Committee on Direct Legislation, Amendment, and Revision, and any other delegates who are interested in this question that was raised are invited to meet with us to go into this specific matter if the article is recommitted to our committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves, seconded by Mr. Boswell, that Article XIII be referred back to the Style and Drafting Committee for the purposes as stated by Mr. Sundborg. The question is, "Shall the article be committed to the Style and Drafting Committee?" All those in favor signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the article has been committed to the Style and Drafting Committee. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I announce a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee for the rear of the gallery. Subject to other committee announcements, I move and ask unanimous consent that we stand at recess for 15 minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting Committee will meet for the purpose outlined at the rear of the gallery immediately upon recess. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration will meet in the large committee room upstairs on recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Administration upstairs immediately upon recess. Are there other committee announcements? If not, the Convention will stand at recess until 3:55.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg, what is your pleasure?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Committee on Style and Drafting, having considered the article on revision and amendment, Article XIII, during the recess, reports it unchanged back to the Convention. We understand that at least one delegate will have an amendment to propose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, the Chief Clerk has on her desk a proposed amendment. At this time I would like to request unanimous consent for suspension of the rules to offer, as an individual, an amendment to take care of the situation that has been explained in connection with this Article XIII. The proposed amendment is as follows: In Article XIII, Section 3, page 2, line 3, after the word "constitution", insert the following sentence: "If a majority of the votes cast on the question are in the negative, the question need not again be placed on the ballot until the end of the next ten-year period." I ask unanimous consent for suspension of the rules to propose that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, would that come after the word "convention"?

DAVIS: It would come after the word "convention". It would be just inserting another sentence in that place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that this specific amendment might be offered. Is there objection?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I so move.

V. RIVERS: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Victor Rivers that the rules be suspended. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Could I ask for a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Davis has offered a motion to suspend the rules in order that he might submit a specific amendment. The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment that would be offered if the rules are suspended.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, page 2, line 3, after the word 'convention', insert the following sentence: 'If a majority of the votes cast on the question are negative, the question need not again be placed on the ballot until the end of the next ten-year period.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 48 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Emberg, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McNees.

Absent: 2 - Doogan, Marston.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order while the Chief Clerk tallies the ballot.

CHIEF CLERK: 48 yeas, 5 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the rules have been suspended. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, at this time I now offer the amendment which has been placed on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 2, line 3, after the word 'convention', insert the following sentence: 'If a majority of the votes cast on the question are in the negative, the question need not again be placed on the ballot until the end of the next ten-year period. "

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I do move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, the matter was brought before the Convention here of a possible situation arising under the Article XIII which some of the delegates feel was not intended. In fairness, I should state that some of the delegates feel that it was intended exactly as written. Under the section as written if the matter were placed on the ballot at the end of a ten-year period, and if the people voted "no" on that question, then so far as I can see it, the matter would continue to be placed on the ballot at each election thereafter until such time as the people voted "yes". Now, as I said a minute ago, some people say that that is what is intended. Others say it is not what was intended. The amendment is offered to fill that gap, if in fact it is a gap. The Style and Drafting Committee as such has passed on the proposed amendment and approves the language if the Convention wishes to adopt the language. Style and Drafting has taken no position at all on whether or not the amendment is desirable, as such, it's a matter for the Convention to decide what they want.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, as a member of the Committee from which this proposal originated, in my own mind I have no doubt but what it was the committee intent that the proposition of holding a constitutional convention should go on the ballot only at ten-year intervals, as will be done if this amendment is adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would support the amendment if the word "ten" were changed to "six". First I will tell you why. First, I don't believe in too many constitutional conventions for the purpose of amending the constitution, but if a voter, when he goes to the polls after the ten-year period is faced with this: "If I don't vote for it now I am going to have to wait ten years before I get another crack at it", he is going to vote for the convention right now. It will tend to cause these conventions being held, which I don't think some of the supporters of this desire to do, so, if you make it "six", there will be less tendency of them being held.

SUNDBORG: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

SUNDBORG: That isn't the question before us. If Mr. Hellenenthal wants to change it to "six" he can offer an amendment to that effect.

HELLENTHAL: I think it was a very great bearing on an analysis of the effect of this amendment --

SUNDBORG: I would like a ruling on my point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, in speaking to the amendment if Mr. Hellenenthal wishes to state why he is not going to vote for this, and upon which terms he might vote for it, he isn't offering the amendment, but he is explaining his position. The Chair would not hold that he is out of order. It seems that he is getting around to explaining his stand on this particular amendment. Mr. Barr.

BARR: May I address a question to Mr. Davis through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Section 2 says the legislature may provide for a constitutional convention and I assume that means anytime. Section 3 says it will be placed on the ballot every ten years automatically. Now, with your amendment, it need not be placed there the following election and the one following that, automatically, but that doesn't prevent the legislature from providing a referendum does it, at any time?

DAVIS: No, it does not. It does not prevent the legislature from providing for a constitutional convention, nor does it prevent the legislature from initiating an amendment itself under the other section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I have a question to ask Mr. Davis, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: In Section 2, it says the legislature may provide for a constitutional convention. Does that legislature in this case also mean the law, including initiative? We have a general policy that was adopted a few days ago that the legislature would include initiative and also, I think Mr. Robertson yesterday in a discussion seemed to have been of the opinion that an initiative can call an amendment, when we discussed the capital question, so I wanted to have this understood.

DAVIS: If that was addressed to me I was reading a note here and didn't get the first part of it. However, in my opinion the mere use of the word "legislature" at this point under the policy statement we adopted a while ago does not limit it to the word "legislature". Now, it's my remembrance that the initiative article itself is not made applicable to the constitutional amendments, but I am not certain. I haven't checked it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: If I may, the initiative article is not applicable as far as amending the constitution by initiative, but it wouldn't prevent the initiative from operating to bring about a referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, does that answer your question?

KILCHER: I am not satisfied. I don't quite understand. I mean, my vote on Mr. Davis' amendment will hinge on this question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, could you answer?

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I am convinced that the word "legislature" in Section 2 means that the people can, by the initiative, pass an act calling a constitutional convention and making provision in it.

HINCKEL: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, Mr. Kilcher still has the floor.

KILCHER: No, it was only a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I was going to attempt to answer Mr. Kilcher's question. During the Committee meeting, it was discussed at considerable length, and it was the intent of the Committee that through the initiative they could initiate a call for the convention, but the people could not initiate an amendment to the constitution itself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Davis be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be offered to Section 3? Section 4? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there are no further amendments, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article XIII, Amendment and Revision, be advanced to third reading, that it be read by title only, and placed in final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended as to Article XIII, the article on amendment and revision, that the article be advanced to third reading, be read by title only, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and the rules have been suspended. Article XIII is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk may read the title of the article.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article XIII, Amendment and Revision."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article is open for debate. If there is no debate, the question is, "Shall Article XIII, the article on amendment and revision, be adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 53 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 0 -

Absent: 2 - Doogan, Marston.)

CHIEF CLERK: 53 yeas and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and Article XIII, the article on amendment and revision, has been adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may we revert to the order of introduction of committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will revert to the order of business, introduction of committee reports, at this time. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, your Committee on Style and Drafting reports with respect to the article on the executive, specifically on the three amendments, substantive amendments which were made on the floor yesterday. Our report is contained in a letter which is on the desks of each delegate, and I would like to ask that the Chief Clerk read it at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting with relation to the executive article.

(The Chief Clerk read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to proposed changes by that Committee on the executive article.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, what is your pleasure?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we have cleared our proposed language with the Chairman of the Committee on the Executive, Mr. Victor Rivers, and we understand that our language expresses the substance which was desired by his Committee when it brought in the amendments. I call your attention -- on the fifth line from the bottom of the first page, there is a typographical error where it says "officer", it should say "office"; the fifth line from the bottom on page 1 beginning with "unable to succeed". The next word should be "office" instead of "officer". This is in the report of our Committee, Mr. Gray, which was just read. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on the three amendments to the article on the executive be accepted, and that the amendments therein be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting be accepted, and that the amendments therein be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I'll object for just a moment. I would like to ask Mr. Sundborg as Chairman of the Committee on Style and Drafting --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your question, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: Is the typographical error you mentioned in the fifth line from the bottom, it says "succeed to the officer" and that should be "office"?

SUNDBORG: Yes, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Well, should there not be an "of" so it says succeed to the office of or act as governor"?

SUNDBORG: Not in our belief, Mr. Taylor. As it is now, "Provision shall be made by law for succession to the office of governor and for an acting governor in the event that the secretary of state is unable to succeed to the office or act as governor." It isn't to succeed to the office of or act as governor. I believe it is two separate situations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the report has been accepted and the amendments adopted as a part of Article III, the article on the executive. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, while we are under this, the amendments as provided, or revised by Style and Drafting, leads us to one other slight change in Section 14. When we set up the article on the executive, we provided for succession from the governor to the secretary of state to the president of the senate to the speaker of the house. Now this body in their wisdom struck the president of the senate and speaker of the house, but under Section 14, we took some of the duties of the secretary or other officer when he succeeds to the office of governor and set them up. It was the opinion of some of the members of the executive and of Style and Drafting that we should strike the words on line 19, Section 14, strike the words "or other officer". Now that will mean that all of the provisions of succession including title, emoluments, and everything else will lie with the legislature and will not be partly in this article and partly in the hands of the legislature. So I will ask unanimous consent for suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for suspension of the rules in order that this amendment might be proposed? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I ask a question, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer, you may ask your question.

V. FISCHER: Is it necessary to delete this language, since whatever officer succeeds would succeed to all those items mentioned?

V. RIVERS: I am following the suggestion to properly clear this matter with Style and Drafting on this only. Now some of the members of the Committee, a number of them, thought they should be deleted, and that would then leave all the power in the hands of the legislature to set up all the terms of succession. It would not appear to be an inconsistency. It was merely a nicety that I acceded to and I will now ask unanimous consent that the words on lines 19 and 20, "or other officer" be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for suspension of the rules? Hearing none, the rules have been suspended. Now do you offer your amendment, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: Didn't I just offer it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, when Mr. Fischer arose, the record would show --

V. RIVERS: All right, I will now ask unanimous consent -- or I will now move that the words "or other officer" on lines 19 and 20, Section 14 -- the words after "state" -- "or other officer" be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves for the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

COOPER: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper seconds the motion.

V. RIVERS: I'll ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I now move that the rules be suspended, that Article III, the Executive, be advanced to third reading, be read by title only, and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended as to Article III, the article on the executive, that the article be advanced to third reading, be read the third time by title only, and placed on final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the rules have been suspended and the article is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will read the title of the article.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article III, The Executive."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article is open for debate. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would just like to rise and say I think the Committee on the Executive Branch did a wonderful job in preparing this article and that we will probably view this article when we become a state as the best basis for the organization of the executive of any state in the Union.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion or debate? If not, the question is, "Shall Article III, the article on the executive, be adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 53 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 0 -

Absent: 2 - Doogan, Marston.)

CHIEF CLERK: 53 yeas and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it, and the article on the executive has been adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to report on behalf of our Committee that we foresee that there will be 15 articles in Alaska's state constitution and we have now passed through third reading nine of them. The total number of pages in the nine articles passed is 39 out of a probable total of about 80 in the entire constitution, so we are just at the halfway mark as far as the number of pages is concerned, but we are well past the halfway mark as far as the number of articles is concerned.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, with that in mind, I would like to place before the Convention if I may at this time, the proposition of whether we are going to work tomorrow -- the plenary session in the afternoon or at any time in the evening. The food service would like to know.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, will the ordinance on the Tennessee Plan be in shape so we can handle that tomorrow afternoon, or begin its discussion tomorrow afternoon?

MCNEALY: It will be, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then, subject to the wishes of the body, the Chair would just venture the suggestion that it would be proper that we work tomorrow afternoon, beginning at sometime in the afternoon, and that there will be an ordinance before us that would take probably the whole afternoon and perhaps part of the evening. Mr. McNees.

3445

MCNEES: In line with that, I move that we do convene the assembly here tomorrow afternoon at 1:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees asks unanimous consent that it be the policy of the Convention -- will there be a bus at that time, on Sunday, do you know, Mr. McNees, or could a special bus be provided?

COGHILL: A special bus could be arranged.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would also like to also inquire, is 1:00 o'clock too early in line with some of the church services in town, if 2:00 o'clock might not be a better time? Would that be a time when all of the services will be completed? Reverend Armstrong, do you know?

ARMSTRONG: That would be satisfactory, I am sure, to anyone who had their dinner after church.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would that be satisfactory then, Mr. McNees, that it be the policy of the Convention --

MCNEES: I have no objection. I have a bus schedule here and it shows a bus at 12:30 and the next one at 3:45, leaving town for the University.

ARMSTRONG: I thought we were speaking about 2:00.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is what I was speaking of, Mr. Armstrong, that we might probably interfere in some manner with the church services if we convened at 1:00. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: If it is the pleasure of the Convention, then, we will obtain the special bus to leave the Nordale Hotel at say 1:30?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would that be satisfactory with you, then, Mr. McNees, if we set the time and policy for convening tomorrow at 2:00 p.m., and the Administration Committee will take care of having a bus at the hotel at 1:30 p.m.?

MCNEES: Yes, it will.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I have one other item of importance. Would it be in order to present that at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: On the wishes of the delegates as to invitations, now, if any of the delegates wish to have any extra invitations other than the 25 that were placed on their desks, if they will leave their name and the amount they will want this evening in the message center room, we will have them Monday afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That same thing will go for the employees of the Convention if they so desire to have a few more invitations.

COGHILL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the message that is before us?

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Moberg has sent a message that the following have not turned in their biographical data: Awes, Barr, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Egan, Emberg, Mrs. Fischer, Victor Fischer, Hermann, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McNeas, McLaughlin, Nolan, Peratrovich, Reader, Ralph Rivers, Victor Rivers, Stewart, Smith, Walsh, White, VanderLeest.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to implore all the delegates who have not turned in their data to do so. (Laughter) Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to have a little more information about this questionnaire that we received. Has it any official status, who is buying it, etc.? When I answer a lot of personal questions, I would like to know where it is going.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will probably -- that biography will go into the archives with relation to the history of this Convention, Mr. Barr. That is the understanding of the President. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Dr. Moberg is the head of the History Department of the University, I believe. It is entirely for the University records.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I don't think I even have it anymore. Is there any place where we can get duplicates?

CHIEF CLERK: I have some.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Those delegates who have not complied with that will --

SUNDBORG: I wonder whether anything has been done about the request of the Nenana school that biographies of the delegates be supplied to them for their use in their school publication?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Yes. That was turned over to the Secretary and he is having one of the boiler room girls take care of that, and probably in the next day or two you will have a questionnaire on your desks.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We now have before us then, Article VI, the article on legislative apportionment -- the report of the Style and drafting Committee on that article. The Chief Clerk may read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

(The Chief Clerk read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on Article VI.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, does your Committee have a report to make at this time?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee redraft of the article on legislative apportionment was prepared initially by a subcommittee consisting of Mr. Davis, Mr. Fischer, and myself. It has been reviewed by the full Apportionment Committee, we are told, and it meets with their approval. They don't feel that we have changed any matter of substance in it, and I would like to ask Mr. Davis to explain such changes as have been made in phraseology and to answer any questions by delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, before proceeding, I would like to call attention of the delegates to page 4 of the Style and Drafting Committee report, line 21, in the middle of that line, it says -- well, in that line it says, "Article XV; A, B, C, D," etc. The "C" which is in there is a typographical error and should be deleted. At this time I would ask unanimous consent that that "C" may be deleted from the report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the deletion. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the deletion is so ordered. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Now, Mr. President, in reviewing this article as against the enrolled copy, some things are apparent to begin with. In the first place, Section 4 of the enrolled copy is matter that was already previously covered in the legislative article, and, accordingly, we have left that section completely out of the redraft. In the second place, the report in the enrolled copy contains certain transitory provisions, one on the senate and one on the house, and we have left them out of the order in which they appear in the enrolled copy, and have placed them in transitory provisions at the end of the redrafted article. The same thing is true of certain language which appeared in Section 1 and Section 2 of the original enrolled copy. There were certain things there of a purely transitory nature and we have taken them from the body of the Style and Drafting report and have moved them into a transitory article, which we have at the end in order that they may be placed in the schedule, and, incidentally, we have talked in here through this article quite a bit about Section 1 and Section 2 of Article XV. Article XV is the schedule. Now, it may be that at a later date, that it will be given another number, but at any rate it is given a special place as an article in the constitution, and, when we make reference to those sections, that is what we mean. You will also note that we have changed the order of some of the sections, so that they don't come in the same order that they did in the enrolled copy. That change was made for the purpose of trying to work out a logical sequence. Section 1 as we have redrafted has to do with the house of representatives. Now, lest there be some question as to whether the house of representatives or the senate is the higher body, and as to which one may properly have come first, I would like to explain that we have placed the house first because it has to do with -- I notice that a change was not made, and I will stop at this point. In Section 1, line 6, on page 1, it says, "Section 2 of Article XV"; that likewise is a typographical error. That should be Section 1. And in Section 2, line 9, it says, "Section 1"; that should be "Section 2", and I would like at this time to ask unanimous consent to correct those numbers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis requests unanimous consent that those number changes be made. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the changes are ordered.

DAVIS: Now, as I started to say a while ago, we placed the house first because the reference to the house is in Section 1 of the schedule, where the reference to the senate is in Section 2 of the schedule. We are not attempting to say that the house is first or the senate is first or the other way around. I might say that we met with the full substantive committee on two occasions, and we have met with the Chairman of the Committee and some other members of the Committee on several occasions, and I am satisfied that the redraft as we have written it meets with the approval of the Committee. At the request of the Committee, we have made certain changes in our draft. We have also made one change which might possibly be considered as a substantive change, and we have made that change at the request of the Committee because it apparently was their intent, and we have made that change to carry out their intent in connection with this article. That particular change had to do with the language found in lines 16 and 17 on page 3, which reads: "Deliberations and decisions of the board shall be free from political considerations." Now, you will find in the original enrolled copy that the apportionment board was supposed to be set up as a nonpartisan board. Style and Drafting in their draft of this article changed the nonpartisan, as you will find it in Section 8, the next to last sentence of Section 8, "Appointments shall be made without regard to political affiliation." And we made that change to conform to the same change that had been made in connection with the judicial article so that it all would be the same sort of language. When we brought that change to the attention of the Committee on Apportionment, we were advised that that change by itself did not cover their intent. They intended that the board should actually in all respects act as a nonpolitical body, and accordingly asked us to add another sentence which would make it clear that the board was to act without regard to partisan politics. Following that, then, we prepared the last two lines I mentioned in Section 9 and submitted them to the Chairman of the Committee and they have likewise been approved. Now I will attempt to answer any questions that may be asked concerning the redraft of this article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions to be directed to Mr. Davis. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I have a question on Section 5, but I will take it in order if you're going to do it that way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 1?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: May we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a minute or two.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there questions relating to Sections 1 or 2? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Before going ahead it has been called to my attention another error that we might as well correct now; also, on line 21 of page 4, we have a capital "AND" -- upper case "AND". I would like to change that to lower case.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent that that change be adopted.

DAVIS: In this line. I would like to let it be known that I am not criticizing the boiler room. After all, those girls worked until well after midnight last night getting this out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the capitalized "AND" on line 21, page 4, next to last word -- if there is no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Section 5. I would like to ask Mr. Davis if, in his opinion, the last three words of the Section 5 on line 11 where it says, "in this article", mean the same as in the enrolled copy on page 8 where it says, "as provided above"? I will wait a minute while you take a look at it.

DAVIS: I won't take time to look at it, Mr. Hinckel. We have used "in this article" in all cases to refer to something else in the particular article in the constitution, so I would say it does mean the same as "as provided above".

HINCKEL: Well, may I make a short statement regarding this, Mr. President?

DAVIS: Mr. Fischer apparently has some different idea.

FISCHER: May I make a suggestion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, if it is in answer to Mr. Hinckel's question.

V. FISCHER: Yes. In this case it previously said "as provided above". Now this says, "The reapportionment of the new districts shall be determined as provided in this article." The only place where it discusses the apportionment for any district is in Section 4. Actually, you could almost put in "as provided in Section 4", because the subsequent section refers to the redistricting when a new district is created. Here one is created automatically, practically automatically, under this provision of the constitution. So, actually, Section 4 would apply in this case.

HINCKEL: I still would like to state my reasons for asking this question. It's my opinion that when the Committee was discussing this, in referring back to "as provided above", they were referring to the reapportionment as it's described in Section 4, but the words on line 10 where it says, "the new district", is confusing to me in that the only place where any reference is made to a new district is beyond that in Section 6; and then again in Section 6 -- of course, they are talking about new districts which might be created and where they will use the vote quotient in the allocation of the representation, and to me it appears that it would be practically certain that the new district, as they call it, formed by the combining of two districts would cause some confusion. If both of those new districts, say, for instance, Valdez and Cordova districts, had fallen below the half-quotient in this next reapportionment, and then they were combined, it would be very possible that they would not have a new district, have a full quotient and would therefore lose their representative again and have to be recombined again with something else in order to have representation, and I don't think that was the intent of the Committee nor the intent of the Convention, and so, unless I can get an interpretation from the Committee that I am wrong and that that is not the intent of the Committee or that that is not the way the Style and Drafting Committee read it, I would like to have it amended. Of course, I would offer the amendment later but the reason for asking the question was to try and clear this up in my mind at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, will you answer the question?

DAVIS: Well, only to this extent, Mr. Hinckel. For the benefit of the Convention, we might say that Mr. Hinckel met with us in connection with this section, and he believed if I misquote you, Mr. Hinckel, say so -- he believed that the enrolled copy as it came out did not express the intention of the Committee or of the Convention. I am quoting you correctly on that, Mr. Hinckel?

HINCKEL: Yes, that is approximately correct.

DAVIS: He felt that there had been a change in the thinking of the Committee between the time that they were deliberating on this and final passage and that it was not properly brought out so that the Convention adopted one thing possibly meaning another. Following, I might mention that we had redrafted this particular section with possibly to be more clear on what we thought the Convention meant in adopting this article, but, in meeting with the Committee, the Substantive Committee, on this, we were advised that they had not intended this article to read as we had drafted it and, after consultation with them, we changed it back to the way it was previously. Now the particular places involved are: in line 8 of Section 5 on page 2, it is provided that when a district falls below the one-half quotient that it shall be attached to another district; and then the sentence -- think Mr. Hinckel mentioned it -- farther down we talk about a new district. I'll see if I can find it. Yes, in line 14, Section 6, it talks about "each new district so created". But after our consultations with the Committee, they convinced us that the change we had made was actually a change of substance which was not what they, at least, meant and which they thought the Convention did not mean, and, accordingly, in the Style and Drafting we changed it back to the words that they had used in these two particulars. So, so far as we are concerned, we are reporting the language, we feel, as it came out in the enrolled copy. Now I believe that Mr. Hinckel's question is a matter of substance that is going to have to be resolved by the Convention itself and not by this Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I had other questions at the time I talked to you. At the time I talked to the Committee, I had other questions, too. But this particular question is one I think, while it is of substance, it is a rearrangement of words which has caused the change in substance. I felt that it was not intentional, if I read it correctly, that, where they refer to what is said in it "as provided above", and at where they say "as provided above", they refer back to a certain way of making apportionment. I just wanted to be sure that it was supposed to still read the same way. It says here, "as provided in this article". Well, the article is the whole article, and so, when you say "a new district" and there is no mention of new districts until after you pass that and go into Section 6 where new districts -- the description of new districts, and their creation, and their apportionment is discussed and an entirely different basis, so now, to be blunt about it, do you interpret the thing now that, if two district were combined that they would have to have the full quotient? Is that your interpretation?

DAVIS: Well, I am afraid you are way beyond me here. It was my belief and still is my belief that the Convention intended that, when one district fell below its quotient -- its one-half quotient in this case -- that it lost its identify as an election district, not as part of a senate district but as an election district, and was combined with another district, and that whole thing became a new district which later could be recreated or not depending on what factors were involved on a reapportionment; but, apparently, that is not the intent of the Committee and not the understanding of the Committee as to what the floor did. So, to try to answer Mr. Hinckel's question, it was our belief that the language we have used here has not changed the language at all as it came off the floor. Now, maybe we are wrong, but that is what we thought we were doing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: If I may add a little bit more in reply to Mr. Hinckel's question, the new district created under Section 5, according to our understanding, would be subject to reapportionment as any district would under Section 4, and, if the two districts that had been combined into this new one had a major fraction of a quotient, then it would obtain a representative.

HINCKEL: That was the way I thought it was intended to be. I just wanted to make sure the wording did not destroy that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: That is correct. I believe that what would answer Mr. Hinckel is, in line 14 where it says "each new district", if you said "such new district", would that clarify your point?

HINCKEL: That might do it.

GRAY: In other words, the new district as in Section 6?

HINCKEL: Can we have a more or less informal discussion in front of the group here?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: This entire substantive (question) can be resolved in line 11 so that it will have the intent of the Committee and of the body. After the word "in", it would read "as provided in Section 4 of this article". That would answer all the problems that are on the floor at this time and that would be in keeping with the enrolled copy which says "as provided above".

DAVIS: Mr. President, we can very easily do that, except that I would like to point out that we have avoided using that kind of language wherever possible in the constitution for the reason that, if one section should be repealed, then you have to go through the constitution to find other references to that section that need changing, where if we don't refer from one section to another in the constitution, that problem doesn't arise. That suggestion, incidentally, was made to me a minute ago, that I might make that motion, and I didn't for the reason that it may very well upset the plan in that respect. Now, I will admit in a minute that we have done just that in connection with the schedule provision. However, the schedule is something a little different than something in the body of the constitution.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, did you have other questions?

HINCKEL: I'll defer to Mr. Hellenthal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I am firmly convinced that absolutely no change or no harm results from the use of the words in this article. I can't see Mr. Hinckel's point at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I don't want to disagree with Mr. Hellenthal but I still feel that there is a difference there. I have another suggestion: that the word "new" -- I made a similar suggestion once before and I hate to make the same thing again but I made the suggestion that the word "new" be changed to "combined" and get away from that "new district" which is referred to later on down the line, but, anyway, it accomplishes the purpose --

PRESIDENT EGAN: It may be best when we get to the substantive amendment state that --

DAVIS: Well, that was going to be my suggestion, Mr. President, because it is obvious that there is a certain amount of disagreement here as to just what is meant. Now, I think that the language we have used carries out the intent of the enrolled copy. I think we have carried that forward, but it may or may not carry out the intent of various delegates, so I think the thing to do, if everybody else agrees, is to pass on it as a matter of Style and take care of it as a substantive amendment if something needs to be changed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, did you have a question?

COGHILL: I believe that the Committee thinking is along the lines of what Mr. Hinckel has there that I believe that it is a change just in style as far as the Style and Drafting Committee and that they have overlooked the point that, in our enrolled copy, it says "as provided above", which goes back to the major fraction of the quotient. It might be, for example, that the population increased to the point where the major quotient was 6,000 and, under our apportionment as of now, two districts wouldn't have the major fraction but together they would have the major fraction; well, they should be allowed to have one representative by being combined, and I believe that it is the feeling of the Committee that that should be done, so, if they put in "as in Section 4", or, as Mr. Hinckel recommended, "combined district", why, it would solve the problem.

V. FISCHER: May we have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, in an effort to get this thing going and get this article taken care of, I would move at this time and ask unanimous consent that in line 11, on page 2, at the end of Section 5, after "in", we insert the words "Section 4 of", so it would read "as provided in Section 4 of this article".

PRESIDENT EGAN: That, in your opinion, Mr. Davis, would not be a substantive amendment? It would just clarify what is meant by that language?

DAVIS: I would say that is the case.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be the feeling of the Chair, also. In the opinion of the Chair, it is not a substantive amendment. Mr. Davis moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I will try to field any other questions that may be asked.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other questions relating to Sections 4 or 5? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I have been wondering if there shouldn't be a differentiation made between the new district defined in line 10 and the new district defined in line 14? I don't feel that I agree with Mr. Hinckel that the word "combined" should be in place of "new"; it's the same meaning, it's just one of clarification.

DAVIS: I don't think there is any question but that this is a change in substance. Mr. President. If the Convention wants to do that, that's fine, but I don't think that that could possibly be considered a change in styling.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would come at the time, Mr. Londborg, when we consider substantive amendments. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to ask a question; page 3, line 16, on the sentence starting with "Deliberation and decision of the board shall be free from political considerations". Wasn't the intent there, actually, that the board should be free from partisanship -- partisan politics, in other words? What was the intent?

DAVIS: I feel quite sure that that was the intent, free from partisan politics, because we used that language to substitute for a previous word "shall be a nonpartisan board".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to -- Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. Davis, I notice in the enrolled section here, in the first line of Section 5, it says "nonpartisan board", and on lines 9 and 10 in Section 8 it says, "Appointments shall be made without regard to political affiliation". Is that Style and Drafting's opinion that "without regard to political affiliation" establishes the same principles as "nonpartisan board"?

DAVIS: That was our belief and for that reason we stopped at that point to begin with, then, as I pointed out, a while ago, the Committee advised us they had intended the language to go farther than that, that the board was to be nonpartisan in all respects, not only in its appointment but in its deliberations and otherwise; and for that reason, we made what we considered a change in substance to that extent, the extent of the language at the end of line 9.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Sections 5, 6, or 7? Are there questions relating to Section 8 or 9? Section 10? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I might make one comment here so that there will not be any misunderstanding. In section 8, in line 7, page 3, we have provided at least one member shall be appointed from each of these various districts. Now, as you will notice by reading the enrolled copy, it says, "one member shall be appointed from each of these districts", and, obviously, since there are five members and four districts, somebody would have had no place to go and we, then, in attempting to meet what was the obvious intent, made it "at least one".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to be asked with relation to Sections 8 or 9? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would like to point out that the words "at least one" are an exact quotation from the enrolled copy.

DAVIS: If so -- yes -- apparently one of our drafts is rather than the enrolled copy. At any rate, we have made it "at least one".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 10? Section 11? Section 12? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I might mention that, if there are questions as to Section 12, that Mr. Fischer is much more familiar with that than I am and he can answer the questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 12? If not, are there questions relating to Section 13? Section 14? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I move that the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second?

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Kilcher. The question is -- are there committee announcements, in case the Convention recesses? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Style and Drafting Committee will meet immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting Committee will meet immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I ask a question of the Chairman of Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: How much more time would you be needing for your Style and Drafting Committee? If we are going to work tomorrow afternoon, wouldn't it be advisable not to work tonight in plenary session?

SUNDBORG: As far as our Committee is concerned, we have now reported to the floor every article which has been referred to us except the article on resources, the article on local government, and part of an article which came to us today on the subject of general and miscellaneous provisions. We will need some time over the weekend and I know we will be working tonight whenever the Convention adjourns, whether it be at this time or whether it be at 9:30, and we will also, in all likelihood, be working tomorrow morning, and we can use any of the time that the Convention could allow us. We will have nothing else to come on the floor until Monday at the earliest, and it may be that we will not have anything until Monday afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, it is the feeling of the Chair --

if it is the feeling of the body -- we have hanging from previous actions the question relating to the capital and the question relating to the fish traps. Now, it would be the opinion of the Chair that, if we could get that out of the way this evening, we would have accomplished something that would really clear our calendar and it is something that we are going to have to clear anyway, and it has been two days since that particular Proposal 17/a was held up, and it would seem that we might get on that and see what the outcome of it is.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, please don't interpret anything I have said as pleading for more time for our Committee. I feel that things are very well in hand by our Committee, and I am much more concerned about the slowness of work here on the floor than I am about the shape of things in our Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair thought that perhaps there might be some feeling as to what we might take up tonight. If it would be the feeling of the delegates, the Chair would feel that it would be a proper time and it might not go until 9:30 if we did come back, but we would have that on the way to Engrossment and Enrollment in one form or another. Are there other committee announcements? The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m.?" All those in favor of recessing until 7:00 p.m. will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" seem to have it, and the Convention stands at recess until 7:00 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Will the Sergeant at Arms see if there are any delegates upstairs? The Convention will come to order. The Convention is at ease until the absent delegates present themselves. The Convention will come to order. We have before us Article No. VI, report of the Style and Drafting Committee. Are there questions with relation to Section 8 or Section 9 to the work that has been done by the Style and Drafting Committee? Are there any questions with relation to the work that has been accomplished by the Style and Drafting Committee to any of the sections including Sections 8 or 9? To Section 10? Are there questions to be directed to the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to Section 11? To Section 12? To Section 13? Or to Section 14? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have a question on Section 5. There seems to be a word, part of a word left out of Section 5 that was in the enrolled copy. "Should the total civilian population within any election district fall below one-half of the quotient, the district shall be attached to an election district within its senate subdistrict". Now the word "subdistrict" appears in the enrolled copy but not in the Style and Drafting. I wonder if I might ask Mr. Davis the reason for that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, can you answer that question?

DAVIS: I will answer it to the best of my ability. As a matter of fact, in the whole article as it stands, there isn't any such thing as a "subdistrict". Every district is a senate district; that is, every one of these "A, B, C's" that we adopted this morning, the "regions" as we have called them, are only senate districts themselves, except that you elect senators from at large from those districts. That is the reason the so-called subdistrict was left out because it didn't mean anything. Does that answer it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: In answer to Mr. Davis's question to me, to actually answer him, Mr. President, I will have to take the floor on a matter of personal privilege for about one minute.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Cooper you may have the floor on personal privilege.

(Mr. Cooper spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there any other delegates in the building?

V. RIVERS: Delegates McNealy and Ralph Rivers are in the building and somewhere nearby. I think they are upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Sergeant at Arms just went upstairs. Had we completed asking questions with relation to the Style and Drafting Committee? Or, Mr. Davis, you had brought up a question with relation to the deletion of the sub senate districts, or Mr. Cooper had brought that up.

DAVIS: Mr. President, as a result of the conference that has been held by a large portion of the Convention, if not all of it, on behalf of Style and Drafting, I would like to offer a change on page 2, Section 6, line 14. I would like to delete the word "section", and insert in place thereof the word "article". I ask unanimous consent for that change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent that that change be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

DAVIS: Following that then, Mr. President, I have another proposed amendment which may or may not be a question of substance, depending on what was meant by the enrolled copy. In Section 7, lines 23 and 24, page 2, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that we strike the words "Southeastern, Southcentral, Central and Northwestern". If we strike those words the section would read, "Section 7. The senate districts, described in Section 2 of Article XV, may be modified to reflect changes in election districts. A district, although modified, shall retain its total number of senators and its approximate perimeter." I offer that amendment and, incidentally, this is not now a Style and Drafting amendment. This is a result of the conference held in the back of the room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, it is the opinion of the Chair that that is a phraseology amendment for the reason that previously in line 9 of Section 5, the word "sub" had been there, and the --

DAVIS: I understand that is the Chair's interpretation?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The interpretation of Section 7, then, meant that the "district" meant the "subsenate districts". Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, on a point of order. I don't want to disagree with the Chair, but I think if you look back to the original language from which Section 7 was derived, which is on page 2 of the enrolled copy, line 20 --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Page 2 of the enrolled copy, line 20?

V. FISCHER: Proposal 14, page 2 of the enrolled copy, Mr. President, it seems to me that that definitely was meant to apply to the four regional senate districts. While I do not object to the change that Mr. Davis proposed, I definitely feel it is a substantive change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was the opinion of the Chair that Mr. Cooper quoted from the enrolled copy where it said "subdistricts".

DAVIS: I don't think there is any use of getting into a hassle as to whether it is substantive or whether it isn't, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, the Chair thought that it was -- that it mentioned "subdistrict" all down through that section.

V. FISCHER: No, this specifically referred to districts where senators at large were elected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I think it would not be a substantive change. It would be merely a change in phraseology because if you say "Southeastern, Southcentral, Central and Northwestern senate districts" you have all the senate districts in the state. If you say "the senate district" described in Section 2, that includes all the senate district in the Southeastern, Southcentral -- so it is just the same thing; it means absolutely the same, identical thing.

DAVIS: In any case, whatever it may be, I ask for unanimous consent and if unanimous consent should be granted, it would make no difference whatsoever.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent.

V. RIVERS: I have to object for a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard --

V. RIVERS: As I visualized our original apportionment, we had four senate districts, approximately the present judicial divisions from which we would have a given number of senators, some of them at large, some of them from a subdistrict that would revolve around within that district in relation to population. Now, as I see this change, that condition would no longer exist. Is that correct?

DAVIS: There isn't any question that if this change is adopted that each senate district set up on the schedule, including what you have called "subdistricts" --

V. RIVERS: What we have called "subdistricts".

DAVIS: All right, what in the enrolled copy possibly was called "subdistricts", each of those districts will retain its senator from here on out until the constitution is amended. There is no question about that in my mind.

V. RIVERS: They won't revolve around on a population basis within the district, is that right?

DAVIS: My belief is that if this amendment is adopted that each of the districts named will retain the same number of senators as listed in the schedule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

V. RIVERS: I will object.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I would like to have Mr. Gray interpret the amendment here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I do so move.

3461

COOPER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Cooper that the amendment be adopted.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, is this a suspension of the rules, now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess while the Chair confers with the Rules Committee.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. After consultation with the Rules Committee, the Chair feels that, at this point in the proceedings, the proposed amendment will have to be viewed as a substantive change. Mr. Davis, you asked unanimous consent, did you not?

DAVIS: I asked unanimous consent and objection was heard, Mr. President. I so move.

STEWART: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis so moves, seconded by Mr. Stewart, that the rules be suspended. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended in order that this amendment might be offered?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

V. RIVERS: Is that suspension for that specific amendment only?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Rivers.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, before we start, I just want to point out that this is a departure from our usual procedure here. We usually go through, and as soon as there are no more amendments as to phraseology, the report of Style and Drafting Committee is accepted; then, if the Convention wants to get into substantive amendments -- I wonder, are we through with all the phraseology amendments?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: For that purpose and with the consent of my second, I will at this time withdraw the motion I made and let the motion be made concerning the Style and Drafting report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other phraseology amendments to be offered? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have a very harmless little amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you read it please, Mr. Barr.

BARR: On page 3, line 17, before the word "political" insert the word "partisan".

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your feeling, Mr. Barr? Do you feel that is a phraseology or substantive amendment?

BARR: I asked Mr. Davis during the questioning period what the intent was there, and he told me the intention was to keep the deliberations of this board from being partisan, politically partisan. I don't want to argue on it until I make the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, are you offering that proposed amendment?

BARR: I move that this amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there a second?

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher seconds it. Now, the Chair has to decide whether that is substantive -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may I say that in the enrolled copy it said it should be a nonpartisan board, and I do feel that it is not at all substantive matter to offer the word "partisan".

PRESIDENT EGAN: And that is the feeling of the Chair also, Mr. Sundborg, that it is just spelling out what the words "political considerations" mean.

BARR: My reason for offering this is I just believe that we should be technically correct here. It is a small thing really, but the way it reads now, "Deliberation and decision of the board shall be free from political considerations". "Politics" means a science of government. "Political" means pertaining to government. I looked it up in the dictionary, by the way. It also means pertaining to the administration of government. A government board could hardly be free from political consideration, but the intent here is it shall be free from partisan political consideration, so I think we should spell that out. That is why I offer this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I ask for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other phraseology amendments to be offered? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the report of Style and Drafting Committee as to Article VI, Legislative Apportionment, be accepted, and the amendments in the Committee draft be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to Article VI, the article on legislative apportionment, be accepted, and that the amendments contained therein be adopted. Is there objection?

TAYLOR: I will object for the time being. Does that mean that we are barred from offering amendments?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, Mr. Taylor, if at this time you offered an amendment of substantive nature, it would take a two-thirds majority. You may offer substantive amendments later if you can get a suspension of the rules, the same as you could right now.

TAYLOR: Could I get a ruling of the Chair as to whether or not something is substantive, that is, a motion to strike a matter that has no meaning whatsoever?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, if it is a part of the article, it probably would have some meaning or it would not be there, Mr. Taylor. (Laughter) The Convention will come to order.

TAYLOR: I might say I have an amendment to offer, and I don't want to lose my opportunity.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard to the motion to accept. Do you wish to read to the Chair what the proposed amendment would be at this time? Perhaps it might expedite things.

TAYLOR: I have written the motion and it is on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment that Mr. Taylor would offer which he wants a decision on as to whether it is a substantive or phraseology amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 9, lines 16 and 17, strike the last sentence of Section 9."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. Taylor -- the Convention will come to order. The Chair would have to rule that that would be a substantive amendment, all right. It means something. The Convention will come to order. Do you still object to Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent request?

TAYLOR: Yes, so I can offer this amendment.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, have you so ruled that this is a substantive amendment that Mr. Taylor has offered?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was the ruling of the Chair -- that it was a substantive amendment.

SUNDBORG: Therefore, it would take a suspension of the rules either before or after?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, either now, Mr. Taylor, or later. Do you still object to the unanimous consent request, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I have no objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, the motion of Mr. Sundborg is ordered adopted. Are there proposed amendments for Section 1? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, at this time, I again make the motion that I made a while ago to strike the words "Southeastern, Southcentral, Central, and Northwestern" in lines 23 and 24, on page 2, in Section 7 of the Style and Drafting report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move that the rules be suspended, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I do move that the rules be suspended for the purpose of making that motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves that the rules be suspended for the purpose of making the motion. Is there a second to the motion?

STEWART: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Stewart.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this be debatable at this time so we can find out what it is about before we have to vote on suspension of the rules.

HARRIS: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

SUNDBORG: I move that the rules be suspended and that --

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion for a suspension of the rules is already on the floor, Mr. Sundborg, and I don't see how we could have two motions to suspend the rules before us at the one time. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 51 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee. Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 0 -

Absent: 4 - Coghill, Collins, H. Fischer, Marston.)

CHIEF CLERK: 51 yeas and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the rules have been suspended. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I trust I am in order this time. I now move that in Section 7, lines 23 and 24, the words "Southeastern, Southcentral, Central and Northwestern" be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis so moves. Is there a second to the motion?

TAYLOR: I second the motion and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor seconds the motion and asks unanimous consent for adoption of the amendment.

V. RIVERS: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

V. RIVERS: I object to ask a question. If you strike those words, Mr. Davis, what becomes of the at-large senators from the overall area and district, the overall senate districts, I am not talking about the senate subdistricts?

DAVIS: Not a thing, Mr. Rivers. The only change would be, then, as the section is written, the at-large senators, the at-large districts are the only ones that have assured senate representation. If we strike these words then the section would read, "The senate districts described in Section 2", which includes those areas I mentioned, "of Article XV, may be modified to reflect changes in election districts. A district, although modified, shall retain its total number of senators and its approximate perimeter." The Section 2 of Schedule 15 describes all the senate districts including the at-large districts that I mentioned. Now I don't think there is any need of my belaboring this point any more because I did it a while ago, I would just be wasting time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there still objection to the unanimous consent request?

V. RIVERS: I want to have further discussion on it.

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, there is, Mr. President; I would like to have Mr. Gray offer us a few observations on this matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray, would you care to?

GRAY: After the "brainwashing" I have had in the last hour, I don't know whether I can get back on the road again. You must understand that this whole plan is a compromise. It has come out of being not only one little group meeting that we had this evening -- we have had dozens of them. And we finally came to this. Now in this -- this is a compromise -- my belief in this plan is that the senate lines are too strict and they should be more elastic. I say that because, from the beginning this is government of the people; it is not government of the mountain tops or the lakes or the flats; it is government of the people. If you have a section with mountain goats on it and no people, it is questionable what representation they are entitled to. I lay that in a broad field, so my belief all the way through has been representation of the people. We have an elastic, very elastic, house plan. The senate plan as set up works good for today. How is it going to look tomorrow? It works at present but as long as this is being nailed down strictly, you must project yourselves into the future. What we haven't experienced, and this was deliberated many, many times, was the old rotten boroughs -- excuse the word -- of England. That is what we are staring in the face right now unless there is a way to correct it. Of course, the way to correct it is amendment to the constitution. The plan is very acceptable at the present time, there is no question about that -- but it does not take care of population shifts. If every section grows in relationship, it will still work; but, if some of these senate districts collapse, you could have a position where they could not have one representative and still they could have two or three or four senators. It will never get to that. The theory of the thing is that it is possible under the strict senate rule. As long as it works as it does today and to keep the show on the road in the committee meeting, we agreed, at least I did, to the change as submitted because it works; it is fair today. Now, whether it is going to be fair in 1970 or 1980, I do not know.

V. RIVERS: What change do you speak of, as submitted?

ROSSWOG: May I ask Mr. Gray a question? How could a senate district that lost its population, or stayed the same, or fell below its quota, get two or three senators?

GRAY: In my relationship, a senate district was the senate region, and the subdistricts were subdistricts of the senate district. That was my contention, and it denoted it because we used the word "subdistrict". "Subdistrict" to me means a part of a senate district. That was my belief right up to this moment. As I say, this has been with the discussions, that all the way through that has been my idea; and using the senate districts, and we can take it then as a senate district, and it is possible with a population shift that they could lose their population to the extent that they could not even retain a half-quotient and still they would be allowed four senators without one representative to the house. Nothing like that will ever happen, I assure you, but the pattern exists, so, in this change, to help the show get on the road, to get the thing going, why as long as the plan works today, I will go for the plan, but it works for today only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: This plan, as we have it now, is counter to my understanding of the Committee's program which I understood was a compromise, and in that compromise, we viewed the four division as we have them now as being an over-all senate district, and in those senate districts were certain subdistricts that would float around within that district in relation as the population shifted. Now that division -- what we call a division now, what we would call a senate district in this would never change except for approximate changes in its perimeter. It would still have a given number of senators, but it would not have what Mr. Gray has rightly referred to as "rotten boroughs". They would either be at large or they would be from some of the election districts, and I for one must necessarily oppose forever freezing these lines within the senate districts. I even think the approximate perimeter clause, as I told the Chairman of the Committee, was too strict to allow the apportionment board to do proper adjusting within very moderate limits. But as I view our whole picture in Alaska, we are not sitting here to prepare a constitution for today, we are sitting here to prepare a constitution for 50 or 100 years from now as well. That is the history of all constitutions, that that is generally as long as they have to last, and we don't want to end up here within a short time with disproportionate representation. This plan is geared first on the election districts to the ratio of population, the proportional population within a district; then they have geared that same election district to a senate subdistrict in which they have then cast into the mold of the over-all division, which I did not particularly object to; but as I see this picture, some of the areas in the sub-senate districts are afraid they would lose population to where they might lose a house representative and also might eventually end up by losing a senate representative. Now, that is not my conception of the future and growth of Alaska. I think that we must necessarily rely upon our vast area and our vast resources to produce our wealth. I think the raw material will be the wealth of Alaska, and in order to get that raw material, we must have people out in the rural areas. I do not visualize Alaska as a great industrial area, because we do not have ready access to great markets, and it will be a long time before we have a great market within our own area, and so, consequently, we must depend upon raw resources for our wealth; and, if we do, it is reasonable to assume that the growth in the rural areas and the outlying areas will either keep abreast of or will exceed the growth of your urban centers, because industrialization is what brings growth to urban centers, and I cannot see, in my mind, that we freeze these senate subdistricts as well as freezing the senate districts. That was never my concept on this floor or in the committee meetings that that was the intent of the substance matter of this original draft or the enrolled copy. If we adopt this amendment, then we are forever freezing the possibility of a lot of rotten boroughs occurring here in a short time. I agreed with the original committee concept, but I cannot agree with this concept of freezing the lines of the subdistricts as well as the senate districts. If we allow them to float around, I think that is fair and right, they should, possibly part of the senate, follow the population, and the rest of the area be represented by the two over-all senators; but I, for one, cannot see freezing these senate subdistricts down in relation to where there may be a large population over to one side of the same area and no population in that area that is being represented. I know this is a compromise, but it certainly doesn't seem to me that this last measure is a compromise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I can see Mr. Rivers' viewpoint of wanting these to float around. If I were in Mr. Rivers' position, I would probably want them to float around also.

V. RIVERS: Point of order, Mr. President.

HARRIS: I haven't got started yet. Mr. Rivers, give me a chance. I can easily visualize where 20 years from now, it is very possible, I am not saying it will happen, it is very possible that the senators would be coming from the cities as well as your house representatives. Well, the idea of the whole compromise from the beginning was that one would be based on a geographic standpoint and the other one on a population standpoint, and the rural areas went along with it with that in mind, that they would be guaranteed representation. We went home for the Christmas recess. I know a lot of the other people from the rural areas did the same as I did and said, "We may lose our house representatives, it is very possible, but we will never lose our senator." That was in our minds and we thought that was what the article said. We have found out that wasn't exactly what it said, but we did have other problems confronting us and that is the reason that this amendment tonight was asked for. It is a compromise. It is a guarantee to the rural areas that they will always have representation, and that was the compromise that was made at the beginning with the Apportionment Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, to clear up any doubts that the senate was to be based strictly on area and the house strictly on population, to clear up any doubts that any member may have had as to whether or not the senate was to be based strictly on area and the house strictly on population (and apparently some delegates felt that was true) let me read from the report of the Committee: "In the composition of the senate, stress was placed upon area with minor stress upon socio-economic groups." Now, I merely say that so there will be no misapprehension in this group that any one was misled by anyone else. It did develop, though, that there was a conflict in the Committee. Some committee members felt one way; some, the other; which, of course, they are entitled to. I frankly agree with Mr. Rivers' contention. A rigid senate plan for Alaska is not advisable, it is not advisable; and with that in mind the minor stress was placed on people, socio-economic areas, people. You have to have people to have socio-areas. That was the reason for it. But as I see, and as we all see, a little trouble developed. There was some misunderstanding over it; and, although I agree with Mr. Rivers we have a good constitution, it can be amended from time to time; it is going to have to be reconsidered from time to time; and I therefore have enough faith in Alaska, in Alaska and all of its segments, to believe that, even if this amendment were not passed, that the problem that Mr. Rivers worries about will never take place. I think we are going to go forward together. For that reason, I voted in the Committee in favor of this amendment that is now before us. The Committee vote was 5 to 1 on it, in case any of you want to know, and I was one of those who voted in favor of this amendment to make it crystal clear, and it is crystal clear. The senate of Alaska, and the constitution is now based strictly, 100 per cent upon area, but the great objective of this group has been secured in that the minor areas are assured of representation. That was what we set out to accomplish, that the minor areas in Alaska, the small hinterland, would be assured of representation, and it wouldn't all go to the cities. We never thought it would all go to the cities. I think that they are all going to -- their population will grow simultaneously, but we have accomplished that objective. This is actually a minor thing, and I therefore speak for two purposes: first, to get the record clear so that no one will have in their minds that there were any misrepresentations made, and secondly, to indicate I feel this amendment is a good amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, for the first time, I think for quite some while, I am in agreement with Mr. Hellenthal. I certainly think that this amendment accomplishes what I believe to be the most serious defect in this whole article. I think one of the essential ingredients in our form of government is, particularly on the apportionment features is stability in the senate district boundaries, and, with the article as it was previously drawn, there certainly was a very grave question as to whether or not that could be accomplished. I think with this amendment that purpose can be accomplished and we have strengthened our constitution and our form of government in the State of Alaska just that much more. I am heartily in favor of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel has been attempting to get the floor.

HINCKEL: I have very little to add. The previous speakers have said practically everything I wanted to say, except I would like to call attention to the fact that the language we have just deleted was put into the article on January 12. It was after we came back from our holiday and the statements that were made when we went home on our holiday that we explained the arrangement of the senatorial districts, and assured our people that they were going to have senatorial representation no matter what happened. Those statements are correct, because we did do that -- I'm sure most of us did -- because that was the way it was explained to us. It was the way it was written in the article, the explanation that went along with the article. Another thing, I had another point that I wanted to make -- I can't think what it was.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Walsh.

WALSH: Mr. Chairman, I was a member and still am a member of the Apportionment Committee, and during our various committee meetings, right from the start, I found myself in the minority, and I think every member of the Committee will agree with me, and we battled along, and in due time we came to a compromise, and that compromise is exactly what Mr. Davis's amendment offers to you tonight; and proof further of that is, which I don't want to elaborate on, is that, less than an hour ago, we had a vote of the Committee in favor of Mr. Davis's amendment. Now that is the compromise, and that is what we came back to this floor with.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, if these allegations are all true, I would like to have somebody point out to me the action that took place in putting these several words, "Southcentral", etc., into this article. How did they get in there if you all allege that Mr. Davis's amendment accomplishes the matter which was finally compromised in the Committee. How did we get these words in here? I would like to know.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I believe I can explain that. In the bill that was sent to Engrossment and Enrollment, you had the Roman numerals I and IV, II, and III, or some such thing -- I don't remember the combination -- but those numbers had been changed I believe on a motion of Mr. Boswell, and, when it was engrossed, I said that those numbers should be changed because I and III, II, and IV was not going to mean anything, so that is where those names come in. After Mr. Boswell changed those district numbers to names, the engrossed copies were then changed.

HELLENTHAL: The Committee approved that change and those names. There is no question about that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe, Mr. President, this amendment of Mr. Davis's clarifies this matter and I think makes it a better bill. I was alarmed when Mr. Victor Rivers was talking about these senatorial districts that were going to be floating around. I thought it would be like going hunting, one of them might fall over one, but I got to thinking it over. They are not going to float around so fast as you might think. They are going to stay pretty well bedded where they are for at least 10 years. Ten years is the period in which our constitutional convention is called. If there is anything wrong with this apportionment or this legislative representation, it can be taken care of. I think those senatorial districts will lay dormant until we can do something about it with the constitutional convention to change this. Now, as I said before, I have been a number of times in the legislature, and very near every time we are down there, there has been an effort made by the people in the sparsely populated parts of the Territory to get some representation. Usually they come there -- there might be one or two from Ketchikan, the rest from Juneau representing the First Division. Maybe Mr. Peratrovich might be there, or Frank Johnson from Kake. Then the Third Division was mostly from Anchorage; Mr. President was from Valdes -- that would be about all. The same would hold true with the Fourth Division -- all from Fairbanks. This is a far departure from what we have had in the past. It seems to me that the more populous areas have gone overboard to give the sparsely populated areas ample representation in the legislature; and I believe that I am going along with this on the amendment and going along on the whole article with the exception of a little amendment I am going to put in. (Laughter) I hope we will adopt Mr. Davis's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, we are writing here a constitution which is patterned after the National Constitution as far as possible, and we have constructed a framework of state government which is patterned after other state governments in the Union, and we have apportioned our representatives in the legislature the same way even using the same formula for apportionment, and yet the Committee wanted to make a compromise on apportioning the senate. Mr. Hellenthal was afraid that we didn't understand that, that we did not understand that they were only partly apportioned according to area and partly according to population. I understood it very thoroughly, and I understand it is very bad. It is un-American. I don't see why we have to change the system of government that has worked so well in all the other states, and also in our national government. Now this amendment corrects that. It is according to area. That is why it is a good amendment. I am even going to vote for the article now.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I will close.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis is closing the argument -- if anyone else wishes to be heard -- Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I find myself torn two ways on this argument. In the first place, as a member of Style and Drafting, I wrote up the article on the basis of the enrolled bill as it was, and I came out with one result. On the other hand, as a member of the Convention, I know very well that, at the time we were arguing this thing, it was definitely stated on behalf of the Committee that under the plan, no matter what might happen to the house representation, that people would not lose their senate representation no matter what might happen to the population. I would just like to throw out one thought here. When we are voting for the senate, more so than when we are voting for the house, we are not voting for a senator to represent our own district; we are voting for a senator who is going to do the best possible job for the State of Alaska; and I hope that we won't lose sight of that here. This Convention has been completely free of divisions according to traditional division lines, and I venture that it is the first gathering that was ever held in Alaska that was free of those division. And it seems to me that, if we can assure each area a representation, a direct representation in the senate, that we have accomplished what we set out to do, and I believe that a person from one of these smaller districts will represent Alaska just as well as if he were from one of the larger districts in population; and for that reason I am willing to go along with this amendment; that coupled with the fact that there isn't any doubt in my mind at all that that's what at least a large number of people in this Convention thought was being accomplished with the apportionment article as it was written.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, Section 7, lines 23 and 24, strike the words 'Southeastern, Southcentral, Central, and Northwestern'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Davis be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify --
