R. RIVERS: That is right. Rather than go through the whole mimeographing process and coming along with a clean copy immediately afterwards, we are just going to give you the clean copy and at that time when the clean copy has been put on your desks our Chairman, Dora Sweeney, I am speaking for Engrossment at this point, will then make her report and at that stage of the game you will have your clean copy. Delegate Sweeney withdrew what he had reported this afternoon because it was premature, because we had not quite understood the setup ourselves. Now we are all clear on that. That explains the significance of the change in the rule.

PERATROVICH: A point of information. Does that mean, Mr.

Rivers, that when the Engrossment Committee returns a bill, the bill will still be in second reading?

R. RIVERS: I can explain that too, but at the moment we have a request for unanimous consent to adopt this change in the rules which does not change the intent, Frank, it just changes the words and clarifies it. After that is acted upon I will be very glad to discuss what you ask.

PERATROVICH: I thought maybe we should know that before we take a vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You might answer that question, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: You have asked then to when it ceases to be in second reading?

PERATROVICH: No. My question is that when the bill is returned by the Engrossment Committee is it still in second reading?

R. RIVERS: We have our own rules. A bill stays in second reading until it is put into third reading, but our rules provide that after all persons have had a chance to make amendments and no one else has any more amendments to make and the Chair refers the matter to the Engrossment Committee, that at that point it is in the custody of the Engrossment Committee. It is out of the hands of the body and that no more amendments or proposals for amendments on substance are in order after that under the majority rule, but it does remain in second reading all through the time it is in the hands of the Engrossment Committee and all through the time it is in the hands of Style and Drafting, but it remains in second reading for a limited purpose only. The wording is that an action on report of Committee on Style and Drafting or action on the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting and action on amendments as to phraseology only, so that after Style and Drafting brings back its work we can change their work as to phraseology and perhaps any sentence structures by majority vote, but if you want to put it back for further amendments on substance, then that takes a suspension of the rules and two-thirds vote. So as far as the delegates here wanting to make further amendments on substance is concerned, I mean so far as their wanting to make further amendment by a majority vote is concerned, that ends when the Chair turns the proposal over to Engrossment and Enrollment. Does that answer the question?

PERATROVICH: Well, the reason I ask that question is that if you don't make that point clearly I can foresee conflicting statements on the floor again that will take up a great deal of our time. I was under the impression and perhaps there are some here too, that as long as it was in second reading it would be subject to amendment, but your explanation answers the point I was trying to make.

R. RIVERS: Yes, it stays in second reading, but there are two phases to second reading. One is the second reading when everybody proposes amendments. From then on it is in second reading for a limited purpose only and that is for checking the work of Style and Drafting for phraseology only. Then after we have approved the Style and Drafting's report, then we put it through a full third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels this particular question is so important that the Chair would like to ask if there is any delegate who is in the dark or is not quite clear on this particular subject. Mr. Knight?

KNIGHT: Mr. President, would it be in order before the measure is sent to the Engrossment Committee for the Chair to ask if any more amendments are to be discussed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight, that is the duty of the Chair and the Chair will attempt at all times to ask if there are any further amendments before, the Chair does not feel that it has allowed anything to go out of the jurisdiction of the body without asking that question possibly once or two or three times, but it will certainly be the policy of the Chair to give ample opportunity that you will know whether or not a proposal is on its way to the Engrossment Committee.

WHITE: I was just going to rise to say that I have a motion to make.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is a motion on the floor. WHITE: After we dispose of that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog has asked unanimous consent that the proposed amendment of the Rules Committee in changing Rule 16 on the second line from the bottom, deleting the words "in completed form after" and inserting in place of those words the words "as amended in" be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered.

WHITE: Mr. President, I ask for the privilege of the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White, you are granted the privilege of the floor.

WHITE: Mr. President, I feel that this is an important matter and I get the distinct feeling that a number of the delegates have not understood that when Committee Proposal No. 2 was referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, that although it was still in second reading it was no longer amendable by a simple majority. I think it is a question that we should decide on and for that purpose I would like to make a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you now rising just as a delegate, Mr. White?

WHITE: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that Committee Proposal No. 2 be withdrawn from the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment and be continued in second reading until after the recess for hearings and then placed on the calendar for further action under the rules of the Convention.

SUNDBORG: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

WHITE: I so move.

R. RIVERS: Point of order.

COGHILL: Second the motion.

R. RIVERS: The point of order is that the matter has been referred to Engrossment and has been in the hands of Engrossment for 24 hours, so I think this motion is out of order.

V. RIVERS: Point of order, Mr. President. Before Committee Proposal No. 2 was submitted to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment and I asked at that time, and it will so show in the journal, that it be continued in second reading, if the Chair recalls, and I was told at that time that it would.

R. RIVERS: I missed a day, I wasn't here that day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was day before yesterday, wasn't it, Mr. Rivers? If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The record shows that Mr. Victor Rivers asked that if the Proposal No. 2 would still be in second reading, and the Chair said that the Chair felt that the proposal would be in second reading through the engrossment through its consideration in the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee. Now whether the question of whether it was there for majority vote on amendments or not is something that we took up in the Rules Committee meeting today, and it was decided that a proposal when it goes to Engrossment and Enrollment is still in second reading all right but that it has left the floor for the purposes of amendment just by majority action. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, after consulting with the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment I would like to ask unanimous consent to withdraw the motion I have on the table.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent to withdraw his motion as previously made by him. Mr. White.

WHITE: I move and ask unanimous consent that when Committee Proposal No. 2 is reported by the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment that it be considered still in second reading for the purposes of amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves and asks unanimous consent that when Committee Proposal No. 2 is reported back to the Convention by the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee it still be before us for second reading for purposes of amendment. Is there a second?

DAVIS: I object.

WHITE: I so move.

V. RIVERS: Point of order. When I asked that it be continued in second reading two days ago I did not have any envisionment of a limited interpretation of second reading. It was my understanding it would stay in second reading for all action in that reading, not for limited action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read what happened.

CHIEF CLERK: There was no motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the motion.

PERATROVICH: I second the motion of Mr. White.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read what occurred as to the reference of Mr. Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: It was just a question Mr. Rivers asked of the Chair whether the proposal would be continued in second reading and there was no motion at all, and the Chair said that he felt it would be in second reading on through referral to Engrossment and Enrollment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no question in the Chair's mind but at that time the Chair felt that we would not lose the proposal for purposes of amendment until it had been referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Of course, upon hearing the interpretation of the rules in the Rules Committee meeting today and speaking of this matter, as it has been brought to the attention of the Chair, that it was the intent and is actually the wording of the rules, if you follow them closely, that such is not the case. However, the Chair feels that there was general feeling that such was the case at that time and Mr. White's motion then is -- Mr. Nolan?

NOLAN: Mr. President, I think Mr. White's motion is wrong then. I think the proper motion should be that the proposal be taken from the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment and be returned to the custody of the Clerk. What would be the use of leaving it in Engrossment if it is now going to come back for amendment again. It is their work to bring it out in proper form to take its course in third reading. If we are going to bring it out now for amendment and then go back to Style and Drafting it is just duplicating the work.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your feeling Mr. White, as to your motion?

WHITE: My motion, Mr. Nolan, is clearly expressed in my first motion. However, the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, as I understand it, would like an opportunity to place before the Convention the clean copy before we recess. My further intent would be that when they come in with their report that the motion would then be made to continue the proposal in second reading over the recess for hearings because I feel that we should present these things during hearings in recess in an amendable form by a simple majority if we are going to hold hearings at all.

KILCHER: Point of information. I address a question to Mr. White. Would you consent to include into your motion the words, "to keep it in second reading for purposes not of amendment but of substantive amendment"? Is that what you mean?

R. RIVERS: He means for all purposes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: He means amendments by a majority vote. Nolan. Mr.

NOLAN: This is going to be an unusual case, it is not the regular procedure, is it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Nolan. Mr. Peratrovich, will you take the Chair.

(Mr. Peratrovich came forward and took the Chair at this time.)

EGAN: Mr. President, as President of the Convention, I would like to state that I certainly have no desire to hold up anything that it is possible to get to working on and get completed, but it is also my feeling at this point with relation to this particular motion that many of the delegates, including possibly the President of the Convention, did not have in his mind too clearly exactly what this procedure would be and as has been read by the Chief Clerk with relation to the question asked by Mr. Victor Rivers on Monday and answered by the President, the direct implication could have been at that time to many many delegates that the particular proposal in question, Proposal No. 2 would still be open to the Convention for amendment in second reading after the Committee on Engrossment reported back, because of the interpretation that would have been lent at that time. Consequently, I think that with reference to this particular proposal that it would behoove the membership to allow the passage of Mr. White's particular motion, in this case because I don't believe that the delegates had a proper understanding of the matter at the time that it went to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee. I think that it is clear now that from here on out that when a proposal goes to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee it can then not be amended again unless by a two-thirds action vote of the delegates, but I feel that I will have to vote to sustain Mr. White's motion in this case.

VICE PRESIDENT PERATROVICH: Mr. Davis

DAVIS: Mr. President, I think what Mr. Egan has said is absolutely true. There has been some confusion on this particular point. However, I think that the suggestion made by Mr. Nolan awhile ago is the correct way to handle this if we are going to handle it, and so far as I am concerned if there is anybody in this Convention that has not had his say on Proposal No. 2 and wants to make some amendments, I would be in favor of allowing, even by a simple majority, allowing the amendments to be made, but I would like to have them made at this time. I see no reason at all why the matter should be held over until after the hearings. Now the result of this thing is this. I believe it was Monday that we finished action on this particular proposal, possibly it was Tuesday, anyway early this week. The matter has gone to Engrossment and Enrollment. We have gone to other matters. The matter has come back today. I am a member of Style and Drafting and I want to get to work on these things. Now if we hold this proposal until after we come back, that means that it will go to Engrossment and enrollment after January 4. Sometime after that time Engrossment and Enrollment will bring back their report. The report will be acted upon. Assuming that it is acted upon favorably, then it goes to Style and Drafting, then we have certainly lost some needless time. The matter has been fully and completely argued I am sure. I doubt that any of the delegates have any amendments they want to offer today, and I don't believe that we are doing right to say we are going to hold everything in second reading and for further amendments of substance until after January 4..

WHITE: Mr. President, I am very sensitive of the feelings of the Committee on Style and Drafting. I understand their problem completely. However, here we are on Thursday. We are going to adjourn on Monday. Not many proposals will go through this procedure, and I think it is important that if we are going to hold hearings, since the hearings are so close, that such proposals as we consider here be kept open in second reading for amendment by simple majority, if we are going to go home and hold hearings. I think that in this particular case it is clear that the proposal in question has the overwhelming majority opinion behind it in the Convention, and its chances of being amended after recess are very slight, and in the light of that I think Style and Drafting can informally do a great deal of work on it between now and the time we adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT PERATROVICH: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to address a question to Mr. White. Would it be your intent that the same procedure be followed on any other articles that may come up and go through the amendment process prior to recess for hearings?

WHITE: It would be my intent, and the reason for it is that if the Convention is so in doubt, that the weight of opinion behind passing certain proposals is so slim that we are afraid it might be changed by going home and holding hearings, I think we ought to hold it open anyway.

VICE PRESIDENT PERATROVICH: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I feel I am going to have to object to this procedure. We set up some rules and this matter has gone through all of the debate I think that is necessary. It is true that we are going to return to our respective communities for public hearings. I question whether very much will come out of those public hearings in regard to this particular proposal that has not already been discussed here on the floor. But if anything substantial comes out of the hearings and is brought back to this floor, I have no doubt in my mind that it can't be returned to second reading in the usual procedure and in light of that I firmly believe that the proposal should continue in its natural course.

VICE PRESIDENT PERATROVICH: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have a point of inquiry. The question before us is in the nature of a suspension of our established rules. My inquiry is will it take a two-thirds vote to carry that motion?

VICE PRESIDENT PERATROVICH: Mr. Johnson, I think I should let your chairman answer that inasmuch as he was in the Chair when this motion was made, not that I want to pass the buck, ladies and gentlemen. I have my interpretation but I think out of courtesy he should make that decision.

(Mr. Egan took the Chair at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson, in answer to your question, it will require a suspension of the rules, it will take a two-thirds vote. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Chairman, before we vote on that I think I should say here that there is a little history behind this. And the history is that along about a week ago or maybe ten days ago, at the meeting of committee chairmen, it was proposed one day that we should hold all proposals in second reading until after the recess for hearings. The committee chairmen after some discussion voted to do that, and they referred the matter to the Rules Committee with the request that the Rules Committee bring in a proper resolution to that effect. The Rules Committee discussed it and decided unanimously against the procedure and reported back to the committee chairmen, and the committee chairmen, after hearing the point of view of the Rules Committee, went along with them and decided that the matter would not be presented on the floor and that we would not adopt such a resolution. Now some of the considerations that went into that decision are as follows: The major consideration is that we have a Committee on Style and Drafting which before this constitution can be completed has to go over every single word, every period, comma, and paragraph of the thing with a fine-tooth comb. That would be a big job even if we had something like 60 days in which to do it. Today at noon we passed the halfway mark in the allotted 75 days that we have to draw this constitution, and the Style and Drafting Committee does not have yet one single proposal before it on which it can work. Now, as Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee, and on behalf of the other members of my Committee, I ask all of you to please have a little consideration for us. We are going to have a terrible job ahead of us even if the thing goes through its natural course and we get Proposal No. 2, as I hoped we would, tomorrow. If we have to wait until what I think will be probably along about the middle of January if we are going to consider any amendments at all, as a result of these hearings before any of these things can come to us, we are going to be faced with what I am afraid is going to be a superhuman task, because there just won't be time. Now as an individual member and not as Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee, I will say that when anybody comes back here after the hearings with anything that is a reasonable suggestion for an amendment, I am going to vote to suspend the rules to put any proposal back in second reading for the purpose of amendment but I feel at this time that we ought to let them take the regular course and let the Committees get on with their work rather than to make everything stand stock-still until so very late in our session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I second the motion, and I should say something on that. I personally don't have any improvements or anything that I could add to the Committee report. However, under the present circumstances I do not think that Mr. White or perhaps others too, did not have the opportunity to perhaps submit their ideas. I think the fault lies in the fact that we created this Engrossment Committee without having a clear understanding. We just brought it up on the floor and voted for the committee and we did not know what the duties were going to be. Now we interpret the thing that once it is referred to the Engrossment Committee then there is no opportunity for amendment. I think that is what confused the issue. For that reason I think that if the mover of this motion has something in mind that perhaps could improve this report I think he should have an opportunity to present it, whether it is good or bad, under these circumstances.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I spoke a minute ago and probably should not speak again. I would have no objection at all to what Mr. Peratrovich has just said. In fact, I would agree to doing it on a majority vote. If anybody has any amendment to make here and now, let's make it. I am objecting to hold it over until after January 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Question is, "Shall Mr. White's motion be adopted by the Convention?"

METCALF: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 19 - Armstrong, Barr, Coghill, Emberg, Harris, Hurley, Kilcher, Londborg, McNealy, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Sweeney, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 32 - Awes, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien.

Absent: 4 - Boswell, Riley, Stewart, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 19 yeas, 32 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has failed. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 1. Will the Chief Clerk please read the pending amendment to Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 1.

JOHNSON: May we have a 15-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, BUCKALEW: I object.

JOHNSON: I so move.

BARR: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves, seconded by Mr. Barr, that we have a 15-minute recess. All in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention stands at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the proposed amendment to Committee Proposal No. 1, Section 1. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 9, after the words 'votes and' strike the balance of the line, strike lines 10 and 11 and first part of line 12 up to and including 'only and'; on line 15 after 'election' insert the following: 'Additional qualifications may be established by law.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Has that motion been moved and seconded?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

SUNDBORG: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any further discussion? If not, (Mr. McNealy just entered Convention Hall) Mr. McNealy, do you know the amendment that is before us?

GRAY: Will the Chief Clerk read the question again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk might hold up the reading for about one minute. There is another delegate coming in. The proposed amendment is to Committee Proposal No. 1. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 9, after the words 'votes and' strike the balance of the line. Strike lines 10 and 11 and the first part of line 12 up to and including the words 'only and'. On line 15 after 'election' insert the following: 'Additional qualifications may be established by law.'

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?"

METCALF: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a few words on that. I know it is a losing cause but I just want to remind the Convention that it is one of the legislative procedures, you might say, to defeat a cause. I don't want to carry this any too far. I realize my responsibilities here as a delegate, and I have tried hard to put just what I thought would be a good thing for a certain group of people, and it seems as though I am on the verge of a failure. I will accept that as a good citizen of the United States, but I am happy to have this on the record to let the delegates know the condition that is existing right at your next door, you might say, and I have tried to remedy that situation so that you could benefit from this instrument you are preparing here. That is all I have to say.

SUNDBORG: I would certainly like to urge Delegate Peratrovich to be of good cheer. He is not even close to being on the verge of a failure. I think that this motion is going to be voted down and it properly should be and that Mr. Peratrovich is on the verge of another brilliant success.

MARSTON: I don't understand this statesman from Southeastern taking this negative attitude. I am very much discouraged the way the body of people are working here. We have worked this over twice. We have voted, we passed it, and men of good will, will stay men of good will, and those who voted for it under convictions will again vote for it. There are 18,000 people right out here between us and the great enemy of the world, Russia, and they are armed and they are defending our shores now. The general out here said that one-fifth of all the information comes from the Native Guard on enemy operations, and I don't see under any expanse of the imagination why you want to obliterate that group of people, and I do not believe you will. I believe you will keep this in as we voted before and not change your minds. There has been work on this to change it. It is the third time we have had it up, and I am depending on the good will of the people to keep together the great Native people of Alaska. Senator Peratrovich, the delegate from Southeastern, he want the Indians to stay with us. We want the Eskimos in the North to stay with us. It is their country. They own it, we are just visitors here.

Let us keep them with us. I urge you to stand by your good will and your first vote.

METCALF: I asked for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 10 - Hinckel, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, Metcalf, Nerland, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson.

Nays: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Boswell, Riley, Stewart, Taylor, White.)

VANDERLEEST: Mr. President, I voted "yes" and I meant "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. VanderLeest wishes to change his vote from "yes" to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 10 yeas, 40 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read Mr. Buckalew's proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, lines 10 and 11, strike all language down through word 'mind' and insert the following: 'No person who is non compos mentis'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Buckalew? Non compos mentis -

BUCKALEW: Did you accuse me of being non compos mentis?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was just wondering if that was the amendment?

BUCKALEW: That is the amendment. I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

BARR: I object.

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

BUCKALEW: I want to direct the body's attention to Section 3. You will see that it provides for a restoration of a civil disability in the case of a convicted felon, and it makes no provision for a person who has been judicially determined to be of unsound mind. Now as I understand this provision, that is an absolute constitutional disability, and there is no provision for a person who has been adjudicated an insane person to take away this civil disability and the effect of my amendment, the test is that a man has to be of sound mind at the time he votes. Another objection I have, I think that probably ten years from now we probably won't even be using the judicial procedure to determine whether a person is sane or insane, and I think probably in ten years it will be meaningless. The effect of my provision is to require that when a person votes he be of a sound mind. This provision here would prevent any person, 20 years ago, if a commissioner at Klawock found him insane they could never vote again, and there is no provision for a restoration of that civil disability.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does that give them the right later, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: "Non compos mentis" means a present state of mental illness.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I have another expression. "Montes murientur mus nascetur -- The mountains are in labor, and a mouse is born." Mr. President, the substitution of a Latin phrase which has no specific and definite meaning would be unwise. I think this phraseology is the one that is normally used, and if we didn't use the expression "judicially determine" you might be subject to the interpretation right at the polls, that they decide whether or not the elector were an idiot or no. So the judicial determination would cover all types of commitment and certainly it was never intended and it would never be interpreted by any court that the judicial determination, that if at any one time you were found of unsound mind by judicial determination, that the fact is you could not vote thereafter. The obvious intent here is that while you are under the disability of being insane and so judicially determined you not vote. I don't feel that the amendment would add anything. It would hopelessly confuse the article.

DAVIS: I was going to ask Mr. Buckalew, Mr. President, if instead of using a Latin phrase he would accept "no person of unsound mind".

BUCKALEW: I did not realize that this Latin phrase was going to cause a furor. It is a common expression and it has a meaning in the courts. I would certainly accept Mr. Davis's amendment. I would ask then with the consent of my second that we strike the "non compos mentis" and insert "unsound mind".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then it would read "no person" delete "judicially".

CHIEF CLERK: He does not have that in now.

DAVIS: I just suggested "no person of unsound mind" to try to say the same thing he was saying.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And leave out the "judicially determined", is that right?

BUCKALEW: It would have to be "no person of unsound mind".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Buckalew's changing his motion to read that way? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, if a man is to be adjudged of unsound mind somebody must make the adjudication. Now even I, like Mr. Buckalew, believe that the present method of incarcerating and proceeding criminally against insane people or, better still, persons mentally disturbed, I think that method is inhuman just as violently as Mr. Buckalew does. However, under no system that has yet been advocated by the most violent critics of the present method would a judicial determination of mental capacity be done away with. It would be an appalling thing if a board or if a group or a psychiatrist could determine one to be of unsound mind. There must be a standard. We have faith in our courts. In all civilized countries the courts or a judicial body makes the determination of whether you are capable of distinguishing between right and wrong, whether you are capable of voting, whether you are capable of taking care of your children and your home. Mr. Buckalew's amendment would throw this right up in the air, and it was for this reason that after careful thought the Committee felt that the language should read "no person judicially determined to be of unsound mind". That does not mean we have to preserve our inhuman method now of treatment of the insane, or the inhuman method of proceeding against them in a criminal proceedings. It doesn't mean that, but it means that before you can be stripped of your civil rights because of mental aberrations some court somewhere must pass on it, and that is the way our government was founded and that is the way it ought to be, and that is the reason that the words "judicially determined" were inserted in the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I think we all have seen how binding rules are and I think the constitution once adopted and is in effect is going to be binding. The courts are going to make their interpretation, and a person coming under there for a question will not have any chance. Now as I read it, a person that is judicially determined to be of unsound mind loses thereafter their vote right according to the way this reads.

HELLENTHAL: No, Mr. Londborg, it qualified by the language, "unless restored to his civil rights".

BUCKALEW: It is not in there. Read it.

HELLENTHAL: "No person judicially determined to be of unsound mind, unless restored to his civil rights, shall be qualified to vote in any state or local election.

LONDBORG: I would like to have that clear, because it says here, in referring to the person of unsound mind, and you have the words "pardoned and restored". I don't know of a person in an insane institution being pardoned. It says they are to be "pardoned and restored", as if they have done something criminally violent. I think that could be cleaned up a bit as far as the language. I think I see your intent and go along with your intent. May I have the floor, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg, you have the floor.

LONDBORG: I see the intent and go along with your intent, but I do believe it could be cleared up a little bit so there would be specifically in our constitution that a person that has been in an insane institution, has been released, is of sound mind, can go to the polls. According to this it sounds that a person judicially determined to be of unsound mind loses his vote right unless they are "pardoned and restored", and I don't think pardoning has anything to do with it. There is something that needs to be straightened out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you be acceptable to a two or three minute recess so you attorneys can get together on this?

HELLENTHAL: I think there is no question but that if we substitute the word "or" for "and" and I know I have the unanimous approval of the Committee for that, that the objection will be obviated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to point out that actually that would not remove a very valid objection raised by Mr. Londborg because even if it says, "unless restored to his civil rights", nowhere does it say, even if that person is judicially determined to be of unsound mind, he is deprived of his civil rights. He is deprived of his voting rights but not of civil rights.

BARR: This does not say that "no person who has been or who has ever been judicially determined." It says "no person judicially determined to be of unsound mind", meaning at the present or at the time of the election. Therefore, if he has been discharged from an asylum, after of course going before a board of psychiatrists, which they always do, then he is of sound mind because they say so. It is a matter of record that he is sane. In fact, he has a great advantage over us. It is not a matter of record that any of us are sane. Therefore, he is judicially determined to be of unsound mind when he goes into the asylum, not at any other time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Chair will declare a two-or three-minute recess so the attorneys and others can get together and talk this over. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, during the recess I was informed by Mr. Buckalew that he would permit me to ask unanimous consent that his pending amendment be withdrawn and that the following amendment be submitted in its place.

BUCKALEW: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked by Mr. Sundborg that Mr. Buckalew's amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? If there is no objection Mr. Buckalew's original amendment is ordered withdrawn. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I now move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the following amendment: "Section 3, strike all of lines 10, 11, 12, and 13 and insert in lieu thereof the following" 'Section 3. No person convicted of a felony involving moral turpitude, unless pardoned and restored to his civil rights, and no person judicially determined to be of unsound mind, until the disability is removed, shall be'."

DAVIS: Will you read the last line of that again?

SUNDBORG: Here is the insert: "Section 3. No person convicted of a felony involving moral turpitude, unless pardoned and restored to his civil rights, and no person judicially determined to be of unsound mind, until the disability is removed, shall be", and then it would pick up "qualified to vote in any state or local election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves

V. RIVERS: You have "judicially determined" in that have you, Mr. Sundborg? I was fearful of that because in the future if somebody looked over some of the proceedings of this Convention that we might disenfranchise ourselves.

SUNDBORG: Yes, they are in there.

HERMANN: I wish to offer an amendment to the amendment. I had it as a major amendment that I meant to offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, would you wait please until the Chief Clerk reads the proposed amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3. Strike lines 10, 11, 12, and 13 and insert in lieu thereof the following: 'Section 3. No person convicted of a felony involving moral turpitude, unless pardoned and restored to his civil rights, and no person judicially determined to be of unsound mind, until the disability is removed, shall be'."

HERMANN: My amendment would be to strike after the word "felony", strike the three words "involving moral turpitude". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves an amendment to the amendment striking the words "involving moral turpitude". Mrs. Hermann asks unanimous consent.

SUNDBORG: I object.

HERMANN: I so move.

KILCHER: I second the motion.

SUNDBORG: I would like to ask Mrs. Hermann what the effect of her amendment would be and how it would change this in substance.

HERMANN: I don't think there is such a thing as a felony that does not involve moral turpitude, so I don't see the necessity of the three words. I say conviction of a felony is inclusive enough to cover the whole situation.

BUCKALEW: That is what a felony means so it is superfluous.

HELLENTHAL: The reason that the qualifying language was used was that not all felonies involve moral turpitude, not all. There are some felonies that do not and the term moral turpitude" is a generally accepted word. Now we adopted this language on the advice of the adviser who agreed with that contention and who felt that we should not require all persons convicted of any felony to have to go before the pardon board. Now that was the reason for the language. Other language that was rejected was "a felony of serious nature". Another suggestion was "convicted of an infamous crime". There was one group in the Committee who felt that any person who served his time should automatically be restored to his civil rights. The majority definitely felt, and later the unanimous opinion of the Committee was that construction would not be sound. But they felt that not all convicted felons should have to go before the pardon board but only those of the more serious felonies. Now, Alaska has a fairly good criminal code, but throughout the United States there are many many offenses which in Alaska are misdemeanors, are considered felonies, and vice versa, and that is why the moral connotation was added and only that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the amendment to the amendment? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would just like to ask Mr. Hellenenthal a question through the Chair. Did this expert tell you what felonies did not involve moral turpitude?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, assault in some cases does not involve moral turpitude. It comes under the decisions of courts.

BUCKALEW: Assault is not a felony.

HELLENTHAL: Many assaults are felonies.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I might suggest that involuntary manslaughter is a case in point of a felony not involving moral turpitude.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mrs. Hermann? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, if there is a question of whether a felony involves moral turpitude or not, we should leave the phrase in. It seems to be the one point whether it does or does not. If we leave the three words in there it conclusively clears up any misunderstanding on that particular subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: On the other hand, I suggest we strike it because even if a felon has committed a crime involving the technicality of moral turpitude, I don't see why that should impair his voting capacity. As to a felon that has committed a crime equally serious but technically not involving moral turpitude, take assault -- assault with a dangerous weapon -- I don't know whether that would be moral turpitude. Assuming it is, I don't see how a man can vote. I don't see that a man might be not smart, but not a coward.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? The question is, "Shall Mrs. Hermann's proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the proposed amendment as offered by Mrs. Hermann will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "noes" have it and the amendment has failed. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I offer another amendment to this amendment, to strike "until the disability is removed". I don't think it makes any sense because it says "judicially determined to be" -- not "to have been". If the man is determined to be of unsound mind then the disability is not removed. At the time of voting the man has to be determined to be judicially of unsound mind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move the adoption of such an amendment?

KILCHER: I move the adoption of the amendment to strike "until such disability is removed". There is no need for too much wordage in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to Mr. Kilcher's motion?

ROBERTSON: Can we have the motion read as it would read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher has offered a motion; it has not been seconded yet.

LEE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is to strike the words in the proposed amendment. Would the Chief Clerk read those words please.

CHIEF CLERK: "Until the disability is removed".

PRESIDENT EGAN: How would that leave the proposed amendment reading then?

CHIEF CLERK: "No person convicted of a felony involving moral turpitude, unless pardoned and restored to his civil rights, and no person judicially determined to be of unsound mind shall be".

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is the way it would be if Mr. Kilcher's motion was adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I was in on some of the huddles during the recess. It originally read "no person judicially determined to be of unsound mind . Now then Mr. Kilcher's amendment would put us exactly back where we started from. Mr. Buckalew wanted it made absolutely clear that after the disability was removed the person could then vote. So I think the only way to go along with Mr. Buckalew's amendment and to be positive on that point is to turn down Mr. Kilcher's amendment.

KILCHER: I hate to waste any more time about a few words, but the general tenor seems to have been that we are going to make this instrument as simple as possible. If we say in there, "any person determined to be of unsound mind cannot vote", he must be of sound mind to be permitted to vote, and if he has been of unsound mind that means he has been judicially declared to not to be any more whatsoever. Naturally the person that goes to the polls is as normal as any of us, presumably. As Mr. Barr says he may be more. He only may not vote if determined to be of unsound mind. The rest is unnecessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher? If not, the question is, "Shall Mr. Kilcher's proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention? All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed. Now we have the proposed amendment to Section 3 as offered by Mr. Sundborg. The Chief Clerk will please read that proposed amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3. Strike lines 10, 11, 12, and 13 and insert in lieu thereof the following: 'Section 3. No person convicted of a felony involving moral turpitude, unless pardoned and restored to his civil rights, and no person judicially determined to be of unsound mind, until the disability is removed, shall be'."

HINCKEL: Mr. President, point of information. It occurs to me that the pronoun "his" is superfluous. I will leave it to Style and Drafting and I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to Section 3 as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All there in favor of the adoption of the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have an amendment first by Mr. Metcalf.

CHIEF CLERK: "Add Section 6. 'Provided further that the legal age of persons qualified to vote shall be permanently established by referendum vote of the people at the time this constitution is submitted for ratification by the people.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have already added a Section 5, is that correct?

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

METCALF: I move the adoption of the amendment.

SUNDBORG: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I speak briefly on this matter. I don't want to appear as one of the disgruntled few or minority we talked about yesterday. I believe there are a segment of the people probably who would disagree with our decision. I am going to vote for whatever constitution is coming out of this Convention, regardless of whether it is in accord with my personal beliefs or not. I felt that this would make a better feeling of the populace choosing for themselves the age limit that they should have for voting, and there are going to be objections, and I believe the people as a whole, and the folks we are working for, should have the last say in this matter. I might be wrong and probably I am many, many times, but in this instance I want to go on record that I have submitted this amendment to the constitution referring this very highly controversial matter to the people at the time this constitution is submitted to them. That is the democratic way. That is all I have to say.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I am not convinced that this matter is one that should be in this particular section of the constitution. It appears to me that the matter of a referendum establishing age at something other than the constitution has set forth, would be a transitory measure rather than a matter of inclusion in this particular article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair, as long as you have raised the question, that question has been mulling around in the mind of the Chairman, and the Chair is unable to decide as to whether or not this proposed amendment is in order in this particular proposal, and the Chair would ask to declare a few minutes recess so that the Rules Committee could come up with some determination as to the propriety of this particular amendment in this proposal. The Convention is at recess for a few minutes while the Rules Committee studies the question.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, with respect to the matter referred to the Rules Committee, it is the opinion of the Committee that the amendment proposed by Mr. Metcalf is not in order with respect to the proposal before us. Now to amplify that a little for its bearing on the proposal we are considering, various of the Committee have volunteered to assist in putting Mr. Metcalf's amendment in other form in order that it may be considered by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Pending the arrival of Mr. Metcalf, Mr. Ralph Rivers, and Mr. Rosswog, are there any other amendments?

HERMANN: I have an amendment on the desk.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, have you declared that amendment out of order?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair has declared that amendment out of order in the order that it was presented to the Convention. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May I ask Mr. Riley, is it the intent to put this other form of an amendment to this particular article?

RILEY: It is my impression, Mr. Robertson, that that is not the intention, that it is not to come forward as an amendment to this proposal.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I submit an amendment to the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, inasmuch as Mr. Metcalf has offered the previous amendment, do you object to his amendment being read first?

HERMANN: I will yield, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Mr. Metcalf's proposed amendment.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, may I withdraw my other amendment. PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been taken care of, Mr. Metcalf.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 2, after the word 'years' insert, 'unless otherwise determined by a referendum vote of the electors at the time this constitution is submitted for ratification'."

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I move for the adoption of this amendment.

COGHILL: I object.

HINCKEL: I second the motion.

RILEY: I don't wish to speak to the motion, Mr. President, but I regret that I misinformed you, Mr. Robertson. I had not realized it was coming forward in quite this manner.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 2, after the word 'years' insert, 'unless otherwise determined by a referendum vote of the electors at the time this constitution is submitted for ratification'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Briefly speaking on this highly controversial subject, I believe if we leave it this way it will remove one of the present barriers to ratification by the people. Goodness knows there are very apt to be a number of barriers to small segments of the people when we get through writing this constitution, and I want to reduce these barriers to a minimum so to be certain of ratification and have a constitution that will be an example for years to come. I believe it is the democratic way of handling this highly controversial matter and I urge each and everyone of you to vote for the amendment.

SUNDBORG: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Metcalf be adopted by the Convention?"

METCALF: I ask for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas:	12	-	Armstrong, Barr, Collins, Hinckel, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Metcalf, Nolan, Reader, Robertson.
Nays:	39	-	Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Boswell, Stewart, Taylor, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 39 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment that has been offered by Mrs. Hermann.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 2, line 7, strike the word 'that' and insert 'the manner of determining', add period after 'elections' and strike the rest of the sentence."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mrs. Hermann?

HERMANN: I move the adoption of the amendment.

RILEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment is open for discussion.

ROBERTSON: Please read the motion.

HERMANN: Read the paragraph as amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Read the paragraph as amended, is that what you want?

CHIEF CLERK: "After the semicolon in line 7 strike the word 'that', then 'it shall provide the manner of determining contested elections.' Strike the rest of the sentence."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to spare the order to the legislature to provide that contested elections be determined by the courts of competent jurisdiction. I doubt very much if the constitution has any right to order a command performance by the legislature. I think it must leave something to the discretion of the legislature, and if it is proper and the body feels that contested elections should be determined by courts, I think we should put that in the constitution and not tell the legislature to pass a law to that effect. This is practically a mandate to the legislature to rule, to pass a law saying that courts must determine contested elections. Well, it is probably a very good thing that courts do determine them, but the legislature might prefer to determine it themselves or might prefer to set up a commission, etc. There is the further fact that it has no importance because if the legislature does not want to do it, it would not have to even if it were ordered to. There is no machinery that can compel a legislature to follow any order that is given, and I think that in view of that fact we will then have it that we will give to the legislature the authority to determine the manner in which contested elections shall be settled, and that seems to me to be a much wiser plan than the one that is provided in the section itself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTAL: Just a word as to why the wording is as it is presented in the proposal. It is precisely the wording of the Hawaiian Constitution in this regard. The legislature - may we pass that for a moment. The reason for it is that throughout the constitution the Committee was well aware that in many many places there will be statements to the effect that the legislature shall do this or shall not do this. They are found throughout the judiciary act that has been approved by this body and they will be found in many many other acts, and it is not uncommon in any constitution to so provide. The Committee was well aware that you cannot mandamus the legislature to do anything unless the constitution expressly provides that you can, and they are well aware of that, but it was felt, we all know, as Alaskans, what happens when an election contest develops. The party in power generally hesitates to take action to unseat one of its own members, and it is generally one of the party in power whose office is contested, because most elections are landslides of one sort or another. They hesitate to take action to unseat their members. They shilly-shally around, they delay. They don't do anything, so all of the writers recommend that the matter should be taken care of in courts and not by the body to which the member, and not by the body to which belongs the man whose right is being contested, and with that in mind it was the Committee's recommendation that the legislature be directed to place it in the courts. The Hawaiian provision on that is -- I shall read it. "Contested elections shall be determined by a court of competent jurisdiction in such manner as shall be provided by law." We could perhaps set out the manner of the contest in detail in the constitution. I am sure Mrs. Hermann would not want that either. About all you can do in a practical world is to say, "The legislature shall do it." I have enough faith in the legislature that they won't ignore any of these provisions in the constitution and they are typical provisions. This is not unusual.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I favor Mrs. Hermann's amendment. Mr. Hellenthal has said that something that influenced the Committee in providing that contests should be determined by a court, is that it is possible that a legislator for example, would be the complaining party or one who is appealing in the case of a contested election. It is just as possible that one of these judges that we have set up in the judiciary article when he comes up for election is going to be one of the party who may want to make some kind of appeal in a contested election and if the legislature is forced, as it would be here, to have the court settle that, we might find a man sitting on the bench deciding his own case. So I say, let's leave something for our poor old legislature to do in the future and not just spell out in our constitution exactly how it shall do everything.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I follow the Delegate Hermann's argument that we should not make it mandatory that every election contest should be thrown' into court, but I think it would be well if we said something to this effect, in determining election contests or in providing the method of determining election contests appeals to the courts shall be allowed. That would leave it then up to any contesting party to appeal if he saw fit. That should not necessarily throw every contest into court. So I think I shall sit down and start writing a proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask that we stand at recess for two minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Mrs. Hermann's proposed amendment to Section 2. Is there further discussion? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I got balled up here, but I am going to move to amend Mrs. Hermann's amendment by adding at the end thereof the following words: "which shall include the right of appeal to a court of competent jurisdiction."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment.

R. RIVERS: I move that as an amendment to Mrs. Hermann's amendment

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion to amend the amendment?

KNIGHT: I second it.

R. RIVERS: I would ask if the mover of the proposed amendment would accede to my adding those words?

HERMANN: I would like to have it read as it now sounds, Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read it as it now sounds.

CHIEF CLERK: "It shall provide the manner of determining contested elections which shall include the right of appeal to a court of competent jurisdiction."

HERMANN: That is satisfactory, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I hesitate to speak for the members of the Committee, but I am sure they have no objection to the proposed amendment as amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I don't know. It seems to me we are getting into matters that could very easily be handled by the legislature. It seems to me that in the province of the legislature they could handle it very easily without making a constitutional matter out of it. It will be something awfully hard to change if it does not work.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan, the proposed amendment to the amendment is already adopted, so now you will be voting on whether to leave it as it was or as amended by the motion before us.

SUNDBORG: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the "proposed amendment as amended will signify by saying "aye , all opposed "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment as amended is ordered adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, I have submitted an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read Miss Awes' proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 5 and substitute the following: 'Section 5. Secrecy of voting shall be preserved.'"

AWES: I move the adoption of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves the adoption of her proposed amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: The reason I proposed this amendment, Section 5 previously provided that the secrecy of the ballot should be preserved." That is the wording that is found in some of the older constitutions, and when those states attempted to adopt the voting machine, the supreme court in some of those states held that the ballot itself was preserved and voting machines would not be allowed. This would preserve secrecy of the voting and would still allow us to adopt voting machines without question if the Territory ever wants to do so.

CHIEF CLERK: This was Section 5 before read: "The right of secrecy of ballot shall be preserved." She is asking to strike that and say, "Secrecy of voting shall be preserved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the proposed amendment be adopted.

MCCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I have an amendment. This amendment has been agreed to by the Committee on Suffrage and Election.

CHIEF CLERK: "In the amended language of the last sentence of Section 1, after the year '1924' insert the following: 'and meet the residence requirements of this section'."

HELLENTHAL: I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

ROBERTSON: How does it read now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk --

CHIEF CLERK: I don't have that amended language right here.

SUNDBORG: I have it, Mr. President. Let me ask first was it in the singular "residence requirement"?

CHIEF CLERK: "Requirements".

SUNDBORG: "Those citizens who legally voted at the general election of November 4, 1924, and meet the residence requirements of this section shall not be deprived of their voting rights by any provisions of this section or the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment? If there is no objection it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Please read the amendment, the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 2."

BARR: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

MCCUTCHEON: I object.

BARR: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seems to the Chair that there had already been an amendment offered striking Section 2 and it had been voted down by the Convention. 1, 2 and 3 had been ordered stricken.

BARR: I so move then.

CHIEF CLERK: 1, 2 and 3 were voted down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel's proposed motion the other day to strike Section 1, the Chair held that that was the meat of the whole proposal and that inasmuch as that amendment striking Sections 1, 2 and 3 had been offered previously and voted down, that Mr. Hinckel's motion was out of order. Mr. Hinckel was going to attempt to insert in Section 1 almost the identical language that Mr. Taylor had offered to Section 1 and which had been defeated. But whether or not the deletion of Section 2, the Chair does not feel that Section 2 is really the meat of this proposal in the sense that Section 1 is.

BARR: Mr. President, that is my contention. Section 1 deals with the qualification of voters. Section 2 is only a detailed list of the things that the legislature shall provide.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, the Chair will hold that your amendment is in order.

BARR: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

LAWS: I second the motion.

ROSSWOG: What is the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr's amendment calls for the deletion of Section 2 from Committee Proposal No. 1. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, the reason for this amendment is that it deals with details which the legislature shall take care of in regard to our voting laws. It provides for registration, precincts, absentee voting, method of voting at election and contested elections. The legislature has authority to do all that, and I don't believe that it has a place in the constitution. The constitution should not go into such details. Therefore, I would like to have it stricken. We know that the legislature will take care of it.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I do not believe it is true that if we strike Section 2 that the legislature has the authority to do these things, and I do not believe that it is true that we say in Section 2 how these things will be set up. All that Section 2 says is the legislature may do so and so and shall do so and so, and without Section 2 I think it is a very serious question that the legislature could do these things. By what right could it do them? This is the authority to the legislature to do them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Barr.

BARR: It is a well-known fact that the legislature has authority to do anything which is not named in the constitution. The constitution is a restriction on the legislature for the protection of the people. If there is nothing mentioned in the constitution then of course the legislature has the authority.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I alleged the same fact here several days ago and I was quite thoroughly challenged on the floor by the various attorneys. I am still not convinced whether or not the legislature does have the right to act if the authority is not so delegated in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Hellenthal a question. I thought he stated the other day that in looking up the authorities he had ascertained that unless the constitution did provide for absentee voting it is very questionable whether it can be legally done.

HELLENTHAL: That is correct, and Mr. Sundborg correctly stated the main reason for these insertions in Section 2.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Barr's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". So the "noes" have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 1?

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment by Mr. Londborg.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, Section 3, strike 'judicially determined to be of unsound mind' and insert after 'person', 'found, in manner provided by law, to be of unsound mind.'"

LONDBORG: I move the adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion? Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, Section 3, strike 'judicially determined to be of unsound mind' and insert after 'person', 'found, in manner provided by law, to be of unsound mind.'"

LONDBORG: I don't know if any discussion is needed. The reason for the amendment is to make it possible in case the legislature should want to set up some other method of determining insanity, such as a board or anything of that nature, they would be at liberty to do so and would take away the mandate that it should be judicially determined, which of course, the legislature can provide that method if they choose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if that is covered by the Bill of Rights? Do we not have something that no one shall be deprived of life, liberty without due process of law? Regardless of how a person is judged unsound it must be by due process of law, and I believe myself "judicially determined" means by due process of law. The wording is the same as far as I can see.

LONDBORG: I think it is obvious that the wording is not the same. The one states that it must be judicially determined and this makes it possible for the legislature to either have it judicially determined or by some other method.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Londborg's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention.?" All those in favor signify by saying "aye", all opposed, "no". The "noes" have it and so the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 1?

KILCHER: I move and ask unanimous consent that the Chair as a general practice in the future will entertain a motion to the effect that a certain proposal will be forwarded to the Committee on Enrollment and Engrossment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean when a proposal is, are you asking that a new rule be adopted?

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order. That appears to me to be strictly the prerogative of the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, if Mr. Kilcher wants to offer a new rule that is fine. The Chair will always give ample notice that any matter that is being referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, but if you ask unanimous consent that it be adopted as a rule of the Convention, that is your prerogative, Mr. Kilcher.

MCCUTCHEON: I object.

KILCHER: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher so moves that the permanent rules be amended and a new rule which would be numbered 61 be adopted that a motion be entertained by the Chair prior to the referral of a proposal to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I would like to suggest that Mr. Kilcher's motion is out of order at this time. We are concerned in working on another matter here. It has nothing to do with this at all. I think it is out of order at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no second.

MCNEES: I would second it made under the proper circumstances.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, it might be well if you would hold that until we are at the proper time. It would seem to the Chair that Mr. Davis's objection is in order in that we have a particular subject before us.

KILCHER: Would the Chair instruct me as to what it considers the proper time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Between the time that we would be referring Mr. Davis, would you suggest the proper time, what it would be?

DAVIS: I suspect that what Mr. Kilcher really wanted to do at the moment was to move that this particular proposition be sent to Enrollment and Engrossment.

KILCHER: No.

DAVIS: Then if I am wrong on that I would say the proper time would be as soon as we have finished working on this particular proposition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I would say that too and the President will call that to your attention at that time, as soon as there are no amendments to be offered to this proposal, then you would be in order to offer the motion. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President. I would like to move that the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any committee announcements? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Committee VI will meet at 8 o'clock at Room 1009 in the Polaris Building.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee VI on Suffrage will meet at 8 p.m. in Room 1009 of the Polaris Building. Are there other committee announcements? If not, we have a motion before us that the Convention stand adjourned until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. tomorrow?" All those in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes have it and the Convention has not adjourned.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The vote has been announced. Do we have an amendment now before us?

COGHILL: I move that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:05 tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, you will have to have some business transpire first.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I wish to rise on a matter of personal privilege. I wish to congratulate the Judiciary, the Committee on the Judicial Branch, for being the only committee in the Convention that managed to hit its target date in producing its committee proposal and to remind them that it is later than you think and we still have no reports in from some of the very important committees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to rise on a similar matter of personal privilege. I would like to point out that there are a number of other committees that have finished work upon their proposals and they are in the mill, and it is not their fault that they have not been able to come on the floor for an actual formal report.

DOOGAN. I would like to point out that this body took some action here awhile ago that every time personal privilege was granted that the soundscriber and stenotypist would be shut off, and to date there has been about four or five personal privileges and everything has gone on as usual.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the Chair could have the personal privilege for just a moment, the Chair would like to congratulate the chairmen of all the committees for the long and hard hours that they have put in on committee work. Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: Mr. President, at this time I would move that Committee Proposal No. 1 as submitted be sent to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment.

SUNDBORG: Point of order. I believe that Mr. Kilcher attempted to make a motion and that the Chair said he would advise Mr. Kilcher.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, your point of order is well taken. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of order. I am not sure but what there might be still some amendments pending.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair had informed Mr. Kilcher with the apparent consent of the body, because there was no objection, that he would allow Mr. Kilcher to make such a motion as he had attempted to offer at a time prior to the time that the proposal should be sent to the Committee on Engrossment.

DAVIS: Aren't we on exactly the same business now as we were then? That was what I was trying to do was to dispose of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, that would probably be in line with the idea that the reason that Mr. Kilcher was asking for permission to offer the motion that he had offered.

R. RIVERS: Point of inquiry. Is there any other proposed amendments on the Clerk's desk?

HELLENTHAL: There are two amendments on the Clerk's desk, both of which were presented yesterday by Mr. Taylor, who is absent today. I have scanned the amendments and both of them I believe, have been taken care of by the action taken care of today. They are similar to other amendments that have been considered. However, in the absence of Mr. Taylor, although I don't think the amendments are of any consequence any more since today's action, I would hesitate to ask that we refer the matter to Engrossment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I am not an expert on rules, but I believe it has always been the custom for the President to move these different measures on after they have been acted on on the floor to committee or to Engrossment and Enrollment, and I don't believe Mr. Davis's motion is in order. That would have the effect of cutting off debate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, you are correct that that has been the general procedure but the Chair had given Mr. Kilcher to understand that he could offer a motion to amend these permanent rules at such time as it was decided that amendments had been completed to Committee Proposal No. 1. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of inquiry. I understand we have not reached that stage, that there is still a proposed amendment on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then we have not reached that stage, Mr. Rivers. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that Committee Proposal No. 1 be continued in second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that Committee Proposal No. 1 be continued in second reading. Is there objection?

BUCKALEW: I object.

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

SUNDBORG: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg so moves, Mr. McNealy seconds the motion that Committee Proposal No. 1 be continued in second reading. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the purpose of my offering this motion is to give us a chance tomorrow when Mr. Taylor, who is the author of several amendments, is present to consider the amendments which he would propose, and I would say that another purpose of it is to get Committee Proposal No. 1 from in front of us so that it may be the proper time for Mr. Kilcher to make his proposed motion for a change in the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think it is extremely foolish to hold this matter up because one of the delegates is not here. He is not ill and so I think it is poor policy to start because some member does not show up to hold up the whole proceedings of the Convention. That is the reason I object.

MCNEALY: It appears to me from the talk and without any reflection on anyone that the type of amendments and discussions and the various things here are to a point where a good many of the delegates who apparently worked hard all day and are getting very tired, and if we had a playback on some of this, I have been sitting back here listening and not talking, I think it would reflect the tired thoughts of the delegates, and I believe that leaving Mr. Taylor out of it, even it would be well to consider this in the morning and after a good night's sleep. That's the reason I seconded the motion.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I would be disinclined to vote for the motion as set forth by Mr. Sundborg by virtue of the fact that it might be establishing a precedent in the fashion in which we could hold back any material before this house. In other words, some delegate could write out a string of amendments to something and disappear for several days and we would have to hold it up in deference to the one delegate who wasn't here in order to take care of those amendments. I am in sympathy for Mr. Sundborg's attitude, but I dislike the way he has put it for the record.

METCALF: May I withdraw my second for Mr. Sundborg's motion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Actually the motion is not debatable because it is a suspension of the rules and the question is, "Shall Committee Proposal No. 1 be held over in second reading?" All those in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes have it and the proposal has not been carried over. Mr. Gray.

GREY: Mr. President, I move we adjourn until 9:05 tomorrow morning.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray moves and Mr. Victor Rivers seconds the motion that the Convention adjourn until 9:05 tomorrow morning.

GRAY: I ask for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 29 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cross, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Nolan, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 23 - Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Hermann, llilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Sundborg, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Boswell, Stewart, Taylor.)

DOOGAN: Mr. President, may I change my vote to "no"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan changes his vote to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 29 yeas, 23 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the Convention stands adjourned until 9:05 a.m. tomorrow. The Convention is adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

December 16, 1955

THIRTY-NINTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning the Reverend Victor Alfsen of the Presbyterian Church of Fairbanks. Reverend Alfsen will give our daily invocation.

REV. ALFSEN: Let us pray. Almighty God Who does hold us to account for the use and the abuse of our powers and privileges, grant we pray Thee to these delegates this day integrity of purpose and unfailing devotion to the cause of righteousness for Thy name's sake. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: Three absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special committee to read the journal have a report to make today?

DOOGAN: I ask that it be deferred until tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the report will be deferred until tomorrow. Are there any petitions or communications from outside the Convention? The Chair would like to state that Reverend Armstrong will have a set of 50 pictures. They will be available for the delegates if you will give your name to Mr. Dave Brown, Mr. Armstrong could arrange to have these pictures kept for you. The Chief Clerk will proceed with the communication.

CHIEF CLERK: Letter from Ron Nerland, Co-chairman of the Dance Committee at College, Business Administration Fraternity, the Christmas dance to be held Friday, December 16, immediately following the Christmas music program, an invitation for the delegates to attend.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is tonight, is it not?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication may be filed. Are there other communications?

CHIEF CLERK: I have none.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any reports of standing committees? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to report for the Local Government Committee that we have completed our proposed section of the constitution and it was approved by all members of our committee. The report is being prepared and as soon as it is mimeographed we will have it ready to present to the Convention. We intend to continue work as a Committee or as members of the Committee with Mr. Cooper as long as he is here, and we hope to have this in not later than Monday morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Rosswog. Are there other committee reports? If not, are there any proposals to be introduced at this time? Are there any motions or resolutions? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess for ten minutes for the purpose of allowing the committees which will be holding hearings in cities throughout Alaska to organize and to send out letters or telegrams to the places of those hearings in an attempt to establish time and place of the hearings.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for ten minutes in order that the suggestions as made by Mr. Sundborg can be accomplished. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to announce that there will be a meeting of committee chairmen at 12:30 in the luncheon room off the main dining room. The Chair would also like to request that all amendments be presented to the Chief Clerk's desk in writing. In other words, if you are about to offer an amendment please put it in writing or call for a brief enough time that you can put it in writing. Is there other unfinished business? Mr. Rosswog?

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, referring to reports of committees, there will be a meeting of the Rules Committee at noon. We will get together on a time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Rules Committee at noon. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, unless something intervenes, the Resources Committee will hold a luncheon meeting in the cafeteria.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I call your attention to the large chart at the front right corner of the room which was prepared by a subcommittee of the Committee on Style and Drafting of which Mr. Hurley was the chairman. In fact, I think Mr.

Hurley in person did the painting, and I don't understand it completely myself. I wonder if we could have unanimous consent for him to just briefly describe what that chart is about.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I disclaim any right to having painted it. I don't paint that well. The chart was asked for or suggested by the Style and Drafting Committee and by others as a sort of scheduling and picture in one look as to where the Convention stood in its various proposals. It was simply intended to represent the location of any particular proposal at any particular time, at least by weeks. I hope that the thing is reasonably self-explanatory. It is not completely filled in as to our present status. We have not had time to. I simply peg those on to demonstrate that the Judiciary Committee has had its first and second reading but has not been completed. The black cards represent being completed and the white cards represent target dates. It's not very complicated, I hope it will do some good.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease for a few minutes. Reverend Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I wanted to inform the delegates that these pictures will have at least 50 in the set, and what I want to do is leave a set in the Anchorage Library, one set here at the University and one at the Territorial Museum. They are not professional photography but I think they do have some interest and others will have pictures here to distribute. For the entire set I thought that $5.00 would cover the cost of mailing and film and reproduction, and I will be glad to see that you get these if you give your name to Dave Brown, then after recess we should have the set assembled and ready for you.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I inquire of Delegate Armstrong if these pictures are acceptable in the home. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: I am sure they are, Mr. McLaughlin. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I wonder if it would not be in order now to have reports from the Hearing Committee, that is the committees for hearings during recess, who they select for chairman in each case and what arrangements, if any, for setting hearing dates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there such reports forthcoming at this time? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, for the benefit of the committee and for a few requests to make for the delegation, the Juneau division has planned to have a panel discussion at probably the Senate chambers in Juneau on the 27th and 28th at 2 p.m. We are going to ask for radio participation. At least we will be able with the radio to reach out to a larger medium throughout the people of the Juneau area, and the Juneau delegation is fairly broad through the group, but we need a little help. We had a couple of voids, so we have delegated one of our members, Mr. Armstrong, to look into the finance group and be able to handle the problems of finance through Mr. Armstrong, so he will be contacting the finance group and probably Chairman Nerland, and if you can brief them up so he can be sure to answer all questions that Juneau may have on finance. The other is Local Government and we have designated Dora Sweeney to represent the Convention as far as the answers to Local Government is concerned, and I would ask Local Government to give Dora Sweeney all the inside dope as well as what you put out on the publication. Otherwise, we will have Gray in Apportionment and Robertson on Judiciary and Sweeney on Legislation and VanderLeest on Executive. Burke Riley and B. D. Stewart may or may not be on Resources, if they are in Juneau at that time, so George Sundborg is going to try to stand by on Resources which is going to be a very important committee. We may have as many as three on Resources. Armstrong will be on Bill of Rights and VanderLeest on Ordinances. I think we have a good setup for panel discussion, and I have every reason to believe that it will be worthwhile in the Juneau area.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, the delegation from the Anchorage area for the Third met and elected Helen Fischer President and Dorothy Awes Secretary. It was a tie vote so we flipped a coin to see who would be which. They are going to arrange meetings in Anchorage, and probably starting the 27th we will have two and maybe three days of meetings. The general idea was informal discussions with answers to questions, would be the approach.

BOSWELL: The Fairbanks delegation has elected myself Chairman, Ada Wien, Secretary, and appointed a committee consisting of George Cooper, Ralph Rivers, and James Doogan, to act as officers on arrangement. We felt that one day of hearings would suffice here because the Fairbanks people have had a good opportunity to keep up with Convention happenings, and we are setting tentative dates of the 28th or 29th, depending on what the committee can arrange for a meeting place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Mr. Gray modestly neglected to state that he had been elected Chairman of the Juneau Committee.

HURLEY: Mr. President, the Palmer Committee of one elected the Palmer Committee of one as President and Secretary, is pleased to announce that public hearings for constitutional discussions are scheduled at Wasilla on December 21, Palmer, December 29, Grange Hall, the 27th, and at the Kiwanis Luncheon on the 27th.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, the committee representing the Ketchikan area will hold hearings on the 27th or 28th at a place to be named later. Mr. Smith will act as Chairman, Mr. Smith will act as Secretary, Mr. Smith will discuss all of the proposed articles, and in view of the duties involved I am sure that Mr. Smith will be rather confused when it is all over.

HINCKEL: I erroneously informed the President that the Kodiak hearing would be on the 24th. It is on the 22nd, a Thursday afternoon at the Elks Club, the Elks Club being the only hall in Kodiak that is of adequate size. I wrote over there asking that the Chamber of Commerce arrange the hearing and they showed enough interest so they phoned me back so I expect that I will have considerable interest and quite a group there. Of course I will be along with Bo Smith I will probably be completely confused too. I hope I can gather enough information so I can answer some questions anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, the Nome delegation consisting of Mr. McNeese and myself has elected Mr. McNeese President though he does not know it yet, and Mrs. Hermann Secretary, and we will hold meetings beginning on the 28th of December and continuing until they run us out of town. We don't know whether they will do it or not, but we do know there is a little bit of unhappiness in Nome that we hope to overcome, and we are going to have to do all of this various committee work ourselves, and like Mr. Smith, I am sure we are going to be very much confused, but I do hope that we will have available to us before we leave for the recess, reports and committee proposals from all the committees so that we can spend one week boning up on what has been suggested and having it ready for presentation after we start the hearings on the 28th of December. And I am sorry Mr. McNeese is not here today because I would like to have him report any other plans he may have made. We also have made arrangements to speak before various local groups like the Chamber of Commerce and the Womens Club, organizations of that sort, and I know of course a whole lot is going to depend on what brand of weather Nome turns loose on us at that time. We hope to get the whole town interested at least and have their viewpoints to present to the Convention when we return.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The Nenana hearing will be held in the Civic Center at 8 p.m. on the 27th. We will hold hearings for approximately two hours and have a smorgasbord and Tom-and-Jerry party afterwards, and all the delegates are very welcome to attend.

KNIGHT: Mr. President, I will do the best I can to carry the ball down at Sitka, and I am holding a special meeting on the 27th in the school auditorium. After that is all over we will adjourn to the Elks Club.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: The Petersburg delegation will hold hearings on the 27th and 28th in the high school auditorium, and I have an idea there will be other hearings conducted at the Elks Club, and if it is possible I intend to go to Kake at my own expense to hold hearings over there at some time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: Bristol Bay delegation will hold hearings at Dillingham on or about the 27th or 28th and on the way back after recess I will hold hearings at Naknek. If possible I might get down to Egegik and Ugashik if the schedule permits.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, speaking from the Seward area, the city council chambers are available, and a tentative hearing is set for Friday, December 23. After the hearings we may adjourn to the Elks Club.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, the Cordova hearings will be held on either the 27th or 28th, probably in the city hall, but possibly at the Elks Club.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: The Valdez hearings will be held on the 27th or 28th. It depends on when the hall is available there for our use and that will consist of President Bill Egan and myself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The delegation will show Mr. Harris as Chairman of that. Mr. King.

KING: The Haines delegation consisting of King, Secretary, and King, President, tentatively established the 27th in Haines as a hearing. We had hoped that Mr. Riley might participate in this, but I have noticed by the former report that the Juneau delegation has stolen my right-hand man, so I will probably conduct the hearings alone.

GRAY: On account of the unusual conditions that prevail in Southeastern, I wish to extend an invitation to the Haines and Petersburg delegates and Sitka delegation to attend our meeting in Juneau, if you are still there at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other delegates who wish to report? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: The Unalakleet hearings will be held in the public school social room, the tentative date is the 27th.

KILCHER: I am still awaiting news from home. My wife might decide to come up here, in which case I would be unable to attend hearings in Homer. However, if this is not the case, I intend to hold hearings in the school house in Homer on the 27th.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anyone else wish to report? If not, we will proceed with the regular order of business which would be Committee Proposal No. 1 which is still before us. Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: Mr. President, day before yesterday I offered two amendments to Committee Proposal No. 1, and in my absence yesterday, the matters of these amendments have been taken care of, so I would like to withdraw.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Taylor's proposed amendments will be withdrawn.

CHIEF CLERK: They were not even read. They had just been placed on my desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to announce that we have with us this morning a part of the sophomore and freshman class of the Fairbanks High School. We are very happy to have you with us and hope you enjoy the proceedings with us. We also have in the gallery, Alaska's Commissioner of Agriculture, Mr. James E. Wilson. (Applause) We are pleased to have you with us, Mr. Wilson. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 1? Are there any more amendments to the proposal? If there is no objection, the proposal -- Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I now suggest that this is the time for Delegate Kilcher to make his motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate Kilcher.

KILCHER: I have not had time to prepare the motion in writing and I would like to have the privilege of postponing the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the matter will be postponed. If there is no objection and if there are no further amendments to Committee Proposal No. 1 it is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to take its regular course. We have before us then Committee Proposal No. 5 as the first proposal on the calendar. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, just as a matter of information, I noticed the calendar on December 13, Committee Proposal No. 1 followed by Committee Proposal No. 3 and then the calendar for December 16 has Committee Proposal No. 5 followed by No. 3. I am just a little bit confused here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there an explanation for that? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: No sir, I was wondering how that happened myself. So far as I know the Rules Committee did not meet.

SWEENEY: I am concerned about the same question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for about two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we stand at recess for a few minutes for the Rules Committee to meet.

HELLENTHAL: Can the recess be set for a fixed time so we can leave this chamber with impunity.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for 15 minutes. That will mean at 10:10 a.m. the Convention will convene again. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. .The Chair would like to ask at this time if Dennis Cook, Vice President of the Sophomore Class of the Fairbanks High School, could come forward. (Mr. Cook came forward.) (Applause) Dennis, this is the gavel that was loaned to the Convention in the early days of the Convention by the Fairbanks High School. We appreciate it very much and we hope that you will return it safely to them. (Applause)

DENNIS COOK: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Rules Committee have a report to make at this time? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, the Rules Committee has decided to reverse the decision of the position of the proposal that is contained on the calendar for December 16 and recommends that we take up Committee Proposal No. 3 to be followed by Committee Proposal No. 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would mean then that we have before us at this time Committee Proposal No. 3. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for a matter of personal privilege for a short moment or two. It occurs to me in our consideration of these proposals as they come before us, a great amount of time is taken up in the plenary session in amendments and discussion which could be solved by a sort of a question and answer period or perhaps a committee of the whole interrogating and answering questions of the committee itself. I don't know whether the procedure is available or what but certainly it would be more conducive to getting the facts of the thinking of the Committee if we were able to more freely ask questions of the Committee than I think that we are in the formality of the plenary session, and again as I say, I hesitate to go through the parliamentary procedures of moving that the Rules Committee change the rules or set up a rule to take care of this problem, but talking to other delegates I find they have a similar opinion and perhaps ten or fifteen minutes of panel discussion or cross examination would save us many hours in the final analysis. Perhaps it is too late to do anything now, but I bring the matter up for consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I heartily concur with Mr. Hurley in what he says. For instance, I notice one thing in this proposal that I would like to change, but when I realized how long these committees have labored over these problems and how extensively they have delved into them, I naturally assume they know more about it than I do. So I would like to hear the reason for the Committee's decision before I would suggest an amendment. If we could hear that, it would save us a lot of time, there would be a lot of amendments that would not be submitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, would you then feel that a motion should be made at this time to revert to a Committee of the Whole on this Proposal No. 3?

BARR: Either that or some other plan. I think it would be a good idea.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I do not feel at first that that is the proper approach to this because I believe we are tied up with some valuable information going over the tape that might be eliminated in the Committee of the Whole. I feel that we can move that the Chairman of the Committee report on his activities, a preliminary report on the activities of his Committee and he can start the discussion and we can question his group. Would that be parliamentary procedure? Just in the motion that the Chairman of the Committee report on his Committee activities and then it will take out the second motion of changes, amendments, etc. We can get the discussion and the record will stand both on the stenotype and on the tape.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Whatever procedure you feel would be best. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Do you have a motion for Committee of the Whole or is the matter open for discussion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Just for information purposes the Chair will allow a discussion on just how we should proceed.

V. RIVERS: I wanted to say that as we get farther into the second reading I also notice the cumbersomeness of which we proceed, and I feel that Hawaii solved the situation quite well by resolving itself into a Committee of the Whole for discussion in second reading. I have here a copy of the proceedings of the Executive Committee in connection with the preparation and also the Committee of the Whole hearings which they conducted and held. They took a complete record of the Committee of the Whole both on stenotype and tape, and then after the Committee of the Whole rose, they appointed two or three people to make notes and to condense down the gist of what took place so that becomes a part of the journal, that Committee of the Whole report in a condensed form and it is therefore easy to see what the intent of the whole body was after the act is passed out of second reading. We have talked about this a number of times before but I believe that the proper handling without observing the nonsoundscribing rule which we have adopted, the proper handling in the Committee of the Whole would be most expeditious and would probably be the most satisfactory for the handling of this second reading and the amendment period and discussion period.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, did you have something to say on the matter?

HINCKEL: I think that Mr. Rivers said what I had in mind. I rather object to anything other than a Committee of the Whole because I am afraid that some of the more experienced legislators would not let us accomplish what some of us would like to have, and that is more or less an informal discussion so we could find out what the facts are.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I would be in favor of Mr. Barr's motion. I would like to amend it to limit to say 45 minutes and try this new method and see if we can't make a little faster progress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did Mr. Barr so move?

BARR: No, I did not make any motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was allowing this discussion just for information purposes.

BARR: I merely made a suggestion that we learn more about the proposals before we submit amendments. It could be done very well in a Committee of the Whole. There is one other method that occurs to me. The Chairman of the Committee could take the floor and make a verbal report and then any member who had doubts about a particular section could ask him to make a further report on that section, so either way would suit me. I will leave it up to someone else to make a motion to which method we should use.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that we proceed by first having the proposal read by the Chief Clerk in plenary session, as I think is required by our rules, and then becoming a Committee of the Whole for a discussion at which the Chairman, or if he designates other members of his Committee, may explain the provisions of the proposal and answer the questions of the delegates and that the Committee of the Whole then rise and report its findings, whatever they are, to the Convention for such action as may be appropriate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of order. Inasmuch as this will be an amendment to the rules I suggest that it be offered in writing and be dealt with at the 2 o'clock session in the afternoon when the Rules Committee has met.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, would it actually be an amendment to the rules inasmuch as Committee of the Whole is allowed under the procedure that Mr. Sundborg suggested?

KILCHER: It makes no difference to me, but I had thought that since the procedure is tied in with what the rules prescribe for having it read by the Chief Clerk, and then it looks to me that is another official step that the proposal will have to go through and I am all in favor of it, but as such a step it should be part of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. Kilcher, the proposal would have to be read in any event in second reading first before it went into the Committee of the Whole in order to give the body an opportunity to make certain they had heard it read. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to see us try the Committee of the Whole proceedings but I would have to oppose it if we did not keep a transcript of the records a transcript of the proceedings of the Committee of the Whole under the suspension of that rule I mentioned and that we did also have available among our membership at least two or three members to get together and produce the report of the Committee of the Whole in condensed form, generally condensing the subject matter which we have discussed in showing our final decisions and that would be for the journal and the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would consent to adding to my request for unanimous consent the provisions that the proceedings within the Committee of the Whole be soundscribed and also preserved by stenotype record and that at the beginning of the Committee of the Whole session the Chairman of the Committee appoint one or more members to keep a report on the proceedings.

V. RIVERS: I would agree to that amendment, except that the Chairman of the Committee would not necessarily have to appoint members. For instance, I was thinking of Mr. Sady or somebody like him or Mr. Rogers, might be men who could very materially assist in helping to prepare the report.

SUNDBORG: I would agree to that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to state that Mr. Rogers is not here and Mr. Sady has had some unfortunate news from home and will probably leave here Saturday evening, not to return until January 4. It would as of necessity entail a great deal of work by those members who would be delegated to make the report as has been suggested.

V. RIVERS: As I said, I have here copies of the report of Hawaii, but we do have to have two or three competent people to condense this meeting and intent and our final decisions into a report form. It wouldn't matter who it was as long as they could handle the work.

HERMANN: Is there any indication on the part of Public Administration Service that anyone will be sent to replace Mr. Sady?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Owing to the fact, Mrs. Hermann, that the Convention will be in recess on Monday it was the feeling of the President that at this time it would probably not be necessary for that one day that we might be in session to have another man come from the states and then go back again.

Mr. Sady will return. But Mr. Kilcher, if the suggestion as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers is the suggestion we proceed under, rather than the suggestion that Mr. Sundborg first mentioned, then it would take, the Chair would feel, an amendment to the rules or a suspension of the rules in order that that be accomplished. There is actually nothing before us on the floor.

SUNDBORG: I asked unanimous consent and that would carry a suspension of the rules, would it not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Sundborg, that would carry a suspension of the rules. You asked unanimous consent, now could you state it?

SUNDBORG: I asked unanimous consent that we proceed to consider Committee Proposal No. 3 by first having it read by the Chief Clerk and then becoming a Committee of the Whole for a discussion of the proposal with the soundscribing to continue through the Committee of the Whole session, a record of which would also be kept by a stenotype, and that at the beginning of the Committee of the Whole session the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole appoint one or more persons to prepare a report of the Committee of the Whole to the main body on what transpired in the committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information. I would like to ask Mr. Victor Rivers a question and Mr. Sundborg, too. In order to make the benefits of such a Committee of the Whole reciprocal to the Convention and the Committee itself, would it not be rather good thing if we incorporated in your general idea the following one namely, that those proposals that are luckily not in yet should be brought into the Committee of the Whole before their final form is reached by their corresponding committees in order that that committee, in case they learn something by the Committee of the Whole, then could go back and do necessary changes without having to reverse too much machinery -- a thought that might have been very beneficial two weeks ago but yet it is not too late I think. The Committee of the whole idea is a very good one, and it should be possibly reached with those proposals which are not finally jelled yet, before they are in a form that experience has shown, is hard to correct.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, it is my understanding that all, or at least practically all of the committees have actually turned their reports and their proposals into the boiler room and they are now being reproduced, and I don't think it would serve any good purpose to discuss them before we have those proposals in the form that the committees have decided upon before us, and so I object to having Mr. Kilcher's suggestion incorporated in my unanimous consent request.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent request?

METCALF: I object.

SUNDBORG: I so move that we suspend the rules to follow the procedure I have suggested.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

BOSWELL: I am not objecting to Mr. Sundborg's amendment except that I am wondering where this report from the subcommittee that is going to report to the Committee of the Whole, when that is going to come into the picture. It would seem to me there is going to be considerable time necessary to get this intent ready and during that time the proposal is going to be lying idle, and I just wondered if we could clear up that point.

SUNDBORG: It was my thought, Mr. Boswell, that that could be handled overnight or after hours by the few people who would be designated to prepare the report and then on the following day the Committee of the Whole could form again to hear and adopt the report. I would suggest we try it once and let's see if it would be a good procedure.

TAYLOR: I don't like it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Actually, Mr. Taylor, the question involves a suspension of the rules and while the Chair has, for information, allowed previous discussion, now that the motion has been made, a suspension of the rules is not debatable.

DAVIS: Why does this involve a suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Because it is a different manner of procedure or proceedings than the rules call for.

DAVIS: I thought the rules called for going into a Committee of the Whole at any time that we wanted to do so. The only thing different about this is whether we do or do not tape or record. That was not a rule but something the Convention adopted here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, that is generally in the Committee of the Whole, the reason is that it is not a matter of the record. The Committee of the Whole proceedings are not a matter of the record, an informal discussion can be entertained in the Committee of the Whole without being on the record. That is one of the main reasons for a Committee of the Whole session. Now the procedure we are attempting to adopt here would make them a matter of the record and would be a diversion from the ordinary parliamentary procedure and necessarily becomes a suspension of the rules.

KILCHER: In order not to repeat this same performance, I had suggested that we make a rule that all proposals get the same treatment, not just the one here experimentally, and then in the future save time. We lost two hours yesterday. I can see us losing an hour now, and maybe on the next proposal, so if we referred it to the Rules Committee, let them set it up, it is cut and dried, and we save time in the future.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Sundborg's motion be adopted by the Convention with relation to the procedure in the Committee of the Whole?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 10 - Cooper, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, McNealy, Metcalf, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers.

Absent: 5 - Hilscher, King, McNees, Riley, Robertson.

CHIEF CLERK: 40 yeas, 10 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has been adopted by the Convention. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am going to renew my request for information. If we did not stay in Committee of the Whole or we didn't go into Committee of the Whole -- everything we say and do would be a matter of our permanent record. Some day this may be printed as it was in New Jersey with several volumes of things. What happens now? We have decided to keep transcriptions of this thing and have the stenotypist take the whole proceedings of the Committee of the Whole. Then we get a report from the Committee of the Whole, then we go back into the regular session and then we take up the matter of formal amendments and that sort of thing. Well is this stenographic record we are making and this tape we are making going to appear in those printed volumes for the archives and for history, and why are we in the Committee of the Whole unless the whole thing goes into the record?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, no action so far as I know has been taken by the convention or anybody else of printing a verbatim record of everything that happens at this Convention. It really would be a very thick volume and 90 per cent would be utterly useless. I have gone along with the idea of having this soundscribed and having the stenotypist keep a record, but I do not think we ought to have it published in several volumes, and if we did we could at that time decide whether we wanted to include perhaps as a supplement the report or transcription of what happened in this Committee of the Whole. In any event, I think that Mr. Rivers' statement is probably out of order. We have already decided this question and have decided upon a procedure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers stated that he was rising to a point of information. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposal for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 3 at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Convention? Is it the desire that we resolve ourselves into a Committee of the Whole at this time? Mr. Smith?

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 this afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 this afternoon. Is there objection?

SUNDBORG: I object.

MARSTON: I second the motion.

SMITH: Mr. President, the reason for the motion was that there are two committees who have need for another hour's work, and while it is possible that a part of that work could be done during the luncheon hour, there is a very great conflict between several committees. I believe the Rules Committee has a meeting scheduled for the luncheon hour. The Resources Committee would like to meet; I believe the Executive Committee needs another meeting, and I feel that the two committees, the Resources Committee and Executive Committee could, if the time was allowed, possibly complete to a large extent the work which they must complete, and I feel that the time lost here would be regained many fold by taking this time now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.?"

DOOGAN: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following results:

Yeas: 29 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, Harris, Hellenthal, Johnson, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 21 - Awes, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, Metcalf, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Absent: 5 - Hilscher, King, McNees, Riley, Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 29 yeas, 21 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the Convention is at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 3. The Chair would like to announce that we have visiting us this afternoon part of the freshman class of the Fairbanks Public Schools, and we are happy to have you with us. The Chair will entertain a motion to resolve into a Committee of the Whole.

SMITH: Mr. Chairman, might I ask unanimous consent to revert to committee reports for a moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection we may revert to committee reports.

SMITH: I simply want to state that the article on resources is ready for the boiler room. A committee report, after slight alterations and proof reading, will be ready for the boiler room, and I am sure it will be ready for all delegates before the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee reports? If not, the Chair will entertain a motion to resolve ourselves into a Committee of the Whole. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I so move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Ralph Rivers, would you take the Chair please. (Mr. Ralph Rivers took the Chair at this time.)

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: The Committee will come to order. Would it be the pleasure of the delegates that the Chairman of the Committee, the Proposal No. 3, give us the explanatory remarks? If there is no objection, Mr. Collins.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Chairman, I believe that under the unanimous consent request of this morning that the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole would appoint several delegates or persons to keep record of what transpires here and make a report thereon.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Yes. I think three would be an adequate number to do that. Is there any objection to making three the number of that committee? I appoint Mr. Sundborg, Mr. Victor Rivers, Katherine Nordale. Now, Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: Mr. Chairlan and fellow members of the Convention, at this time I do not desire to take any more time of the Convention, for I know time is the essence, but I think you will agree with me that heretofore I have not occupied a great deal of attention or time of the Convention, but I am very much concerned with the Committee's report on Direct Legislation, Amendment and Revision. This report has been read in its entirety by the Chief Clerk here this morning. I might make a few comments, and I think it is in order that as Chairman of this Committee, that I should take over the comments of the committee. We had submitted to us in the beginning, Proposals No. 29 and 34 for consideration of this Committee. Together with that we had the individual opinion of the different members of the Committee. For some time we were stymied on progress of the report of this Committee. There seemed to be two or three lines of thought on the various principles that were incorporated with this proposal. Not getting anywhere, it was decided that we consider the different lines of thought and the Committee come in with a committee proposal. We have submitted that to you, a committee report. It was okayed by the seven members of this Committee. Yet perhaps there was some individual feeling of members that their idea was not properly expressed in this report, and it was decided to place this report back to the Convention for the consideration of each individual member here for a full expression of his opinion, and we want to hear his opinion, and the Committee itself will not feel bad about any amendment that is germane to the principles that are set forth in this report. I would like to have the different articles, I would like to read the comments of the Committee. Perhaps it might give some enlightenment into the questions that you would ask about that report. It will take very little time. Now on the commentary of the Committee on the Article of Initiative, Referendum and Recall.

"(Section 1 Initiative) The initiative is the power of the people to initiate laws themselves and to provide for a referendum on such laws without action by the legislature. This section reserves the authority of the people to initiate laws by petition and vote of the people directly.

(Section 2 Referendum) This section permits the people to require that laws passed by the Legislature be referred to a vote of the people before taking effect. This power is known as the Referendum.

(Section 3 Procedure) Many constitutions, in the states which make provision for the use of the initiative and referendum, contain a great degree of detail relating to the exercise of the initiative and referendum. This section permits the legislature to provide by law for some details, but provides that the Legislature may not restrict the substantive rights guaranteed in Section 4, nor to require procedures more difficult than provided in Section 4.

(Section 4 Petition, ballot title; election; vote required) This section sets forth certain substantive provisions and minimum procedures affecting the exercise of the initiative and referendum. To prevent waste of money on elections for laws that are unconstitutional, sponsors are required to submit a proposed law to the Attorney General for certification of its constitutionality, subject to court review, prior to the circulation of petitions. The provision is intended to stop, at the initial stage, the circulation of petitions for laws that would, even if approved by the voters, result in expensive court action.

If the legislature adopts a measure that is the subject of the initiative, the measure does not have to be submitted to the people.

Additional details of procedure may be provided by the legislature subject to the limits imposed by this section. The procedure outlined has the advantage of brevity while insuring the substantive rights to the people.

(Section 5 Restrictions) The exercise of the initiative is a fundamental right of the people, but special interest groups should not be permitted to unduly hamper the operation of the government. The restrictions in Section 5 will prevent the abuses and problems that have sometimes arisen in the states permitting initiative and referendum. Neither the initiative nor referendum can be used with regard to emergency legislation, appropriations, or measures earmarking taxes and other revenues, or for special or local laws that are of interest to only one group of people or people in only one portion of the state.

(Section 6 Recall) The right of the people to remove elected officials is preserved. The Legislature is directed to provide the methods to be used.

Commentary on the Article on Amendment and Revision

(Section 1 Methods) This section outlines three methods by which the constitution may be amended or revised. By action of two separate legislatures directly; (2) by action of one legislature and referral to the people; and (3) by constitutional convention.

(Section 2 Proposals by Legislature) The Legislature, by a two-thirds vote, may submit a proposed amendment to a vote at a general election. Use of general election is intended to insure a substantial vote on the question.

An alternate method is provided which permits the legislature, by a two-thirds vote, to submit a proposed amendment to the next legislature, but not to a succeeding session of the same legislature. If the second legislature adopts the amendment by a two-thirds vote it becomes part of the constitution without referring it to a vote of the people.

(Section 3 Constitutional Convention) The legislature is empowered to call a convention, but if the legislature does not provide for a convention each ten years, the question is submitted to the people at the following general election.

The legislature is authorized to prescribe the procedures and powers of a convention; but if it does not make such provisions, the law calling this convention will be followed insofar as practical."

That is the commentary on the articles which your Committee has put before you in the substitute report. Now on December 4, to settle the line of the Committee itself, we have drafted this as short as possible, as plain as possible, and if there is any amendments to come forth, the Committee will have no feeling. We have seven on our Committee and the Committee will answer the questions that might be put forth to members of this Committee.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to direct a question to Mr. Collins. Mr. Collins, there seems to be some difference of opinion as to whether or not the principle of the initiative and the referendum is a desirable and necessary one. I would like to have the comments or through you the comments of your Committee as to whether or not you feel the use of the initiative and referendum in any way circumscribes the idea of republican form of government, and if so is the principle of the initiative and referendum a desirable one for inclusion in the constitution as your Committee sees it.

COLLINS: I tried to infer that the draft that submitted this report would come to one thought on the matter, and I think we got together on that, and to prevent a minority report, and I think the Committee itself is pretty well satisfied with this report as presented. Now to give the individual thought of the members on this, we spent hours on it, and I don't think that the Convention would gain a great deal by that, but it would take up a lot of time. This is plain English language and to the point, and Mr. Taylor is the Vice Chairman of that. If you wish to make an explanation, Mr. Taylor, I would be glad for you to.

TAYLOR: Mr. Rivers, I might say we, the Committee, went into the historical background of the initiative and referendum. North Dakota was the first state to adopt the initiative and referendum so as to reserve to the people the power of initiating laws or either accepting or rejecting laws that have been passed by the legislature. Now, in our deliberations, I believe that we went through the laws, the constitutions of various states that have the initiative and referendum of which there are 19, and it was between about 1898 and 1928, I believe it was, that the states, practically all of the states that now have the initiative and referendum adopted the same. And in reviewing the history of the use of the referendum, I think the Committee members had differences of opinion as to whether or not the initiative and referendum should be included in the constitution. Although it has not been used a great deal in the last few years in some of the states that did use it before, the initiative and referendum is there and it serves a useful purpose in this way that the legislature does know that the people have reserved to them the right to initiate legislation and the right to pass upon legislation that has been passed by the legislature, so that ultimately they can, if they deem fit, can guide the legislature or guide the lawmaking in certain particulars. Now in practically all the states that have the initiative and referendum there are certain limitations put upon the matters that can be acted upon by those measures. Now appropriations are not subject to the initiative or the referendum. Some states made a great mistake by not restricting the initiative measures and allowed pressure groups to gather great numbers of signatures to a petition and that petition would require the expenditure of large amounts of money, perhaps a great deal more than the state could possibly afford and sometimes they would also initiate some legislation to raise money, a revenue measure and then directed that the proceeds of that measure would be utilized for a particular purpose. In other words, it took the making of revenue measures and expenditure of the funds away from the legislature and in some instances the governmental functions and governmental institutions suffered a great deal. And it was necessary within as short a time as possible to undo the damage that has been done. Now in this present proposal as the Committee returned it, and I might say as Mr. Collins, our Chairman has said, that this does constitute, you may say, the compromise thought of the Committee. We were several weeks. We had differences of opinion. Some of the members of the Committee thought that all the details of the proposal, or all the details of the matter, should be spelled out to the minute degree, and others felt that they should have the bare outline of granting the right to reserve powers to the people and then letting the legislature set up the machinery for implementing, so we have included in this proposal the least number of details that we could. Now of course our first sections there is the right of the people.

V. RIVERS: May I ask a question. Before I go into the sections I was trying to determine, I think it is absolutely essential before we include anything in the constitution or in the laws that we determine three things: first, the desirability; second, the need; and third, the workability. Now I have gathered from what you said that your Committee considers the initiative and referendum desirable in the constitution.

TAYLOR: Well, I think on the matter that we have it in here now it is, because it is in a way that it cannot do any harm. It cannot interfere with the appropriations or raising of revenue. It cannot affect the disbursements of state funds.

V. RIVERS: Could I ask this? You say it cannot do any harm. Is it good and is it actually needed in this particular approach?

TAYLOR: I might say, Mr. Rivers, I went into that quite carefully. I find out that all initiative and referendum bills, or states that adopted that method of direct legislation, there has been none since 1928. Some of those states have attempted to repeal that provision of their constitution, and others have used it little if any. Now there was quite a fine treatise on that subject by a professor of political science and he reviewed the history of the initiative and referendum in Oregon over a period of ten years, 1938-1948. He took the measures one by one which had been either initiated or which had been referred, and when he summed up his opinion after a very long study and a thorough study of the proposition, he said in all probability the legislature would have done the same things that the initiative and referendum accomplished. Of course, now we know in some states the exercise of the initiative and referendum was perhaps warranted by one act maybe that it put through. One of them was in California. The Civil Service Act for state employees was put through by means of the initiative measure. The legislature had been importuned for year after year for civil service status of the employees, and it was only in that way that they finally got it. Of course, if the proper safeguards are not put around the type of legislation that can be initiated by the people, as I said before, they can do a lot of harm. There was one in California that within a year they found out it was bankrupting the state, and they had to get out another initiative and do away with the first one. Colorado had the same experience, and the State of Washington, because they were levying taxes under those bills and directing where these taxes were going, and the State of Washington in a period of about eighteen months found themselves with not only losing a 60,000,000 dollar surplus that it had in the treasury but also 120,000,000 dollars in the hole. Colorado was about the same way.

V. RIVERS: With certain safeguards the Committee considers it useful and desirable. Now what about the workability? Do you figure it is workable in a territory like Alaska, of this size and widespread population? I would like some comments on that.

TAYLOR: We took that into consideration, Mr. Rivers, in drawing this up. I might say in our initiative we have left a small percentage of the voters who voted for the governor in the previous election for the amount necessary to initiate a petition. So then I might say in another way that we have tried to protect the voters and state from pressure groups is the fact that before a petition can be circulated, ten sponsors of that petition must have it up and submit it to the attorney general not only as certifying as to whether the proposition is set out properly on the ballot but also as to its constitutionality, and if he does not give that certificate .as to its constitutionality and the proper setting out of the ballot on that, they cannot circulate it and that will overcome the arguments against the initiative and referendum. In some states due to the .fact that pressure groups could get the required signatures and they could file it with the secretary of state regardless of whether it had the proper designation of the matter that was to be acted on, regardless of the constitutionality of it, even if it did pass, the court could throw it out, so we have that for safeguards.

V. RIVERS: Your Committee, I assume, thinks it is workable for the Territory in its present form?

TAYLOR: I believe it would.

V. RIVERS: One other question, on the basis of the general application of this act, before we go into detail, do you think that in our Organic Act it says, "We shall have a republican form of government." Does this in any way circumscribe the idea the republican form of government which is legislation through the elected representative rather than direct from the people?

TAYLOR: I know that argument has been advanced. It might be the exception that if our republican form of government did perhaps fall down, that the general public will have a vast interest in it with their reserve powers, if the powers to exercise, if the right to exercise that power is restricted to certain things, I don't believe it is a departure from our republican form of government.

JOHNSON: Mr. Chairman, may I address a question to Mr. Taylor? In this connection, Mr. Taylor, it is my understanding from looking at Committee Proposal No. 5 that the Committee on Legislation recommended that we hold meetings of the legislature each year. Now with the legislature meeting that frequently, do you think it is still necessary to have some safeguards such as this as you propose, or would there be a sufficient check on the legislative procedure meeting once a year?

TAYLOR: I believe it would be, Mr. Johnson, in this way. It might be some very badly needed legislation but which the legislature would refuse to act upon. I could see a number of reasons which we don't have to elaborate on that but there might be some pressure groups. Well, if that was the case, and the people had the right to initiate this legislation they could possibly cure the ills that were existing by reason of the legislature not working.

JOHNSON: Don't you think these so-called pressure groups might exercise just as much influence on the legislature?

TAYLOR: Absolutely they might, but if the legislature did not act, after the legislature adjourned at any time in the future, then they could initiate the legislation which the legislature had refused maybe even if they had been petitioned, not initiative petition but other petitions.

EGAN: Mr. Chairman, may I address a question to Mr. Taylor?

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: You may, Mr. Egan.

EGAN: Mr. Taylor, in the article on Direct Legislation, Section 1, it says, "The people reserve the power by petition to propose laws and to enact or reject such laws at the polls." Now the reading of that section would imply that the people through the power of the initiative would not have the right to reject any laws that they themselves had not already put on the books, in that order.

TAYLOR: That would come under Section 2, Mr. Egan. That is the referendum, after a law is passed, then they could by a petition have a vote upon that.

EGAN: My question was, Mr. Taylor, that under this particular provision of the initiative with relation to the initiative power of the people, they could not attempt to reject a law that was already on the books. They could only attempt to reject a law that had been passed by the initiative provision.

TAYLOR: That is right, that would be the only thing, now I think in that first section, Mr. Egan, is the fact that they can petition, they file this petition. It then is referred to the people, and the people can reject it or adopt it.

EGAN: Then, Mr. Taylor, if a law is passed by the people through the use of the proposed initiative when would the law become a law?

TAYLOR: In 120 days I believe we have in here no, 90 days, and any referendum petition would necessarily have to be filed with the secretary of state within the 90 days after the law is enacted.

EGAN: Where does it say that?

TAYLOR: Page 2, line 6. The first part of the word "referendum" starts at the end of that line. Referendum petitions shall be filed within 90 days after adjournment of the legislative session at which the measure was passed."

EGAN: That does not say that is when the law will become enacted through the initiative. It just says that is when they shall be filed.

TAYLOR: If that is filed, that suspends them, but, .it does not suspend an emergency act. If there is an emergency clause upon a bill, the referendum is not operable.

EGAN: In Section 5 it says, "Neither the initiative nor referendum may be used as a means of making or defeating appropriations of public funds or earmarking of revenues nor for local or special legislation." But it says nothing in there denying the people the right to go to the polls and do away with a particular tax, say, that had been levied by the legislature. Did you mean that the people could, through the use of the initiative, go to the polls and nullify any act that they might so choose? I am thinking if that is true what might happen in some cases where a certain appropriation had been made but you would not be voting against the appropriation, but if the people went to the polls, if there was not some restriction there, and did away with the tax measure that the legislature had deemed absolutely necessary to provide the revenues, it could cause chaos until that situation was corrected.

TAYLOR: If the use of those moneys was so imperative, Mr. Egan, I think the legislature could very easily attach an emergency measure on that and take it out of the provisions of the referendum.

EGAN: Could the legislature do that or would it be necessary to add some wording in Section 5 in order to be certain that through the action of the general public at the polls that they might do away with enough revenue that would cripple some program that they had no intention of crippling?

TAYLOR: I don't believe they would have the right to take away revenue unless they could show some methods of raising the same amount of revenue from different matters. As your question states, it might be to clarify this matter that if we could amend this to show, to carry out the intent you ask, that it could not impair the revenue structure that had been passed by the legislature.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor a question. I would like to carry Mr. Egan's thought just a little bit further, Mr. Taylor, and I would like to carry it where one legislature has imposed, say the property tax and then another legislature comes along and abolishes that property tax. I notice according to your Section 1 and Section 5 that I don't consider that there is anything in there that would allow the people either, through the initiative, to oppose the abolishing of that property tax by the legislature.

TAYLOR: Not unless it indirectly affected the appropriations.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Marston has been trying to .get the floor.

MARSTON: I don't rise to ask questions. When Mr. Taylor is through I would like to talk on the subject, if I may.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: We will stick to the asking of questions. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I would like to ask some questions of Mr. Taylor. Would you refer to the last sentence of Section 4 in line 19 of the proposal, "No law passed by the initiative may be vetoed by the Governor nor amended or repealed by the legislature for a period of three years." As I read that, it is possible to infer there that the governor might have a right to veto such a law after three years, and I wonder if that is what you intended or if you meant that the governor would have no right to veto it at all, but the legislature might have a right to amend or repeal after three years?

TAYLOR: I think Mr. Davis that all legislatures, the governor must veto a bill within a certain number of days, and he couldn't wait for another year and the legislature for a period of three years would not be able to repeal that law by an act of the legislature, but there would be nothing to prevent the people, if they felt that the act that they had initiated was wrong, why they can then by the appropriate petition can repeal it.

DAVIS: The thing I was trying to make clear was your intent here. I think it can be read the way I read it, and I think if it is intended that the governor have no right to veto at that it might be fixed up by in line 20 after the word "nor", say, "nor may it be amended or repealed by the legislature, etc."

TAYLOR: It might be in going over these matters so much for about three weeks that they seem very plain and apparent to us as to the meaning, but if we could add anything to clarify the meaning, why I think the Committee would go right along.

DAVIS: It isn't your intention in any event, that the governor shall have any right to veto any matter that is initiative?

TAYLOR: No, sir. It is only the people that can do it and the legislature after three years.

DAVIS: Well, as long as I'm on my feet, then let me ask a question on a couple of other sections about the same place. Section 5, line 24. has to do with restrictions on the use of the initiative. It says that the initiative may not be used for various things including, "as a means of making or defeating appropriations of public funds or earmarking of revenues nor for local or special legislation." Now I take it that what you intended there was rather than defeating or earmarking of revenues, that the initiative may not earmark revenues?

TAYLOR: They cannot.

DAVIS: That was your intention?

TAYLOR: That is right.

DAVIS: It was suggested in conversations among some of us this morning that it might be possible since you have listed various things that cannot be initiated and have not included an amendment of the constitution, that it might be inferred that then one could amend the constitution by initiative. It was also argued along that line that since you have along with this put in a bill concerning amendments to the constitution, which does not include an initiative procedure, that the Committee did not intend that the constitution should be amended by initiative.

TAYLOR: We have specifically excluded that, Mr. Davis. We felt that the initiative was not the proper way to amend the constitution. We took a shorter and perhaps a less expensive way of amending the constitution.

DAVIS: The reason then that you have not included the amending of the constitution in this Section 5 among the things which the initiative may not do is the fact that you have covered that subject in the section on the amendment of the constitution?

TAYLOR: That is right.

MCLAUGHLIN: I have a question, Mr. Taylor. Regarding your attention to Section 4, the first two sentences: Prior to general circulation, an initiative petition shall be signed by ten qualified electors as sponsors and have the constitutionality certified by the Attorney General. Certification shall be reviewable by the courts." First, sir, is that provision found in any one of the 19 states that have initiative and referendum?

TAYLOR: No, I think this is the first one I have run across. We felt that should be to prevent, you might say cycloramic groups from, putting these petitions out, and we know it has been done in many states. We put that on there and the attorney general passed on it, but they have the right to go to the courts to test the validity of the petition that they are going to get out.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I ask another question? Mr. Taylor, assuming that ten electors get together and present this petition to the attorney general and the attorney general makes a ruling that the act sought to be certified is constitutional, does that preclude the courts thereafter from finding it unconstitutional?

TAYLOR: I think any interested taxpayer could have it reviewed, and I think whether the certification was unfavorable or favorable, I think that an interested taxpayer could review that.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Taylor, would there be more of a saving to the government if it were required that the eight per cent sign the petition before they submit it to the attorney general rather than having any ten persons submit it to the attorney general for an opinion? Would the government suffer any loss if it required the eight per cent of the total voters to secure the petition before they present it to the attorney general?

TAYLOR: Mr. McLaughlin, in this particular instance we went over all the states that have the initiative and referendum and some of them require considerable percentage of the number of votes that were cast for the governor at the preceding election, and this eight per cent that we arbitrarily set was put at that figure. It is low, it is among the lowest. Because of the size of the Territory, the limited population in proportion of the size, we felt an eight per cent after it is certified as to its constitutionality is okay and also that the ballot is properly described.

MCLAUGHLIN: Had the Committee discussed how many states in the Union authorized their highest appellate courts to give advisory opinions on constitutionality where the question hasn't arisen?

TAYLOR: I don't know. Some of them were referred to the secretary of state who no doubt, we felt would certify the question to the attorney general for an opinion. Unless the secretary of state was an attorney he would be a little hard put to pass upon the constitutionality, but I suppose he would do that through the attorney general of the state.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Point of clarification. This says the attorney general shall pass upon that.

TAYLOR: That is right in here, but a lot of states have said just the secretary of state, so we put it the attorney general who is the law officer of the state and he passes on it without having to go to somebody else.

MCLAUGHLIN: Did the Committee consider how long normally, assuming that this process went into immediate operation, how long it would take for the supreme court of Alaska or the superior court, after an appeal from the superior court, to determine the constitutionality of an abstract question presented by ten citizens?

TAYLOR: Well, it might take some little time. It might be given a priority, like if it was something that affected the entire electorate of the state.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Taylor, may I inquire of you personally if it's proper, in your experience in determination of constitutionality of questions presented and appealed to the highest courts of any states, what is the average time lapse from the time the question is first presented until the time it is determined?

TAYLOR: I would say if it went through the superior court, the supreme court would take at least six months.

MCLAUGHLIN: That would be under extremely ideal conditions.

TAYLOR: That would be without any particular brakes being put on it.

MCLAUGHLIN: What is the meaning in Section 5, last sentence, "Emergency acts are not subject to referendum." What are emergency acts?

TAYLOR: Well, if an act that has passed the legislature and is of such a nature that the legislature feels that it should be passed immediately, they can, by two-thirds majority, declare that an emergency exists and that law shall become effective immediately upon its passage and approval, which means that as soon as the governor signed it, that became a law of the state.

MCLAUGHLIN: Could you tell me offhand, Mr. Taylor, how many of the acts of the Territorial legislature normally are emergencies? What percentage?

TAYLOR: It would be a guess, but I would say half or more of them are declared emergency legislation.

MCLAUGHLIN: How many states in their initiative and referendum proposals provide that emergency acts are exempted?

TAYLOR: Most of them.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to answer one of the questions Mr. McLaughlin asked of Mr. Taylor which I think was answered incorrectly. He asked if there were any state that had such a provision as this small number of people asking for certification, sponsoring, and this will not be the first state to have it. The State of Massachusetts has it, and the object of it in the article that I read regarding that, aside from the fact I knew it to be a fact, was that it would prevent people, prevent one person from circulating a petition which would have no real value and possibly be unconstitutional at the same time, and bothering people with getting this thing circulated and signed and presented and causing nothing but trouble, and if it was done this way it would eliminate that and also it would prevent the circulation of petitions in a secret manner that as soon as the petition was submitted to the attorney general, why it would become a public matter and it has considerable advantage in my opinion. I was the person on the Committee that suggested it be included and our advisory group concurred. They thought it a very good idea. He asked another question that I wanted to answer too, but I can't think right now.

TAYLOR: Mr. Speaker, I am glad Mr. Hinckel brought that up. He might have misunderstood me. I said this was one of the lower. Some are ten, some are fifteen, some twenty per cent. I think the higher brackets make it impossible.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Hinckel was talking about the ten sponsors, Mr. Taylor, and pointing out that Massachusetts requires a certain number of sponsors before the petition is circulated.

TAYLOR: Oh yes, that is right. I did not mean to say none of them have it. None of them I knew of at the time. We were putting a safeguard around people being importuned by these groups who wanted signatures and they had to get quite a number of them, and if it was an unconstitutional proposition they were advancing or if they did not have the proposition properly set out on the ballot, they could not circulate it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: The point is clear now. Mr. White.

WHITE: I would like to direct a question to the Chairman of the Committee on Direct Legislation.

TAYLOR: I am not the Chairman, but Mr. Collins has asked me.

WHITE: In that case, Mr. Taylor, referring again to Section 5, it says that the referendum may not be used as a means of making appropriations of public funds. Could that be construed as saying that the legislature could not put to the people by a referendum, a bond issue proposition?

TAYLOR: No. They could approve the bond, but I think they could possibly require a bond but they could not direct where the money went to.

WHIIE: In passing a bond issue it is inherent under the situation that appropriation of public funds must subsequently be made to retire the bonds. It would seem to me that in the sense of this section it would forbid the legislature from putting bond issues to the public referendum.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Bonding would be to borrow, Mr. White. Appropriating would be taking money presently available.

TAYLOR: It would be pledging the credit of the state. I doubt very much whether a bond issue could possibly be because the bond issue would necessarily have to be for a particular purpose. Now in many of the states the provisions in regard to initiative and referendum do not apply to any moneys of the state for the purpose of carrying on the function of government. The universities, school systems, orphan homes, penitentiaries, those are all exempt because those are functions of the government that have to be carried on, so they don't get, you might say, some chance of trying to nullify those institutions by cutting off appropriations for them, and that is the reason that the safeguard is put in here, the same as it is in practically all the states.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Taylor, is it not true that only 19 states have adopted this?

TAYLOR: I believe that is all there is at the present time.

BUCKALEW: Is it also not true that the last state to adopt such measures was some 30 years ago?

TAYLOR: 1928 I believe it was.

BUCKALEW: Do you know what state?

TAYLOR: No I don't. Practically all of the initiative referendum was adopted in a period around 20 years, between 1898 and 1918 was the time they were in popular favor of the states at that time.

DOOGAN: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor, you provided for the initiative and referendum, but don't you feel that the power that is left to the people as provided by this article is only in what you might call minor lawmaking?

TAYLOR: No, I would not think so.

DOOGAN: The reason I point that out is that you allow no initiative or referendum for raising money. You don't allow them to prevent the legislature at times, as they have done, to stop them from removing some of the taxes that they have already applied, when it might be felt by the people that the legislature was subject to a great deal of pressure to do so, and consequently my particular feeling is that what is left for the people to do is very minor legislation, and something that would hardly be worth their while to go into anyhow.

TAYLOR: What particular part of this proposal, Mr. Doogan, are you referring to?

DOOGAN: Section 1 and Section 5 which seem to me to be most of the meat of the proposal as it is.

TAYLOR: Well, there is a lot of local legislation, like if the legislature, or some people up here wanted to have money appropriated by the legislature to put another bridge across the Chena River, and they got an initiative addition out, that would not be acted upon because it is strictly expenditure of money for local purposes. That would only apply to particular subjects or particular people or particular areas, so then they would not be allowed to circulate petitions.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor a question. On Section 4, the last line on page 1 and going to the top of page 2 it provides that you will have eight per cent of the number of votes cast for governor in the preceding general election, at which the governor was elected. I am wondering if your Committee considered the possibility of a restriction in there similar to the one that is in the model constitution requiring that only a certain percentage of those signatures .can come from a certain district. That is, that the petition must represent a large area rather than a restricted area.

TAYLOR: We did talk that over. We gave it consideration. We felt that with the geographical limitations of the state of Alaska, we felt that in view of the size of Alaska, the geographical size of it in proportion to the population, that if we put a limitation upon the number of voters that could come from any political subdivision or of any particular area, that it would make it very difficult up here by reason of the great sparsely populated areas, we did not hold that up. We felt it would make it very difficult if 25 per cent of, say 25 or 30 per cent of the petitions had to be from one division or one part of a division. Well, you could go in there and get those all right, but it is so difficult to circulate those petitions in the outlying precincts.

SWEENEY: On the other hand, I feel that, if just speaking of divisions now, if one division, for instance the Southeast, had a bit of legislation they wanted passed, they could get the eight per cent of the votes very easily and yet we would be imposing, if the legislature then passed whatever it was we wanted, we would be imposing our will on the whole of Alaska, and it seems to me that a portion should be required to come from another division, perhaps a third or even half from another section.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: The Committee will be at ease for a moment while our guests pass out. (Guests left gallery.) The Committee will come to order.

TAYLOR: Mr. Chairman, I would like to answer Mrs. Sweeney's question in this way. Although as she states the eight per cent of the voters, of the number of voters that cast their votes for the governor at the previous election was secured in one division, that does not make it a law because that then is submitted, if they get the sufficient number of signatures on there, then it is submitted to the entire electorate and then it can be defeated by the voters of other divisions or political subdivisions whichever they might be, because the entire electorate then votes upon what eight per cent of the electorate initiated.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor a question. As I understand it, Mr. Taylor, there are two procedures to put into effect on the initiative. One is written in the bill here, and the other form is for the people to petition the legislature by initiative to enact certain laws. I was wondering if your Committee had considered the one I just mentioned by the people petitioning the legislature to enact laws rather than taking it direct as set out in the bill.

TAYLOR: I think the right of the people to petition the legislature is one of our rights as guaranteed us by the Constitution and requires no special law for that purpose. We can all petition the legislature.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor two or three questions on the initiative. I can see for the recall and referendum, but the initiative seems to me to be a very cumbersome and unnecessary procedure. Will you please convince me that it is necessary. And I would like to point out to you as a member of the legislature, over 200 bills were introduced, and many of them were introduced by request. It is a very easy matter to ask a member of the legislature to introduce a bill. Why is this cumbersome procedure necessary?

TAYLOR: Well, this is not for the legislature to do it. This is to have the questions submitted to the voters as to whether that becomes a law or not -- to vote on it.

BARR: Providing the legislature does not pass the act before that time?

TAYLOR: Yes.

BARR: In other words, if the legislature refuses to act, then it goes for a referendum. Well, in our present form of government the people elect the legislators to represent them, and I have never known a case where they did not do what they thought the people wanted. I don't think they ever would.

TAYLOR: Did you read the history of the State of California and the Southern Pacific Railroad, Mr. Barr?

BARR: You mean some special group wanted something done?

TAYLOR: And they got it.

BARR: Don't you believe that with all these restrictions even, that it is still easy to have a petition signed and that any special group could have a petition of this sort signed very easily and submitted?

TAYLOR: I think eight per cent of the voters would be quite a sizeable petition, especially if say 15,000 votes were cast for the governor in the governor's election, this last one we had 27,000 votes. It would take eight per cent of those 27,000 votes that were cast for a particular man. How many were cast for the candidates that were running for governor, the entire election for governor?

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Did we have an election for governor?

TAYLOR: I mean if we did.

BARR: Mr. Taylor, eight per cent would take a large number of petitioners. If there was some little group in one town who wanted something on some question, something that was Territorial wide, such as fish traps, statehood or groups representing one type of school against another type of school, don't you think eight per cent would be a fairly small number of petitioners?

TAYLOR: I do not believe it would be a very small number, and then another thing, Mr. Barr, carrying your arguments further, you say a small group in a particular locality that wanted something, they are barred because that would be local legislation.

BARR: That is what I pointed out. But I am speaking of something now that is Territorial wide, some question, and there are a large group of people on both sides of the question, and eight per cent would not be many signatures.

TAYLOR: No, that is only to say whether an election is going to be held, Mr. Barr. I don't think we should put undue restrictions upon having an election because then the whole electorate has got to come out and say whether or not that proposition is going to prevail or whether it is to go down in defeat.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to call attention to the fact that we have had a perfect illustration here of the fact that in considering any proposal, or section by section, we are apt to see only the section before us and not take into consideration that every preceding section may also affect those following. Now I refer specifically to the fact that Section 1 and Section 5 have been said to be the meat of this proposal. Actually Section 3 is fully as significant as any of the others. Section 3 says, "The legislature shall prescribe the procedures to be followed in the exercise of the powers of initiative and referendum, subject to the specific authority reserved herein." Now going back to the questions raised several times as to the percentage of the number of votes required to initiate a measure and the fact that they might all originate in one certain district, we have left the power with the legislature to provide that those signatures may be required within the various districts, may require that they may be scattered throughout the various districts.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: The Committee will be at ease while the stenotypist puts on a new tape. The Committee will come to order. Mr. Smith has the floor.

SMITH: Mr. Chairman, there are a lot of questions that have been brought up, and I am just going to touch on some of them very briefly. Referring back to the survey of Oregon's experience, the report states that the measures initiated were on the whole not much better or worse than the products of the legislature. The people of Oregon had been considerably burdened with decisions on all manner of measures, some of them nuisance proposals that kept reappearing time after time. The people were not notably better educated politically than before. However, they had exercised their responsibility in a fairly conservative manner. They had been rather free to alter the structure of the government, had not been financially irresponsible and had been rather conservative on policies in the general field of public welfare. Now I think Mr. Victor Rivers brought up a question as to whether, if the initiative were included in the constitution we would then have a republican form of government. I think it would take a constitutional lawyer to answer that question, but I imagine that the people in the states who do have this provision feel they do have a republican form of government. We go back to the question as to the accomplishments of the initiative and referendum which have been covered to a certain extent. I go back, possibly because it is more realistic to me, to the fact that Washington and Oregon for many years tried to get their legislatures to eliminate fish traps with no success. Through the initiative measure they were both successful. Now Mr. Barr's suggestion that it would be easy to get the legislature to take action if they were asked goes back to the fact that California again tried for years to get their state legislature to set up a civil service system. They were unsuccessful. Through the initiative right the people of California instituted a civil service system. Now I believe Mr. Doogan asked a question. I am not sure. Someone brought up the point -- I believe it was Mr. Davis that the right of the initiative as outlined here might be construed as allowing the people to amend the constitution. I would call your attention to Section 1 which is preceded by the word "initiative" and following, "The people reserve the power by petition to propose laws and to enact or reject such laws at the polls." And I don't think that could be construed as amendments to the constitution.

V. RIVERS: Do you yield for a question, Mr. Smith? In your study of Oregon, did you find that by referendum the people of Oregon had defeated a statewide sales tax seven times?

SMITH: Yes, now that you call it to mind, I do very distinctly.

V. RIVERS: Do you also believe that if we had this clause in here which says, "emergency action not be subject to referendum", that we would eliminate practically nine-tenths of all the acts of the legislature including such as things as sales tax if it carried that clause?

SMITH: I have had considerable worry over that fact, Mr. Rivers, and I think it is a thing which is very open to question.

V. RIVERS: Do you believe that if we have the initiative and referendum in the constitution it will make it more palatable from the point of view of some of the legislators or senators in Congress for approving this act?

SMITH: That is one of the chief reasons why I support very strongly the inclusion of the initiative process in the constitution, even though it is not used, it is there. I think that the legislators, if they know it is there, they will be very careful in ignoring the will of the people.

V. RIVERS: Do you believe that approval of the act subject to referendum, any of those emergency acts shall not be subject to referendum, could be covered by a different clause such as the acts that are necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, safety, etc., would that be better than just saying those that carry an emergency clause?

SMITH: I feel it would, Mr. Rivers.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to speak on that subject. We had numerous drafts of this article and among them we had somewhere the wording I thought was better, and it is quite possible that in trying to condense it that we went a little too far, and some of the things we originally had written in the article and took out in condensing may have to be put back in. Mr. McNealy asked a question which has been incorrectly answered. He asked had we considered the indirect method of putting through a bill, and you will notice that on lines 13 and 14, page 2, that is says that these conditions shall exist, "unless the legislature enacts the measure initiated during the session. So we did include the indirect method of approach which we thought was the economical way to do it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: A question of Mr. Taylor. Mr. Taylor, is it not possible that the California fiasco where the legislature was dominated by the railroad could have been due to the fact that the California Legislature as then constituted was not truly representative of the people?

TAYLOR: That is entirely possible, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Is it not possible that some of the domination of the Alaska Territorial Legislature in ancient times might have been due to the fact that it also was not representative of the people?

TAYLOR: That is true.

LONDBORG: Mr. Chairman, may I direct a question to Mr. Taylor? According to statistics I believe the other states require from eight to fifteen per cent of the qualified electorate to initiate. Is that not true?

TAYLOR: They have different ways. I think the majority of them that have it there is a percentage of the votes cast for the governorship at the previous election.

LONDBORG: The votes cast? I was referring to the report where it said that eight to fifteen per cent of the qualified electorate, and I wanted to have it clarified. Here we have eight per cent of the votes cast which would be a considerable lower percentage of the qualified electorate than eight per cent. I thought we might have that open for consideration.

TAYLOR: That would be the number of votes cast for the governorship, not the particular man who won the race.

LONDBORG: That would still be a considerable amount less than eight per cent of the qualified electorate, and I am wondering if other states do have it reading the governor.

TAYLOR: There is quite a few of them who have it. I might state why that is, because it's ordinary, there might be instances where three people would be running for the governorship, usually it is two. Most people who go to the polls would vote for one of those two candidates for governor so they take the combined vote for governor and then eight per cent if it is in the law or fifteen per cent if it is in the law. Now there is one state I think that has only five per cent.

LONDBORG: I see that. That is eight per cent of the total number of votes cast, but I was wondering about that if the states used that or if they used the percentage of qualified electors as was referred. Perhaps the PAS report was in error on that.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Fischer, could you throw some light on that?

V. FISCHER: I might read from the Hawaiian Manual. "Six states require a number of signatures to be based on previous vote for governor. Two states require number of signatures to be based on previous vote for supreme court justice. One state requires number of signatures to be based on previous vote for secretary of state, one state requires number of signatures to be based on state office which receives the highest vote at previous election, and then a few leave it up to the legislature to determine and two states specify in the constitution the exact number of signatures required.

LONDBORG: They did not give the percentages at all there, did they?

V. FISCHER: Yes, they do. Arizona ten per cent based on governor; Arkansas eight per cent on governor; California eight per cent on governor. Eight per cent is the most common.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor a question. In my own mind, what do you mean by "an emergency act of the legislature"? Is that on any act that has an emergency clause? An emergency clause is called by a separate vote, is it not?

TAYLOR: Oh yes, because the passing an act with an emergency clause is actually a suspension of the rules. So it takes a two-thirds vote to pass the emergency clause, although it only takes a bare majority to pass the bill itself.

GRAY: Can any act have attached to it an emergency clause, any act that should come out of the legislature?

TAYLOR: Yes, you could put them on there, but it is doubtful as to whether every act would be passed with an emergency clause. I know we see in the legislature many acts that carry an emergency clause that we turn down.

GRAY: I was not sure in my own mind what an emergency act was, but I refer to Section 2. "The people reserve the power to require, by petition, that laws enacted by the legislature be submitted to the voters for approval or rejection." In Section 5 we have a sentence, "Emergency acts are not subject to referendum." It seems to me that you put a tool in the hands of the legislature that removes that particular act for the referendum. It takes a two-thirds vote I understand, but it does remove the referendum from being a check on the legislature.

TAYLOR: I will tell you why, Mr. Gray. The fact that if an act is passed as an emergency the supposition is that the act should go into effect immediately. Well, then if you will read the section regarding the referendum, they would have 90 days in which to file a petition for a vote upon an act and that 90 days, if they waited that time, might defeat something that was very essential that should be passed and become law immediately, so that would suspend that for 90 days and so then after the 90 days, then there is the time that is fixed for the special elections as to whether this act is going to stay on the books or whether it is going to be defeated, so by that time your emergency might be over.

EGAN: Mr. Chairman, may I ask Mr. Taylor, Mr. Taylor, I don't read that as having anything to do with 90 days as to when relating to an emergency clause. Are you referring to the 90- day clause in Section 4, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I was referring to it in the event that if they had the right to refer an emergency measure to the people and that section was in there, there was 90 days before they would even had to file their petition.

EGAN: That wouldn't have anything to do with whether or not there had been an emergency to the law when it passed the legislature.

TAYLOR: With an emergency clause on it you can't do it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me that we are confusing the issue a little here by the fact that once we become a state this matter of emergency clause will no longer be present because the minute the legislature passes the law and it is signed by the governor, it becomes valid immediately, unless it has some restraining clause within its own provisions. This emergency clause procedure was set up strictly for the Territory of Alaska, because any law that is passed by the legislature without an emergency clause does not become effective until 90 days after the adjournment, and it is to overcome that procedure that this emergency clause was inserted in the Organic Act and does give the Territorial Legislature the right to pass laws with an emergency clause whereby they become effective immediately upon passage and approval. Once we become a state, the legislature would have the right to pass laws that would become effective immediately upon signature by the governor, so I don't see the necessity for such a law.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Unless, Mr. Johnson, the legislative provisions of our constitution imposes similar --

TAYLOR: I would like to answer Mr. Johnson, that practically all the states I have been to have a provision that the legislature may tack an emergency upon any act that they pass. If they don't put that on there it takes 90 days, just exactly as it does in Alaska before the act becomes effective.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. Chairman, I seem to be confused, and I think maybe some of the others are. We are talking about two different things here -- an emergency clause and an emergency act. If I read correctly Section 5. Emergency acts are not subject to referendum." I think you are talking about an act which must be passed right now to take care of some grave emergency. Now the emergency clause concerning which Mr. Taylor spoke a little while ago, he said in answer to Mr. Victor Rivers' question as to how many laws in the legislature carry the emergency clause, Mr. Taylor said "probably half". Now that does not indicate that half of the bills were emergency acts because they are not. In many instances you have deficiency bills, say $200 due some individual who has not been paid and the legislature pays that instead of making her wait 90 days to get her check, we put an emergency clause on there, the governor signs the bill. That is not an emergency act, that is simply an emergency clause on the bill. I want to say in answer to a statement Mr. Barr made, he said that if we could get bills introduced by request, why should we go through this cumbersome system of initiative. It has been a general practice or at least my feeling and the feeling of others that bills introduced by request were not pushed. When you say that Sweeney introduced a bill by request it was an indication that Sweeney was not going to be too anxious to fight for it and consequently you were not expected to put too much effort on it either. But a bill that is brought to you by initiative is going to mean you had better get on it and do something about it, it is the will of the people. So I believe there is a need for the initiative and not to go back to the old system of introducing bills by request. I go along with Victor Rivers' statement about making a better emergency clause there to clear that thing up.

HELLENTHAL: How much, Mr. Taylor, did the Committee estimate it would cost to hold a special election?

TAYLOR: Forty thousand dollars.

HELLENTHAL: Now if the legislature, and I understand it will meet annually or it is proposed that it will, if they meet for a period of three months, and then there is 90 days, another three months following that in which to file petitions for referendums, that's six months, then 180 after that--that would be another six months. I can see where no harm would be done, but if the legislature only met for two months would it not be possible that we would have to call 30 successive special elections, depending upon the date?

TAYLOR: That is right, Mr. Hellenenthal. It is going to run up into quite a bit of money.

HELLENTHAL: That would be $1,200,000, wouldn't it?

TAYLOR: Of course, you could hold three elections at one time if you have three laws.

HELLENTHAL: If you had three laws but if they were filed on three successive days you could not.

TAYLOR: That is right. I would like to point out to Mrs. Sweeney that an emergency act and emergency clause are the same thing. It is not always an emergency but the legislature will say, Emergency is hereby declared to exist and this act shall take effect immediately upon its passage and approval." "Approval" means signing by the governor, so that is the emergency. The legislature declares it is emergency whether it is or not. So it is an emergency at law. So there is absolutely no difference in an act carrying an emergency clause and an emergency act.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: You would not mind if this was clarified would you, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: It is so obvious I don't see it could be clarified.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, I approve of the initiative and referendum but after reading this over and listening to the debate, it has entered my mind that the Committee that proposed this bill was not very much sold on the initiative and referendum. It seems to me to be full of contradictions that tie the hands of the people so they can do practically nothing, and therefore, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that this section of the committee proposal be referred back to the Convention and with the recommendation that it be referred back to the Committee to either make up their minds, do they want an initiative and referendum or they don't and if they do, to provide one that will work.

TAYLOR: Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Doogan is out of order.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Yes, I would rule that out of order, because when this Committee reports, the whole thing goes back to the Convention, and we are only here now for explanation and discussion.

DOOGAN: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. In a sense what I am doing is precluding any more debate on this because I think we are wasting time and I don't think I am out of order in making that motion.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: I am willing to hear from better parliamentarians than I. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I will have to sit down then. I make a motion and ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole rise and report progress.

TAYLOR: I think we have quite a bit more to this bill. We have the revision and amendment of the constitution, also recall here which is part of our article.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Cooper's motion dies for lack of a second. Mr. Egan.

EGAN: With relation to the type of motion that Mr. Doogan made and with no relation to whether or not it is a good motion, I wonder if we should get it straightened out right here as to under the motion that we went into this type of Committee of the Whole on, that type of motion would be a recommendation. We can also make motions in this type of Committee of the Whole under the terms that we came into this Committee of the Whole on. It was my understanding any way that this is a different type of the Committee of the Whole than we ordinarily work under, and motions can be made of any nature relative to how it will be reported back to the Convention.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Did someone second Mr. Doogan's motion?

DOOGAN: I asked for unanimous consent.

DAVIS: I object.

DOOGAN: I so move.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

CHAIRMAN H. RIVERS: The question is, "Shall the subject of this section" -- will you specify?

DOOGAN: The Sections on Initiative, Referendum and Recall.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: "The Initiative, Referendum and Recall Sections be referred back to the Constitutional Convention for rereferral to the Committee, to the standing committee?"

ARMSTRONG: Mr. Chairman, how do we know we want this included in that final motion when it comes back on the floor? How do we know the Convention even wants to vote for the initiative?

EGAN: Wasn't it with the recommendation to the plenary session that they send it back? It is just recommending to the plenary session.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: I meant to say that. Mrs. Hermann. HERMANN: Mr. Chairman, it is an article rather than a section.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Let us call it the article on initiative, referendum and recall. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I wanted to say, I merely wanted to point out that the motion we went into the Committee of the Whole on was that we would proceed to discuss this in a general way and then take it up in specific sections was my understanding as was done in Hawaii, in which specific amendments were made and then the substance of the amendments was reported out by the Committee of the Whole. The procedure used and quite successfully, was to have such a general discussion as we have had as to the merits and if they wanted a general idea, and then to proceed into section by section, reading and amendment. It seems to me that that is in order now. We have had something of a general discussion, and it appears from the statements of many members here that there is a desire on the part of many members of the body to have the initiative and referendum. It seems to me that at this time we should take it section by section and amend it in the manner we want it to come out of this Committee. Then we will be ready to kick it back into its regular place on the calendar for it to carry on to the next order on the agenda. I think it would be unwise now, we would have wasted this general time, unless we do not want the initiative and referendum in the constitution, to rise from this Committee of the Whole. We can proceed with the business here and get this out of the way now. I think everybody has a general idea of what their thinking is. I think the work of the Committee, maybe a few changes we want, but on the whole, I think it can without too much amendment, be made very adoptable.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: The Chair will insist on disposing of Mr. Doogan's motion. Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: May we have a two-minute recess?

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Is there any objection to a 15-minute recess? If not, we recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: The Committee will come to order. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, I feel that after listening to some conversation, I proposed the wrong motion. So I would like to withdraw that motion and substitute another. I think that before much more is done on this initiative and referendum, I consider this bill worthless, and I consider before we go any further that possibly the thing we should do is to have a vote or a poll of the delegates.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Let's act on your request. Is there any objection to Mr. Doogan withdrawing the motion he previously made?

HERMANN: I consent.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: In that case the motion is withdrawn. Now Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would move then that a poll, house vote, that you get everybody in the house --

SUNDBORG: Call of the house, or call of the committee.

DOOGAN: Is that in order?

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: I know of one at least who has gone to Fairbanks. We may be through for the week if you ask for a call of the house. I think on request we should just round up the delegates in the building without a formal call.

DOOGAN: Well, that's what I wanted to do so that everybody gets a chance to express themselves on it and first, take a vote on the initiative and then on the referendum to decide whether we're going to go on with this or not.

MARSTON: There have been seven people speak on this and I want to make a speech in favor of the initiative and referendum and recall before you vote on it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Would you wait until the motion has been made? We shall clue you when it is ready. The motion isn't made but there is a suggestion we should try to round -- and then there was another factor involved. Mr. Doogan has asked that we try to round up the members of this body, which are in this building. Is there any objection to having a recess for two or three minutes until we round up the absent delegates?

SWEENEY: I object for just a moment, Mr. Chairman. When we had a Committee of the Whole on the question of bicameral or unicameral legislature, we were not permitted to get a poll. We said that was not an issue and we weren't to have it. We are setting precedent here if we are going to have a poll in the Committee of the Whole. If we're going to do that on everything that comes up before us in the Committee of the Whole, I don't think we ought to start that.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: May we get the delegates, before that is acted on, that are not in the house but in the building? Mr. Doogan, do you want to pursue your suggestion? We can discuss whether or not this motion is in order. Mrs. Sweeney, were you making a point of order?

SWEENEY: I was just registering an objection to having a poll in the Committee of the Whole, if we are going to have this same procedure at every Committee of the Whole meeting.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I agree with the intent of the motion which is to decide whether we want to have the initiative, whether we want to have the referendum before we go and start discussing amendments only to possibly later vote the whole thing down. However, in line with Mrs. Sweeney's suggestion, it probably would be more proper to make a motion that this Committee recommend to the Convention to have no provision in the constitution on the initiative first, and take a poll on that, and then whichever way that goes then we can have another motion made that this Committee recommend to the Convention that we have no provision on referendum in the constitution. Then, if both of those motions carry, then there is no need for amendments. If those motions are defeated then we can go ahead and start amending and we won't have to go at length, as we have been, into any further discussion of the pros and cons of the initiative and referendum.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Chairman, I believe that Mr. Fischer is right in his remarks, although I believe it should be handled just a little bit different by a motion that the Committee rise and report to the plenary session that Sections 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 of the Article on Initiative and Referendum be stricken and then when we vote that, if we vote that, we will know the sentiment of the Convention as to whether they want it or not. If we vote that and find out it is so, when we got into plenary session we take the vote and know just what it is.

EGAN: Mr. Chairman, I think to clear something up here that everyone should realize that we came into this particular Committee of the Whole in a different fashion than what we have entered any other Committee of the Whole. We came in here with the power to make amendments that could be recommended back to the plenary session or do anything else in this Committee of the Whole that we would do in plenary session, other than actually act on the amendments and have them become part of the record so far as the final vote was concerned, that this action was done by a suspension of the rules and is entirely different from the particular Committee of the Whole we were in the night that we debated the unicameral and bicameral legislature.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Would the Clerk please read the motion as it is now stated.

CHIEF CLERK: I am not sure that I got Mr. Doogan's whole intent, but he moved to "Call the members in so that we could take a poll on what the Convention wants as to this bill", is that it?

DOOGAN: I feel that there is a division here and that they should take a vote on the initiative first and the referendum. They may want one and not the other or they may want both or they may want to throw them all out.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: And that would be for the purpose of recommending to the plenary session?

DOOGAN: That is right.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that the motion as phrased by Mr. Fischer be substituted for that suggested by Mr. Doogan, if Mr. Doogan approves. My belief is that Mr. Fischer stated the motion in what would be the proper manner to achieve the intention of Mr. Doogan, but I don't want to say that if Mr. Doogan does not also agree with me on it. Do you recall?

DOOGAN: I don't recall.

SUNDBORG: The Clerk has it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: If there is no objection we will have the Clerk read the language proposed by Mr. Fischer.

CHIEF CLERK: "That this Committee recommend to the Convention to have no provision in the constitution on the initiative", and then the other one would be, "That this Committee recommend to the Convention that we have no provision on referendum in the constitution."

SUNDBORG: To be taken up one by one and of course only the first one to be before this body at this time.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Doogan, what is your pleasure?

DOOGAN: That was not my intent. As Mr. Egan stated, we came into this Committee under suspension of the rules with the power to amend and everything in this Committee so that when we did report back to the floor we would report back specific amendments and would not take up the time of the plenary session to do it. The only way we can actually carry through on that is to decide first whether we want the initiative and then decide whether we want the referendum and if they are decided in favor of both of those we can go ahead and amend as we started out to do in this Committee.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Doogan, wouldn't Mr. Fischer's language arrive at that exact result?

DOOGAN: He says report back to the Convention.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: That is all we can do and that's what you're trying to achieve, and we will test the two viewpoints by those motions that Mr. Fischer has suggested.

DOOGAN: Okay.

KILCHER: Mr. Chairman, it is my opinion that the motion that two gentlemen are advocating is proper material for an amendment and should be brought in on plenary session and then we will have something to act upon. If the motion should carry that we strike these five sections, then we forget about it. That is simple. If it does not carry, then we amend.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: It is clear that we can get the poll we are after right here in this Committee and that we can report that result to the plenary session when this Committee arises. Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: If Mr. Doogan has withdrawn his motion, I will second Mr. Fischer's motion.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: I have not declared that Mr. Doogan has withdrawn his motion.

DOOGAN: I withdraw.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: In the absence of objection, Mr. Doogan's motion has been withdrawn. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I move the adoption of the first motion I previously made.

CHIEF CLERK: "That this committee recommend to the Convention to have no provision in the constitution on the initiative and referendum.

SWEENEY: Point of order Mr. Chairman. I believe that the motion should be in the affirmative -- that we do have. It is going to be very hard to vote on and I think it should be stated that we do have the initiative and referendum.

V. FISCHER: I accept the change.

HURLEY: I accept it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: If there is no objection it shall be couched in the affirmative. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I think the motion should read that we should strike the paragraph in relation to the initiative. - mean" recommend. I want the affirmative vote on the word "strike .

TAYLOR: I think that is the proper way to do it, as I urged before, that we should strike those particular sections if we don't want the initiative.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: The two subject matters of initiative and referendum are intertwined throughout this document. If you vote on striking the sections you are combining those two. If you want to separate the subject matters you have to take it the way Mr. Fischer has proposed it. Is there a second to Mr. Fischer's motion?

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Hurley seconded it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Are you ready for the question? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Are you going to let me talk now?

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Now is the time to make that speech, Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I am going to make a speech in favor of the initiative, referendum and recall which has not been made yet, and you have made up your minds practically here without the thing being properly presented, and don't let for one minute, gentlemen and ladies, this kind of talk you heard make up your minds on so vital a piece of legislation. Delegates who make a remark about this foolish piece of work", I think it is unbecoming to this audience and this group of people to talk that way about a thing so fundamental as we have here. If you don't trust the people I don't know where you are going. That means if you vote down the initiative, referendum and recall you do not trust the people, and the people are the people, and that is the only reason we are here, and if you can't trust them I would hesitate to go back home before your committees and talk to them. I think the passage of the initiative, referendum and recall will sell a lot of these constitutions. When a man says "I don't like that", you can say "You have a right." The people themselves can go into the courts of the land to have your word made law by a certain procedure. I hope that we pass the initiative, referendum and recall, and I hope we never have the occasion to use it. I think it is a great thing to have it in the hands of the people, and you will notice that the Western states are the ones that passed and used the initiative, referendum and recall, and we are Western and Northern, the same kind of people. We are explosive people. We like to express ourselves, and I can see miners back in the camps thinking over things that have not been right, and fishermen in their little boats wondering why. Now they can say, "We can correct that thing", and though they never use it it is a great healthy thing to have in the hands of the people. It has been used in some 15 states, and they have it in their constitutions. It is constitutional, fundamental law, and I hope that you people keep an open mind here and don't let this talking on here affect you because it is vital. You are sent here with a great duty to carry out the wishes of the people back home, and if you turn down this kind of legislation you are going to be in for a lot of embarrassment and a lot of criticism, and I don't like the way it has been carried on here. This Committee was not in agreement that made this document, and it was said so here, and I think all the members of the Committee should be heard on this before you make up your minds. I am for the initiative, referendum and recall, and I hope that you people open your minds again which you had it practically closed up here and were ready to close off by a certain group of people here, and think very seriously on this matter. It is fundamental law and I am going to ask the Chair right now to call on the rest of the Committee that worked on this direct legislation. That is all I have to say.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Committee members and others may be heard.

Mr. Cross.

CROSS: I have been thinking quite seriously on this. I made up my mind that if you can't trust your legislature this cumbersome machinery is not going to help it very much, and I don't think we are going to help matters by taking a more cumbersome way of deciding things. We are here to set up machinery for legislation. And if we can't set up machinery that will work, I doubt very much if we can find any other way of doing it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Chairman, I agree with Colonel Marston. I believe he has stated it perhaps more eloquently than I can, about the desirability of having the initiative and referendum. I can not go along with Mr. Cross's statement that if the legislature doesn't do something there is no use trying to let anybody else do anything, but I believe if we do have this additional safeguard that worthwhile legislation will be enacted in case the legislature did not, that we are only saving to the people a power which they may never exercise, but the mere fact that the power is there and is available for the electorate to initiate some measure for the benefit of all the people, they should have the right to do it. Now perhaps Mr. Doogan says this is a silly piece of work. I wish Mr. Doogan would have been on the Committee because there were seven of us on there and we worked for three weeks and we met practically every day, and as I said before, we had studied and examined the initiative and referendum provisions of practically all the states that have the initiative and referendum, and to come into this Convention with a recommended article on those particular provisions, some of us sacrificed our convictions that all the details of the law should be spelled out in the Convention. Some of us sacrificed our convictions that just the framework should be drawn up by this Convention and the details filled in entirely by the legislature, and we finally met upon the common grounds which is here before us. And with the study that I have given to this and I think the other six members have given to it, that the cry of "silly" or "ill-advised legislation" or "ill-advised article" doesn't sound too good. If Mr. Doogan had been on that Committee perhaps we would have come up with a masterly article which we could pass without any amendments, without any discussion, but the men of limited mentality who composed this Committee were not able to do so. I feel that we should have as a curb, if nothing else, a power that might never be used but is still there. We should have that in the constitution. And a power that can be implemented by the legislature to whatever extent they wish, subject to the limitations that this Committee has put in the bill.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, I feel along the same lines that were just spoken. I think that probably the biggest majority of people here had to run to be elected for this Constitutional Convention, and probably if they were faced with the issue from the voters, and I believe a poll was taken, that a majority of the delegates was in favor of the initiative, referendum and recall. Was it a vote-getter? Were you fooling the people when you told them? Are you standing up to your convictions? I think that the people of the Territory need assurance that they are going to have individual rights restored to them. We under Territorial status have seen some awful reckless things happen during the realm of Secretary Ickes, Chapman, and now McKay. I think that you will find that under this form of government, a non-representative form of government, that the people are quite sensitive to their individual rights, their individual thoughts, as far as government is concerned. Woodrow Wilson put the phrase quite masterfully when he said that, "These three forms of controlling your government are the gun behind the door assuring direct legislation for the people." - think it is basic and I admire the work that was done on the Committee.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: Mr. President, I agree with Mr. Marston and Mr. Taylor and also Mr. Coghill. Why should we take any power away from the people? The people put us here. However, Mr. Marston is wrong when he said there were 15 states that had this on their books now, there are 19. The last one was the State of Maine, January of this year, and I am going to favor this act.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to state that it is not a clumsy procedure, that it is a very simple procedure up to at least the point where the legislature may or may not act upon it, and they are in the end of it, they pass it and if it goes beyond that point why it may become a little bit complicated and expensive, but I don't think that very many times it will. I think that with the provisions as set up in this article that probably the legislature will handle the subject of the initiative due to the fact that they will be convinced that they are a large number of the people who desire that it be taken care of and probably that will be about as far as it will go in most cases.

MCNEALY: I had not intended to speak here, but there have been one or two things said that probably require a little clarification.

I would like first to mention that there are 19 and only 19 states that have the initiative and out of the 19 there are only 11 of them with the direct initiative. The other eight have their initiative to the legislature. And as to what we promised the voters, one of my statements, that there were not many things that were conflicted here among the candidates, but here in the Fourth Division in Fairbanks, maybe I should confine it out of respect to Delegate Coghill here, but that was one of the issues of initiative and referendum, and I came out strongly opposed to the initiative and at quite a large meeting held in the public high school here, every candidate who was running for this Convention, whether this means anything or not but all the candidates who stood up and said they were for the initiative are not present in this body today, whether that means anything or not. The point is I think it is a cumbersome system and outmoded system. It was popular 50 years ago, and I don't feel too strongly on it because in looking back, outside of the expense that it has cost the states in a lot of elections that came to naught, and far more of the propositions advanced on the initiative were defeated by the voters at great expense to the public than were ever passed, and that goes without contradiction. I feel that the proponents of this measure felt that in the early days it would cure everything, and those who were opposed to it thought it would be the end of government. Neither instance has happened. You might put it this way, it is not particularly good constitutional material and it is not particularly bad. For that reason, at least as to the initiative, I am opposed to it.

KILCHER: I have to disagree with Mr. McNealy on more than one point. For one thing, there are luckily quite a few of the candidates present here who in the campaign have advocated initiative and referendum. I might say in a lot of respects they have proven to be the more progressive ones. This referendum and initiative can only, with a stretch of the imagination, be called something outmoded, or you would have to call democracy itself outmoded. If we look at the history of the thing we can see that it coincides very closely with a whole series of progressive political movement of the late 19th century extending into the early part of the 20th century. If we look at the little map of the United States and see, here we can see which states they are. They are preferably the Northern and Western states and not the others. Some are known as the more progressive of our states, so consequently I think we have very good precedence, and we have nothing to worry about if we adopt initiative and referendum. Also the cost involved in an occasional election I think is cheap money for political education. It will in my opinion tend to decrease what Governor Gruening has called "the political illiteracy". It will greatly increase the interests of the people and the faith in themselves and their laws.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, if I trod on the feelings of the integrity of any members of the Committee that drafted this thing individually, I am sorry. To say that the initiative and referendum is outmoded, I consider this impossible. As I read this, to be specific, a man brought up the suggestion of fish traps. If the legislature wanted to provide for the abolition of fish traps by referendum, it could not be done. You could not initiate for it either. I don't think it will work. I was one of the candidates that was asked whether I was for the initiative and referendum and I said "yes" and I am here. The thing is, the reason I changed my motion is just in general conversation I find that there is quite a difference of opinion, which I did not know before, and so as far as I am concerned the thing to settle first is, do we want the initiative and referendum, before we go on amending a bill we might later throw out, and I will abide by the decision.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, if I may make a few brief remarks on this matter, I was one of the Committee members that worked with Mr. Collins and Mr. Taylor, and we worked out this compromise on the initiative and referendum. It is far from perfect I know, but personally speaking I am in favor of the initiative and the referendum. Missouri saw fit in its revision in 1945 to spell it out pretty much. We copied or took some of our provisions from the Missouri article, and that was the 1945 revision. Another reason that makes me strongly in favor of the initiative and referendum is the fact, so I am told, that you are having a strongly centralized executive department. He is going to appoint administrative officers, much stronger than the average, and so in adjusting our system of checks and balances I feel the people should have an extra hold in this system of checks and balances. Speaking about the legislature, I believe Mr. Cross mentioned that why can't the legislature take care of everything. This talk about the legislature frankly has me confused here. Some people on one day say, "You can trust the legislature." The next day they say "You can't trust the legislature." Then there is the old man, Public Enemy No. 1, the lobbyist. So I am confused what to think about the legislature, and I think this system of the people having their hold on the checks and balances should be just as accurate and just as perfect as when you go to the bank to borrow some money on a homestead, you don't expect the banker to hand you out some money without you signing up the mortgage, as a matter of banking routine. He gives you the money and you sign up, and it is just the same way with the initiative and referendum here. The people ought to have it in black and white, just what the rights are and not leave it to guesswork. I believe as Mr. Kilcher does, that if these matters, the initiative and referendum, are left to the people to study, it would reduce the political illiteracy that we now have, and I wish and urge everyone too vote to keep the initiative and referendum.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I merely want to ask a question and that is, could any of the members of the Committee that formulated this committee proposal tell me how many of the 19 states that do have the initiative and referendum, have provided for such in the constitution, as opposed by the legislature?

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Miss Awes.

AWES: I think perhaps I can answer Mrs. Hermann's question. I have before me the PAS pamphlet. It says that, "Altogether there are 19 state constitutions which provide for some form of statutory initiative." So evidently it is provided for by the constitution in all the 19 states.

BARR: Since Mr. Metcalf is a bit confused about the legislature, I might be able to clear up a few points for him. The legislature is elected by the people and the legislature is what the people make it. If you vote for the right people you have the right kind of a legislature. Therefore, it goes directly back to the people, and Mr. Marston says, "Can't we trust the people?" Well, certainly, but the question is, "Can the people trust the legislature? If they can, there is no need for any initiative, and they still have the referendum, and that is their check on the actions of the legislature. Now we do not have a democracy here. This is a republican form of government. If we had a democracy, of course the people would do everything directly. Since we have chosen the republican form of government, in which the legislation is taken care of by representatives chosen directly by the people, I think we should retain that form of government. It has worked out pretty well so far. Of course, I believe the referendum is necessary, but the initiative is not necessary. It is cumbersome, at least it is more so than our usual method of introducing bills in the legislature, and I know there are lots of them introduced by request. I have introduced some and have fought for them. Of course, if one is introduced by Sweeney and Sweeney does not fight for it that is a different proposition, but I think they should be fought for or not introduced in the first place. I am concerned about the initiative for several reasons. One, bringing up the old bugaboo of lobbyists again. There have been legislatures that have been dominated by lobbyists. I suppose in Alaska and other states also, but that is because perhaps the people did not vote for the right men. I do know for a fact, that a good many years ago the people of Alaska were more politically illiterate than they are today, and things are improving steadily, and as they improve, we will have better people in the legislature, And of course there will be an added cost if we have the initiative and have elections, and I am sure that we will have many elections because it is so easy to get a petition signed and it is not always a little group that wants to initiate some particular piece of legislation. It is usually eight or ten per cent of the people or more. And I believe that under our present system when the people elect certain representatives they try to pick out, I won't say a better man than they are, but one who is experienced and one who has good judgment, and when you group these people together in a legislature, if they approve of a certain bill, it is generally a pretty good one. I have seen some bum ones passed, but when you take in all the people of the Territory, counting the lobbyists, crackpots and individuals with special interests, etc., we can have any type of legislation we want. Of course, there are restrictions under this Committee report here which would tend to alleviate that condition somewhat, but I don't believe that it would correct the matter altogether. So I believe that under our present system we are getting along very well, and I was reading the model state constitution here, and I noticed on their commentary on it that was the sentiment there too, although there is a provision in the model constitution for both referendum and initiative, if I could find it I would like to read it.

METCALF: Page 29.

BARR: Page 29. In one paragraph in the right-hand side of page 30 it says, "Recent experiments in several states with the attempts of certain groups to employ these agencies to place in the constitution controversial matters". Now "controversial matters" of course does not necessarily mean that it might be promoted by a certain industry. "Controversial matters of an economic nature have led to a wave of criticism of direct legislation and to numerous suggestions for restrictions on the use of the initiative and referendum." We have the restrictions in this report, but I don't think that restrictions cure it altogether. I just don't believe in the basic principles of the initiative, not under the republican form of government where everything is as streamlined and as efficient as we have it today to promote legislation.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: I would like to speak in behalf of the report of the Committee. This Committee was appointed, seven men from various sections of the Territory of Alaska. Two propositions covering the questions that were sent to our Committee was considered. We brought in for consultation the advisors that we brought here, Mr. Elliott and others. We went over this report of ours with them, trying to unify the different thoughts that the members had, and I want to say in behalf of that Committee that their work, their endeavor, a result of their study, was not "foolish legislation". I resent that statement. I am not going to get personal. Supposing I were taking the floor and had thrown that at the report of the Judiciary Committee - "foolish legislation". Any member of this Convention has the right to express his own individual opinion. He has the right to vote that opinion and I want to say in behalf of the members of this Committee that in submitting this report they have given the study, have gone over all questions you have heard here today, and we met on a common ground and we don't consider it "foolish legislation". We come back to you people to the Convention to see whether you are going to accept our report. You have the right to submit amendments, this is true. This is no gag rule nor is it no starchamber proceedings, and I think the quicker we get back into Convention and let the members express their individual views by appropriate amendments, and let this body pass on it, the quicker we will get the result of our endeavors.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: question.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: May I address a question to Mr. Egan? Must the question be put when called for? When somebody who wants to talk further, may he have the floor?

EGAN: He may have the floor.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Victor Rivers was trying here several times.

V. RIVERS: I merely wanted to say that I would like to be sure of the form in which the question is put because if we say, "Will the question of initiative be considered?" it means that it takes 28 votes to say it will be. Actually, we have it before us, so the question should be, "Will the consideration of the initiative be stricken?" and that is the way I want to be sure the motion is made. "Will we strike the consideration of the initiative?"

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Well, I make a point of order that the motion before us is worded in the manner previously read and that the delegates may consider your interpretation of it. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I would just like to bring this up. I feel that after a committee has made a long study of it and come up with something there must be some merit in it. Now in about two hours we hear the whole story and have to be rushed to a decision on it. I will have to admit that on this particular item I would like to hear more or have a little time to think about it. I have been on both sides of the question myself, and I don't feel qualified to vote on it yet. I would rather abstain from voting myself right now.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that insofar as I personally am concerned, the initiative was a device that was created some years back for specific situations. The outline of our new legislature makes that need much less imperative than it was 35 years ago. There are several devices in the legislative article here which I think would preclude the necessity of having an initiative. Bills can be introduced into the legislature by request, and even though they fail, assuming that this article is adopted substantially in its form as it is presented, even though those bills fail it may go out to referendum, so it does not preclude the possibility of people initiating some type of legislation without going through the cumbersome form of an election.

BUCKALEW: I am just going to take a second. I want to tell Mr. Collins that I think he and his Committee did a good job of presenting their material. I am going to vote against it, not because I have any objections as to the way the work was done, but I don't think the initiative is necessary. I was interested in Colonel Marston's speech about the people. I remember in the Third Division there was not any issue at all that any of the candidates campaigned on. Most of the candidates came out that they were for a constitution and it should confine itself to fundamental law and that was the only comments that I recall any of the candidates making. I think I am the only candidate that came out for an 18-year-old franchise, and that was defeated, and for myself I got a lot of criticism in the Third Division because I said that the constitution should be in the English language and in readable form. There were no issues before the people in the Third Division. Forty or fifty years ago this type of legislation was considered progressive. I don't think it is considered progressive legislation any more. I think it is costly. I don't think we need it, and that is the reason I am going to vote against it. Now as far as the referendum, I am in favor of an optional referendum as drawn in the legislative article which provides if the legislature wants to they can refer a vote to the people. I am going to vote against it.

HURLEY: Mr. Chairman, I did not realize that people would be against this, so I am forced to speak by saying in very simple language I am in favor of the initiative, referendum and recall. I have always been in favor of it, I could stay here for 24 hours and I'd still be in favor of it. I think it is a basis of democracy, even if we have a republican form of government. My thinking is summed up completely in section 1, "The people reserve the power by petition to propose laws and to enact or reject such laws at the polls." I do think that some of the items in here need amending to meet my full approval, but I am in favor of the initiative.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I feel much like Mr. Londborg. I agree with everybody.

I say that from the point that I am agreeing in principle with one faction and I am agreeing in practice with the other faction. I believe that the real value of the initiative is not in its use. It is in the fact it is there. It is a threat. That is the real value of the initiative. I will say that I believe that the initiative is expensive and it probably will not have the due consideration that the same bill will be put through legislature. I will say that an initiative that is precipitated by one per cent of the voters would be a great nuisance. On the other hand, I will say that the initiative that had 50 per cent of your electoral voters, these are maximum, there is no question about it -- the legislature would have to do it. It seems to me that if we can find limitations that preclude uselessness and cumbersome of minor matters and make your requirements such that we will say that if 25 per cent of the electors desired a particular measure, I doubt very, very much whether any legislature would hesitate about passing it. I believe that in the articles of the constitution that the initiative is a positive part of our government, but it is not a desirable part of legislation, and I would like to see the qualifications of numbers. I don't know why we have eight or ten per cent. Maybe some person on the Committee could explain why the particular ten per cent. But before it was thrown out I would like to see the percentage raised and keep the initiative.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: I think we should stick to the main question and take up the details later.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

SUNDBORG: Read the question.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Read the question please.

CHIEF CLERK: In line with Mrs. Sweeney's suggestion which was accepted the question now reads, "That this Committee recommend to the Convention to have the provision in the constitution on initiative." And then there was a second half.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Let us stick to the initiative in the first half. The referendum will follow.

WALSH: Are we discussing Mr. Fischer's motion?

NORDALE: No.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Katherine, speak up. Let us hear what you have got -

CHIEF CLERK: "That this committee recommend to the Convention --

V. RIVERS: Point of order. That is not an affirmative motion.

We already have consideration before this Committee in the form of a Committee report stating that it embodies the initiative, the referendum. Therefore, the recommendation should be "Shall we strike it?"

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: An amendment to the motion I take it would be in order, if you people want to clarify the wording of the motion.

V. RIVERS: It is an improper motion, Mr. President.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, Mr. Fischer moved, and after some discussion here he moved that that part of the proposal relating to the initiative and referendum be stricken so that if you vote "yes" you vote the initiative out. If you vote "no you leave it in.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mrs. Sweeney suggested that we put it in the affirmative and we move that we retain the initiative in the constitution, and then everybody agreed to Mrs. Sweeney's proposition. May I hear from Mr. Fischer as to how he wants his motion.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, as I remember the motion as I made it, it was first stated to the effect that we would not include the initiative. Then the point was brought up and the point of order or otherwise, by Mrs. Sweeney that we should have a positive motion and with general consent as I remember, that was changed to be a positive motion to read that the constitution shall provide for the initiative.

V. RIVERS: Point of order, Mr. President. I said "shall strike" and I so made the point on the floor. It was not that we would vote on whether or not we provided in the constitution, it was whether we should strike it from this consideration or not.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: It got before us in the form of, "Shall we retain an initiative in the constitution?"

MCCUTCHEON: I move and ask unanimous consent that the motion be laid on the table.

V. RIVERS: Second the motion.

MCCUTCHEON: The motion as now stated before us, we have this matter before us, Mr. Chairman. It is a matter of whether we are going to strike it. The matter is positive. It is to be included. The motion must be to strike, to take it out.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: I have said that the motion as now stated is subject to amendment. Will somebody please make an amendment?

TAYLOR: I move that the motion be amended to read that the sections of the proposal now before us relating to the initiative and referendum, be stricken. That is in the affirmative. That is on the initiative, just the initiative.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

BARR: There is a motion before the house to lay it on the table. I believe it was seconded.

TAYLOR: There was no agreement as to what the motion was at that time.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: At that time there was not. That was the trouble and I was wondering if we couldn't get some place with this. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. Chairman, I am not above retracting my offer of the motion to lay on the table, but you were about to put the question that Mrs. Sweeney had offered and that was why I interrupted with the motion to lay on the table because if you put that motion you would not be voting on it correctly. I withdraw with the consent of my second.

V. FISCHER: I stated my convictions very clearly in the beginning, that the purpose of my motion was to have a decision on the principle of the initiative. It makes no difference to me which way the motion is worded, even though it might make a difference in terms of carrying by one vote one way or another. If somebody wants to suggest it be put back the way it was stated originally, I am agreeable to it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Taylor's motion is before the house. It has been seconded by Mr. Victor Rivers. At this point I will ask the Secretary to read to us the motion now before us.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Taylor moved to amend the motion to read, "That sections of the proposal regarding the initiative be stricken."

BUCKALEW: The reason I asked unanimous consent was on the amendment so we can vote on it today.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Buckalew asked unanimous consent on the amendment. Do I hear any objections?

SUNDBORG: I object to it and for a particular reason. Sections of the proposal relating to the initiative is practically every section in here. It starts out in the first section and includes both the initiative and referendum. I hoped we could confine this just to the principle, do we want an initiative provided for in the constitution? If you start striking sections that mention the initiative you are going to strike out everything that's here, and I think we just want to decide, do we want an initiative? Strike all reference to initiative but don't strike the whole section.

HERMANN: Point of order. I don't think the motion has been properly made because at the time it was made there was another motion before us. I think we will have to start over and make another motion before we can get anywhere.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: That might clear the air.

SWEENEY: I would like to clear my point of order a little while ago. Mr. Fischer's motion was to have no provision in the constitution on the initiative, and all I wanted to do was to suggest it read something like this, "To have provisions in the constitution on the initiative." That is all I want. Then you can vote "yes" or "no". You will have or won't have.

CHAIRMAN RIVERS: Yes, Mrs. Sweeney, we have been over that, and Mr. Victor Rivers pointed out we already have it before us, and therefore it has been rephrased to now include the idea of striking something which is already before us. Mrs. Hermann has pointed out that Mr. McCutcheon had not withdrawn his motion at the time that this was submitted so there is nothing before us, so I rule us out of order. I would like to have Mr. Taylor rephrase his motion.

V. RIVERS: I will make a motion. I move that all reference to the matter relating to the initiative in the present act be stricken in the article before us.

BUCKALEW: I second it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: You have heard the motion, are you ready for the question.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: We started all over because there was a motion to table and I ruled Mr. Taylor's motion out of order and we started all over and this is a motion. Mr. Egan.

EGAN: Mr. Chairman, I think that Mr. Victor Rivers would mean that his motion would read that all reference to initiative in this proposal be deleted and that such be reported to the Convention, to the plenary session of the Convention.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Do you consent to that phraseology?

V. RIVERS: Yes.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Let us not get confused, so let us try to understand what we're going to vote on. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I was simply going to ask that the Chair state clearly what the effect of the motion would be.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: I was first going to have the Clerk read the motion as stated by Mr. Egan, which was the phraseology being consented to by Mr. Victor Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Moved that all reference to the matter relating to the initiative be deleted and such be reported to the Convention."

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: The effect of that would be that if you vote "yes" you would be voting to delete all reference to initiative. If you vote you are voting to retain initiative. Will the Clerk call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:)

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 34 nays and 5 absent.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: So the motion has been lost and a similar motion with regard to referendum is now in order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would ask, Mr. President, that exactly the same motion simply substituting the word "referendum" for the word "initiative" in the motion we have just considered be adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

KILCHER: I second it.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Will the Clerk please read it as it would apply to the present subject.

CHIEF CLERK: "That all reference to the matter relating to the referendum be stricken and such be reported to the Convention."

BUCKALEW: Could I ask one question? Now if we vote to strike in this section it does not have any effect on the provision for referendum in the legislative part?

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: No, the legislature can always call for an advisory referendum. This is talking about a compulsory referendum brought on by petition. Now if you vote in favor of this motion you are voting to delete all reference to a referendum in our constitution. Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I would like to ask a question if possible through the Chair to the Legislative Committee in regard to this last sentence of Section 5 which says, "Emergency acts are not subject to referendum. It appears to me there is a question here of just what will constitute the requirements of an act becoming an emergency act. I would like to know if there is anything in that legislative article.

MCCUTCHEON: An emergency act may be any act, but the emergency must be set forth in the bill and stipulate what an emergency is. It is not a qualification that is currently used in order to make a bill become immediate law.

EMBERG: Is there anything that says it would have to be two thirds of the legislature?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, it does. Two-thirds.

EGAN: Mr. Chairman, while maybe this subject is not open for discussion, I still don't think that is the proper use of the explanation of the use of the word in here. I think it means just what it says -- emergency acts -- not that the legislature declared it an emergency in order that the bill would become law within 90 days but something that was classed generally as becoming an emergency. As Mrs. Sweeney already explained, hardly any member of the legislature would vote not to pay someone an amount of money that was justly owing to that person and put an emergency on that particular act because of the fact that they might already have been waiting a long time and wanting them to get the money, but I think that the explanation here is not right -- that it means an emergency act something that is an emergency in the Territory.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: May the Chair put it this way, that we are talking about whether we shall retain a referendum procedure in this article. The details are going to be taken up later. We can rephrase that and amend this business and clarify what's meant, later. Let's stay away from the details. Are you ready for the question? If you vote in favor of this motion you are voting to delete any reference to a referendum procedure as outlined in this article. If you vote against the motion you are voting in favor of having a referendum in our constitution. Call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

V. FISCHER: Mr. Chairman, I want to change my vote to "yes".

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Mr. Fischer changes his vote to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 8 yeas, 42 nays and 5 absent.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: So the motion has been lost. Now, ladies and gentlemen of the Committee, we have arrived at the point now where it would be in order to proceed section by section for the amendatory process. It has been suggested that we explore that and start working on that in Committee of the Whole. It has also been suggested that we arise and handle the amendatory process by the plenary session. What would the expression be from the body?

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, I move and ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole rise and report progress.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

HERMANN: Is the report to be progress or the recommendation that we have made?

EGAN: Mr. Chairman, I believe Mrs. Hermann's question is proper inasmuch as in this particular Committee of the Whole a committee of three was appointed to render a report to the plenary session, so it would be more than progress.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Yes, I would say that I had not anticipated that we would hold up the proceedings while that committee submitted a report. We all know the status of this thing right now. For the records and for posterity this committee is going to write a report but I think we can go back into plenary session now and continue working on the amendatory process. Mr. Coghill, would you say that the committee report?

COGHILL: Yes, just report progress.

DOOGAN: Point of information. We have another article or another part of the article from this same Committee to work on, and I believe it was the intent that this Committee would settle most of this before we report back.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: Ladies and gentlemen, this next article is on a totally different subject, and I was hopeful that we would now go right on and complete the article on initiative, referendum, and recall before we forgot all we learned here this afternoon and before we got into a totally new subject. Are you ready for the question? All in favor of rising and reporting say aye", all opposed "no". The "ayes" have it and the Committee rises.

(The Committee of the Whole rose and returned to plenary session.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to ask whether the roll calls that were taken should be turned over to the committee of three by the Chief Clerk and other pertinent information. Does the Chief Clerk have some other questions?

CHIEF CLERK: I just wanted to know because ordinarily the Committee of the Whole that is just a statement. Is this to go in the report?

V. RIVERS: The only thing the body is interested in is the conclusion of the Committee of the Whole as to the general consideration and I think they are not necessary and should be destroyed.

CHAIRMAN R. RIVERS: The Committee of the Whole wishes to report that a subcommittee of three will reduce the consensus of the work of the Committee of the Whole into a written report to be submitted later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it the desire of the Convention that inasmuch as the action of the membership during the Committee of the Whole, is it quite clear to everyone that regardless of the report that will be forthcoming, that we will go ahead with second reading and amendment of Committee Proposal No. 3? If that is your wish, that is how we will proceed. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, I have two proposed amendments to the section I have written.

JOHNSON: I have five proposed amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then we have two proposals by Mr. Davis on the Chief Clerk's desk and five proposals by Mr. Johnson on the Chief Clerk's desk. Are there other amendments to be proposed?

COOPER: I have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper has one. Would you rather that we take them one at a time or put them all on the Chief Clerk's desk?

DAVIS: I might state that both proposed amendments that I suggested -- one has to do with Section 4 and one with 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Please read Mr. Davis's first amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, page 2, line 20, insert after the word 'nor' the words 'may it be'"

SUNDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President, and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: "Section 4, page 2, line 20." Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert after the word 'nor' the words 'may it be'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of the proposed amendment? If not, the amendment is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk will please read Mr. Davis's amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, page 2, line 24, insert a comma after the word 'funds', delete the word 'or' and insert 'of' in lieu thereof, change the word 'nor', the next to last word in the line, to 'or'."

DAVIS: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the proposed amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves the adoption of the proposed amendment and asks unanimous consent. Is there objection?

SUNDBORG: May we have it read as it will read if the amendment is adopted, as it will read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read it as it will read if the proposed amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Neither the initiative nor referendum may be used as a means of making or defeating appropriations of public funds, of earmarking of revenues or for local or special legislation."

TAYLOR: I think the amendment provided for the insertion of a comma after the word "funds".

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right.

R. RIVERS: May the word after "earmarking" be deleted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The word "of" will still be there under this amendment. Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment? Objection is heard until the delegates get it clear in their minds. It would read "Neither the initiative nor referendum may be used as a means of making or defeating appropriations of public funds, of earmarking of revenues or for local or special legislation." Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment? If there is no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Johnson, did you have an amendment?

JOHNSON: Yes, I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read Mr. Johnson's amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, Section 4, line 18. Strike word 'eight' at the end of the line and insert in lieu thereof the word 'fifteen'."

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

GRAY: I would like to ask the mover how he arrived at the figure "fifteen". I had in mind "twenty-five" but I don't know what the difference is between eight, ten, or fifteen per cent.

JOHNSON: I suppose I arrived at my fifteen like you arrived at your twenty-five. It was simply an estimate of what I thought would be a far better percentage of the electorate needed to initiate a proposal under this act. It seemed to me that eight per cent was a little bit low.

SUNDBORG: I think we should all be clear that all that this figure refers to is the percentage of the electors or of those voting at the last election who would have to sign a petition in order to get it voted upon. It does not mean that eight or fifteen percentage means it goes into effect. It just puts it on the ballot. I venture if we change this to fifteen there would be very few initiative measures would ever get on the ballot. That is quite a high percentage to get when you carry petitions around.

LONDBORG: If you can't get fifteen per cent to put it on the ballot they certainly would not get enough to pass it when it does come out. I think it should be a little bit higher than eight per cent because its not eight per cent of the qualified electors, it's only eight per cent of the ones that voted and I think we ought to have it a little bit higher to preclude any possibility of throwing in legislation that might also call for special elections and a lot of expense.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I am not an authority on the subject, but I understand there are other states who have as high a percentage as 15 and I believe one has as high as 20 per cent. I can't quote the number of states. I would like to hear from some of the Committee that has investigated that.

MARSTON: Mr. Chairman, the average requirement is eight per cent of the states that have this form of law. The average is eight per cent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, did you want the floor?

KILCHER: Yes. I advise that this amendment be defeated. It is exorbitantly high and I intend to suggest an amendment at a much lower figure than this. The average is slightly less than eight per cent, as for as my figures show. Considering the distance and geography of Alaska, we should rather have a figure lower than eight or leave it as it is. That defeats the purpose of the measure.

GRAY: I feel that this is an important figure. I feel that this is the one place, if this is a constitutional measure, to insure that the people want the measure rather than some small group in one locality. I believe that this figure should be sufficiently high. Under a republican form of government we are going to legislate through our legislature. We want to keep the principle of the law ultimately belongs to the people, and I think the figure should denote and be used only at a time that the legislature is not conforming to the wishes of the people, and that is why I believe this figure is very important, and by this figure I think we save the initiative for the constitution or we lose it due to the cumbersome expenses of practice of possibly poor legislation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion -- Mr. Barr?

BARR: Mr. President, as I stated before, I am against the basic idea of an initiative but I realize it has some value if it is in the constitution. In fact it may be a deterrent on the actions of legislature if they know it is there and could be used, but my main fear was it would be used too often for no good purpose. I may change my mind and vote for it if this figure of fifteen per cent is adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think that possibly the adoption of this 15 per cent motion would make the program of the initiative unworkable. I notice that the states that used the initiative for statutory purposes, there are none of them that are above ten. Now I will grant that for purposes of amending the constitution there are some states that go as high, I believe, as thirty. I think it would be an error to adopt this fifteen per cent because of the fact it would be practically impossible to get that number of signatures on the petition required to initiate an initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, now they call this a petition by the voters, how to get a certain per cent of it. Now in looking at it another way, it is a motion by a certain percentage of the electors that they would like to have something voted on. Now you say eight per cent is too much, but as important as this session is, less than two per cent of the body of this house can initiate anything they want to before this body and have it voted on, so why should you have to have the electors, eight per cent or fifteen per cent more. Eight per cent I think is a fair compromise. We discussed that considerably in the Committee, but when you figure that less than two per cent in here can start something, all a man has to do is to make a motion. That one man is less than two per cent and everybody considers it, so I think if we have eight per cent on this initiative, that is plenty.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Eight per cent is a little higher than the average state that uses this law. Now we know how hard it was to go out and get 250 names on a paper to get the chance to run for this Constitutional Convention. It was a lot of work for most of us to go out and do it ourselves. To get one of these initiative measures before the people it takes over 2,000 people to sign up. You would not get any place if you had to get 2,000. You would not be here and neither would I. It's a hurdle high enough if they feel that 2,000 votes to get on the ballot is what you have to get, they have a cause and then the people have a chance to say "yes or "no". I think eight per cent is right.

BOSWELL: I wondered if the Committee had studied the statistics of voting and about what eight per cent would require. Is that the figure -
- 2,000?

MARSTON: My recollection is 27,000 votes here all over Alaska. Eight per cent of that is 2,160.

BOSWELL: I would speak in favor of a higher figure than eight per cent. It seems to me that one of the things, one of the abuses is that a number of bills could get introduced with a few voters and with only 2,000 it seems to me that it would be very easy for one locality to get 2,000 votes on a particular issue. That is why I would favor a higher figure, and I think fifteen per cent is about right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: If Alaska had a static population I would be inclined to agree, but I feel we have an expanding population, and by the time we become a state, the people that are concerned with introducing proposals, our population and our voting population will be such that eight per cent will be a reasonable figure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, talking about the difficulty of getting that number of signatures to a petition, I maintain it is pretty easy to get a petition signed. I know of one candidate to this Constitutional Convention who merely typed up some petitions and mailed them to friends and he got 800 signatures with no effort on the part of himself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I have to rise a second time because of that 200-vote deal. The gentleman on that pointed directly at me. I wish to cite right now the principle of the thing. On the extraneous, unimportant matters, we don't care what the percentage is, two per cent, but on these important matters we must raise it to a higher value.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would just like to say that the effect of the amendment, if it is adopted, would be that in Alaska right now in order to get any measure up before the people on an initiative basis, it would require 4,050 signatures on petitions. That is a lot of signatures to try to go out and get in Alaska. That is what fifteen per cent of 27,000 is. This is not going to carry the proposition. This is what is required to simply get it on the ballot so the people can have a chance to vote on it. The eight per cent now in there, as Mr. Marston said, would require slightly over 2,000, so that is what we are voting on.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a few words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I think it should be hard to get these petitions out and have them filled out, and I would be in favor of a little higher figure than the eight per cent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I am recalling the other arguments that have been made prior to this particular question. And if you will recall various people stated "Well, when the legislature fails to enact some necessary legislation the people can put the blocks to them. If the legislature has fallen down that much, it is not going to be any trouble at all to get fifteen per cent because they are all going to be up in arms. If the legislature has fallen down that much and they have to resort to the initiative, I think you can get fifteen per cent, if it's that important.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I take my second turn here. I still believe it should be a lot higher. If that small percentage can throw the wheels in motion and perhaps calls for a special election and have $40,000 every time a few people get together and want it if it does not happen to fall on a primary or general election, I think it should be relatively hard to do it because if it is something that that many people want, I am sure you can get the signatures. There have been various experiments performed on the idea of getting people to sign their names, and they say in cities that one out of ten will refuse to sign their signatures on a petition and perhaps not even look at the petition.

COOPER: I would like to point out that the figure fifteen per cent as used in the proposal, the figures that were presented on the floor were fifteen percent of 27,000 votes, and the last general election, as I recall I am not letter perfect on these figures -- was over 40,000. Is that correct? Might I ask if any of the delegates know?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Twenty seven thousand the Chair believes, or something like that.

COOPER: Of the general election?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Twenty seven thousand, six hundred and something.

COOPER: I just wanted to point out in argument that the delegate that was elected at large with the greatest number of votes, Territory wide, received 7,000 votes, which in effect would be a signature. The 15 per cent of the 27,000 votes then would be over 4,000 signatures. I believe it is a little high.

R. RIVERS: That delegate was running in a field of seven candidates. The 27,000 reflects the number of votes cast per delegate, I believe.

HILSCHER: According to the report of PAS slightly less than eight per cent seems to be the average in the states where this provision applies. Those states have a far more static population than we have. They are closely allied through transportation, through numerous radio stations, telephones, and it is much easier to get your message across. Here in Alaska where we have such a large area, the great distances between our towns and communities, our lack of communications comparable to those in the states places an additional penalty upon our people. So if we are to adopt the fifteen per cent, we might in essence from the standpoint of inconvenience, be setting it up almost at 25 per cent. I am in favor of the figure as it stands at the present time in Section 4, at eight per cent.

HINCKEL: I originally proposed or composed an article in which I set forth fifteen per cent. In Committee they changed my mind and I agreed to the eight per cent. In view of the fact that we have now removed all restrictions on the voters, a voter does not have to be able to read, etc., the qualified elector who would be permitted to sign this petition, I now favor that we raise the percentage back to a higher figure than eight -- possibly as high as fifteen.

UNIDENTIFIED DELAGATE: Question.

TAYLOR: I would like to say too that some of the states don't favor too large petitions. New York with three or four million voters, you can't present a petition that has more than 50,000 signatures, so it is a very small percentage of the voters that are on the petition because they are too bulky, there is too much trouble checking them. So in New York State you can't get more than 50,000 people on which would be a small percentage.

MCNEALY: I had not intended to speak on this, but everybody is taking a turn. The point is that I have some amendments to offer here which if the fifteen per cent went through I would be inclined to go along with the initiative and not offer my proposed amendments. Mr. Taylor speaks of New York. I think there are others here in the body who talked with Congressman O'Brien from New York. He said in one of his last words of parting from a little meeting, he said, "Don't get stuck like the State of New York with an initiative system or you will be spending out a good percentage of the Territory's money. You will find that your initiative elections will cost you far more than your regular elections. As a Congressman from New York I sincerely hope you do not write the initiative into the constitution." I think this fifteen per cent would be somewhat of a safeguard against too many elections at least.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" That is changing "eight per cent" to read "fifteen per cent". All those in favor of the adoption of the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no".

SWEENEY: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 25 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cross, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Hinckel, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 23 - Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Taylor..

Absent: 7 - H. Fischer, Hellenthal, King, Riley, Robertson, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas, 23 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the motion has carried and the amendment is ordered adopted.

V. RIVERS: It takes a majority of all of the members to which the body is entitled for final action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will declare a two-minute recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would hold that the amendment carried, not with relation so much to this amendment but if such would not be the ruling, we will very likely on through the session, could be in considering questions not the final passage of the proposals, but in considering these proposals, we could be in trouble at various times. Now, Rule No. 49, and the Chair feels that it is important to bring that to the attention of everyone, specifically sets out that on the question of agreement on any proposal on third reading the vote shall be taken by roll call and entered on the journal of the Convention. No proposal shall be declared adopted unless at least 28 delegates had voted in favor of its adoption. Now Robert's Rules and the rules of almost any assembly that you can find will say that it only takes a majority of the members voting and present to amend or to conduct other business of the body. It does, however, in most other bodies require the same requirement that is stated in Rule No. 49.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I would suggest that Rule 11 covers the present situation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Rule 11, Mr. Davis? Yes, that says just what I said. I had not found that. So the amendment is ordered adopted. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I think we ought to do something about excessive absenteeism when votes are coming up.

SWEENEY: I would like to report that Mr. King is ill. He left in the middle of the morning and so he should be excused.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Robertson is ill.

KNIGHT: Mr. VanderLeest is ill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We don't have much absenteeism that is not accounted for. Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: I move that we adjourn until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight moves that the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. tomorrow morning. Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: Objection.

COGHILL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. tomorrow? All those in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 29 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Johnson, Knight, Laws, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 17 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Cooper, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, McCutcheon, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Rosswog, Sundborg, Mr. President.

Absent: 9 - H. Fischer, Harris, King, Londborg, McNealy, Riley, Robertson, VanderLeest, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 29 yeas, 17 nays and 9 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the Convention stands adjourned until 9 a.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

December 17, 1955

FORTIETH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning the Reverend Richard Lambert of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church. Reverend Lambert will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND LAMBERT: Let us pray. Direct us, O Lord, in all our doings with Thy most gracious favor and further us with Thy continual help that in all our works begun, continued and ended in Thee that we may glorify Thy Holy Name. We ask Thy continued guidance for this Assembly that with one accord that we may work for good government for Alaska which will be to the lasting honor of the delegates here assembled and to the glory of many generations in Alaska to come. This we pray in Christ's name. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Show Mr. Coghill and Mr. McNealy as being present.

CHIEF CLERK: Two absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. Does the Committee appointed to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White.

WHITE: The Committee to read the journal asks unanimous consent to make the report later in the day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee asks unanimous consent that it make its report later in the day. If there is no objection, so ordered. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside the Convention? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I have a communication here that I want this body to send to our Canadian friends across the line. I would like to read it to you and ask unanimous consent that this be sent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection Mr. Marston may read his proposed communication.

MARSTON: Having lived in Canada for several years I know how much interested they are in what goes on across the line, and I know they are interested and so therefore this resolution. (Mr. Marston read his resolution.) I move and ask unanimous consent that this be sent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, the Chair wonders if it would be acceptable to you to have the resolution go to the Resolutions Committee first and then perhaps there might be some changes. Would that be all right?

MARSTON: That would be perfectly all right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Such is the case then. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: To whom is that to be directed?

MARSTON: That is to be directed from this Convention to the Governor of Alaska, to the Secretary of State, and then to the land bordering Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the resolution is referred to the Committee on Resolutions for their consideration. Does the Chief Clerk have any communications to read to the Convention?

CHIEF CLERK: A letter from the Territorial Librarian. (The Chief Clerk read the letter regarding the preservation of the papers of the Convention.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be referred to the Committee on Administration.

CHIEF CLERK: A letter from the Sitka Central Labor Council.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This is opposing the right-to-work clause in the constitution.

CHIEF CLERK: Shall I read it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Inasmuch as the Preamble and Bill of Rights Committee has reported, the letter will be on file. It deals entirely with that subject.

CHIEF CLERK: That is all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there reports of standing committees? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Committee No. 1 on Rules wishes to report that it recommends that Proposal No. 4 be referred to the Committee on Ordinances. Committee Proposal No. 4 is an ordinance actually, and we feel that the Ordinance Committee should give that some consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Committee Proposal No. 4 will be referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

HERMANN: We have as a second recommendation, pursuant to Rule

No. 46, the Committee recommends that after January 8 only committee proposals will be accepted by the Convention. That is for the purpose of shutting off individual proposals at a selected time. Rule No. 46 covers that. I think it will have to have action by the Convention. I move the adoption of this report.

V. RIVERS: What day is the recommendation for?

HERMANN: January 8, four days after we resume sessions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves and asks unanimous consent that in line with the statement that is contained in Rule No. 46 of the permanent rules that January 8 be set as the date after which all proposals will have to be committee proposals and not individual proposals. Is there objection?

JOHNSON: I object.

HERMANN: I so move.

ROSSWOG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think it is unwise to put these ceilings over the committees when they are already working hard. If the committees were not working hard it might be well. It does not seem to me that the quality and speed go along hand in hand. You are speaking only of the committee proposals?

HERMANN: No, individual proposals.

V. RIVERS: It seems to me further that we should not put such a ceiling on individual proposals. There are going to be times and matters coming up when there are things that have not yet reached our attention. It seems to me we should put it up to a very late date in the Convention when committee proposals could not be received.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The resolution would not put any ceiling over committee work or committee proposals but just be cutting off the introduction of individual proposals as of that date, and as far as I am concerned we could have dispensed with the whole matter of ever having any individual proposals. Now if we adopt this, if any individual even after that time thinks he has a good idea, all he needs to do is go to the proper committee and broach his idea, and the committee would still be perfectly free and they would have the right to bring in a proposal in body, but it is just to stop the great mass of work through the boiler room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to correct, and with the feeling that Mr. Sundborg meant to say that the proposals that are being submitted to the Convention are all being actually worked over by the committees rather than that the constitution is being written by the committees. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: That is true of any legislative body. The matter that comes in to it will be referred to committee. It does not seem right to me to foreclose the delegates on having the chance to put in any original ideas, especially after these hearings. We are coming back on the 4th. We will then have four days to put in delegate proposals. I think it should be left open, I don't see any reason for this ceiling, there's not a great amount of them probably coming in but there will doubtless be some that will have to come in and then it will take a two-thirds majority or else you will have to go through some committee that might be very reluctant. You would have to induce seven or nine people to join in introducing something, which may or may not be of value, but which I think should still be the privilege of this body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: It was our thought here that anybody that may gain some thoughts at home in which he would wish to embody in a committee proposal will have the period of the recess after the idea occurs and four days after he comes back here to make up his proposal and that should be adequate for anybody to make any proposal he wants to make. Then, thereafter, if he gets a bright idea he can give it to the committee and let them take care of it. We have got to have this cut off some place, and we felt that January 8 would give everybody adequate time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I agree with Mr. Victor Rivers. I see no reason for putting a shutoff date on this proposition at all. In the first place, January 8 falls on Sunday, so the last day would be Saturday, January 7, but that is a mere technicality. However, it seems to me that if we are going to put a ceiling on such a thing as this it could well be advanced at least a couple of weeks, because I believe there are many things that are still completely out of this constitution that must be put in, and I don't know of any committee that is working on it, and some of the things like delegate proposals. I see no reason for cutting off any delegate who has some proposal he feels is necessary in the constitution. He should have adequate time to put it in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: I want to ask a question. If the last day falls on Sunday, would we have until Monday to introduce a proposal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be the ruling of the Chair. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to speak once more. Practically all the members of the body have been extremely busy on committee proposals. For that reason, a number of delegates, including myself, have had no chance to do hardly any work on individual proposals, some of which I think are important and necessary. We have been devoting ourselves however to practically strictly committee work, and this practically would foreclose us from any delegate proposals having a chance to be introduced.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: My own experience in these matters of course is with the legislature, and every session I have ever attended we have had to rush during the last two weeks to get the bills through and many of them were not really very important ones, but of course you were allowed to introduce bills up to five or ten days before the end of the session, and there was always a rush of bills at the last minute. Now, it seems to me that if we have two weeks vacation to think about it, and four days to submit these proposals, that would be ample time. The committees have pretty well covered all these subjects although we may overlook something. Anyway, if something is overlooked and it is important, and this body recognizes it, it could be introduced by suspension of the rules or better yet, by submission to a committee and have them report on it. I don't believe we will ever get through with this Convention in 75 days if we submit proposals right up to the last day.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I don't see where individual proposals will cause a great loss of time to the Convention at any date after New Year's because of the following reasons -- the committees can decide how much attention they will pay to proposals, how much attention they will not pay. Some committees in the past have spent quite a lot of time with individual proposals. Others have barely paid attention to them. They can do so in the future, but the closer they get to the deadline the more they will be reluctant to be much deviated by delegate proposals. Yet I think the delegates should have the right. There is one advantage in delegate proposals. We will save time on the floor actually with having them around up until way into January, because the committee does not necessarily have to pick them up. If they are a very good idea maybe they will, but in the normal procedure of introducing delegate proposals, they will be on the desk without using actually floor time to get acquainted with the matter and in case a committee should pick up a delegate proposal, the Convention would already be conversant with the matters. It would not waste any time at all, except the delegate who sits up at night and draws up his proposals, and I think it is a minority right. It is essential that we have the right to introduce delegate proposals. I can't see anything to do with the fear that somebody is trying unduly to obstruct and to make it impossible to meet the deadline.

MCLAUGHLIN: I move the previous question.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The previous question has been ordered, and the question is, "Shall January 8 be set as the cutoff date for the introduction of individual delegate proposals?"

V. RIVERS: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

TAYLOR: A two-thirds vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, a majority vote.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 31 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Rosswog, Sundborg, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 21 - Boswell, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Absent: 3 - Doogan, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 31 yeas, 21 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has passed and the motion is ordered adopted. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of order. Is that not actually an addition to the rules, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, the Chair was going to bring that to the attention of the body. The question was raised just before the vote. Rule 46 says "The Convention may set a date after which no proposal shall be introduced except by a committee." Therefore, it takes only a majority vote because it is covered in the rules and direct authority is given to the Convention specifically. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: There are two more minor items in the report to the Committee on Rules. The Committee will hold daily meetings immediately following the noon recess each day to set the calendar for the following day. The meetings will be held in the gallery. The Committee also reports progress on Mr. Kilcher's request that it reconsider Rule 35, and we will have a report on that very shortly. That is the rule covering the previous question. I move the adoption of the entire report.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for two or three minutes while the Chief Clerk ascertains whether there are any committee proposals ready in the boiler room. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other committee reports? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, the Committee on the Executive Branch has two proposals, both of which are committee proposals, and they relate to certain work which is tied to the proposal on the Executive Branch. Now the proposal on the Executive Branch has not yet been completed. These are two supplementary proposals that go along with the main proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the two committee proposals for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 11, introduced by the Committee on Executive Branch, ORDINANCE ON THE FIRST ELECTION OF THE GOVERNOR AND THE SECRETARY OF STATE." "Committee Proposal No. 12, introduced by the Committee on the Executive Branch, ARTICLE CONTAINING GENERAL AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposals are referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar, and the delegates will note that these proposals bore the numbers "11" and "12" respectively. There are other proposals that have been assigned numbers lower than those numbers, but they have not yet been run off in the boiler room. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to inquire if one of those proposals, since it was in the form of an ordinance, should it not be referred to the Ordinance Committee? Mr. McNealy, the Chairman of that Committee, yesterday asked the Rules Committee to surrender Proposal No. 4 because it was brought in the Committee on Resolutions in the form of an ordinance, and I believe Mr. McNealy's point was quite well taken that since we do have a committee with that responsibility and they may later be charged with the responsibility if something happens to be wrong with the form of the matter, that they should look it over. Is it going to be a general practice that ordinances can go on the calendar without reference to the Ordinance Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Which one were you referring to, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: The first one read, No. 11.

MCNEALY: If I might state, it is not the intention of the Committee on Ordinances to be looking for work, but the only expert which our Committee has had has been an expert on legal research, and we have amassed a large number of court decisions, and in the report which we will submit to the delegates and will be on their desks Monday, we have pointed out the court actions taken against new constitutions, and the cases run into the thousands, and fully 90 per cent of them are directed against the ordinances and transitional measures, and we have been endeavoring to adopt or write in ordinances on which we have the precedent of prior court decisions, and that is the only thought we had in mind with regard to that particular subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If this Executive Committee Proposal No. 11 is in the form of an ordinance, if there is no objection, the Chair would re-refer the particular proposal from the Rules Committee to the Ordinance Committee. Are there other committee reports at this time? Are there reports of select committees? Are there any proposals to be introduced? Are there any motions or resolutions? Is there other unfinished business? Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, this is actually not unfinished business, but I missed it along sometime yesterday morning. I would move and ask unanimous consent that the secretariat write a short letter to Vernon D. Forbes, Judge of the District Court for the Fourth Division, thanking him for the use of the law library for the benefit of the Convention. A number of the delegates have used it, and some of the secretariat who he has made a place in the library and since the library is under his supervision, he is not required to do that, I believe a letter of thanks would show our appreciation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, such a letter will be written to Judge Forbes. Is there other unfinished business? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, Mr. Sady is not with us this morning due to the death of his father in the states. I was wondering if this body should not write some letter to Mr. Sady expressing sympathy and condolences of this body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A letter will be written, Mr. Harris, along with your suggestion. If there is no further unfinished business, the Convention will proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 3. The proposal has been read in its entirety for the second time, is that correct?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes. We are on Mr. Johnson's amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have an amendment by Mr. Johnson before us at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: No, it was just next. We acted on the last one but I have several.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment? Mrs. Hermann?

HERMANN: Mr. President, I was probably asleep yesterday when the announcement was made in regard to that vote on whether the percentage was raised to fifteen or left at eight, and I would like to know what was done about that, what the vote was on it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the vote.

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas, 23 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the percentage was raised to fifteen per cent, Mrs. Hermann. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment by Mr. Johnson.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, Section 4, line 5, strike the word 'constitutionality' and substitute in lieu thereof the word 'form'."

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

MCLAUGHLIN: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I was prepared to submit a lengthier one, but I will recommend certain things. First of all, Mr. Chairman, in all of the 19 states that have this provision on initiative and referendum, I don't think there is one state that has a provision requiring a determination of constitutionality. That is specifically so in two cases that were cited here yesterday. It was suggested that California has such a provision. California merely has a provision under Article 4, Section 1, "Prior to circulation of any initiative or referendum petition for signatures thereof a draft of said petition shall be submitted to the attorney general with a written request that he prepare a title and summary of the chief purpose and points of said proposed measure. Said title and summary not to exceed 100 words in all." There is no requirement that the attorney general give an opinion on constitutionality. In the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Article 74, Section 1, "The mode of originating such petition shall first be signed by ten qualified voters of the Commonwealth and shall be submitted to the attorney general not later than the first Wednesday of the August before the assembling of the general court into which it is to be introduced, and if he shall certify the measure and the title thereof are in proper form for submission to the people, etc." Now the general court that is referred to is the legislature in Massachusetts that is the legislature in Massachusetts is known as the general court. The true court, the judiciary is the supreme judicial court but the general court is the legislative body. It is merely an old word that has existed through the years to apply. The evil of this thing is first of all, any ten men in substance can gather together on any question that they desire an opinion on constitutionality, and they can submit it in a petition to the attorney general. I don't say that all these ideas are going to originate in the bars, but I say that any ten men when they have exhausted the possibility of the football scores, might well determine that they might send a petition with ten names signed to it to the attorney general, and the attorney general will then have to give a decision on the constitutionality of any proposed "legislation". What is the evil? The evil goes farther than that. The attorney general would be burdened then with answering questions and he would be required to do it and any lawyer here or any civilian knows that when a question of constitutionality arises it takes quite some time under any system to determine whether or not it is not only legal but in conformity to the constitution. The attorney general would have to have the largest staff conceivable in the executive branch of government to handle all of these problems. More than that, we have in the following sentence, "The certification as to its constitutionality would be determined by the courts." In only one state I believe, forgive me, maybe there are two, I don't know what the other one is, is there a provision in the constitution whereby courts can be required -- in Massachusetts under one of the articles of its constitution, the supreme judicial court which is the equivalent of our supreme court -- upon petition of the governor or legislature is required to give an opinion on the constitutionality of proposed legislation. Why has it not been adopted in other states? There is a practical reason for it. Most courts do not, like the United States Supreme Court, do not like to determine constitutionality on moot or abstract questions because constitutionality normally can be determined not on the theory, not on the words, but on the effect, and courts usually insist that legislation, they want to see the effect of legislation before they can determine whether or not it is in violation of some constitutional prohibition. Generally, throughout the United States, the request for opinions, advisory opinions, are frowned upon by the judiciary. And to inject into this constitution an advisory opinion, and in substance that is what we are requiring, the courts to give advisory opinions on constitutionality on academic questions, may in substance destroy the effectiveness of many of our appellate courts. They cannot anticipate the effects of most legislation. The additional evil of this legislation is the fact that in substance they don't ask that after all the petitions are filled out, that is we secure the 15 per cent, that is if someone is opposed, let us say we have a piece of legislation, someone desires to secure fluoridation of water throughout the state; the legislature has opposed such a principle. All you need is ten people in favor of fluoridation and they will get a lengthy opinion from the attorney general. They can take the academic matter into the court and determine its constitutionality and on what basis, maybe only ten desire fluoridation. At least in theory you should require these people to get the eight per cent, at least before they ask the opinion of the attorney general. As this thing stands now though, there is another evil that is obvious. Supposing the ten do submit the question to the attorney general, and they say "Is this proposed petition in conformity with the constitution?" The attorney general says "Yes, it is." Well, there is no court review then. They go ahead and secure their other 15 per cent. They have the act passed and all of a sudden someone comes in and attacks the act. The supreme court on review says "unconstitutional". Has the opinion of the attorney general been worth anything? No, not at all. Bluntly, I think this thing is too dangerous. It has been a bit distorted and they have inserted one word "constitutionality" in there. Most states require certification, that is a mere ministerial act. I think frankly, that is the only thing we should require, too. The suggestion that we change the whole system of judicature in the United States so ten or fifteen per cent of the people can receive gratis an opinion on constitutionality is unjustified. I might point out in this case that here the people seeking the referendum or petition can get an opinion on constitutionality, and yet the legislature nor the governor or elected officials can secure the same thing. I am entirely in accord with Mr. Johnson's motion that it be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Without endorsing all of Mr. McLaughlin's argument I too am in favor of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I am in favor of it, but I would like a little information. This paragraph speaks of only the petition. I can certainly see the reason for having it certified only as to form, but then Mr. McLaughlin said that he had a longer amendment, that he had proposed making an amendment so that the attorney general would certify as to the measure's constitutionality before it is put on the ballot. I think somebody should pass on that because there is no use having an expensive election and then find out it doesn't conform with the constitution after it passes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: What I had proposed striking was the first two sentences of Section 4. That is, I would strike, "Prior to general circulation, an initiative petition shall be signed by ten qualified electors as sponsors and have the constitutionality certified by the Attorney General. Certification shall be reviewable by the courts." I moved to strike both on the grounds that I figured there was no sense merely requiring that the attorney general certify the constitutionality. I feel that if eight or fifteen per cent of the people are sufficiently interested to secure those petitions, they can do what we normally do, they can hire their own attorneys to get his opinion as to constitutionality. Securing the bare opinion of constitutionality from the attorney general accomplishes nothing because the attorney general might well be wrong, and under those circumstances I was prepared to ask that both sentences be stricken on the grounds that no other amendment is possible, and if Mr. Johnson consents, I would request that he consent to the amendment of his motion to strike the first two sentences of Section 4.

JOHNSON: I have no, objection to that.

MCLAUGHLIN: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: He asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be amended so that the first two sentences of Section 4 be stricken. Is there objection to adoption of that?

TAYLOR: I object.

MCLAUGHLIN: I so move.

STEWART: I second the motion.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I, think Mr. McLaughlin shoots some arrows in the air and I am wondering where they are going to drop. I think he paints a very black picture of this where possibly those somber hues are not required. He painted a word picture, but it seems to me the colors have kind of run together, and it is a little bit confused and possibly people are not getting the proper idea. Now the Committee considered all the matters that Mr. McLaughlin has spoken to you about, and prior to the general circulation, having the sponsors submit that to the attorney general to ascertain whether or not it is properly designated as to the measure which it is expected to have the electors vote on. Well, at the time that the attorney general has got it, he is also asked to pass upon the constitutionality of the measure if it would be enacted, which he has the right to do because it is something that affects all the people of the state. If he says, "Well, I don't believe this is constitutional," he doesn't have to go into a whole long rigmarole. So then if he says it is not constitutional, then they have the right to go into court and they have a dispute, and there is such a thing as a declaratory judgment. They can go into the courts and take exception to the attorney general's opinion, and it is not a moot question by any means. It is an actual abiding question before the court. And the court will pass on it as to whether the matter would be constitutional if it did pass. Now, of course, we know that this doesn't spell out the details of all this is going through. The legislature will have to implement this act. I cannot see any reason we could not leave this matter in there as it is because the picture is not as black as Mr. McLaughlin paints it.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, on reconsideration, I think that so that the article will be maintained in logical integrity, I request that my amendment to Mr. Johnson's amendment be withdrawn and with the consent of my second, and I do request that Mr. Johnson's amendment pass.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin asks unanimous consent that he be allowed to withdraw his proposed amendment to the amendment. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I think that the attorney general should certify as to both constitutionality and form.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, are you objecting to the withdrawing of Mr. McLaughlin's proposed amendment to the amendment?

R. RIVERS: Oh, no.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. McLaughlin's proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered withdrawn. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I think the attorney general should pass on both the constitutionality and form. Many people, some of humble brackets that don't know any law, and others that have a big idea, some of the wheelers and dealers are going to figure out something and go to the attorney general, and if he tells them that it is not constitutional and in many instances it is quite apparent whether it is constitutional or not, and the answer is simple. Those people will be guided by the attorney general's opinion and they will forego circulating petitions all over the Territory and getting into everyone's hair. I think the thinking of the Committee is very good when they provide for a screening of these ideas before the circulation of the petitions. I think, however, that the attorney general ought to advise them as to form as well. Later he has to draft a proposed title that will embody the subject matter of the proposed legislation, and if they misworded it or botched it or need a little assistance in straightening out the wording, then they should submit it to him both for constitutionality and form, so I am "going to oppose Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment to strike constitutionality" and substitute the word "form" and I am going to propose adding the words "and form" after the word constitutionality". Maybe the body would rather vote on Mr. Johnson's proposal the way it is now, and I will make mine later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I am going to have to oppose the amendment because when I first saw this -- lawyers, most of them, very few of them enjoy looking up law, and I immediately had the thought that I always know at least ten other attorneys if we get stuck with a constitutional question, why should we have to look it up ourselves if we can get ten signers and have the attorney general do it for me, so I am going to have to oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I believe Mr. McNealy is arguing that he is going to support the amendment. The amendment would strike the word constitutionality" and substitute the word "form". Was your argument in the opposite direction?

MCNEALY: I would oppose it because by eliminating the word "constitutionality" it might cause me to have to look up some law some time myself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?"

TAYLOR: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 33 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Emberg, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, White, Wien, Mr. President.)

TAYLOR: I object to someone prompting a vote.

WIEN: Mr. President, may I ask that it be read. I did not understand.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have started the roll call, Mrs. Wien. The Chair is sorry. Once the roll has started it is not in order to have the question read.

WIEN: I would just like to go on record as saying I do my own thinking and I was not being prompted as to my vote but rather as to the wording of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is the adoption of Mr. Johnson's amendment.

(The Chief Clerk continued the roll call:

Nays: 18 - Armstrong, Coghill, Collins, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Hinckel, King, Knight, Londborg, Metcalf, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh.

Absent: 4 - Cross, V. Fischer, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 33 yeas, 18 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted.

BARR: Mr. President, I move the for the adoption of the amendment which I have placed on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment of Mr. Barr's? The Chair would state that it is up to a delegate if he has an amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk to rise and say so.

JOHNSON: In that event I have several amendments which I want read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr has been recognized.

JOHNSON: I understand that.

BARR: I believe that I failed to state where this should be placed. On page 1, line 16, after the words "Attorney General", unless somebody has a better place.

CHIEF CLERK: Is this the wording then? Page 1, line 16, after the word "Attorney General", is that a new sentence?

BARR: Yes.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the required number of signatures to the petition have been obtained, the proposed legislation shall be submitted to the Attorney General who shall edit it and place it in proper legal form.

BARR: I move for the adoption of the amendment.

ROBERTSON: May we have it re-read please?

CHIEF CLERK: "After the required number of signatures to the petition have been obtained, the proposed legislation shall be submitted to the Attorney General who shall edit it and place it in proper legal form.

BARR: Mr. President, I see now that coming after this sentence when I say "required number of signatures", it could be taken to mean the ten, and I actually mean the fifteen per cent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us an amendment by Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, the wording of the amendment is the same, but the placement in the proposal is a little different. I would like unanimous consent to amend my amendment. It would be on page 2, line 3, after the word chosen", add a new sentence, otherwise the wording is the same.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would it be better, Mr. Barr, if you asked to withdraw your original amendment and it be offered again? There was no second to the other motion you had, so I believe you are in order.

BARR: Then I move the adoption of the amendment which I have on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 3, after word 'chosen' add a new sentence 'After the required number of signatures to the petition have been obtained, the proposed legislation shall be submitted to the Attorney General who shall edit it and place it in proper legal form.'

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

PERATROVICH: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, before the legislature had a Legislative Council, the attorney general actually wrote most of the legislation at the request of some member. He acted as a counsel for the legislature. At the present time he still does some of that and the Legislative Council, I would say does the majority of it. It seems to me that before we have an expensive election somebody should edit the proposed legislation to see that it is in proper legal form, meaning of course that it is constitutional and in the proper form usually accepted by the legislature, and the attorney general should properly be the man to do that job since he is the legal counsel for the governor, and the legislature. That would avoid any possibility of the people passing on some measure that was later judged unconstitutional or illegal for some other reason. If we asked the attorney general to do this after the 15 per cent of the electors have signed it, there is no chance then of the attorney general being put to the unnecessary task of editing or passing on numerous bits of legislation which may not pass or which may not obtain the required number of signatures.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to call attention to the delegates with respect to this particular amendment that if anyone is laboring under the impression that the particular amendment deals with constitutionality, it does not, it deals with proper legal form, which is aside and different from constitutionality. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I would like to have some consideration for the people. We ask in this petition here that the attorney general pass on it before 4,000 people have to go out and sign it. I think the people should have consideration and let the attorney general work a little bit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to call Mr. Barr's attention to the fact that following the insertion of that amendment of his we have the repetition of the same thing in a sense because we have the words then, "Petitions shall be filed with the Attorney General who shall prepare a ballot title, and the adequacy of the ballot title shall be reviewable by the courts." That is all that

Mr. Barr wants to see, that the thing is in the proper form, then you go ahead and say it again in here that you want it in the proper form. It seems to me that you are piling that up a little bit high here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Well, I am afraid that Mr. Taylor is a bit confused. If he will read the first paragraph as Mr. Johnson amended it, it says that prior to general circulation, an initiative petition will be signed and have the form certified by the attorney general, that is speaking about the petition itself. But then after the petition is circulated and the people have read this proposed legislation and have approved of the subject matter, then the proposed legislation shall go to the attorney general for proper editing. We are speaking of two different things, the first thing the petition and the second thing, the legislation itself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the only thing which is binding in this case and which becomes the law is the matter that is on the ballot. Mr. Barr would have the attorney general, after perhaps 4,000 people have signed a petition, change the wording of a petition which they have signed, and I think the petition is of no value after that point. The petition is simply a petition to place a certain subject on the ballot. I think the proposed article as it is written is proper. The matter that goes on the ballot title is what becomes the law if it is adopted by the majority of the electors, and we don't care what the petition says. The petition was just a request that this matter be placed on the ballot. I think what we want to be sure is in proper form is the ballot title. I think the committee has provided that here, and there is no necessity for Mr. Barr's addition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, what Mr. Sundborg says is true. We have already provided for the proper form of ballot and petition. But the people are voting on the subject matter of the proposed legislation. They know what they want to place on the ballot, but if somebody writes up a proposed bill or law to be submitted, it may not be in proper legal form. It may be unconstitutional or may be several things wrong with it, but if the attorney general passes on that before it actually goes before the legislature or for referendum, it is more likely to be passed and not judged illegal later.

WHITE: Point of order. I notice that is the third time Mr. Barr has spoken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order is well taken. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Barr has posed a serious gap in this whole procedure. A subject matter is established in the petition. The attorney general drafts a title of what would be a proposed piece of legislation to go on a ballot along with a summary of the subject matter. The people vote on it and adopt it. Who drafts the bill, spells out the details with the particular provisions? Mr. Sundborg has said that all that becomes the law is what the people vote upon. They vote upon this draft of a title by the attorney general with a summary of the purpose of the thing. I would like to know who drafts the bill. A title merely has to be broad enough to cover the general purpose and subject matter. Who spells out the details? What is it that becomes the law? I would like to have it that the petition should be in bill form and approved as to form and constitutionality by the attorney general.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, you may have raised a question there that does need some consideration, and it might be in good order if we did have a recess for about 15 minutes at this time in order to allow the attorney members and Mr. Barr and others who are interested -- Mr. Marston -- to determine whether that question is properly spelled out in this particular proposal and what kind of an amendment is necessary.

TAYLOR: The speaker just spelled out too many times.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will stand at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: May we revert to the reports of standing committees?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to standing committee reports.

SWEENEY: Your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 2, has compared same with the original and finds it properly engrossed and the first enrolled copy in proper form. I move and ask unanimous consent that the report be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent that the report relating to Committee Proposal No. 2 of the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Is it now automatic that the Chair refers Committee Proposal No. 2 to the Committee on Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Sundborg. The Chair now refers Committee Proposal No. 2 to the Style and Drafting Committee. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I met with some of the attorney members on the matter of this amendment of mine and at first they did not exactly agree, but with great effort, bloodshed was avoided. Finally Mr. Rivers made some suggestions which incorporated my thought but overcame some of the objections on the part of the other attorneys, and it was suggested that he write an amendment to incorporate his ideas. So for this purpose I ask unanimous consent for the withdrawal of my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr asks unanimous consent for the withdrawal of his amendment for the purpose of incorporating his ideas in an amendment by Mr. Rivers. Is there objection? If there is no objection the amendment is ordered withdrawn.

R. RIVERS: It will take me a couple more minutes to complete what I am writing.

JOHNSON: I have some amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, would you ask for time or let us go on with another proposed amendment?

R. RIVERS: You might work on one more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read Mr. Johnson's amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: Do you want this one taken up next?

JOHNSON: Yes, please.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 3. Section 4, after word 'chosen' add new sentence, 'The petition shall be from two-thirds of the voting precincts.'"

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: "The petition shall be from two-thirds of the voting precincts" -- where, Mr. Johnson, of the Territory?

JOHNSON: Of course it would be from the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair stands corrected.

CHIEF CLERK: Do you want to add that?

JOHNSON: It is not necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption of the proposed amendment?

JOHNSON: I do.

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

JOHNSON: I might explain, Mr. President, that it occurs to me that under the present wording that a petition could be circulated in one large population area and the required number of signatures be obtained from that one population area, and I believe that it would be better or equitable to have the petitions circulated in at least two-thirds of the voting precincts and signatures obtained all around the state rather than just in one locality.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: We went all through this, and in this big land of Alaska we said the other day one voting precinct was bigger than 40 of the states, and we concluded it was not fair if we want the initiative to work, to chase them all over the great land of Alaska to get these petitions. You nullify it. Here is one man with five petitions here. It is not improving this thing. If you want to nullify it, this is one way to do it. We worked on it for about four weeks, good men, even if I was on there, the rest of them anyway, and we decided that some of these people -- we had it in there. We took it out. It was too big a land to chase them over the mountains and across the rivers and the oceans to get this scattered vote, so I wish if you want this initiative and referendum you would hold back on a lot of these amendments. They are not improving it. That is the reason we did not put it in there. We considered Mr. Johnson's amendment carefully. I would like to hear some of the other Committees on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: May I ask Mr. Johnson a question? If I understood your explanation correctly, Mr. Johnson, what you intended was that the petition should be circulated or that signatures should be secured from at least two-thirds. It seems to me the form does not quite carry out what you are trying to do. I am in favor of the suggestion that I think you are trying to make there.

JOHNSON: We could add the words "shall be circulated in at least two-thirds of the voting precincts." I will accept Mr. Davis' suggested amendment, and insert, "The petition shall contain signatures from at least two-thirds of the election districts of the State."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, do you offer that proposed amendment?

DAVIS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Davis's proposed amendment to the amendment? Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Are you substituting the word "circulating" and do not require signing, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: Either "circulated" or "signatures should be secured from". Either one would be all right from my standpoint. But as it reads it says, "it shall be from" and I think it is meaningless.

MCLAUGHLIN: I am just anxious to know what the amended amendment is.

DAVIS: I will say "circulated" as an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have the same question in mind, and in my mind it would have been at least two-thirds of the voting precincts that would be represented, and that would indicate at least one vote from at least two-thirds of the voting precincts in Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I can certainly see a value in having signatures from that many of the precincts. That would be one of the best ways to get the people all over the State of Alaska acquainted with what is coming up, otherwise many people will have to depend on radio or newspapers, etc., to find out and first thing you know there is a special election and a lot of them will have the initiative before them to vote and come to the polls and probably have not had a chance to talk it over and can't read, and we are going to have a lot of confusion, but if it can be circulated around I think it is going to stimulate a lot of interest and a lot of study on the initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I am partially in favor of Mr. Johnson's motion, and I am against it for the use of the phraseology "of all the voting precincts", which would be a difficult job. I would like to amend the motion and make it similar to the Missouri Constitution, what they say on the matter. I would like to amend the motion and say "the major political subdivisions" and put the word "each" before that. In other words, you have Nome, Fairbanks, Anchorage, and Juneau, and you have to get two-thirds of your signatures from those major areas, and you won't work a hardship on the people with the initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf, at the present time the particular motion cannot be further amended in its present state. There has already been an amendment to the proposed amendment offered and an amendment to the amendment to the amendment the Chair would hold would be out of order at this time. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. President, just one question of information. Would the word "circulating" include posting in a public place?

DAVIS: Mr. President, in order to get away from the confusion which I caused here, I would like to withdraw the proposed amendment, putting it back to Mr. Johnson's amendment, then we can start over again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent to withdraw his proposed amendment to the amendment.

MCNEALY: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That will take a motion before we can discuss it further. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I move that I be allowed to withdraw my proposed amendment to Mr. Johnson's amendment.

JOHNSON: I second.

MCNEALY: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment to the amendment was withdrawn. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I should like to read the amendment to Mr. Johnson's motion here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you could get it in writing. The Convention will sit at ease for a minute or two. The Convention is at ease. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I ask leave by unanimous consent to withdraw my original amendment and substitute in lieu thereof a different wording which I have placed on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson asks unanimous consent that he be allowed to withdraw his original amendment and substitute another amendment. Is there objection? If there is no objection it is so ordered, and the Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 3, Section 4, after word 'chosen' add a new sentence, 'The petition shall contain signatures from at least two-thirds of the election districts of the State.'"

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment as read.

ROBERTSON: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, my recollection of the Committee discussion on this question was that under Section 3 the legislature would have the authority to require that signatures be obtained from as many legislative districts as they might deem necessary. The Committee felt, that is my version of the Committee feeling was, that due to the changes which will inevitably come, that the legislature could safely make those requirements. They could change those requirements to meet changing conditions and, therefore, I am opposing the amendment.

TAYLOR: I would just like to substantiate the remarks of Mr. Smith. We went over this quite carefully. We argued pro and con as to whether we should put anything in about where the petition was to be circulated, how many names to it, studied the other states' provisions along these same lines, and we felt due to our geographical limits that it would be better to leave that to the legislature. Now that is an untried thing in Alaska, and if we put this in here the legislature then would be unable to change it. It would take a constitutional amendment to make any change in the method of getting the signatures or where you got them from. So we thought we would leave this thing in the fluid stage so if there was an attempt to initiate legislation by this method, and they found out that the provision by law pursuant to the article was unwieldy, cumbersome, and made it practically impossible to get a measure through, that the legislature could change it at the first session if they realize it should be done. So we purposely left that out. We felt it would be better to leave it fluid so by trial and error we can find out what is the best manner to handle this, so I would think that the amendment should be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I was going to state for the advocacy of the delegates that the original wording we had in there was that not over 25 per cent of the signatures on a petition should come from any one political subdivision, and we all agreed that it would probably be adequate but as Mr. Taylor has said, we finally decided that we might be wrong and it would be better to leave it to the legislature so it could be amended or changed without all the trouble of going through constitutional amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Line 25 on page 2, actually Section 5, says this measure of the initiative shall not pertain to local or special legislation. Therefore, I don't think the amendment is in any way, shape or form out of order. If the people of the state at-large are to be affected by eventual legislation, then I believe that petition should be distributed within at least two-thirds of the voting precincts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: There seems to be a feeling here that this is making it too hard to get an initiative. I would like to call the attention to the initiative provision in the State of Missouri where they not only ask that it be circulated in two-thirds of the congressional districts of the state, but that it be signed by a certain per cent of the legal voters. Now in the case of the constitutionality amendment it is eight per cent. In case of the law it is five per cent, which I think would compare to our fifteen per cent of those who voted. This is five per cent of the legal voters and it shall be signed by five per cent of the voters in each of two-thirds of the districts, so they certainly have their initiative a lot harder than we are proposing here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I think we are losing sight of one of the main things to be considered in connection with this proposal. These amendments and others that have already been adopted, as well as some of the sections themselves, are clearly attempts to replace fundamental law with statutory law, and I think that the whole thing of setting up the procedure for initiative and referendum, which is now being clumsily done by the body, should be left in the hands of the legislature. I have said once on this floor, if I have said it once I have said it a dozen times and probably will say it that many more, we have got to leave things to the legislature that belong among the legislature's functions, and instead of trying to write statutory law into the constitution of the State of Alaska let's get down to brass tacks and write the fundamental law on which the legislature may base its actions. I am against the amendment.

SUNDBORG: I have to take a view opposite to that of Mrs. Hermann's, something which I do not often do, for the reason that this provision would cover not only initiative petitions but referendum petitions, and I do not believe it proper to leave in the hands of the legislature the writing of basic provisions on how petitions which would override and defeat actions which the legislature has taken would have to be handled. Now under your view it is open here if we don't mention it, and it is open to the legislature to put up any kind of a provision it wants, it could require that there would have to be signatures from every voting precinct in the state which would defeat it because it would be impossible to get such signatures, and I don't believe that if we are going to have the referendum at all which is the process for the people to say, "We don't want this law which the legislature has just passed." We don't want to leave it to the legislature to set up the ground rules of how those things are going to be handled. I think that the amendment as now submitted does not require very much. All it says is that the petition shall contain signatures from at least two-thirds of the election districts of the state. The Apportionment Committee is bringing out a report which is going to set up 24 election districts in the state. This would require that anyone who wants to get a matter on the ballot would only have to have signatures from 16 of those election districts. Say that we need 4,000 as it is in Alaska today, he could have 3,985 signatures from the City of Anchorage and he could get one each from the other 16 election districts and he's on the ballot. Now I don't think that is going to restrict very many initiative or referendum petitions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I certainly agree with Mrs. Hermann. It seems to me a lot of delegates, and I have had the same idea myself up to this point, that you can't write into the constitution provisions that are going to take care of every imaginary evil that might come up. I think you can trust the legislature. We are going to trust the judges. We have created judges. We have given to the judges the power to incarcerate people and even hang them, and it is not any more illogical to trust the legislature. I might say that I offered an amendment which I think will cure all of this discussion, and I don't mean any reflection on Mr. Collins or his Committee, but I certainly agree with Mrs. Hermann. Now you can see the hassle we have gotten into over whether it is going to be ten or fifteen per cent, and it is all legislation, and if it proves to be unworkable you have got to amend the constitution to change it, and Mrs. Hermann is absolutely right.

MCLAUGHLIN: Without committing myself either way, I am just a little bit puzzled. Under Mrs. Hermann's suggestion it would all be left to the legislature. If the legislature exercises its authority under Section 3 prescribing the procedures to be followed in the exercise of powers of initiative and referendum, it makes it an emergency act, and you can't have a referendum on your referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, the only value for the initiative and referendum procedure is if there is a clear channel for enactment of legislation by the people. That is, if it goes directly from the people bypassing the legislature. If you give the legislature the power to block that channel, then you just as well as have no initiative and referendum at all. Now this is the second time I have had to change my mind on the question that is concerned with this, but I will now support the amendment offered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I think, in answering Mr. Smith's objections, he possibly loses sight of the fact that this Convention, if we adopt this proposal would be bound by it, as it says "No law shall be enacted to hamper, restrict or impair the exercise of powers reserved herein...by the people." They have got to pass the legislation. It has got to be introduced. It has got to be implemented by the proper legislative measure. Let us trust the legislature. Let us leave this just as much as basic law as we possibly can. Otherwise, we are coming out of here with a constitution that the voters will not ratify. Maybe some of these amendments are put in for the purpose of defeating the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I want to say that I agree, strange as it may seem, with what Mrs. Hermann has said here. I think a good deal that is in this bill as written is legislation. The amendment which Mr. Johnson offered and which I supported was a matter to amend something that is legislation in my opinion to make the thing clearer and more nearly responsive to the will of the people of the whole rather than one section. That was the reason for offering the amendment. I would agree right off that if this part of Section 4 could be stricken as legislation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I resent the implication that I have offered any amendments for the purpose of defeating this constitution. I don't believe that Delegate Taylor had any right to make such an inference. I think that any delegate here has the right to offer amendments as long as they feel they are justified and it is part of the subject matter at hand. Now certainly in this instance, the constitutions that have been read to us, clearly indicate that this provision which is now before us by way of amendment is not unusual. There is nothing strange about it, and as Delegate Sundborg points out, it is not an impractical proposition because you can get, as he says, 3,995 signatures in Anchorage and get the rest of them, one signature from the other 15 voting precincts, so it is not an impractical proposition. It still acts as an additional safeguard on the misuse of the initiative. Yesterday I was opposed to the initiative principle, but the delegation in the Committee of the Whole voted to support the principle, and it is now in our constitution and will be I assume, but I still think that we have the right to make it as strong as possible because certainly it can be very easily misused as has been pointed out, and a special election under the initiative could cost the taxpayers $40,000 and you might have a number of those special elections every year, and it runs into money, and I don't think we are going to have any too much money after we become a state, at least not for awhile, so I believe it is a reasonable safeguard and that the amendment should be passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I am a strong advocate of leaving matters to the legislature, but I want to point out that when you start writing legislation into the constitution then you have got to write more legislation in order to supplement the legislation that you already have written in, and I too want to call attention to Section 3, the last line where it states, "No law shall be enacted to hamper, restrict, or impair the exercise of powers reserved herein by the people. If this is left blank, the percentage of the voters who must sign the petition, and if it is left in the blank about what districts they shall be signed in, then I can foresee and very clearly there will be untold litigation, because if the legislature attempted to pass a bill and required fifteen per cent of the signatures, the people, or a small segment, would attack it on the grounds that it was hampering or restricting or impairing the voters. If the legislature attempted to say that the petitions had to be secured in certain districts they could always refer back to this clause here of hampering, restricting, or impairing. I think as long as we started writing legislation into this, unless the matter is clearly spelled out in the bill and left up to the legislature, then we must spell out these things in order to protect against future court action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair is going to adhere to the rule, Mr. Taylor, that each delegate is allowed two times around. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information. I would like to address a question to Mr. Johnson. If Mr. Johnson's amendment should be adopted, would that leave enough power to the legislature later on to determine the percentage of signatures required in each of the two-thirds of the legal subdivisions?

JOHNSON: Offhand, I would say no, but it seems to me that it might be construed that if the legislature should determine later that each voting precinct would have to produce a proportionate share of the signatures, that might be in contravention of the constitutionality. I am not enough of a constitutional lawyer to know, but my offhand opinion is that this provision as it is now before us would make it flexible, and if the legislature attempted to put any restrictions on that flexibility, that it would not be improper.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Personally I think that the legislature would be entitled to make further specifications that are not limited by any of the constitutional sections, and I hope that it will. and provided that I am right in my assumption, I am in favor of Mr. Johnson's amendment.

ARMSTRONG: If Section 4 is to stay in the act, it seems to me that we have to have this provision. I want to revert back to the thing that Mr. Marston constantly talks about, the people. I have a feeling so often that when I vote on the wrong side of an issue that I am voting against the people because that word has been underscored so emphatically. I think that to eradicate sectionalism and provincialism from Alaska we must have an expression from as many sections of the state as possible. I think one of the great things that is hampering us now is the feeling that one area wants to dominate another . area, and I will vote for this amendment because of my inner feeling that this is bridging all of these depressions of sectionalism. It is asking for a widespread opinion on a piece of legislation. If folks say "Well, we are not intelligently" enlightened on this enough so that we can sign this petition, then let them dig into it before they sign it. It will probably give a wider base of opinion when it comes to a vote. We can probably vote on it more intelligently. I will support this amendment if we are keeping in Section 4.

BOSWELL: I move the previous question.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of the "question will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying no . The "ayes have it and the previous question is ordered. The question is, "Shall Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor --

TAYLOR: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 3, Section 4, after the word 'chosen' add a new sentence, 'The petition shall contain signatures from at least two-thirds of the election districts of the State.' "

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 38 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Awes, Buckalew, Emberg, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, V. Rivers. Taylor.

Absent: 4 - Cross, V. Fischer, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 38 yeas, 13 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I have an amendment which amends the other way. It is on the desk already. It is an amendment that tends to favor the use of the initiative whereas the last one somewhat curtailed it. So perhaps it might be well to consider this one now. It is in relation to the second line of Section 4.

R. RIVERS: I have already laid on the desk that redraft that the body was waiting for after that recess in connection with Section 4, on the whole procedure of Section 4. I was wondering if Mr. Hellenthal would yield and see what I drafted.

HELLENTHAL: I would be happy to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then the Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment that Mr. Ralph Rivers has offered.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, Section 4, strike lines 13 to 18 inclusive, and lines 1 to 5 inclusive, on page 2 and substitute the following: "Section 4. Prior to general circulation, an initiative petition containing a draft of the proposed law in bill form shall be signed by ten qualified electors as sponsors and have its legal sufficiency and form certified by the attorney general. If certified to be sufficient the initiative or referendum petition containing a summary of the subject matter prepared by the attorney general may then be circulated and must be signed by qualified electors equal to 15% of the number of votes cast for governor in the preceding general election at which the governor was chosen. The petition may be filed with the attorney general who shall prepare a ballot title or proposition designating and summarizing the substance of the proposed law which proposition shall go upon the ballot as hereinafter provided.

BUCKALEW: I would like to say one thing. That amendment is as long as a proposal. I would not be in position to vote on that unless I had a copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, do you so move the adoption? R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

BARR: I second the motion.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, the only way we can clearly indicate what procedure which Mr. Buckalew is capable of comparing with what was previously written was to strike all of Section 4 appearing at the bottom of page 1 and the first five lines of page 2. Previously it spoke of the "ten qualified electors". We have had it scratched out to change "constitutionality" to "form". We have had certification spoken about. We did not have any procedure there as to what this petition should contain. I pointed out the gap that unless somebody drafted the bill and you passed upon a ballot title at the poll you would not have a law. We have provided the proposition here that the ten people who submit the petition include the proposed law in bill form at the very outset, and the ten people that have enough interest to study the subject and take action should at least draft the bill with the help of such counsels as they desire. The attorney general then looks it over. That is the petition indicating that they want this to be an initiative petition, he scrutinizes the proposed bill, passes on it as to sufficiency, and legal form. Then after that is done he certifies it. If he certifies it to be sufficient, then the attorney general prepares a summary of the proposed legislation which is to constitute the heading of the petition. You don't have to stick the whole bill draft on the petition because that would be awkward to pass that all around the Territory, but at least you have this proposed bill filed with the attorney general at that time for anybody who wants to refer to it or look at it. Then after the 4,000 signatures have been obtained the attorney general prepares a ballot title or proposition containing a summary of the subject matter, and that is what goes on the ballot, and after the people have voted favorably on that proposition, the law is adopted. But what is adopted is a law that has been drafted and approved by the attorney general, as to sufficiency and form. I think I have filled the void that we were talking about before the recess and cured Mr. Barr's objection and actually made a procedure here that would result in a specified law.

JOHNSON: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

JOHNSON: Is it your intent by the amendment as stated now to eliminate the contents of the amendment which we have just adopted previously, because that is included in the words that were stricken out?

R. RIVERS: I drafted this before that, but I had no such intention. I asked unanimous consent to include the language of the last amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, Mr. Buckalew raised a question there about the length of the proposed amendment, and it would seem inasmuch as although you have explained what it intends but with an amendment that long where the members can't remember all the words and where they fit, that it would be well if the membership had a copy of the amendment before them, if that is their desire.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, if I am the only one who does not understand I will concede.

GRAY: I will agree with Mr. Buckalew.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent then that my amendment be held in suspense while the body proceeds with other amendments with the general knowledge that what my amendment proposes, and that after 1:30 perhaps we can have a copy for everybody.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is just that if an amendment of that length were adopted, and later somebody would say, "I didn't realize how the wording was." If there is no objection the motion for adoption of Mr. Rivers' particular amendment could by unanimous consent be held over and we could proceed with other amendments to the proposal, if that would be the desire of the delegates, until such time as copies of this proposed amendment could be made available.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Would it be in order to ask for about a one-minute recess to enable Mr. Johnson and Mr. Rivers to reconcile content of these two amendments if any reconciliation is in order?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for a minute or two.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Laws.

LAWS: I move you that we recess until 1 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Laws moves that the Convention stands at recess until 1 p.m.

LAWS: Pardon me, I mean 1:30 p.m.

RILEY: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.?" All in favor of standing at recess until 1:30 p.m. will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The motion has failed.

KILCHER: I move that Article 1 of Committee Proposal No. 3 be recommitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that Article 1 of Committee Proposal No. 3 be recommitted to the Committee on Direct Legislation.

RILEY: I second the motion.

BUCKALEW: Question.

SMITH: I can see no reason, I can see nothing to be gained by resubmitting this proposal to the Committee. I think that we would simply have to go through all of this once again. I believe it would be a complete waste of time, and therefore I oppose the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I feel the same way as Mr. Smith. I talked with the Chairman of the Committee a few moments ago, and the rereferral of this to the Committee is a useless gesture because I doubt that we would act upon it. It will come out the way it is.

COLLINS: As Chairman of the Committee, I wish to state after consultation with the members of the Committee that we came in here with our report. We settled our minds on the differences that were suggested to us. We worked tirelessly hour after hour. We centered our differences of opinion in this report, and we decided to send that report to this body, which was necessary, and let them introduce amendments to this report that we submitted. Now I think it is useless to even attempt to send this report back to this Committee because we will have to come back with the same report. How can you expect if 55 members cannot decide on an issue, a germane question, how do you expect seven men to decide it? It will be the same thing over and over again. We will have to come back here and subjugate ourselves to the sharp shooters of this Convention. I oppose a recommitment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: In seconding Delegate Kilcher's motion a moment ago I have not underestimated or minimized the work of the Committee, but it occurs to me that we have any variety of amendments ahead of us on Section 4 at least and possibly on other sections, and in that knowledge it seemed reasonable to expect that those people who are advancing those particular amendments might meet with the Committee and somehow resolve this matter a little further than it has been on the floor now. I think it would save considerable floor time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I feel that if Mr. Kilcher may amend his motion, I feel that everybody has been tied up pretty much in their own committees and they have been released. I believe, as Mr. Collins says, there is no point in resubmitting this back to the Committee, but there is a lot of new thought and a lot of new ideas expressed. Would it be out of order to submit these articles to a special committee? I leave that as a suggestion to Mr. Kilcher, if that is what he had in mind.

COLLINS: I think the only way to clear this, Mr. President, is to go back in the Committee of the Whole.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to support here the thought that if we are going to arrive at any conclusions on any of these articles that come before this body from the committees, only by one way, and this is working them over, and this I think is the best way to work them over is here in general discussion, whether in the Committee of the Whole or in plenary session. I would like to support this article that Mr. Collins has brought out, but I do think it is our prerogative to take it apart and put it back together again and incorporate the thinking of 55 people in it. We can't expect seven men to carry the load, yet the 55 are carrying the load for the entire Territory. I feel that this is the only way we can arrive at the solution to it. If it is going to take time, it is going to take time.

HERMANN: I have several times risen to address the assembly on the matter of the time urgency that we have. I think if you put this back in Committee you are going to have to recess your plenary sessions to let the Committee meet again. We are going to go all through this falderal that we did before, of waiting for a committee report to come out and marking time while we do it. I don't think we will achieve a single thing by referring this back to the Committee except use additional time, and we will all be up again saying our two bits worth just like we have today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I think something can be gained by postponing at least part of this article a little. Now we have one long amendment that as I understand it will have to go through the boiler room and presented to each delegate before we are even prepared to discuss it. I know of another amendment that would seek to retain the intent of the body here as shown by the amendments already adopted but would also considerably shorten this section. I wonder if Mr. Kilcher, the maker of the motion, would agree to withdrawing it and submitting a new one which would state that further consideration of Section 4 would be deferred until 1:30?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, in making my motion I had the time at heart that is getting shorter every day, and I intended this vote to be a vote of confidence in the Committee on Direct Legislation, because I think they are perfectly competent. They have done a good job in good faith. We have had a Committee of the Whole, we have had a lot of deliberations. Yesterday we were bogged down in more than one way. We were tired. Today we are approaching the same situation. There are conflicting and contradictory and overlapping amendments on the Chief Clerk's desk. Others are coming up. I just trust and rely on the good will of the Committee that they will be able to incorporate some of these ideas that they realize that we expect them to be flexible. We expect the same thing of other committees in the future, that in perfectly good faith they will, after the thing has come on the floor and after everybody's opinion is known, they should take these conflicting amendments and work them over and try honestly to see if they could incorporate some of them, and I for one am certain that the majority of the delegates here then, when the proposal comes back, will recognize the committee's good will and will vote on these things and we will have saved a lot of time that we otherwise will spend on the floor, because we have noticed that if too many amendments come in things get torn up so bad that it gets more and more confusing and bogged down, the mental processes slow down, it is a terrific waste of time. If we recommit in such situations and trust to the Committee, I will take the words of them from then on. They are a clearing house so to speak and they on their own time, I admit it means to burden them further, but we are willing to burden them and take the work. I am willing to be burdened in my committee later on, but we will save floor time for everybody and in that sense alone I make the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I realize the Committee's feeling. They have worked on the thing and have arrived at this compromise. Why would it not be sensible for everybody who has an amendment for this section to write it down and then everybody and his amendments go back here and hash it out and rewrite the section to suit themselves and then bring it back as an amendment, and then go on from there?

HILSCHER: Mr. President, Mrs. Nordale has given us a bright light and a ray of hope here. I was practically ready to rise to ask that we suspend operations until 1:30 until we could bring in 55 beautiful chartered certificates from the society dedicated to the charm and beauty of the human voice. We are all going to yack yack on this thing endlessly. I think that Mrs. Nordale has a very good point, without committing the Chief Clerk, I see she has a stack of amendments there. There will be undoubtedly a great many more, and it would be well if Mrs. Nordale's suggestion was to be seriously considered by this body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, approximately a week ago, if you recall, I was accused of lobbying when I announced during the hearings on the judiciary bill that we desired to hold a special meeting during the noon recess and we designated that we desired to hear every man who had entered verbally, any objection on the floor to the judiciary bill. After our noon recess and in the course of our Judiciary Committee hearing, all our difficulties were resolved by logic and not by lobbying. The bill went through a bit easier. I am disposed to vote against Mr. Kilcher's amendment because I think the Committee has worked hard, and as expressed by the Chairman, I don't think there is any point of involuntarily tossing the bill back to him, but I do think if the Committee on its own motion, just before someone moves for adjournment until 1:45, should announce a committee hearing and invite all those people who have amendments to come, that on their own motion and voluntarily they might be able to solve many of the problems they have confronting them. But I am forced to oppose a formal recommitment of the bill. Without their consent I think it means nothing and is a waste of time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I rise in defense of this Proposal No. 3. The trouble is not with the Committee. The trouble is with the group right here. It is a good bill, we brought out and it is well worked out, and I am definitely in favor of Delegate Nordale's proposal that these people get together. This bill has suffered no differently than any other bill here. It has had the same result, and we jump too quickly here without thinking. We have some mills to grind out proposals. You can trace them back. They come right through all the time. Let them study this one. I propose that Nordale's proposal be put through. I am backing it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Like others, I have confidence in the work of the Committee, and I think it should not be submitted to the special committee and do away with all the experience that this Committee has gained in working on the proposal, and I agree with Mrs. Hermann that if it is referred to Committee again, and it comes out on the floor, it will still be amended, we will still have to work it over and consider it. I don't believe it should be referred to Committee. Although, as Mrs. Nordale suggests, that these people who have amendments to propose would get together with the Committee and they might find out that the Committee has some good reasons for not incorporating that thought into the proposal and they would not have to submit the amendments. I move that after we vote on Mr. Kilcher's motion that we recess until 1:45.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think we were doing fine here up until we jumped the gun and under the guise of Style and Drafting decided to sum up the first twelve sentences. They were in crude form following the amendments, but the principles were clear. I personally think Mr. Rivers' motion, desirable though it may be, was entirely out of order. We are not concerned with the form or the style so much at this stage of the proceedings. We are concerned with the principles, and once they are established the form will follow as a matter of course. Now I personally think that the first six lines of Section 4 and the next nine lines are pretty well established with one or two minor points, and I personally think that there will probably be two amendments attacking some of the rest of Section 4 or suggesting some very good modifications and then we'll be through. The mere fact that a lot of amendments pile up on the Clerk's desk, that does not mean the bill is poor, it doesn't mean that poor work has been done by anybody. I will be willing to wager that most of those are duplicates and that when decisions are made on one or two cardinal points that they will be withdrawn or else summarily defeated by this body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I rise to be heard. I don't concur with Mr. Hellenthal that my proposed amendment is out of order. I pointed out a gap, a complete gap on who is to draft the bill and what was going to be the law and to try to avoid confusion and say we strike this word and another word and interlineate some other words, I suggested striking about ten lines and rewriting those ten lines in the best form I knew how to put it in. I think this body has made some progress. We are pretty well agreed on the basic part which is that of Section -. I think we are going to wind it up fairly rapidly after we get going on it again. I might suggest, however, that we ought to take amendments one section at a time and only have them brought to the Clerk's desk as each section is called. Otherwise (which is the procedure that I remember pertaining in the Legislature) if we establish something basic on an early section that is going to obviate the dropping in of a whole bunch of amendments pertaining to later sections which may never be dropped in if we can only proceed section at a time and only allow those amendments to be placed on the Clerk's desk a section at a time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are correct, Mr. Rivers. Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: Let us go back to the motion that was made here and duly seconded. In answer to Mr. Kilcher's statement that we, the Committee, refer this to the Committee that has already submitted it here, we did submit this report. We read the commentaries on it. We spent time after time in answering every question that was propounded to the Committee, and I say Mr. Taylor answered them. Now you say it will save time going back in the Committee and the proponents of the different amendments will meet there with the Committee. What is the difference? There is a vast difference of meeting here and accepting those amendments in this hall where we have the room and have the air than to meet in a little cubby hole above us here. There is no room, no air, and the same questions will be presented to us that will be better presented to the body here. And I say the only way to determine that is to go in the Committee of the Whole, as a usual thing, and let each individual submit his amendments and let the 55 members of this Constitutional Convention decide on it, giving each member his right. Put it before the body of 55 and not before the body of seven.

SUNDBORG: I move the previous question.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

KILCHER: I object. Point of order. I understood that before the previous question and the motion is seconded one can get up and object.

BARR: The Chair had not recognized Mr. Kilcher up to that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the motion was objected to, it would just require the second to put the motion as a motion, Mr. Kilcher. You could object which you did, but when Mr. Buckalew seconded the motion, it put the motion before us.

KILCHER: What I was driving at, according to the rules, the maker of the motion has the right to speak.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, but if it is their desire to make a motion for the previous question, it is their privilege to do so, if they wish to do so, and it has been moved by Mr. Sundborg, seconded by Mr. Buckalew, that the previous question be ordered. The motion is in order.

DAVIS: I would like to inquire if Mr. Kilcher wants to make a closing argument, is that the reason for his objection?

KILCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, will you hold the motion?

SUNDBORG: I will hold up the motion if he makes it very brief.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg withdraws his motion.

TAYLOR: I think it would be in order to advise Mr. Kilcher that he doesn't have to close.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, you have the floor.

KILCHER: The motion to recommit is not made in a mood that implies that the proposal is poor, like somebody awhile ago intimated. It is the other way around, as I said before. It reflects well on the proposal, and I just expected that the same consideration that has been given the proposal in committee can also be given the amendments, and it is solely made in the interest of saving time. Next month, in January, we will have very little committee work any more, and we will have however a scarcity of time on the floor, and the oftener, under the right circumstances, we recommit something to committees we clear space on the floor because we will always have proposals that we can work on. Like in this instance I had suggested we recommit Article 1. Independently of this, we could work immediately on Article 2 and with the Committee's good will and with the good will of those who have amendments pending to work together with the Committee, I am certain we could establish a good precedent, that the Committee will come back with the air cleared, with some of the amendments eliminated and others accepted by the Committee because of what they learned and heard on the floor, and then we can go on with our work, and we will have saved a lot of time, and we will need that next month.

SUNDBORG: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Kilcher's motion to commit Article 1 of Committee Proposal No. 3 back to Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adoption of the motion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the amendment has failed. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Before I make this motion for a recess, I want to remind the Rules Committee that we are meeting immediately after we do recess.

HELLENTHAL: The Committee on Apportionment will meet upstairs immediately following this recess.

MCNEALY: The Committee on Ordinances will also meet immediately following recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Ordinances will meet immediately following recess. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: The Committee on Resources, for as many as them as can, will get together immediately following the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I move that the assembly stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

LAWS: I object.

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I have an amendment to offer. (Mr. Buckalew brought his amendment to Clerk's desk.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there an amendment pending at this time? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May we be at ease for a moment while the copies are passed around.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection we will be at ease while the copies are passed around. Mr. Rivers' amendment is already pending, Mr. Buckalew, and the Chair would like to state that the amendments will have to follow in order down through the sections. Now after we get through amending all of the sections you can go back and amend again, but we won't jump from 4 to 6 and then back to 1 and 2. Does everyone now have a copy of the proposed amendment? Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I ask for a question of information. If Delegate Ralph Rivers' amendment should be adopted, is it still in order to make an amendment, to offer an amendment to the original Section 4 in the part embodied in this amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If this amendment was adopted, would it then be in order to amend this particular amendment after it was adopted, is that your question?

ROBERTSON: That would probably be involved. I was wondering if it would be in order to make an amendment --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, if your proposed amendment, while it might involve changing words in this particular amendment that might be adopted, if it would change the sense of something of the interpretation, it would be in order. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Robertson discussed this. He has in mind a number that would change the number of sponsors from ten to some other number.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be in order, Mr. Robertson. Was your motion seconded, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Yes, it was. In the redraft we have done a little editing, so I now move its adoption in the form now submitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment would have to be read. The Chair did not get a copy of the proposed amendment. Mr. Rivers, it might be well then if you withdraw the original amendment.

R. RIVERS: I withdraw the amendment as it was originally submitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. R. Rivers asks unanimous consent that his original amendment be withdrawn.

R. RIVERS: I now move the adoption of the amendment in the form presently presented and before you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, Section 4, strike lines 13 to 18 inclusive, and lines 1 to 5 inclusive, on page 2 and substitute the following: 'Section 4. Prior to general circulation, an initiative petition containing a draft of the proposed law in bill form shall be signed by ten qualified electors as sponsors and have its sufficiency as to form certified by the attorney general. Denial of certification shall be reviewable by the court. If certified to be sufficient the initiative or referendum petition containing a summary of the subject matter prepared by the attorney general may then be circulated and must be signed by qualified electors equal to 15% of the number of votes cast for governor in the preceding general election at which the governor was chosen. The petition shall contain signatures from at least two-thirds of the election districts of the State. The petition may be filed with the attorney general who shall prepare a ballot title or proposition designating and summarizing the substance of the proposed law which proposition shall go upon the ballot as hereinafter provided.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion by Mr. Ralph Rivers?

BARR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded, and the motion is open for discussion. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I have an amendment to offer. It is on the desk, an amendment changing "15" as a per cent in the unnumbered lines here, but it is the last word in the original proposal, changing the 15%" to "10%".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your amendment is out of order at this time. This motion is before us. A new amendment is on the floor at this time.

TAYLOR: Amending the amendment though.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Amending the "15%" to "10%"? Mr. Taylor then offers an amendment to the amendment seeking to change to read "10%". Is there a second?

MARSTON: I second the motion.

SWEENEY: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is on the amendment to the amendment seeking to make it ten per cent of the number of votes cast. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: This matter was voted on in the Committee of the Whole last night, and in coming into the plenary session we adopted the oral report of the Committee. Now I don't feel that we can vote on that issue again any more than we can vote on the 19 or 20 years again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, the Chair does not recall that we ever voted on ten per cent. But anything that happened in the Committee of the Whole session would just come to the plenary session as a recommendation. That is all. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe Mrs. Sweeney's recollection is perhaps incorrect and that we did in plenary session amend from the figure eight to fifteen per cent. I don't believe we discussed that matter at all in Committee of the Whole.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No one could again offer the amendment and be in order to make it eight per cent, Mrs. Sweeney, but the Chair will have to rule that the particular amendment to the amendment offering ten per cent as the figure is in order. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to speak briefly. I think this has been argued pro and con at the time that the original proposal was eight per cent. I think a number of the Committee have spoken against the fifteen per cent on the grounds that it would positively make it impossible or so difficult to circulate a petition for an initiative that it would render the law inoperative. Now as Mr. Londborg said, this morning he was reading some statistics in Missouri, and to initiate a law it only requires five per cent. Now, of course, we realize that in Missouri it is much easier to get petitions circulated. The transportation problem is nothing. The people who circulate them can drive around different places and counties and get them signed. Here with the vast distances and the difficulties of transportation, it would be a little bit difficult. So that would leave us, if we adopt the ten per cent, still twice as high as the State of Missouri where transportation is very easy. So I think ten per cent would be a good compromise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I think if we read the Missouri Constitution carefully we will find that it is "five per cent of the qualified electors". We are only asking for a certain per cent of the governor's vote. There is a lot of difference because I don't think half or maybe a third of the people who can vote go out and vote. So actually five per cent in Missouri would be equivalent to maybe fifteen or twenty per cent here. Not only that, they also require five per cent of the electors in each of two-thirds of the voting precincts. We are saying that they can get all but fourteen, I believe it is, in one precinct and then just go out and spot enough so that they qualify in the two-thirds in the other.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I don't go along with Mr. Taylor that this is going to be such a difficult task to get the fifteen per cent. Every petition will have at least ten sponsors, and if they know it is going to have to come from two-thirds of the legislative districts, those ten sponsors will in all likelihood come from ten different districts or maybe five. If you have 4,000 votes to get it requires each sponsor to secure 400 votes, and I believe it should be left at fifteen per cent.

MARSTON: The 19 states who have the initiative and referendum laws have averaged a little below eight per cent requirement. We went over this document and this figure with the experts here. It was in keeping with their thinking, and eight per cent is higher than the average of the 19 states who have this, and it is the right number. I want to warn the people here of one thing I see coming up. The person or persons who are issuing most of these amendments are people against initiative and referendum. I know that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will have to hold from here on that the Chair will have to declare any one out of order if they allude to the motives behind any delegate.

MARSTON: Can I say who is for and against? It has been said on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This does not particularly refer to your statements, but the Chair is going to have to hold firm on allusions as to what might be the motives of other delegates on the floor.

MARSTON: Eight per cent is above the average required. If you want the initiative and referendum to work, if you want the people of Alaska to have a chance to initiate and recall laws, keep it at eight per cent. That is the right figure. Ten per cent would be plenty high. Fifteen per cent rules it out. It is not effective.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I am both in agreement and in disagreement with Mr. Taylor's proposal. Ten per cent at the present time with our present voting population perhaps would be a little low. Also, I have an amendment on the desk, and if Mr. Taylor would adopt the latter part of my amendment, I think maybe we would straighten this situation out. I would go ten per cent provided however that no petition shall have less than 5,000 signatures.

SUNDBORG: Question.

COOPER: I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper moves the previous question.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The ayes have it and the previous question has been ordered. The question is, "Shall Mr. Taylor's proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention?"

JOHNSON: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 29 - Coghill, Collins, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Nays: 21 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Gray, Hellenthal, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Cross, V. Fischer, Hilscher, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

MCNEALY: I would like to change my vote to "yes".

AWES: I just wanted to inquire as to if my vote was listed as "no". I said both.

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, it was.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did Mr. Barr want to change his vote?

BARR: No, I wanted to inquire about Miss Awes.

CHIEF CLERK: 29 yeas, 21 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has been adopted by the Convention.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, at this time I would like to give notice of reconsideration of my vote on the following Convention date.

TAYLOR: Mr. Speaker, I move that the rules be suspended and that Mr. McNealy's reconsideration of his vote be brought out at this time.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy serves notice of reconsideration of his vote. Mr. Taylor moves that the reconsideration of Mr. McNealy's vote be considered at this time. Mr. Victor Rivers seconded the motion. The question is, "Shall the reconsideration of Mr. McNealy's vote on the amendment just adopted by the Convention be considered at this time?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 32 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Coghill, Collins, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 18 - Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien.

Absent: 5 - Cross, V. Fischer, Hilscher, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 32 yeas, 18 nays and 5 absent.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair has not announced the outcome as yet.

R. RIVERS: I am sorry.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has failed of passage and Mr. McNealy's reconsideration is ordered held over until tomorrow. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, what I have in mind is that that motion to change the fifteen per cent to ten per cent would have been in order even after my amendment had been acted upon, so I trust that we can now go ahead and act on the main amendment reserving over until tomorrow the reconsideration as to that percentage. Am I correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be possible to act upon, Mr. Rivers, that does not affect your amendment. Your amendment in its present form does not affect Mr. McNealy's reconsideration.

R. RIVERS: Then I ask unanimous consent that we proceed to consider the amendment which I have submitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Although the amendment, while it was offered as an amendment to your amendment, the fifteen per cent still stays in the actual bill, but technically --

R. RIVERS: The reconsideration of the percentage still goes over until tomorrow?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's right. We could vote on the original amendment. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: It appears that there is a stalemate on this reconsideration which is something I don't think was the intent of some of the body here, and for that point I would like to move at this time to rescind our former action, now that I realize what this reconsideration vote means.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray moves that the Convention rescind its action in adopting a figure of ten per cent.

GRAY: No, the reconsideration vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will hold that you cannot rescind the reconsideration vote.

TAYLOR: I think, Mr. President, as Mr. Rivers pointed out, if we go ahead with the amendment offered by Mr. Rivers, leave it as it is, fifteen per cent, and then tomorrow morning we vote on whether it will be the fifteen or the ten.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think this is an excellent amendment. It incorporates all of the matters that were brought before the body this morning. It incorporates some that were not which are excellent. It limits the court review to denial of certification which certainly makes it easier to sponsor a worthwhile initiative, and I think that after all the debate that we should speedily work on this amendment and adopt it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Point of inquiry, Mr. Chairman, did Mr. Buckalew ask to have his amendment circulated?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did Mr. Buckalew ask to have his amendment circulated? Not that the Chair recalls.

BUCKALEW: No, I did not.

WHITE: That is not up before us at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is not up before us at this time, Mr. White, but he, so far as the Chair knows has not asked that anything be circulated. We have before us the amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

WHITE: Mr. President, pursuing my inquiry, I would like to ask of the Chair that since we moved this matter over until 1:30 so the people could get together and the amendments that were too long to be understood could go through the boiler room, why we might not have Mr. Buckalew's proposed amendment circulated, because I feel it bears on our vote that we might make on Mr. Ralph Rivers' amendment. I think we must understand what is going to be in the second in order to vote intelligently on the first. Since his work has been done and is in order, I ask that it be circulated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be in order to consider that at this time, by unanimous consent or two-thirds vote of the body because we have the question before us of Mr. Ralph Rivers' amendment. Mr. Buckalew's amendment has no status whatever at this time.

BUCKALEW: It has my name on it. I take exception to the Chair's remark. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is on the adoption of the amendment that we all have before us, an amendment to Committee Proposal No. 3 by Mr. Ralph Rivers. If there is no discussion the question is, shall the amendment be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: According to Robert's Rules of Order affirmative votes on the following cannot be reconsidered, and one of those is to amend Robert's Rules of Order on page 158.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The point of order was not well taken. We have before us the amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers. The question is, "Shall the amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 45 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 4 - Buckalew, Coghill, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - Cross, Doogan, V. Fischer, Hilscher, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 45 yeas, 4 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the proposed amendment has been adopted. Mr. McNealy's reconsideration by general consent is still hanging with this particular proposal. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I have an amendment to this particular section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson.

CHIEF CLERK: "Amendment to Section 4. Delete 'ten' and insert '100' in lieu thereof."

ROBERTSON: I move the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves that his amendment be adopted.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Robertson's --"

ROBERTSON: My thought is that 'ten' is entirely too insufficient a number. I don't believe there is a statute on the books today that you can't find ten disgruntled people who said a law is no good and who would not be willing to petition and have it annulled and repealed or revoked. I don't think the initiative referendum should be made too easy. I think there should be some difficulty, after our legislature has sat in solemn session and tried to put over laws or rejected passage of certain laws. I don't think that any ten people should come along and be able to start a movement and to get a law enacted or a law repealed, and I believe that, as a great many believe, that 100 is a much fairer number than ten. My recollection is that we had something like 27,000 votes at the last election, something like that. One hundred is much less than one per cent of the total number of votes then. I hope the delegates of the Convention will adopt this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I don't believe that Mr. Robertson from his talk realizes that only applies to initiative petitions which will initiate a law and it does not apply to a referendum, and then these ten qualified electors must have a bill drawn, must be in bill form and submitted to the attorney general, and that is all that is to show whether the bill is in form, if it is sufficient under the law as to a proper bill, If the bill is drawn as Mr. Rivers put in there, the petition, the first petition goes inside and it contains a draft of the proposed law in bill form just as it is going to be in the legislature, so the attorney general can then pass upon its sufficiency as a bill of the Territory or the state in which it is drawn, so I don't think it should be made unduly hard to do that. I think ten is enough. I think that the amendment should be voted down.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

ROBERTSON: I do understand thoroughly that the ten and the 100 I am speaking about are the sponsors for the original initiative petition, and I realize that after it is passed upon by the attorney general they must go out and get this 15 per cent endorsement thereof by signature, but I still submit that ten is an insufficient number to be able to attack any law or to initiate new laws in the Territory when we have a legislature for that very purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I also understand this applies only to the initiative and that is why I am for it. We should not make it too easy because it is so easy to get signatures to a petition. Right here in this body on any amendment we voted on which did not pass unanimously, I could get ten signatures to try to overthrow it. Any ten people who did not agree with a law that has been passed are willing to sign such a petition. I would not object to having 500 voters sign it because they do have another method of initiating a bill. The legislature can introduce it or a member can introduce it by request, so if we use a second method, the initiative there should be some restrictions on it. It is going to cost us money if we use that, therefore we should make it difficult so it could not be used too often.

METCALF: I speak briefly. I know our original draft of the initiative and referendum was not perfect. I should like to make friends for this. This business of getting through on the floor is a matter of give and take, and we must all remember that. I feel the same as Mr. Robertson. I think it would be easier for a person to get a hundred signatures on the petition than it would be to have somebody in the attorney general's office to spend two or three days looking up the law on the matter. So for the sake of harmony and making friends for the . initiative and referendum I favor Mr. Robertson's opinion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Robertson's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?"

ROBERTSON: Roll call.

STEWART: May we have the amendment read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4: delete 'ten' and insert '100'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please call the roll as to the adoption of Mr. Robertson's amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 33 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Hellenthal, Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 17 - Davis, H. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor.

Absent: 5 - Cross, V. Fischer, Hilscher, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 33 yeas, 17 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted.

BUCKALEW: I have an amendment to offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew has an amendment to offer. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 3 be amended as follows: Strike the first five sections and in lieu thereof insert:

'Section 1. The power of initiative and referendum is reserved to the people. The legislature shall provide by law the necessary procedure to accomplish these purposes.

'Section 2. A valid initiative or referendum petition shall be signed by qualified electors equal to 15% of the number of votes cast for Governor in the preceding general election at which the Governor was chosen. The petition shall contain signatures of qualified electors resident in at least two-thirds of the election districts of the state. Neither the initiative nor referendum may be used as a means of making appropriations for public funds, nor for local or special legislation.'

Change '6' on page 3, line 2 to '3'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would have to hold that at this time such an amendment is not in order for the reason that Mr. McNealy's reconsideration of the amendment to the amendment is holding over until tomorrow, and in this proposed amendment of Mr. Buckalew's the percentage figure is contained therein and consequently the amendment of this kind is out of order until after we have considered Mr. McNealy's reconsideration tomorrow. Are there other amendments?

R. RIVERS: I have an amendment to offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, line 10, delete the words 'authority reserved' and substitute the word 'provisions'."

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption and ask for unanimous consent.

I would like to explain it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was the line?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Strike the words "authority reserved"?

R. RIVERS: And substitute the word "provisions". So the section would read: "The legislature shall prescribe the procedures to be followed in the exercise of the powers of initiative and referendum, subject to the specific provisions herein." It now says "subject to the specific authority reserved herein." The Section 3 is on the subject of the procedures to be followed in the exercise of those powers. The powers reserved herein are up in Section 1. Now the power of the legislature is not subject to the authority reserved herein. The power of the legislature is subject to these procedural provisions herein, and I think that it now causes a little confusion and is an obscure reference. We know when they say "subject to the specific provisions herein" we are talking about the framework that is provided for in Section 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, do you move adoption of your proposal?

R. RIVERS: I asked for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? If there is no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have an amendment to offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Clerk will please read Mr. Victor Rivers' proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 25. after the word 'legislation' strike the balance of the line and on page 3, strike line 1 and insert in lieu thereof the following: 'The referendum shall not be applicable to such laws as are necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety and laws making appropriations for the current expenses of the State government and for the maintenance of public institutions.'"

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that amendment.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

SMITH: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk read again Mr. Victor Rivers' proposed amendment.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion.

SWEENEY: May we have the last half again?

(The Chief Clerk reread the proposed amendment.)

ROBERTSON: May I ask a question of Delegate Victor Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: How do you think, Mr. Rivers, this adds to or betters the present provision?

V. RIVERS: Well, the present act is geared to the emergency clause. Now who would determine what an emergency was, whether or not it carried an emergency clause or not, I don't know, but it might well be that some particular act that had a grave bearing on the public health or welfare or safety could be passed without an emergency clause, and I feel that any act that affects the public health, safety or peace or also affects the current operations of our institutions, the immediate effect upon them, I think should not be subject to a referendum. It puts a little sense I think in this use of the term "emergency act" because an emergency act, as we had discussed yesterday, could be declared when it actually was not, and some emergency acts that were actually, in effect, emergency could also be left without an emergency clause. This would pin down a limitation upon the breadth and scope of the use of the referendum for things that might materially upset our everyday functioning of government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I just noticed in the gallery we have visiting dignitaries from Caribou Creek, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hitchcock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are happy to have you with us this afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock. We have Mr. Victor Rivers' proposed amendment before us at this time. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I want to just ask for a point of information,

Section 5 starting on line 22, page 2, says that, "Neither the initiative nor referendum may be used as a means of making or defeating appropriations of public funds". In Mr. Victor Rivers' proposed amendment, the last several lines of his proposed amendment duplicates that subject of appropriations. Now the way Section 5 now stands the referendum may not be used in regard to any appropriations, and Mr. Rivers speaks of appropriations for maintaining of public institutions. If we are going to have it apply to all appropriations in one place we are going to have to skip the specific references later or else we have got to leave it open on appropriations generally with the exception of a few specified ones. So as an amendment to Mr. Rivers' amendment I move we strike all the language after the word "safety" and I ask unanimous consent.

V. RIVERS: I accept the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The amendment is quite long, and the Chair wonders if the delegates have a clear idea as to what is being accomplished.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent. Could the Clerk read it as it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

BUCKALEW: For what?

PRESIDENT EGAN: For the insertion of Mr. Ralph Rivers' amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers.

R. RIVERS: It is to delete the reference to appropriations which is already covered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: May we have it read as it is going to be?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will now read the proposed amendment as it will be before us.

CHIEF CLERK: "The referendum shall not be applicable to such laws as are necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety and laws making appropriations for the current expenses of the State."

R. RIVERS: After the word "safety" everything is to be struck. PRESIDENT EGAN: Read the whole amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 25, after the word 'legislation' strike the balance of the line and on page 3, strike line 1 and insert in lieu thereof the following: 'The referendum shall not be applicable to such laws as are necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety.'"

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Victor Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson, you may.

JOHNSON: Mr. Rivers, from the language used now you have limited your amendment to just referendum. Did you intend to include initiative?

V. RIVERS: No, it was my intent to limit it just to the referendum.

JOHNSON: Do you think it would be advisable to include it?

V. RIVERS: No, I don't think it would be advisable to include the initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, on that particular subject the Chair might state relating to emergency acts that was the way it originally read. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, to follow up the discussion on the advantage of this amendment over the previous wording, the previous wording said, "The emergency acts are not subject to referendum. We had quite a discussion yesterday as to the meaning of an emergency. Mr. Taylor concluded an emergency act was any act to which the legislature attached an emergency clause. The reason generally for an emergency clause is to speed up the effective date of the act, but not that any public emergency exists. Now one advantage of what is an emergency here is that the legislature could still go ahead and use the device of speeding up the effective date of any act without causing any confusion under this referendum procedure, so there is a real advantage there and it is not the intention to deprive the public of the referendum on every act that the legislature hooks an emergency clause on to. This defines what is the kind of an emergency to which the referendum would not apply, and it leaves all other acts in the hands of the legislature as to fixing the effective date without causing any confusion. So I strongly advocate the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: As I construe this, no piece of legislation dealing with public peace, public health or public safety, at least I can't conceive of any that would be subject to the referendum, because the justification for any legislation dealing with peace, health or safety is an immediate need. This would, I am not an anti-fluoridationist, this would certainly prevent the fluoridation people from having a referendum on a law permitting fluoridation of water, and I think it will just prevent the use of the referendum on anything dealing with health, safety and peace. I wonder if that is desirable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I don't think Mr. Hellenthal puts enough emphasis on the word "immediate". This merely defines an emergency measure, meaning a real emergency. For purposes of civil defense, in case of a natural disaster, or something of that kind. Otherwise, if that word "immediate" were not there then of course it would be as Mr. Hellenthal says. You could not have a referendum on any of those subjects. This only applies to immediate emergencies dealing with those things.

COOPER: Well, that in a way answers my question. However, in reference to Delegate Hellenthal's statement, the fluoridation people might propose a referendum. However, supposing the legislature proposed legislation requiring fluoridation and the people of Alaska did not want it. This would prohibit the people voting on referendum as far as the matter of public health or safety or peace is concerned.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: We are not dealing only with the word "immediate". We are dealing with the words "immediate preservation" of the public laws that are necessary for the public peace and health and safety. Now that defines what is a real emergency. We have lived for all these years without fluoridation. There would never be such a law necessary for the immediate preservation of the health and safety. I think with these words "immediate preservation" you have clearly made it apparent what you are talking about, and the general subjects of health and safety and peace are still open for referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I am inclined to agree with Mr. Hellenthal. The intent that we have in this clause is very good but actually the referendum, the need of the referendum, I believe the people are more concerned with measures affecting their peace, health and safety than they are probably any other one group. It is not what our intent is here. It is what the effect of this referendum will be. I believe that the peace, health and safety are three of the things that the people might most want their referendum. I am just a little afraid of the limiting factor of this clause, not from what we mean here but maybe ten years from now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: It seems to me that any referendum concerning the health, peace and safety which could be returned to the people for the voting is not in the category of "immediate preservation". An immediate case would be where we have to appropriate money to take care of an area which is absolutely destitute, or where we have to submit funds for a burned out area. But anything that could take the time to be submitted to the people for a referendum does not fall in the category of the "immediate preservation" as explained here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe Mrs. Sweeney is arguing for this amendment. I take it that way because in reading the bill it must be the immediate. If there is a war, disaster or flood or something, and the health and sanitary conditions was such that it required immediate action, a special session of the legislature could be called and steps could be used to take care of the refugees, the homeless people without food, whereas if a referendum was submitted on that particular thing it would take 180 days before you could have a vote on it, and the people would all be dead or be gone before that 180 days had elapsed, so this is as the name implies, it must be immediate preservation of the public peace and safety and health, something like that if it comes up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I was just going to say that I think that the interpretation that Mr. Hellenthal has put on this, in effect, omits the words "necessary for the immediate preservation", and if you omitted those words you would have the same result as he says we have with this. The court, any court that interprets this section, is going to assume that those words mean something, and therefore I think that more than unlikely, practically impossible that any court would reach the interpretation Mr. Hellenthal has.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman. I agree heartily with Miss Awes. I think frankly that this amendment does improve the language and gets away from the possibility of an abuse where we substitute, where we describe them as emergency acts. Literally what has happened in these cases, let us say the legislature does pass an act on fluoridation and in substance someone starts a referendum. They start their referendum, they secure their petitions, they put it on the ballot; it is voted on. Let us say it fails, you have no problem. Let us say that the referendum, in substance, negatives the law. Then the question is up substantially for the courts. If the proponents of the act who passed it in the legislature insist that it was a law that was necessary for the immediate preservation of the public health, peace or safety, then it would be a matter for judicial determination by the courts to determine whether or not that act is immune from referendum. You have held the referendum, and if you are right the courts will sustain you. Frankly, it does away with the possibility of the greater abuse of merely leaving the expression as emergency acts. There is one thing I suggest. I don't propose the amendment, but possibly to prevent an abuse, it might be possible if the proponents of this amendment so desire, to say the referendum shall not be applicable to such laws as are necessary and declared to be for the immediate preservation, so that at least you put your legislature on the spot. They have to specifically declare it. Merely declaring it is not going to necessarily make it necessary for immediate preservation, but at least you compel the legislature to declare it in the bill. I suggest it. I don't propose it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Then if you say "declared to be necessary for the immediate preservation", then you are giving the legislature a chance to declare a lot of stuff necessary for the immediate preservation.

MCLAUGHLIN: I say I merely suggest.

R. RIVERS: I think it is better without that.

HELLENTHAL: May I speak a minute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I think what we are quarreling about is the time when the immediate determination of immediate necessity is made. The way this reads, if this is an immediate necessity at the time the legislative act is passed, and there must be or it would not be passed, then there can be no referendum. Now if those words, "immediate" and "necessary" qualify the time of the passage of the legislative act, you are never going to have a referendum on matters relating to public peace, health or safety.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye," all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew,

Collins, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 10 - Coghill, Cooper, Gray, Hellenthal, Kilcher, Laws, McNealy, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson.

Absent: 5 - Cross, V. Fischer, Hilscher, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 40 yeas, 10 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "ayes" have it and the motion is ordered adopted. The reason the Chair called for a roll call was that it was evident about half the delegates did not vote either way. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, line 2, insert period after first word 'laws' and delete remainder of lines 2 and 3."

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves the adoption of his proposed amendment on line 2, page 1, insert a period after the word "laws" and delete the rest of the sentence. Is there a second to the motion?

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the word "laws" occurs at two places in that line, and I wonder if Mr. Robertson would point out which one.

ROBERTSON: After the first word "laws". I am frank to state, Mr. President, that I personally fear very much that the initiative and referendum is one step in the destruction of the republican form of government, and while I firmly believe in the people and all people personally, and everyone else having a power by petition to propose laws, I don't believe that the people themselves -- I think it is not a representative form of government when we send back to the people themselves, despite their duly elected representatives in the Territory, to enact or reject laws. That is the purpose of my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Point of order. Mr. Chairman, it was my understanding that we were to proceed section by section by section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seemed that we were doing to the last section, Mr. McLaughlin. No one had offered any other amendments to Section 6. We proceeded with Section 5. We are now back to Section 1. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I rise to a point of order also. In effect this proposal which is now before us would be the same as striking the initiative from the article, and we have already voted that we would not do that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, the Chair feels that the effect of such an amendment as proposed by Mr. Robertson would in effect destroy the whole proposal and that your point of order on those grounds would be well taken, that the proposal, that such an amendment is not in order.

ROBERTSON: Very well, Mr. President.

HINCKEL: I have a point of information I would like to make also for the record. During the editing of this proposal we struck, I will read it, "The legislature may provide by law for a procedure by which the sponsor of initiative petition may be withdrawn at any time prior to its submission to the people." I am informed by some of the attorneys here that it is not necessary and that it can be taken care of, but I think it is important that it be in the record that that can happen. Otherwise, if the legislature decided that they would enact a measure similar to the proposed one that had been initiated, but they amended it to some slight degree, then it might be that they would still have to have a referendum on it, and I think that would be extremely silly and expensive, so I would like to have it somehow or other either in the article or understood in some manner so there could never be any question about the fact that an article passed by the legislature which covered the matter in substance would obviate the necessity of a referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, that would undoubtedly be a subject for some sort of an amendment, but on this particular question you raised the point of order on, the Chair would like to state that the Chair never likes to be in a position to have to rule in that way, but the particular amendment, Mr. Robertson, would have the effect, whether you intend it so or not, in the opinion of the Chair, of crippling this proposal to such an extent that it would in effect be killing the effect of the proposal.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I accept your ruling. I was not here yesterday, and I did not know just how the conduct was carried on. I have another amendment I would like to offer to Section No. 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: First, we are back to Section 1. Does anyone else have an amendment to Section 1? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Was not our decision to strike done in Committee of the Whole, to strike that Section 1? That was in Committee of the Whole. We never voted on that in plenary session, have we?

PRESIDENT EGAN: But Mr. Londborg, the Chair would have to hold that striking Section 1 would in effect kill this proposal, and an amendment that would in effect kill the proposal is out of order. The only way we can kill this proposal would be in its final vote on third reading. You cannot kill a proposal by amendment, and that is the reason that the Chair rules as such. It was not the intention I know of the maker of the motion, but that was the effect it would have had. Is there any other amendment to Section 1? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment unless somebody can answer my objection. A point of information. I would like to ask, perhaps the Chairman of the Committee about this word used in Section 1. It says, "The people reserve the power by petition to propose laws and to enact or reject such laws at the polls." It seems to me that the legislature is the only one that actually enacts a law. The people here are proposing a law and then at the polls they approve of it. My amendment would be to change that word "enact" to "approve" and then they approve or reject such laws at the polls. It seems to me that is the proper word. Would some member of the Committee tell me why they used the word "enact"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: That is a standard definition of the initiative as used in a majority of the articles of the constitutions that we reviewed.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I amplify? If the legislature does not pass this proposition which is drafted in the bill form, Mr. Barr, then the people are the ones that enact it by their affirmative vote at the polls.

BARR: Under the authority of the constitution it is enacted?

R. RIVERS: Yes, that is right.

BARR: That answers my objections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any amendment to Section 2? Mr.

1047

Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I move for a 15-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to find out from the delegates, and perhaps we should wait until they all get here, the Convention will be at ease for a minute or two until the rest of the delegates arrive. The Convention will come to order. Mr. White, if there is no objection we will revert to the reports of the select committees.

WHITE: The Committee on reading the journal has the journal for the 36th Convention day, one correction to recommend: Tuesday, December 13, "on page 10, paragraph 4, first line, insert the word "when before "the Convention" and insert the words "considered adjournment it" after "the Convention". I ask unanimous consent that the Convention approve the journal of the 36th day with that correction. The 35th day we are holding off until the paragraph has been inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent that the journal for the 36th day be approved by the Convention with that correction. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I did not get the amendments. I wonder if he would give them again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would Mr. White read the proposed changes again?

WHITE: Page 10, paragraph 4, first line, insert the word "when" before the the Convention" and insert the words "considered adjournment it" after "the Convention".

BUCKALEW: Mr. White, we can't hear you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you like to read it again?

WHITE: The first line would now read, "Mr. Boswell moved that when the Convention considered adjournment it adjourn until 9 o'clock."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent that the journal of the 36th day as corrected by the special Committee be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, seeing how we are reverting to committee reports, I would like to state again from the Committee on Administration that we need the number of committee proposal packets that are going to be needed by the delegates returning to their homes for the purpose of public hearings. In order to have these set up for you Monday and that there will not be any confusion, would you please turn in the number of committee proposal packets that you would like to take home, at the message center upstairs so that we will have them ready for you by Monday evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The number of each proposal that each delegate will want, whether they want all proposals or so many of some proposal, more of one than the other, that would be appreciated also. Miss Awes.

AWES: I wanted to announce that the report of the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights is out and has been distributed. I believe that was given a number the other day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask that the proposal be read for the first time?

AWES: Yes, that is why I got up to mention it, because I don't believe that has been done and it has not been referred to the Rules Committee to put on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes asks unanimous consent that the Committee Proposal No. 7 be read for the first time. The Chief Clerk will read the proposal for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 7, introduced by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, PREAMBLE, ARTICLE ON DECLARATION OF RIGHTS AND ARTICLE ON HEALTH, EDUCATION AND WELFARE."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment on the calendar. The Chair would like to ask the delegates at this time to make known to the Chief Clerk as to how many delegates need a return trip ticket to get home and that the transportation requests will be mailed to the delegates during the recess for their return, so if that can be accomplished this evening, or it should be accomplished this evening. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Before we go into further business, it would seem to me that before we adjourn for our recess that it would be very helpful if the committee chairmen of the committees that have not yet reported, would give a brief explanation of their proposal for the benefit of the delegates who will be holding hearings so that we might be able to carry the committee thinking on to our hearings, and if it is in order I will move that time be provided on Monday, December 19, for committee chairmen or some other designated committee member to explain proposals not heretofore considered by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to that setting of a time aside on Monday for hearing from all committee chairmen and possibly some of the committee members on each proposal, summarizing in effect the proposals for the benefit of all the delegates? Copies will be available, but then it will be better, so far as the feeling of the Chair that Mr. Boswell's is a very fine one inasmuch as it will help the individual delegates in going through the proposals at home in knowing what the intent was behind certain sections and in the over-all proposal. It should prove very helpful. Is there objection to setting Monday morning as a time for hearing from the various committee chairmen on these matters?

HERMANN: As long as we get the copies also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it not so that the copies of all proposals from all committees will be available by Monday evening?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, if the committee chairmen get everything finished.

HERMANN: Do they all have the commentary attached? It would not seem it would take very long for each committee chairman to talk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels that what Mr. Boswell had in mind that there might be many points read by the committee chairmen that might not be in the particular commentary, and it would be very helpful to the delegates, and that will be remembered as a time that we will consider hearing from the committee chairmen and possibly some of the various committee members. Is there anything else of general importance to come before the Convention before we proceed? The number of proposals that each delegate would like to take home with him or her or mailed to them should be made known before Monday to the Chief Clerk so that the necessary work can be accomplished upstairs. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Could I inquire whether it is intended that there will be a staff, maybe just a skeleton staff on hand here throughout the recess?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a skeleton staff here. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The delegates would probably like to leave instructions about what should be done with mail or messages which arrive during their absence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: They could notify the Chief Clerk and expect that she will do her best to do what is possible along that line.

CHIEF CLERK: I think there was a request for mailing addresses already sent out for your home address.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are now back to Committee Proposal No. 3. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I have a proposed amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as proposed by Mr. Hinckel to Section 3.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert after the end of the present line 12, Section 3, the following: 'The legislature may provide by law for a procedure by which the sponsors of the initiative petition may withdraw the petition at any time prior to its submission to the people.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, what is your pleasure?

HINCKEL: I move and ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I object for purpose of further clarification.

HINCKEL: I explained my intent before. If it is not necessary that it be in the constitution we can leave it out, but I want it firmly understood that it is possible to do exactly what I am stating as in the amendment.

KILCHER: At what point, Mr. Hinckel, would you still permit the sponsors to withdraw an initiative for instance -- before the ballot?

HINCKEL: Any time before the ballot, the idea being to save the cost of an election. If the legislature to whom we have given the authority to act upon a petition, an act of legislation that takes care of the subject that was initiated, why then there is no longer any need for an election. Therefore -- but they might amend it. If it was amended why then they should have to ask the sponsors' permission to withdraw or ask them to withdraw or something. It can be handled according to that procedure. The only thing wrong now is that we have jumped the number of sponsors from ten to one hundred. One hundred would have to be contacted instead of ten which I disapprove of. It would be more difficult now to withdraw, but I still think it can be done, and I think we ought to make provision for saving 40,000 bucks any time we can.

DAVIS: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hinckel a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Davis, if there is no objection.

DAVIS: I wonder, Mr. Hinckel, if you have some particular reason for wanting to put that in Section 3. It seems to me it might more properly go in Section 4 where you are talking about the petitions.

HINCKEL: It does not make any difference to me as long as it accomplishes the purpose.

DAVIS: So long as it is in there you don't care which section it is in?

MCLAUGHLIN: Merely to save some words and save Style and Drafting some trouble, would this amendment be acceptable, that is in Section 3, line 9, after the word "referendum comma "including amendment and withdrawal" comma, would that effectuate your purpose? That is line 9, page 1, after the word "referendum comma "including amendment and withdrawal" comma, and then polish it up in Style and Drafting later?

HINCKEL: I think that would probably cover it. The wording I used is customary in other constitutions. That's the reason I picked it. If we can improve on it that is fine, but I don't want unnecessary elections to be held just for the fun of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your feeling, Mr. Hinckel?

HINCKEL: I will withdraw it and allow Mr. McLaughlin to make a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hinckel asks unanimous consent to withdraw his amendment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to say that I happen to know that Mr. Davis and Mr. Ralph Rivers have an amendment which they intend to propose to Section 4 which covers that very point and I think in its proper place.

MCLAUGHLIN: I withdraw any suggestion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, then the proposed amendment is withdrawn. The President neglected to have a communication read. If there is no objection, the communication will be read at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: A letter to Mr. McLaughlin from Arthur T. Vanderbilt, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey. (The Chief Clerk read the communication congratulating the Committee of the Judiciary Branch on the fine work done on its proposal.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed. Are there other amendments to Proposal No. 3 at this time?

AWES: I have an amendment to Section 3 on the desk. I move its adoption.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, line 9. delete comma after 'referendum' and insert period. Delete remainder of section."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, did you move the adoption?

AWES: Yes, I did.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Miss Awes.

AWES: The reason I propose this amendment, it seems that the last portion of this one sentence, "subject to the specific authority reserved herein", it seems to me that it merely says the legislature is bound by the provisions of the article, and that is true. That just goes to the nature of a constitution. The next sentence it seems to me can mean one of two things. It can either be a restatement of the clause that I just read, and if so it is objectionable for the same reason. Otherwise, it means something additional, and if it means something additional, then it seems to me that practically anything that the legislature attempts to prescribe under this section could be attacked in the court on the grounds that it hampered, restricted, or impaired the powers given, and for that reason, if it means any more than the other clause, I think that it would practically nullify the whole section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to concur with Miss Awes. It is a fact that the legislature prescribing the procedure is bound by the specific provisions that are contained in the constitution itself, and I think that language, "No law shall be enacted to hamper, restrict, or impair the exercise of powers reserved herein by the people", is absolutely a constitutional principle without being written into this constitution, and any procedure that you spell out telling the people whether they have got to register or what precinct they must vote in, would be a restriction and that could only be a trouble-maker, so I hope that her amendment is adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, did Miss Awes' amendment carry all of the balance of Section 3? That is, it would strike out the sentence beginning, "No law shall be enacted", etc., or was it just to strike out the balance of the sentence?

CHIEF CLERK: No, it says sentence.

AWES: I intended it, unless I made a mistake on that, strike out "subject to the specific authority reserved herein. No law shall be enacted to hamper, restrict or impair the exercise of powers reserved herein by the people.

CHIEF CLERK: That is not what it says.

AWES: I meant the balance of the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the record will show that it meant the end of that sentence and the next sentence to be deleted. Is there further discussion? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Is it open for discussion? The reason that was in there was because it is a common statement that is in a great many other constitutions, and also we felt that it was something that would make the section more acceptable to the people. It may be the legal minds can see that it is not necessary, but we on the Committee, I believe we had two attorneys there, and the rest of us were not, but we thought it looked all right in there and did clarify it, and there are probably a lot of other people that are interested enough in the constitution to read it before they approve it, why they probably might like to see it in there also. That is the reason we had it in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: As another civilian of this Convention, I heartily concur with the gentleman from Kodiak. I believe that the classification of people in the Territory, there are quite a few of us, that would prefer to see it spelled out in detail.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I believe for the benefit of nonlegal people, it may add such a thing, but if it belongs in the constitution at all it should belong in the general provisions and not be restricted entirely to this particular act. We are going to come out with some general provisions, so this same thought, if it is true, should apply nonetheless throughout the constitution and would rightfully come under the general provisions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Miss Awes.

AWES: I would just like to make a remark or two in closing. We are, we hope, drawing up a constitution that we will live with quite a few years, and this constitution like other constitutions will be scrutinized and interpreted by the courts and the courts not unreasonably assume that words are put in to mean something. Consequently, the courts attempt to give the words meaning, and if you have words in that serve no purpose the courts are apt to construe them to mean something that was not intended, and I think if these words are left in that they are pretty apt to cause trouble for as many years as they are there.

BUCKALEW: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I hesitate very strongly to argue, I will say the word again, with an attorney, but it would appear to me that it would be much easier to interpret the meaning here if one or the other, the last part of the last sentence in the paragraph or the last sentence in the paragraph were left in. I can't see from my own viewpoint how that it would confuse the meaning. I just can't see the need for striking both. I can see that striking either one would not materially change the meaning to the layman reading this, but I believe striking them both would possibly be very confusing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I might tell Mr. Smith that there is no objection to leaving in the words "subject to the specific provisions herein." There is no objection to that at all. Miss Awes just moved to strike that part because she thought it was unnecessary because naturally the legislature is circumscribed by the specific provisions herein, but I would be perfectly glad to see the words, "subject to the specific provisions herein" remain, but it is this part, "No law shall be enacted to hamper, restrict or impair the exercise of powers reserved herein by the people" which could cause trouble, because whatever the legislature spells out as to the registration of voters for election purposes, etc., could be regarded as a restriction upon their rights and that would only cause trouble, and the legislature must not veto the powers reserved by the people here, so we don't have to say that, and we are better off, as Miss Awes says, if that last sentence is stricken, but I don't care about the other.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I want to speak in behalf of attorney Awes' amendment, and I want to point out to the members of this Convention that a lot of us attorneys have been "shooting from the hips" on legal opinions, in fact there has probably been a million dollars worth of legal advice has gone out in this body, but I wish to point out to this Convention that when attorney Awes gives an opinion and writes and offers an amendment she has usually given a lot of thought and consideration to it. I respect her legal ability, and I know she has given it a lot of thought, and I concur in her opinion, and I am of the firm opinion that this language would hurt the people more than it would help them. It might appeal to them in some way, I don't know. Maybe it looks easy in the constitution, but it is a troublemaker and it should be deleted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I agree that the last sentence should be eliminated. As far as the remainder of the previous sentence, it does not make any difference to me, and it might help the laymen who read it. It might lead him to believe that his rights are being preserved by the constitution. I sort of favor leaving it in, but it does not make much difference. I might say in answer to Mr. Buckalew here regarding a million dollars worth of attorneys' advice, we will agree as to the amount of advice, but as to the value of it, why there may be a difference of opinion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I am amazed that we see so little opposition to leaving seven words in our constitution, admittedly, to clutter it up. I am referring to the last part of the first sentence in Section 3. We are willing to compromise on something that does not matter. We are willing to leave seven words there that we practically all admit by a short little amendment could be deleted, it is self-explanatory. All legislation is subject to the specific provisions of the constitution. We agree to that, but I don't think we should likely amend or rather strike the last sentence in Section 3, because it is in my opinion a crucial section. In my opinion, and the lawyers may correct me if I am wrong there, this sentence will determine upon whom the burden of proof shall be. It is like the court, the difference between judicial systems. Is the accused assumed innocent until proved guilty or guilty until proved innocent? If we strike the sentence out of Section 3 we will have a situation whereby in a law enacted by the legislature that prescribes procedures the people will have to get up if they have an initiative and go to court, and the burden of proof is the people's to prove that this particular law is impairing their rights. They have the burden of proof, the expense and the time involved. In other words, it is a further impairment of the right of initiative. If we leave this section as it is, then the legislature in enacting laws will have to be very careful in enacting a law that does not impair or restrict the exercise of the powers of the people reserved herein. The burden of the proof then is there. They will have to prove, if they are called upon, that they are not impairing. It is quite important. I am in favor of leaving it as it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I borrowed this map. There are 19 great states there. I can name them from Maine to Ohio, across the State of Washington, that use the language very much like we have in this document. (Holding up map) I am going to defend the people against the legislature and not defend the legislature against the people. They have a lot of lawyers down in the legislature who can take care of themselves, and I am going to lean over on the side of the people and vote "no" on this proposition, as much as I hate to vote against Dorothy right beside me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: As a matter of personal privilege, I resent seriously all that has been said and is being said here about the lawyers as a class. The lawyers are people just the same as anybody else, and whether we are here in this Convention or in the legislature we do what we think is right for the people and not for the lawyers. (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, the Chair would like to say that the Chair feels that each and every delegate is attempting to look out for the interests of the people, regardless of how he feels on any question. Is there any further discussion? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, speaking just briefly on this, I would like to agree with Mr. Rivers there and others. I can see no objection to leaving in the words "subject to the specific provisions". However, I agree with Miss Awes that it is not necessary. Speaking now, when we speak continually about the people, and as to the initiative and the initiative only, the initiative section of this particular piece of the article that is apparently going in the constitution, is over the years is going to cost the people of this Territory millions and millions of dollars holding elections over the courses of years. It is borne out by the costs in other states, and I don't like to add any more to the burden of the people by leaving this open here to hamper or restrict, because that is going to bring in even more lawsuits. It is going to cost the people more money, and the people are going to remember us on those things when they have to start paying the bill in years to come. Therefore, I am going to have to vote in favor of the amendment, and I particularly favor it as to the last sentence and purely from the cost angle and the cost angle alone.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I move and ask unanimous consent that the question be divided.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent that the question be divided.

BUCKALEW: I second it. I would object to it subject to whatever Miss Awes thinks about it. I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I question very seriously whether Mrs. Sweeney's motion is in order. She is not proposing to divide the question, but what she is really proposing I believe is that either the last six words of the first sentence involved here or the second sentence should be stricken from Miss Awes' amendment by an amendment thereto. I don't believe a question of this kind is divisible. There is only one question here and the question is, "Shall we strike the following words?" Now if you want to divide that, at what point do you divide it, at the period?

SWEENEY: Perhaps my procedure is wrong. I was hoping we could have a vote on the last six words of the first sentence and then have a vote on the final sentence of the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, you could ask then that that part of the amendment be amended to delete the last sentence, but you would have to first ask to withdraw. If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for about 30 seconds.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I withdraw my motion with the consent of my second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney asks to withdraw her motion with the consent of her second. Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Miss Awes, did you have something, the Chair understood --

AWES: May I ask a question? I still think that my amendment is good. I think the whole thing is objectionable. If that should be voted down, that would not preclude the submission of another amendment as to the part of it, would it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It should not. Actually there are two subjects involved there, it would seem.

AWES: Then I prefer to have it voted on this way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that Miss Awes' amendment be amended by changing the word "section" in her amendment to the word sentence and I would ask the Chief Clerk then to read how Miss Awes' amendment would read under those circumstances.

AWES: I don't think that is what you mean.

SUNDBORG: See if it is not right.

CHIEF CLERK: Section 3, line 9, delete comma after 'referendum and insert period. Delete remainder of sentence.'

SUNDBORG: That is what I would propose as my amendment to Miss

Awes' amendment. My intention is that after we vote on that then we may take up the other sentence which some delegates feel is a different subject.

AWES: I will accept that amendment under those circumstances.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the amendment to the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. The question is, "Shall the amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor of the amendment signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 3?

AWES: I have another amendment to Section 3 I am just writing out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Miss Awes.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, line 10, delete the words 'No law shall be enacted to hamper, restrict or impair the exercise of powers reserved herein by the people.'"

AWES: I move the adoption of that amendment.

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I am going to vote against that amendment. After all, there are only two reservations of power in the people, the initiative and the referendum with regards to law. We do have the recall. Now I can readily conceive that if this particular amendment is passed that if there was a legislature that might be hostile to the exercise of the initiative or the referendum, they could very easily pass a bill that would perhaps emasculate the entire constitutional article by making it impossible for the initiative to be called. So by reason of it being the only reserve powers of the people in regard to legislation, I think we should say that the legislature shall not enact a law that will impair the right of the people in initiating law or shall restrict it or shall impair the exercise, not the power, but the exercising of the power. They might throw the lack of appropriation in the way of having an election. They might have a cost for filing a petition so prohibitive that you could not, and if you did not have this in here there is nothing you could do about it. But if you have it in here it guides the legislature in passing any law affecting the initiative and referendum, that when they do put the provisions and procedure and manner and mode of holding an election in here, the legislature has got to consider at each time, "Will this impair or restrict or hamper the exercise of the power by the people?". We should leave it in here. If it goes out I will then work and vote against the passage of the proposal because they don't mean a thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the Chair may, I wonder if I could ask a question without leaving the Chair. I wonder, is there some such statement in the proposed bill of rights, and if it was in there would it not have the over-all effect for everything in the constitution?

TAYLOR: I don't know, but I know that every one of the constitutional provisions on initiative and referendum have a statement that means just that same thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: What I said before is applicable now, so I won't say much. I would like to say a few words in answer to Mr. Taylor. What we have here is a proposal which sets up pretty well the whole procedure for the initiative and referendum. In fact, there has been some objection that it is legislative in nature. Beyond this point I can't see any law that could possibly be passed by the legislature that would not in some respect hamper, restrict or impair the exercise of powers, and if you are going to have this in here it covers so much ground that I think the practical effect is to nullify the whole Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Miss Awes' proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?"

KILCHER: Read the amendment please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, line 10, delete the words 'No law shall be enacted to hamper, restrict or impair the exercise of powers reserved herein by the people.'"

COGHILL: I move and ask unanimous consent that the motion be postponed indefinitely.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves, seconded by Mr. Taylor, that the motion be postponed indefinitely.

MCNEES: I object.

COGHILL: I so move.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be indefinitely postponed?" Is there discussion on the motion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed motion be indefinitely postponed?"

HERMANN: I think that the assembly should be advised, for the sake of those who may not know it, that a motion to indefinitely postpone is a motion to kill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: Mr. President, does that not take a two-thirds vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It takes a majority vote, that is the Chair's remembrance. The question is, "Shall the proposed motion by Miss Awes be indefinitely postponed?"

TAYLOR: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

GRAY: Can I abstain?

HERMANN: On what grounds are you abstaining?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann desires you explain why you abstain.

GRAY: The reason I don't know how to vote on this.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order. I don't think an explanation can be called for by any one delegate here.

LONDBORG: Point of order. I believe that the decision to abstain must be made before the voting starts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are correct, Mr. Londborg.

GRAY: I vote "no" then.

Yeas: 13 - Coghill, Collins, Emberg, King, Knight, Laws, Marston, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Smith, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Nays: 38 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Helleenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Cross, V. Fischer, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 13 yeas, 38 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the motion to indefinitely postpone has failed of passage. We have before us Miss Awes' motion. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent for the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent for the previous question to be ordered. Is there objection?

COGHILL: I object.

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no." The "ayes" have it and the previous question has been ordered. The question is, "Shall Miss Awes' amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 32 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 19 - Coghill, Collins, Emberg, Gray, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, V. Rivers, Smith, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Absent: 4 - Cross, V. Fischer, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 32 yeas, 19 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment on Section 4 on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the amendment. Barr. Mr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment still to Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you have an amendment to Section 3 --

BARR: I don't have it written out but I will in just one minute.

KILCHER: I also have an amendment to Section 3 that is written out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will accept the amendments to Section 3. The Chair felt that all the amendments had been made to Section 3. I am sorry, Mr. Rivers. The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment as offered by Mr. Barr to Section 3.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 9, after the word 'referendum' insert, 'No law shall be enacted to nullify the exercise of powers reserved herein by the people.'"

BARR: Mr. President, I move that this amendment be adopted.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I object for the moment. Mr. President, I wonder if Mr. Barr would use the word "prevent" instead of "nullify"? "Nullify" imports that something has already been done. The word "prevent", I think, is what you are driving at.

LAWS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, there was some question in my mind at the time, and if the word "prevent" would take care of the situation. I have no objection to amending the amendment to the word "prevent" instead of "nullify".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Mr. Barr's proposed amendment in my view is totally unnecessary. Here we say that the people reserve certain powers and that is right in our constitution, and we go down a few more sentences and say, "No law shall be enacted" or that the legislature shall not do anything to prevent their exercise of the powers. It is obvious that the legislature cannot adopt a law that would prevent the exercise of their powers if the powers are reserved for them by the constitution. If the legislature attempted to enact such a law, it would be unconstitutional.

BUCKALEW: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Barr's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all apposed "no". The "noes have it and the amendment has failed of adoption.

KILCHER: Roll call. I said "roll call" before it was announced. I said "roll call" before a second person also said "roll call".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair did not hear a call for a roll call until after he announced the decision.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, was there not a request made for roll call after you had announced your decision on the vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are right, Mr. Robertson, but after the vote is announced, it has been announced and it cannot be undone. The Chair is not attempting to take any prerogative that is not the Chair's or attempting to do that, but so far as the Chair is concerned there was no call for a roll call until the vote had been announced, and under the rules that is how the Chair has proceeded. The Chair has no other alternative but to say on that particular amendment the vote had been announced. Is there another amendment to Section 3?

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President. I think my neighbors around here will verify the fact that I said "roll call" fairly loud before it was announced, and as the President went on speaking I said it a second time.

MCNEES: I would confirm that fact even though we voted on opposite sides of the question.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President, wouldn't the proper procedure be an appeal from the ruling of the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that we suspend the rules and have a roll call on the proposed amendment by Mr. Barr.

BARR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair does not want to prevent a roll call under the statement that was made by Mr. McNees. If the Chair has the authority after he has announced to reverse himself on a question of that kind, the Chair would be willing to do so. If there is no objection, the Chair will do so and order a roll call. It was not the idea of the Chair to cut off anyone's right to call for the roll, but the Chair had announced before the Chair had heard this cry for a roll call back here.

KILCHER: May we have Mr. Barr's amendment read again.

CHIEF CLERK: What happens to Mr. Sundborg's motion?

SUNDBORG: Since the President has made a ruling which makes my motion superfluous, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Without objection, the Chair would certainly like to ask if a roll call is going to be called for, rather than waiting to see what the outcome is, that if the delegates could try to ask for the roll call previously it would be helpful, and this kind of situation would not arise. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: It appears to me, Mr. President, that this would be taken care of if the delegate who wants a roll call would stand up and be recognized as the rules require.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, there has been no appeal from the decision of the Chair, has there?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There seems to be a feeling that we should have a roll call, and the Chair is not adverse to having a roll call, Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I think we are going to set a precedent here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk will call the roll on Mr. Barr's amendment. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Before we call the roll, may I ask a question? Does it require a vote of five members to demand a roll call?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Not here, Mr. Buckalew. It says one person, and Mr. McNees stated that Mr. Kilcher had been asking for a roll call before the roll was announced. The Chair is willing to take the word of the delegates that the Chair was in error, and if there is no objection, the Chief Clerk will call the roll.

RILEY: If you are calling for another objection, I am pleased to object to put it on the road and put it through properly by an appeal from the Chair's ruling. For that purpose I object.

SUNDBORG: Is it not the ruling of the Chair that a roll call is in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It could not be the ruling. The Chair merely stated that if there was no objection the Chair was not adverse to allowing a roll call.

SUNDBORG: It is to that that Mr. Riley objects?

RILEY: Correct.

NOLAN: I move that the ruling of the Chair be sustained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan moves that the ruling of the Chair be sustained. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I second the motion. May I ask for information? When you see that a vote is on the losing end of it, say that you are losing, is that the time for calling for a roll call?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If they are heard.

ARMSTRONG: Aren't you supposed to ask for a roll call before we could move into the motion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Generally a person should ask before we go into the subject. Whether or not the rules say that a person should be recognized when he asks for a roll call, the Chair cannot quite remember, but the question is, "Shall the ruling of the Chair be sustained?" Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, as I remember the events as they happened, I am certain that Mr. Kilcher was the first one to call for a roll call and as I remember he was speaking at approximately the same time you were. In other words, you might have started before he started to speak, but he had called for the roll call before you had ended your announcement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair is not arguing with the question. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Is this matter debatable? As I understand the motion is to sustain the Chair. Is that debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question has to be put.

LONDBORG: May I ask what is your decision on that roll call, so what are we sustaining?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you sustain the ruling of the Chair, then the question on Mr. Barr's motion is decided without further action. If you do not sustain the decision of the Chair, then we will vote by roll call on Mr. Barr's amendment. The question is, "Shall the ruling of the Chair be sustained?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

DOOGAN: I have to pass. I forgot the question.

KILCHER: I don't understand the effect of this motion, Mr. President. I can't vote.

MR. PRESIDENT: Not voting.

HERMANN: Point of order, Mr. President. I think we had three people who did not vote and did not announce in advance that they were not going to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: For two of them anyway the Chair felt they really did not understand the question that was being put. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Is that going to be the question then, that whenever we want to abstain from voting we just say we don't understand?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It isn't going to be the policy, no, Mr. Londborg. But on this particular situation it was the first time it came up, and the Chair feels that the particular people did not for some reason realize what they were being asked to vote upon.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, I had no reason for abstaining other than I had forgotten the question. If it will help any I will vote.

KILCHER: Mr. Chairman, if at any time it is in order to ask for information, I would like to do so when it was my time to vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: After the roll starts there can be no information asked for.

Yeas: 39 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 9 - Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Davis, Knight, Laws, Peratrovich, R. Rivers.

Not Voting: 3 - Doogan, Kilcher, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Cross, V. Fischer, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 9 nays, 3 not voting, 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the ruling of the Chair has been sustained. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information. Is it in order that the Chief Clerk announces the roll that while somebody on the floor is speaking for a point of information that might have bearing on the announcement of the roll call, in case they wanted to change it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, actually no one can be recognized and be in order until the roll call is announced, except a person who wishes to change his vote from one side to the other. Until that time, from the time the roll starts and until the roll ends, nothing is in order.

KILCHER: You would not be allowed either to vote after you had not voted, the same as if you changed? By implication if I understood finally what the motion meant by seeing who voted how?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may I be recognized briefly on a point of personal privilege? I feel that perhaps the time has come when we should implore all the delegates to pay close attention to the matters which are before the body. The people of Alaska have spent 300,000 dollars to send us here to try to write and organize a constitution for the state, and these are most important questions that are before us. I cannot see any possible reason why a delegate who has been sitting in this room would not understand for instance what that question was about. It was the simplest kind of a question and it was explained at some length what it was about. The question was, "Shall the Chair be sustained in his ruling?" and it was asked on the floor what the effect would be, and that was explained and then we get into the middle of the roll call and find that several delegates don't even know what the question is. The time to find out what the question is, is before the roll call starts. I would like to say further that on this matter of calling for a roll call, it is perfectly proper for members to call for a roll call, but as Mr. Davis has pointed out, the member who desires a roll call should rise before there has been a voice vote, obtain the recognition of the Chair and say, "Mr. President, I ask for a roll call." That is proper. It is not proper after there has been a voice vote to say "roll call". The only person who then may say "roll call" is the President who might say that the Chair is in doubt. That would be in the case of a voice vote where he really cannot tell on which side the balance lay and then he may say, "The Chair is in doubt, the Chief Clerk will call the roll." Then we'll have a roll call. The purpose of the roll call is not to change what appears to be the voice vote results. The purpose of the roll call is just to find out on which sides are the delegates voting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In closing this whole thing, the Chair would like to say that the Chair would have had no compunction at all to call for a roll call immediately except that the Chair had announced before he realized they were calling for the roll call. Mr. Barr.

BARR: On a point of information on procedure. In case there is a roll call and a man does not know what the question is or doubts whether he knows it, if he passes, is it not in order for him to rise after the roll call is taken and before it is announced and ask for instruction so he can vote at that time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Ordinarily it is not in order, Mr. Barr, and probably why in the regular rules governing parliamentary bodies it is not in order is that it might be that someone might be attempting to figure the question at this time or something, but unless it would be the special rule in this body, it is not the general manner of procedure. Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: With the President's permission, I think it would be helpful to read Rule 30 again. It states that, "No member shall be entitled to abstain from voting on any roll call unless he shall have stated his intention to abstain before the voting starts."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then it goes on to say, "Upon any announcement of intention to abstain the Delegate making such announcement upon request of five Delegates may be required to state his reasons. Mr. Buckalew, the Chair would like to ask: what is the Chair going to do when you come down to a roll call and someone does abstain from voting? We had that situation here the other day, and how are you going to make them vote even though the rule says so?

BUCKALEW: You have a Sergeant at Arms; that's the only thing I can think of.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe this is a practical solution to that problem, and the solution is that the member should vote. It does not matter if he says "yes" or "no". And then, if he can find out what the question is about before the end of the list is reached, he still has the privilege before the result is announced to change his vote. Say he voted "yes", and he finds out that he voted the wrong way. He can get up and say, "I ask that my vote be changed to 'no'." I think that is the only practical way we can get around that, but our rules do not permit a member to pass unless he announces it before the roll is called.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. It might be well to announce that on the per diem (Mr. Harris, if you would not mind waiting a moment) you won't get your per diem checks for the day or so that it takes you to get home and the day or two it might take you to get back until after you do come back. You will be paid your per diem and compensation up through Monday. That will be sent to you in the mail. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I move that we adjourn until Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

BUCKALEW: I object.

COGHILL: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until Monday morning." Are there committee announcements.

POULSEN: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

ROSSWOG: I have a committee announcement. The Local Government Committee will meet whenever we adjourn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Local Government Committee will meet upon adjournment. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The Committee on Administration will meet upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Is it possible to amend this motion to adjourn specifying the time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Not under our rules, Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I was merely going to suggest that we said something about the Traveler's Inn the other day and today is open house down at the Traveler's Inn.

HELLENTHAL: It is open house in the Convention too.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements to be made at this time? The question is, "Shall the Convention adjourn until 9 a.m. Monday? The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Armstrong, Barr, Collins, Harris, Johnson, Londborg, McLaughlin, Marston, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh.

Nays: 34 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Cross, V. Fischer, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 34 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the adjournment has failed. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would like to make a suggestion that I don't think it would apply to any rule except a different practice so far, that committee chairman announcements be made after the vote for an adjournment and before the results are announced, so leave it up to the Chair before the Convention is recessed, because we have seen it several times in the past that quite a bit of time has been spent on committee announcements. I have seen it announced now, and later you hardly remember, so actually the question could be disposed of much quicker if the adjournment motion were dealt with, and then before the hammer goes down on the table that the committee chairmen be given their time to make announcements.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It might be a good idea but it would be pretty hard to do. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I suggest that we discuss the constitution, at least indirectly?

COOPER: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that no motion for adjournment be presented until at least 5:50 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper moves and asks unanimous consent that no motion for adjournment be made until at least 5:50 p.m. It might be better, Mr. Cooper, if you would say 5:45.

COOPER: I amend it to 5:45.

RILEY: Point of order. Motion to adjourn is always in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is always in order unless the body would rule otherwise. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 3. Does Mr. Kilcher have an amendment on the table?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, amendment by Mr. Kilcher, strike the first sentence."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, what is your pleasure regarding this proposal?

KILCHER: I move that this amendment be adopted.

COOPER: I object.

JOHNSON: Point of order. Isn't this a matter which has already been acted upon by previous motion to strike the entire Sections 1, 2, and 3?

PRESIDENT EGAN: I believe so, Mr. Johnson. Is there a second to the motion? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to ask that the proposed amendment be read again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, strike the first sentence."

SMITH: I second the motion.

SUNDBORG: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Kilcher's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to speak in favor of this amendment. The Section 3 has become in my opinion meaningless with the last sentence deleted. I was going to make this amendment even if the last sentence had stood its ground. Much more so I move this amendment after the last sentence has been defeated. The first sentence in my opinion does not make sense any more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, that is all there is in Section 3. isn't it? Your motion should probably read, "Delete Section 3 and renumber all the other sections." The question is, "Shall Mr. Kilcher's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Section 4?

DAVIS: Mr. President, I have a proposed amendment to Section 4, to that portion of Section 4 that has been amended, as amended by Mr. Rivers' previous amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'general' on line 4 of Mr. Rivers' amendment insert the following sentence: 'The same procedure, so far as applicable, shall apply to referendum petitions.'"

DAVIS: I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

SWEENEY: I object. Can we hear it again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, after the word 'general' on line 4, insert the following sentence: 'The same procedure, so far as applicable, shall apply to referendum petitions.'"

DAVIS: Mr. President, the purpose of the proposed amendment is that we insert a sentence which will make the procedure as to presentation of petitions for referendum the same insofar as you can make it the same as for initiative petitions so that we won't have to repeat that at a later time.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted?" All those in favor of the adoption of the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment on the Secretary's desk on Section 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, amendment to R. Rivers amendment. change 'two-thirds of the election districts of the State' to 'one-half of the election districts of the State'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I move and ask unanimous consent that we adopt that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves that the proposed amendment be adopted.

JOHNSON: I object.

V. RIVERS: I so move.

SMITH: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, it seems to me in view of the geographical distribution of the country and in view of the varied interests, economic and otherwise, that we would be defeating practically the purpose of the initiative and referendum if we require two-thirds of the districts to be represented on this petition. I think that half is a fair figure. It seems to me that if you were going to have an initiative or referendum on mining matters that in all probability it would be very hard to get votes for that initiative in two-thirds of the districts where their main interests perhaps would lie in fish, or fur, or timber. I put this amendment in in all sincerity, because I think it will make the initiative and referendum more workable and more fair if we allow it to go through.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to say that we are talking not about precincts here, which at the present time there are something like 400 in the Territory, but about election districts under the constitution, and my understanding is that the Committee on Apportionment will bring in a proposal which will specify there will be 24 election districts. That would mean if we leave it the way it is that it would require at least one person's signature only from 16 of the districts to be among either ten or fifteen per cent as we may vote tomorrow on Mr. McNealy's motion to reconsider. The way Mr. Rivers would propose to change it, it would be necessary to get signatures from only 12 different districts, that is 12 signatures would be necessary, one from each district, making up a total of around 4,000 at the present time. I feel that as it is it is not at all cumbersome or difficult. If we had required that a large number had to be obtained from the districts, it might be, but all that is necessary is one lone signature from each district.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Fellow delegates, I hope that most of you are more aware of this issue that is getting more and more confused than I am. As I have shown on the last vote, and I want to be well aware that those among you who are in favor of the initiative in principle should see that any other attempt to emasculate the initiative as such should be voted down, and I see that Mr. Rivers' amendment is in favor of reinjecting some strength in the initiative. Since Section 3 has been amended to take more rights away from the people, since the first sentence will give the legislature the right to prescribe procedures, it is only fair that we reduce the "two-thirds" to onehalf" because if those that are opposed now and in the future to the initiative will have their way, they will have the legislature immediately to go about and have strict procedures established, for instance that in two-thirds of all the election districts we will have to have the full 15 per cent of signatures prorated in each district. I think the legislature will try to do that, and if they try to do it, if it is unconstitutional, it will have to be the people who go to the court and prove that such an act by the legislature would be unconstitutional. I think the legislature would get away with it and I wouldn't blame them for trying. It is not true that it will take only eleven signatures, one signature from each of the other eleven districts, and the one that tries to "railroad" something, I have no doubt whatsoever that those elements opposed to the initiative in the legislature will circumscribe the necessary procedure where we would end up by having two thirds of all the election districts required to furnish 15 per cent of the signatures. They would not rest quiet before they have that. Consequently, they will make the initiative unworkable. Consequently I am in favor of Mr. Rivers' amendment that only half of the election districts be required to furnish signatures. I have no doubt that before long they will be required to furnish each 16 per cent of the signatures, and be well aware of that, that attempt will be made, and all in favor of the initiative in principle should vote in favor of Mr. Rivers' amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Victor Rivers. V.

RIVERS: I ask that the roll be called.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 26 - Awes, Coghill, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Nays: 26 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Davis, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Johnson, Laws, Londborg. McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Cross, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 26 yeas, 26 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has failed of adoption. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I have an amendment to offer to Mr. Rivers' amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read Mr. Buckalew's proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the entire sentence of R. Rivers' amendment beginning with 'The petition shall, etc.,' and substitute, 'The petition shall contain signatures of qualified electors resident in at least two-thirds of the election districts of the State.'"

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

AWES: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?" Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: This is an amendment to Mr. Rivers' amendment on Section 4. "Strike the entire sentence beginning with 'The petition shall, etc.,' and substitute 'The petition shall contain signatures of qualified electors resident in at least two-thirds of the election districts of the State.'"

BUCKALEW: I will ask unanimous consent. The only reason I offered this amendment is the way it is drawn, it is ambiguous. What they meant, in the preceding sentence they refer to qualified electors and then they get down and refer to only signatures and what they mean is qualified electors resident in the districts, and I think it clears the ambiguity.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of information. That affects just the one sentence? I think it is a good improvement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent has been asked. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is ordered adopted. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read Mr. Robertson's amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: It was to the old Section 4 which has been stricken.

ROBERTSON: That has not been changed any. It is still in the law. It is line 19, page 2, Section 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read it.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, page 2, lines 19, 20 and 21, strike all of lines 19, 20 and 21 except the word 'referred'."

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves that his proposed amendment be adopted. Is there a second?

HILSCHER: Could we have that read again?

POULSEN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Lines 19, 20 and 21. Strike all of lines 19, 20 and 21 except the word 'referred'." Strike the last sentence.

ROBERTSON: In other words, it is to strike the last sentence of Section 4. Mr. President, my point is that I fear again that this is an interference with our form of government as depriving one of our three checks, the governor from the power of veto. Maybe there should be some restrictions upon the manner in which he could veto the initiative, and furthermore it seems to me to say that because an initiative measure is passed, no matter how bad it is, as may be proved within a very few months that it cannot be amended or appealed by the legislature for a period of three years, might very possibly put a great burden upon the Territory. It seems to me we should not have that provision in our constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I oppose the proposed amendment. In the first place, this is not a part of the checks and balances. It is not the legislature that has enacted this law, it is the people and the people embodied themselves the powers of all three of the coordinated branches of government, and there is no practical way that there could be a provision for the people, for instance, to override the veto of a governor. They are going to spend 40,000 dollars here in an election, and they go through all that and the governor vetoes it. I don't believe that is proper. If the majority of the people voting in an election are in favor of enacting some matter, it should be the law. Now, as for the second part of it, about the prohibiting its being amended or repealed by the legislature for a period of three years, I think that is something that every voter will take into consideration at the time he goes to the polls, and if he is in doubt perhaps he will vote against it or maybe he won't vote, but every voter should know that when he goes to the polls on an initiative or referendum matter that the thing is going to be on the law books for three years. If we did not have a restriction such as this in here we would again go through this whole lengthy process, have a special election costing all this money, get something on the books perhaps, and have the very next legislature repeal it, and I believe it is a good safeguard and ought to stay in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: May I ask Mr. Taylor a question, please? Mr. Taylor, is this type of provision contained in most initiative and referendum laws?

TAYLOR: Yes, Mrs. Nordale it is, because with that out the act is entirely emasculated, and we might as well lay it on the table or postpone it indefinitely or forget about it, because we have no initiative or referendum with that restriction.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Taylor, as I understand the general initiative law, the way you get your veto is another petition through the people and your veto can come in during the time it takes to initiate.

TAYLOR: That is right. I might say that if this part is stricken, the vote of the people would only be in advisory capacity, because it would not mean it is a law, because it would be subject to repeal by the legislature or vetoed by the governor, so there would be no use of passing this act. You might as well indefinitely postpone it if you strike this part out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I again suggest that that is a far departure from the representative form of government and that no governor who has been elected by the people is going to veto any initiative measure unless it is clearly demonstrated that that is bad legislation for the Territory. Now so far as the second part of this particular sentence is concerned, it goes clear by one legislature, as I understand the provisions that have been put in here, it will be they have a legislature meet every two years or at least that frequently. By putting that three year provision in here, one legislature would have to sit idly by after this legislation became law, no matter what its effect upon the Territory and could not possibly repeal it, could not amend it or repeal it, and I say the expenditure of 40,000 dollars for an election does not insure good legislation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to point out that the purpose of the various restrictions which have been placed upon the use of the initiative were designed to prevent insofar as it is possible a situation arising which Mr. Robertson has described. Therefore, I oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I would like to leave something to the people. If they put a law on the books that's not good, the legislature puts up a law that is not good, they'll take it off. Let's let the people take it off if they don't want it. Let a little something stay in the hands of the people. I think we are getting down a little enough now. I am not happy here with the castigation of this great law. It is continuing and continuing and I am going to try to stop it again, and if the people put in a law that is not good they will take it off. Let the people have a decision on their laws.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: The book, and I am quoting from the Hawaiian Manual, says that with respect to the governor's veto power, "Fourteen states explicitly exempt such measures from the veto power. In regard to the power of the legislature to repeal or amend, only one state entirely forbids subsequent action." I want to point out that we have several problems in this sentence, and you must distinguish between veto and amending and repealing.

ROBERTSON: Roll call, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Robertson's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 7 - Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson.

Nays: 45 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooler, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Cross, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 7 yeas, 45 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have what I hope will be a constructive amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, you may present your amendment. The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may read the amendment proposed by Mr. Hurley.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, page 2, line 10, after the word 'at' strike the balance of the line and strike line 11 to and including the word 'of' and insert therefor 'The first state election after'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, with this new amendment that was adopted of Mr. Rivers, it changes the --

HURLEY: I believe it only went down to line 5.

R. RIVERS: This is later material. Mine did not cover this phase. Mr. President, I might add that several of us have been working on a rewrite of this last half of page 2. We will have embodied some subject matter that is on the same point as Mr. Hurley's, and perhaps we could get together.

MCLAUGHLIN: I move for a five-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have an amendment here. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, bowing to more proper and more verbiage, I ask that my amendment be withdrawn in favor of one to be presented by Mr. Davis and Mr. Hellenthal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley withdraws his motion. If there is no objection, then the amendment takes the place of the amendment Mr. Hurley had offered. It is offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers and Mr. Hellenthal. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 9 (beginning with the word 'Laws') to 17 (ending with the word 'sure') be stricken and the following substituted: 'Laws proposed by the initiative shall be submitted to the voters by ballot title at the first statewide election which occurs more than one hundred twenty (120) days after adjournment of the legislative session following the filing of the initiative petition, unless the legislature at said session shall have enacted substantially the same measure. Questions on referendum shall also be submitted to the voters by ballot title at the first statewide election occurring more than one hundred twenty (120) days after adjournment of the legislature which passed the law being referred.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is quite a long amendment to expect 55 delegates to digest. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I move that we adjourn until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves that the Convention adjourn until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

STEWART: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. on Monday?" Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Point of information. Can this motion be amended as to time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Under the rules of the Convention it cannot be amended.
Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: The proposers will have copies of the proposed amendment.
They will be on the delegates' desks on Monday morning.

V. RIVERS: I ask for roll call, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. on Monday?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 25 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Collins, H. Fischer, Harris,
Johnson, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy,
Marston, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers,
Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 27 - Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann,
Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Lee, McNees, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Smith, Sundborg,
Taylor, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Cross, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas, 27 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has failed of adoption.

HELLENTHAL: I don't believe anyone will object to letting the long amendment go until the next session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are asking it be held over until Monday?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the long amendment will be held over until Monday. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have an amendment on this topic that was under discussion a minute ago. It is on the Clerk's desk. It will strike all the words following the word "Governor" in the last sentence of Section 4, that is in lines 20 and 21, and I move that that amendment be passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, strike all words after 'Governor' on lines 20 and 21."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move.

HELLENTHAL: I so move.

BUCKALEW: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I make this motion because although Alaskans should not be afraid to be unique, they would be rather unique if they retained that language, inasmuch as only one other state has it, and it is true that the people propose matters through the initiative, but it is likewise true that the same people elect legislators, and I don't think the people are any less negligent in proposing a matter by the initiative than they are otherwise when they elect their legislators, and any device or any system which would prevent us in this rapidly growing state from keeping pace with progress and from adapting ourselves to changing conditions as they occur would have no place in our constitution. Now it is perfectly proper that a one man, a governor, should be forbidden to veto a matter passed through the use of the initiative. In a fit of petulance he might do that and cause trouble, but amendments are an entirely different thing, and we have just got to keep pace with the progress that I know the state is going to have, and no harm will come. It would take a very evil and a very, very corrupt group of Alaskans, of our own fellows, to attempt to violate and to brush aside the will of the people recently expressed in an initiative, and I know that no harm would come in forbidding change in keeping with progress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I had the identical amendment. There is only one thing I would like to add to what Mr. Hellenthal has said. I think that we have been talking about this fellow, the people all the while. I think if we are going to protect the people we ought to take that out because they might pass some law that had some little legal defect in it and the legislature would be forbidden to amend it, and the people might go off on a tangent and pass a piece of frightful legislation which might bankrupt the state and yet the legislature could not amend it or repeal it, and the legislature after all represents the people, and I think it is a necessary safeguard.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I believe that we have already restricted the people in passing initiative measures in regard to appropriations, and while I don't see any great thing to fear here, I don't see the necessity of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I decided I was not going to talk any more on this bill. I thought I had said enough, but things happen to look now it's like we had quite a nice looking tree here so the farmer started to trim the limbs and he cut off this and that, and then he got some bigger limbs off, and now I see he is cutting the roots, and the tree will be dead. Of course, it has been slowly dying all afternoon, but this and the amendment awhile ago in which they actually took the teeth out of it I think was the finishing touches, because I think you got a couple of the main roots now severed. and if this amendment passes, it might as well be thrown in the Clerk's waste basket for all the good it is going to do the Territory of Alaska or the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Am I right, was not the word "amendment" taken out of that section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, three words, "may it be" were added before "amended". The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal and Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?"

METCALF: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following results:

Yeas: 27 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 25 - Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Wien.

Absent: 3 - Cross, McCutcheon, Nerland.)

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas, 27 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption.* Are there other amendments?

R. RIVERS: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 20, page 2, delete the words 'amended or'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Line 20, page 2, it is.

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

COGHILL: I object.

R. RIVERS: Now, Mr. President, the fear was well expressed by both Mr. Hellenthal and Mr. Buckalew that some defects in the draftsmanship of a bill which has been enacted by the initiative might prove to be a bad stumbling block, some very bad complications might arise, and to say that the legislature for a period of three years could not amend it, which might be something which the public generally would very much approve, just because the legislature be barred from amending it, might put the new state in a precarious position. The effect of what I propose here is that the legislature may not repeal such an act as was enacted by the initiative but the legislature would be trusted to amend it if necessary.

MCNEES: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees you may, if there is no objection.

MCNEES: I prefer an explanatory answer rather than an unqualified "yes" or "no". Is not the power to amend also the power to kill?

R. RIVERS: I am glad you asked for something more than a "yes" or "no" answer. If you wanted to amend it by taking out some very basic section I suppose in the pursuit of such skulduggery the legislature could practically nullify it. But on the other hand, if the legislature is barred during that period from repealing it, showing constitutional intent that the work of the people shall be honored, then I think you will be trusting your legislature only to make such minor amendments or reasonable and proper amendments as the public need might require.

* The Convention voted on December 19, (pages 1115 through 1116) to expunge the announcement of this vote from the record. The correct vote was announced on December 19, page 1119.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question? If things are so bad that you are going to go to hell with some law that the people put in to power, can't they withdraw that? Have they not the good judgment to withdraw that?

R. RIVERS: I don't know how.

MARSTON: By another referendum or initiative?

R. RIVERS: They could perhaps institute an initiative which takes a matter of a year over the whole operative period, and as Mr. Buckalew says, you might bankrupt the state during that year. That procedure is so cumbersome that we might be in trouble. The average legislature that is prevented from repealing a law which was put through by popular vote is going to emasculate it completely but you would save the legislature the power to protect the public by making reasonable amendments if the development so indicated.

MARSTON: If it is so hard to repeal a law and it would be so hard to get it on there, I don't think it would work either way. I think the people would repeal a law if they don't like it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I should like to speak in favor of this amendment, thinking back a few years to an experience in the State of Washington, which many of us will recall. It was featured in their daily press, almost daily for the greater part of a biennium following the adoption of what I believe was called Initiative 177. It was wholly irresponsible from a fiscal standpoint, unrealistic from the standpoint of the state's finances and it resulted I believe in that one biennium in the calling of some three special sessions before finally their machinery through the initiative enabled the State to reconsider and repeal or to modify substantially the original initiative, by which time the State had incurred an enormous deficit, and it is still suffering from that. I think this is a proper safeguard.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I for one have no objection to the power to amend if it is used judiciously, but I think it is well illustrated that the power to amend can be the power to destroy, as we have seen illustrated today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I was just going to remark that there seems to be a great deal of fear that the legislature would destroy this legislation by amendment under the proposed amendment before us now, but I think we should remember that as a practical matter, the legislature is elected by the same people that vote on the initiative and the referendum, and enough of the legislators are going to have their eye on re-election that they are not going to deliberately destroy something the people have shown they want.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I was going to say practically the same thing. Several times the members have shown distrust of the legislature in that they are trying to protect the people from it. They don't seem to realize that the legislature is the people, the legislature is a section of Alaskan people who are elected by other Alaskan people, and they are there to help the State out, and when a law has been passed by the people under this initiative I am certain they are not going to do anything to destroy it. They may wish to amend it to correct a situation in case the state is going broke under this law. While I am on my feet, I might point out that I voted against the amendment striking the provision against repealing by the legislature. I do not believe they should have the right to repeal it. There are other ways. For instance, the people can start another initiative to repeal it which would take time and is a little cumbersome, or if the legislature was in session and through their investigations found out it was not going to work for certain reasons, they could initiate a referendum and refer it to the people. So I do not think the repeal is necessary to the legislature, but the power of amendment is.

METCALF: Is a motion for adjournment in order?

SUNDBORG: We called for the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those who are in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment --

STEWART: May we have it read, please.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 20, page 2, delete the words 'amended or'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 38 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Doogan, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 13 - Coghill, Collins, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Kilcher, King, Laws, McNees, Marston, Peratrovich, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Cross, McCutcheon, Nerland, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 38 yeas, 13 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment has been adopted.* Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move that we adjourn until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

ARMSTRONG: Objection.

V. FISCHER: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves, Mr. Victor Fischer seconds the motion, that the Convention adjourn until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The question is shall the Convention stand adjourned until 2 p.m. tomorrow?"

V. RIVERS: Roll call please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 23 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hinckel,

* The Convention rescinded its action on this amendment on December 19.

Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Riley, Smith, Sundborg, VanderLeest, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 28 - Armstrong, Barr, Cooper, Davis, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien.

Absent: 4 - Cross, McCutcheon, Nerland, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 23 yeas, 28 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "nays" have it and the motion has failed.

V. RIVERS: I move that we adjourn until 9:05 a.m. Monday.

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves, seconded by Mr. Robertson, that the Convention adjourn until 9:05 Monday morning. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9:05 Monday morning?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention is adjourned until 9:05 Monday morning.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

December 19, 1955

FORTY-SECOND DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning Reverend A. E. Purviance of the First Methodist Church. Reverend Purviance will give the daily invocation.

REVEREND PURVIANCE: Gracious God, our Heavenly Father, we praise Thy Name for bringing us back together and giving us rest over the weekend. We thank Thee now that we may call upon Thy Name for Thy guidance and Thy wisdom. We do not trust our own strength. We call upon Thee now to be with us during the sessions of this day and that if it be Thy will take us safely to our homes and bring us back together again that we may complete the work that is before us. May Thou hear us in this moment of Thy invocation, for we ask these things with humility of thought and in the Name of the Master of us all. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: Seven absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: I have not had a chance to read it. I would like to suspend it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight has not had a chance to read the journal and asks permission to suspend it. If there is no objection, the reading of the journal will be suspended until the Committee reports. Are there any memorials or communications from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I understand that the Committee Proposal on Resources is now available for distribution. I wonder if we might have a minute's recess while they are distributed. I understand they are here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Have they been distributed, Committee Proposal No. 9? It is available.

SMITH: I fail to see it on my desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the messenger please bring a copy of Proposal No. 9 to Mr. Smith. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: No. 9 is the report of the Committee on Finance and Taxation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chairman stands corrected. It is another number.

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, it is here. It has not been distributed.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I move for a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for a brief time.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Smith, is it satisfactory with you if we pass your report until later and have it submitted at a later time?

SMITH: Perfectly satisfactory.

WHITE: Mr. President, in the absence of the Chairman of the Committee on Finance and Taxation, I would like to report that Committee Proposal No. 9 has been prepared and distributed to the delegates, and I ask that it be read for the first time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk will read Committee Proposal No. 9 for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 9, introduced by the Committee on Finance and Taxation, ARTICLE ON FINANCE AND TAXATION."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, about a week ago the question of Rule 35 on the previous question was referred for study to the Rules Committee, and the Rules Committee has on a number of occasions discussed the matter and I am empowered to report that they have no recommendation to make.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Rules Committee reports that they have no recommendation to make as to Rule No. 35. Are there other committee reports? Are there any proposals to be introduced at this time? Motions or resolutions? The Chair would feel at this time that it would be proper to take up the reports by the chairmen of the various committees, the summaries as to what the meaning of their reports are as we discussed the other day, and we agreed to have those brief summaries from the chairmen or members of the various committees at this time. Is it the wish of the body that this would be a proper time to consider that? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I think this is a good time to do that. I would like the suggestion very much. I move and ask unanimous consent that we proceed on that basis.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will proceed on that basis. And we might have the first report then come from the Chairman of the Preamble and Bill of Rights Committee, Committee No. V, if you would so desire, Miss Awes.

AWES: All right. I will not attempt to discuss the bill of rights provision section by section. There are about 19 of them, and each of them deal with a different subject. I will point out a few things about the bill of rights in general and then mention a few of the more controversial provisions. I may mention in the beginning that there were quite a number of proposals referred to our Committee, and in our forwarding letter we took up those proposals one by one and mentioned how we disposed of them and usually gave our reasons for our action, so I don't think I have to say anything more on those. The bill of rights - - we considered the various provisions. We usually also considered the pertinent provisions from the Federal Bill of Rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the people please let Miss Awes continue.

AWES: In some instances we felt that the Federal Bill of Rights, the particular provisions, as long as we have had it that it has served its purpose well and was suited to the needs of Alaska. Some of those provisions already apply to Alaska through the interpretation of the Supreme Court. In those cases we just used the federal provision, and in a report we have noted which of those provisions are identical with the Federal Constitution. Others were changed either because of the peculiar conditions of Alaska or because we felt due to conditions changing in the 150 years or so that we have had the Federal Constitution that some modification should be made. Usually we have noted the modification and often given our reason for it. There are a few provisions which are in addition to those which appeared in the federal bill. One of those is the Section 3, which is denominated to civil rights. That is one that took up quite a bit of time and consideration of the Committee. We finally decided that a general provision with an additional provision, "that the Legislature shall provide appropriate legislation", was the best way to handle it because we felt that it was just impossible to enumerate all the conditions and all the places where people should not be discriminated against because of race, color and origin. If we could do it today, by next year it would be out of date anyway. Section 7 which pertains to grand juries is also different from the Federal. We preserved the grand jury, but we changed the number of grand jurors from 23 to 12, and we also modified the use of it somewhat. We are not substituting something entirely new but something which has been tried in other states and is found to be more efficient and economical without in any way taking away any protection which the people have or should have. The same is true of Sections 12 and 13 dealing with the juries in criminal and civil cases. Again we tried to provide a procedure which would protect the right to a jury but still to do it more economically and efficiently without sacrificing any rights of individuals, and again the provisions that we have adopted have been tried and found satisfactory in other jurisdictions. Section 18 is also something that does not appear in the Federal Constitution but appears in a number of state constitutions. An explanation of that, which should be sufficient, is found in the report which we submitted. I think perhaps I should mention too, matters which we considered and did not include in the bill of rights. One is wire tapping. That is quite controversial as shown by the fact that we reached a four to three decision and there is a minority report signed by three of the members. I think I can speak for the majority on saying that the reason we did not include it is that we feel that it is a matter that to a certain extent is prohibited by the Federal Constitution and our bill of rights as proposed, that to a certain extent, both due to the fact that perhaps there are circumstances when it should not be prohibited and the fact that science is making so many new developments in that particular area that it is perhaps impossible to treat it in the bill of rights and any additional legislation needed should be handled by the legislature rather than by the constitution. Then another controversial issue -- there is the correlated provision for the right-to-work. The Committee I believe was unanimous in the feeling that there should be no right-to-work provision. One of the members filed a minority report saying that he thought there should be a collective bargaining provision and another member tended that way but not sufficiently to sign a report on it. The other five were agreed that collective bargaining did not belong in the constitution that it is purely a matter of legislative consideration. I think I may point out in that connection, we had several letters from labor unions saying that they did not want a right-to-work provision but we had no communication at all which even intimated that they were interested in seeing a collective bargaining provision in it, which perhaps indicated labor organizations felt the way we do. There again we feel that collective bargaining is also you might say, in a state of evolution, and anything that we put in probably would not have any enduring value, and it is a matter that undoubtedly the legislature will take care of. We also submitted another article on health, welfare and education. The first section is on public education, and except for the last sentence, it is taken almost verbatim from the Enabling Act. We added the one sentence, "No money shall be paid from public funds for the direct benefit of any religious or other private institution." Sections 2 and 3 are just general sections giving the legislature the authority to take the necessary action with reference to public health and public welfare. At first glance

Section 4 may not appear to be necessary in a constitution. But we have found that in other states the courts have sometimes held that the legislature had no authority in the matter of slum clearance and low cost housing unless there was specific authority granted by the constitution. Section 4 grants that authority to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Miss Awes. Are there any questions that the delegates would like to ask of Miss Awes? If not, I wonder if there is someone present who could report on the report of the Committee on Suffrage, Election, and Apportionment? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I am vice chairman of that Committee. As you know, the elections have been through the mill on the floor, so I have nothing to report except on the apportionment. The apportionment of the house and senate was a job, a hard job, and it required a lot of work. The Apportionment Committee, until four days ago, had no concrete proposal. At that time all the delegates who had been to the meeting, as well as the delegates on the Committee, reached I might say almost unanimous decision on the following: "RESOLVED that the house shall be a 40-member house." The reapportionment of the house is set up in the schedule so that at the end of every decennial census within a limited period of time the governor shall appoint a reapportionment board and by mandamus shall act on the findings of that board. In addition to the membership of the house and the reapportionment, the membership of the senate was set at 20. To arrive at the areas which the house and senate districts would represent, your Committee, you might say, redistricted and reapportioned Alaska as of this date but using the 1950 census which were the only sure figures we had to work with. We have redistricted 24 election districts out of the Territory of Alaska. Of these 24 election districts, they are combined to make 12 senatorial districts, and in addition to that we have four senatorial regions which very closely bound the old judicial divisions but not exactly. I don't want to go into it too far because without a map it gets to be very misleading. We will have at the end of the recess a photostat copy of the districting map for every member. The apportionment board that is provided for in the act shall be a nonpartisan board of five members from the general public. They will be appointed by the governor and will act in an advisory capacity, and he is ordered within a limited period of time after their findings to reapportion Alaska which should give the State an up-to-date representation at all times in the house and the senate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Cooper. The Chair would like to note that we do not as yet have copies of that report. However, it will be available before the day is out. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I was going to ask a question about if that report would be available before we went home.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will be, Mr. Davis. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would like to ask a question. Will one of these reapportionment maps be available in the building, or is it now so that we could look at it?

COOPER: I don't know. The one man who has the map is not here this morning, and later on in the day I will find out if the map is upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill is going to be here.

COOPER: Then the map will be available today.

GRAY: Along that line, I wonder as long as this is the last day, if the Vice-chairman could have the map placed on the wall or available down here so they can look over it, and any of the Committees would be very glad to answer any of the 10,000 questions on how we reached this map.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The map will be available and placed on the wall as quickly as possible. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: The Committee through the aid of consultants really went into the redistricting of apportionment of Alaska. Every election district is an individual district within itself based on geographical, social economic basis of the people that live within that district, and I believe that it is a very fine job and that when the Convention as a whole sees this map they will agree, and as Mr. Davis said, the majority of the members are here and I know that the map does require some explanation, but during the day the Committee would be glad to answer some questions because this is a controversial issue that should be brought up during the public hearings.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Along that same line, I would like to ask if it would be possible to secure photostatic copies of the map in time to mail them to the delegates before the public hearings are held?

COOPER: We will also attempt to do that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would it be asking too much, Mr. Cooper, if you could attempt to see that those maps are mailed?

COOPER: No sir, that is not asking too much. We will do it as soon as we get the photostatic copies made and printed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Cooper. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I was wondering if we could be at ease so the class could come in and the last proposal may be passed out. They are ready here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease so the school class can come in and the proposal will be passed out. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, in talking to the members of the Apportionment Committee, it was suggested that a very brief outline be given as to the method of obtaining the apportionment within the 24 election districts that Alaska now consists of. We used the method of equal proportionment. Mr. Gray seems to be an expert on that. It is a system used by the United States House of Representatives, the house consisting of the total population, civilian population of Alaska divided by a house consisting of 40 gives you a quotient, a minimum population. Any election district containing that population has one representative. Now to further guarantee various election districts, representation, we used the method of the major fraction of that quotient, the major fraction being the quotient divided by two plus one. Every election district within Alaska at this time has the minimum population for representation. In later years, as the population increases and the reapportionment board meets, any district falling below the minimum population will be joined to its nearest social economic district. Those two districts, then combined, will have the minimum population and still have their representation. I believe that was all.

GRAY: Additional districts, subdistricts --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray, would you like to talk?

GRAY: I was just going to carry on that these are economic areas. Some of them are rather large. We will just take for instance Skagway -- if it should have a project come in that puts in a population of five to ten thousand. Out of the election districts, if there is a sufficient number in there equal to this quotient, you can set up a district within a district assuring this smaller locale a full delegate in the house of representatives, the idea principally being in this method of equal proportions, the fact that the population divided by the house members, makes each member responsible to an exact number of people. We worked on a 1950 census. I believe the figure was 2,746, and any time that you have 2,746 people in an absolute geographic area they are entitled to one representative, and that was the principle we worked out on these election districts. Now in some places like your municipalities, like Anchorage and so one, they are lumped together. You have multiples of that quotient. Something like Anchorage would get eight because they are right within a district and Fairbanks would get five because those are multiples. Each representative represents exactly that amount. In any case that you have, we will take Bristol Bay which is one district, but if the time should come where there is a quotient and this quotient varies with every dicennial, but we will say that Bristol Bay has 4,000 people on the north side of the Bay and 4,000 people on the south side of the Bay, each with sufficient number to have one exact representative, then you would subdivide your districts so that each locality that is entitled to a whole member in the house would get it or any multiple thereof. I have asked the boiler room to mimeograph a little typed sample of this that I hope to have this afternoon, so that you are able to study this problem and take it home with you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask one question of Mr. Gray. You have 24 legislative districts then, and you have combined certain of these to make senatorial districts. If you split one of these legislative districts, are you going to have to count each sub as a unit in connection with your senatorial division?

GRAY: No, it is not my understanding of that. The house is based on population, absolutely on population. As your population varies, your representatives follow the population, but in the senate, whatever senate lines are drawn is in my opinion, your senate lines remain permanent regardless of population shift.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I happen to be on this Committee. I don't want to underrate the IQ of this organization, but I do not believe we can all grasp it here without a map and a chart, and this a vital piece of this Convention is in this apportionment and reapportionment, and I think if Mr. Gray and Mr. Cooper, who is Vice-president of this Committee, should have their maps here, and this organization could well afford to give them a major part of an hour some time today. Otherwise, we will just be confused with this on the issue.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, they have signified that they will have that map here, and we will give them the time if there is no objection. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I should have waited until we were sure that we were through with the questions. If there are further questions, I would rather wait.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there further questions of Mr. Cooper and Mr. Gray? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I would like to know just what was the basis for apportionment of senators. That is going to be a very important question in the area where I am going to hold hearings, and I would like to know what the thinking was in apportioning the senators.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Marston is exactly right. This will get so confusing without a map and without the figures to work from that I am afraid that the Committee will lose the support that we now have, and I would like to, if it is all right with Mrs. Hermann and the other delegates, to withhold until we have the map, and then we can explain it. The major way of choosing a senatorial district is to have your geographic location and yet contain in that limit your economic and social standards that would form a senatorial district. But we do have to have the map.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that satisfactory, Mrs. Hermann?

HERMANN: I just want to make sure it is not according to population.

COOPER: No, it is not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper will have that information this afternoon. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Another very important and contributing factor in this I think is Doug Gray's blackboard explanation of the method of equal apportionment. Would it be possible to have that blackboard down here at the same time?

GRAY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to announce at this time that there is a part of the sophomore and part of the freshman class of the Fairbanks High School with us this morning. We are very happy to have you here. Also, we have two visitors from Nome, Mr. Frank Morris who is the district engineer for the Alaska Road Commission there and his wife. We are happy to have you here with us this morning, also. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to ask unanimous consent to revert to committee reports.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to introduction of committee reports at this time. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to present Committee Proposal No. 8 introduced by the Committee on Resources and ask unanimous consent that it be read for the first time and given a place on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection Committee Proposal No. 8 will be read for the first time. The Chief Clerk may read the proposal.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 8, introduced by the Committee on Resources, STATE LANDS AND NATURAL RESOURCES."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, while we are on this order of business, I would like to submit to the Convention, Committee Proposal No. 10 and ask it be read for the first time and placed on the calendar. It is the report of the Committee on the Executive Branch.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers requests that Committee Proposal No. 10 be read for the first time and placed on the calendar. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, along that line, I have been advised that our Committee Reports No. 11 and No. 12 supplementing the article on the Executive are also ready, and I would like to have them included in my motion. They are passing them out now.

CHIEF CLERK: No. 11 and 12 have already been introduced. PRESIDENT EGAN: They were read for the first time, Mr. Rivers. V. RIVERS: That is right. Yes, thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read Proposal No. 10 for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 10, report of the Committee on the Executive Branch, ARTICLE ON THE EXECUTIVE."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Are there other committee reports at this time? If not, we will proceed, and could we have a report from Committee No. VII, the Committee on the Legislative Branch. Would some member wish to summarize that proposal? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: As vice Chairman I can go over it quickly. The legislature is going to be composed of 20 members in the senate, 40 in the house. Senators must be at least 25 years of age, representatives, 21. They are required to be in Alaska at least three years and in the legislative district from which they file at least one year immediately preceding their filing. They shall be elected at a time to be specified and their term of office will begin on the fourth Monday of January. Representatives will serve for two years, senators for four years, half of them elected every two years. Vacancies will be filled in a manner to be prescribed or else by the governor. There is a provision which provides that no legislator or other elective or appointive officer can hold any other office or file for reelection except to some other office. There is also an immunity clause which provides a legislator will not be held liable for anything that he says during the session. He is also free from arrest on his way to and from the Convention. We have a salary provision which will say the salary of the legislature will be one-third of the salary of the governor, and the salary of the governor is to be set by the legislature. And also, there is a provision that the legislators may receive per diem so that is a matter that is left to the legislators. From this you will see that the legislators will be paid annually which means they can serve for maybe 60 days and come back and serve another session, but they will receive an annual salary, and there will not be additional pay for those extra sessions. Special sessions can be called either through a poll conducted by the Legislative Council or by the governor and there is also a provision stating that nothing can be brought up at the special session except those things listed by the governor or requested of him to introduce. There is also a provision for the Legislative Council and such other interim committees that the legislature may want to set up. We have a Legislative Council now, and in discussion in the Committee it was felt that it should be stated in the constitution so there won't be any questions later as to whether the Legislative Council was permitted or not. And the interim committees would be such committees as appropriation or finance committee or taxation committee that we want to study problems during an interim period. There is a provision for adoption of uniform rules which I think is not different than what it has been. And also a new provision that the legislature shall direct by law in what manner and what court suits might be brought against state or agencies thereof. We have an impeachment provision which is a little different than that found in other constitutions in that in this article it is proposed that the impeachment will be brought by the senate and heard in the house. And there will also be a justice of the supreme court presiding and two-thirds of the members of the house will be required to carry out the impeachment. Then all civil officers except the governor may be removed for causes other than those which fall in the impeachment bracket. We have a veto by the governor. This is a little different also. The bill is returned by the governor if vetoed to the house. Then the legislature sits as a body, as one body, and then it requires two-thirds of the total number of the legislators to override. There is a provision there dealing with the veto of general appropriation bills which would require three-fourths of the total number. Also, the governor is given 15 days while the legislature is in session, 15 days time to either sign or veto the bill. If the legislature is not in session he has 20 days in which to either sign or veto the bill. Otherwise it will be law. There is a procedure for the enactment of bills which is not too difficult to understand and also the provision regarding time of taking effect. The time will run from the time the session ends, 90 days after the adjournment of the session rather than 90 days after the time the bill has been approved, which is the case at the present time. There is a section on local and special acts which are prohibited, and also a new section on the remission of taxes. This is prohibited. "No obligation or liability of any person, association, or corporation held or owned by the state or any municipal corporation therein, shall ever be exchanged, transferred, remitted, released or postponed or in any way diminished by the legislature, nor shall such liability or obligation be extinguished except by the payment thereof into the proper treasury." That is the main clause and we felt that should be in there. There is also a new section on referendum which states that any bill that fails of passage in the legislature can be put to the people through a referendum by the governor either in its original form or with some of the amendments that had been considered. Bills may also be put to referendum by the legislature by meeting certain requirements, so if they want they can do that. Then, we have a freedom of religion section, and the native land section is practically lifted from the Enabling Act. And the taxes on nonresidents I believe was also lifted from the Enabling Act, one that is required to be in there. And then we set up a board of apportionment which I think you will find not too hard to understand but which we felt should be in there. On the whole I think it is a fine bill and easy to understand.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I would like to ask Mrs. Sweeney a question. We ran into somewhat similar groups. I want to call everyone's attention to it that there will be two apportionment sections and we will only use one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, our Committee recognizes and I believe other committees recognize their proposals will contain sections which might be a duplication of a section in another proposal, and we felt that when the proposal comes on the floor, if it is not in the proper proposal the section will be lifted and put into some other proposal or it will be cut out entirely. We recognize that duplication and know that some parts will have to be lifted or eliminated.

GRAY: That explains it. I just wanted to call everybody's attention to the fact. They are practically the same except there is a difference. How did the Legislative Committee arrive at the figures of 40 and 20?

SWEENEY: I believe that was decided at a meeting I was not able to attend. Perhaps Mr. McNees can tell you that.

MCNEES: I might state in that connection that roughly the old rule of thumb that the senate should be smaller than the house. There was some of the Committee felt that we should have a senate of 24, some a senate of 16, and I believe the figure 20 was more or less a compromise figure between those two extremes. It is rather interesting I think that Apportionment and Legislative both should have come up with the same figures. I was going to counter and ask Mr. Gray how his Committee arrived at theirs. Then, in the house we felt that 40 should be a maximum limit and not necessarily an arbitrary figure, and we are willing to give in to Apportionment though on their basis there, I think. We would have no quarrel with the figure "40" in the house being an arbitrary figure rather than an arbitrary maximum, so actually, Mr. Gray, in answer to your question, you might say that the senate figure of 20 was a compromise figure. The figure of 40 was set as a maximum figure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I would be interested in an explanation of the thinking of the changing of the impeachment process from what is normally used.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. Chairman, you will note that I have some sections I do not concur in, which I purposely did not mention or dwell on that, because I felt that was something that will come up in discussion on the bill at the time we have the bill in second reading. That is one of the things that I am opposed to and I hardly think it has a place here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, inasmuch as Mrs. Sweeney has filed, in effect, a minority report pertaining to that particular section, it sort of puts her on the spot. I wonder if I might answer that for Mr. Boswell.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: The idea of the impeachment proceedings --

SWEENEY: I rise to a point of order. If Mr. Cooper is going to argue or tell why they think it should be in, then I would want to get up and argue the point. I hardly think this is the place or time for it.

BOSWELL: I withdraw my question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: May I call Mr. Boswell's attention to the explanatory article in our commentary relative to the section on impeachment. I think that will explain the situation and get us completely away from any controversy at the present time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relative to the report of the legislative branch? Mr. Victor Rivers, as Chairman of the Executive Committee, would you like to give a summary of your particular proposal?

V. RIVERS: Yes, Mr. President. As I think all delegates have heard, the Executive Committee has worked on the theory of the strong executive. That was the intention throughout the article to centralize authority and responsibility for the administration of government, enforcement of laws, in a single elective official. Now there is the ideal which is set up by the model constitution. We have some variations on that. We have an elected governor and also an elected secretary of state. The procedure to be followed there would be to elect both of these officials on the same ballot as is done in the State of New York and as is done nationally. The governor's qualifications would be a minimum of 30 years of age, 20 years a citizen of the United States, seven years a resident of the Territory of Alaska. The term of the governor would be for four years, and he could hold office for two successive terms. At the end of that time he would have to have a four year break before he would again be eligible to run for the governorship. We have provided for the governor's replacement in case of a vacancy or in the case of his temporary absence from the state. His powers would be taken over by the secretary of state. We felt the second elected official was necessary in order that when there was a vacancy, an individual who was elected by all the voters of the whole Territory would still be eligible as his successor, both if a permanent vacancy occurred or if the absence was a temporary one. The secretary of state would not sit, under our proposal, as a president of the senate. He would have duties prescribed to him by law and by the legislature. The succession was one thing we had considerable discussion about. The succession would run from the governor to the secretary of state, to the president of the senate, to the speaker of the house, in that order. In the latter two, of course, they would be elected by a segment only of the electorate of the state. In regard to compensation for the governor, it was to be fixed by law. The governor would have the strong power, power of appointing all his department heads. They would also be removable at the governor's will. He would also make the appointments for the multiheaded boards in case there are such, and some there probably will be. The executive secretary of any of the regulatory or quasi-judicial boards could not be removed by the governor but removed in a manner provided by law. The purpose of that is that in a regulatory board, regulating the power rates, telephone rates, etc., the power of removal might be the power to make the office ineffective so that removal would be prescribed by the legislature. There are set up a maximum of 20 single department heads. The major departments would be limited to 20. That is similar, in parallel to the Hawaiian situation. Those departments were not named, the departments would fall into the classification or in a category set up in an organization chart of the state government. We have covered some other clauses that have to do with related matters, such as a civil service establishment under the administrative department of the state government, and we have included the necessary qualifications for disqualification for disloyalty and for taking oath of office which are more or less mandatory and probably not controversial. I think that covers generally the approach we have made to the executive. I might say that our Committee is not in entire agreement on certain points, but on the major approach however the Committee is in agreement. The other points that we are in disagreement on will probably come out more than once on the floor during the time that our proposal is being studied.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Rivers. Are there any questions? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Awhile ago Mr. Rivers mentioned some other portions of this Executive Article. I thought it was said they had been passed out, but I don't seem to have them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: On Saturday they were read for the first time.

DAVIS: I do remember something being done with them, but I don't have them here.

HERMANN: It was referred to the Committee on Ordinances, and the other to the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, but the copies should have been made available for the delegates. Would the messenger see that Proposals No. 11 and 12 are made available to the delegates, copies of them. Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: What is Proposal No. 6. I don't have it.

CHIEF CLERK: Local government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Local government. It will be out in just a few minutes. If there are no further questions at this time on the Executive Branch, we will proceed with the report of the Chairman of the Resources Committee. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to say first that a letter of transmittal accompanying the report was hurriedly drawn at 6 o'clock in the evening, and a corrected letter showing the disposal of delegate proposals referred to the Committee will be presented at a later date. I would like to suggest further that anyone who has a suggestion for change or an amendment to offer after the Christmas recess, get in touch with the Committee so that we can thrash that out before the matter comes on the floor. Now, in order to understand the problems with which this Committee has been confronted, in fact in order to be able to understand some of the provisions of the proposal, it is necessary to understand the provisions of the latest enabling act, House Resolution 2535 and Senate Bills 49 and 50. The lack of a general knowledge of these bills has led to some fantastic rumors. Apparently mining representatives throughout the Territory were not familiar with these provisions and had considered the suggested article which had appeared in the original staff paper as something dreamed up by a professor or something dreamed up here at this Convention. Comments of a like nature have come in from as far as California and Texas. In fact, one letter from Texas had it that Texas would oppose the formation of a state with state monopolies on all minerals. The facts are that the latest enabling acts have contained a clause granting to the State of Alaska all mineral rights on all lands granted to the state. This is in itself an unusual provision. During the years when the public land states of the West were being admitted into the Union it was the general policy of Congress to include only nonmineral lands within the grants customarily made to new states. In the case of the United States vs. Sweet in 1918, the Supreme Court said, "It has been the policy of the government at all times in disposition of public lands to reserve the mines for the use of the United States." A material change in this attitude was advanced in 1927 when Congress provided in effect that all grants of school lands should encompass lands that were mineral in character equally with nonmineral lands. The Act of 1927 provided that the states must preserve the mineral deposits from any disposition of title to the lands, that the mineral deposits should be subject to lease as the state legislature might direct, and that the income derived from the leasing of mineral deposits must be utilized for public school purposes only. The incorporation in the latest enabling bills of a provision identical to that contained in the Act of 1927 presumably reflected a desire on the part of Congress to achieve so far as practical, parity of treatment between Alaska and the existing states having congressional land grants. In other words, the thought was that Alaska should be allowed to obtain mineral rights on all its lands only if it would administer them in substantially the same manner that states now having mineral land grants are required to administer the lands obtained by them under grants from the United States. A decision by Congress not to earmark for public school purposes any of the land grants proposed for Alaska coupled with a desire to get the new state off to a flying start towards self-support probably induced Congress to grant to Alaska mineral deposits on all its lands subject to the restrictions imposed by the Act of 1927, which are identical to the restrictions imposed in the latest enabling bill. This resulted in the inclusion of Section 205, subsection J of the present enabling bill, which reads as follows: "The grants of mineral lands to the State of Alaska under this section are made upon the express condition that all sales, grants, deeds or patents for any of the mineral lands shall be subject to and contain a reservation to the State of all the minerals in the lands so sold, granted, deeded or patented, together with the right to prospect for, mine and remove the same. Mineral deposits in such lands shall be subject to lease by the State as the state legislature may direct, provided that any lands or minerals hereafter disposed of contrary to the provisions of this section shall be forfeited to the United States." With this background your Committee could only proceed on the presumption that the Act admitting Alaska as a state would contain a provision of this kind. The problem then was to attempt to find a way in which the mining industry, including the small operator, the large operator and the prospector could continue to operate insofar as is possible under conditions at least equal to and in a manner closely paralleling those under which they now operate. In devising such a system it was necessary to consider the operations of those now operating under a leasing system, such as oil, gas, coal, etc. This attempt called for the devising of a completely new approach, something entirely different from anything ever attempted before. In devising this new approach your Committee was fortunate in having the assistance of a good many people, including of course, Professors Bartley and Ostrom and a goodly number of Alaskans to whom I feel the Committee will be forever grateful. The entire proposed article probably goes further than anything of a like nature in attempting to foresee future developments and to properly safeguard the public interest and in the natural resources of the future state. However, every general principle embodied in this proposed article has ample precedence. This proposal has been submitted in its initial stages to the scrutiny of such men as Mr. Greeley, Regional Forester for Alaska, Mr. Holdsworth, Commissioner of Mines, Mr. Brown, Commissioner of Agriculture, Mr. Barnes of Shell Oil Company, as well as to the scrutiny of a goodly number of other people. It is probably far too early to say just what their verdict will be, but the comment has so far been all favorable. Each of these people has been asked, "Do you see anything in this proposed article which might be unduly restrictive on private industry?" answer has been almost unanimously "no". The provisions of the enabling bills covering lands and resources have been summarized by the Senate Committee which has initiated and carried these provisions through the various enabling acts in the report of the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular affairs. Now this Senate Committee report is available in the library upstairs. Copies can be had by writing to Delegate Bartlett, House Building, Washington, D. C. Now in explaining or commenting on the proposed article itself, I would like to call upon Mr. Burke Riley who has acted ably as the Secretary of this Committee. Mr. Riley, would you take over?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I don't think there is particular occasion to enlarge on Mr. Smith's remarks too fully. One thing we have is a detailed commentary which I trust every delegate will take with him and read over the recess. Mr. Smith remarked about a somewhat doctrinaire proposed article with which the Committee was once rather unpopularly tagged. It drew a great deal of fire and some interests were somewhat gun shy for good and sufficient reason, but I think to get the basic idea of our present article one need only refer to the first paragraph, a statement of purpose in the nature of a preamble which states, "It is the policy of the State to foster and encourage settlement and development through the maximum use and availability of its resources consistent with the public interest and the avoidance of waste and to that end it is the intent of this article to extend to all peoples the opportunity of participating in Alaska's heritage . The Committee has had to break new ground all the way on this, largely for the reason that this particular subject matter has had very little attention in constitutional coverage in the past. And for that reason the Committee has worked right up to this moment interviewing people and drafting and redrafting, and I am sure I express the view of the entire Committee when I suggest that we are not yet pleased with the content from the standpoint of style and full coverage. And no one has any pride of authorship here, and we hope to enlist the aid of anyone so disposed over the recess to assist in its perfection, so that a finished article may be put on the floor early after the recess. I will go down the commentary very briefly just to indicate what the main portions cover. The first section recites generally what the State's authority in the field is over natural resources, their utilization and development; and recites them by name as including game, fish, wildlife, fisheries, waters, lands, mineral rights, and other interests in the lands. The second section is a general statement that the sustained yield principle, not sustained yield by any limited usage or application of sustained yield but the sustained yield principle will be followed and will be the policy of the state as to all replenishable resources. The third section sets forth a general reservation to the people covering such matters as game, fish, wildlife, fisheries, and waters. That is amplified, or each of those is amplified in part throughout the article. The forest section is a general authorization for aid to users of the lands and other resources, aid in the nature of that provided by farm agents as to utilization of lands, by the forest service as to the best utilization of timber stands. The fifth section is one of uniform application which requires no comment at the time. The sixth section is one taken from a delegate proposal or I believe from several, whereby the state is authorized to reserve scenic, historic, cultural or scientific sites of interest from those standpoints and to administer them. The seventh section is simply a definition of the state public domain, which would eliminate from that definition the sites just mentioned, put aside for historical, cultural, scenic, etc., purposes. It would also eliminate those random parcels of real estate around the country which might be held for strictly governmental purposes in the nature of office buildings, etc. This section also grants to the legislature, general authority for the selection of lands and their administration, those lands to be granted to the state by the United States in the enabling act. The eighth section covers generally a provision for leases, authorizes the leasing of state lands, and the ninth section, the same coverage on sales and grants. The tenth section is very brief. I think that has merit as compared with most state constitutions I have checked on this point, and it simply sets up safeguards for observing the public interests in the disposal of all the public domain. Such matters as advertising, sales, competitive auctions, competitive bidding, where the sales will be held and under what conditions, we believe can all be spelled out amply by the legislature without its enlarging this article in the constitution. Section 11 I think is perhaps one of the most important in the entire article. It touches on the one matter which has been highly controversial throughout the Convention to this point, and that was the attitude of the Committee and of the state to be with respect to mineral interests in the lands granted by the United States. As Mr. Smith has suggested, the Committee has been mindful throughout of the apparent Congressional directive we will be operating under should present language in the enabling bills be retained and contained in the final enabling act. That language reserving mineral rights in all granted lands to the state has been something of a poser, and we have met that in two ways. First, we have tried to set up a procedure parallel but on a leasing basis to the present disposal system under the Federal Mining Law, reserving patent but in all other respects maintaining the familiar concepts which all the mining industry and prospectors are accustomed to discovery, appropriations, filing of location notices, etc., right on through. That is one section, I might add, which I consider to be still imperfect, and I would certainly be pleased to have any comments over the recess and on our return in that respect. Section 12 has to do with water rights. It is spelled out that we shall use the appropriation system in the State of Alaska, the old concept of first in time, first in right. Section 13 has to do with access to navigable waters; Section 14, no exclusive right or special privilege of fishery. Section 15 is something of a poser. It is new ground for many of us, and it too may require some blue penciling and clarification. It has to do with the concept of beneficial use and also with concurrent use of lands. In short, we seek to authorize one piece of property as being available for more than one purpose, if that may be done consistent with the primary use, and that is a point where a scale must be set up indicating orders of preference in beneficial use. Normally the highest beneficial use in water, for example, is considered to be domestic or industrial consumption. Others are irrigation, fisheries, and hydroelectric. I won't go further into that except to indicate that that is one of the matters which may be a departure from our thinking in the past and which I believe the delegates should familiarize themselves with insofar as possible in the next few days. Section 16 is an eminent domain section. Where the term, "private ways of necessity" is featured it has been lifted from other constitutions and appears in a number of them and is aimed at providing a means of access for the utilization in transportation of resources, forest products, or is an eminent domain section which may duplicate one elsewhere in the constitution, but is aimed at the resource field entirely. Section 17 is simply a restatement of the enabling Bill's boundary provision, and Section 18 is a statement, "Common place residual powers indicating that the coverage giving in the constitution is not necessarily a limitation on the legislature."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions of Mr. Riley? Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I would like to ask one question on Section 2. I know this question is going to be asked of perhaps a few of the delegates that are interested in fisheries. Now this sustained yield, did the Committee take under consideration the conservation of fisheries, etc., under this section?

RILEY: That was certainly our purpose, Mr. Peratrovich, in tying this language to all replenishable resources. Perhaps one of our two specialists in that field on the Committee could give you a fuller statement, but it was very much in the Committee's mind.

PERATROVICH: Does this mean then it will be left to the State legislature to determine whether it will be a sustained yield program?

RILEY: It would seem to me the legislature would have to set up an administrative agency which in turn would conduct biological studies and meet with the fishermen in the establishment of regulations, seasons, and that sort of thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: May I ask a question, Mr. Riley? Mr. Riley, is the wording of this similar to Washington's and Oregon's constitutions as far as controlling the regulation of the fisheries?

RILEY: I can't answer that, I am sorry, Mr. Lee.

LEE: I was just wondering, for instance, in the matter of fish traps, I'll bring that up. It was necessary for Washington and Oregon to use the initiative in order to use that form of conservation. Does it appear to you that that may be the method necessary here?

RILEY: Don't let me suggest, but I can't answer that. When you first rose I thought I would have a direct question on that because theirs is provided by initiative, threw me off in your first question. The Committee has considered at length the matter of fish trap coverage in the constitution, or I should say, fish trap abolition. They had considered it on several occasions before Delegate Lee's proposal came in. I should therefore say there is unanimity in the Committee, all favoring vigorously Delegate Lee's proposal, but the feeling was after a rather searching consideration, that there was probably not occasion for its being given treatment in the constitution as such. Now this thought may be subject to change, but the Committee itself, in issuing a proposal, felt there were other and equally effective means that would be available just as soon as the constitution was enforced. In short, we could offer something in the constitution here which would have no more meaning than the first act of the first legislature might have, the first state legislature that is, and it was our rather, shall we say, high level thinking that there was no need to impose any economic sanctions in the constitution itself. It should not surprise me if the article as it comes out the other end of the horn will be a little different in that respect.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other questions? The Convention will be at ease. The Convention will come to order. Does the Vice President of the Committee on Finance have a summarizing report to make at this time? Mr. Barr.

BARR: The Committee on Finance and Taxation has a report ready, and a copy is on each member's desk. I will ask our Secretary, Mr. White, to go over the commentary for us.

WHITE: Mr. President, Committee Proposal No. 9, Article on Finance and Taxation. I think I will just run briefly through it section by section and preface it by saying that I believe as far as the Committee is concerned, the Committee feels that this is as brief and straightforward an article on finance and taxation we could arrive at. It is aimed to assure a sound system of finance and taxation and leave as much leeway to the state as possible and the sound practices to be carried out in the future. Section 1 is a rather routine statement that the power of taxation shall never be surrendered or contracted away. The reason for the division of the thought there and the addition of the words, "except as provided herein" is to remove doubt as to what we might mean later on down in the article by providing exceptions. Section 2 is a requirement of the enabling act which the Committee felt belonged in the Article on Finance and Taxation. It is a standard provision. Section 3 is a provision for the legislature to provide the standards of assessments, uniform standards of assessment to be used throughout the state. This is not found in most constitutions, but the Committee felt that it would be to the interest of the state if some sort of standard of assessment could be set up essentially and be made available to the local taxing unit for their use, in that it would save cost and result in higher standards of assessment being used. Quite a bit of discretion is left to the legislature in setting that up, however. Section 4 deals with exemptions from taxation, most of it is pretty standard. The reason in the first sentence for the words, "with such exceptions as the legislature may direct" in referring to taxation of real and personal properties of the state and of its political subdivisions, is to leave to future legislatures the decision as to whether normally business enterprises of the state or political subdivision should or should not be taxable. The exemption given to religious, charitable, cemetery, or educational purposes is pretty standard. These are the only ones we have attempted to spell out here. And then in the last paragraph of that section it provides that other exemptions may be provided by general law. This would allow for, among other things, for a granting of tax incentives to new industries. Section 5 has come from the enabling act and it provides that no tax should be imposed upon the property of the United States except as allowed by federal law. The last two sentences in that section have been adopted almost verbatim from the enabling act. Section 6 gives to the state the power to tax lease holds, contracts, or other interests of land or property owned or held by the state. Sometimes that matter is in doubt if it is not spelled out. Section 7 is a standard provision of which I think needs no further explanation here. Section 8 states that all revenue shall be deposited in the state treasury without allocations for special purposes, with two exceptions. The Committee found it necessary to add the words, except where state participation in Federal programs would thereby be denied." Certain Federal programs of aid to states now demand that certain funds be earmarked for the purposes stated, and of course it is always possible that in the future, additional Federal laws might so state. The last sentence allows for the continuation of such earmarked funds as the Territory now has or will have upon the date of ratification. That is one place where there was some difference of opinion within the Committee, and this sentence represents the majority view. If I might digress for a moment, the Territory of Alaska now has approximately 27 per cent of its funds earmarked for special purposes, and those are the ones which would be continued or allowed to be continued under this section. The legislature could eliminate them in the future if they want to. As you all know, those are primarily the tobacco tax for school purposes, the motor fuel tax for roads, highways, airports and harbors. Section 9 deals with the contraction of debt, and it is a provision that ordinary debt shall be for capital improvements and must be approved by the voters of the state by referendum with certain standard exceptions which are repelling invasion, suppressing insurrection, defending the state in war, meeting national catastrophes, or redeeming outstanding indebtedness of the state at the time the constitution becomes effective. Section 10 allows the state to borrow money in anticipation of the collection of the revenues for a period of one year without the referendum provision applying. Section 11 in its first part allows for refunding of debt by the calling of current bonds and issuing of new ones at lower interest rates without the referendum. And in the last part it provides that the public enterprise or public corporation may incur indebtedness and the only security for such indebtedness is the revenues of the enterprise or the public corporation, or indebtedness incurred under special improvement statutes when the only security for such indebtedness is the properties benefited or improved or the assessments thereon. There actually is no way of getting around this. Most states have found that with severe debt restrictions that they wind up with this kind of enterprise any way, and the courts hold that debts incurred by this type of enterprise do not come under the standard debt restrictions, so we have made this provision here to spell it out clearly and avoid litigation in court. Section 12 has a rather standard provision of requiring the governor to submit a budget to the legislature along with appropriation bills and bills covering revenue measures that the executive department might desire to cover later. Section 13 is a standard section providing that money shall not be withdrawn from the treasury except in accordance with appropriations made by law and providing in its last sentence for the recapture of unexpended funds which have been appropriated at intervals that can be specified by the legislature so as to enable the state to clean up its books periodically and start afresh. Section 14 provides for the appointment of a postaudit by the legislature and allows the legislature to prescribe its duties, provides that he will conduct a postaudit and report to the governor and legislature. We felt it unnecessary to go into any further detail than that because the legislature in hiring such an auditor should have full rein to prescribe its duties. Section 15 merely provides that the state shall assume the debts and liabilities of the Territory and the debts owed to the Territory and the assets of the Territory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. White. Are there any questions? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have a question I would like to ask. In your Section 4, right at the last of page 1, "All or any portion of property used exclusively for nonprofit religious, charitable, cemetery, or educational purposes as defined by law, is exempt from taxation." How was it taken into consideration the fact that a charitable institution might own ten acres of revenue-producing ground in a locality other than the ground on which the institution itself existed?

WHITE: Mr. President, in answer to Mr. Cooper's question, the intent of the Committee here is to allow for tax exemptions on property used for religious, charitable, cemetery, or educational purposes, to be exempt from taxation, but to provide for taxation of income-producing property, and furthermore, to allow for proration of such income-producing property. For example, if a religious organization should own an office building, a part of which is rented out, a part of which is used for its own purposes, the intent here is to allow the taxation of the income-producing part of that office building and exemption on the non-income producing part.

JOHNSON: May I ask Mr. White a question please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. White, in Section 9 and 10 there seems to be a limitation on the right of the state to borrow money. However, on just a cursory examination, I don't see anything spelled out about a debt limitation. Did the Committee consider that matter? For instance, the United States government, to use an example, has a debt limitation fixed periodically. Is anything of that nature contemplated by this section?

WHITE: Mr. President, as to Mr. Johnson's question, there is no dollar debt limitation set forth here. The Committee considered various dollar or percentage limitation, decided that it was undesirable to restrict the state in such a way, and furthermore that where such restrictions had been tried in other states they had not resulted in the intended purpose. In other words, the credit of most states where strict limitations are in effect is generally no better than the credit of states that have no debt limitations. The only limitations here are that ordinary debts be submitted to the voters for approval, that debt may be incurred without referendum by the people where the enterprise financed by the debt will be self-sustaining and that the state may borrow short terms of money one year on anticipation of revenues. We considered other limitations and discarded them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I might add to that a little bit. The Committee did consider for a time allowing the legislature to provide for a debt up to a certain limit, but that was decided against, so at the present time the only debt of the state now which can be allowed is a debt to be paid out of anticipated revenues, that is from year to year, except a debt which must be approved by the people on referendum. In other words, the people are the ones that put the limit on any public debt, any large amount.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog, do you have a report on the Committee on Local Government?

ROSSWOG: The proposed article has been distributed, and I would like to ask at this time to return to the introduction of committee proposals, and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to the order of business introduction of committee proposals. The Chief Clerk may read the proposal for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 6, introduced by the Committee on Local Government, LOCAL GOVERNMENT."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, the commentary on this proposal is not quite completed, and as some of the members in the Committee worked with Mr. Cooper yesterday to finish it up, and it will be distributed before this session is over today, but at this time I would like to make some explanation of our work on this proposal. Now when this problem of local government structure, where the State of Alaska was placed before the Local Government Committee, we first considered whether local government units as we have them in the Territory were sufficient to take care of our needs as a state. It was our conclusion that the three classes of cities and the service areas we have now were not sufficient. For a growing state the framework of some form of intermediate government was needed. Without this framework, the orderly creation of local government units, there was a great possibility that we could have a hodgepodge of different local units that would be almost impossible to untangle at some later date. Now, in our considerations we can do two things, we can simply state that we should have cities and then some other unit between the cities and the state, or we could outline a plan on which such units could be built. The Committee felt that the first possibility we would be shirking our responsibility. We felt that in drawing up a plan we should keep in mind that we should not disrupt the present local government units any more than it was just possible to do so. We approached the problem with three basic rules in mind, one, that the unit should have as much local home rule as possible. Second, that the overlapping of authority and taxing power should be held to a minimum, and third, that any form of local units should be adaptable to different sections of Alaska. If you will take the proposed article we will go to Section 1, and I believe that is self-explanatory. That states our purpose and also allows for liberal interpretation. Section 2 provides for two primary units of local government. These are the cities and the boroughs. The name "borough" was selected because it had a meaning of local government and still was broad enough to cover a large area and also that it would be immediately recognized as pertaining to government and would not be confused with anything else. The city and the borough would be independent but also would be integrated. If each were a completely independent unit we would have the same problems and abuses as in most of the states who are divided into counties, parishes or townships. The difference between this unit and the county, as usually created, is that the county is usually set up to work from the upper level down and to handle functions that are sometimes handled by the state, such as police, the lower courts, the roads, and recordings, etc. Our purpose in creating this local unit was to build from below and up and give local home rule where these units could take on these duties, and up to the amount that the local people were able to carry. Section 3 provides that the borough or intermediate unit should be set up in three classes. The first would have almost complete home rule, the second would have limited home rule and the third would have only basic government or be unorganized. Section 5 sets up the governing body of the borough. We have put it in as an assembly composed of members of city councils and members from the rest of the area. Section 6 provides for service areas within the boundaries of the other units. Section 7 provides for the authority of the city and its governing body. Both the city and the borough can be municipal corporations. Section 8 establishes the jurisdiction of the two units and the separation of their functions. Section 9 establishes the taxing power of the two units and prohibits delegating this to other units. Sections 10 and 11 establish a principle of home rule, and Section 12 provides for operational forms of government to be set up by the legislature. Section 13 makes provisions for establishment and change of boundaries and the way they shall be determined. On boundaries we felt that the units should have assistance and supervision from the state level. Now, under ordinary home rule charters, the unit sets up its own boundaries and authority, but under our proposal the boundaries would be under a commission or agency established by the legislature and also a department or agency in the state government would provide assistance to the local unit. Articles 15, 16, 17 and 18 cover and review the setting up of special districts and financial burdens, etc. I think we have not too much comment to make on those, but I would like to say that this plan, as proposed, is new in lots of ways as far as the Territory is concerned, but it is based actually on experience in local government in not only the states but in other countries and also on the studies that have been made for combining the smaller local units, particularly in the states. We feel that it has a base and experience behind it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog, did the Chair understand also that it is your intention when the Convention comes back from its hearings recess to call the proposal back for a brief time to rearrange certain sections?

ROSSWOG: We thought it might be necessary after our recess that this proposal should be put out, and we would be glad to receive any suggestions. The Committee will remain active and if necessary we may call the proposal back for any changes necessary, and we hope any of the delegates that have questions or suggestions will come to us in the meantime.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Rosswog. At this time, the normal order of business, we would come back to Committee Proposal No. 3, the proposal relating to the question of initiative and referendum. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Section 4, the last half of Section 4, has been submitted as an amendment which would be along very soon, and I thought we might take up Mr. McNealy's reconsideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to make a statement before we proceed at all, and that is that the Chief Clerk informed the Chair not long after the adjournment on Saturday night that an error had been made in totaling the roll call tabulation of the amendment, one of the last amendments that was offered to Committee Proposal No. 3. Others who had been totaling the particular amendment had caught it in their totals and the Chief Clerk also had caught that particular error. Would the Chief Clerk please explain that particular thing to the delegates at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: Well, I announced 25 yeas and 27 nays, and it should have been the other way around -- 27 yeas and 25 nays. It was striking all the matter after the word "governor" on line 20 and striking line 21. It was putting a period after the word "governor" actually.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk read the totals, as the Chair understands it, as being 27 nays and 25 yeas. As a matter of fact it should have been just the other way around, and that error that was found by the Chief Clerk has been corroborated by others who were keeping a total at their desks at the time of the voting on the proposed amendment. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I think then it is in order that I move and ask unanimous consent that we rescind all action back to that point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would feel that that would be probably the thing to do or to expunge it and possibly vote on whether the motion to expunge from the record or rescind would be better in this case? The Chair is not quite clear.

SWEENEY: Possibly "expunge" is correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then take another vote on the particular amendment or just to have it read into the record differently?

SWEENEY: I think it is probably better to expunge it up to the point where the roll call is called again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for about one minute while we confer with the Chairman of the Rules Committee.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I withdraw that previous motion that I made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney asks unanimous consent that she withdraw the previous motion she made. If there is no objection the previous motion is withdrawn. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we rescind our action on the amendment on line 20, page 2 which called to strike the words "amended or".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent that we rescind the action taken on line 20 which deletes the words "amended or". Now the reason she is asking that is that after this wrong total was reported to the Convention, another amendment was offered. The only other amendment we acted upon Saturday evening was offered to strike the words "amended or". Now, actually, that was all stricken in the previous amendment except that the majority was read as having been 27 nays instead of having been 27 ayes. So in adopting Mrs. Sweeney's unanimous consent amendment we would have then reverted back to the point where the Chair could correct the announcement that was made as to the vote on the previous amendment Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: That would not rescind the vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: This particular motion would rescind the vote on the amendment that followed that but not the original vote. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the action has been rescinded relative to striking the words "amended or" relative to that amendment. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Now Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we expunge from the record the President's announcement of the vote on the amendment which would have stricken all of the words on line 20 after the word "governor", which is the amendment that is in question now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent that we expunge from the record that part of the record wherein the President announced the vote on the particular amendment that we are now considering or that we are back to. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I think Mrs. Sweeney should include in it line 21 -- she just said after the word "governor" in line 20.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, in the particular motion that Mrs. Sweeney made she was referring not to the amendment that we are back to now but to the amendment that followed that which did, as the Chair remembers it, only include those words "amended on line 20. But we have rescinded our action on that. Now we are back to the original announcement of the vote. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. Robertson I think is right. When she wanted to expunge the record she only made reference to line 20, but she meant also line 21.

SWEENEY: Yes, I just said that everything beyond the word "governor" on line 20, which would take on into line 21, the balance of the sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then the motion will stand as corrected, if there is no objection. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I will object only for clarification. It occurs to me that if we expunge all this matter from the record after having rescinded, what meaning does that give our action? Does it show in the journal this morning?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was what the Chair felt too, Mr. Riley, that the only thing we are expunging from the record is the announcement of the Chair as to what the voting result was and not anything with relation to lines 20 and 21 in this particular motion.

SWEENEY: That is right. I was just sort of clarifying my statement. I just wanted to expunge that part that says, "that the motion failed".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If we expunge this from the record then, it would be in order for the Chair to state that the result of the vote was 27 ayes and 25 nays. That would be the effect of the adoption of Mrs. Sweeney's unanimous consent request. It would then put the Chair in the position of being able to announce the correct vote. Does everyone have that clear? Is there objection to the motion to expunge from the record? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I object. It would appear to me, Mr. President, that if you are going to expunge that portion from the record, then you should expunge any reference to the amendment that followed, because actually it was clear out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We rescinded the action.

DOOGAN: It will show on the journal that you rescinded, so if you expunge the announcement of the vote as it was announced in error, then you should go on into the journal and it says that you rescinded your action and it would be kind of confusing would it not?

RILEY: Mr. President, that is what I am thinking of. The journal today I think speaks for itself.

SWEENEY: We have an objection. We have no motion before us. I suggest Mr. Riley start from scratch.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move?

SWEENEY: No, I don't move, so we don't have anything before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney withdraws her unanimous consent request. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, if we may defer this, perhaps a few of us might get together at the first opportunity and consider various aspects of it from that point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Sergeant at arms has informed the Chair that when he went to get the blackboard that someone was there to get the blackboard to take it back to where it had originally been borrowed from, saying that they needed it again, but they left it. The engineer left it there and went back to find out how urgently it was needed, so that is still up in the air as far as the blackboard is concerned. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: If two of us can be excused we could go up and get the information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That seems that it might be considerable length of time, and with us having this question and motion hanging here it might be best to take up the subject we are on first. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that to expunge from Saturday's record the Chair's erroneous announcement covering the vote under consideration and show the corrected announcement to reflect the vote, that we expunge all further reference in Saturday's journal to any remaining portions of that sentence since at that time there was no remainder.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Riley's motion. Did the Chief Clerk get the motion?

RILEY: I have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Riley's unanimous consent request? If there is no objection, it is so ordered, and that matter is all deleted up to the point where the amendment had been voted upon by the Convention. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I would like to make a further motion and ask unanimous consent that the time for reconsideration be extended on that particular vote which was announced erroneously to the first Convention day following recess with the requirement, of course, that if reconsideration is desired that notice must be given today, this for the reason that --

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair first had better announce the vote. The Chair will announce the result of the vote. The result was 27 ayes and 25 nays, the result of the vote on the amendment and therefore the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Now, Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Because of the possibility that those on the prevailing side were unaware of the fact that they were on the prevailing side and vice versa, it is possible someone has been denied the opportunity to reconsider who might otherwise have given notice that day. For that reason I ask that the rules be suspended and that anyone disposed to reconsider be allowed to give notice today and that reconsideration come up on the first day following recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Riley's request? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I want more information. If so much time has elapsed on so many amendments, and I would like to have that particular roll call vote result read, if that is in order, by the Chief Clerk so that I may be able to recall exactly who voted how.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment and then the vote by "ayes" and "nays" on the particular amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 20, page 2, strike all matter after the word on line 20 and strike line 21." (The clerk read the "ayes" and "nays".)

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think that if the roll call had been announced correctly this particular day I would have changed my vote in order to be on the prevailing side. Now can that still be done?

R. RIVERS: Mr. Riley has asked that the period for reconsideration be kept open now in view of this change, but it can only be by someone who voted on the prevailing side.

COOPER: Point of order. Does a man have to change his vote before the announcement is made?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. It would take someone who voted "aye" to serve notice of a reconsideration, if there is one. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I will renew my motion and ask unanimous consent, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There was no objection to it as the Chair remembers it, to the unanimous consent request. So if anyone who voted "aye" wishes to reconsider that vote he may do so at any time before we adjourn today. Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: In view of the discussion, we have consumed a great deal of time of this Convention expressing our own individual ideas in regard to this amendment. Now the Committee, in view of what has transpired, so many amendments to our report, the Committee met during the recess and we have about come to the conclusion that we can agree on a proposed amendment that might prevent a lot of discussion on other amendments and the question involving Section 4. First, we thought we would ask for a continuation of this after the recess, holding our same right on the calendar to be heard and not losing our right as it has been set. I think if we proceed, Mr. Davis might throw some solution on this. I think we have virtually agreed and met the objections. I think we can arrive at some conclusion and save time and finish this report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean that during the dinner recess you can come together? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: We did during the recess. A number of those who have been pro and con on this proposition met, and I think that it is possible some of us who are interested in getting this bill through, can during the noon recess, if we are given a little time, come up with an amendment that will properly resolve the differences suggested by those who are opposing the matter, so instead of putting it over until after our recess

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking that it be held over until after our noon recess?

TAYLOR: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Committee Proposal No. 3 will be held for consideration until after the noon recess. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, there is one thing hanging fire that will prevent any final work in connection with this and that is Mr. McNealy's motion for reconsideration. I think we ought to take that up before noon recess. It won't affect what the Committee is going to try to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I move and ask unanimous consent that my reconsideration of last Saturday be voted upon at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves that his reconsideration be acted upon at this time. The motion in itself opens the proposed amendment to debate. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Just to be consistent with the rule. I would ask unanimous consent that it may be allowed. It has been encountered before, as you recall.

MCLAUGHLIN: Could the question be fully stated prior to debate so we will know?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do our rules say it is not debatable, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: It has to be under the suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then if there is no objection, it may be open to debate. Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, may the full question be stated so the delegates will know what it is about?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: I didn't bring it down but I think it was the one changing fifteen per cent to ten.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment that changed fifteen per cent of the voters to read "ten per cent of the number of votes."

CHIEF CLERK: No, it was to change "eight" to "fifteen".

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it was changing "fifteen" to "ten".

TAYLOR: It was changed to "fifteen" and upon my amendment which carried it was reduced to "ten per cent". The question now is whether the ten per cent is going to remain or whether it goes back up to fifteen per cent. I think we have had sufficient argument on this. I think I have pointed out several times, and others too, that due to our geographical circumstances that fifteen per cent would possibly be an undue burden upon the people who wanted to launch an initiative proposition and that ten per cent would be more in line with the proportion of the voters in the other states, some of them as low as five per cent and a great many eight per cent, and the fact that eight per cent seems to be the prevailing percentage in a great many of the states, that to practically double that would place, as I say, an undue burden upon the voters, and I feel that since the majority of the Convention yesterday felt that ten per cent was the proper amount, I believe that we should retain that figure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I won't take up time in debate on this. When we had it at fifteen per cent it removed largely any objections that I had, and several others that I talked to, it removed our objection to the initiative system because we felt it would not be misused. I think possibly I am going to vote to retain the fifteen per cent but possibly somewhere between ten and fifteen per cent would be common ground. I feel that ten per cent, however, is too low, and that the bill then, and with one or two other proposed amendments as to the dates of holding election, would make this one of the finest bills in the Convention. If we cut the requirement down too low it will not do us any particular good.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I think if you hold that to where Mr. McNealy moves it, it removes the possibility of the law ever functioning. It is too high. Nineteen states have it averaged under eight per cent. We had one of our main parts taken out by the delegate on my left here and it threw it back to protect the legislature. The lady will have to stand responsible to the people for that and answer that question, why they took it away from the people. Now when you go into a bill before the legislature, and its vital corporations have a lobby which goes in and protects those corporations, the people do not have a lobby and cannot go down and work and defend their bills. I am for holding that at not one point above ten per cent. If you do, the law is practically unworkable, and I am on the side of the people and I am going to stay on the side of the people, and they are not going to take the laws away from the people too far. This initiative and referendum is important. It is a wholesome law, and the people should have it. And the amendments shoved in here have surprised me, and I am surprised at the people that would do that, attack a law of the people as viciously as they have and made it so difficult to work. I think the law should be workable. We should take up the pattern after the nineteen states who have adopted them. I believe that men of good will toward the initiative and referendum by the people will keep that at ten per cent because they have no chance, the people have no chance to go down and lobby. They have not the money or the ability to do it; while big corporations can and others can go down and lobby and take care of themselves. I hope I never have to talk on this again.

BUACKALEW: I was going to suggest (this is no reflection on Colonel Marston) I was going to suggest that we get a record, "Battle Hymn of the Republic and we'll play it at this time. According to Delegate Marston anybody who votes for fifteen per cent are against the people. I am going to vote for fifteen per cent and I think I am protecting the people. I think I am protecting the people from a costly machine that is going to bog down and perhaps might even destroy the State of Alaska. Sometimes I think some of the delegates think maybe we ought to abolish the legislature and do everything by initiative. That would be one way to do it, and it might work. I am going to vote for fifteen per cent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I was going to talk on much the same vein, so I'll be brief. I wish to point out that the delegates who supported most of these motions, amendments to the proposed article, do so because they think they are protecting the interests of the people, and I would like further to say that the motion made by the lady at Delegate Marston's left was concurred in by the majority of the Convention. I am one of the majority and I'll support it along with her.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: It seems to me one feature we have not considered in this percentage deal is the number that it is the percentage of. We are comparing a number of states that perhaps have several million voters. One per cent of that vote would be equivalent to fifteen per cent of our Alaskan vote. It does not seem to me that the argument holds just because nineteen other states' average is eight per cent that that is a valid reason for setting our figure at that percentage, because we are dealing with an entirely different figure. Fifteen per cent when Alaska gets several million people would certainly not be a good figure, but until we reach that time and I would think we should hold it at fifteen per cent, and when we have another Constitutional Convention if Alaska has three or four million people, then we would naturally lower it, but until that time I think it should remain somewhere between ten and fifteen per cent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, along that line I might point out that the states when they adopted their initiative and referendum in their constitutions many of them, seventeen states, had less population than Alaska has at this time. We have seen no drastic abuse with the safeguards we have in this act. I also want to point out that regardless of the thinness of our population, now requiring signatures from two-thirds of the districts would require that our people at a minimum cover an area of approximately 300,000 square miles, which is somewhat about three times of the area of the average state, which is in the neighborhood of 80,000 square miles. We have placed handicaps here in the matter of getting signatures so great that when the fifteen or even a lesser figure, I feel we have robbed the initiative and referendum of a good deal of its usefulness. I think ten should be an absolute maximum, and I feel also that it could well go below that and not be abused but a useful instrument in the hands of the voting populace.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I do not concur that ten per cent is an absolute maximum. The percentage of people initiating an initiative or referendum on the fifteen per cent basis, based on the last general election, would be 2.12 per cent of the total population in Alaska. That is based on a figure of estimated population of 180,000. I have those figures from Mr. George Rogers who has served here as a consultant. The ten per cent would mean that seven-tenths of one per cent of the people, the total population of Alaska, could bring about legislation through an initiative or referendum, and I believe that the small percentage of people that could affect the over-all population should be at least 2.12 per cent, the fifteen per cent required.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall fifteen per cent be changed to read ten per cent?"

TAYLOR: I think you put that wrong. The vote passed and put it to ten per cent. Now Mr. McNealy is trying to get it changed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That brings us back to the original question, Mr. Taylor. The question is to the delegates, Shall we change 'fifteen per cent' to read 'ten per cent'?" Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Coghill, Collins, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Nays: 23 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, V. Fischer, Gray, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - H. Fischer, Hellenthal, McCutcheon, Nerland, Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 23 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has carried and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask for a point of information, if I may. I am sorry to have to revert to this, but I did not have clearly in my mind. The matter was when we expunged the record and we subsequently adopted by unanimous consent an agreement whereby a person could move for reconsideration by announcing it today and following the recess -- I wonder what the Rules Committee had suggested, if anything, on the matter of announcing a motion to rescind the action?

RILEY: Mr. President, it is my memory that we have done nothing on that matter to rescind. Are you speaking of a prospective rescinding?

HURLEY: I wish to move to rescind the action and the difference between the two-thirds and the majority would be the difference on whether I announce it.

RILEY: I believe you would have no problem by filing notice today, it would automatically carry over to the next Convention day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Hurley, and if you serve notice, a notice to rescind the action today, it would be on the next Convention day it could be rescinded by a majority vote.

HURLEY: Would it be proper at this time to give such notice?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be proper I think. Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I would like to have a little information on that. Is it necessary to give notice?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you wish to have it rescinded by less than a two-thirds majority vote.

PERATROVICH: Is that our own rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, that is Robert's Rules. It is not mentioned in our own rules as the Chair recalls it. It is the Chair's recollection that it is not mentioned in our own rules. Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I was under the impression, Mr. Chairman, that the only time you give notice of such a motion is on a reconsideration. If it is rescinding it seems to me we have to act on it now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, Robert's Rules says on the motion to rescind also that you can take up the action right then, and it takes a two-thirds majority vote. If there is previous notice given, it takes a majority vote, much the same as notice of reconsideration, except on the notice of reconsideration, you don't necessarily wipe out the action taken. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I was not so worried about the two-thirds vote. I understand they are going to reconsider the whole situation, and it may be that it would take care of the whole situation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You can make that motion any time before we adjourn if you so choose to do so. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I move now that we recess until 1:30 today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m. Is there objection? Objection is heard. There is nothing before us. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I am wondering if we can't go on to the discussion by the Apportionment Committee at this time and just finish that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That might take hours.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers seconds Mr. Davis's motion to recess until 1:30 today. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I have a committee announcement. May I make it at this time? The Local Government Committee will meet at 1:15 upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Local Government Committee will meet upstairs at 1:15 this afternoon. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I would like to call a meeting of the delegates who are going to remain in Fairbanks, immediately following adjournment, in the gallery to discuss for just a few minutes our plans.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell announces a meeting of the delegates who are going to remain in Fairbanks in the gallery immediately following adjournment. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Your Committee on Administration would like to meet in the regular committee room at 1 o'clock with the President of the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The President will meet with the Committee of the Administration Committee at 1 o'clock if he can. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Saturday there was referred to the proposed letter of Delegate Marston to the recommendation of the Rules Committee, but we have not received the letter yet. I would ask our Chairman if he would hold a meeting on that letter immediately following the recess at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross, is it your wish to hold such a meeting?

CROSS: Yes, I would like to call a meeting immediately after recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Resolutions Committee immediately upon recess. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: This might be the last opportunity, but the hearings in Juneau, the Committee going back to Juneau, we will probably hold our meeting on the airplane ride, and we will be sure to conduct the meeting on a high plane.

AWES: Is there a meeting of the chairmen today?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, not today. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I wanted to ask Mr. Riley if it is his intention to hold a regular meeting of the Rules Committee on recess?

RILEY: It would be my thought that the Rules Committee will set the next day's calendar perhaps that morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The next day's calendar will be set upon the return from the hearings recess. Mr. Barr.

BARR: It seemed that several committees want to meet briefly during the noon hour, so I move for recess until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have a motion before the Convention to recess until 1:30 this afternoon, Mr. Barr.

DAVIS: I will have no objection to changing it to 2 o'clock if that is what the group wants.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection then, the original motion shall be that the Convention stand at recess until 2 p.m. Those in favor of the Convention standing at recess until 2 o'clock this afternoon will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, your Committee on Administration met during the lunch hour and there were several problems that were brought up. One of them is the problem of having someone here or at the message center during the time of recess. For the information of all delegates, if they do need any of the committee proposals or individual proposals, any material that is here at the Convention Hall, they are to address their requests by wire or phone or letter to the Convention Hall, the secretariat at the Convention Hall, and they will receive attention to the matters which they are requesting. Another one of the matters that was brought up before the matter of Committee on Administration was the clearing of personal effects from the tables on the plenary session floor. This door cannot be locked and probably during the 15-day recess the University staff might wish to use this hall for certain activities, and it will be open to the public. So, therefore, if you will pile all of the stuff that you wish to leave here at Convention Hall, the Sergeant at Arms and the messengers and secretariat will remove personal effects to the Committee room upstairs and lock it up. Upon reconvening after recess the material will be back in the places on your desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of information. When Mr. Coghill says personal effects, does he mean our working papers?

COGHILL: That is what I refer to, your own working material.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair notes that in the gallery is a group of Fairbanks High School students. We are happy to have you with us, and we hope you enjoy the afternoon session. Mr. Davis, did you have something to bring before the Convention?

DAVIS: I think, Mr. President, the other day Mr. Rivers filed a proposed amendment to a portion of Committee Proposal No. 3. That amendment was proposed by Mr. Rivers, Mr. Hellenthal, Mr. Smith, Mr. Sundborg and myself, and we would now like to have that matter considered, if it is the pleasure of the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Convention relating to the particular amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal, Smith, Davis and Ralph Rivers? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I want to call attention to the fact that the mimeographed copy of that proposed amendment is on the desk of each delegate. It pertains to the last half of Section 4 of Proposal No. 3. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 9. beginning with the word 'laws', to 17 ending with the word 'sure' should be stricken and the following substituted: "Laws proposed by the initiative shall be submitted to the voters by ballot title at the first statewide election which occurs more than one hundred twenty (120) days after adjournment of the legislative session following the filing of the initiative petition, unless the legislature at said session shall have enacted substantially the same measure. Questions on referendum shall also be submitted to the voters by ballot title at the first statewide election occurring more than one hundred twenty (120) days after adjournment of the legislature which passed the law being referred."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Convention? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President. I move the adoption of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment.

DAVIS: I second the motion. I would like to point out that the effect of the proposed amendment would be to do away with the special elections for initiative or referendum matters, putting the matter on the ballot at the next statewide election whether it be a primary election, a general election or a statewide or a special election called for another purpose, which we feel would have the effect of doing away with the tremendous cost that could occur by reason of numerous special elections on these matters. We think that the amendment, if adopted, will keep the essence of the Committee's proposal but clear it up a little bit so that the election procedure would be more workable. I also would like to suggest that there is some wording in the proposed amendment that possibly is surplus, but we felt that rather than getting into an argument here over words that we would put it in the way we have it and let Style and Drafting go to work on clearing the language up to put it in better form than it now is.

KILCHER: I would like to address a question to Mr. Davis.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Could you tell me what maximum time should elapse between the start of an initiative that is not acted upon voluntarily then by the next legislature? If I understand correctly, 120 days after such legislature, when would the next general election be? How much time could possibly elapse at worst?

DAVIS: Mr. Kilcher, I have not read to this time the setup on state elections as proposed by the Legislative Committee. But assuming, for the purpose of argument, that they have elections only every two years, it would be possible, the longest time that would be possible would be two years less 180 days. On the other hand, if the primary elections are held, or if special elections are held for some other reason, it would be much sooner. I don't believe I can answer it any closer than that at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Could somebody from the Legislative Committee give me the additional information on what they have proposed so I will know where I stand on this amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, could you answer that question?

SWEENEY: I don't believe there will be an election more often than once every two years, but special elections can be called by the governor or by the representatives themselves if they wish to initiate the procedure, and the poll would be made by the Legislative Council, but it is possible that with an annual session that the matter under consideration might be taken care of at an interim session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, since I sat down Mr. Nolan has pointed out something to me that might partially answer this thing. The primary election is held substantially ahead of the general election. It works out to be a little bit over a year I believe and after the legislature adjourns, so if you would take 180 days off of that and it would probably be something under a year before the next election would occur.

KILCHER: In any case?

DAVIS: It would appear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If there is no other discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal, Mr. Ralph Rivers, Mr. Smith. Mr. Davis and Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 3?

ROBERTSON: Are we now through Section 4?

PRESIDENT EGAN: At this moment we are, Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask a question relative to Section 5, Mr. President, which one or two other members have the same doubt in their minds. It was amended I understand by changing line 24 so to put a comma after "public funds" and then inserting "in lieu of" instead of "or", so it reads "of earmarking of revenues", and what I am interested in knowing is whether or not that means now that funds can't be earmarked by either initiative or referendum, and I know some of the other delegates wonder if that is the thought of the language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It probably was not the thought. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I put it in and what I had in mind was that earmarking the funds could not be done by initiative. That is what I had in mind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I have on the Chief Clerk's desk an amendment to Section 5, which I think will clear this matter up. The sentence still leaves me in some doubt, and I would ask that it be read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, Section 5, line 22-25, strike the first sentence and insert in lieu thereof: 'The initiative and referendum may not be used as a means of earmarking revenues, for making or defeating appropriations of public funds, or for local or special legislation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure? Mr. White.

WHITE: I move the adoption of the amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment is open for discussion. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, the reason for the amendment -- I discussed the matter with the Committee, and I understood their intent to be that the initiative could not be used as a means of initiating or earmarking of funds. As written now it is a little unclear, and it might possibly be construed to mean it could not be used as a means of defeating earmarking of funds, which I think is not the intent of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I concur in what Mr. White has said.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I ask for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent.

DAVIS: I don't want to object, but I would like to have it read again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, Section 5, lines 22-25, strike the first sentence and insert in lieu thereof: 'The initiative and referendum may not be used as a means of earmarking revenues, for making or defeating appropriations of public funds, or for local or special legislation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I guess it would be in the nature of a question that I have. The thought occurs to me, and I could be wrong, but it is serious if I am right. Could that be interpreted as eliminating the possibility for an initiative on a local level, that last phrase there?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Not in my mind, but I have not changed the Committee's wording in that respect at all. I would refer you to the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I might say that it was not the intent of the Committee to prohibit the right of initiative to any local government. The Committee intent was to prevent the initiation of legislation affecting local areas wherein the people of the state as a whole would be allowed to vote on issues which concerned only one locality.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Without even consulting with the Committee on Local Government, that word "local and special legislation" has a specific meaning in the law and in fact it is the expressed intent of the local government article that no local laws, that is laws of special and local effect shall be passed, but only general laws applicable to all communities shall be passed, so it does not confuse or contradict any article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Ralph Rivers asked unanimous consent for the adoption of this amendment. Mr. Barr?

BARR: I would like to ask Mr. White a question on this amendment. Maybe it is an oversight. The wording of this amendment says that the initiative shall not be used for earmarking funds", but it does not say anything about being used for defeating earmarking of funds which the original amendment did contain.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I feel this is entirely in keeping with my usual moment, and I would like to see the initiative left open for the defeating of earmarking of funds. I understand that was the Committee's intent. I just wanted to clear it up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Going back to the original Committee, what they mean by "special legislation". It occurs to me that all legislation is special. I wonder if the Committee could report on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: The same explanation that Mr. McLaughlin just gave on the other local legislation, answers the question. It is something that has already been established by law and defines exactly what we mean. Perhaps I had better let Mr. McLaughlin explain the legal definition, but it is used in every article on this subject and it is specific.

MCLAUGHLIN: The best example of special legislation which is usually prohibitive is one you find in our Organic Act prohibiting the legislature from granting a divorce, which was a common device many years ago. When I say special legislation I mean the granting of a specific divorce would be special legislation. Special legislation would also constitute the direct incorporation by legislative act of a corporation with special privileges. All of that is special legislation which is here denominated.

R. RIVERS: As a member of the Judiciary Committee, I would like to amplify what Mr. McLaughlin said, and this goes back to experience in the legislature when I was down there. If the legislature should appropriate 50,000 dollars for a school house at North Pole, that would not be legal because that is an appropriation of a general public fund for a specific locality.

If the legislature appropriates 50,000 dollars for the use of schools of the cities of the third class, and that money to be allotted by the Commissioner of Education as the need may arise, then any city of the third class, which happens to be North Pole, could get the 50,000 dollars. If you would say that if we had jurisdiction over fish traps that a particular fish trap at a certain cove shall be abolished or closed, as an act of the legislature, that would be special, but if you say all fish traps of a certain classification shall be closed, that is general legislation. So local and special laws have that particular meaning in all the books in all the constitutions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection at this time to Mr. Ralph Rivers' unanimous consent request for the adoption of the proposed amendment? If there is no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: Mr. President, in the gallery is Mr. R. H. Derr, and at this time I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that he be given the privilege of the floor. He is Manager of the Fairbanks Chamber of Commerce.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Wien moves and asks unanimous consent that Mr. Derr be granted the privilege of the floor. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I object for a minute -- just as long as he does not tell that lemon-squeezing story. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Derr, we are happy to have you with us. Will you come forward. (Applause)

MR. R. H. DERR: Members of this wonderful body. I would like to use a few minutes of your time for something very precious, a Christmas message. There is an old story of a new, rich American being shown about the Vatican gallery in Rome wherein is hung some of the most famous art treasures of the world. This American had never learned to appreciate or thrill to the messages of great paintings or thrill to their innate wonders. So he listened in bored silence to the ecstasies of his guide and finally said, "You may be right, but I would not give you ten dollars for a whole carload of them." The guide replied, "Sir, you are not judging these masterpieces, they are judging you." Of the last generation a very famous preacher was reading a criticism of one of his sermons by a newspaper reporter who did not understand and couldn't comprehend, and when he was asked to refute it he said, "I am sorry -- I could give him a careful statement of the case and a reasonable interpretation of the facts, but I could not give him the ability to understand it." It has been the world's misfortune, not the Christ child's, that it has never fully comprehended the light He brought into the world. If the world fully understood the vastness of His message we would be rid of woe, bloodshed, hardship, strife, poverty, ignorance, and hunger. Every hearer listening to a thoughtful sermon is judged by that sermon; listening to great music, he is judged by the music; and reading a serious book, he is judged by the book. In a sense it can be said that any person is in a dangerous position who exposes himself to the light. He will forever after be judged by that light. To man and man alone has been given the power to become. The hummingbird that built a nest outside of your window last spring achieved something of a wonder. Rare indeed would be the man who could match it either in delicacy or in craftsmanship, but the important thing to note is that from time to time it builds other nests but never shows any improvement, either in its concept of what a nest should be or in its skill as a builder, but man made in the image of God is never satisfied with his building. He begins with a mud hut along a far stream or a cave far up in the mountains, and goes on from there to build either a cathedral of St. John the Divine or a Taj Mahal. Every generation of man undertakes to improve upon the works of its father. Every class graduating from our universities has been exposed to a little more light than his predecessor. You may be wondering how this is a Christmas message. So do we wonder how old is Christmas. Viewed as a festival it is only 1600 years old. Most of us would say that Christmas being the birthday of Jesus Christ dates from about 4 B.C. But its beginning may be calculated as one calculates the beginning of this new constitution you are writing. You might say it was on the day this building was first entered for organization, or the date you will affix your names to the completed document, or going further back, we may justifiably say that this constitution began when the first Alaskans felt the need for a new form of government. So it is with the age of Christmas. As a festival of worship it was entered in the fourth century, but the cornerstone was laid in a manger at Bethlehem and back at Bethlehem were the dreams of a Deliverer cherished by the people of Israel. Even the Greek philosopher, Plato, expected it when he wrote, "Only by way of some divine disclosure coming in to life from outside it could men find the way of truth and freedom." So to you wonderful people who would write a constitution for Alaska, who by your earnestness of purpose, your ability to labor hard and long, and above all, your willingness to being exposed to the light have endeared yourselves to the people of Fairbanks and all Alaska. We wish you a most enjoyable Christmas season, and may you return imbued with those gifts from the manger -- love beyond our love, wisdom beyond our wisdom, and a power beyond our power. The hinge of history is on the stable door at Bethlehem. God bless all of you. A merry Christmas and from your labors here will come a happy new year for all Alaska. Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I yield to Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I have an amendment here to the Rivers' amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as offered by Mr. Londborg.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, page 2, after the word 'signatures' in the next to the last sentence of the Rivers amendment, delete the rest of the sentence and substitute the following:" It's that mimeographed sheet, is that right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease for a moment. It would be to Section 4, Mr. Londborg. Was it an amendment offered on Saturday? The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'signatures' in the next to the last sentence of the Rivers amendment, delete the rest of the sentence and substitute the following: 'from each of two thirds of the election districts of the state with signatures equaling not less than 3% of the number of voters casting ballots for governor in each such district in the preceding general election at which a governor was elected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Convention as regards Mr. Londborg's amendment?

LONDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment.

WHITE: I object.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion.

R. RIVERS: May I have the privilege of the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Ralph Rivers, you may have the privilege of the floor.

R. RIVERS: I have discussed this with Mr. Collins and other members of the Committee that brought in Proposal No. 3 and various others of us who have worked on it, and we have thought that it would be well to keep Proposal No. 3 in second reading for all purposes until after the recess. This amendment presently introduced by Mr. Londborg is controversial. There are many members who should get away from here by about 3:30 this afternoon. There will be expressions from the public on the initiative and the referendum, and so my thought is that it would be well now if we agreed to leave the whole proposal in second reading for all purposes until after the recess and do no more with it until then.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

R. RIVERS: I won't make a motion. That is my thought.

DOOGAN: Question. I would like to ask Mr. Rivers, does that include the recall section too?

R. RIVERS: That would include the whole proposal in second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Under his question of privilege, Mr. Rivers suggested perhaps that Proposal No. 3 remain in second reading until after the recess. Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: Amplifying, Mr. Rivers, at the recess, the Committee in conjunction with other members that were interested in the passing of this report agreed and thought it advisable to hold the matter over until after the recess in second reading and prevent it from getting into any controversial discussion here this afternoon when many other things have to be taken up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have, Mr. Collins, at this time a motion to adopt an amendment to this particular proposal. Are you requesting the author of that proposal or asking him whether or not he would accede to COLLINS: I thought it was agreed on that we would do that and give them a chance after the recess and have a chance to come in then and give them time to think it over until we reconvene. I thought it was generally understood.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing before us except the particular motion relative to this amendment. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I may be out of order. I had thought it was in the process of being withdrawn. I'll defer to Mr. Londborg.

HURLEY: I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion has been seconded. Mr. Johnson seconded Mr. Londborg's motion.

RILEY: It has been seconded? May I have the floor on a matter of personal privilege for a moment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Riley, you may have the floor on question of personal privilege.

RILEY: I should like to serve notice of reconsideration of the vote cast on the controversial matter this morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Pardon, Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I should like to serve notice of reconsideration concerning the matter of the vote cast on the controversial matter this morning, relating back to last Saturday's journal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You don't do that under a motion of personal privilege.

RILEY: I am just indicating now I am going to do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: If it is in order I would like to move that consideration of Mr. Londborg's amendment be postponed until January 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease for a moment or two. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I rise to a point of order. I think Mr. Smith's proposal is out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, whether it is out of order or not, the Chair was going to ask Mr. Smith if he would hold his motion inasmuch as Mr. Londborg has signified an intent of withdrawing the original motion for the time being.

TAYLOR: I would like to make a motion that it be laid on the table.

COGHILL: I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, did you offer a motion then?

TAYLOR: Yes, to lay on the table.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the motion as offered by Mr. Londborg be laid on the table?" All those in favor of saying the particular motion on the table will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your point of information?

V. FISCHER: If the amendment is laid on the table, does that lay the proposal on the table?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, just that particular amendment, Mr. Fischer, not the proposal with it.

JOHNSON: Point of information, Mr. President. Mr. President, is the motion to lay on the table subject to an amendment to lay it on the table for a specific time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Not at this time, Mr. Johnson, it is not. The Chief Clerk will please call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 24 - Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Emberg, Gray, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 25 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, McNees, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Walsh, White.

Absent: 6 - H. Fischer, Hellenthal, McCutcheon, Nerland, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 24 yeas, 25 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has failed, and we still have the motion before us.

LONDBORG: Did you have a motion to hold it all over in second reading? If you don't have, I would like to have the privilege of withdrawing the motion for amendment until later date, and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn for submission at a later date. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: At this time I would like to serve notice that I should like to reconsider my vote. I recall that I was on the prevailing side considering a period after the word "governor" on line 20, page 2.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley serves notice that he will move a reconsideration of his vote on that particular amendment. The notice by Mr. Riley has the effect of keeping, will keep Proposal No. 3 before us until after the hearings' recess. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I thought that we agreed by unanimous consent to expunge the Chair's erroneous ruling. I assume that is the matter that Mr. Riley is now referring to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That question was expunged, Mr. Robertson, but it is not the particular thing that Mr. Riley is referring to. Later than that, if the Chair recalls correctly, Mr. Riley asked unanimous consent that a motion to reconsider on that particular vote would be in order during the balance of today, and he has now served his notice that he will reconsider.

RILEY: For Mr. Robertson's information, there is no motivation in my earlier request of this morning. This was not anticipated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of information. Would a motion to forego any further action at this time on Proposal No. 3 and to have Proposal No. 3 retained in second reading for all purposes until after the recess call for a suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair -- whether that would call for a suspension of the rules or not -- a suspension of the rules, if you made such a motion now, yes, Mr. Rivers.

SWEENEY: I thought it could be settled by just moving for adjournment until January 3 at 9 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would settle it, Mrs. Sweeney. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: We have allotted time now for a briefing on this political subdivision question, and I move then that we forego any further action on Proposal No. 3 and go into the briefing on political subdivisions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention forego any further action on Committee Proposal No. 3 until after the hearings' recess and that Committee Proposal No. 3 be placed before the Convention in its present form for all purposes on January 4, 1956. Is there objection? Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: I wanted to ask a question. When he says "present form", does that mean the Chief Clerk will have a copy of Proposal No. 3 as it now stands with the amendments on our desk when we come back? Is that what Mr. Rivers means?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers was probably hoping it would be possible to have all those amendments incorporated in some manner that it would be easier for delegates to see just what the present standing is. Whether that would be possible under the circumstances, with the help being pressed at this time

CHIEF CLERK: We can do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will be possible and that is the way it will be.

BUCKALEW: I was going to say that unless it was in that form - I don't think there is any delegate including the people on the Committee who know what form this Proposal No. 3 is in now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair agrees with you Mr. Buckalew. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: In order to keep in conformity, I move and ask unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until January 4, 1956.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at its hearings' recess until January 4, 1956, at 9 a.m. Is there objection? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I object. Mr. President, I would like to hear this briefing we have been talking about.

COGHILL: I so move.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, it is not debatable.

COGHILL: May I make a statement?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection Mr. Coghill may for information purposes make a statement.

COGHILL: The reason that we are not endeavoring to explain this map is because the schedule has not been mimeographed yet, and before it can be intelligently explained, each delegate should have the schedule before him.

JOHNSON: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m., January 1956?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

ARMSTRONG: Before you announce the results, Mr. President, there is a matter I think that if we are going to adjourn that we as a body should give our vote of thanks and our greetings to those who have worked so faithfully in the boiler room and the secretariat. I think we all understand the tremendous job that they have done. They have been very capable, and I think we should be in position to extend that thanks to them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Let the record show that.

BUCKALEW: Do you think we could let the record show that the body feels the same way about Mr. President?

MARSTON: Mr. President, the body feels the same way about the City of Fairbanks.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order so the Chief Clerk can announce the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 28 - Awes, Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Emberg, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 21 - Armstrong, Bosweil, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Kilcher, Lee, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, White.

Absent: 6 - H. Fischer, Hellenthal. McCutcheon, Nerland, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 28 yeas, 21 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the Convention stands adjourned until 9 a.m. on January 4, 1956.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 4, 1956

FORTY-THIRD DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning the Reverend Alwyn Reiners, of St. George's in the Arctic, the Episcopal Church of Kotzebue. The Reverend Reiners will bring our daily invocation.

REVEREND REINERS: Let us pray. Almighty God who has given us this good land for our heritage, we humbly beseech that we may always prove ourselves a people mindful of Thy favor and glad to do Thy will. Bless our land with honorable industry, sound learning and pure manners. Save us from pride and arrogance and from every evil way. Defend our liberties and fashion into one united people the multitudes brought here out of many kindreds and tongues. Imbue with the spirit of wisdom those to whom in Thy name we entrust the authority of government that there may be justice and peace at home and that through obedience to Thy law we may show forth Thy praise among the nations of the earth. In the time of prosperity fill our hearts with thankfulness and in the day of trouble suffer not our trust in Thee to fail. All which we ask through Jesus Christ our Lord.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: Seven absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. The President would like to state that the President regrets the delay. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications? Are there reports of standing committees?

AWES: Shortly before we recessed the Committee proposal of the Bill of Rights Committee was passed out. I am now told that some of those were incomplete, that in some of those proposals the article on Health, Welfare and Education was omitted and that the two minority reports were omitted. So if the members want to check their reports and if they are incomplete, they can turn them in and get others.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Miss Awes. Are there other reports of committee chairmen? If not, are there reports of select committees? Mr. Gray?

GRAY: I imagine the report on the hearings are select committees. Is that correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It might be considered that, at this time, if there is no objection, Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Well, at this time according to our rules of organization on the public hearings, a brief report shall be submitted to the Convention by each committee not later than January 6. The report of the Juneau Committee has been mimeographed and is on your desk. The importance of the Juneau Committee, as I see it, was the very very good reception we received from the people and the increased interest in the Juneau area. I am bringing it to everybody's mind here and for the reason that the Convention is getting credit for doing a good job all the way through -- that is what we heard. The most important thing I found in the hearings is the faith that the Convention has from the people. We covered three public meetings, one Chamber of Commerce meeting, two service club meetings and one high school civic's class between the Juneau delegation. The public hearings were divided into two parts. The first part was a report to the people. That is where the committee members explained their article or particular phase, because we had to assume that the people in the remote areas, (that's Juneau) did not know maybe what had been going on for the past five weeks. We picked the problem up at the beginning and carried the Convention to them in detail, and one of the basic troubles we had, and I think probably every person who held a hearing, the proposals came out just in the last minute, and the people did not have an opportunity to read them. We brought down many spare proposals but were far shy of requests for proposals, and it brought us to reading to the people what the proposals were. That was a matter of public education and it was the initial explanation of the constitutional articles. Part two was a formal hearing. In part one, as we explained it, members of the audience arose at any time and asked questions for clarification or to state their opinions which was really the heart of our meetings in Juneau. Part two, the formal hearing, was definitely called and any member or any person who wished to appear officially before the panel and state his opinion or state his ideas was given the opportunity, and those who wished to file a statement for the official records were invited to do so. Those people, you will find, are listed in our report. The importance of the public hearing to ourselves was the same as the board of equalization in your tax structure. They were given an opportunity, the important thing is that they were given an opportunity to express their opinions to the Convention, and whether they utilized it or not it was well to have it. But the main thing was they did have the opportunity, that was the important thing. The fact that the report of the Juneau committee is on your desk this morning is due to the very fine work of the Secretary of our panel, Dora Sweeney. I thank you, Dora, very much.

SWEENEY: Just one more thing. The statements which are reported in the mimeographed report are on file with the Secretary of the Convention, and so those who wish to see them may see them. I also received a statement on Proposal No. 6, the Local Government, and this is not mentioned in that report, and I will turn it over now to Mr. Rosswog, and those who are interested in Local Government can contact him.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, similarly as a result of the Juneau hearing I have received a statement from Don Dafoe with respect to the article on the executive, and I have turned that over to Mr. Victor Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other reports of committee chairmen of those committees? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. President, I can report for the hearings in Cordova. At the Chamber of Commerce luncheon on the 27th there were about 15 members present and I gave a little talk on apportionment. They were very satisfied but of course, the boundary questions came up there. On the Thursday of that week I did set a hearing but we were stormed out and so our hearing was held on January 1 in the evening of New Year's day. They had a very fine turnout of about 53 people and a lively discussion. I have some suggestions that I will pass on to different committees, and I too found a lot of interest, more interest than I had thought and more people that are following this Convention and stated that they were very pleased with our work here but of course they had suggestions on the different articles.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no further reports, the reports can be made at a later time. Are there any other reports? Mr. Boswell?

BOSWELL: Hearings were held here in Fairbanks on the 29th in the Federal District Courtroom between 2 and 5 p.m. in the afternoon and 7:30 and 10:00 in the evening. We had about 60 to 70 in the afternoon and about 50 in the evening. We had 16 delegates on our panel, four of whom were committee chairmen, so we were able to give the people a good explanation of everything. Our agenda covered the eleven substantive parts of the constitution, and we were able to get through all of them in two sessions, five in the afternoon and the balance in the evening. Two hours of the afternoon session were broadcast by KFRB and KFAR soundscribed two hours for later broadcast. We have complete minutes of these hearings, and they will be on file shortly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Fischer.

H. FISCHER: Mr. President, the report of the Anchorage delegation is being typed at this time, but I would like to say that other than the hearings there were many television programs at which all of the Anchorage delegates took part. I think perhaps they were the most informative for the greatest number of people because of the snowbound conditions of Anchorage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, the Valdez committee hearings were held on the 27th of December. They were well attended and it was held more or less on an informal basis, letting the people ask questions. We attempted to explain the proposals from the time that the Convention started up to the work that we are intending to do, and we had very lively discussion, a very good group of interested people, and I think the committee hearings were very well received.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Harris. Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: Mr. President, I was unable to arrange for a public meeting in Sitka. However, I did appear before the Chamber of Commerce luncheon on the 30th. In view of the fact we were not able to have a public hearing I arranged for a radio broadcast, and I was on that for 45 minutes and explained to the general public the procedure we had developed, and gave them a resume of the Tennessee Plan. It was very well received. I was complimented the following day. It kindled their interest so I am happy to report that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, Mr. McNees really should make this report but I have been communicating with him in deaf and dumb language and he has indicated beyond doubt that he prefers to have me make it, probably in deaf and dumb language also. I held the hearings at Nome with Mr. McNees's very able assistance on the 28th of December. We also had the coldest day of the year for the occasion, but I am very proud to state that I think we had the largest meeting held anywhere in Alaska because we had over one hundred out and a great deal of interest was shown. Participation, audience participation in discussion was had, and we had another very fortunate occurrence -- we had the services of a stenotypist who donated them and a complete report will be available for all members of the Convention in time. The principal things that I learned myself from this meeting were that Nome does not like the apportionment plan and that they are against the 19-year-old voting age, and they are not too happy with the judiciary article. I suppose that everybody who conducted hearings found similar differences of opinion, but like the others who have reported, I am happy to say that the people of Nome are distinctly interested in what we are doing over here and have a very friendly attitude toward the Convention as a whole. I have found no criticism of the action of committee members. They did realize that they probably were not in full accord with some of the things we were doing, but it might be necessary to give a little here and take a little there. I also spoke at a full meeting of the Chamber of Commerce and Mr. McNees could not get there, having been chasing around over the stratosphere for two or three days attempting to land, and likewise at a full meeting of the Rotary Club. By that time I had expected them to be tired of hearing of the Constitutional Convention, but I found that on the contrary, the interest increased rather than diminished as we held the different meetings. If the weather had been a little better we would have tried for some afternoon meetings also, but we were advised against that by the Chamber of Commerce which sponsored our public hearing, and that is another thing I felt very pleased over was the interest in the Chamber in taking charge of and sponsoring the hearings so that everybody could come. We had a mixed audience. We had many Eskimos, and they participated in the discussion quite as much as the whites did and showed as much interest in the Constitutional Convention. We had at least one member who was against most everything, but the rest of them limited their criticisms to one or two articles as written. I think it is most unfortunate that we could not have had the proposals, the committee proposals a little earlier. I had not got them myself in time to feel too proficient in discussing them. I do want to take off my hat in deaf and dumb language to Mr. McNees who explained the apportionment article very ably and carried his audience right along with him in his discussion of it and for the rest of the time we just sort of took turns handling it. I envied the ones who had 14 to hold a hearing, because when it falls upon two or one, as in the case of Mr. Rosswog and some of the others, it becomes sometimes a little frustrating.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mrs. Hermann. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I would like to follow through with the hearings out along the Bering Sea. I was able to hold our hearing at Unalakleet according to the proposed schedule, and I found the village was very much interested in the Convention. In fact, the first thing they asked me, several of the people, "Are we going to have a report on the Convention?" And I talked with the mayor of the village and told him it was up to them if they really wanted one, and they made arrangements for the school building and the time set and put out the posters and everything else, and I was very pleased to go over there on a stormy night and find over 50 out, a good ten per cent of the population. I do have copies of the statements that were taken down by one of the ladies, and I will try to get them in duplicate form to pass around as soon as possible. The local government proposal, of course, took a great deal of the time. They were very much interested in that, to find out just what they would have as far as local government. We spent some time on the Tennessee Plan and someone suggested even taking a little vote whether they should back such a plan, which they did, and then, of course, being a Native village, the Marston plan was brought up and discussed and as a whole I felt that they were really interested in the Convention. Then, on Thursday evening, two days later, I was able to be at White Mountain and there we had over a third of the people out on very short notice. A third of the people makes about 35 or 40 in that village, and a very inspiring group to talk to and to hear from. I don't have a set of the statements from that particular group. The person that I thought was taking the statements did not take down as complete as we had at Unalakleet. Then yesterday I had the privilege of being at the Chamber of Commerce meeting in Nome and found that there was not much that could be added to the information that Mrs. Hermann and Mr. McNees had already given them, but they did of course have a chance to think over some things and raise a few questions, and I am sure that the comments in all three places will be profitable to the various committees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Londborg. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I too, addressed a meeting on the 22nd, Thursday afternoon, a comparatively small group, but those people that were there were much interested. The subjects they were most interested in were local government and apportionment. The apportionment plan they were very happy with. The local government plan they could not seem to understand too well, probably due to the fact I was not able to explain it too well. I did considerable study to it myself before attempting to explain it, but I find it appears to me even a little vague. They were afraid that by approving it they would not know exactly what they were approving. Another very definite expression they did make was on the voting age. Of the 35 or 40 people who were at the meeting there were only five who felt that the age should be changed from 21. The rest very definitely stated they disapproved. I can make up a written report and will.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Hinckel. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Following the hearing in Nome I went on into the little Arctic village of Kotzebue but we were unable to arrange a general public hearing for the town, but I did speak informally to three different groups there, one of seven, one of nine and another group of fourteen, as well as talking to many, many individuals up there. I did go in there for an afternoon and evening and spent three days trying to get out. Kotzebue will study the proposals. I left two complete sets there, one with Edith Bullock, Representative, and another with Erv Wheeler, the President of the Chamber of Commerce in Kotzebue. They will have formal meetings in Kotzebue sometime during this week and will forward any comments or opinions to this group. I will also make a written report of those hearings at a later date.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The local hearing at Nenana took place on December 27, in the Civic Center. Our attendance was not too good. However, we did have a roundtable discussion. We had ten sets of proposals on hand and all of them were placed throughout the community after the meeting, and we did go through all of the 13 proposals and discussed, and I tried to explain each one of them. The comments were brought out mostly on the judiciary. They were very much opposed to the judicial plan. They opposed my personal stand on the 18-year-old voting. They thought that the 21 voting age was logical. They too had a terrific time trying to understand the local government proposal, and we spent quite a lot of time on that. They approved the apportionment plan 100 per cent. They thought it a very fine plan. They knew we would have to give concession to larger populated areas but at least now are assured of some sort of representation. Also, on the bill of rights, we went over that quite thoroughly and it brought some comment. One thing that was brought out in our hearing that the people were quite concerned in having some sort of a guarantee or insurance in our constitution on insurance or social funds, such as the retirement fund or the unemployment security fund, so it cannot be tampered with by each legislature. That was the extent of our Nenana hearing. However, afterwards, why it seemed that every day there were three or four in the store asking or talking about certain parts of proposals, and I had to keep my committee proposal booklet with me at all times because of the comments. I have sent committee proposal packets to McGrath, Aniak, Bethel, Holy Cross, Galena, Ruby, Tanana and Fort Yukon, and I am hoping to hear from them. I have had a letter from Bethel and they are very impressed with the apportionment portion of the Constitutional Convention. However, I think that the thing we have accomplished by our public hearings is the fact that we are letting the public in on our procedure and letting them have their say before it goes into final reading.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of personal privilege. I would like to direct a question to Mr. Coghill through the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I would like to have Mr. Coghill amplify a little bit his remark about tampering with the legislation when they were discussing in regard to unemployment security. I don't quite understand why the legislature should be denied the privilege of tampering with it. I don't quite understand that.

COGHILL: Maybe I misquoted myself on that. The thing they were concerned in was the fact that if they pay into a fund that the fund will be solvent, such as the Teachers' Retirement Fund, or any other retirement fund that might come up or like, some folks down there have been working for four or five years and now that they are unemployed and they apply for unemployment insurance, why they found that all they get is a yellow slip stating the Employment Security owes them that money.

However, the money is forthcoming at some other time. It was a local problem and they were just asking for some sort of assurance in the constitution that retirement or social benefit funds will be safeguarded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I hesitated quite awhile, did not know whether it was best to make my report first or last, but actually the people with whom I talked in Ketchikan were like all other people in Alaska intensely interested in the work done. I don't think that I heard any criticism, even of any committee proposal. I did have several constructive suggestions made and I will in turn pass them on to the various committees. I will say that the city government in Ketchikan, the City Manager and the City Council approved the local government plan in principle. They made a few suggestions for changes, but they were very thoroughly in accord with the plan, and I think that held all the way through all of the committee proposals. There were naturally things that certain people did not like just as there are things I do not like in some proposals, but I think they will accept the document as a whole rather than to attempt to simply concentrate on what they do not like, and aside from the poor attendance at the hearings, I was very well pleased with the reception of the work of the Convention in Ketchikan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you. Mr. Smith. Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I wish to report in regard to the Bristol Bay hearing. I had a meeting on an informal basis at the Dillingham High School on the evening of the 27th. The weather conditions were very poor at the time, and that was not too good for the attendance. The hearings were informal which constituted mostly a discussion of the various articles. The predominant interest shown there was in the local government division and the resources article, and in the apportionment article. I tried to hold hearings at Naknek on the way back but I was weather bound at King Salmon at the air base there for two days. The roads were not open and there were no small planes flying at the time, so I had to mail out copies of the proposals to the Naknek Village. I have some comments that were made that I can pass along to the proper committees at another time in regard to suggestions. There was a great deal of interest in Bristol Bay in what this Convention is doing and their work, and the thing I would like to report here at this time is the fact that the apportionment article was very well received. They feel that under the divisions of that article that Bristol Bay and lower Kuskokwim will gain representation they have not had in the past from their own areas, and they are pleased.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you Mr. Emberg. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. President, my hearing was a complete failure. It was advertised before I left here for December 23 on Friday. It happened it was a terrific storm. The men were working on the boat and on the school plays and I had advertising on the radio four or five times and there was not a single soul who showed up except myself, but I did talk to a number of people, I suppose 25 or 30. The interest is mild but for the most part I would say 95 per cent are satisfied with the work that is going on here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you Mr. Metcalf. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I will first, what I might forget later, that my main interest in going home to Kenai Peninsula was to find out what the general atmosphere, if it had changed during my absence and if it had changed, how it had changed, and I am glad to report that what cynicism had existed and the negative critical attitude that had existed during the fall months had to a large degree disappeared, and there was a general willingness to face facts and issues objectively and that was a heartening experience in itself. Now as to the meetings themselves, they have been partly successful. The most successful part was a radio interview I had in Homer on the 23rd. The Editor of the Kenai Pioneer has also a little radio station there, and he had gathered a lot of questions from people previously and had nicely worked them into an interview which was a good form to approach the people with, and then there was a meeting scheduled the 29th, but that meeting was not very well attended because it was in the worst snow storm. Actually, only three cars were moving at that time, mine and two others, but a dozen or so other people had walked there. But these people were some of the more interested ones and probably could have been those who would have spoken any way, even if there had been a hundred around, so they represented different groups of interest of people, and we had a very lively discussion in spite of the small number present. And I was hard pressed in several respects and it was very satisfactory in my opinion. To mention specific items, the voting age of 19-year-olds was generally accepted and great satisfaction was also felt about the apportionment plan as it is. Local government I tried to explain as good as possible and with some success, I hope, and they would like to hear more about it however. One of the greatest points of interest was the initiative and referendum. As a matter of fact, one of the more articulate persons in the lower Kenai Peninsula, a critical man, yet fair and analytical in his mind, has been identified in the past as being opposed to statehood on very logical grounds. He has expressed his willingness to consider the constitution as a whole. He had several conditions, one of which was a very good initiative and referendum article, which he has used from his home state of Wisconsin. Also, I am seemingly patting myself on the back, because the same person and some of the others later on in informal statements have also expressed themselves very much in favor of initiative and referendum in what they call a democratic safeguard but are also in favor of one of my delegate proposals, that automatic convention clause which I will later on bring in as the existing committee proposal. As a whole the venture down there I think was rather successful. I talked to larger groups of people in informal meetings in various places, community halls and street corners and other places where one most likely finds people during the Christmas holidays, and we had a lot of lively discussion, and I expect to hear from the people down there off and on during the next four or five weeks.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Kilcher. Mr. King.

KING: Mr. President, we held our public hearing on the night of the 30th. That date, of course, was due to the fact that Delegate Riley attended the hearings in Juneau and we delayed the hearing until the 30th until Mr. Riley could attend the hearing at Haines. We were glad to have him. There was a lot of interest there and we went through all the proposals and explained them, and Mr. Riley left a complete set of the proposals at the school and they are going to do the same as here. The school is going to study them and work them into their class studies. I think the hearing was a success and it does not stop at the hearing. The fact is that during the holidays we had a lot of opportunity to talk to these people prior to the hearing and they would come in daily into our place and we would be able to talk to them, and I think that there is a great deal of interest, and I don't think there is any doubt that they are well pleased with what is going on here. I wired the Mayor of Skagway on two different occasions and on the night of the hearing he called and said he was unable to attend. The weather in that country was bad, too. He was very well pleased with the Convention here. He said that he had no comments to make other than he was very pleased. I will also have a written report to make.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. King. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I simply rise to repeat practically what has been said and have reports of hearings at Palmer and Wasilla which I will place on the file with the Clerk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Hurley. Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. Chairman, I held a hearing in Petersburg on the 28th. We had between 50 and 60 people in attendance, and it was very well received. A great deal of interest was shown. A number of questions were asked and discussed. I found considerable opposition to the present apportionment plan and also in the language regarding fisheries in the resources plan. I will write out the minutes and they will be on file.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Lee. Does anyone else have a report to make on the hearings? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May we have a 15-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess for 15 minutes. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. The Convention will stand at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there any other hearings reports to be presented at this time? If not, we will -- Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I don't have a hearing report. I was a member of Mr. Boswell's committee here but I thought maybe the Convention would like to hear that I was invited to address two different high school classes on the Convention and how we were writing the constitution, and I was amazed at the interest the students took and the variety of questions they asked. Of course, I did not get much of an expression of opinion from the students. However, since they were all young people I did want to find out how they felt about the voting age. So I explained arguments for and against the younger people voting. Of course, you know I am for the older people, but I gave them an equal number of arguments on both sides because I wanted to hear an impartial opinion. It came out this way. We voted on it by ages with the raising of hands and both classes had a very low vote for the 18-year-olds. One class I remember there were two votes out of 30 for 18-year-olds, and the other was a like number -- two or three, something like that. On the 19-year-olds one class had a majority for the 19-year-olds but a very small majority over the 20-year-olds. The other class was about four to one for the 20-year-olds. I will say that the 21-year-olds also lost by about two or three. I would say generally they favored the 20-year-olds.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Barr. Mr. White.

WHITE: The Committee on reading the journal has no report today and would call attention to the delegates to the fact that journals for the 36th, 37th, 39th, 40th, and 42nd days are on the desk for which we will ask approval for tomorrow. I would like to also call attention to the mimeographed correction sheets that have been placed on the desk for the journals of the first, second, third and fourth days, the approval which we will ask for tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the reading of the journals then will be held over until tomorrow. Are there any proposals to be introduced at this time? Are there any motions or resolutions? Unfinished business? Under unfinished business we are down to the article on the initiative and referendum. The Chair has been wondering if whether or not it would be better to recess now and allow all the delegates to come up to date in their minds as to just where we were when we left off on the initiative and referendum article. It could be taken up immediately following this recess at the afternoon session, and everyone would have had an opportunity to refresh themselves as to just where we were on that subject. The Chair would entertain some discussion on that. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 1:30, at that time to take up the initiative and referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before the Chair would put any question, the Chair would like to request all the committee chairmen to meet at a luncheon meeting at 12:30 in the luncheon room upstairs. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I would like to call a meeting of the Rules Committee immediately upon recess in the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Rules Committee immediately upon recess in the rear of the gallery. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: The Local Government Committee will meet at 11:30 in the committee room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Local Government Committee will meet at 11:30 in the committee room. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Engrossment and Enrollment immediately upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Engrossment and Enrollment Committee will meet immediately upon recess. Mrs. Fischer.

H. FISCHER: Mr. President, the Anchorage delegation that attended the hearings in Anchorage will meet immediately following recess in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Anchorage delegation that attended the hearings will meet immediately following recess in the gallery. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: The Committee on Ordinances will meet immediately upon the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Ordinances will meet immediately upon recess. Are there any other announcements to be made by the committees at this time? If not, Mr. Marston moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the Convention is at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to bring to the attention of the Convention the fact that we have with us once again our Secretary who had departed from us because of illness. We are happy to have him back with us. We are also happy to have his wife with us. As you know, the Secretary became a married man during the course of his recuperation. (Laughter)(Applause)

HERMANN: Is that the kind of heart trouble he had?

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask unanimous consent to revert to committee announcements.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: There will be a meeting of the Resources Committee this evening and we will meet in the lobby of the Northward Building at 7:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Resources Committee in the lobby of the Northward Building at 7:30 this evening. Miss Awes.

AWES: The Bill of Rights Committee will meet at 7:30 this evening at Apartment 1009 in the Polaris Building.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Bill of Rights Committee at 7:30 in Apartment 1009 in the Polaris Building. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: The Local Government Committee will meet at Apartment 19 in the Alaskan Inn at 8 o'clock this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Local Government Committee at 8 o'clock this evening in Apartment 19 of the Alaskan Inn. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Your Committee on Administration will meet immediately following adjournment this afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Administration will meet immediately upon adjournment this afternoon. Are there other committee announcements? Are there other reports of committees. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to make a report for the Committee of Committee Chairmen. At the luncheon meeting today the committee chairmen discussed the problem of a working schedule for the next few days and for the balance of the Convention, and it is the recommendation of the committee chairmen that we have no evening sessions of the Convention as a whole until next Monday and that starting Monday evening we have committee sessions, Convention session nightly as long as may be necessary. The suggestion of the committee chairmen is that for the balance of this week that sessions of the Convention be held from 9 o'clock in the morning until 12 o'clock noon and that we do not run past 12 o'clock for the reason there is only one reporter here representing newspapers of the Territory and she must file daily by 12:20, and if we continue to go, part of the session will not be recorded as it takes a little time to prepare the file before she puts it in the teletype, and then that we take a full hour and one-half for lunch and permit the Rules Committee to meet as it probably will frequently, in order to settle the calendar; to permit the committee chairmen to meet at 12:30 as they have been doing, and to permit other consultation among delegates and among committees. Then that we meet in the afternoon starting at 1:30 o'clock and continue those meetings through this week until the hour of 5:40 daily, and the hour of 5:40 was recommended because there is a bus leaving here at 5:50, and it is thought that there will be fewer personal cars coming out to the Convention now that the weather is colder and now that we are going to be running later hours. The purpose of suggesting that there be no night sessions of the plenary sessions this week is to permit the committees to consider some of the suggestions made during recess at evening meetings, and the committee chairmen hope that the committees can pretty well finish their consideration of those suggestions and of other business which may be before them by Sunday, so that starting Monday we can have plenary sessions nightly. The committee chairmen would also like to suggest that individual delegates in making social engagements for evenings from now on make them only tentatively, as for example, "I will be glad to come unless we have a Convention session for that night". Looking over the body of work, it looks like we're going to have a good many evening sessions. The committee chairmen also suggest that we limit the number of recesses during the day and that we have recognized recesses of 15 minutes each at 10:30 and 3:30 daily. Mr. President, I am not sure whether I should put this in the form of a motion that we follow these suggestions or whether we just discuss it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, it might be proper in this case to ask if there is any discussion on the particular suggestions. There has been no motion but it is important enough that if there is discussion that perhaps a motion should be held until we allow, it is a little departure from the rules but if you have any suggestions to make to the suggestions as made by Mr. Sundborg, we will be pleased to hear from the floor at this time. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I was wondering if the Committee had any consideration for the present bus setup. It might be quite possible that we will not get a bus out of Fairbanks until after 9 o'clock. Have you looked into that at all, George?

SUNDBORG: Do you mean a bus leaving for town?

GRAY: No, a bus leaving the town for the University. As I understand it, with the opening of the new school, it has made a problem of bringing all the youngsters in at one time when they used to have a split shift, and there is an extreme shortage of buses, and I believe that is what happened this morning. We had to wait for a school bus to discharge its pupils before it was available to ourselves. I don't doubt that that same circumstance may happen tomorrow too, and unless some clear-cut arrangement was made by the bus company, I am just sure you are not going to have a bus available until after 9 o'clock in the morning, and I think that should be considered by the committee.

SUNDBORG: That was not discussed in the meeting of committee chairmen, and I think most of us did not know about that problem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, the Committee on Administration is going to have a meeting at the time of adjournment this afternoon. That subject could be discussed and we could find out from the bus company just what the situation is and everyone could be advised of it prior to morning.

SUNDBORG: Perhaps our motion, if we entertain one here, should be only until the hours we met daily instead of the hour when we begin.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I was informed by the bus driver this morning that the reason he was late was that he had two buses in the ditch and he had to send a bus out and pull them out. He did not think that would happen again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Administration Committee will determine just exactly what the bus schedule will be for the delegates. Mr. White.

WHITE: I would like to inquire if the committee chairmen discussed a Sunday afternoon meeting?

SUNDBORG: It was not discussed at our meeting today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It did not come up at the meeting. Is there discussion relative to a Sunday afternoon meeting this weekend? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: At the committee meeting it was the intention of the chairmen that this period up until we come into session Monday morning would be for having committee work completed. Apparently several of the committees are revamping their proposals and it was my understanding that that and only that was the purpose of having the night sessions withheld or long session withheld until that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Coghill. Does that answer your question, Mr. White, inasmuch as it might be that some of the committees, Resources, or Executive or Local Government, it might be necessary for them to have a meeting on Sunday afternoon. That particular time was not discussed, but Mr. Coghill was correct in stating that that was the reason for the recommendation.

WHITE: The unspoken intention was then to leave Sunday afternoon open for further disposition?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. Is there further discussion? Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: If there is no further discussion, Mr. President, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that, for the balance of this week, plenary sessions be held daily from 9 o'clock in the morning until 12 noon, that we recess from 12 to 1:30 for luncheon, then resume from 1:30 to 5:40 p.m., and that recesses of 15 minutes each be held at 10:30 a.m. and 3:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I question the right of the assembly to adopt such a course of action by a motion since a motion to adjourn or a motion to recess is always in order, and I think we might express approval of the committee's report and leave it as a matter of personal responsibility not to call for recesses at other times, but I question the wisdom of putting it in a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Perhaps, Mrs. Hermann, you have a good point there. It might be just that there be a general understanding among the delegates, if there is not a majority objection that the suggestions as contained in the statement of Mr. Sundborg, be the manner in which the Convention will conduct its meetings until next Monday morning. Is there objection to that? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I object. The basis of my objection is that, or I should say a different approach would be that I approve of the whole plan of the committee with the exception of Saturday afternoon this week. The various standing committees are going to be working on suggestions and sort of reappraising their situation after the public hearings. Style and Drafting has not gotten started yet and could possibly do some work on Saturday afternoon and a good many of these delegates have other arrangements in Fairbanks on Saturday afternoon, and by general understanding perhaps we can leave Saturday afternoon open for standing committee operations and other purposes. With that understanding I think we should all try to adhere to the schedule and then set up as vigorous a schedule as necessary for the ensuing weeks. I would like to ask a question of Mr. Sundborg, however. That is how the staff is going to carry through from 9 in the morning until 5:40 at night and then also night sessions and how can the stenotypist stand that kind of marathon, and how can the secretaries keep up with all the journals, and why should we start night sessions next week?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, would you be acceptable to a two minute recess at this time? If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill, could you answer the question of Mr. Ralph Rivers relative to the help problem?

COGHILL: On the stenotypist, just before the two-minute recess was declared, it was asked about, in concern to having so much time for the stenotypist and the clerical help and upstairs, well, we have arrangements made to get another stenotypist to relieve the present one and also I don't believe that the boiler room will have to be fully staffed in the evening. I think they can catch up on their work during the day. As far as help, I think it has no bearing on how late we meet in the evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I think there is something we are all conscious of, and I think if some investigation was made and that is the heating situation. If this cold weather keeps up, it is going to be disagreeable working here unless we come with our mukluks and our parkas and what have you. Now I have looked this thing over, and the windows all along the upper part there are windows that open inward. They are loose in there. I think the engineer in charge of this building, if he would have those weather-stripped and shut off this door back here, it might be possible that those radiators would furnish enough heat. I think possibly the President can feel that cold air on the back of his neck. I think if we have the weather stripping there we will get away from some of this cold, because if it gets any colder, it is going to get very disagreeable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I believe the Chairman of the Committee on Administration will take this up this afternoon.

TAYLOR: I sure hope he does.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the suggestions as generally outlined by Mr. Sundborg then will be adopted as the general manner in which we will proceed until Monday morning with our meetings here. Are there any communications? Mr.

Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Before we leave that order of business on committees I would like to ask if the committee proposal on the Executive be recommitted to committee for some slight reconsideration due to the information received during the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the proposal of the Committee on the Executive will be rereferred to the Committee. Is there objection? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, this is not an objection but the Rules Committee met this morning and the calendar will shortly be published and will be distributed this afternoon reflecting all proposals that Rules had in its custody at that time. Now there may be other matters recommitted, but the thinking of the Rules Committee was that if the Convention could see the entire roster of work before it at this time, it could better budget its time. Now this is being recommitted to Executive and perhaps there will be others, but insofar as possible to arrange with the several committees, it would be the view of the Rules Committee that the calendar to be distributed this afternoon will be in force with the slight chance of some revision from time to time as seems necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That subject was brought up in the meeting of the committee chairmen, and it was more or less determined that by the time the Executive Committee, for instance, gets its proposal back on the calendar it would not have interfered with the calendar as it will be submitted by the Rules Committee, and the same will go for the other two committees at least that indicated that they might want to have their proposals back for some slight revision, so it will not interfere so far as we know with the calendar that will be presented by the Rules Committee. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, at the last meeting held prior to the Christmas holiday Proposal No. 14 was not technically presented to the Convention for first reading, and I ask at this time that it be so presented and considered in first reading so that the technical objection can be met. It had not been mimeographed at the time when presentations were to be made, so I ask unanimous consent that Proposal No. 14 be considered in first reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Committee Proposal No. 14 may be considered before us in first reading at this time. Is there objection? The Chief Clerk will read the proposal for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 14, by the Committee on Suffrage, Elections and Apportionment, LEGISLATIVE APPORTIONMENT."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. President, I am not talking on this subject, but I want to request for the Local Government Committee that Proposal No. 6 be returned to the Committee for further revision, and I would also like to ask at this time that if any of the delegates have suggestions that they received at their hearings for the Local Government Committee, if possible, would have them in writing by tomorrow and if not possible, we would like to hear from them in our meetings.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to having Committee Proposal No. 6, the Proposal on Local Government, returned to the Committee for revision? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the proposal is ordered returned to the Committee. The Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading or summarizing of communications.

SECRETARY: Mr. President, there is a telegram from Mr. Adlai E. Stevenson conveying his best wishes to the Convention and another one expressing his disappointment in not being able to accept our invitation to speak at our Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The President would at this time like to state that he was at home when this wire came from Mr. Stevenson and took it upon himself to send Mr. Stevenson a message thanking him for the message and telling him we would be very happy to have him address the Convention if he could find time to do so, and this second telegram was the message in which he explained it would be impossible to come before us.

SECRETARY: Mr. President, there is a letter from Senator Warren G. Magnuson of the United States Senate commending the Convention on the effort it is undertaking. A letter from Colonel Ray J. Will of the Eielson Air Force Base thanking the Convention for its resolution expressing sympathy in the tragedy at Eielson Field.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And the donations of the delegates towards that tragedy.

SECRETARY: A communication from citizens of the Bristol Bay area wishing to point out that the area should be fully represented in any future legislative body in the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication from Bristol Bay mentions their desire for proper apportionment. The communications can be filed. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I think the communications should be repeated in the journal, particularly the one from the Eielson people, so they can be in our own private journals instead of just on file.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you like to have the communications summarized in the journal?

HERMANN: I would really like to have them spread on the journal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann asks unanimous consent that the communications that have just been read and summarized be spread upon the pages of the journal. Is there objection? Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I object tentatively. I would like to ask the Secretary if they are very lengthy communications.

SECRETARY: No longer than a single spaced page letter. There are four or five.

SUNDBORG: I don't object then.

NORDALE: I object. We have not done that with the other communications. I don't see why when they are on file in the Secretary's office it is necessary. However, I would like to move that the telegram from Adlai Stevenson be spread on the record.

HERMANN: There still is objection. I so move and if I get a second I will explain why they should be in the journal.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, my principal reason in asking they be spread upon the journal was so we would get the telegrams from Mr. Stevenson on our official records and also the letter from Senator Magnuson, and I think since all of us contributed to the fund for Eielson relief that we should have that on the record also. I am not sure but what we should go back and have a copy of our own letter in the record in that case. I don't insist on that. I don't think that will unduly encumber the record. Those are matters of somewhat important historical interest in the handling of the Convention's business.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair believes that it might be well to state that so far as the Chair feels that if a letter came from Vice President Nixon or President Eisenhower or any other outstanding figure should be received that it should receive the same consideration of being at least read before the Convention and possibly placed in the journal. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Point of information. Are the telegrams sent by Vice President Nixon spread upon the journal in full in the beginning of the session?

PRESIDENT EGAN: So far as the Chair knows, they were. Did Vice President Nixon send a communication?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I am going to vote against the measure not because I don't appreciate the sentiment, but we have had many, many communications that were really worthy of being spread on the record, and we have not done so, and we are implying that these are more important than the previous ones. Tomorrow we are going to have some other ones. The very fact we have proceeded in this manner and have tried to maintain it a working journal, I believe we ought to follow the system we have used in the past 43 days and not change it at this time. It has nothing to do with the worthiness of the project, but I do believe we are setting up a criterion of shall it or shall it not go in that will have to be handled with every single communication to come before us, and it is going to be hard to call the points.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I tend to agree with those comments. I am particularly concerned with the inclusion of the communication from Bristol Bay. It might be a very worthy suggestion, but here is an outstanding breach of our past practice where we have had a good many suggestions made to us in various forms, either to the committee or the Convention as a whole and none of them to my knowledge have been spread upon the record. I particularly object to the inclusion of that one in the journal.

HELLENTHAL: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the communications be spread upon the pages of the journal?"

V. RIVERS: Has the Secretary read all the communications yet?

SECRETARY: There is one from the Attorney General.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The only other communication is a communication from the Attorney General giving an opinion as to the date we have to adjourn. That, the Chair felt should be read in its entirety in any event and possibly mimeographed for all the members of the Convention at a later date, but we did not come to that particular communication as yet. At the present time we are speaking of the communications that related to other things and the official business of the Convention. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I might say, Mr. President, that I think this is quite a line of demarcation on the type of communications we have had here, and many of them have been for the information of members of the group in regard to the work they are doing. I think they were very properly referred to committees, and it was not necessary they be considered by the body as a whole. But certainly I do feel that communications from any person of prominence in the country wishing us success and what not in the writing of a state constitution belong in a journal for their historic interest if for no other reason.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the communications be spread upon the pages of the journal?" Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: I request a roll call please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Would this mean now all the communications received now would be put on the journal or just starting now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion pertains to these particular communications before us at the present time, Mr. Marston. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following results:

Yeas: 17 - Cross, H. Fischer, Hermann, Hilscher, Knight, McCutcheon, McNees, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 32 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, White, Wien.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 32 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the motion has failed and the communications will not be spread upon the pages of the journal. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to suggest that if this matter of inclusion of certain communications is considered of sufficient importance by the Administration Committee, they might devise a method where at the end of the Convention, all of the communications could be included in a separate report which could be attached to the journals upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Administration Committee can take that matter under consideration. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I now move and ask unanimous consent that the Secretary read the communications in full.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves and asks unanimous consent that the Secretary read the communications in full. Is there objection?

METCALF: I object. We are taking too much time here, and we should get on with our business, at the rate of $10.00 per minute.

H. FISCHER: I second the motion.

SUNDBORG: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Secretary read the foregoing communications in full?" Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President. it seems to me we have one communication here from a man who has a good possibility of becoming the future President of the United States. It seems he would necessarily have something to say in regard not only to his wishes to us but perhaps in regard to his stand on statehood. It seems to me there is going to be other communications of like nature. In fact, I have a copy of one in my pocket now that will be gunning through the Convention shortly. It seems it would be a good thing to have them on record, and I think it is short-sighted and very thoughtless of this group not to have the communications of that type on the record in full in the journal and I notice that Delegate Hermann's position is definitely to get the communication in their entirety on the record because it could be a valuable implement to us in getting statehood or perhaps, keeping the support of a lot of statehood people in Congress and in the national administration at some future date.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I go along with Mr. Fischer's talk and Mr. Rivers', and Delegate Mildred Hermann's. I think that all the communications should be printed and we should have them. We shut them off here. Why should the outside world communicate with us? The only reason I would vote against your motion was that you only took part of it. If you take them all, I'll go right down the line with you and fight for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the communications be read in their entirety?" All those in favor of having the communications read in their entirety will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll'.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 31 - Awes, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Doogan,Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, McCutcheon, McNees, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 18 - Barr, Collins, Cross, Harris, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 31 yeas, 18 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has carried and the Secretary will please read the communications in full.

(At this time Secretary Stewart read in full the communications from Adlai E. Stevenson, Warren G. Magnuson, Colonel Ray J. Will, and petition from 22 residents of Bristol Bay.)

SECRETARY: The communication from the Attorney General, do you wish, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Proceed to read the communication from the Attorney General.

(The Secretary read the communication from the Attorney General.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do the delegates feel that it would be necessary to mimeograph copies of that decision or is it sufficiently clear to you just what the decision is without having copies mimeographed? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I wonder if the attached opinion of an earlier date did not state that we would in fact be entitled to meet until 10 o'clock of the 76th day, that is until the hour of the 76th day on which we started on the first day?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be the natural presumption, Mr. Sundborg. I believe that in a news article the Attorney General stated that but that would be the natural presumption. Mr. Ralph Rivers, I believe a decision by you stated that previously.

R. RIVERS: As I remember.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Secretary can read the opinion that was handed down in 1953.

(The Secretary read the 1953 opinion at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The time will have run out on this Convention at 10 o'clock a.m. on February 6. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I want to express my appreciation for having heard those letters. I got a lift out of them. I don't know whether the rest of you did or not, but I don't think we should ever decry the importance of getting a little inspiration into the journal.

R. RIVERS: I suggest that we are all clear on the subject matter of the Attorney General's letter and that it will be filed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the letter will be filed along with the other letters. We have before us now Committee Proposal No. 3 on the initiative, referendum and recall. It is the recollection of the Chair that we held over on the last day before we recessed, consideration of an action. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, in order to resume discussion on a point given considerable treatment when last we met, I move now to bring on my reconsideration, touching on the amendment of line 20, page 2.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moved, Mr. Doogan seconded the motion that the reconsideration of the matter that related to line 20, page 2, be before us at this time. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: At this point, Mr. President, I will ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that it be debatable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that this reconsideration motion be debatable. Is there objection? If there is no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Let me preface my remarks by stating that in serving notice on the last Convention day that I wished to reconsider this matter, but today I do not have in mind any particular discussion of it but had thought that it would be the most expeditious means of holding it open, bearing in mind that earlier that week, or previous week, more or less discussion had occurred as to holding anything deliberately in second reading. It was the final day before our recess and it seemed the simpler means of accomplishing the purpose of holding it open. At that time I had not given particular thought to the effect of the earlier amendment. You will all recall that this amendment was the one on which the vote was erroneously announced a day or two earlier. The effect of the matter as it stands now is that line 20 contains but three words, and I am referring to the original Article 3, if you have that one before you. I believe you all have a corrected copy before you and my reference to the corrected one would be on page 3, line 7, ending with the word "governor", but actually, to follow what I have in mind, reference should be made to the original Proposal No. 3 on page 2, line 20. After having served notice to reconsider, I gave this some thought to see if there were any substantive implications. Now as this article first hit the floor about three or four weeks ago, line 20 read, "by the governor nor amended or repealed by the legislature for a period of three years." This has to do with action which may be taken on an initiative measure once adopted by the people, following its adoption, what action may be taken by the governor or the legislature. Now, as all will recall, after the erroneous announcement of the vote on an amendment which proposed to end that sentence with the word "governor", the Convention continued consideration of that sentence and amended it so as to read "no law passed by the initiative may be vetoed by the governor nor may it be repealed by the legislature for a period of three years." The language prohibiting amendment by the legislature was stricken. The language remaining would allow the legislature to amend but would not allow the legislature to repeal an initiative measure for a period of three years. Later it was found that we had actually adopted the earlier amendment and had stricken all of that language after the word "governor". I have done a little checking as to the implications of leaving the matter as it stands now with a period after the word "governor" and find that if there is no language in the constitution regarding amendment or repeal of initiated laws that we are left in a state of uncertainty and that its meaning would be subject to construction in the courts. I find that 97 ALR 1046 states there is no general rule. It goes on to say that, "Courts are not agreed on the question whether in the absence of expressed constitutional or other provision prohibiting the amendment or repeal by the legislature of measures adopted by the people, such measures may be so amended or repealed. Most state constitutions do contain some provision for amendment and repeal or a prohibition against actions by the legislature. Silence in the constitution will mean that we will not know what powers, if any, the legislature will have with regard to initiated laws. The result would depend upon interpretation by the courts, and it is noted that the Washington and Oregon supreme courts have reached opposite results on this single question." Now I feel in pursuing this matter that if it is the wish of the entire Convention or a majority of the Convention to reopen the subject by favoring my motion to reconsider that we will then be faced with a two step process. If my motion should prevail, it will restore the language as it was originally, as it appears in print on your mimeographed original, and the second step would then be to consider whether further modification is desired in the language which has been restored. That language was modified, mistakenly the other day. It was modified to read, "nor may it be repealed by the legislature for a period of three years", leaving the door open, as I see it, for amendment by the legislature in the event runaway initiative measures proved a hazard to the state or to the state's solvency.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, if the Chair might ask a question here, were not the words may it be" inserted before this particular motion to change the rest of it was made?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

RILEY: It is my impression that that may have been the case. Now I would have to check with the Clerk on that.

CHIEF CLERK: That is right. It was prior to the one putting the period after "governor". That was taken several days before.

RILEY: In that event I stand corrected. It would not restore it to the original language but it would restore it to "nor may it be repealed". My own view in that event would be we might wish to still consider retention of the word "amended" or striking it as we did later that afternoon. I don't wish to get ahead of myself in this respect, but I do wish to state very clearly that if we feel that we are closing the door to legislative consideration of any sort, if we feel we are putting the matter up to the courts for interpretation, I think our only course is to reconsider our action taken, in short to support this motion, and then from that point to consider the following language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is actually at this time, "Shall the motion that was made" -- who made the motion for the adoption of the particular amendment?

RILEY: Mr. Hellenthal, as I recall.

HELLENTHAL: I don't think any mistakes were made in this matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, in order to clarify what is going on here, I believe you were not here the following day, but what happened was that in totaling the results of that vote on your particular amendment, on the official total it was written "27 nays and 25 yeas". Actually it was reported that way and the Chair stated the result as it appeared on the totals, but actually it was in reverse, and it was "27 yeas and 25 nays".

HELLENTHAL: Which amendment was it though? There were three amendments to that particular sentence?

CHIEF CLERK: It was "Strike all the words after 'governor' in line 20 and strike line 21." And that was announced as having failed, and so another amendment came up and on Monday they expunged the rest of it.

HELLENTHAL: The first amendment had passed so it was all stricken. Was not that same result accomplished in another method, regardless?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for two or three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The question is, "Shall all the words after the word 'governor' on lines 20 and 21 be stricken?" Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, the effect of my motion as you have just stated it, if my motion carries, will be to restore us to the position we were in before that deletion occurred and before the period was put after the word "governor". It will open the way for further attention to that language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are back once more to the vote to that particular amendment. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: We have no objection on that as long as the manifest intent of the body is preserved after all the maneuvering is over with, namely that when it all winds up that it will be impossible for the governor to veto a law passed by the initiative. It will be impossible for the legislature to repeal it for a period of three years, but it will be possible for the legislature to amend such a law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, point of information. Now to accomplish this result, a "no" vote will be necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A "no" vote would accomplish the result that has been spoken of here on the floor, that is if you are inclined to cast a "no" vote. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, if a "yes" vote carries, Mr. Riley has made the statement we would be exactly where we were before and then could amend it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, Mr. Riley, you might explain.

RILEY: Mr. President, I expect to vote "no" on this proposal in the hope that the negative side will prevail in order to open up the subject of further amendment of that language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If a "no" vote prevails, the way the Chair understands it then, the whole sentence will read, "No law passed by the initiative may be vetoed by the governor nor may it be amended or repealed by the legislature for a period of three years." That is what a "no" vote on this particular motion will do. If a "yes" vote prevails a period will be stricken after the word "governor" on line 20.

R. RIVERS: No -- put.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A period will be put. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I am straightened out from that standpoint. Then going back to Mr. Riley's statement -- if the "noes" carry we will be in the same position where we were the other day before we started amending except for one thing. If the body then does not approve the deletion of "amended in the original sentence you cannot again strike the remainder of the sentence after "governor". In other words, I am just throwing this out whether there is not a danger that the intent of the reconsideration would not be accomplished.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, the intent of the reconsideration would be to nullify the action taken in deleting the rest of that sentence. You are correct, and it would leave it as it is at the present time. No one else could offer a motion after that if the "noes" prevail to delete all the wording after "governor" again.

MCCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It could be amended in various ways but could not completely be deleted. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Did you not say if the "noes" prevail all will be deleted after the word "governor"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the "noes" prevail it leaves with the proposal all the words. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, maybe I am retroverting to my post November state of mind, but I am still not clear in my mind about what is going on here. Could we please hear the motion? It has been almost a half hour ago that we have heard it. I am told that "no" accomplishes this, "yes" accomplishes that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Here is the question. The question is, "Shall the words 'nor it be amended or repealed by the legislature for a period of three years', shall those words be deleted from the proposal?" That is the question that is before us at this time.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is everyone clear now what they are voting on? They are voting on the question, "Shall the words 'nor may it be amended or repealed by the legislature for a period of three years', shall these words be deleted from the proposal?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 9 - Barr, V. Fischer, Johnson, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog.

Nays: 39 - Awes, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 9 yeas, 39 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "noes" have it and so the amendment has not been adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: To follow up, Mr. President, Mr. Riley's purpose, I have prepared an amendment to Section 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers offers an amendment to Section 4. The Chief Clerk may read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 20, page 2, delete 'amended or' and on the last line of Section 4 after the word 'years' change the period to a comma and add 'but may be amended at any time'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you offering this as one amendment, Mr. Rivers? It is a related amendment?

R. RIVERS: They are two segments of the same amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure?

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this.

WHITE: I object.

R. RIVERS: I so move.

MCCUTCHEON: Second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Riley has pointed out that the right of the legislature to amend an initiated measure is not clear unless the constitution specifically authorizes the legislature to amend an initiated measure. The usual power of the legislature includes the power to amend. Oregon and Washington on the identical question have differed. One of those courts said that if you do not mention the power to amend an initiated measure, the legislature may not amend it. The other court says that if you don't mention amending an initiated measure that the legislature may amend it. Now we have the law before us, the division in the courts on this identical question, so we should be guided by this previous experience and keep our government out of court and make it perfectly clear when it is so easy to do by specifically saying that the legislature may amend at any time. We don't want to prohibit amendments, that is the reason for the first part in my motion. The first part is to delete the words "amended or" because that has to do with prohibitions imposed upon the legislature. So if we adopt this motion we will delete the words "amended or" and we would add the words "but may be amended at any time" at the very end of the sentence, and then the way it would read would be as follows, "No law passed by the initiative may be vetoed by the governor nor may it be repealed by the legislature for a period of three years but may be amended at any time."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: By way of an explanation of my objection, I had an amendment on the Secretary's desk at the same time which I will give in opposition to this amendment. My amendment would read, "Strike all the words after 'governor' and say 'but may be amended or repealed by the legislature'." The intent of that is that I believe mine will take us back to the intent of the body when we originally struck all the words after "governor". In other words, at the time we adopted that amendment it was our intention to allow amendment or repeal by the legislature. I think it has become clear to the proceedings here that it would be desirable to spell that out. I think we should spell it out but it was our intent when we passed the amendment before, to allow amendment or repeal by the legislature without any reference to three years. I voted for that amendment at the time. To be consistent I will vote against this one today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I do not personally favor an initiative or referendum of this type for the initiation of law. However, if we do adopt such an initiative then certainly we must put some particular date line on it to give the law a valid opportunity to be ascertained whether or not it is going to be a good law, and by putting a limitation on the legislature it will prohibit the legislature from probably repealing it immediately. I do not think the legislature should be prohibited from rectifying such mistakes as may develop in the law after it has been put to practical utility.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I agree with Mr. Rivers and Mr. McCutcheon, and it is true that the first amendment passed which would put the period after the word "governor", as Mr. White said, but in a very few minutes thereafter, this body decided they would let the legislature amend matters passed by the initiative within the time limit but they would not permit the repeal within the time limit, and I think that we should follow the most recent demonstration of the intent of this body rather than the earlier demonstration that Mr. White refers to, and for that reason I support Mr. Rivers' amendment and I agree wholeheartedly with Mr. McCutcheon that if we are going to have an initiative and referendum law let's make it a workable law.

KILCHER: I do not think it wise to refer to this body's intention after a mistaken poll there, that the intention is after this mistaken result has been announced, or any other intentions before Christmas should have any bearing at all upon this body's consideration now. We have been home to get new ideas. I have some. It has been brought to my forceful attention in my part of the country that the people were specifically dissatisfied with most of the intentions that were shown in the poll here on initiative and referendum, dissatisfaction with those who were outright opposed to it, dissatisfaction with the way it was weakened and dissatisfaction with the majority of the Convention's opinions before Christmas. I hope this very majority has changed now. I don't see where Mr. Rivers' amendment will essentially satisfy these people who have expressed dissatisfaction along the lines mentioned. I would like to be able to confer with Mr. Rivers or suggest an amendment to the amendment or have a chance at least that after we voted on this that should it be accepted, that we can amend it or possibly bring it up now, actually I still think it would be not a bad idea to consider it as a committee, but probably that would not hold.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you ask for a two- or three-minute recess to confer with Mr. Ralph Rivers?

KILCHER: I would like that very much.

MCLAUGHLIN: I might point out to you that we already have a statement of policy on the subject of recesses.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels that it did not pertain to recesses that might be an attempt to iron out certain difficulties where on the floor we might absorb more time than the recess might take. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Perhaps I can expedite matters by saying that any proposed amendment that Mr. Kilcher would have to make after my amendment is adopted, if it is adopted, would be in order, if it is not absolutely paraphrasing some former factor that has been acted upon. So I think the orderly procedure, Mr. Kilcher, would be for you to come in with your amendment after you see what happens to mine, because I don't want to change what I have submitted.

KILCHER: What I am afraid is that, past experience has shown me that if I should have an amendment that is essentially not only contributory or opposed to yours, after yours has passed, my chances are slim. We might reach a better compromise privately. There is no reason why we should not ask questions on the floor. What I had in mind, Mr. Rivers, if I may ask this question, we have seen what amending can do on this floor and in the legislature. If we want the initiative law at all it is little consolation that it cannot be repealed by the legislature for three years. It can be crippled badly enough any time, according to your amendment, so that it might just as well be dead. It can be crippled sufficiently to make repealing seem merciful, so I would suggest that we make the amending more difficult. I would be willing to compromise on the three years, make two years for repealing or one year for amending or make it amendable by two-thirds majority of each house. Why not? The initiative and referendum is supposed to be the voice of the people, stronger than the legislature. If the legislature should really find that an obnoxious law has been passed by the populace, well fine. We certainly would be right in assuming that two-thirds of the legislature could be aroused to repeal this evil law. If it is not an evil law, it has reason to stand, the people put it there. I will make an amendment to your amendment, you can accept it now or later, that the two thirds majority be added right after your sentence.

R. RIVERS: That would be entirely in order after he sees what has happened to my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Just a point of information. Before we left for the recess, we had this Committee Proposal No. 3, the portion we are working on, on the initiative and referendum and recall, remimeographed with the amendments made up to date, and I just wonder if any amendments that aren't submitted now should not be submitted to that amended form because for one thing the lines are different, the line numbers I should say in which you are submitting your amendments are different.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan, that form was made for the information of the delegates and will not be officially the amended form until we are through amending. Mr. White.

WHITE: Just briefly to correct something that was said previously. I refer to the copy for clarification in which it distinctly shows a period following the word "governor" which is the last action taken by the body. In other words, the last action taken by this body was to allow by inference, amendment or repeal by the legislature. I merely rose before to say that I have not changed my mind and therefore will vote against this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I agree with Mr. White. I think that before the Convention recessed for the holiday we had adopted a plan which would permit the legislature by reason of the amendment, as it was finally determined, to be correct, would give the legislature a right to amend or repeal these laws as they were initiated by the vote of the people. Now it develops there is some question as to whether or not that intent could be specifically inferred from the fact that there was no specific language to that effect in the provisions as it then stood. I think that certainly it is just as dangerous to say that a law could be passed by the people and could not be repealed for three years. If this happened to be a very bad law, which could happen, then we are, as the saying goes, stuck with it for a period of three years and nothing could be done about it. However, if the matter were left to the legislature to determine they can by inaction allow the matter to have a good run and see whether or not it is workable, but if it should be demonstrated in six months or a year that the law was bad or ought to be repealed, then you are hampered by the three-year limitation just as seriously as you would be the other way, so I think Mr. McCutcheon's argument works both ways. What is good on one side certainly ought to apply on the other. I am not in favor of the amendment as offered by Mr. Rivers. I certainly would be in favor of some amendment as suggested by Mr. White.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I rise to close the debate unless someone else wishes to be heard and that is to the effect that if you allow the legislature to repeal an initiated measure right away, that you are making the initiative meaningless as Mr. Hellenthal pointed out, but if something were wrong the amendatory process would be sufficient to protect the state.

MCCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. B. D. Stewart.

STEWART: May we have it read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 20, page 2, delete the words 'amended or' and on the last line of Section 4 after the word 'years', change period to a comma and add 'but may be amended at any time'."

JOHNSON: May we have a roll call?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 40 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 8 - Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, Poulsen, Reader, White.

Absent: 7 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 40 yeas, 8 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to request a two-minute recess to have time to write up my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher, do you have your proposed amendment?

KILCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the amendment as proposed by Mr. Kilcher.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, page 2, line 21 add the following, 'by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each house'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, what is your pleasure?

KILCHER: I move the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves the adoption of the amendment.

MARSTON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Kilcher's proposed amendment be adopted? Is there discussion? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I don't think we should set up any such rules for the legislature here. The usual system is for the legislature to pass any bill by a majority vote, and of course they can change their rules by a two-thirds majority. If we put things like this in the constitution, we will have to run back through the constitution to see whether or not each bill passes that they vote on, etc. I don't think that we should restrict the legislature on their power to make amendments anyhow or even to repeal such a law. When a law is enacted some of them are supposed to be more or less permanent. Others are temporary measures to take care of emergency conditions or temporary conditions, and if the people initiate the law, it passes, the following year conditions may be entirely different. The people themselves might want that law repealed and the quickest way to have it done is by the legislature. It seems that it is the feeling of a few of the people here that they are trying to protect the people from their legislature thinking that the legislature through stubbornness or some other reason will immediately repeal a law the people have passed. I can't imagine that happening. A group of the people in the legislature are elected by the people to represent them. I don't see how they can turn around and go against a clear-cut expression of the will of the people. But if we put such things as this in the constitution they are restricted from correcting a bad condition.

MARSTON: I had some information, quite a lot while I was out in this period of time. I found some people who said, "I won't vote for that constitution you fellows are writing there on this one point. I took care of this man. I said, "You are going to have a right to speak up and correct that. If there is only one point that is worrying you, and you are going to turn it down, you can do it. We are making a provision so you can make a correction." I agree with Mr. Barr that the legislature is not going to go in reverse to the people, but if the people go out and pass a law they say, "Those fellows can upset that if they want to." The very feeling is there. They like to have the power in the people to initiate a law and know that we will be protected and be abided by the legislature. This is not too strong at all. I am going along with Mr. Kilcher's amendment because it puts the power in the hands of the people and I can sell this constitution to the people a lot more by having this initiative and referendum a workable clause so that the legislature, if we do something wrong to the people, then they can do it and the legislature is the thing that is wrong. On the story of the initiative and referendum, they have passed more good laws than they have bad laws and that is as good as you can say for any legislature. I would like to see this amendment put through to keep the power in the hands of the people, and if we have done a wrong thing the people can correct it by a two-thirds vote. I am going to vote for this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted?"

COLLINS: I ask to have that amendment read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 21, after the last word of Section 4 as amended, add the following: 'by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each house'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the two sentences as they would now read.

CHIEF CLERK: "No law passed by the initiative may be vetoed by the governor nor may it be repealed by the legislature for a period of three years but may be amended at any time by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each house."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 22 - Coghill, Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, R. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Wien.

Nays: 26 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, llellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, King, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Poulson, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 22 yeas, 26 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of passage. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I have an amendment. It is the one I submitted before the recess. I would like to resubmit it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment. The amendment was not voted upon, is that right?

LONDBORG: It was not voted upon, I had asked that it be withdrawn.

CHIEF CLERK: This was to Section 4, is that right?

LONDBORG: I believe so. It is in the Ralph Rivers amendment. I think you will find it better on page 2, line 8 of the changed copy, although I can't legally attach it to that.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'signatures' in the next to the last sentence of the Ralph Rivers amendment, delete the rest of the sentence and substitute the following: 'from each of two-thirds of the election districts of the State with signatures equalling not less than 3% of the number of voters casting ballots for governor in each such district in the preceding general election at which a governor was elected'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Londborg?

LONDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion and the Chief Clerk might read the proposed amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: You can find it on page 5 of the journal of the 42nd day, next to the last paragraph, it is the bottom of the page.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: The reason for this proposed amendment is to make it a little more clear that there should be at least more than one signature in each of these two-thirds of the districts. As the proposal now reads, they are to obtain signatures in at least two-thirds of the election districts of the state. Now, as I take it, that would mean that a person wanting to start an initiative, if he would get ten per cent of the total votes cast in one city, then he could send out or go out, either way, and just get one signature in each of two-thirds remaining districts and that would make the petition valid. Probably he would get two or three to play safe, but he would only have to get one. He would get a signature in each of the two-thirds districts and I believe that when we have such an important thing as an initiative and if the legislature has failed to the great extent that initiative is necessary, then that initiative should be a vital interest over all the state and not just in one area, and I believe that that interest will be best shown if we have at least three per cent of the voters in each of those two-thirds districts signing. Now three per cent is not very high. I put that purposely low so that it would not make it hard to get the signatures in any one of those areas, but at least it should be more than one signature in two-thirds of the election districts. That is not going to make the initiative, I don't believe, any harder to work but it will at least show and prove that that proposed bill or that proposed law is gaining interest over the whole state, not just a local affair that the ten per cent would indicate if they were taken from one city or one locality and just go out and get one signature to comply with our initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I am going to support the amendment because I think it makes good sense.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I am going to vote against the amendment because I don't think it makes good sense. The reasoning behind it sounds perfectly logical but I call attention to the fact that in this proposal that we have so far, we have at least three types of initiative which are not possible. We have put safeguards on it as far as the people are concerned so that the Territorial legislature will not be faced with a law they do not want. I think we also should remember that the initiative petition is just the beginning, that it will still be referred to the people for a vote throughout the Territory of Alaska, and I am sure by that time there will be sufficient discussion of it so it will be taken up, but I have the feeling we have gone to too large an extent in legislating this matter of initiative and referendum in the first place. We are continually getting into numbers.

We are getting into things that are subject to critical glances from the people that are trying to get the job done, and I think generally that the less restrictions that we put on this thing the better off we are going to be, and I don't think the amendment will serve the purpose that the proposer thinks it will.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, I believe I agree with Mr. Hurley's position on this. Even though the signatures originate in one area I want you to note that in Section 5 it states, "Neither the initiative nor referendum may be used as a means of making or defeating appropriations of public funds or earmarking of revenues nor for local or special legislation." Well, if there is no special local interest in the legislation, even though the signatures should come from a local area, if it is an overall general legislation, it would be my assumption that they would probably try to get as widespread number of signatures as possible to get as widespread interest as possible. I see no reason to impose some other percentage figure now. I don't see we gain a thing by it. I think it is an extra handicap and does not add to but detracts from the initiative and referendum as we now have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I would like to close this short debate. In answer to the last objection, I don't believe Section 5 is a safeguard at all. It just merely says that they may not be used for means of earmarking revenues, etc., but there still may be a law that one locality might particularly want, maybe it isn't pertaining to them, but it may pertain to the whole state, but the state may not be particularly interested in it, and the initiative may spring out of a populous area and they could get the ten per cent in just an overnight campaign and get the one signature out around, and then in answer to the former objection where we should not make it hard or things of that nature, let us remember that the initiative is not enacting laws by an apportionment representation. We are enacting laws by popular vote, and we have set up a machinery in the legislature to make our laws and they are sitting representing the various areas of the country, but when it comes to a popular vote, then you will find that it is where the people are that is going to count, and I think as a safeguard, and again I say it is not a high safeguard but very low, if you get three per cent of the qualified voters in these two-thirds districts you will have a good indication of whether it is of statewide interest.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Londborg be adopted by the Convention?"

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Barr, Boswell, Cross, Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh.

Nays: 31 - Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, VanderLeest, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 31 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 3:45 o'clock today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 3? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to ask unanimous consent to revert to Committee announcements again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I have been requested to postpone the meeting of the Resources Committee until tomorrow night due to the fact that there are quite a number of suggestions that have been made, at 7:30, and we will still meet in the lobby of the Northward Building.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The meeting of the Resources Committee has been postponed until tomorrow evening at 7:30 p.m. in the lobby of the Northward Building. Are there amendments to Committee Proposal No. 3? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment on the Secretary's desk.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, line 21, change the word 'three' to 'two'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rosswog?

ROSSWOG: I would like to move that this amendment be adopted.

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. That is an amendment on line 21, page 2, the word "three" be changed to the word "two". In other words, it could not be repealed by the legislature for a period less than two years rather than three years. The proposed amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I might like to say that I believe that just in the possibility that we should have a law we should not wait three years to have it repealed. I believe that two years would carry over one session of the legislature and the following session would be able to repeal it, where three years, possibly with a two-year session there would have to wait.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I would like to address a question to Mr. Taylor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale, you may address your question if there is no objection.

NORDALE: Mr. Taylor, I would like to know how the Committee arrived at the figure "three".

TAYLOR: That figure was arrived at with the fact that it would not let the same legislature act upon the matter. The next legislature would perhaps be quite a change in body. At least half of them would be new ones. I don't believe the Committee has any objection to changing it to two years especially if we have every biennium a meeting of the legislature. Otherwise, it would go four years anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? If not the question is, "Shall the amendment as proposed by Mr. Rosswog be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Cross, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 10 - Coghill, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Hurley, Metcalf, Nerland, Poulsen, V. Rivers, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 10 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 3? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I have two amendments on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the first amendment as offered by Mr. Smith. Now, first, are we through with amendments to Section 4? Mr. Smith, would you hold your proposed amendments to Section 3 until we are completed with Section 4?

SMITH: I will be very glad to do that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You bring it to the attention of the Chair the minute we come to that. Mr. Kilcher, do you have a proposed amendment to Section 4? We will not go back to other sections until we have completed Section 4, 5, and 6. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher to Section 4.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, page 2, line 20, after the word 'governor' delete the balance and substitute the following: 'nor may it be amended or repealed by the legislature within a period of two years except by a two-thirds majority vote of the members to which each house is entitled'.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order. I think this matter has already been before the body once and possibly twice and that the motion is out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed motion again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, page 2, line 20, after the word 'governor' delete the balance and substitute the following: 'nor may it be amended or repealed by the legislature within a period of two years except by a two-thirds majority vote of the members to which each house is entitled'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would have to hold it changes the three years to read "two years" and whether or not the Convention has considered the question of a two-thirds majority vote in a two-year period of time the Chair does not recall that the Convention has considered it. Changing it to two years changes the complete substance.

TAYLOR: I think Mr. Hellenthal's point of order is well taken because we have already, by the adoption of our previous motion, made it two years so the motion to amend as proposed by Mr. Kilcher moves to strike all this and then only adding a few words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Taylor, but the question I believe Mr. Hellenthal was thinking of was the fact that Mr. Kilcher had previously offered an amendment that called for a two-thirds majority vote of both houses, "but at that time the wording of the section said "three years instead of "two years". Now there is a difference there.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I have to add something to your explanation. If it were only that, I would agree it would just be a matter of taking advantage of a possible technicality and be a loss of time, and that was not the intention. I think the amendment is in order for a different reason. This is the first time that the amendment includes repealing, even before two years. It includes repealing and amending. In that respect it is a new amendment. The other one had a two-thirds majority for amending. I had this amendment written before the decision had been reached as to whether it was going to be two or three years. Irregardless of the three years I would like to see it repealable, not only amendable within two or three years.

HELLENTHAL: I withdraw my point of order.

KILCHER: I would like to grant the legislature the right to repeal before two years and to amend it before two years, both with the two-thirds majority.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The meaning of the proposed amendment is entirely different than the meaning of the previous amendment. The amendment is in order.

KILCHER: I move this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

BARR: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr seconds the motion. The question is open for discussion. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: This is another attempt not only to write legislation into what should be merely fundamental law but also to write rule-making powers of the legislation into fundamental law. I don't think that majority by which the vote should be passed has any place whatever in a constitution, and I am not adverse to the initiative and referendum but I think that is a great breach of constitution writing to include a proposition in it that should be a subject for the rules of the legislature, not even the laws that the legislature passes, but the rules which they adopt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I should feel elated with Mrs. Hermann's remarks because they are contrary to her past performance, and is very weak in my opinion, her logic. However, I don't want to become too optimistic about my amendment because of this, but in rebuttal to her points there I would like to say that if this two-thirds majority were not matter to be included in the constitution, how could we include the ten and three per cent and all the other matters in the constitution. This initiative and referendum as such is part of the body of the constitution and is in no way in relationship whatsoever with the legislature. The legislature has no more relationship to the initiative and referendum stemming from the people than the judicial council has in its relation to the legislature. That is debatable maybe but that is the way I see it. So the two-thirds majority I am glad to discover here in the model constitution, for whatever it's worth. It also says no measure adopted by vote of qualified voters under the initiative and referendum provision of this constitution shall be repealed or amended by the legislature within a period of three years. We have it too, except as a two-thirds vote of all the members. That is the model constitution. So I am not entirely on wild ground and I think by having it down to two years, which I think is reasonable, and by making it amendable as well as repealable within two years, with the two-thirds majority I don't think we are stepping into the sanctum of the legislature's prerogatives. Either we believe in the initiative and referendum or we don't. If something entirely dangerous should come up, not only the people would repeal their own mistakes, but even more efficiently than that, the legislature would be there to repeal its mistakes. The same as we have rules here in this Convention I was told, "If something really bad comes up, don't be afraid of a two-thirds majority. You'll easily get it if something is drastically wrong." Mrs. Hermann has mentioned that several times in the past and the same rule would apply to the legislature. I don't see why they should be afraid to have a two-thirds ruling and I don't think that matter should not be included in the constitution. I think in my obligations towards the people whom I have promised a few last ditch fights in this matter and who will be decisive maybe, maybe 50 or 100 votes may be decisive.

In that respect I think it will not be a loss of time to give this a little bit more thought and I strongly urge that true friends of the initiative and referendum system give it some consideration and accept this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I am a true friend of the initiative and referendum, and I don't know just what we are voting on here, and I'd like to know before the vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the amendment once more.

KILCHER: May I request the Chief Clerk to read it as the paragraph would read, including the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "No law passed by the initiative may be vetoed by the Governor nor may it be amended or repealed by the legislature within a period of two years except by a two-thirds majority vote of the members to which each house is entitled."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am a little bit puzzled. Delegate Kilcher has contended for the strongest possible initiative. At the present time, the way we have it now written, there is no repeal by the legislature allowed at all for two years. Now he wants to whack it down and say the legislature may repeal some law which was initiated by a two-thirds vote of both houses. We have already fought the battle out that we were not in favor of having the legislature repeal something that was initiated within a period of two years. I contended that they should have the power to amend at any time to protect the state against ill-advised financial drains upon the treasury or something that might bankrupt the state, but the amendatory process could protect the state in almost any event. I am going to vote against the amendment because I think it reflects the way we worked it out to this point and this represents a reversal of Mr. Kilcher's previous position.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Would you have the Chief Clerk read that just once more?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4, page 2, line 20, after the word 'governor' delete the balance and substitute the following: nor may it be amended or repealed by the legislature within a period of two years except by a two-thirds majority vote of the members to which each house is entitled."

HERMANN: May I ask a question of Mr. Kilcher?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Does he mean that in joint session or single session?

KILCHER: Single session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment as proposed by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 4? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I believe my second amendment I have on the Chief Clerk's desk does relate to Section 4.

CHIEF CLERK: It does not say what page. Is it after the word "chosen"?

SMITH: Line 3, page 2 of the original.

CHIEF CLERK: That is taken out already I think.

SMITH: Go back to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: That has already been deleted by Mr. Rivers' amendment which revamped that first part.

SMITH: Go back to Mr. Rivers' amendment then. It would be probably better to go back to the amended version. It would be on page 2, line 7. It would come after the word "chosen".

CHIEF CLERK: It has to be to amend Mr. Rivers' amendment because we can't refer to this. It is after the word "chosen", add the words "but not to exceed eight thousand signatures in any event."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Smith?

SMITH: I move the adoption of the amendment to Mr. Rivers' amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith moves the adoption of the amendment.

SMITH: I ask unanimous consent.

SUNDBORG: I object.

EMBERG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg seconded the motion. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: The reason for the amendment is that as the population increases in Alaska it would require more and more signatures to initiate a petition, that is to make a petition valid. After you reach a certain number of signatures it naturally will become more and more difficult and the purpose of the amendment is to hold the obtaining of signatures to at least what I would call a reasonable level. It would not affect the initiative procedure in any way until the population of the Territory reached a rather large figure, and I am sorry that I did not bring my reference material. I know that a like provision does occur in some state constitutions and I cannot refer to those due to lack of material.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, it is true that the proposal or the article as we now have it amended would require that a larger number of signatures be obtained as the population of the state grew, and I think it should. I think it would be dangerous to put in this limit of only 8,000. I hope this constitution will still be in effect and still governing the State of Alaska when population may be a million or two million people, and to make it possible at that time for a mere 8,000 people, which would be an infinitesimal proportion of the people of the state, to saddle the state with all of the bother of going through an initiative or referendum election, I think would be very bad and very dangerous.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: There is one state, I think California, has set a limit, and down there in Long Beach, California, they have a lot of clubs and they can get a bunch of people most any time they want on a question. I know the feelings back of this. It sounds good, but it works out wrong. I am going to vote against this, and I am going to vote against any more amendments that come up here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: In regard to the remarks that were made by Delegate Sundborg, with the population of a future state of a million or two million, these signatures have to be by qualified electors. They will have to be checked. If you get 100,000 signatures to a petition, it would take practically the entire period between the two sessions of the legislature to get through that part of the procedure. I don't think we should require in the future that 50,000 signatures are required for a petition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I am against putting any definite figures in the constitution like 8,000 for instance. We don't know what Alaska will be like 100 years from now. I don't suppose the population will grow as fast as it will in some other areas, but the Indians who sold the Island of Manhattan did not imagine there would be as many pale faces on that island as there are now. If there is a large population of two or three or four million here, that means a large population consisting of reasonable people, but also a larger percentage of crackpots who will want to put over their own ideas. Therefore we should require the same percentage of signatures and those signatures should be checked for that very reason.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe if we adopted this amendment we would be indulging in mere conjecture or guess work as to trying to establish a limitation upon a number of signatures that could possibly be on a petition. Now the State of New York saw fit in adopting the initiative and referendum that possibly 10,000,000 votes in the State of New York, that they only require not more than 50,000 signatures on an initiative petition. Perhaps they felt too it was quite burdensome to require more than that for the reason it would be very difficult to check. How can we say now 8,000 is the maximum we can use? Why not leave that to the future generation because I don't think in the next 10 or 20 years, in case the initiative is used, that we are going to have a population that is going to require any 8,000 signatures. We are going to have a phenomenal increase in population if we do, and I think we should not guess on these things. I think the next Constitutional Convention will possibly have a little better idea than we have now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to add to Mr. Taylor and to detract from Mr. Barr's picturesque speech about Manhattan Island that these same Indians could not foresee what was going to happen, that there was going to be a Constitutional Convention in a hundred years, so we should not project these matters into a hundred years. We should realize that such minor matters should be taken up in the next Constitutional Convention. It is really not so spectacular as Mr. Barr likes to think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Smith be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor will signify by saying aye, all opposed by saying "no". The "noes have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 4, Proposal No. 3? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have an amendment I have not quite finished writing up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for 30 seconds.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will read the amendment as proposed by Mr. Hellenthal.

TAYLOR: Just before you read that, I would like to know which one the Clerk is reading from. We have what we originally called here the revised one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk cannot very well read from the revised proposal because as yet there is no real revised proposal. That is for information purposes only. You can refer your original proposal to the revision of amendments up to this time, but she has to read on the proposal before her, the official proposal with the amendments. Those amendments are just tentative, naturally until we are through second reading.

CHIEF CLERK: This is an amendment to the Rivers amendment. It is that part of Section 4, so you can follow it on the amended copy. It is on line 5 of the amended copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Actually this reference to the Rivers amendment, the amendment is not anyone's any more. It is part of the original proposal. There is nothing separate about it.

CHIEF CLERK: There is no line to refer to it, so it has to be referred to that way. It is line 5 of the amended copy, page 2, add the following words --

HELLENTHAL: The amendment is in line 5, strike "qualified electors equal to 10% of the number of votes cast for governor" and substitute the words, "10% of the voters who cast votes for governor".

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hellenthal, if that is your amendment.

HELLENTHAL: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves the adoption of his amendment. Is there a second?

SMITH: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: The reason I make this amendment is that it struck me to check a petition will be very difficult because you have to determine in each case whether a person is a qualified elector and where you have 7,000 or 8,000 names that is going to be an enormous and very, very expensive job. If you tie it in with 10 per cent of the voters who cast votes for the governor in the preceding general election at which there will be a poll book kept and the names will be there, it will eliminate the very costly and very expensive checking process that would be necessary if the present language is retained. I thought that was worthy of consideration by the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: It does not appear to me that is a valid reason for changing the language. Even if you checked the poll book and saw the name "John Jones" listed as having voted in that election, it does not indicate from his signing the book whether he voted for the governor. He could have voted for only one or two offices. The fact that he signed the poll book is no indication that he voted for governor or anyone else. I don't see that possibly could be a check. Under the wording as Mr. Hellenthal has offered that would be the implication, and it would be an impossibility.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I had overlooked that, and I should ask with the permission of my second that the words "governor" be stricken in the amendment so it will read "at which the governor was chosen."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Johnson stated my point of view.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, if that amendment was adopted it would deprive perhaps many people who are qualified voters in the state from signing a petition for an initiative due to the fact that through circumstances beyond their control they might not have been in their home precinct, might not have been able to vote and therefore would be deprived of the right of participating in the initiative. I think it should be 10 per cent of the number who voted in that preceding election, not those of the actual people who did vote but 10 per cent of the number.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, are you saying that the proposal as it reads right now does not require that the qualified voter actually voted in the election? It only requires that a number of qualified voters equal to the 10 per cent signing these petitions, is that right?

TAYLOR: Now under the amendment those people must have voted in the preceding election. What if they were not in the state and had been voting for years?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I think it would be a good thing for more than one reason. As Mr. Hellenthal stated, it would be about the best way to check because you would have the records to go by in checking. Then, also, I don't think that anyone is going to be denied the privilege of voting whether he's home or not, with our absentee ballot system. If they have not taken the interest to vote, I don't think it is too serious to deny them the right of initiation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: There is a proposal that has been on this floor in which there is a system of registration of voters that is going to be set up. You at all times from one year to the next, you have a list of the qualified voters in the state. So you will know by the number of votes cast in any one election what percentage of the number of qualified voters did vote in an election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I believe Section 3 would take care of Mr. Hellenthal's objection. It says the legislature shall prescribe the procedure to be followed in exercising the powers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: No, it would not, because if we adopt the present language. In other words, the check is tied in with a check of qualified electors, we are bound by it. That is covered by the constitution and that would be the rule that would have to be followed in checking the petitions, so I do this merely for practical reasons. It is much cheaper and much easier to check a list of voters that voted at the preceding election at which the governor was chosen. It is true, as Mr. Taylor said, that people, newcomers, would not be able to sign the petition nor would people who were through no fault of their own, "outside", but we have to balance the thing out and sometimes it is best to deprive them of their right to sign the initiative petition because a greater good would result by making it more practical and cheaper and easier to check. Now, as I understand it, the Legislative Committee will recommend a governor will be chosen every four years, so very, very few people would be hurt by Mr. Taylor's suggestion, and it might put a premium on voting. There would be more reason to vote at the general election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Point of inquiry to Mr. Hellenthal. Mr. Hellenthal, now if we adopt a system of registration of legally qualified voters, a young fellow who becomes of voting age, he immediately goes up and registers and as a qualified voter, does that not take care of the objection to the present language?

HELLENTHAL: The section on elections and suffrage that was adopted in second reading did not subscribe a system of voter registration. It merely said that the legislature might do it if they saw fit and you will recall from the debate, that many, many delegates felt that there should be no registration at all from the hinterland areas because it would be impractical so I don't think your point is very well taken in that regard, because there is no requirement of registration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I think Mr. Taylor's point is extremely well taken. The mention of the voters of the hinterlands has strengthened Mr. Taylor's argument for the same reason that some of the delegates in the past debate have been opposed to registration of votes. Let's not forget that some have been for it, and if because of the objection of Mr. Hellenenthal, in five or ten years from now we should find that it is cumbersome to define qualified voters, provided this amendment is not adopted, then the legislature will have an added reason to devise some system of registering the voters which I would be in favor personally, so I think we can leave that matter up to the legislature and have trust in it, and I am not in favor of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: A point of inquiry. Have we officially changed Mr. Hellenenthal's original proposed amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal asked unanimous consent, but the Chair does not recall whether the Chair stated that there is no objection to the proposed amendment to the amendment of Mr. Hellenenthal. What was that?

HELLENTHAL: Striking the words "for governor".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to that?

TAYLOR: I object.

HELLENTHAL: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal so moves.

HELLENTHAL: As a point of order, I wonder just why anyone should object to that when the moving party and my second agreed to the deletion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You offered the motion originally, Mr. Hellenenthal. You had to offer the amendment to the motion as an amendment.

HELLENTHAL: I merely offered it as a deletion from the motion with the consent of the second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If members of the delegation objected then it would require the same amendment as if it came from some other member of the Convention. Is there a second to your motion to amend the amendment, the original motion?

SMITH: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the "original motion be amended to strike the words "for governor"?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor of the proposed amendment to the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes have it and the proposed amendment has been adopted. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Now we are back on the original amendment?

SWEENEY: Excuse me. Will you yield for a moment? May we have something read here? I don't know what we're discussing, I did not get it clearly the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike 'qualified electors equal to 10% of the number of votes cast for governor'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: That has been stricken now.

CHIEF CLERK: "And insert '10% of the voters who cast votes'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Read the amendment as it is now before the Convention, the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike 'qualified electors equal to 10% of the number of votes cast for governor' and substitute '10% of the voters who cast votes.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, in line with this, I am not particularly in favor of tying the 10% of the voters who cast votes for the governor for this reason -- 27,000 votes were cast for this particular election to the Constitutional Convention, which is representative of 13 per cent, roughly, of the estimated 1954 population of Alaska. Now there would be a four-year time lag not reflecting the increased population in Alaska. When you take 10 per cent of the voters who cast votes for governor, I personally would be in favor of 10 per cent of the voters who cast votes in the preceding general election period.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is the way it is now.

COOPER: No, sir. The words "cast votes in the preceding general election at which the governor was chosen" is the way it states right now. The only two words that were eliminated were "governor nor".

HELLENTHAL: They were eliminated from the first amendment, so --

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for a minute. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Cooper, you had the floor.

COOPER: I yield to Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I hate to burden the assembly here, but this thought occurred rather rapidly and my motion was predicated on a notion that I had that there would be one general election every four years, but there will be a general election every two years, so I would like to ask permission of my second again to amend my motion by also deleting the words "at which the governor was chosen" from line 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You offer that as a proposed amendment to the proposed amendment?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal asks unanimous consent.

V. RIVERS: I object.

HELLENTHAL: I so move.

COOPER: I second the motion.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment is open for discussion. Does everyone have the question clearly in mind? Would the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment to the amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the words 'at which the governor was chosen' and insert a period after 'election', on line 7."

V. RIVERS: How will it then read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read it as it would read if the proposed amendment were adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "... prepared by the attorney general may be circulated and must be signed by 10 per cent of the voters who cast votes in the preceding general election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption to the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has been adopted. Now we have the original amendment before us.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. Chairman, I am quite impressed with this amendment. It seems that this is really going to make it very much more difficult for an initiative to be put on the ballot. To only have 27,000 people, as an example, that can sign a petition is going to make it very difficult with the other restrictions that we also have. I am going to vote against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: A little earlier Mr. Johnson called attention to one point, namely one of uncertainty as to precisely who these people were who cast votes for governor. I don't see that it is yet corrected, and I would like to check Mr. Hellenenthal through the Chair, if I may. As I heard the language last read it states, "Ten per cent of the voters who cast votes in the preceding general election." Do you mean ten per cent of those people who cast votes?

HELLENTHAL: Ten per cent of the total vote is my understanding of that language.

RILEY: They must actually have cast votes in the last general election - - signatories. That was the way I would read it, and it seemed to me a weakness.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I am going to vote against this measure and probably all other measures that come up, but what I see about this is you are disenfranchising some 70 per cent of the people by changing it as far as the initiative is concerned. The way it reads right now is better than anything that I have seen right now as far as the true purpose of the initiative. By changing the words, as I see it, you are disenfranchising the greater majority of the people, and that is not the purpose of this initiative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I think Mr. Lee's statement was correct. He says it is going to make it extremely difficult. In fact, if this amendment passes, it is going to emasculate the entire article, and there is absolutely no use of having it in the constitution because it is just so much verbiage in there without any possibility of action being taken under an initiative, because if you are going to make it 10 per cent of those people you have got to find out those people who vote in a certain election and hunt those people down. There might be thousands who did not vote in that election for some reason or another, but they can't sign. Now this is the finest way that has come up yet to actually kill this article. You are not going to have an initiative if this goes through.

MCLAUGHLIN: Point of order. I think --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Hellenthal already has had the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to speak prior to anyone who closes the debate? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I am not in favor of the actual wording at this time. However, I am in favor of the idea that is trying to be put across here. If you will bear with me on the revised form that we are using temporarily, starting in line 4, "may then be circulated and must be signed by a number equal to 10 per cent of the voters who cast votes in the preceding general election". I believe that was the intent. That is not the way it exists right now. I don't particularly care or even believe that 10 per cent of the people that voted in the last election should be the only people that have the right to initiate the initiative, but a number equal to 10 per cent if they are qualified electors.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: We went over this carefully in the Committee, and this language is one the experts passed, and as I said before, I am going to vote no and continue to on all amendments on this thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Taylor's guess as to my motives is incorrect. This amendment was made in a sincere effort to tie in the checking of the petition with an easily ascertainable list of people rather than to have to examine the qualifications of each person whose name appears on the petition. I speak with a little experience on this ground. As a lawyer we are often engaged to check petitions for liquor licenses. People who protest the issuance of a license will want to check the petition. Very deserving people will come in the office and they say, "This is a petition. It is a phony. Those are not qualified electors whose names appear on the petition. Will you check it?" And I think there are others here that have checked those petitions and to check a liquor petition with 5,000 names on it to determine if there are actually 5,000 qualified voters can cost the people who are making the intelligent inquiry in the neighborhood of 3,000 or 4,000 dollars, it is an immense job. It makes it virtually impossible in large areas to check liquor petitions. It likewise, if we tie in the initiative petition with qualified electors it will make it virtually impossible to check it. Now that should give consolation to the people who are fanatically in favor of an initiative and a referendum. But regardless of that, if we are going to have the initiative and referendum we should make it easy to check those petitions, and practical. This way no one is going to check the petition. When you come in with a whole bunch of petitions, there is no one who is going to have the money or the time to do it, but if you tie it in with the list of people who voted at the last election then it makes sense, but qualified electors, no.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?"

HILSCHER: May we have it again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 5, strike 'qualified electors equal to 10 per cent of the number of votes cast for governor' and substitute '10 per cent of the voters who cast votes' and strike everything after 'election' on that sentence on line 7."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 4?

COOPER: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 4.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have the amendment ready to submit, Mr. Cooper? The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as submitted by Mr. Cooper.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 6 of the amended Proposal No. 3, after 'cast' delete 'for governor' and insert a period after 'election' in line 7."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Delete the words 'for governor' on line 6 and insert a period after 'election'."

COOPER: Mr. President, I move the adoption of that by unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

GRAY: I object.

SUNDBORG: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: It would then read: "If certified to be sufficient, the initiative or referendum petition containing a summary of the subject matter prepared by the attorney general may then be circulated and must be signed by qualified electors equal to 10 per cent of the number of votes cast in the preceding general election."

TAYLOR: May I rise to a point of information?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to ask Mr. Cooper as to whether that number of votes cast in the preceding election would be all those votes cast for the governor, the secretary of state and all the senators and all the representatives? There are going to be a lot of votes cast in those elections, maybe a hundred thousand of them. I think they should be for some particular office. They should be the guiding star in this thing and not leave it to "the votes cast" because if there are votes cast by a hundred thousand people in Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: We are back to the purpose of the original writing. We might have two elections, the governor's election where everybody votes and then a side election where a minority group because the national names are not on the ballot. That is why they poll the governor's vote to give a true representation of the voting populace which is the reason they poll the governor's vote. Your other elections may be very, very minor. You never know but they may be very minor and that's the purpose of this particular deal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, as I pointed out earlier when I first discussed this matter, had there been a general election in 1950 in Alaska, the population at that time was 108,000. Using the percentage of voters that cast votes for the Constitutional Convention, 13 per cent of an estimated 185,000 people voted in Alaska. Now if you tie this 10 per cent to the last preceding general election at which the governor was elected, there can be a four-year time lag. For instance, since 1950 through 1954, there was an increase of 80,000 people in Alaska, and I do not like this time lag. It is estimated in 1955 the population went over 200,000 in Alaska which is an increase of 20,000 in one year. Your general elections when we become a state will be elections at which you elect your representatives and your U. S. representatives, not just the governor or U. S. senators, so I believe that in the future, the forthcoming state of Alaska, the general elections, once every two years, will poll a larger number of votes, and the 10 per cent to initiate the initiative will be a better cross section of the people than the qualified voters of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I believe Mr. Taylor is right in the terminology of what would be left. The number of votes cast, that leaves it up in the air, but if I might address a question to Mr. Cooper, I wonder if it would not clarify it if you would have 10 per cent of the number of voters voting at the last general election. That is what you mean, but the words "votes cast" --

COOPER: I thought when a voter voted he cast a vote.

LONDBORG: I think Mr. Taylor brought up the plurality of the situation and it would clarify it by putting "the voters voting".

TAYLOR: I might suggest he might word it "ballots cast at the preceding election".

COOPER: Yes, I see. That would be all right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking that your amendment be amended, Mr. Cooper? What would you like the amendment to be? If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: In lieu of the word "votes", delete the word "votes" and insert "ballots". It would now read "qualified electors equal to ten per cent of the number of ballots cast in the preceding general election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delete the word "votes" and insert the word "ballots".

COOPER: I ask unanimous consent. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Is the matter open for discussion?

COOPER: I so move.

V. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I rise to ask a question. What if we have a special referendum or a special ballot in which ballots are cast not for individuals, but on a point at issue, such as a referendum or initiative ballot or another ballot entirely separate from the vote in which an individual is elected? This matter of ballots could cover too wide a scope and could extend somewhat considerably beyond the actual number of voters.

LONDBORG: That is why I addressed a question to Mr. Cooper asking if it wouldn't be better to put "voters who voted". Now in every division at present you can write and ask the clerk of the court how many people voted at the last general election and they will tell you exactly and you have the number.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: After thinking it over, the words, "ballots cast in the preceding general election" in Committee Report No. 1, the general elections were established in October of an even numbered year and held every two years thereafter. That is a definition of general election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The words "general election" still appear in this section?

COOPER: Yes, they do. "Ten per cent of the number of ballots cast in the preceding general election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Can't one of our experts here on the floor say whether a person at a given time can cast more than one ballot as well as more than one vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Certainly, if you have a separate ballot on a referendum to go along with the general election ballot, each voter is casting two ballots.

KILCHER: This wording then is inaccurate?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: On the other hand, you could have as many as 50 times the total number of voters because you may make 50 votes on one ballot.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I still believe that the number of voters who voted, how many times they made an "x" doesn't matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment be, as offered by Mr. Cooper, be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption. We now have the original amendment as offered by Mr. Cooper. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I would like to move to amend that amendment to read, "voters who voted".

TAYLOR: I rise to a point of order. There is no amendment before the house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment is still before us in its original form, Mr. Taylor.

LONDBORG: Strike the words "vote cast" and put in "voters who voted" or "voters voting", "ten per cent of the number of voters who voted in the preceding general election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I move the amendment be tabled.

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moved, seconded by Mr. Metcalf, that the amendment be tabled. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Cooper be laid on the table?" All those in favor of laying the proposed amendment on the table will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no".

KILCHER: Point of order. I don't think there was an amendment by Mr. Cooper on the table. It was the original amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was the original amendment as offered by Mr. Cooper. The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the question as to whether or not to lay the amendment on the table. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: May we have the amendment read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 6 of the revised proposal No. 3, after the word 'cast' delete the words 'for governor' and insert a period after the word 'election' on line 7."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be laid on the table? The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 15 - Collins, Gray, Kilcher, Knight, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Taylor, VanderLeest, White.

Nays: 33 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Nerland, Nordale, Reader, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Doogan, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 15 yeas, 33 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has not been laid on the table. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I believe my motion for amendment is in order now, to delete the words "votes cast" on that particular line and insert "voters who voted". I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg moves the adoption of the amendment.

BARR: Second.

LONDBORG: I ask unanimous consent.

TAYLOR: I object.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, this is, I beg your pardon, this is just on the amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment to the amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "On line 6 strike the words 'votes cast' and insert the words 'voters who voted'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Londborg be adopted?" All in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted, the amendment to the amendment. Now we are back to the original amendment as amended. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, just a point of information to Mr. Cooper. Did you include in your original amendment that the words following "election" in line 7 in that sentence be stricken?

COOPER: Yes, a period after the word "election".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that particular section as it will read if the proposed amendment would be adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "If certified to be sufficient, the initiative or referendum petition containing a summary of the subject matter prepared by the attorney general may then be circulated and must be signed by qualified electors equal to ten per cent of the number of voters who voted in the preceding general election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment as amended will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 28 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McNees, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 20 - Collins, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, King, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Sweeney, Taylor, White.

Absent: 7 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Doogan, Nolan, Peratrovich, Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 28 yeas, 20 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and so the proposed amendment as amended has been adopted by the Convention. Are there other amendments to Section 4, Committee Proposal No. 3? Are there amendments to Section 5 of the Committee Proposal No. 3? Are there amendments to Section 6 of the Committee Proposal No. 3?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, I have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment to Section 6 of Committee Proposal No. 3.

CHIEF CLERK: We are back to the original proposal, page 3, line 6, strike the words "involving moral turpitude". Whose amendment is that?

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Hellenthal's.

HELLENTHAL: I so move.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Briefly, the reason for this is that a public official unlike an ordinary citizen should be beyond reproach, and irrespective of the nature of the crime he should be subject to recall. That does not mean he has to be recalled if he commits a crime, but he should be subject to recall. The way it reads now he is only subject to recall for crimes involving moral turpitude. Now I can think of many cases not involving moral turpitude where I would sign a recall petition. For example, if a hypocrite in public office voted one way and then pursued a course of conduct in his private life exactly the opposite of the way he voted in order to appease people, I would like to see that man recalled even though the offense might be very slight. And for that reason, and primarily because the public official must be irreproachable, I think he should be subject to recall for the slightest offense.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I am just wondering about the definition of the words "crime" there. I am wondering now if we are going to recall a public official for going through a red light or parking overtime.

What is the definition of the word "crime" according to the legal definition?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, can you answer that?

HELLENTHAL: I would under certain circumstances sign a recall petition for a public official who went through a red light, especially if that official was a director of public safety or had led a big newspaper campaign to protect people's lives and health and safety. I would sign a petition, but perhaps somebody else would not, and the petition might fail but the door should be open. "Moral turpitude" is too high a standard. It is going to protect too many inefficient people. Maybe it is a poor illustration but I can recall a group of legislators who violated the fishing laws. In a sense they were recalled, they were not re-elected. Those circumstances did not involve moral turpitude, but any legislator who would vote to prohibit people from fishing at certain times, at certain places, and then turn around and violate that same law within a few months should be recalled whether it involves moral turpitude or not.

V. RIVERS: I still have no definition for "crime", as I requested.

HELLENTHAL: Any crime should be the grounds for recall and then leave it to the good judgment of the people to determine whether the crime was severe enough for them to warrant signing the petition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: If I might answer Mr. Rivers, generally a crime is any offense which may be punishable by the state and generally crimes are divided into felonies and misdemeanors, but literally, even what we call now petty offenses -- traffic tickets, could be defined to be crimes under an act of the legislature so in effect, if you knocked out the words "moral turpitude", if a legislature decided to describe all parking violations as crimes, then in substance you would have a technical right upon legislative definition to recall a public official for having violated some minor petty traffic law. The crime of its nature varies in each state of the Union. Normally crimes are divided into felonies and misdemeanors, and they pick up a third category, or second, however you think of it, as petty offenses, that is traffic tickets. But in fact the legislature could define everything, all offenses against municipalities or the state as crimes.

V. RIVERS: Don't you think the word "crime" should be qualified by some degree, such as a felony in this matter? We have moral turpitude involved here at the present time. What degree of qualification should we put in front of the word "crime"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Merely to clarify it, a felony is what the legislature makes it. In most states the legislature defines (this is an offhand opinion) the legislature defines as felonies those things which are capable of imprisonment. In some other states they determine what a felony is by describing the amount of imprisonment you can receive from it. The legislature can again define any act in violation of a state law as either a felony or misdemeanor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I am quite in accord with Mr. Hellenthal's sympathies on this matter of recall. I think, however, his efforts to amend here has not gone far enough. It appears to me it should include all of the stated reasons here. A person is subject, or any official should be subject to recall he should be subject to recall period. It doesn't make any difference whether there are grounds or not, if there is a change in the public sympathy with respect to their politics or their attitude in office or anything else, they should be subject to recall. I don't see why there should be any grounds stated whatsoever.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: What is before the house?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It involves the striking of the words "involving moral turpitude" on line 6, page 3, of Committee Proposal No.

R. RIVERS: I know that. I can't remember if the motion was put and seconded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Very well, Mr. McLaughlin has adequately stated that every violation whereby you can be fined or punished by either long or short incarceration is a crime. So all these little traffic matters are not crimes in the broad sense of the word. The words "moral turpitude" embody something that is dishonest, such as malappropriation of somebody's property, purposely inflicting pain on people. Those are things known as malum in se. You can take regulations and laws which are malum prohibitum, they are bad only because they are prohibited by a town ordinance or statute. Those do not involve moral turpitude. The council might pass an ordinance to the effect that people shall not cross the street between intersections. There is nothing morally wrong about crossing a street between intersections but if the council passes such an ordinance, then that is malum prohibitum. Now I cannot see subjecting public officials to recall or even being eligible to be recalled as Mr. Hellenthal suggests, because they cross the streets between intersections or violate some minor regulation or ordinance which was malum prohibitum. We might also say that many misdemeanors involve moral turpitude. Petty larceny involves moral turpitude even if it is under $35.00, which distinguishes between a misdemeanor and a felony. Embezzlement of very minor amounts involve moral turpitude whether classified as a misdemeanor or a felony, so I don't think we can modify this language by saying that they should be subject to recall for any felony that they commit such as Mr. Victor Rivers suggested, because there are too many misdemeanors involving moral turpitude which should be the subject matter of recall. But neither can I see knocking out the words "moral turpitude" here because every public official is subject to recall for the most minor misdemeanor. I think it should be left exactly the way it is.

HELLENTHAL: One of those minor little things might be total neglect to pay your Territorial taxes for example. That does not involve moral turpitude, but I think any public official who refused to pay his taxes should be recalled. It does not involve moral turpitude. I will go farther than that, I have faith in the people. I don't think the people are going to sign recall petitions for people who walk against red lights, I am sure they are not going to but I don't want to put the people in the position where they can not even have a chance to recall a man for example, who has failed to pay his state income taxes but yet who voted for them in the legislature. I know of no reason in logic or morality or common decency which requires us to protect legislators to the extent that they can only be recalled for heinous crimes or those involving moral turpitude. They should be like Caesar's wife, and the sooner they realize it, the better.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I am compelled to disagree with Mr. Hellenthal that failure to pay taxes is not a crime or an offense involving moral turpitude. As I understand it, our Territorial income tax law is based primarily on the federal income tax law, and if you fail to pay your federal income tax you are subject to punishment by imprisonment, and therefore, by the same token it would be a crime involving moral turpitude, so I don't think that that argument follows at all. I am against the amendment because I think there ought to be some protection for public officials. I think it would be ridiculous to subject them to recall simply because they happened to violate some minor infraction of traffic regulation or something of that nature, and they certainly would be open to recall on that ground if the amendment as suggested now by Mr. Hellenthal is adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Hellenthal gave an illustration as to what would constitute in his opinion the grounds for a recall, that of a public official and he got up and publicly spoke about some measure or something that affected the people and then he acted opposite when he got to be an official, which could be a man who got up and talked very loudly for maybe a prohibition bill, but maybe he gets elected, but he keeps a bottle in his desk and he sets them up to his friends that he knows will take a drink when they come in or something like that, and there are other instances, but I think that Mr. Hellenthal is going to say those are things that will subject an official to recall. We don't have to strike anything in this at all, because he says anything involving moral turpitude or hypocrisy. He has shown that hypocrisy should be grounds for recall of public officials. Public punishment for hypocrisy went out for some time ago it went out with the Spanish Inquisition. I don't think this constitution should be putting anybody that subjects them to something that is the state of mind of a person. I think it should be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Do you think that those public officials who violated the fishing laws should not be subject to recall? Now I will have to twist the illustration a little because they were not public officials, they were legislators. They voted to put in restrictions on fishing and then turned right around and violated them and pled guilty to the offense. The offense does not involve moral turpitude, but those men who would pass a law and then intentionally violate it are not fit to hold public office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I think Mr. Hellenthal's illustration is poorly chosen. The fishermen he has in mind violated the regulations of Fish and Wildlife and not any law that the legislature passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: That was the point I was going to make.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" all those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I move that the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to have this particular invitation read before he puts any motion for adjournment.

JOHNSON: I will withdraw the motion then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the invitation.

(The Chief Clerk read the invitation from Pan American World Airways.)

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to present a question to the Chairman of the Committee who submitted this proposal. We are still on Section 6, are we not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Point of order. We had a communication on the floor and it is "please reply". That ought to be taken care of first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you object, Mr. Victor Rivers, to disposing of the reply? That ought to be taken care of. The Chief Clerk can call the office here, if there is no objection, and tell them that if it is possible for the members to attend, that they will. That is about all we can tell them because some of you will probably be at committee meetings. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Before we adjourn, I would like to ask a question in regard to this recall. It says "every elected public official in the state, etc." Does that apply to the elected officials within the elected corporate municipalities? I assume it would be meant to apply to the council and mayor of the cities as well as to the officers of the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Collins, could you answer that question? COLLINS: Mr. Taylor could probably answer that.

TAYLOR: We probably felt it would be, but the city would have to provide for it by ordinance if they did, and then the legislature would necessarily have to implement this act also by the proper legislative enactment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to address a question to Mr. Taylor, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: In line with a suggestion made by Mr. McCutcheon before, that recall be authorized without stating any grounds, would it be possible then, if lines 5 and 6 were stricken, then would it be possible for the legislature to establish grounds for recall?

TAYLOR: Yes. It certainly would have to be implemented, and I think you could it by the legislature upon such grounds as may be provided by law and strike the rest of it. Of course, the common grounds for recall of an elected official are malfeasance, misfeasance, and nonfeasance, or conviction of a crime. Practically all the provisions of constitutions that we ran across were very short and to the point, but the legislature has to implement that act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, if the Chair is not out of order, why are the words "except judicial officers" in this recall section?

TAYLOR: Because in the judicial article there is a method for removing judges.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: There is a historical reason for that. I believe that in the case of the application of Arizona to be admitted to the Union, President Taft vetoed the act of admission on the grounds that they had a provision in there asking for the recall of judicial officers. He was so offended by it because it violated the tradition, that he vetoed the act and the people of Arizona promptly took the recall provision out of the constitution and were admitted to the Union, and then under the right to organize their internal affairs, they promptly put it back in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Our judiciary article provides for a screening of the judges and appointment by the governor subject to approval and removal by the public at subsequent voting procedures. When we speak here of elected public officials, we say "except judicial officers," because they do go on the ballot periodically, but they are not strictly elected public officials so that only clarifies the point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other proposed amendments to Section 6? Mr. Victor Fischer?

V. FISCHER: I was just in the process of writing out a proposed amendment to delete lines 5 and 6 on page 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you offer that as an amendment, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I offer that as an amendment and ask unanimous consent. .

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent that line 5 and 6 on page 3 of Section 6 be deleted from the proposal. Is there objection?

TAYLOR: I object.

V. FISCHER. I so move.

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer so moves and Mr. Sundborg seconds the motion. The question is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, as Mr. McCutcheon has stated the case very well before, and that is that every public official should be liable to recall for whatever grounds the people feel are justified. Secondly, I also feel that when you specify grounds in the constitution, you will end up in the courts each time to determine, "Now is this really malfeasance, or misfeasance?" It will always be a matter of degree to see whether it fits in. Lets leave it to the people. If they feel a man should be kicked out of his job, let the people do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: May I direct a question to Mr. Fischer?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. Fischer, do you make this amendment with the understanding that line 7 means that the legislature can't prescribe the grounds for recall?

V. FISCHER: I make the amendment with that in mind as well as with the assumption that even if it were silent on it, the legislature could still decide.

WHITE: The legislature then would still have to provide the grounds, and your argument that each recall petition would wind up in court would not have any bearing because it would wind up in court anyhow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: . It is not necessary that the legislature establish any grounds whatsoever. It is necessary that they establish the procedure for which a recall may be instituted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I don't concur with Mr. McCutcheon. I think there have to be grounds prescribed. If we don't prescribe the grounds, the legislature will have to do so. You don't indulge in a penalty proceedings without some grounds or criteria for removal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: If we should strike the two lines as proposed by the amendment, we have nothing left in the recall section that is of any value. We might just as well delete it entirely and give the legislature authority to set up the recall procedure under such conditions that it deems advisable.

HELLENTHAL: I have been checking the Hawaiian Manual on this, and none of the states prescribe the grounds in the constitution. We are being rather novel in the inclusion of lines 5 and 6, and I would certainly think they should be deleted. If there is any doubt about whether the grounds can be properly prescribed by the legislature, a very simple amendment to line 7 adding the words, "The legislature shall prescribe the recall procedure and grounds" therefore would solve it. I would certainly support the elimination of lines 5 and 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to know whether Mr. Fischer has not considered that by striking line 5 and 6 alone, the whole article is still vague as to the procedures. I think we are not interested enough in the procedures here, and if we should vote on this, and I would not feel qualified to vote intelligently because I think the whole section there is too vague as to procedure as to how the voters, is it a form of initiative or referendum? I would like to know that.

V. FISCHER: If I may answer that question, Mr. President, the proposed amendment would not change the vagueness of this section in my opinion in any way. It would not make it any vaguer. It would make it broader and give the people more power in terms of scope of recall, and as was pointed out, if the legislature feels that any grounds should be authorized for recall they could do it. In terms of procedure that would have to be a separate amendment.

KILCHER: What I am trying to stress is this, that if recall is made easier from the people's point of view, if the procedure is left to the legislature, the legislature will constrict the procedure, so what you enlarge in one way, unless the procedure is not defined better in this article, the procedure will be constricted. We win one way and lose another.

COGHILL: I rise to a point of order. We might hold this vote over, the time clock is a little slow, and that bus is going to be coming around pretty quick. I move and ask unanimous consent that we adjourn until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other committee announcements?

COGHILL: The Administration Committee will meet immediately upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill asks unanimous consent that the Convention adjourn until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered, and the Convention stands adjourned until 9 a.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 5, 1956

FORTY-FOURTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Reverend Londborg, would you give our daily invocation?

REVEREND LONDBORG: Our Heavenly Father, we pray that You will bless us in our deliberations this day. We pray for clear minds that we may be able to think through these problems and to decide wisely. We ask in Thy name, Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Seven absent.

DAVIS: Mr. President, Mr. Hellenthal is sick this morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with the regular order of business. Mr. Riley is present also. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, the Committee to read the journal recommends the approval of the journals for the first, second, third and fourth Convention days with the corrections noted on the mimeographed sheets, provided the delegates agree.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does everyone have copies of the suggested corrections to the journals for the first, second, third and fourth days? Is there objection to the approval of the minutes to those days as suggested by the special Committee to read the journal? If not, the journals of the first, second, third and fourth days are ordered approved as corrected and read by the special Committee to read the journal. The record will show Mr. Barr as being present. Mr. McCutcheon, also. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside the Convention? Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I rise to a point of personal privilege. We are short one report from one of our members. We would like to have a report on the hearings held by our member recently returned from Hawaii.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Delegate who was recently from Hawaii have a report to make? We are very happy to have you back with us, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I report progress. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are pleased to see our absent members here with us this morning. The weather has allowed them to be with us again. Are there any communications from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Of select committees? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask unanimous consent for the withdrawal of Committee Proposal No. 8 for Committee revision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that the resources?

SMITH: That is the resources article. I would call your attention to the fact that this proposal was marked "No. 8" and to the effect that the withdrawal would not, as I see it, affect its place on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith asks unanimous consent that the Committee be allowed to withdraw Committee Proposal No. 8 for suggested revision. If there is no objection, it is so ordered and the proposal will be turned over to the Committee. Are there other reports? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 1 has compared same with the original and find it correctly engrossed and the first enrolled copy in proper form. Mr. President, I would like to move that the rules be suspended and that Committee Proposal No. 1 be returned to second reading for the purpose of rescinding our action on the voting age and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent that Committee Proposal No. 1, which is the proposal dealing with the election provisions of the suffrage proposal, be returned to second reading for specific amendment.

SWEENEY: We would be rescinding the action on the voting age.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent?

COGHILL: I object.

SWEENEY: I so move.

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is on a suspension of the rules. It is not debatable, Mrs. Sweeney. The question is, "Shall Committee Proposal No. 1 be returned to second reading?" Well, Mrs. Sweeney, as the Chair sees it, and the Chair would stand corrected if the Chair does not see it correctly, the Chair feels that your first motion would have to be the suspension of the rules to return it to the second reading. A rescinding motion would have to be made in second reading after.

SWEENEY: I just did not want to get tied up with the wrong motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that the feeling of the delegates, that we would have to suspend the rules first, get it into second reading, then you could offer your motion to rescind if it went to second reading?

SWEENEY: May we have a roll call on that please?

COGHILL: Mr. President, it was my understanding that no proposal has left second reading until after the recess. So therefore it would still be in second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, Mr. Coghill, when it went to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee, it is still technically in second reading until the Style and Drafting Committee completes its work on the proposal. However, so far as the rules are concerned, the moment it went to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee, to get it back into second reading for any amendment or any action whatsoever it would take a suspension of the rules. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and Committee Proposal No. 1 be returned to second reading?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 22 - Boswell, Cooper, Gray, Hermann, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Metcalf, Nolan, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 28 - Awes, Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Doogan, Hellenthal, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 22 yeas, 28 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed motion to suspend the rules has failed of adoption. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I now forward the enrolled copies and I believe that the mimeographed and first enrolled copies have been placed on the delegates' desks.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask for the adoption of the report of the Committee?

SWEENEY: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. The proposal will proceed on its regular course to the Style and Drafting Committee. Are there any proposals to be introduced at this time? Are there any motions or resolutions? Miss Awes, did you have something?

AWES: Mr. President, if we could revert to committee reports for a minute.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will revert to committee reports. Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to announce a meeting of the Bill of Rights Committee just as soon as we recess for noon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A meeting of the Bill of Rights Committee will be held immediately upon recess. Are there other committee announcements to be made? The Chair would like to announce that there will be a meeting of the committee chairmen at 12:30. Is there unfinished business? We have before us Committee Proposal No. 3 in second reading. We are on Section 6 of Committee Proposal No. 3. Is there an amendment pending at this time?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, Mr. Fischer's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer's proposed amendment to Committee Proposal No. 3, Section 6. Would the Chief Clerk please read that proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, delete lines 5 and 6 on page 3."

PRESIDENT EGAN: A motion has been made and seconded for the adoption of that amendment. Is that correct?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Just to refresh everyone's memory, the motion to amend was made in order to remove the limitation on the grounds for recall and leave the way open to recall by the voters for any reason that the voters may see fit, as is done in practically every state. In connection with that it should be pointed out that this recall is not only against state officers but would apply also to elective officers in local government where the grounds may be justifiable or of a different nature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? If not, the question is, "Shall the amendment as proposed by Mr. Victor Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 6? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, now that that amendment has passed, I propose an amendment to line 7 on page 3. Line 7 on page 3 now reads as follows: "The legislature shall prescribe the recall procedures." I move to amend that by adding to the end of that sentence "and grounds for recall".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you strike the period?

R. RIVERS: Yes, strike the period at the end.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And add the words "and grounds for recall".

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to check, Mr. President, for the purpose of possibly making a little further amendment in a few minutes, and I would like to ask Mr. Rivers' consent to possibly go on to some other amendments that are pending and then we might be able to work out a more comprehensive amendment to this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would it take you very long, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: About five minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do the delegates feel we should have a five minute recess to get this cleared up before we do proceed? If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess while Mr. Fischer and Mr. Rivers get together.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, I could well see that the amendment I proposed would hinge on whether or not Mr. Fischer's amendment carries, so I wish to have mine suspended or withheld until

Mr. Fischer's amendment is acted upon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will hold Mr. Ralph Rivers' amendment in abeyance until the amendment that will be proposed by Mr. Victor Fischer can be mimeographed. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, could I have permission to have this mimeographed since it consists of several sentences?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair has seen the proposed amendment and feels that a copy should be in the hands of each delegate. You have permission to have it mimeographed. Are there other amendments to Proposal No. 3 on the initiative and referendum? Does Mr. Smith have an amendment to Section 3? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I have one on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg has an amendment to Section 6 which has nothing to do with the proposed amendment we are holding in abeyance. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment by Mr. Londborg.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, line 3, strike the words 'except judicial officers'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Londborg?

LONDBORG: I move the adoption of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg moves the adoption of the amendment, that is, to strike the three words from line 3, Section 6, "except judicial officers". Is there a second to the motion?

MCCUTCHEON: I object.

COGHILL: I second the motion.

MCCUTCHEON: I will give notice at this time that, if the vote is called on this, I will call the assembly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg, were you trying to get the floor?

LONDBORG: I feel that, inasmuch as the Judiciary Committee has taken care of the judges through the fact that they are not elected, that they are already exempt from the recall, and I am thinking of probably the judicial officers down in the lower courts that may be elected by the people. We don't know what will be set up in local governments or anything of that nature, and certainly they should not be protected from the people and have a cloak put around them so that they could not be recalled. I think you will find that there will have to be some substitute made for the present United States Commissioner who is acting out in places. Now, if they should be elected by the people, if that should be the form set up, then certainly there would have to be some way of recalling them, because they would not come under the impeachment act set up in the Judiciary Committee. As far as the judges under the judiciary proposal, I do not believe this affects them in any way. It is not necessarily intended to because they are not elected officials to begin with, and this article of Section 6 only pertains to elected officials, but I think all elected ones should be included, and I am thinking particularly of the judges in the lower courts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, the historical precedent for Mr. Londborg, as I mentioned yesterday -- in 1911, President Taft turned down, vetoed the admission of Arizona into the Union because specifically in their constitution they had a provision providing for the recall of the judiciary. It was solely on that grounds that President Taft turned down the admission of Arizona into the Union. The fact is that it does have that provision in its constitution now. But historically that was the only reason and true reason given by President Taft for rejecting the whole proposed constitution of the State of Arizona, because to him, and it does exist in other constitutions. but to him at that time, the provision for recall was so offensive that he in substance turned down the whole constitution. In substance what you are doing by this recall petition is you are providing for a recall or an election. You are amending the judiciary article to provide that an election, in substance, can be held at any time to recall any judicial officer. That means that, if his decision is unpopular at any given time, that promptly he can be reversed. It is roughly equivalent to one other provision that was at one time in one state constitution providing that by referendum, it is a rough equivalent of that where the state supreme court determined that something was in violation of the constitution, that people by referendum could reverse the supreme court and declare it constitutional. In substance you are doing the same thing by permitting a recall, you could recall every one of the supreme court justices because of the fact you felt that their decision was improper, they could be recalled and another panel substituted immediately for them. You would be getting reversal of decisions by recalling your judicial officers. That is the offensive part of the article. I believe the Convention voted in substance that we had adequate provisions in our judiciary article for the removal of incompetent or inadequate personnel. The recall provision, as I say, historically might be grounds for the rejection of this constitution, and I feel that we are moving on very dangerous grounds when we consider the proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I must have misunderstood Mr. Londborg's motion if Mr. McLaughlin is talking to the point, because I thought he was making an exception of judicial officers. They should not be recalled.

PRESIDENT EGAN: He was striking the three words "except judicial officers". Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to say, too, that all judicial officers are under the general impeachment clause and the legislature will be providing for these courts of limited jurisdiction, like juvenile justices and justices of the peace courts and all that sort of thing. Those courts will be set up as the legislature shall prescribe, and I think the legislature should take care of the hiring and the firing. If the legislature chooses to call for elective justices of the peace, then they can be under the impeachment clause. They are under the early retirement based on recommendation of the judicial council. They are subject to being removed for being incapacitated or infirm under the procedure set up in the judiciary, so I believe we have got that very well covered the way it is. I might also say that Mr. Londborg does not think that his language would be construed to apply to the justices of the supreme court or the judges of the superior courts, but the fact remains that they are elective officials in the sense that their names go on the ballot, so then you are starting up another argument as to whether judges are elected or not. We know they are screened and appointed, but they are still subject to the approval of the voters periodically, so you are just fouling it up.

LONDBORG: May I direct one or two questions through the Chair? First, I would like to ask Mr. Rivers if a governor appoints someone and a senate confirms it, then we don't say they are elected by the senate and the same way if the judges are appointed they serve awhile and the people confirm their appointment in three years. This is not an election is it?

R. RIVERS: No, you are talking strictly of appointive officers confirmed by the senate and they wouldn't come under this at all, but the very fact that you subject your judges to approval or rejection at the polls raises the argument whether they are elected or not.

LONDBORG: I would like to ask Mr. McLaughlin, he mentions a state that was refused admission. How were they selecting their judges at that time? Was that by your present setup or were they elected judges?

MCLAUGHLIN: I frankly do not know, Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: That puts it in an entirely different situation than we have here. I don't think we should operate on the fear we are going to be rejected by the United States or not, it is whether we feel it is right or not. I am just throwing that out that that should govern us, not pick a state that has a different situation and use that as a basis for argument.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Londborg, I feel that $300,000 and three months of work, that if it is going to be turned down by the Congress of the United States, it is a matter of great concern to the Convention.

LONDBORG: I agree with you entirely on that, but we can use that same argument in many other instances and pick something that may not be entirely related and use it as a threat to the voting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, do you have the floor?

MCLAUGHLIN: Forgive me, I do not, I am out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: In order to allay Mr. Londborg's fears, assuming that at least a portion of the legislative branch article shall be adopted, we have in that two different devices which should protect the public from any type of an officer that Mr. Londborg fears might remain in office. One is by method of impeachment by the legislature and another is by joint address wherein any civil officer may be removed from office by the legislature. It would appear to me that there would be no need to strike these particular words that Mr. Londborg objects to at this particular time in view of the fact that we have other devices in other sections of the proposed constitution which would give ample public protection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, just a point of information. Since we have had the threat once already of calling of the assembly, I would like to know under what rules we are operating on a call of the house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would feel that we are operating under the Robert's Rules of Order and any rule that might be in the proposed rules relative to the call of the assembly which--is there a specific number who has to call under the rules?

RILEY: Mr. President, our own rules do not specify. They say the house may take such means as it feels necessary.

SWEENEY: That is what I am wondering. If we have a call of the house, does that mean we are going to have to sit and wait until 55 come or are we going to suspend operation on the issue and go on with other things?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, that would have to be decided by the assembly. If Mr. McCutcheon did call the assembly, it would mean that we would either have to sit here until all delegates arrived here or by general agreement suspend further action on this proposal until they were all present.

SWEENEY: That is something we take care of at that time? We don't have any rules yet?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The rule is there, that any number may make a call of the assembly. It would take a suspension of the rules to overrule any motion of that nature, but we are operating under Robert's Rules of Order and our own rules which mention the call of the assembly.

SWEENEY: It seems to me that we ought to have something definite on it because we certainly don't want to have to sit here on one issue and wait until we have a full house. We ought to have some rule whereby we can definitely know that we can suspend or go on with other things.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The feeling of the Chair is that we have a rule in Robert's Rules that relates to a call of the assembly and a call of the house, and it takes just one person to make a call.

SWEENEY: I understand that, Mr. President, but I don't believe that Robert's Rules of Order say we can go on with other business by holding this one issue in suspension.

PRESIDENT EGAN: By general agreement which would be suspension of all rules, it can be done, of course. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: At the time the rules were being drafted by the Rules Committee I recall we consulted Robert's Rules on this point to see what it did provide, and what it does provide is something quite different from what those who have served in Alaska legislatures may be accustomed to. In other words, all business of the house does not stop. I think Robert's provide that when there is a call of the house, that a vote on the measure in connection with which the call is made shall be withheld until the absent members have been summoned, but the house may go on with other business.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: As a matter of information, I do not intend to call the house if you bring this matter to issue.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I believe about the only thing about the judiciary bill that I agree with is that we should not subject the judges to recall. However, I don't believe either that the legislative proposal, for example, if justices of the peace are to be elected and that sort of procedure set up at a later time, I don't believe we should have to wait until the time that the legislature met in order to endeavor to impeach a justice of the peace in some far-flung community, and I believe that probably would be a matter of separate amendment and possibly somewhere else in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, I raised this same question sometime ago and discussed it with Mr. McLaughlin and then I had proposed to make the same amendment as Mr. Londborg made. After discussing it with Mr. McLaughlin I tore it up. But now that Mr. Londborg has raised a question and there seems to be an objection, I am just wondering, and I will ask somebody a question. Maybe they can answer it. Instead of striking the three words "except judicial officers", I am wondering about adding to that except judicial officers of the superior and supreme courts" and then if that would not protect the judiciary article, and at the same time provide for the fear that Mr. Londborg seems to have. We have discussed in Local Government, particularly under the home rule charters where we have most of our officials elected, etc., that there should be some provision for setting up justices of the peace, and then being able to recall them if necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan, we have this proposed amendment by Mr. Londborg. Unless he would desire to amend his proposed amendment, the other discussion would be in order later after this has been dispensed with. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, it seems to me that while I am not especially fearful of the need for the recall for the judiciary at the lower levels, it seems to me there should be a little amplification for perhaps some of the members, the delegates who may want to vote for this amendment. It seems that the historical precedent cited to us, that of Arizona and the rejection of their constitution by Taft, on account of it would not be in the nature of a majority historical precedent. The Hawaiian Handbook says, Constitutional and statutory provisions of twelve states have made the recall applicable to state officers, judges being specifically excluded in four of these states, which are Idaho, Louisiana, Michigan and Washington." Now as the Chairman of the Judiciary Branch stated the other day, they put that clause back in, that they could recall the state judiciary in Arizona after their constitution was approved, but it seems to me that the historical precedent would be that there are a greater number that allow the recall of judicial officers than the number that do not so allow, and it seems to me that for the benefit of those who want to vote for this amendment they should have that information rather than the one case of Arizona.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Londborg be adopted by the Convention?"

ROBERTSON: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 7 - Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, Poulsen, Reader, Sweeney, Walsh.

Nays: 44 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 7 yeas, 44 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Doogan, do you have an amendment to Section 6, a proposed amendment?

DOOGAN: Yes. I brought it to the desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Doogan.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 3, line 3, add after the word 'officers' the following, 'of the Superior and Supreme Courts'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Doogan?

DOOGAN: I move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves and asks unanimous consent for his proposed amendment.

MCCUTCHEON: Objection.

DOOGAN: I so move.

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, Section 16 of the article on the judiciary which we have going into third reading, "Impeachment of any justice or judge for malfeasance or misfeasance may be carried on." In case there was some question in minds as to whether the local judges would be subject to impeachment, I think they would be subject to it regardless of what the legislature did if we adopt our present judiciary article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I have that sentence read as it would be?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the sentence as it would appear if the proposed amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Every elected public official in the state except elected judicial officers of superior or supreme courts is subject to recall", etc.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Doogan be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye," all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 6? If not, the Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment to Section 3 as offered by Mr. Smith.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 9, strike the period after 'referendum' and insert a comma and add 'except as herein provided'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Smith?

SMITH: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers seconds the motion. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to say that the addition of those words is merely for the purposes of clarifying the intent. This section as I see it makes it mandatory that the legislature prescribe the procedures to be followed in the exercise of the powers of initiative and referendum, then the article goes ahead and prescribes those procedures so I think that it might save confusion by the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I think it would not save any confusion at all. Of course, if we provide in the constitution conditions under which these things must be done, those things are mandatory. You don't have to say "except as provided herein". It's already in there. It is just unnecessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I differ with Mr. Sundborg. We have spelled in enough procedure here so that this could be self-executing if we say "except" as provided herein. Otherwise, we say "the legislature shall", but we have practically done the job, and it makes better sense to persons who are not familiar with constitutional interpretations if we put those three words in there, and in the absence of action by the legislature you still have got a self-executing procedure here. So I strongly advocate Mr. Smith's amendment.

SUNDBORG: May I address a question to Mr. Ralph Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Sundborg, if there is no objection.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Rivers, would you contend that if we defeat this amendment and do not put in those words that the legislature would not be governed by the specific provisions later appearing in Sections 4 and 5?

R. RIVERS: This says, "The legislature shall prescribe the procedure". Now the legislature might pass an act that is just simply declaratory of the procedure that is set in here. If the legislature did not pass an act that is declaratory of this language here, then it could be argued that there is no initiative or referendum until the legislature passes that kind of act. Mr. Sundborg doesn't object to those words except he thinks they are surplus verbiage, but I think they do serve a useful purpose. I don't want to say a legislature's going to fail its duty but it might be several sessions before the legislature gets around to it. It simply helps matters.

SUNDBORG: May I hear from some other learned attorney on this point, perhaps Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I am not learned on the point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Smith be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following results)

MARSTON: I wish to change my vote here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You will have to wait to the end.

MARSTON: I wish to change it to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: That is what it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you wish to leave it at "yes"?

MARSTON: Yes, I do.

(The following is the result of the roll call:

Yeas: 33 - Boswell, Collins, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 18 - Awes, Barr, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Sundborg, VanderLeest.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 33 yeas, 18 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted by the Convention. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, an amendment proposed by me has been mimeographed and distributed. Before it is read I would like to make two grammatical corrections. In the fifth line, after "recall petition" insert a comma. Also in the fifth line, after "recall" change a comma to a period, change the "t" to a capital "T".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, the Chair would wonder if you would have any objection, we are on Section 3 now, and had Mr. Smith offered another amendment to Section 3?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then you may proceed, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Does this have to be read or can I move its adoption?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk should read the proposed amendment before you move its adoption. The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert the following before the last sentence of Sec. 6: 'Such number of such voters as shall equal twenty per cent of the number of votes cast at the preceding general election for all of the candidates for the office held by such official, may, by petition which shall be known as a recall petition, demand his recall. The petition shall contain a statement in not more than 200 words of the grounds for recall. If the official concerned shall not have resigned within 5 days after the required number of voters have signed a recall petition, a special election shall be ordered to be held within the state or political subdivision as the case may be, not less than 60 nor more than 90 days after such order, to determine whether such official shall be recalled.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: I move the adoption of this amendment and ask unanimous consent.

MCCUTCHEON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard to the unanimous consent request. Is there a second to the proposed motion?

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher seconds Mr. Fischer's motion. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, the recall power is a means of direct participation of the voters in their government just as the initiative and referendum. The initiative and referendum would be useless if you say, "The voters may enact laws by the initiative and may vote upon referred laws according" to such procedures as may be established by the legislature. We have spelled the procedures out at length. The same thing must be done in the case of recall if it is to be effective. I would like to refer to the Hawaiian Manual in which you will find that out of twelve states that authorize the recall, ten provide for the procedure. Also, in those ten the grounds for the recall are left to the statement of the petitioners as is provided here in the second sentence which says that, "The petition shall contain a statement in not more than two hundred words of the grounds for recall." That is where the grounds will be found. The procedure as set up here, you will note, would set up a special election held within the state or the political subdivision, as the case may be. This is so that in case a petition is filed against an official who may have another year or two or three to serve, that he can be recalled before the next general election which may be two years away. I believe that if we are to have the recall section included in this article we should adopt this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Fischer, if I may. Mr. Fischer, when you proposed your amendment yesterday which was passed today, deleting lines 5 and 6, I asked you if you did that with the understanding that line 7 would allow the legislature to prescribe the grounds for recall. As I recall, your answer was "yes". Now, if I understand correctly, you maintain that this sentence in your proposed amendment would allow the grounds to be set forth there on the further assumption that the grounds outlined would be legal grounds for recall. It seems to me that is contradictory. It seems to me the legislature can still probably prescribe the grounds for recall and that, if they can, your whole amendment is contradictory with the deletion of lines 5 and 6 because the grounds, it seems to me, are the most important factor to set forth, if you wish to spell this out.

V. FISCHER: When I rose yesterday to move the deletion of 5 and 6 I stated that I agreed with Mr. McCutcheon's remarks to the effect that the voters should be able to recall for any reason that the voters deemed proper. If I gave the impression that I felt the legislature should establish the grounds, I may have given the wrong impression. I did not fully intend that. I might say in this connection that if this amendment is adopted the last sentence should then of course be amended to read, "The legislature may then provide additional recall procedures." I feel that the grounds should be left up to the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, would you please look at this book I have in my hand. That is the Constitution of the State of California. It is about five times as thick as any other state constitution. It is full of legislative matters such as this long detailed procedure for recall which is now proposed as an amendment. Another reason for its length is that it has been amended some 500 times. The reason that had to be amended was because it was full of long involved procedures such as this. The only way I could vote for an amendment like this is that at the same time we abolish the legislature. Some of us forget that we were sent here to write a constitution, not to make detailed laws.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. Barr practically took the words out of my mouth. I just wanted to add that if we continue we may not have the best constitution in the United States but we will sure have the longest.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Our trip out to the Ladd Air Force Base should have taught us a lesson, when we see one of these million dollar jets where it is modern today and outmoded tomorrow. I for one am going to vote against this amendment and leave it to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I probably would agree with the process by Mr. Fischer but I look with askance at 20 per cent, 200 words within five days, 60 or 90 days. It will take us about four days to get through this recall because everyone has a different idea on the exact figure. I believe the authority for the recall is all that is necessary, and the legislature can take care of this affair. I just feel that putting through another recall will take another three or four days in this delegation. I will vote against the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I am in agreement with Mr. Fischer's amendment, most of it anyway. I seconded it. I think the arguments brought against it are valid only in part. Especially those among us here who have been legislators, we fail to grasp the sense of truth that this is an article about direct legislation. It is something that is parallel, and maybe, if you look at it the way I do, superseding in some instance the legislature. It is an article that should not be subject to the legislature. You can't harp on that enough. It is the very nature of direct legislation that it has to be described in all of its aspects in the constitution. This amendment would certainly add about 10 more lines to the constitution. It won't add 100 pages or 10 pages but 10 lines. If we want to include the whole article on direct legislation, we have spent more than 10 lines to describe the procedure for initiative and referendum. Recall is the triplicate brother of the same article. We have to give as much space and certainly as much consideration as Mr. Fischer justly said. The article actually stands and falls with the recall as much as it would have stood and fallen with the initiative and referendum. They are three integral parts and they all have the same weight and should all get the same treatment. It is not a loss of time and much less a loss of space in that constitution of ours if we take 10 more lines to include it. It is in the nature of direct legislation, that which you can spell in the constitution. That is the only recourse people have in direct legislation and it should not be subject to the legislature, that is the fallacy involved. I strongly urge that you give this consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question -- Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would just again like to say that you are not giving the power of recall to the people unless you establish the procedure in this, and, if we have to put a few more words in the constitution, that is why we are writing a constitution. It is just as important here as it is in the initiative and referendum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I just want to say very briefly that I support this amendment. I feel that a provision of this type is necessary in our constitution. I don't think that anyone here can deny the fact that we do want to give the public some consideration in drawing up this constitution, and the object of the initiative, referendum and recall I think is to give that power to the voters. We have gone over the first two parts, and it seems to me that, if we are going to have this privilege extended to the voters, this provision here adequately covers it. I think the people are entitled to have this provision in the constitution for their own safety. I don't think it is a question of mistrusting their legislature. We have had very good men down there, and of course some of us have failed in a good many respects while we were public servants. However, we should not assume that we are going to have a perfect body of legislators all the time, and I think the people are entitled to some protection. I, therefore, support this amendment, and I think it is a good provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I feel there is all the difference in the words between the subjects covered in the previous sections of this article and the one on which we are now dwelling. In the case of the initiative, it is a provision whereby the people may do something that a legislature has failed to do or that a legislature has refused to do, and in that case it would not be proper to leave it to the legislature to set up the provisions. You have to have the provisions in the constitution. In the second case, the case of the referendum, it is a provision whereby the people may have their say on something they feel the legislature has done wrong and may want to override. The recall is something different, it doesn't deal with the legislature, it deals with public officials and I think it is proper, and the way to do it is to leave the procedure to the legislature. There is nothing permissive about this language. It says, "The legislature shall provide the recall procedures." I say let them do it and let them have the right to change it from time to time to meet conditions which cannot be done if we write into the constitution a provision which I don't think is very well thought out and might require amendment in a very short time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I have a proposed amendment to Section 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Can we hold the other amendment of yours, Mr. Ralph Rivers?

R. RIVERS: I consent to have it held, pending this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert before the last line of Section 6 'Grounds for recall shall be set forth in a recall petition'."

WHITE: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves the adoption of the proposed amendment and asks unanimous consent.

MCCUTCHEON: Objection.

WHITE: I so move.

GRAY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, it appeared to me that the desirable part of the amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer was that it would allow the grounds for recall to be set forth by the people demanding the recall. As it stands now, without my proposed amendment I feel that the legislature is to prescribe the grounds for recall. In fact, with this bill we will probably have an amendment to set that forth clearly. The vital part of the recall movement it seems to me is that the people retain not only the right to recall a public official but to name the reasons for instituting such action and let the action itself stand or fall on the merits of the case. I think this logically follows removing of lines 5 and 6 as we did previously.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, the reason I was willing to have my proposed amendment withheld is that Mr. White's amendment gives us a clear-cut issue. If his language is adopted here then I will withdraw my amendment because we are to decide now whether the voters shall decide the grounds for recall to be stated in a petition or whether you wish to vote down this amendment and leave it to the legislature to prescribe the grounds for recall. I think that a good clear-cut issue is to be desired and here we have a good clear-cut issue. I am going to hold for having the legislature prescribe the grounds for recall as well as the procedures, but I approve of the way this is presented.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I am a little at sea here on one point. I can see some merit in both positions. It seems to me that the legislature may prescribe the area within which a recall may occur, that we struck lines 5 and 6 in order to leave that open to the legislature. But Mr. White's amendment calls for a petition which will state an individual case. What grounds within that area prescribed by the legislature shall apply in a particular recall? If I am on the track here I would like to suggest a two-minute recess to discuss the matter with Mr. Rivers and Mr. White to see if these matters are not readily reconciled.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for just two minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I think the two points of view as set forth in the two proposed amendments are not reconcilable. Should my amendment pass, Mr. Ralph Rivers' proposed amendment could logically also be passed, but it would limit the meaning of mine. I intend through my amendment to leave it to the people to establish the grounds, the basis of recall, be it as frivolous as it may, and let the case stand or fall on its merits. I feel that that really carries out the intent we had in striking lines 5 and 6. I feel it is not the intent of the body not to limit the grounds of recall.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I was against the elimination of lines 5 and 6 and I am also against the adoption of this amendment because I feel that it does create a nuisance value to which public officials should not be subjected. I recognize that they should be subject to recall, but I think that the grounds should be sincere and they should be. I think it is fair to leave it to the legislature to prescribe the grounds under which a recall petition should be circulated so as to prevent circulation of recall petitions for petty grounds in local jurisdictions by some recalcitrant officer who was not elected, which I have seen happen in my own community.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it would appear to me that a petition for a recall certainly could have no merit or stand by itself without stating some ground in it. It appears to me that the addition of these words is merely loading the constitution up with things that are not necessarily pertinent. I don't see how anyone can circulate a petition for recall unless there were substantial grounds stated in it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I am way behind the parade here, but did we pass an amendment adding "and grounds for recall" to the last sentence?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was the proposed amendment that Mr. Ralph Rivers has. Mr. White.

WHITE: I am speaking for the third time, Mr. President. If there is objection I will sit down. I just wanted to point out that the last sentence will still remain, "that the legislature shall prescribe recall procedures". It does not necessarily follow that they would say that any two voters could initiate a recall petition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. We now have before us the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers. The Chief Clerk may read that proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 7, page 3, strike the period and add to the end of that sentence 'and grounds for recall'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was that moved and seconded?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, it was. No, it was not seconded.

R. RIVERS: Now I ask unanimous consent. I so move.

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Is there discussion?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Awes, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 11 - Barr, V. Fischer, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Peratrovich, Poulsen, White.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Doogan, Hellenthal, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 11 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted by the Convention. Are there other amendments to Proposal No. 3? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, may I have the floor on a point of personal privilege."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr requests the floor on a point of personal privilege. If there is no objection, Mr. Barr.

(Mr. Barr spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 10:45 a.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 10:45 a.m. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, when there are no further amendments to the first article of the proposal now before us, because there are two articles in that proposal, I should like to ask unanimous consent that the first article be referred separately to Engrossment and Enrollment so that they may commence work on it, only because we may spend some time on the next article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, Mr. Riley, but that question came into the mind of the President and both of these articles are a part of Committee Proposal No. 3. We can't segregate them to the extent that they can be taken out of second reading until both articles are ready to go, but if the body wishes to give the first article to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment for the purposes that they can start working on the amendments, but it would still, if a member of the delegation offered an amendment after we consider Article 2, the article on revision and amendment, it would still be in order in second reading.

RILEY: That is my entire purpose, Mr. President. I wish simply to ask a suspension of the rules in order to start the process in Engrossment and Enrollment with that understanding.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That does not preclude the further amendment of the article on initiative and referendum if, after we have considered Article No. 2, anyone wishes to do so. In other words, someone who is strongly for the initiative and referendum might wish to offer some amendment after we get through with this second article. If there is no objection, the article will be referred to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee under those circumstances. If there is no objection, it is so ordered. Are there further amendments? If not, we will proceed with the article on revision and amendment. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

R. RIVERS: Are we taking these section by section now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will start with Section 1.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I was wondering if the Clerk might not read this entire thing for us to review our minds before we start amending.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Have we had it read previously?

CHIEF CLERK: I don't recall.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the entire article before we start any amendments if that is the wish of the delegates.

(Clerk read article on revision and amendment.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to the article on revision and amendment? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the Secretary's desk to Section 1 and also Section 2 because it is tied in with the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 1 in its entirety and insert in lieu thereof a new Section 1: 'Revisions of this constitution may be adopted by a two-thirds affirmative vote of two successive legislatures, a constitutional convention, or by a three fourths affirmative vote of the legislature. Amendments to this constitution may be adopted by the affirmative vote of three-fifths of all votes cast by qualified voters, voting on such amendment'." "Section 2, line 5, delete 'two-thirds' and insert 'three-fourths'." "Section 2, line 9, after the word 'a' before 'majority' insert 'three-fifths'.

COOPER: I move the adoption of this amendment.

HELLENTHAL: I object.

COGHILL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill seconds the motion. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have this in mind. It should not be so easy as outlined in this article at present to amend or revise the constitution. We have been told we were doing a good job with it. I felt quite sure when the constitution leaves this Convention and goes to the people it will be good. The revisions of the constitution as provided in Section 1 says, "may be adopted by two succeeding legislatures, or be proposed by constitutional convention or by the legislature." It does not make itself clear. My amendment would be revisions of the constitution may be adopted by a two-thirds vote of two successive legislatures, a constitutional convention, or by a three-fourths affirmative vote of a legislature. The amendments to the constitution which would be voted on by the people would be by a three-fifths majority of all votes cast in the affirmative for such an amendment. In Section 2, line 5, is merely inserting the fractions as outlined in Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to point out that, under Section 1 as outlined here, it is not possible for one legislature to amend the constitution. It is only possible for them to propose amendment and then submit that to the people, and it provides further for amendment by constitutional convention. It is not possible for one legislature to amend the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of perhaps someone on the Committee. Does Section 1 as now written mean that the amendments can be adopted by the two succeeding legislatures without any referral to the people?

SMITH: Mr. President, I am certain that that is the intent of Section 1 that an amendment may be adopted if it is proposed by one legislature and approved by the second legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, was your question there relating to the clarity of the wording even if that section were adopted as it is?

R. RIVERS: If we kept it the way it was, Section 2 says that, "Any legislature may by a two-thirds vote of each house propose amendments to the constitution." And those proposed amendments may be submitted by ballot title to the voters. That, of course, would be a different procedure than Section 1 which merely says that two legislatures may amend the constitution. But the thing is that it does not seem to register clearly that these are alternative methods. You have got to stop and start analyzing to see just what they mean. Now then on line 12 it says, "Proposed amendments may be submitted to the next legislature . That would mean the proposals set forth in Section 2 I suppose. Up here it says the revision in Section 1, "Revisions of or amendments to this constitution may be adopted by two succeeding legislatures, or be proposed by constitutional convention." The only way you can get a constitutional convention, as set forth on the second line of Section 3, is that the legislature may provide for a constitutional convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Can anyone on the Committee answer that? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: It is clear. We went over it for three weeks. The experts were in there. We adopted from previous states the program, the language is clear. There are two ways of amending the constitution. It is clear as can be, and I don't believe that we can in quick judgment charge in and make it better. I think snap judgment has gone far enough on this thing. I think this should be taken seriously as it is. There are two ways to amend the constitution, by two succeeding legislatures or by request of the legislature for amendment. It is clear and concise and this snap judgment of waiting time to write a new amendment, it is clear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the Chair understood correctly, Mr. Ralph Rivers' question was not dealing with the intent of the Committee, it was in dealing with the actual wording as it appears here, whether or not it does in effect do the things that you think it will do.

R. RIVERS: Yes, exactly. I have no quarrel with what is in here. But what the intent is, I can't quite understand it.

MARSTON: That is the decision of the experts and that is the way they passed on it.

R. RIVERS: Maybe they were so expert that they don't write it so ordinary people can understand it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. Rivers made the remark that up here in this section, "proposed by constitutional convention", then he said that only the legislature can do that. The first sentence in Section 3 states that, "The legislature may provide for constitutional conventions."

R. RIVERS: When they speak of amendments being proposed by constitutional convention, constitutional conventions do the amending, they don't propose amendments.

HERMANN: They have to be ratified.

R. RIVERS: That is more than a proposition though.

BARR: I don't have the floor but I would like to answer that. I think they're using that language, proposed, in reference to a proposal. Everything we put in here is a proposal. We proposed.

R. RIVERS: That is the trouble. We think we mean something but we have not said so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us Mr. Cooper's proposed amendment. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Cooper be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 5 - Coghill, Cooper, Kilcher, Reader, Rosswog.

Nays: 45 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 5 yeas, 45 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to the article on revision and amendment? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit your amendment. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I also have an amendment on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley had been recognized and Mr. Johnson's amendment can come after Mr. Hurley's. I am sorry, Mr. Johnson.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, lines 2 and 3, strike 'adopted by two succeeding legislatures, or be', and change 'proposed' to 'adopted' and add 'proposed' after 'or'.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Read that again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, lines 2 and 3, strike 'adopted by two succeeding legislatures, or be', and change 'proposed' to 'adopted' and add 'proposed' after 'or'". And then Section 2" -- is that a separate amendment?

HURLEY: No, they are together.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, strike lines 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will hold that we will have to act upon that as being the amendment. If Mr. Hurley proposes to move that, he should move on that as an amendment in its own right.

HURLEY: The last paragraph in Section 2 is surplus verbiage, it refers to something I propose to eliminate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection you might include it, if there is no objection you can include the whole thing in your motion.

HURLEY: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves the adoption of the proposed motion as read.

HARRIS: I second the motion.

COGHILL: Through the Chair, Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Hurley.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, if there is no objection, you may ask your question.

COGHILL: In the language therefore set, the constitutional convention would not have to have ratification of amendments by the people, is that correct? Under the language that you have now set, it would not be necessary?

HURLEY: Perhaps I too hurriedly changed the word "proposed" to "adopted". There was some discussion on that. My thought was that the constitutional convention would be submitted to the voters. If I changed that, I certainly did not intend to. It was pointed out a little different between proposing a constitutional convention and the convention actually proposing amendments which will be submitted to the people. It was my intention that anything be submitted to the people for referendum, but, if I did it wrong, I regret it and I'll change it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a minute to decide that.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of personal privilege, Mr. Hinckel. If there is no objection, you have the floor on personal privilege.

(Mr. Hinckel spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

DAVIS: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hinckel a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I am wondering if Section 1 adds anything at all. Actually, is not everything in Section 1 covered completely by Sections 2 and 3?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, do you care to answer that question?

HINCKEL: I would have to take another look at it to answer that intelligently. The object of Section 1 of course was the statement of the intent and the other sections went into the procedures.

DAVIS: It seems to me that Section 1 is a summary of the whole proposal and Sections 2 and 3 spell it out. If that is the case, it seems to me Section 1 is probably a surplus.

HINCKEL: That may be correct in your opinion, sir. However, it seems to me that most of the articles start out with the intent.

AWES: May I comment that I not only agree with Mr. Davis, but that I found it confusing, and I read it several times to find out what the purpose of it was other than to summarize the later propositions. I found it definitely confusing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I am inclined to agree with Mr. Hinckel that Section 1 could be eliminated by Style and Drafting if the Committee felt that all the intent was fully stated in the remainder of the sections, and, if I may go on, I think that in some ways the most important thing right now is to find out the intent of the Committee and, if I may, I would like to point out something and ask a question for guidance of the Committee. The way Section 1 reads now, it states that, "Revisions of or amendments to this constitution may be adopted by two succeeding legislatures." There is a big difference between revisions, which implies rewriting the constitution, and making amendments to specific articles or sections of the constitution. In talking to a few of the members of the Committee during the short recess, it appears that the Committee has in mind that revisions be undertaken by constitutional conventions and be adopted by vote of the people rather than by the legislature itself, and I just would like to have confirmation from one or more members of the Committee.

HINCKEL: We discussed that in Committee and we felt that if two separate legislative bodies agreed on the change or revision that it should be adequate, but we did not want one single legislature to make a change of that nature. If two succeeding separate legislatures concurred, we felt that probably that would be satisfactory.

V. FISCHER: If I may continue to ask a question, Mr. Hinckel, is it your intention then that the legislature be authorized in two succeeding sessions to sit as this constitutional convention here and revise the whole constitution from beginning to the end?

HINCKEL: I don't think there is any legislature that would even attempt to do such a thing. They would not want to assume the responsibility and it was not our intention that they do that. I don't think that they would ever try it.

V. FISCHER: Was it your intention that the legislature could rewrite the whole constitution by the process of revision and submit a completely revised constitution to the voters for adoption or should that process go through constitutional convention?

HINCKEL: As far as I personally am concerned, my personal opinion is that the legislature should not do that and I don't think it was our intent that they be permitted to. If we discussed it at all, as I state, I think we probably figured that they would call a convention for such a purpose.

V. FISCHER: That was my impression of the intent of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Hurley's amendment, or proposed amendment, poses a real question of substance, not just one for Style and Drafting. Mr. Hurley's amendment would require action by a constitutional convention to be ratified by the people, and it would also require action by the state legislature by a two-thirds vote of both houses in two successive sessions to be ratified by the people. The way the thing is now written, the legislature could amend the constitution or revise the constitution by action of two successive sessions without submitting it to the people. So we have more than a matter of Style and Drafting here. I think this body has got to take the responsibility of making these basic substantive decisions, but I for one, if we don't run too late here, would like to meet with the standing committee and various others that are particularly interested and have a conference during the noon hour with the standing committee and perhaps we could all come up with something that would be helpful.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I agree that Mr. Hurley's intention is a matter of substance, something that the Convention is going to have to decide, but it seems to me we are going after it backwards. The substance of his amendment is his motion to strike the last paragraph of Section 2. Since I think it is pretty generally agreed that Section 1 is merely a matter of statement of intent, we could actually drop that whole section without hurting what we're doing, and therefore to move now to amend Section 1 is not getting anywhere. What we are really after here is finding out whether the Convention wants to allow the constitution to be amended by the legislature or not. I wonder if Mr. Hurley or the Chair would object to passing on his motion to strike which is the substance of what we are after here. You see his motion is a two-barrelled motion, it is a motion to strike the last paragraph of Section 2. Now if that should pass, then there is no use of worrying about the wording of Section 1 because it is completely surplus verbiage or would follow as a matter of course, but what we want to do is to find out whether the group does or does not agree that the constitution can be amended by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your suggestion is that Mr. Hurley's proposed amendment be amended to not say anything about Section 1, is that right, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I thought we might pass on the portion of his amendment that had to do with Section 2 first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that in line with your desire, Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: It would be quite adequate with me if we divide the question into two parts. Vote first on the amendment to Section 2. If the second part carries Section 1 will not be applicable, and then we can either strike it or amend it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley asks unanimous consent that his original motion be divided in two parts and that the Convention act first on that.

HURLEY: In order to make it more simple, I will ask that my amendment be amended by striking the reference to Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley asks unanimous consent that his amendment be amended by striking all reference to Section 1. Is there objection?

HINCKEL: I object.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

HURLEY: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that Mr. Hurley's proposed amendment be amended by striking all reference to Section 1. The question is open for discussion. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: As I stated before, the object is to save the state expenses. If they have a proposed amendment that is urgent and is worthwhile, it can be handled in a manner that is not going to cost the state a lot of money. If you want to spend the money for special elections, you can.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I feel that it is basic that a constitution is a charter handed down by the people.

HURLEY: I rise to a point of order. We are speaking now on the amendment to the amendment. If we are going to speak on the original amendment I would like to have something to say about it, but the amendment to the amendment is simply to strike this thing and vote on one thing at a time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course in determining just whether a person is in the proper latitude, Mr. Hurley, it might include reference to what the meat of the original amendment was.

HURLEY: I withdraw my point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: If I understand Mr. Hurley's present suggestion, the pending one, there is a little misunderstanding in that Mr. Hinckel's comments I don't believe are responsive. Mr. Hurley seeks only to strike his reference to Section 1, he does not seek to strike Section 1 in the pending amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Hinckel. If the Chair did not make that clear, Mr. Hurley is not attempting to delete Section 1. He is striking the reference that he originally made to Section 1, asking that that be stricken from his proposed amendment. Section 1 will remain as it is if this amendment is adopted.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Hurley's proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention? All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying aye, all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment is adopted. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would just like to give my reasons for proposing the amendment now before us. That is that both myself and the people who attended the hearings which I held felt that any amendment to the constitution should be submitted to a referendum by the people. I recognize that it would be cheaper, by the cost of a ballot at any rate, for the two successive legislatures to amend the constitution, but I think it is somewhat contrary to the general methods of amending constitutions, and I have felt sometimes it would be better to take this matter up of amending the constitution after we have finished the constitution. When we get through I might be quite happy to have two legislatures amend it, but at the present time I think I would prefer to have any proposed amendment to the constitution submitted to the people for the referendum and that is the reason I proposed the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I feel inclined to support the matter as it stands rather than by amendment to strike out the proposition of the two legislatures. I feel that some of our group here are a little too suspicious of the legislators. If we will think in terms of the number of people who must be elected to the legislature in order to change the constitution, I think we will be a little less suspicious. It will actually require 110 different people to be elected at large over the Territory in order to change the constitution because it must be submitted to one, assuming that we have a total legislature of 60, then we elect in the next legislature 50, it will be a total of 110 people. That certainly should be a cross section and representation of the whole population of Alaska, and I can't see why two legislatures, if they are in accord by two-thirds, why that shouldn't be sufficient protection for the public.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Many other issues will be before the people when they are considering what men they should elect to their legislature. They will not be thinking primarily of the proposed amendment to the constitution. I feel strongly that the constitution of the State of Alaska should be amended, if at all, only by the people directly, and that their ratification be secured by their own votes and not through electing some man to the legislature whenever an amendment is proposed. So I favor Mr. Hurley's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, as we all know from the studies we have made, you have to tread a middle ground on amending constitutions. You must not make it so hard that they cannot be amended when amendment is necessary. You must not make it so easy that they can be amended at the whim of any particular segment of the population. It seems to me that the Committee here has done a good job. They have set up three alternative methods for amending the constitution. I am going to propose an amendment on the amount of votes that it will be necessary to carry an amendment in the event it is submitted to the people, but, so far as the methods, I like the way they have set it up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, it is my opinion here we are, in this amendment, voting on whether we wish to adopt the method of amendment by the legislature, whether it's two, three or four successive legislatures, this does not particularly matter to me. I feel that this being supreme, the charter or law, should be an instrument of the people and they and they alone delegate power to the governing bodies. I do not feel that the legislative power should extend to an ability to change the constitution, no matter how many successive legislatures it may go to. This is a principle that we in this body must decide on. However, in the course of the morning I have heard a number of incidents brought up that we are being too detailed in our amendments. That is the democratic process and that is the right of every member on this floor and I will defend that right. However, this is a matter that I feel should be given careful consideration. I don't think that we should delegate the supreme power to the legislature to alter the document by which they themselves are constituted and they themselves are governed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: It was the thought of the Committee, I think, that it is going to be quite difficult for the legislature to amend the constitution by the first method. The first legislature by majority proposes, and the second by two-thirds majority adopts, and it seems to me the odds of a second entirely different group of men that are elected adopting the method by a two-thirds majority would be almost as great as winning the ice pool, and it seems to me that if the need was great enough and a two-thirds could be gotten together, a two-thirds majority, it seems to me it would be a good amendment. Just remember we are living in a jet age, and, as suggested by Mr. Rivers, if you are going to take nine or ten months to put all this before the people, you may need this done quickly, and I think a two-thirds majority is a safe check and balance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended and offered by Mr. Hurley be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to see a roll call on this issue, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Amendment to Section 2, strike lines 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 33 - Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McNealy, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 18 - Awes, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Hermann, Hinckel, King, McCutcheon, McLaughlin. McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Rosswog, Wien.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 33 yeas, 18 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted by the Convention. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have one to offer.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, line 7, page 1, strike the word 'may' and insert the word 'shall'."

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the proposed amendment is adopted. Are there other amendments? Does Mr. Ralph Rivers have an amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, strike Section 1 and substitute the following new Section 1: 'Revisions of or amendments to this constitution may be adopted by the legislature or by constitutional convention as hereinafter authorized subject to ratification by the people.'"

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of that amendment.

HURLEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the proposed amendment by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I won't even ask unanimous consent. Mr. President, this motion is made in conformity with the action we have already taken, that whatever amending is done must be subjected to ratification by the people. It is also made out of respect to the standing committee and the desire of the standing committee that there be an expression of intention as Article 1. The way this would read is that, "Revisions of or amendments to this constitution may be adopted by the legislature or by constitutional convention as hereinafter authorized subject; to ratification by the people." Now I have used the words "adopted by the legislature", and that deals with the voting procedure in any case. Now, you don't want to have to call a constitutional convention every time you want to amend something necessarily. Perhaps the legislature is confronted with an important point, and everybody is generally agreed that there should be an amendment. Nevertheless, if the legislature takes that type of action it is still subject to the ratification by the people. I have used the word "adopted" because what the people ratify is not just something that has been proposed, but what the people ratify is something that has been adopted subject to ratification. The same thing is true of a constitutional convention. The convention does not just propose something, the constitutional convention adopts it but subject to confirmation or ratification by the people. Accordingly, the expression of intention, if this motion is carried, would simply be that our constitution may be revised or amended either by the legislature or by constitutional convention as hereinafter authorized subject to ratification by the people. Now that is clear, and it preserves the intention of our standing committee that they should have an expression of intent as Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent?

R. RIVERS: Now I ask for unanimous consent.

MCCUTCHEON: I object. I think the heart has been stricken from the very authority of it here. I don't see how on one hand he bows down now to the committee by trying to make some amends by adding a bunch of verbiage in the front of it. As far as I can see, just strike Section 1 and be done with it. Section 2 is absolutely plain as far as its intent is concerned. Why do you have to say the same thing twice?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I will close then. He says Section 2 is absolutely plain. It says, "Proposed amendments shall be submitted by ballot title. This does not state in so many words how the amendment is adopted. It imports that the people are adopting the amendment. It does not stack up too well unless we do preserve some expression in Section 1, I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment as proposed by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 38 - Awes, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Barr, Cooper, Doogan, V. Fischer, Kilcher, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, White.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 38 yeas, 13 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, if further amendments are in order to Section 2, I would like to suggest that in view of the action by the Convention in adopting the amendment just now and in view of Mr. Rivers' explanation of the meaning of the word "adopted", then, perhaps in the lines 10 and 11 in Section 2 on page 1, rather in line 10 where the word "adoption" appears, we ought to "put in the word "ratification" and, in line 11 where the word "adopted" appears, the word "ratified" should be substituted, and I move that the section be amended in line 10 to strike the word "adoption" and insert the word "ratification", and also in line 11 to strike the word "adopted" and insert the word "ratified".

PRESIDENT EGAN: You move the adoption?

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: There is a question I would like to ask Mr. Johnson. Would it be advisable to change the last word "adopted" to "ratified"? Would it not be better to say "the amendment is adopted"?

JOHNSON: Following out the argument as advanced by Mr. Ralph Rivers, it occurs to me that the word should be changed to "ratified" since the word "adopted" signifies action by the legislature or the constitutional convention and that that action would subsequently be ratified by the people in a vote. I think the word "ratified" should be substituted for the word "adopted".

KILCHER: May I address a question to Mr. Johnson?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Kilcher, you may address the question.

KILCHER: Should you not possibly consider in following the logic of Mr. Rivers' statement to substitute in line 6 the word "adopt" for "propose", and in line 7 the word "adopted" for "proposed"? In other words, if the popular vote ratifies, then the legislature has adopted something that has to be ratified not just proposed.

JOHNSON: That is a little outside my amendment then.

KILCHER: If we change the one we should change the whole sequence of it. I can see that a committee in the legislature would propose, and the legislature would adopt it, and then people would ratify. There is probably where the sequence of ratified and adopted comes in. The whole thing should be switched.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It might be best to see what happens to this and then if you felt that was in order, Mr. Kilcher, you could offer an amendment.

KILCHER: I thought maybe we could save time if he wanted to possibly include it and follow it all the way through. It is the same thought.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: This amendment by Mr. Johnson and the comments by Mr. Kilcher I think have to do with what I now think is the clearly expressed opinion of the Convention on what it means by the word "adopted" and what it means by the word "ratified", and I think the intent is perfectly clear. I wonder if Mr. Johnson would consent and then we could have unanimous consent here to make the language conform and, when we get it into the Committee on Style and Drafting, make it conform with the amendment by Mr. Rivers which we have just adopted for Section 1.

JOHNSON: I have no objection to that procedure provided that is permissible under the rules. We are in second reading and the article is subject to amendment and since I believe these matters are substance rather than form, we would not have a valid right to change it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you feel that way, Mr. Johnson, it would be better to go through with your amendment. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: In line with Mr. Johnson's amendment, I would wonder if he would be agreeable to language that might clean up the last sentence by striking the period after the word "election" on line 9 and continuing "a majority of the votes cast on a question shall be necessary to ratification." Just throwing that out, it is a change in construction, but I think it is a little less awkward.

JOHNSON: This I think is a matter for the Committee on Style and Drafting, once we have adopted this substance we have proposed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then the question is, "Shall the amendment as proposed by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?"

SUNDBORG: May I hear it read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 10, strike the word 'adoption' and insert the word 'ratification' and on line 11 strike the word 'adopted' and insert the word 'ratified'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Fischer.

KILCHER: There is an amendment on the board.

CHIEF CLERK: I have one to Section 2 here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair had recognized Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would accede to an amendment to Section 2 although I would prefer to --

KILCHER: Mine is on 3.

V. FISCHER: Mine is on 3, but I would like to get it in prior to Mr. Kilcher's because I don't think it would affect his proposal.

R. RIVERS: Point of order. Is Mr. Kilcher's amendment on Section 2?

PRESIDENT EGAN: On Section 3. The Chief Clerk will please read Mr. Fischer's amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: What about the Section 2 amendment?

DAVIS: That is my proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then it would be in order to recognize Mr. Davis, if it is to Section 2. It may be read at this time.

DAVIS: I offer a proposed amendment to Section 2. The proposed amendment is on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as offered by Mr. Davis.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, line 10, strike the words 'tallied on the question' and substitute the words 'cast at the election'." If the amendment is adopted the last sentence of the section will read as follows: "If a majority of the votes cast at the election favor the adoption of the amendment, the amendment is adopted."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I move the adoption of the amendment and in making the motion would like to state that I discussed this matter with at least a majority of the members of the Committee, and I think they will have no objection to the proposed amendment. The purpose for the amendment is that I think it is common knowledge that when propositions are on a ballot many people do not vote for propositions that do vote at the election. I think it would be entirely possible as the language is written for a very small minority to carry a constitutional proposition because only a majority of those voting on the question would carry it. I would like to see that changed to a majority of those voting at the election in question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moved the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Point of order. His statement as to how the last two lines will read, the words "adopted" have been changed to "ratified" and "ratification". I believe that his amendment should so read for the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you seeking to change those words back again, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: No, my amendment was in before the last amendment was adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you wish that those words be changed in your amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: That is not part of the amendment. That is just a statement that he had down here, how it would read. Does that satisfy your inquiry, Mr. Rivers?

JOHNSON: I ask unanimous consent.

R. RIVERS: I object.

RILEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, you are going to have these ratification elections take place at a general election, and of course there may be more people vote on the general ballot than actually ballot on the special proposition, on the separate ballot for ratifying a constitutional amendment, but every voter is going to have that separate ballot handed to him, and I think the bulk of the people voting are going to cast their vote on that special ballot. I think that the people that take the trouble to do the thinking, to decide how they are going to cast their ballot on a constitutional amendment, are the people whose ballots should be counted, and the majority of those votes are the ones that should govern. If you take a few hundred additional people who did not even cast a ballot on the business of ratifying our constitution and make a majority of those who did not think about or didn't even cast a ballot on it, determine what the outcome to be on a close election, I don't think you are actually regarding the citizenry who thought about it and who cast a ballot upon it. So I am opposed to Mr. Davis's proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, if Mr. Davis's amendment should be accepted, I think it would be a discrimination against the voters that are only interested in the amendment itself. In a way I would not mind that, to have a restriction put upon the vote, but then we should also put a restriction on line 5, on the two-thirds votes of each house, we should then change it possibly to two-thirds of the votes to which each house is entitled to make sure that they are all there. That would be in the same category of the thought. In other words, not two-thirds majority of a quorum but two-thirds of what each house is entitled to. But I am willing to forego that amendment if Mr. Davis's amendment is defeated, which I suggest should be done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I favor the amendment. In changing the constitution which is the will of the people, I think there should be no question about a clear majority. In a great many cases, people who are satisfied with conditions do not vote, but those people who are for the change will vote. It may not be so much a matter of a lack of interest, it may be that they are acceptable, and the ones who desire the change are the ones who are going to get out to vote. But basically it is the principle of the thing, let's establish a clear majority, let's not have a minority of the electors change the constitution. I am in favor of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I am opposed to the amendment, Mr. President. I think the Committee certainly seems to have had in mind that those who are interested in the constitutional amendments, one way or the other, should be the ones to make the decision, and that the Committee recommendation is not something made they thought out, it is the practice in 34 states. Only nine states require a majority of those voting at the election. Thirty-four require a majority of those voting on a specific amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I believe the changes or the amendments to the constitution should be well thought out, and I would like to see a majority voting for it. I would hate to see amendments or changes made by a minority vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: We have a hard time getting people out to vote. If they are there, I don't think that the people who have a proposition on the ballot should have to carry a lot of dead wood. I think it is a fair proposition that the people express themselves. They are there at the voting booth, they have that proposition. If they are not interested enough to vote on it one way or the other, then there should not be a penalty to those who are out working. I am going to vote against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I think I agree with Mr. Marston in substance, but I would like to state that our election laws are rather lax and if we are going to permit the people to cast a negative vote by just not voting due to the fact that they possibly cannot read or understand the proposal, why I don't see that that is very fair, and I am against this proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Davis be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I ask for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 25 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Davis, Gray, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh.

Nays: 26 - Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Reader, R. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas, 26 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and so the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 1:30 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to announce that the meeting of committee chairmen, the luncheon meeting, will be held in this end of the building instead of the regular luncheon room. Are there other committee announcements to be made before we recess? If not, the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the article on the referendum. Before we proceed with this article would the Chief Clerk please read the communications that have been received.

CHIEF CLERK: A telegram from the Juneau Chamber of Commerce. (The Chief Clerk read in full the telegram congratulating the Convention on its accomplishments to date and extending best wishes for success.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed.

(The Chief Clerk read in full a letter from the Honorable Clair Engle, Chairman of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the United States House of Representatives, commending the Convention on the necessary and important work being done, extending good wishes and sincere and vigorous support toward the final objective, statehood for Alaska.,

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, before proceeding, I would like to refer to committee announcements.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rosswog, the Convention will refer to committee announcements.

ROSSWOG: For the Committee on Local Government, I would like to again ask that if any of the delegates have suggestions for us that they give them to us at the finish of this session and we will have a meeting of the Local Government Committee tonight. at 8 o'clock at Apartment 19, in the Alaskan Inn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Rosswog's announcement. If there are any suggestions for the Local Government Committee, he would like to have them at the earliest possible time. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I merely wanted to make the same suggestion, that anyone who has suggested amendments to the resources article, I would like to have them and the Committee will meet this evening at 7:30. They will meet in the lobby of the Northward Building at the meeting place to be named later. The object in meeting in the lobby is to have a central place to meet and then we will have to determine where the meeting is to be held.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You will get your committee members together at 7:30 in the lobby of the Northward Building?

SMITH: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anybody else have an announcement? Are there other committee announcements? If not, we will proceed with the amending of the article on revision and amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: There is an amendment on the desk of the Chief Clerk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as proposed by Mr. Kilcher?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 18, strike the word 'if' and all that follows in the first paragraph of Section 3 through line 3 on page 2, and substitute the following: 'After the lapse of fifteen years during which a constitutional convention has not been convened, delegates to a constitutional convention shall be elected at the next regular election.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the proposed amendment be adopted.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Ralph Rivers .

R. RIVERS: I would like to hear Mr. Kilcher's approach and thinking on this.

KILCHER: I think that we have an amendment here that will surely be in the spirit of a simple constitution in as far as we are saving possibly eight lines in the present proposal, and in the first sentence of Section 3 has given the legislature wide and not specifically defined powers to arrange for a constitutional convention. The legislature may provide for a constitutional convention as they see fit, but if no constitutional convention has been held during a period of 15 or 20 years (that can be amendable) if none has been held then there shall be one, and the last paragraph of Section 3 will be retained in whole and explained in what way this convention should come about unless provided differently by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to rise to a point of information. Mr. Kilcher, what would be the reason of just arbitrarily calling a convention, a constitutional convention, unless there was some decided need for it, some public clamor or the legislature certified that there should be a convention called? Why would you call a constitutional convention where there is no apparent need for it?

KILCHER: I have, after speaking the matter over with a number of people, delegates and others, I have come to the conclusion and I for one am certain that in, let's say 15 years, we will have a need for a convention, and whether this convention will last a week, and I hope it might only, or whether there is a need to have it last a month, which only the future will show, I am convinced that there will be some need for a convention at that time. If we have a certainty, a guarantee of having one in 15 years, I think we would expedite a lot of matters in this Convention here. We will feel much less equitable in accepting small compromises, in not haggling over little things and small matters, and we possibly will also save time in the future. For instance, I could foresee within 9, 10 or 11 years after attainment of statehood, there might be some need for an amendment and a slight need for revision. There might be several such needs for amendment, and they would all be tabled for that convention that will happen no matter how, in 15 years. Instead of having, for instance, four or five or six referendums or amendments for the approval and lengthy legislative debate and arguments, we could refer these matters equitably to the future. I could even see where a thing that seems very important in nine or ten years from now, if it is referred to that convention that is going to happen anyway in 15 years, maybe three years later the need may have changed or is less important, but certainly we can bunch together a small batch of amendments, maybe a lot of important amendments, maybe that in the future are going to bring up. I am convinced that at least the first time in 15 years we will have a good use for the convention, if at that time after having practiced statehood for 15 years and after having had a lot of experience that points to the contrary, if at that time we decide we will not have it repetitious from there on, that could maybe be one of the articles that we change at that time. I would like to have a guaranteed whack at it in 15 years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: It would appear to me that under this Section 3 as it exists here there is a guaranteed whack at it, and it may not take 15 years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question of Mr. Kilcher. The way this is written here this would give us a constitutional convention every 15 years until it was repealed, if they had not had a constitutional convention within that period. In a course of 150 years it would automatically call for 10 constitutional conventions if it was not repealed. Is that right?

KILCHER: That is right. If the need will not occur any more I would expect it to be repealed, so this is rather an academic question. To answer Mr. McCutcheon's question which I think it was, that Section 3 already contains a guarantee of even less than 15 years, I did not want to make my amendment 10 years because there is a greater demand in there on the electorate. Ten years of experience is not enough for a convention, I think, but the automatic convention provision and the automatic referendum for a convention is, in substance, very different. As history has shown in the case of the New York Constitution, where they have a 20-year automatic referendum if I am not mistaken, history has shown there that when the time approaches that the referendum is due, there will for one thing, the people at that time are made tax or budget conscious. We can assume that if changes should be in the wind that are essentially not in the interests of those powers that have it in their hands to handle the referendum, if changes are in the coming that are in the middle to people interested in the status quo, and as a rule those people of those that hold the actual political power, then they will find ways and means of advising against it. I trust the electorate, if they are given all the facts, but the choice of making all the facts available always has and always will rest with those that have access to the facts and also have the power to publicize these facts. So if a case arises where the people interested in the status quo of any sort are against a change, they will find ways and means to advise against and in such a way influence the otherwise free will of the people. The people will not have a true picture. Whereas, with this provision here, there will be a convention nohow, and I am personally convinced, and, judging by the past performance here and projecting it in the next four weeks, we will make mistakes. We will make compromises. We certainly should say there would be a great need for a first trial of this here method.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I see that, since Mr. Kilcher has reversed his stand, I must now rise in defense of the people. On the beginning of this initiative proposal here, the first part of the article, Mr. Kilcher was afraid the people would not have the right to vote. I am going to have to vote against his amendment because under the present language of the proposal here it gives the people the right to vote every 10 years, and I don't think we should take the right away from the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. Kilcher proposed practically the same thing in an individual proposal that was handled by the Committee, and he also addressed the Committee, and we discussed the thing thoroughly and decided against including this proposal. We just could not see that there was much sense in committing the state to the expense of a $300,000 or better convention whether we needed it or not. We felt there was plenty of opportunity in the article as we presented it to assure the people that they could have a convention if it was needed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I will pass, Mr. President, if we are going to vote on the question now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to reply to both Mr. McNealy's and Mr. Hinckel's arguments there. The sum of $300,000 should not be in our minds because, as I said, the need for this convention might only be for a short convention, possibly a week or 10 days, which would cut it to 50 or so thousand dollars, which would not be very much more than one or two elections. Actually, it might prove to be a saving. If we, in a short convention, can bunch together five, six or seven referendum votes or amendments that otherwise would have to come in general elections all along, so I think the cost angle works the other way around. As far as protecting the people is concerned, I think the first sentence in Section 3 will take care of that. It still stands in there, and if they have a convention there will be no automatic convention. It will take 15 years from that. That is evident by the wording. The people can have a convention any time, the legislature can provide for one any time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 10 - Emberg, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hurley, Kilcher, Londborg, McNees, Peratrovich, Poulsen.

Nays: 42 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Gray, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee. McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal.)

CHIEF CLERK: 10 yeas, 42 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I offer an amendment to Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers offers an amendment to Section 3. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, Section 3, line 18, change the words, 'ten-year' to 'twenty-year'."

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, having the governor compelled to certify the question to the public every 10 years as to whether the public wants another constitutional convention strikes me as being too frequent. We have the system here whereby the legislature can take care of specific amendments on a two-thirds vote with a ratification of the voters, and if we take care of these little snarls that come up from time to time through that process, there would not be any need for a convention at the end of 10 years, but the trouble is that when the voters go to the polls they are given the regular ballot at the general election. They are given a special referendum ballot and a lot of voters are going to think that there must be some need for it, otherwise it would not be presented to them. A lot of people are going to vote for it, and you might end up with a constitutional convention that is not needed. On the other hand, over a period of 20 years, there could be an accumulation of matters and changes of viewpoint. So I don't mind having the governor certify the question or have it on the special referendum ballot every 20 years, but I think 10 years is too close. That is why I have submitted it to change it to 20.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the Secretary's desk. It is not to Section 3. It is a new section to be added.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 3? If not, then Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment is in order. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "New Section 4: 'No amendment to this constitution shall alter the republican form of government established by it or abolish its bill of rights.'"

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

GRAY: May we have it read again, Mr. Chairman?

COOPER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. The Chief Clerk will read the amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "New Section 4: 'No amendment to this Constitution shall alter the republican form of government established by it or abolish its bill of rights.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the proposed amendment. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, that is just a reiteration of what we already have got in the constitution, and it is also a reiteration of a provision of the Federal Constitution which says that we must maintain the republican form of government, so as I say that would only be a further reiteration of the Federal Constitution and what we have already got because we could not legally change the form of government from a republican form of government. I think it would just be gilding the lily.

RILL.Y: Mr. President, I would like to address a question to Mr. Johnson. I am not sure how effective this language would be unless carried to its logical conclusion that this sentence itself be preserved intact by any future amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Well, Mr. President, I borrowed the section from the constitution of the government of Puerto Rico which is contained in their section on amendments and as a separate section, and I thought that it was an added safeguard that we probably had just overlooked. This constitution, I might add, has been approved by the Congress of the United States. While it may be in the sense somewhat a duplication, there is no language that I have seen anywhere in the constitution yet or any of the proposals, and certainly not in this amending process, that would prohibit a possible amendment to change our form of government from the republican form to some other form or to abolish the bill of rights, and in order to spell it out in a separate section of this kind seemed to me just an added safeguard.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, there is no way that we can tell another constitutional convention that they can't change anything that we do because they have the same authority. Now, our bill of rights is a little different from the others. We can say, "You can't change our bill of rights." They may want to improve it but there is no way we can protect our own writing from future delegations. Actually, it has no place in this group.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, this amendment does not seek to prevent an amendment of the bill of rights. It simply seeks to prevent the abolishment of the bill of rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Would it be possible for a convention to abolish the bill of rights under the Federal Constitution?

JOHNSON: I think they certainly could try it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the amendment as proposed by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to the article on revision and amendment? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, Section 3, line 18, strike the words 'ten-year' and insert in lieu thereof the words 'sixteen-year'."

V. RIVERS: I move and ask unanimous consent.

MCCUTCHEON: I object.

H. FISCHER: I second the motion.

V. RIVERS: I ask for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment once more?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, page 1, line 18, strike the words 'ten-year' and insert in lieu thereof the words 'sixteen-year'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I set the period at 16 years so it would come every fourth gubernatorial election rather than coming in the 10-year interval, if it is passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: As it reads now, "it would not come at the end of a 10-year period. It says, if at the end of a 10-year period if there has been no constitutional convention, then the governor shall put the question on the ballot at the next general election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?"

The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 20 - Boswell, H. Fischer, Harris, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 32 - Awes, Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest, White.

Absent: 3 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal.)

CHIEF CLERK: 20 yeas, 32 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to this article? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Chairman of the Committee a question before we close the article. I notice that the initiative cannot be applied to the constitutional amendments by popular action. Could the members of the Committee or any member of the Committee give me the thinking of the Committee on why it was not made applicable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Collins, could you answer the question? COLLINS: I could not hear Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I notice that the initiative is not made applicable to the amendments of the constitution. I wonder what the thinking and the reasoning of the Committee was in not allowing it to be so.

COLLINS: We considered all those questions in Committee and, as I have said, there were two lines of thought on that. We met on common ground and presented that just as the Committee decided upon, and we discussed all those questions and we had the advantage of consultants and the language in here is plain English.

V. RIVERS: I was asking for a little discussion on your Committee on that point. I know you folks discussed it but I was asking for the reasoning behind not including it. I know many states do and some don't.

COLLINS: We thought it was all covered in this.

SMITH: Mr. President, while I can't recall all of the Committee's discussion, I think that it should be clear that the right of the initiative, at least in every instance where I have seen it defined, is the right of the people to initiate and enact laws. It has no connection with the amendment to the constitutions. I feel that was the thinking of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I am in a unique position to have a discussion of my amendment before I put it on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is going to be such an amendment offered, if we're not through amending, then we will allow Mr. Kilcher to offer his amendment, Mr. Rivers, and then perhaps we will be on safer ground. Mr. Kilcher, you may offer your amendment. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Amend Section 1, line 2, to add after the first word 'laws', the words, 'and amendments to this constitution' and add after the second word 'laws' the words, 'and amendments to this constitution'. Add a new section to be numbered Section 7 and to read as follows: 'Section 7. An initiative petition proposing a constitutional amendment shall be signed by twenty per cent of the number of votes cast for governor in the next preceding general election in which the governor was chosen. Initiative petitions proposing constitutional amendments shall be filed with the attorney general. If the proposed constitutional amendment, in substantially this form in which it was submitted, is not presented by the Legislature to the voters for their approval or rejection by the next regular session of the Legislature, the proposed constitutional amendment shall be submitted to the voters for their approval or rejection at the next general election, and be enforced, if sixty-five per cent of the votes cast are in favor of the amendment.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Copies of the proposed amendment are being distributed to the delegates. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, that appears to me to be dealing with two different subject terms inasmuch as it deals with one section and then seeks to add another. Unless the mover of this amendment will do it himself I am going to seek to divide the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher has not moved to adopt it.

KILCHER: I was afraid that might be necessary, but I hoped it might save time if we had it in one since the one part necessitates the other. I just thought it would save time if we had it together.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you wish to offer a motion?

KILCHER: I would like to move that the amendment in its entirety be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there a second?

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

TAYLOR: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion on the proposed amendment? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: We are back to the beginning of this thing that we spent so much time on. Should we not finish the other, be sure we are through the amendment and revision section before we go on?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan, the Chair asked whether or not there might be more amendments to the revision and amendment section and for a minute or two no one spoke. The Chair was about to state that the proposal would be assigned to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee. Mr. Victor Rivers rose and asked a question that related to the initiative question, and the amendment is in order to be presented. Mr. Victor Rivers seconded the motion, and the proposed amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to go back and answer Mr. Rivers' question. The Committee was very deliberate about writing this the way we did. We did not feel that the initiative should be used to propose constitutional amendments. We discussed it very thoroughly and there was no divided opinion. The Committee was unanimous, but we felt that it should not be handled that way. It would be burdensome on the state to have constitutional amendments proposed by the people, and I think there is plenty of opportunity for amendments to be effected from the article as it reads now, and I do not think it needs further amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I was confused about Section 7, where Section 7 is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It should be the article on the initiative and referendum. The mimeographing was in error evidently.

KILCHER: It happened in the boiler room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It should read "Amendment of Article on Initiative, Referendum and Recall, Amendment and Revision".

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 3? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have an amendment to the article on revision and amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This is to the article on revision and amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, page 1, line 21, after the word 'Convention' insert before the question mark the words, 'for the purpose of revising the Constitution of the State of Alaska'."

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

DOOGAN: I object.

TAYLOR: I would like to have it read.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The matter is open for discussion. The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, page 1, line 21, after the word 'Convention' insert before the question mark the words, 'for the purpose of revising the Constitution of the State of Alaska'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The sentence then would read, "If any sixteen-year period elapses during which the legislature has not called a convention", is it "10"? Excuse me, I missed a chapter here then, "shall etc., "for the purpose of revising the Constitution of the State of Alaska". I just think it makes it clear to the people what it is they are voting for on that ballot. It seems up in the air to just say "Shall there be a constitutional convention".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I cannot see that at all. I cast my vote against the initiative on constitutional amendments. However, I did that because I felt that the people still could, if they wanted to, adopt a specific amendment, could vote in favor of a constitutional convention. Should the constitutional convention be limited to revision, it implies that they could not amend, and I don't think that is a proper amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I am a little amazed at Mr. Sundborg because I think he is putting some of those words in that he is always anxious to take out. Section 1, as I have it, states that revisions and amendments to this constitution may be made in certain ways, and it spells out that one of them is by constitutional convention. I think it already says that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The difference that would be brought into the matter if my amendment is adopted would be that you would not call a constitutional convention with all the attendant expense and the special elections, etc., just for the purpose of making some simple amendment. There is a process provided here for amending the constitution. It is not expensive or time-consuming, and the only purpose in calling together as many as 55 delegates, I would say, would be to go over the convention in some detail and revise its articles and study them and submit them to committees in the way we have been doing here. If some simple amendment is desired, the way to do it is by the provision that is set up in Section 2 and not by that as allowed under Section 3, as it now reads, but which I think should not be allowed and which would not be allowed if my amendment is adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information. Would not revision include amending, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: It would include it, yes.

KILCHER: Why mention it?

V. RIVERS: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, before I vote on this issue, I do not believe that revision includes amendment. I spent this morning after getting off into hot water and submitting an amendment without having it mimeographed and presented to the delegates, I spent a few minutes back there at that large volume called a dictionary, and revision is one thing and amendment is another, and they should be treated separately in here. Just saying revision alone is not enough.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I was not asked whether revision and amendment were identical. I was asked whether revision includes amendment and it does but they're not identical. Revision includes amendment but amendment does not include revision.

COOPER: I say it does not. Revision does not allow a change, but amendment does.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, could you answer that question?

HERMANN: I could very well take a leaf from Mr. McLaughlin's book and say, "I am not learned on this subject." I am of the impression that you would have difficulty revising the constitution without making amendments, but I would hate to be pinned down to an absolute definition of the two terms.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Londborg?

LONDBORG: Just a point of information. May I ask Mr. Sundborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: The purpose of your amendment would be to make the ballot read a little more inclusive, is that not right, so when the people read it they will know exactly that they are voting on a convention and what it is for?

SUNDBORG: Right.

LONDBORG: Rather than just throw them out a piece of paper and say, "Shall there be a convention?" It might be for some other purpose.

SUNDBORG: That's right.

LONDBORG: I think it would make a little better sense.

SUNDBORG: I think it would make better sense and I think it would make the people fully cognizant at the time they went to the polls that what they were voting for if they voted for it is a body that could completely revise their state constitution.

LONDBORG: And that it specifically refers to the constitution of the State of Alaska, they may be living under some other constitution, that is, within the state.

SUNDBORG: Of course they will be living under the Federal Constitution. This ties it right down and tells why there will be a constitutional convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: It seems like the amendments to this particular article lose sight of the fact that the future legislature should have something to do regarding the calling of these conventions, and, in this particular section which Mr. Sundborg is attempting to limit the constitutional convention only to revision, it would preclude you having and making an amendment during that period. I believe all revisions would be amendments but all amendments are not revisions, so I think it should be left out, and the legislature when they by a proper act provide for a constitutional convention, they are not only not going to put in a bill that says constitutional conventions will be held on such and such a date and leave it go at that, they are going to spell out a few details. Why should we tell them what the details are going to be? Leave it up to the legislature. We purposely left it that way so that the future legislatures would at least have something to say when and where and how many delegates were going to be at a convention called for the purpose of revising and amending the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: The question before us has only to do with the form of the ballot that would be submitted to the public every 10 years. Now I agree with Mr. Sundborg that you might as well give them, if you are going to pin it down in so many words, give them an adequate ballot which shows the scope and the reason for it so that the people that are voting won't be in the dark. But I do think that, inasmuch as there is some uncertainty as to whether revising includes amending, I think we should also specifically mention amendments. So I move to amend Mr. Sundborg's proposed amendment by inserting after the word "revising and amending".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves that the proposed amendment by Mr. Sundborg be amended by inserting after the word "revising" insert the words "and amending". Is there a second to the motion?

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I address a question to Mr. Rivers? Would you consider possibly in your amendment to drop the word "constitutional" so that it would read, "Shall there be a Convention with the purpose to amend and revise the constitution?"

R. RIVERS: That is what mine would accomplish. Mine would then read "for the purpose of revising and amending the constitution of the State of Alaska".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, I wonder if it might be better if we had a one- or two-minute recess and, Mr. Sundborg, yourself and Mr. Kilcher could form

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would leave that to Style and Drafting, omitting the word "constitution" in line 21, it is immaterial to me. I leave that to Style and Drafting.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I would just like to say that apparently some of us have a low opinion of the intelligence of the future citizens of the State of Alaska, implying that they don't know what a constitutional convention is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be adopted.

TAYLOR: I object.

R. RIVERS: I so move.

LONDBORG: I second the motion.

DOOGAN: May we have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the proposed amendment by Mr. Ralph Rivers. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I approve of Mr. Ralph Rivers' amendment and would accept it as part of my original amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of Mr. Ralph Rivers?

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection had been heard and it was seconded, that is correct. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?"

KILCHER: Would you read the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: It is an amendment to the amendment. I will have to read the amendment first. "Page 1, line 21, after the word 'convention' insert before the question mark the words, 'for the purpose of revising the constitution of the State of Alaska'", and Mr. Rivers moves to insert after "revising" the words "and amending".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no".

R. RIVERS: I ask for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 26 - Awes, Boswell, Coghill, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hinckel, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 24 - Barr, Collins, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, Harris, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Riley, Rosswog, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Wien.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal, Hilscher, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 26 yeas, 24 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. We now have the proposed amendment as amended before us for a discussion. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I feel I have probably not made myself clear to many here as to just what I intend by this. Of course, we know now what a constitutional convention is because we are in the middle of one, but this is a provision that comes up automatically on the ballot. It may come up without any discussion on the part of the people at all. There may be no great desire to have a constitutional convention and I am sure for many voters it may be the very first time they have ever been confronted with the question when into the polling booth and see this simple little question, there be a constitutional convention?" I want it to at least be explanatory, of what a constitutional convention is for.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Boswell, Coghill, H. Fischer, Hinckel, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 33 - Awes, Barr, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Riley, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Taylor, VanderLeest, Wien.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal, Hilscher, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 33 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment as amended has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to the proposal? If there are no further amendments to Committee Proposal No. 3 -- Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: Mr. McNees and I are working on one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: It is on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher, and by Mr. McNees.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2. line 3, add 'If 20 years should lapse during which a constitutional convention has not been convened, delegates to a constitutional convention shall be elected at the next regular election specifically for the purpose of amendment and revision.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. McNees?

MCNEES: I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to the motion?

KILCHER: I second the motion.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 3, add the words 'If 20 years should lapse during which a constitutional convention has not been convened, delegates to a constitutional convention shall be elected at the next regular election specifically for the purpose of amendment and revision.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McNees and Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye," all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 3? Are there any other amendments? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I move it be advanced to third reading.

MARSTON: I second that motion.

R. RIVERS: Point of order. I suggest it be sent to Engrossment and Enrollment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection and there are no further amendments to Committee Proposal No. 3, it is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. We now have before us the proposal of the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. Committee Proposal No. 7. Has the Rules Committee had a proposed calendar mimeographed, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Yes, it was distributed yesterday.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Has every member a copy of that proposed calendar as submitted by the Rules Committee? The Chief Clerk may proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 7.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 4 introduced by the Committee on the Preamble and Bill of Rights.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to the preamble of Committee Proposal No. 7? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of information. I would like to ask Delegate Awes (my book just closed on me, I am trying to find the place); it is on line 10 of page 3. It says, "No person shall be prosecuted criminally for felony other than by indictment or information". Under the present procedure a person cannot be prosecuted for a felony except upon an indictment by a grand jury unless he waives the indictment and consents to be tried on the information filed by the district attorney. This says that the indictment and information shall be concurrent remedies. Now, actually, this is not a matter of remedy because the individual charged in any case is presumed to be innocent. It is a matter of procedure, and in the second place I wonder whether we should make it absolutely unnecessary to prosecute a man on a felony without an indictment unless he waives the indictment and consents to be tried upon the information, and I was wondering what the Committee's thinking was on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: We considered that and we looked into what the other states had done and some of the other states have provisions similar to this one we adopted and it seems to work out pretty well. The defendant's rights still seem to be protected. It speeds up the criminal process. Sometimes it is a matter of getting these informations. You can get these men into court quicker than you can if you wait for a grand jury. By retaining the grand jury and the indictment, if you should have a district attorney, say, who is bringing in too many informations and acting in a pre-emptory matter, then the governor has the right to call the grand jury.

R. RIVERS: That is another thing that bothers me because the grand jury is essentially a part of the judiciary process and is called by the courts. There should be a grand jury every year to carry out the particular purposes, but I am wondering if we would ever have a grand jury. What other part of a constitution would provide for a grand jury? I don't have that clear in my mind. We may never have one. If the district attorney can prosecute by information, and doesn't have to get indictments, there may never be a grand jury. I just want your thinking.

AWES: That, too, was considered and it is usual to have a provision in the bill of rights preserving the grand jury. Any states that have a similar provision, I think that it has proved out that whenever there is a need for a grand jury that it is called by the proper official of the government and still you're not spending a lot of money by calling a grand jury when there is no real need for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: If we could sort of make clear who the proper official is, I will go along.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: It says in here on Section 7, page 3, at the top of the page, "that no grand jury shall be convened except upon an order of a judge", etc.

TAYLOR: I was going to rise for the purpose of getting this thing in an orderly manner. Why don't we start at Section 1 and go through?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct for amendatory purposes, but evidently these people were just asking questions for information purposes of the Chairman of the Committee. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I rise to a point of inquiry. I thought we discussed several sections of this Committee Proposal No. 7 before we took our recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Not on this proposal, Mr. Robertson. It was on the suffrage proposal, Proposal No. 1.

R. RIVERS: The Committee gave us a briefing on this before the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Miss Awes a little information. On page 2, Section 3, line 10, it says, "No person is to be denied the enjoyment of any civil or political right..." Is that phrase, any civil or political right", is that all inclusive? Is that all-inclusive as far as the government is concerned? Are there any rights being denied under that phrase?

AWES: I think that I can speak for the Committee that it was our feeling that we wanted to make that as broad as we could and that was intended to be an all-inclusive term.

GRAY: Along about the same thing on page 3, Section 8, line 17, it says, "No person shall be compelled in any criminal proceeding to be a witness against himself." Now you have the words "criminal proceeding". Is there any time a person shall be compelled to be a witness against himself, particularly in a noncriminal case?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, do you care to answer that?

AWES: Yes, first we had a draft that just said, "No person shall be"compelled in any proceedings to be a witness against himself. Then we thought of civil suits, for instance, if John Jones sues John Smith over a land title or something, and that was so broad that the plaintiff or defendant would not have to testify, and we did not want to go that far, so in noncriminal suits we did not want to protect him against testifying against himself.

GRAY: I am wondering if, in testimony in hearings for instance legislative hearings, would it be possible to compel a person to become a witness against himself under this phrase?

AWES: I think I will let Mr. McNealy speak.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. Gray, I raised that point particularly in Committee because I was very much concerned about these legislative investigations. The Federal Constitution holds that, "nor shall he be compelled in any criminal case," and we felt here that the nearest the Committee could unanimously agree was to substitute the word "proceeding" for "case" and our rundown on that, it would cover any hearings before any administrative bodies if they were criminal in nature. As the Federal Constitution holds, it is merely a court case more by using the word "proceeding" rather than case", why, it expands the latitude, gives greater latitude, probably takes in, at least we hope it takes in, matters before legislative committees, such as senate committee hearings and things of that type.

GRAY: You think if there was a criminal background or the outcome of the hearing may prove to have such a thing as being charged with a crime, if that should come out in administrative hearing, would this criminal hearing include that kind of investigation?

MCNEALY: The basis for this to cover, the investigation would have to be of criminal nature.

GRAY: This being a bill of rights, I just wanted these definitive terms explained to me. On page 4, Section 12, line 15, you are using the phrase "in courts not of record". I wonder if you could explain that to me, Miss Awes. What is the difference between courts not of record and the other courts?

AWES: "Courts not of record" is a term that is accepted in legal language and it means any court where you don't make a record or transcript of the complete proceedings. In Alaska, now, the only courts of record that we have are the Federal District Courts, all others are courts not of record.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe Mr. McNealy answered the question for Mr. Gray, but I don't believe he went far enough with it. Now in the course of a civil proceedings or in the course of legislative hearing or an investigation, if the questions got to the point where the answers would tend to degrade or to incriminate a person of a crime, he can refuse to answer under the Fifth Amendment of the United States. This is more or less to the nature of the reiteration of the Fifth Amendment, which prevents a person, or he has the right to remain silent if an answer tends to degrade or humiliate or holds him up to ridicule or disgrace or tends to incriminate him of a crime. So he has the right to remain silent and invoke the Fifth Amendment.

GRAY: Does that say that here?

TAYLOR: That's what it means. It is in any proceeding, criminal or civil. You do not have to answer a question if it tends to degrade you or incriminate you of a crime.

GRAY: But does this article say that? That is Section 8, line 7, page 3.

TAYLOR: In Section 8 that is a reiteration of our Federal Constitution which no person can be compelled to be a witness against himself. That is also the reason that many times an officer will get a prisoner and keep him in their custody and attempt to break him down, and, when they get a story, lots of time the courts refuse to allow anything he said at that time or any statements he made or signed to be used because they forced him to testify against himself. I think it should go farther than this. I think there should be a penalty imposed against anybody that would discriminate against a man by invoking the Fifth Amendment. Like in some places, they have fired men from their place of employment because of the reason he invoked the Fifth Amendment when they were before an investigative hearing. I think there should be a penalty against a person doing something that lawfully he has the right to do. I plan to offer an amendment along that line later on.

GRAY: I have one more question. On page 6, Section 18, "There shall be no imprisonment for debt, except in cases where there is a strong presumption of fraud. I am a little ambiguous on the meaning of that. Could I have Miss Awes explain that. Where is the limiting line in that phrase?

AWES: Well, "strong presumption of fraud", there may be some question as to whether that phrase is strictly necessary, but there seemed to be some feeling that it was. That would give the person, what we were thinking of when we put that in were these people, transients more or less, who run up big bills which they haven't too much intention of paying and decide to leave the Territory and leave the creditors holding the bag. That phrase was put in to make it possible to arrest such a person before he can leave the Territory without subjecting yourself to a false imprisonment suit in case he should not be convicted. It would not be able to imprison him on the strong presumption of fraud but it would enable you to arrest him and then he could be brought to trial if necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I amplify a little on that? Our present statute covers what is called "summary remedies" and in there, absconding debtors, people leaving for the purpose of defrauding creditors, be put under what is known as a civil arrest, and if we leave this language in here, then our legislature will have the power to pass such statutes covering summary remedies and civil arrests. Now I don't think we can be without letting our legislature have that power. We have had people sneak their baggage out of the back door without paying their hotel bill, and when I was district attorney I have gotten out warrants that stopped them down in Ketchikan. Of course that was under criminal proceedings but I've also represented a plaintiff in a civil case where he posted a bond and made the allegations of fraud and stopped somebody on his way out and brought him back to straighten up that bill before the matter was disposed of. So we need that language in there to enable our legislature to pass that kind of legislation. I am for it the way it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Chairman of the Committee, referring to Sections 12 and also to 13, is there any place where the article specifically provides that a jury of 12 shall prevail in courts of record in both civil and criminal cases?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: It is my understanding that it is the principle of constitutional law that the common law jury was a jury of 12 men, and if the constitution preserves the jury, then it preserves a jury of 12, and the legislature has no authority to lessen it, and that is the reason why we said nothing. You could have a jury of less in courts not of record, and we feel this does preserve a jury of 12 in courts of record.

ROBERTSON: In any of the articles or proposals, does it anywhere say to preserve the common law?

AWES: Not in those words that I know of.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Chairman of the Committee, if I may, a question as to whether or not the Committee explored the possibility of not providing for grand juries in criminal matters. Many states do not have grand juries. There is a provision in many constitutions that a grand jury may be called by a district judge or superior judge, whichever the case may be, for the purpose of investigations. But all criminal matters are preceded by an information or complaint and it is drawn by the district attorney and then immediate trial can come up. Now I have felt that great injustices have been done in the Territory of Alaska through the failure of a grand jury to sit. I have known possibly hundreds of men who would be arrested shortly after a grand jury had convened in the fall and they would sit in jail until the following fall before their case was even considered by the next grand jury, and I know of many instances in which the accusation was very frivolous, and when the grand jury had considered that case they would bring in that it was "not a true bill", and there a year of a man's life is gone because of some accusation made against him. If we do not have grand juries to say whether or not there is probable cause, I think we would be possibly better off in the administration of justice.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, were you asking Miss Awes if they considered that?

TAYLOR: Yes, that is a question.

AWES: Yes, the Committee did consider whether the grand jury should be retained in criminal matters at all, and it was. I believe, a unanimous feeling of the Committee that the grand jury should be preserved for that purpose, but we were perfectly aware of the difficulties which you mentioned, and that is what we wanted to take care of by making the indictment and the information concurrent remedies so that these men can be brought to trial by information. But if there is some unusual circumstance that there should be consideration by the grand jury, then the right to calling it is there, but you still wouldn't have to have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to the preamble of Committee Proposal No. 7? Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I would like to ask a question in regard to the last sentence of Section 10, page 4, lines 3, 4, and 5. It reads, "The administration of criminal justice shall be founded on principles of reformation, and not vindictiveness." Now, I have no quarrel with the thought expressed here, except as it relates to the establishment of a code which might provide forfeiture of life, capital punishment, in other words. Is there any relation between the two?

AWES: Is your question whether or not this would eliminate capital punishment?

EMBERG: Yes.

AWES: That was brought up in the Committee, and this provision is found in several other state constitutions, and in those states the courts have ruled that this language does not prohibit capital punishment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments? Mr. Rosswog?

ROSSWOG: I have an amendment to Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog, would you mind holding that until we get to it? Are there amendments to the preamble at this time? Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to address a question on the preamble to Miss Awes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, address your question, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: To the effect, what exactly is the purpose of a preamble? What is its legal standing insofar as the whole constitution is concerned?

AWES: As to its legal standing, so far as I know, it does not have very much. It is one of those formalities that goes with drawing a constitution, and it expresses the sentiment of the people who are doing the work, who are both drawing the constitution and ratifying it, but beyond that I don't know of any effect that it has.

V. FISCHER: In connection with that, some of the language in Section 1 sounds similar to what is found in some states and in the Federal Constitution, the preamble. I was wondering if there was any special reason for separating those two, the preamble from Section 1 for instance, the general welfare and a couple of those clauses?

AWES: Section 1 is the provision that is found in many state constitutions, and it was the feeling of the Committee that it did set forth certain fundamental ideas that should be in the bill of rights itself rather than in the preamble because they have more force and effect.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I would like to direct a question to Miss Awes on the same general subject. Did the Committee see any conflict between the preamble and Section 5?

AWES: I don't see any conflict between the two. If you have something particular in mind, if you could be more specific I could maybe answer you a little better.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you have something specifically in mind, Mr. White?

WHITE: I am not prepared to assert too far, Mr. President, but the question was asked of me during the recess, why in the light of Section 5, which seems to retain the right of the establishment of any sort of religion whatsoever, and perhaps by inference means that there should be no mention of the establishment of religion in the constitution, why it was found necessary to put a preamble of these words in the preamble of the bill of rights. It is not something that I disagree with, but I have heard objection made to it, and I raise the question for that reason.

AWES: I don't see that there is any conflict there. As I said a few minutes ago, the preamble expresses more or less the sentiment of the people, and we felt that civil and religious liberty as mentioned in the preamble is something that is of concern and is one of the motivating forces and consequently should be mentioned there. Section 5, which is the same wording as the Federal Constitution, is the guarantee of the right. That is the law so to speak. The preamble is not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be offered to the preamble? Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: May I address a question to Miss Awes?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: In my opinion there is a basic conflict between the preamble and Section 5 and that conflict has been brought to my attention by a fellow who has been in the "sticks for 20 years and I was rather abashed that I did not find it. And I think we should go into it, but I would like to stress as far as I can do it, the conflict and ask Miss Awes if I am right or wrong, if the Committee had thought of it. In my opinion, "No law shall be made with respect to establishing of religion". The preamble is tantamount to such a law, inasmuch as the wording is referring to a possible majority opinion of the deity. The wording is not all-encompassing and comprehensive enough to insure the very liberty of religion that we have in Section 5. It will deprive minorities of their expression of their wording, of their interpretation of a preamble. A preamble is all-encompassing enough, in my opinion it is too specific.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I am not quite sure I understand Mr. Kilcher's argument. You say it is too specific. I can't see how this statement could set forth either majority or minority views. There might be a few atheists who might object to it, but it has never been my understanding that our government has ever been that completely divorced from KILCHER: Had it occurred to you, Miss Awes, that it is not only a possible small minority of atheists but there may be pantheists, Buddhists, Jews. The wording of "God Almighty" is not one that is customary with a variety of Christian sects, religions and non-Christian religions that are accepted in this country and others that may arise at any time. This constitution is supposed to be infallible for a hundred or hundreds of years and consequently, I think the wording is too much custom bound or specifically one that will not be in conformity with other Christians and other religious sects.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair does not mean to interrupt, but Miss Awes attempted to answer the question, but if the time comes when an amendment would be submitted, then would be the time to go into argument. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I add to Miss Awes' answer by pointing out what the Supreme Court of the United States has said about the Preamble of the Federal Constitution?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: In the case of Dorr v. the United States, which was decided by the Supreme Court in 1904, the court held that, "No" power to enact any statute is derived from the Preamble. The Constitution was the only source of power authorizing action by any branch of the Federal government. It would seem to me that under that the question is moot.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I think we are making much ado about nothing here. Some of us don't seem to understand that the government of the United States is based upon a belief in a god, and it does not specifically state what kind of a god. It could be a Buddhist god or any other kind. Some people worship the same God, but in a different manner, and call him a different name, and our government is based upon a belief of a god, and you will find it so stated in the Constitution and many other places. If you look at a silver dollar you will find it on there also. This Section 5 only states that no special law will be enacted regarding a specific or special kind of religion or a certain sect. It is presumed even in Section 5 here that there will be some kind of religion recognized. Now there are some people, of course, who are not very religious and others who are atheists, but there is nothing here to prevent their beliefs. They can believe any way they want to, worship or not worship, just as they wish. But our government is based upon a religious belief and since we are writing a constitution which is to be based upon our National Constitution, that is the kind it should be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I request a 15.minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 15 minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there are no amendments to the preamble we will proceed with Section 1 of the article on the declaration of rights. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I have submitted to the Chief Clerk an amendment. There are two on the one page, an amendment to Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have an amendment to Section 1. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, page 1, line 10, after the word

'persons' insert the words 'are created equal and'." And "Section 1, page 2, line 1, strike words 'are equal and'.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I will move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the first amendment, the insertion of the words "are created equal and".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves adoption of the amendment and asks unanimous consent. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, page 1, line 10, after the word 'persons' insert the words 'are created equal and'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to this amendment? That portion would read, "and is dedicated to the principle that all persons are created equal and have a natural right to life, liberty," etc. Is there objection to the proposed amendment? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Was that a request for unanimous consent? I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I so move.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the proposed amendment be adopted. The amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I offered that, Mr. President, for the purpose of a little clarification and correcting a popular fallacy which appears later in that same section. We realize that we are all created equal. At the start we have equal chances but they don't remain equal, and so I felt that by putting in that all persons are created equal and have a natural right to the benefits of the provisions of the constitution, that would naturally call to exclude, as shown in my second amendment there, the words "are equal and" because we know that persons are not all equal. They are unequal possibly in intelligence, in ability of various sorts, in possession of worldly goods they are not equal, but they are entitled to equal rights and opportunities under the law. That is the purpose of the two amendments, and actually work in together.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: A point of information. Is Mr. Taylor offering both of these amendments?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, just the first one at this time.

JOHNSON: Then I have no objection.

R. RIVERS: Point of information. Is there anything inconsistent though between just dropping your first one and adopting your second?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, Mr. Ralph Rivers at this time is asking that the first one be adopted.

TAYLOR: I believe it would be better to leave it in there and strike the "and are equal" out because we know people are not equal.

R. RIVERS: Why do you say they are even created equal? That does not make one equal, what some people regard as an undisputed statement. I would like to see this straightened out and get away from that thought completely. They have equal rights and opportunities.

JOHNSON: Point of order. Is there not a motion before the house?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is before the house. The Chair felt Mr. Ralph Rivers was speaking to the motion to amend this section. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Perhaps I am out of order too, but I read the second portion a little differently. It says all persons are equal under the law." Isn't that what it means?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are not on the second part yet, Mrs. Nordale. We just have the particular amendment that relates to the wording after the word "persons". Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I am going to have to vote against this amendment because I think what we mean is said just a little bit plainer the way it is actually written now. When you start bringing up the possibility that there are not people always created equal, I have serious doubts as to the legality of that statement as well as to how applicable it would be to everyone.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, the reason I objected to the request for unanimous consent is that I realize the Committee had this very thought go through their minds and have presented the best possible Section 1 that they could, and had the words "are created equal" been of any value I am sure they would have been in there. I believe they are surplus.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The noes have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 1?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, page 2, line 1, strike the words 'are equal and'."

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment.

GRAY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I think that means that all persons are equal under the law and are entitled to equal rights and opportunities under the law. Isn't that right, Miss Awes?

AWES: That is right.

NORDALE: So I would oppose the amendment.

TAYLOR: If they are going to mean it that way they should have put it that way. It says, "All persons are equal and are entitled to equal rights and opportunities under the law." Of course we know that can be a fallacious statement. There would be no truth in it to say that all men are not equal under the law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, if the Chair may, what you have said is that if it just said, "Persons are entitled to equal rights and opportunities under the law". That is what you intend to have it say, but by using the two words "are equal" in the first part of line 1, you are saying they are not just equal under the law, they are equal in all other respects. Is that what you mean?

TAYLOR: Equal rights and opportunities.

ROBERTSON: I don't like to criticize other persons' language, but I think the obvious mistake of that sentence is that the "are" should not be in there. It should be "persons are equal and entitled to equal rights under the law." Then there would be no question under the law applied to the persons being equal, but by putting in the verb "are" in again indicates you have cut off the qualifications under the law from the first part of the clause, "are equal".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I don't believe that that is the correct interpretation of this wording, and if this amendment is adopted it will weaken the section entirely, because there are two things that are provided for here. One is that all persons are equal under the law and the other is that they are all entitled to equal rights and opportunities under the law. They are two separate and distinct things, and you have to leave the conjunction "and" in there, otherwise you run it all together. So it seems to me that the amendment is not well taken.

TAYLOR: I withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Taylor asks unanimous consent to withdraw his motion. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I rise to a point of information. Mr. Taylor, could you accomplish what you are trying to accomplish, Mr. Taylor, by changing the thing around and state that the persons are equal under the law and they are entitled to equal rights and opportunities? Would that clarify it and satisfy you?

TAYLOR: Yes, that would be all right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, you ask unanimous consent that it be withdrawn?

TAYLOR: I don't think it worthwhile to argue.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is ordered withdrawn. Are there other amendments? Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: I would like to offer an amendment to delete the second word "are" in sentence 1, page 1, Section 1, which I think will read apparently the way the authors intended it to read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves that the second word "are" on line 1 be deleted from the sentence.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

HURLEY: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the second word "are" on Section 1 be deleted. Is there objection?

V. RIVERS: How will that read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: "Persons are equal and entitled to equal rights and opportunities under the law." Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 1? If not, are there amendments to Section 2? Are there amendments to Section 3? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to propose an amendment to Section 3 on line 11, after the word "color", I would include the word "sex". I move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves and asks unanimous consent that on line 11, page 2, after the word "color", include the word "sex" and a comma and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Taylor.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE. I object.

TAYLOR: Is the purpose of your amendment, Mr. Rosswog, to give the males equal rights with the women?

ROSSWOG: I will explain if I get a second.

COOPER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: Mr. Chairman, through the Chair, I would like to explain to Mr. Rosswog that that was taken up in our Committee and we decided that the term "person" included both men and women.

ROSSWOG: I might say the reason for putting this amendment up, I was asked to do it by some people at my Committee hearing, and they were quite concerned about it, and I have talked to some members of the Committee, and it was stated that "persons" or "person" should cover that matter, but I have not seen, or it has not been included in the constitution where it states that that means both sexes.

H. FISCHER: Mr. President, I think "sex" definitely should be in this proposal because there are still states in the Union where women are not allowed to serve on juries.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Objection being just temporary I was wondering why put the word "sex" between the word "race" and the word "color"? I would ask the maker of the motion concerned to have the word "sex" put after the word "of" on line 10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you agree with that?

ROSSWOG: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the proposed amendment will read then the word "sex" comes after the word "of" on line 10 and insert a comma after the word "sex".

RILEY: I withdraw my objection to "sex". (laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin, are you objecting to that change?

MCLAUGHLIN: Is it open for discussion, Mr. Chairman?

PRESIDENT EGAN: By unanimous consent we changed the placing of the word "sex".

GRAY: Did he put a comma after that word "sex"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray, the Chair stated that there would be a comma. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I believe that the female person to my left did enter an objection and the motion is now open for discussion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is now open for discussion.

MCLAUGHLIN: Merely for the information of the Convention, this afternoon at the meeting of the committee chairmen, one of the general provisions which will probably, I cannot speak for the Committee, be in the constitution under the miscellaneous article, will be some sort of a provision providing that wherever we use the word "persons" or "people" it will be meant to include male and female persons. That is merely a generic explanation and a miscellaneous portion of the constitution providing where the expression "persons" is used, it indicates persons of either sex.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I think it is wholly unnecessary to put that word in the constitution. I agree with Mr. McLaughlin and also with Mrs. Wien that whenever the word "person" occurs it does refer to persons of both sexes. Alaska was the first political subdivision under the American flag to give the women the right of suffrage. That was accomplished in 1913, six years before the national Congress got around to amending the Constitution to provide the same thing. I think Alaska as a Territory and even before it had a legislature amply provided for the political and civil rights of its women and we have nothing at all to complain about in those respects. There are some changes we may want to see changed in regard to property rights and things of that sort, but I think it is an unnecessary incorporation into the text of the constitution and raises the inference perhaps in the minds of people that we need that protection because we do not already have it. As a matter of fact, we do and we will have it further guaranteed under this miscellaneous provision of which Mr. McLaughlin has spoken, and I think we are putting undue emphasis on a contingency that does not exist. I am going to be against the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 10, Section 3, insert the word 'sex' after the word 'of' and add a comma."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Rosswog be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 15 - Barr, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, H.
Fischer, Harris, Kilcher, Metcalf, Nolan, R. Rivers,
Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Mr. President.

Nays: 37 - Awes, Boswell, Collins, Doogan, Emberg,

V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 3 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal.)

CHIEF CLERK: 15 yeas, 37 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The nays have it and so the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I rise to a point of inquiry. Mr. Gray, I think, propounded this question to Miss Awes, but I didn't get it. At the Juneau hearing we had some of the people raise a question about the scope of the words "civil" or political right". I think they were particularly interested in whether a civil right includes a religious right. I never had occasion to look that matter up, but I would like to ask Miss Awes again if she has already answered Mr. Gray, I did not get her answer -- did the Committee vote on that question to see definitely if that covers civil and religious rights?

AWES: Whether this precludes a person from being denied the enjoyment of any religious rights?

ROBERTSON: Is it broad enough in scope to cover religious rights?

AWES: We did not cover that particular point so far as I recall. I wonder if it is necessary to consider it in view of Section 5?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would Section 5 cover any possible objections, is that what you mean?

AWES: I would be glad to have some of the other members of the Committee speak on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, I might try to answer that. I recall that there was quite a little discussion about these rights, and that in this Section 3 we specifically stated political or civil right because we felt in Section 5, which is a religious right in its entirety, would cover the religion angle of it. In Section 3 we tried to protect just the civil and political right reserving to Section 5 the religious rights. Incidentally, all that Section 5 says is that there is a religion anybody wants, but the state shall recognize no one religion above the other.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, does that answer your question?

ROBERTSON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 3? Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President. I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 10, Section 3, page 2, after the word 'civil' insert a comma and add the word 'economic'."

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, since there seems to be a question of whether civil includes economic, I move and ask unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

COGHILL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move?

V. FISCHER: I so move.

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I would like to inquire of Mr. Fischer what might not be covered by the word "civil" that might be covered by the word "economic" or what is an economic right that is not covered by a civil right?

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, this question of economic right in Section 3 was raised at the hearing in Anchorage and there was a definite disagreement among attorneys present at that hearing as to whether civil does include economic. In the minds of many people civil refers primarily to the various rights that have been listed, such as religion, freedom of speech, press, assembly, petition, trial by grand jury, etc. Economic would include the right of employment, equal opportunity for employment. Now apparently there was some question, that a civil right as such or should we try to spell it out to economic? Generally, economic opportunity in every sense, I think one can cite a number of other examples, economic discrimination in insurance or anything else, and I think that this would clarify the intent because certainly the Committee had in mind to provide for economic equality as well as political and the general concept of "civil" and I don't feel that this would be treading on anybody's toes. As long as there is a question as to whether this is adequately covered, I think it is worth an extra word and a comma in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Section 6 provides that, "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. It occurs to me that the word "economic" ought to be covered by the word "property" in that section and is unnecessary.

V. FISCHER: If I may try to answer that, I do not see where there is any relationship between the two. In Section 3 we would be establishing an economic right, the quality of opportunity. In Section 6 you are dealing with being deprived of property which is not the same thing as having a right to do something.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to ask Mr. Fischer a question in that regard. This word "economic" you proposed inserting here, your hearing in Anchorage, was the inference or was it said that that word "economic" then would mean the term that the right-to-work clause as we understand it?

V. FISCHER: No.

DOOGAN: That is what I am wondering if inserting in there that that word "economic" might not mean the right-to-work clause as we know it as against collective bargaining, and if that is the case we had quite a hassle in Committee and decided, with the exception of the minority report, to leave both the right-to-work clause and the collective bargaining clause out of the bill of rights because we felt that they were legislative matters rather than constitutional matters.

V. FISCHER: If I may answer, this refers to denial of an economic right because of race, color, creed or national origin. I do not see how this could be interpreted as any kind of a right-to-work provision. The answer when this question was raised, whether "civil includes "economic", the answer was that the intent was to include. Therefore, if "civil" were to include "economic" and if you put that word in, I don't think that we are even getting close to a right-to-work provision because we referred to denial because of race, color, creed, or national origin only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: May I ask Mr. Fischer a question?

1300

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I would like to know just what an economic right is.

V. FISCHER: It is an equal right of employment.

NORDALE: Is that a right?

V. FISCHER: Opportunity.

NORDALE: Opportunity is not necessarily a right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The reason for my objections to this is I was always under the impression that "civil" meant just what Mr. Fischer is referring to, "and in the abridged copy of the dictionary it points out that civil" is relating to the usual business of citizens and "economic" brings out the point of man's need. It says, "relating to the satisfaction of man's needs." Now, one thing you might run into here, Mr. Fischer, in your amendment would be the damaging part of it. Taking a look at the other side of it, how it could be construed.

V. FISCHER: I do not quite know what you mean by how it could be construed from the other side.

COGHILL: By clarifying that, that the points you were bringing out here would actually be interpreted under the civil rights of any human being because of race, color or creed or national origin, whereas the economic part of it might bring about a part where they figure that they should have equal opportunities in an economic portion of a community or something such as that, where it is actually a civil case.

V. FISCHER: That is exactly the intent that they should have. The reason I brought this in, as I stated before, if it is included in civil we have done no harm. However, apparently a very serious doubt exists as to whether it is included at this time in civil right, and that is the reason for the amendment to provide to make sure that economic right is included.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I am going to try to stay out of soft ground again, but I am not too sure that I like the word because I believe it is hazy. As far as economic is concerned, it can be any number of levels or phases or you can set the valuation on it on an economic level, and if I understand it right, no person is to be denied the enjoyment of any economic level, which might be high or low, regardless of the person's efforts. If it could possibly be construed that way, if there were even the remotest chance that it could be construed that way, I would definitely not be in favor of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: If I might state, I would hesitate to amend this particular section at least, by inserting the word "economic" or any other words. The thought of the Committee, this is a civil rights section. It was required in the Enabling Act, and we in Committee adopted practically the language of the Enabling Act where it states that there shall be no distinction in the civil or political rights on account of race or color, and we did enlarge that to put in creed or national origin. Then to satisfy, but mainly for the purpose of certain segments of the population were concerned with having a longer and a very detailed civil rights bill in here, and we then left it up to the legislature to implement and make the appropriate legislation, but this is strictly a civil rights matter here to comply with the Enabling Act of the House Bill 2535.

V. FISCHER: Could I ask Mr. McNealy a question? Would you guarantee that economic is included in civil rights?

MCNEALY: I heartily do to a certain extent that economics is equal to all persons but not to the extent that it guarantees anything in the nature of welfare.

V. FISCHER: Do you feel that because the Enabling Bill referred to civil or political, that we could not add "economic" since you did add some additional words at the end of that sentence?

MCNEALY: I am afraid of the word "economic" standing out in itself. I think to what extent it could be included in the word "civil", but to set out the word "economic" I am going to have to agree with what Mr. Doogan spoke about there, that there might be a danger then of getting the right-to-work or collective bargaining mixed up in the civil rights clause, and we want this as a civil rights clause and only for that purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe it would be a dangerous thing to put that word in there because I don't believe it appears in any constitution that I have read, neither does it appear in the Federal Constitution. Economic right can be construed in many different ways, and, if we would adopt that word in this particular article, we are getting ourselves into a morass of doubt in which we may, as Mr. Cooper, says getting into soft going, and it may take a considerable amount of litigation to have the courts establish what economic right was guaranteed under the constitution. I believe in other parts of the constitution as we have it here, proposed constitution, that it is more fully set out, but I think by reason of the doubt as to the meaning or the interpretations that could be put on it, I think it would be a grave error if we did include that word in it because one person's idea of the meaning of that might be entirely different from a thousand other people, and you could see the resulting litigation that might develop from it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: If I may have the last word, Mr. President, I would like to point out that we have a very large population in Alaska of people other than the white race, and I think it is important that they be given every possible protection within this constitution, that they be guaranteed every possible equality of rights and opportunity. What this does, even if we put "economic" in here, it would only say that they may not be denied enjoyment of an economic right because of race, color, creed or national origin. In other words, it would prohibit discrimination against these people who constitute a very large number of Alaskans. If you take race, color, creed and national origin, you get a very high percentage, and I think those people have the right.

COOPER: Point of order. I wanted to make one more statement before the closing debate, and I did not get up fast enough, but to bear out my point of order, Section 1, the final two words on page 1, that all persons are equal and are entitled to equal rights and opportunities under the law", and I believe that takes care of the entire situation and that has already been adopted.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, in reply to Mr. Cooper's statement, I think if you accept that then you can strike all of Section 3 because all of it becomes redundant. This is a very necessary part of the constitution. I don't think we are repeating anything here. Section 1 is primarily a statement of policy. Here we are laying down law, and I think it is important that we adopt this provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Knight, Did you have an amendment?

KNIGHT: No, Mr. McLaughlin answered my question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chief Clerk have any other amendments on her desk relative to Section 3?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 3? If not, proceed to Section 4. Are there amendments to Section 4? Are there amendments to Section 5? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May we go back to Section 4? I have another question in my mind as to whether or not the word "department" is the correct word to use there, whether it is broad enough in scope. I might ask Miss Awes if they gave that word any consideration.

AWES: We intended to use it to broaden. The federal language merely provides, as I recall, the right to petition the "government for any grievance. Well, we added the government or any department" and dropped the words, "for any grievance". Therefore, we felt we were broadening the right of the people to petition because they may petition not only the government generally but also any particular department that they might have something to say and are not limited to grievances but for any reason that they wanted to petition. That was our idea.

ROBERTSON: My point, Mr. President, a department has more or less a restricted meaning in governmental activities, at least in federal government. We have bureaus, agencies, corporations, departments, and many times they have a very distinct meaning, and bureau is not necessarily an agency or not a federal corporation, and it seems to me that possibly instead of broadening it is lessening, but if the Committee made a study of that, why that is all the further I care to pursue it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would think that would mean the major branches of the government. We have the War Department, the Navy Department, the Department of the Interior and the Department of Commerce. They are the major departments of the government. Then in those departments we have the innumerable bureaus which Alaskans are quite familiar with, and I believe that possibly an amendment to that to have that, "any department, bureau, or branch thereof", if that was inserted, it would make it kind of all inclusive. Otherwise, we would not have to go to the head of the department but also the bureaus or whatever you call them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Would you think the word "subdivision" in lieu of "department" might not cover all agencies, branches, etc.?

TAYLOR: I think that subdivision would more connote the geographical declaration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Well, I rather like Mr. Rivers' suggestion that we use "subdivision". It didn't to me, as it did to Mr. Taylor, connote geographical division, it would indicate any subdivision of government. As I said before, we used that expression, "or any department" to broaden rather than to limit. As a matter of fact, I think perhaps the word "government" implies any subdivision thereof, and I think the words "or any department" if it causes confusion, could be stricken and leave it out all together.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have no proposed amendment before us at this time. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May I make a proposal? Mr. President, I move that after the word "department" in line 18, page 2, Section 4, be inserted "bureau, agency or subdivision thereof".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that after the word "department" the words "bureau, agency or subdivision thereof" be inserted.

ROBERTSON: "Thereof" is already in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment?

KILCHER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

TAYLOR: Second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 22 - Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, H. Fischer, Harris, Johnson, Knight, Laws, McNealy, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Mr. President.

Nays: 30 - Awes, Barr, Collins, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 3 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Hellenthal.)

CHIEF CLERK: 22 yeas, 30 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and so the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I move Section 4, line 18, strike the first four words, "or any department thereof". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves and asks unanimous consent that on line 18 of page 2, Section 4, the first four words be stricken, the words "or any department thereof". Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

WHITE: I so move.

KILCHER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White so moves, Mr. Kilcher seconds the motion. The question is open for debate.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it, and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to address a question to the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee. In Section 4 we have language as follows: Every person may freely speak, write, and publish on all subjects, etc. Now, in most other constitutions, if not all, including the Federal, we have a statement to the effect that no law shall be passed denying the right, or something to that effect. In other sections immediately above and below this particular provision we say "no person is to be denied the enjoyment of any civil or political right", etc., "shall never be abridged", etc., "shall never be deprived". I wonder if the statement in this sentence might not open this up to an infringement of freedom of speech through legislation by indirect means?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: We discussed that in the Committee and the majority of the Committee preferred this language. I think that this accomplishes the same purpose as saying "no law shall be made" because this provision protects the right of the people to freely speak, write and publish, etc., and any law which denied them this right, it seems to me, would have to be unconstitutional, or I don't see any point in having the provision. So I think this accomplishes the same thing, and that was the opinion of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: My question was based primarily upon the fact that all the other statements are a specific statement to the effect that no persons could be denied or something generally equal to that, and in this section we say, "Every person may". That was the basis that you seem to be setting this apart from all the other civil rights.

AWES: Yes, I will admit the wording is different. I still think it accomplishes the same thing. I did not object to this wording, but I was not one that pushed it, either. If there is anybody on the Committee who would like to speak on this, I am willing to have them do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I am not on the Committee, but I would like to call attention to the fact that you have a Style and Drafting Committee that is supposed to take care of incongruity and lack of uniformity in language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The wording is taken identically from the Idaho example. It has been tested.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read what the second sentence in Section 4, how it now reads?

CHIEF CLERK: "The right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government shall never be abridged."

AWES: We are talking about the first sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I know, Miss Awes, but no one had the floor just then and the Chair has been wondering, now we adopted another amendment there with relation to bureaus and agencies, etc.

CHIEF CLERK: No, that was killed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then it does read, "The right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government shall never be abridged." Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I was going to call attention to the matter under controversy here regarding speech. We do have the right of free speech, but if you abuse that right by making an obscene statement you can be civilly liable, so the constitution says, "yes, you can speak on anything you want but you are responsible for the abuse of that right which is given to you," and those are the same identical words that appear in the constitution of the State of Washington, too. Possibly Idaho took Washington's words, and I think it certainly expresses the subject as concisely and intelligently, possibly more so than the Federal Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have a question of the Chair of that particular Committee, and I notice they have carried a very brief statement in regard to freedom of speech. But some of the other constitutions, such as New Jersey, carry a much longer statement in which anything that is held to be true and which they are sued for libel under and if it were actually true and published in good faith, they would be presumed to be innocent of libel. Is there any reason why that right of contingent liability should be eliminated? What was the discussion in Committee?

AWES: I don't think it was a question of whether it should have been eliminated. I think it would be better to say, was there any question why it should be included. It was not included in the Federal Constitution and some of the other state constitutions and we felt that it was a Matter that could be left to the legislature. It is really legislative in nature and that is adequate to protect the rights of the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 4? If not, are there amendments to Section 5? Are there amendments to Section 6? Section 7? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I have a proposed amendment to Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, lines 11 and 12, strike the words 'or information, which shall be concurrent remedies' and insert the following in lieu thereof: 'unless indictment be waived by the accused. If right to indictment be waived, proceedings may be by information'."

DAVIS: I move the adoption of the proposed amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

NORDALE: I second the motion.

TAYLOR: I wonder if we could have a three-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for three or four minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, with reference to my pending amendment, and also with reference to all of Section 7, I am advised that Mr. Buckalew who is not present today had a good deal to do with preparation of Section 7, also Mr. Hellenthal who is ill today, and so for that reason I would like to ask unanimous consent at this time to pass Section 7 and go on to Section 8 and consider Section 7 tomorrow when we expect the other two men will be here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will pass Section 7 subject to the time that Mr. Buckalew and Mr. Hellenthal will be present. Are there amendments to Section 8? Are there amendments to be proposed to Section 9? Section 10? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I submit one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: Page 4, Section 10, line 3, delete the last sentence commencing on line 3 and substitute the following: 'The administration of criminal justice shall be founded upon the principle of reformation as well as upon the need to protect the public.'

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of this proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Please read the amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk read the amendment again.)

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, the reason for that is that I think the administration of criminal justice should definitely be founded upon the need for protecting the public. I think that, secondarily, it is a very good idea for us to try to reform the people who have breached the law and become antisocial, but I don't want to completely overlook the protection of the public. I also think this business about "and not on vindictiveness" sounds a little odd. You can't legislate away that kind of sin. If a district attorney is mean, he is mean. I don't care, so I merely submit that to say that the administration of criminal justice shall be founded upon the principle of reformation as well as upon the need for protecting the public. It covers the subject better than it is now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I would like to ask the Chairman of the Bill of Rights a question. Was it the intention of this clause to abolish capital punishment on the theory that you cannot reform a dead man?

AWES: I made the same objection as did one or two others on the Committee. However, this sentence has used almost the identical words as in other state constitutions, and in those states the supreme court upheld that it does not abolish capital punishment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, to clarify this article more, this clause was originally taken from Indiana I believe it is. I forget the article and section number, but the way it was written in there, although it stated that it had been tested and did not preclude capital punishment, after discussion in the Committee it was purported to intend that this clause would have nothing to do until the time a person was sentenced, but in view of penal institutions and governments in their work to rehabilitate prisoners rather than lock them up on bread and water and forget about them, that this statement was more or less advisory or instructive to the penal institutions that they would work on the basis of reformation and not go back to the bread and water stage, but it was intended that it would apply after a person had received sentence. It was not to apply up until that time, and I think that is what the criminal justice is supposed to mean.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I also do not like the word "vindictiveness". I would like to believe that there is never any vindictiveness in the punishment of people who have violated the laws of the country, though I am compelled to admit that sometimes I have seen evidences of it, but I do think that Mr. Ralph Rivers is correct in saying that the chief aim of criminal justice is the protection of the public and that the reformation or rehabilitation of the persons who have been found guilty of a crime is vastly important also, so if I understand Mr. Rivers' motion correctly, I am going to support it. I think that it is high time that some state constitution had in it some mention of the need of reformation of people who seem criminally inclined rather than the need of constantly stressing punishment for them. When we learn to have preventive instead of punitive measures on our statute books we are going to be a long ways further towards really administering criminal justice.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 10? Are there proposed amendments to Section 11? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I am preparing one, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor is preparing one. The Convention will be at ease for a moment while Mr. Taylor prepares his amendment. The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 11, page 4, line 12, after the word 'seized' insert the following sentence: 'That the legislature shall provide by law for penalties for officers of the state or any subdivision thereof violating the right of the citizens under this section.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: May we have it read again slowly?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment again slowly.

(The Chief Clerk read .the amendment again.)

TAYLOR: You left out the word "penalties".

CHIEF CLERK: I am sorry. "That the legislature shall provide by law for penalties for officers of the state or any subdivision thereof violating the right of the citizens under this section."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What line is that?

CHIEF CLERK: Line 12, at the end of the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to it?

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked.

METCALF: I object.

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I put that in so that the first legislature of the state may also implement the article. As it is it doesn't mean a thing unless there is some penal provisions mentioned and in the present Alaska Code we have a provision which provides for punishment for any officers who do violate this section, and it would be meaningless unless there were penalties provided. We have a great many officers who are zealous and in many instances are overzealous and do violate our rights to a great extent, and in attempting to secure, or in securing evidence against people accused of crime. I feel we should have a penalty because this is an article which prohibits the officers from making unreasonable searches and seizures, so you have got to have a penalty. If you don't you might as well strike the bill of rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I think the cards are stacked up against the officers. Having been in that capacity for many years, I think the officer is entitled to make a few mistakes, though we don't mean to make mistakes, and I think if you put a penalty on an officer, maybe seizing a bit of evidence, I think it is going to discourage efficient law enforcement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor a question if I may. My vote will be persuaded by your interpretation of my question here. I just want to know if the seizures of property and unwarranted searching of residences, etc., and other properties, would that include abodes as well?

TAYLOR: That would include abodes as well. That means anything within the enclosure of your yard, and the reason I put this in is that I have seen so many flagrant violations of the law by the officers themselves, and it has been on the books all the time that Mr. Metcalf has been violating the law by illegal searches and seizures. There has been some objection made to it, and I don't think Mr. Metcalf will take that very seriously. I don't think Mr. Metcalf did violate the law. And we have a penal provision in the statutes right now, and I would like to see it carried over into the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I would like to point out so far as I can see in reading it in a hurry, Section 11 is identical to the Article 4 of the Bill of Rights of the United States Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: As I recall, I think this is identical to Section 4 of the United States Constitution, and Mr. Taylor himself says that there is a statute on the books now, and it is my understanding that those statutes, including that one, will be continued unless altered or repealed, so consequently there will be a statute, and it seems to me that this proposed amendment is legislative in nature and unnecessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I was just going to say that I thought the amendment offered by Mr. Taylor might be superfluous in view of Section 19 which says, "The enumeration of rights in this constitution shall not impair or deny others retained by the people." In other words, though we set up a Bill of Rights here, if the legislature feels it is necessary to implement any of these rights by statute that they can do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would also like to point out that to implement this section of the bill of rights, the legislature would have to define "specific offenses as well as prescribe penalties. If we are going to pursue Mr. Taylor's thought we are going to have to write it out more fully. I am in favor of leaving it the way it is and letting the legislature handle it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe Mr. Rivers has the wrong interpretation. I said "The Legislature shall provide penalties". That is all we have to do and leave it up to the legislature. I am not afraid of the future legislature like a lot of people here. I think they are going to have more than seventh grade intelligence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, if there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 11? If not, are there proposed amendments to Section 12? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I have one to Section 12.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, line 15, page 4, remove the period and insert 'of twelve, except'. Change capital 'I' to small letter 'i' in the word 'in'.

ROBERTSON: I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves the adoption of the amendment and asks unanimous consent. Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, line 15, page 4, remove period and insert 'of twelve, except'. Change capital 'I' to small letter 'i' in the word 'in PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May we have a minute's recess? For just a minute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at ease for a moment or two. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Robertson asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 12? Miss Awes.

AWES: I think his amendment was to add the words "of twelve, except". I think we should also unanimously add the word "that" because otherwise it is awfully awkward.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes asks unanimous consent that the word "that" be placed after the word "except". Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to offer a short amendment that following the word "persons" on line 17 that we strike the period and insert the words "with the consent of the accused." Otherwise, they could provide for a jury of six without the consent of the defendant.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, do you offer that as an amendment?

TAYLOR: I offer that as an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: "Striking the period after the word 'persons' and inserting the words 'with the consent of the accused.'" Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I ask Mr. Taylor a question? Mr. Taylor, the wording now says, "In courts not of record the jury may consist of not more than twelve nor less than six persons. Would that not imply that if it were less than twelve it would have to be with the consent of the accused?"

TAYLOR: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is objection heard to the unanimous consent request?

AWES: I object.

VANDERLEEST: I second the motion.

TAYLOR: I think it should be changed a little bit, I think we can change that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at ease for a moment. The Convention will come to order. We have the proposed amendment as proposed by Mr. Taylor before us. Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like both to object to the amendment and I would also like to make a little explanation of the section. Mr. Johnson made an interpretation that I don't think is quite correct. The section provides, "In courts not of record the jury may consist of not more than twelve nor less than six persons. It is my understanding that when a constitution preserves the right to a jury it preserves the right to a jury of twelve, which was the common law jury. The provision, may consist" rather than "shall consist was intended to leave the matter up to the legislature, the right of jury is preserved and that would be twelve people unless the legislature sees fit to change it to six or eight or anything not less than six. I don't think that if you are going to add this "with the consent of the accused", you might as well knock out the whole thing from the word "except" on to the end of the sentence because the accused can always waive the right to practically any constitutional protection he has. You don't have to put it in the constitution. I think there was one case where the defendant waived so many of his rights that he was soon facing the electric chair The court held that as long as he voluntarily waived them that he could do it. Therefore, there is no point of having a provision in there. If he wants to he can consent to no jury at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: For once I do not concur with the eminent Chairman of the Committee. A person under a system which allows a trial by jury of twelve, the accused may waive a jury, period, but that means he just throws himself on the mercy of the court and has no jury at all, but if he is going to be allowed a jury of six persons instead of twelve, which is generally agreeable to the parties involved in your commissioner courts or justice of the peace courts, the law has to provide for such a jury of six. Now, the procedure now in the justice of the peace courts and our commissioners' is that if a defendant in a criminal case in a J P court wishes to consent to it and wants a jury, he may have a jury of six and waive as to the requirement of having twelve people on the jury. The thought behind Mr. Taylor's amendment here is the same as prevails in Alaska at the present time. So you don't have to go whole hog or none. You waive a jury completely and you don't get any at all. You just as well might let the J P courts operate with juries of six, but as it was, it would be the legislature may positively fix a jury of six in justice of the peace courts, the way the language was. Mr. Taylor is trying to establish that you may have a jury of six if the defendant waives a jury of twelve and consents to a jury of six. I am supporting Mr. Taylor's amendment, except that I want to make it read a little better here. I am going to offer an amendment to his amendment. That is, the language on line 16 which says "not more than twelve nor less than six". If you establish a jury of twelve period, and you say that he may waive the jury of twelve and have a jury of six, you don't want to talk about a jury of not more than twelve. You just say "may consist of a jury of six", so I move to amend Mr. Taylor's proposed amendment by deleting the words on line 16 as follows: "Not more than twelve or less than", and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair might ask a question. What was the particular amendment in that section that Mr. Robertson has proposed? How does the section in there read at this time?

CHIEF CLERK: "In all criminal prosecutions the accused has the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of twelve, except that in courts not of record the jury may consist of not more than twelve nor less than six persons."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does that interfere with what Mr. Ralph Rivers said?

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Rivers is on the next line.

TAYLOR: Just for a moment, a change of an idea with Mr. Rivers. I think though that that doesn't cure the defect in it because if a man is being tried it might be the district attorney who might say, "I want only six jurors", and the defendant has nothing to say about it because the district attorney said it, but it should be in there that it must be with his consent to be tried by a jury of less than twelve people.

R. RIVERS: Does not your principal amendment say "with the consent of the accused"? May we have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the previous amendment to Section 12.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor asks unanimous consent to withdraw his original amendment.

R. RIVERS: I ask the same with regard to my proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the withdrawal?

TAYLOR: I offer an amendment that takes care of the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The amendments are ordered withdrawn. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 15, page 4, after the second word 'jury' insert 'with the consent of the accused'. Line 16, strike 'not more than twelve nor less than'."

R. RIVERS: The word "jury" being the last word "jury" on line 15.

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves the adoption of the proposed amendment and asks unanimous consent.

MCNEALY: I object.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The matter is open for discussion. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor or one of the other attorneys here, exactly what are we talking about when we talk about "courts not of record"? Are those established by the legislature and could the legislature not provide for the size of the jury and all the other details?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Not if we put this limitation on it, or restriction on them. That is why it is in there. A court not of record is a court in which the proceedings are not transcribed, they have no shorthand reporters present unless you ask for a court of record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I amplify what Mr. Taylor says? The courts of general jurisdiction have the common law jury of twelve. That is what will be our superior court after we get to be a state. The judiciary article says that the legislature may establish such courts of limited jurisdiction as the legislature deems fit, and that would be the J P courts, and they authorize these magistrate courts in the towns and juvenile courts and that sort of thing, all of those courts which would be created by the legislature would not be courts of record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, did you want the floor?

AWES: I just was going to explain what a court not of record was.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I don't feel strongly one way or the other in regard to this amendment here. The only reason I objected to the amendment was for the same reason I voted for this in Committee. To allow for juries of six in magistrate courts or in commissioners courts or justice of peace courts, as they possibly will be, both as prosecuting and defending of cases in these inferior courts there is very often that I have called for a jury of twelve in a commissioner's court on a traffic violation or a drunken driving charge or some petty misdemeanor, and the reason I did was because it was the Federal government that was paying twelve dollars a day, I believe jury's fees, and in looking this over in the Committee I felt that if the state was going to have to pay that, that comes a little closer to home and was purely a financial matter as far as I was concerned. Actually, I believe if the party that was accused of assault and battery or drunken driving or some parking violation or any misdemeanor, that he can get ample justice before a jury of six, and it would save the state about $72 on these one-hour trials and further, if he is still not satisfied with the decision of the jury of six he has the right of course then to appeal and have his case heard before a jury of twelve in the higher court, so it was strictly from a financial point of view that gives the legislature power, and I believe that if the legislature, if they feel that people's rights aren't covered by a jury of six, then they can cause the jury to be set at twelve or they can legislate this particular amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I am wondering that if the wording that is given to us is as clear as we want it to be. It says here "with the consent of the accused the jury shall not be more than twelve nor less than six."

TAYLOR: No.

R. RIVERS: That is what I am moving to strike, "not more than twelve or less than six".

LONDBORG: I see.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross.

CROSS: I would like to point out that there are several places in the Territory where it is extremely difficult to get a jury of twelve and an accused man can obstruct justice for a considerable time by demanding a jury of twelve.

HURLEY: I would like to second what Mr. Cross has said and also, although we have not provided for it in the constitution under the judiciary article, I presume it is fair to think there will be a very simple right of appeal from your lower courts to your courts of record, and I do not think we are trodding upon the rights of the accused by providing a lesser number than twelve as a jury if that appears to be the proper thing to do by the judge who is trying the case. I am against the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion -- Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to answer Mr. Hurley. Perhaps he is not familiar with the way law is administered in Alaska. Now take the hypothetical case of a man who is tried before a commissioner or a justice of the peace or before a jury of six. He says, he spent his day in court so he can appeal. Well, this is a criminal case he is trying, and it might be he lies in jail one year before his appeal can be heard. He is denied the right of justice. Mr. McNealy here, he would crucify justice on the cross of gold because it is going to cost $72 for a couple of jurors.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder if I might direct a question to Mr. McLaughlin through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. McLaughlin, I am wondering if the article on the judiciary which has already passed through second reading does not permit in its Section 19 which says, "The Supreme Court shall make and promulgate rules governing the administration of all courts of the State. It shall also make and promulgate rules governing practice and procedure in all civil and criminal cases in all courts, which rules may be changed by the Legislature only upon a two-thirds vote of the members elected to each house." It does not give the supreme court the authority to do what we are attempting to write in here as a bill of rights, that is the right for a trial by jury of six persons.

MCLAUGHLIN: I would say it does not give that right. That is not a procedural matter, that is a substantive matter, the right of trial by jury and the number that you will have. I would say the supreme court had no authority to make rules on that subject. It would be either the legislature or provided in the constitution.

SUNDBORG: Do you believe it belongs in the bill of rights?

MCLAUGHLIN: If you are asking my opinion of this section, I think this section as presented by the Bill of Rights Committee is an excellent section without amendment.

SUNDBORG: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention"? All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 12? Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I have a question to the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee, line 18, that is beginning at 17, "The accused is also entitled to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation". Does "cause" add anything to it?

AWES: I don't recall any particular question on that by the Committee. I am inclined to think that the words "and cause" are redundant.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Once again that is taken word for word from the Federal Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: The word "cause" as I understand it, the nature of the crime would be the facts. The cause would apply to the law the party was charged under.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I note by my clock that the time is 5:40, and if it is in order I move to adjourn until 9 a.m. tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before this motion is acted upon, the Chair would like to remind the delegates that they are invited to an open house given by Pan American Airways at their new office quarters in the Nordale Hotel between now and 7 p.m. The Chair would also like to suggest that inasmuch as we now have a full calendar before us and inasmuch as each delegate has that calendar in his possession that it might expedite matters if each delegate would attempt to go through each proposal, and if he feels that there are any parts of it he would like to offer amendments to, have the amendments ready at the time that we convene if possible. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I would suggest that they also read the PAS book about that same material because some times you get some very good ideas from it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any committee announcements to be made at this time? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I will ask for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. tomorrow. Hearing no objection it is so ordered.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 6, 1956

FORTY-FIFTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Chaplain Foss from Ladd Air Force Base will give the morning invocation.

CHAPLAIN HENRY A. FOSS: Eternal loving Heavenly Father, we raise our voices to Thee in gratitude for Thy protection and guidance in the days and years past, and we look up to Thee for guidance in the deliberations of this meeting which may determine the destiny of this Territory for the welfare of Thy people. May Thy Name be exalted and glorified for evermore. In His Name we pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper is ill.

CHIEF CLERK: Five absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with the regular order of business. Are there any petitions or memorials or communications from outside the Convention? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I requested that the College here through the student body sometime ago to give me an expression of their opinion on when a man should start voting. I have a petition here signed by the majority of the students addressed to the Alaska Constitutional Convention. I wish to submit it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit it, Mr. Marston, and if the Convention would stand at recess for about one minute the Chair will also get a communication relating to that subject that arrived last evening.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may read the communications.

(The Chief Clerk read a communication from the President of the Associated Students of the University of Alaska pledging their support to and recommending any resolution of the Convention favoring an 18-year-old voting age in the future state of Alaska.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication may be filed.

(The Chief Clerk read a communication signed by 121 students of the University of Alaska urging the Convention to set 18 as the minimum age required as a qualification to vote in the future State of Alaska.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication may be filed. Are there other communications? Are there reports of standing committees? Reports of select committees? Are there any proposals to be introduced? Are there any motions or resolutions? Under unfinished business we have before us Committee Proposal No. 7. Are there any amendments before us at the present time?

CHIEF CLERK: We have Mr. Davis's which he asked to hold over until Mr. Buckalew and Mr. Hellenthal were here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, would you wish to present your amendment again at this time since Mr. Hellenthal and Mr. Buckalew are here?

DAVIS: I think yesterday I moved the adoption of the proposed amendment. I do not know whether there was a second to it or not.

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, it was seconded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So we have before us Mr. Davis's proposed amendment. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, lines 11 and 12, strike the words 'or information, which shall be concurrent remedies' on lines 11 and 12 and insert the following in lieu thereof: 'unless indictment be waived by the accused. If right to indictment be waived, proceedings may be by information.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, the purpose of the proposed amendment is this, as the section reads, the district attorney or the prosecuting officer, whoever he may be, may proceed in a criminal case either by indictment or information. I think as a matter of practice that he would proceed in all cases or nearly all cases by information. It is much easier for his office to do it that way. In my practice it appears to me that the grand jury serves a useful purpose. In some cases, not often it is true, but in some cases a person against whom criminal charges have been filed by the district attorney or by private parties, is released by the grand jury as there does not appear to be sufficient cause to hold him for trial. That of course is the purpose of the indictment. Now it is as pointed out yesterday, in many many cases, particularly in Alaska, a person may miss a grand jury and be charged with a crime and may have to wait a considerable period of time in jail before he can have the matter heard by a grand jury. For that reason we have been allowing an accused to waive his right to a grand jury if he wants to, to waive his right to being indicted, and the amendment which I have proposed would preserve that same procedure which I think has worked very well. It will allow those who wish to have the matter heard by a grand jury, to have it heard by a grand jury. It will also allow the man who may be accused and who may want to waive the grand jury to waive and to proceed on information. Now I think the procedure we have had has worked very well, and I would like to keep it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of Mr. Davis's proposed amendment? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, the Committee initially left the article by providing the requirement of the government to go by way of indictment unless the accused waives. Now as you all know, the first 10 amendments to the Constitution apply directly to Alaska now because we are a Federal Territory. For that reason the procedure we have today is carried out because we are complying with the Constitution. Now most states follow similar procedures we have lined out here in the article. I can see why the Federal government could have a provision against it requiring proceeding by indictment because at that time the only crimes against the United States would be serious crimes, and I suspect that the framers of the Constitution had in mind the particular crime of treason. Now if we change the article as Mr. Davis wants to change it, if a man picks up a $56 radio, you have got to go by way of indictment. You have got to panel a grand jury. I think in Alaska it will be costly and expensive, and I think it is an unreasonable burden to put on the state, and I don't believe that it affords any additional protection to the accused. I think that historically in the Federal Constitution it probably served its purpose, but most of the states do not require proceeding by indictment. Now we have preserved the investigating powers of the grand jury. The only bad feature I can see about it, and I thought about it, Mr. Davis pointed it out to me, was that perhaps a grand jury would never be impaneled, but that is probably true, and probably you will never need a grand jury, and I can't see that it serves any useful purpose, does not afford any additional protection to the accused. In Alaska it is going to be costly and most of the states followed this particular provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I started the discussion on this point yesterday when I asked the Chairman of the Committee what they had thought about it and what their thinking was. The grand jury once a year investigates the jails and sometimes is useful where any particular fraud or general scandal has occurred, and I think they serve a useful purpose. Sometimes, as Mr. Davis said, the grand jury will bring in a "no true bill" meaning they just refused to accuse anybody because the evidence is too flimsy. I like it the way it has been where the accused has the alternative of taking his choice, and the object of waiving an indictment by the grand jury is that if a man is accused, and you are not going to have a grand jury for six months or a year, so he says, "I want to get this over with." So he says to the district attorney, "File on information and we will fight it out on the information." That is the protection, so the grand jury does serve some useful purpose. That is my thinking in bringing it up.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I think yesterday I made my ideas clear. I am against the use of a grand jury in criminal prosecution. I was in the United States Attorney's office for five years, and I've had quite a bit of experience with them. I have been on the other side of the fence for a good many more years. I would say retain the grand jury all right for investigative purposes of officials and public institutions, but why not proceed the same as most of the states do? Now we are trying to formulate a modern document, a modern constitution in this Convention. Just because a grand jury is a historical tradition dating from the time of the drawing of the Federal Constitution, why do we have to hang on to those old traditions that have outlived their usefulness? Let us make this modern and up-to-date, and I think that doing away with the grand jury will expedite the criminal procedure, will give a person what they are entitled to, a plain and speedy trial instead of a wait for a year or more sometimes before they can get the trial. I think that the grand jury is in the same class as the dodo; it's done for, it is gone and we might as well relegate it to oblivion where it belongs because it serves no useful purpose except for just investigative purposes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I think a nonlawyer should speak about this matter too, and I am very surprised that one time the dodo bird should be a symbol and the next time the eagle. I am also surprised that one day they are going to be rabid reformists and reject conventions when it is handy, and the next time we are frowning upon innovation when it is equally handy. I think that the grand jury essentially is an added protection to the citizens, specifically to the criminal cases. I am in favor of the amendment, and I think the cost angle when civic liberties are in question should not be mentioned.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I favor Mr. Taylor's viewpoint on the matter, and my observation in the law enforcement game for many years, there would be a terrific duplication of expense. Bring a big crew of witnesses in on a case and they sit around for a week or so and pay $20 a day, and then the case is heard before the grand jury and then they are sent back home again, and then maybe three or four months later bring them in again. You are going to be paying the bill for this duplication of expense. Therefore, I favor Mr. Taylor's viewpoint on the bill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: This particular provision is exactly Section 16 and Section 17 of the Constitution of the State of Missouri. The provision in question that we are passing on now is exactly the Missouri provision. Now two things have been confused here. One is the right to waive proceeding by indictment and the other is requiring indictment in all felonies. Now I believe that a person can always waive proceeding by indictment against himself, but if there is any doubt about it I would certainly be in favor of that portion of Mr. Davis's amendment. However, to preserve the old system which Mr. Taylor truly says is antiquated, I do not think it belongs in a modern constitution, and that is why the Committee chose the Missouri form. The grand jury should certainly and definitely be preserved as an investigating agency. There is no question about it at all, and the Missouri provision does exactly that, but to require indictment in felonies is archaic, it is not modern, and I think it serves very little if any, useful purpose. I agree wholeheartedly with Mr. Taylor's remarks, and I note that Mr. Taylor was one of the most successful prosecutors that they ever had in the Third Judicial Division and he is likewise one of the most successful defense attorneys in Alaska, and I certainly think that great weight should be afforded to his analysis of the situation. He shows good sound judgment, and he obviously is leaning over to protect the citizen, and if he were looking at it in a narrow manner he might insist on the grand jury and the method of indictment because it does give some consolation to those evilly disposed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think that probably we should advise the nonlawyer delegates that at the time the grand juries convene the prosecutor controls all of the proceedings. The prosecutor decides what witnesses shall be called. The accused does not have a right to be represented by counsel. It is a secret proceeding which is more or less geared and controlled by the prosecutor and most of the time it is something that is just sort of a rubber stamp deal, and actually I can't see that it affords an accused person much protection at all, and usually it works the other way because a prosecutor will convene a grand jury just to get the testimony of his weak witnesses under oath, and he might call a grand jury to more or less buck up some of his witnesses, and it can be used for all kinds of things, and I can't think of any of the various uses that I have seen grand juries used for that it affords any real protection to the accused, and I can see where here in Alaska, if we followed this amendment, it would be awfully costly on a small state, and I figured that if it afforded any protection, regardless of the cost, I would vote for the amendment, but I can't see that it protects the citizens, and as I say, he has no rights before the grand jury, and as a matter of fact, I think it is more beneficial to the government than it is to the citizen. I can't see any sense in providing that the state be required to have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question, perhaps of Mr. Buckalew. If the amendment is not adopted, under what circumstances would a grand jury be called? As I read it here, a judge having the power to try and determine felonies would have the right to convene a grand jury, is that true?

BUCKALEW: That would be your superior court which is your trial court. The only person who could convene a grand jury would be the superior judge, and I think the superior judge would convene a grand jury, certainly if there was anything unusual going on in his district or any other district, and I think too that if the prosecutor got out of hand and was running like a brush fire, that the court would probably convene a grand jury and require him to indict everybody by grand jury.

HURLEY: That was the second question I was going to ask you, that if, beginning the trial by a matter of information were being abused, you feel that the judge of the superior court having reasonable tenure would be interested in the well being of the area and would call a grand jury?

BUCKALEW: Here is another consideration, if the prosecutor can go in and file an information, he is not going to be rushing in there filing informations without merit because the first time he does and it is thrown out or the case does not go to the jury, he would stop that practice right quick, because it would be fresh in the public minds that he failed an information and two weeks later he was miserably defeated. I would imagine he would get the cure without the judge having to panel a grand jury.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I guess I have the right to close. Nobody who has talked against the proposed amendment has disputed the suggestion I made that if we allow the alternative method, that indictments will not be used as a matter of practice, informations will be used in all cases. Now it is true that the investigative grand jury has been preserved in the bill as set forth here. However, an investigative grand jury will only be called under certain specific circumstances, and somebody is going to have to find conditions pretty bad before an investigative grand jury will be called, whereas a grand jury which is impaneled regularly, once or twice a year in our division, has full investigative power as well as the power to consider indictments. The grand jury is there and may take any steps that it feels may be necessary toward investigation. It does not have to wait for a call. Now it is true that a grand jury may be somewhat expensive, and it is true also that a grand jury dates back to the early days. But it does not follow in my opinion that the fact that a grand jury is something historic, or means that the grand jury at this time should be scrapped. It has served a useful purpose and it does serve a useful purpose. Mr. Buckalew has pointed out that the grand jury is more or less under the control, that isn't the right word but at any rate the proceedings are under the control of the district attorney. There is no question about that and there isn't any question that each grand jury that sits returns some "no true bills". The present grand jury just finished sitting in Anchorage has returned probably 10 "no true bills". For those who are not lawyers, a "no true bill" means that somebody has been charged with a crime by the district attorney and the district attorney, with all the control of the proceedings before the grand jury, has presented all of his evidence to the grand jury and in spite of that the grand jury has said that there is no cause to hold this man for trial, and the man has been released without going through a trial to a regular jury. Certainly under those circumstances it can't be said that the grand jury serves no useful purpose. It serves a distinctly useful purpose, and not as Mr. Hellenthal said, only to persons evilly disposed. It might be me, it might be you, it might be anybody that was charged with crime and was not guilty of that crime and should be released by a grand jury when the evidence was produced before the grand jury. Mr. Buckalew, possibly inadvertently, mentioned another useful purpose that the grand jury serves when he says that the district attorney can get his weak witnesses on record. Certainly that is worthwhile to the government in a case where the government has a case that he wants to prosecute. To get his witnesses on record under oath certainly is of considerable value. I will agree in a minute that in most cases, under present circumstances, the defendants are going to waive the right to grand jury investigation and to indictment and to proceed by information because it is so much faster, but I certainly hope that we preserve the right to have the criminal matters investigated by a grand jury if the accused wants it done that way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, yesterday we attempted an amendment to Section 11. I think it was prompted by Mr. Taylor, on line 12, page 4, I don't recall the amendment verbatim, but it had to do with punishment defined for officers that are infringing on civil liberties. Isn't that so, Mr. Taylor? So I can see a contingency between your amendment of yesterday and the question at hand right now. I recall personally a situation eight or nine years ago that brought it to my attention forcefully how the grand jury can be utterly vital. I think the grand jury can to some extent come into play in situations that your amendment yesterday was trying to remedy. The grand jury in its investigative power as well as for the fact that it is sitting there as a panel sometimes is the only recourse for a citizen to get justice, to get redress from abuse in lower courts. It is the only place where a citizen who had a just case but who was refused to have his just case treated in the lower court, as it is now in the Territory, the commissioner's court, to appeal directly to the grand jury is the only way. If the commissioner refuses to have the case appealed in superior court, this is my personal experience, it is the only safeguard a citizen occasionally has when for any reason and very often for political reasons, a case is not dealt with properly. The grand jury can be appealed to directly, which is an invaluable right to the citizen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to ask a question of Mr. Buckalew, if I may. I ask it out of pure ignorance as a layman. Where will we get our district attorneys or prosecutors under the state government?

BUCKALEW: From the way the constitution looks now, Mr. McLaughlin can probably answer it better than I could, I would say he would be elected from, what is this outfit, the boroughs.

SUNDBORG: I was wondering when we are a state and operating under this constitution, how will we get our prosecutors or district attorneys?

MCLAUGHLIN: This says the legislature shall prescribe them. I don't believe any one of the committee proposals makes any provision for the prosecutors. I presume the legislature will have to determine how the prosecutors are appointed.

SUNDBORG: What would be a logical method? Are there a number of choices?

MCLAUGHLIN: There are plenty of choices, elective, appointive by the governor, appointive within the borough.

SUNDBORG: I have another question. Will the state constitution and this material which we are going to have in our bill of rights be governing in the federal court in Alaska as well as in our state court?

MCLAUGHLIN: What is that again?

SUNDBORG: Will the state constitution and this material which we are going to have in our bill of rights be governing in the Federal court in Alaska as well as in our state court? Presumably we will have a Federal District Court.

MCLAUGHLIN: It will not unless it is appealed. Normally I will say this -- no, it will not apply. They will use the substantive law, which is the Constitution of the United States in cases in the Federal courts, but normally it does not apply.

SUNDBORG: The guarantees we think we are writing into our state constitution would not be guarantees of the liberties citizens if the rules of the procedure in the Federal courts were at variance with them?

MCLAUGHLIN: These are protections for the people of the state. If you are unfortunate enough to appear in the United States District Court for the District of Alaska, which will be established on statehood, then your rights will be determined under Federal law, and those cases as Mr. Hellenthal mentioned, one out of a thousand I guess, that is what it will be in the United States District Court.

SUNDBORG: Would there still be a Federal grand jury?

MCLAUGHLIN: Yes, there would.

MARSTON: Could I ask Delegate Davis a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. Davis, if a man goes afoul of the law and the D.A. charges him with breaking the law, he throws him in jail, then can that man require a grand jury hearing or does he have to go up for trial, wait there for a year or two years like they do in Anchorage now to have a hearing? Does he have to wait in jail or can he have a grand jury hearing and get out?

DAVIS: Under the present circumstances, the district attorney files or somebody files a complaint usually with the commissioner's office. If it is a felony case which we are talking about here, a felony case being any case that any matter that is punishable by imprisonment or death, anything more than a petty crime, if it is a felony case, the United States Commissioner holds a hearing, which we call a preliminary hearing. At that hearing the United States Commissioner decides whether or not there is reasonable cause to hold this man. Now, as a matter of practice, in most cases the United States Commissioner holds that there is reasonable cause, some cases, no, but most cases, yes. In case the United States Commissioner holds there is reasonable cause to hold the man for crime charged, then the matter goes to the grand jury. Now there is a short cut of that procedure. The district attorney, if he wishes, may bring the matter directly before the grand jury, or for that matter the grand jury may on its own motion indict someone, usually not, but it could. Now, if the grand jury finds that there is no cause to hold the man for the crime, it renders what is called a no true bill and the man is released. If it finds that there is cause to hold him for trial, and as I pointed out awhile ago, usually it does, if it finds that there is just cause to hold him for trial, he is sent for trial to the district court. However, the provision as it now stands allows the man to waive the preliminary hearing I talked about. It also allows him to waive the right to trial by grand jury, and I suppose under present circumstances that at least half of the people accused waive the right to grand jury. Now I may be wrong on my figures, but at least a substantial portion of them do. Now Mr. McCutcheon has just pointed out to me here, and this may be what you were really asking about, as to whether a man can require immediate action by a grand jury. He cannot. The grand jury only meets as called by the district judge. In Anchorage that is twice a year. In some other divisions it may be different, it depends on what the case load is. The judge in our area calls the grand jury twice a year. Now if a person is accused of crime and he does not wish to waive his rights to have his case heard by the grand jury, then he has to either make bail or sit in jail until the grand jury meets, and at that time if the grand jury releases him, he is released. If the grand jury binds him over to the district court for trial or indicts him, he stands trial in the district court. Have I answered the question?

MARSTON: Will your amendment preserve the grand jury if it is passed, or will it destroy it?

DAVIS: As I intend it, it will preserve the right to grand jury in all cases where a man is accused of a felony. It will give the man the right, if he wishes, to waive that right and to proceed without an indictment.

MARSTON: Mr. President, may I speak on this? I had a case of an Arctic friend of mine who came afoul of the law and landed in the jail, and I took him out, got his bail, and the grand jury was good enough to send for me to talk for him. If that man had had to sit there for trial he wouldn't have had the money to fight it, he would have lost his job and been a derelict on the shores of white man's civilization. I went before the grand jury. They found what I learned was a no true bill handed to him, and he is a free citizen, has his job and is doing all right. On that basis I am going to vote for Mr. Davis's amendment and preserve that grand jury.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to say that under the rules each delegate has a right to be heard twice, except the maker of the motion. Now, Mr. Davis can still close this argument if he so chooses. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I feel that this grand jury situation is important enough to possibly take up a few more minutes of the time of the delegates here but again, I don't think that it is something that I am not too strongly persuaded for or against the amendment. I only speak to point out one or two things. There are at least four of us here who have been United States attorneys and have handled the matters before the grand juries and are conversant with them. Just mentioning briefly, as Mr. Buckalew spoke there, the United States attorney or any prosecuting attorney before the grand jury, if he really wants an indictment, in I would say 99 out of 100 cases he could secure the indictment because you can furnish hearsay evidence to the members of a grand jury. You can present letters and affidavits and evidence of that nature which you could not get into evidence in the trial court before the petit jury so it has that disadvantage there, and I think every prosecuting attorney I know, including myself, has submitted evidence at times to the grand jury thinking later on he could back that evidence before a petit jury, and on occasion you fail, and the petit jury releases them where the grand jury indicts. On the other hand, I don't want to say anything about the cross angle today because I was nailed to the cross of gold yesterday. The only thing at all that I could speak in favor of the grand jury for is simply this, that occasionally our appointed prosecutors become a little overzealous and want to secure a number of convictions and in some of those instances a grand jury will return a no true bill. Even more important I think is the fact that during the time I was in office, they had citizens here who came in with the complaints against others and in three or four instances that I remember distinctly, they were prominent citizens of the town here. Charges were filed against them and it was presented direct to the grand jury, that is the charges were labeled for the grand jury, and the grand jury heard the evidence and returned a no true bill, and it was under the secret indictment procedure which the grand jury is allowed to use. In other words, the secret indictment may be returned or the hearing held secretly before the grand jury, and in these four or five instances that I call to mind, they were more or less prominent citizens of the town who were not criminally inclined, and the jury returned a no true bill, and it was a secret indictment in three cases the parties did not even know the charges were filed before the grand jury. Had we not had the grand jury system and had a complaint been filed against these people, it would have hit the front pages of the local papers and probably would have done great harm to the reputation of these few people where it was not warranted, and for that reason alone, it would be the only reason. I think the ordinary criminal is, or the person charged with a crime is well protected by the system of information but the only thing that could offset that would be if the state prosecutors are elected and not appointed by the judicial council then it may be that since they are elected officials they may not be so prone to jump out and start prosecutions under information. In closing, I could only say, and I have not added a great deal, but there is simply the question of whether the grand jury system, the perpetuation of it in order to protect a few, whether it is worthwhile for that or whether it is not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe we have all strayed away from the subject before the Convention. I think it was as to whether or not we would prosecute by information or by grand jury, but now we've got to arguing about whether a grand jury should be retained or not and I think a number of us have made it very clear we are not in favor of the retention of the grand jury. If we are going to retain the grand jury I am in favor of Mr. Davis's amendment. It does protect the accused to a considerable extent, but I would much rather see an amendment offered here that abolished the grand jury for the investigation of felonies and the return of true bills or not true bills.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: As a layman I am learning a lot about the law business in this discussion. I can understand now why every attorney has walls covered with books, and I would like to suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this matter be laid on the table, and I so move that this be laid on the table until all of the 17 attorneys can be put into a small room and come out with something that is understandable to the lay people. I for one feel completely confused with all of this discussion, and I think I am of reasonable intelligence. I would like to suggest that all of these attorneys who have gone to college for five years to become attorneys and to confuse the public get together.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher are you moving to lay this motion of Mr. Davis's on the table?

HILSCHER: I am moving to lay this motion on the table.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is undebatable. Is there a second?

LAWS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Davis be laid on the table?" All those in favor of laying the proposed amendment on the table will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the motion has failed of adoption. Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I yield to Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I am in favor of Mr. Davis's proposed amendment. I personally don't try very many criminal cases, although, during the many years I have practiced law, I have defended a good many of the accused. I have watched for the past several years down in the First Division, and it seems to me that the use of an information against the accused is being greatly overdone and being done without entire fairness to the accused. And after all, when a person is accused of a crime, he is not guilty of a crime until he has been convicted, and it seems to me that at the very least, the accused ought to have the privilege or the right of saying whether or not he demands that he be indicted before he goes to trial, and I think that Mr. Davis's amendment as I understand it, will continue to give the accused that right unless the United States attorney and the other officials can talk him into the waiving of the right of indictment, he can still stand on his constitutional right that a grand jury must first indict him before he can be brought to trial before the petit jury, and I think it is a great thing to the accused to have this amendment put in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: As Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee, I was asked a lot of questions yesterday, and I also got up and talked on practically every section that was discussed. For that reason I thought I would get up and just say that I don't want it implied that because I am not talking today that I do not favor the section as it came out of the Bill of Rights Committee. I do favor the way it stands. I agree with everything that Mr. Buckalew has said because I felt that he and some of the others on the Committee knew more about criminal law than I did. I preferred to let them speak, but I don't want it implied that I do not favor this provision. I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: There is one thing I think should be cleared up, and it came up in connection with Mr. Sundborg's question. He asked about the Federal grand jury, and the answer was that the Federal grand jury would be continued for the very few criminal cases that arose in the Federal District Court that will exist after the state is created. I want to point out, though, that under the Federal Constitution the only crimes for which one is indicted are capital or other infamous crimes. That is what the Federal Constitution says. The Davis amendment, though, would permit the accused to insist on an indictment for any felony. It goes far beyond the Federal Constitution. If the amendment passes, there will certainly be an amendment to at least draw it into line with the Federal Constitution and restrict it to capital or other infamous crimes. I am reading from the United States Constitution. Secondly, if the Davis amendment passes, we are going to have to change line 25 on page 2 which says that any nine of the twelve may find an indictment or true bill. Under the Federal Rules and under the rules that now apply in Alaska, twelve reach a true bill. This Davis amendment would certainly give consolation again to the person who is evilly disposed. The prosecution has got to get nine votes out of twelve to give him a bad time, whereas under the present ruling 12 out of 23 will suffice. Again, as I pointed out, it is far broader than the Federal Constitution, far broader than most states in the Union. It is true that sometimes a zealous prosecutor goes a little wild and prosecutes a little too much, but the petit juries usually pick him up. But on the other side, the person evilly disposed when he is accused of crime, delay is what he wants, delay, delay, delay, and he will get it under the Davis amendment. He will get opportunities for delay he did not have before. He will have opportunity for confusion he did not have before. You have got to weigh these things in the balance. Sure, some are going to be hurt on one side, some on the other, but balance the thing out. The Davis amendment is going to benefit more evilly disposed persons than it is going to aid the good people. An innocent man has little to fear in a court. Now there are exceptions to that, and I have argued about them sometimes as a lawyer. But in the broad general picture, under our American form of government and under this proposed article in the constitution, the innocent man has little if anything to fear. There is no sense of making it easy for the other minority who do not respect the laws. Now, this matter of information that might sometimes be abused by a young prosecutor, the information as we all know, we know it in Alaska because it is contained in the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure which permits the prosecutor to proceed by means of an information in certain lesser crimes. They are not infamous crimes or capital offenses. They are only under the Federal Rules as the indictment preserves. The instances where the information have been abused are very, very few, and certainly under the state where the prosecutor will be far more amenable to the people than he is now, where they are picked in federal circles in peculiar fashion, certainly in the new state the information will not be abused.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I thought I would stay out of this hassle, but I feel constrained to stand and say I approve of Mr. Davis's amendment, and I also have had a considerable volume of experience as a defense attorney. I have had no other experience except as a defense attorney, though not all of my cases have been as a general rule in the criminal courts. I also have seen the misplaced zeal of some of our district attorneys that Mr. Robertson mentioned, and my 20 years experience as an attorney in the courts of Alaska, exclusively, have given me no reason to have too much reverence for district attorneys even though I have one in the family, and I think very highly of him. The fact of the matter is that I have seen a great many innocent people plead guilty rather than wait for the grand jury to meet. I have also seen innocent people convicted, not a lot of them, but I have seen it enough to know that it is done and that our system of justice as it now stands is far from perfect. I keep hearing that they have to wait a year for a grand jury or maybe six months. We are speaking of the grand jury system as it exists in the Territory of Alaska. We are writing a constitution for the State of Alaska. There is no reason on earth why a grand jury cannot be called to be available any time that there is business to be considered and that the indictments by grand jury can be preserved in that way. It is true that now we have a grand jury once or twice a year, in Juneau only once a year. But it is entirely within our powers to place a grand jury that is on permanent call, not on a permanent salary or permanent basis but is available at any time that business should be placed before it, and I see no reason whatever to abandon the grand jury in this system of justice. I know myself from personal experience that every time a grand jury is about due to be called I have a great rush of calls from the district attorney offering me all kinds of inducements to waive presentment by the grand jury and let my clients plead on information. There is another evil in the information system if it is overused that has not been mentioned here. I don't know if it exists all over the Territory, and again, we are speaking of the Territory and not of the State, and that is the fact that people who are asked to waive indictment are expected to plead guilty in our division, not expected to stand trial, and I have known them to be denied the right to waive indictment unless they would agree to a plea of guilty. Now those things are all things that we have to consider. It is true that most people who come to stand before the bar of justice come because they have committed some crime, but there is also a considerable volume of people that appear to be tried that appear in court that are unjustly called there. Mr. McNealy himself gave you some examples a few moments ago of situations of that kind. I don't believe in protecting the guilty but I do believe in considering them innocent until they are proved guilty. I have from personal experience found that the grand jury protects the public, not the criminal nor the alleged criminal, but the public as a whole. For that reason I am going to vote for Mr. Davis's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I was not going to say anything on this subject, but I also agree with the Davis amendment. I think it should be pointed out that the degree of secrecy involved that can be had in a grand jury where a person is innocent does not subject him to the blasting of the press that he might be submitted to if he goes before a petit jury on an information. Even though he be acquitted, he is bound to get a considerable amount of adverse publicity. For that reason I also will favor the Davis amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I served some time in the Department of Justice as a law enforcement officer. I also had the occasion to put in a short stint of duty on a grand jury. I have had occasion to observe the actions of a grand jury, both first hand and second handily. Some of the assertions that Mr. Rivers makes is not a fact. The secrecy of a grand jury is secret only to a few. The actions of the grand jury very frequently are public and become public by word of mouth to the detriment of many people's reputation, and it is true that a grand jury does not protect the public from an overzealous prosecutor. An overzealous prosecutor can present such types of evidence as is necessary to bring in a true bill and injury may be given thereby to people's reputation and their business. One thing that has not been pointed out here to those who are not versed in the matters of grand jury and the function in which they perform is that the grand jury does not try anything. A grand jury only hears the evidence that is presented by one person, the prosecutor, and decides whether there is sufficient evidence to bring it to trial and court, and there is reasonable chance for the government to win a conviction. I am against Mr. Davis's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I direct a question to the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee? Delegate Awes, what is the procedure followed in Canada? Do they use the grand jury system there?

AWES: I don't know. Maybe somebody else knows.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anyone know what the system is in Canada? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I almost wish I had not brought this matter up, but to my notion it is vital, and that is the reason I did bring it up and that is the reason I am speaking for the third time. I want to make it clear that I am not at all interested in those persons that Mr. Hellenthal has called, "those persons evilly disposed". Those persons can take care of themselves. I am interested in the occasional person who is charged with crime and who is completely innocent of that crime, and so far as I am concerned if even one person is charged with crime, who is innocent, and who may have the matter disposed of without having to stand trial, it's worth the cost, and it seems to be apparent here from everything that has been said that, in spite of the fact the district attorney controls the grand jury, in spite of the fact that he presents evidence that would not be received in a court at law, in spite of the fact that the grand jury hears only one side of the thing, the grand jury occasionally, and we might say even frequently, finds there is not cause to hold a man for trial who has been charged by the district attorney. That ought to be sufficient to show that the grand jury serves a distinct useful purpose, not for those evilly disposed but for you and for me and for all of us. One further thing, unless I am badly mistaken, the United States Constitution, in the use of the word "infamous crimes" has exactly the same meaning that we are talking about in felonies. Certainly all federal crimes which we know as felonies are prosecuted by indictment, unless waived.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention is at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Will the Chief Clerk please read Mr. Davis's proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, lines 11 and 12, strike the words 'or information, which shall be concurrent remedies' and insert the following in lieu thereof: 'unless indictment be waived by the accused. If right "to indictment be waived, proceedings may be by information.'

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Davis be adopted by the Convention?"

METCALF: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Barr, Boswell, Collins, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McNealy, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh and White.

Nays: 12 - Awes, Buckalew, Cross, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Laws, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Wien and Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Coghill, Cooper and Doogan.)

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 12 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 7? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: After how that amendment carried, Mr. President, I think we can strike all the preceding material. I think it is all superfluous. Starting with Section 7 , line 24. I think we ought to just strike all that down to Mr. Davis's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you so moving?

BUCKALEW: I so move. It is not written. I move to strike all of Section 7 commencing at line 24 and including all of the material down including line 9 on page 3 and ask unanimous consent.

HERMANN: I object.

V. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew so moves that the first paragraph of Section 7 be stricken from the Section. Mr. Fischer seconded the motion. The matter is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: The reason for my seconding this motion is that during the recess it was pointed out to me by several people that they felt that this paragraph that is proposed to be stricken is strictly of a legislative nature, that the establishment of the procedure for the grand jury as to who calls it, its authority to investigate, etc., are generally established by the legislature, and generally not included in the constitution and certainly do not have to be in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe whoever the informants of Mr. Fischer were were wrong, because, if this Convention does not provide for a grand jury in the constitution, the legislature would have no right to provide for a grand jury, and then, in the paragraph that would be left in Section 7, it says, to be prosecuted by indictment or information", you would have nobody to bring in the indictment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I stand corrected. The suggestion that was made to me was that if the paragraph be stricken and merely provide that there shall be a grand jury.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, if you stand corrected, perhaps the Chair should declare a two-minute recess. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Buckalew, did you have something to submit?

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I did not get a chance to finish, but I was talking to Mr. Davis and I would think it would probably be better to offer another amendment and use almost the same language as found in the Federal Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking that your original amendment be withdrawn, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: That is a good suggestion; that's what I'm asking.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the original amendment offered by Mr. Buckalew, seconded by Mr. Fischer, will be withdrawn.

BUCKALEW: Can we have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I would like to revert to Section 1 for a very minor amendment. I have discussed the matter with Miss Awes, the Chairman of the Committee, and I believe she agreed that the amendment would be well taken.

AWES: Point of order. I am not objecting to the amendment, but I wonder if this is the time for it. We specifically delayed paragraph 7 yesterday, but we were in Section 12, I wonder if it would not be better to go through and come back.

BUCKALEW: I misunderstood the President. I thought you said there was nothing before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I meant we had not received the proposed amendment that had been spoken of. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew, Davis, Hellenthal, Taylor, and McNealy.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7. Strike Section 7 as amended and substitute the following section: "Section 7. No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, unless waived by the accused, in which event the prosecution shall be by information. The grand jury shall consist of not less than twelve citizens.'"

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May we have it read again more slowly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 7 as amended and substitute the following section: 'Section 7. No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, unless waived by the accused, in which event the prosecution shall be by information. The grand jury shall consist of not less than twelve citizens.'"

ROBERTSON: My only "objection" is it seems to me that the first "unless" should we except".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please slowly read that section again?

CHIEF CLERK: "No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, unless waived by the accused, in which event the prosecution shall be by information. The grand jury shall consist of not less than twelve citizens."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion by Mr. Buckalew?

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: My only suggestion was that the first "unless" should be "except". I am not going to raise any objection to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: On that question and inasmuch as we don't have copies of this before us -- Mr. Barr.

BARR: I agree with Mr. Robertson. The wording is awkward there. Either one "unless" should be changed, it should be gone over.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels the attorneys should get together and try to get this amendment

DAVIS: Mr. President, I realize it is awkward and I helped prepare the thing, but I think Style and Drafting can well take care of it without worrying about it here. However, this amendment went in with my name on it and I did agree to the substance of it, but I did not intend we should drop the last three lines of the present Section 7, and I don't think any of us actually intended to drop that. The way the amendment reads it will drop, "but this shall not be applied to cases arising in the land or naval forces or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger."

HELLENTHAL: Let us have a one-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to bring to the attention of the delegates that as a result of the Hawaiian hearings we received two coconuts here. If it is the desire of the delegates at the 3:30 recess this afternoon, everyone can partake of these Hawaiian coconuts. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as it is now offered as amended.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 7 as amended and substitute the following: 'No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except when waived by the accused, in which event the prosecution shall be by information, but this shall not be applied to cases arising in the land or naval forces or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger.'" The grand jury may consist of not less than twelve citizens.'

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, do you ask that the original amendment be amended by the addition of that section relating to land or naval forces or militia? Were there other changes in the first part?

BUCKALEW: Yes.

CHIEF CLERK: "Unless" was changed to "except when".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does everyone understand the changes now that have been made, that are attempted to be amended to the original amendment at this time? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: With the consent of my second I would like permission to withdraw the original amendment and have it printed.

R. RIVERS: Point of order. My understanding was that the original amendment was withdrawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was not withdrawn, but it would be simpler if they would withdraw the original amendment and then offer this as a complete new amendment.

BUCKALEW: Then I can have this amendment mimeographed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You can have it submitted unless there is objection and the delegates wish it.

BUCKALEW: I don't think it is that long.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the original amendment offered by the several delegates is ordered withdrawn. Would the Chief Clerk please read this amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: Amendment offered by Mr. Buckalew, Mr. Davis, Mr. Hellenthal, Mr. Taylor and Mr. McNealy: "Strike Section 7 as amended and substitute the following new section: 'No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except when waived by the accused, in which event the prosecution shall be by information, but this shall not be applied to cases arising in the land or naval forces or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger. The grand jury may consist of not less than twelve citizens.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, what is your pleasure?

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption, Mr. President.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I am worried by that word "may" in the last sentence. I am wondering if the lawyers gave consideration to that. Should it not say "shall"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there an answer to that question?

MCNEALY: Mr. Hellenthal has written in the word "shall" and I suggested "may", and the only purpose of suggesting "may" was that some future legislature might feel that it was necessary to have possibly more than twelve rather than just have the number of twelve. With the use of the word "may" we felt they could increase it to 23, which is the actual number of the federal grand jury.

SUNDBORG: If we leave the word "may" in there, could the legislature not say we shall have a grand jury of seven?

HERMANN: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Having Section 7 completely revised, is it not possible to have mimeographed copies for each one?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen, if that is your desire, it will be ordered. If there is no objection then, the particular proposed amendment will be held in abeyance until mimeographed copies are available. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Point of information. I would like to know if that statement which says, "but this shall not be applied to cases arising in the land or naval forces," etc., what portion of the article does that pertain to, what does it cover?

BUCKALEW: It covers the whole section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I am worried, too. In the original Section 7 it states a majority at which a grand jury may come in and come in with an indictment. Does it mean that the grand jury must be unanimous?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf, now that the question was raised, this is a long amendment, and the Chair has ordered that the particular proposed amendment be mimeographed and placed on everyone's desk. In the meantime it might be possible for the delegates, before this comes up again, to discuss the whole matter with the makers of this proposed amendment and we could proceed on with other sections of the proposal, if that is the desire, while we are holding this in abeyance. Is there objection to that? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment I would like to make to this section which would just be an addition to the amendment we are now considering. What should I do about that? It is about four sentences but it is just lifted out of this present section. Therefore it is before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It could be, Mr. Barr, that the best way to handle that would be to confer with the makers of the original motion and if they would desire that your proposed amendment become a part of the amendment, why they might have it all mimeographed together and resubmit the amendment.

BARR: If not, if they would not agree to this and I still want to submit it, it would not be necessary to have it mimeographed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you have it in writing.

BARR: It is in writing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Under those circumstances, the Chair would not feel yours would have to be mimeographed. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: In order to speed up the procedure afterwards, I would like to hear his amendment now and be thinking about it.

BARR: The new amendment does not make any mention of the investigating powers of the grand jury, and I have been told they would still have those powers under the Federal Constitution, but I believe it should be mentioned in our constitution because I think that is one of the most important duties of the grand jury. Therefore, I am going to propose later that we lift this language out of the present article and add it on to the amendment on Section 7, page 3, line 6, starting with the word "the".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection we shall proceed with Section 12. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I don't believe that is necessary in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is not before us, and at some recess prior to the time we take up Section 7 again, perhaps you might get together with Mr. Barr and the other makers of this particular motion and discuss the matter. We are now going to proceed to Section 12 until such time as we have a mimeographed copy of the amendment. Are there amendments to Section 12? Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, line 19, page 4, after the word 'offenses' insert: 'when the proof is evident or the presumption great;'. "

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: I move the adoption of this amendment.

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, line 19, page 4, after the word 'offenses' insert: 'when the proof is evident or the presumption great;'. "

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I have discussed this with a number of the members of the Bill of Rights Committee. The language in the Federal Constitution reads generally to the effect that excessive bail shall not be required. A number of states have changed that language to provide more or less the language we have, that the accused may be released on bail except for capital offenses. But in practically every case where this new language is used, the words, "when proof is evident and the presumption great" and that is a necessary protection for the accused and we should follow the majority of the states in this case. It has proven a desirable practice. The actual determination of when a person is released on bail, if charged with a capital offense, is still up to the judge.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, Mr. Fischer spoke to me about this before he introduced it, and I have only had the opportunity to discuss it with a couple members of the Committee, but it seems to me it would be a good amendment, and those members of the Committee which I talked to also felt that way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of this proposed amendment? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to speak for it. Quite often there is no need for denying a person charged with first degree murder bail if the court thinks he is close and is safe, and in a very close case he should be given bail.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment offered by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 12? The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, line 22, page 4, change the period to a semicolon and insert thereafter the following: 'That the accused shall, in no instance, be required to advance money or fees to secure the rights herein guaranteed, nor shall the accused be taxed with any costs of the prosecution.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

MCLAUGHLIN: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: May we have it read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, line 22, page 4. Change the period to a semicolon and insert thereafter the following: 'That the accused shall, in no instance, be required to advance money or fees to secure the rights herein guaranteed, nor shall the accused be taxed with any costs of the prosecution.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I offered that amendment because in a number of the constitutions it provides that the accused shall not be required to advance any costs or to secure the rights guaranteed him by the Bill of Rights. Our legislature a number of years ago enacted the statute that said the defendant would not have to pay any costs of the prosecution, and that was in effect for quite a number of years until such time as the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure were put into effect of which we had no right to say whether it should be or not. The Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure provide that costs of the prosecution can be taxed against the defendant. Well, I know in a number of instances where that has been done. I know in one dismissed demeanor here recently, a man was brought from the Azores Islands as a witness in the case and testified in the matter, and the person who was convicted and was given 60 days of which 40 days was suspended, but they are saddled with a $1,300 civil liability to the government, and it is not right. As soon as they get out of jail the district attorney starts to try to collect from them. When a man gets out of jail and gets a job they immediately want to get his money. I don't believe there should be any requirement of a person paying the cost of the prosecution, because sometimes in a felony case sometimes it would be thousands and thousands of dollars which would be the cost of the prosecution and the man might go to jail for a couple of years, he gets out and is saddled for the rest of his life with an obligation to the state. I don't think that should be. I feel that in all sincerity that we should have it in the constitution so that the legislature will maintain our present law which says a defendant will not be taxed with the cost of prosecution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Taylor argues that under Territorial law we had a statute which prohibited the assessment of costs against the defendant in the criminal case, and that that has been changed by Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. Well, if we become a state, there certainly would be nothing to prevent the state legislature from also passing a law prohibiting the taxation of costs against a defendant in a criminal case, because under our present setup there is nothing in the Organic Act that in any way covers it. So the legislature in passing such a law must have done so under the general police power. The state could certainly do the same thing, and the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure would not apply except in federal cases. I believe that this matter could just as well be handled by the legislature and left out of the constitution. It would only cause confusion. I am opposed to the amendment.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I have the amendment read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment again slowly.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, line 22, page 4, change the period to a semicolon and insert thereafter the following: 'That the accused shall, in no instance, be required to advance money or fees to secure the rights herein guaranteed, nor shall the accused be taxed with any costs of the prosecution.'"

MCLAUGHLIN: May I direct a question to Mr. Taylor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Taylor, under that system -- I am not objecting to the theory. In substance, the constitution might prohibit any client from paying his attorney for representing him, but I am particularly bothered with the implication that this, in substance, sets up a public defender system because it does not require one to advance any fees to secure one of the rights guaranteed, the right of assistance of counsel. So, in substance, may we not be embedding in the constitution the public defender system which should be a matter for legislation?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I think that was taken care of not only by law but also by the rules of the court. The courts will not allow a man to be tried for a felony unless he does have an attorney, and if he does not have the money to employ an attorney -- and if he does not have the money to employ an attorney, he will have an attorney appointed for him, who will be paid out of the state or government funds.

MCLAUGHLIN: Does this require that he be a pauper? Under your provision he could be a millionaire and he would not be required to pay a nickel for counsel, and then the only way in substance he could secure counsel would be out of the public treasury.

TAYLOR: No, he has the right to have counsel. He doesn't have the right to have counsel appointed for him unless he is a pauper. If he can't pay for it, the government has to pay for it because a man can't be tried unless he has an attorney.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I am going to vote against the proposed amendment because that would prohibit the courts from ever taxing the cost to wealthy accused, and it would be an unreasonable provision because then if the legislature wanted to give the courts discretion in certain cases to tax cost to the accused, they could not do it, they would be prohibited. Suppose that the accused is a millionaire and he's being tried for a particular crime that doesn't provide for a fine, only imprisonment, then the government perhaps, has gone to a $3,000 or $4,000 expense and they can't tax the cost to him when he has been convicted and it seems to me that when the government is the prevailing party, in certain situations they certainly should be allowed the privilege of taxing cost.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to comment a little on Mr. Taylor's statements. He said that the Territorial legislature at one time had provided a statute similar to this and then the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure provided that cost could be taxed and that they would override the Territorial law. I would like to point out that these Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure are rules for the Federal court and our district courts now are Federal courts, but when we get state law, those rules will apply only to the Federal District Court and not the state courts. Consequently, any law of the legislature will apply to the state courts. I agree with those who have stated that they believe this is a matter for the legislature. I think that if we adopt this we are writing legislation into the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, may I ask Mr. Taylor a question? In that phraseology just previous to Mr. Taylor's proposed amendment, it says, "to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor", I was just wondering if Mr. Taylor's amendment were passed, if the defendant should have a witness down in the Azores Islands, would the state have to subpoena and have to pay his travel expenses up here for a trial?

TAYLOR: I think he would under the present way because if he can be taxed for the cost of bringing that witness back if the government subpoenas him, I think he ought to subpoena him himself because it would only be fair, because if the government brings him, the defendant still has to pay for it. Now, with the new Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, you can. If you are a pauper, you can require process to be issued for a man any place in the United States, any place that the process of the United States courts extend. So we could do that, but although you could, the legislature could provide that for a person without the jurisdiction does not have to come in. Of course you have your Territorial limitations if when we become a state, so that the process of a state court would only extend to the boundaries of the state. Of course now, under the new rules, the extent of the process will serve to any place where the American flag is flying. In fact, I had one fellow brought back from Germany awhile back to testify. If it is fair for the government to charge the cost of transportation for a witness, it is just as fair to have the man have the witness come himself. Now, I would also like to answer Mr. Buckalew. He is going to take one man, a millionaire in court, and I cannot conceive by any stretch of the imagination that a millionaire that is being tried for a criminal offense in the District Court, or a court of the State of Alaska is going to be satisfied with the caliber of attorneys that is usually appointed to defend a criminal. It is usually the young, inexperienced man, and they are thrown those cases. If a millionaire goes into court and wants a young inexperienced man to defend him, he ought to be convicted and he ought to pay a fine. I don't think that applies. Mr. Buckalew would see a thousand poor people suffer and have to pay the cost of prosecution because one millionaire might take advantage of something to save an attorney fee.

BUCKALEW: There is only one thing I want to say. Mr. Taylor's last recital was somewhat winning but I think quite inaccurate. It has been my observation in our District Court that if a man is charged with murder, that the trial judge usually selects only the oldest and most experienced attorneys. I have never seen the trial judge appoint a so-called young and inexperienced counsel to defend somebody in a murder trial. There is also another point I would like to make on this process which we are talking about, it might enlighten some of the other delegates. The accused does not have the right, for example, to subpoena people from all over the world where our courts have process. He has to make a certain showing in open court. He has to file an affidavit and convince the court what the particular witnesses are going to testify. I have seen cases where an accused would submit a list of 46 names to the court and want all 46 persons subpoenaed at government expense, and it ended up he didn't get one of them because the 46 witnesses could not testify to anything, so it is not a provision that is a blanket privilege that you can submit a roster to the court and have people brought back from Germany, the Azores, Japan and other places. There are certain limitations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I think Mr. Buckalew realized when I said that it was a material witness that could be brought from any place. I don't say a man can say, "I want Johnson from the Azores", but it must be a material witness and he must show that he is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I am not opposed to the amendment except on the grounds I believe that as Miss Awes said, I believe it is a legislative matter, and I do want to call attention to the fact that we still have on the Territorial statutes, and the law is still there that says that the person convicted of a crime cannot be charged with the cost. However, we cannot apply it because the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure now say that it can be. However, under our constitution here it is going to require that we continue the Territorial laws in force as state laws until amended or repealed, so that Mr. Taylor's amendment will be taken care of unless that law is amended or repealed, why we will have that law on the books because it is still there and still continuing in force until such time as it is removed.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 12? If not, are there amendments to Section 13? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, Section 13, line 25, page 4, after the word "jury" insert the words "of twelve", and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is on line 25, page 4, Section 13, after the word "jury", Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Yes. Insert the two words, "of twelve" so it will read "the right of trial by jury of twelve is preserved."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert the words 'of twelve' after the word 'jury'."

ROBERTSON: I move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Just for a moment. Does he mean to strike "not less than six"?

ROBERTSON: Oh no, the "except" will read after that. It will read, "In suits at common law, where the amount in controversy exceeds two hundred and fifty dollars, the right of trial by jury of twelve is preserved, except that the legislature may provide for a jury of not less than six in courts not of record."

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Robertson if he has lost sight of the fact that they should in the first suits, the suits of common law, that should be in the superior court because the exception then is made to trials in courts not of record, in the JP courts, so I think it should be a further amendment, and suits of common law in a superior court" where the matters exceed $250.

ROBERTSON: I had thought, Mr. President, that the implication was that the superior court under the Judiciary Branch Proposal No. 2, I believe it is, will be a court in which you try commonlaw suits and that the exceptions of the jury to six is made for what I call the inferior courts. We did not use the word "inferior" in the judicial branch of the committee proposal, but I think it is already completely covered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Robertson's unanimous consent request for the adoption of his proposed amendment?

TAYLOR: I object.

ROBERTSON: I so move.

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: One point I would like to raise, "I don't think the wording is proper "in suits of common law." Common law, unless preserved by statute, is abolished in the Territory of Alaska. I think it should be amended because if you adopt this amendment in the present form it doesn't mean a thing. In fact, the whole section doesn't mean a thing. I think in suits of the superior courts, it should be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I rise to a point of order. Mr. Taylor has that part of the section and he should propose an amendment in line 1 of Section 13 to put in "the superior court".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I think that the whole purpose of saying "in suits of common law" is to distinguish between Section 1, criminal actions, and the right to trial by jury. Section 13 deals with other suits and I think the whole thing could be settled and I think it would be better to say in civil suits.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, while we are discussing that I want to draw Miss Awes' attention, you say civil suits, we have the whole branch of equity acts which are civil suits. We have got to say "causes in law".

AWES: You say that the right to trial by jury is preserved, so it is only preserved to the extent that we have it now.

R. RIVERS: Well, that's possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 13? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would like to direct a question to the Committee. I assume that in the last sentence you intend that to be only in civil cases. Is it absolutely clear that, merely by virtue of being in this paragraph that sentence refers only to civil cases?

AWES: Yes, I think that is clear.

WHITE: There is no doubt about that?

AWES: I don't think so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to address a question to Miss Awes. In Section 13 there is reference to a sum of $250. I wonder if the Chairman would be in favor of an amendment there to strike the $250 and substitute "sum set by law". I will tell you what my meaning is there. I think one of the reasons why courts are crowded nowadays in the Territory is that the antiquated sum set of a thousand dollars beyond which a commissioner's court can deal, a thousand dollars when that sum was set, 30 or 40 years ago, was a year's income. Nowadays it is a small sum. If we had it more flexible, as things are nowadays, the commissioner should be able to deal with sums set with two or three thousand dollars which would greatly relieve the burden of a clogged district court. Since we are not going to have a guaranteed constitutional convention in 15 or 20 years, I would leave the sum up to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, are you offering such an amendment, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: Well, I wondered what the Committee thought.

AWES: The Federal Constitution provided $20, which $20 was probably as much then as $250 is now. So we did, for that reason, increase it considerably. I can't say on this question of leaving it to the legislature, that my feelings are not too strong one way or the other. The only possibility of leaving it up to the legislature is that the legislature could raise the sum so high that it would, in effect, abolish the right to trial by jury without in so many words doing so.

KILCHER: I would like to make this amendment. It is short.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your amendment, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: On line 24, strike "two hundred and fifty dollars" and substitute "a sum set by law".

BARR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure?

KILCHER: I move it be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 24, on page 4, strike 'two hundred and fifty dollars' and insert 'a sum set by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, Miss Awes has just proved to me that we cannot state a certain sum in dollars and cents in the constitution. To say that the sum of $20 as set forth in the National Constitution, and now of course we had to raise it to $250 because of the change in the value of money during that time. It seems to me if we leave this up to the legislature, 50 years from now they can change their laws as they see fit or lower the sum as necessary. Another thing I have in mind is that if I remember correctly, the last session of the legislature passed an act empowering the cities to set up a small claims court which did not require a jury trial. In other words, if a man owed a store seven or eight dollars or a hundred dollars, the merchant could go the small claims court and get judgment, and it didn't clutter up the courts and would not have to go before a jury. As I remember the maximum was set at $300. That is not an exorbitant sum, and if this amendment is adopted, then of course the legislature is free to keep that maximum amount in keeping with the current conditions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I will try to make this pertinent to the amendment. It occurs to me that there may be a period of time between the usefulness of this constitution and the time when the legislature may set an amount. In that respect, I wonder if it would not be wiser to set an amount. I am in favor of the general idea and then provide that it could be changed by law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, it seems to me that we are trying here to set forth a bill of rights. We are trying to preserve the right of jury. If we leave the amount open we have not preserved anything because the legislature could, if it wanted to, only in suits involving a million dollars or more, is the right of jury preserved. I don't think that is what we intend to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, my consideration is purely one of economics, and as the past has seen inflationary tendency all over the world, and in this sense I trust the legislature more than I trust the economics of the world in general.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 26 - Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, Hinckel, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Taylor, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 24 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, King, Laws, McLaughlin, McNealy, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Smith, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Wien.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Cooper, Doogan, Hilscher, Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 26 yeas, 24 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 13? If not, are there amendments to Section 14? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask a question of the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee, Mr. President. Does Section 14 imply without stating so that the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus when authorized will be only in such manner as prescribed by law? Is that implied within the section?

AWES: After you raised that objection the other day, I discussed it with the Committee, and it is our belief that it is implied.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I had another amendment to Section 13 and I see we got away from it. It is a short amendment, though.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Buckalew, to Section 13, what is your amendment?

BUCKALEW: Section 13, strike "in suits at common law" and insert "in civil cases".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seeks to strike the words "in suits at common law" and insert the words "in civil cases".

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion on the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: Is that on line 23?

BUCKALEW: That is line 23. Here is the reason I offered that amendment. You have a lot of causes of action that wouldn't be covered by the expression, "in suits of common law" and they would be statutory, and you would not have a right to trial by jury, and what we are trying to do is to preserve the right to trial by jury in civil cases.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think the amendment is dangerous. The United States Constitution limits the right to trial by jury, and I quote from it, to suits "at common law" and that has been construed to include your statutory actions in some instances and in other instances the statute expressly provides for a jury trial. Now if Mr. Buckalew could secure his purpose if there is question about saying, "in suits at common law or in statutory civil suits", but to substitute the words "civil suits" for "suits at common law" is extremely dangerous. Mr. Rivers pointed it out here awhile ago. There is a vast class of cases, equitable cases, where you are not entitled to a jury trial and by tampering with the constitution we might provide for a jury trial where none exists and where none should exist, and we want to preserve the right to trial by jury as we have done here, and I think it is hasty and I think it may cause an immense amount of trouble and I would oppose the amendment. I think it can be secured in another way, but this is not the way to do it.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 13? If not, are there amendments to Section 14? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I should like, in line with Mr. White's request, the legislature may provide for a verdict by not less than three-fourths of the members of the jury. I should like to ask unanimous consent that the words in any court" be inserted following the word "jury". The reason I ask that is that there is doubt in my mind if that sentence applies to a civil suit in any court, and I have the same doubt Mr. White has, and the sentence to me seems to be hanging there and I think those three simple words would remove, perhaps, future trouble.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, the Chair was wondering perhaps it seems that the attorneys are not in complete agreement on this. If we had a five-minute recess, so you could get together and come up with the proper wording there. Mr. White.

WHITE: If I may before the five-minute recess, I don't want to get tangled up with all the attorneys during the recess, I agree with Mr. Hellenthal as to the doubt as to what that sentence implies. However, I would not like to imply that it was my desire necessarily to have it apply to the preceding sections in criminal cases. I did not mean to imply that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Do we have a proposed amendment before us at this time?

CHIEF CLERK: It has not been moved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that in line 4 on page 5, the last sentence of Section 13, that the word "the in front of the word "jury", be stricken and substitute the word "any" and insert the words "in civil causes" following the word "jury", so the sentence will read, "The legislature may provide for a verdict by not less than three-fourths of the members of any jury in civil causes."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chief Clerk have that amendment? Would the Chief Clerk read it back?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 13, line 4, page 5, strike the word 'the' before the word 'jury' and substitute the word 'any' and insert the words 'in civil causes' following the word 'jury'."

HELLENTHAL: I so move.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion? If there is no discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I see it is about 11:57 a.m. Is the clock correct up there?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is right, according to my watch.

GRAY: I have just received a letter from Juneau, and I believe it is worthy of the group to have this letter read. I see this as a letter not from Juneau but from any part in Alaska that has to do with our hearings. I think this lady who wrote this letter is a new type of citizen that we are receiving in Alaska at this time, and I ask unanimous consent that the Secretary be permitted to read the letter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Secretary may read the letter as offered by Mr. Gray. The Chief Clerk will please read the letter.

(The Chief Clerk read the letter from Mrs. Rolf W. Fremming expressing pleasure at having had the opportunity to attend the public hearings on the constitutional proposals and confidence in the work of the delegates.)

1358

PRESIDENT EGAN: The letter will be filed. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I move that we recess until 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention stands at recess until 1:30. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I wonder if I could ask Mr. Cross to call a very brief meeting of the Committee on Resolutions and Recommendations on recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross.

CROSS: There will be a meeting of the Committee on Resolutions and Recommendations upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to announce a meeting of the Committee on Style and Drafting, a brief meeting, upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? If not the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to Section 13? Are there amendments to Section 14? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have an amendment I was going to offer to Section 11, if when we revert back to that, I will offer it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 15? To Section 16? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question with regard to Section 14. I see that some states in regard to the writ of habeas corpus allow it to be suspended in only cases of rebellion and invasion. Oklahoma allows it never to be suspended. Now we have added the words "or imminent peril". I wonder what the Committee was thinking of. What imminent peril besides rebellion and invasion do we fear?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: We thought that under the modern conditions of warfare that you sometimes have to act when you are in imminent peril or when the rebellion or invasion actually occurs, and it might be too late. We were out at Ladd Air Force Base that Saturday and heard the speech, and I think they told us we were only an hour and one-half from attack by Russia. The phrase "imminent peril" is a phrase that we got from a decision of the United States Supreme Court.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does that answer your question, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: It does not give me an answer to what they intended it to include. I just wondered to what extent they intended to include imminent peril from the activities perhaps of some organized group in our society. What scope are they intended to extend? I would like to see it clarified for the record here, at least.

AWES: As I say, the words "imminent peril" were taken from a Supreme Court decision and in that particular case, I think Mr. Hellenthal is more familiar with the case than I am, so I will let him speak on that. However, I think that the fact that "rebellion or "invasion" or "imminent peril" are all used together, that the words "imminent peril" would be construed as applying only to imminent peril from an enemy such as you would have in the case of rebellion or invasion.

V. RIVERS: You don't think it would be used in case of a great earthquake or in the case of fire, tidal wave or anything like that, where a great deal of our population was imperiled?

AWES: The Committee did not so intend, and I don't think it would be construed that way by a court.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The question comes up in my mind as to the value of the words there at all. The thing we are trying to protect against is the use of the habeas corpus during rebellion or invasion. I would like to hear a little more discussion on it before I move to strike the word.

AWES: I think those words may add a little. I think there might be a time when you don't actually have rebellion or invasion and yet the danger of it is there, and I think that in that case it might be helpful to have it in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, it seems clear to me, of course I might be wrong, that there are three cases where the writ of habeas corpus may be suspended. In the center one, those two things are grouped together. It says, "comma, invasion or imminent peril". To my mind that means that imminent peril is connected with invasion. In other words, we may expect to be invaded at any moment. If, for instance, some foreign country should bomb Washington, D. C., we in Alaska are in imminent peril, although maybe we have never seen an enemy face up to that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, "-- would like to move and ask unanimous consent that the word thereof" be inserted after the word "peril" on line 8.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves and asks unanimous consent that the word "thereof" be inserted after the word "peril" in line 8, Section 14. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to object for the purpose of further clarification, so may I ask Mr. Fischer a question.

V. FISCHER: I so move.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I get one minute's recess? I have an amendment of similar nature about it, but I think it would save time if we could talk it over.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: My purpose in submitting the amendment was strictly to clarify what I believe was the intent. I don't think that the Committee intends that imminent peril should apply to earthquakes or floods or anything else but only to invasion and possible rebellion, and I think it should be strictly limited, and the thereof" might do it.

V. RIVERS: That would meet my objections to the phrase.

HELLENTHAL: I object to the request for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The unanimous consent has been already objected to. It has been moved by Mr. Fischer and seconded by Mr. Victor Rivers.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I should like to be heard in opposition to the amendment. This amendment was carefully chosen and it was not chosen to qualify the words "invasion" or "rebellion". It was chosen to cover the case of any imminent peril to the government of the State of Alaska, and I think any reasonable man reading that would so interpret it. Now, if that peril would result from say, deprivation and destruction and pillaging following a great earthquake or something like that, fine. The writ should be suspended, if it imperiled the government. Normally it would not imperil the government though, so you need fear nothing from that source. Now Mr. Rivers mentioned that in Oklahoma they won't permit the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus for any reason at all. I can understand why Oklahoma won't permit the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus. It is right in the heart of the United States. The possibility of even an atomic war being fought in Oklahoma is quite remote, and the possibility of an invading army in the old days of warfare ever bothering Oklahoma was highly improbable, and I don't think that we in Alaska living side by side with Soviet Russia should feel guided by any Oklahoma principles. Now this is in here for a good reason. First of all, let me state that our bill of rights is highly conservative. There is no question about it in my mind. We have deviated hardly one iota from the Bill of Rights that was found in the Federal Constitution, but many changes have taken place since that day and great changes have taken place in warfare. Now, we live at the limits, at the perimeter of the United States. We go back constantly to Washington to justify huge appropriations, and all of us participate in that because we are in the jaws of death. Russia is 20 minutes away. We have got to adapt ourselves to the modern situation. We need highway funds because we have to have roads in case of the perils that we envision. We have to have innumerable things, always because of military necessity. Now we must face this military necessity. Now it is true, as Miss Awes pointed out, that under the decisions of the United States Supreme Court culminating in the case of the United States versus Hirabayashi which was the famous case decided in Hawaii when the habeas corpus was suspended during the war. In that case, which came down from the equally famous case of Ex parte Milligan, in a uniform line of decisions, the United States Supreme Court has held that imminent peril will justify the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus. That is the law. Let us face it in Alaska. Now there are good reasons for facing it. We want the support of the military, we need the support of the military. Why should we do it the hard way and discourage the military by inept use of language or acting like a bunch of Oklahomans when we're not. Let's adapt ourselves to the modern situation -- imminent peril. For instance, the Nazi saboteurs that came in this country, they were not an invading army but they constituted an imminent peril and those men were held, and the writ of habeas corpus was properly suspended as to them. We all know that the next war will take the form of fifth columnists. There will be no marching army. The illustration they commonly give is illustration of a ship slipping into a harbor with an atomic bomb somewhere in its hold. Imminent peril, there will be spies, fifth columnists, agents throughout the country, infiltrations. That is why we have the Alaska Guard organized. That is what we are concerned with, those things amount to imminent peril and I say when that day comes and when that imminent peril exists the courts will recognize it, and we should recognize it in our modern constitution. An alternative, and I don't think this is possible, not probable, if we don't adopt this language we might incur the criticism from informed military people that we are not keeping pace with the advance of military progress and with the atomic age. I don't think we will meet that criticism but we are leaving ourselves wide open if we adopt an old-fashioned cave man notion of suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in this modern age. I assure you that no harm can come to your civil rights by retaining those two simple words in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I got a little confused from following Mr. Hellenthal's speech but I am going to support Mr. Fischer's amendment for this reason. I think that we should be certain that the words "imminent peril" refers back to invasion. Now as I recall the celebrated case that Mr. Hellenthal is talking about, Ex parte Milligan and that situation, we people from the South were fighting a war against the United States at that time, and a brilliant Confederate cavalry leader made a deep penetration into the State of Indiana I believe, and of course they sort of raised a lot of hell going through Indiana and they got the district judge and the military commander excited and he closed down the district court and they tried this party, Milligan, for some reason or another. He violated some of the orders of the military commander. The Confederate cavalry came in and made a penetration and went back to the South. Now the Supreme Court held that imminent peril is such a situation where that ground troops, so to speak, of an armed enemy are so close to the court house that it is unsafe for the court and his officials to sit, now that is what they mean by "imminent peril". The troops are so close there that the courts cannot physically conduct their business. That is what it means and I don't think it means anything like Mr. Hellenthal is talking about, saboteurs, submarines and all this other stuff. Imminent peril is a situation where an armed aggressor of some sort is in your territory and his presence deprives the court the freedom of opening of the court house doors so to speak, and I think we ought to be extremely cautious and insert the words "thereof" to make sure it refers back to invasion. I don't care what the military think about it. I mean the military are in subordination to the people here in Alaska. I don't think anyone will question that the civil authority is supreme to the military authority, and I don't care whether they like it, it wouldn't make any difference to me whether they read or not because they are up here to protect us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair is a little confused with the amendment. Mr. Fischer, the amendment did not say to strike the words "imminent peril"?

V. FISCHER: No.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to go a little further on the Ex parte Milligan case and read to "you some of what it said about it in the Hawaiian handbook. In the famous Civil War case of Ex parte Milligan, the Supreme Court ruled that so far as federal usage is concerned the privilege can be suspended only by act of Congress, or at all events by the President under authority expressly conferred by Congress."

HELLENTHAL: In the Nazi saboteur's case, the court held that they were properly tried and punished under the Articles of War and not by the civilian courts. In other words, the Supreme Court rejected the contention that they were protected. They were treated as invaders and it was a situation of imminent peril under the decision of the Supreme Court.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, there seems to be two lines of thought here. Mr. Buckalew is concerned with the imminent peril of the courts only. I take this to mean imminent peril to our government. That is what I am concerned about. If we accept Mr. Fischer's amendment, he ties this imminent peril down to invasion only. But invasion is only one phase of warfare and there are modern methods of warfare. We could be in peril in several different ways. The enemy may consider that it is not worthwhile to take Alaska but they would like to deny us the use of our bases here to attack them. Therefore, we may be under a constant attack by bombing planes, while they would have no thought of taking over the country. On the other hand, we know that one particular country has wide experience in infiltration of saboteurs and spies. It may be possible that we may be infiltrated by very large numbers of saboteurs here to render these bases unusable. There may be constant destruction all over the Territory for that reason. Therefore, our government would be in imminent peril. I don't think that we should tie the words "imminent peril" down to invasion only. Therefore, I am against the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I am caught between two fires on this. One is between my desire to protect the rights of a person of being unjustly or unduly incarcerated without a charge being placed against him. I am also equally solicitous of the welfare of the government in time of peril. I don't think that our beliefs or our actions here should be swayed by any dustbowl philosophers from Oklahoma. Neither should our actions be swayed by what a detachment of Southern soldiers did in 1865 when they were either invading the North or trying to get over to Canada to get out of the service. Well, the time has changed. Warfare has changed. Methods of waging warfare prior to a declaration is now the rule rather than the exception. Now, if we adopt the amendment that is proposed by Mr. Fischer, the only way of suspending the writ of habeas corpus and taking into custody a saboteur or spy would be in case of invasion or rebellion because your imminent peril therefrom would be imminent peril from invasion. So I don't think that meets the bill. What we could do if you wanted to, if it was imminent peril of such a nature as to require the imposition of martial law, I would say that would be to the extent to which we should go, because martial law can be invoked though in other cases such as Mr. Hellenthal spoke of, and which I think it can be and which it has been. I remember during the San Francisco fire they invoked martial law and brought in troops, not only the California militia but the troops from the President, and they not only invoked martial law but they had court martials and executed people on the streets of San Francisco. They went that far, the looters, because there seems to be a penchant in the hearts of many people that when a disaster is on, they are going to get what they can out of it, so they had to do that. But I think if martial law was declared it would be perfectly proper to suspend the writ of habeas corpus so that spies, saboteurs or others who, for the welfare of our country, could be taken into custody so they would not be able to guide enemy aircraft or ships or other means of invasion into the country." But I don't believe that by the words "thereto", "therefrom", or "thereof" will do it.

V. FISCHER: One brief word, Mr. President. Those who have criticized the inclusion of the word "thereof" have not really objected to that particular phrase. They have been objecting to the limitation of the term invasion". Now possibly if this word is adopted we should also insert "enemy attack in addition to "rebellion and invasion" because to that is what most of the remarks were addressed. The purpose of inserting "thereof" is restricting the application of imminent peril so that it could not be said "imminent peril of strikes, famine, imminent peril of anything", and if these people feel that we should broaden the application beyond rebellion and invasion, I think that would be a separate amendment, in addition to the insertion of the word "thereof".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment as proposed by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 14? Are there amendments to Section 15? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I don't know if this needs an amendment but I think the words "nor" in line 16 should be "or". I think it expresses a double negative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Line 16, change the word "nor" to "or". Mrs. Hermann, could you answer that?

HERMANN: I can answer that by saying I still think you people have to realize that Style and Drafting has a job to do here and we are going to do it and you don't need to be afraid we won't do it properly.

BUCKALEW: If it saves time I will move and ask unanimous consent that we change the name of that committee to Style and Gaffing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 15? To Section

ROBERTSON: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, you may submit your amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, line 20, page 5, delete the period and insert a comma and add 'or in advocating the overthrow of the government by force or violence'."

ROBERTSON: I move for the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves that the proposed amendment be adopted and asks unanimous consent.

BUCKALEW: Objection. Could we have that read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, line 20, page 5, delete the period and insert a comma and add 'or in advocating the overthrow of the government by force or violence'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent has been asked that the proposed amendment be adopted. Objection is heard.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, we had a number of people at the hearing in Juneau who urged such an amendment, and it seems to me that treason as defined in Section 16 is not broad enough. I believe that advocating the overthrow of the government by force or violence is treasonable. For that reason I suggest this amendment and I urge it is a very important amendment in our bill of rights so we have a correct definition of treason.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: If it were a correct definition of treason I would agree with Mr. Robertson, but no state of the Union defines treason as attempting to overthrow or taking methods which tend to overthrow the United States government. That is a separate crime known as subversion, it is not treason. His suggestion has some merit but it would be like broadening the definition of murder to include rape. There is no reason for it. Now Michigan approaches the problem by defining treason and then in Section 21 of its Bill of Rights and in Section 2 they define subversion but they don't call both of them treason. Nor does any other state, so for that reason alone I would oppose the amendment. It is very, very unique.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I wanted to say that the Federal law as covered by an act of Congress, I think it is called the Smith Act, our legislature would have complete power to take care of what Mr. Robertson has in mind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: My point simply is, regardless of how other constitutions may define treason", the acts mentioned in the amendment are treasonable and therefore we ought to put it in this bill of rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment as proposed by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 16? If not, are there amendments to Section 17? Or to Section 18? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 18.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson has an amendment to Section 18. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 6, line 2, strike the comma after the word 'debt' and insert a period. Strike the balance of line 2 and all of line 3."

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

MARSTON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Could we have the amendment read again?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 6, line 2, strike the comma after the word 'debt' and insert a period. Strike the balance of line 2 and all of line 3."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, debt is not a crime but fraud is. If a man is to be in prison because of strong presumption of fraud, then he should be charged with fraud. Debt should have nothing to do with it.

R. RIVERS: I would like to hear Mr. Johnson's definition of "fraud", because there are many transactions which are fraudulent that don't constitute crimes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I suppose I should fall back on the old reason that I am not schooled in this subject. However, it occurs to me that certainly anything that is fraudulent ought to be and should be included in the criminal statutes which undoubtedly will be passed by the legislature or carried over by the Territory. As Mr. Barr has pointed out, if a person is guilty of fraud, or if there is a strong suspicion of fraud, he should be and rightfully should be prosecuted under the criminal sections rather than under any sort of civil proceedings. I believe that this section contains one of the most fundamental principles of our form of government, and it was one of the things that the founders were most concerned about when they set up the original Constitution and Bill of Rights because they had been subjected to that very thing, imprisonment for debt in the old country, and they wanted to be certain that that sort of condition could not exist here, and I believe it is a danger to that right if we leave in the constitution the words, except in cases where there is a strong presumption of fraud". In the first place, that phrase is itself subject to conjecture and speculation and undoubtedly would cause many cases to go into court for the purpose of interpreting exactly what is meant by it. I believe it is much better to leave it out. I don't know whether I have answered Mr. Rivers' question, but I think anything that involves fraud certainly is a crime.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, I spoke on this yesterday when I was questioned about why the Committee drafted it in this way, so I won't repeat all that I said then. I would like to say that I agree with Mr. Rivers rather than with Mr. Johnson. There are a lot of things that are fraud that are not criminal. As I recall, Mr. Johnson can correct me if I am wrong, as I recall at the time this was drawn up, we looked through the Federal Constitution and I don't believe there is a statement in the Federal Constitution, not in the Bill of Rights I know, but many of the states do have such a provision, and it is because of the fact that some fraud is not criminal and also because it makes it dangerous for anybody to cause an arrest for fraudulently refusing to pay debt. If there isn't some protection given to them that they won't be sued for false imprisonment on every provocation if they act under reasonable circumstances, which a strong presumption of fraud should be, then they should not be subject to arrest for taking such action and that is what we intended to accomplish with this provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I probably was one of the strongest in Committee to insist that it be put in, and it was taken from another constitution. I don't remember which at the moment. The purpose of it is, particularly in this area and the Anchorage area, was there is a great deal of transient population. There has been innumerable cases that you can't count, of people that are transients living in the area for a period up to two years contracting debts and then taking off over the highway, or by boat or by plane without saying anything, and it is pretty hard to stop them without involving yourself in a suit, and the purpose of this last sentence was to serve notice on those people that from here on out, if they are going to contract debts, they had better pay them before they leave because all of the people in business in the Territory would then have some means of getting to them without being sued for false arrest.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: As I understand, this is the background of this addition. The formula as it stands now is going to be used as blackmail, a threat against a great many of those customers that are given credit to some point and then refuse payment. To refuse payment is not fraud or to profess inability to pay is not fraud. This inability might be questionable if they have enough money to leave the Territory. Perfectly honest in his ability to pay, the merchant who has gambled to make profits on the premise that he might get paid has his own lookout to collect his bills in my opinion. I have lost money in that respect and I took it. I can see the implication here and I don't like a bit of it. I would like to address a question to Miss Awes as Chairman of the Committee as to that respect, when and if there are some forms of fraud that are not crimes on the other hand, if you only can be imprisoned for crimes, correct me if I am wrong, you can only be imprisoned for a crime is that right? In other words, you can only be imprisoned for frauds that are crimes? This would leave the door open to imprison somebody for a noncriminal fraud.

AWES: What this does, Mr. Kilcher, is to give the legislature authority to pass a statute that would make this type of fraud criminal and being subject to punishment including imprisonment.

KILCHER: Which type of fraud? Why include it in the constitution? Any fraud, it is up to the legislature to decide what crimes are and what frauds should constitute crimes, and the moment there is any fraud committed in the future state that is a crime, a man can be imprisoned. As long as there is no crime a man should not be imprisoned.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I think practically all I can do is repeat what I have said. I think this is primarily authority to the legislature to pass a statute which would in effect make fraudulent nonpayment of debts a crime. If this section merely said there should be no imprisonment for debts, I think there would be some question of the legislature's authority to so act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Perhaps Mr. Kilcher is not conversant with the present law that we have regarding debtors who are attempting to defraud their creditors. We have such a law on the books at the present time, if it will remain there and it is strictly a statutory matter. Imprisonment as for a matter of debt itself is unlawful as we have said here, but as we know that there are many instances in which persons deliberately contract debts without any intention of paying them and that they will then attempt to decamp the Territory without paying them. Now we have a law against fraudulent representation for obtaining goods under false representation. That false representation must be some token that is signed by the person who is defrauded. Ordinarily the merchant does not have that false token so that you would not in the absence of such a token be able to apprehend the man. Now, also, I would like to advise Mr. Kilcher that nobody is ever arrested for debt in the Territory of Alaska that I know of, as long as he was in the Territory - only when he was attempting to leave the Territory for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, but when it is evident on the face that there is a presumption of fraud, they usually catch him when he is leaving or catch him before he gets to the border. That is done many times. Another thing perhaps Mr. Kilcher does not know is the fact that before you can arrest a man under these circumstances where the creditor believes that he is leaving the Territory for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, that he must be leaving and that the creditor then must file an action. If he files an action in debt against this person, then he makes out an affidavit and recites the circumstances of why he thinks this person is leaving the Territory, he is leaving to defraud creditors and asks for a writ of civil arrest, but before he has the writ of civil arrest he must post with the United States Commissioner a bond that he will answer for all damages that this debtor who is leaving will suffer by reason of his being apprehended and brought back. That is a civil arrest because, at that time he is arrested, then the creditor takes over. He has to pay all the expenses of bringing that man back and he must pay while he is in jail. He must pay the board of that debtor. The debtor is entitled to bail as soon as he gets in. If he puts up a reasonable bail he can get out and then the civil case is tried, not a criminal case, and there are not very many cases of this because of the fact that if a person does have a man arrested for debt and it is found that the arrest was without probable cause, that there was no evidence of attempting to defraud, the man has a very fine case for damages, and I have known of several very large verdicts that have been received in the Territory of Alaska just for those particular matters, so that the debtor is protected. He might suffer a little inconvenience, but he has the right of a remedy against the person that had him arrested. So as I said before, I think the section should be left just as it is, so the legislature then can continue the act that is now in effect and which has been in effect for the many, many years, or strengthen it if they want to, or if they want to weaken or relax it, that is up to the legislature. I think where there is a presumption of fraud they should be able to stop a debtor if he leaves the Territory for the purpose of beating his creditors. I think the amendment should fail.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would have no particular objection to the language if it said, "There shall be no imprisonment for debt except in cases of fraud." "Where there is a strong presumption", I have not been able to find any constitution that has the "strong presumption" phrase in it, but there might be such a one. I notice the Hawaiian Constitution says, where shall be no imprisonment for debt." I notice the New Jersey Constitution says, "No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any action or in any judgment founded upon contract unless in cases of fraud." There the fraud is definitely established. In this "strong presumption of fraud" the fraud is not definitely established and it seems to me we are foreclosing some of the legal rights of the individual involved if we should imprison him for debt on the presumption of fraud. I am not legally trained but I just wonder whose presumption it would be. Would it be the presumption of the one filing the complaint or the man issuing the complaint, the arresting officer? In these cases where he is going over the highway, whose presumption would it be that this man is intending to defraud? It doesn't seem to me that where there is a strong presumption, those words should be left in our constitutional document.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: It seems to me we are getting somewhat off the track here. All of the argument has been concerning a person who may try to beat a debt by leaving the Territory. I suggest that if we arrest a person civilly because he is leaving the Territory we are not arresting him because of the debt. We are not arresting him at all because he owed a debt. As long as he stays here he would not be arrested. We are arresting him because he is trying to commit fraud or trying to leave the Territory or beat his bills or something of that order. I see nothing at all inconsistent with stopping with the word "debt" and still having a civil arrest procedure which we now have and which I think we probably ought to keep. I am for the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: This amendment is not too unusual. As Mr. Rivers stated, they have it in New Jersey, they have it in Missouri. Each one varies a little. In Missouri they say, "No person shall be imprisoned for debt except for nonpayment of fines and penalties imposed by law." In Michigan they say, "No person shall be imprisoned for debt arising out of, or founded on a contract express or implied, except in cases of fraud or breaches of trust or of moneys collected by public officers or in any professional employment." And it is quite interesting that the State of Illinois states, "No person shall be imprisoned for debt unless upon refusal to deliver up his estate for the benefit of his creditors in such manner as shall be prescribed by law." Here it is exactly the language of the proposed amendment, "or in cases where there is a strong presumption of fraud". Now I halfway agree with Mr. Johnson. I think this, although I was a member of the Committee and supported the amendment in the Committee, I think that it is troublesome, and I don't think that we have hit on the right language. I don't think Mr. Johnson's amendment will help our situation. We have this statute in Alaska as you all know, that where a man absconds and owes money, he can be arrested provisionally. That means not forever, he does not have to go to jail until a certain number of days until he pays the total amount of his debts. He is provisionally detained so he can be examined and a judgment can be secured against him, and after that he can go, but he cannot escape judgment or the arm of the law by jumping on a plane. That is a healthy situation. Now Mr. Victor Rivers agrees with that but he would like to say it has to be a case of actual fraud. That wouldn't be good because then a business man would have to operate at his peril. If for some reason he was wrong in going before the judge and signing the complaint, (and it is a judge, Mr. Rivers, not the arresting officer) if he were wrong he would be liable to a suit for a wrongful arrest if you made it actual fraud, so presumed fraud gives a necessary protection to the business man and makes the law workable, but I think the real solution is this, and I am going to ask for a one-minute recess to see if we can work it out. The State of Washington is where we took our Alaska statute from and that is what we want to keep. Everybody seems to agree that an absconding debtor should be given no protection and that we should be able to arrest that sort of man. In Washington, they arrest them down there when they start out for Alaska, and I think we should arrest them in Alaska when they head back. In Washington they say, "There shall be no imprisonment for debt except in cases of absconding debtors." I think in one minute I could talk Mr. Johnson into agreeing with that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will stand at recess for 60 seconds.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson, did you have a new amendment or anything because of this recess?

JOHNSON: I have no new amendment. My amendment remains the same.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I move to table the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves that the proposed amendment be laid on the table. Is there a second?

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be laid on the table?"

V. RIVERS: I ask for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll. The Chief Clerk will also read the amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 6, line 2, strike the comma after 'debt' and insert a period. Strike the balance of line 2 and all of line 3."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be laid on the table?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 16 - Cross, Doogan, Harris, Hinckel, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Reader, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White.

Nays: 34 - Awes, Boswell, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McNealy, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Collins, Cooper, Hilscher, McLaughlin.)

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 34 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed to have been laid upon the table. The amendment is now before us. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to answer some of the opposition to this amendment. In my opinion this clause is a protective clause for businessmen. This clause has been brought to my attention. I had not been in Alaska three months in 1940. I was well aware of it. I had a man get away from me with a debt. One of the attorneys here advised me in the matter. I was apprised of the possibility to stop the fellow before he got to the states. Actually it is obsolete now and that is another reason we should not have it. At that time I was aware of it and I had a choice to have the man stopped. The only person I could possibly see profit by that would be the lawyer in question giving me the advice because the sum was so paltry that the legal fees would have eaten it up. So I said, "Let the man go", and I have let a couple of them go since. I also have heard of cases where a poor fellow who has no ability to go to the supreme court and question the constitutionality of our Alaskan statute as it is now, and it can be questioned. I personally doubt whether it is constitutional, this Alaskan business protecting clause. I know about men who have gone to the states and have been arrested under this clause, sure they can come back and sue. Who will have the time and money involved in a suit? The man just simply proved that he did not have fraudulent intention, that he had a good reason to go out for a half year or so, but in order to prove that he had a judgment against him and a court cost against him. The man was arrested. He was deprived of his liberty. He was habeas corpused for a short while, and I think it is unconstitutional, it is indecent, absolutely wrong. I am for the amendment.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move the previous question.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The previous question cuts off debate.

BARR: Did we not decide at one time that debate should not be limited?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was never decided, Mr. Barr. Mr. Buckalew, do you wish to withdraw your second to the question?

BUCKALEW: No.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, there is an amendment before us at this time, Mr. Coghill moves that that question be ordered. So long as someone moved the previous question and it was seconded the Chair has no other alternative but to cut off debate until this particular motion is voted on.

BARR: Is that under a suspension of the rules? Don't the rules say that a man is entitled to speak twice?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, the previous question can shut it off at any time if the delegates so choose to order the previous question. They have not done so yet. It is the duty of the Chair to put the question. The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The previous question has failed. Mr. Barr. you have the floor.

BARR: This is my second and my last time for speaking, but I want to point out that under the present wording it says a man may be imprisoned for debt if there is a strong presumption of fraud. That is just beating about the bush and allowing a man to be imprisoned for one thing when actually his crime was another. I previously stated that debt was not a crime and that fraud is a crime, and therefore he should be imprisoned for fraud, if imprisoned for anything. Now a couple of law experts have pointed out that some kinds of fraud are not a crime. All right, in case some crimes of fraud are not a crime, he can still be imprisoned for a debt under that. In other words, he can be imprisoned for not committing a crime. Now this section is in our bill of rights, whose rights? It seems to me that this whole proposal is meant to protect the citizens of Alaska. This does not do it. I believe a man should be imprisoned for fraud too, and the legislature has the power to define what fraud is. He should not be imprisoned for something else, and it is traditional in our country that he not be imprisoned for debt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I suppose I should have spoken on this before, but I was probably one of the strongest supporters of this in the Committee, and possibly there should be an amendment to it just calling for absconding debtors on that because that was the only interest I had in the particular matter, and I grant the fact that I don't know, I could not count offhand how many years past I have stopped down in Ketchikan on the way outside, and when they were stopped by the Marshal at Ketchikan they paid the bill and went on their way. They had the money in their pocket to pay. I don't own any business and I don't represent very many business interests, so to speak, but it is no good to the people of the Territory of Alaska to be losing money by a bunch of no-account bums leaving the Territory and taking away their ill-gotten gains and gains that they did not intend to pay for when they got them. I think we have lost sight of the fact that we are here to write a constitution for Alaska and not for a bunch of crooks that are going to come up here and buy things and just skip out without paying for them and doing it intentionally. I believe we should have something in here to enable us to be able to keep the money in Alaska and not to aid and abet some crooks. Let's write this constitution for the Alaskans.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I wish to call the attention of the delegates that if we adopt this amendment by Mr. Johnson you are going to wreck one of the old-time traditions up here in Alaska. Personally I have seen where some high-pressured person comes in and takes room and board at a widow woman's house for several months and then bingo, he skips, and the fraud you are trying to get at him for, and I urge each and everyone to vote to keep this section intact as it is. Many times I have had occasion to arrest people just before getting on a plane with a ticket to Seattle, as explained by Mr. McNealy, have coughed up the money and paid the debt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would like to ask Mr. McNealy a question if I may. Mr. McNealy, in your opinion, if the amendment carries, would a statute such as we have on our books now, pertaining to absconding debtors, be constitutional?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: The present statute would be constitutional in my opinion under this section.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Mr. Johnson's amendment on the table. I would like to have it read and acted upon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert after the word 'except' the words 'in case of absconding debtors'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Insert after the word "except" the words "in case of absconding debtors". The proposed amendment by Mr. Johnson to Section 18 is to strike the comma after the word "debt" in line 2 and insert a period, and strike all the rest of the sentence. The word "except" is gone in the original amendment.

TAYLOR: I will put it back in then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment will have to be drawn correctly to be read to the delegates.

ROSSWOG: May I address a question to Mr. McNealy while we are waiting, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Did you mean, Mr. McNealy, that the present statute would be constitutional as the section stands now?

MCNEALY: As the section stands now I am positive that our present law would be constitutional. If the amendment is adopted it is my opinion that our statute as to absconding debtors would not be constitutional.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Do you think Mr. McNealy, that if the section stands as it is that our present Alaskan statute would be constitutional as far as the state's constitution is concerned, but it might be unconstitutional as far as the Federal Constitution is concerned? That was brought to my attention by an FBI lawyer.

MCNEALY: I have read over the Federal Constitution and during the many years that I have been more or less acquainted with this, if I have missed this and anyone can point out to me where the Federal Constitution forbids imprisonment for debt, why I am really going to learn something.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak a few words on the question. I think we should not lose sight of the fact that this last sentence is not only for the protection of merchants in Alaska but also for the general public in Alaska.

I think if we pass this amendment we would be opening the doors for anyone that wanted to come up here and defraud our citizens.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor, the amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert after the comma following the word 'debt'" --

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no comma there anymore. The thing to do would be to strike the period and insert a comma.

TAYLOR: In the amendment they did not take the period out. There is nothing about removing the period.

RILEY: Does that purport to be an amendment to the amendment now before us?

TAYLOR: Yes.

R. RIVERS: I rise to a point of order. I don't think what Mr. Taylor has is germane to the pending amendment. The amendment is to strike everything after that period. That is entitled to be acted upon. If we pass that amendment of Mr. Johnson's, then Mr. Taylor can move to add those additional words as a separate motion.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, there was nothing about changing that comma to a period, so far as we are concerned there is a comma there and something should follow it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, the Chair will hold that Mr. Ralph Rivers' point of order is well taken at this particular point and that your amendment will be in order after this particular amendment is acted upon. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: May I ask one question of Delegate McNealy. In case the amendment carries, can the legislature impose a law on people who leave the Territory without paying their bills?

MCNEALY: I question very much in my own mind whether they can be imprisoned for debt, Mr. Marston, and it would also carry with the other one we have on the books now that, where an employer does not pay his employees within a certain time, he can be subject to arrest for that and that would also, without some saving clause in here, that also would prevent his being imprisoned under that clause.

MARSTON: You say we can't pass that law then?

MCNEALY: That is my opinion that if we say there shall be no imprisonment for debt, that is it period, and the legislature cannot contravene that.

MARSTON: I did not like the argument used defending this position here, that we have a different group of people here than we have elsewhere that are running out and not paying their bills any more than any state in the Union.. I did not like the comments on Oklahoma today. I know "Alfalfa Bill" over there, the Governor. He wouldn't like what Delegate Taylor said about him. I think we should be careful what we say about these people in other states, and I don't like to be up here different than the other states, that these people up here are different here, I think we are the same people. We are a part of the same people, and I don't like to be set aside as peculiar, and the argument used to defend this position, I did not like, so I am going to vote for the amendment.

LONDBORG: I would like to ask a question of Mr. McNealy. It has just been said it is doubtful if a law could be passed imprisoning someone for debt if this were stricken. I would like to ask a question, if a law could be passed to imprison a person for fraud. If they were beating a debt, could a law be passed to put them in prison for fraud or presumption of fraud?

MCNEALY: Yes, I think a law could be passed to imprison a person for fraud. We do have those laws on the book such as obtaining money under false pretenses, and a few similar statutes.

LONDBORG: It would seem that they should be put into prison for fraud and not the debt. I think the amendment should be passed.

RILEY: I prefer the language proposed by Mr. Taylor a moment ago but not yet before us to the language as it now exists, and for that reason alone I expect to support the amendment now and hope that it passes so that the way may be paved for submission of Mr. Taylor's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will have to adhere to the two times for each delegate. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?"

H. FISCHER: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 34 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McNealy, Marston, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 17 - Cross, Doogan, Harris, Hinckel, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog, Sweeney, Taylor, White, Wien.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Collins, Cooper, Hilscher.)

CHIEF CLERK: 34 yeas, 17 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Now the Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I think the amendment should be changed because I was amending the amendment. It will just be amending the article now.

CHIEF CLERK: "Change the period to a comma and insert after the word 'debt' the following words: 'except in case of absconding debtors', line 2, page 6."

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second?

RILEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Just for clarification there is no period. That is a comma because it has not been changed.

SUNDBORG: It was changed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was changed in the previous amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think regarding discussion about this amendment, essentially the section reads the same as before. It is only a vain string over that poor man who is presumed to be fraudulent. An absconding debtor, how are you going to determine who is an absconding debtor? He is presumed to be leaving the Territory under a fraudulent pretext, that is an absconding debtor in my opinion, so actually we are back where we were, and I think the question should be asked.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 37 - Awes, Boswell, Coghill, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 14 - Barr, Buckalew, V. Fischer, Hermann, Johnson, Laws, Lee, Londborg, Marston, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Collins, Cooper, Hilscher.)

KILCHER: I would like to change my vote from "no" to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher asks that his vote be changed from "no" to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 37 yeas, 14 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 18? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Could we have just a moment, Mr. President?

V. RIVERS: Have we passed through Section 19 or is this matter reopened for Section 11?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have not passed through Section 19 yet, Mr. Rivers. Are there amendments to Section 19?

ROBERTSON: I would like to offer a new Section 19.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A new Section 19, Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may present your amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert new Section 19: 'Every person shall have the right to work for the gaining of his livelihood.' Renumber the present Section 19 to be Section 20."

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there a second to the motion?

LONDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I submitted that proposal to the Committee together with a proposal I thought to be consistent with that of the right of collective bargaining. The Committee was good enough to give me a hearing on it, but as I understood it, they thought it was a legislative matter and not a constitutional matter. However, Mr. Hellenthal made a minority report in which he wanted collective bargaining. Now I maintain that every American citizen has the right to work for the gain of his livelihood. In Juneau we had several instances of where people had been deprived of that right and I submit that no matter how powerful the labor unions may become, and I am not opposed to labor unions in any matter, I submit that labor unions have no right to deprive an individual of the right to work. We have had cases in Juneau where they attempted to prevent people from working on their own houses, such as painting their own houses or painting their own building, and I submit that is wrong. Now I have no doubt in time, I feel that the labor unions in time will see that is wrong and probably the leaders don't condone those threats, and I submit that is a proper amendment and ought to go into the constitution or bill of rights, giving every citizen the right to work at his discretion for the gain of his own livelihood. I hope the Convention will adopt it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to tell the Convention about the action of the Committee. Mr. Robertson was heard and the Committee considered carefully the collective bargaining and the right-to-work. It is only the right-to-work before us now, and I may say that the Committee was unanimous in its decision that there should be no right-to-work provision in the bill of rights.

BUCKALEW: I move to table the amendment.

ROBERTSON: I understand there are 16 states that have a constitutional provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, the motion to lay on the table is not debatable.

STEWART: I second Mr. Buckalew's motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be laid on the table?"

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 23 - Awes, Buckalew, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, King, Knight, Lee, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Poulsen, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest.

Nays: 28 - Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cross, Davis, V. Fischer, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Collins, Cooper, Hilscher.)

CHIEF CLERK: 23 yeas, 28 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion to lay on the table has failed of passage. Mr. Robertson, you have the floor.

ROBERTSON: I understand 16 states have constitutional provisions on the right to work. I have looked at some of them and I believe they are of much broader scope, and if such a right is criticizable or detrimental to anyone, that those state constitutions have much broader provisions in the extent and scope of their effect upon work than my provision, and that is a very simple provision, simply giving every citizen the right to work.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I think this falls along the line of this amendment, the right to work. Last summer a construction company moved into Unalakleet to do some work and in their move in they brought along all the technical help, which of course they had to do. They brought along their laborers, many from the states, and the Natives at Unalakleet were deprived of the right to work. There were various reasons given. Some of the reasons were that they were not able to do the work, but they didn't have the chance to prove it. They were not hired because they did not belong to the union. There was no way for them to get in because the union agent was in Anchorage and they would have to take a trip down there and pay union dues, etc. And consequently you have quite a large number of employees that came up from the states and worked and went back to the states spending the money earned up here. You have people up there that will have to have relief paid out of Territorial funds because they were denied the right to work. I wonder just how that sets with us as a state. If we are going to deny our own people the right to work and therefore, they have to be supported by the state, people can come in from the outside and take the jobs and then go back and spend their money.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I opposed the right-to-work clause and with it I opposed the collective bargaining of which the minority report was written upon, as a part of the constitution, and I put them both together because I feel that if the right-to-work clause is put in the constitution then I am going to have to go against my better wishes and vote to have a collective bargaining clause in the constitution. I take the position that it won't be very many years until something better than what we know as collective bargaining at the moment, it may still be collective bargaining, but I think in a few years there will be something better, maybe even to the point that we won't require either a right-to-work or a collective bargaining clause any place. I think the matters are legislative because of that reason.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?"

HURLEY: Roll call.

BARR: May I hear the amendment read again?

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert new Section 19: 'Every person shall have the right to work for the gaining of his livelihood.' Renumber present Section 19 to be Section 20."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Fischer.

H. FISCHER: Mr. President, I don't think I understand. I think the right to work is misconstrued in the title. Is this not a bill that more or less kills unions, organized labor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will anyone answer the question? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Yes, this is the bill that would destroy collective bargaining, completely and utterly. It was presented to us under a new guise. I don't think that the manner in which it was presented has ever been used before anywhere. It was presented to us that the adoption of this would permit a man to work on his own house. Nothing is further from the truth. We have a perfect right to work on our own house anytime we want to, unless we are prohibited by some legislation, and that is not the purpose of this bill. Now, Mr. Robertson may in all good faith consider it to be, but he is the only person who has advocated the right-to-work who has ever grounded it on that basis. The right-to-work would make it possible for a man to disregard the provisions of a union contract and to go off on his own. It would utterly destroy, as Mrs. Fischer correctly said, the power of the unions. I notice nobody has spoken in opposition to it, so apparently the opponents feel there are sufficient votes here to defeat the proposal. I think that some few words should be said in opposition to the bill.

MCCUTCHEON: Question.

HELLENTHAL: Just a moment. The phrase, "right-to-work" is a misnomer. One of the editors of a national magazine said that it was invented by a "phony genius at propaganda", and that is just about correct. Nothing is further from the truth than that of considering this as a protection for an individual. It is nothing but a device aimed at breaking up the right of unions to organize and bargain collectively for their members, which is a right, mind you, that is sanctified by the Taft Hartley law, by all of the advanced labor legislation that we have had on the national scene for many many years past. There are 17 states, mostly Southern states, most all of them Southern states, in which the right-to-work legislation has sneaked through. In Massachusetts a similar provision was defeated 190 to 2 who were in favor of it, only two out of the 192 votes cast. The Secretary of Labor, James P. Mitchell, has taken an emphatic and violent stand against right-to-work legislation on any form. I think that should be brought to the attention of the house. The freedom of any person to work wherever he can get a job at whatever wages he is able to earn and willing to take is a fundamental American right, but this right-to-work legislation would destroy the very fundamental rights and purposes for which union people gather. Secretary Mitchell's stand was taken in a speech he gave on December 7, 1954. So for those reasons and many other reasons, this purported right, this phony device that has been sold by glib propaganda agents, hypocrites mind you, should be defeated. It does not accomplish the purpose that Mr. Robertson suggests. It is nothing but a union-destroying device contrary to the national legislation that we have on the books and have had in Democratic administrations and Republican administrations.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I am not particularly in favor of this amendment but it does not happen to be for reasons that have been announced by Mr. Hellenthal. I think that he has indulged in rather a demagogic display of oratory about something that has already been included in the bill of rights and he is one of the authors of this particular section. He says that this wordage, the right to work, is a union-busting provision, and he says that that should not be in the constitution for that reason. If you look at Section 1, almost identically the same language is used where it says that the rights, the natural rights of any person shall be guaranteed, and the natural right to the enjoyment of the gains of their own industry. That is almost identically the same thing as saying they have the right to work and to the fruits of their own industry. So, I think, so far as Mr. Hellenthal's arguments are concerned, he is begging the question. They have already inserted virtually the identical provision. As I say, I am not so in favor of the amendment because I think that it is a legislative matter and could just as well be left out, but I certainly do not think we ought to defeat the amendment solely on the basis of Mr. Hellenthal's argument. It is not sound.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I just wanted to say that I felt the Committee did a good job in leaving both of these items out, the collective bargaining and the right to work. I feel they are legislative too, and both had better be left out. For that reason I will not support this amendment and I would not support the collective bargaining amendment.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I am a little resentful of my old friend, John Hellenthal, accusing me of being a hypocrite but I have been accused of a good many things, and I can take it. I explained to the Committee that my purpose was not to get a right of a strike breaker. I was simply trying to protect the very right which, if I correctly understood Mr. Hellenthal, he was quoting from Secretary Mitchell, he said it was an inalienable American right. That is the right I am trying to protect through this bill of rights. There is no hypocrisy about it whatsoever. It would meet the very conditions that Mr. Londborg spoke about at Unalakleet. There are hundreds of those conditions existing in Alaska, at least during the seasonal work, where people are denied the right to work because the control is in a union from the states and a person here in Alaska is not permitted to join. Most all our boys, even when they get to be over 16, when they can work, between the ages of 16 and 18, many times they are not permitted to join the union. Now that is a denial of the right to work. I claim that is one of the causes of our delinquency among our youth today, it is the labor unions preventing our young men going out to work when they are well able to, and I submit to you that this ought to be passed, and I hope it will.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert a new Section 19: 'Every person shall have the right to work for the gaining of his livelihood. Renumber present Section 19 to be Section 20.'"

ROBERTSON: I call for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 4 - Laws, Londborg, Reader, Robertson.

Nays: 47 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Collins, Cooper, Hilscher.)

CHIEF CLERK: 4 yeas, 47 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Under the personal privilege I extend my gratitude to Delegate Laws for voting with me.

WHITE: Parliamentary inquiry. I voted with the prevailing side. I did so that later today I will have the opportunity today to vote against inclusion of the section which would in the constitution be the right to collective bargaining. My question then is, if I give notice to reconsider my vote tomorrow, may that notice be withdrawn by me and I not have to support that motion, should it not be necessary?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair sees no reason why if you serve notice of reconsideration, if you withdraw your intention of asking reconsideration, that should be up to you, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I voted with the prevailing side in this Convention and I give notice that I wish to reconsider my vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White serves notice that he wishes to reconsider his vote tomorrow. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move that we suspend the rules and take up the reconsideration at this time, Mr. White's reconsideration.

H. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved by Mr. Sundborg, seconded by Mrs. Fischer, that the Convention take up the reconsideration of Mr. White's vote at this time.

DAVIS: Mr. President, as a point of order, I don't think Mr. White has made a motion to reconsider yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion has been made by other delegates, Mr. Davis. Other delegates may, in effect, ask for a suspension of the rules and that the reconsideration come before the Convention at this time. The question is actually, "Shall the rules be suspended and Mr. White's reconsideration be taken up at this time? The motion you will be voting on first will be a suspension of the rules and then you will be voting on the same matter that we just voted on if the motion should carry. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and Mr. White's notice of reconsideration be considered at this time?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. "Shall the rules be suspended?"

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 10 - Buckalew, H. Fischer, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Poulsen, R. Rivers, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 41 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, White, Wien.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, Collins, Cooper, Hilscher.)

CHIEF CLERK: 10 yeas, 41 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the motion has failed of adoption and Mr. White's reconsideration will come up at its regular time tomorrow. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Would it be in order at this time for me to give notice of reconsideration also? I voted in the affirmative on Mr. Kilcher's amendment to amend line 24 in Section 13 on page 4, of changing "$250" to the words "sum set by law", and I would like to give notice of reconsideration for tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be in order if the record shows that you voted in the affirmative, yes, Mr. Robertson.

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, he did.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then Mr. Robertson serves notice of a reconsideration of his vote on an amendment that changed the words "$250" to read "a sum set by law".

ROBERTSON: It changed "$250" to "a sum set by law".

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will have the two reconsiderations then coming before us tomorrow. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: An inquiry, Mr. President. Is Section 1 now subject to further amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no other amendments to Section 18 or 19. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment preceding Section 1 which I would like to offer if we're going back through the order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers had mentioned previously, Mr. Johnson, that he had an amendment to the preamble, was it, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: Yes, here it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I had an amendment that I was writing to present following the treatment of each of the different sections. It is the amendment with regard to wire tapping. I don't know whether the Chair wishes to consider that now and then go back and work through again or wait until we have worked through once more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, if you are not quite certain where that should go, we will work back through. We will give everyone an opportunity to submit amendments right on down through the proposal. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: We have not yet taken up Section 19.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Section 19, that was the amendment we just had. The Chair asked if there were other amendments to Section 19. If there are other amendments to Section 19, that was the one Mr. Robertson proposed to substitute a new section for, Mr. Taylor. Do you have an amendment to Section 19. Mr. Taylor?

Mr. Hellenthal, would you mind?

HELLENTHAL: I am indifferent. I should like to present, though, the amendment which was initially proposed as a sentence following the first sentence in Section 10, whenever the Chair rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Proposed by Mr. Victor Rivers, Mr. Sundborg, Mr. White, Mr. V. Fischer, Mr. Hilscher, Mr. Ralph Rivers, Mrs. Helen Fischer, Mr. Emberg, Mr. Poulsen, Mr. King, Mr. Riley and Mr. Hellenthal. Amendment of Article on Preamble and Bill of Rights. Strike lines 1 through 5 on page 1 and substitute the following: 'We the people of Alaska, conscious of our heritage of political, civil and religious liberty, grateful to God and to those who founded the nation and pioneered this great land, reaffirm our belief in government by consent of the governed within the Union of States and do ordain and establish this Constitution for the State of Alaska.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, what is your pleasure?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, as one of the makers of this motion, I move and ask unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

TAYLOR: I object.

H. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President and delegates, it seemed to me in reading the preamble that we had on this particular proposal that it was merely a restatement of the preambles of many of the proposals of many of the states. I wanted to see a little bit more originality, something that would be more typical of the thinking and the speaking and the heritage of our Alaska people, so I drafted a proposal. Since that time there have been a number of changes. However, in the present form it seems to me to be more applicable to our particular form of constitution, perhaps more acceptable to our people than would be the one which was originally presented in the Committee proposal. I personally feel that while a great many of the people who vote on this constitution may not read it in its entirety, that practically all and everyone will read the preamble. While I realize it has no force of law, I think it should be a statement and intent and feeling of those people who drafted it rather than some other words of someone else who drafted a constitution under somewhat considerably different circumstances. Therefore, I have been one of those who moved to prepare and submit this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I was quite disappointed when I read the preamble submitted and I am happy with this amendment. I shall vote for it, I think it expresses the attitude of Alaska, and I am only sorry I could not be a party to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I agree with everything that has been said and I engaged to some extent in working with the preamble, in trying to write one that would express our feelings in strong words with one exception. Three words have been added to this since I signed it, and I move to add to the amendment by striking the three words, "to God and". I so move.

LAWS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves to amend the proposed amendment by striking "to God and", seconded by Mr. Laws. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I don't expect to get far with this, and perhaps it is not very important. I am not an atheist. I go to church regularly. I spent five enjoyable and instructive years in one of the most well-known church schools in the states. This was called to my attention first during the recess, called to my attention by people whose opinion I respect, and because of who they were I would expect they express a rather widely held opinion, in that I think the inclusion of these words in the preamble is not consistent with Section 5. That is the basis of my objection. I will make only one other note and that is that sometime ago Mr. Hellenthal said that the Bill of Rights Committee did not deviate hardly one iota from the Preamble to the Federal Constitution. Here is one case where they did. I think it was interesting to note that our forbearers, for all their deeply held religious convictions, when they came to the Preamble of the Federal Constitution they left out any words such as these. I just think with Section 5 and with the wording here, "conscious of our religious liberty", that the matter is covered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I am going to have to take exception, not only for myself but for a man that is not here who I think if he were here might have quite a little bit to say about it. Unfortunately, he cannot be here and is unavoidably detained. We wrote this preamble in the Bill of Rights Committee, and it is true that we studied a good many preambles of other states, and it is also true that this preamble with a few exceptions, copies another preamble. The only way I can state it is the way it was so aptly put I think by one of the members of the Committee of the Bill of Rights, that the preamble to the bill of rights is the same as saying grace before you sit down and eat your meal. That is all it is and that is all it is intended for. I know many of these people here, practically all of them, belong to an organization, church, and for every organization and church that they belong to they must of necessity some place in there, pay at least lip service to the Lord. In the oath that you took, you did the same thing. Every day here we have a minister before us to give us the grace before we start our meeting. If we are going to eliminate any reference to the Lord or God, I don't care by what other name you call Him, then I think we are wasting our time in having the ministers come before us and give us a blessing before we start, and I think that you are also being unjustly fair to both Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Lundborg who are here as delegates but every so often you feel the necessity to call upon them in their respective capacity as a minister. Therefore I am going to oppose the amendment.

(At this time Delegate Armstrong entered the hall.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Let the record show that Mr. Armstrong is present now. If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 3:45. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us an amendment. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, the Convention has now had the opinion of two very sincere men representing both sides of the question. I think it has been adequately heard. I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

V. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the previous question is ordered. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: It is the amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. White. shall the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention? All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption. We now have before us the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers and other delegates. Is there further discussion? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I would like to offer an amendment to the amendment. Since we decided to leave "God" back in the amendment I would like to restore Him to full title and make it "Almighty God". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You offer to amend the proposed amendment by inserting the word "Almighty" before "God"?

HINCKEL: I object.

COGHILL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think that the amendment as offered here is acceptable to everybody and I am opposed to the amendment as offered by Mr. Harris on the grounds that "God" without an adjective is more comprehensive and more acceptable to various faiths, Christians and non-Christians alike, and I am opposed to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Harris be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 24 - Armstrong, Awes, Coghill, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Johnson, King, Knight, Londborg, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Reader, Robertson, Sweeney, vanderLeest, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 24 - Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Collins, Cooper, Cross, Hilscher, McNealy, Rosswog, Stewart.)

CHIEF CLERK: 24 yeas, 24 nays, and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption.

MCCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers and other delegates be adopted by the Convention?"

H. FISCHER: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 49 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 2 - Laws, Wien.

Absent: 4 - Collins, Cooper, Hilscher, Stewart.)

KILCHER: I would like to change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher wishes to change his vote to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 49 yeas, 2 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments, or are there amendments to Section 1? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have on the Secretary's desk an amendment to Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, page 2, lines 1 and 2, insert a comma after the word 'rights', strike the word 'and' on line 2 and after the word 'opportunities' insert the words 'and equal protection'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: How would that sentence read with that proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: Don't you mean it to start on line 1, Mr. Johnson, a comma after the word "rights" on line 1, is that not it? You say "strike word 'and' and insert comma after the word 'rights'."

JOHNSON: Yes, line 1.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 1, insert a comma after the word 'rights', strike 'and' on line 2 and add after the word 'opportunities' 'and equal protection'."

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, as I started to explain this morning. it seems to me that the section as it now stands does not protect a very essential right of citizens and that is equal protection of the laws. Such a right is contained in the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution, and I discussed the matter with Miss Awes, the Chairman of the Committee, and after going over the section I think she agreed also that with this addition suggested by the amendment that we would safeguard the equal protection of the laws" right and it ought properly to be in the bill of rights..

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe because of the exact wording of the proposed amendment that we are doing something else if we adopt it. As it now reads, it says that persons are equal and they are entitled to equal rights and opportunities under the law. As it would be amended it would say they are entitled to equal rights, opportunities and equal protection. That is, they are not entitled to equal opportunities, if we adopt this amendment, as I read it. Now, if Mr. Johnson would consent to dropping the "equal" before the word "protection" in his proposed amendment, I would support it, but not otherwise, because I think if we leave the word equal" before "rights" and put the word "equal" before "protection" we are emphasizing there that the word "opportunities" does not have an equal" before it.

JOHNSON: I have no objection to that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered, and the amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment, as amended. Is there objection?

HELLENTHAL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there further discussion? If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment as amended will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment as amended is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I should like to change my vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Which way did you vote?

HELLENTHAL: I would like to change it to "nay".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal voted "nay". Are there other amendments to Section 1 or are there other amendments to be offered to the proposal? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers.

BARR: Mr. President, was there not a proposal sometime ago held over on Section 7?

HERMANN: Yes, there is a mimeographed one.

BARR: I have one before me by Mr. Buckalew, Davis, Hellenenthal, Taylor, and McNealy. We haven't acted on that, have we?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you rather have the sections as we come to them, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I don't particularly object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection we will hold Mr. Victor Rivers' amendment in abeyance until we come back to that section. We are on Section 7. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 7 as amended and substitute the following section: 'No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except when waived by the accused, in which event the prosecution shall be by information, but this shall not be applied to cases arising in the land or naval forces or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger. The grand jury may consist of not less than twelve citizens.'

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have a question, Mr. President, to address to the drafters of the motion. It seems to me it would be arising in the military forces. They have left out "air" there. Now we have naval and land. We had better get abreast of the time here and include "air force" or make it "military forces". "Arising in the military forces or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger", I think would read correctly.

BUCKALEW: That is the same language as the Constitution. They didn't have an air force then and they haven't had any problems with it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I would recommend that the Committee, and I leave it up to the Committee, substitute for their amendment where they say "in land and naval forces", substitute the words, "in the armed forces or in the militia" instead of the "land or naval forces or the militia" because we are going to run into confusion. We have used in this article now, the word "militia" twice. That is, the authority creating the militia, we have used it twice in the bill of rights article, and in the executive article I know what bothers Mr. Rivers they have used in Section 11, "armed forces of the state". Now there might be some conflict, although I don't see it if we dropped out the word "militia". But if we substituted "armed forces" for the words, "land or naval forces" at least we would have only two expressions in our constitution. "The armed forces of the state and the militia". If we leave it this way we will have a third one. Inasmuch as we are quite proud of our Air National Guard, we might have in our organized or unorganized militia as provided under the Military Code of 1955, provisions for an air force, unorganized. It might be advisable to make that change. I know that has no effect on the legislators because of the fact they exempted themselves from the unorganized militia under the 1955 act, but they kept every other able-bodied man in this Assembly in it and it might be helpful if we substitute the Committee, the gentlemen making the proposal, substitute the words "armed forces" in place of the "land or naval forces."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would ask unanimous consent of the other person signing the amendment to delete the language and insert "armed forces".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. That particular amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I am at sea here. Mr. Buckalew asked for permission to substitute the words "armed forces" for something, but I don't know for what.

BUCKALEW: Substituted the words "armed forces" for "land or naval forces or in the militia."

SUNDBORG: I want that very clear on what we are doing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for a minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, after further discussion on top of another discussion, the amendment as I intended to propose it just strikes the words "land or naval" and insert the words "armed forces". Now that is wrong yet. All I do is just insert the word "armed".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, you ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that amendment to the amendment?

BUCKALEW: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection on that proposed amendment to the amendment, it is ordered adopted. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I would like to submit an amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment to the amendment by Mr. Metcalf.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the last sentence of amended Section 7 and substitute the following: 'The grand jury shall consist of at least twelve citizens, three-fourths of whom concurring may find an indictment or true bill.'" "

METCALF: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf moves the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment.

METCALF: I ask unanimous consent.

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I must have misunderstood it or something because I understood it to say an indictment or a true bill. Does he not mean an indictment or not true bill?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the last sentence of amended Section 7 and substitute the following: 'The grand jury shall consist of at least twelve citizens, three-fourths of whom concurring may find an indictment or true bill.'" "

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would imply would it not, Mr. Hinckel, it would have to be a not true bill?

BUCKALEW: A true bill is an indictment. It is the same thing, so it is superfluous.

HINCKEL: It is a repetition. I wonder if he did not mean it should work both ways?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf, what is your explanation of that?

METCALF: I believe that is the same language that is in the original Section 7, was it not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. That is what it says in the original language.

TAYLOR: Point of order. I think that matter has already been disposed of in previous action today as that was in Section 7, "any nine of whom concurring". We have already struck it out. This would be putting it back in, three-fourths.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, this is rewriting the section all right, but it would be in order, as the Chair remembers that we never actually completed Section 7. This would strike Section 7, this proposed amendment we have before us now, so if Mr. Metcalf would seek to add that particular wording he would be in order up to this point, because we didn't yet strike Section 7. Is there further discussion? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to have it read once more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please slowly read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike last sentence of amended Section 7 and substitute the following: 'The grand jury shall consist of at least twelve citizens, three-fourths of whom concurring may find an indictment or true bill.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I concur with Mr. Hinckel. I think that the words "or true bill" are superfluous in there. An indictment, as most lawyers are familiar with, regardless of whether it is a true bill or not a true bill, both of them are labeled "indictment". They could return either a true bill or not a true bill and I think if you're going to leave the words, "a true bill" in, it also in turn should be "not a true bill".

PRESIDENT EGAN: You would say it should be "indictment or a true bill or not a true bill", is that right? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: That would seem to mean that it would take nine concurring to give a not true bill as well as an indictment, and I don't think that anyone would ever desire to have that situation arise. The point of the matter is, if you don't get your nine concurring you don't have a true bill. You don't have to have nine against, but you just simply don't have a true bill. The wording is a little awkward for that reason.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was the original wording in the bill of rights proposal. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe that should not be in that way because the grand jury is investigating something that there has been no bind-over from the commissioner's court. That if they do not, if sufficient number of jurors do not vote an indictment, they could not return not a true bill because all matters touching that particular inquiry are secret and don't come out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would a few of the attorneys care to work with Mr. Metcalf on the wording of that, is that your desire? If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a couple of minutes while that is done.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment which I just previously submitted and in lieu thereof I submit a rewritten amendment which is on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf asks unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment which he had previously submitted. If there is no objection it is so ordered and the Chief Clerk will now read the proposed amendment as now submitted by Mr. Metcalf.

CHIEF CLERK: "Delete the last sentence of amended Section 7 and add the following: 'The grand jury shall consist of at least 12 citizens, three-fourths of whom concurring may return a true bill.'"

METCALF: I ask for the adoption of the proposed amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second it.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

HELLENTHAL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. The question is open for discussion. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I know of no reason why the present law which has been in effect for 50 years in Alaska should be changed. Today, yesterday, and ever since we had grand juries in Alaska it took a majority of the grand jury of 23 to indict. Now, overnight, and for no reason I know of at all, we are going to require three-fourths of the members of the grand jury to concur before an indictment can be turned in. Do we know of any cases where the grand juries have been abusing their rights? Is there any reason, any reason why it should be made more difficult to indict a criminal? Any reason why one accused of crime should have the protection of three more votes, of another 25 per cent? Unless some reason is pointed out to me, this amendment which could only give consolation to those who are involved some way or another, unless some good reason is pointed out I must oppose it. Now. the reason that the language, "any nine of whom concurring may find an indictment or true bill" is found in that Missouri provision which has been rejected, was that indictments that were preserved by the original Section 7 were merely indictments resulting from willful misconduct in office of public officers. That was the only type of indictment, you will recall, that was preserved in the original Section 7, and so there is no tie-in whatsoever with the recommendation that any nine might concur in that type of an offense, and applying it now to all offenses I can see no good, no useful purpose whatsoever that will be served by this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment to the amendment? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It seems to me in the face of the present law which sets up, I believe, 23 members for the grand jury, it would then require 18 members under this amendment to indict and find a true bill and I think that is a fairly substantial majority and that would then allow the case to go to the petit jury or before the court. It seems to me that if it were based entirely on the 12 which we have before us, it might not be so good, but in the present law with 23, and if the present law is adopted in its entirety, it would seem to me that 18 people would be pretty sure they were right in the final analysis before bringing in a true bill or indictment. If the present law were held it would seem to me that this would be a very good clause. Three-fourths is a very high number to get in a body where there is any question of doubt in their minds.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I am not so sure I understand Mr. Rivers. A man can be indicted under the present law. First, the present law requires that there be 23 men and women on a grand jury. The present law requires that 13 of those people must agree before a true bill can be brought in, 12 rather. Now Mr. Rivers wants to raise that to 18. What reason exists for raising it from 12 to 18? Or by the same token from six to nine? What reason?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It would seem to me that the way this amendment is written any three-fourths of the entire body would have to act in order to bring in a true bill, is that not correct? So it actually would be three-fourths of 24, which would be 18 members. Is that right?

HELLENTHAL: No. The present bill provides for a 12-man jury, so it would be nine out of 12, 18 out of 24, or if you have a 40-man grand jury, it would be 30 out of 40.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I respond to Mr. Hellenthal's question. It takes 12 persons now to accuse a man of a crime by bringing in a true bill. By cutting down the grand jury to 12 instead of 23 you have cut down the size of the body so much that even with this requirement, it would take affirmative action by nine people to accuse a man of a crime, or to bring in a true bill. I think the reason for having this three-fourths is that you are cutting the size of the body down so much. From a practical standpoint, although the legislature could have a larger grand jury than 12, to save money and not spend more than necessary, I should judge they would set up a grand jury of 12 people. Well, then, nine would be the number of affirmative votes required to bring in a true bill. That is the thinking behind it. I would not care if it said a majority. But I think it is well to say something along that line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I agree fully with "majority", but to go beyond majority it is going to play into the hands of the law breakers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 23 - Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Sweeney, Mr. President.

Nays: 29 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Doogan, Emberg, Harris, Hellenthal, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 3 - Collins, Cooper, Hilscher.)

CHIEF CLERK: 23 yeas, 29 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment as amended has not been adopted. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I wish to submit an amendment which I have not written but is the same as Mr. Metcalf had except it says "a majority".

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann offers the same amendment except that it would require a majority of the jurors rather than three-fourths. Mrs. Hermann moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Mr. Hellenthal seconds the motion. The question is,

"Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mrs. Hermann be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: I hope that I have it right. "The grand jury shall consist of at least 12 citizens, a majority of whom concurring may return a true bill."?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have an amendment on the Secretary's desk which I would like to offer and there is also a copy on each delegates desk, Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr.

JOHNSON: Point of order. We have the original amendment before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have the original amendment before us. Your point of order is well taken. The last amendment was actually an amendment to the amendment as proposed by Mrs. Hermann, so now we have the original amendment as amended before us for consideration. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to ask the movers of this amendment to what they refer in the use of the word "this" in the fourth line, "but this shall not be applied". Do they refer to prosecution by information? Do they refer to everything that goes ahead of that or what is their intention? I think we can straighten it around in Style and Drafting if we know what they mean by it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have analyzed it. I know they mean this section shall not apply to the armed forces. I ask unanimous consent that we insert the word "section" after the word "this".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent that the word "section" be inserted after the word "this" on the fourth line of the proposed Section 7. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I think also then the two following words, "be applied", should be changed to "not apply".

R. RIVERS: That would be for Style and Drafting really. I don't care. "This section shall not be applied to the armed forces", is that not just as good a way as saying "it shall not apply"?

TAYLOR: Why does it say "shall not apply" then?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have adopted the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers. Is there further discussion?

R. RIVERS: I would like to offer an amendment on the last line of the amendment before us, that the word "may" be changed to "shall".

H. FISCHER: It has been.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I believe if Mr. Barr would offer his amendment as an amendment to this amendment, it would be in order, and I think that whether that is included or not that will have a bearing on whether I vote for the amendment to Committee Proposal No. 7 or whether I vote to retain Committee Proposal No. 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was it your desire to offer your proposed amendment as an amendment to the amendment, Mr. Barr?

BARR: It wasn't because I hesitate to interfere with anybody's amendment. I would like to offer it if this amendment we're reconsidering now, is adopted. However, I can see that there might be opposition to the amendment under consideration unless mine is also included. I feel that way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are free to offer your amendment as an amendment to this amendment if you so desire.

BARR: I might ask if any of the authors of this amendment would object to adding mine.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If they would object to your asking that it be added? Would you please read Mr. Barr's proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "At the end of Section 7, as amended, add the following paragraph: 'The power of grand juries to investigate and make recommendations concerning conditions detrimental to the public welfare or safety shall never be suspended.'"

BARR: That is an additional paragraph. If none of the authors of this amendment object, I would like to offer this as an amendment to the amendment. I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr so moves.

BARR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr asks unanimous consent. Is there objection?

BUCKALEW: I object.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

R. RIVERS: Point of clarification. Does he intend to have it added on to what we already have?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, added on to what we already have as the proposed amendment before us. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: From my first impression and my prime objection to this particular amendment is that I think and feel certain it will open the door, for example, the grand jury might have under investigation the conduct of some particular public office, for example the governor, or any public official, the local tax collector. They don't have enough evidence to return an indictment but this would give them the power to blast him good and hard, and I think it would lead to all kinds of trouble, and I think it is an unheard of provision. The recommendation of the Committee provided that the grand jury could investigate, they could return indictments, but it certainly did not give them the privilege to more or less defame somebody if they did not have quite enough action for a bill. Under this they could discredit him completely, and he would have no way of answering. He might be able to come back and get the report of the grand jury stricken from the records of the court, but the damage would then be done. I think it is extremely dangerous because a citizen would not have any protection. Once it was published the only thing he could do would be to then come in and ask the court to strike portions of it. For that reason I would object to it.

R. RIVERS: The present province of our grand jury is to investigate public offices and institutions, not just to investigate anything involving the public welfare. I wonder if Mr. Barr is intending to try to preserve what we already have now, as the province of the grand jury. Would you consent to having it worded as "investigate public offices and institutions and make recommendations"?

BARR: No. I think that their power should be a little broader than that. I don't know what the powers are right now exactly, but I do know that they make recommendations concerning other things than public offices and officers, and under this provision it would only investigate and make recommendations concerning things that endangered public welfare's safety, and I believe that is what the grand jury is for is to protect the rights of its citizens. They do not necessarily have to defame any person or mention him by name. If the tax collector was using methods not acceptable to the public, they might make a recommendation for a change in the system of tax collection, etc., and I think it would be their duty to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment to the amendment? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, my suggestion was that the word "detrimental" be stricken and the word "involving" be inserted because I agree with Mr. Barr that the investigatory power of a grand jury is extremely broad, not as narrow as Mr. Rivers contends. I think a grand jury can investigate anything, and it is true that there is little protection against what they call in the vernacular, a runaway grand jury, but in the history of the United States there have been few runaway grand juries, extremely few, and I think that the broad statement of power that Mr. Barr asked for is proper and healthy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Barr be amended by striking the words "detrimental to" in the second line and substituting therefore the word "involving".

RILEY: Mr. President, point of order. I believe I think Mr. Barr's submission on this was contingent upon no objection. There was objection raised, so it is not before us yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is before us, it was moved and seconded, but the Chair was wondering if Mr. Barr was acceptable to that proposed amendment as suggested by Mr. Hellenthal. Are you, Mr. Barr?

BARR: Yes, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I was wondering if you might ask to withdraw it and have it inserted with the proposed words in it, if that is your wish. Then we will get around this amendment for the third or fourth time.

BARR: I ask permission to withdraw my amendment and submit another amendment in lieu thereof.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered withdrawn.

BARR: I would like to submit the same amendment but using the word "involving" instead of "detrimental to" and I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

BUCKALEW: I object.

BARR: I so move.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves and Mr. Johnson seconds the motion. If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr to the amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted.

V. RIVERS: Point of order. If the "ayes" have it my ears deceive me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If someone asks for a roll call, the Chair will call for one.

SWEENEY: I'll ask for a roll call, but I want to state something else. When you call for "ayes" or "nays" it is only necessary to say "aye" or "nay". It is not necessary to put the volume behind it.

JOHNSON: The Chair has already announced the result.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair did announce the result, but if there is objection, that is the result, the Chair would like to state that in many instances half of the delegates do not vote at all. It seems to be the feeling of the Chair that many of the delegates sit quietly and let the rest of the delegates do the answering in one way or another. You have to make some noise. You can't whisper "yes" or "no", and it is true, it seems to the Chair, it is true that a few of the delegates make their wishes known in many cases and others just sit quietly and let others do the answering. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, there is substantial doubt in my mind as to the outcome of that vote. I will have to ask for an appeal to the ruling of the Chair and ask for a roll call vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers appeals to the ruling of the Chair.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that the ruling of the Chair be sustained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The moment that a person on the floor appeals to the ruling of the Chair, it is then the proper manner for the Chair to say, "Shall the ruling of the Chair be sustained?" and then all other business ceases until that action is taken. The question is, "Shall the ruling of the Chair be sustained?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 44 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cross, Davis, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest. Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 8 - Buckalew, Doogan, H. Fischer, Laws, Riley, V. Rivers, Smith, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Collins, Cooper, Hilscher.)

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President, I question the President's right to abstain without having given previous notice.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the President will say "no" then.

CHIEF CLERK: 44 yeas, 8 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the ruling of the Chair then has been sustained. Are there other amendments to Section 7? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, my recollection is that we have not yet adopted the amendment. We have only just amended it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: On the amendment to the amendment that is correct, Mr. Sundborg.

ROBERTSON: I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves the previous question. Do you ask unanimous consent?

ROBERTSON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Hearing no objection, the previous question is ordered. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to Section 7 as amended be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment as amended --

MARSTON: We will have to have that read I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as amended.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment as amended.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended, as offered by Mr. Buckalew and other delegates, be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes have it and the proposed amendment as amended is ordered adopted by the Convention. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I turned around and noted a string of dignitaries had entered the assembly -- the Speaker of the House, Mr. Kay, Representative Plummer and Representative Johnson.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are happy to have you with us Mr. Kay, Mr. Plummer and Mr. Johnson. (Applause) Are there other amendments to Section 7 of Committee Proposal No. 7? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have one to Section 8.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment to Section 8.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Kilcher's amendment to Section 8, page 3, change --

KILCHER: Mr. President, I don't intend to move this amendment, pardon me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment will be withdrawn. Is there any other amendment to Section 8, 9 or 10? Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, Mr. President, I move that following the first sentence of Section 10, the following sentence be inserted: "Wire tapping or obtaining unauthorized information by other technical means or devices is prohibited. Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall be inadmissible in the courts."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have that in writing, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: It is in the report of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chief Clerk have the proposed amendment now? Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Following the first sentence of Section 10, insert" 'Wire tapping or obtaining unauthorized information by other technical means or devices is prohibited. Evidence obtained in violation of this section shall be inadmissible in the courts.'

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

H. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I objected in the Committee and that is the reason that the minority report was written. I maintain that this amendment as it is written is a legislative matter rather than a constitutional matter. I think with the progress being made in the electronics, photography, etc., you preclude the good administration of justice by putting in an all-inclusive clause in the constitution such as this is. I believe that wire tapping should be controlled but I believe that there is a place that it should be used and that it should not be used. I believe that our administrative officials that we hire to administer our laws and protect us should have the right of at times using almost any device that they so choose in the apprehending of known criminals, known subversive people who are promulgating subversive action, etc., and I submit again that it is not a constitutional matter, it is a legislative matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: The objection that this is legislative can be made to every one of the 20 sections of the bill of rights. Every bit of it is legislative. There is no question about it. To appear here and classify that as legislative particularly in dealing with this section does not convince one that the matter is faulty. It is not a question of whether it is legislative or not, it is a question of stress. Now the reason that the Bill of Rights was first enacted by the founding fathers was that they felt that there were certain rights, legislative matters if you wish, upon which great stress should be placed. They had unhappy experiences with the colonists, and rather than leave these fundamental things that bothered them deeply, they saw fit to include them in the first 10 amendments to the United States Constitution. All were legislative if you please. So the test is not, "Is it legislative?" The test is, "Shall it be stressed?" In following the Bill of Rights some of us have adopted this test to guide us in determining what should be in the bill of rights today. And the test is this -- is it a right which a totalitarian state today would deny? Is it a practice current in the totalitarian states and abhorrent to free people? Applying that test, wire tapping is abhorrent to free peoples. It is a common practice in the totalitarian states and it should be outlawed and it should be stressed in the bill of rights. Now the United States Supreme Court by judicial decision has reached the conclusion that wire tapping is illegal. If the founding fathers had telephone wires, electronic devices, telegraph wires before them, which they did not, I am sure that they would have prohibited this unwarranted invasion of a free American's privacy. The Supreme Court, however, did it by interpretation. Now, it is like this matter we talked about this morning about indictment and information and whether you should abolish the indictment. You can argue truthfully that in some instances, by keeping the indictment, criminals will escape punishment. On the other hand though, innocent people by abolishing the indictment might suffer, and it is equally true that by restricting the use of wire tapping and unauthorized eavesdropping, if you will, that some criminals will be benefited, but the greater good results from the prohibition, just like the greater good resulted from the retention this morning of the indictment, and for that reason you must weigh it. The lawyers and the law professors call these prophylactic rules, where the good must be balanced against the evil, and if you approach this thing fairly, analyze it fairly, consider it abhorrent to totalitarian practices that are prevalent today, I am sure that you will find that this prohibition will accomplish great good and will do great good for our democratic processes and our democratic form of government and that it deservedly has its place in a modern bill of rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I too find wire tapping as abhorrent as the distinguished delegate, Mr. Hellenthal. I also find murder and rape abhorrent, but we have not defined it, put it in the constitution and prescribed for its punishment. We have provided that we can protect this state by a well-organized militia when it's necessary. We have protected treasonable persons by setting up rules of evidence, limiting the type of evidence that can be introduced, and in this instance we have absolutely prohibited not only wire tapping as proposed by Mr. Hellenthal but obtaining of any unauthorized information by other technical means. If we embed this in our constitution with the worthiest of intent we may in fact strap the hands of the legislature and the law enforcement authorities. I find it abhorrent, but I believe as the Committee believes, this is a matter for the legislative action, not for us to be embedding in the constitution forever.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment I would like to make to Mr. Hellenthal's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf has an amendment to the proposed amendment.

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment that is along the same general lines, approaching it from a slightly different point of view. I would like to ask for a three-minute recess and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, during the recess we conferred with Mr. Victor Rivers and others, and we have submitted a different amendment which has been signed by Mr. McNealy, Reverend Armstrong and myself, all of whom concurred in the minority opinion with regard to wire tapping and which is also concurred in by Mr. Rivers who will present it, and I wish to withdraw the proposed amendment with the consent of my second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that the original amendment be withdrawn? Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and Mr. Hellenthal's original amendment is withdrawn. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have submitted to the Clerk the amendment proposed by Mr. Hellenthal, and Mr. Armstrong and Mr. McNealy and myself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers and other delegates.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 11, page 4, line 12, at end of line 12 add the following: 'The right of privacy of the individual shall not be invaded by use of any electronic or other scientific transmitting, listening or sound recording device for the purpose of gathering incriminating evidence. Evidence so obtained shall not be admissible in judicial proceedings or legislative hearings.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I will move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

ARMSTRONG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. White.

WHITE: May I ask a question of Mr. Rivers? Would you explain to me, Mr. Rivers, how this differs in any vital respect from the former amendment?

V. RIVERS: This differs in the respect that we are trying to avoid the invasion of the right of privacy. We have set up in here that a man shall be inviolate in his home, which is his castle. We have an amendment here which would not allow his rights of privacy be invaded at such times as he was conducting his private affairs, if he were sitting in his home talking over his telephone or he was sending a private communication by voice. Now it seems to me we must protect somewhere along the line the right of privacy in this constitution. We certainly are entitled to enjoy that right of privacy within the boundaries of our home or where we would be subject to some listening device, some recording device which might be put there, part of which might be taken out of its context and used against us where if the whole conversation were heard, it would not be so. It seems to me that we are failing to fulfill one of the obligations to protect our citizens if we do not protect their privacy in the matter of gathering evidence in that manner for the purpose of using it as incriminating evidence. I've given this proposal a good deal of thought and it seems to me the more we progress in the matter of scientific devices the less privacy the individual has. I would not venture to say it will not be too long before we have listening and soundscribing devices which will be of a nature that they will transcribe our thoughts before we even speak them. Unless science is a lot slower than I think it is, that will not be too far in the distant future. It seems that this thing, with the advances of science, it is absolutely essential to the protection of the right of privacy of the individual in the matter of obtaining and submitting against him incriminating evidence which might not be in its entirety or might not be in its context.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I am in favor of an amendment along the lines we have been discussing but I am sorry to say I am not able to pass on the amendment offered by Mr. Rivers, was long as it is, without seeing the thing. I don't know whether it meets what I want or not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I believe that we are in a position now of talking about something that goes beyond law. I think we are talking about a moral factor. It has been said here this afternoon that we do not know what science will bring to our civilization, and that I believe. I concur in that, we have no dream of what we have in the future. This may not spell out what we need for the future, but it will place here in our declaration of rights our intent that we will not be invaded in our homes or in other places where we might meet to discuss political activities, to discuss the rights of our bill and declaration. I have read the statements of district attorneys and lawyers against wire tapping. I see their point. They believe that we are making it difficult for them to receive information and that is just what we are trying to do, make it difficult to the point where we still possess our rights and we are not surrendering them. I believe this is within the field of the moral obligations we have to one another and, if this amendment does not spell this out intrinsically, I think we should work it out to the point where we do have it in the declaration, and, for lack of any better amendment at this point, I certainly will support this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: This amendment is merely a recurrence of the original proposal which it was substituted for. If it is said that we don't know what science will bring, it is my suggestion then, under those circumstances, let's not say anything about it and leave it to the legislature because they will certainly find out what has been created at the time they sit. They can rectify the evil if it exists at that time. As I say, I am morally opposed to wire tapping, too. What have we done now? In substance we have provided that under no circumstances will the admission of wire tapping through electronic devices done in a person's home be admitted as evidence in any court. That in substance means that Alger Hiss or Gerhardt Eisler is immune, now, tomorrow and the next day. As a matter of fact, in Section 14 we have permitted the writ of habeas corpus to be suspended in cases of rebellion, invasion or imminent peril. In the case of wire tapping it is always prohibitive. Even at a treason trial it would be inadmissible. Stress has been made here today that we certainly have protected the treasonable, because we provided in Section 16 that, "No person shall be convicted of treason, unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court." But we consider treason a heinous crime, yet we refuse to make the exception and say in substance that wire tapping of treasonable conversations done at home will be admissible evidence in the courts. I stress the point that wire tapping is abhorrent but we can go on and amend and amend and amend and make exceptions and the legislature's hands will be tied because we in our wisdom, not knowing what will take place in electronic developments, still are insisting that this thing shall be perpetuated in the constitution. I merely reiterate there are many abhorrent things, but there is no use or sense going on record in the constitution against them. It is something that should be left to the legislature. If it is so abhorrent to all men, then certainly the legislature can take care of it and they should.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I think Mr. McLaughlin has presented my ideas far more ably than I, and I certainly concur in his point of view. It has been said here for the second time today that the test should be applied that if anything that occurs within a totalitarian state should be prohibited here. It sounds good on the surface but in connection with this, let's consider the totalitarian states allow the use of side arms, we don't deny our law enforcement officers the use of side arms merely because they are permitted in totalitarian states. That argument holds no weight with me. It is contended that the use of eavesdropping methods is a violation of rights which indeed it is, looked at in one way, but I would submit the right of the people to be protected against particular crimes, if you will, is a superior right and I would name kidnapping, extortion, sabotage, overthrow of the government in that category. I can visualize a day might come when a child of mine has been kidnapped and the only way to get at the people who have perpetrated the crime would be to put a tap on my phone and wait until they call in. All these things are abhorrent to me but I think it would be far more sensible to us to leave it to the legislature to permit the use of such devices under strict control, under strictly outlined circumstances just as the Department of Justice has done according to my understanding since 1931, without exception, under every administration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Section 11 as it is presently written provides that the right of the people be secure in their houses and homes. They shall be protected against unreasonable searches and seizures, and it provides as to how searches and seizures may be made under certain circumstances. Now I submit that it is not any less a violation of a person's rights to make a search and seizure by some sort of an electronic device or other device than it is by physically searching his home or his person. I feel about this exactly as I did this morning about the matter of indictment. I am not trying to protect the saboteur or the subversive or somebody that may be a kidnapper, but the problem is that we have got to make a distinction between the saboteur and other people of that class and somebody that somebody may think is a saboteur or a subversive or a kidnapper and certainly, unless our government officials are prohibited against using the devices which we now have, we don't need to worry about the devices yet to come, the devices we now have, we will have no privacy whatsoever, and in my opinion, unless either by constitution or by legislative enactment we have some sort of prohibition on the thing we are talking about, we have taken the first step toward a police state. Now as to whether it should be in the constitution or whether it should be by legislative enactment is important. If I knew that the legislature were going to enact something of this kind I would certainly leave it out of the constitution. I do not so know it and I believe that it is perfectly proper and that we should have a provision of this kind in the constitution, then there cannot be any question of some government official deciding that he wants to find out what so and so may be doing in his own home. The only question I raised awhile ago on this thing was I am not sure that the language as written goes far enough. It seems from the discussion here that we are talking about something in a person's home. Now, it is my understanding that presently we have electronic devices which doesn't invade a person's home at all physically, but from a considerable distance can find out exactly what is said in a person's home without using the telephone or anything else, present electronic devices. I think we would be derelict in our duty here if we did not prohibit that sort of thing and prohibit use of evidence so gathered in our courts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I am inclined to think that Mr. Davis's argument is sound except it raises in my mind this question: Mr. Hellenthal has also pointed out that the right to be secure in a person's privacy has been protected by the United States Constitution, and that the Supreme Court of the United States under the Fourth Amendment has held that evidence obtained by wire tapping is not admissible in courts. Now, to follow out Mr. Davis's idea that we should guard against any future electronic device, it seems to me that if the Supreme Court of the United States has already ruled that evidence obtained by an electronic device, and I assume that wire tapping is in that category, then we have nothing to fear from the language of the section as it now stands. Another thing that occurs to me, and with respect to electronic devices, and that is that this matter of a radar device which is now used by the Territorial Highway Police to assist in the capture of speeders and reckless drivers. That device was adopted from the State of Washington. I believe the Supreme Court of the State of Washington has held that evidence obtained by the use of that device is valid and admissible in their courts, and yet, if we put a prohibition of that as specific as this amendment seeks to do in our constitution, what about this radar device for capturing speeders? Would such evidence still be admissible? It seems to me that a radar device of that kind is clearly within a definition of an electronic device. I think we would do nothing but hamstring law enforcement if we should adopt such an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: The emphasis on this amendment as drafted is to protect against the invasion of the right of privacy, and it says that that right of privacy shall not be invaded by the use of electronic devices or other mechanical or such devices. If, in the instance that Mr. White gave, he consented to the tapping of his own telephone wire in cooperation with the police and the kidnapper phoned in, that would not be the invasion of anybody's right of privacy because he would be consenting to it. What I am getting at is that the police people and the enforcement authorities could, under this amendment, utilize all of these modern devices as long as they did not infringe or invade a person's right of privacy. I don't think that protecting the right of privacy would prevent the use of radar on a highway. This is flexible enough and has enough interpretation and is based so solely on the invasion of the right of privacy that any use that could be made of any of these devices without invading the right of privacy could still be utilized, and then, as to Mr. Johnson's point, the Supreme Court is making the decision under Federal law and procedure and is telling the Federal enforcement authorities what it cannot do, but the Supreme Court is not prescribing for the states who may wish to allow wire tapping.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: We started out here at the Convention when we started adopting these amendments there was a high distrust of the legislature. We finally seem to have got it down to the point where we are going to begin to trust the future legislatures even if we have not felt we could trust the ones in the past. We are now at the point almost where we started the Convention, of not trusting our administrative and police officials, district attorneys, etc. I can't quite figure it out because it says here in Section 11, "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses", and we have preserved that right, and in being secure in your person and in your house is only insofar as you live up to the law. When you try to insert an amendment such as is being proposed, wire tapping if you want to call it that, then you are preserving the right to be secure in anything that you might choose to do, even in breaking the law. To go a little further, we are trying to provide that the people shall be safe and inviolate from everything. Again, you have taken away their right to be secure if you adopt this amendment by permitting subversives to do anything that they want, and when a criminal does something it is usually against one person, but when a person engaged in subversive activity does something it is against all of us. Again, I feel that the legislature is quite capable, once this particular problem is made known to them, of taking any necessary action to allow such controlled wire tapping, electronic devices, etc., is necessary, and I don't think they are going to put it in a position that they can come into your house and listen to you discuss any matter you might choose to discuss with your wife or family. I say again, it is a legislative matter that, if we put anything of this sort in the constitution, then we have forever eliminated, until the constitution is amended, the right of our enforcement officials to protect us in our right of person, house, property and in our right to be free citizens.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to point out on the fallacy of one statement made by my good friend, Ralph Rivers. In speaking of the case where Mr. White's child might be kidnapped, and Mr. White would allow the police to come in and tap his phone, and then he said there would then be no question of invasion of privacy since they came with the consent of Mr. White, but that is not quite right. The privacy of the kidnapper would be assailed certainly. This amendment, if it is passed, why it will make such a situation perfectly safe for kidnappers. Now this amendment as it reads, to me it reads exactly like any law enacted by the legislature and it might make a pretty good law, but it has no place in the constitution. In the constitution it will stick out like a sore thumb.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to submit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may submit your proposed amendment to the amendment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I am advised that the clock is incorrect and that the hour of 5:40 has arrived, and, subject to committee announcements, I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 9 a.m. tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements before we put this before the Convention? Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Just a request that the amendment as proposed by Mr. Rivers be mimeographed by tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please see to that? The proposed amendment to the amendment, Mr. Metcalf, will be placed before us at that time. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in line with the ruling of the committee chairmen that we have no evening session meetings until Monday, seeing that there is no committee meeting announcement for tonight, I move that we adjourn until 8 o'clock this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any committee announcements? Mr. Coghill, the motion to adjourn was before us. It is only out of the courtesy of Mr. Sundborg that the Chair has been allowed to ask for these committee announcements and ask if there is anything else to come before the Convention. The Chair will have to hold that Mr. Sundborg's request for adjournment until 9 a.m. will have to be voted on first.

SUNDBORG: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg so moves.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. tomorrow? All those in favor of adjourning until 9 a.m. tomorrow will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention stands adjourned until 9 a.m.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 7, 1956

FORTY-SIXTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning the Reverend John Stokes of the University Community Presbyterian Church at College. Reverend Stokes will deliver the daily invocation.

REVEREND STOKES: Let us pray. Almighty Lord, Father of all mankind, we thank You for the new opportunities which You present to us in this new day. To these framers of the constitution of the State of Alaska, grant great faith, high ideals and good health that this document may be a testimony to Thy grace in the affairs of men. In the name of Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: One absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. We will proceed with the regular order of business. Does the Committee to read the journal have a report to make this morning? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I have journals from the 39th day through the 42nd day to report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan has the journals from the 39th day through the 42nd day to report.

DOOGAN: On the journal for the 39th day, in the title of the journal "Thirty-Nine", strike the "e" on page 3. In the first paragraph after the recess insert in the second line after "vice president of" insert the words "student body of the". On page 5 in the first paragraph after recess, in the second line, strike the word "part" and substitute "another group"; strike "the" before "sophomore"; strike "classes" and substitute "students". Journal for the 37th day, page 1, second paragraph, change the "e" to "a" in the name of Chaplain. Journal for the 38th day, page 1, paragraph 2, insert "the Reverend" before "Robert". On page 9, fifth paragraph from the bottom of the page, strike the first "p.m.". Journal for the 40th day, page 1, delete "o'clock" in the first paragraph. Page 3, 6th paragraph, strike "5" and insert "15". Page 6, first paragraph AFTER RECESS insert "to" after "moved". Page 9, second paragraph AFTER RECESS after the word "to", insert the following: "the first sentence in the amended". Page 12, insert "AFTER RECESS" after paragraph 5, calling the recess. Page 19, first roll call, change "27 yeas" to "25 yeas". Second roll call, change "25 yeas" to "27 yeas". For the journal of the 42nd Convention day, page 1, next to the last paragraph, insert a period after "gallery" and strike the rest of the sentence and substitute the following: "The Alaska Road Commission District Engineer from Nome, Mr. Frank Morris and Mrs. Morris were introduced." Page 3, third paragraph from the bottom of the page, strike "himself and announced" and substitute "the earlier announcement of said vote by announcing". Second paragraph from the bottom of the page, third line, insert "portion of that" at the end of line. Last paragraph, strike "voting on"; insert comma after "recess". Page 5, third paragraph from the bottom of page, third line, strike "H."; insert "Ralston" before "A". Page 6, third paragraph from the bottom of page, change "wishes" to "wished". Second paragraph from the bottom of page, second line, strike "of" and substitute "on". Those are all of the corrections and I ask that the journals from the 37th day through the 42nd day be approved as amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was that from the 37th day or the 39th day?

DOOGAN: Beginning on the 37th day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the unanimous consent request from Mr. Doogan that the journals from the 37th day through the 42nd day be approved as amended. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: In looking over the journals I note that there is never any reference to the time that the plenary sessions adjourn, and it seems to me that should be an important part of the record.

CHIEF CLERK: That came up once before and it was the feeling of the Convention that when we were having committee meetings that they did not want to say that they adjourned at 10 or 11 o'clock in the morning, although they were working the rest of the day, but, if that is the feeling of the body, I'll be glad to put it in, but that is the reason why it was left out.

BOSWELL: It would seem that whenever we are in a committee of the whole they should state when we start and when we finish. You can look at this journal and you can't tell where something has had a half hour's or a day's consideration.

CHIEF CLERK: You mean each time there is a recess you want the time?

BOSWELL: No, just when it's something special.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would feel that the journal should show that the Convention adjourned at a certain time until a certain time, from now on.

DOOGAN: I ask unanimous consent for the approval of those journals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan asked unanimous consent that the journals of the 37th through the 42nd days be approved as read and corrected by the special Committee to read the journal, that they be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? If there is no objection it is so ordered and the journals are ordered adopted. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Reports of select committees? Are there any proposals to be introduced at this time? Are there any motions or resolutions? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, in accordance with my motion yesterday, I moved for a reconsideration of my vote upon the question submitted by Mr. Hilscher's proposed amendment in line 24, Section 13, page 4, whereby we deleted the words "two hundred and fifty dollars" and inserted the words, "a sum set by law".

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That motion then puts the question before us and the question is, "Shall this amendment deleting the words "two hundred fifty dollars" be deleted from Section 13, line 4, and the other words inserted in their place?" Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I voted on the affirmative yesterday on this proposed amendment. I don't think I realized the possible detrimental effects of the amendment if put into effect. I reached a conclusion shortly after I cast my vote and I talked to a number of the proponents to the amendment later about it, and I concur with them that this would be tantamount to removing the right to trial by jury, and I think we should have a fixed amount left there. Whether or not it should be $250 or some other sum, I don't know, but that was my thought in mind. I move for reconsideration of the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, if the Chair may, when you said it would be tantamount to removing the right to trial by jury, you meant in suits of common law?

ROBERTSON: That is correct, Mr. President. Of course, the legislature might not ever set any amount or it might set an amount so high that we ordinary people might not ever have an opportunity to have a trial by jury in any suits on which we would be interested in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I think that the body should seriously reconsider this if they voted in the affirmative because this is our bill of rights and we are not protecting the people in the bill of rights at all, we are leaving it up to the legislature. It is a novel innovation. In the Federal Constitution, the reason they put $20 in there was because they wanted to protect the people. If $250 depreciates and does not amount to anything, why certainly the constitution will have to be amended, but we have got to give the people a right to trial by jury. The only way to do it is to write the amount into the constitution. I think it will be embarrassing to the people of Alaska if we send this constitution off and don't protect the people, absolutely, no matter what the sum is. I would rather see $2,500 in there rather than leave it up to the legislature. It doesn't matter to me just so it is some reasonable figure, and I think $250 is a nice round figure to start off with.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Robertson, you have no objection if this is reconsidered to making amendments as long as it is a fixed sum, is that right?

ROBERTSON: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, a fixed sum is just exactly what we should not have. That is not a constitutional matter. The fact that there was a fixed sum in the Federal Constitution, $20 and it had to be amended later, proves that this will likely have to be amended later. We are not here to write a constitution only for the purpose of amending it. We are supposed to write an enduring document. This is really a legislative matter. They can change it any time in the future. If you don't figure that the people elected to the legislature will have good sense then, of course, we should write a lot of detailed laws into this constitution, but we are not here to write legislative matters and detailed figures into the constitution. I certainly would not be proud of the constitution we write if we had to do that all the way through it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, Mr. Barr just made the statement that the figure $20 had to be amended. It has never been amended to this day. It still says $20. As a practical matter the litigants often don't claim a jury trial for such small amounts, but that figure is still in the Federal Constitution. I do not agree that this is a legislative matter, and I agree with Mr. Robertson and Mr. Buckalew that the section does not guarantee anything unless you put some fixed sum in there because if you leave it to the legislature they could make it a sum so large that there could never be any case that could come within the provision. That would in effect abolish the right to jury trial.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to inquire how should I vote if I want to put the figure $250 back in?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Vote "no" on the proposed amendment if you wish to put the figure "$250" back in. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, the very fact that Miss Awes has corrected Mr. Barr's statement that the $20 has never been changed should be in favor of the original amendment because it is extremely hard to even change figures in statutes and laws. It is very seldom that they are changed. Legislatures are reluctant to change them, these figures, let alone figures set in the constitution. They are likely to float with us forever and I think that in such a matter we can trust not only the judiciary to give fair justice in small claims but also we can trust the legislature. I don't think that the legislature will ever set a precedent where they will make it impossible for the people to get justice. I don't think any legislature that would dare set an exorbitantly high limit would have a chance of lasting very long, and it would be supplanted by one that would certainly more leave it up to the people's expectations. In this respect I think it is a matter of legislation and of our trust into our future legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, the fact that a dollar figure is set, as I see this, is of no significance whatever as long as the dollar figure set is not out of sight. Miss Awes and others have brought out that $20 is perhaps an absurd figure today in terms of dollar value, but I don't believe that the depreciation of the dollar has any bearing on the principle involved here. Under this construction a figure must be used. As I see it, it is the principle of preserving and guaranteeing the jury system in a civil case which is at stake and under this construction it is almost essential to set a figure.

R. RIVERS: I am going to support Mr. Robertson's position with the idea of attempting later to amend it to $300 because our present small claims court setup is based on a $300 figure. That would be very good, I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, a great deal has been said about trust in the legislature. If we had trust in the legislature then why would we need a bill of rights? The bill of rights is to guarantee rights, not to leave them to future legislation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 13, line 24, strike 'two hundred fifty dollars' and insert 'a sum set by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: When we are voting we are voting on that proposed amendment. If you vote "yes" you are voting to delete the sum of $250 and insert the wording as offered by Mr. Kilcher. If you vote "no" you are voting, in effect, to leaving the wording "two hundred fifty dollars" in the section.

ROBERTSON: Roll call, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 3 - Barr, Kilcher, Lee.

Nays: 50 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Cooper, Emberg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 3 yeas, 50 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Now, Mr. President, I move that we change "the figure "two hundred fifty dollars" to "three hundred dollars".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves that "two hundred and fifty dollars" be changed to "three hundred dollars".

MARSTON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers moves and Mr. Marston seconds the motion that the figure "two hundred and fifty dollars" be deleted and the words "three hundred dollars" be inserted in lieu thereof.

BUCKALEW: I ask unanimous consent.

TAYLOR: I object to unanimous consent.

R. RIVERS: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Robertson.

BUCKALEW: Question.

ROBERTSON: I think the question is because at the present time we have a limitation in the magistrate's court and it sort of makes it consistent with that amount.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to address a question to Mr. Rivers. The figure $300, I think, was enacted by the last legislature, and the next legislature may easily raise that figure to $500. Would it be feasible to leave in $250 or $300, if adopted, to put in after dollars a phrase such as "or such other reasonable sum as may be established by law"? I would like to ask you the question if the term "reasonable" is in there, would that give the people protection or do you think it should be limited to one particular figure?

R. RIVERS: I think it should be limited to a particular figure. Otherwise, you are throwing it open again contrary to the intention to what the body just expressed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I am surprised at my legal colleagues here on the floor, rather the delegates from the bar, that they should on one hand reject a sum set by the legislature and on the other hand tie a sum in the constitution to something that certainly is very temporary. I think it is a loss of time. We just might as well leave it at $250.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I cannot see where there is any practical use of tying this bill in with what a city magistrate's court could do for the reason that the magistrate's court only has jurisdiction within the city limits and anybody living outside of the city does not have access to the magistrate's court for a collection of small claims, so there is only a small percentage of the people in Alaska that do have recourse through the magistrate's court, and that is only up to an amount of $300. Now that would not be too bad because in most of the cities where they have magistrates' courts, here and in Anchorage, and I believe in Juneau and Ketchikan, there is a person of legal training as magistrate. Possibly you would get a better deal, but because most of your United States Commissioners in Alaska are laymen and out in the sticks you are giving them the right to decide controversies up to $300. I don't think it should even be $200, but I am going along with this. But when you put it up to $300, I can't do it. I can't see where the untrained laymen in most of these outlying precincts should be given exclusive jurisdiction of a case involving $250 because it just doesn't make sense. I would not mind giving the commissioners the $300, but they are mostly lawyers. I am certainly against raising it to $300. I think the way it was was ample. I thought that possibly was too much, but I was not making any objection. So there is absolutely no relation between what is in this constitution and what some city does about the jurisdiction granted to a city magistrate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Mr. President, may I ask the Chairman of the Committee a question? Miss Awes, may I ask how did your Committee arrive at the figure of $250?

AWES: There is no scientific way that we knew of to arrive at any certain figure so this is more or less arbitrary but we just picked a figure that we thought was reasonable under the present day circumstances and conditions in Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: That was what I was going to say. We might have used a ouija board to determine $250 or $300. I agree in this occasion with Mr. Taylor's logic. There is no relationship with what the city magistrate's limitation is, but another thing I would like to say, Mr. Taylor, you will find these judges out in the boondocks and the untrained judges in the lower courts, that is, untrained in the law, I have observed one thing in my limited experience and that is, they follow what is known as substantial justice. They seem to pick the right side most of the time and I've observed in the district court I have been clobbered by technicalities.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I might say Mr. Buckalew bases his statement upon his knowledge gained or his acquaintance with outside judges. He has had very slight dealings with them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is a matter of opinion, Mr. Taylor. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Buckalew, Cross, H. Fischer, Hinckel, Laws, McLaughlin, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, White.

Nays: 36 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nordale, Reader, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Cooper, Emberg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 36 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. We have now before us the proposed amendment that relates to wire tapping, is it not? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, did we find the order of business, the call of the order of business?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We had asked for motions and resolutions, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder if we could revert to the announcements of Committee meetings?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

SUNDBORG: Committee No. III, Style and Drafting, will meet at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at Room 1013 of the Polaris Building.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to bring to your attention -- was it 10:30 or 10:00?

SUNDBORG: 10:30 a.m.

COGHILL: The Committee on Administration will meet immediately upon recess at 10:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you mean the 15-minute recess or the recess during the noon hour?

COGHILL: During the regular 15-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? If not, we will proceed with the regular order of business. Is there any other unfinished business except the matter of the amendment that is pending to this bill of rights section of the proposal? If not, would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment we have before us?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 11, page 4, line 12, at the end of line 12 add the following: 'The right of privacy of the individual shall not be invaded by use of any electronic, or other scientific transmitting, listening or sound recording device for the purpose of gathering incriminating evidence. Evidence so obtained shall not be admissible in judicial proceedings or legislative hearings.'"

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I have an amendment to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This proposed amendment has been moved and seconded that it be adopted, is that right?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

R. RIVERS: I would like to point out that the mimeographed copy of this proposed amendment is on everyone's desk.

TAYLOR: Could we have just a moment? I would like to confer with Mr. Rivers in regard to the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a minute or two.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the proposed amendment. Is there discussion? We have the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I have an amendment. I would like to read it. I just changed a few words in it so it would read if this amendment is adopted, "The right of privacy of the individual shall not be invaded by use of any electronic or other scientific transmitting, listening, or sound recording device for the purpose of gathering incriminating evidence. Information so obtained shall not be admissible as evidence in judicial proceedings and legislative or other investigative hearings."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Taylor? Do you move the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment?

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk then read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'admissible' insert the words 'as evidence'; strike the second word 'evidence' and insert the word information'; strike the word 'or' in the last sentence and insert the word 'and' and insert the words 'or other investigative' after the word 'legislative'."

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as amended by the amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "The right of privacy of the individual shall not be invaded by use of any electronic or other scientific transmitting, listening or sound recording device for the purpose of gathering incriminating evidence. Information so obtained shall not be admissible as evidence in judicial proceedings and legislative or other investigative hearings."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to Mr. Taylor's proposed amendment to the amendment?

V. RIVERS: I will second it and ask unanimous consent.

JOHNSON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. The question is open for discussion. Is there discussion of the proposed amendment to the amendment? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I think it is a little bit incomplete. There is nothing covered here except listening and sound recording devices and apparently there would be nothing in the amendment to prevent the taking of photographs or other visual things that could be used just as damagingly as sound transmitting. Also, I am a little puzzled by that expression "incriminating evidence" since it leaves the assumption that it could be done as a matter of course if it was not going to be used for evidence. I value my privacy too much to want it imposed upon even by somebody who might have an aborted case of curiosity.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I don't think that this protects the rights of the people especially. It protects the rights of the lawyer who is protecting a defendant all right, but for instance it does not say that we can't have somebody's wires tapped for the purpose of blackmail. It is only that we can't tap their wires to gain incriminating evidence. Of course I am against the whole thing any way. It is just a legislative matter. I want to remind you that we all came here with the idea of writing a simple constitution covering only general things, and instead of that we are putting in red tape and details. This has no place in the constitution. If we are going to continue to do this, it would be a much simpler matter to adopt the whole constitution of the State of California. We would not have a good constitution, but I can assure you everything would be covered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Point of order. We are on the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are on the amendment to the amendment, but it relates to the amendment itself.

GRAY: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 19 - Armstrong, Awes, Davis, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, McCutcheon, McNealy, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor.

Nays: 34 - Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Cooper, Emberg.)

V. FISCHER: I would like to change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer asks that his vote be changed from "no" to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 19 yeas, 34 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit it. Would the messenger please bring forth the amendment to the amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson.

CHIEF CLERK: "Amendment to the amendment of Section 11: At the end of the amendment, delete the period and insert a comma and add the words, 'except when obtained upon warrant issued upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the objectives thereof.'"

ROBERTSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment.

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The matter is open for discussion. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I am in favor of the amendment as proposed by the four delegates. I believe in the protection of the privacy of the individual citizen, but I also don't want to spoil criminal investigative or law enforcement officers from having no way of obtaining evidence from criminals and others if probable cause is shown. There seems to me there is no reason why this invasion of privacy should not have the same kinds of exceptions as searches and seizures. I believe it could be done by requiring in each instance probable cause to be shown as to why they should be permitted to invade the privacy of some particular person that they are trying to gain evidence against. That is the theory of my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I find myself in agreement in theory with the amendment to the amendment because I am sure that it would ruin the purpose of the amendment. Certainly upon hearing whether it is just cause to tap somebody's wire or not, he would make sure not to use them. Since I am against the amendment in the first place, I shall vote for the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe this is one of the most flagrant ways of depriving the citizens of privacy I have seen brought forth here today. Mr. Robertson's amendment states that it must be on oath or affirmation, the same as a search warrant. Now the law respecting search warrants says that you must describe what is expected to be found and that it is either stolen property or is contraband property. Now, how can any law enforcement officer say that in my home something is going to be said, maybe today or tomorrow, that they would like to pick up that conversation and they would have the right issued by a commissioner who issues search warrants and who in most instances are laymen to have a law officer go and tap my telephone wire or attach a microphone or other listening device to my house to find out and set on that thing and catch all the conversation that has gone on for several days. How is any law enforcement officer going to say that incriminating evidence is going to come over a wire? Now in a search warrant you must swear that that is there and give the sources of your opinion and you can't even make that affidavit on information and belief. You can't make the affidavit that somebody said it was there, because then you will have to get the affidavit of the person who said it because the law is very particular that a search warrant that cannot be based upon information and belief. Even if somebody told the commissioner that they understood that John Jones and Pete Smith are going to have a conversation tomorrow over a certain telephone, but you still can't say what is going to be said. This is the worst invasion of the rights of the citizen that I have seen yet. First, who is going to say whose home shall be tapped? How are you going to get around that? Who is going to have this power possessed by what most of us believe is by the Almighty, that is going to say that certain incriminating evidence is going to come over a wire and that it can be caught by electronic device tomorrow or next week or next month. That is going too far. I think we should vote it down.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Robertson a question. My understanding is that at this time the certain agencies of the federal government do resort to wire tapping, but only for the collection of information which can lead them to obtain evidence. If this were adopted, anybody could go to the courts and obtain a permit to tap and then whatever they actually heard on the wire would be admissible as evidence in court. In other words, this would go a lot further than even what is being done today in terms of wire tapping, would it not?

ROBERTSON: I don't think so. They must particularly describe the objectives of why they want to use these devices, and I think you could rely on the courts to see that the objectives are valid. For instance, they might want to obtain evidence against some gangster going into a house or a building and they would have to state it. I think we could rely upon the courts the same as upon the issuance of a warrant to search and seize objects in the house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by -- Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, with this amendment, if it were adopted, it would be right in line with Section 11 which guarantees the privacy of persons and their homes and property. Now when we speak of persons and we guarantee their privacy, it means of course law-abiding citizens. Where there is reasonable doubt of that, where there is reason to believe that the law has been violated, of course, a warrant may be obtained to search their homes. And in case a warrant is obtained, it says it should be issued upon probable cause, but of course in a like case, a warrant could be issued upon probable cause to listen on the phone. It must be supported by oath or affirmation, which could likewise be done in this case and should particularly describe the place to be searched, in this case it would be the same and the persons or things to be seized. Now, Mr. Taylor says you cannot expect to tell what will be heard. That is true, but such a warrant would only be issued after there was probable cause and other evidence that would tend to prove that the person was a criminal or was breaking the law. The purpose of tapping the wire would be to obtain further evidence. You would not obtain a warrant to obtain the first evidence. There would not be probable cause. With this amendment the rights of a person to his privacy is still guaranteed. It is only upon some evidence that he is breaking the law that a warrant would be issued.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I am a little confused as to how to vote on this amendment. I think I am in sympathy with the cause because I am against the main amendment. But I think some difficulty ensues here by inserting this amendment to the amendment at the end of the second sentence where it refers only to whether or not the evidence obtained shall be admissible, which seems to me is pointless when you prevent the invasion of the right of privacy in the first sentence. I don't know what to suggest, but it seems to me it would be better to vote on the main motion first. If it should pass, then amend it. You could say, for instance, "strike the last sentence and insert after the first word 'subject to such exceptions and procedures as could be established by the legislature'." That would be my suggestion, but I am afraid the amendment as offered is a little confusing coming at the end of the second sentence.

BUCKALEW: I wonder if Mr. Robertson would agree to withdraw his amendment so we could vote on the main amendment and that would close the issue.

ROBERTSON: To answer Mr. Buckalew, I feel I must support the main amendment because I believe in the right of privacy, but I would still, as I stated at the outset, I would still like to have some provision in there so law enforcement officers won't be handicapped in gathering evidence against criminals. That was the purpose of my amendment. It seems to me that it is very clear and not at all confusing. I believe it follows in the proper sequence in the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?"

STEWART: May we have it read, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "At the end of the amendment delete the period and insert a comma and add 'except when obtained upon warrant issued upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the objectives thereof.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

35 Yeas: - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, White.

18 Nays: - Armstrong, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, King. Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNees, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, V. Rivers, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

2 Absent: - Cooper, Emberg.)

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher asks that his vote be changed to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 35 yeas, 18 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I move the previous question.

LAWS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying no. The "noes" have it and the previous question has not been ordered. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I voted for the amendment because I guess it improves it. I am still a little confused about it applying to the last sentence and not the first. I still think we would be better off without the amendment in its entirety. As it stands, it probably expresses the intent of most of the members of the body, and in that it appears to me that it is desirable to leave the door open to the use of such devices under certain circumstances and subject to tight control. You can, for example, require the local district attorney to apply to the attorney general of the state. You can go beyond that and say the attorney general must get the approval of the chief justice of the supreme court. I would not object to seeing any kind of restrictions apply to wire tapping or the use of any other electronic devices, but I think the constitution is not the place to do it. I would agree with the point pursued by Mrs. Hermann a little earlier that this does not go far enough if you want to start mentioning these things in the constitution. You should prohibit the invasion of privacy by the use of tear gas and we should also outlaw war and do quite a few other things. I think a more sensible approach is the one taken that will provide our law enforcement officers with side arms and we don't say, "You can't use them." We say only, "Shoot the right people". This is merely another weapon in the battle against crime. Another thing I think that has confused the issue is that we have not separated the question of the use of such devices and the admission in court of evidence obtained thereby. It is separated on the federal level where every attorney general since 1931 with the approval of the administration has authorized the use of wire tapping subject to tight control, but the admission of evidence obtained thereby is not permitted in court. That, it seems to me, is the sensible approach. I still feel that we should vote down the amendment.

McNEALY: I have an amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy has a proposed amendment to the amendment as amended. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 6 of the amended amendment, delete the word 'incriminating' and insert the words 'information or'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: "Delete the word 'incriminating' and insert the words 'information or'."

McNEALY: I move the adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: The only reason for that is that, and the reason my name appears on the amendment, I am interested in the rights of the individual and the privacy of the individual and the basis of my thought is that it is not so much the preventing, the individual is not going to have to worry particularly about incriminating evidence against him. The thing I am concerned on is picking up private information as to a man's business affairs to be used by competitors or information in a person's home, it might open the avenues to blackmail by improper parties getting evidence in this matter.

BUCKALEW: I wanted to speak on a subject for just a few minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. McNealy before us.

BUCKALEW: Not on that, no sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, this amendment to the amendment does make the meaning much broader instead of making this amendment merely a protection to defense attorneys it does now protect the privacy of most individuals, all individuals, not only those accused of breaking the law. However, I still say that this is a legislative matter for the very simple reason that there are so many angles connected with it that it should be a law taking up two or three pages. For instance, if this amendment to the amendment, including the words "information or" is now adopted, what are we going to do about all these good women who listen in on party lines? They are using an electronic device. There are a lot of things to consider. I think it should be left to the legislature and they will work it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended as offered by Mr. McNealy be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "In the mimeographed amendment delete the word 'incriminating' on line 4 and insert the words 'information or'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. McNealy be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended is ordered adopted. Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: On the original amendment before Mr. Coghill moves the previous question, I would like to speak just briefly. I am strongly in favor of the amendment as it is and I first want to call attention to the fact that the legislature has been the whipping boy of the Convention. It is fortunate that we have the legislature so that in all phases of this session we have had something from time to time to refer to. Now, the direct attacks upon the legislature, have fortunately ceased, now the device is being used that if you are opposed to anything going in the constitution, the argument is that you leave it up to the legislature. If you are for something going into the constitution, why you say, "Let's not leave that up to the legislature, let's spell it out." So the argument on the legislative matters and the legislature here has been purely down to a point now whether or not you are for or against the amendment. I have talked with the local United States Attorney on this subject. He naturally is opposed to, would prefer that nothing of this kind come in, but his greatest fear as he expressed to me, and possibly to others, would be to write something in that would prevent the use of lie detectors or taking fingerprints or the use of binoculars. This is what I considered a watered down amendment here which is now before us, and it does not take away the right of the federal officers to use the lie detectors, binoculars, and that type of thing, to secure information for convictions, and so to a large extent it eliminates what at least the local law enforcement officers feel would be in their road in attempting to secure convictions and evidence for convictions. Now there has been a great deal brought up here on the floor about subversives and kidnapping and treason and saying how terrible it would be if my child is kidnapped here and they could not use this wire tapping or things of that nature and how terrible it would be if we could not catch subversives, how terrible it would be if we could not use this evidence for a matter of treason. Now, fellow delegates, those are not state affairs, those are affairs of the federal government. No state in the Union is out looking for subversives. Kidnapping is a federal offense. Treason is certainly a federal offense. Our treason article which we have written into the bill of rights means exactly nothing. It is a gesture holding to tradition, because the only actual treason that could be committed would be a treason against the federal government. If we became a state and there was treason against the state, it would be treason against the government of the United States per se, so the reason I mention those three things, subversive, kidnapping and treason, is because the use of evidence obtained by these methods, regardless of whether we have it in here or not, is by the federal law, by the supreme court. They can't use it as evidence anyhow, even if we were a state. The only purpose of this is that a great number of states have begun to use and to allow wire tapping there by legislation, where again the legislature has passed laws in several states allowing wire tapping and has cut down upon the rights of the individuals. Another thing is that from the little experience I have had in serving the government as well as in a private capacity, and I do wish to state that I am not a criminal attorney; in fact, I have discontinued, and quite some time ago, the handling of any criminal cases whatsoever. So I am not interested in it from that point, but I know a great number of the delegates realize, possibly everyone does not, but I want to comment on a few of the devices which we have already, and heaven alone knows what the future is going to bring forth. I am going to agree with Mr. Rivers, it is certainly not beyond the realm of possibility that in the near future they may even be able to transcribe our thoughts by electronic devices, but now, there are devices which can be stuck to your door of say, your hotel room, or on the door leading into your house and put on the outside of your door, and the person can stand outside and through this little electronic device stuck on the door with a suction cup, you can hear everything that is said, even in the farthest corners of the room. There are little devices where they can enter your house and behind a baseboard or something plug in a little article into a wall plug that is so small that it is scarcely noticeable, especially if there is any way to camouflage it at all. A person two blocks away can hear everything that goes on and is said in that particular room. There are devices that are carried on the person. They can be lowered by a wire down near the outside of a window and pick up from inside of the house and heard two blocks away. The devices carried upon the person are such, I think we are certainly all acquainted with, and a person can walk into your home and carry on a conversation and another party standing outside within two or three blocks can listen to everything in that conversation. There are numerous others. I am not going to take up your time on these devices, but since we have those, I think the person has the right of privacy in the home. I think they also have the right of privacy in their place of business or office. Now I am concerned largely here that if this sort of thing is allowed, and I do not agree that it is a legislative matter, I think that more and more of the constitutions of the states will begin to adopt this protection for its citizens, as the State of New York has done in its constitution, and we have shown here that we are not adverse to taking minority views or the views of minority states and writing it into our constitution. I think it would be a protection for the people of the future state of Alaska to have at least in their individual rights, and it properly belongs in the bill of rights. I can see where if this is allowed that business competitors could use it. It would be useful in politics and even more so in the matter of the home. On this, I think this is the first time possibly that I have referred to any experts, but the Committee did have the assistance and the recommendation and the advice of Mr. Elliott who was here with the Judicial Committee in working up this, and I believe that we should seriously consider writing this into the constitution, and I hope that a substantial number of delegates will vote for one more right to the individual. We are not here to write a constitution to deprive the individual of their rights but to give them more rights than the Federal Constitution gives if possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would invite all of the delegates to take a quick glance at the proposed bill of rights, and you will see in the bill of rights that it covers such things as freedom of speech, searches and seizures, freedom from imprisonment for debt, etc. Now, I think that we are chasing the imaginary bogymen that does not exist. I don't think we have ever had any problem in Alaska with wire tapping or invasion of the right of privacy of the average Alaskan with these devices that we are talking about. I was in the United States Attorney's Office for awhile. I was an assistant United States Attorney, and I had access to all the files that were in the office and had been there for years, but I don't recall coming across any criminal case where the government had used wire tapping or any technological devices to invade the privacy of the home. The problem does not exist. In the bill of rights you protect rights that have been abused; historically that is the way it came up. We got abuses from England and they came into the Federal Constitution because they were abuses that George III had used against us. There is no problem of wire tapping in Alaska today, and if the problem ever came up, I am sure that the Alaska legislature would act promptly. They have the authority to, and they would stamp it out at once. The people would rise up and demand it and we would have a law that could be studied and that could cover any particular situation that might arise in the future. One of the things that really frightens me about this amendment is, as it exists in its present form, I think it gives the police too much power because it is an unheard of innovation. For that reason I am going to vote against it. For the other reason I am going to vote against it is because we don't have any problem with wire tapping. The people of Alaska have not demanded of this body that we put such an amendment in the constitution. The main reason, the most frightening thing about this amendment is that the lawyers that have signed this amendment don't know the legal effect of it. They can't tell you how it is going to hamper police officers. All I know is that it is awfully broad. I am afraid that some day this very amendment is going to be used to stab the life blood out of the new State of Alaska.

MARSTON: In the light of the changing world, the rapidly changing world, the atomic power, I think is going to make this world in ten years so we won't recognize it in more than one way. I would like to believe, I am inclined to believe in flying saucers. I believe that there are other worlds trying to communicate with us. If a citizen may speak now, I am going to have faith in the legislature of the future State of Alaska, though we have not had a lot of faith in the Territorial Legislature as indicated here, but I believe that the State of Alaska will have a legislature that will run this government. I believe it will be a different legislature, and I have faith in that legislature, and I am going to go along with Delegate Barr, and I am going to, as I said before, continue to practically vote all the amendments to these committees down and keep a framework here and not a great big bunch of legislation. I am going to leave it to the future State of Alaska to settle this question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: As one of the makers of the amendment, I want to present my statements at this time. I have noticed that the amendments that have been submitted so far, I believe, have been submitted in all sincerity in order to improve the proposal. I think that is true of the amendment submitted by Mr. Robertson. I have noticed though that in some legislative bodies there are two types of legislators. This I consider to be included in the class of a legislative body. We are making supreme law for the State of Alaska. One class of legislator is a relatively farseeing man who tries to amend and act in such a way that it will be better even if he is going to vote against it. I have seen sincere and honest men try to amend an act to improve it. I have seen men trying to amend an act out of its real substance in order to make it unappealing to others so if it does pass it is not workable. I have always approached that in the only honest way which is to act and vote upon an amendment on its true merits, not to try to make it unworkable not to try to make it so if it passes it will be a discredit to the body but a credit to the body. Now I feel that the Robertson amendment was a well-adopted amendment and could possibly, by proper legal interpretation, be made to work. He is an attorney trained in such things, he favors this motion and I have heard others stand on the floor here and say that they feared for the police power. I think their tendency in that kind of thinking is in the terms of a police state. It seems to me that we in this bill of rights are trying to protect the right of the individual. Out of the thousands of individuals of which there may be one criminal we are willing to sacrifice the rights of 999 to possibly assist the police or the police-type of state in apprehending the one man out of that thousand. I think that our approach to this constitution, this bill of rights, should be the protection of the individual and the reservation of the power of the state from its perhaps overzealous officials who might try to, in all sincerity, might abuse the rights of the individual and try to achieve their objectives. I have also heard others with the military point of view of thinking in terms of a military state. There is often a chance that the military state with its extreme powers can and would abuse the rights of the individual. I think that the military power of the state and the use of wire tapping devices, electronic devices, the power of the national government protecting itself against the subversives, is well-covered in our congressional acts and in our supreme court interpretations. It is my thought here and my hope in presenting this amendment that we would protect the rights of the individuals against undue invasion by scientific devices. I for one feel that the amendment in its present form is a workable amendment with proper legal interpretations at the time the matters come up. It only seems right and just to me that we should be farseeing enough to sit here and try to protect the rights of citizens from these devices which might be used to abuse them for the seeking of this one criminal out of perhaps 10,000 people. I just want to say again that a person whom I feel tries to amend an act out of shape so that it is unworkable and unacceptable to the majority of the body of the people is not honest in his approach to the problem. I have heard it brought on the floor twice this morning and that is why I bring that point up. The right of the individual here is something we are trying to protect. I have gone through this bill of rights and I see that we have adopted a number of the standard clauses from a number of constitutions. I also see that some of the things that are of high importance to us, certain types of the approach to investigations, certain inalienable rights that we should enjoy, which have been violated many times in the last 25 or 30 years in the name of protection of the state, have not been included. I have another amendment which I am going to offer which I will not discuss now but it seems to me we should have the vision to look forward and see what we must anticipate in protecting the rights of all of our people rather than to try to protect and build up a strong police or military state which would be supreme and above the rights of those people. For that reason and in all sincerity, I was one of the makers of this amendment, and it seems to me we have here a chance to protect the right of privacy of the individual from undue invasion by scientific devices, and I for one am in favor of it.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess for 15 minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The Administration Committee will meet here for about one minute.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

WHITE: Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may Mr. White.

(Mr. White spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk will please read the communication on the desk.

(The Chief Clerk read a telegram from Mr. Henning N. Johnson and William Paver of Homer, stating they believed the people on the Kenai Peninsula would not ratify the constitution unless the initiative and referendum are included and recommending an automatic constitutional convention every 25 years.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Communication will be filed. We have another communication here. Mr. Armstrong had been asking about it, and the Chair had forgotten just what had occurred relative to that communication. Mr. Sundborg had received such a communication and had brought it before the attention of the delegates. If there is no objection, this particular communication from the Commissioner of Education will be turned over to Miss Awes, the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Dafoe, Commissioner of Education, will be in town. on the tenth of the month, next Tuesday, and I would like to bring it to the attention of the delegates if at that time they would like to invite him to speak before the Convention. We have had different dignitaries of the Territory address the Convention, and I think that with the substance of the matter of education pertaining to the children, that it would be very advantageous for the delegates to invite Mr. Dafoe to address the Convention.

KING: Mr. Chairman, I would like to inquire, is the Commissioner of Education a lobbyist also?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, you might take that up with your Committee and the President at a later time before the question of having Mr. Dafoe.

KILCHER: Just a suggestion to the Chairman of the Administration Committee, if it would not be possible to grant Mr. Dafoe some time during the lunch hour, not to take too much of the Convention time, but yet to give him an opportunity to speak?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Something might be arranged. Are there other communications?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If not, we are back to the particular amendment before us that relates to the wire tapping. Mr. Harris.

McCUTCHEON: Question.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I would like to bring up a couple of points here. I wonder if we realize just exactly what we have done with this particular amendment. As it now stands, we have outlawed telephones in anyone's home because we do use them for information. They are an electronic device. We have outlawed the electronic flash on my camera because I gather information quite frequently with it. We have outlawed quite a few other items. The point I am getting at is that we are trying to legislate and I do mean legislate an article here that you can't legislate in three or four paragraphs. It takes more time than we have to give it here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I have not spoken on this subject and I have little to say beyond the fact I have been back and forth all morning as to where I might stand on the particular proposition before us from time to time as its complexion has changed. I should like to say that in the event of a defeat of the amendment now before us, I am confident that other language will be suggested to be included in the existing Section 11, which I think as far as now known, would perhaps avoid some of the objections to the present amendment, which might be more enduring in time and states the general principle with somewhat greater dignity, perhaps, than does the existing amendment, in my judgment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: "Shall the proposed amendment as amended and as offered by Mr. McNealy and other delegates, be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to see a roll call vote and request the same.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 12 - Armstrong, Davis, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Laws, McNealy, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith.

Nays: 41 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Cooper, Emberg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 41 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 11? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask that we stand at recess for five minutes, I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess while a proposed amendment is discussed.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, while we are waiting for the members to return, I would like to revert to the reading of the journal for a minute.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

DOOGAN: On the journal for the 40th Convention day, there was a correction that was not read so the Chief Clerk can correct the journal, it will have to be stated on the floor. On page 13, the journal for the 40th Convention day, in the second paragraph after the recess, bottom of the page, insert as another statement or paragraph, "On voice vote the amended amendment was adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure?

DOOGAN: I move again that the journal be approved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan asks unanimous consent that the suggested correction of the special Committee to read the journal be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the correction is ordered adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, a number of us met during the recess and I think have met on a substantial agreement among ourselves as to the proposed additional language for Section 11. I should prefer to have that mimeographed, however, before confronting the body with it and ask that further action on Section 11 be deferred until that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the proposed amendment will be ordered mimeographed and the Convention will proceed to the other sections until that is done. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I revert and ask a question regarding Section 3?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer, you may do so and ask your question.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee about the meaning of the language. The section now reads, "No person is to be denied the enjoyment of any civil or political right because of race, color, creed or national origin." There might be a possible question about whether the denial is an interpretation in a very positive sense that you can only not deny. Would that cover an infringement of civil rights in this case?

AWES: It is my opinion that the word "deny" means to deny in any and all degrees and I think that the word "deny" includes the word "infringe" and goes beyond it.

V. FISCHER: Thank you.

BUCKALEW: Could I ask Delegate Awes a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection you may rise and ask the question.

BUCKALEW: I was on the Committee, but the thought just occurred to me, after the first sentence we inserted this language, "The legislature shall provide appropriate legislation." Now, Miss Awes, do you think that would possibly restrict the legislature from introducing legislation which would eliminate discrimination by individuals instead of the state? Do you think the legislature should get the idea that they should only protect against discrimination as far as the state is concerned and as opposed to protection against individual rights?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: The purpose of the Committee in including that sentence was to direct the legislature and show the legislature that they should provide legislation of an anti-discrimination nature. The reason for that was that we found it was almost impossible to adequately write into the bill of rights all circumstances under which these rights should be guaranteed. We thought it was not only impossible but also undesirable, and yet we wanted to indicate that we believe that such legislation should be enacted. I don't believe that the legislature would consider this as a restrictive provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to the article on the declaration of rights other than that that we are waiting on? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the messenger please bring the proposed amendment to the Secretary's desk? Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 2, line 23, add to the section the following sentence: 'The right of a person to due process of law shall not be infringed by use of the Legislature's investigative power.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I move for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

McCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The matter is open for discussion, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I would just like for the purpose of information, ask Mr. Rivers to explain the reason for the amendment.

V. RIVERS: I would be glad to do that. I was intending to do that, Mr. President. It has been my observation that in the later years there has been a great deal of congressional and legislative investigation throughout the states and some in Alaska in which the right of the individual has been infringed, in that he is publicly brought into a body by accusation of certain things, is indicted, and then by sensationalism in the press is condemned, without any fair previous hearing or consideration as to whether he should be subject to that type of thing or not. It has been particularly noticeable that the investigative power of congressional groups and committees has been extremely abused in the last ten years. It seems to me that I would not want to limit the investigative power of the legislature but would I like to see them do it in an orderly manner. In such a way that individuals are not castigated and character is not assassinated without properly knowing that the individual has some grounds upon which to approach the individual as to his presumed guilt. It seems to me that there is a drastic field for abuse unless it is curbed in some manner by proper legislative procedure established by law, that there can be an abuse again by the right of the individual subject to the legislative investigative power. Does that answer your question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I would like to ask Mr. Rivers a question. "Don't you think, Mr. Rivers, that under the section as it now stands that those guarantees could still be secured? You referred to legislative processes and guaranteeing the rights of people before legislative investigations, and I am wondering if under this provision as it now stands whether that same right is not already given or protected?

V. RIVERS: All I can answer that is by saying is this, that under similar provisions in other constitutions the right of the individual to due process in legislative investigations has not been protected and many of the areas in which investigations have been held have been held under similar clauses and it has not applied.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I am sorry I did not get the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment. Read it slowly.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 2, line 23, add to the section the following sentence: 'The right of a person to due process of law shall not be infringed by use of the Legislature's investigative power.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Barr.

BARR: I certainly see eye to eye with Mr. Rivers on this. It is true that our rights are protected in the Federal Constitution and other state constitutions in a general way, but I must point out that the trend in recent years has been to give more power to the state on investigations and they seem to abuse that power in certain cases. I believe in spite of any other guarantees in the constitution that we should mention that, only I would go a little further than Mr. Rivers. He said that the people should be protected from the legislative investigative power. I should say from the "investigative power of the state" because we do have certain departments that investigate persons of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I don't want to take up too much time, but I did want to say that I thought the words "legislative investigative power", the investigative power in any event would have to be delegated by the legislature to either a committee or agencies or departments of government and that it would all be inclusive under the term "legislative power". That was my thought in the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, speaking as a lawyer, I don't think that clause means anything. I don't think it is going to reach Mr. Rivers' point, what he is trying to do. Apparently he is trying to require the legislature to set up certain rules of evidence, certain procedures by which a witness could be entitled to counsel, but "due process" does not mean that. I would like to hear from Mr. McLaughlin. That is my opinion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: I have no ideas. I am frankly puzzled by the amendment. I think this was taken obviously from the 14th Amendment of the Constitution. I believe the wording is exactly the 14th Amendment. We have a mess of cases, probably more cases decided under the due process clause than under any other clause of the constitution, except possibly the interstate commerce clause, and I am puzzled, frankly, Mr. Rivers, by the amendment.

V. RIVERS: It seems to me that on the basis of past and present you might not have a case that applies in this particular instance. Do you not believe that suitable laws could be established by the legislature to protect the right of the individual in appearing before investigative committees or investigative departments of the legislature or departments to which their power had been delegated so that they were not castigated publicly before they were indicted or before they were convicted. Do you think that is beyond the realm or the power of or scope of our law to do such a thing?

McLAUGHLIN: I do not think it beyond the scope of our law, but my recollection is that there are certain members of this Convention who were obviously desirous of securing an opinion from the Attorney General, in substance, to determine whether or not they could libel in this legislative power. I don't know how we could curb the power of the hearings from blasting any individual or any group of individuals right on the floor of the house. He would be subject to the castigation apparently we are attempting to avoid. I think the intent is good, but I think you could not possibly curb your legislature to such an extent that they could not say anything nasty about anyone until they were present with counsel. That is why I am puzzled.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I can see the problem. Depriving a person of life, liberty or property points squarely to the judiciary process. A man cannot be required to testify against himself where he is charged with a crime and they cannot take his property, say like under an eminent domain proceedings without due process of law. There is a real problem. The McCarthy hearings brought out the great issue that existed here a couple of years ago. McCarthy was making charges against people under the exercise of the powers of a congressional legislative committee. The people, individuals were sorely abused under the guise of the exercise of the power of the legislature to investigate. The only subject that a legislature is supposed to investigate upon is something that will bear upon the state code or prospective legislation that might be under consideration. But under the guise of looking into legislative matters they call hearings and then maybe subject people to very bad treatment and ruin their reputations and assassinate them from a character standpoint, and unless some thought is flagged, even though not too much could be done with this thought, the thought would be there that our constitution is warning the legislature under the guise of its power to investigate; that it shall observe some type of due process and respect for the individual. Now that is the problem. Whether Mr. Rivers' particular brief amendment would clearly pave the way to accomplish that purpose, I don't know, but at least it flags the present abuse.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I am perfectly sympathetic to what Mr. Rivers is trying to achieve, but I am doubtful that this language does it. Frankly, I have read this amendment over several times, and I don't know what the language used does mean.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, this is a matter I think we should all concern ourselves with because as Mr. Rivers has said, over the past number of years we have seen some very shameful episodes in the national life which was more clearly exemplified by the actions of a man whose name very seldom appears in the newspapers anymore, Senator Joe McCarthy. We feel there was a pattern laid by that, I was going to call him a gentlemen, but I will not do so, which we should not allow to be emulated by any department of the Territory. There was a pattern set by him that under the guise of a legislative procedure, or investigation, he indulged in vilification, character assassination, and an intimation of guilt by association. I understand we had some legislative assistant or head of the legislative investigating committee in Alaska who attempted in his own feeble way to emulate that ignoble example set by McCarthy. I don't know as Mr. Rivers' amendment goes far enough, but if it will go to any extent to curb such activities and prevent such shameful episodes from occurring in the Territory of Alaska, I will go along with it. We can't tell but what we might have some "McCarthy" showing up here sometime that wants to bask in the limelight and he will attempt to follow those methods as set by Mr. McCarthy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I am still puzzled about my original inquiry. I don't see that the rights Mr. Rivers seeks to protect cannot be obtained under the law as it now stands because certainly there is no prohibition in the Constitution or in Section 6 that would prevent the legislature from setting up a set of rules of procedure for its own investigations and, after all, that is the problem, and I don't see that adding this language will strengthen or detract from that rule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I thought I tried to clarify that in response to your inquiry when I said that it is now directed only to depriving a man of his life, liberty or property. We know that the congressional committees don't put a man in jail, and they don't take any property away from him, they just ruin him period. I don't think the present language reaches the problem we are trying to solve.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I just want to caution the body that there is no point in voting on anything if we don't know what it means. I am going to vote against it. I am opposed to these legislative examining committees and I might add that the latest expression of the people of Alaska was to abolish the so-called Stringer Committee by an overwhelming vote, so the problem really does not exist in Alaska.

R. RIVERS: There is one other amendment that is being rewritten submitted by Mr. Riley, and I think this could bear a little thought and go over it and be held over. I am not too satisfied with the wording "due process" which has to do with judicial proceedings, although it could be applied in a broad way. I think we have to study that a little bit more. I would ask unanimous consent that this go over until such time as we take up the matter after lunch.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers has asked unanimous consent that we hold this particular amendment in abeyance until after the noon recess. Is there objection? If there is no objection, the particular amendment then of Mr. Victor Rivers will be held in abeyance until the afternoon session. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Sergeant at Arms bring Mr. Kilcher's proposed amendment forward. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 14, line 8, strike the comma and the words 'invasion or imminent peril' and substitute the words 'or actual and imminent invasion'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I move and ask unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

MCCUTCHEON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to the motion?

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May we have it read, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 14, line 8, strike the comma and the words 'invasion or imminent peril' and substitute the words 'or actual and imminent invasion'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion on this proposed amendment? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Just for the purpose of clarification, I would like to state that I believe the two words "imminent" and "actual" are inconsistent. A thing cannot be imminent and actual at the same time. If it is imminent there is a possibility it will occur shortly. If it is actual, it is actually there. It can't be actual and imminent both.

KILCHER: I am afraid that might be the case. I was in doubt myself whether it should be "and actual or imminent", or whether it should be "and imminent or actual". I think that is a matter of Style and Drafting, that is the substance of it, the amendment. I admit that yesterday there was a similar amendment, not quite the same, had been on the floor, and I would like to read Section 14 as it would read as amendment. "The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion, or actual and imminent invasion the public safety requires it." There are several state constitutions who never want their habeas corpus suspended. Several others have a saving clause that only in rebellion and invasion may it be suspended. I am afraid that this here Section 14 as it stands now, with the words "imminent peril" in it as a vague clause, that with many others if we don't think thoroughly we will open the road of invasion not of a foreign enemy but of an internal one. It is to me that the clause "imminent peril" in times of turmoil, political restlessness, and so on, can be abused and can be construed to mean almost anything. I am surprised in thinking over, I have given it quite a bit of thought since yesterday, in going over this in my mind, over Mr. Hellenthal's flowery but not quite logical speech of yesterday, where he worried not enough about the right of the people's habeas corpus, and today he seems to worry very much about people's privacy. Personally, I am worrying about both, but if I had a choice, I would worry more about the habeas corpus than about people's privacy in other matters. This imminent peril clause can be construed, and that is what we have to worry about. It can be construed to be almost everything and in case of rebellion, invasion, actual or imminent, that should be the only exceptions to the right of habeas corpus. We have solid precedent, but with all the other constitutions, the imminent peril clause is dangerous and should be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: When Mr. Kilcher read Section 14, I am wondering if he put in some language that we did not adopt yesterday. I did not follow him. He was putting in words that he did not include in the amendment he was offering now. At least, I did not get them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the section as it would appear if Mr. Kilcher's amendment were adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion, or actual and imminent invasion, the public safety requires it."

AWES: I wonder if Mr. Kilcher would amend his amendment by changing the word "and" to "or".

KILCHER: I think it would make better sense, and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher asks unanimous consent to change the word "and" to "or". If there is no objection, the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I have a distinct feeling that this section as it stands now is subject to two different interpretations and as it seeks to be amended, and I think with the "or" it definitely sets it up with one interpretation, although as I recall yesterday, we cleared that thing up and then voted down the amendment, but I certainly think something should be done to this to decide whether we want the writ of habeas corpus suspended in the event of imminent peril or only want it in the event of imminent peril of invasion. If I am convinced that this amendment takes care of it, I am in favor of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I can see now where the Committee left it open for some doubt. In Committee, the majority of the Committee understood that the courts in construing invasion and the expression "imminent peril" would have to consider the two together; "imminent peril" and "invasion" go together. Delegate Hellenthal is a lawyer and his interpretation of what this section meant was strange and novel to me, and I can see where the court could have the same interpretation as Mr. Hellenthal, and for that reason I am going to support Delegate Kilcher's amendment. I think it is an excellent amendment because I don't think that the right of habeas corpus should be suspended unless danger of invasion by a foreign enemy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to say that I agree with Mr. Buckalew, with what he has just said. When the Committee adopted this language it was personally my understanding that it meant just about what Mr. Kilcher's amendment says, but from what was said on the floor yesterday, evidently even the Committee was not in agreement, and I am still inclined to think that Section 14 could be interpreted, but I think Mr. Kilcher's amendment would clarify the matter and I am in favor of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended and offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll. The shouting confuses the Chair very often.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 30 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, Longborg, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Mr. President.

Nays: 23 - Barr, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Laws, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Metcalf, Nordale, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 2 - Cooper, Emberg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 30 yeas, 23 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Riley, your amendment has not been mimeographed?

RILEY: I prefer to put it off rather than to recess now to consider it again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments other than to Section 11 at this time? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: May I ask a question, Mr. President? It seems to me that this is the day in which the body by their rules have foreclosed themselves from introducing individual proposals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The 8th is Sunday. The understanding of the Chair was that after we discovered that it was a Sunday that it would be held over until Monday. Is the Chair correct in recalling that?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Yes.

GRAY: If there are no further amendments, I would like to have about ten minutes privilege of the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection you may be granted the floor. The subject is on apportionment.

(Mr. Gray spoke after being granted the privilege of the floor.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, in view of the fact that we have quite a long week coming up next week with the evening sessions, etc., in order to give the delegates time to take care of personal affairs in view of the fact they will not have evenings next week available, I will move and ask unanimous consent that we stand adjourned until 9 a.m. Monday.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. Monday?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, H. Fischer, Johnson, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Taylor, Wien.

Nays: 36 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Cooper, Emberg.)

LONDBORG: May I change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg asks that his vote be changed to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 36 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the Convention has not adjourned. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 1:30 p.m. today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention recess until 1:30 p.m. today. Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered, and the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, in the report of the Juneau hearings in the section concerning apportionment, we heard from Mr. Curtis G. Shattuck and the report states he is submitting a written statement. The written statement just reached me and I am filing this with the Secretary of the Convention and copies have been distributed among the committee members on the Apportionment Committee so anyone who would like to see them can.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mrs. Sweeney. Would the Chief Clerk read the communication. Are there other communications to be read at this time? Would you desire that this be read or filed?

SWEENEY: No, just have it filed for the information of the delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes has requested that this information which was in her possession and it relates to this section that we will soon be on, if there is no objection it can be read. It is one page.

(The Chief Clerk read a memorandum from the Alaska Department of Health regarding Section 1 of Proposal No. 7, Health, Education and Welfare and Section 19 of Proposal No. 5 on the Legislative Branch, prohibiting the expenditure of public funds for the direct aid or benefit of religious or private institutions.)

CHIEF CLERK: There are three attachments. Do you want those read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the communication can be filed.

RILEY: I think it would be of interest to the delegates to know the names of the institutions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read them.

(The Chief Clerk read the tables showing the hospitals receiving aid.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed and it will be available to any delegates who wish to see it. Are there other communications?

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I have here a letter from Don Dafoe, Commissioner of Education, relative to the hearings in Juneau, particularly on the section on education, Section 1 on Health, Education, and Welfare, pertinent to public education. I shall file this with the Clerk, and if anyone cares to read it, I think it should be there for the record and then transmission to Miss Awes, Chairman of the Committee on Bill of Rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, that is the way it will be handled. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would like to have it read. We have read the other.

V. FISCHER: I would like to suggest that we defer the reading of this letter until we come to that particular proposal. We will probably get to it later today or Monday.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would that be in line with what you had in mind, Mr. Buckalew? Perhaps we might bring up both of these communications at that time.

BUCKALEW: I will concede.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will proceed with Committee Proposal No. 7. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Riley?

RILEY: This is offered by a number of people whose names appear on the amendment. I might add that those of the members who have it before them, should have inserted four additional words to be in the form submitted. That is on the fourth line from the bottom, following the word "searched" there should be inserted "the information sought or".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, the proposal I have has no name on it.

RILEY: The names are Robertson, Davis, Hellenthal, R. Rivers, Mrs. Nordale and Riley.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was the wording?

RILEY: Fourth line from the bottom following the word "searched" there should be inserted "the information sought or" and the word "and" is stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection that will be included in the proposed amendment, and the Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 11. The right of the people to privacy and to be secure in their persons, houses and other property, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches, seizures, or other invasions of privacy shall not be violated; and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, the information sought or the persons or things to be seized. Information secured in violation of this section shall not be admissible evidence in any judicial or other proceeding."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, what is your pleasure? Mr. Riley, would you care to move the adoption of the amendment?

RILEY: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment as read.

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I think that this amendment is not so positive in its terms, not so rigid in its terms, and that it is not so short term in its application or its knowledge of the particular problem that confronts us in its knowledge of technological advance that could perhaps put an absurd twist on a recital of various devices that we may be concerned about. I think as such that it meets many of the objections raised this morning in simply adapting Section 11 by extension of the right of privacy of the individual. The underscored matter on the amendment before you is all new matter. Otherwise, the section is as it appeared originally coming from the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I don't think that the section has been improved very much. If anything, I think it has been further confused or a veil thrown over some of the facts that I pointed out this morning. In bunching together the invasion of the home for purposes of arrest and search for material things and in bunching together with it the obtaining of other information and not mentioning the devices, it does not simplify the matter which in itself would be commendable but it confuses the matter by putting together incompatibles in my opinion. This morning on the floor and in several recesses we have discussed this matter and not due consideration has been given to those among us delegates who said we would like to see the search warrants as of old applied to things that they have always applied for, but the specific search warrant for obtaining information should not by all means be treated by any other search warrants to be applied by anybody, district judge, inferior judge, etc. That should be treated separately, if permissible at all. Unless such an amendment will be offered, I think I can only vote against it and advise everybody else to do the same because there are hidden dangers in here. It makes it too easy in times of confusion, in times of public panic or mentality to exert pressure upon the lower courts, and it is tantamount to giving up our most precious civil rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, if the Chair might just ask one question, and that would be in considering the wording, "or other invasions of privacy". Do you think that could or ever would be interpreted in the courts as meaning for instance taking a photograph of someone could be considered invading the rights of privacy?

RILEY: I would not think that any responsible court would think that a casual photograph or snapshot such as was suggested this morning would enter the picture here at all.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, on the contrary, if such a casual photograph shows a person to their derogation, it is an invasion of their private rights, and the courts have held on many occasions.

WHITE: I think "unreasonable" applies to searches or seizures or invasion of privacy.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I have only one thing to say about this amendment, and I am not being funny even though the flower of the Alaska Bar is supporting this proposed amendment. I challenge any lawyer that put his name on this to explain to this Convention the extent of this amendment. It is dangerous and ought to be voted down now.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I kind of feel the same way. I don't know what we have here. I hesitate fully to take 15 minutes and write a bill of rights. The previous established bill of rights we have read and read them. We know what they are, but I am hesitant of all this new material, this projection in the future. I read these things over, I am an ordinary person, we are all ordinary, we don't know what they mean. We are projecting in the future. It might be perfectly all right, but I would like to see more than 15 minutes deliberations on such a subject.

HELLENTHAL: I will try to answer any questions, Mr. Gray.

GRAY: What is the extent of privacy?

HELLENTHAL: The courts during the last 50 years have started a trend of decisions which has reached its culmination in defining the right of privacy. It is a well-defined right. Any unreasonable interference with your personal privacy, if you were, has been held illegal by the courts, and under this constitutional amendment, the practice would be sanctioned in the new State of Alaska. Privacy means precisely what it says, the right to be alone, to be secure in your home, you and your family; the right to be free from interference by unauthorized people, people looking over your transom, those people invade your right of privacy. People who photograph you without authority, they invade your right of privacy, people who break into your yards, climb over your fence, those people invade your right to privacy. Courts have had no difficulty in defining this right. Now it is true, you could ask someone what is an unreasonable seizure and people could spend hours sitting and citing examples of what were unreasonable seizures. I don't think they could tell you all of them. Each one depends on the particular facts of the unreasonable seizure, but courts have had no trouble with that. For 200 years unreasonable seizures have been defined as the need arose by the courts. No one has been concerned about it at all. As the need arises the definitions are amplified and the same thing would happen here. The courts are the protectors of our liberties. We have had faith in our courts for 200 years. They have not let us down and they won't in the future.

BUCKALEW: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, I hesitate but I feel that I have to make a statement again. I am wondering what this group is thinking of. What do they mean when they mean the invasion of privacy. It appears to me that most of the people that are worried about their invasion of privacy are worried because of some overt act that they may commit. Myself, I have no worry about there being any invasion of my privacy because at the moment I don't intend that I am going to do anything that is going to cause the law to come into my place and make a search or a seizure. However, if something does happen, they are welcome to come in. To me it is just exactly like being caught speeding. There is nothing wrong with speeding as long as you get away with it, but you are against the marshal that arrests you because he caught you. It seems to me we are beginning to beg the question quite a little on all of this argument that goes on. As long as we provide for the fundamental rights in the constitution, let us leave it at that and let's put some faith in our legislature and in our police officers and any other administrative officials that we might have to see that we are protected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, in answer to what Mr. Doogan has said, I consider the right to privacy a fundamental right. That is one of the fundamental rights, and I intend, so far as I am concerned at least, that if this amendment is adopted, that is going to try to get at the same problem that we tried to reach this morning when we were talking about wire tapping and use of other devices to invade a person's home, I can't agree with Mr. Doogan that I am going to leave everything to the police and I can't agree with him that only people who expect to do something wrong are going to object to having their privacy invaded. The difficulty is that a police officer in a police state figures that he is carrying out the will of the state and the rights of the individual don't matter and that is what I am trying to get away from here. Now it is very true that as of today our police cannot invade our private lives to the extent that they do in a totalitarian state, but that is what we are trying to preserve. It is only a question of time if police officials or government officials can eavesdrop on what is done in a person's home in the privacy of his home. It's only a question of time until we don't have any liberties left, one step after another. Eventually everything will be in the hands of the government and our whole theory of government here is that the people are bigger than the government and the people control the government and the whole tendency of the government is to try to invade those rights little by little and each case the invasion is made for a proper purpose supposedly. We talk about kidnapping. We talk about subversives. We talk about that sort of thing and we are all against it, but what we don't realize is that when we nibble away here and there, after awhile there is no liberty left. I consider that the right to privacy in a person's home, in his papers, in his effects, is just as much a fundamental right as the right to free speech.

Now certainly, had this problem been before the framers of the United States Constitution they would have had to deal with it because they were conscious of searches and seizures that had been made by the King's men prior to the Revolution. That is why they were so conscious of the right to assemble, the right to petition, the right not to have their persons or their homes violated. Now, as was pointed out this morning, under the present state, a scientific development, anybody including government officials, can invade my home and your home without even coming near the home. That is something that was not envisioned at the time the Federal Constitution was adopted, and it is something that we should protect against now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I want to say one more thing. I feel that I should say it and I don't believe that the proponents of this amendment have answered the question in my opinion. As a lawyer, it completely destroys the protection provided us by the Fourth Amendment of the Federal Constitution and our Section 11 was extracted almost in toto from the Federal Constitution. This is a novel innovation that allows police officers to get search warrants to secure information, as I read it, and you talk about playing in the hands of a totalitarian state, you are not nibbling at it, you are taking one great big gulp and handing the people's privacy to persons in authority.

MARSTON: May I ask Mr. Davis a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Does this Proposal No. 7 protect people as you have talked on here?

DAVIS: Mr. Marston, in my opinion it does.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, could I ask Mr. Davis a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection you may rise and ask the question.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Davis, under this article in your opinion does it give police officers permission and authority to tap a wire for example for any type of crime if they make a search showing to the court?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, do you care to answer that?

DAVIS: Well, I will try to answer it. I think probably it would if they made the proper showing to the court and if they got the proper warrant, the same as the same individual can have his house invaded upon a showing and the issuance of a warrant by the proper court.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: If this amendment here is defeated, where are we at then? I am getting confused.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are back to the original Section 11 if this amendment would be defeated. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I would like to point out one thing I think we are overlooking here. We keep talking about searches and seizures. I would like to point out that that is one house, when you tap a telephone in one house you have tapped every telephone in any place in the United States that have called that house. You are not tapping one phone but all of them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I find the same fault with this amendment that I have found with most of the others presented on this same section. I had no particular quarrel originally with the section as it came out of Committee. However, I do feel there is a certain amount of legislation written into it. I am wondering what the thinking of the Committee would be, also I am asking the same question of the proposers of this particular amendment now, what would your particular thinking be if we terminated this particular amendment on the 4th line following the word "violated" and inserted a clause "except as provided specifically by law". The same thing could be done to the original article following the word "violated" giving the same effect that is apparent in my thinking. I feel that here we are trying to legislate against the many evils of our private affairs where perhaps we should, if we are going to legislate at all, legislate specifically against particular evils or violations. Therefore, I would say leave it up to the legislature to provide the specific times and means, the particular instance if you please, whereby the search, the seizure, the violation of a private individual's rights might be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. McNees asked what the Committee thought of the suggestion which he had to stop after the word "violated" and add "except as provided by law". As I recall, Section 11 was taken word for word from the Federal Constitution. That particular section in the Federal Constitution has stood for quite a number of years, it has been interpreted by the courts. We know what it means and as long as it means what we want it to say, I think it would be just as well to use it and not change it. Also, I think there is objection to Mr. McNees' section because if you say "except as provided by law", I think that phrase is broad enough to give the legislature authority to pass such exceptions that you would practically nullify the section. You might as well not have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, how I yearn for the days when I had simple decisions to make, such as if the voters should be 17, 18 or 19. This morning I was against the amendment that was submitted, primarily for the reason that the mentioning of these electronic devices frightened me. In going over this thing as carefully as I have had time to do, I do not share Mr. Buckalew's fears and I think that it is a proper recognition of a privacy which was not recognized in days gone by, and I therefore support the amendment.

BUCKALEW: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Riley and other delegates be adopted by the convention?"

JOHNSON: May we have a roll call?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Armstrong, Coghill, Cross, Davis, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Walsh, White.

Nays: 21 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Doogan, Gray, Harris, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nolan, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Barr, Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, McNealy, Taylor, Wien).

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 21 nays, and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. The Chair would like to state at this time that it is not in good courtesy for other delegates, when a delegate's name is called, to attempt to tell him how to vote and the Chair has noted that on several occasions, and undoubtedly it at times confuses delegates to have other delegates do that thing, and the Chair would request that that not happen again, if possible to avoid it. Are there other amendments to Section 11? The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, this is a revision of the amendment submitted before recess.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 2, line 23, add to the section the following sentence: 'The right of the people to be protected from unjust abuse in the course of legislative investigations shall not be infringed, to this end the legislature shall prescribe adequate investigative procedures.'"

DOOGAN: Point of order. It seems to me that that is identical to the question we have already acted upon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We held it over, Mr. Doogan, as the Chair recalls. This was a new amendment, was it not, Mr. Victor Rivers? Would you ask unanimous consent that your original amendment be withdrawn?

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent to withdraw the original amendment and substitute this in its place in lieu of the other one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent to withdraw the original amendment and substitute this amendment in its place in lieu thereof. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Could we have this read more slowly, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to withdrawing the original amendment as proposed by Mr. Victor Rivers? If not, that amendment is ordered withdrawn. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 2, line 23, add to the section the following sentence: 'The right of the people to be protected from unjust abuse in the course of legislative investigations shall not be infringed, to this end the legislature shall prescribe adequate investigative procedures.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Victor Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I will move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves that the amendment be adopted. Is there a second to the motion?

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: The last sentence there is to this end that the legislature shall prescribe adequate procedures. There should be a period ahead of the word "to".

V. RIVERS: I will accede to that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, that correction is ordered made. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I consulted with some of the members of the bar in regard to the expression "due process" as it would apply to the legislature. We decided that "due process" actually focused squarely upon judicial proceedings, and it would not be applicable to a legislative operation. You would not have a judge sitting there passing upon the admissibility of evidence and making the other determinations that enter into, generally speaking, a type of hearing or proceedings which is characterized by the matters that are brought before a court of law. What we are trying to get at is that the legislature in the exercise of its powers to investigate could very well set up a code of ethics or rules of procedure which would adequately protect principles and witnesses from abusive treatment, such as has occurred in the past. We cannot, outside of leaving it to the legislature to prescribe such adequate proceedings, we cannot spell it out here. We can flag it. We can tell them to treat the citizens properly in a legislative investigating proceedings, so Mr. Rivers gave up the idea of trying to extend the due process to legislative proceedings and endeavored to simply highlight the point by asking that the legislature set up proper and adequate procedures to safeguard witnesses and principals against abusive treatment in legislative procedures. I might say that after the McCarthy hearings last year Congress itself appointed a committee or in some other manner initiated steps to set up some rules and ethics for the conduct of Congressional hearings. I don't know what happened to that, but I know that was Congress' thought and that is what we are trying to flag for our legislature here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Rivers, would it perhaps not be better to couch the proposed amendment in affirmative language and recite it as a right that, in other words, the right of a person to fair and just treatment rather than put in the negative provision?

R. RIVERS: I did not help Mr. Victor Rivers draft this. I refer the question to Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I used the term "unjust abuses" and it would seem to me that perhaps Mr. Hellenthal's suggestion has merit. I used the term, I don't remember exactly the term, "The right of the people to be protected from unjust abuse in the course of legislative investigations shall not be infringed".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: One more question. As a directive as to the scope of the amendment, it seems to me, I may be wrong, that there are also executive investigations which likewise, at which the witness should be treated fairly and justly.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I will ask for a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have now placed the matter in the affirmative in a slightly different form. I will ask unanimous consent to substitute this amendment in lieu of the one previously discussed. The substance is the same.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent to substitute a new amendment in place of the original amendment. Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered.

STEWART: I did not hear what was said.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that a new amendment be substituted for the original amendment. If there is no objection, it is so ordered and the Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 2, line 23, add to the section the following sentence: 'The right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive investigations shall not be infringed.'"

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I will move for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves that the amendment be adopted. Is there a second to the motion?

SMITH: I second the motion.

AWES: May we have that read once more?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 2, line 23, add to the section the following sentence: 'The right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive investigations shall not be infringed.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am merely trying to effectuate the statement I made this morning in regard to past experiences that we have had in the later years at least in the matter of legislative and governmental investigations. I think this covers it and would flag, as Ralph has said, the legislature to take the necessary action and set up adequate procedures to see that their rights under this clause were protected.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I feel sort of constrained to speak on this subject. It seems like when I do, it almost insures its passage. In my opinion this article is completely unenforceable and it has no meaning in law. It can afford no protection to anybody before these legislative and examining committees. What does it mean? Are we going to follow the rules of evidence as we know in our trial courts? It is a matter for the legislature, for the voters, and there is no way I know of in this short article that you can protect a citizen from some fireball, or whatever you want to call him, a legislator that is running one of these examining committees. The damage is going to be done, and then you are going to get a political question more or less before the courts and the courts are going to have to determine whether he had a fair hearing so to speak before this so-called committee and there is no way that anyone can mandamus the legislature to provide certain rules. I think it is just going to clutter up the bill of rights and my opinion is that it is just a lot of gibberish and is completely unenforceable and should be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I think Mr. Buckalew has pointed out very effectively how this very provision can be made effective. The fact that the legislature, as he has put it, once sets up the rules, or even if there should appear to be a violation of this particular provision, then once the courts have taken the matter in hand and made a ruling of any kind, then they have definitely established something under this provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, well, I am of the same opinion now as I was this morning regarding the first proposal. It seems to me that it is entirely unnecessary. A great deal of question was raised during the argument as to the meaning of the words, "due process of law". Well, many many years ago the Supreme Court of the United States settled it by pointing out that by the Fifth Amendment it was introduced into the Constitution of the United States as a limitation upon the powers of the national government and by the Fourteenth as a guarantee against encroachment upon an acknowledged right of citizenship by the legislatures of the states. Well, under that language certainly "due process of law" not only includes the procedure in our courts but would include any procedure involving the acknowledged right of citizenship, so I don't see but what there is under the proposal as it was originally framed by the Committee and as it is now contained in Section 6, I don't see why the very same protection cannot be afforded without the amendment, and certainly as Mr. Ralph Rivers points out, when there seems to have been an abuse created in a senatorial investigation, Congress immediately took steps to correct it, but it did not take an amendment to the Constitution to do that. The Congress operated under the exact language to correct that abuse by passing suitable legislation, and I think the legislature could certainly do the same thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. President, my recollection was that that abuse continued for several years before there was even an attempt to correct it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, in closing this discussion, I just want to say that I have sat in the legislature and on quite a number of investigations. Certain of those groups had fairly orderly procedures that were set up as they went along. Oftentimes it took the form originally of an executive session at which the information was discussed in a preliminary manner. There was no pattern set to follow, but I imagine there was no pattern set to follow when our founding fathers adopted the words "due process". I can look around any lawyer's office and see shelf after shelf of books in which they tried to effectuate, no doubt, the meaning of the term "due process". I can see how in the legislative body after the experiences we have gone through, that there will be revised and improved procedures for protecting the rights of individuals in investigative procedures of this kind, investigations by the legislature and the executive. I don't say you'd have a body of court of law set up, but I imagine that in due time there would be a body of precedence set up by which succeeding legislatures would learn one from the other the best method in which these matters had been handled before and how they could be improved in future handling. It seems to me that we are laying a cornerstone here to flag them and to bring to their attention the fact that we feel there has been an abuse of this legislative investigative power and asking them in a nice way to be sure that in a fair and just manner the abuses are not continued further. It seems to me the least we can do is to bring this forcibly to their attention and try and start this matter of investigative procedures on a healthy track.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 2, line 23, add to the section the following sentence: 'The right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive investigations shall not be infringed.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to the article? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, may I have the floor on a matter of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Harris, you may have the floor on the matter of personal privilege.

(Mrs. Harris spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to sections of the proposal on the bill of rights? If not, we will proceed to the section of the article that deals with questions of health, education and welfare. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to make an inquiry, Mr. President. This is the second instance where the same committee has prepared two separate articles for the constitution. Would it not be a good idea to separate them henceforth both for purposes of engrossment and enrollment as well as for purposes of work by Style and Drafting and by the Convention in third reading, since they are proposed as separate articles of the constitution?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, it would take a complete change in the title and it would entail, as it were, a lot of mimeographing, a lot of work, and you would have to waive that in lieu of what we would feel would be the cumbersomeness of the present procedure, so you would run into a lot of work if you did it. Just how it happened in this form, it would entail more and we have it before us in this form. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I thought it was my understanding that when these matters got to Style and Drafting that it was the prerogative of Style and Drafting to take various sections and move them around in placement in regular order in the constitution. Is that not correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan, in a manner all right is what Style and Drafting will do, whether it applies to this particular thing, of course, the articles will follow each other probably in this case. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, the only thing I had in mind was possibly simplification so things could move a little faster through the remaining process. If it means the mimeographing of even one extra page, I am not in favor of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, do I recall that several days ago when we had a similar double-barreled proposal that by consent, the first part when we had finished with it, went to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee so they could start work on it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are correct, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If there are no more amendments to the preamble and bill of rights, I would ask unanimous consent that that process be followed with that part of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It went with this provision that if after we finish the article that is in the same proposal, if at that time anyone desired to amend the proposed article, that if it was sent to Engrossment and Enrollment before we were through with this, it would still be open for amendment.

SUNDBORG: With that proviso, I would like to make that request.

LONDBORG: Would there be any necessity of it? They can start work on it at their desk any time they want to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In this manner, Mr. Londborg, the chairman of the committee could then call the committee together. It would be official. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Before we get onto this new section in Committee Proposal No. 7, I would like to move that we adjourn until 9 o'clock Monday morning rather than get started on something else. I so move.

V. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. on Monday. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. on Monday?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of order. There is quite a good possibility that notice might want to be given for reconsideration which had been, discussion leading up to that possibility discussions were expected to be held at the normal recess of 3 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, your notice of reconsideration is in order if you so desire to make it, even now after the motion to adjourn has been placed, if the question has not been put. Do you wish to make it?

KILCHER: What I am trying to drive at is this, in a short recess awhile ago the possibility has arisen that further discussion at the normal recess at 3:30 would lead up to a sound solid reconsideration if it is cut off now would be impossible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, that is up to the delegates. We have the motion to adjourn. However, under our rules, a motion of reconsideration or a reconsideration can be considered even at this time even if it is pending. Now, if the Convention voted to adjourn, it would cut off that reconsideration if you did not make it now.

KILCHER: Would a motion for a short recess be in order now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it would not. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: In order to allay the fears, having voted on the prevailing side of the question of amending Section 11 by the adoption of Mr. Riley's amendment, I ask now that I be allowed to reconsider.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley serves notice of his reconsideration of his vote on the adoption of the amendment to Section 11. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9 a.m. on Monday?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 21 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Harris, Johnson, Londborg, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest.

Nays: 26 - Awes, Buckalew, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNeas, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 8 - Barr, Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, Hilscher, McNealy, Taylor, Wien.)

CHIEF CLERK: 21 yeas, 26 nays, and 8 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and so the motion has failed of adoption. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I am not clear on whether unanimous consent was given to my request that the part of Committee Proposal No. 7 consisting of the preamble and bill of rights be referred to the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was, Mr. Sundborg, no one objected. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, point of order. Would the bill of rights proposal still remain before us under Mr. Hurley's reconsideration?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, your point of order is well taken under that consideration because the motion for reconsideration, even though it was made afterwards, is always in order. You are correct. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: May I ask a question? What has become of the proposal on the initiative and referendum that I thought was referred to Engrossment some days ago?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is in the hands of Engrossment and Enrollment Committee, is it not?

CHIEF CLERK: No, it is in the boiler room.

SWEENEY: My motion to adjourn was not debatable, Mr. President, but our boiler room has been working on amendments that we have been getting out this morning and so far today, and I just thought this was a good place to stop. We have Mr. Hurley's reconsideration, and rather than tie them up in the boiler room now until 5 or 6 o'clock and come here Monday and not have anything, I thought it would be a good time to quit, and we had eight absent, so I still think my motion to adjourn is a good idea.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Did the Chief Clerk already read this article?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 1? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, that was a couple of days ago. Could we have it read again?

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we stand at recess for five minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess for five minutes. If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may, Mr. White.

(Mr. White spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us the article on health, education and welfare. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed article.

(The Chief Clerk read the article at this time.)

SWEENEY: Mr. President, since business has transpired since the last motion, I would like to move that we adjourn until 9:05 a.m. on Monday morning.

ROSSWOG: I second the motion.

HERMANN: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9:05 on Monday morning?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

HELLENTHAL: Is it necessary to call the roll?

HERMANN: I asked for a roll call.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Harris, Helleenthal, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Londborg, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh.

Nays: 20 - Awes, Buckalew, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Peratrovich,

Riley, Smith, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 8 - Barr, Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, McNealy, V. Rivers, VanderLeest, Wien.)

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 20 nays and 8 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the Convention stands adjourned until 9:05 a.m. on Monday. If the delegates would give the Chair their attention, are there any committee announcements? Mr.
Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet at 10:30 a.m.
tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Do those letters that came in have to do with health and education and was there a brief accompanying same?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There was quite a statement, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Some of us may wish to take the opportunity to reading up on that. One reason I did not feel we were prepared to go into health and education now is that we have not read those communications or that statement or brief, so those who want to keep on working, you have got something to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention stands adjourned until 9:05 a.m. on Monday.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 9, 1956

FORTY-EIGHTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us Father Boileau of the Immaculate Conception Church. Father Boileau will give our daily invocation.

FATHER BOILEAU: Grant us, Almighty God, the gift of wisdom and understanding; give us Your help this day that we may continue to work with sincerity, with true charity and harmony, for the good of our country and for Your glory, through Christ our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: All present.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. We will proceed with the regular order of business. The Chair heard someone wonder whether we had a gavel or not. The Chair would like to state that the gavel is locked up in the President's desk and the keys are not here. We will proceed without the gavel today. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time?

KNIGHT: The journal for the 43rd day has been checked for errors and omissions. We do not find anything. We ask unanimous consent that it be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight asks unanimous consent that the journal of the 43rd Convention day be approved. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I note on page 9 it shows one person voting both "yea" and "nay".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you ask that that correction be made?

BOSWELL: I will.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The correction will be ordered made as the Chief Clerk might find it to be. If there are no other corrections, the journal of the 43rd day is ordered approved. The Convention will come to order. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, as Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee, it gives me great pleasure this morning to introduce to you a man who has come to assist us and who will remain until the end of the Convention, if that is the desire of the Convention. He is Dr. John Bebout, Assistant Director of the National Municipal League in New York City, and will be working principally with our Committee but will also be available to give such assistance as other committees may desire. Mr. Bebout is, as he says, a generalist rather than a specialist in the problems of state government and is also something of a specialist in the problems of local government. I would like to suggest that Dr. Bebout be invited to come forward from the gallery and to address the Convention briefly, if that is his desire.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Bebout, we are happy to have you here and would like to have you deliver a few remarks.

DR. BEBOUT: Well, I am sure that the proper function for a consultant is to be seen and not heard, at least very loud, so I will be very brief, but I do take great pleasure in this opportunity and privilege of being here with you. It takes me back some years ago and to the eight-year struggle to get a new and modern constitution in my own State of New Jersey. I played various modest roles in that connection from the time that Governor Edison advocated the calling of a convention in his inaugural address in 1941, until the time we inaugurated our new constitution in 1948. I stress those dates because this is a long process or may be a long process from the beginning to the end, but it is very worth all the effort that goes in it. We feel that in the drafting of our new constitution in New Jersey, we set something of a new standard for modern state constitutions, but I am confident from everything that I have seen and heard about your labors here to date that you are on the way to setting a still higher standard for state constitutions, and it is a great privilege to be with you. (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Bebout. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to announce a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee to be held at the table at the rear of the gallery at the morning recess, at 10:30 or thereabouts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of Style and Drafting Committee immediately upon recess. Are there reports of select committees? Are there any proposals to be introduced at this time? Are there any motions or resolutions? If not, we are down to unfinished business which takes us back to Committee Proposal No. 7. We are down to the article on health, education and welfare. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: In line with my notice at the previous session for consideration of the amendment to Section 11 on Committee Proposal No. 7, I ask that we take up this matter now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley asks that we take up this matter of reconsideration of the amendment to Section 11 at this time. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, on the supposition that Mr. Hurley may wish to discuss this, I will ask for a suspension of the rules in order that it may be debatable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the rules will be suspended. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, my discussion will be rather short.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, I believe that you were right in the first place. You should make the motion that your reconsideration come up at this time. Is that right, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you so move, Mr. Hurley, that your reconsideration be placed before us at this time?

HURLEY: That was my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair just wanted to be certain that the record would show that. Mr. Hurley, you have the floor.

HURLEY: On carefully going over the amendment, I came to the conclusion that it did not say what I thought that it said, that it did in fact legalize, at least possibly legalize the use of electronic devices for the invasion of privacy under a warrant and give then the information a place before the courts as admissible evidence. Now I realize that there are some delegates who properly feel that that should be done. I realize also that the law enforcement agencies should have every weapon at their command that will allow them to bring criminals to justice for the protection of the public good. I also was very anxious that the privacy of the individual be not improperly invaded by the use of such electronic devices. Although my own privacy as far as I know has never been invaded, I can readily see where it would be possible to do so. There are a great many opportunities for people who are not committing a crime and do not have criminal intent, but perhaps are somewhat antisocial to be plagued with at least a threat of blackmail, so I was desirous of having some way of preventing the improper use of such electronic devices. I use the word rather broadly. However, after giving the thing as much consideration as I was capable of, I decided that the amendment did not insure that such devices would not be indiscriminately used. It did insure that devices could be used by obtaining a warrant and made me think of the possibility that our political situation could change, could change to a position where use of the warrant could be a blow to our privacy rather than a help to it. So I finally came to the conclusion that the best thing to do as far as I was concerned was to leave Section 11 pretty much alone as it was submitted by the Committee and to hope that the legislature, when the time came, that we were being unreasonably invaded in our privacy, to take such steps as would prevent it, so I therefore have decided if the matter comes up again to vote against the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, when this particular amendment passed on the last day of the session, I frankly was stunned and I think that the only reason it passed is that some of the delegates did not know what it did or what it meant. Now this amendment here completely destroys the Fourth Amendment as we know it in the Constitution. It in effect would completely destroy our civil liberties. I don't think that the proponents of this amendment fully realized its effect. In my opinion it destroys the individual liberties of man as we know it in the North American continent. It is a vicious infamous amendment. It is unknown in our system of jurisprudence, and I ask all the members to vote it down now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I voted for this amendment at the time it was presented but I, too, have changed my mind. I felt there was not a great deal of difference between the use of a warrant for search and seizure and a warrant to use one of the electronic devices, but it is now my opinion that this would be a bad thing and I feel somewhat as Mr. Buckalew does. I have prepared another amendment which I am going to submit if it is reconsidered, but I would not like to see it stay in the constitution the way we wrote it in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I am going to be very brief. The retention of that amendment in the constitution would be the first step toward the establishment of a police state and a long broad step at that. I hope it will be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I, too, voted for that amendment with the instructions I had, but I think it is not going to do what I thought it was going to do, and I made a decision some time ago to vote for the Committee's report except in rare occasions. I digressed there. I am sorry for it. I am going back, if I get a chance, and vote for what the Committee reported out unless something new shows up, that is going to be my position.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I think that I have been dragged into this a little by my heels but I should say that it was a matter of growing interest which developed the other day which obliged me to take an interest in the matter. I have been especially interested in Mr. Hurley's remarks and in his speaking against the amendment. I think that his remarks have been entirely conscientious. I know them to have been so, just as I felt the other day when he spoke for the amendment shortly before reconsidering that those remarks too were entirely conscientious, and I think that that situation, his own experience, reflects the thinking and the experience of the entire body on this particular subject matter as we have had it under discussion for two or three days. I know that I myself in first speaking on the matter stated that I had entertained grave doubts as the discussion continued and I have been back and forth on the subject from the moment it first hit the floor and so I say that Mr. Hurley's position I feel is representative of the entire body in his uncertainty. I think he knows what we are trying to reach. I think he feels that we have overreached it. I think that as Mr. Hinckel suggests, there are remedies still which can be offered to accomplish our purpose in this amendment. I will grant that there are voids, as Mr. Taylor suggests, in the present language which have brought about these fears. I thought since this discussion started two or three days ago of a naturalization speech made by the very able and eminent Learned Hand many years ago wherein he said something to the effect that the spirit of freedom is one which is not always sure it is right, while striving to be right it admits of doubt, and I think perhaps that is a characteristic of this entire Convention. We are not ever positive. We hope we are on the right course in any decision we take. Now, I personally feel we have set up a safeguard if we should use it. If we were now to use it by an amendment such as that which I suspect Mr. Hinckel may have in mind. We have gone to great lengths to create independent judiciary, a judiciary perhaps as independent as one may be. We have provided that superior court judges shall serve for six years, shall be certainly free from partisanship, that supreme court justices shall serve for ten years and shall be even more free from partisanship and from the popular whim of the moment, the hysteria that sometimes sweeps the country. I think that where we do employ those justices for the purpose of issuing these warrants we would have taken a far greater safeguard, we would have provided a far stronger safeguard than has been employed in Alaska in the case of the issuance of search warrants. Now there has not been a great wave of indignation or fear that the search warrant procedure will be abused nor an expression that it has been abused in our experience, and I submit only that the pending amendment now under reconsideration is possibly susceptible of improvement.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I spoke at some length on this matter on Saturday. Several of the delegates have told me that they thought that I had overpersuaded them in connection with the amendment and that what we had done was actually different from what we were trying to do. I want to be clear. The fact that I do not believe as the others have stated here that we have done what we didn't intend to do. However, I certainly recognize the doubt and I will not be disappointed for anybody that may change his vote that may have voted the other way the other day because of what I said. I am still going to vote to keep the amendment as we made it, but that does not bind anyone else to the same thing.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think there has been some overstatement about the first foundations of a police state and that sort of thing. About 175 years ago the founding fathers drafted a constitution and in that constitution they provided that no warrants, in speaking of searching your home or your office or your business, no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause supported by oath or affirmation and particularly describing the place to be searched and the person or things to be seized. It was our thought that we would have to provide some chance for the use of these other detection devices besides beating on your door and if you would not open it, kicking it in and pulling out your dresser drawers and that sort of thing. This all hinges upon a showing of probable cause and upon oath and affirmation to indicate the information sought. It seeks a permission from a court. Now I have not heard that the courts have been any pushovers as far as search warrants are concerned in the course of the last 175 years. How this is any more of a foundation for a police state than the original search warrant clause 175 years ago is more than I know. Certain details and other factors could be spelled in by the legislature. The legislature could say what court is to have the authority to issue these search warrants. It happens that under our present setup the justices of the peace court in Alaska have the authority to issue search warrants. Those men are not judicially trained. They are our court of limited jurisdiction but there are district courts. Our legislature can authorize a district court to be the one to consider the question upon probable cause on oath or affirmation as to whether or not any modern device could be used in the detection of crime. Now we have tried to protect the privacy of the individual here by saying that they shall not willy-nilly be subjected to wire tapping and microphones in your bedrooms and that sort of thing which they do now for information purposes which might lead them to witnesses, etc., who could produce the direct testimony for introduction in court. The way we have it before we put in this, what I call a protection of our privacy, is outside of minor trespasses. The law officers now just plain do it. Where is your privacy there? This would prevent them from doing it in any case unless they had permission from a court and that to me is better than not having any safeguard at all.

KILCHER: Mr. President, if the authorities right now without legal foundation are invading your home and listening in on conversations, etc., with technical devices, as Mr. Rivers has admitted they do now, how much more so will they do the same thing when they are legally entitled, and once they are allowed legally to perform that sort of invasion they again will have a wave of illegal activities ahead of the legal activities like they are doing now. In other words, the invasion of a home will be greater than it is now. I can only see where we lose. We are forgetting entirely one thing in this matter, namely that all these impersonal technical devices are unreliable. They are unintelligent. They are subject to fraud, subject to tampering. In normal seizures and searches of a house there are persons involved, responsible persons whose evidence can be questioned. Let me tell you one thing of a technical means. It is entirely possible nowadays that anyone of us here can make a statement that is recorded on the tape recorder in our presence and we make a carefully thought out statement where we say, "I am not a Communist, I hate the Communists, I don't believe in Communism, and I think the Russians are evil characters. I do not believe that the government should be overthrown by force." And sit down and the machine can be used, the results of that recording can be handled in such a way and in a way that cannot be proven that it has been done, to make you having said a statement, "I am a Communist. I like Communism, and I believe in the overthrow of the government by force." This is technically entirely possible. If we permit nonpersonal technical evidence that can be tampered with without proof, we are sticking our necks in the noose. It is entirely different from the old warrants of search and seizure which is done by persons, responsible, intelligent human beings. It is a dangerous thing and I really think that we should be grateful of having this chance of reconsideration and vote the amendment pending now down and leave Section 11 as it was.

BARR: Mr. President, if we have always authorized law officers to search a home if there was probable cause, that is invasion of privacy. Wire tapping of course is another invasion of privacy and I can see no difference. I believe that we should allow it for probable cause, especially in cases of known criminals. It was said here that a recording could be altered to produce false evidence and I believe it could in certain cases it depends on what was said at that time. That is nothing new, photographs have been altered many times. It was said that a search of a house would be done personally and could not be falsified but that is not true. An officer searching a house can plant evidence. He can open a dresser drawer and drop a small package of heroin or marijuana in a drawer. That has been done, so there is actually no difference between the two, search and seizure and wire tapping. I know that for a certainty myself that wire tapping is done nearly every day in Fairbanks, by federal officers, of course, and it seems to me it would be better if they had to obtain a warrant from the court, the privacy of the individual would be better guaranteed. I have no fear of the courts issuing a warrant to tap somebody's wire unless there is pretty good evidence that he is a criminal and engaged in a fairly serious crime. The law-abiding citizen has nothing to fear from this amendment, but the criminal has. We have the problem here of guaranteeing the privacy of the individual but one of the biggest problems in the nation today is the crime problem, and if any of you have had any experience as a law enforcement officer, you will know that the law is rigged to favor the criminal because we are guaranteeing the freedom and privacy of the individual and that works in favor of the criminal. Now, I believe in guaranteeing the privacy of the individual in every way I can. I believe that this is the best amendment that has been admitted so far that has been adopted, and I do not believe that it endangers the privacy of the law-abiding individual. I would vote against this amendment if I thought that we would then revert to the original committee report and no more amendments would be submitted. But I fear that is not so, so I believe I will vote for this amendment.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I would like to point out a couple of things here. Mr. Barr made the statement that only criminals have anything to fear from this amendment as it now stands. That is not true. The difference between a warrant for tapping a phone and the difference of a warrant in looking into a house are two different things altogether. In the first place, when you look into the house you get a warrant for that one house. You can go completely through it, that is true. That is one person's privacy you are invading. When you tap a phone anyone, that calls that number you are tapping their phone. You are not tapping the phone of one individual, you are not invading the privacy of one individual, you are invading the privacy of every person that calls that number, whether he be innocent, whether he be guilty or who he might be. Another thing here in the bill of rights is the protection of the people against the government. That was what it was intended for, and in this amendment we are giving the government complete right to go into any person's home by their telephone or in any other method at any time. If this amendment was written in such a way that it would take a superior judge to issue such a warrant, I would be in favor of it. Where you can go into a J P or any judge and get a warrant to tap anyone's phone on probable cause, I can't see my way clear in voting for such an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: As one of the proponents of the amendment, I gave it considerable serious thought over Sunday and I came here this morning with an open mind, but the more I read and study this amendment, I have to agree with Mr. Riley and Mr. Rivers that it will protect us and I am going to continue to support the amendment.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I feel as the previous speakers have stated that the intent of this amendment is good. We have spread a great many words upon our records to show what our intent was, what we wanted it to do and wanted it to avoid. I realize also it is merely the outline, but then it is the general statement under which we are going to be governed and a policy that will be established by the courts. That is what was done in the case of the national Constitution. Each phrase and clause had to be interpreted in the light of its intent, and that intent effectuated by the laws and rules of the court that was set up to carry out that intent. I am confident that reviewing the phraseology as we have it here, in reviewing the records of the intents of this body, that no court could issue a set of rules or procedures in such a manner that it would be detrimental to the right of the individual. I have none of the fears that go along with this so-called preliminary establishment of a police state. We are not here, nor has it been shown as the intent of this body in any part of its proceedings to favor the despots and the tyrants who are necessary in the maintenance of a military or a police state. I do not share the fears of the souls who say that we have opened the gates here to any abuse on the part of our judiciary. It has been the practice and the experience of our country that it has to be the interpretations of these broad clauses based on intent, have to also be based upon honesty and good judgment, and I for one feel that that has been done in the past and will be done in the future, that interpreting this clause, there will not be harm but good done to the rights of privacy of the individual. I am for the amendment as it stands.

V. FISCHER: I would like to address a question to Mr. Davis, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer, you may address your question.

V. FISCHER: If the present amendment as approved is retained, can the legislature pass a law stating that only justices of the supreme court and judges of the superior court may issue warrants under this section for the purpose of wire tapping, or will this section automatically leave it open to issuance of warrants by any court?

DAVIS: Mr. President, in answer to Mr. Fischer, in my opinion the legislature would have complete discretion in that matter. However, to go one step farther than your question--in order to meet the fears that have been mentioned here, I think possibly it might be wise if this section is retained to change it to provide that warrants shall be issued only by superior or supreme courts. Put it in the constitution.

McNEES: I do believe that stipulation, as much as I am against writing legislative law into our constitution, I do feel that the provision relative to which courts might issue said warrant should definitely be established here if we are going to leave the present considered amendment to stand. I raise on other question. Other than the fact that any court under this present wording could issue such a warrant, there is grave question in my own mind as to who might be able to secure such a warrant and conduct such a search. For instance, any private investigating officer that may be working in conjunction with a case or with some other individual who seeks that information often conducts search with the help of the police, perhaps, where they feel that he should not be given full rein but also in many cases on his own. He might have a motive in requesting such a warrant and in conducting such a search altogether outside of the stipulation that he makes in request to the warrant. I do believe that we have left these two gaps in the present considered amendment. Beyond that I am very definitely against writing any more legislative law than we have to into the constitution. I feel that the committee proposal as it came out is perhaps just as complete an article as this body should write. Therefore, I am against the present considered amendment and will support the original article when it comes back on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I am not going to speak either for or against the amendment. I think I am going to change my vote when the time comes to vote, but I would like to call the attention of the assembly to the fact that we shall have, if we adopt the present article on the judicial branch, we shall have eight superior court judges and justices of the supreme court altogether in the entire Territory of Alaska. Four of those we may reasonably assume will be stationed at the capital city of Alaska. That is, your supreme court will sit there, and there will be without doubt at least one superior court judge assigned there. I don't know whether anybody, I am sure Mr. Robertson and probably some of the other attorneys here have had much the same experience that I have had in trying to get papers signed by a judge who is several hundred miles away, and I think we will meet this exact same situation in regard to issuing warrants for searching or for wire tapping in the event that we place that power exclusively in the hands of the superior court judges and supreme court justices, and I am quite sure that the reason the power to issue warrants has been given to United States Commissioners is due to the fact that they are more widely scattered, that they are closer to people than the more distant district courts and for that reason in the interest of expediting business and getting warrants out in time they have had to resort to the United States Commissioners and I think we will meet with exactly that situation in regard when we have statehood, that we will still find it very difficult to get warrants in time to be of any value if we limit the issuance of them to superior court judges and justices of the supreme court, and I think that that is a very definitely a thing that ought to be considered in this matter. We don't know what kind of inferior courts we are going to have, but judging by some of the United States Commissioners that I have seen at work I would hesitate to give them authority to issue warrants for the purpose of tapping wires.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I am opposed to the amendment as it is written, and in my many years of law enforcement I have had occasion to go to the commissioner and get search warrants for property that has been alleged to be stolen, and it is my understanding that under the law of searches the officer or person who signs the search warrant must actually know, there is not any guesswork, you must know that a watch or a camera or binoculars is in a certain place. Now that is the old-time lawyers have told me that and it has been drilled into me. Now in the case of wire tapping, you have got a thing that does not even exist, you don't know what is going to be said over the wire. In the case of the search warrant, you get your search warrant and go to John Doe's place and you knock at the door and whoever comes, you identify yourself and give them the search warrant and under the authority of the search warrant you search the premises described in the search warrant. This thing here, you don't even know what is going to be said. And the next thing, when are you going to give them the warrant to tap their telephone. If you give it to them before tapping they are sure not going to talk about what you think they are going to say. I think it is a poorly written article, and as far as I am concerned, I am going to vote to retain the original recommendation of the Committee, and I would like to see the matter left up to the legislature. There may be times of national emergency or war, let the legislature make something on it. You will probably need some legislative law. If you recall, it has not been mentioned yet, during the last war our mail was all censored going between here and the states, and for a very good reason. None of us should have any fear in times of national emergency to have our privacy or personal lives, they are welcome to come into my house any time to look for anything that might affect the national security. I am going to vote against the amendment.

CROSS: Mr. President, I fail to see where we are giving anyone any right for a wire tapping in this amendment. It seems to me that it is a prohibition against invasions of privacy, at least that was the intent when it was submitted. It seems to me that the language is entirely negative here and left up to the legislature, if they see fit to give the warrants.

BUCKALEW: I don't know whether this point has been brought out to the body or not, but as Section 11 originally came from the Committee, it prohibits wire tapping. It was taken from the Federal Constitution, the Fourth Amendment has that the Supreme Court has construed that that protects the people in their homes from wire tapping. As a matter of fact, Section 11 as it was drawn prohibits wire tapping, it was taken care of by the Committee. Another thing, if Senator Barr knows of any federal officer in the City of Fairbanks that is tapping wires as an officer of the District Court from the District of Alaska, if he will give the information to me, I will go down now and sign a complaint against that federal officer and he can be prosecuted. If he has any evidence now, I am willing to go down and sign.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Riley and other delegates.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 11 in its entirety and insert the following: 'Section 11. The right of the people to privacy and to be secure in their persons, houses and other property, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches, seizures, or other invasions of privacy shall not be violated; and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, the information sought or the persons or things to be seized. Information secured in violation of this section shall not be admissible evidence in any judicial or other proceeding.'"

HURLEY: May I close?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I will simply close by saying I have appreciated the arguments I have heard on the floor this morning as well as those the other day. I still feel as I did this morning that we would be better off to eliminate the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Riley and other delegates to Section 11 be adopted by the Convention?"

KILCHER: Roll call.

DAVIS: To make the thing absolutely certain as I understand it, now if we vote "yes" we are voting to retain Section 11 as amended on Saturday. If we vote "no" we are voting against that amendment, is that correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you vote "yes" you are voting once more to adopt this particular amendment. If you vote "no" you are retaining Section 11 as it appears in the proposal. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 18 - Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, Laws, McCutcheon, Nolan, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Sundborg, Walsh, White.

Nays: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Wien, Mr. President.)

CHIEF CLERK: 18 yeas, 37 nays.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I have a proposed amendment to Section 11.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, you may present your proposed amendment. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hinckel.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert the following after line 12, Section 11: 'The right of the people to be secure against unreasonable invasion of their individual privacy by the use of any electronic or other scientific device shall not be violated, and ex parte orders or warrants shall issue from the Superior or Supreme Court only upon oath or affirmation that there is reasonable ground to believe that evidence of crime may be thus obtained, and identifying the particular means of communication, and particularly describing the person or persons whose communications are to be intercepted and the purpose thereof. Information secured in violation of this section shall not be admissible evidence in any judicial or other proceeding.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hinckel?

HINCKEL: I move the adoption of the amendment.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In as much, Mr. Hinckel, as the amendment is quite long, do you think it would be wise to have it mimeographed?

HINCKEL: It might be well. I would like to make a short statement right now. You will note that I left the original Section 11 as presented by the Committee intact because I felt that the ordinary warrants for ordinary purposes such as we have had in the past, that the inferior courts should be able to handle them, but this controversial subject which seems to be quite a little bit more delicate and should be given more consideration, can only be handled by superior or supreme court judges.

McNEES: I was just going to move the consideration of this amendment following our 10:30 recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the consideration of this particular amendment will be held in abeyance until after the 10:30 recess in order that mimeographed copies may be on the desk of each delegate. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I don't exactly know whether I am in order or not, but I wonder if there are any other people who have amendments to offer on this particular amendment that might be long and also need to be mimeographed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are some of particular length they might take this time to offer them so they could be mimeographed. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I am holding one as I have been for two days which I am intending to submit if this one is voted down. It is not particularly long except in that it restores part of a previous one we have once voted down. It might be read and decided whether you want it mimeographed or not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel's amendment is the one before us, but it looks quite long all right. If you intend to offer it at all, it would probable be wise to have it mimeographed, Mr. White.

WHITE: I thought I would ask to have it read and then mimeographed if someone wants it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read it for information purposes only.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 11, after the last line add: 'The right of privacy of the individual shall not be invaded by use of any electronic or other scientific transmitting, listening or sound recording device for the purpose of gathering information or incriminating evidence, subject to such exceptions and procedures as may be established by law for the protection of the public safety.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the feeling of the body? Would it be wise to have it mimeographed? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would so request.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection we will order it mimeographed to have it ready. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Did I understand that was to be added following line 11?

CHIEF CLERK: At the end of Section 11.

McNEES: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If we are going to hold this matter in abeyance we could proceed with the matter on health, education and welfare.

HELLENTHAL: I move that we take the normal 15-minute recess at this time this morning rather than at 10:30 and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves that we take the regular 15-minute morning recess at this time and asks unanimous consent. If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 10:10 a.m. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

(Mr. Hilscher spoke under point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to sending this wire to the President of the United States? If not, Mr. Hilscher, you may send the wire. We do not as yet have copies of the particular amendment as offered by Mr. Hinckel, do we?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, we do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then we have before us the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hinckel to Section 11. Mr. Hinckel, did you move the adoption of that proposed amendment?

HINCKEL: Yes, I did.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Rivers seconded it, Ralph Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of this proposed amendment? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I think that the brief statement I made is all that is necessary for me to make. We discussed the thing very thoroughly and we should have a comprehensive understanding of the problem

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Does everyone have a copy? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I ask that we have a two-minute recess.

BARR: If I may object, what is the purpose of the recess?

HURLEY: I would like to read these things.

BARR: Excuse me. I thought maybe somebody wanted to write another amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It might be best to hold this in abeyance and come back to it, whatever the Convention feels. If it takes too much time now to digest the proposed amendment, it might be better to proceed and come back to this.

HURLY: I withdraw my request.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hinckel? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I did not rise to discuss it, but to step into the breach created when Mr. Hurley withdrew his request for a recess. I would like a recess if I may.

BUCKALEW: Could we make it five minutes?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Perhaps, Mr. Buckalew, the Chair was wondering if it might be better to go on with the article on health, education and welfare and when this has been completely digested, then we could come back to it later. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: In my own obscure manner, Mr. President, the two are related in my mind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Mr. Hinckel's proposed amendment to Section 11. The question is open for discussion. The question is, "Shall Mr. Hinckel's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I feel that I can take a minute or two on this. I did not address the assembly before on this matter. As I see it now, it is going to leave the issuance of warrants up to the two courts, and I think Mrs. Hermann pointed out very clearly that they are not going to have the time to handle that and also I feel that in reference to the inferior court system, that they have other authority that I believe is just as great if not greater than the matter of wire tapping. They have the authority to put a man in jail up to a year. They have the authority to do other things, and while we hear many cases of injustice, maybe we should also consider the possibility of 90 or 99 per cent of the cases that they may be handled right also. It looks to me that this could well be handled by legislation. There seems to be a fear of the state police system coming in, but I don't think that the legislature, if they can't protect us from that in the matter of wire tapping, then the police state is going to come anyway. I think the whole matter should be left up to the legislature.

HINCKEL: I agree that the commissioner's court should handle the first part of Section 11 as presented by the Committee, but these other matters which I have covered in the second paragraph of this section, I believe, should not be handled by the commissioner's court, and I don't think that they are things that are going to come up often enough so that they can't take just a little extra time and get ahold of a person with a little more mature judgment and experience before such an order was issued. I objected to some of the previous amendments for that reason. It worried me that persons of inexperience or lack of the proper judgment would issue orders to tap wires or use these other various electronic devices which may be developed in the future and so I just will not go along with anything that will permit that, but I do think that the law enforcement body should be permitted, when it is absolutely necessary, to have it to use, and I think I have covered it pretty well by this amendment. I would not be adverse to anyone improving upon it if they can. The legal verbiage I did not think up myself. I took it from the Constitution of the State of New York. This is not the same as the State of New York's provision, but the legal words as I used them to describe my intent came from their Constitution, so I am pretty sure it is workable and useable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: This is the last time I am going to speak on this subject. I think that this amendment should be voted down. I think that Section 11 as drawn, I am confident that it prohibits wire tapping. I think that Section 11 as it is drawn would prevent in the future an invasion of a man's home by any kind of sound wave or any other kind of device and I believe on the wire tapping it should be left to the national government. If it comes to a day when we have a problem with subversion, I think the national Congress will act on that subject and it will be a federal question. I would rather see the amendment defeated because I believe Section 11 will absolutely protect the citizens.

ROBERTSON: I believe I could go along with this amendment if instead of "reasonable ground" the words "probable cause" were used. The words "probable cause" have been construed in the Federal Constitution provision many times and I don't know of any construction with the words, "there is reasonable ground".

COLLINS: There is another angle to this amendment that presents itself to my mind, "The right of the people to be secure against unreasonable invasion of their individual privacy by the use of any electronic or other scientific device shall not be violated". I am just wondering if Mr. Hinckel had in mind that a driver on a highway would consider that his privacy would be invaded by an electronic device such as they are establishing throughout the United States. One of the greatest problems confronting American people today is the number of deaths on the highway. In various states of the Union they have established the radar to catch a speeder, a potential murderer on the highway. Now if the roads of Alaska, undoubtedly during statehood, we will have more traffic than we have today. Every driver on the highway realizes that the potential murderer is a man with a car that's driving 60 or 70 or 90 miles an hour, if he can be apprehended by the use of radar, it is going to save the lives of many, but if the police patrols are prevented from going into court and using the evidence which they have secured by the radar, that potential murderer is going to get away with it for then it is up to the police to offset testimony of that driver, which oftentimes is intoxicated, oftentimes the passengers are intoxicated. It has been the means of killing a man, wife and all his children. I am wondering if the interpretation of this amendment would say that the privacy of a drunken driver would be violated by the evidence secured by the electronic device. I think in view of the study of the report of the Committee that they have covered the protection for privacy. No man living within the law has any fear of an unreasonable search or seizure. They have had time to study them. Now it seems to me that there is a movement here to throw every safeguard around the criminal. I say again that a man who lives within the law has no fear.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I am very much opposed to wire tapping, almost in any instance. I think there are only a few exceptions where wire tapping might possibly be justified and I have been sympathetic to various proposals that have been introduced to amend Section 11 beginning with the first minority report. However, each proposed amendment has raised a number of other questions that have in most cases forced me to vote against the eventual adoption of the amendment, and I personally have come around to the point of view that when this problem becomes serious in the State of Alaska or even in the Territory of Alaska, our legislature will take the necessary action. I think it has been pointed out here before that to date this has not been a very serious problem. Had it been so, I am sure that we would have had a lot of discussion of it in the past on legislative floors as well as in all our various communities where any abuse or invasion of individual privacy might have taken place. It seems to me that the basis for the protection of individual privacy exists in our constitution. I think that rather than putting in language that is questionable, and so far every proposed amendment that has been introduced has raised questions such as Mr. Collins just now brought up, and the current one may be open to abuse. I think the other amendment that has been mimeographed has more or less the same deficiencies. Therefore, I personally am opposed to this amendment, and I believe in the interest of protecting the privacy of individuals, in the interest of getting a workable clause on to our law books, we should leave this matter to the legislature which can spell this out in detail to meet the needs of the day.

R. RIVERS: Well, just briefly, I agree with Mr. Buckalew that subversion is largely a federal question and that actually this bears more heavily on operations by the federal government. What we would put in here under our own police system of our state would not detract one bit from the power of the federal government, so let's as far as our own local scene is concerned, let us forget the federal question. Radar, Mr. Collins is concerned about this. That is a legitimate inquiry. At the present time, under your search and seizures law and under the authority of the highway patrol statutes and regulations that are made in the public interest, the police buzz you down, make you show your driver's license, take a look at your car, and I think they are quite abusive sometimes in spite of safeguards. I can almost assure you, Mr. Collins, taking tabs on a man's speed by radar is not going to be invasion of privacy and would not be prohibited under this amendment. It does not fit in to an invasion of privacy. Sure, it is the bunk to get caught, but that is about all there is to that. Pursuing Mr. Robertson's suggestion of which I approve, I move to amend this proposed amendment as follows: On line 5 of the printed copy before us, I move to delete "there is reasonable ground" and substitute "probable cause exists".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves to delete the words "there is reasonable ground" on line 5 of this proposed amendment and substitute "probable cause exists".

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

KILCHER: Objection for a point of information. You would still leave, in other words it would read then "that probable cause exists to believe"? That something is probable and you believe?

R. RIVERS: That is a standard expression, Mr. Kilcher. May I have a recess for a couple of minutes?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Rivers, did you move the adoption of the proposed amendment?

R. RIVERS: I did and now I ask unanimous consent for the privilege of withdrawing my proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent to withdraw the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I now move an alternative motion after consultation, that the words "reasonable ground" be deleted and the words "probable cause" be inserted in lieu thereof.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves, is that correct, and asks unanimous consent that the words "reasonable ground" be deleted and the words "probable cause" be inserted in lieu thereof. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to follow up a little bit. It would then read "upon oath or affirmation that there is probable cause to believe".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak further against this same amendment here. I believe if we follow the language, the original section submitted by the Committee and leave any additions up to the legislature, in my way of thinking this amendment would help the criminal rather than to help the law enforcement officers. Let's take an example of say an officer is following a suspect in the city and he puts on glasses and false whiskers and follows the suspect around. The suspect takes a room in skid road in one of the hotels and you take a room adjoining there and maybe in your four walls you are legally entitled to be there. Suppose you have a listening device or an ear that magnifies sound or a recording machine and you listen to a conversation in the adjacent room when actually you are within the four walls you are entitled to, and according to this if you don't have a blanket order the information you might gain and with which you might solve a serious case, that would preclude you from ever submitting that evidence in court. Therefore, I am voting against this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hinckel be adopted by the Convention?"

TAYLOR: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you wish to offer an amendment? Mr. Taylor wishes to offer an amendment to the proposed amendment at this time.

BARR: Mr. President, it seems to me we have spent a lot of time with amendments to the amendment, and I submit to you it would be lots easier to vote on this amendment than keep on amending it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'violated' in the third line, insert a period and strike the balance of paragraph eleven."

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment -- Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I would like to speak on that a minute. I talked with quite a number of the members of the Convention and in matters that have been brought forth here it seems to me that quite a number are in favor of leaving it to the legislature to implement or to make any exceptions to the wire tapping prohibition. I think if we put in in the way I have it here, "the rights to privacy will not be violated", then it will be up to the legislature if they wish to make a change. I might say that in the Congress and in the law enforcement bodies of the Department of Justice there has been considerable controversy as to the right of wire tapping. Most of them have come out against it and the nearest they have ever got to some kind of an agreement, and that has not gone into effect, is that the federal government could under exceptional circumstances after a hearing before a United States Federal Judge, could issue an order allowing a wire tap, but it must be exceptional circumstances and I feel that if we just put in here that it is just a direct prohibition against a wire tap that if Congress did enact a law which did give some restrictions, it would be applicable to Alaska, and we could take advantage of it then. I am very dubious of little by little surrendering or allowing exceptions to be made to the guarantees to the people piece by piece. We have the Federal Constitution. They did not give any exceptions on search warrants. We should not give any exceptions on this because this is a much graver matter than is the searching of your house which they come into for a few minutes, but under this they might sit on your wire for six months or six years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: This in substance is exactly the original minority report which we long since voted down. In my opinion it leaves absolutely nothing to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption. We now have the proposed amendment to Section 11 as offered by Mr. Hinckel. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hinckel be adopted by the Convention?"

HINCKEL: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 14 - Armstrong, Boswell, Davis, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hinckel, McCutcheon, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Sundborg.

Nays: 40 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Rosswog, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh. White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 14 yeas, 40 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I move the adoption of my amendment that is on the members' desks.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

WHITE: Mr. President, I believe everything that could possibly be said on the subject has long since been said. I have two brief comments only. The comments on the amendment itself is that it differs from the previous one in this respect among others, and that is that if there is question to the matter that Mr. Collins brought up as to the use of radar to speeding, this matter would allow blanket exceptions by the Legislature. The other one is this. I don't like to waste time speaking for the record, but several references have been made to the record this morning, and I will have to take exception to something said by my good friend, Delegate Buckalew. I believe the use of wire tapping has been permitted by every attorney general in the United States since 1931 and there would be no prohibition in the Federal Constitution against wire tapping, but use of the evidence obtained thereby is not permitted.

DAVIS: May I ask Mr. White a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. White, I am wondering if it is your intention here to allow the legislature to promote regulations against any kind of device, whether it be sound, tape recording or any kind of device? I am afraid the language as it stands is limited to certain particular kinds of scientific devices. Supposing this amendment is adopted, is it your intention that any kind of device that might be used would be subject to this regulation? If so, I don't think there is any use in making amendments. We will clear it up in Style and Drafting or some other way and get going on this thing.

WHITE: I would agree with you, Mr. Davis. I asked the question during the last recess and said I would agree to almost any amendment that would clear up the first four sentences. For instance, if anyone wanted to strike the words "transmitting, listening or sound recording", that would be perfectly agreeable with me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, if the Chair might ask you a question, is it just the underlined matter in your proposed amendment that is supposed to be the new matter?

WHITE: I underlined that on my handwritten amendment to emphasize that that is the only new matter before the body. The first three and one-half lines were contained in the original minority report but my amendment includes all the matter on this mimeographed sheet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Every word in this proposed amendment is new matter?

WHITE: Technically, yes.

BARR: This question we are considering here is rather complicated, and I want to point out to you that actually if we considered every angle and took into consideration every kind of device that might be used, it would take a long time. The usual procedure in the legislature is to do that. A question like this would take each house probably an hour or two hours to go over it and in addition would hear expert witnesses, probably officers of the court and electronic experts testify and they would have the time and the knowledge to go through this and make certain exceptions and I am sure they would certainly protect the rights of the citizens. That is what they are there for, so I believe the legislature can take care of this very well. I am normally for no more amendments, but this amendment seems to me to be pretty good because it would provide just what we need.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, I have not spoken and I don't intend to speak but I would ask if Mr. White would consent to the amendment he spoke of there, simply striking out after the word "scientific", striking out the words "transmitting, listening or sound recording" so it would merely read "scientific device"?

WHITE: With the consent of my second I would agree to the deletion of those words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent, Mr. McNealy, that those particular words be deleted? Is that your purpose?

McNEALY: Yes, Mr. President.

JOHNSON: I would object to that.

McNEALY: I so move.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The words "transmitting, listening or sound recording" be deleted from the proposed amendment.

McLAUGHLIN: I would like to ask a question of Mr. White. What then, Mr. White, is a scientific device as opposed to a nonscientific device?

WHITE: I will have to answer that by saying I am not an expert in that field. The trouble with any of these things is of course that we want to cover every possible eventuality with a perfect language and I don't believe it could be done. To do it, we would be here for weeks. The merit of this to my mind is that it seems to accomplish the intent of the body to say something on the subject but it allows the legislature to make such exceptions and establish such procedures as they may desire.

BARR: I believe that I could answer that question. A scientific device that does not make use of electronics, perhaps would be a listening tube, a pair of binoculars, which is used as an optical principle.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Could I ask a question? Would there be any objection, Mr. White, to eliminating the word "scientific", just leave it "device".

R. RIVERS: I would object.

WHITE: Well, I would have no objection to eliminating the word "scientific", I don't know what to say. As I have already said, I think we could be here all week trying to draft perfect language on this. The point is to say something about protecting the right of privacy of the individual and then to allow such exceptions that have become obvious to me that we have to allow for. I will not move that "scientific" be stricken, but if you want to, go ahead. I won't oppose it.

KILCHER: I am perfectly convinced that there are no occasions on the state level where any of these amendments and subamendments and deletions, whether we amend them or not, are applicable. So my remarks, I hope to speak the last time on this, and I think my remarks will go for any of the amendments. I am in favor of the original Section 11, namely that the matter is not mainly criminal but it is a matter of political and civil rights that are at stake, and wire tapping could not possibly be compared with a search warrant. It would rather be compared with fishing for evidence, like in a case of murder it would be --

SUNDBORG: Point of order. The matter that is before the floor is a motion to strike the words "transmitting, listening or sound recording". If Mr. Kilcher wants to speak on that, let him speak, but he seems to be speaking on the whole amendment. The matter before us is, as moved by Mr. McNealy, is striking the words "transmitting, listening or sound recording".

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Sundborg. The question is, "Shall the words 'transmitting, listening or sound recording-be deleted from the proposed amendment?" All those in favor of deleting those words from the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the words, "transmitting, listening or sound recording" have been deleted. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Do you realize that right now any one of the 55 delegates at this Convention can walk outside this door and commit murder and there is no scientific device that can be used to gather information to prove that they committed murder. I have a right to my privacy and a scientific device can be construed to mean finger printing or any other means of obtaining information. There had better be some thought on this. I am speaking on this amendment as it is.

TAYLOR: Mr. White, I think, has given a lot of thought to this matter and I think he has the right approach. I don't believe that at this time that a law regarding wire tapping is necessary, just as much as Congress did not think such a law was necessary. A couple of years ago when Mr. Brownell, Attorney General of the United States, was toying with the idea of having a wire tapping bill introduced in Congress, but after consultation with a number of the heads of the law enforcement agencies, including J. Edgar Hoover, the Chairmen of the Judiciary Committees of both the Senate and the House, and able constitutional lawyers of the East, he decided not to do it. J. Edgar Hoover was opposed to it, the leading law professors of the East were opposed to it because the danger was greater than the good that could be expected from it. There might be in a few cases, but they felt there was such a breakdown or insidious invasion of the rights of the people to be secure in their privacy that they felt the law should be left the way it is and let the courts pass upon the admissibility of evidence and if it had been secured in an illegal way by the invasion of your home or privacy, it would not be admissible. When the Attorney General of the United States would not do this and when J. Edgar Hoover, whose honesty and conscientiousness has never been questioned, came out flatfootedly against legislative enactment of a wire tapping bill, I think it ill behooves us here to draw a proposed constitution for the State of Alaska to rush in, and we rush in where the angels fear to tread. I think that this possibly should be left entirely out of the proposed constitution. Let us rely upon the guarantees of the bill of rights as it is written by the Committee. Vote this down and go ahead and adopt Section 11 as reported in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, the Attorney General of the United States was considering asking Congress for authority to wire tap and use that evidence in court. Somebody might go and ask our legislature someday for the same thing. Our legislature might turn it down, the same as Congress at this time showed no particular disposition to pass it. So by leaving it specifically up to the legislature to make these exceptions, then you are leaving it open for the future to solve its own problems. I don't think Mr. Taylor's proposition about trodding where angels fear to tread is analogous. We say there shall be no invasion of right of privacy by the use of these devices except such as the legislature may allow. The federal law is much the same way now. That is, they can't admit any evidence that is obtained through transgressions upon privacy into court at the present time, and they are not about to allow that be admitted as evidence in court, so here we are saying that our legislature, that none of that can be used except such as our legislature may allow.

HELLENTHAL: Briefly, I feel that this amendment places stress upon the right of privacy such as, we have stated before, we felt should be placed upon the right. It fully protects us in that the legislature may make exceptions. If Mr. Cooper's contention is correct that finger printing would be the use of scientific device, the legislature could make an exception in that case, and I am sure they would. But this stresses the present day need for preservation of the right of privacy, places emphasis upon the existence of that right which has grown up during the last 50 or 60 years and then gives full freedom to the legislature in addition to the courts to protect us and for that reason I favor the amendment. I cannot see how it can conceivably could harm anyone, how it could thwart the law enforcement agencies, and I feel it is a pressing matter for this state to consider. It is not handled by the federal government, it is a matter of state concern. and the future state of Alaska should properly concern itself with this amendment and this is a good amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. President, I again feel that the use of the words "electronic" and "scientific" will certainly handcuff the officers in carrying on investigation of serious crimes. I speak with nearly 15 years of experience in that activity. I can visualize, if you should see fit to pass this amendment. I can see in the future state, in the courts thereof, thousands of hours being spent with criminal lawyers in the courts, arguing whether a criminal's constitutional rights have been violated by, say, an officer picking up evidence through a false ear or a hearing aid or a camera operated on a battery. I urge each and every one of you to vote "No" on the amendment.

BUCKALEW: I just want to say one more thing on this subject. It is a dangerous invasion of the rights of the individual citizen, and it is bad and it should be voted down. We are supposed to protect the citizens of the state, not leave it up to the legislature, and it should be voted down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended and as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?"

METCALF: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 14 - Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Laws, McCutcheon, McNealy, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Sundborg, White.

Nays: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.

CHIEF CLERK: 14 yeas, 40 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move the previous question.

GRAY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the previous question?

HELLENTHAL: Adoption of Section 11.

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of Section 11 as it is contained in the committee report.

MARSTON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no previous question, so the previous question motion at the time it was made was out of order.

COGHILL: I now move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: We don't adopt anything until third reading. All we are doing here is amending and we have not adopted any other section or article or anything else yet. We have been amending in second reading. There is nothing before us at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was undecided about that question originally himself and that is, when we adopt amendment, we are adopting them into the proposal. We are not passing them in their final form necessarily, so Mr. Sundborg's point would be well taken. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I move that we proceed to the article, Committee Proposal No. 7, on health, education and welfare.

RILEY: May I call attention to the fact that we have in the gallery one who is largely instrumental for the creation of this Convention, through serving, as I recall, as Chairman of the Statehood Committee in the last legislature in the Senate. I refer to Judge Earl Cooper, and ask that he be extended the privilege of the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Judge Cooper, you have been extended the privilege of the floor for a brief statement.

BARR: I second the motion.

JUDGE COOPER: Chairman Egan, fellow Alaskans. I think it would not be inappropriate at this time to say fellow Americans, because I am sure we are about the business of Americanism today. A lump kind of came into my throat today as I drove up in the taxi and saw the sign out front, "Alaska Constitutional Hall". I thought to myself what a historic occasion those people are about in there today. As I look into your faces I could almost call every one of you by name. That is significant to me from this viewpoint because here, establishing a Constitution for the next great State of Alaska are people who have identified themselves with civic groups, professional groups, various organizations which have concerned themselves with the welfare of Alaska throughout the years. I think the people have chosen well. Two things are significant to me in connection with this Constitutional Convention. One is the fact that you have gone about your deliberations with the sincere and honest desire to bring out a Constitution that is going to be acceptable to all the people of Alaska. The second thing that is quite significant to me, although I happen to be identified with one of the two major political parties, you have approached your deliberation here with a spirit of nonpartisanship. This was highly necessary to come out with a constitution that would be acceptable to the people of Alaska. I think you are to be highly commended, my friends. I wish I was a part of this group. I wish I could sometime gather my grandchildren about my knees and say I had the opportunity of affixing my name to a state constitution. If I get a little emotional about this it is because you people are making history here today. This deliberation intrigued me the way you have gone about it with a seriousness, sincerity and the conscientious attitude you have shown. Of course, you will arrive at your areas of difference of opinion. We all have different approaches to the solution of our problems. But you approach this, I think, with what is good for my fellow citizens of Alaska. I predict, although I don't set myself up as a seer, I predict when you come out of here, when your deliberations are over, you can take pride in the fact that you have submitted for confirmation a document all of Alaska can take pride in. Thanks very much for extending me this privilege, and Godspeed.

(Standing ovation.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I have an amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us the article on health, education and welfare. Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: Before proceeding I wonder if under the suggestions made the other day we can now send the first part of this article to Engrossment and Enrollment. I so move.

HARRIS: Point of order. I believe there is still a motion by Mr. White to be considered.

SUNDBORG: If Mr. White had desired to move reconsideration, his right to do so should have been done yesterday.

WHITE: I had no intention of so doing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seemed to the Chair, Mr. Davis, that we had already let the proposal go to the Committee with the understanding that other amendments were not precluded.

DAVIS: You may be right and if so my motion is out of order, but at least Section 11 did not go.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your motion is not out of order unless the Chair is correct.

CHIEF CLERK: After the reconsideration you withdrew the order, so it is in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Davis's request that the article be referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment at this time with the understanding that it would still be in second reading? Is that your understanding, Mr. Davis, until we finish with the article on health, education and welfare?

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President, if it is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, it would take a suspension of the rules, if it were to be amended again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, the reason it was done in the case of the article on the initiative and referendum, we asked that it go to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment with the understanding that it would not be final in the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee until we finished with the other part of the proposal, which was the article on the referendum. You see this article here is merely a section of or an article included in Committee Proposal No. 7. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe that the President is right in that particular matter, that this at the present time, although referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment for the purpose of coming out with the proposal, up to where we have left off now, in proper form with the amendments, but it is still in second reading. It has not been passed on to third reading and would be subject to amendment after it comes back. Is that what the Chair intends?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was the intention unless there is objection. We have before us Section 1 of the article on health, education and welfare. Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to move for a five-minute recess and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chairman of the Committee had informed the Chair that by the time the delegates got seated, they would be finished. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that the remarks of the Honorable Earl Cooper be spread upon the journal today.

MARSTON: I second the motion.

JOHNSON: I have one suggestion, that we also include the prayer given by Father Boileau.

SUNDBORG: I accept that as part of the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the unanimous consent request. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, the time is growing quite short and it is almost noon. As Chairman of the Administration Committee, we would like to know what the feelings of the delegates are today as to night sessions. Are we going to recess at 5:30 and take up again at 6:30 or 7:00? There is a bus at 9:50 p.m. Now it is going to be quite hard to get bus transportation or special buses out at that hour apparently because the buses are running to the army bases at that time, so I am going to call for an Administration Committee meeting at 1 o'clock and the things we have to decide on hinge on what the delegates wish as to the evening sessions, when they wish to start them, and as to the time that they would like to adjourn as of an arrangement that we had when we first started the session after our hearing recess. We will also have to know if we are going to recess and have lunch or supper here. The management of the cafeteria will have to know at noon to provide for this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is the recollection of the Chair that at the committee chairmen meeting at which this subject was discussed, the remembrance of the Chair is that the convening time of 7 o'clock in the evening was discussed, and that we left the rest of the adjournment time open partly because of the bus problem. Mr. White.

WHITE: I was just going to direct a question to Mr. Coghill, if I might. The time of the next previous bus before 9:50?

COGHILL: It leaves the University at 6:50 and at 9:50. The 7:50 bus has been canceled, so if we had evening sessions say until 9:30, that would give the delegates plenty of time to get wraps and into the bus.

WHITE: I just thought while I was on my feet I will make the only comments I have to make on this subject. It appears to me that an hour and one-half for dinner would be taking considerably more time than we need for the function of eating, and it would slow us up later in the evening than we really would have to be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you suggest from 5:30 to 6:30? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I think an hour and one-half would be worthwhile. I think pressure would have built up by then. In addition, a number of committees are still working and will be working. Style and Drafting are going on even beyond that, so I think if we could give people a chance to have committee meetings and relax a little bit, if they have a chance to do so, it would be good, and therefore if we recess from 5:30 until 7:00, it would be desirable.

R. RIVERS: I would like to support Mr. Fischer's views. Some of us are compelled to drive to town during that break, and to get to town and back again requires an hour and one-half.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, then, are you asking unanimous consent that it will be the policy of the delegates to recess from 5:30 p.m. until 7:00 p.m. and convene in session until 9:30, depending on if that is the last bus?

R. RIVERS: 9:30 would still give us 20 minutes. I just ask unanimous consent in regard to this general idea.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to that being the policy of the Convention? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information. Would that include all six days of the week and possibly, or possibly maybe five only?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It might include all six days.

KILCHER: I suggest it might exclude Saturday.

PRESIDENT EGAN: After a few night sessions we might really get going and digging away. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: If there are no objections to that, it would be advantageous to the Committee on Administration if we could have a showing of hands of how many of the delegates figure they would be here for supper tonight.

HILSCHER: Anyone wanting a double serving should raise two hands.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be then about 40 who plan to be here for the evening meal. Mr. Coghill can make those arrangements during the lunch hour, if he will. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Therefore, if there is no other business before the floor, I move that we adjourn until 1:30 this afternoon.

SUNDBORG: Style and Drafting Committee will meet immediately upon recess at the table at the rear of the gallery.

AWES: Bill of Rights will meet immediately upon recess in the committee room upstairs.

V. RIVERS: The Executive Committee will meet immediately upon recess upstairs.

COGHILL: The Committee on Administration will meet at 1 o'clock in the large committee room upstairs.

SWEENEY: The Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment will meet at 12:45.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, then the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the article on health, education and welfare. Miss Awes.

AWES: I placed an amendment on the desk which has been submitted by the Bill of Rights Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I just wanted to get this thing off my desk before we got started on this other thing. Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 3, has compared same with the original and finds the same correctly engrossed, and the first enrolled copy will be on the delegates' desks this afternoon. I move the adoption and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney asks unanimous consent that the report be adopted. If there is no objection, Committee Proposal No. 3 is referred to Style and Drafting. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White.

WHITE: I made a report this morning and there is no additional report.

KNIGHT: On rechecking we find that page 9 of the journal for the 43rd day, roll call, under "nays", strike "Barr" and insert "Awes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Page 9 of the journal of the 43rd day, the first name should be "Awes" instead of "Barr" under the "nays". You ask unanimous consent?

KNIGHT: I do, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to adopting the journal of the 43rd day with the suggested correction as offered by the special Committee to read the journal? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the journal for that day is ordered approved. At this time we have before us the article on health, education and welfare, and we have the proposed amendment, as proposed by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. The Chief Clerk will read that proposal. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to report for the Style and Drafting Committee, if I may at this time, that the Committee is hard at work utilizing the subcommittee method on the articles which had been referred to us. The subcommittees consist of three members each, and they are going over the proposals word by word. We have adopted within our Committee a procedure whereby after the subcommittee has agreed upon its recommendations to the full Committee, but before the full Committee has acted, the subcommittee will contact the substantive committee involved with the view to having one member who would be a spokesman for that committee sit with our subcommittee to go over in detail the suggested changes so that we may be certain that we are following the intent of the committee which originally drafted the article or the intent of the body as expressed here on the floor in amendments. Then after our subcommittees have so conferred with the representative of the substantive committee, the full Style and Drafting Committee will consider their report and report something back here to the Convention floor. My purpose in announcing this to the Convention at this time is to alert each of the major committees to the fact that we will want to have you designate a spokesman or representative of your committee to meet with our subcommittees as we work on your proposals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is a matter you will undoubtedly take up with each committee as you come to that.

SUNDBORG: We will notify the committee when we would desire a meeting but we would like to have them be ready to nominate someone to represent them so we will not be delayed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to Section 1.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, article health, education and welfare, add the word 'educational' before the word 'institution' on the last line."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Committee?

AWES: The Committee met and unanimously adopted this proposed amendment. The word is put in purely for clarification purposes, and I ask the adoption and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Point of information. Is that the only amendment, to put the word "educational" in front of the word "institution"? I am not objecting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection -- Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will have to object a little further because that does not in my opinion cover the context of certain communications that we had read here. I will object for this time.

BUCKALEW: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The subject is open for discussion. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I rise to a point of order. I don't think that it is necessary to vote on the proposed amendment. The Committee met and unanimously decided that the word should be included, and rather than have their report remimeographed they merely want to present it with the word in it, and then in the proper course of time the matter will be considered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, Mr. Hellenthal, it will have to be amended. Your report is before us and the only manner it can be amended in now is by the action of the body. I understand what your feeling was here, but that is out of that jurisdiction at this time. Miss Awes.

AWES: I will give a little explanation of this. This word, as I said before, was merely for clarification purposes. It was the opinion of the Committee that is what this meant originally, but it was implied by virtue of the fact it was in the education section, but there have been so many comments and so many questions, both from the members of the body and from the communications which have come into the Committee and the Convention, we thought it would be better if this were amended to conform with the intent, at least so it is clear what the intent of the Committee is, and that is the only purpose in submitting this at this time.

HERMANN: Point of information, if we adopt this amendment now and insert the word "educational" before "institution ", it will not be possible to remove it later, will it, by amendment from the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would not be possible to remove the word "educational", Mrs. Hermann, that is true. The Chair just wondered, Mrs. Hermann, if the word "educational" being there, if there are any other institutions in the Territory other than educational institutions that would be affected by this.

COGHILL: I rise to a point of information on that. It is in the educational article, Section 1 of the health, welfare, and education, and it should be germane to that section, and that is just clarifying the intent of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment?

ROBERTSON: Point of inquiry, does the word "private" mean parochial?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you mean is it all-inclusive? Is that right, Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Yes, that's right. I don't understand the word "private".

AWES: Well, I think undoubtedly it does. You will notice before the word "private" comes the word "religious". "Religious or other private educational institutions", so I think that would undoubtedly be any educational institution that is not supported and run by the state.

V. RIVERS: The basis to my objection to that is this, we had some statements here for matching funds for hospitals under the Hill-Burton Act under legislative acts and of the Territorial legislature. Now it seems to me if we are going to put in other educational institutions, it might refer back to religious institutions or other private institutions, but I think that under this section they also want to include perhaps that no public funds shall be paid for the direct benefit of any religious institution, so if "education" qualifies "religious", then also you have not taken care of the fact that they will be authorized or allowed to prescribe for religious institutions. Also, I believe if that does not apply, then we have eliminated certain groups that operate hospitals from benefiting under Hill-Burton funds and similar appropriations. It seems to me the word "education" is not adequate to cover it unless we all feel it is adequately covered in some other part of the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I would suggest that before we have a discussion at this point, that if this could be accepted as Miss Awes has suggested, we could go ahead with the suggestions of the article and the intent. We are starting at the end of the article instead of the beginning, and I think we are warping Miss Awes' intent out of shape by getting into a lengthy discussion of what was asked as an addition for clarification and I believe we would find that we would have a much more intelligent approach to this thing if we could start at the beginning of the article and read it through, think it through, discuss it and then make any of these amendments. I would say, too, that if we are going to have a lengthy discussion at this point it might be well to just withdraw the motion, because I think we would be defeating our intent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article has been read for the second time in its entirety. Mr. White.

WHITE: I don't wish to complicate the situation, but we may run into this again. If I understand the article that is before us on the floor, the Committee did not ask to withdraw it, but I think Mrs. Hermann raised a very valid point. If this word is inserted now, we can't move later during the course of the debate to strike it. I would move that the rules be suspended and that the Committee be allowed to substitute its unanimous amendment with the thought in mind that we can then later remove it if during the course of the debate it appears to be the wish of the body to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair stated it could not be removed and the Chair would stand corrected to a certain point on that statement, that is by a suspension of the rules or rescinding of the action of course you could do it.

WHITE: I so move, Mr. President, and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, please state the motion.

WHITE: That the rules be suspended and that the Committee be allowed to submit its proposed amendment as though a part of the Committee report.

KILCHER: Point of information. Could it possibly be handled in such a manner as to have the report reconsidered and recommitted and come out again a second time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The effect of Mr. White's motion under suspension of the rules would accomplish that. Mr. Riley RILEY: Mr. President. I think this is in line with Mr. White's suggestion that this article of this proposal now before us be considered under a suspension of the rules, simply as a committee substitute for the same article. I think that would put the thing in motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Right, and have the word "educational" placed before the word "institution".

RILEY: That would enable us to work either way from that word afterwards.

V. RIVERS: That would cover my objection. I have no objection to that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection then, then it is so ordered, and the word "educational" has been inserted before the word "institution" as if this were a substitute committee report. Now, Section 1 is open for amendment. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee. Would your Committee consider in using the terminology "direct benefit whether or not that would be a directive or a license to the legislature to appropriate money for the indirect benefits? If so, what was their conclusion?

AWES: I don't think it is a direct order to the legislature to do anything. I think we prohibited what we wanted to prohibit. I don't think that tells the legislature they are supposed to do anything else.

METCALF: I have an amendment.

COGHILL: I rise to a point of order. I submitted an amendment to this section before the noon recess, and it has never been recognized, and I was recognized by the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Were you recognized for that purpose before the noon recess? If you were, then the Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Coghill. The Chair feels sorry about that, Mr. Coghill.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, line 7, after the word 'direct' insert the words 'or indirect'."

COGHILL: I move and ask unanimous consent.

R. RIVERS: I object.

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the words "or indirect" be inserted after the word "direct" in line 7, Section 1.

WHITE: Point of order. I believe there was a letter presented to the Convention the other day that the Convention agreed to defer the reading of until we reached this section. It seems to me proper we hear it before we consider any business.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there such a communication? The Chief Clerk might read the communication that was referred to before we act upon this amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: (A letter from Mr. Don M. Dafoe, Commissioner of Education, enclosing a statement on Section 1 of the article on health, education and welfare to the effect that he believed the statement somewhat oversimplified and setting forth seven points which he believed should be included in the constitution, was read.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, the Committee has asked me to speak to this section, and seeing it has been amended I hope you will liberally construe that I am talking to the amendment, but the Enabling Act that we have before us says on page 3, "The provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools which shall be open to all children of said state and free from sectarian control." Mr. President, your Committee on Health, Education and Welfare approached this whole subject of education with great care and consideration. Many methods were sought out to provide and protect for the future of our public schools. We had to recognize that the public schools were our responsibility and that it was our duty to provide for all children of the state in matters of education. The Convention will note that in Section 1 that the Committee has kept a broad concept and has tried to keep our schools unshackled by constitutional road blocks. May I draw to your attention further the fact that we have used the words to establish and maintain by general law". This is a clear directive to the legislature to set the machinery in motion in keeping with the constitution and whatever future needs may arise. Your Committee has also spelled out the fact that all children shall have the opportunity of schools, and that if the need arises for vocational schools, rehabilitation centers, schools for the retarded and other forms of education, that it is completely possible under this proposal. It is not only wise but mandatory under the Enabling Act to spell out that schools are operated in the public interest by the state and kept from sectarian control. In the third sentence of this section it deals with the public funds. This term was used because we felt that state funds may at times go through many hands before reaching the point of their work for the public, and so the term "public funds" was then used as a guide to every portion of our state financing, borough, city or other entity for the disbursement of these monies. In this third sentence we have used the word "direct". It was spelled out that the maintenance and operation or other features of direct help would be prohibited. This was not intended and does not prohibit the contracting or giving of services to the individual child, for that child benefits as his part of society. This section gives the education department, or other departments, the right to seek out the child, independent of his religious affiliation, to help him to become a strong and useful part of society wherein it touches health and matters of welfare. We would also point out in the light of letters that have come to this floor relevant to the disbursement of funds to denominational or other private institutions, that this does not prohibit the use of funds in other educational matters, and I am sure that no one on the Committee would object to the inclusion of this word as we have given the amendment here to clarify this one statement. Now it reads as it has been amended by the Committee, "No money shall be paid from public funds for the direct benefit of any religious or other private educational institution." We did this to take any doubt away on the part of this Convention of our motives, and we state that where there are welfare cases for children in homes and when there are indigents in hospitals that we do not wish to interfere with that practice of helping to serve people through those institutions. It is the feeling of the Committee, after long work and thorough study, that these basic recommendations that we have given here on this section on education should be accepted by the Convention.

V. FISCHER: May I ask the delegate a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Fischer, if there is no objection.

V. FISCHER: The article on finance, the proposal on finance, has the following Section 7: "No tax shall be levied or appropriation of public money made or public property transferred, nor shall the public credit be used, except for a public purpose." Now, that is the article and proposal on finance which would govern not only education but all expenditures of the state, and unless there is a very special reason for having separate and different language here, we probably should treat financial matters only in the finance article, so my question to you is, is there a special reason why we should have the third sentence of Section 1 in the health, education and welfare article?

ARMSTRONG: Your Committee on Health, Education, and Welfare discussed this prior to coming to the floor this afternoon. I believe it was our unanimous feeling that this should be taken as a part of education so that it could always be clarified in relationship to this subject. We realize there are two other matters in proposals that deal directly with finance, but we felt that when we came to those things they would have to be correlated with our action at this point. I feel that this matter needs to be clarified here and that was the action of the Committee and their reason for retaining it here instead of postponing it to the finance section.

R. RIVERS: I speak directly to the proposed amendment to the section. As I understand it, or remember it after all this general discussion -- PRESIDENT EGAN: Before you proceed, it seems that some of the delegates don't realize what the proposed amendment is. After the word "direct" insert the words "or indirect". You may proceed.

R. RIVERS: The standard approach is that no public funds shall be disbursed for the direct benefit of any religious institution or parochial schools. The word "direct" is the standard treatment of that subject. Now when you get into the wording "or indirect", then you are getting into an argument as to whether you can even contract with a private institution for the rendering of certain public services because they might say they might make a profit. Now I agree that it might not be interpreted that way, but you are only stirring up an argument when you talk about prohibiting the disbursement of money for an indirect benefit to a parochial or private institution. You are reaching clear out to ad infinitum in the realms of logic and association. You don't treat it that way, you don't stir up that kind of an argument. If there is a public purpose for which money is to be extended it does not matter if some of it does result in an indirect benefit to some private concern, which may be a contractor, so I definitely don't want to see the words "or indirect" inserted in this section.

COGHILL: Speaking in defense of my proposed amendment, I would first like to say I am very prone to the problem of putting any religious persecution into the Constitutional Convention or among the delegates. It would be the same thing as me trying to convince Mr. Ralph Rivers of the principles of the Republican party, and he in turn of the party he belongs to. I don't believe that is the problem at all. I think that they certainly have a right, a private right or a religious right, or a parochial right under our constitution to have schools. However, I believe that the way our government was set up 175 years ago, that the founders felt that public education was necessary to bring about a form of educating the whole child for civic benefit through a division of point of the home taking a certain part of the child, the church taking a certain part of this education, and the government or state through public schools taking the other part. I adhere to that principle, and I might say that I am the president of the Association of Alaska School Boards and one of the formers of that twelve-point program we developed in Anchorage last October. I think that the problem could probably be well misconstrued here as to the motive and intent. However, I feel that the intent of public education is primarily a state function and does not belong to any private or any one particular group, whether they are in the minority or the majority. I believe we should take direct steps to maintain a free public education not encroached upon by any quarter. I think it might be well to bring out in the argument for the direct or indirect benefit of public funds for education is the matter that is now being faced in Europe and in particular in the Netherlands where they have what is called the form of educational pacification, where the government is splitting the tax dollar among some 500 different church groups providing for a parochial school benefit on an indirect basis, and in a community where there is maybe 500 school children there will be as high as seven or eight small schools scattered out throughout the community, not providing for the fullest benefit in the educational field as far as having a good complete centralized program. I think that sectarianism segregation in our educational system is bad for the children. I do not deny the right of people to have their own schools. However, I think that we should always look to the interest of the founders of our nation when they brought about the separation of church and state. The problem was brought, and it was brought about by Thomas Jefferson quite well when he said, "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free in the state of civilization, it expects something that never shall be". Therefore out of his deliberations with John Madison they brought about a form of free public education starting in Virginia, and it has come forward ever since under the intent of having the tax dollar only brought to the public educational system. I know there have been many law cases on it, Supreme Court rulings and what not, and I think that the matter still is divided as far as the general public is concerned, as between the sects of religion and not on the principle of preserving the free public education as an instrument of the state.

RILEY: Mr. President, I should like to address a question, if I may, to the Committee Chairman, but meanwhile I wish to commend Mr. Coghill on quoting with favor, Thomas Jefferson. Miss Awes, it runs in mind and I have not the delegate proposal before me, that there was a delegate proposal submitted in language substantially the same as this would read if Mr. Coghill's amendment were adopted. Could you tell me what your experience was in Committee, what the Committee thinking was in rejecting that language?

AWES: That I believe, if I recall rightly, was Proposal No. 2 and submitted by Mr. Johnson. It was carefully considered by the Committee, and Mr. Johnson was requested to come in and speak with us on it. We considered both the words "direct" and "indirect" and we felt that the words "or indirect" would, as Mr. Rivers said, reach out into infinity practically, and probably it is not even known what the results of that might be. We did feel it would shut out certain things that should not be prohibited. For instance, the welfare department was giving certain free care to the children of the community, and it might be administered through the schools. Well, we feared that "indirect" would make it impossible to give any of these welfare benefits, for instance, to children who were in private schools, and we did not feel that any prohibition should go that far, and so the Committee did carefully consider that word and unanimously agreed we should not use it.

RILEY: It has been said the Committee gave it correct attention and rejected it permanently?

AWES: That is right.

RILEY: Thank you.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I very much favor the inclusion in this section of the words "or indirect". As I read the section it refers to our school system and in this book, "Constitutions of the States", there are 16 states that have sections in their constitutions preventing public tax dollars from being spent for private schools in any way, shape or form. Here is the section from the State of Missouri. The constitution was drawn in 1945, which some of you may have read. It says that, "No money shall ever be taken from the public treasury directly or indirectly in aid of any church, sect or denomination of religion, or in aid of any priest, preacher, minister, or teacher thereof as such, and that no preference shall be given to or any discrimination be made against any church, or any form of religious faith or worship." I am a firm believer in freedom of religion, and we have been aware in the progress of history, medieval times down to colonial times, that at times there have been persecutions practiced. Those are unpleasant things and they have gone past into history. I am for the free public school system, being a licensed teacher and having taught in public school systems in the Territory. I am also a firm believer in the complete separation of church and state, especially with the use of state money and state property. As I said again, I don't believe that the state property or taxes should be used and transferred to a religious group to be used directly or indirectly to the economic or political religious detriment of some other group or individual, and all activity should be on a free and competitive basis, and if I may just have a few minutes, I have a situation in Seward where a religious group have been given the use of the building and land by the Territory, and they are in competition, economic competition to my economic detriment. It is an actual fact, and I not only speak for myself but I speak for four or five people who happen to be affected similarly, and that is why I am trying to point out that I do not like to see state property or money transferred over to religious groups because persecution often times can come about. In this instance here, they have a Territory land, building valued around 60,000 dollars, and they are in active competition with private enterprise, and they have other advantages -- free snow removal, cheap help, no taxes, and I just point out these little things here that make me very much opposed to the use of state money or property in any way, shape or form by religious groups. I therefore favor the inclusion of this phrase "or indirect".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I had the opportunity to talk rather at great length with the superintendent of schools in Ketchikan during the Christmas recess on this very subject. He had suggested that the word "indirect" be inserted here, but during the course of the conversation he also said that the public school people were desirous of providing that the standards in the parochial schools be in some manner made equal to those in the public schools. Of course, the only way that could be provided would be through supervision by the State Board of Education. I pointed out to him that the insertion of the word "indirect" here would defeat that purpose and he immediately said that he agreed and he did not want the word "indirect" inserted.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, will the Chair permit a question through the Chair to Mr. Coghill?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will permit a question through the Chair to Mr. Coghill.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. Coghill, could you cite me at least a few instances how indirect benefit might accrue. Are there specific types of instances within your knowledge of how this would apply? Because of your delivery here a few moments ago I assumed that there must be various types of specific indirect benefits which you would wish to prohibit. I would like to know what they are.

COGHILL: Through the Chair to Mr. McCutcheon, I believe by putting the indirect benefit clause in there that any social welfare, health arrangements that might be made with the state with any private or parochial institution would be on a contractual basis and would be providing a service to the public and not to the institution, and that is the purpose of the indirect clause in there. It would allow them to have a contract to produce or to show full value for the value of money received from the tax coffer, from the funds. In other words, to provide a hot lunch program with Territorial money or to provide a health program in a school, I do not deny that to the private schools because I feel that that is an instrument of public benefit because the child is benefiting from it from a public standpoint, and a contractual agreement between the organization and our organized state would therefore be in effect. Does that answer your question?

McCUTCHEON: In part. Your intent would be then that if some private institution of one nature or another were to supply this particular service under contract to the state that there could be no profit in that as it extended to that institution? That is, they would have to supply that service at the actual cost? That there could be no profit derived from that particular transaction. Is that the point you are making, that it would not prohibit supplying these various types of welfare programs, hot lunches, etc., but there could not be a profit factor involved?

COGHILL: That is correct, because we in the public school system, we are not allowed to make profit on such things.

KILCHER: I think that the position is not clear at all. What Mr. McCutcheon brought up is not clear at all, a benefit is not the same as a profit, so if they don't want any profit, why don't they mention it. I can see where a private school is benefited by getting nonprofit assistance. If, for instance, it is possible for a private school to get lunch money assistance on nonprofit basis for its children, it may make the difference for them to be able to operate or not. If they are not getting lunch money or such things, they might not be able to operate, so by getting these nonprofit assistances for the children, they are getting benefited greatly. As a matter of fact, the benefit is so great it means survival or not, so I think the issue is not clear. On the principle I think I should be against the amendment because it does not clear the issue at all in that respect.

COGHILL: Maybe to clarify a point for Mr. Kilcher, one thing we want to keep in mind is the fact that the state has set up a public educational system for all children. The people that are sending their children to private, parochial, or any other type of institution are segregating themselves from the public and therefore they should not derive the benefit from the tax dollar. We are providing it. We have spent thousands, hundreds of thousands to provide a good educational system, and if we go to the pacification plan, we are destroying that principle and that in turn answers your interpretation of profit or benefit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: If I may ask Mr. Coghill, in reference to your remarks, does your state guarantee to offer a complete educational system?

COGHILL: It certainly will, Mr. Gray, after we write the articles on the legislation.

GRAY: You feel you have a complete educational system today?

COGHILL: I certainly think so.

GRAY: I think there are a lot of areas where a lot of children have no opportunity for public education.

COGHILL: I feel that it is quite a privilege to be a part of a public educational system and be able to criticize it, to be able to criticize our methods and our procedures and to work on those. I will agree with you wholeheartedly, Mr. Gray, that there are lots of things we have to do. However, in my recent trip to Washington, D. C., and being a conferee on the White House Conference on Education, we found with the exception of one disgruntled person, we found that our educational system in Alaska was far above the educational systems of the states. We have a progressive educational system in the sense that we are moving forward. I think one of our biggest thorns is the Alaska Native Service, if that's what you are referring to.

TAYLOR: There has been a lot of sparring around here on this subject. Everybody seems to duck the issue, and I am going to ask Mr. Coghill a question if I may, through the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Coghill, what -- in the event that the word "indirect" was inserted into this measure, what effect would that have on the school bus law that is now in effect?

COGHILL: What effect would that have on the school bus law? I know I am up against a pretty good attorney, but I think that will in turn not affect too much of the school bus system in Alaska because it can be on a public work contractual basis, take it completely out of the educational picture, put it on the welfare picture.

AWES: I would like to make one statement. Mr. Coghill suggested that we insert the words "or indirect". The Committee very carefully considered that word "indirect". We were not sure of the far-reaching effects it would have. Mr. Coghill now proposes that he explains what it means. I can't agree with his interpretation in any respect, and he would have us believe from the explanation he has given so far that it means precisely nothing. I don't believe that any court would so interpret it, and I think he should either give us some reason for having it in there or else if it doesn't mean anything, then I think we should take it out, but I am not satisfied with any explanation he's given yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Since the Committee considered this at considerable length about this matter of "direct" or "indirect" wording in this particular section, you must have in mind several specific instances where "indirect" might apply in some fashion in a derogatory manner. If you do have such an idea or some particular questions how this word "indirect" might affect adversely to thinking upon your particular section here, I would like to hear some of them. If your Committee has gone into this so thoroughly, there must have been one or two problems that have arisen where there would be some question about including the word "indirect".

AWES: I have already given one very good example, and that is this question of welfare services which are often administered to children through the schools. Mr. Coghill says that the word "indirect" would not prevent these. I very definitely think that the word "indirect" would prevent them. I think that is one very good example.

POULSEN: May I ask Mr. Coghill a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: If the word "indirect" is put in, would that mean there is such a thing as subsidy to hospitals would be eliminated?

COGHILL: Mr. Poulsen, this is an educational article with the educational institution.

POULSEN: It still comes under public welfare, matching funds for instance.

COGHILL: Mr. Poulsen, if you will note that the Committee amended their proposal to have "educational" inserted before institutions, and so this is strictly an educational article, sir.

WHITE: May I direct a question to Mr. Coghill?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. Coghill, are there children's homes, foster homes in the Territory which provide any education at all to the children who are entitled to admission to those homes?

COGHILL: The children's homes that have schools with them, is that what you mean?

WHITE: Are there any such institutions in the Territory of Alaska that provide any education at all to the children admitted to them?

COGHILL: Yes, there is.

WHITE: What would happen to them under your proposed amendment?

COGHILL: What would happen to these institutions now operating?

WHITE: Do any of these receive any public funds either from the Federal government or the Territorial government?

COGHILL: I don't believe they do because the contract schools went out before 1900. They had a form of contract for schools and that went out. I think that all your foster homes would be deriving an indirect benefit or some sort or another, and there are plenty of them.

WHITE: I think your statement could be corrected, but I'm not the one to do it. I'll defer to someone else, but in the event it is corrected, I would like to hear your answer to the question as to what would happen to them under your amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have here a copy of a memorandum from Henry A. Harmon, Director of the Department of Public Welfare of the Territory to the Attorney General on this very subject, listing a number of schools operated by private and religious organizations to which the Territory now pays funds through the Department of Public Welfare. They show that such institutions not only include a few Catholic institutions, but also Seventh Day Adventists, Moravian, and Presbyterian. It is very brief. I wonder if I might ask to have it read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the communication can be read. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I think it should be read only if it covers educational institutions.

SUNDBORG: It does only that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the communication.

(This letter giving information as to payments made by the Territory to various children's institutions in the Territory was read by the Chief Clerk.)

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, there are several sources of income in the private institution. First of all, an institution can apply for a surplus of food, and upon the signature of the administrator, that food is made available in a limited quantity. I might give an example of butter, beans, and staples of that type. I think that is given on the basis that no Territorial agency is able to give a large enough sum to a private institution to support that child. I might give you an example of one institution that probably is receiving 900 dollars a year from the Territory, but the actual cost breakdown without new buildings and capital expenditures run in excess of 1300 dollars a year to adequately take care of that child. In that institution there was no educational facilities, that is just housing. Another source of income would be then this Territorial grant of 50 dollars which is in lieu of home care. The child as a ward of the Territory and as such must be put into a foster home or into a private institution. They choose, wherever possible, to put the child in a foster home and let that child go to the private school. If a family situation is so complicated, they want to keep that family structure together and hold that family, the child is placed in a private home. There are a few, very few of the schools that have boarding facilities and educational facilities, but there are some that exist, Mr. White, in the Territory, and most of the grants by the Territorial Department of Welfare are given for the boarding home facilities and not for the education, and I think that could be borne out by the fact that they are looking for a holding situation for the child. The educational facilities are incidental at that particular point, but there are a number of places that are together. I hope that will help.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I don't think the question has been answered yet by any of the persons who have spoken on this subject.

If the word "indirect" is in there, it is going to eliminate almost any kind of aid. It will, for example, eliminate the free lunch, eliminate bus transportation, eliminate, for example, if we had a school or an institution where they had a school, it would eliminate the state giving any support to the child because that would be indirect support to the institution. I think when the members vote on it, I think they ought to understand the word "indirect" cuts out everything, just eliminates all kinds of support, and I don't think there is any question about it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that I cannot agree with Mr. Coghill that contracts would not be indirect help. I believe you could construe them to be indirect help. I believe that we should leave these words out of the section, and I believe the Committee has done a very good job. They have considered all angles of it, and I would like to say that I support the Committee resolution.

COGHILL: In closing the argument, I might just leave the thought with the delegates that on this particular subject of the direct or indirect benefit to the private or religious educational institution, would guarantee every citizen of the new State of Alaska that any money diverted from the public funds to any such organization in complete competition with your public institutions, if you will, that there will be a sound contractual agreement between your government and this private institution to provide public service and not to the benefit of the individual institution.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1 line 7, after the word 'direct' insert the words 'or indirect'."

JOHNSON: I request a roll call.

KILCHER: I am sorry to take another minute. There is one problem that has not come up in this discussion. I am a father of seven children, five of which have had the Calvert course for several years with good results. I understand that the Calvert course could possibly be construed not to be available anymore either if indirect help were not available to a private school. The Territory pays it. My children go to a private school, or most of them. The biggest ones though hike over the road, and the Territory pays an indirect system. It could possibly be construed to include the Calvert course, which is a great problem in Alaska.

COGHILL: I might answer that, being familiar with the Calvert course, that the Territorial Department of Education, that is one of their recognized correspondence courses for the outlying areas, and if any family on a CAA remote station or someone on a remote part of the Yukon River, etc., would want to further the education of their children, write to the Commissioner of Education and they are referred to the Calvert course, and in higher institutions it would be the correspondence courses from the University of Nebraska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Coghill be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 19 - Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Harris, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, McCutcheon, Metcalf, Nerland, Poulsen, Robertson, Sweeney.

Nays: 34 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nordale. Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Nolan, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 19 yeas, 34 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption.

WHITE: I have an amendment to Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White and Mr. Fischer.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, strike the last sentence."

WHITE: I move the adoption of the amendment.

V. FISCHER: I second it.

ARMSTRONG: I object. Mr. President, I feel that we will complicate our finance situation by trying to write this into a later report for clarification. I think here in one sentence you pinpoint it; you clarify it once and for all, but when you start to define this thing again in a larger amendment, you have a hopeless task. I don't think it can be done, and I believe you want it here where they read it, they understand it and they know the precepts we are following. I think we would be wasting time to now delete this after we have had this vote of confidence for the Committee's report and then try to take it up again later. So I shall vote to kill the amendment and would ask the delegates to do likewise.

WHITE: I feel again that we are getting into a legislative matter here, and I feel that the broad policies that have been laid down in the Federal Constitution are good enough for our purposes here. Those policies that are contained in our Section 5 of our bill of rights which says, "No law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof". In a section, I forget the number of it, in a finance article saying that no funds shall be spent for other than a public purpose. I think those two sections are good enough to spell out the broad outline. In addition, I feel that while I am not a lawyer that almost every argument that has been applied against the use of the word "indirect" could just as logically be applied against the use of the word "direct", and I think it will lead us into trouble.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White and Mr. Fischer be adopted"? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would just like to add, Mr. President, that while this Commissioner Dafoe points out education is an important field, I do not feel that when it comes to an appropriation of public funds it should receive any special, either more restrictive or more favored treatment. As Mr. White pointed out, the general stipulation is that funds be appropriated only for public purpose. Now it seems to me that the definition of public purpose must be made during every age in view of the conditions prevailing at that time. I think that has been one of the strong points of the Federal Constitution. The fact that it has left itself open to that kind of interpretation and, therefore, it seems that if we give favored treatment or discriminatory treatment to this education section, what are we going to do when it comes to health, welfare and just anything else that may come out. I think the public purpose provision should be the only guidance when it comes to appropriating public funds.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I would like to ask the Chairman of Style and Drafting if they would have the authority to move this section, if it directly belonged to taxation, would Style and Drafting have that authority?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Rules Committee have the answer to that question?

SUNDBORG: Our rules, I believe, outline the authority of the Style and Drafting Committee and they do provide that after the various proposals have been adopted in third reading that the Style and Drafting Committee has an opportunity to arrange any material, section, subsections and I believe even sentences where it properly belongs in the constitution. It might be that Style and Drafting would have that authority, but, of course, that authority would be subject to approval here on the floor because we can't do anything in our Committee, of course, unless it is approved in a subsequent report that we make to the plenary session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I merely wanted to point out that this problem has arisen in a good many of the States. It has arisen in connection with the education, and therefore I feel that this provision should remain in the section under education.

COGHILL: Mr. White brought up the thought that the Federal Constitution was all-inclusive. However, it might be well to remember that during the years that they were writing the Federal Constitution they left all educational matters to the individual states, and the purpose of leaving these educational matters to them was because of the trouble they were having at that time between different groups and different communities and different states being quite well controlled by different churches of one sort and another, such as the Quakers in Penn State and down in Virginia and over in Rhode Island and through that area. I feel that this should stay in the article, although my amendment did not ride, I am going to vote for it because I feel at least we have a certain provision for the direct benefit of tax dollars. I might, if I may, Mr. President, read the Supreme Court's decision of 1947 of the Emerson case, and I will not read the whole section but just in one part. It says, "No tax in any amount, large or small, can be levied to support any religious activities or institution whatever they may be called, or whatever form they may adopt to teach or practice religion. Neither state nor federal government can openly or secretly participate in the affairs of any religious organizations or groups and vice versa."

WHITE: If I may close briefly. I am not for or against bus transportation to certain institutions. I am not for or against hot lunches to certain institutions. I again think we would be much better advised to stick to the broad outlines. In partial reply to Mr. Coghill, I might mention that 100 years from now the state might wish to get involved in some sort of G.I. Bill of its own, following another war. I would not be in favor of it now, but 100 years from now I might. Why not leave ourselves open?

BARR: Point of information. I seem to remember when we first started out there was a sheet of paper on our desk to outline certain things that was mandatory to place in our constitution to conform with the Federal Constitution and with our accepted principles of American government. I will ask Mr. Armstrong, I believe, wasn't this practically the same wording in one of those paragraphs and did it not specifically mention schools? Mr. White has put in his amendment because he said the other phrasing in the Finance Committee report would take care of it. That mentioned public funds should be used for public purposes, but aren't we required to state in our constitution that public funds should not be used for private schools?

ARMSTRONG: No sir, not according to the House Enabling Act that we have used as a guide. On page 3, line 14, it just makes the general provision that for the establishment and the maintenance of a system of public schools which shall be open to all children of the state and free from sectarian control. That is the only thing, but I might add that I believe that there are 39 states that have added some type of safeguard in their constitutions directly in connection with education, and I believe every new constitution that has come out has held to some provision of this type, practically in every case they have been written in at this point, so I don't know why we should be afraid to follow that pattern. I don't think it is unusual to keep it here. I think it is healthy to keep it here, and I believe this is where it belongs.

McNEES: I call for the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White and Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?"

JOHNSON: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 13 - V. Fischer, Hurley, Kilcher. Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, Nolan, Poulsen. Reader, Riley. Sundborg, Walsh, White.

Nays: 41 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 13 yeas, 41 nays and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 1? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: May I ask a question? I notice that the Committee has come in with the words "direct benefit". I notice that some of the other states' constitutions, including that of Hawaii, say "support or benefit". What was the intent of limiting them to the word "direct"? I would like to know a little about the intent of the Committee rather than in dealing with both "support" or "benefit".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I don't recall that the Committee considered the words "support" or "benefit". I think the purpose we wanted to achieve was brought out in the arguments on an earlier amendment and we felt these words did it, and I don't recall the words "support" or "benefit" came before the Committee.

V. RIVERS: In other words, the Committee did not consider the words "support" or "benefit"?

AWES: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That seems to be the understanding of the Chair. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: As I recall, Mr. President, we probably discussed the question of the support of private schools, but we did not feel it needed to be in this particular section, and I don't recall, Mr. Rivers, that we considered that as a part of the text. I certainly would agree with what Miss Awes has said, although we discussed in Committee such things as direct legislation for the building of a school or the maintenance of a private school, which would be support, but it was our understanding that that would be covered under this word "direct benefit". This would prohibit the direct appropriation for building or maintenance of private institutions.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am going to make a motion. I think that the word "direct" limits the interpretation of this. I am going to make a motion that the word "direct" be stricken and insert in lieu thereof the words "support of", line 7.

BARR: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The matter is open for discussion. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I would just question the striking of the words "direct benefit". The "support" I can see that, but "direct benefit", it might leave the question wide open again as far as I'm concerned.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I move and ask unanimous consent for a five-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May I ask Mr. Rivers, what in your opinion would be the implication or result of the proposed change?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: There is some question in my mind as to what interpretation the words "direct benefit" would receive from the courts and just how narrow they would consider a "direct benefit" to be. I notice in other state constitutions, I don't have all the constitutions available, but the wording I provided was identical with the State of Hawaii. In Nevada they say, "No money shall be expended, either city, county or state, for benefit of sectarian purposes.". In the case of Puerto Rico they also have the same broad general language. I hesitate to use the Puerto Rican constitution as a model for I don't care too much for it, but in that highly religious little Commonwealth they have adopted the same principle, but there again I feel that the word "direct" may be interpreted very narrowly by the courts and may lead to a great many funds that would go for support that I personally do not feel should be going to support of sectarian institutions.

TAYLOR: Mr. Rivers, do you not believe that if you leave that word out it will create more confusion than it will, leaving it in?

V. RIVERS: I don't think so. It will leave a little broader field for interpretation. However, Mr. Chairman, I believe that after considering the matter I will withdraw my amendment and ask unanimous consent to do so for the moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I ask that we now revert to the introduction of proposals.

1531

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will now revert to the order of business of introduction of proposals. The Chief Clerk may read the proposals as introduced by Mr. Barr.

COOPER: Is this a delegate proposal or committee proposal? Was not the date set January 8?

CHIEF CLERK: That is today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposal.

CHIEF CLERK: "Delegate Proposal No. 45, introduced by Mr. Barr, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What committee would you like that to be referred to, Mr. Barr? I believe it should go to the Executive, both of those should. Would the Committee on the Executive be the proper committee? If there is no objection the Committee Proposal will be referred to the Committee on the Executive. The Chief Clerk will please read the second proposal.

CHIEF CLERK: "Delegate Proposal No. 45 introduced by Mr. Barr, OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on the Executive.

BARR: Would it be possible afterwards to have that referred also to the Judiciary?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, it will be referred from the Committee on the Executive to the Committee on the Judiciary. If there is no objection it is so ordered. Are there other amendments to Section 1? Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: I have no amendment. I would like to direct a question to the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee concerning this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson, you may direct a question.

JOHNSON: Miss Awes, in the second line, the wording "system of public schools" appears. Now in a number of state constitutions I have noticed that they use the word "system of free public schools". It is assumed I imagine that you intended that we should have a system of free public schools here, but you did not specifically use the word, and I wondered if the Committee had considered that matter and if so, why it was left out?

AMES: We did consider the matter. The first two sentences in this section are taken almost word for word from the Enabling Act. The word "free" was mentioned. We did not feel it was necessary since we say that a "system of public schools shall be open to all children" and since there is already a well set up system of schools which are free, we were afraid that the word, while not necessary, might cause some confusion if it were used. For instance, this section is intended to refer not only to grade schools and high schools, but also other educational institutions. For instance, a state university, and there may be vocational schools, etc., established, which is customary throughout the country to charge tuition for, sometimes less to residents of the state than to other persons. Also, a city running its own school system, I think, customarily charges a small tuition fee to children who come in from other places, and we were afraid if we used the word "free" that it might raise questions whether or not certain practices like this should be continued or considered. We did not think that was a matter for the constitution.

JOHNSON: Thank you.

HURLEY: I would like to speak on the matter of personal privilege and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hurley.

(Mr. Hurley spoke under a question of personal privilege regarding the article on health, education and welfare.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 1, article on health, education and welfare? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I have an amendment to follow Section 1. I want to change Section 2. I have this amendment, it is neither an amendment to Section 2 nor Section 1. I just want to get a new Section 2 and renumber it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are asking that Section 2 be deleted?

HERMANN: No, not deleted, just moved down. This actually belongs under the education section, that is the reason I put it in. It has nothing to do with what is already written, however.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as offered. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mrs. Hermann wants to inject some new material between the sections. What she has so happens to come in logical order between Sections 1 and 2. We are taking these up section by section, but are we not at liberty to interject new sections in between sections?

PRESIDENT EGAN: She wants to inject a new Section 2 and renumber 2, 3, 4, and 5. The Chair is just hard at getting it through his head. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Add a new Section 2 and renumber succeeding sections: 'The state shall provide for a Unified Library Service.'"

HERMANN: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

HERMANN: I ask unanimous consent.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I very probably should have submitted this suggestion to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, but it was not made to me until after they had turned in their report, and it is submitted at the request of the present Territorial Library Board that we open the way for the establishment of a unified library service for the State of Alaska, which is in keeping with the unified library service that we have recently established for the Territory of Alaska, and it properly comes under the educational article of the constitution, so I have submitted it for that reason. I shall be glad to answer any questions anyone wishes to ask.

DOOGAN: I would like to ask Delegate Hermann a question. Don't you suppose this could very easily be handled by the legislature rather than making it a constitutional provision?

HERMANN: It provides that the legislature shall do it, that is draw up all the regulations concerning it. It was just simply giving them the authority to do it.

SUNDBORG: May I address a question to Mrs. Hermann? Would there be anything in the constitution, if adopted without your proposed amendment, which would prevent the legislature from doing that at any time it pleased to do so?

HERMANN: Frankly, Mr. Sundborg, I don't know, but I submitted the amendment at the request of the Library Board. They think they need the authority.

McNEALY: If I could address a question to Mrs. Hermann. I am probable a little thickheaded today of all days, but what is the meaning of the word "unified"?

HERMANN: The last legislature established for the Territory of Alaska what is designated as a "unified library service". It means a Territorial library service under the direction of a Territorial librarian that seeks to get uniformity in the operations of libraries throughout the Territory. It also has as one of its major objectives the collection of documents and materials to include in all of these libraries. I think if the assembly will remember, we had a letter some time back from Miss Phelps who is the Territorial Librarian, suggesting that some place be made the repository of everything that is of any historical importance that came out of this Convention, and that is what she is attempting to do for all the libraries, so that in every community we will have libraries having material available that deals with the Territorial development in all of its forms, as well as the customary library material. It also seeks to set up uniformity in operations and proceedings. As most of you likely know, we have a Territorial Library Aid bill whereby we contribute matching funds to certain libraries for the purpose of acquiring books and other periodicals, and all of that is supposed to be reduced to a uniformity of procedure that will do away with much of the confusion that has resulted from every little library and every little place setting up its own rules of procedure and probably not adhering very closely to them after it sets them up.

RILEY: Mrs. Hermann, would you have any objection to the journal showing that the amendment offered by Mrs. Hermann is by request?

HERMANN: I think it was Mr. Barr the other day who said he never introduced anything by request and I am trying to emulate Mr. Barr's noble example. I have no real objection.

MARSTON: May I ask, Delegate Hermann, did you say that the Territory could do all this without us going through the operation here?

HERMANN: Frankly, I said that I did not know. I have not given the question a great deal of thought. I just received this request in the last day, and the Library Board feels that the authority is necessary before the state can pass a law creating it.

TAYLOR: Mrs. Hermann, do you not believe that due to the fact we now have in effect a law providing for a unified library system, it would naturally carry over into the state, be a state law?

HERMANN: If it is re-enacted by the first Territorial or State legislature.

TAYLOR: If the legislature re-enacted the present laws, it would not need this?

HERMANN: I might say there is a provision in the Hawaiian Constitution providing for this very thing and that is probably what induced the sponsors of this request to ask it.

BARR: I am greatly in favor of establishing public libraries. However, there is great doubt in my mind as to whether this is constitutional material. We do have a law establishing library boards which will carry over to the new state, of course, and if we put such a proposal into the constitution, it will be permanent. If at some future time we decide that conditions are so bad we can't afford libraries or want to abolish them, we can't very well do it if it is in the constitution. I would like to point out, the library board is one of the minor departments at the present time, and in the report submitted by the Committee on the Executive Branch which deals with the establishment of the various departments of the government, no mention was made of many departments much more important than a library board for the simple reason that it was supposed the legislature would make laws relating to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mrs. Hermann be adopted by the Convention? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I claim the prerogative of making the final remarks about this brainchild of mine, and I want to say in answer to Mr. Barr's statement, except for the public school system of Alaska, I don't think that anything is more important than library service. Maybe he does not read as much as I do, maybe he reads more but buys his own, but I feel very strongly that the entire cultural pattern of a state or any unit of government is set by the library facilities it offers to the people of that country, and I hope that you will pass this amendment because just for the very reason that he says that we might sometime feel too poor to afford a library service. I don't think we can ever be too poor to afford a library service, and I don't think there is anything in our government, aside from our public school system, that is so valuable to the citizens as a whole as a library service.

McNEES: Roll call, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mrs. Hermann be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

STEWART: May we have it read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could the Chief Clerk please read the amendment at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Add a new Section 2 and renumber succeeding sections: 'The state shall provide for a Unified Library Service'."

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 16 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Doogan, Hermann, Hinckel, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McNees, Nerland, Robertson, Sweeney, Walsh.

Nays: 37 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Hilscher, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 37 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What section?

BUCKALEW: Two and three.

KILCHER: I also had an amendment to Section 3 on the table.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew had been recognized, Mr. Kilcher, but the Chair will remember that. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Sections 2 and 3 and renumber Section 4 to read Section 2."

BUCKALEW: I move the adoption.

METCALF: I second the motion.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I was on the Committee, but after more mature consideration I believe that Sections 2 and 3 are absolutely unnecessary. The state has the power under the general welfare clause. It really struck me in the face when we got Delegate Hermann's proposal about unified library board. I think Sections 2 and 3 are about the same category. It is not necessary to put it in there, and if the state has got the power I believe that it should be stricken along with the idea we are not trying to legislate, just trying to write a constitution.

ARMSTRONG: I object. I feel that these sections give a check and a philosophy we need within the constitution. I think to delete them would be shirking our duty and pointing the way in both welfare and public health. These are important parts of our living day by day, and when we say the promotion of the protection of public health, we weighed those words. When we came to Section 3 and we said, "the standard of living compatible with health and human dignity", we weighed those words, and I think we put them in there because of the philosophy that we held that these departments should carry out. I believe they should be retained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I want to say one more thing. I would direct the delegates again to read Section 3. That sort of frightens me a little. I don't know what it means, even after being on the Committee, -- "a standard of living compatible with health and human dignity". I don't know what that is going to do to the state treasury, but I see no reason for having either one of the sections in view of the fact that we have a general welfare clause.

MARSTON: In the name of brevity and shortness, on the same condition I turned down Mildred Hermann, I am going to vote along with Buckalew on those two deletions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe that if we eliminated these two sections, Sections 2 and 3, that this constitution would receive scant consideration from the voters of the Territory of Alaska who vote upon confirmation, and if they did happen to pass it, it would receive scant consideration from Congress, that would omit two such important articles of the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I am amazed at the statements made here this afternoon by some of our delegates. Is this the same Mrs. Hermann who time after time asked us not to include statements that are purely legislative? Is this the same Mr. Marston who has said he would vote against all amendments? Is this the same Mr. Buckalew who sat for five weeks or so on the committee which drew up this article and signed its report and here this afternoon they are all reversing their positions? I ask the delegates to note that Section 2 says, "The State shall", so that means one thing. Section 3 says "The State may". If we knock them out, as Mr. Buckalew suggests, it may be that the state has the power to do such things, but the legislature may either do it or not at its discretion. But if we leave them in the legislature must provide for the promotion and protection of public health.

BUCKALEW: I have the right to close. Of course I am the same Mr. Buckalew who has been here all along, but I might add that the same Mr. Buckalew has learned a little more about constitutional law as he has gone along. As I say, after more mature consideration I think both sections are superfluous, and the general welfare clause is inclusive, and I see no necessity for putting it in the constitution. I think the people of Alaska will vote for the constitution whether it is there or not. It shouldn't be in there and I want to vote it down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor of the proposed amendment being adopted will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: My amendment is for Section 3. Someone might have one for Section 2.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have no amendment, but I have a question which I would like to direct to the Chairman of the Committee. Would the language of Section 2, as it now stands, permit programs of state health insurance? For instance in the nation of Norway there is a system under which the nation by taking money out of your pay check, the pay check of each employee, every month or week or whenever he is paid, sets up a statewide system of public health benefits. Great Britain does the same thing. Now would the same thing be permitted under the language of Section 2 in your opinion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Well, to tell the truth about it, I had not considered that particular problem. I think this section would probably permit it unless some other section prohibits it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 3:45.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I wish to call attention to the fact that we have today spent 47 minutes over and beyond the period of time called for by motions to recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us Mr. Kilcher's proposed amendment to Section 3 of this article.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike all of Section 3 and substitute the following: 'The State may provide for the general welfare.'"

SWEENEY: Is that a new Section 2 or 3?

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike all of Section 3 and substitute the following: 'The State may provide for the general welfare.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I move the adoption.

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I would like to inquire of the maker of the motion, is he providing that the state will provide for the general welfare?

KILCHER: I did not hear.

COGHILL: Are you providing that the state shall provide for the general welfare of the people of the state?

KILCHER: May provide. Mr. President, I think in line with our need for brevity and also with our past attempts of being too restrictive by permitting and yet not forcing the state to provide for the general welfare, we are in line with the United States Constitution. The general welfare clause is stressing the words "general welfare only. Everything else is inconsequential, and that is perfectly sufficient in my opinion for all that the state may decide to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: The very first article in the bill of rights takes care of that. That is what I interpret it as meaning, the general welfare.

KILCHER: I agree with Mrs. Nordale to the extent that I also was in favor of striking Section 3 under Mr. Buckalew's amendment, but since it may not hurt to make mention of this matter in the article on health, education and welfare, I propose that we include it in this brief formulation.

NORDALE: My point was I was wondering if he means the same thing that is meant in the first article of the bill of rights. Is that what you mean by your amendment?

KILCHER: If the same words are used, it must necessarily mean the same thing, I haven't read it.

NORDALE: I believe the original article means something else. You mean you are repeating what is in the original, that is what you want? To repeat the first article in the bill of rights?

KILCHER: Well, I am not so sure of that since it is under the article of health, education, and welfare, it might have a slightly narrower meaning. This is such a vague article, impossible of definition, that I think this proposed article would solve the problem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: To me the words "general welfare" do not have the connotation at all of public welfare. The term "general welfare" is so much broader in its meaning to what "public welfare" is I can't see that the amendment is material to the section to which it has been made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I just wanted to point out the difference between these two as I see it. Section 1, they say that this constitution is to promote the general welfare. We are speaking of the constitution here. This other section says the state shall provide for the general welfare. General welfare generally means, of course, all welfare means health, safety, etc. In Mr. Kilcher's amendment he provides that the state shall provide it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: This Section 3 which is one reason why I seconded Mr. Kilcher's motion, is that I don't know what person is unable, what extent of inability do they have to have to be unable, and I don't understand what a standard of living compatible with health and human dignity is; whose health and whose human dignity? We all have different modes of living, and what comparative standards are you going to put in order to comply with that section? Mr. Armstrong, you explained that a little bit.

ARMSTRONG: I think that when it says that the state may provide for this system of public welfare for persons unable to maintain the standard of living, there are all types of people who can be considered indigent. There isn't any way of pointing that out, someone who has to go to a TB ward is an indigent, yet he may have what seems to be a normal adequate income, yet the loss of his income while in the TB sanitarium makes it absolutely impossible for him to pay the bills that would be involved, so this would be a sliding scale on the standard of living, his needs and health and human dignity. I think we were trying to get away from a clause that might indicate that you had to be a pauper and really down and out before you would arrive at the place you could crawl up to the welfare department for help. There are many areas of life where a little help to a widow, to an orphan, to a pioneer who needs help, brings them to the place of self-respect, and dignity and self-respect certainly go hand in hand.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, my idea of public welfare connotes a system provided by the state or established by the state for the alleviation of various people who are unable to make a living, and now we are saying the state may provide for public welfare for persons unable to maintain a standard of living. Now, of course, that does not connote a welfare for persons if you use it as a system of public welfare for a certain class of people of our population. It seems to me that that section would possibly be a little plainer and would not be open to the construction that has been placed upon it this afternoon if we would provide for public aid for persons unable to maintain a standard of living compatible with health and human dignity, it would be public aid. We have a system for public welfare but the aid given by the public welfare would be the people who are unable to help themselves.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: My point is that if a sick person is unable to maintain a standard of health compatible of health, not perhaps because of any money but because he is afflicted with a disease, and this leaves it open it seems to me that anyone who has a disease who can't maintain a condition compatible with health and yet, we are going to extend them public welfare. Why don't they say "indigents or people who are ill or unable to provide for themselves"? Why don't they put it in plain English? No one can construe these words. I know what I mean by human dignity, but a person on a higher social scale has another standard for human dignity and someone else, another. What standards are you going by?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think Mr. Robertson's argument is that the language would permit, say a millionaire to be given assistance.

ROBERTSON: I don't see why.

HELLENTHAL: It says if you are unable to maintain the standard, that means unable from any cause. I think that would clearly throw out the millionaire and I think any court or any person would interpret it that way. If you are unable from any cause whatsoever, but if you are able then there is no assistance. You are able because you are a millionaire, though sick.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to make one further comment to Mr. Robertson's objection. I think that the words "public welfare" themselves would prohibit an interpretation that a millionaire would not be entitled to help. The words "public welfare" have come to have a very definite meaning in our society today, and I think that is the meaning that should be given here. If you just give "public welfare", those two words, their ordinary meaning, I don't think the question would come up.

HERMANN: Point of order. Mr. Kilcher's motion is to substitute "general welfare", and to strike that whole section and substitute a new section dealing with "general welfare" and I don't think anybody is speaking on the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I looked up my reference, and considering that I drew up this amendment hastily, I would suggest that somebody amend "general welfare" to "public welfare", that is actually what I had in mind, or I withdraw my motion. That is what I had in mind. I will be very amenable to that if somebody wants to amend it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there such an amendment offered? Do you ask unanimous consent, Mr. Kilcher, that the word "general" be changed to "public"?

KILCHER: Yes I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the change Mr. Kilcher asks for? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the proposed amendment has been amended. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Point of inquiry. Miss Awes, along the line of your statement that you do not believe that this section would apply to a millionaire, I agree that under most public welfare systems millionaires would not be applying or should not be applying, but suppose that a millionaire lost his money and did not have any money at all and came to the public welfare department. Under the phraseology you have here, "to maintain a standard of living compatible with health and human dignity", now would he be expected to get sufficient assistance to maintain his former standard of living or human dignity. I mean, could it be construed that way?

AWES: I don't think so. I think we are getting into some rather farfetched illustrations. I think the only purpose of this section is to give the legislature a broad general authority to provide for the public welfare and, as I said before, public welfare, it is generally known what that means, and I think it is very unlikely that any other construction would be put upon it.

JOHNSON: Perhaps my illustration was farfetched, but I intended it to be, and I am wondering if some other words might be substituted to the word "dignity" that might lend itself to less confusion.

LONDBORG: I have been wondering along that same line too. If I might ask someone of the Bill of Rights Committee, what other kind of dignity would there be other than human dignity?

HARRIS: Point of order. If Mr. Kilcher's motion goes through the way it is now there won't be any word "dignity". There will be just a period after 'welfare'.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike all of Section 3 and substitute the following: 'The State may provide for the public welfare.'"

ARMSTRONG: I am afraid that that phraseology is far too broad and you are saying "for the public welfare" but the connotation does not tie it down to the establishment of a department, and it does not give the instructions as to the philosophy we have here in mind. I think that you need the retention of this section.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I have a short amendment I would like to offer, and before the word "public" on line 11 of Section 3 I would like to insert "a system of" of, so that it would read, "The state may provide for a system public welfare for persons unable", etc. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed amendment be adopted.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

TAYLOR: I so move.

ARMSTRONG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the section as it would appear if the proposed amendment was adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "The state may provide for a system of public welfare for persons unable to maintain a standard of living compatible with health and human dignity."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor what human dignity means. I like it, I am for it, and I want to know what it means.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Maybe I might give an illustration of it. I think any time when a person is reduced to the point where they have to beg and feel that they are an object of charity, they have lost their dignity, and we think that the people of the State of Alaska should not be reduced to that condition where you have got to be a beggar or a pauper or feel you are an object of charity. When you do you have lost your human dignity.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the mover what difference is "a system of public welfare", what difference does that make in the article?

TAYLOR: The reason I put that in is that because there may be many different matters touching public welfare. We might have such as we have today, we have the relief of the widows, we have dependent children, we have relief for the orphans, for the cripples, we have rehabilitation for persons who have partially lost their ability to earn or gain for livelihood, and other matters which would come under this public welfare, so it would be a system that would embrace all of those things that would go into maintaining the health and human dignity of our people who are handicapped or unfortunate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, since the section starts with the word "may", I don't see why these added words "a system of" should be included. Certainly the state may do that in any case, even if the words are not in here, it might do that. I can see a reason, if it should say "shall", and make it mandatory, but since it is optional, you can certainly expect as the situation requires that the state should do that and it is superfluous.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, line 11, after the word 'for' insert 'a system of'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

- Yeas: 26 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Knight, McCutcheon, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, Roberston, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh.
- Nays: 27 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNees, Nolan, Peratrovich, Reader, V. Rivers, Smith, Sweeney, White, Wien, Mr. President.
- Absent: 2 - Poulsen, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 26 yeas, 27 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and proposed amendment has failed of passage. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I was out in the hall here for a minute, but I understand somebody already offered the amendment that was defeated to delete the words "persons unable to maintain a standard of living compatible with health and human dignity". I did not hear the argument on it, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You should have been here, Mr. Buckalew.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the section as it appears right now.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3. The State may provide for public welfare for persons unable to maintain a standard of living compatible with health and human dignity."

BUCKALEW: Could I have the privilege of the floor for a minute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

(Mr. Buckalew was granted the privilege of the floor.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: There were quite a few arguments at the time we had the amendment. Are there other amendments to Section 3? If not, to Section 4? Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment. CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 4."

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this amendment and would like to offer a brief explanation, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

ARMSTRONG: I object.

V. FISCHER: I so move.

HURLEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Originally I submitted a delegate's proposal on health, education and welfare including this Section 4, and I appeared before the Committee on the Bill of Rights and discussed the inclusion of this section. At that time I was under the understanding that it was necessary for this section to be contained in the constitution to authorize slum clearance in Alaska. A number of states have had their statutes for slum clearance in urban redevelopment projects, such as is now going on in Fairbanks and is proposed in Ketchikan, Sitka, Juneau, Anchorage, and Haines. They have had similar projects declared unconstitutional because they had no express provision authorizing slum clearance. Therefore, I appeared before the Committee and urged the inclusion of this section as it presently stands. Since then we have obtained additional material from the Housing and Home Finance Agency in Washington, which agency is in charge of providing federal assistance for urban redevelopment. The legal matter forwarded by the HFFA shows clearly that our constitution is broad enough in every aspect to authorize slum clearance in similar urban redevelopment programs without a specific enabling clause such as this. If you will note, I have emphasized slum clearance. There has never been any doubt about public housing. It is definitely authorized under the welfare clause, so there is no need for that at all. Since there is no legal doubt about the legality of slum clearance under this constitution, I introduce this motion to strike Section 4, since I, even when I first proposed it, it seemed to me as matter preferably not to be covered in the constitution.

GRAY: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I just wanted to make a brief statement about the action of the Committee in putting this section in. The section first came to the attention of the Committee as a part of the proposal made by Mr. Fischer and Mr. Fischer appeared before the Committee and gave his reasons, which are similar to what he gave just a few minutes ago, and the Committee was convinced, so I think the body should know that it was on the basis of the information supplied by Mr. Fischer that it was put in here.

HELLENTHAL: I don't think any of the Committee members have any objection to Mr. Fischer's proposal now, because it was at his insistence that it appeared in the constitution. Unless I hear some objection from some of the Committee members, I shall support Mr. Fischer's proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are absolutely positive that it is not necessary?

V. FISCHER: Yes. Since Mr. Gray removed his objection, I renew my unanimous consent request.

TAYLOR: I object.

NORDALE: May I just ask Mr. Fischer a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Is there any possibility that some provision might possibly creep into the finance section that would make it necessary to have this in this particular section?

V. FISCHER: No, because our health and welfare clauses are broad enough. We have a condemnation clause for public purpose and appropriation for public purpose, so between all of those factors there would be no restrictive provisions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: In the event that this suggested amendment is not passed, I think we are going to have to rework it anyway for the simple reason that very definitely it is stated here that the state may provide for and assist in the development of substandard housing, and I think we are going to have to rephrase that in case the amendment is not passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment has been adopted by the Convention. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 7? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I have an amendment on the Clerk's desk.

CHIEF CLERK: "Add a new section known as Section 4 which shall read as follows: 'In all matters of public welfare the legislature may provide by law in cooperation with the United States, or other states.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

McLAUGHLIN: I object.

McNEALY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: It is kind of long to remember.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment slowly.

CHIEF CLERK: This first part is the subhead, is that right, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: Yes.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 4. In all matters of public welfare the legislature may provide by law in cooperation with the United States, or other states." And the subhead on the margin is "Cooperation with Federal and other State Governments".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg, did you object to the length?

LONDBORG: I have a copy now. No objection.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I object on the grounds that are reasonably well known to the members of the Executive Committee, members of the Resources Committee, forgive me, not Resources Committee, but members of the Local Government Committee, and reasons known to the members of Style and Drafting. That is the specific provision in the Executive Article providing for agreements, and in a much broader scope than this, of all natures, agreements of any nature between the state or between any local government units and the states and the United States or any other nations. We will have a complete reduplication, and I have not consulted with any members of the committee, but I think it is inappropriate to consider this matter at this time. It will arise again more properly under the executive article and probably most properly under any miscellaneous provisions in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: That is a correct statement. The executive has provided in a broad general clause for cooperation with other parts of government, including local, state, and national, and in cases where it will be permitted, with other governments. I don't think there is any need for this article to cover the provision. We already have it broadly covered.

TAYLOR: In view of the statement made by Mr. McLaughlin and Mr. Rivers, that this is a blanket provision along the same lines which is going to be in the future article, I would like to ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor asks unanimous consent to withdraw his proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Victor Rivers.

1550

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask unanimous consent to revert to the introduction of proposals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to the introduction of proposals.

KILCHER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You object to the reverting to the introduction of proposals at this time?

KILCHER: It will take only two minutes and we will be done with the whole article anyway. I would ask Mr. Rivers to wait. I have an amendment.

V. RIVERS: I will yield to Mr. Kilcher.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read Mr. Kilcher's proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, lines 11 and 12, strike the words 'public welfare'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I move that we adopt the amendment and ask unanimous consent. It is probably a matter of Style and Drafting because it is just a duplication of a definition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

SUNDBORG: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

ROBERTSON: May we have it re-read?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, lines 11 and 12, strike the words public welfare'".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

V. RIVERS: Point of order. I heard a second from Mr. Londborg.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the proposed amendment has been adopted. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I have absolutely nothing against public welfare. Even contrary, I was afraid possibly Style and Drafting might not catch it, and if they did it is a matter of language, and that is why I proposed it to bring it to the attention and have it drafted, even if the amendment fails. It is not a substantial change, it just saves three words in the constitution. If we say "the state should provide" that is what public welfare is.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to the article on health, education and welfare? Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 7 in its entirety? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I am not sure whether we had a record vote on Section 1 or not. Did we?

PRESIDENT EGAN: I am sure there was a roll call vote on that, Mr. Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: Section 1 of this article?

PRESIDENT EGAN: On the proposed amendment, Mr. Rivers? V.

RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels certain there was a roll call vote on it.

TAYLOR: Two of them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I believe you are right, Mr. Taylor.

COGHILL: I think what Mr. Rivers is referring to is the insertion of "education" before "institution" on the recommittal of the Committee.

CHIEF CLERK: That was accepted as a committee report.

SUNDBORG: It was unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: It was turned back to the Committee and the Committee resubmitted the article with that word in it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are correct, Mr. Hinckel. Are there amendments to the proposal? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Is it ready to pass now from second reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is ready to go now, if there are no other amendments, to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, which would take it out of second reading so far as amendments are concerned without a suspension of the rules. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I have been thinking about this one vote on Mr. Coghill's amendment, and I wonder if we gave sufficient thought to the amendment. I would like to give notice of reconsideration of my vote on this particular amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In inserting the word "indirect"? Do you serve notice of reconsideration of your vote?

LONDBORG: I do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Let the record show that Mr. Londborg gives notice of reconsideration. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that we take a five minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order please. We have Committee Proposal No. 5 before us and ask the Secretary to please read it at this time. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I was under the impression that Mr. Victor Rivers had asked us to refer to the introduction of proposals.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I'm sorry. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I so asked and that was objected to for a period of two minutes, so I understand it is now in order. The objection was merely to finish that last amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Delegate Proposal No. 46, introduced by Mr. Victor Rivers, ORDINANCE: The legislature shall establish one or more agencies of State government to regulate public utilities in the public interest."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: It shall be referred to the Ordinance Committee. You may proceed with Proposal No. 5.

(The Secretary read Committee Proposal No. 5 at this time.)

NORDALE: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question before we start on this article. I was under the impression that the article on the legislative branch was to set up the structure of the legislative branch of government, and I would like to have this clear before we start working on any of these articles. It occurs to me there are several things instructing the legislature what to do and what not to do, and my impression was that it was a case of setting up a legislature, not necessarily telling what to do. If I am wrong I would like to know it before we start.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I wonder if the Chairman of the Committee would answer that. Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: I think I can say this, keeping in mind that our Committee is practically unanimous on the subject of things that had to do with actual legislation and the composition of the houses, those matters which pertained to bills insofar as they pertained to the legislature and the handling of them were properly a legislative matter. We have included several sections in this group which might be borderline propositions, which we have lifted from the Enabling Act and in this instance I refer to Senate 50, and included them in here fearing that they may not have been included elsewhere. They will probably be in conflict with other sections that will be offered by other committees and I think again I can speak, that our Committee will have no objection in removing those things which are in conflict to the same type of material being in other articles.

LONDBORG: One of the things I think that will come up right away, and that is the overlapping of material relative to apportionment. Could I ask a question of the Chairman of the Legislative Committee? How do you feel on that? In other words, we are going to be doing with some things that may freeze a certain thing, and then come to apportionment and find it otherwise.

McCUTCHEON: In this instance there were a good number of our Committee who sat in and listened to the testimony that was offered and the argument and testimony that took place in the Committee on Apportionment and Reapportionment, and it appeared to our Committee that we would have to settle upon some sort of an arbitrary figure for the number of legislators to be in the legislature. It appeared to us at the time we drafted this measure and also from the various proposals that were entered by most of the delegates that these figures came most closely to the general composite that was being developed at that time. In other words, the Apportionment Committee appeared to be thinking in terms of a figure very close to this. It may have been a little more, or may have finally developed to be a little less, and a number of the proposals that were offered by committees fell in this same general category, so our committee seized upon these things as a point in which to begin in discussing the matter.

LONDBORG: That answers it at least in part. I can see the difficulty in having split the two, the Legislative and Apportionment, into two different committees. I think some constitutional conventions deal with them together for the purpose of amending one or the other and I think we should keep that in mind, that if we fix something and pass through second reading that it may affect our apportionment later.

HELLENTHAL: Might I suggest as far as apportionment is concerned, I can see that there might possibly be some conflict between Section 1 and the last section which is, I believe Section 25, and that's all. There are many ways it can be handled. I would not like to see a situation develop where we might agree tentatively with Section 1 and Section 25, and then find it would take a two-thirds vote to make a change when the same matter came up before a committee that was properly told to handle the very same matter. Might I suggest that the matter be referred to save time on the floor to the Rules Committee for suggestions as to how any trouble can be avoided so that the rights to amend might be preserved say, after we have finished dealing with the legislative matter but still not run into the restrictions of two-thirds, and I would like to move that the matter of possible conflict between the two committees, namely Legislative and Apportionment, as to Sections 1 and 25 be referred to the Rules Committee for suggestion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. Chairman, would you be agreeable to amending that to include other committees also? I see that the Legislative Committee has done two-thirds of the work of the Finance Committee. The language is practically the same.

HELLENTHAL: If I knew the sections I would be happy to consent to the amendment, but I would suggest that each committee in turn make a similar amendment if this meets with the approval of the group.

MARSTON: I second the motion.

DOOGAN: May I have it read?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "The matter of conflict between the legislative and apportionment articles as to Sections 1 and 25 be referred to the Rules Committee for suggestion."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", contrary "no". The "ayes" have it, carried. You wish to go ahead with the other sections, other than the two involved in this motion?

DOOGAN: May I ask the Chairman of the Legislative Committee a question? It is purely for information, and I don't object to it. I notice that you say in Section 8, "when the legislature shall convene," but it does not say they will meet for 60 days, 90 days, or a specified period of time. Did you have a definite reason for that?

McCUTCHEON: It was the preponderant thinking of our Committee that our legislature should not be limited as to time. It should be a continuing affair and that as the needs of the state required, the legislature could be brought into existence, it could be brought in by its own method of convening. The governor can call it, and they have also a stipulated date to begin each year for a session, and that is one of the reasons why we endeavor to devise a device in payment which would make the payment cover a year's service at a time so the legislature could be brought into session or out of session from time to time to take care of the needs. That is why we did not establish a limiting date except on special session. If the need arose of special session the legislature could maintain themselves in session, or the governor could maintain themselves in session, and if the governor did maintain the legislature in session, the legislature could only consider those items which the governor wanted on the agenda.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair would like to call the result of this motion to the attention of this Committee. I think, Mr. McCutcheon, in this case to meet with the committees at your convenience to make this correction, as the motion implied. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Chairman, this then might be a proper time to announce a meeting of the Rules Committee during the dinner hour recess.

NERLAND: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question, or rather, Mr. McCutcheon? Mr. McCutcheon, as these various sections come up that are taken up in other proposals, is it your intention that these be discussed and amended finally on the floor, or do you intend that reference be made that this is taken care of in some other proposal and that the matter just be dropped until we come to that proposal?

McCUTCHEON: It may be that possibly I and one or two other members of the committee were laboring under the delusion that the Style and Drafting Committee had the right to reshuffle these various paragraphs in the articles to fit properly into place in the constitution, and where there was conflict if there was not substantive conflict to drop one from one article and insert one from another article or vice versa. It appears from some of the times I have spoken here to some of the members of Style and Drafting that that may not be the case. If it is not the case, then we must either submit on the legislative branch, then I would suggest we might as well throw the legislative branch to the tail-end of the pile and take it up last and let everybody else get down to their business and then whatever is left, the legislative branch will utilize.

NERLAND: Mr. McCutcheon, would it be your opinion that if somebody moved to strike one of these sections, supposedly because it was mentioned elsewhere, would that preclude discussion of that section in another proposal?

McCUTCHEON: Not as far as we are concerned, I don't see how it could. The thing is that if you were moving to strike a whole section out of our article, it would appear to me that an identical section or a similar section in the article that you propose to have this paragraph stand in, I think it should be read so that the body could see whether or not they prefer it in one place or in the other. The Legislative Committee wishes to be as compliant as possible with the wishes of this body, and we don't want to deter anything or hold back anything.

NERLAND: I assume that. Don't you think it would be desirable to have it understood now how these matters are going to be taken up? Are they going to be amended finally and leave it to Style and Drafting to take it out of this section and put in another proposal at the proper time?

McCUTCHEON: It is a matter of authority of the Style and Drafting if they feel they can do that, I am perfectly willing to have such an action take place.

NERLAND: My point is that unless we do determine pretty definitely how it will be handled, why one might be handled in one manner and one might be in another.

McCUTCHEON: Absolutely. I think it is properly a matter of question before the body right at this moment as to what authority Style and Drafting will have in that respect.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. White.

WHHITE: It appears to me that you can't possibly properly discuss this section out of context. The body feels a certain section belongs in a certain article, it would be foolish for us to discuss it when it appears in another article. Mr. Nerland has raised a very good point. If you move to strike an article, somebody could raise the question when you come to the second article, it is a matter of a two-thirds vote. You may not agree with me. I might not agree with myself. I think it is a good point to raise. I think both matters are a subject for the Rules Committee and I suggest we defer any discussion about sections in question.

McCUTCHEON: In answer to Mr. White, I don't believe we could properly say it would require a two-thirds vote on the second article which was not at that time under consideration if we struck one from the article under consideration because it never properly came before consideration on the subsequent article that was under consideration.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair will hold the same view on that. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I will endorse that view just for myself, but it occurs to me that in the exchange between Mr. Nerland and Mr. McCutcheon, a number of points arose which parallel the ones assigned to Rules, and if it is the wish of the body that the Rules Committee come forward with a suggestion covering all of those situations, and there will be many of them which arise, it would be preferable to address ourselves to the full problem rather than to simply legislative and apportionment. There is sufficient overlap, as a matter of fact, on Rules and Style and Drafting that I think we could perhaps approach the thing from all standpoints and come up with a suggestion this evening.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Riley, do you suggest to take care of that now or later on?

RILEY: I would ask unanimous consent that the directive just given the Rules Committee extend beyond the question of apportionment and the legislative branch, that it cover the general proposition before us.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any objection to that? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: In view of that, I believe that there is quite a little discussion that has got to go on in the Rules Committee, and we can't rightly discuss and even begin to discuss this legislative article now and it is 5:10, so I would move and ask unanimous consent that we adjourn until 7 o'clock so that the Rules Committee can settle this.

COOPER: I object on the basis that --

DOOGAN: I so move.

1558

HURLEY: Point of order. The motion is not debatable.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have heard the motion.

METCALF: Roll call.

ROSSWOG: I would like to ask to return to committee announcements if this motion carries.

V. FISCHER: Point of order. I think the motion to adjourn is out of order. Mr. Doogan rose and asked unanimous consent and sat down. Mr. Cooper was recognized by the Chair and while he was speaking, without being recognized, the motion was made and seconded. It seems to me that properly Mr. Cooper has the floor.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I want to state my position here. We have been making our motions that "I move and ask unanimous consent", which I always felt was improper. I just assumed that was the type of motion Mr. Doogan made, but I do think your point of order is well taken, so the Chair will reverse his recognition of this motion and recognize Mr. Cooper. There is no motion before the floor.

COOPER: The thing that I want to point out is that Apportionment and Legislative have both decided on identical figures. I think it is entirely in order to take Section 1 and now discuss it and any of the delegates submit any amendments if they so desire, but I do believe it is in order to go ahead and discuss Section 1 and go on with the business.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: If there is no further discussion, we will proceed with this proposal section by section. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, I will move that we stand at recess until 7 o'clock.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is there a second to that?

BARR: I second it.

ROSSWOG: Can we now revert to committee announcements?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Yes, Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Local Government Committee will meet after recess in one of the committee rooms on the upper floor.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet briefly immediately on recess which I hope will be about 5:40 p.m.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other announcements?

METCALF: Roll call.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 8 - Barr, Doogan, Harris, Laws, Marston, Nolan, Riley, Sweeney.

Nays: 43 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 4 - Poulsen, Stewart, VanderLeest, Mr. President.)

CHIEF CLERK: 8 yeas, 43 nays and 4 absent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: So the motion failed to pass. Are there any amendments to Section 1? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I rise to a point of order. I thought we just passed a motion here a few minutes ago referring Section 1 and 25 to the Rules Committee. It seems to me we would have to rescind our action.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, my understanding of the motion was that we referred the general problems of conflict between this article and others to the Rules Committee. We did not refer to those sections.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I think Mr. Robertson is right. As I understood the motion, Sections 1 and 25 were to be referred to the Rules Committee. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: There is no conflict between Section 1 and the section in the other article.

HELLENTHAL: May I be heard on this? I see Mr. Cooper's point precisely. Mr. Cooper is a member of both the Legislative and Apportionment Committees. He is the only member of the Apportionment Committee that is in that enviable position. Now it took the Apportionment Committee something like three weeks to arrive at the conclusion that they presently have, that the senate should be composed of 20 members and their recommendation to the floor is that the senate be composed of 20 members. Now, during the Christmas holidays and in many discussions with gentlemen and ladies here in this group, I have received the impression that some people might want to increase that number, and some people might want to reduce that number. Now, I am prepared and I am sure other members of the Committee are prepared to take you step by step through the reasoning that led to the conclusion that the composition should be 20 members, but I think it would be better to do that perhaps at a later time, and that is why the matter was referred to the Committee on Legislation so that the entire apportionment could be considered as an integrated whole. If Mr. Cooper's suggestion is followed through, I think it will unduly prolong our discussions now and furthermore if a mistake is made after the careful consideration of the apportionment is made, and all the detail that go into it, it would take a two-thirds vote to rectify the mistake, to suspend the rules, and I think that is an undue burden to place on the body here. I personally am indifferent, but I don't see why. It is absolutely inconsistent with the creation of a separate Committee on Apportionment, and the inconsistency is more apparent with Section 25. There is a basic difference in approach between Section 25 and the recommendations that are made in the apportionment proposal. And I think we are going to waste a lot of time, and I'm doing it only to speed up our proceedings.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenthal, the Chair was correct in stating your motion that the first, Sections 1 and 25, the two sections to be referred to the Committee? We'll proceed with Section 2 then. Are there any amendments to Section 2 Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Mr. Hellenthal referred to taking us through a step by step statement as to how we arrived at these figures. We've got about 12 minutes to go before adjournment time, couldn't the Committee brief us a little bit before we start and utilize that for general information?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Without any objections, the Chair will ask the Chairman.

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President, I would like to be corrected by Mr. Hellenthal if I am wrong, but I think Mr. Hellenthal had reference to this figure when its the Apportionment Committee's term, when the proposal by his Committee is up, the step-by-step explanation will come from Mr. Hellenthal.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Kilcher, I think the question here is whether Section No. 1 and 25 is included in this motion that was made. Mr. Hellenthal, would you care to brief the delegates as Mr. Rivers suggested.

HELLENTHAL: I would love to, but frankly I do not think it can be done by any member of our Committee in the time allotted. I think that the presentation, it will all depend, well first, this is the pattern it will have to follow. An analysis will have to be made of the election districts that are suggested to the group. Following the analyses of the election districts, an analysis will have to be made of the house plan and of the method of equal proportions. Following that, a thorough analysis of this senate plan, which consists of two steps in the selection of senators, will have to be made. It is an integrated, dovetailed, whole, and if the body wants it now, it can very properly be given now, but I feel it is out of order now and frankly I would prefer to see it given when the apportionment is considered as a whole, and it does not tie Sections 1 and 25, do not tie in with any of the remaining 23 sections of the legislative group. I don't think it is necessary to know the exact numerical compositions of the bodies before intelligent decisions can be made on the other 23 sections. For example, in the senate we are in virtually substantial agreement on the number, just the precise number. I don't think it is going to vary more than three or four one way or the other, but I think it should be considered in logical sequence when it is presented and presented right from the election district right up the pyramid.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: In the light of those remarks, I think it would be well for us then to just suspend action on Section 1 and go on to Section 2. That carries out Mr. Robertson's idea. There is no relation and we could make some progress perhaps.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, if I may so make a suggestion now while the thought is fresh in our minds as to the address to the Rules Committee, wouldn't it be possibly wise to consider conferring with the Chairman and ask the Chairman of the proposals that are coming up now to read all the other proposals and try to figure out what possible conflict there is and submit all of these possible conflicts to the Rules Committee and then that possibly the Rules Committee could except those sections from the general two-thirds rule. I see now that last year had come up, two months ago that question that we had in our Rules Committee. We lost a bit of time there. I am afraid the situation had no reason, but I for one was afraid it might happen. But possibly if a general reading of all the proposals was mandatory with the chairmen at least, and if a list of possible substantial conflicts were arrived at, the Rules Committee could then possibly decide upon which sections were in conflict and elevate all of those out of two-thirds rules. We would save a lot of time and future argument.

RILEY: I think the approach you suggest would probably be considered, Mr. Kilcher, at least as far as getting the committee chairmen together is concerned.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I would like to make a motion, but I would like to say a few words before that. I recognize that Mr. Gray has given the delegates a week's notice that the apportionment proposal was coming up. However, it might be that the delegates are ready to consider Proposal No. 14 at this time without this additional time, so I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that Committee Proposal No. 14 be taken up at this time rather than Committee Proposal No. 5. That is the apportionment proposal.

GRAY: I object.

SWEENEY: I so move.

HARRIS: I second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: It will take a two-thirds vote for that consideration.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Roll call.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 25 - Armstrong, Awes, Coghill, Collins, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Reader, Sweeney, Taylor, Wien.

Nays: 25 - Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Walsh, White.

Absent: 5 - Hilscher, Poulsen, Stewart, VanderLeest, Mr. President.)

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I wish to change my vote from "no" to "yes".

HURLEY: Mr. President, I wish to change my vote from "yes" to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas and 25 nays and 5 absent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The motion has failed for the suspension of the rules. We will have Proposal No. 5 before us. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGNA: Mr. Chairman, I would like to move that the figures as spelled out in Section I conform as finally settled upon in the apportionment article.

HERMANN: Point of order, Mr. President. Did we not agree that we would not discuss Section 1?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: That is true. Section 2. We are holding No. 1 an d25 in abeyance. We start with Section 2. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Well, since we have wasted 15 minutes, and it has reached 5:30, I make the motion that we recess until 7:00 this evening.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All those in favor of recessing until 7 o'clock this evening will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "ayes" have it. So ordered.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. The Chair wishes to call your attention to the fact that we don't have a stenotypist here and do you wish to continue with the recording here? There is supposed to be a man coming to replace the lady here and he hasn't shown up so far. What is the pleasure of the Convention? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I don't see how we can continue with the plenary session without a stenotypist because that is required by the Convention.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, if I might make a suggestion, the stenotypist could take the notes from the tape machine.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, if we decide to go ahead, Mr. President, it would be well for you to in all cases give the name of the person who is on his feet so that they will not have to depend upon the voice to try to identify the person.

CHIEF CLERK: I keep a record of each person in the order that they speak.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Put my name down. I move and ask unanimous consent that we continue with the business before us.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered. I think the first thing in order is the report from the Rules Committee. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, the Rules Committee met during the recess and on the question presented, reports as follows: that Section 25 in the legislative article be stricken from the legislative article and that it be considered later with the apportionment article. That Section 1 of the legislative article now before us, the Committee recommends that that be considered now for the reason that the apportionment formula if adopted will apply against whatever number of senators and representatives are provided in the legislative article. There is further reason that once these numbers are fixed in the legislative article, there will be time still for apportionment to consider that if change is indicated. As to other matters referred to the Rules Committee, the Committee on Rules asks that all chairmen of all committees call to Rules attention particular conflict concerning their articles, and that they do that prior to those articles coming up, that they note such conflict. In that event, Rules can then recommend to the Convention the assignment of that conflicting subject matter as between committees and as between articles. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee report be adopted.

MARSTON: I object.

RILEY: I so move.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: It has been moved and seconded that the Committee report be adopted. Is there any discussion? Mr. Marston?

MARSTON: May I ask the Delegate a question? Do I get it clear here that you're going to work on this first part of the program here on the size of the house?

RILEY: That is the Committee recommendation, yes, that the body consider that now.

MARSTON: It is very unfortunate that the whole program of apportionment and reapportionment has concrete definite reason why there should be a senate of 20 and house of 40 and it isn't in here. It isn't necessary that you do things here that will absolutely upset the apportionment rules.

RILEY: It is a coincidence that the two articles are almost in agreement. One states 20, the other states 20.

MARSTON: If you'll keep that there, I'll go along with you, but

--

RILEY: I won't guarantee a thing.

MARSTON: I wish you would, I'd be very happy.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I think the motion before us is to adopt or reject the committee report and I think we should confine the discussion. Is there further discussion on the motion? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Did Mr. Riley mention that if we adopt the legislative report as it is, just in as much as it happens to be the same as the Apportionment and the Apportionment should come up with something different, we could go back and change this, is that right?

RILEY: No, that was not my suggestion. I believe you misunderstood me. The Committee recommends that Section 1 be considered now and that numbers be fixed in Section 1 as to the composition of the house and the senate, with the view that apportionment is a matter of devising a formula, which formula will apply against whatever numbers are adopted for senate and house. Now as we know, the articles happen to coincide or are nearly in agreement. One says "not less than" and the other says "shall be". Now we feel that in the case of which came first and the logical order here, in our judgment, is the legislative article because the matter of devising a formula can be worked against whatever number the Convention adopts.

LONDBORG: I can see a possible conflict even with that because in our consideration of a formula, we may wish to come up with a different number and with that in mind, I think we are giving up our right then to change the 20 and 40, unless by a two-thirds vote.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I wish to call a two-minute recess. The stenotypist is here and it will give him an opportunity to set up his machine.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. We are ready to proceed. We now have a stenotypist with us. Now, Mr. Londborg, if you want to continue with your statement, you may do so.

LONDBORG: Well, I'd just like to say this, that there are apportionment plans, I believe, that leave a limitation as far as the number that are flexible. And if we adopt something like that, then we are stuck with a 24/40 plan, if that is adopted in the Legislature, and it couldn't be changed except by a two-thirds vote.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, in this respect I feel full confidence that if we ever found ourselves in an unworkable situation that was conspicuous or obvious, that two-thirds would never be a problem.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I will be in favor of this general motion if the Chairman of the Rules Committee could assure me for the record that when the discussion of districting comes up in apportionment proposal, all references to this Section I will be ruled out of order. I'll tell you the intent of that. If it seems advisable for consideration of districting which is a matter in itself, to come up with 19 or 21 senators, I wouldn't like to hear them say, "Well, bud, you're stuck with a two-thirds vote." I would like to see a substantial conflict permitted to develop, and then when we have a substantial conflict it will be possible to get a two-thirds majority, otherwise, I wouldn't want to have that thrown in my face, because I can plainly see where conflicts will come up. It looks too much like trying to tie something down with two birds with one rock, but to me it looks much more like driving a square peg in a round hole.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Kilcher, as I have mentioned, it's like the question of the chicken and the egg, but in any event I can't guarantee that anything would be ruled one way or the other, not having the gavel, but I am confident, as stated, that in a given situation two-thirds will be no problem.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, it was my understanding in the meeting with the Rules Committee that each and every committee proposal is treated in a like manner on this floor and that when the Apportionment Committee report hits this floor, it can, and undoubtedly will, be acceptable to amendments on a simple majority, is that not right?

RILEY: Yes.

COOPER: So there is no conflict whatsoever. There will be no two-thirds, three-fifths, or seven-eighths required to do anything to the Apportionment Committee, only the simple majority that is required at the present time.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, in other words, if we come up with something in Apportionment and we want to change the figure of 40, that can be done by pulling Legislative back and doing it on majority vote, is that right?

COOPER: As I understand it right now, the Apportionment Committee -- and this is the consensus in the Rules Committee -- that is that the Apportionment Committee, or any committee report yet to come on this floor can be amended by simple majority, they are all treated alike.

RILEY: I don't think these two gentlemen are both approaching the matter from the same end. Certainly, when Apportionment comes up in the future, every action taken on apportionment, until it gets out of second reading, will be taken by majority vote. But Mr. Londborg's problem is this: we have included second reading of the legislative articles. He fears that some change may occur, thanks to the action taken on apportionment, that there may be need for a change in the legislative article. In that event, what you heard discussed about a majority did not apply, but I think there, just on the basis of reasoning, that we would have more nearly a unanimous vote than a two-thirds.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to point out something else. In proposal No. 14 it says that, "The house shall be composed of 40 members and the senate shall be composed of 20 members." If we adopt a 20/40 figure for the legislative article, if when apportionment comes up and we decide that those figures are wrong and we want to change 40 to 35, we can change it to 35 in that article; and then, if the majority so desires, then, of course, we have a conflict between two articles that will have to be resolved, but then the two articles will be on an equal footing, one will say "35" and one will say "40". Then it's just a matter of working it out without necessarily resorting to --

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Don't interrupt the speaker, please.

HELLENTHAL: I'm sorry.

V. FISCHER: -- without necessarily having to resort to a two-thirds majority vote.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I'll grant what you say is true, Mr. Fischer, but if one of the group decides that it should be, say, 45 in the house rather than 35, then under your interpretation, could a simple majority alter the figure that is adopted now?

V. FISCHER: Well, if we adopt 40 now and then, when apportionment is in second reading, we up that to 45, I think the same will hold true -- one will be at 40 and one at 45, and then we will just have to get together and work it out.

HELLENTHAL: I don't quite agree with you. I think that the action fixes a ceiling on it. If we approve Section 1 of the legislative article, I think we set a ceiling on the numerical composition in the house and senate, and to change it beyond that ceiling would require a two-thirds vote. But I agree with Mr. Riley. I have a lot of faith in the body, and I shall abide by the decision of the Rules Committee.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Kilcher.

SUNDBORG: Point of order, Mr. President. Mr. Kilcher has already been heard twice on this subject, and I think we should invoke the rule that says that no member shall be heard more than twice on any motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I'll be glad to enforce that, but you folks deviate from your rules every other day and I'm trying to be fair about the thing. All right, Mr. Kilcher, you said your piece, you spoke twice. We'll adhere to this rule. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, now I'm getting confused. If I understood Mr. Riley and Mr. Fischer correctly, they are directly contrary in their statements. I'd like to hear from Mr. Riley.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You're directing a question to someone -- Mr. Fischer or somebody?

WHITE: Well, I'd like to direct a question to Mr. Riley.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Riley, do you care to answer that?

RILEY: It's a difficult question. I'd say in many matters we are in accord. Mr. Fischer suggests that if that impasse results, that would be up to the body to reconcile the situation. I think he said they would get together. I may be mistaken on this, but I don't think he launched into this two-thirds proposition very fully.

WHITE: If I understand it correctly, that when we come to apportionment, if we wind up in variance with what we adopted in this legislative article, it is merely a matter of ironing it out with a majority vote.

RILEY: Ironing it out with a two-thirds vote in the legislative article. Apportionment will be a majority proposition all the way through second reading as all others, but if legislative meanwhile had been disposed of and gone into third reading, or gone to Style and Drafting, it will take a two-thirds vote to get it back to the floor for amendment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I think it's a little ridiculous to assume that we couldn't get a two-thirds majority to prevent our coming out with a constitution that said one thing in one section and an entirely different thing in another section. I think we'd probably get a unanimous vote to get them together.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe we have in our rules another procedure for resolving these conflicts if such a conflict as has been supposed here should arise, and that is that the Style and Drafting Committee is directed to work out those conflicts and to make, if they can't work it out, to make a recommendation to the floor on how it should be resolved. So I think if we should come out and adopt 40 as a number here and 45 in another article, obviously, there is a conflict here which Style and Drafting has to resolve. Style and Drafting would then make a report to the Convention, which would either be adopted or rejected by a majority vote, not by a two-thirds vote, and if adopted, that would be the number. If it is rejected it goes back to Style and Drafting again and they come out with another number until finally they get one that is adopted, and that language is written right into the appropriate article and it doesn't take a two-thirds vote to do so.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair is of the opinion that the interpretation of the rule by Mr. Sundborg is absolutely correct. Any further discussion on this motion?

LEE: Do we have a question before the house?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Did you wish to speak Mr. Lee?

LEE: No sir, I wanted to know if we had the question of the adoption of the report before us.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: That is what we are discussing now.

LEE: I would like to call for the question.

WHITE: May I ask a question?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: This is your first time?

WHITE: Second.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Just ask your question.

WHITE: In adoption of this report, Mr. Riley, are we assuming that you have recommended that we make no disposition of other sections of this article? Do we just leave it for the future?

RILEY: I might in reply state some background known to Mr. White and myself and the Rules Committee, that the Finance Committee did call to our attention other conflicts or other sections which were covered in other articles. Perhaps not in case of conflict, but the recommendations made by the Rules Committee covered Section 25 and Section 1 specifically of the legislative article and included in our report was a general recommendation that the other committees follow the practice already adopted by the Finance Committee. We asked that those conflicts be called to our attention early in order that we could recommend back to the Convention assignment of that subject matter to a particular article and to a particular committee, with the thought that the same treatment would be given it that is here recommended for Section 25, that it be stricken from this article and considered in the next.

WHITE: When we come to the article in question, then we so recommend?

RILEY: Well, we will try to set up a schedule where we may know before coming to that article if all the committee chairmen respond it will expedite the whole process.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All those in favor of adopting this committee report signify by saying "aye". Contrary by saying "no". It is unanimous. The motion is carried and so ordered. Now you have Section 1 before you as to the figures, am I correct on that? Do I hear any amendments to Section 1? Not hearing any, we will proceed to Section 2. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I wasn't aware of everything that was going on, but since we are now allowed to amend this, I would like to move to amend on line 3.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Which section?

BARR: Section 1. Line 3. Change the figure 20 to 16. I move its adoption.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any second?

NOLAN: I second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any discussion on the question? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Yes, I'm prepared to give the report of the Apportionment Committee at this time.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I wish you'd confine it to this motion before us. Could you wait until we're through with that, or does it have a bearing on this?

HELLENTHAL: It has a direct bearing on this motion, and I reluctantly do so because I feel that this should be considered in its proper place. It's going to take about an hour and 15 minutes, Mr. President, and then when I'm through with this there may be other members, I know there will be, who will want to be heard on this.

RILEY: I raise a point of order, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: State your point of order.

RILEY: I heard Mr. Hellenenthal's reply the last time it was suggested, and this might be out of order, but the Apportionment Committee's report will normally accompany the apportionment article consideration, which is set on the calendar for sometime in the future, and I don't think that in view of the action just taken, that we need hear the Apportionment Committee's report at this moment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Riley, the Chair inquired of that, and he states that his talk will be directly on this motion, so I think that would be in order.

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman.

HELLENTHAL: I yield to Mr. Coghill.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: With the consent of Mr. Hellenenthal, I'd like to have a one-minute recess for the purpose of a conference.

HELLENTHAL: I will gladly consent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Granted. The Convention will recess for one minute.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr, Mr. Hellenenthal has the floor.

HELLENTHAL: I'll yield to Mr. Barr.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Barr, you may have the floor.

BARR: As I stated, my reason for making this motion, for changing the figures to 16 has nothing to do with apportionment, and I'm only worried about the mechanics of the legislature, the operation of the legislature and the difficulty of operating with 20 members. Now I'm willing to take this up some other time if I know no other amendments are going in or if this Section 1 was not going to be considered until later when we take it up in apportionment. I'm willing to delay it, but I wouldn't want it to go through this way and not be able to change it later. Is anybody else going to make any amendments on it, or leave it over until we consider the apportionment report?

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I would certainly agree with Mr. Barr that it may be delayed and considered once fully after we have all the facts.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenthal, I think you should confine your statements to the motion. If you wish to delay this motion, you know how to do it, and you folks know what it is.

BARR: I'm uncertain in my mind about what anybody else will do or whether I'll have an opportunity later to submit this amendment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I don't think you should try to get the delegates to commit themselves.

BARR: I don't believe I'll be able to.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: If 16 goes through, I'll move for 21. If that fails, I'll move for 22, and if that fails, I'll move for 24 members of the senate. I'm willing to accept 20 though.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Barr, do you wish to yield? You have the floor.

BARR: I know now what Mr. Victor Rivers will do if this goes through. I'm worried about what will happen if I withdraw my motion, if there will be like amendments or any amendment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: My point is that I would be unable to vote on this motion until I have heard from Apportionment. We are absolutely shooting in the dark unless we know all the facts, as Mr. Hellenthal said. I would be willing to say that if they suspended Section 25 of this thing to be filled in later after we have heard from Apportionment that we should give Section 1 exactly the same treatment. We should also leave Section 1 open by common consent so that anybody can propose any numbers that he wishes to propose at that time. In other words, that no one would be foreclosed by suspending Section 1 at this time. And then we could go ahead with the rest of this article, but we can't sit here and shoot in the dark on these numbers before we have heard from Apportionment. So I move and ask unanimous consent that Section 1 be suspended from consideration at this time, and that no one be foreclosed when it is considered in connection with apportionment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers, the Chair feels that we have a motion before us here. You can table the question before us or postpone it to a set time, if you care to.

R. RIVERS: I regret my overlooking that he had made a motion.

BARR: Mr. Chairman, with the consent of my second, I will now withdraw my motion and I assume that Mr. Rivers will make the motion he was speaking of.

HELLENTHAL: I yield to Mr. Rivers.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers has the floor.

HELLENTHAL: I think I still have the floor, I may have lost it, but I don't think so.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair will hold that Mr. Hellenthal still has the floor, although he did yield here.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, point of order.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Fischer, state your point of order.

V. FISCHER: It seems to me that there is nothing in the rules which authorizes this kind of yielding. If a motion is made, for instance, now by Mr. Rivers, unless Mr. Hellenthal yields to me, I couldn't even second. Unless Mr. Hellenthal yields to me, I can't get up and object to it and speak against it. I think it's perfectly improper.

HELLENTHAL: I'll abandon my position.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers, you may proceed.

R. RIVERS: Well, in that case I wish to advance the same motion that I just made, that Section 1 be suspended along with Section 25 for consideration later and until we have heard from Apportionment and had our full consideration of apportionment, and that by so suspending, no one be foreclosed from moving for any particular number in the legislature at that time.

HERMANN: Point of order, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: State your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: We have just passed a motion to consider Section 1 to accept the report of the Rules Committee, which was to consider Section 1 at this time.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: However, Mrs. Hermann, if I may interrupt, he can move to postpone to a set time or else table it.

HERMANN: That isn't what he moved. I think he'd have to move to rescind our action of accepting that report.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Not necessarily. He is trying to postpone consideration of this particular question within that section to a set time, and it's perfectly in order, according to the Chair's ruling.

HERMANN: I believe Mr. Rivers has asked for a suspension.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: It isn't the way I understood it. He is asking for a postponement of consideration of this question to such time as we get a report from Apportionment Committee, if I am correct in that, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Yes, indeed, but whether it took a two-thirds vote or not, I did not stop to consider, Mr. President, but we have now run into a snag, and after we had accepted the report of the Rules Committee, we run into a snag, I think there is nothing to stop us from going ahead and taking some other action. So I submit my motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any second to that motion?

BARR: I'll second it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Seconded by Mr. Barr. It is open for discussion. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I don't see why there is such a furor here. If the members who were so concerned about their future rights will read the thing, they will find out that these are only maximum numbers.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any further discussion? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, it occurs to me that we have been working on four proposals in the past two weeks, and the custom has always been to go through each proposal section by section and get all the amendments that anyone has to offer at the time, and then to go back over the same proposal section by section, and ask for any other amendments, and if there are any further amendments, through the section. So it doesn't strike me that this motion is particularly out of order, because, as I say, we have been doing that very thing all the time. Until the proposal is submitted to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, it's been before us in second reading, subject to amendment, period. And the amendments have been offered from one section to another, or in any order that they have come up, and we have always entertained them. There has never been any question about that.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Johnson, the Chair feels that inasmuch as this particular question has been covered in two committees' reports, it is to the advantage of the Convention to see if there is a way out to combine the two after we hear the Apportionment Committee report. I think that's what Mr. Rivers had in mind.

JOHNSON: I wasn't objecting to Mr. Rivers' motion, I was simply pointing out that what he proposes is what we have been doing.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I can see no reason why we cannot go ahead with this at this time. The bill on apportionment states that there shall be 40 members of the house and 20 members of the senate. This proposed article says that the house shall consist of not more than 40 and 20 in the senate. It sets a maximum, so it could, no matter what happens, coincide with what Apportionment says. And another thing, we've got to look ahead and to the fact that there is a possibility that we might have to sacrifice some of our geographical area of Alaska to a nebulous theory that the northern part of it shall be used for defensive purposes, and so we may be deprived of two or three senatorial or representative districts. So I believe that the only safe method that we could pursue at this time is to consider number one, which sets a maximum, and it might be anything between half of what sets out there and up to the maximum limitation set here. It's a sliding scale, and in case we lost some of our geography of Alaska, this would still apply, and it would apply to the apportionment because the apportionment is based upon a population and geography. So you can't say that you have to wait on the apportionment bill to consider this, because this will work just as well with apportionment as the figures that they have got in apportionment, because you couldn't take those figures in the apportionment article because it might be wrong, because you might not have that many districts or you might not have the population you think you got, if the United States retains that northern part of Alaska and cuts out a good share of the geographical limitations so that it won't be in the Territory. So we should adopt this and forget about the number that's in the apportionment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any further discussion? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Point of information, Mr. President. Couldn't this whole matter be pretty conveniently resolved by a rewording of this first section according to something like this: "The legislative power and authority of the state is vested in the legislature which shall consist of a senate and a house, membership in which shall be provided in Section So and So of the apportionment section." That way, we can take it up properly at the time when we come to it, instead of trying to argue about it now and reconcile the two proposals later.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The motion before us, however, is to postpone consideration here. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon a question. Mr. McCutcheon, was your figure for the senate of not more than 20 and the figure for the house of not more than 40 based upon a convenient apportionment scheme, or was it based upon what the Committee considered to be a proper size for the respective legislative bodies for the State of Alaska?

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I think I can say without deviating from the general sense of our Committee's thinking that the majority of the Committee felt that the legislature should be somewhat larger than it is, but did not feel that we should fall in the error of a number of the states which have run their legislatures up to two or three hundred people, and it was because of that thinking that we decided that something larger than our current membership, and we seized upon this figure because one of the members of the Legislative Branch was on Apportionment, and a number of the members of the Legislative Branch had observed the hearings and discussion what had gone on in the Apportionment Committee. It appeared that the Apportionment Committee had developed a theory of apportionment which fitted this type of figuring. So without getting into apportionment in the Legislative Branch to establish the figures, we set up these which it appeared would come out of the other Committee. Now there may be a conflict between the two inasmuch as the Legislative Branch has set a limitation, whereas I'm not sure that the Apportionment group intended to limit it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Well, Mr. President, I'm opposed to Mr. Rivers' motion because it seems to me that apparently the Legislative Branch Committee had a basis for establishing these figures. It seems to me that the purpose of the Apportionment Committee is to set up districts and apportion on the basis of what we want to be the sizes of the houses of the legislature in the state. And it seems to me that the apportionment is a secondary matter, whether we have 50 members, as we may decide now, or whether we have 30 members in the house. We may have to revise the districts. I know the Apportionment Committee has worked hard, and they have come up with a certain apportionment scheme, but still the most important thing is to have the kind of legislature which we want for the state with the proper size. It may be necessary to revise the apportionment, the districting. but it seems to me that this is a proper place to decide on the membership of the house and the senate, and it seems to me that Mr. Barr's motion was perfectly in order and properly should be considered at this time, and I'm opposed to Mr. Rivers' motion, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have heard several times that the members of the delegation, the delegates here want to hear from the Apportionment Committee. I am a member of that Committee, and I can say that you have heard from them. The Apportionment Committee set a figure of 20 for the senate and a figure of 40 in the house. It is identical to what is in Section 1, which is now before you. I think that is hearing from the Apportionment Committee. Seven men sat and decided and worked and figured out the apportionment for Alaska and arrived at a figure of 20 for the senate and 40 for the house. This Constitutional Convention has heard from the Apportionment Committee in so far as the number of legislators are concerned, and I think that Section 1 should go ahead and go across the floor and be considered.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Looking at this Section 1, it seems to be sufficiently elastic. I don't know what all the discussion is about, but I'm in favor of proceeding with the Constitutional Convention, and I move the previous question.

R. RIVERS: Generally the mover has the close. Do you want to cut me out of that?

BUCKALEW: I'd like to, but I'll yield. (Laughter)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Point of order. The mover did not have the closing --

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair will have to rule that the previous question has been ordered.

R. RIVERS: The previous question is though that there has been debate on this question and the motion is that we suspend this until later. Now I have never had a chance to close. Buck, do you still want to make the previous question?

BUCKALEW: I do, Delegate Rivers.

HERMANN: Mr. President, that will not prevent him from talking after the previous question has been ordered. He can then have his say.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair is in a position where he has to enforce these motions as they occur. Should you wish to extend the privilege of closing the argument to Mr. Rivers, then it is entirely up to the maker of the motion to withdraw, or perhaps someone to extend him that consideration. Mr. McLaughlin?

McLAUGHLIN: May I request unanimous consent to have a minute's recess?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will recess for one minute.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent that my motion may be withdrawn. Let the tail go with the hide.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: What motion was that?

R. RIVERS: My motion was that we suspend with Section 1.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: In other words, it nullifies the previous question. I see. And you're right back on Section 1, is that right?

R. RIVERS: Was unanimous consent granted?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Yes, I didn't hear any objection. What is the pleasure of the Convention with regard to Section 1? Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I request that the Secretary read that.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Will the Secretary read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1, page 1, line 3: strike the words 'of not more than 20 members', and on line 4, strike 'of not more than 40 members'." So that Section 1 reads: "The legislative power and authority of the State is vested in the legislature, which consists of a senate and a house of representatives."

McLAUGHLIN: I so move.

WHITE: I'll second the motion.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: It is open for discussion then. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I have no particular interest on either side of the question, except to get the show on the road, and one method of getting the show on the road is merely to drop out the numerals that seem to be bothering everyone. They are referred to specifically in the article on apportionment and it might be a bad start, but gentlemen, we can pick it up. It is one of the few things we can, in Style and Drafting and insert it back in where it belongs, properly in terms of form, but what we are arguing about now is merely a question of form.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, it seems to me that we are arguing about a question of substance. He's changed it from 20 to 40 to just creating a legislature composing of a senate and a house. Now I think this amendment is one of the most illogical amendments that has been offered to date. The legislative article is going to have to determine the size of the senate and the size of the house -- the limits on it, anyway -- and I think we ought to vote on Section 1, and that's the way to get the show on the road.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I'd like to ask Mr. McLaughlin a question.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may.

DAVIS: Was it your intention, Mr. McLaughlin, that we vote on this section as you have proposed the amendment, and then at the time the apportionment section is considered we'll set the number and then Style and Drafting, or somebody else, can take the number which is set and put it back in this section?

McLAUGHLIN: Yes, Mr. Davis, and it doesn't require a two-thirds vote under any circumstances.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. White.

WHITE: I believe, contrary to Mr. Buckalew, that this is the most logical proposal that has been made all day. There may be some people here who feel that the figures in this paragraph have no relation whatsoever to apportionment, but it is also obvious that there are other people who feel these figures are inextricably bound up to the part that Apportionment has done. So long as that is the case, somebody here is going to demand that we hear the entire apportionment story before we set any figures. I would agree with Mr. McLaughlin or anyone else who feels that the final resulting figures belong in this article and I think Mr. McLaughlin has found a perfect way out for now.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I believe that this amendment will serve the purpose very well. The hour is getting late, and this being our first evening session, I feel that we should accomplish something, at least get through the first section on this proposal. So, therefore, I move the previous question.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any second to that?

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The motion is that the previous question be ordered. All those in favor of the motion signify by saying "aye". All those contrary? The "ayes" have it. So what is the motion now? Will the Chief Clerk please read it.

CHIEF CLERK: "To strike the words on line 3 'of not more than 20 members' and on line 4, strike 'of not more than 40 members'."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All those in favor of this motion signify by saying "aye".

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Roll call, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Roll call, Secretary, please.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: State your point of order, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Did you not announce the results?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: No, I didn't.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following results:

Yeas: 38 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cross, Davis, Emberg, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 11 - Buckalew, Cooper, Doogan, V. Fischer, Lee, McCutcheon, McNeese, Peratrovich, V. Rivers, Sundborg, Taylor.

Absent: 6 - Collins, H. Fischer, King, Robertson, VanderLeest, Mr. President.)

CHIEF CLERK: 38 ayes and 11 nays, and 6 absent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The motion is carried. Any further amendments in Section 1? If not, we'll proceed with Section 2.

CHIEF CLERK: I don't have any amendments to Section 2.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Proceed to Section 3. Any amendments to Section 3?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any amendments to Section 4?

CHIEF CLERK: No amendments to Section 4.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any amendments to Section 5? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I don't have an amendment, but I'd like to ask the Chairman a question, if I may.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. McCutcheon, in the second sentence of Section 5 in line 13, is it your intention to preclude a legislator running for governor or United States senator or United States representative without resigning from the legislature?

MCCUTCHEON: The intention of this section was to place a prohibition upon anyone holding office transporting themselves around the new state campaigning at public expense. We sought to shut off any public funds from being utilized for political purposes, as has been done in the past. If they wish to run for an office other than this one, that is, given the two exemptions that exist here, then they shall resign from their office.

V. FISCHER: I'd like to ask a further question. It says, "No legislator or other elective or appointive officer" In other words, you're dealing here also with the governor in the legislative article?

MCCUTCHEON: With the governor and any of his appointees.

V. FISCHER: One more question. Is it your intent on line 15 where it says "until his services have been terminated" - does that mean when his term expires?

McCUTCHEON: The intent is that he shall resign if he files for a different office.

V. FISCHER: If it was just a matter of whether resignation is a termination of his services, is that what you had in mind?

McCUTCHEON: Well, however you apply it. It shuts his pay off, that's it, period.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I'd like to ask Mr. McCutcheon a question on the same line. On that same sentence that you were just discussing, would that preclude a board member from serving on a board, would he have to be asked to resign from the board?

McCUTCHEON: Yes, if he draws any salary from the State of Alaska.

COGHILL: It doesn't state so. He would just have to resign, whether he was just on a per diem and travel, such as our board members are today.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. McCutcheon, I believe Mr. Fischer asked you a question as to whether a person would have to resign if he was running for the Senate of the United States or the House of Representatives in Washington, D.C. Did your Committee take into consideration that they are not state officers, that they could run. If they are paid by the United States they would not come under the provisions of this chapter or section.

McCUTCHEON: You mean a member of the national Congress is not a state officer except in the sense that he is representing but his remuneration does not come from the state, it comes from the national Congress.

TAYLOR: The members of the legislature of Alaska could run for senator or representative of Congress without resigning his position, if there be no prohibition.

McCUTCHEON: I'm not sure, and I hope the Committee will clarify the situation, if I have overlooked it. I'm not sure that our Committee discussed that particular point. Do you recall, Mr. McNees?

McNEES: No, we did not in Committee.

McCUTCHEON: Do you recall, Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: No, we did not concern with that phase of it.

McCUTCHEON: I think our intention was to eliminate the possibility of any state official of any nature whatsoever traveling at public expense for the purpose of campaigning, and that was our idea and our intent that he couldn't hold one job and run against another official of the state office. If we haven't quite accomplished that --

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any further questions? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Would a two-minute recess be in order to resolve that at this time, and I ask unanimous consent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: So ordered, and the Convention is at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Before we proceed with our business, I'd like to ask the delegates to please state your names when you arise to speak. We have a new man operating here and he's not acquainted with you ladies and gentlemen. You have Section 5 before you. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have an amendment for Section 5, it's on the Clerk's desk.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Would the Secretary read the amendment to Section 5.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, line 15: after the word 'office' insert the words 'or the Congress of the United States'."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: What is your pleasure, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I move for the adoption of the amendment.

TAYLOR: I'll second the motion, and ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any objection? Hearing no objection, the adoption of the amendment to Section 5 is so ordered. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I have an amendment on the Clerk's desk.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, line 13: delete 'or other elective or appointive officer of this state'."

HARRIS: I move its adoption.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hear any second to that?

BARR: Mr. President, I'll second it.

HARRIS: I'd like to state my reason for this amendment. I can see the time in the future where we might have some people serving on an elective or appointive office in a dollar-a-year capacity. Now those people, I don't think, should be prohibited from running for office if they so desire, and since this is a legislative article, I think we should try to confine it to the legislative branch and not to any and all branches.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any further discussion? Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, as Mr. McCutcheon said, the objection is that people who are in the public service may not develop business all over the Territory just prior to the election and travel on Territorial expense and per diem. Well, a dollar-a-year man is only a dollar-a-year man so far as his salary is concerned. He, as a dollar-a-year man, can still get his transportation and per diem all over for campaigning purposes. So to carry out the intention of the Committee and actually ban all campaigning at state expense, we should turn down this motion of Mr. Harris.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, my chief objection to this language that Mr. Harris is trying to delete, is that it has no place in the legislative article, it deals with the members of the executive branch of the government, and we have an Executive Committee report. I do believe they should not use public money for that reason, but I don't go quite as strong. I believe there should be a few that should campaign. I don't think that the governor should campaign to become a senator in Washington if he wants to.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any further discussion? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I don't want to take up too much time on this because we've got other things to do here, but as Mr. Barr says, in the executive section in the committee report that we do have a clause covering that for appointees of the governor, and if we are going to throw these clauses indiscriminately into every article, we are going to come up with a quite confusing document, I'm afraid. So, therefore, the main reason for suggesting it in the first place was to confine the legislative article to the legislative branch and let the other branches take care of themselves as they so choose, so that if there is a conflict, if there is a man that we think should run, we won't have him prohibited from it by making a blanket statement such as we have here.

1585

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Ready for the question?

TAYLOR: Question.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All those in favor of adopting this motion, signify by saying "aye". Read the motion, Secretary.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, line 13: delete 'or other elective or appointive officers of this state'."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All those in favor of this motion signify by saying "aye". To the contrary, say "no". I think the motion is lost. The Chair rules the motion is lost. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question of the Chairman of the Legislative Committee. If I understand it, the way we have amended it, if the governor wanted to run for senator or for the house of representatives of Congress, he would then file, and immediately, or prior to the time of his filing on the first of February, he would have to resign the governorship; and then, as we have the executive set up at this time, the secretary of state would become acting governor, and he would then have to resign in order to file to become governor.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers, are you speaking on a motion?

V. RIVERS: No, I'm asking a question. I'm just going to ask the Chairman of the Legislative Committee what becomes of all our successive state offices here, they all must resign for the office ahead of them when they start to file.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Can you answer that, Mr. McCutcheon?

McNEES: I can answer that. If he wants to run for office, let him resign.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I have an amendment to Section 5.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Will the Secretary read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, page 2, line 14: after the word 'state', add the words, 'except members of boards'."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any second?

HARRIS: I second it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Harris seconded the motion. Is there any discussion on it? Mrs. Nordale?

NORDALE: May I ask a question of Mr. Johnson?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may.

NORDALE: Is a board member considered an officer of the state?

JOHNSON: Well, I would think so, he's a civil officer if he occupies a board created by the legislature.

NORDALE: Even though he doesn't draw a salary?

JOHNSON: That is correct, I don't think that makes any difference.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Will the Secretary read the amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, line 14: after the word 'state', add the words 'except members of boards'."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All those in favor of adopting this amendment signify by saying "aye". Contrary? The "ayes" have it, and it is so ordered. Any further amendments? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I'm concerned with what Mr. Victor Rivers just brought up, and I'd like to direct a question, if I may, to the Chairman, Mr. McCutcheon, as to the extent of the governor. You know as well as I do that any governor or senator will use every opportune time to get up and speak or to further his political career, if that is his aspiration, and in going around to dedicate school buildings, or what not, why he'll become a prominent public figure in that community, and, in turn, is promoting his own political or general welfare. Now are you in this requiring a governor to resign his office and the lieutenant-governor take over, if he wishes to become a state senator, or file for the state senate?

MCCUTCHEON: Would that be an unacceptable procedure? The line of automatic succession as set up in the executive articles would take care of the office. It seems to me that a governor is going about the state on business of the state, no matter what he was doing, if he were dedicating things, as you say, he may do so, until the date he files for election, or files for office at national level, then it seems to me that comes within the intent of this Committee, and that he should get off the payroll.

V. RIVERS: I'm not asking a frivolous question when I say that at the same time the governor resigns to run for Congress, why then the secretary of state must resign to run for governor.

McCUTCHEON: He does not have to resign to run for governor, if I understand your automatic succession sets up a vacancy.

V. RIVERS: He would be the automatic successor as the acting governor, but he'd have to run for re-election from the secretary of state's position.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: We have no motions before us. Any amendments?

NORDALE: May I ask Mr. McCutcheon a question, Mr. President?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may.

NORDALE: This says, "To run for election to any other state office"; that would mean that anyone could run for re-election?

McCUTCHEON: Right.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no amendments, we'll proceed with Section 6 Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I don't have an amendment, but I would like to ask concerning line 24, between the words "except" and "felony" whether the word "treason" should be in there, Mr. McCutcheon? In our first draft we did have "treason" in there, and I was wondering whether this is just a slip that it is not there now?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Care to answer that, Mr. McCutcheon?

McCUTCHEON: As I recall, as a matter of fact, we did have "treason" in the original article, and it seems to me that our consultant said that it would be unlikely that a treasonable act would occur insofar as our state was concerned.

R. RIVERS: Well, treason is a felony, too.

SWEENEY: Well, I just wanted to be sure that we are all right in leaving it out, and, as I say, we did have it, and your constitution carries it.

McCUTCHEON: It appears that several of the attorneys state that treason is a felony, so it would be covered under a felony.

HERMANN: I'm wondering if it was intended to omit "immunity" from service of a subpoena?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Maybe some other members of the Committee should help Mr. McCutcheon out.

TAYLOR: I'd like to ask Mr. McCutcheon a question. Ordinarily the privilege of being served a civil process extends to members of the legislature, but I see that the Committee has left it out of here. I was wondering whether that was done deliberately or whether it was an oversight? In other words to protect the members of the legislature so that they wouldn't be summarily taken away from the legislature to answer civil processes in the courts.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I don't think Mrs. Hermann had an answer yet to her question.

HERMANN: It was the same thing.

McCUTCHEON: If I'm not incorrect -- and I'll stand corrected by any member of our Committee -- it was the intention of our Committee that while in session the legislators should be protected from the service of any type which would impede or impair their attending a session of the legislature, excepting in the event that they do create a felony or create a breach of the peace, so that our intent was that -- I think we are probably more concerned about being subjected to a libel suit, if they made some statement, and it is possible that we inadvertently overlooked the service of civil process which would interfere with their attending a legislature.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are you through with the answer to the question, Mr. McCutcheon?

McCUTCHEON: Yes sir.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I move for a three-minute recess to give the Committee an opportunity to draw an amendment to cover civil process for subpoena.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Without objection, it is so ordered. The Convention will recess for three minutes.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. The Secretary will read the amendment by Mr. McCutcheon.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 25, page 2: after the word 'arrest', insert 'and immune from service of civil process'."

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any second to it?

McCUTCHEON: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

R. RIVERS: I object.

McCUTCHEON: I so move.

BUCKALEW: I will second it.

R. RIVERS: I object just for the time being. The grounds for my objection is that you are not immune from service of process, you're immune from the compulsion to leave the body to go some place. Now if I'm in the legislature, someone can serve a summons upon me any time during the session. I can engage counsel in my home town to file a motion or an answer to stall the thing off. I think what it was intended here that no subpoena or other order of the court shall be compulsory while you're in attendance. Now I want to get at the same intention that Mr. McCutcheon is aiming at here, but I think we ought to pause just a moment before we act on this, because you're not immune from the service of a process. If somebody serves something on you, you're not under the compulsion, you don't have to respond and you're not in contempt of court. I just wanted to get this wording right.

BUCKALEW: Could I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may.

BUCKALEW: Don't you think, for example, that the legislator that was served with a civil suit and I don't think he should be allowed to be served with a civil suit until after the legislator was over?

R. RIVERS: Well, he's got 20 days in which to answer. Any lawyer could file a motion to tide him over. Being served with a summons doesn't take a man away from the session. Perhaps we had better look and see what our legislative immunity says in our present statutes. I haven't had a chance to look at it here. But I am quite sure that normally services of various papers can be made, but you're not compelled to leave the body. That's the point.

HELLENTHAL: The book here refers to it as "immunity from civil process" in two places, on page 17 of this chapter on the legislative department.

R. RIVERS: That's from the PAS?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, sir.

R. RIVERS: That's probably just a reference to the subject matter though, without trying to guide us on the right phraseology.

HELLENTHAL: Why don't we pass this for a few minutes, go on to the next section while you and I check?

R. RIVERS: All right.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: We have a motion for its adoption on that. Do you wish to delay action on it and revert back to it? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I ask unanimous consent to defer further action of this until we conclude the correct wording of the proposed amendment. I ask unanimous consent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? So ordered. We are still on Section 6, however. While they are making their corrections, does anybody have any other amendments in a different part of this section? I hesitate to go to other sections before they are through.

CHIEF CLERK: I have an amendment to Section 7.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: We'll proceed with Section 7, and in case I forget, someone remind me to revert back to 6. Read the amendment to the section.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Boswell: "Strike the first two lines from Section 7 and the word 'governor' in the third line and insert in lieu thereof, 'each member of the legislature shall receive for their services and per diem, a sum not to exceed one three hundred-sixtieth of the annual salary of the governor for each day's attendance while the legislature is in session.' Strike the comma after 'salary' in line 8. Insert a period, and strike the remainder of lines 8, 9, and 10."

BOSWELL: I so move.

COGHILL: I will second it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I wonder if we could have Mr. McCutcheon give us the thinking of the Committee on the need for an annual salary as it is opposed to this amendment? If one would strike out the intent of the Committee, let's hear from the Committee.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I think this question was directed to Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The thinking of the Committee with respect to an annual salary, whether or not you agree with this particular formula is the fact that on an annual basis you will not have the jam-up of legislation at the end of the session. It will be a continuing affair. The legislature can be activated or deactivated any time, either by themselves or by the governor. If there is a press of business, they can be summoned into session on short notice for a short period of time. Their salary is a continuing affair which doesn't require that they shall have to get up against a log jam in order to adjourn on a limiting date. Now the main theory behind an annual salary proposition is that if an annual salary is established, the legislators will conclude with as much dispatch as the public interest will permit the business of the legislature. They'll be happy to get back home. If it's put on a daily remuneration basis, then necessarily there must be a limit to the time that is established, that the legislature may sit, and by putting it in such a fashion we have then the same frailties of our legislative setup that we have in the Territory at this time. There are quite a number of the states that pay their legislators on a yearly basis. Consequently, while I may be partly in accord with the theory of the motion that is offered by Mr. Boswell, I personally in this respect believe that he is defeating the intent of our Committee by revising the salary proposition, because he takes out the comment of annual salary, which then makes the legislature on a limited basis and it will require substantial amendment in order to create the time limit as they should be set for the legislature.

BOSWELL: Mr. Chairman, I agree with the Committee's viewpoint, that it is not wise to put a dollar amount in the Constitution, and also I think it was a good idea to tie it to the governor's salary. I do not agree with their methods. In the first place, it would give us a questionable distinction of having the highest paid legislature in the 49 states. New York is now the highest with an annual salary of $5,000. If we assume a salary for the governor of $20,000, it would mean then that our legislators would be getting $6,667. Also, I might point out that New York's tax receipts are in excess of one billion dollars, and it would seem to me that with our tax receipts such as they are, that putting our legislators' salaries up above New York would seem a little out of place. The Committee said in their commentary that this sum would result in career legislators. I don't believe it's enough money to induce anyone to make a career out of being a legislator. And, as a matter of fact, I'm not sure that having career legislators would be a good thing either. I think we'd better have a little fresh blood in there once in awhile, a new viewpoint. If we assume a salary of $20,000 for the governor, this would amount to about $55.50 per day. Extending that to a month and it would be $1400. I think that would induce a fairly high type of person to run for the legislature. And if the legislature is in session for four and one-half months, it would then equal the amount that the Committee has set for it; it would equal one-third of the governor's salary. Of course, if it went on to a six-month session, it would equal half his salary, approximately. It may be necessary for the legislature to sit for a long time for the first year or so, but I would expect that the time will come when it might only require a month or two. And if it does reach the time, say they should have a good Legislative Council which they have set up, that they only have to go there for a month, then on this committee proposal they would be working at an annual salary of $8,000 a year, having gotten a third of the governor's salary for one month's work. And I'm merely seeking to establish a yardstick here that will pay the legislators on the basis of services performed, and if it takes four or five months for a while, that's fine, but the time may come when I think it would be a lot more applicable figure.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I believe that the Committee's plan of an annual salary is highly desirable. If we go through with the amendment we would have to change Section "A" by adding a limit upon the session, because I do not believe that with a daily pay you would want to leave the length of a session completely open. I think that rather than approve the amendment, we should decrease the annual salary below the one-third of the governor's salary, and I have an amendment to offer in that line, if this is defeated.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McNeese.

MCNEESE: Mr. President, in line with Mr. Boswell's remarks, I'd also like to remind the assembly here that New York also has 56 senators and 150 representatives.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. President, if I might direct a question at some member of the Committee. I know in their thinking of this proposal that they must have considered the cost of such a three month session of the legislature each year. Just in rough figures I can see where at $5,000 a year salary it would run to $300,000 for salaries, and usually it costs that much again for other expenses, which be around $600,000 per year. At present we have a session every two years, and I believe that it is considered for a yearly session, or longer.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any further discussion? Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I'd like to hear from some folks who have served in the legislature as to their feelings about this, because it seems to me it means a person forfeiting their time and business for a year or two years. There is not only the service to the state, but the retention of their own business and their own security and their home.

And before I could vote on this, I would want to see it from the standpoint of someone who has served in the legislature. What is your feeling about it, and are you in favor of an annual type of setup as we have it proposed here in the original section, which would be altered by Mr. Boswell's amendment? Could I direct it, say, to Mr. Barr over here? He's had to sit down in Juneau. What is your reaction to it, Mr. Barr?

BARR: Mr. President, I do favor the annual salary for reasons stated by Mr. McCutcheon. The legislature should be called any time for special sessions, and so forth, and that would not vary the sum expended, it would be constant year after year. And another reason is that I don't believe that some of us here realize that a legislator, himself, does a little work at other times. He's always speaking to his constituents, or they are asking him for something, and he's writing to the departments of the government trying to get it for them. It may not be a great amount of time he spends, but he certainly would feel as if he were obliged to do those things for the people if he were receiving an annual salary, instead of being paid just while he was in Juneau. Now, also, I'm not for giving the members of the legislature a really large salary, but I believe it should be large enough so that it would attract the right kind of people, not just men who would run for the salary alone. Perhaps they are footloose and fancy free, and they can't lose anything by filing for the election. In Alaska we do have some pretty high salaries paid at the present time. My opinion is that with the present salary, a single man can go to Juneau and can come back without losing any money, he might have a few dollars left in his pocket. A married man who has to maintain a home, say in Fairbanks or Anchorage, and then goes down there and lives in a hotel might lose by it, and in addition, if he is running a business of his own, he will lose. Now we know that the average good attorney makes more money in a month's time than he will receive in Juneau, and, of course, if we have attorneys down there, we want good attorneys down there, and most of them can't afford to leave their business. I believe the salaries should be tied to the governor's salary and not in a dollar amount, but a percentage thereof. And we must consider, of course, the ability of the Territory to pay these salaries. If we have a very large legislature, it takes more money, and if the salary is very high, it takes more money. We should pay them sufficiently, and I'm not prepared to say what that figure is, but it should be sufficient.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Barr, what is the monthly salary of a legislator now?

BARR: It's $15 a day and $20 per diem. And actually, that $20 is somewhat in lieu of pay, because we know that $15 isn't very much pay.

HELLENTHAL: Would you say it was $900 a month? Thirty-five times thirty?

BARR: Yes.

TAYLOR: Between that, less taxes.

HELLENTHAL: Well, I'm a lawyer, and I don't make $2700 a month. I believe your remark was, though, that a lawyer made as much in one month as a legislator made throughout the session of the legislature.

BARR: If I did, I didn't mean to say that.

HELLENTHAL: That's the way I interpreted it, Mr. Barr.

BARR: No, I said that the average lawyer made more in a month's time than a legislator made in a month's time.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, the reason for my cross-examination on this is because of a fundamental belief that I have in the price that we are going to have to pay for statehood. I think as we move into statehood we must be secure in that fact, that the men we put into the office of the legislature will be assured that they can do the job and do it well, that we can call for the highest caliber of men throughout the Territory, and I'm talking about women, too, that's correct, Mrs. Hermann. But this feeling has been one that I have carried for many years. As people have talked about statehood, I have insisted that statehood would bring to Alaska the highest type of citizenry to work for us in our halls of the legislature, without reflection on any work that has been done before. And I think at the point of statehood we must produce the highest type of a legislation to show that we are able to hold our place in the sisterhood of states. So as I am trying to weigh this back and forth, my own feeling at this point is that we may have to pay more for the annual wage, but it would seem to me it would be a price worth paying, if we can hold ourselves up before the Union and say that we want the highest type of men and women to serve us in the legislature. So my feeling is to defeat the amendment and to retain some formula that would be set up in the original document.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for two-or three-minutes' recess, please.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and the Convention is at recess for ten minutes.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I've had the occasion of being brought into a corner and talked to in reference to the statements I made. Not that I was reprimanded, but should I say, enlightened. I'd like to ask Mr. Taylor if he would speak to the Convention from the standpoint of his discussion with me as to where there was a fallacy in my procedure, for he was talking about deadlines and the amount of time away from a person's business in a little different angle, and I wonder if he would explain to the Convention some of the fallacies that he felt were in my arguments.

TAYLOR: Well, after quite a number of times in the legislature, we find that the ordinary person aspiring to the legislature that thinks of the salary last, I believe, and in getting something done for the Territory, first. And it is a considerable burden upon a man with a business to have to go away for even a stated period like 60 days. Ordinarily, we know when we go down for 60 days that we'll be back and we can arrange our affairs in the office accordingly. Now with an indeterminate session such as we've got, it would be a grave doubt as to whether a man with a business could run for the office, because he wouldn't know whether he was going to be gone for 30 days or six months. And so as I say, the salary proposition is something we should not consider too much. As we realize, the salaries heretofore for the legislature have been paid by the Federal government, the per diem has been paid by the Territory. So if we come out with a bill, or with an article in the constitution that shows that it cost $600,000 to hold the Territorial session or a state session of the legislature, and it would be reflected in our constitutional articles when it went before the people, they might be a little hesitant about buying that bill of goods that we are trying to sell them. They will think it was a little bit too high, so I think that we should lower our sights on this, considerably below what is put in the proposed article. It might tie the salary to the governor all right, but I don't believe that in proportion as set out here, of one-third, because it might be that some year you might get $6,000 for a 30 days session, and that's quite a large salary, and another time you might get the same amount of money for a two-months session. Of course then again, you may have to get $6,000 for a six months session. If you got that, you'd be getting about just what you get now on a per diem basis. So I think we should be careful, not only in regard to the finances of the Territory, but also the effect that it's going to have upon the voters when this document is submitted to them for ratification. Now I think that Rivers had another thought that he brought up with Mr. Armstrong that he might like to elaborate on.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Could I first ask Mr. Taylor whether he is for or against the amendment, since we have an amendment before us.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may.

TAYLOR: I don't think I heard the amendment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Will the Secretary read the amendment, please.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the first two lines of Section 7 and the word 'governor' in the third line, and insert in lieu thereof, 'each member of the legislature shall receive for their services and per diem a sum not to exceed one 300/60ths of the annual salary of the governor for each day's attendance while the legislature is in session.' Strike the comma after 'salary' in line 8. Insert a period and strike the remainder of lines 8, 9, and 10."

TAYLOR: That would be tied in to the governor's salary, but on a per diem basis. That might be a good idea.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I want to speak to the amendment. After having been down there one session as a member and also the attorney for forum sessions, including two extraordinaries, I have found that things lag at the outset, and as much as with this body, you don't seem to get very much done until you're facing a deadline. Your big production and your calling out of all your junk that gets thrown in all comes because of the fact that you are reaching a deadline and you have to get the job done in a certain time. So I don't like this indefinite, year-long call that you're on, or that you can string along with a job, especially with some people who never want to let go of a bone or a detail. You can't get the job done unless you have some definite periods of time is the way I feel about this, so I favor Mr. Boswell's amendment very much. I am very concerned about the amount of money that we would run into. We've got this big charge that the big doubt is whether Alaska can afford statehood. I think we have to trim the suit to fit the cloth. I don't see how we can come out paying $300,000 a year for a legislative setup during the early years of our statehood when we are only paying about $60,000 a session now. Maybe that's just $15 without the $20, but then you multiply that by two and make it $120,000 a year for the legislature's activities, but this sounds like a deluxe deal, and I don't think we can afford it. So I go along with Mr. Taylor, that if many men who have businesses and professions were going to be asked to run on that sort of a nondeadline basis, which could string on for months, they might just as well give up the idea of running for the legislature at all. As it is, many of your busiest men are your best men. They can spare 60 days, or 90 days at the outset and still plan accordingly, arrange their affairs and be in business, but if you cannot be in business and be on that kind of nondeadline continuous call, then you can't run for the legislature, so I think this system would eliminate more good, qualified, highpowered people than it would induce. I also think, as I said before, it would cost far too much. I think that the percentages as set forth by Mr. Boswell are very liberal. It would run $55 a day on the basis of the governor getting about $20,000 a year and you would simply be getting paid so much per day for the work you did. If we adopt Mr. Boswell's idea, I think we should stick in a provision that the legislature may extend its session for an additional month, emergencies or press of business requiring. But nevertheless, that would take a majority vote of the members of the legislature, you would still have a tentative deadline at the end of your 90 days, with a possibility of an additional 30 days. You would also have your extraordinary sessions as the basis for taking up any emergencies or unforeseen contingencies that might arise. I also concur that if you do give them a compensation based on a daily performance, then you have to fix a maximum period for your sessions, with a possibility of allowing them to extend for an additional 30 days or something like that. But I like that formula much better than this deluxe annual salary that cuts lots of good people out of really being able to run.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: The time I was out, this vacation time, I learned one thing, I learned the fear of this gigantic price that we are paying for statehood on these salaries. I am all for it and I believe you can never pay a good man too much, but on this basis and the fear of the people that I talked to, it leads me to go right down the channel with Taylor and Rivers here on their thoughts and I think we should scale it down. I don't think we should do it tonight. It is now 9:30 and I move that we adjourn tonight at this time. Now tomorrow morning if someone could come up with a new formula, it will give us time to think it over. It is time to adjourn now and I move and ask unanimous consent that we adjourn for the evening, until 9 a.m. tomorrow.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

DOOGAN: Having voted on the prevailing side on the article on health, welfare, and education, I serve notice now of reconsideration for tomorrow on the motion to delete the last line of Section 1 of the article on education.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is that for a specific amendment?

DOOGAN: The last sentence.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The motion before us is to stand adjourned. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: We have one announcement. During one of the recent recesses, the Rules Committee reconsidered the pending calendar, thinking that because we were now on the legislative articles and because there has been so much discussion of apportionment, that probably while all attention was directed to the two subjects jointly, the next matter on the calendar should be apportionment instead of the executive. I don't have my own calendar before me but the existing lineup was for the two executive articles, 10 and 12, following legislative and the Rules Committee felt that the body should have notice that it has made this change in the calendar whereby apportionment will be the next matter taken up after legislative, which will probably make it the day after tomorrow.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Will the delegates make note of that, please, it's quite important.

McCUTCHEON: I'd like to make a committee announcement. The Legislative Branch will meet in the back of the room here at 8:30 tomorrow morning or as soon thereafter as any of the Committee can get here.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The motion is that we adjourn until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. All those in favor signify by saying "aye". The "ayes" have it and it is so ordered. The Convention is adjourned until 9 o'clock a.m.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 10, 1956

FORTY-NINTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning the Reverend Robert Sheppard of the First Church of the Nazarene. Reverend Sheppard will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND SHEPPARD: Let us pray. Our Heavenly Father, we consider it to be proper and fitting that we again today look to Thee for a moment of worship before we turn our hands to those things that lie before us. Thy Word has told us that the Lord is nigh unto all of them that call upon Him and call upon Him in truth. We pray that Thou shalt enable us to see that truth and to know it that we might have the nearness of Thy presence and the strength Thou has to give. We thank Thee for this Constitutional Convention and all that has been accomplished to this good day. We thank Thee for the tireless efforts and the intimate concern to which this group has given itself to the task at hand. Now we pray as we look into the affairs of today with those associations we must necessarily have one with another, that we shall remember above all that there is one with whom we have the most intimate association and to whom we are the most responsible. That one is God. Therefore let us be diligent to seek out this that we know to be best and highest, that we might provide a document that shall truly govern and rule a great state and great people, as the Lord wills. Be with us to this end we pray. In the name of Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: Five absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make? Mr. White.

WHITE: Reporting on the journal for the 44th day, page 5, fifth paragraph from the bottom, change the word "refer to" to "revert". Page 9, third paragraph from the top, insert a period after the word "Amendment" and strike the words "of Proposal No. 3". Page 14, bottom paragraph, strike the second "s" on "Rivers". Page 16, third paragraph from the bottom, excluding the roll call, strike the comma after Section 3 and insert a colon. Page 18, third paragraph, beginning with the words "Mr. Taylor", correct spelling of the word seized". Page 19, second paragraph, third line, insert "R." before the name "Rivers". Mr. President, the Committee recommends the adoption of the journal with those corrections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent that the journal of the 44th day be adopted with the recommended changes as offered by the special Committee. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the journal of the 44th day is ordered adopted. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside of the Convention? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I would like to announce to the Convention that the children of the Nenana Public School and High School will visit the Convention on Friday morning, the 13th.

PRESIDENT EGAN: How many children will that be?

COGHILL: Twenty.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you suggest that perhaps the Convention delegates take those children to lunch?

COGHILL: If it is the pleasure of the Convention. They will board the train at Nenana, the Alaska Railroad, at 6:45 in the morning and arrive here at 8:30 and will catch the 9:50 bus to the Convention Hall. They will be here with the delegates that morning. If it is the pleasure of the Convention, I am sure they would enjoy it.

V. FISCHER: I think it would be a fine occasion for Mr. Coghill to take all the youngsters out to lunch, as well as the delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, you might have a very fine idea there. Perhaps in the interim period we could decide what we will do. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: It may be somewhat in the wrong order, but there will be a meeting of the Committee No. VI immediately following the calling of the noon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of Committee No. VI immediately following the calling of the noon recess. That is the Committee on Suffrage, Elections and Apportionment?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

CROSS: Committee on Resolutions and Recommendations has considered Mr. Marston's resolution entitled "Friendly Relations With Canada", and is returning it to the Convention with the recommendation that it be adopted by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The report of the Committee will be committed to the Chief Clerk at this time. The Chief Clerk will please read the Committee report.

CHIEF CLERK: "The full Committee, Chairman Cross presiding, having met on January 6, 1956, and considered Delegate Marston's resolution of December 16, entitled 'Friendly Relations With Canada', hereby recommends that said resolution be adopted by the Convention, which resolution it herewith returns."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Are there reports of select committees? Are there any proposals to be introduced at this time? Any motions or resolutions? Under unfinished business, I believe we have Committee Proposal No. 5 before us in second reading. There are some amendments on hand. Is there a particular amendment pending?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Section 7. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I be excused for the balance of the morning session?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson, you may be excused. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed pending amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the first two lines of Section 7 and the word 'governor' in the third line, and insert in lieu thereof: 'each member of the legislature shall receive for their services and per diem a sum not to exceed one three-hundred-sixtieth of the annual salary of the Governor for each day's attendance while the legislature is in session'; strike the comma after 'salary' in line 8, insert a period, and strike the remainder of lines 8, 9 and 10." This was by Mr. Boswell. It was moved and seconded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was moved and seconded that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there discussion? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: It is too early in the morning, but I think before we go into the salary here on the legislature, I placed down some figures hurriedly which I wish everyone who has a pencil would take these figures and have some kind of comparison of what happens under Mr. Boswell's amendment, and then, if I may have the opportunity, the one three-hundred-sixtieth per day of the annual salary of the Governor, you pick a figure say of $22,500, that happens to be the salary of federal judges, and that will probably be the salary of your governor, that of the federal judges. It may be 20,000 or 18,000, but as far as we know now the highest salary in the Territory is $22,500. As long as we are handling dollars we might as well use plenty of them, so you can check my mathematics at this time. I did not go into too much detail, but first, this present plan runs $63 a day, or roughly $1890 per month.

DAVIS: That is the present plan of the committee proposal?

GRAY. No, that is the present plan of Mr. Boswell. One three-hundred-sixtieth of the governor's salary equals $63 per day or roughly $1890 per month. Now I bring that up to compare any other method to this particular method. I am going to give you the ratio of the salaries of one-tenth of the governor's salary and one-twelfth for comparison. The way I have this is if the governor's salary is based on one-tenth of the legislative salary, one-tenth of the governor's salary, and we have got to remember that when we first start here, why the first year or two you may have 60-, 90-, or 120-day sessions. I see very little reason that they are going to get by with a 30-day session in the first several years, so using the figure, a 60-day legislature, and the legislator's salary is $2,250 a year, that is one-tenth, which would give you on a 60-day session, would give you $37.50 per day. I think you might as well accept the fact they will use the same per diem as we do now, $20 per day. There is advantage to using the per diem because it is nontaxable. It is still money though, so you add the $20 per day and that gives the per day salary of the legislature at $57.50 per day, which runs $1,725 per month. That is on the 60-day session. Now, right below that, take another group. This is series two, on a 90-day session for the legislature. Covering over $2,250 per year gives you $25 per day salary plus $20 per day diem gives you a total income of $45 per day or roughly $1,350 a month.

R. RIVERS: You said the 90-day session? Are you talking about one-twelfth of the 60-day session?

GRAY: No. We may have a 60-day session. We may have a 90 or a 120 in the same year. This is a 90-day session.

R. RIVERS: Why does it drop from $55 a day to $45 a day?

GRAY: Because of annual salary. Why I bring this up is that as your legislature's days increase the salary automatically drops per day because you are based on an annual salary, and if you bring that into the days of the session, you can see the longer the session you hold your average per day drops. I take a third series, the 120-day session which gives you $19 per day plus $20 per day per diem which gives you $39 per day salary or $1,170 monthly salary. Now, what we have here, we have an annual salary that is basic and the shorter the session the higher the salary and the longer the session, the shorter the salary. You have a standard salary but you also have the per diem which you are going to have any way. You are going to have that $20 per day and that takes care of the difference whether you are in session or not. You have a sliding scale. It is to the advantage of the legislators to get their work done as quickly as possible because every day their salary is progressively dropping. Also, you don't have to have any closing period. They are going to get the same amount of money outside of per diem whether in session 30, 60, 90, or 180 days, except for the per diem. I bring this in the matter of Mr. Boswell's remarks, that they get a salary of $63 per day, the same as the governor. If the legislature chose to stay in session for twelve months, each one would draw $22,500, the top salary in the state, unless you had some limiting factor on it. Even with the $22 per day these figures look fairly high, and I used one-twelfth, and the one-twelfth salary per year, I would like to put those down because I am going to put in for one-twelfth of $22,500. It may be too small. I would like to take some advice from some other people on this thing. I will try the one-twelfth if it is too small then the alternate would be one-tenth. I am following the same thing, on one-twelfth of the $22,500 is $1,875 per year. In other words, if the legislature did not have a session they would draw roughly $157 per month. I assume that what we are going to have is two propositions in this state legislature that you have to meet. One is that in the first years of the legislature your session may go three or four months a year, and in subsequent sessions you may have as low as 30-day sessions in the whole year, but probably 45-to 60-day sessions a year, but in your opening years you are going to have long sessions. In the one-twelfth, take the 60-day sessions first, under $1,875 a year leaves $31.25 per day plus $20 per day per diem which gives $51 a day salary and per diem, or roughly $1,500 per month. On your 90-day session, that is what it is per year, it would be roughly $20 per day plus $20 per diem which equals $40 per day. It would give you roughly $1,200 per month. I bring up a 120-day session because I think in the opening years you are going to have 120-day sessions. Your salary would be $15 per day plus $20 per day per diem which equals $35 per day which is the salary that the legislature is working on as of today. It is the salary the delegates are working on today, and that is for the 120 days which is a four-month period based on one-twelfth. Now there is an advantage on this per diem because it is tax exempt, I mean that $20 is yours, the salary is not yours, only part yours. I just put this series of figures in so you possibly could evaluate what these figures mean, particularly what one three-hundred-sixtieth of the governor's salary means plus $20 per diem on top of that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I think Mr. Boswell's amendment contemplated one-three-hundred-sixtieth for salary and per diem combined.

GRAY: I think that would bring it down to about $43 for the 90-day session. I believe that is all I wanted to show you was that if you could have a sliding scale on there, you create two things. One, you don't have to have a limiting day, 30 or 60. As the time progresses the legislature draws progressively less money every day they are in session. You are not limited to a certain length session, and it costs the state very little more, just costs the per diem expenses.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to ask Mr. Gray a question and then point out a point to the assembly that I think very definitely ought to be considered here. Mr. Gray, in your thinking do you think it is possible during the first four or five years, four or five sessions of the newly formed state legislature, for the State of Alaska to actually complete the work that will be involved in drawing up a statutory set of laws for the state in a period of even 120 days? Might it not run twice that?

GRAY: Well, you asked for my opinion. Having not gone through it, why it is not going to be worth much to you, but I doubt that the session, the actual sessions, would run more than four months a year.

MCNEES: During the formative period?

GRAY: During the formative period. After all, that is a long time, that is practically long enough. For the people where it is in their backyard, that is all right, but for the people away from home, four months a year and during legislative sessions, that is a long time.

MCNEES: Thank you very much. I would like to point out here, too, that Juneau is not in the backyard for most of us, not that I have any quarrel and I am not bringing that up as a point either. It is a long way away from home, but I do believe that the vast majority of those who run for the legislature have good legislation in mind. Furthermore, I would like to point out on this Legislative Committee that brought out the original proposal No. 5, seven people involved, only two of whom had ever served or whom might have voiced any desire to serve in the legislative halls. However, of these seven there is not a one that is not interested in good legislation. I would like to point out the extreme importance of these first three, four, five or six formative years in our statutory law program. They are going to be tremendously vital years with many interim committees serving between sessions. I think they should be allowed to serve without any great financial sacrifice to themselves. I think it should bring the top men of the Territory to the foreground. When I use the term "men", I mean men and women because we all recognize the value of the women in our own assembly here. I think they will play an important role in the politics of the Territory forever, an increasingly vital role. I would like to point out, too, that if we put these salaries too low we are going to subject our own legislature during these formative years when lobbyists become increasingly important to that possible threat of back cubby-hole legislation which certainly should not enter into the picture, particularly during these formative years. I recognize the role of the lobbying in legislation. I am in favor of it, but not when it works to the detriment of the legislator in the hall because then it reflects directly back to the people. We want good legislation, and for good legislation we must pay. I know the financial problem that faces us in the formation of the new state. It is important, it is tremendously vital that we be able to pay for what we want, but knowing the resources of this Territory, which is soon to become a state, as I do, I am not the least bit concerned in my own thinking, nor have not been for the last 15 years, but what we will be able to pay for it. Therefore, I heartily recommend that we set those salaries high enough first to bring top men to the foreground, secondly, to prevent cubby-hole legislation, and thirdly, to set an example for other states across the nation.

V. FISCHER: May I ask Mr. McNees a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: The pending amendment is to set the salary on a daily basis as against the annual salary as provided in the committee proposal. You are speaking primarily on Mr. Gray's argument against the daily proposal plan. What is your opinion of the annual salary as against the daily salary plan as proposed by the amendment?

MCNEES: Being a member of the Committee, I won't say I am defending the article primarily because I am a member of that Committee, but I do feel we came out with a workable recommendation in Committee with possibly some adjustment on the one-third figure. I would like to see it held to. I think that there should be a salary figure there high enough so that a man could become a careerist in the field. That is the only way we are going to prepare adequate men for the United States Congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I agree with the proposal of the Committee and will be willing of course to see the percentage of amount adjusted. I also feel with Mr. McNees that this first four or five years of being a state, possibly the first two, there might well be a session of 90 days or part of the year and another session of 90 days with a break in between, similar to the way Congress sits at the present time, and that would be especially true in the first years of the new state. I also feel this: I have served, as you know, in some six senate sessions, and it has been my observation that the senator who runs for the senate has certain commitments and obligations in his campaign that can range anywhere from $250 to $1,500. Then he goes to the senate and legislature and has to establish a second home during the legislature. If he is an active member he must also provide some additional secretarial help at his own cost. It has been my observation in the present level, a person with a business and transferring his residence to Juneau for a certain period of time, it has been my observation that he takes a loss of about $1,000 a month at the present level. Now that is a direct loss; there is another indirect loss. If you perhaps happen to spearhead a revenue program which certain people that have done business with you feel will touch them, there is a very good chance in the next four or five years, you will get very little business from them. I have in mind a legislator who has not been in the legislature for about four years. I asked if he intended to run next time and he said "No, I don't believe that I will because I am just recovering from the last session. There are some people who now come back into my store whom I haven't seen for two or three years and are getting kind of friendly again." That is the indirect loss that a man sustains. I would like to see a reasonable but a substantial and fair salary set for the legislature, and I approve the annual plan, not the one three-hundred-sixtieth percentage as Mr. Boswell's amendment sets up. It seems to me particularly in the first years of the state the annual salary basis would be the most desirable and best. I don't quite agree with Mr. McNeese that you are going to have men seeking careers on the part time basis of legislation, but I think it is very good training ground and could very well lead them into productive careers in the state executive and congressional legislative offices from the experience they gain in the two houses. I don't like to see us have to send men down there to make a personal sacrifice financially and of their time and not compensate them reasonably at least to offset in some part the benefit and value of their efforts plus the losses they take to their own private income. It seems to me this is an item that should be given serious consideration. I hope we maintain the annual plan as set up by the Committee. I am willing to listen to some adjustment in the percentage which they show.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I do not wish to speak to the motion so perhaps I should ask for special privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, special privilege is granted you, Mrs. Sweeney.

(Mrs. Sweeney spoke under special privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, the way the Chair understands it is that if we set up anything related to salary in the constitution for legislators, that would become effective immediately following passage of the Enabling Act by the Congress, so the transitional measures will have nothing to do with the salary of the first legislators, so far as the Chair understands it. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: There are a few things here that come to mind since I have heard the discussion on this proposed amendment and I would like to ask a few questions, if I may. First, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Victor Rivers. You made reference to the fact that often times there may be up to $1,500 campaign expenses and that consequently a man going down there that has to put a man out for that much should have a salary sufficient enough to take up that shock, is that correct?

V. RIVERS: If a man has strong beliefs in certain policies and principles of government and on the basis of those policies thinks they would be of good value to the people and wants to let them know about that and what his thoughts are, he has an obligation to let them know, I believe, and he is required to spend certain monies. And out of that money the only way he reimburses his own pocket book for that is by having it in the salary. It is part of the cost of the operation of being a legislator.

LONDBORG: Along that line let us suppose there are two candidates, and they are equally earnest and zealous and equal as statesmen, and so equal that one gets elected by one vote over the other. The defeated candidate also has quite a shock to his budget. He has put himself out $1,500 and who is going to pay for that? That is one thing I see in covering the shock of the campaign by a salary.

V. RIVERS: I think the answer to Mr. Londborg's question is self-evident. It is like everything else in life, it is a gamble. If you win, you win, and if you lose, you lose, and it comes out of your own pocket.

LONDBORG: It is interesting then that we take in gambling on it, but if there is such a shocking loss it is interesting to me why so many continue to run. Now I would like to ask a question of Mr. McNeese. He has been arguing that we are going to have a longer term during this transitional period. Then it would seem that either we should put it on a daily basis, speaking now on the amendment, as Mr. Boswell puts it, so if it runs longer they get salary each day for as long as it runs. If it runs shorter they get a salary each day for as short as it runs. It seems that we are having arguments for setting a very high salary on the basis of the fact that we have a long transitional period. I think we ought to look ahead when the thing is going to level down, what should be a decent salary then. If we feel it should be higher during the transitional period then leave it up to some other measure. I am not for underpaying by any means. I don't feel that the one-third is quite justified though.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I am in full accord with the Committee's report. People are strange sometimes. I want to point this out to this legislative body. I was in the last session of the legislature and I say that with some honor, and we had a tremendous fight in the house to get for people to this Convention $35 a day, and I can recall some of the speeches that were made, and I remember that I had to fight like a tiger to get $35, and then the people said they were not worth it because they did not want to vote for $35 because they wanted to make the argument, when they got home that they were for economy. I think that the people here are probably the most important people in Alaska, and they deserve to be paid. As far as this legislature is concerned, I look upon a legislator as one of the most important individuals in the state. The legislator is as important as a judge, the governor, and you pay a man according to the job he does -- the job that is created for him, and when you figure it out, cut it down to so much a day and go along and have to diminish his salary, that is nonsense. I don't see why you should put any strings on a legislature. They are mature individuals, and I don't think they are going to go down there and goof off on the money of the new state. It costs money to run for office and if you are going to make everybody eligible for an office, you are going to have to pay them, and I think that the proposal of the Committee is the only proposal I have seen that makes it possible for the average man to run; by the average man I mean the man who is making payments every month to the bank. When I went to the legislature I had to go down and see Dan Cuddy to get some money to get to Juneau, and I don't think that is fair. Maybe we want to eliminate it and let the people in certain brackets run. If you are going to start whittling it down, you are going to get to the point where we poor boys can't run for the legislature. I don't say we are more qualified, but I think we are entitled to the privilege to run for the legislature. The only way we are going to get that privilege is to be paid for it, and the only place I want to get the money is from the state treasury. I ask all of you to support the Committee proposal because I think it is a step in the right direction, and I think we're going to get a lot of good members turning out for that first state legislature.

MARSTON: I am going to ask some questions to get my own mind made up here. When I was out during the recess I found a lot of sincere people questioning the Committee's recommendation for this big amount of money. I am for paying good people. You pay good wages and you get good help, but whether it is the right thing to do now or not, I have a question after hearing, the people outside talking about that large sum we are giving to the legislature over and above the present operating cost. This is a question I would like to get at. Further, I don't think we are going to have a long session of this new State of Alaska. What is the story of other states when they came from territory to statehood? Did they take a long session? These are the questions I would like to have you answer so I can make up my mind. I would like to ask the author of this amendment to figure out how much money he would pay for a 60-or 90-day session. Then I would like to ask the wizard of figures here, Mr. Gray, how much his scale would cost for a 60-or 90-day compared to the Committee's recommendation. I am lost with the figures, and that will help me a whole lot.

BOSWELL: May I have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Committee will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, I think I have here for the 60-day session figures which would amount to $2,800 per legislator or $168,000 for the session; for a 90-day session, $4,200 per legislator or $252,000 for the session. That is salary only.

WHITE: Mr. President, I think another part of the question -- we might refer to how the Committee proposal would work out. I have it worked out here on the same basis as Mr. Gray, and that is one-third of the governor's salary, assuming the governor's salary to be $22,500 per year. For a 30-day session that would be per salary $7,500 per month or $250 per day and if assume a $20 per diem which this section allows for, it would be a $270 per day or combined salary and per diem, $8,100 for a 30-day session. For a 60-day session it would be salary of $3,750 per month, $125 per day plus $20 per diem would be $145 per day for salary and per diem combined, $4,350 per month. For a 90-day session, salary of $2,500 per month, $83.33 per day plus $20 per diem, a total of $103.33 per day, or salary and per diem combined at $3,100 month; a 120-day session, $1,87 per month salary which equals $62.50 per day plus $20 per diem equals $82.50 per day combined, $2,475 per month.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, those are interesting figures, as have been all the others. I just want to point out here that any legislator that is elected to the legislature who is a conscientious individual has more to do than the time that he spends at the session. I feel that every man who has had experience in the legislature and every woman in this body must know that all during the time you are a member of that legislature, whether you are in session or not, you spend a substantial amount of your time working with, helping people, answering questions and trying to assist individuals and groups in their problems, and it cannot be measured in terms of only the time the legislator who is a public official, sits in the legislature when it is in plenary session. There is no way you can measure the amount of work that is done by one individual, but I say that any conscientious individual who has the ability and is trying to help the people of the Territory as a member of the legislature must spend a substantial amount of his time while he is not in session. I believe it is part of his oath of office and bounden duty, and I am practically sure that most of the men and the women who have sat in the legislature have found it to be true that they spend as perhaps as high as 25 per cent of their off time, directly or indirectly, in affairs that involve their legislative activities and activities of the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Walsh.

WALSH: Speaking of this Committee proposal, as I read it, the salary of the legislator would be based on an annual salary equal to one-third of that which the governor might receive and assuming that the governor's salary would be $22,500, which seems to be the figure in the minds of most of them here, that would mean one-third of that would be $7,500 on an annual basis. Multiply that by a 60-member legislature, house and senate, as in the minds of the delegates here now, it would mean $450,000 per annum which would mean $900,000 for a biennium. I am afraid that if this is incorporated in the constitution, that when it goes to the people for ratification they might take another look. I think that we ought to make haste slowly on a proposition of this kind, and I think there should be a time limit on the sessions of the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would just like to say briefly that I believe that both the Committee proposal and Mr. Boswell's motion set the legislative salaries way too high. I believe, however, that the figures in either the Committee proposal or in Mr. Boswell's motion can be adjusted downward. I think what we should consider right now is the point, do we want an annual salary without a limitation upon the length of the session or do we want, as Mr. Boswell proposes, a salary based upon the number of days that the legislature is in session, and then of course we have to follow up in subsequent sessions and put in a limitation upon the length of the session of each legislative session. I think that should be the basis of the discussion rather than the fact that the salaries in either or both proposals are too high. There is no question about that in my mind. I personally am in favor of the annual salary plan as proposed by the Committee, and I hope that we will defeat the motion and go on and substitute a proper and adequate annual salary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee, I recognize from the temper of the group here that the proposal of dollars by the Committee is beyond their desire of accepting. I don't think we should belabor that point any longer, and I would prefer that we vote on the matter now and vote against Mr. Boswell's proposal so that we could reduce to some more suitable figure on an annual salary plan the Committee proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: If I may say a few words in closing, the debate on this has covered a much broader scope than this amendment would indicate, and I think it is proper that it has. The question of the method of payment and the length of the sessions are bound up together. We can't get away from that fact and we have to consider them together. I was particularly impressed by Delegate Taylor and Ralph Rivers comments on this amendment, speaking from their experience. They pointed out that many people who would make good legislators did not leave their business and go down to the legislature for an indefinite period of time. I think that is a very important point. I think we also have to face the fact that

Alaska is seasonal. We have to make hay when the sun shines up here, and we should do this legislating in the winter when we can. If we would just take our own personal point of view, how many of us could have come to this Constitutional Convention if we had not known how long it would last or that after we are through we might be called back for another month or two during the summer when we are busy? I think it would have ruled out a number of the delegates from attending this Convention. I think it would do the same thing in the legislature. I don't want to see anything get into this article that will not permit capable legislators from being elected, and I think we are more likely to do this by annual indeterminate lengths of term than we are by the methods of payment. I would urge the adoption of my amendment as a first step toward setting up a legislature that will attract capable people, and then I think we must go further and determine the length of the terms. I cannot see from some of the argument that these early sessions of the legislature are going to run for several months. We have laws on our books that will continue to be in force, and we can gradually augment those laws to fit our constitution, and it seems to me we can still do that over a period of two or three years and not have to be in session for six months or an indeterminate session. I think our money would be better spent in between sessions by having good consultants and a good advisory staff for the legislature and to have a good Legislative Council cut down the terms of the legislature, use that same money in between times, and I think we will have better legislation, and we can keep these terms to something more people will feel they can run for the legislature and not be interfering with their business, I think we will have better legislators.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the first two lines of Section 7 and the word 'Governor' in the third line and insert in lieu thereof: 'Each member of the legislature shall receive for their services and per diem a sum not to exceed one three-hundred-sixtieth of the annual salary of the Governor for each day's attendance while the legislature is in session,' Strike the comma after salary in line 8, insert a period, and strike the remainder of lines 8, 9, and 10."

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment to offer to the amendment and I would say strike the words "and per diem" and strike from the amendment the words referring to the last three lines which are lines 8, 9, and 10. I offer that amendment because I don't have the copy of the amendment before me. I would remove from that the term "and per diem" from the consideration of services, and the per diem would then be established by the legislature.

BOWSELL: Mr. President, the reason I put that "and per diem" where I did --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell, if the Chair may, I don't think we are proper. Mr. Victor Rivers, did you move the adoption of the amendment?

V. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

BARR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: It seemed to me if we set a high salary here which we would do and not include the per diem in it, we would include it elsewhere. A great deal of that high salary is going to go in taxes, and the legislator himself is not going to benefit much by the change. If we keep the per diem and the high salary together in our constitution, then the legislature can decide when they get there how much of that they want to make salary and how much per diem and trust to their own good judgment how they would handle that.

SUNDBORG: I move that Mr. Boswell's amendment be laid on the table.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us at the present time the amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: My amendment would automatically fail if his motion carries.

SUNDBORG: I want to get rid of that whole thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Chairman of the Rules Committee, can we revert back to the original amendment in order for the motion to lay on the table, or would we have to move that Mr. Victor Rivers' amendment to the amendment would -- if there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg, what came into the mind of the Chair was the manner in which you stated the motion would not be in order; if anyone wishes to move any motion of that nature you would move to lay the amendment to the amendment on the table, and if it carried it would take the original amendment with it.

RILEY: No.

SUNDBORG: I hear the Chairman of the Rules Committee here saying "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will then have a minute recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my motion to lay Mr. Boswell's motion on the table.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked by Mr. Sundborg to withdraw his motion to lay Mr. Boswell's motion on the table. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, in order to clear this matter up and open the way for the motion that has been withdrawn, I will now ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent to withdraw his proposed amendment to the amendment. Therefore, the question before us is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Boswell be adopted by the Convention?"

WALSH: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the proposed amendment by Mr. Boswell.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 19 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Kilcher, King, Laws, Londborg, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White.

Nays: 33 - Awes, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Doogan, Johnson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 19 yeas, 33 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may offer your proposed amendment. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I have an amendment I would like to offer, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You can leave it on the Chief Clerk's desk. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Gray. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order. I have been told that the Committee has an amendment. Perhaps it might save a lot of time if the Committee would come forth with their amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, we have recognized Mr. Gray and his amendment. Is there a Committee amendment available? Would the Chief Clerk please read Mr. Gray's amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, line 4, delete the words 'one-third' and insert the words 'one-tenth'."

TAYLOR: Mr. President, Mr. Gray's amendment is the same as mine. I would like unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has not been offered yet.

GRAY: I move the adoption of the amendment at the rate as read.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I believe that this salary, this dollars and cents becomes a very important situation, and I am not completely sold on one-tenth myself. It looks like the best that I can see, but I sure don't want to hold any too little discussion on it because I believe it is a very important factor. If there is one thing I ran into in the hearings, it was the salary of one-third, because on the first apparent side it was very high, so on this one-tenth let's get our figures straight. One-tenth of $22,500 is $2,250. If we follow our past experience, as someone has suggested, it will be a 60-day session once a year and that would break down to a salary payment of $37.50 per day. Our present per diem is $20 per day which would pay your legislators at the rate of $57.50 per day total. That is in comparison with the present $35 per day. And for 60 days, a two-month session, that would pay your legislator $3,450 or about $1,700 a month. The total cost of a 60-day session would be -- $3,450 times 60 days would give you $207,000, is what your 60-day session would cost you. Out of this $207,000 per year, $135,000 would be the cost in salary, and the remaining figure, some $70,000, would be the cost of per diem. Now actually the only figure that you are making permanent in the constitution is the one-tenth in case we do have a change in economy where the governor's salary goes up, why the legislature's salary goes up with it.

You also have a change in the per diem which is left with the legislature. They can raise the per diem or they can lower it. We are just using the figures of per diem as we are using them today. The figure on the governor's salary, we are projecting on that, we have $22,500 and it is the most acceptable figure, but it could be less, it might be more. I follow the Committee plan wholeheartedly that they have presented, and it is just in my own mind it has been insufficient discussion, but in my own mind one-tenth of the governor's salary seems the most adequate figure to me at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, there is only one thing I want to caution this body about. I think the figure is too low. We have no assurance that the legislature is going to pass any per diem. They have the authority to do so. Now, as I understand it, it figures out $37.50 per day salary on a 60-day session. I predict that is what they will get, because you won't get the rest of the legislators to provide any per diem, and the legislators that have a little money are going to stab the boys that are not in the same economic position, and I don't think that $37 as a salary for a legislator is sufficient. I think the figure "one-tenth" is entirely too low. I think we ought to figure the salary on the assumption that there is not going to be a provision for any per diem because I predict that is what is going to happen.

KILCHER: I am generally in favor of this way of arriving at a salary, but I would like to ask a question. Who establishes the governor's salary in the future?

BUCKALEW: The legislature.

KILCHER: Isn't it probably questionable to hitch the legislature's salary to the governor's, so they indirectly can increase theirs by increasing the governor's? I can see that in the way of a political football.

V. RIVERS: The executive article states that the legislature would establish the salary. The Territory of Hawaii in their Constitution adopted a fixed salary as a minimum which was $18,000 for the governor. We are continually comparing the governor's salary here to the judges which are $22,500. Whether he ends up with that or not is up to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to point out that if Mr. Gray's suggested figure here is approved that there would be 12 states in the United States that would pay, reducing to a common denominator now the salaries of all the states and the legislative pay therewith, there would be 12 states in the nation with paid salaries per annum greater than that introduced in the amendment by Mr. Gray. There would be 36 that paid lower per annum compensation. To follow up on this, I would like to read very briefly, it will take me about three minutes, a little bit from this pamphlet, The Great Unwatched, which is condensation of five articles which were condensed and reported in the Readers' Digest during the last several years, relative to the state legislatures of the nation and how they have fallen behind in their revisions, fallen behind with the times. The title of the subheading is this: "What of the Pay of Our Legislators?"

"New Hampshire's lawmakers haven't had a raise since 1784. They are still paid at the rate of $200 a session, a sum written into the state constitution when a man could get a hotel room for 50 cents. Rich New York and Illinois now pay legislators the tops of $5,000 yearly, which is less than a first-class machinist earns. Fifteen states pay between $5 and $10 a day which can't even cover room and board at the state capital. In Texas the pay is $10 daily for 120 days; then it drops to $5 a day. This collapsing pay scheme is used by special interest groups to their advantage. In the last session a bill to tax natural gas pipe lines was delayed by lobbyists until the 120th day, in the hope that the tax's champions, unable to live on $5 a day fee would go home. Instead 19 idealistic legislators moved into a one-time Texas fraternity house. There in the state of oil billions, they were kept from hunger by gifts of food from charitable neighbors. The bill went through. It may mean $12,000,000 yearly to our state treasury."

I would like to read just a bit more on what the ills of this low pay to our legislators might mean right here, our new State of Alaska. "Bribery is unpleasant but ever-present factor of legislative life. According to a veteran Illinois house member, lobbyists in one famous legislative struggle gave out $50 bills in the men's washroom. In Florida, legislators told me that in one classic struggle between competing race tracks, the bidding for votes ran as high as $5,000 apiece. Said a former house member, 'Why we've had members who have made enough in one session to set them up for a couple of years.' In New Jersey, an influential state senator, a lawyer, shed some light on a widespread practice. 'A group of undertakers asked me to draw a bill for them', he related. 'They said we suppose you want a $5,000 fee. They didn't want to buy my legal services, they wanted my influence in the senate.' He turned them down. 'What bothers me most,' says a representative of a San Francisco taxpayers' group, 'is watching the corrupting process begin. Fine, honest men come up here, but the pressure plays against the weakest part of their nature. How many times can a lawyer turn down a retainer or an insurance man turn down a commission?' In Nebraska, a former member of the legislature told of a lawyer colleague who regularly found in his mailbox a $100 check, a retainer from a small loan company interested in keeping loan rates high. So many legislators take fees from special interests that some legislatures as in Massachusetts bar lawmakers from voting on matters in which they or their clients have an interest. The rules look good on the books, but how often are they invoked in question. There are other ways than fees to a legislator's heart. The simplest is to put him on the payroll. The New Hampshire Jockey Club's Rockingham Park racetrack, with an interest in the state's racing laws, once hired 30 state legislators. The lawmakers parked cars, ran errands, sold tickets, policed the grounds; these chores so interfered with legislative business that nonracetrack employees in the New Hampshire legislature passed a law to get the boys back into the legislature during the session. There had to be a law -- the racetrack paid $18 a day, the state less than one." I would like to point to a page of the Hawaiian Manual, which was a summary study made prior to the Hawaiian Constitution. Again, briefly to this summarization of the state legislative salaries, reduced to an annual figure -- New York, Illinois, New Jersey, New York meeting annually, New Jersey meeting annually, Illinois meeting biannually, are the three highest paid state legislatures in the nation today. May I also point out that in keeping with the times they have held in very recent years three state constitutional revision commissions that we have pointed to many many times here in our arguments with pride, attempting in many moves to follow their footsteps. Why? Because they are keeping pace with the times, and increasing legislative pay goes along with the times. We have tied here in Committee the governor's salary and the legislative pay together. We have taken a salary that is easily and readily changed, and tied to it the legislative salaries with the idea in mind that the legislative pay and the governor's pay must keep pace with the times. I urge you all that you give serious consideration and support to the Committee thinking on this, knowing that the Committee in turn will give support and close adherence to some modification of the actual figures used. but we would like to see the general plan kept.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess for 15 minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the Convention recess for 15 minutes. The Convention stands at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to state at this time in order to clear the air relative to a motion to lay on the table, Mr. Sundborg did not withdraw his motion because he had been in error in making the motion. He was in order in making the motion. The main motion before the delegates at that time was Mr. Boswell's motion. Mr. Victor Rivers' amendment to the amendment was a subsidiary or a hearing amendment, and if Mr. Sundborg's motion had carried it would have carried Mr. Victor Rivers' proposed amendment to the amendment with it. Mr. Sundborg withdrew his motion to table in order to avoid any possible confusion relative to further amendments relating to salary. We have before us at this time Mr. Gray's proposed amendment. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, we heard the reading of Mr. McNees's a while ago, and I think that no doubt all those instances are true, there must be -- maybe a lot more. After all, there have been a lot of state legislatures that have met between the time of the first state and up to now. I think we ought also to consider something like this. I wonder just which legislators are most subject to receiving a little extra money on the side, some of those who give of themselves and of their job and of their own to go down and do the job, or some that would perhaps run because there is a lucrative salary attached to the job. I wonder if they go down there because, if they are not going to be subject to the same temptations maybe because they would consider it a pretty good job, they might even be greedy for a little bit more. I put that out that we ought to consider it and not just be swayed by the fact that the ones that are pinched are the ones that are going to always be the ones on the handout for the lobbyists. I still feel they ought to be paid adequately, but I think we must seriously consider what is adequate.

DAVIS: I would like to suggest that Mr. McCutcheon is not here, and that he should actually be. Here he is. I am sorry. Mr. President, I would like to support Mr. Gray's proposed amendment. I have done some figuring which I think might be helpful to the delegates in connection with considering this matter. Starting with the point, assuming that the governor has a salary of $22,500 a year, now of course nobody knows what that is, but we have got to start some place. Starting at that point and taking 10 per cent of the governor's salary would figure $2,250 a year. Now, since the legislators are elected for a two-year period at least, it seems to me it is better to work it on a biennial basis rather than an annual basis, and accordingly I have doubled $2,250 to get the biennial salary which amounts then on the assumption I have made at $4,500 a year, I mean for a two-year period. For the purpose of trying to get some place, I have assumed that on an average the legislature would meet two months one year and one month another year during the biennium. That, of course, could be any combination of that, but a total of 90 days in the two years. I think that Mr. Victor Rivers probably was absolutely correct when he says that a legislator has much more to do than the time when he is in session. He holds hearings, he has constituents asking him about this and that. I have never been in the legislature, and I can't set a percentage on time, but to try to arrive at something here I have assumed that 10 per cent of the legislator's time when he is not in session will be spent on Territorial business in connection with his job. Without completely going over it, take 10 per cent of the time that he is not in session, plus the time he is in session, on the assumptions I have made, he would be spending a total of 160 days on state business during the biennium. If we make all of those assumptions, I will admit there are a lot of assumptions there, but if we make all those assumptions on the 10 per cent basis of Mr. Gray's proposed amendment, the legislator's salary as such would come to $24.37 a day over the two-year period. Also, make the assumption that the legislature would adopt some sort of a per diem to cover out-of-pocket expenses when they are actually in session. If we assume that we use the same figure we are using here, $20 a day, that would mean that the legislator's salary would be $24.27 which would continue all the two years. In addition, when the legislature was in session he would get a per diem which we will assume was $20 a day, or a total, while he is in session, of $44 a day. Now it seems to me that is reasonably close to what we have now and reasonably adequate, and I believe that for that reason with all the assumptions I have made, that the 10 per cent is a pretty good figure. I have one further thing which is not strictly in order at the minute, but which I think bears on the whole thing, and I would like to talk to it at this time unless somebody wants to stop me. I am going to suggest, if people are not too unhappy with it, that in line 4 of page 3, Section 7, after the word "equal", we put in the words "of not more than", or something to that effect.

GRAY: "Not to exceed".

DAVIS: Not to exceed 10 per cent of the salary. I would do that for two reasons. In the first place, I think Mr. Boswell had an extremely cogent point awhile ago when he talked about the matter of taxes. If we set the legislators' salary at 10 per cent of the governor's salary, the legislature is stuck with that figure as being a salary. If we leave it as not to exceed 10 per cent, then the legislature can set its own salary up to that limit, and if it wishes can adjust on the per diem to come to the same place, but the per diem portion would not be taxable and actually it should not be because it is out-of-pocket expenses that they have to pay to live away from home. There is one further thing along that line. None of us knows exactly what the ability of the new state is going to be to pay. If we set a fixed amount for salaries in the constitution, we may find that we have set an amount that the state cannot bear. On the other hand, if we leave it a figure up to a percentage, then the legislature can set the salary according to what the state can handle and it is already left in the section as it is that the matter of per diem is completely flexible and within the power of the legislature to handle. That is my thinking in connection with the present proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I have not spoken on the subject yet and therefore I will speak only once. Several matters have come up that I agree with in regard to the salary, and salary and honesty I don't believe go together. I think that if a man were paid $10 a day or whether he was paid $200 a day, if he were inclined to take a little money under the table I don't think the amount of the salary would have any effect. The honesty and salary are things that we should not attempt to tie together here. I agree a good deal with Mr. Victor Rivers here. I know that any campaign a man makes for office is considerable out-of-pocket expense. I know that in my own experience that the loss in the legislature, that is the direct losses, that that is at least $1,000 a month and besides all of the indirect losses such as business and clients you lose while you are gone. People have lost a number of clients because they said, "Well, when you make up your mind whether you are going to be in politics or whether you are going to practice law, if you decide to confine yourself to the law business, we will bring our business back to your office." There is in addition to that, I don't know what the percentage of the total time would be, but I do know that since coming back from the last legislature that one-fourth of the time in my office has been spent on purely political matters in connection with writing letters to department heads and trying to get things for our constituents, the people here in this division, and in the outlying areas, so that of course takes time besides the expense and some little travel expense along with it, but those are all part of things. No one asked me to run for the legislature, and no one asked me to run for this Constitutional Convention, and like practically everyone here I am losing money every day that I am out here, the same as the rest of you, but we were not sent an engraved invitation to file for this office, so therefore we have no right to complain if we are losing money. The same thing in my opinion applies to the legislature. With me I don't believe that I am so smart that I add any great amount to the legislature; I have some ideas. I go there mainly for the purpose of trying to carry out the ideas of people living in this division that speak to me about and say they want done, and you go there for that purpose and think you are doing some good in that way but I believe that most of the members of this body who have served in the legislature, and a good many of you have time and time again, that it is sort of a bug that you are bitten by which is similar to that of the old prospector going out prospecting for gold. It becomes no more than avocation in that it is a luxury that we feel we can afford ourselves. In connection there, when I speak thereto of the matter of being a luxury, when the most of you fill out your income tax at the end of the year, and it looks like you begin to figure out how you are going to pay that income tax, and then you happen to think, you have forgotten what you made in the last legislature, and you add that on top of the other, then you have got a headache. I think it is largely in politics, it is probably largely an avocation, a certain amount of luxury involved. You go back to the historic principles, back to the days of Roman forum, it was the honor of the senators to sit there. I think as far as the senate goes, it should be that way today. It is an honor to sit there, and it should not require any salary at all. The house of representatives is probably a little different proposition. In conclusion, I do wish to say that I don't think we can look at this on the basis of going down to the legislature and making money, and I for one feel that if we have this in the constitution that it "shall not exceed", I would say "not to exceed 10 per cent of the governor's salary", and then let's not have the highest paid governor in the nation either.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, before the Chair recognizes you, the Chair was wondering, Mr. Davis, were you seeking to offer that as an amendment to the proposed amendment?

DAVIS: If it would help I will now offer that as an amendment. I did not wish to make an amendment on an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The chair thought perhaps it had neglected to recognize the amendment.

DAVIS: If Mr. Gray will accept it, I will offer it as an amendment

PRESIDENT EGAN: Just what would be the proposed amendment to the amendment, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: "After the word 'to', so it will read "equal to".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my motion in order to take in the care of Mr. Davis's motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Gray's unanimous consent request to withdraw his original amendment?

TAYLOR: As a second to that motion, Mr. Davis's proposed amendment did not take in the percentage of the salary. It only struck several words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Taylor, but Mr. Gray's purpose is to allow the proposed amendment just to be an amendment and that it can be rewritten in its entirety.

TAYLOR: I agree to that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection it is so ordered.

GRAY: On page 3, Section 7, after the word "salary", delete "equal to one-third" and insert "not to exceed 10 per cent". I so move.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I will vote for Mr. Gray's amendment because I think it is a reasonable compromise. I would like to agree with what Mr. McNealy said in that it is an admirable aim to try and pay public officers a salary sufficient to avoid any chance of corruption, but I think it is a practical impossibility. I think we have all had the experience of finding that regardless of what our salary or wage may be, that each time it is increased we find we are just barely living within it any way. I think the two are not connected. In the case of New Hampshire, I happened to have lived there, Mr. McNees, and I think the fact that 30 legislators were on the payroll at Rockingham Park is not necessarily a comment on the pay of the legislature, but more probably on the fact New Hampshire has a 399-member legislature. Also, when you refer to page 9 of the Hawaiian manual, I think you will find those figures are all on a biennium basis, and if Mr. Gray's amendment is accepted, you would find only six states would exceed the pay of Alaska's legislators. Those six would be New York, Illinois, Massachusetts, Ohio, New Jersey and Michigan, all of them big populous states. I am a little concerned about the committee proposal amounting to $7,500 a year, and as to what it would do to the people available to the legislature. I am afraid that it might result in a situation where a good many of the residents of the State of Alaska who would make good legislators would in actual fact not be available, because I think it allows great limits in the length of the sessions that might result. I would only go on to point out that under Mr. Gray's amendment we would have to go 120 days before we got down to the combined pay and per diem we are operating under now. I think we can reasonably expect that on an annual basis that 60 days would be the more probable result and on a 60-day basis the pay and per diem would amount to $1,725. I feel that is a reasonable compromise.

R. RIVERS: I have been down there and I think I ought to say a few words. I have thought about the length of sessions and about the thought that Mr. Boswell injected that we do have a code, our Territorial code will be our State code. However, the first session is going to be confronted with about a dozen very important gaps or bills that won't recur later. The rest of our code will be subject to change and amendment as we go along. At the outset we will probably say that where the word "Territory" appears in the code we shall substitute the word "state". We are not going to be starting from scratch without any laws at all for that first legislature. We are going to have to come up with something to fill the game law requirements and various others that are now reserved to Congress. Perhaps the second year there will have to be a 90-day session to get organized, but we have to think of this pretty much of a long-range basis, and I think that for a good many years to come 60 days a year is what our sessions will resolve themselves down to, with a special session now and then to meet emergencies. On that basis then I see that the $37 per day which is embodied in Mr. Gray's amendment plus this conjectured figure of $20 per diem would make $57.50 per day. That is basically what the members would be getting for those regular sessions of 60 days per year. As far as the per diem is concerned, I think the legislature can take care of itself. Somebody had the nerve at one time to put in for $10 per diem, back about 1937. That was raised next to $15 per day and then to $20 per day in the 1953 legislature. They got a few little curves tossed at them and a few snide remarks, but there was no great arousal about the subject because that was absolutely fair and they had it coming. With the precedent of $20 a day, I rather suspect that one of the first things that the first legislature will do is to hop on that precedent and establish $20 a day per diem. I don't think they are going to be under any political compulsions to prevent them from establishing that $20 per diem. I am kind of taking up a few points as they have been brought up. So I differ a little with Mr. Davis in that I would postulate 60 days a year instead of 60 days one year and 30 days the next, and I think that would be something we ought to think of and more or less figure out what the daily amount will be. Now, I am also concerned with selling this package when I get back from this Convention, helping sell it in other words. The $57.50 per day does result on the basis of 60 members in the legislature, for a year and $204,000 for a year and $408,000 for a biennium. Now that does not count Legislative Council expense nor travel. Now that is going so far beyond what we are accustomed to, and we have been confronted so often with the thought we may not be able to afford statehood, that within the realms of fairness, we have got to watch our step and not get something we cannot handle when we go back to the voters for ratification, so I favor Mr. Gray's amendment. I hope I have contributed a little bit on what we might estimate as the length of the session and on that basis we can compute how much money is going to have to be spent, with fairness to the legislators and yet without getting ourselves into too liberal a position from the standpoint of pay.

COGHILL: Mr. President, on the same lines that Mr. Rivers has been speaking on, I am not in favor of the Gray amendment from the standpoint I feel that we should leave it to the legislature of the new state. We have a package to sell the people. We have to sell them on the constitution for the new State of Alaska. and I believe hinging on that is eventual statehood for our Territory. I see that many people here that are members of the same organizations that I am and there is no remuneration for travel expense or anything else such as in the Chamber of Commerce or your veterans organizations, the organizations such as school organizations, etc. I have spent many a dollar not figuring any gain for myself personally, but for the point of gaining services and things for the people of the Territory. I feel that the argument is completely off base, and we are begging the issue. I see that the average income of the more populated areas of Alaska and the hinterlands is way lower than what we are bringing about here for our legislature. I like the section in No. 8 because it provides the legislature to establish the time that they will meet, and I feel that possibly legislative time such as they have in California, where they meet for a certain length of time and introduce nothing but bills without appropriations and recess for a period of 15 to 30 days for either research or hearings, or whatever they wish to do, and when they reconvene it would be nothing but appropriation bills that could be introduced, in that way speeding up the legislature. I feel that by establishing a 10 per cent clause in there we are damaging the clause of the Convention and we should leave it up entirely to the legislature. I feel they will be guided by their conscience.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I am rising to speak against the amendment on this ground. I do not believe it is adequate. I believe we are creating an aristocracy of wealth such as Mr. McNealy referred to in the ancient Roman senators, and I believe that the workman is entitled to his wage on a fair basis, and the businessman is entitled to a fair profit. I agree with Mr. Davis's statement that approximately 10 per cent of his time will be spent in session, I mean the legislator's time; another 10 per cent of his time is a reasonable assumption that it will be spent in the performance of his duties while he is not in session. I think the 20 per cent of a moderate salary which might be $20,000 established for the governor would be an adequate amount to pay the legislators. It seems to me that I have heard a number of remarks here in regard to corruption in legislators. I for one want to make it clear from the number of legislatures I have seen, I have never yet been approached nor have I seen anyone else approached with a direct offer of corruption. I have seen men prosper because their particular points of view coincided with particular points of view of interest such as they had joint business dealings after the legislature. I have seen other men fail to prosper, probably due somewhat to the same reason, but I believe if we are going to pay at the rate Mr. Davis has stated there, it would come to approximately, using his assumptions, $24 per day irregardless of the per diem. On that basis he would receive for an hour of his time approximately $3, which is 'somewhat less than the average laborer gets in this area today when he is employed at his home base. If he is away from his home base he gets a travel and expense account. The average rate a commercial traveller figures his expenses at in traveling through the Territory today is $20. I feel that if we are going to ask good people to run for these offices that they should be receiving a compensation commensurate with what they would normally receive on a level of activity or operation they would receive at home. I do not feel that 10 per cent is adequate, I feel that 20 per cent would be a much more adequate figure and would not reflect the over-expense that some of the people in this Convention seem to visualize as too much of an added burden for the cost of good lawmaking. Now, whether or not you like the idea, over a period of time the returns that come into the average legislator's pocket from the term of office he serves reflects a great deal in whether or not he feels he can be eligible and will be eligible to run again. I have cited you one instance and know of many instances where good men have gone to the legislature and have received experience which could be useful to all the people but have not felt they could afford to go back again because of their experience in the first instance. On the grounds of my discussion I am going to move, Mr. President, an amendment of 20 per cent in lieu of the 10 per cent on the original amendment, an amendment to the amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that there be an amendment to the proposed amendment.

MARSTON: If we were having statehood tomorrow I would be happy to vote for this Gray amendment. I think it is fine. I look back at Hawaii, I visited them last year there, and they are terribly discouraged. They have waited five years and their document is gathering nothing but dust, and it is a good constitution. In this changing world we don't know how we are going to fix the salary for five years, ten years off. I think it is a legislative matter, and I am going along with Coghill's suggestion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I know some people are anxious to get to the question. However, I think by inserting the new amendment, not the amendment to the amendment, but the one before, I am going to speak to the amendment in a minute. We have changed the whole complexion of the section, incidentally which I agree to. I feel now that our section says the legislature shall set its own salary and it shall set it not beyond a certain amount. I am in favor of it. I am also in favor of the amendment to the amendment. Since the legislature is going to set its own salary we should put a ceiling on it, and I think 20 per cent is a reasonable ceiling. I am in favor of the amendment and also the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I believe that I favor also the 20 per cent because I have observed a good many legislatures in action, and I have never felt that they are unreasonable in the amount of money that they set for their own compensation, and that is their per diem, and furthermore, they are always concerned with the amount of money that is coming into the treasury through taxation, and often times some of us feel they are a little penurious with the way they appropriate money. As far as the length of the sessions are concerned, I have never yet seen a session of the legislature that was anxious to remain longer than 60 days, so I feel there should be little apprehension in the minds of the voters about the length of the sessions, or if they are given a ceiling of 20 per cent, I think it might be quite likely they would pay themselves five per cent to start with.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I certainly agree with Mrs. Nordale. In any session of the legislature in which I served I observed they were more or less a pennypinching body rather than a spendthrift body. I don't know whether it was from fear of public opinion or whether most of them were just looking out for the good of the Territory. They certainly did not throw the money around. I favor the amendment to the amendment of 20 per cent, because of the reason it is only a limit, and I am certain the legislature will not go overboard, and I am also fearful that the governor's salary will not be set at a high figure. Everybody assumes it is going to be $22,500, but I believe that the legislature is not going to give us the highest salaried governor by any means, and during the transitional period when the legislature knows we will have some unusual expenses they will be cutting down a lot of things. I will not be surprised that the governor's salary is set at $18,000 or even $15,000. If the governor's salary goes down, of course the legislature's salary goes down, and since this 20 per cent is only a ceiling, I believe we should leave them a little leeway and then they can give them a certain percentage in salary and a percentage in per diem, whichever way they see fit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Briefly, I want to point out to the group of delegates that according to analysis by the Hawaiian group, 22 of the states are permitted to set their salary by statute, 24 of the states set it by constitution, and the other states set it by a combination of constitution and statute. These amendments, as they have been offered, appear to be to me personally and I do not speak for the Committee, appear to be more desirable than the paragraph that the Committee has brought out because it does make it more flexible, and by establishing a ceiling certainly the legislature may exercise some judgment in establishing their own salary, but it permits a ceiling and it is a flexible thing rather than a rigid thing such as our Committee brought out. I am going to vote for the amendment to the amendment.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I made a very brief analysis here of the governors' salaries across the nation, again from the Hawaiian manual, and I find that 31 of the 48 states pay their governors $10,000 or more annually whereas 18 of them pay $12,000 or more. Eight pay $15,000 or higher; six, $18,000 or higher; five $20,000 or higher, and only two, namely California and New York, pay $25,000.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: With the amendment and the added amendment I think I have finally reached a decision that will satisfy me. At my hearing the people were unanimously against the one-third deal. Mr. Buckalew summed up my argument completely when he stated that it was almost impossible to get by on the amount that you do receive.

You can by watching very closely, but I don't think you should have to worry about money completely, whether your family is going to get by or yourself. This here being the combination of the two, of not to exceed 20 per cent, will still be in the constitution controlled by the legislature, and I think should be an acceptable setup to the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I favor the amendment as proposed by Mr. Gray, and I oppose the amendment to the amendment since proposed. It is true that it is only an upper limit, and that it would be left to the legislature to set within that limit, but I can hear every opponent of statehood both within this Territory and without this Territory, talking about how this Convention has authorized a salary of $75 per day for each one of its legislators, has let them meet as long as they please, and would permit them in addition to set per diem of any amount they please. Now I think we have to think of that practical consideration that we do have a constitution to sell. The amendment to the amendment, if adopted, would change the figure really from one-third as it was when we had our hearings to one-fifth. It does add the additional thing of not to exceed that, but it at least is suggestive that that was what it would be, at least to the people of the Territory as they are voting on ratification. I think that one-tenth is enough, and I think that if they need more compensation it can be taken care of as provided in the later part of this section by the unlimited right of the legislature to adjust the amount of the per diem, so I oppose the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I have not had the opportunity of talking on this, and I should like to do so very briefly. I agree with Mr. Sundborg that we have an end product to sell. I am in favor of the Gray amendment, and I should like to say why. If the amendment to the amendment is approved, I can see two public relations firms who are going to be very prominent in this thing before we get through, who are going to have a marvelous sales argument to kill statehood. They are going to say we can't afford it and if the figure is indefinite I can see a bunch of cartoons in our newspapers that are going to say, "Are you willing to buy a pig in a poke?" I believe that in order to sell a constitution and sell statehood to the people we are going to have to have a pretty definite figure. I am satisfied that this $204,000 per biennium is not going to be too difficult to sell, but if we leave it indefinite, I think we are going to have a tough job. If I were working for one of these two public relations outfits that will probably be prominent in this picture before long, I would certainly get busy and start in on, "Are you willing to buy a pig in a poke?"

HERMANN: On four successive Congressional senatorial hearings on the subject of statehood, it has been my privilege, which was not always appreciated at the time, to present the fiscal picture of statehood. Invariably the principal opposition that was centered against statehood on the part of the senate or house committees, or members of it, has been on the theory that we cannot afford it, that we have not yet proved that we can afford statehood, so that for four successive hearings which I attended I had to prove that we could. I was extremely successful in doing it because after each hearing they voted that they were convinced that we could afford statehood on the basis of the figures presented by me with the support of the other witnesses who testified in behalf of statehood. I don't want you to make me out too big a liar. I am willing to be corrected and say I have underestimated the cost of holding a legislative session, but I don't want it to be quite to the extent that it would be if we allowed a 20 per cent salary, as has been suggested by this amendment. That according to my estimate mate, unless I have calculated is about $400,000 a year. The other was $204,000, this would $408,000, and frankly, I don't think we can afford it. Now, I am all for a fixed salary, a year round salary for legislators, and I do not approve of the per day payment of legislators or even the per session payment of legislators, as many of the states have established, but I think you are shooting pretty high when you put it at 20 per cent of what may be the governor's salary, or how high that may be we do not know, and I am going to agree with Mr. Sundborg that we should not pass the amendment to the amendment, and my own support will go to Mr. Gray's amendment, which fixes it at 10 per cent of the salary paid the governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I am going to support the amendment. As one of the Committee I feel -- HELLENTHAL: I rise to a point of order. I enjoy hearing Mr. McNees speak, and I think everyone else does, but I think that he has spoken more than twice on this subject, and I keep looking at that blackboard.

V. RIVERS: Point of order. Mr. McNees has not spoken on the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I do not believe that Mr. McNees has spoken once to the amendment. You may proceed.

MCNEES: I rise to speak in favor of the amendment to the amendment. Feeling sure that when it comes to selling the end product, the question Mr. Hilscher has raised, that we can best sell that product by giving them good government. We are going to give them good government by attracting adequate men, and we are going to attract adequate men by paying an adequate salary. I have had to do some adjustment in my thinking to reach the conclusion whereby I might even support the amendment. I had hoped it might be somewhat higher. I have in mind very much what Mr. Hilscher has, in selling the end product to the people, but I feel that there are 55 salesmen in this room who, when this Convention is over, will go out and gladly put every effort necessary and possible to sell it. I don't think there is an organized PA group in the Territory or in the states that will throw their weight against us, that have 55 salesmen who will know the subject, understand the subject and be more sold on the subject of our constitution when it is finished and we have it ready to present to the people, than this group right here. The 20 per cent figure set as a ceiling I am convinced, and that is the big question in my mind, I have come to a conviction in my thinking that possibly we might set it as a ceiling, but I am somewhat afraid and raise this question that the salary of the legislators will probably never approach that figure. I know there are many other ways in which the legislators' salaries might be reduced. We might pay a lower governor's salary and make certain other compensations available to him in lieu of salary, thereby keeping the legislators' pay down -- the provision of housing, providing entertainment, expenses, providing extreme travel allowance, and many many other things. However, I do think as I have analyzed the thinking of this group, that probably the 20 per cent figure comes closest to first and foremost providing an adequate salary to attract adequate men to provide adequate law, and secondly, the penury or economy measure that seems to me uppermost in the thinking in a few of your minds. Therefore, I feel that we should support this amendment, thinking at the same time that it is a maximum and not the actual salary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?"

ROSSWOG: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 21 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, McCutcheon, McNees, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Taylor.

Nays: 32 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Davis, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Johnson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 21 Yeas, 32 Nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I now move, Mr. President, that the same amendment to the amendment that Mr. Rivers made except make that 15 per cent.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

H. FISCHER: I second the motion.

HERMANN: I move we recess until 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30. Is there objection? Objection is heard. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.?" All those in favor of recessing until 1:30 p.m. will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. We have before us the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I was longing to speak on the previous amendment to the amendment that was defeated. I was in agreement on the 10 per cent, not for the fact that I thought a legislator was adequately compensated for his time and the effort and the expense, and the sacrifices he makes by virtue of being a legislator, and through quite a number of years of experiences I know what it costs to be a legislator in time and money. You are operating a business or a profession, and you have to close that business up or go away and leave your profession, you come back and you find you have a far greater loss than you thought it was going to be. That is especially true in the profession of law because if you are gone for two months your office is closed, your entire income at that time. I was torn between two ideas -- one was to a certain extent try to adequately compensate legislators -- the other was the point raised by Mr. Hilscher that if we do place this too high we give the opposition to statehood a wonderful lot of ammunition to try to use in defeating the confirmation of this constitution, and after I was listening to and considering the various arguments pro and con on the previous motion, I got to thinking that possibly the compromise between the 10 and 20 per cent would be the logical solution to this matter, to have it read "not to exceed 15 per cent". It might be with the wording of the article, that we might not as a legislature set it at 15 per cent, might set it at 10 and then attempt in some small way of compensating the legislator by a larger per diem. Now Mr. Buckalew says that he doesn't think the legislature will vote for a per diem. Well, Mr. Buckalew is possibly speaking from inexperience, because I have been going to the legislature off and on for some 23 years and I have never yet ever seen the legislature. refuse to vote the per diem, and I am pretty sure that if the next legislature will perhaps be the same way, and if Mr. Buckalew was in it, I know there is going to be a great fight for per diem, and I think he is going to make so much noise that the per diem bill will carry. Now we have, what we might say, indulged in conjecture of conclusion as to what the governor's salary is going to be. I think in that respect we have to take into consideration that the governor is the chief executive. He must maintain a position commensurate with the position that he holds. Now, we will have at least one representative in Congress and we will have two senators in Congress. They will each be drawing $22,500 a year. That is the salary. We will have one district judge in the Territory of Alaska who will be drawing $22,500 a year, and I think that the legislature would be taking more or less a niggardly attitude if we paid our chief executive less than the representatives in Congress are getting or less than a district judge in the Territory of Alaska, and I think we can safely assume, now it is an assumption as Mr. Davis said very ably in talking on the previous amendment, that we must assume, but our assumptions were based upon experience and our knowledge of other matters, and I agree with those, after giving this the consideration, that I am going to vote for this amendment. I was for the 10 per cent, and if we are censured for saying we are unduly compensating the legislators, we will have to take that censure and make the best of it, and the best way we can explain why, and I think that these 55 members here can go back and say why this bill is written in the way it is.

LUNDBORG: I would like to ask somebody who has a handy handbook around, what is the highest paid legislator now in the states?

V. RIVERS: That is the State of Illinois, that is $5,000. That does not include travel expense which they allow too, to and from their homes once each week. That does not include per diem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to refer to some figures again and I will do it briefly. If we adopt the amendment to the amendment which is before us, which would permit a maximum of 15 per cent of the governor's salary annually, and if we postulate a governor's salary of $22,500, which I agree with Mr. Taylor is reasonable, and if we should have legislative sessions running the same length as those we have had in the Territory, which is 60 days every two years, if we adopt this amendment, we are authorizing those people to pay themselves salaries of $112.50 per day plus per diem, and if you don't think a lot is going to be made of that, whether by public relations firms or by individuals who are themselves opposed to statehood, you are very much mistaken. I hold to the 10 per cent, and I urge that you reject the amendment to the amendment.

HARRIS: I move the previous question.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

HILSCHER: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 38 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, White, Wien.

Nays: 15 - Davis, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, Marston, Metcalf, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Johnson, VanderLeest.)

MARSTON: May I change my vote? I wanted to vote against the 15 per cent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, we are ordering the previous question, Mr. Marston. The Convention will come to order while the Chief Clerk prepares the tally.

CHIEF CLERK: 38 yeas, 15 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So by your vote you have ordered the previous question. The motion has carried. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?' Rather, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Delete '10 per cent' and make it 'not to exceed 15 per cent'."

R. RIVERS: Yes, that is correct.

METCALF: Roll call please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the adoption of the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 22 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, McCutcheon, McNees, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Taylor.

Nays: 31 - Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Johnson, VanderLeest.)

SUNDBORG: I wish to change my vote from "yes" to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg wishes to change his vote from "yes" to "no".

V. RIVERS: I wish to change my vote from "yes" to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers wishes to change his vote from "yes" to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 22 yeas, 31 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption.

DOOGAN: I ask unanimous consent that we stand at recess until 1:30.

SUNDBORG: I object.

DOOGAN: I so move.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair did not actually hear a second. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move the previous question.

TAYLOR: I second the motion for the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "ayes" have it and the previous question has been ordered. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Gray be adopted by the Convention?"

SUNDBORG: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 48 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg. McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Laws, Nolan

Absent: 2 - Johnson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 48 yeas, 5 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that we now recess until 1:35 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements to be made at this time? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Committee meeting of Committee No. VI upstairs.

V. RIVERS: There will be a meeting of the Executive at 12:50.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee No. VI will meet upstairs; there will be a meeting of the Executive Committee at 12:50. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 1:35 p.m.?" Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered, and the Convention stands at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, the management of the dining room upstairs would like to have a show of hands on how many will be here for dinner this evening. The chef is wavering between guinea fowl under glass and pork chops, though I am afraid it is going to be in favor of pork chops. (Delegates held up hands at this time.) About 45.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anything else to come before us at this time? Any unfinished business other than the proposal before us? We have before us Section 7 of Committee Proposal No. 5. Are there other amendments to Section 7? Mr. White.

WHITE: I have an amendment to Section 7 that I would like to have read. I am not sure I indicated it should come after the last line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White.

CHIEF CLERK: At the end of the paragraph?

WHITE: Yes.

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert at the end of paragraph 7 the following: 'No increase or decrease in salary or per diem shall apply to the legislature which enacted it.'"

WHITE: I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

DAVIS: I would like to have it read again slowly.

EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment again slowly.

CHIEF CLERK: "No increase or decrease in salary or per diem shall apply to the legislature which enacted it."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Is there objection?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. White?

WHITE: I so move.

METCALF: I second the motion.

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I have no objection to the intent, but I am prepared to ask Mr. White what happens to the first legislature or are you preparing a transitory provision? If you cannot increase or decrease the salary, then by implication you cannot set it initially.

WHITE: That is a good point, Mr. McLaughlin. I will have to confess I hadn't thought of that. We will have to treat it, if the amendment passed, in a transitory measure.

SUNDBORG: I have a question, also. It occurs to me that at least in the Territory today we do not have a law which sets the per diem of members. I think it is usually handled by a resolution of the legislature itself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is a law.

SUNDBORG: Is there a law covering per diem for legislators? I believe it is a resolution of the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, do you have something on that?

RILEY: It is my memory that it has been done, Mr. President, by a joint resolution which has the force of law.

SUNDBORG: In any event, it is done by the session to which it applies, and it applies only to that session. Now if we adopted Mr. White's amendment, it would have to be done by law.

RILEY: Each session has set its own. I think it is well established.

SUNDBORG: They have not set their salary because that is set by the Organic Act.

WHITE: It seems I was under the wrong impression. If each session has set its own per diem, if that is the procedure that has applied to the past, and if there has been no objection to it, I certainly would have no objection to the taking of the words "per diem" out of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking unanimous consent, Mr. White, that the words "per diem" be removed from this particular proposed amendment?

WHITE: I have no objection, I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks that the words "or per diem" be removed from the amendment.

V. RIVERS: I will object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard to the unanimous consent request. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I suppose in order to talk about this I have to second the motion. I second the motion. I want to really ask a point of information here. In Section 5 we say that no member of the legislature, and then a few small blank spots, shall hold, as I read it, an office or salary which have been increased while he was a member of it. Wouldn't that take care of it? He can't hold any other office that has been established, they can't, increase their own salary or decrease it, as I understand it, so that if the present legislature increases the salary it would be for the salaries of the next legislature and the same with the decrease? I can't see it. I don't see the need for Mr. White's amendment.

SUNDBORG: I believe that that would be the case only if we adopt Mr. White's amendment. What Section 5 says is that, "No member of the legislature shall hold any other office which has been created, or the salary or emoluments of which have been increased while he was a member of the legislature." I think it clearly excepts the office of legislator.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon, the Chairman of our Legislative Committee, if he did not believe it was the intent of the Legislative Committee to have this apply to the members of the legislature?

MCCUTCHEON: Well, that particular thing is not my recollection. It could be that I don't remember that part of it, and I would ask that you ask some other members of the Committee, as my understanding was that it is our intention to prohibit members of the legislature from holding offices other than the legislature in which they may have had a hand in increasing the salary of or in creating such an office as much as it currently works now.

SWEENEY: Again, as I recall the discussion, we brought out many times that the legislators were a little reluctant to raise their own salary, no matter how necessary it was, because of the criticism that came, and the answer that was brought out in the Committee was that they are not increasing their own salaries because of this section. They may increase it but it will not go into effect until the following legislature. They are not increasing their own salaries. That was my remembrance of the committee hearings on this. If that is not the case I think it should be changed, but I thought that was sufficient.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: It occurs to me that Section 7 pertains just to the salaries and per diem of the members of the legislature. It is my understanding that the Convention this morning fixed a ceiling on their salaries by amendment. I don't see how then that they could later be given the right to increase that salary without conflicting with the first part of the section, unless it is intended to be an exception.

WHITE: This amendment would not have any point if the salary were fixed, Mr. Johnson. A salary is no longer fixed. A ceiling is set, so the salary can fluctuate anywhere it wants under that ceiling.

JOHNSON: Down, yes, but not up.

WHITE: Once it is down it can fluctuate back up again until it hits the ceiling.

GRAY: I feel it was just by accident we put it in "not to exceed". We might very well have established the 10 per cent, and I think we have sufficiently put the ceiling on the legislature as it is, and I would not even go any further in trying to limit the legislature. They are pretty well limited as it is right now.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, the reason I would concur in Mr. Gray's statement, they are pretty well limited actually to where I feel that the men who will be elected to office sometime after we become a state will be those who have substantial subsidies to provide for their election. I do not see any value or merit in the amendment as it is offered. Under that amendment, including the word "emoluments", the legislature as a group could neither increase up to the ceiling we established nor could they increase their per diem, as I interpret the word "emoluments". It does not seem to me a safeguard that is at all needed. We have a legislature that is going to appropriate all state funds for all offices, all departments, all individuals employed. We are going to disburse probably in the first parts of their early years as much as 15, 18, or 20 million dollars a year and now we are going to stop them from raising up within the very low limit, which we have already set, to that limit in any one year in which they may hold office. I have no brief with the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I just want to say about three words. I don't think this will accomplish what Mr. White intends. He intends to limit the legislature. Right now they are limited by public opinion as to the amount they vote themselves. If this amendment goes into effect then they would have to vote an increase for the benefit of the following legislators and the following session, and they would feel that they could very well increase it to a larger amount without criticism if they did not enjoy any of the benefits. Therefore, they are likely to increase it to a greater amount that way. This removes the criticism of public opinion.

WHITE: I don't follow Mr. Barr's reasoning. The reason for the amendment is merely to allow any discussion on the salaries of legislators to take place on an unbiased plane without reference to politics or public opinion at the moment. To reduce the question to its simplest terms, should the legislators have a higher salary or should they not, without any undue pressures being brought to bear on the men and women debating at the time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as it would read at this time?

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert at the end of the paragraph the following: 'No increase or decrease in salary or per diem shall apply to the legislature which enacted it.'" Except the amendment now is to strike "or per diem".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was there a question as to how it would read with the proposed amendment? Did we act on the amendment to the amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is what is before us.

SUNDBORG: My recollection was that the amendment to the amendment was requested by unanimous consent by Mr. White and Mr. Rivers objected to it and it was not moved.

CHIEF CLERK: Mrs. Sweeney seconded it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, that is correct, Mr. Sundborg, it was the amendment to the amendment that Mrs. Sweeney seconded, so we have the proposed amendment to the amendment. Would the Chief Clerk please read it again.

CHIEF CLERK: "To strike the words 'or per diem'."

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask Mr. Rivers, if I may, why he objects to the striking of "or per diem".

V. RIVERS. I would not mind answering that question. I seems to me that if they are going to handle -- I understood the word "emoluments" to be in there and I objected to the word "emoluments" -- but I did not get the reading of the section as it stated "per diem" because I thought "emoluments" would cover also "per diem".

V. FISCHER: Would you withdraw your objection so that we can just vote on the salary only?

V. RIVERS: Yes, I will withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The objection is withdrawn. Mr. White asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment.

RILEY: I will object for the purpose of addressing a question to Mr. White. I don't think it is your intent is it, to deny the legislature the ability of the choice of decreasing their salary, is it?

WHITE: Yes, any change.

RILEY: Does the legislature enact a salary or does it adopt a salary?

V. FISCHER: Aren't we discussing the matter of the elimination of the words "or per diem"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Would you object, Mr. White, to the elimination of the words "or decrease"?

V. FISCHER: Point of order, Mr. President, could we not dispose of the words "or per diem" once and for all?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have not disposed of them yet. That is the proposed amendment to the amendment.

V. FISCHER: That is right and I am suggesting that before we start changing other words that we strike the words "or per diem" as asked by Mr. White.

MCNEES: I will reserve my question until later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the deletion of those words, "or per diem"? If not, the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted, and the words have been deleted. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, in answer to Mr. McNees's question, I would object. I think if there is any logic to the argument that discussions of salaries should be kept free from pressures of the moment, the logic in it could be applied as to whether the movement is up or down equally well.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I disagree with Mr. White. I think if the same logic were applied you would have to have it read somewhat like this: "No salary could be increased in the next legislature and the decrease should apply to the one that decreased it." That would be perfectly logical.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the proposed amendment as amended will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I have an amendment. I would like to have it read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF.CLERK: "Section 7, line 4, strike all material in Section

1641

7 following the first word 'salary' up to and including the word 'governor' on line 5."

BUCKALEW: I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

AWES: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, line 4, strike all material following the first word 'salary' up to and including the word 'governor' on line 5."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could the Chief Clerk please read it as it would read.

CHIEF CLERK: "Each member of the legislature shall receive an annual salary and shall be entitled to travel expenses in going to and returning from sessions."

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, the proposal when it came out of the Committee attempted to guarantee minimum wage for legislators. That is the reason that the test originally originated, tying the legislators' salary to that of the governor. The way it has been amended, it has no logical reason for its retention. It does not provide for a minimum salary and I think it is an unrealistic test just put in there to perhaps limit the legislators in setting their salary. Now we trust the legislators to enact all our laws, and I think we can trust them to set their salaries. I was listening to one of the arguments before lunch, and I got the impression that I thought I was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, but after listening to some of the arguments I thought it was some kind of package sale. Now, using their argument I think it would cause less concern if we just left it up to the legislature. As I say, the reason the test was put in was to provide and protect the legislators for a minimum salary. That is out of the window now, it does nothing, so there is no logical reason for its retention. I think we just ought to leave it up to the legislators, and I don't think the soap salesmen can cause us as much trouble.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?"

METCALF: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 28 - Awes, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley,

V. Rivers, Stewart, Sweeney, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 23 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Davis, H. Fischer,
V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Johnson, Laws, Metcalf,
Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson,
Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White.

Absent: 4 - Coghill, Hilscher, Londborg, VanderLeest.)

SMITH: I would like to change my vote from "yes" to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith asks that his vote be changed from "yes" to "no".

METCALF: May I change mine from "yes" to "no"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf changes his vote from "yes" to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 28 yeas, 23 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted by the Convention. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: In line with the amendment just approved, I just happen to have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, strike the first sentence and substitute the following: 'Members of the legislature shall receive an annual salary and expense allowances as prescribed by law, but the amount thereof shall neither be increased nor diminished during the term for which they are elected.' In line 8 replace the comma by a period and strike the remainder of the sentence."

V. FISCHER: I move the adoption of this amendment and ask unanimous consent.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves the adoption of the amendment and asks unanimous consent. Objection is heard.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I might explain that some of the language in the the beginning of the first sentence is slightly changed to round it out, and of course the last two lines are stricken because we take two lines to say what is said here in two words, but the main point is that a minute ago we did vote down Mr. White's amendment which was related to an annual salary, one-tenth of that of the governor. In the main, arguments against that were made on the basis that we were setting a ceiling upon that salary. However, if there is no ceiling, we should provide for this clause that they may not increase their own salary and with that the decrease, the main reason for that being that certainly the onus of public opinion may be upon the legislature. However, if they do that in the first or second day of session, the onus will be worn off by the time the next election comes along. In the meantime, they do enjoy the benefit of their own action. I might further point out that in the Hawaiian Manual again on, I think it is page 8, we have a statement to the effect that, "Legislative salaries vary in different states and regions. In 27 states the salaries are now fixed by the constitution while in the remaining 21 states this matter is determined by the legislative bodies themselves", as we would up here. "In the latter case, provision is ordinarily made that such compensation may not be increased or decreased during the term for which the members have been elected." I think that there is no end of logic in that kind of a provision, and I might say that the phraseology of the amendment is based upon the model state constitution, and I certainly hope it will be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, one thought occurs to me. The senators will be elected for four-year terms, I suspect, on a staggered basis, so if they could not have their salary increased during their term, you would have half the senators during a particular session drawing one scale of pay and the other half of the senators drawing a lesser scale of pay. Now I should say, you might say for the session or during the calendar year they enacted their measure.

V. FISCHER: I would certainly be agreeable to that kind of a change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What kind of change would that involve, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: The amount thereof shall neither be increased nor diminished during the session at which it was enacted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: You mentioned the model state constitution, you might want to use the language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a couple of minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for permission to withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent that his amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection?

BUCKALEW: I am objecting to find out the purpose.

V. FISCHER: For the purpose of introducing a revised amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? If there is no objection, so ordered. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would now like to introduce a new amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, strike the first sentence and substitute the following: 'Members of the legislature shall receive an annual salary and expense allowances as prescribed by law, but any increase or decrease in salary shall not apply to the legislature which enacted the change.' In line 8, replace comma by period and strike the remainder of the sentence."

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

KILCHER: Point of information. I would like to ask Mr. Fischer a question. Does the legislature mean a two-year term or maybe it should be "session" to make it clear?

V. FISCHER: I might say that as this was being drafted we used the term "session", but you may have a number of sessions during one legislature and one legislature would apply to a two-year period.

KILCHER: In that case I would like to speak against the amendment. I would like to have you or somebody make an adjustment there to apply to the calendar year. I see that would be sensible, since probably we are going to have two main sessions, and I had thought you would come up that we could word it "a calendar year", but I don't think it would be fair to apply it to a two-year legislature. I had been in favor as long as it was meant to be understood to be one year or one main session, but not legislature in the sense of two years.

V. FISCHER: May I answer that? I might say that the intent here and in most constitutions is that the legislature which enacts the change not make the increase which it usually is applicable to itself, and that is the main reason, rather than making the change one year so that it applies during the second year of that legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment?

V. FISCHER: May we have it read once more?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, strike the first sentence and substitute the following: 'Members of the legislature shall receive an annual salary and expense allowances as prescribed by law, but any increase or decrease in salary shall not apply to the legislature which enacted the change.' In line 8, replace the comma by a period and strike the remainder of the sentence."

RILEY: Mr. President, I would like to direct one inquiry to Mr. Fischer. I note that the Committee language distinguished between travel expenses and per diem, and I am sure that Mr. Fischer intends that expense allowances include each. Am I right?

V. FISCHER: Yes, I would certainly intend to cover both.

RILEY: I would also like to address a question to Mr. McLaughlin. I am wondering, Mr. McLaughlin, do you see anything in this language of the proposed amendment that might parallel your objection to that first proposed by Mr. White in the setting of the first salary?

MCLAUGHLIN: I presume that again they are going to have a transitory provision to handle any of this.

RILEY: I simply wanted to call attention to that to the minds of the mover.

HELLENTHAL: What is the necessity for the second sentence? Why have the sentence reading, "The presiding officers of the respective houses may receive an additional salary"?

V. FISCHER: I don't know, the committee put that in.

V. RIVERS: I will answer that question in this regard. The presiding officers of both houses are often called upon to perform a good many additional duties which generally constitute a certain number of duties after the official session is over, and on the basis of that session being over, there is generally an allowance made for the time it takes them to go over the journal with the chief clerk and get the statutes ready for presentation to the printer, and it involves anywhere from one to two weeks.

HELLENTHAL: Thank you, Mr. Rivers. My question was more directed to the constitutional or legal necessity. I wondered if there had been an opinion or expression somewhere that such language was necessary. I personally believe that the first sentence is adequate constitutional justification for furnishing additional salaries to the presiding officers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, this morning when I addressed the body in regard to the Gray amendment I pointed out the fact that the first question always asked at a congressional hearing and probably the last one also is, "Can Alaska afford statehood, where is her income, and what is her outcome going to be under statehood?" I think this amendment of Mr. Fischer's very adequately puts us in a better talking position to both Congress and to the public of Alaska that we want to ratify this constitution. We have left it to the legislature to set up salaries. There can be no accusation, justified or unjustified, to the effect we have gone hog wild and are spending money or are preparing to spend money beyond our means, and I think that this places the responsibility for fixing the salaries of legislators squarely where it belongs, on the legislature, and for that reason we should vote "yes" to this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have a question to address to Mr. Fischer. I wonder if he has given consideration to the fact of whether the allowances he mentions in his amendment to Section 7 would cover the allowances which are referred to in Section 10. That is, the allowances that may be, it says members of the council, that is the Legislative Council, may receive an allowance for expenses. Would it be impossible for a legislature to set the allowance that would pay the members of the Legislative Council for their activities between sessions?

V. FISCHER: I would certainly say "yes" under this language one says "allowance for expenses" and in the amendment it says expense allowances" so that would certainly cover exactly the same ground. The intent certainly would be to cover travel, per diem for expenses incurred during the session and during travel or any other time while performing the duties of a legislator.

SUNDBORG: So a legislature could not raise or lower the allowance of the members who would be serving between sessions during that legislature on a Legislative Council?

V. FISCHER: I might say that the increase and decrease applies only to salaries, not to the allowances.

SUNDBORG: Is that correct? I am sorry, I misunderstood you.

MCNEALY: First, I would like permission of the Chair to address a question to Mr. Fischer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, if there is no objection, Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: On the point Mr. Ralph Rivers raised some time ago here, if we changed the pay scale in the legislature for a period of time would you have senators on a different pay scale under this wording?

V. FISCHER: Under this wording the increase would be applicable except to the legislature which enacted the change. That would apply even to a senator during whose first half of the term the increase was enacted, and I think in line with that Mr. Rivers was agreeable to the amendment.

MCNEALY: I would like to say that I am opposed, probably not strongly opposed, to the amendment especially in a section there about allowing expenses. Now, the historic and the legal terms that have been used for years has been travel expenses, per diem, and when we talk about we have an allowance for expenses to the legislature to pay for postage for mailing, etc., and whether these words here, "allowance of expenses", would cover all of those, or whether it would appear they were left out. Maybe this discussion here, sometime you might get back to the journal or back to the stenotype report and find out that we had intended to mean this, but I can see no good reason unless it is meant to limit why it should be left out. On the matter of transitional measures I object to saying that it is going to be easier and still easier as time goes on, and say I am chairman of this committee and it would be easy to say, "Well, we will leave this matter up to a transitional measure." Well now, ordinances and transitional measures are matters that are more or less uniform in these constitutions. We have not studied any constitutions that have provided for setting up of salaries in the ordinances. You go back even in the early days and the schedules and ordinances merely provide for the first legislature and provide for the matter that they get into operation, but in all the old ones, and I can't speak offhand from the Hawaiian Constitution at the moment, but from all the old ones, why evidently the first legislature went ahead and set their own salary, and I question whether there should be another hassle on the floor here in its regard. If we do have to write a transitional measure to cover this, if this amendment is adopted, then we will be fighting around how much we are going to pay them for the first year. I think it should be settled, and the amendment defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I don't think that the precise language of the amendment would necessarily even preclude the first legislature from setting its own salary. It says "they may not increase or decrease", but they may certainly set it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 25 - Armstrong, Boswell, Cross, Davis, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, Knight, Lee, Marston, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 26 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Laws, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor.

Absent: 4 - Coghill, Doogan, Londborg, VanderLeest.)

R. RIVERS: I want to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks that his vote be changed to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 25 yeas, 26 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, at this time I would like to give notice of reconsideration of my vote on Mr. Buckalew's motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What motion was that, Mrs. Nordale?

NORDALE: The motion to strike "not to exceed 10 per cent of the salary of the governor", and then there was more to it I guess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale serves notice of her intention to reconsider her vote on Mr. Buckalew's amendment that dealt with the salary. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I address a question to Mrs. Nordale?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mrs. Nordale, would you have any objection to taking that matter up at this time rather than tomorrow?

NORDALE: If I may have a few moments recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Section 7? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that Mrs. Nordale's motion to reconsider her vote on Mr. Buckalew's amendment be taken up at this time.

METCALF: I second the motion.

JOHNSON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that Mrs. Nordale's motion to reconsider her vote on Mr. Buckalew's amendment be taken up at this time. Objection is heard.

SUNDBORG: I include that in the motion that the rules be suspended and that Mrs. Nordale's motion be taken up at this time.

HURLEY: Is this debatable or may I ask a question or is it out of order?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is not supposed to be debatable. You may ask a question if there is no objection.

HURLEY: All I want to know is if Mrs. Nordale agrees to this move.

NORDALE: Yes, I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mrs. Nordale's reconsideration come before us at this time? The Chief Clerk will call the roll. It takes a two-third's vote. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 46 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 5 - Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Nolan, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Coghill, Doogan, Londborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 46 yeas, 5 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the reconsideration motion has carried and we have before us at this time Mr. Buckalew's proposed amendment to Section 7. The proposed amendment is open for discussion. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, line 4, strike all material following the first word 'salary' to and including the word 'governor' on line 5."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I favor the reconsideration and the adoption of what for lack of a better phrase, I would refer to as the 10 per cent method, for several reasons. One reason is that it does limit the matter whereas the alternative method, it could be said by the opponents of the constitution that it gave a blank check to the members of the legislature, although I don't think actually it would, it could so be said. But a lot of thought went into the 10 per cent rule, speaker after speaker got up here and said he favored it, and I think each speaker said so conscientiously and sincerely. I think it represented a fine rule. It has one qualification that was not stressed. The 10 per cent rule is new, unique, and it shows that Alaskans are capable of thinking for themselves, and it is a new approach to the problem, and it is met with the approval of the Committee, it met with the approval of the advisors on the Committee, and I think it is commendable. It is restricted, it is sound, and it shows we are capable in the field of government of devising a good sound approach to a problem that someone else had not thought of, and for that reason I should like to favor the retention of the 10 per cent plan.

MCNEES: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. McNees, if there is no objection.

MCNEES: He said the Committee generally favored the 10 per cent plan. I wonder if he is not putting words into the Committee's mouth.

HELLENTHAL: The Committee of course favored the method, the percentage no, but the method that was represented by what I call the 10 per cent plan was conceived by the Committee, as I understand it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I voted for Mr. Buckalew's amendment, and I still favor that amendment. The legislature handles large sums of money. Eventually it will run into millions of dollars. These legislators' salaries are only a small percentage of the appropriations that are made, and I don't think there is any place where the legislature is so subject to the will of the people, and for that reason less apt to go overboard in any action they take. I think there will be very few places in the constitution where we limit the amount of money that the legislature can appropriate, and I think this place is probably where it is the least necessary. All the difficulty we had this morning, first we considered 33 1/3 per cent, then 20, 15. and 10. The very action we went through this morning shows the difficulty of deciding on a percentage. Certainly there is no scientific way of doing it. Mr. Hellenthal says the figure of 10 per cent is well considered. I will say that while I did not favor the 33 1/3 per cent that figure probably received even more consideration because it was considered by the Committee for several weeks before this committee proposal even came out. I think that it is both unwise and unnecessary to put any specific limitation in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: As I follow the discussion, the plan seems to me that the 10 per cent is too small for the legislature, and I hold with what Mrs. Hermann says that the expense of this statehood is of more serious consideration than the salaries of the legislature on account of our state economy. We are trying to compare our economy with New York and California. You must remember that every dollar spent has to be raised, and I feel in this discussion that the proponents of Mr. Buckalew's amendment is that 10 per cent which we have figured out to a couple of hundred thousand dollars is not enough, and every time you add another dollar, 15 per cent for instance, that again is more tax money, that again is the legislature's worry, but it is conceivable to me that the legislature feels that the 10 per cent is too small for them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, perhaps I should say a word or two about my reason for asking for a reconsideration of my vote. It was pointed out that with the amendment not to exceed 10 per cent several things were accomplished. We showed that we did not want too high a salary, it was pointed out that it placed a certain restriction upon the length of the sessions, that is it had a tendency to restrict the length of the sessions. Then immediately, as soon as that was wiped out, other amendments came on to the floor immediately proposing other restrictions, that they could not be increased or decreased. It occurred to me that if we would go back to the 10 per cent and leave it there that it would solve all these other problems about increases and decreases and then perhaps have some bearing on the next section that poses no limitation on the sessions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: Mr. Chairman, my question is partly answered by the mover of this motion. However, I wish to state my position on this. I voted on the prevailing side of Mr. Buckalew's amendment with good intentions and good faith as all of you have voted. As Mrs. Nordale relates here, we have tried to solve this question practically from all angles. It seems that we are pretty much divided, and the only solution appears to me that can take care of this situation for us is to leave this to the legislative body. I think they are in a better position to know for themselves as to what the needs are as far as the individuals are concerned. In other words, if the cost of living increases, and which very often happens, I have not seen any decrease in recent years, I think they are the best judge because they will be on the ground and they can act accordingly. I therefore feel in the face of all those proposals that we have tried, our best solution is to leave it to the legislative body. I think that is where it belongs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: I was a member of this Committee, and as Mr. Hellenthal has said, we did a lot of thinking on this proposal. Now he stated there has been a lot of thinking done, but the purpose of all our thinking was defeated in this 10 per cent setup, so I am going to vote to retain Mr. Buckalew's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I heartily endorse Mrs. Nordale's stand because I look at it from a man in my profession. We have an end product to sell and that is one thing that I hate to stress too much, but it must be kept constantly in front of us, and if we give the legislature a blank check to write their own salaries, that is the finest argument in the world to get people stirred up emotionally to vote against the ratification of the constitution. If we set a ceiling at the present time, then the people have a chance to say, "Well, it won't cost us any more than that." Whereas, if we leave it wide open then it is the easiest argument in the world for those who wish to oppose statehood to say, "How do you know it is not going to be a half-million dollars every session of the legislature?" I believe that since we have an end product to sell, let's not be misled by a red herring. I really do feel that we have an emotional appeal, and we must be careful. I heartily endorse the 10 per cent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I endorsed the 10 per cent proposition this morning, and I have not changed my mind now. I am not one that feels that the legislature is going to go hog wild in setting its salary. This is a matter of emphasis from my standpoint. I am perfectly willing to accept the matter of the legislature setting its salary if I am sure that is what this body wants, but as a matter of preference, I like what we did this morning much better.

I am only sorry Mr. Buckalew did not make this motion first thing this morning and save us a whole day's time because we went from 10 per cent to 15 per cent and all over the place. I would like to say from my standpoint that I think what Mr. Buckalew is trying to do is defeated by the motion he has made. He voted this morning on all the motions to the effect that the legislature should receive more than 10 per cent. Now it is my belief, contrary to what some of the other folks have said here, it is my belief that if we put no limit on the legislature, they are probably actually going to be getting less salary than if we put a limit. We had considerable discussion this morning about trying to get a good qualified legislator by paying at least an adequate salary, something where he would not lose too much by being a legislator. By leaving this thing strictly to the legislature I am afraid we have done exactly the contrary. I think we only have to look back to the last session of Congress to see what happened there. The pressure that was brought, the criticism they got for trying to raise their own salaries. I recognize that in the action we took this morning the legislature still would set its own salaries, but certainly we have taken part of the burden here by saying they could go up to 10 per cent, which shows that the thinking of this body at least was that that was not unreasonable, clear up the 10 per cent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Before Mr. Buckalew perhaps closes the argument, I would like to say I go along with Mr. Davis's line of reasoning. I can see the members of the legislature on the hook down there. We have not given them any guide or any sanction. At least we are sanctioning 10 per cent of what the governor would get as a basis, something they could point to to justify their position. If they go down there without such a guide, a few of those boys who are mostly well-heeled, who want to avoid criticism, are going to say, "Let's go easy on this and what's more the state is king of poor, and we have to save some money, so let's fix it at a very nominal amount." From then on out each succeeding legislature is going to hesitate to raise its own salary because they are afraid they are going to be under criticism. We have given them a fairly liberal guide, the sanction of a fairly liberal amount which reflects our thinking, and if you throw it wide open and knock out what we did this morning, I think you are just putting our legislature in a spot without anything to get them off the hook, and you are going to end up just as Mr. Davis indicated, and I hope we can put back this 10 per cent formula.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information. Did not the 10 per cent amendment that we had before Mr. Buckalew's amendment, state that it is a top limit, that it may be considered a top limit? Then, Mr. Ralph Rivers, I see that your argument, that the rich boys might just say "Let's go easy and do it for a dollar per year", for instance, could not be applied against Mr. Buckalew's amendment because the same argument could be applied against the 10 per cent amendment, so this argument does not apply to Mr. Buckalew's case. There is a limit set there in both and as far as dumping something into the legislature's lap that they have nothing to go by, I don't agree with that. We have the record available of this Convention where the general arguments seem to range from 10 to 15, that is enough for them to go by. I am entirely in favor of Mr. Buckalew's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, if the Committee had come out originally with the proposal that the salary be left to the legislature to fix, I would have been perfectly willing to have gone along with it, but I think when they came out with this suggestion that it be one-third of the governor's salary, that the damage has been done. That was received unfavorably by the people. I think we have all heard the rumors of discontent on that. If we now go back to the point where we leave it to the legislature, I think the people will still feel that this one-third is probably the goal the legislature is going to set for. They will say, "They have covered this up, they are going to let the legislature take care of it", that it will probably be one-third like the original proposal. So I am in favor of the 10 per cent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I think delegate Hermann wants the floor, and I will decline to her.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I like to consider this matter in terms of dollars and cents, probably because I have had to so many times before these congressional committees. Two hundred and four thousand dollars is what Mr. Gray estimated would be the amount it would cost for legislators' salaries under the 10 per cent rule. At the present time the federal government, at the time I spoke before the congressional committees, the expense to the federal government of conducting the legislation was $75,000 a year to which the Territory added additional sums which in no way approached $204,000. Now, let's not forget that this item of $204,000 is only legislators' salaries. It does not include the other expenses incident to holding a legislative session, the expense of the boiler room, the printing of the journals, and all of those things that go into the cost of a bill of legislative session are not included in that $204,000, if I understood Mr. Gray right. Now, when we go out to sell this action of ours, this constitution of ours as Mr. Hilscher has suggested several times, and a matter of which I am extremely sensitive to myself, I think you are going to have dollars and cents to talk about, not 10 per cent, and that when you do have that to talk about you are going to have an awfully hard time explaining why you had to leap -- on the first early days of statehood when there has been no appreciable difference in the economy of the Territory or possibly will be, why you have to leap from the sum of $75,000 which the federal government was paying, plus the additional cost which the legislature paid, to a sum of this amount which could easily be twice $204,000 by the time other expenses are added in. Remember the $75,000 plus the legislative appropriation, I believe it was $50,000 at the time I spoke in 1950. That is dollars and cents people talk about, and I don't think we have any right to subject the constitution to the danger of nonratification by that fact, that is what they will talk about. They are not going to say 10 per cent nor say that that is a small salary. They are going to talk about actual dollars and cents. I have encountered these opponents of statehood too often in my brief career as a proponent of statehood not to realize what all their arguments are and how they are going to be presented. Quite apart from that is the additional fact that setting the salaries is a legislative function. Yesterday I was accused of being inconsistent because Mr. Sundborg thought I was trying to put some legislation into the constitution. If you take the right of the legislature to set salaries away, you have taken one of its most important functions away from it. I have never been a member of the legislature, I think some of the people in this group think I have. I have been willing, like Barkis, but my constituents have been less willing, so I have never been elected to be a member of the Alaska legislature. I can assure you without any fear of contradiction that you have to keep your legislature's functions intact. They may have made some mistakes in the past, and I have been one of the loudest in calling them to the attention of the public, but nevertheless, it is one of the most important instrumentalities of our republican form of government, and it must not have its rights abrogated and abridged. Let's forget this idea of sticking to a percentage and base this on the governor's salary and being novel and original and all of this, and let's remember that it's money that talks. I supported Mr. Gray's amendment this morning. I did it because it looked at the time like it was the very best we could do, and I was going to go along with what was best, but I think that Mr. Buckalew's amendment I also supported it, and I supported Mr. Fischer's because all of them have elements in them that I think is the most vital thing we have to consider, and that is the matter of cost, not as it appeals to us sitting here, but as it will appeal to the public who pays the bill, and I think that is very vital, and another reason why the legislature should have this function is that they have the revenue picture before them when they are making their appropriations and passing their bills. They have the statistics from the tax commissioner, and the treasurer, and everyone that has anything to do with the handling of the revenue of the Territory of Alaska. We don't. Right now we don't know what our revenue will be when the salary for the first legislature for the Territory of Alaska will have to be set. I strongly urge everyone who is interested in seeing the constitution ratified to support Mr. Buckalew's amendment. I am only sorry you did not support Mr. Fischer's because I think it provided exactly the same thing and did it in a little better language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I go along with Mr. Davis's talk that we have wasted a lot of time this morning. You will remember Delegate Coghill and I tried to get this into the legislature this morning but there was no chance of heading off the 10 percenters. They were heavy in there and they had to run their course before we could get a chance to come to it. This is a legislative matter, and I don't know and you don't know if five or ten years from now but what this constitution will still not be in use and the economy of the country will change, and it must be left up to the legislature to pass on that. This is a legislative matter, and I am going to follow along with Delegate Hermann, and I am taking her advice.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I also voted in regard to this morning's motions. After the words "not to exceed were put in, I voted for the 20 and 15 per cent. I thought the 10 was too low and that it took over a considerable number of the legislature's prerogatives. I feel along with Mrs. Hermann and Mr. Marston that this amendment leaves the power in the hands of the legislators, and I restate here that the majority of the legislators have integrity to a point where I agree with Mr. Davis that they will probably appropriate and spend less if we leave it this way than if we have the 10 per cent maximum established, but I can see as time goes by that they may desire to and may have to change it. I was talking to a legislator in February, in the Washington State Legislature. He told me that there in the populous centers that it now costs approximately $20,000 to get elected from a municipality in the State of Washington. In the rural areas he said it cost somewhat less. He also stated that legislators from the smaller areas where they were not subjected to the pressures did not have to expend large moneys to be elected, were proving to be the better statesmen and the better legislators in the interest of the people. I can readily see where in a period of time the legislature may desire to raise that money, that compensation, but I can also see that if we have the 10 per cent clause, in order to do so they will very readily apt to force the salary of the governor up to where it would not be what they would want. You have another variable there which must be considered. I feel we should allow it to lie in the hands of the legislature. I would not object to a provision that no legislature within any given session should increase its own compensation provided it is limited to the session or the calendar year in question, if the body feels that is a necessary safeguard, but I want to strongly emphasize that here again we have a legislative function, and I am sure the people can trust the majority of the legislators to do the right thing in regard to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I agree with quite a few things Mrs. Hermann says. She is an able student of the legislative process and was one of the most able critics of the legislature. I remember as a freshman senator she stated in the press that I did not know the facts of life. Perhaps that is so, but I believe I learned the facts of life since then, perhaps with the aid of Mrs. Hermann. There are some facts I know. I know it to be a fact that under either one of these methods Mr. Buckalew's amendment, or the 10 per cent method, it is still left up to the legislature to set the amount of salary and per diem for each member. The only difference is that under the 10 per cent method we do state a limit and I believe that is desirable from the standpoint of the people who look at this constitution before voting for or against it. Because after reading the Committee report, setting it at one-third of the governor's salary, and after it seeming very high to them, if they take a second look and see that it is left wide open and up to the legislature, I don't believe it will appeal to them anymore, but if we put some limit there, it will.

HILSCHER: May I ask Mrs. Hermann a question through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hilscher, if there is no objection.

HILSCHER: Mrs. Hermann, I heartily endorse your views but may I ask this question. How are you going to answer the question to the people of how much will it cost if you do not establish some type of a ceiling or some sort of an index or pointer as to how much the legislature is going to cost? I can readily see where this would readily be a very fine stumbling block in selling the constitution and statehood.

HERMANN: I would answer the question by saying that I have no light to guide my path save the lamp of experience, and that the cost would be projected on a 60-member legislature, if such we do establish on the basis of the cost of a 40-member legislature, under our present system. I do not mean to say that I think the wages of legislators should be and continue to be $15 with $20 per diem per day, but I think the only basis we have for estimating of cost in case the question is brought to our minds by unkind questioners, that we only know what it has cost in the past on a 40-member legislature, and we have no reason to believe that the legislature itself will vary that beyond the limits that it must go in order to provide for a 60-member legislature.

V. FISCHER: I would like to say, as a former 10 percenter who previously voted against Mr. Buckalew's motion, I have been swayed by Mrs. Hermann's arguments and will vote in favor of the motion now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe that Mrs. Nordale's motion for reconsideration is very well-advised. In view of the fact that the criticism that has been leveled at the original proposal of one-third, I don't believe we would cure that criticism by then leaving it wide open in the proposal because I think it would be inducive of more criticism than one-third of the governor's salary would. Now we are not setting a salary by putting 10 per cent in here. We are setting a limit, and I think that the people will be very glad to know that we have a limit set on the salary that the legislators can vote themselves. Now, Mrs. Hermann, I think quoted a figure of two hundred and some thousand dollars for salaries. Was that it? I don't know, perhaps Mrs. Hermann and I use a different book for arithmetic, but figuring $2,250, which would be 10 per cent of the governor's salary, if the governor was serving and receiving $22,500, and if we have a 60-person legislature, I arrive at $135,000 for salaries.

GRAY: Point of order. I gave the figures to Mrs. Hermann. It is $135,000 for the salary but it was $207,000 including the $20 per day per diem. It is $135,000 straight salary.

TAYLOR: I am not ashamed to go before the people and say that the salaries under 60-person legislature is only $135,000 and that would be if the maximum salary was allowed. The legislature might not feel that they want to take the maximum salary. That is a very modest sum I think in proportion to what other legislatures cost, like the legislatures mentioned, a 399-person legislature in New Hampshire which in the whole state is not much larger than a fair sized county in the West, and I think we would not be a bit ashamed of that, and I think we should put this guide and this ceiling upon the salaries for the legislature.

RILEY: I have been curious in listening to the debate as to how the four members present who are members of the Alaska Statehood Committee might divide on this question. I see they are evenly divided, and I think that is rather significant of the thinking of the whole body. I was going to move the previous question, but I note two others wish to speak.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I was happy to learn here a few minutes ago that Mrs. Hermann once said about Mr. Barr something, because I remember very well what Mrs. Hermann once said about me. I have only the kindest feeling for Mrs. Hermann and I know she has always very ably and very conscientiously represented the best interests of Alaska when she has appeared before Congressional committees to discuss this question of statehood. I have had the privilege of hearing her several times discuss it, and I think we would have all been proud if we had had that same privilege. I am wondering, however, if Mrs. Hermann could in good conscience, after the debate we have heard here today, go before another Congressional committee and say that the cost of a legislature would be 50 per cent greater than it has been under the Territorial system because we have 50 per cent more members. In view of the fact that every person who has spoken here in favor of the Buckalew amendment, with the single exception of Mrs. Hermann, has spoken of it from the standpoint they want more money, that is why they are for the Buckalew amendment. They don't want to be held down to 10 per cent. Mr. McNees is for it, he says, because we defeated the one-third. Mr. Victor Rivers is for it because we defeated the 15 and the 20.

V. RIVERS: I think the 10 is far too low.

SUNDBORG: Others who have spoken on the subject said they were for the Buckalew amendment because they said they want to put more money out to the legislators. If that is their desire, I think they achieve it if they adopt the Buckalew amendment because what it does it takes off every, there is no restriction on the salary in the first place, there is no restriction on whether the members can raise their salary in that very session. There is no restriction on how long the sessions may be. I believe that one thing that the 10 per cent achieves and it is only one thing, is that it tends to limit the number of days in which a legislature is going to be in session in any biennium or any year. If you take the thing off entirely the legislators may say it is perfectly all right for us to get salaries amounting to so much per day, $50 per day, and so if we meet for six months each year we are entitled to salaries of so much. If we leave the 10 per cent in they could not do that and would not do it and they would show some restraint at least about how many months out of each year they would be meeting, because at the utmost all they could collect in salary would be 10 per cent of the salary of the governor, and so I would vote "no" on the motion that is going to be put to us shortly, which is "Shall we adopt Mr. Buckalew's amendment?"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. Sundborg is the second one who has made the remark that everyone who has been speaking in favor of the Buckalew amendment favors it because it will enable the legislators to receive more than 10 per cent of the governor's salary in pay. Since I spoke in favor of the Buckalew amendment I feel called upon to express my views on that particular point. I did not, I am sure in the remarks I have made, say any such thing. I frankly do not know what the correct percentage would be. I do not believe that is any way we can determine what the correct percentage is. I am not at all sure the legislature will not end up with a salary less than 10 per cent. I am not saying they should, but they might. I still think it is a matter that should be left to the legislature, and that is the reason why I support the Buckalew amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I think my position has been consistent all through this debate. The reason I supported Mr. McCutcheon's committee report is that it set a minimum standard which the salary could not go below, and I agreed with that theory, but I can see now that when they put in the 10 per cent, "not more than 10 per cent" there was no purpose, no logical reason for leaving any figure in there because it did not accomplish anything, and I agree with Mr. Davis. I think that the first state legislature is going to get a lot less than the present Territorial legislature, but I still think it is a logical amendment because we are leaving it up to the legislature, and if they want to pay themselves $20 a day, which they probably will, it is all right with me, but leaving this other figure in it does not make sense. There is no reason for it in there, and I trust the legislature absolutely. I believe they will starve me out, but I still believe this amendment should be supported.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I just want to add a few words to this proposal since I too favor Mr. Buckalew's amendment. I was not mentioned as a proponent of this motion that is before us now, but however I consider my views based on good grounds also. I too have had a little experience in the legislature. Sometimes it works out to the benefit of the public when you have constituents sitting in a gallery and for that reason I think perhaps it would be a good idea to leave this question to the legislative body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I am consistently holding to the Buckalew proposition primarily, not withstanding the misquotation by Mr. Sundborg relative to my remarks. I did not support Mr. Buckalew's amendment because I wanted to spend money or see the Territory of the new state spend money. I support Mr. Buckalew's remarks because I want to see good legislation. As I remarked before, by good legislators, from whatever walk of life they may come from, whether they have financial support that makes them independent or whether they come from the grass roots and the back roads of the country way, I feel that inasmuch as the theory propounded by the Committee in their thinking relative to good salaries, very adequate salaries for the legislators, with the one idea in mind again, that of good government, that that still holds true and can be applied best considering only the two arguments now before us, the plan of the 10 per cent or Mr. Buckalew's amendment leaving it up to the legislature. I have appreciated Mrs. Hermann's arguments. I feel she has been very close to this situation for as many years as a good many of us, if we were lumped together. I feel she has met most of these arguments at one time or another, and has met them well. I am not at all afraid of going to the people with a constitution in which this matter is properly left up to the legislature and asking their acceptance of it. I think we will get it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?"

H. FISCHER: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll and please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, line 4, strike all material following the first word 'salary' up to and including the word 'governor' on line 5."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nolan, Peratrovich, Riley, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Mr. President.

Nays: 25 - Barr, Boswell, Collins, Davis, H. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Knight, Laws, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 3 - Coghill, Londborg, VanderLeest.)

KILCHER: May I hear Mr. Davis's answer? I did not hear.

DAVIS: No.

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 25 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 7?

If not, are there amendments to Section 8?

CHIEF CLERK: There was an amendment left over from last evening, Mr. McCutcheon's. They were going to do something about changing a word but it was moved and seconded but nothing has been done about it yet, it was Section 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If it was held over the Chair did not know that. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: We have proceeded beyond Section 6, and I assume that when we come back to Section 6 that we will propose it at that time.

CHIEF CLERK: It was held in the minutes as seconded, and no further action. Is that all right?

PERATROVICH: I think it was held in abeyance, subject to the conference of these committees, and we proceeded with 7. The understanding was we revert back to 6 to take care of that particular question when you were ready.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair knew nothing about it. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to make a motion orally. I move that the word "uneven" be inserted before the word "year" in line 12 of Section 8.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Section 8, that the word "uneven" be inserted before the word "year" on line 12 of Section 8. What is your pleasure, Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: I ask unanimous consent.

DOOGAN: I object.

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, my thought is that holding a session of the legislature every year is too frequent, particularly when we have a provision that if an emergency occurs that special sessions can be called. I believe in stability of the law and I think that annual sessions of the legislature necessarily creates a considerable turmoil. It makes the people, even the lawyers, uncertain as to what the laws are, and I believe in our Territory that if we have a regular session of the legislature every other year we are in ample position to furnish all adequate and necessary legislation for the proper government of the state and furthermore, there is another point that we know the proneness of each legislature, probably from necessity, at least the legislators believe they are necessary, to increase taxes and I believe the taxpayer has a right for at least a two years' rest from an increase of taxes, and I submit this thorny problem should be once every other year instead of every year.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I might say something in that regard. I am against the amendment for this reason. Though a city council is a small portion of the government of the Territory, we have found here in Fairbanks and I think every major city of any importance of the Territory finds the same thing, that they reach a point where instead of having a council meeting every two weeks they get to the point where they have to have a council meeting every week because of the growing size of the city and growing necessity of taking care of things as they come up, and I feel that the Territory is growing in that same regard, and as we have seen in the past, that the legislature is slugged with a tremendous amount of work all through the session and particularly at the end of the session that they end up where they can't accomplish the work in the manner that we would like to have it accomplished because of the press of work. It is necessary that we have the legislature meet every year and then those that are worried about the length of the session, I think will find that the session of the legislature probably won't exceed between 30 and 60 days every year because they are taking up the matters as they come before them. When you speak of special sessions, you have seen in the past the reluctance of some governors to call for a special session namely because it is economy for the people of the Territory. I have found, and I think that the Territory of Alaska will find that as they go on that special sessions will become a necessity more and more, and you get into more special sessions than you actually want, and if you have a Territorial legislature that meets every year to take up the business in an orderly manner, then you are not plaguing the people that are serving on the legislature to a call of a special session when it may be inconvenient for them to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I know the last few sessions of the legislature it has been found to be physically impossible to do the work that should be done by the legislature in the 60-day period, and we have had many talks down there, publicly and privately among the legislators that there should be a 60-day session in the one year, the odd year, and a 30-day session in the next year. Since 1945 I don't believe that there has ever been a legislature that adjourned and that all of the bills, and many of them for which were very fine bills, had received consideration from the house and from the senate, that many bills died because it was physically impossible to consider them and either pass them or defeat them. Now that is not just an isolated instance, but it is in every legislature. We found the same thing in 1955. I believe we went 12 days over there. We not only considered the Employment Security Commission bill, but also others. We did work steadily with night sessions during the entire session, and I think we could very well, with the size of the Territory and its increasing problems, could afford to have a 60-day session one year and a 30-day session the following year. I think then possibly we could keep up with the business.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I have lived in Juneau during every session of the Territorial legislature and I think public necessity, my recollection may be wrong in one instance, but I think public necessity has only called during all those years since 1913 for two special sessions. It might have been three special sessions, but the fact is that I challenge anyone to point out whereby the Territory has suffered harm by the fact there have not been more special sessions called. Now this article provides that the legislature itself may call a special session, so it seems to me that if it is true that at the end of a regular session the majority, or whatever the required number is in this article, of the legislators feel that they have more legislation that is important to the welfare of the Territory to enact, they themselves could call a special session before they adjourn, but I can't see any reason of putting upon the Territory the burden of having a regular session every year, and I also say what laws have been passed, or have not been passed from which the Territory is suffering. I have heard of none. I don't think anyone else has, and I submit it stands to reason. We have talked a lot today about trying to get good men and women to run for the legislature, not that they have not been in the past, maybe to increase their caliber. I submit it is a burden on an individual to accept a legislative position and if he has to go there once every year it is going to be just that much more of a burden, and you do destroy this salary. You just cut his salary in two and I believe it is only common sense to have our laws stable enough so that we know for at least two years the law is going to be in effect, unless some public emergency calls for its being repealed or amended and not having it subject to being in effect knowingly, so we all know it. I submit we ought to amend the article in the course of my proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I believe that if a law passed by the legislature is a good law there is no question but what it will stay on the books more than one year. I also believe it has been very well established that special sessions have become regarded as emergency sessions, and they have only been called where there has been an emergency. So I feel very strongly that the annual session is desirable in order to get away as far as possible from the last minute rush which has, I am sure, though I cannot cite specific instances, resulted in the passage of poor laws and has resulted in desirable laws not being passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to point out three things very briefly. In the first place the executive article has developed a very strong executive in which I am in favor. However, we must in conjunction with that also have a strong legislature, and I do not feel that can be accomplished in biennial sessions. The trend of the other states in recent years is back toward annual sessions. Originally most of your legislatures, in fact all of your original legislatures in the states, were set up on the basis of annual session. When your legislatures reached a new low in the thinking of the people in the mid-nineteenth century, we found the trend became away from the annual sessions and toward the biennial sessions. In the twentieth century we find the swing back toward the annual sessions, and I feel we would be making a big mistake in a state as large as this one is, to have a strong executive and not have annual sessions of our legislature. I am firmly in favor of a strong executive, but I also want a strong legislature. Furthermore, you are going to have the best reflected thinking of your populace of Alaska as a whole in your legislature rather than in your executive. You are going to have that because your legislator constantly goes back among his constituents, and he in turn will carry that thinking into the capital city, wherever it may be, and it will be reflected in turn in your executive thinking as it should be.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, some of the folks here have said an annual session of the legislature is going to solve the last-minute-rush problem. I wonder if they are going to solve the last-minute-rush problem in this Convention.

HERMANN: A good question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 3:50 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair has received a communication from a professor at the University in which he announced that Major William F. Dean will make a speech in the gymnasium at 1:00 o'clock on Thursday. Professor Richardson, I believe, invited the delegates to be present if they so chose to hear General Dean's speech, and I was wondering if it might be in order, if the delegates did not wish to recess for that particular length of time, to send General Dean a communication requesting he make a few brief remarks here at the Convention following his speech at the University, or just what you would like to do?

JOHNSON: I so move.

MARSTON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN; It has been moved and seconded and unanimous consent is asked that the President request Major General Dean to present a few brief remarks to us on Thursday afternoon if he would so choose to do so. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it will be accomplished. Are there amendments pending at this time? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment to Section 8, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Amendment to Section 8. Would the Sergeant at Arms please bring the amendment forward? The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 14, Section 8, add the following at the end of this section: 'If the two houses cannot agree on the time of adjournment, the governor may, on the same being certified to him by one of the houses, adjourn the legislature to such time as he shall think proper but not beyond the day set for the opening of the next regular session.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, what is your pleasure?

V. RIVERS: I will move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

NORDALE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I will ask unanimous consent so that the Style and Drafting Committee can have a good time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

BUCKALEW: I object.

GRAY: I object for a minute. I wonder if just for the moment, just what was the intent of the Committee to go as far as they went and no further, did you contemplate this?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, in perusing the bulk of the constitutions of all the states, as a matter of fact, I think I read them all and some others besides, I cannot recall if all of them had the provision similar to this, but at least a substantial preponderance had the provision just exactly as it is written here. "One house shall not adjourn for more than three days without the consent of the other." The point of Mr. Rivers's amendment, I think in theory, is well taken. I am not just sure how it would apply in the event the legislature sought to reinstitute a special session by polling their own membership as is provided in another subsequent section. I think Mr. Rivers's amendment seeks to eliminate the possibility of a complete stalemate and because there is not a limitation necessarily in the legislature it will permit the governor to set up a limitation unless they arrive at some conclusion rather than being a total stalemate, and in so terminating the legislature will provide them a cooling-off period, so to speak, so they may go home and consult their constituents, and I assume it would not prohibit the assembly again of the legislature under its own authority.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: That is the intent, Mr. President. This is not, I don't think, a controversial amendment. It does, however, appear in practically all the state constitutions where they do not have time limits on their sessions. It was my thought in presenting it that we should have such a measure to overcome a deadlock in the case such a thing occurred, and it is very possible that such a thing could occur, that after a reasonable cooling-off period the members could then gather and resolve their problems. I just want to refer to the Hawaiian reference manual on it and give you a few figures. A number of states grant the governor power to adjourn the legislature, usually when there is a dispute between the houses as to the time of adjournment. Under these circumstances the governors of 18 states may adjourn the legislature but not beyond the time of the next regular session. The constitutions of five other states grant similar power, but the maximum length of the recess is expressed in terms of days or months. I think that covers all there is on that point. The subject is that if there is a deadlock rather without a time limit set on its session, that the governor in this particular manner can, on the request of one house, adjourn the legislature. It was expressed to me before I presented the amendment, there should be a limit of time in which you should notify the other house, such as two or three days. I think this is broad enough to allow the governor to set up such a procedure and grant the other house two-or three-days'notice that he had been asked to take such action and would do so in the three-day period.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I disagree that this is a good thing because it seems to me to be unwarranted encroachment of the executive department upon the legislative. We have three distinct branches and they should be kept as separate and distinct as possible. Now if we are going to take away from the legislature the right to fix its own adjournment date by giving it to the governor, I think we are destroying one of their essential powers and on any matters that involve organization and the conduct of the business of the legislature, it seems to me that should be their prerogative. I am certainly against the amendment.

SUNDBORG: May I hear it read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, Section 8, line 14, add the following at the end of this section: 'If the two houses cannot agree on the time of adjournment, the governor may, on the same being certified to him by one of the houses, adjourn the legislature to such time as he shall think proper but not beyond the day set for the opening of the next regular session.'"

GRAY: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I would like to direct a question to Mr. McCutcheon. Perhaps I did not follow him clearly. Did you say that in every case where there was no expiration time set for a session that a provision similar to this existed?

MCCUTCHEON: No, I did not intend to infer that.

RILEY: I have rather pronounced reservations on this myself in line with Mr. Johnson's remarks. If, as we have always felt, that they are coordinated branches, I think rather recent memory would show us that in our own situation, had we no expiration date we would have been at an impasse, and I think perhaps further language could be considered here in line with the next section, that any adjournment taken by such a means be taken subject to the legislature's right to reconvene itself. That possibly would satisfy my objection, but I will leave it up to Mr. Rivers to call for a recess should he wish to consider other language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I am a little confused here as to when this comes about. It seems to me from the amendment this only comes about when the two houses of legislature cannot agree with each other that they should adjourn. If that is true, I don't feel that the executive is usurping the power of the legislature to adjourn. If they can't make up their own minds to adjourn, somebody is going to have to make up their minds for them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: This is a rather lengthy amendment. I would like to either have it reread or ask Mr. Rivers a question. Mr. Rivers, would the result of your amendment be that the governor would have the authority to set the time of the adjournment, is that included in there?

V. RIVERS: I will read to you the amendment. "If the two houses cannot agree on the time of adjournment, the governor may, on the same being certified to him by one of the houses, adjourn the legislature to such time as he shall think proper but not beyond the day set for the opening of the next regular session."

KILCHER: That means he sets a date.

V. RIVERS: He shall adjourn the legislature to the time he shall think proper, etc.

KILCHER: Is there an amendment forthcoming that will mitigate somehow that power of adjournment to the time he sees fit? I think I am against the amendment. I see the impasse that the house could be in, but I think the governor has altogether too much authority under this amendment. Unless an amendment to this amendment comes forth, I will vote against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I agree with Mr. Johnson's principles that the executive should not infringe upon the powers of the legislative, but this is a special situation where the members of the legislative branch cannot agree. One house would want to adjourn, the other house would not. There is only one way that situation could be resolved, and that is by a referee, and who is better fitted to be a referee than the highest official elected by the people?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention? Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would just like to say a few more words and that is this, that I think if this amendment in substantially this general form is not adopted, it will probably be one of the first amendments adopted at the next constitutional revision convention.

BUCKALEW: Could I ask Mr. Rivers one question before I vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: As I understand it, if we adopt this amendment that would preclude the both houses from having a poll and calling themselves back into session prior to the date set by the governor?

V. RIVERS: No, that would not be my interpretation. I am not sure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the Chair called for a two-minute recess it might be this could be resolved. If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, after some discussion I agree, and those I discussed it with feel that by putting a period after the word "legislature", or a comma after the word "legislature", striking the balance of the typewritten matter and adding the words, "subject to the provisions of Section 9 hereof," would allow the self-starter clause to operate. In Section 9 is a self-starter clause whereby two-thirds poll of the legislative members they may reconvene, so I will ask to withdraw my original proposal for an amendment and submit this amendment as read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that his original proposed amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the amendment has been withdrawn. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as it is before us at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, Section 8, line 14, add the following at the end of this section: 'If the two houses cannot agree on the time of adjournment, the governor may, on the same being certified to him by one of the houses, adjourn the legislature, subject to the provisions of Section 9 hereof.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, what is your pleasure?

V. RIVERS: I will move the adoption of the amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to ask Mr. Rivers a question. As I see Section 8, it refers to regular sessions of the legislature while Section 9 refers to special sessions, and special sessions are limited in the subjects which can come before that session. Do you feel you would accomplish the purpose which would be desirable under those circumstances?

MCCUTCHEON: I would like to point out to Mr. Smith, however, that when the legislature is convened because of its own action, it is not limited to subject matter. Only when the governor calls a special session is the special session limited to such agenda as the governor may submit.

SMITH: Thank you, Mr. McCutcheon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask the question of anyone that can answer it. If this material does not go in the constitution could the legislature then prescribe for such a situation?

V. RIVERS: I doubt very much if they could. In the section previous to that, Section 8, the wording previous to that, we have the words, "Neither house may adjourn or recess for a period longer than three days without concurrence of the other." It automatically prohibits them from both adjourning, and if they are deadlocked, in the matter of adjournment, then in this manner the governor could adjourn them and they could reconvene on a two-thirds vote of their own group, and I believe that would handle it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I don't think that Mr. Rivers' answer quite filled Mr. Hurley's question there. I still wonder whether if this article fails of adoption, whether the legislature could not choose its own system of arbitration. Is that your idea, Mr. Rivers? I wonder technically if they could not choose their own umpire so to speak, make their own rules? I think it would be just house rules Mr. Riley, what do you think of that?

RILEY: Like so many I profess no expert qualifications in that respect.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, assuming that Section 11, which we have not arrived at yet, stands in its form, I think that that eventuality which Mr. Rivers has provided for would be taken care of by their own action, but the section may not stand, and in such a case it may be necessary to add Mr. Rivers's amendment.

HURLEY: Mr. President, the question was asked with this thought in mind and as I say, these things leave me a little cold. We will assume this impasse is going to come about by the fact that one house is considering something and the other house is not interested in it and it wants to adjourn. It appears to me that the governor then could be in favor of one or the other of them and act in such a way as to prefer one house or the other and in essence then prefer one particular subject matter that they were discussing, and the possibility occurs to me it may be a dangerous thing, and so I am a little frightened of it. If it could be taken care of by rules I would prefer that it would be done that way.

MCCUTCHEON: I would like to point out one further thing. In this instance I am speaking neither for nor against the amendment. You might consider in looking through Section 9 that in the event the legislature took an immediate poll and voted by two-thirds to stay in session, it would in effect override the governor's so-called veto of the legislature, so it's a matter of the governor siding with one house, if there is two-thirds of the members that prefer not to accept the governor in the other house or the majority of the house, if they can muster the two-thirds they can, in effect, override the governor's veto so they could stay in session.

RILEY: Mr. President, another thought occurs to me which may not have been in our minds during the last recess, and Mr. McCutcheon has touched on it. If this language is acceptable, further attention will probably be required on Section 9 to obviate a series of adjournments. I see we have a limitation in the last sentence in Section 9: "No special session shall be of longer duration than 30 days." We will assume that this proposition is set in action whereby one house wishes to adjourn, that house and the governor get together and bring about an adjournment, immediately two-thirds of the total number of legislators call for reconvening the legislature. Again the one house decides to adjourn on the first day they are back or within a short time thereafter, I don't think we are fully covered yet under the language which is before us.

HELLENTHAL: Unless another recess is proposed, I cannot quite agree with Mr. Riley. He says that two-thirds of the legislators can override the governor. It does not say that, it says through a poll directed by the Legislative Council. Frankly, I don't know what that means. Does that mean that it takes a majority vote of the Legislative Council before the machinery can be set in process? Apparently Mr. Riley thinks not. He thinks that a petition signed by two-thirds of the legislators might accomplish the result, so I certainly would like attention focused, during the recess, to what this language, "poll directed by the Legislative Council" means.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I move that we postpone this amendment to a set time, the time being on the next working over of the section after we have a chance to go over Section 11. In other words, to take this matter up again after Section 11 has been treated with and if it should be accepted as it stands, which I hope, then it appears it might be entirely a matter up to house rules and after Section 11 has been dealt with in better shape, it might save us time and recesses. We have other recesses in which this question could then be handled.

1673

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are asking that this particular proposed amendment be set over to a set time?

KILCHER: Set time being after Section 11 has been dealt with.

KNIGHT: I second it.

V. RIVERS: I have no objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, then the proposed amendment is set over until we have completed our action on Section 11. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, line 12, after the word 'year' insert 'for a session of not to exceed 60 days'."

SUNDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: This I think will make unnecessary the language proposed by Mr. Rivers because it would bring the legislature to an end if it reaches an impasse when it gets to the 60th day. I believe that the provision that they may meet up to 60 days each year is generous. They have been meeting only 60 days every other year under our Territorial experience, and if there is necessity for additional time of meeting it could be ordered by either the governor or by two-thirds of the legislators.

MCNEES: Where does the insertion go in please?

SUNDBORG: After the word "year". Right after the word "year", between "year" and period.

PRESIDENT EGAN: After the word "year" on line 12. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think that the question, shall we have a limited or unlimited legislature, should not come up here merely in the light of an amendment. It is a basic question and I think if you decide on it now we won't have given it enough thought. Mr. Sundborg, I think that the question itself in its own place and time is a good one. However, I don't think it will solve this particular problem we are speaking about, because for instance you have a legislature that after 30 days reaches this impasse. Would you then have them be in an impasse for another 30 days until they have to go home anyway?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to state we will have to handle these problems somehow, and if we keep setting them all aside we never will. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I do submit that this is the time and place to decide this. It belongs in this section if we are going to limit the length of the sessions of the legislature, it belongs right where I put it. I offered it not just to solve the matter which Mr. Victor Rivers brought up, I had it written out here on my desk before he submitted his amendment. I believe it is good anyway, but in addition it would make unnecessary an amendment such as Mr. Rivers has proposed.

BUCKALEW: I would like to hear from somebody on the Committee. This is an important amendment and I haven't heard anyone from the Committee.

MCCUTCHEON: The preponderance of Committee thinking on this subject was that we should have unlimited sessions. The whole theory of this legislative article has depended on an annual salary, unlimited sessions, special sessions that could be called by the governor if he has a program that is necessary to be instituted, or to call a special session of or in the event of public necessity in the feeling of the legislature and the feeling of the public for the legislature to bring itself to convening. By placing this 60-day limitation in here we obviate the theory of this particular legislative article, and I mean virtually the bulk of the article, because the thinking has been along the lines of the general tendencies in legislatures of the states to get away from limited session by more and more leaning into either split sessions or annual sessions. At least six of the states now have gone over to the point again, as Mr. McNees said some time back, of having annual sessions. Some of the states have developed annual sessions and have also included special sessions, almost as a matter of course. We think, at least most of us on the Committee, felt that in line with the proposition of being able to institute the legislature when necessary, and we felt that because of the necessity of perhaps taking care of the situation as our new state grows, the problems of our state multiply by increases in population, the advent of industry and whatever it may be, that it might be necessary for the next 15 or 20 years for us to have sometimes in a year perhaps as much as two sessions or calling a regular session and a short session on the following year to pick up the tag ends of what may have been left off at one session. The theory of this particular article is that on an annual basis the legislators will be, let us say, self-stopping. The necessity of their own private affairs will tend to make them transact their business in an expeditious manner as possible and so bring the termination of the legislature at the convenient point when they need to go home or when the bulk of the affairs of the state have been taken care of, yet still not precluding the fact they still must stop on a given date and leave undone much important legislation. So if this matter of a 60-day limitation is interposed at this particular point, it is my feeling that the intent of this legislative article is going to have to be very substantially revised.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I don't quite follow the argument that if this amendment is adopted it would necessitate a complete revision of the legislative article. It seems to me that the intent is not altered at all. The only question is whether or not we can afford to spend money for unlimited sessions or whether we ought to try to economize as some have suggested and limit the sessions to 60 days each year. That should be plenty of time if the legislature gets down to business and does its work, and the arguments which have been put forth on the basis that if you have an unlimited session they are going to get their work down a lot quicker. If that argument is good, on limited sessions, it seems to me it should be good on 60-day annual sessions. I have not had as much experience in the legislature as some, but I have attended one or two regular sessions and one special session, and it occurs to me that with the regular session every year, 60 days in length, and with the provision as set forth in Section 9, where the governor or legislature itself is given the right to call any emergency special session, that we have spent plenty of money to make our laws. This would be a very good way of economizing on the cost of the legislature over all. I am for the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I can agree with Mr. Johnson that economy is desirable, but I do not believe we should economize at the expense of good legislation, and I think it is important that the legislature have time to carry out the purpose of creating good legislation, and I think too that we have seen what limitation of time can do, so I am opposed to the amendment.

ARMSTRONG: May I ask Mr. Sundborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: In the Hawaii Constitution they seem to classify between general sessions and between budget and special sessions; general sessions for 30 days and budget sessions and special sessions for 30 days, and that the governor may extend any session for not more than 30 days. Have you considered that type of provision in making out your amendment for this article?

SUNDBORG: I did not, Mr. Armstrong, but I would say that it would be identical with ours, as it would be if my amendment is adopted, regular sessions of 60 days, special sessions of 30 days. The thing that would be different would be that we have no provision for the governor to extend the session, but we do have a provision allowing the governor to call a special session, which is the same thing.

ARMSTRONG: But you do not have anything in there about a budget session, and it seems to me that is an appropriate inclusion.

SUNDBORG: That was not the intention of my amendment. I do not know anything about the subject of a budget session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 20 - Barr, Boswell, Cross, Harris, Johnson, Laws, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 32 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, White.

Absent: 3 - Coghill, Londborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 20 yeas, 32 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the Clerk's desk to Section 8.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, page 3, line 13, change the words 'three days' to 'one day'."

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The subject is open for discussion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I bring this up now so the matter will not be unconsidered. To say that either house may adjourn for three days without the consent of the other house is kind of crossing up the purposes of our legislature. Certainly we have gotten away from a unicameral legislature. We have a bicameral, but I think if the members of one house are there and on duty there is no reason why the other house with the constant exchange of business, be authorized here or have it left open to take a recess for three full days. They could take turns taking recesses. I can see a house knocking off for one day without the consent of the other house, but I think the three-day period is too long for this particular purpose.

MCNEES: I would like to ask Mr. Rivers a question if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may, Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Couldn't you possibly imagine a situation whereby one house might like to send a delegation of their members out into the greater area for a series of hearings that might run into four or five days on a particular question, and the other house might want to sit in session during that time?

R. RIVERS: They haven't recessed when they are in the committee of the whole. When in committee of the whole they are still conducting business of the legislature. If they want to hold hearings they can go right ahead as a committee of the whole and hold them.

MCNEES: I did not mean necessarily hold them at the seat of government, but hold them out in a greater area. They might disperse into two or three or four committees in various ways, a proportion of the house still sitting at the capital city.

R. RIVERS: Where there is a legislature in session I can't see them taking out into the country and holding hearings. They would hold hearings between sessions as in a committee of the whole, but I have no strong feeling on the matter. I just wanted the body to consider it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, the Chair was wondering whether or not maybe the Committee thought that one year the house would go to the Pioneers' Home and the next year the senate would go. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: The house and the senate, each time they meet, send a delegation for an inspection of the Home and the business continues. They do not pass bills but they do a lot of second reading for instance and introduction of bills and conduct all kinds of business, and that is for quite a number of days.

BARR: Mr. Rivers says that he just gave us this for our consideration. It has not taken me long to consider it. I think it is a very unnecessary amendment. I can think of several situations where one house might want to recess, such as Mrs. Sweeney mentions, also perhaps they have finished practically all of their business and a big long 80-page banking bill has passed one house but is being considered in the other house. Why should one house sit there for three days while the other house is working on that 80-page bill? They might as well recess, but it is up to the members of the legislature. They are not going to recess just for fun, not if there is any work to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon, the language in there, "for a period longer than three days" sort of bothers me. I think Mr. Gray asked him some question on the point, but what is to prevent either house from doing that recurrently? Having a recess for three days without the concurrence of the other house? Then meeting again and then immediately taking another recess for another three days?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: It is my impression that this same terminology is in the Organic Act or else it is in the joint rules of the house and senate. I can't remember which, and I can't find it in the Organic Act right this minute, but I think the terminology there is nearly identical to it. It is apparently standard terminology or relatively standard terminology in the bulk of the constitutions, and for reason of precedents, I suppose, we accepted that.

BARR: I can answer Mr. Robertson's question as to what would prevent it. The newspapers would prevent it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 8? Mr. McCutcheon.

SUNDBORG: I do not have an amendment, but I have a question. I wondered, Mr. McCutcheon, if I may ask a question, we are providing here for an annual salary. Was it your thought that that salary would be paid in equal installments? And the reason I ask that is that a man might come down to the capital city of Juneau and work for two months very hard in session and earn a total of $400, presuming that our annual salary might be around $2,400, and there would be no other duties, particularly of the legislators, for the balance of the 10 months, and then under Section 5 where any member would have to resign in order to run for any elective position or to be appointed to any position, under the state, that would be all the compensation he would get. Now just for the purpose of judging what the intent of the constitution is, would the annual salary be paid in equal monthly installments or could they pay more while the legislature is in session?

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the discussion I believe in the Committee was relatively informal on that matter, and it was concluded that the legislators would be paid on a monthly basis. It appears, at least our consultant advised us, that most of the states or a good portion of the states that have an annual salary operation do pay on a monthly basis. Whether that is an actual fact or not I do not know. We have not checked it out with any of the books or other constitutions on that matter. We assumed that the payment would be on a monthly basis, receiving such other additional compensation as they may be entitled to at the time they were in actual session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon a question. Is it your understanding that once we have created an office of a legislator, once a man has been elected, he fills the office, I would think he would be entitled to the full amount then. I mean, if the legislators wanted to pay themselves that way, but once he is elected to the office, is he entitled to the annual salary?

MCCUTCHEON: That is a question I don't think we had considered in that fashion. We felt that so long as a man was actually serving in the capacity of the legislature that from month to month he should be paid, but for some reason he ceased serving in that, the Territory shouldn't seek to get back the unserved portion of his remuneration. Did I get your point correctly?

BUCKALEW: You just intended to leave it up to the legislature?

MCCUTCHEON: I assumed the legislature would set up some kind of fiscal arrangement for paying the legislators.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: That would be correct because Section 7 now says the legislature will receive an annual salary. That leaves it entirely up to the legislature to figure out the details, and we don't have to spell them into this constitution.

V. RIVERS: I have another question, and that is in regard to the fourth Monday in January of each year. It seems to me that in the first few sessions of the first state legislature, that the second Monday would gain 15 days for you and I can see that in the first few sessions, the first few years of the new state, that we are going to have considerably longer sessions than you probably will have later. I wondered if the Committee had considered the use of the second Monday in January in order not to run so far into the spring months?

MCCUTCHEON: There had been some discussion about it. I think our discussion revolved around the time the governor would take office. There was some coordination of thought in that respect. I think the governor takes office prior to the time the legislature convenes, to permit him to get his fingers into the matter of government prior to the time the legislature actually sits. Now the Committee, and I think I can speak for all of the Committee on this matter, the Committee has no particular date they would like to see it set, except they did not want to get it too far along. It seems to me the fourth Monday of January is about the time the legislature convenes currently. If it were advanced, I am sure that I speak for the committee again, we would have no objection if it were advanced to an earlier date.

V. RIVERS: As I recall, all the discussions in the Executive Committee, we more or less keyed the seating of the time of the governor around the second Monday in January and that is why I asked the question. We keyed it around the second Monday in January, the legislature meeting then, and I am going to ask the unanimous consent to change the word "fourth" in line 11 to "second", that will save two weeks in the matter of the early spring season and we do have a seasonal operation.

NOLAN: I will object.

V. RIVERS: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: If we are going to have a 60-day session, I know they have changed the income tax law, but anyone in business, I think it is a pretty tough proposition to get there on the second Monday of January. That is kind of tough, a little too tough on anyone that is going to try to get their business affairs in shape, don't you think?

PRESIDENT EGAN: At times that could fall on the seventh or eighth of January. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The least it would fall on ever would be the eighth day in January.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, in connection with this, something that had occurred to me previously, was that we provided the legislature may change the date of the general elections. Could Mr. Rivers's objection and Mr. Nolan's objections to each other, etc., be met by inserting, "unless otherwise provided by law" or "unless changed by law", as we have done for the date of the general election?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I wish to agree entirely with Senator Nolan. Even if you would add one more week, the third Monday in January, at the first of the year every day counts, and the third Monday is much, much preferable to the second Monday.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I think we probably should give more consideration to Mr. Fischer's thoughts on this matter. If the legislature can change the election date, I think the legislature should be able to change the date which they convene. You might run into a situation where you have to amend the constitution to conform with an election.

NOLAN: I think Section 3 has been called to my attention which says the terms of office shall begin on the fourth Monday of the following January. You would have to change that also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the Chair may, the Chair recalls that there have been several, not one but several amendments to the Organic Act that related to this particular question, and it might not be a bad idea to leave it up to the legislature. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Three times within my memory, and I have watched the legislatures convene for about 30 years now, but three times within my memory the date of convening has been changed. It used to convene in March and it was set to convene I believe the second Monday of January, and that proved to be undesirable and another change was made to make it the fourth Monday in January. I think myself that there should be a provision in there permitting the legislature to change the date and not just tying us down flatly to the date of the fourth Monday in January, no matter what happens because things could happen in regard to the calling of the national Congress that might affect our time a little too. I think the suggestion made by Mr. Fischer is good, and I hope he will reduce it to an amendment and submit it.

V. RIVERS: I will ask for a two-minute recess, so Mr. Fischer can work on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent to withdraw my previous motion and to submit in lieu thereof this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers asks unanimous consent that his previous amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'January' on page 1, line 18, and on page 3, line 12, after the words 'each year' insert the words 'unless otherwise provided by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Victor Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I will move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment as it has been proposed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

SWEENEY: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please reread the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'January' on page 1, line 18, and on page 3, line 12, after the words 'each year' insert the words 'unless otherwise provided by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there still objection to the unanimous consent request?

SWEENEY: I will withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I should have spoken before you said it was adopted. However, I would like for the record to know that it was the opinion of the Committee to set the date of the beginning of the term of office and the date of the convening of the legislative session on exactly the same date so that there could be no doubt in anyone's minds that the legislators elected at the last election, their term of office shall begin at the stipulated time when the new session of the legislature convenes. That was our idea in setting up the beginning of the term of office on the fourth day of January in Section 3 and establishing the beginning of the legislature on the fourth Monday of January in the subsequent Section 8, so there would be no conflict at all.

HERMANN: I just wonder what that might be to the travel authorizations prior to the fourth Monday. If he is not a member of the legislature until the fourth Monday how are you going to get him to the legislature on the fourth Monday?

MCCUTCHEON: Actually, Mrs. Hermann, we are not members of the legislature now until we actually take the oath of office at the legislature.

V. RIVERS: The fact of certification of election is adequate to cover that and has been in the past.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I remember one occasion when there was a great press of business and the attempt was made to call an extraordinary session prior to the fourth Monday in January, and it was called and the boys worked for 17 days and later on the circuit court held it was not valid but they did so much work in the 17 days that they successfully completed all their labors during the following 60 days. The thought was they could be convened because they had been certified to be elected even though a previous legislature had been elected and was theoretically still in office. It was a bit of a mean question so I think we should be fairly clear on the subject matter that Mrs. Hermann raises or we are going to have another law suit. I don't know just how to get at it, I would have to study it. However, the travel time, I think they get paid for travel time on their full per diem by specific authorization and that can be for two days travel before you take your oath, but whether you could actually start drawing a salary on January 1, before you have been sworn in, that is something else again. I know it can be done if this constitution says so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I think that we resolved that the legislature will take care of their own salaries and if they get into salary difficulty here they will be authorized to take care of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: It is my impression that once we get to be a state we won't have the same problems we had under the Organic Act. I don't think Mrs. Hermann's question will raise much of a problem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, with your indulgence I will revert to Section 6 in as much as we have one amendment pending from last night which was held in abeyance. If you will permit we would like to take that up at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, prior to that time I would like to ask unanimous consent that I withdraw the original amendment that was offered last evening and supply in lieu thereof a new amendment which I hereby offer at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. McCutcheon's unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection the original amendment is ordered withdrawn. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McCutcheon at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, Section 6, line 25, following the word 'arrest' insert 'and not subject to civil process'."

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection?

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I object just for a point of clarification. Those words would supplant the word "during"?

MCCUTCHEON: No.

R. RIVERS: Very well.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McCutcheon? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Is that in the present guarantee in the Organic Act?

R. RIVERS: Mr. Hellenthal and I had luck. We found that in the first constitution we looked at, which was the State of Washington, practically none of the other constitutions had anything about immunity from civil process but this was the language used in the State of Washington. It sounds pretty good to me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 6? If not, we will proceed again with Section 8. Are there amendments to Section 8? Section 9? Are there amendments to Section 9?

R. RIVERS: I have one which I will offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 9, page 3, line 20, after the word 'governor' delete the rest of the sentence and substitute the following: 'He shall in his proclamation state the purpose of the call, but the legislature may also act on other matters and shall be the judge as to the time of its adjournment within the time limit herein prescribed.'"

R. RIVERS: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, this is a fundamental question. You will note that Section 9 is entirely on the subject of special sessions or extraordinary sessions. Section 9 as presently written has for its last sentence, "No special session shall be of longer duration than 30 days." Our present Organic Act says that no special session shall be longer than 30 days. The Organic Act does not state whether the governor shall determine the length of an extraordinary session or whether the legislature shall determine the length of an extraordinary session. Accordingly, at the last session of the legislature the governor took the position that he could call an extraordinary session and limit the time to three days or five days. On the opinion of the Attorney General of Alaska, the Alaska legislature took the position that being a co-equal department in government that once convened it was the judge of when it had completed its labors and it was the judge as to when its time of adjournment should be. I fully believe that if you are going to treat the legislature as a co-equal department of government, that within the limit of 30 days special sessions or extraordinary sessions for emergency purposes or otherwise, the legislature should decide when it has completed its labors and it should not be called into special session for five days or 10 days by the governor who wants to put the grease under it when it may take 15 days or 20 days to cover a major subject and write the bill. So I think that even though we want to be brief in this constitution, we should borrow from some of our past experiences and where there is a disputable question let this body decide that type of issue. Now, there are two points contained in this amendment. The one I have just mentioned as shall the legislature be the judge of the time when it shall adjourn within the 30-day limit. The next question is, may the governor limit the purpose of an extraordinary session in his call. The present Organic Act says that the governor may call for emergencies or when public necessity or convenience requires, the governor may call the legislature into extraordinary session. On ruling of the Attorney General's office, it was pointed out that although the Organic Act did say that the governor was to state the purpose of his call, the Organic Act does not say that the legislature once convened is limited to just the one subject that the governor specifies or the two or three subjects which the governor specifies. In the absence of any specific limitation it was held that once convened in extraordinary session the Alaska legislature was the judge of when it had done the legislative work it wanted to do and could carry out a few other subjects that arose besides the special subject set forth by the governor in his proclamation as the purpose to call. Well, we have heard quite a bit here about each of these three main branches of government being co-equal under the checks and balance system characteristic of our republican form of government. Now I have found in three extraordinary sessions I have been connected with, two as Attorney General, that invariably when the legislature was called some very timely matters were brought to its attention that were not mentioned in the governor's call. Of course, our legislature was not limited to just the specific objects of the call, so it could pick up those timely matters and while it is waiting for some long bill in a free conference committee, it can be acting on other matters. I don't believe in saying that when you only have a 30-day extraordinary session and you go to all the expense of bringing your legislators together and taking them to your capital, that they should be prevented from exercising their full legislative powers. It is absolutely obvious that they always get to work on the particular subject that the governor called them for. That is what constitutes the emergency or the most important thing that must be done, but you have got them there and if my amendment carries they are going to be the judge as to whether they stay 15 days or the full 30 days or whatever time would be involved, and they are also going to be the judge as to whether they can handle a few other matters during that period of time within the 30-day limit other than the specific things laid out by the governor in his proclamation, so I submit that as the basis for my argument.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I believe probably Mr. McCutcheon wants to bring out the same point. You will notice on line 22 and 23, beginning with the last word on 22, "or presented to them by the governor". In Committee, our feeling was that by putting this into this section we gave the legislators an opportunity to present any bills that they had to the governor and the governor would then present them to the legislature. There was a feeling that the governor should list the subjects in his proclamation, but that the legislature should not be precluded from submitting other bills, but having them presented by the governor would do away with any great rash of bills being introduced. The important bills would be taken care of. I don't see any limitation in the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The failure of Mr. Rivers's argument lies in this principle. He has predicated all his remarks on a single situation which has been predicated on a bill of don'ts, or our Organic Act. We must assume that with little exception, and I say little exception, that a strong executive arm and the legislature will probably be of the same political party. We have not precluded that the legislature will assemble on their own hook. They can do that but we have stated here that in the event the governor calls a special session for whatever duration he may desire, that he sets up the agenda which will be considered, but it does not again preclude the possibility of the floor leaders of the houses taking this other material to the governor and having it approved. I seriously doubt that if the leadership of both houses would approach the governor on this matter that it could be considered well enough, but there would be no reason to stay in session longer than was necessary. There is one other consideration that establishes that there is no need to undertake the amendment Mr. Rivers has, and that is the fact we are hoping there shall be annual sessions. The press of business will not be in the same fashion as it has in the previous years when we have used only the biennial session with extremely rare special sessions, so the Committee felt and discussed, and I will admit there were several points of view at one time on this, that if we were to adopt this particular kind of device, that the governor could call and the governor could dictate. It is a strong executive branch, he is talking to his equal arm in the legislature. On the other hand, the legislature can assemble on behalf to consider whatever they want, so that neither is precluded from putting across the necessary program or taking up a necessary emergency. We must remember that this governor is answerable to the people, he is not answerable to Washington, D.C., he is answerable to the people. Secondly, there will be extremely few exceptions where the governor shall be of the opposite party of the majority of the legislature. I think with these safeguards, the way this particular section is designed, that it is going to give the most complete mobility that we can possibly have in this particular section of our article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. McCutcheon has brought out several of the points I was going to mention. One is that with annual sessions of the legislature there will be little need for special sessions. Another thing is that it is actually a protection to a special session of the legislature if they are confined to the matters the governor presents because you who have been in the legislature know that the moment you convene the head of every department of government descends upon you with all kinds of proposed legislation, and I am sure that if there is anything important enough to consider at a special session, you would just as soon be relieved of all that extraneous material. Furthermore, if other matters are presented that you feel are going to take more time, you can poll yourselves and a two-thirds vote will keep you in session for an additional period of time. Is that not right?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Yes.

HELLENTHAL: I ask that the question be put.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal asks that the question be put. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Before putting the question, Mr. President, I do not get how much of this section Mr. Rivers would strike. He started with the word "governor" in line 20, but I did not get how much was to be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'governor' delete the rest of the sentence.

DAVIS: Thank you.

R. RIVERS: That would mean that the last sentence would be retained. The last sentence being "no special session", etc. Now, as I said there are two parts to my proposed amendment. One is specifying who shall be the judge of the length of their term to accomplish the job for which they are called, and the other is this business of whether they can handle extra matters or not. I see that the Committee has a pretty good argument for letting the governor specify objects of the call, so if I could have a two-minute recess I would like to maybe withdraw my amendment and submit another one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I ask for unanimous consent to withdraw my proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent to withdraw his proposed amendment. Is there objection? If there is no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Now, for the record, I want to ask the Chairman of the Committee a question. Mr. McCutcheon, would it have been the Committee's intention under the language of your section as submitted that the governor would have any power to limit the length of a special session?

MCCUTCHEON: I can't recall that that particular topic came under discussion. We thought in terms primarily of limiting special sessions. As to whose authority of limitation, I don't think we discussed it.

R. RIVERS: Would it be your interpretation of it as written though that in as much as you have said nothing about the governor being able to limit the length of the session, but you have limited the subject matter of the session, that that would be interpreted that the legislature would be the judge of its adjournment time within the 30 days?

MCCUTCHEON: I think I can speak for the Committee. We assumed that because the governor had control of the agenda to be presented that by so presenting the material he would limit the session of the legislature in special session, except it got to 30 days.

R. RIVERS: Then I must prepare an amendment.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask a question of Mr. McCutcheon? By the use of the word "directed" in line 17, did the Committee feel it would take a majority vote of the Legislative Council to start a petition method in operation?

MCCUTCHEON: We had the advice of Mr. McKay on this, and he stated that in as much as the Legislative Council had the president of the senate and the speaker of the house as members of the Legislative Council, that it would take a majority of the Council. I assumed, to instigate a special session. However, the assumption is also that there may be public demand for it, and the legislators may be writing in as they have occasionally demanded in recent years here, that the governor call a special session, but such has not happened, but it would be the natural assumption of the Legislative Council acting as a whole with the membership of both houses who are on the Legislative Council, that it would require the majority of their vote to instigate the poll of the other members of the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: That defeats the whole purpose of your section because if the complexion of your Legislative Council was different than the legislature you would not get anywhere because you would have to have two-thirds of the members of the Legislative Council and you might have some holdovers on there.

MCCUTCHEON: You can always create a contingency which is a very minor exception to the rule. We are assuming that the Legislative Council would be composed of those who most recently reflect the attitude of the people in their elections. I may be in error.

BUCKALEW: Did you consider the possibility of making the polling of the legislature a mere administrative act of the Council?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, that is right. I will have to ask for some support from the Committee on that but I'm sure that is the case. I yield to Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: As I recall the consideration in Committee, at a time when there was apparent demand for a special session, the Legislative Council would be asked to poll the legislators. The Legislative Council itself is composed of legislators and it is my understanding that they had to have a majority or any portion of the Legislative Council to demand it. For instance, the legislators from Nome and Fairbanks and Anchorage could write down and tell the Council they thought there should be a poll put out for a special session, and the Legislative Council would do the administrative part of polling the legislators and then if two-thirds of the legislators demanded a special session, that would be called. Perhaps I misunderstood you, Mr. McCutcheon, concerning the majority of the Legislative Council itself.

MCCUTCHEON: I am in error, I apparently misunderstood the question here, but the Legislative Council acts purely as an administrative agent in that respect.

V. FISCHER: Could I ask a question in line with what Mr. Rivers was driving at? If a governor calls a special session of the legislature to consider a specific item and assuming that even though he wants that passed, and the legislature has not had time to pass it, and he sets a time limit, and the time limit has expired, could the Legislative Council in its administrative capacity right then and there, not poll the legislators and if two-thirds of them favor a special session, a special session will start right then and there, which would preclude the need for any amendment?

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, if a session comes to an end and a special session is called, all business of the session that is ended is dead, all bills have to be reintroduced. You don't have a continuity by falling back on this special session idea.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have an amendment pending?

R. RIVERS: I have now an amendment to submit to take the place of the one withdrawn.

HELLENTHAL: Would you object to substituting the word "conducted", perhaps, for the word "directed" in line 17?

JOHNSON: Parliamentary inquiry. I would like to ask the Chairman a question. Regarding the language of Section 9, Mr. McCutcheon, there seems to be some indication that under the provisions of this section the governor may limit the time of a special session. That is, he may fix it at any time less than 30 days. I believe the largest amount of time would be 30 days. Is there anything in the section that would give him the right to fix the time at less than 30 days? I don't understand that from reading the section.

MCCUTCHEON: There is nothing specifically stipulating that the governor can fix it at less than 30 days.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 9, add to the end of the section the following: 'The Legislature shall determine the time of its adjournment within the thirty-day period.'"

R. RIVERS: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment and asks unanimous consent.

JOHNSON: I object.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have asked, for the record and which will be how the courts are going to interpret this constitution, as to whether the standing committee who submitted the proposal had in mind that the legislature could limit the duration of the session within the 30-day period, and Mr. McCutcheon said yes, they could limit the time it would take to accomplish the work required. I will admit there is nothing in here that says the governor can limit the length of the session. It is wide open but some of the Committee members were kind of thinking in terms that maybe he could. We don't want to go through what we went through again. There is no reason why we can't in a simple sentence solve what may turn out later to be a big controversy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I don't see the need for this for this reason. When the governor sends out the proclamation and lists the subjects that are going to come up at the special session, and he knows that the members of the legislature will probably bring other bills for presentation, he can't say this is going to be done in two weeks or 10 days or anything else. He is going to have to leave it open and trust that the legislators will quit when they are through if it is before the 30 days. If the legislators are polled for a session the 60 members can't say it will be for 60 days or 10 days, they have to leave it open. The thing is they will go along until they finish their business and not over 30 days and the legislature will adjourn.

R. RIVERS: I still want to close, Mr. President. It can't happen, but it did happen. There is nothing in the Organic Act that says the governor may state the duration of that special session. There is nothing in the Organic Act that says the governor can call a special session for 10 or 20 days. It says he can call a special session. The Organic Act says that the limit of a session shall be 30 days and so it can't happen, but it did happen, and I don't want to see it happen again, and I don't want to see any arguments about the question in the future. Therefore, I am proposing that we simply specify that the legislature shall determine the time of its adjournment.

KILCHER: I don't know what happened according to Mr. Rivers. I am confused about what happens.

R. RIVERS: At the past session the governor called an extraordinary session for three days. We knew we could not do the job in three days, so we went right on working. At the end of the three days he gave us another three days and then 10 days. We always contended we were the judge of when we could adjourn and he was telling us how long we could stay in special session. Now I don't want that to happen again.

MCNEALY: Neither under the Organic Act nor in the last session were we on annual salary either.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 23 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Cross, Emberg, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight,
McNealy, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R.
Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien,
Mr. President.

Nays: 25 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Davis, H.
Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hilscher, Hinckel,
Johnson, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston,
Metcalf, Nolan, Poulsen, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney.

Absent: 7 - Coghill, Doogan, Laws, Londborg, Reader, Stewart, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 23 yeas, 25 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a committee announcement if we may revert to that order of business. The Local Government Committee will meet at 6:10 p.m. in the committee room on the third floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Subject to other committee announcements, I move that we recess until 7:05 this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves and asks unanimous consent that subject to other committee announcements the Convention recess until 7:05 this evening. Are there other committee announcements? If not, the Convention will stand at recess until 7:05 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, as a matter of having the record completely clarified with respect to Section 9 pertaining to the amendment that Ralph Rivers offered some time ago and was defeated, I'd like to have the record perfectly clear on the intent of the Committee, that the defeat of that amendment should be conclusive; that the Committee, in bringing out this particular article, or this section of the article, did not intend that the governor should in any way limit, from the standpoint of time, the consideration of any of the necessary business before a special session of the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other amendments to Section 9?

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think I voted on the prevailing side on that question of the Rivers amendment. I wonder if the Clerk could check.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What does the record show relative to Ralph Rivers's amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: No, you didn't, you voted on the other side.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 9? If not, are there any amendments to Section 10? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McCutcheon.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, line 18, after 'Council', add a comma and insert 'or as otherwise prescribed by law.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. McCutcheon? Adding a comma after those words, is that what you meant?

CHIEF CLERK: There is a comma there, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I'll move for the adoption of the amendment.

BUCKALEW: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Buckalew, Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: I think he must be referring to Section 9. You called for amendments to Section 10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. McCutcheon said that he had an amendment to Section 9. I had called for Section 10, that's right, Mr. Stewart, but Mr. McCutcheon didn't realize we were going ahead of ourselves. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: I don't think it's right, because there is a comma after "Council" already.

PRESIDENT EGAN: He probably meant that the comma should come after the words he is asking to be inserted, is that right, Mr. McCutcheon?

CHIEF CLERK: You mean strike the comma after "Council" and insert "or as otherwise prescribed by law," line 18?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion was made by Mr. McCutcheon and seconded by Mr. Buckalew. This matter is now opened for discussion. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it has been felt by some that it might be advisable to offer this amendment inasmuch as after the legislature has once gotten into session they may wish to devise some other fashion in which to initiate their own convention, so that the legislature may not wish to use necessarily the Legislative Council as the administrative agent in conducting a poll to bring them into session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McCutcheon be adopted by this Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it, and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 9? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley, you may ask Mr. McCutcheon a question.

HURLEY: If what you just said, Mr. McCutcheon, is true, wouldn't it be possible to strike all the material in line 17 after "the legislators" down through the balance of the sentence? You're depending upon the legislature to make the rules anyway?

MCCUTCHEON: Not necessarily.

HURLEY: Okay, thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 9? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, having voted on the prevailing side on this article, on Section 9 pertaining to whether the governor or the legislature can -- anyway, the motion that was made by Mr. Ralph Rivers, I'd like to file notice of reconsideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris serves notice of his intention to reconsider his vote on the last amendment that had been proposed by Mr. Ralph Rivers, which was defeated. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I'd like to ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that we take up Mr. Harris's reconsideration now.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew asks unanimous consent. Objection is heard.

BUCKALEW: I so move.

V. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer seconds the motion that we take up the matter of Mr. Harris's reconsideration at this time. It is a suspension of the rules and is undebatable.

DAVIS: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and Mr. Harris's reconsideration be ordered at this time?"

V. FISCHER: Point of order, Mr. President. I'd like to ask a question similar to the one asked of Mrs. Nordale earlier today, of Mr. Harris, whether or not he favors this reconsideration now?

HARRIS: I would, yes.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and Mr. Harris's reconsideration be placed before us at this time?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 8 - Cooper, Davis, Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, Nordale.

Absent: 7 - Barr, Collins, Nolan, R. Rivers, Robertson, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 40 ayes, 8 nays, and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "ayes" have it. The rules have been suspended and Mr. Harris's reconsideration is now before us. Will the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 9, add to the end of the section, 'The legislature shall determine the time of its adjournment within the 30-day period.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I'd like to point out that this amendment was offered when Mr. Rivers asked Mr. McCutcheon a question. The question, as I remember it, was, "Do you feel, as a member of the Committee, that the governor could set the time of a special session?" and Mr. McCutcheon said, "Yes". Then Mr. Rivers said, "in that event, I think I will have to offer an amendment", and offered the particular amendment here. Now I'm satisfied that Mr. McCutcheon did not understand the question when he made the answer, and I think that's shown by the statement he made at the beginning of the session tonight. Mr. McCutcheon does not, as a member of the Committee or otherwise, feel that the governor, under the language as it now stands, has any right at all to limit the session of a special session other than the general 30day period, which the governor doesn't limit, the constitution does. And for that reason, in my opinion, the proposed amendment is absolutely surplus, it doesn't hurt anything, but it certainly doesn't add anything.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I got directly the opposite impression from the opening action of this session when Mr. McCutcheon, as Chairman of the Committee, felt it necessary in addressing the record and make it clear that it was not the Committee's intent to allow the governor to curtail special sessions. I think if that action is necessary, reconsideration and a change in the vote to carry out that intent is necessary on this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, the very reason for giving this reconsideration was to get this matter clear and in the constitution, as well as being on the record. There is a difference of opinion, as we can see here, by the two speakers that have already spoken on it. So, therefore, that was the reason I gave my reconsideration, and since the time of taking our last ballot, I have been shown by different parties the reason for the motion being made. Although I felt at the time that the constitution, as it is written the article as it was written covered the subject, being as there are so many delegates that didn't feel it was covered, I am perfectly willing to go along with it and have it written into the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I read the section, and I get a different interpretation of it than Mr. Davis. If he can give me any clear, convincing, and lucid argument that says the governor cannot cut it off, I'll vote the amendment down.

DAVIS: Are you asking me a question?

BUCKALEW: I'll put that in the form of a question.

DAVIS: I'll try to answer it this way. The section, as written, says nothing at all about the governor allowing or setting the duration of a special session. Mr. Rivers, in his first talk on this point felt that, unless there were a special limitation, that the governor would have no right to set the time limit of a special session. And it was only because he misunderstood Mr. McCutcheon, or Mr. McCutcheon misunderstood him, that this amendment was made. Well now it seems to me clear that there is no power given in this section, as written, for the governor to limit the time of a special session. He can, of course, under this section, limit the thing to be considered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. Chairman, I think where the misunderstanding came about was in the manner in which the question was presented to Mr. McCutcheon. If there were any way that the governor could control the time that the legislature would be in session, well, the governor, as Mr. McCutcheon explained, has a small power of controlling the time, in that he can only present, or he will be able to control what is presented to the legislature at that time. I think that was the point that Mr. McCutcheon didn't get quite clear to the people here.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye". All those opposed by saying "no". The "noes have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 9? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the word "directed" in line 17, Section 9, at page 3, be changed to "conducted".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of his proposed amendment. Is there objection?

Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted.

Are there other amendments to Section 9? If not, we'll proceed to Section 10. Are there amendments to Section 10? Are there amendments to Section 11? Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: With regard to Section 10 apparently it is intended that it should be mandatory that there be a Legislative Council rather than permissive with the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: According to Section 10 it would be mandatory, the way the Chair reads it, Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Does not that set up an agency which is more or less independent of the legislature? Isn't it their prerogative under this to set up such a Council?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Stewart has the floor. What is your question, Mr. Stewart?

STEWART: I think I should like to introduce an amendment to strike the word "shall" on line 25, under Section 10, and insert therefor the word "may", giving the legislature the authority to establish a Legislative Council, but not directing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart asks unanimous consent that the word "shall" be deleted and the word "may" be inserted in lieu thereof on line 25 of Section 10.

KNIGHT: Seconded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

MCCUTCHEON: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Stewart so moves; Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The question is open for discussion. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it was the feeling of the Committee that the legislature should utilize the services of their Legislative Council. It was the feeling of the Committee that there should be no if's, and's, or but's about it; it is not permissive, they are directed to utilize the Legislative Council, such as we are utilizing at the present time. The tendencies among the states is to more and more go into the utilities of legislative councils. It is an economic factor in the handling of legislative matters because the facts are developed; the investigations are made; the wording of the bill is actually studied by this Committee. There are members of the legislature on this Committee, they develop the material, it's presented to the legislature as a proper product to be considered, and is considered by the legislature. We felt that it was a matter of economy to utilize this, and we did not, in our Committee, desire that there should be any if's, and's, or but's. We wanted the legislature to use a Legislative Council, period. If this body feels otherwise, then you will have to support Mr. Stewart.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, there are duties of the Legislative Council which we have already passed over and apparently approved. If we are not going to have a Legislative Council, then those articles will have to be rewritten.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I'd like to ask Mr. McCutcheon a question. Every time you tell a legislature what they are going to do and what would happen if the legislature set up no money for the Legislative Council?

MCCUTCHEON: I'd assume the Legislature Council wouldn't function.

GRAY: That's just the point that we are bringing up: "shall" or "may". If you are going to give authority to the Legislative Council, they must have the intent and initiative. "Shall" or "may" is no different. If something should happen in the next 20 years where the Legislative Council was substituted by some other activity it would be tied up with the Constitutional Convention.

MCCUTCHEON: There would be at least one constitutional convention prior to that time.

COOPER: As far as the legislature setting up any money for the Legislative Council, your legislatures are now on an annual salary.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Stewart be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I'd like to get some information from Mr. McCutcheon. If no reference is made in Section 10 to the Legislative Council may the legislature in the future then establish one anyway?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, they may.

KILCHER: In other words, if we should not direct the legislature in this article, may it just as well delete all reference to the Council, is that right?

MCCUTCHEON: That's what I would conclude, yes, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: May I start again? I was right. The article now states that the legislature shall receive an annual salary, therefore, the members are being reimbursed for their services. This article merely states that the members of the Legislative Council and other committees may receive allowances for expenses. So there is no need for an additional reimbursement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, how many references to the Legislative Council appear in the article?

PRESIDENT EGAN: How many references appear? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I believe there is only one other reference in a different place.

HELLENTHAL: That's the one on the question of polling the legislature about the mechanics of conducting a special session?

MCCUTCHEON: That's the one that comes to mind immediately.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Stewart be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye". All opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 10? If not, are there amendments to Section 11? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I don't have an amendment, I just want to ask a question, if I may?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. McCutcheon, I notice you say here, "Each house shall have the power to choose its officers and employees." I just want to get this absolutely clear, does that mean that it would be possible to have one central staff to serve both houses, in some capacities at any rate, wouldn't it?

MCCUTCHEON: The reason that we found it necessary to put in that particular wording is because in the line above "The houses of each legislature shall adopt uniform rules of procedure." It may be that one house requires a different number of employees than the other house, so it was felt that it should put this particular sentence in there to clarify that. There is nothing to prohibit them from having a uniform system of employees by having a pool, or labor pool or a clerical pool, and both houses utilize the same pool of labor. However, the prohibition here, you'll notice, does not extend to any officers. In other words, the senate shall choose their president, despite the uniform rules of procedure, and the house shall seek its speaker.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 11? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may present your amendment, Mrs. Sweeney. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mrs. Sweeney.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 11, delete 'of' and insert the words 'to which' after 'of', and after the word 'house' insert the words

'is entitled'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent that her proposed amendment be adopted.

DAVIS: I must object. Will the clerk read the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read it.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 11, delete 'of' and insert 'to which', and after the word 'house' insert the words 'is entitled'."

SWEENEY: It will now read: "A majority of the members to which each house is entitled shall constitute a quorum to do business."

DAVIS: It is entirely possible, it is clearly understood that it would be a majority of the members to which each house is entitled, but I'm not sure. Maybe Style and Drafting can change it without any action here.

SWEENEY: Well, if it's clear then, I'll withdraw.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked to adopt Mrs. Sweeney's proposed amendment. Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered, and the amendment has been adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have a question of Mr. McCutcheon. Was there any necessity indicated by the advisors, or anyone else, any legal necessity for the inclusion of the last sentence?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, sir, there was. At least two, possibly three, of the consultants suggested that the last sentence be inserted in this particular section, because in some instances it had been held that where the constitution was silent, the legislature had no authority to actually control lobbying.

HELLENTHAL: One more question, was attention given to the problem that by the enumeration of certain powers that the inclusion of other powers by inference is more or less defeated, and it is restrictive on the powers of the legislature to specify some and not others?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I have no answer for your question, Mr. Hellenthal. The only thing is that I recall the Committee was concerned about the authority of the legislature to actually control lobbying, and it was pointed out that in the absence in some states of a specific statement, that lobbying could not be controlled.

HELLENTHAL: Well, in the face of the opinion of those who know much more about it than I do, I'm afraid I'll yield to any objections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 11? If not, are there amendments to Section 12? Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I move to amend Committee Proposal No. 5 on page 4. Strike Section 12 and substitute the words "Suits against the state for all liabilities hereinafter originating or now existing, shall be provided for by law."

SWEENEY: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, what is your point of order?

SWEENEY: It seems to me that after Section 11 we were to return to Section 8 concerning recesses and adjournments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: After Section 11, Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: Yes, after the adoption of the paragraph on uniform rules of procedure, it seems to me we were to return to Section 8.

KILCHER: If I may. The intent of my motion to postpone -- I didn't mean that 8 would have to come up immediately after 11. Just any time after 11, that was my intention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, strike Section 12 and substitute the following: 'Suits against the state for all liabilities hereinafter' originating or now existing shall be provided for by law.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, what is your pleasure?

MCLAUGHLIN: I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves that his proposed amendment be adopted. Is there a second?

HERMANN: I'll second the motion.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I'd just like to ask Mr. McLaughlin a question here. Mr. McLaughlin, don't you think that part of that belongs properly in the transitional measures?

MCLAUGHLIN: In direct answer to that, I don't know where it belongs, and, frankly, I don't know whether you should have a section in there or not. I'm merely substituting another section to clarify it so that it won't be in conflict with the judiciary. If I may have an opportunity to explain?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes.

MCLAUGHLIN: It's my understanding that by Section 12 the Committee did plan to authorize suits against the sovereign, that is, to compel the legislature to recognize that law suits could be instituted, that is, monetary claims and factual claims, and tort claims for injuries. The legislature would have to make provisions for those, that is, it would be mandatory, and it is my understanding not from the Committee but it is my understanding that about half the states include such a provision in their constitution one way or the other, either prohibiting the legislature from consenting that the state be sued or directing that it should be done. My concern is this, Section 12, as it now reads, was apparently taken from either the Arizona Constitution or the Washington Constitution. Was it the Washington State Constitution?

MCCUTCHEON: Arizona.

MCLAUGHLIN: And three words were added -- three words at the end of Section 12, "or agencies thereof". Reading this by itself, it would indicate that any suit, and suits by general definition means any action against anyone, and that includes both law and equity, would be subject against the state. Any suit against the state or any agency would be subject to the direction of the legislature, and the legislature could create the court in which that action could be tried. In substance, looking at it alone, it would mean that if someone wanted to institute an action to restrain a commission or board, it would have to go to the court and in the manner prescribed by the legislature. This would be acceptable in the constitution as it reads now, except for the fact that in the Arizona Constitution where they set up their courts, they specifically authorized the courts to try entertaining proceedings and mandamus, certiorari, review, and prohibitions, that is, actions that normally lie against boards and commissions, and my problem here was bringing it to the attention of the Convention, since we don't describe or authorize specifically in the judiciary article the entertainment by the superior court or the supreme court of these actions. It might be interpreted to mean that if you wanted to mandamus, if you wanted to restrain, if you wanted to review, the legislature would determine exactly what court created by them and what procedure would be for this determination. And I move to strike and I substituted a provision out of Oregon in lieu of the present one so that at least the debate would be in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the intent of the Committee in this matter was nothing other than after the judiciary had been set up that they would designate which level of court that any suit against the state could be brought. In other words, there would be one particular level of court in which all suits against the state or their agencies must be brought. It would not be of any further determination as far as the legislature was concerned nor in otherwise concerning or controlling the courts. They would make the one designation when the court system was set up. "This is it. From now on any suits against the state will be entered in that particular court."

MCLAUGHLIN: May I inquire whether it was the intent of the Committee to authorize suits against the state in court?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes.

MCLAUGHLIN: Well, then I feel under those circumstances that the amendment is justified, that is if the Convention decides to authorize action against the state in the constitution.

MCCUTCHEON: I feel that because the Committee intended one thing, I think that this group understands what the Committee intended, that our Committee has no objection if this particular amendment is the thing that makes it perfectly clear what was intended by our group. In other words, the Legislative Committee felt that the state may be sued, period; that the legislature shall indicate which level of court shall hear that suit against the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I rise for a question of Mr. McLaughlin. Do you think your language, using the word "liability", would cover the case of claims, such as claims under excessive condemnation or something of that type?

MCLAUGHLIN: I think it would, Mr. Rivers, and it would prevent the creation of claims nonexistent during Territorial status. The word "liability" there helps to clarify it. As I say, that was taken from the Oregon Constitution.

V. RIVERS: Does the word "liability" in any sense narrow the field of jurisdiction in which the sovereign could be sued?

MCLAUGHLIN: It does not, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Any further discussion? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. McLaughlin, in your opinion would the language which you propose here permit suits by taxpayers in matters in which the individual taxpayer is not damaged to any greater extent than all other taxpayers? Are you familiar with the case of Griffin versus Sheldon and the decision of the Court of Appeals?

MCLAUGHLIN: I understand what your problem is. I would say this amendment is not intended to cover a taxpayer's suit, as such. This as originally intended by the Committee, this was intended to cover merely claims against the State of Alaska for breach of contract on a contract between the individual and the State of Alaska. He'd have a court of claims to go to, or some other court, or it also directs that the legislature provide the tort claims, that is, for damages let us say, for negligence by the servants of the state. What I'm trying to do is to keep the taxpayers' suits in the superior courts or other courts, and authorize them.

SUNDBORG: You're not fearful that the use of this "all liabilities" might open this up to taxpayer suits?

MCLAUGHLIN: No.

COOPER: May we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The Committee had sort of a rough session here, and it was agreed, in the light of Mr. McLaughlin's expression, that for the record that the intent of the Committee is clear and the wording of this particular amendment. I will therefore ask unanimous consent for its adoption, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin be adopted.

SUNDBORG: I'll object to the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has already been moved and seconded that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I've had an opportunity to look at the amendment during the recess and I think there is something wrong with it. I wonder if the Clerk would read it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Suits against the state for all liabilities hereinafter originating or now existing shall be provided for by law."

SUNDBORG: What it says is that suits against the state shall be provided for by law. Now it may be that Mr. McLaughlin's intention was that the manner of trial of suits or the manner of presentation of suits against the state shall be provided for, but I don't think that he meant that the suits shall be provided for by law. Did you, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: Yes, sir, I did.

SUNDBORG: "Suits shall be provided for law." Then I have a different understanding of the word "suit" than a lawyer has.

MCLAUGHLIN: Could we have about a two-minute recess, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be recessed for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would be willing to withdraw my objection, if Mr. McLaughlin, who is a member of Style and Drafting will promise to tell us when he gets into the bosom of the Committee what he intends by this amendment.

MCLAUGHLIN: Gentlemen, it is with great reluctance that I refuse to participate in such conspiracy. It should be on the record and they should know what they are voting for. I shall detail it very slowly if the President will permit me. What has happened is that they have taken from Arizona a provision providing for claims against the state and in Arizona when they authorized the claims against the state, they used this exact language, with the exception of the last three words "or agencies thereof". That's the language that is now presently in Section 12, and it was taken from Article 4 of the Arizona Constitution, and the words added by the Committee "or agencies thereof". But in the Arizona Constitution it provides that there are certain types of courts that shall be set up, the supreme court, superior court, justices of the peace, and other inferior courts. And then, in the Arizona Constitution, they specifically say, just as they do in all other constitutions that use this wording, they say that the superior court shall have jurisdiction in mandamus; it shall have jurisdiction in review, in prohibition, in certiorari. Now those are all remedies that are normally used against public bodies, that is, they have specifically vested the power in the superior court. So it's clear upon reading the Arizona Constitution that what you mean by the language that you have here in Section 12 is for claims against the state, and you're not taking away from the superior court the right to mandamus, certiorari, review, or prohibitions. That is, a taxpayer can go into those courts and can restrain under the constitution, he can restrain any agency of the government from certain actions. I wanted to make sure also that it was clear here in the Convention, that the use of this language in Section 12, taking the Arizona provision and bringing it in here without any explanation in the judiciary article, it might well be interpreted to mean that for all types of actions -- mandamus, reviews, prohibitions, and certiorari, that the legislature had a right to create a special court, and in that special court all those types of actions would be tried, and you would be depriving the superior court of the constitutional jurisdiction to hear the cases, and I know that that was not your intent. So what I did is that I took from the State of Oregon, this present provision -- and it does appear in other constitutions so that it would make it clear that what you were talking about in substance is that you could, the legislature since it was being directed to, consent to suit on things that it is normally not subject to suit for. That is, the state consented as a sovereign, sets up its own court of claims and provides for procedure. Under the authority of this section and under the judiciary act, they have a right to determine the manner of procedure and everything else and I think my amendment does it. Is that clear?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Is the language which you propose taken directly and completely from the Oregon Constitution?

MCLAUGHLIN: The language which I propose is taken directly from the Oregon Constitution. I have not included the latter half of the provision, which requires that it be by general law if possible, because you have a similar provision later on in your articles on the same subject matter, but it is verbatim out of the Oregon Constitution the first portion of it, and it is not taken out of context.

SUNDBORG: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is withdrawn. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I wish to make an objection. I have listened to Mr. McLaughlin and I have read this section, and I have read his proposed amendment, and so help me, I can't see where one is any better than the other. I like the one that is in there now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I'm sort of in the same position Mr. Davis is in. I frankly can't follow Mr. McLaughlin. I'm a member of the bar, and I don't know what he's talking about.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I'm confused, too. May I ask Mr. McLaughlin a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

WHITE: Is it your desire to have these suits brought in superior court, period?

MCLAUGHLIN: No, I do not, but I don't want to deprive the superior court of a jurisdiction which it should have, and, under the wording of this, it could be interpreted as depriving the superior court of this jurisdiction.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White still has the floor, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Would you yield for a moment?

WHITE: Well, I want to pursue this for just one minute. I'm still confused, because in your amendment, where you say, "shall be provided for by law", how does that differ from the legislature "shall direct by law"? Aren't laws passed by the legislature?

MCLAUGHLIN: That adds another problem that I didn't want to raise at this moment, but in Style and Drafting, we were confronted with this problem: If you recall, we passed an article, a proposal called the initiative, and now we are confronted where certain types of the people were limited in the types of laws that they could institute or initiate, but we find out now that in every one of these sections we say the legislature "shall" and we are trying to determine now whether or not, where we used the expression "legislature" and approve of it, whether or not these proposals which are being passed subsequent to our article on the initiative where we used the expression "legislature" does not limit the initiative power. And so, in every instance where possible, we have been substituting for the word "legislature" the words "by law" so that it would conform to the style of the initiative, if you understand that. Is that clear? For example, Mr. White, in the judiciary article we say, "The legislature shall provide for the systems of courts." If we leave it in there, that means by initiative, the system of courts might be interpreted to mean that by the initiative you couldn't change the system of courts because we specifically said, "The legislature alone can do that." That is a problem that will confront us on every article that now appears, and I believe it is the intention of the Style and Drafting Committee, wherever possible, to use the expression "provided by law" instead of "by the legislature".

WHITE: As it stands now then your amendment reads it could be provided for by the legislature or by the courts? How did initiative get into this? As your amendment now reads, I don't see that it reads any differently than Section 12, because you say, "shall be provided for by law", and the way we have been operating, it means "by the legislature".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: After talking to Mr. McLaughlin and others here, I should like to ask unanimous consent that this matter be taken up tomorrow sometime in mid-morning so that members of the Judiciary Committee can briefly assemble and pursue the intricacies of this matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Hellenthal's request. Is there any objection? If there is no objection, we will hold the matter in abeyance until tomorrow morning. Are there amendments to Section 13?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment to Section 13.

CHIEF CLERK: "Amendment by Mr. Buckalew to Section 13; line 21, strike the words 'the senate' and insert 'either house'. Line 22, strike 'of all the senators' and add a period after 'vote'. Line 24, strike 'before the house of representatives' and insert 'in joint session assembled'. Line 26, strike the last word in the line 'of' and on line 1, page 5, strike 'the house of representatives' and insert 'in joint session assembled'."

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves adoption of his proposed amendment to Section 13. Is there a second to the motion?

SUNDBORG: Yes, I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg seconds the motion. May we have it read again rather slowly.

(The Chief Clerk reread the proposed amendment.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may ask a question.

JOHNSON: I presume you would tell us anyway, Mr. Buckalew, but what is the purpose of this amendment?

BUCKALEW: I think it's quite clear. What I have done by this amendment, I have provided an impeachment can be brought in either house. The impeachment can be brought in the senate and brought in the house of representatives on a two-thirds vote. Impeachment trial is conducted by both houses in joint session assembled. Now this Section 13 provides -- and I don't know why -- that the charge shall be brought in the senate and the trial shall be in the house of representatives. Now I don't know what the thinking of the Committee was on that, but it seems to me that impeachment is such a serious matter, and if either house had any evidence, that that house ought to vote on it and that house ought to be able to get the business started. If the senate knows anything, well, they can bring the charges and then both houses can get together and try whomever they have got to try. I think you should consider that impeachment is not like a criminal trial; there is no imprisonment or anything, it just provides a method of getting rid of a corrupt official. If an official is corrupt I'd like to see the way made easy to get rid of him, and the way to do it is to provide that the charges can be brought in either house, such as I have done. Now it seems to me that the senate, according to this article here, the senators have to be 25 years of age, and I think the members of the house have to be 21, and if they were thinking of a judicial proceedings, it looks to me like they would have had the charges brought in the house and the trial in the senate. After all, they are older and are supposed to be more mature. I think my amendment is logical, and I think my amendment provides an easy and speedy removal of corrupt officers, and, at the same time it provides enough protection, and it has to be by two-thirds vote of all the members in joint session assembled. They have got the added protection of having a superior court judge there to see that is is a regular trial.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I was a little curious about this article in its original form because of the reversal of the procedure, but now isn't it a little odd to have the same people that bring the accusation sit in judgment? And that's what you have here, isn't it? That is, a part of the jury would be the people who brought the charges, isn't that right?

BUCKALEW: May I answer that question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may answer the question, if you wish.

BUCKALEW: I think we ought to be realistic about it. An impeachment thing, noise is going on in both houses and you're not going to have any, what you call divorcement, from the prosecutor, and it just doesn't exist in an impeachment trial. It is an unrealistic attitude, I think. I think this amendment has real merit for the reason that a corrupt officer can be hit with either house, and I think that one house, particularly the senate, could protect a corrupt officer, and the senate might be closer to the executive, and they might be trying to get at one of the executive officers, and if the house doesn't have enough to carry it, then during the trial he would probably be acquitted. But the beauty of this amendment is that the official is going to know that either house can bring it. What he'll probably do is resign and go to Seattle.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, this is one of the sections in which I do not concur, and I have an amendment to present, but Mr. Buckalew was quicker on his feet. When this arrangement was first read into the proposal having the impeachment start in the senate, one of the statements made in the Committee was that it would be better to have the proceedings started by the senate for the simple reason that the members of the house were brand new and might get off on a tangent, or just not too wise in all the ways. So when they thought they would have the procedure start in the senate, I too, thought it should be heard in joint session, and our consultants told us that that was not very good for the reason that the people who were bringing the impeachment were also sitting as judges. I would like to have my amendment considered, too, and I'm wondering if I could get Mr. Buckalew and take a two-minute recess and perhaps talk over this with Mr. Buckalew.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for about three minutes. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I would like a few minutes before we recess. Of course, I have all the objections to the amendment that have been presented, and more, but I would like to point out that this same subject was considered in two committees, in the Legislative and one on the Executive Branch, and they came out with practically the same thing, except that the two houses are reversed: the charges are made in one instead of the other, and the other house sits in judgment. Now those two committees gave this quite a bit of consideration then, and they had the advantages of listening to experts and having a thorough researching on it from other constitutions and books that were available, and in spite of my admiration of Mr. Buckalew's legal knowledge and his good judgment, I still would have to go along with these two committee reports.

SWEENEY: I still want a few minutes' recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for about three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, during the recess I got together with some of the members on the Committee, and I'd like to ask unanimous consent to withdraw my proposal on the understanding that Mr. McCutcheon will introduce a proposal I just looked at.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection?

HINCKEL: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I just don't like this more or less collusion that's going on. I think the original committee proposal is a better proposal than anything that is about to be offered, and I don't think the proposal has been properly explained. Now if Mr.

McCutcheon will first explain the committee proposal as we discussed it in Committee, and then if he wants to go ahead and submit another proposal, why, I'll go along with it, but I think the committee proposal should be at least given a fair shake and fair explanation. We have had the unique distinction of having our one dissenting member offer the explanation so far on the committee proposal.

BUCKALEW: Now, Mr. President, before we go any further, I'm going to take exception to Mr. Hinckel's remark about collusion. I don't even know what the word means. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Buckalew, objection has been heard to your being able to withdraw your amendment. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I just want to say that if Mr. McCutcheon is going to have an opportunity to explain his amendment before the withdrawal of Mr. Buckalew's, then I'll expect to have the same opportunity to present mine for consideration before Mr. Buckalew's is withdrawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I believe that in this circumstance it is proper that the Chairman of the Committee explain the reason for having the section in the first place. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: When I think of the number of times that we have missed the boat on amendments because the committee has not explained the proposition before we've had amendments, and I wish we could follow the whole procedure before we have any amendments on a section, ask the committee if they have an explanation of it. I think we could head off an awful lot of amendments that are unnecessary, or we would have an intelligent grasp of the committee's viewpoints, and then be able to see the amendments in that light, and I wish we could follow that procedure. Here we are clear to the end of the discussion and now we ask the committee chairman to give an explanation of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think for the record that I should state that I was the one that put Mr. McCutcheon on the spot, he didn't know anything about it. I sort of left him in the barrel with a bunch of tigers, but he didn't have anything to do with this. This was my idea.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it is not my intention to offer an amendment to our article, --

SWEENEY: Then I'll withdraw my objection.

MCCUTCHEON: I will give the majority Committee thinking with respect to the article the way we have developed it. From time honored fashion, which stems from probably beyond the history of the United States, is that the charges shall arise in an impeachment proceeding in a lower house and be tried in a so called house of aristocrats, or lords, or senators, if you please, the feeling being that the upper house represents the upper crust of society. In this particular instance, it has been the feeling of the Committee that the charges might arise in the senate because the charges that will be presented by the senate may be leavened by the fact that only half of the senators have been elected at this time. So there could be no irresponsibility of the new house in the event it was a complete turnover of personnel or legislators, and that if the charges had sufficient merit, they should be tried before the new house, which is the house that was last completely responsible to the will of the people. In other words, if there is merit in the charges presented by the senate, then certainly the new representatives, who are the last ones who have responded in the largest group to the will of the people, the most of the people, if they find the executive has been culpable of the crimes he has been indicted for, then let him be thrown out. If he were tried before the senate on the charges by the house, the charge might be hurled at the house members that they are brand new, they know nothing of the problem, and that in this particular instance they may be operating on a strictly political basis. But on the other hand, with half of the senators at least held over, that certainly will have a leavening effect on the judgment of the senate in bringing the charges, but if those charges can be sustained in a brand new house, which may not have any political alliance but is the last group most completely responsible to the will of the people, then certainly it appears to us, or appeared to the majority of our group, that that was the fairest method of considering an impeachment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, did you wish to be heard for reasons of entering a minority report?

SWEENEY: Mr. President, my statement a few moments ago concerning an amendment which Mr. McCutcheon, I thought, was going to introduce, and I figured if he was going to speak on that, I wanted to speak on the amendment I wanted to put in. In one breath Mr. McCutcheon has stated the "irresponsibility" of the lower house, and for that reason he wants the charges brought in the senate, yet he would have those "irresponsible" house members make the final decision in an impeachment. I believe -- and I don't care if it's 150 years old or 200 years old -- I believe the system that has been in practice is the system to follow, and I would like to reverse the procedure so that it will be the same as that in the Judiciary Committee, which would be to bring the impeachment in the house and to have it heard in the senate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us Mr. Buckalew's proposed amendment to Section 13.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, before we barrel-roll this thing, I'd like an opportunity to make a few remarks on it. I feel that my amendment has merit, and I feel that although it might be historically different than what is used in the United States Congress, that it protects the people of Alaska more fully than any other impeachment procedure that we now have. There is no opportunity for a public officer to hide behind one house, because if either house has evidence and it develops that the evidence is well-founded, then it takes a two-thirds vote. And I think that even members of the house are not as young as everyone around here would think they are. I mean when it comes to presenting an impeachment charge, I think that either house will see that there is good and sufficient evidence. And I believe that this amendment will protect the public in that it will insure to the people that if there is evidence we will know that both houses will hear it and that there won't be any chance for either the senate or the house to suppress evidence, because the way the article is drawn now the senate -- I don't understand the logic of that, and I heard Mr. McCutcheon -- the senate can protect anybody. Under my amendment nobody is going to be protected, except by the two-thirds vote, and then at the trial it's going to have to be by majority of two-thirds of the houses in joint session assembled. I think it has merit, and I ask you all to support it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, could I ask Mr. Buckalew a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Two questions, in fact. You're assuming, of course, that there will be a house of at least 40 members, are you in this, at such a trial?

BUCKALEW: Well, that's according to the articles I have seen, that's my assumption.

BARR: Then if the house initiated this impeachment and they sat in judgment with joint session with the senate, and the senate didn't agree with the impeachment proceedings or the accusation, but the house had 40 members and could make a two-thirds majority, then the house would be initiating the proceedings and the house would be sitting in judgment and the house would make the judgment in spite of the senate.

BUCKALEW: If the house voted 40 to zero, I think he should be impeached.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by this Convention?"

LONDBORG: May we have it read again, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk read the amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by this Convention?" Will the Chief Clerk please call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 6 - Buckalew, V. Fischer, Hurley, Kilcher, Sundborg, White.

Nays: 44 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Collins, R. Rivers, Robertson, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 6 ayes, 44 nays, and 5 absent.

1717

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, you may present your amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mrs. Sweeney.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, line 21, delete 'senate' and insert 'house of representatives'. Line 22, delete 'senators' and insert 'representatives'. Line 24 delete 'house of representatives' and insert 'senate'. And page 5, line 1, delete 'house of representatives' and insert 'senate'.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Objection is heard.

HARRIS: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris seconds the motion. Now just where does that differ from the last amendment, Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: The impeachment arises now in the house and is heard by the senate rather than in joint session. This is the general practice now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, point of information. This is practically, in substance, it is the same as the recommendation of the Executive Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I understand that the Executive Committee had not come out with a recommendation one way or the other.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: On our article in the Executive, we discussed impeachment, but we left that to the Legislative, we showed no impeachment proceedings.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: May I ask Mr. Victor Rivers to tell us what plan they did consider?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers would you care to answer Mrs. Sweeney's question?

SWEENEY: It's the same plan that I presented, practically.

V. RIVERS: I would like to discuss the amendment. I would speak to the amendment at the present time. I feel that this puts it back in the position where you have the older and more mature body making the final decision. I noted with some interest the statements in regard to Mr. Buckalew's amendment that the senate would "protect" somebody. I don't think members of either house are interested in protecting somebody who is not properly performing their duties and who should be subject to impeachment under whatever grounds might be established. This section establishes no special grounds; they shall be established by the legislature. What impresses me most is that I wonder what would be the effect upon the Congress that is going to approve this constitution if they saw that in the smallest body of the legislature we brought the impeachment proceedings and the motion originated, and then the trial was conducted in the largest body consisting of the youngest members with the least experience. It give me considerable number of qualms to think of what they would think when they saw our actions in this manner. I don't think they would follow or agree with the reasoning presented for the section as it stands now. I know I personally do not. I don't feel though, with other members of the floor who have spoken that there would be any tendency of any large group of people like that to protect any malfeasance or misfeasance in office. It seems to me that either body would be equally honest in approaching the problem. The question is where the final judgment should lay, rather than one of where there would be the least or most protection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I'd like to apologize for making a misstatement. This matter was considered at great length in the Executive Committee, and I had forgotten that we had finally left it out and left it up to the Legislative, but I don't mind stating that it was general sentiment, I believe, at that time that it should be initiated in the lower house, the proceedings, and tried in the senate. At the present moment I'm not leaning either way very much, as long as it's left to the two separate houses.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: Mr. President, I would like to address a question to Mr. Rivers, if there is no objection, to the statement he just made. I had been wondering about this article, in that the grounds for impeachment weren't specified here, and I believe you stated that if they are not specified here that means that the legislature can specify?

V. RIVERS: That would be my understanding of it. Impeachment proceedings carry with it disgrace and so forth, but no punishment penalties. The article here leaves it open for the judiciary to go ahead and try them on any criminal action which they might have actually been guilty of. This impeachment is merely a manner of removing them from office for malfeasance or misfeance in office, and I assume that would be the grounds. Others, perhaps, may be better informed on that than I am.

EMBERG: I would like to have that clear, if we are setting up procedure here for impeachment, that we would require a constitutional statement of grounds, or whether it is perfectly proper to leave that to the legislature.

V. RIVERS: I'd like to answer your question in just one further degree. Most of the state constitutions do not set up the removal of all civil officers by impeachment as is done here. It is generally limited to the principal elective and appointive officers, generally the governor, the lieutenant governor, and various other elective department and appointive department heads. The principal officers are the ones that they generally limit impeachment to. The grounds in most cases are not stated as they are here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: In partial answer to Mr. Emberg's commentary here it states on lines 22 and 23 "Such motion , referring back to the motion for impeachment, shall list fully the basis for the proceeding". In other words, they have to recite the facts that they are predicating their impeachment action on.

EMBERG: I understand that, but I was wondering --

MCCUTCHEON: Do you feel that it is necessary that the specific grounds should be established in the constitution?

EMBERG: I was just wondering whether we would be in a legally better position if we did specify the grounds, such as malfeasance and misfeance in office rather than leaving it blank, or whether it would be perfectly proper to let the legislature write that. We're setting up a very serious article. I wonder if we should leave this blank. There is no specification of charges other than what the statement that they shall be given notice of cause whenever they are served on them. That doesn't seem to be much protection for the individual.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I'd like to ask Mr. McCutcheon a question. He says in Section 13 the trial of such motion shall list fully the basis for the proceeding, and then in Section 14 on the joint address -- removal for joint address -- it says, "may be removed for cause which need not be sufficient ground for impeachment". What is the distinction, if you can make one, between "ground for impeachment", which are set forth, and then in Section 14 they say, "which need not be sufficient ground for impeachment"?

HARRIS: Point of order, Mr. President. Isn't the question before the house is whether they will be tried in the senate or tried in the house, instead of what grounds they are being tried on?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's correct, Mr. Harris, but then it might affect -- Mr. Emberg seriously questions that particular question.

EMBERG: I seriously question it, but I think it should be brought up one at a time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I think I have one argument here in favor of the section as it is, namely, that two-thirds of the senate is 14 members, and two-thirds of the house, as it is now assumed to be, is 27 members. Now in view of the fact also that the senate has a longer tenure, it can be better acquainted with the official in question: and there is also this advantage, that only 14 persons will have to be in on the facts, if the facts have to be divulged before these 14 persons; and in case the grounds are found to be not sufficient for the motion to be carried, and it only involves 14 persons, and 14 persons that have had longer legislative standing. It will be less grave a case than as if 27 persons had been involved in the motion should it not carry.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The degree of this amendment opens this whole section to any type of discussion. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I'm opposed to the amendment, and I intend to vote against it and to vote against all amendments that are opposite of that in the Committee, unless in some point the committee report is harmful to the constitution. We're going over so many of these things merely for the purpose of change. I can't go along with the maker of the amendment or with anyone who has spoken or will speak, using as their only basis that the senate is older and more mature. Good old Sam Rayburn in the federal Congress, or if you are a Republican, look at Martin in the federal Congress and I have seen some very callow and immature men in our Territorial senate, and I have seen some very mature men in the house of representatives, and vice versa; so that's no argument. I believe that if the Committee here felt that there was sufficient grounds to change it over here, I think that the Committee should be upheld, and if they feel that the house of representatives is the more representative body and that 40 of them will give a better trial than 20, then I'm with the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to ask one question of Mr. Rivers. What particular distinction do you see between the report as the Committee brought it out and the other method of having it originate in the house and be tried in the senate, other than that of common or general practice?

V. RIVERS: Well. I don't see much difference, except for the matter of common and general practice. I noted the other day that in regard to the discussion of the grand jury, the grand jury was the indicting body, and they had, at the present time, under Alaska statute, 23 members, and they tried the case and final action before the judge and the members of a 12-member jury. You have the same pattern there and of course back in England you had the same pattern that the amendment asks that we follow here, and we have it in practically all the other states, and we are just reversing the procedure. And while I shouldn't perhaps have said that the youngest members lie in the house, at least the requirements call for the youngest members. It allows a certain differential age limit to those running for the house, but it doesn't necessarily imply that they will be younger or will be less experienced. But it perhaps is true that the preponderance, the greater majority of that body will be somewhat younger, and somewhat less experienced than the older body. Those are the answers that I have, and those are all.

MCNEES: Do you not think then that the Committee thinking with regard to the value of the house reflecting more recently that of the electorate, that that factor might outweigh that of traditional thinking?

V. RIVERS: I would answer that by saying that without a question of a doubt in my mind, that I could say that I think the matter of appearing before and being elected by the public would have nothing to do whatsoever with the maturity of the judgment of the individuals elected. It would not reflect the maturity of the judgment of the public in the matter regarding the misfeasance and malfeasance of some public officer in office. It seems to me to be the diametrically opposite approach to what it should be to render the best justice.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 18 - Armstrong, Boswell, Cross, Gray, Harris, Johnson, King, Laws, Londborg, Metcalf, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh.

Nays: 32 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Collins, R. Rivers, Robertson, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

BARR: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr asks that his vote be changed to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 18 ayes, 32 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, line 21, beginning with the words 'senate' delete the balance of the line, and on line 22, up to the period, insert in lieu the following: 'either house and shall be by two-thirds vote of all the members of such house'. Page 4, line 21, strike 'of representatives' and insert before the word 'house' the word 'other'. Page 5, line 1, strike the words 'of representatives' and insert in lieu thereof 'hearing the matter'."

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: Isn't that substantially the same substance?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair could not answer that because the Chair wasn't able to follow the proposed amendment.

BUCKALEW: I'll answer that, if you care, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Proceed, Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: This provides for impeachment being brought in either house and tried in the opposite house, so it's materially different than the first amendment. I move its adoption, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves adoption of his proposed amendment.

SUNDBORG: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg seconds the motion. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I think it was pretty clear from the debate we had here on Mrs. Sweeney's motion that there was no feeling very much on either side from the members here. They just felt in one case it was traditional and in the other case they would like to stick by the Committee, they don't care in which house these charges are tried, particularly, but I do think it should be the other house. On Mr. Buckalew's motion I might say that I had started to write out the identical motion here. Let the charges arise in either house just so long as they are tried in the opposite house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I, too, really don't care which house it is originated in or tried in, but I still say that this Committee has studied this matter far more than I have. So I'm going to stick to the committee's report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Someone might be interested in knowing that the consultants, of whom there were several here at the time this article was written, commented very favorably upon this innovation, if you wish to call it that. It met with considerable favor.

BUCKALEW: Did the consultant comment favorably on this proposal, is that what you meant?

HINCKEL: I have no knowledge of what the consultant would have thought of your proposal.

BUCKALEW: That where it originated in either house?

HINCKEL: I have no knowledge of what they might have thought of that, but I do know I have a bad time remembering names, but Mr. Bartley I think it was, examined this committee proposal and commented very favorably on it, and so did at least two others.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer, you may.

(Mr. Fischer spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I remember going before a faculty of long-gray-whiskered fellows, and I talked to them about a deal, and they said "No," and I said "Why", and they said, "We have never done it that way." And I said, "Is that any reason why you shouldn't do it this way?" I don't know why we can't go along with the Committee. It's a good deal, and I'm going to stick with the Committee and continue to do so until I've got good and sufficient reason to change.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all those against by saying "no". The "noes have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, may we have a recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Section 13? If not, the Chair would like to state that perhaps, in line with the suggestion made by Mr. Armstrong, that henceforth it might be well that in all instances where sections come up and it is evident that amendments are going to be made to those sections, that the chairman of the committee be asked at that point to give the committee explanation of the particular section; if it is evident that there aren't going to be amendments to a particular section, it would not be necessary to have the chairman give such an explanation. If that is in line with the feeling and thinking of the delegates, that is the way the Chair will proceed. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I propose to move to strike all of Section 14.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, would you give an explanation for the reason of having Section 14?

MCCUTCHEON: The thinking of the Committee -- and I think in this instance I speak for all of the Committee -- was to the effect that an impeachment proceeding is perhaps a more cumbersome affair than removal by joint address. Impeachment connotes, let us say, high crimes in office. There may be other reasons why a person should be removed from office, and they may not have anything to do with high crimes or the neglect of that office for one reason or the other. They could be for senility or gross negligence, or the person may just be inept in that particular job, they aren't high crimes. It's no crime to be senile because of age; it's no crime to be inept. You may be a criminal in a moral sense of the word if you seek a job not having qualifications to support your application for that job, and it may be that after awhile in office one becomes an alcoholic and becomes negligent because of that. The reason that the Committee felt that there should be something other than impeachment is that removal by joint address does not require the signature of the governor. The legislature can remove from the strong executive arm some person who may not be completely functioning in office but who could not be impeached necessarily because they have not committed some type of a high crime or treason. Consequently, it was the feeling of the Committee that there should be some facility available to the legislature to reach into the Territorial government and remove people who for some reason, other than a high crime, are not fit for office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLE'NTHAL: Mr. President, a question of Mr. McCutcheon. Where did the word "joint address" come from, or the phrase?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, could you answer that question, or could any other member of the Committee?

MCCUTCHEON: Would "concurrent resolution" suit your purpose better?

HELLENTHAL: Well, I would like to know where this came from -if anybody knows?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, I know where it came from.

HELLENTHAL: Where?

MCCUTCHEON: It came from a member of the Legislative Committee.

HELLENTHAL: Did he take it from any source anywhere?

MCCUTCHEON: I believe that it originally came out of the State of Kansas I believe it was in the Kansas Constitution.

HELLENTHAL: Well, that answers my question. Mr. President, I'm inclined to agree with Mr. McLaughlin. (To Mr. McCutcheon): I think you have answered my question. I want to speak just briefly on the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The matter is opened for amendment right now. There is nothing before us. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I ask Mr. McCutcheon a few more questions to clarify this thing?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may, Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. McCutcheon, I'm perturbed about two things in here. One, if Section 13 doesn't state what the ground of the impeachment, the causes of impeachment are, what is a lesser cause which is required to be stated at length in the joint address? Could anything be put in, such as your politics?

MCCUTCHEON: It was not the intention of the Committee that this type of a thing should be used for any political purpose.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I inquire, Mr. McCutcheon, can you think of any circumstance in which the legislature would ever, if Section 14 is approved by the Convention, can you think of any circumstance or any time when the legislature would ever bother to use the impeachment procedure in Section 13 when they can accomplish the same thing with lesser causes, without any cause, under Section 14 by a majority vote of both houses?

MCCUTCHEON: If I recall our article correctly, you can't remove the governor by joint address.

MCLAUGHLIN: But isn't it true that you may remove a civil officer, includes the supreme court and superior court and what concerns me is this, if the Democrats control both houses of the legislature, then by a 51 -- majority vote, they can remove all the Republicans, including the entire constitutional judiciary, and the same thing applies if the Republicans controlled both of the houses. Then they can automatically remove all the constitutional judiciary, every officer of the state, except the governor, isn't that true?

MCCUTCHEON: If you feel that the legislature would be so insincere, and if you challenge the legislature's integrity to that point, then I would suggest that you strike it. We must place our confidence in some fashion.

MCLAUGHLIN: I move to strike Section 14. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

SUNDBORG: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves and Mr. Sundborg seconds the motion to strike Section 14. Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to ask Mr. McLaughlin a question, Mr. President. Any civil officer, does that effect civil service employees?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon?

MCCUTCHEON: Well, I'm afraid that I can only say this -- I would say that it meant anybody working for the State of Alaska, period, outside of the situation here, that is, excepting the governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: How do you fire somebody?

MCCUTCHEON: What does this mean?

HELLENTHAL: It takes a concurrent resolution of both houses of the legislature to fire him?

MCCUTCHEON: It certainly does, if the legislature wants to remove him from office.

HELLENTHAL: If a man becomes a drunk, do you have to drag him through a concurrent resolution of the legislature?

MCCUTCHEON: You are seizing upon the fine interpretation of it. It doesn't mean that.

HERMANN: Mr. President. I rise to a point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I think the two delegates should address the Chair and not each other at such length.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I would like to point out that this is for cause only, and the cause must be stated in joint resolution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Mr. McLaughlin said there were two things about this that bothered him. There are three things that bother me, there is the beginning of it, and the end of it, and everything in between. This is the gosh darndest thing that I ever saw in my life. I know that if there had been such a law as this in the statutes of the Territory of Alaska the head of every department and probably the assistants and several tiers under them in the government would have been removed by the legislature which met in Juneau in 1953, and,

I'm equally certain that the legislature which met in Juneau a year ago would have removed just about to the same extent every officer of that administration. I hesitate to say that this is un-American, because that word has been overworked, but it certainly is un-Alaskan. I think it is unique. I'm sure it does not appear in this form in the Constitution of Kansas or any other state, that by a simple majority vote of both houses of the legislature you can fire any member of the administration. We talk here about setting up a strong executive, and here we are getting back to a thing where the legislature, by a simple majority vote can get rid of any member of the administration. I certainly support the motion to strike Section 14.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, earlier in our meetings here we had discussed the possibilities of two articles conflicting, I think this is one of the cases where they do. I think the article on legislature there is dealing with something that should be handled in the executive article, and is covered in the executive article, Section 14, page 7, if some one would like to look it up. I think it's covered a little more adequately in that section. If you'd like, I could read it to you. It's a short paragraph. It says, "The governor may make such changes in the administrative structure or in the assignment of functions as may, in his judgment, be necessary for efficient administration. These changes shall be set forth in executive orders which shall become effective at the close of the next regular session of the legislature, unless disapproved by a resolution concurred in by a majority of all the members of the legislature meeting jointly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I'd like to address a question to Mr. McNees for a change, since he brought up the fact that it says here they must be removed for cause. What specific cause do you have in mind?

MCNEES: I would say it would be most any cause for which the bringers of the petition would hold themselves liable. In other words if there was just reason to bring action, it could be held providing the vote was secured by joint address.

V. FISCHER: If I may try to insist, I asked for a specific, such as what, for example?

MCNEES: There have been several cited and I can reiterate on those. I would say drunkenness for one. I would say there are other causes short of those where impeachment proceedings would be used that would be equally applicable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I'm really scared of this section. (To Mr. McNeas): Thank you, Mr. McNeas. The standard procedure for removing civil officers is impeachment, when sufficient grounds exist. We have already gone through a section which provides for impeachment. The body showed its faith in the Committee there by not changing anything. In this case we are faced with something that isn't tied down. We have had the example of drunkenness brought up. Drunkenness can be covered by general law: "No alcoholic shall be employed in the services of the State --" (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

V. FISCHER: I'm serious, Mr. President. I think I'm very serious on this. I think employment in the civil service of the State, employment in the judiciary service, which this covers, employment in the legislative service, including legislators in this case, must be acted upon. I'll leave out the legislators, since they can handle their own affairs. But we must deal with those by general law. The standard way is to set up a civil service commission, if the legislature feels it necessary, they prescribe the standards. They can set a maximum age limit and authorize removal for senility. They can authorize removal by the civil service commission on any other grounds, but this kind of authority to the legislature to pass special, personal, individual legislation seems dangerous. I mean, Mr. McLaughlin sort of joking brought up the political aspect, I think it opens it up to mayhem here. And I'm not in the least bit trying to be amusing. I think that it does open the way to removal practically without cause, where general law is sufficient.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I'd just like to say that the "for cause" clause is protected in other parts of the constitution. They could not be removed for their race, creed, color, or religion, as I see it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I'd like to point out that, if I read this section correctly, we can completely upset our judicial system, our independent judiciary, as broad as this section is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, if I may sum up, unless there is some concern that I am not aware of what is happening. There is no cause required to be shown under Section 13. which is the impeachment procedure and most impeachment proceedings, historically, have not been judicial proceedings, they have been political. But I might point out that a lesser cause and under Section 14 it says, a cause which need not be sufficient ground for impeachment. In substance, I'm a Democrat, but I will appreciate if the first state legislature were predominantly Democratic, they could take Judge Cooper's speech of last night, remove the jokes, and then remove all the Republicans from office. As to my attitude on the subject, I did have in here, and I thought it was in bad taste and withdrew it, an amendment providing that in Section 14, line 1, that we would strike the words "the governor" and substitute the word "democrats" and exempt all of them from removal. And I signed it Andrew Jackson McLaughlin. Frankly, this is the spoils system, and I feel that if this were ever approved, that the whole constitution would be repudiated at the polls. You can remove every constitutional officer except the governor. It would be unacceptable to anyone.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I remind Mr. McLaughlin that that is for cause only. I don't think that these fears are justified. I don't see in anyway why you're afraid of it. I just fail to see your argument.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I do not intend to speak against Mr. McLaughlin's amendment, but I would like to state that the Committee had no idea of any of the things that we have been accused of, and our intent was merely to permit some unfortunate person, who was holding office in the state government and who for reasonable cause should be removed, that to permit him to be removed without blemishing his character and his record by impeachment, and that was the intent and the only intent that we had.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.
