Nays: 19 - Barr, Boswell, Cooper, Cross, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Lee, Londborg, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Walsh.

Absent: 5 - Coghill, Collins, H. Fischer, McNealy, Marston.)

CHIEF CLERK: 31 yeas, 19 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rules have not been suspended. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I wonder where they are going to get the members of the board from.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to be offered for Section 9? For Section 10? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Could I ask Mr. Davis a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: In striking those words, "Southeastern, Southcentral", etc., in Section 7, I notice the same words over in Section 8. Will it be necessary to strike them there?

DAVIS: No, I am sure it won't. Those remain, Mr. Metcalf, as senate districts. The only change that has been made is in the section which we struck. They were the only districts which were entitled to assured senate representation. That is the only effect of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: May I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

AWES: In Section 8, these districts are mentioned, "Southeastern, Southcentral", etc., where are they defined?

HELLENTHAL: They are defined in the Schedule, Section 2 of the Schedule, where it says, "A. Southeastern", composed of Election Districts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6; then it goes on to "E. South-central", composed of Election Districts 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14, and the same for the senate districts, and the last one which is the "Northwestern 21, 22, 23 and 24".

AWES: Oh, I see. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Point of inquiry. Was that amendment carried putting the word "partisan" before "political"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, that was adopted, Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: The same expression appears in Section 9.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is where it was adopted, Mr. Stewart, line 17, Section 9. Are there proposed amendments for Section 10? For Section 11? For Section 12? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I think I understand the various explanation they have given here of what they mean by Article XIV, actually, as far as I can understand Section 2 of Committee Proposal No. 14 -- I admit that was very confusing to me for a while -- I would like to ask, have these A, B, C, D, etc. been carefully checked out by someone? They could lead to a terrible injustice if they have not been properly checked out to see what the senatorial representation is coming out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I might say that the breakdown as to who gets a two-year term and what district gets a four-year term was prepared by the Apportionment Committee. These figures, I think, have been checked time and again by the Apportionment Committee and Style and Drafting. We have checked, double checked, and triple checked them.

HELLENTHAL: We hope the members will all do it, too, because it would be catastrophic were there to be an error.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Maybe it should be mentioned for the record that it was determined by the toss of a coin which districts would get the two-year and which would get the four-year terms to start with.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, as a matter of information, I would like to have the Chief Clerk read back the motion that Mr. Taylor made a few moments ago with respect to lines 16 and 17, Section 8, a moment ago.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was it not Section 9?

MCCUTCHEON: Section 9, I beg your pardon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed motion.

CHIEF CLERK: For the suspension of the rules?

MCCUTCHEON: Read the motion Mr. Taylor made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor never had an opportunity to move for the adoption of his amendment, it was on the suspension of the rules.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. Taylor made a motion and I would like to hear it read.

CHIEF CLERK: Well, I don't take them literally. I just put down that he moved for the suspension of the rules.

TAYLOR: I believe my motion was for the suspension of the rules and adoption of the amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: He made a compound motion, Mr. President, and you didn't rule it out of order.

CHIEF CLERK: When he called the question --

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair never heard Mr. Taylor use the words "and adoption of the amendment".

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, could the body be at ease for a moment or two?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The body will be at ease for a moment. The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to state that in relation to Mr. McCutcheon's point of order, that the stenotypist's record shows that Mr. Taylor moved a suspension of the rules and also asked for the adoption of the amendment. The Chair did not evidently hear Mr. Taylor make the compound motion and stated the question as being, "Shall the rules be suspended?" Mr. McCutcheon, do you rise to your point of order?

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, inasmuch as the motion was incorrectly put and since it was a compound motion, I think that we should have opportunity to vote on the suspension of the rules individually as against the adoption of the amendment. I am convinced that there are a number of people here who would move to suspend the rules. I'm not necessarily concerned that they would move to adopt the amendment, but, in all fairness, I think we should have that try.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon's point of order, so long as it has been raised, is a valid point of order. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: How long do we have to raise these points of order with regard to compound motions?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is a question too, Mr. Hellenthal, whether you can go back after business has been done and raise the point of order. Of course, it went back to the record. The record showed at that time the Chair was in error. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I will renew my motion for suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Just a suspension of the rules, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: That is all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves that the rules be suspended in order that he might offer his proposed amendment to Section 9, which would be deletion of the last sentence in Section 9. Is there a second to the motion?

MCCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon seconds the motion.

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended in order that Mr. Taylor might offer his proposed amendment.

EMBERG: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Barr, Buckalew, Cross, Hinckel, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, Stewart, Walsh.

Absent: 5 - Coghill, Collins, H. Fischer, McNealy, Marston.)

HURLEY: I would like to change my vote from "no" to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley would like to change his vote from "no" to "yes".

HARRIS: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote from "no" to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris changes his vote from "no" to "yes".

LONDBORG: I will change my vote from "yes" to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg changes his vote from "yes" to "no".

COOPER: I will change my vote from "no" to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 37 yeas, 13 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the rules have been suspended. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Now I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Doogan, are you seconding the motion?

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

POULSEN: I object.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Knight. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would like to ask Mr. Taylor a question. I was swayed by Mr. Taylor's persuasive argument. I had already made up my mind that the word "nonpartisan" should be included in this act. We had a debate the other night and Mr. Taylor on a very close question gave me great consolation because he got up and made a little speech and said that every delegate here, when they came to this group, took an oath that they would be nonpartisan in the conduct of their deliberations here, and I think some of you will remember that, and doubtless Mr. Taylor remembers it. Mr. Taylor, where did you find that in the act?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there discussion of this proposed motion? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I hope at this point you are not going to turn down your good old Style and Drafting Committee. This sentence is one of the proudest productions of our Committee. We had help in drafting it, not only of all of the members of our own Committee, but of Mr. Hellenthal's Committee, and further help on the floor tonight from Mr. Barr who wrote in the word "partisan"; and I think there may be something worse than this in the constitution up to date, but I can't tell you where it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

HELLENTHAL: Can I be heard again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann had been trying to get the floor. Mr. Hellenthal. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I don't want to dispute Mr. Sundborg's statement that every member of Style and Drafting had something to do with that. I did not and I would certainly blush all over the country if I thought that anything that I had anything to do with that was that bad as a sentence was going into the constitution of the State of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Since the Style and Drafting board has been unanimously covered and charged and blamed for this amendment. Mr. President, I might point out that, at the time it was adopted, the only reason I consented to it was that I presumed under the "55-Idiot Rule" the Convention would promptly knock it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, to get on a little more serious vein, I will agree that in Section 8 "Appointments shall be made without regard to political affiliation" -- I think that is a very fair and honest way to approach a design of a board that is as important as this board will be to the future of Alaska. Such a board will probably resolve some of the very questions that we have spent some time, and there have been some heated discussions, privately at least, in attempting to resolve, and one that this body has finally resolved by eliminating four or five words from our constitution with respect to districts. At some future date, this board will have these very things to consider again and properly so, and properly so their decision should not be predicated upon any necessary partisan politics. The thing that I find it difficult to believe, though, is that one sentence in our constitution, if those people decided that they were going to have partisan politics enter their consideration, that this one sentence here would offer a Boy Scout's oath of honor to prevent their mind from straying to partisan consideration, and that is the only argument I have to offer, that it is difficult to police the mind, and, if the intention of politics enters into a person's mind and they are so swayed, you certainly can't rule it out with a simple sentence of this nature. I think it is a frivolous inclusion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to close.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you closing, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I'll close.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, just to intrude for a moment, Mr. Taylor, I would like to call attention to the fact that for several weeks. for a couple of months that I know of, various members of the Convention have been seeking to persuade the sportsmen that it was rather futile to work into the Convention any guarantee of nonpartisanship or the absence of political activity, and for that reason, I am especially pleased, myself, to see this sentence attract the notice it has this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, this is going to hurt me deeply. I finally had an amendment adopted here tonight. (Laughter) I am even going to vote for Mr. Taylor's amendment which will eliminate mine. I, too, agree that it is absolutely impossible to police anyone's mind, tell them how they are going to think. You might control their actions but not their mind, and I think that this is entirely unnecessary and just a little bit ridiculous in the constitution.

TAYLOR: I will waive closing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to be proposed for Section 9? Section 10? Section 11? Are there amendments for Section 12? For Section 13? For Section 14? If not, are there amendments for Section 1? Are there other amendments to be offered to Article No. VI, the legislative apportionment article? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Could we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to Section 1 or 2? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, we have been through it on one occasion for purpose of amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are going through to see if there are any other amendments. Our procedure has been to go through everything twice, Mr. McCutcheon, to give them the opportunity. Are there amendments to Section 3 or 4? To 5 or 6? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, there is an amendment on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment that would be offered by Mr. Kilcher.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, line 11, add the following: 'Districts that have in this manner lost their representation shall regain it when in the next census they meet the requirements under which they were originally established.'"

ROBERTSON: Please reread it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk reread the amendment.)

COOPER: Mr. President, point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

COOPER: That means that 100 years from this date that an election district would be re-established on 1,362 people, and I believe that is entirely out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper, there is no point of order there. Mr. Kilcher has to move for a suspension of the rules first in order to present the amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I feel that in view of Mr. Cooper's broaching the subject --

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: We have adhered quite strictly to the rules on these matters and I submit that any remarks whatsoever other than " I move for"--

PRESIDENT EGAN: The only statement that can be entertained is a motion to suspend the rules. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to speak on a point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: My point of order is that Mr. Cooper was out of order in discussing an amendment when it was read for introduction, and I maintain that because of the fact that Mr. Cooper spoke out of order that it would be fair if I were given permission -- to get unanimous consent -- to answer one thing Mr. Cooper mentioned to offset its possible influence on the unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher asks unanimous consent that he be allowed to answer Mr. Cooper's statement. Is there objection? Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I raise objection on this point, that the Chair ruled Mr. Cooper out of order. I have no objection to Mr. Kilcher making any statement that concerns this, but I do object to his predicating his remarks on the basis that Mr. Cooper was out of order and that the Chair did not rule him out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. Is there objection to Mr. Kilcher making his statement?

MCCUTCHEON: No, I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. Cooper, the Chief Clerk will read the amendment again and you will see that there is no number of inhabitants mentioned and the manner in which they lose it is mentioned, and if they meet the specifications -- the specification is the major fraction, Mr. Cooper, and you are conversant with that. Do you agree? If they meet the specifications of the major fraction, that would reestablish them. That major fraction in 100 years may be a half million people, not 1,300.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I rise to a point of order, then, on this point, that Section 5 of line 11 says that "the new district shall be determined as provided in Section 4 of this article", which refers to exactly what Mr. Kilcher is trying to say.

KILCHER: Section 4 talks about a major fraction.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, do you move a suspension of the rules? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I think there is a valid point of order here. The Clerk was asked to read a motion on which Mr. Kilcher's suspension of the rules was to be sought. If there is any occasion for arguing it or discussing it, that will come after the suspension has been granted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. The Convention will be at recess while the Rules Committee decides the question.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher, do you ask for the suspension of the rules?

KILCHER: Mr. President, I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves a suspension of the rules. Is there a second to the motion?

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann seconds the motion. The question is. "Shall the rules be suspended in order that Mr. Kilcher might introduce this amendment?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 31 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 17 - Armstrong, Boswell, Cross, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, King, Knight, McNealy, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, R. Rivers, Sweeney, Taylor, White.

Absent: 7 - Coghill, Collins, H. Fischer, Laws, Marston, Stewart, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 31 yeas, 17 nays, and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rules have not been suspended. Are there other amendments for Article No. VI, the article on legislative apportionment? The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I might say first that the several amendments which have been made here on the floor to this article will not require it being recommitted to Style and Drafting. They have all been cleared with Style and Drafting and are acceptable to us. Then, I would like to say I have not desired to arrogate to myself the honor here of moving these various articles along in position for their final adoption, and I think it would be altogether fitting if Mr. Hellenthal, as the Chairman of the Committee on Apportionment, would make the appropriate motion to advance this article, if he desires to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I probably will fall on my face doing that because I lack that political finesse. However, I move that the article on apportionment be considered as a part of the constitution. Is that the proper motion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That the rules be suspended, and the article be advanced to third reading and read the third time by title only and placed on final passage.

HELLENTHAL: I so move. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal so moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended as to Article No. VI, article on legislative apportionment, that the article be advanced to third reading, read the third time by title only, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended, and Article No. VI is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will read the title of the article.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article VI, Legislative Apportionment".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any debate? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to say a few words on this article. Mr.

President. It seems to me that we have arrived at a point in this Convention when we must take a little bit of stock of our position. We have adopted now an article on apportionment which places approximately 60 per cent of the representation in the rural areas in the senate, representing 25 per cent of the population. We have placed 65 per cent of the representation in the rural areas representing 25 per cent of the population. It seems to me there should be and there was an intent in this body that we would try and gear our population transition in the house and half-way in the senate. We have not now done that. It seems to me this is supposed to be a democratic process. As I see this article now, as we go further and further along, it will be the darkest blot on this constitution that we have. It will be the only bad blot that I see to date and to my way of thinking, the article is a very undemocratic one, and I hope that it will work a lot better than it appears to me now. I think that actually the intent of this committee and this body was clearly stated to everyone before the hearings and after, and tonight we have reversed the substance matter to where that article no longer exists.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further debate? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I am glad to have this opportunity to say some of the arguments that I would have said in my amendment that did not go through a minute ago. They apply, however, to the whole article, and in part will answer the speaker who has spoken ahead of me. In the discussion of this article tonight and weeks ago, when it was in first reading, the word "rotten borough" had been used frequently. It has been used without much thought to what the original rotten borough is. The English rotten borough is a feudal entity that is not subject to any constitutional amendment. England has no constitution. It is unfair to compare any part of America with England. The English rotten borough dates back into the Middle Ages. Ours only dates back to today. We have a constitution, I hope, and we will probably have other constitutional conventions; if not conventions, we'll have amendments to it. If any situation ever arises that becomes lopsided, grossly unfair, I trust that the people as a whole will recognize that and recognize it in time and they are given the means to change it. I disagree fully with Mr. Rivers that this article is undemocratic. This article is quite democratic, much more democratic than a lot of other articles in other constitutions we have studied. In this process, I think that as far as the urban populations are concerned, the population idea is well taken care of in this article right now in 1956 -- much more so in 1980. Both houses in my opinion are largely based on population. The two senators that are chosen at large in the four senatorial districts, they are based on population; they are only based on area in as far as they come from four areas, but within these four large areas they are based on population. Before long the house districts will all be based on population. They will be extinguished, one after the other, as the small ones will be overshadowed by the development of urbanization. The larger the towns, the more will they get representatives in the house, which is fair enough; but the concession made in the senate to population by the fact that two senators are chosen at large, that concession made to population in the house, that always has been based on area -- that concession is much greater than the equivalent concession in the house of representatives to area. That is what my amendment a while ago was going to come in. The concession made in the house of representatives in this article, and mind you, I like the article as it is now -- I would like it better if it had been the other way -- the concession that is made to area in the house of representatives is very small, much smaller than the one made to population in the senate. So I can't see how urban thinking could disagree with this article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I guess Alaska has grown up, because we are starting out on the conflict between the urbanites on the one hand and the ruralites on the other, and I hope that, as we become a state and go forward, that we will always use the good sound judgment that this body has used in resolving this conflict. I move the adoption of the article, that it be made a part of Alaska's constitution.

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further debate? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would just like to say that in reference to the term "rotten borough", I have also had the feeling that rotten boroughs are made by people, not by apportionment plans, not by areas, or anything else. Any plan is what the people make it, and the effect of it is determined by what the people do with it. I have full faith that the people of Alaska will use this plan in the manner which it was developed here and that it will work.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further debate, the question is, "Shall Article VI, the legislative apportionment article, be adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 45 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - McCutcheon, Nolan, Poulsen, V. Rivers, Robertson.

Absent: 5 - Coghill, Collins, H. Fischer, Marston, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 45 yeas, 5 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it, and Article VI, the article on legislative apportionment, has become a part of Alaska's state constitution. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I request unanimous consent for permission to revert to the business of introduction of resolutions. I have a resolution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hilscher, the Convention will revert to the order of business of introduction of resolutions. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed resolution.

(The Chief Clerk read a resolution introduced by delegates Doogan, Emberg, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Riley, Stewart, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest, White, and Wien designating Mr. George H. Lehleitner of New Orleans, Louisiana an honorary member of the Convention.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I ask unanimous consent for the passage and acceptance of this resolution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher asks unanimous consent for the passage and acceptance of the resolution. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I ask unanimous consent also for the inclusion of all the delegates as the cosponsors of this resolution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent that all the delegates be included as cosponsors of the resolution. Is there objection?

HILSCHER: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Hilscher asks unanimous consent that this expression contained in this resolution be adopted. Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Do you have any objection to change the word "Tennessee" to "Alaska" plan?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the resolution will become a part of the journal. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I rise to a point of inquiry. Here in this Article VI it refers to Sections 1 and 2 of Article XV, which I understand have not yet been formally adopted by the Convention. What is the status of those two?

PRESIDENT EGAN: They have not been as yet adopted as a part of the constitution, that is correct, Mr. Robertson. If anything would happen that the Article XV in going through the process of final passage would be materially changed, rescinding action could be taken with relation to Article VI. That would be the way to accomplish any necessary change that might possibly show up.

ROBERTSON: I was just wondering, Mr. President, whether or not the adoption of this by references to Article XV necessarily carried the two sections of Article XV?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It does not carry it, no, Mr. Robertson. Is it the wish of the body that we proceed at this time with another order of business? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we adjourn until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention adjourn until 2:00 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Prior to adjournment, Mr. President, I would like to ask unanimous consent that the reconsideration of my vote be carried over until tomorrow, inasmuch as the article has not been brought up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees, it is the understanding of the Chair that that was agreed unanimously last night, that your reconsideration could be held over until any such time that we would have 17/a before us.

MCNEES: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements to be made at this time? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon adjournment at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon adjournment at the rear of the gallery. Are there other committee announcements? If there are no other committee announcements and if there is no objection, the Convention stands adjourned until 2:00 p.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 29, 1956

SIXTY-EIGHTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Reverend Armstrong, could we call upon you to give the daily invocation?

REVEREND ARMSTRONG: Gracious Father, at the beginning of this new week, we thank Thee that we can come together on this day, Thy day, to discuss the business that is important to our future lives. We pray that the decisions made today might spell a forward advance for statehood, for better living, towards a higher way of life for every one of us. We trust in Thee. We thank Thee for the trust Thou hast placed in us. In Christ's name. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk then called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Two absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present and the Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Are there any communications or petitions from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees or of select committees? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Under reports of standing committees, I would like at this time on behalf of the Committee on Ordinances to introduce Proposal No. 17/c, the Tennessee Plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read Committee Proposal No. 17/c for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Schedule."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, in view of the fact that the calendar was completed yesterday, the calendar did not appear on the desks this morning. The Rules Committee anticipated that other measures would be introduced today and, accordingly, I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that Proposal No. 17/c be advanced to second reading for consideration and first place today on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Committee Proposal No. 17/c be placed on the calendar in second reading for consideration at this time. Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered and 17/c will be our first order of business in second reading today. Are there reports of select committees? Are there reports or resolutions to be placed before the body? Is there any other unfinished business? If not, the Chief Clerk may please read Committee Proposal No. 17/c for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk then read Committee Proposal 17/c for the second time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments? Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: I would like to call attention to what I think is a typographical error at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be proper, Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: On page 4, line 10, "Alaska Constitutional Convention by Chapter 46, Session Laws of Alaska, 1945", I think that is "1955".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent that that change be made, Mr. Stewart?

STEWART: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection to that change, it is so ordered. Are there proposed amendments for Section 27? Mr. McNealy, do you have an explanation or statement to make in relation to this?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, there are probably two fundamental matters here: one is whether the Convention is going to adopt the Tennessee Plan ordinance, and second, an almost equally fundamental matter is whether consideration is to be given to the method of primary elections. I do wish to call attention that it was promised to have been ready to distribute by 1:30; it was to be on the desks here. It was a substitution. The only difference in the substitution will be that the dates would be more clearly set out as to direct primary procedure. That is one of the big problems that faces the Convention here that a great many people feel that there should be a direct primary and a great many people feel that, due to the time element, that a party convention system of nominating candidates, and, in addition to that, allowing the independent candidates to file should be adopted. The only difficulty we find with the direct primary is the tight, the very tight schedule that is involved here, if it is possible for it to work out. The Secretary of the Convention has contacted the various clerks of the court, and they say that it is administratively possible to use the direct primary system providing that no one falls down anyplace along the line from the dates of filing until the distribution and counting of the ballots is concerned. And that was the reason the Committee thought of providing this alternate plan of the party convention, because we have discussed this matter and worked on it and considered it from every angle, and the Committee is very fearful of the direct primary nominations. And, for that reason, we definitely felt or knew that we had to put in the party convention system of nominating; in the event that fell down, we would be able to proceed through the party convention. The difficulty with trying it -- there are many things -- of course, that can happen here. There is a possibility, I think, which I think all of the attorneys realize here, which in fact I think everybody realizes here, and that is that on the direct primary there is some little question there about the legality of running for an office which doesn't exist, which of course would be cured at the time the constitution is ratified and the convention held afterward -- the nominations for the office -- if it would cure that one legal technicality there. The other is that I don't think we have too much to fear from this -- about the Director of Finance not cooperating, because all of us who are present here remember, at least in the house of representatives, and very likely the same thing in the senate, that when this Convention bill was passed that there was doubts whether or not the Governor was favorable or not favorable; whether actually there would be the possibility of voting upon the delegates to this Convention since that was about as irregular for the Legislature to do as the adoption of the Tennessee Plan would be for this Convention. However, as we all know there was cooperation on the part of all of the Territorial officials and clerks of the court to make this Convention possible, and from what Mr. Stewart has been able to learn, there will be that same cooperation in regard to the ratification vote of this constitution and, also, to this Tennessee Plan. Now, I just had a note here from the boiler room that the revised Tennessee Plan will be down in about 20 minutes, which will undoubtedly obviate a great deal of amendments to be offered from the floor. We have called in several here who are conversant with election mechanics -- "Dixie" Hall, Clerk of Court, and others, together with the experts -- and there will be a lot of so-called bugs ironed out of 17/c as to the direct primary, and the rest of it will probably remain the same. I do want to call attention to the fact of how close the schedule will run, and I believe these will be mimeographed also and placed on the desks, but, as we all know, the Territorial date for filing of primary candidates and for independent candidates filing for office is on February 1. We won't sign the constitution until February 5. Territorial law requires that these candidates file before February 1 and be certified to the clerks of the court by February 10. It is proposed in this ordinance to advance the filing dates for primary candidates and independent candidates to February 20, which, as we know, is a 20-day jump in time there; and then to allow -- the date for certifying these candidates to the clerk of the court would be advanced to February 25 rather than February 10, and, under the Territorial statutes, all the ballots are required by law to be in the precinct by March 15 because of absentee ballot voting, which I believe allows some 40 days, so the ballots from this Convention must also be in the precinct on March 15. And then, of course, there would be the primary election on April 24. The clerks are then required to certify the primary results to the Director of Finance by June 15, with the deadline for the primary results to be certified from the clerk of court to the Director of Finance by June 25. Now, if the direct primary system did for any reason fail, then the party nominating conventions would have to be held about June 25, or between June 25 and July 15, in order that the results could be certified to the Director of Finance by July 15, which would also be the deadline under Convention system for independent candidates to file because they must be in the hands of the Director of Finance so he would have to certify the names to be printed on the ballots in the elections to be held this fall. And I might state as to printing the ballots that Mr. Hall felt, and I believe it will be required also since the February 1 date has gone by, that any ordinances passed by this Convention together with the ballot on ratifying the constitution will of necessity have to be printed -- caused to be printed by the Secretary of the Convention. There are a great many problems, and your Committee felt that the matter of the direct primary election should be discussed from the floor and the only fault that I find at all is that, in the event that it should fall down, the direct primary, somewhere along the line and not be able to go through, it might give the people a chance to discredit it in light of any party conventions later on. The Committee feels it is strictly a matter for the Convention, and we have done everything possible here to provide the mechanics for a direct primary and, in the alternative, for the party convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry addressed to the Chair. If I should move to strike subsection 1 of Section 28 in order to get the proceedings on the way, would that require a suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it would not because we are in the amending process in second reading.

McLAUGHLIN: Then, Mr. Chairman, I move to strike subsection 1 of Section 28. I might point out, I believe, that that would in effect nullify the whole Tennessee Plan and I so move merely to get it before the Convention. I move to strike subsection 1 of Section 28.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves that subsection 1 of Section 28, that it be deleted from the proposal. Is there a second to the motion?

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is moved and seconded that subsection 1 of Section 28 be deleted from the proposal. The proposed amendment is open for discussion. Is there any discussion on the proposed motion? Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: May we ask Mr. McLaughlin to give a little clearer explanation as to what is involved here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: The explanation is that, if the Convention, in substance, as I understand it, votes yes to strike that section, the Convention then has gone on record that they do not desire the Tennessee Plan, because you have in substance cut the essentials of the plan immediately from the schedule. So that issue, as I understand it, is that if you vote yes, in favor of my amendment, you don't wish the Tennessee Plan. If you vote no, against my amendment, you desire the Tennessee Plan. So, at least the question is presented to the Convention: whether you desire the Tennessee Plan or whether you do not. I present it to the Convention merely because I presume the next question is the question as to the primaries; how it shall be held or how the selection of candidates will be determined, but the first question should be whether or not you favor the Tennessee Plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, it seems to me the issue is clearly outlined and I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion -- Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr President, you mean to say we are going to vote now on whether to have the Tennessee Plan or not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, Mr. Marston, what Mr. McLaughlin said was that it will indicate, if you vote yes on this deletion of this subsection at this time, it would indicate that you do not favor the Tennessee Plan, because it cuts the heart out of this proposed plan. If you vote no, it indicates that the Convention favors some sort of plan such as this.

MARSTON: Are we going to have debate on this question? Well, I think now is the time to do it, not later on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If any person opposes the motion or if he favors the motion, he can debate that motion now.

MARSTON: Mr. President, may I speak now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I have not been selected for this job; I didn't know it could be decided so suddenly. If somebody is going to talk on this and present it, I would like to sit down and listen to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, this does not decide the question. It merely puts before the Convention a motion that would indicate the feeling of the Convention as to whether or not -- because if you adopt this motion as it is presented here, it would probably indicate that the Convention does not favor this sort of plan. So, you have the floor and you can debate this motion.

MARSTON: I wasn't picked to do this job and had no intention to do it, but I don't want to see this time go by without expression from the floor. I think "Sir Galahad" who came here from the South and presented this great program has the right plan. I think it's a terrific story, and I think that it is now or never for statehood and Lehleitner -- the Tennessee Plan is the only course; if we turn that down, then we have wasted our time here. We came here to build a constitution for the great State of Alaska and we can become a state now and not wait forever; it's now or never, and I think the Tennessee Plan is the only course that we can take. That is all I can say. Thank you for the time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? If not the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

Yeas: 0

Nays: 53 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Coghill, R. Rivers.)

CHIEF CLERK: 53 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I haven't consulted with Mr. McNealy on this, but I am trying to get the show on the road. I now move to strike subsection 4 of Section 28 as it appears on page 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves to strike, or delete, from Committee Proposal No. 17/c, subsection 4 of Section 28, page 3.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Victor Rivers. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I make this motion because subsection 4 as it reads will determine the only thing in substance. If you vote for my amendment, it means, in substance, that you will vote against party conventions. You will vote against party conventions because just a cursory reading indicates that it would prohibit party conventions, and then the determination is whether you want to put it on the primary alone; that is, is it to be a primary election? That is my understanding that that would be the result of it. I present it on the floor so that there can be debate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I direct a question or two to the Chairman of the Ordinance Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no objection.

WHITE: Mr. McNealy, in presenting both sections 3 and 4 to the Convention, was it the intention of the Committee that possibly we might allow them both to remain in, or was it the definite intention of the Committee that one or the other would be stricken?

McNEALY: It was the intention of the Committee, and I might state that we felt that it would be almost necessary that Section 4 at least remain in because of the mechanical, the administrative difficulties, and the possible legal difficulties of the direct primary. In answer to that and, as Mr. McLaughlin stated, and he certainly is on the right course of getting this matter before the body for consideration, but in his proposed amendment -- Mr. Chairman, could I ask for a one-minute recess at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, with my usual deliberation, I glanced through the proposal and picked the wrong section to be stricken. I request unanimous consent that my proposed amendment be withdrawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn.

LONDBORG: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg objects to the withdrawing of the proposed amendment.

McLAUGHLIN: If I might explain to Mr. Londborg through the Chair, the amendment that I had presented does not strike at the heart of the problem. The amendment which I propose to substitute for it will strike at the heart of the problem, the determination whether it shall be primary or by convention.

LONDBORG: Mr President, how am I to know whether it strikes at the heart of the problem? As far as I am concerned, I don't know what else you are going to offer.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Londborg, here is what I am going to offer. I am prepared to offer an amendment to strike, commencing on page 2, line 21, after "offices", all wording following the word "offices" to the end of page 2, and all wording commencing on line 1 of page 3, all the way down to the word "then" in line 13.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is objection still heard to Mr. McLaughlin's unanimous consent request?

LONDBORG: I have not withdrawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. McLaughlin?

McLAUGHLIN: I so move.

RILEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was so moved, seconded by Mr. Riley. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to say to Mr. Londborg that if he still thinks he wants to strike, that he can offer the motion that Mr. McLaughlin is attempting to withdraw. It doesn't mean it can't be renewed; it hasn't been voted on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. McLaughlin be allowed to withdraw his proposed amendment?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 45 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 8 - Barr, Boswell, Cooper, Londborg, Reader, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Sweeney.

Absent: 2 - Coghill, R. Rivers.)

CHIEF CLERK: 45 yeas, 8 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it, and the amendment is ordered withdrawn. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike all the words on line 21, page 2, following the word "offices"; and I further move to strike all the words on page 3 commencing with the first word of line 1 down to and including line 13, the word, first word in line 13, "then".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, do you also include in that the capitalization of the word "One", of the "O" in the "One"?

McLAUGHLIN: I also strike the word "One"; everything on page 3 commencing with the first word of line 1 down to and including "then one" on line 13 of page 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

STEWART: I'll second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Stewart. The proposed amendment is open for discussion. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, when I move to strike this, I, in substance, have stricken and am prepared to raise the question of whether or not the primary shall be held on the 24th day of April with qualifying candidates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, as Mr. McLaughlin has said, this would, in effect, strike the primary system, and it seems to me some basic questions arise, and I would like to address a further question to the Chairman of the Ordinance Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White, you may address your question.

WHITE: Mr. McNealy, whether or not the Convention prefers one system over another, it seems to me there are at least three basic considerations in trying to decide whether or not we should strike the primary system. I would wonder what the advice of the Ordinance Committee is as to the practicality as to timing of going through the primary system, first of all; secondly, the power of the Convention to provide a filing date separate from the one already in existence under Territorial law; and thirdly, the power of the Convention to provide that nominations would take place in the primary election at the same time the ordinance was ratified.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, you may answer the question if you wish.

McNEALY: Mr. President, from the outset, the Committee on Ordinances felt that a direct primary system should be had for the nomination of these candidates and we worked from every angle there to provide for a direct primary. We finally ran up against the legal obstacles as well as the administrative obstacles of holding the elections at later dates than were provided by law, and we then dropped the primary plan and wrote only the convention plan into our ordinance. However, there were a number of people, members of this Convention and outside the Convention, that approached the Committee with reference to making every attempt to provide for a direct primary, so a complete and further study was made and we endeavored to get all of the advice we could. As I mentioned before, Mr. Stewart contacted the various clerks of the court and it eventually resolved it down to this, in just a few words: that if everyone, from the candidates filing themselves, if they can get their filings in by February 20, and then if the Director of Finance will accept those, and if he will certify them back to the clerks of the court, and if the ballots can be printed and distributed to all precincts by March 15; in other words, if everyone who comes in contact -- our problem is not only on this Tennessee Plan, the greater problem is here. I grant that because it is a matter of additional ballots as far as the administrative problem is concerned, though you have the same thing to face with ratification of the constitution, or any other ordinances that might come out of this body. But the word that we have from the clerks of the court, at least, and especially from "Dixie" Hall here in Fairbanks that, if every person from the Director of Finance on down to the precinct level will cooperate and there are no slipups any place, then it is administratively possible for a direct primary. If there is a holdup on the part of the Director or clerk of any court or distribution of these by the various commissioners or under the clerks of the court, then it would possibly, in effect, be administratively impossible to work under the direct primary system. I don't know whether I have answered all of Mr. White's questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, that answers part of it. Mr. McNealy, the second part was the opinion of the Committee as to the power of the Convention legally to provide for a separate filing date and legally to provide for the primary election of those candidates at the same time as the ratification is taking place, the ratification of the ordinance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: In answer to that, Mr. President, it goes back to -- I might answer a portion of that, Mr. President, by reading a short citation from a case cited in 59 Southwestern on a subject somewhat similar in covering elections that, "A constitutional convention is not a coordinate branch of the government but is a body of representatives of the people convened only on special occasions and for the purpose of reviving or revising or framing a constitution. The powers it has are usually expressly conferred upon it together with such implied and inherent powers as may be necessary to carry into effect those expressly conferred." The Convention here has an inherent power, and under our enabling act, to take all measures necessary and proper in preparation for the admission of Alaska as a state. However, to enforce any of these, this Convention would have no power by way of a writ of mandamus to force the Director of Finance to do anything, or to force the clerks of the court to do anything, any more than we have the power to force them to cause a vote to be taken upon the ratification of this constitution. The only thing there I can say, Mr. White, is the officials of the Territory and the federal government did cooperate with the calling of the election held for the delegates of this Convention, and that we can only hope that they will furnish the same cooperation in voting, providing the votes and the ballots for voting on the ratification of the constitution together with any ordinances adopted by this Convention. The very serious thought, though, had the Committee thought that had we a 90 per cent chance of being able to elect by a direct primary, we would not have put in an alternative method of the party convention. If there is one slip-up, if they fail to hold the elections in one division, or if it is attacked on the legal question of whether it is possible for people to run for offices which do not exist and which will not exist, then we still have the convention plan left to fall back on and which might, in effect, deter anyone from bringing action. If the convention plan were knocked out, I don't think there would be any elections held on this at all. There is that very grave possibility. The Committee considered, also, and we tried to tie it in so far -- and the revised copy that comes out here on the desks will possibly save a great many amendments on the floor, because we tied it in as closely as possible with the Territorial law; and all of you here who are familiar with the public utility districts and the organizing of them -- we do have a little precedent here in Alaska that it is possible for the courts to order an election which would be similar to this Convention ordering an election. If the people vote to become independent as a public utility district, then the candidates running at the same time, and the five highest number of candidates are elected to office, so they are, in effect, running for an office which does not exist unless the people vote for a public utility district. So we do have that little precedent in Territorial law which we have endeavored to follow as much as possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I would like to make an inquiry of the Chair and then ask a question of Mr. McNealy, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your inquiry, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: In the first place, while Mr. McNealy has been talking, there has been passed out a proposal marked, Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, and I think I notice that the section numbers are different in that revised plan than in the original plan, and I would like to inquire of the Chair as to whether or not it is clear that the vote we took a while ago and the vote that will be taken on Mr. McLaughlin's motion has to do with the original plan and not with the revised plan?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, that question has arisen in the mind of the Chair. If Mr. McLaughlin and the other delegates would be agreeable, it would seem that it might be well, inasmuch as it seems to be the wish of the Committee that this Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, be placed before the Convention in some way at this time, that possibly we could read this proposal and then hold any amendments in abeyance until such time as we would have the revised proposal before us. Is that --

DAVIS: Either that or, since we are voting here to find out actually the intent of the body, as I understand it, then it seems to me we could proceed under the present Proposal No. 17/c. All I want to do is make sure the record shows that we are voting on Section 28 of the present one, because Section 28 of the revised is something entirely different.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct.

DAVIS: Either way, I think, would be acceptable; it's just a matter of making sure how we are proceeding is what I had in mind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I request unanimous consent to withdraw my proposed amendment to Committee Proposal No. 17/c.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin asks unanimous consent for the withdrawal of his proposed amendment to Committee Proposal No. 17/c.

McLAUGHLIN: My purpose for doing that is that it is my understanding Mr. McNealy is going to withdraw No. 17/c and submit 17/c, Revised, and then I shall move later to remove the comparable words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. McLaughlin's unanimous consent request? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: One question first: if I understand correctly, he is only withdrawing his last motion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, that is right, at this time. Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered and the motion is ordered withdrawn. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the original Committee Proposal No. 17/c be withdrawn from the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves and asks unanimous consent that the original Committee Proposal No. 17/c be withdrawn from the calendar. Is there objection? If there is no objection, Committee Proposal 17/c is ordered withdrawn. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I now offer Committee Proposal 17/c, Revised, for consideration of the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy -- the Ordinance Committee now offers Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, for the Convention. The Chief Clerk will please read Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, Schedule."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I infer that it has been referred to the Rules Committee for placement on the calendar, and I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, be placed on the calendar as the next order of business.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves and asks unanimous consent that Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, be placed on the calendar in second reading as the next order of business. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. The Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk then read Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, for the second time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, would you care to offer an explanation of the changes made in this?

McNEALY: Mr. President, first I wish to state that I have, on two or three occasions on the floor if not more, have not spoken so very highly of some of our experts connected with this Convention. I do wish, in regard to this particular ordinance, to say that the experts have been of invaluable aid in the technicalities involved in this particular one and have been of great assistance. The greater change made here under this is that in the matter of endeavoring to pinpoint the essential elements necessary, such as the filing fees and the actions to be taken by the Director of Finance, the clerks of the court, and the time in which these various parties should act. It has gone along -- I believe on each desk there is a mimeographed sheet showing a possible Territorial and State Election Schedule, and by "state election schedule", we mean the ratification of the constitution and any ordinances; and while it is a very tight schedule, it has been coordinated insofar as possible with the proper sections of the Territorial law. We have also provided in this, which I note was not in the other, that in the event some candidate holding another office, if he should be successful, then he would not be entitled to the compensation of both offices. I do wish to state also that, wherever Chapter 46 of Session Laws of Alaska appears, it says, on my mimeographed copy, it says 1945; however, the meaning is 1955. I believe that this more clearly expresses the intent of the Committee, and it also contains Sections 27 and 28 which the Convention remembers are ordinances or transitional measures that were referred to us from other committees here on the floor, and they are included here so that this completes all of the proposed ordinances of the Ordinance Committee unless more are referred to us in some way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions or proposed amendments for Section 27 of Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised? Are there proposed amendments to be offered for Section 28? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have a question I would like to direct to Mr. McNealy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. McNealy, I take it that the reason you include Section 28 is that, although this would be in a transitional measure in our constitution, that transitional measure would not yet be in effect? Is that correct, Mr. McNealy?

McNEALY: That is true.

SUNDBORG: Would not the original law, part of the federal law, which is already in effect and which takes care of this problem, be still in effect and thus make it unnecessary here?

McNEALY: I might state, Mr. President, that it was the feeling or the opinion of the Committee that it was true, since Section 28 is set out by federal law, that it still would be in effect; notwithstanding, however, it was referred to us from another committee and was taken to remove it from the body of the constitution.

SUNDBORG: I am sorry; I was trying to read this with reference to the Tennessee Plan which -- it is not in there with reference to the Tennessee Plan at all, is it?

McNEALY: No. It goes back to the Organic Act.

SUNDBORG: I am straightened out on that now; thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed amendments to Section 29? Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I move that on page 3 -- I move to strike all language on page 3 commencing with the numeral 4, the bracketed numeral 4, on line 14, line 14 of page 3, and all subsequent wording on that page; and I move additionally to strike all the wording on page 4; and I move to strike additionally on page 5 all the wording commencing on line 1 down to the word "then" on line 7 -- it includes the word "then" on line 7. If I may read this again -- I move to strike all the wording on page 3 after line 13, all the wording on page 3 after line 13; all the wording on page 4; all the wording on page 5 commencing with line 1 down to and including the word "then" on line 7, page 5.

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves the adoption of the amendment, Mr. Sundborg seconds the motion. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Now, Mr President, in order to get this matter clear in my mind, I would like to ask Mr. McNealy some questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Davis, you may ask your questions.

DAVIS: Mr. McNealy, as I understand the proposed amendment, if adopted, the effect will be that the senators and representatives, if authorized by the ratification of the constitution and adoption of the ordinance, those parties would be nominated then strictly by party conventions. We have stricken out any reference to a primary here for nomination of those officials. Is that your understanding?

McNEALY: Mr. President. That is my understanding, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Now then, it is also my understanding that, if we take the 17/c, revised, as it is written, that you set up alternative plans: first, a plan to nominate the proposed senators and representative by primary if a primary can be used for that purpose, but that the Committee has doubts, first, as to whether or not there might be some question about the legality of using a primary for that purpose (you have already mentioned the reasons for your doubts); second, you have further doubt as to whether the primary can be made to work administratively even if there wasn't any question about its illegality, and, for that reason, you have put in the alternative plan. Is that correct?

McNEALY: That is correct. We felt that it was most essential to retain the alternative plan of the party convention for the reasons stated, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Now then, one further question. It is the Committee's belief, if I understood you correctly a while ago, that, if the primary can be made to do the job, that that is a desirable way to proceed here, and you have only put in the alternative to take care of the contingency of the primary failing either by reason of being held to be illegal or by reason of being administratively impossible? Is that right?

McNEALY: Mr. President. That is a correct statement, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: So, if we adopt Mr. McLaughlin's proposed amendment, we have then taken a course that the Committee feels is not desirable? Is that right?

McNEALY: Mr. President, it's a question that I can't answer directly, because it's the feeling of the Committee and from the parties that we have talked to who are in the know that there is, probably, I would say there is a very slim chance of the primary system working.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: However, to put my question another way, it is the desire, or it is the feeling of the Committee that both plans should be retained, and that the primary should be used if it can be made to work; otherwise, we will fall back on the alternative plan? Is that correct?

McNEALY: That is the feeling of the Committee, our desire to have the direct primary if at all possible, but with all the obstacles we face, then we can fall back, as you state, Mr. Davis, on the alternative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I direct a question to Mr. McNealy?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may direct a question, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. McNealy, if the primary plan should fail or be inoperative, administratively, and if it should develop that that fact wouldn't be known until after a considerable amount of money had been expended by way of preparation of ballots, etc., then that expense would be of no avail and would be wasted? Is that correct?

McNEALY: That is true, Mr. Johnson; the cost of printing ballots would be money thrown away.

JOHNSON: I believe that, under the convention system, as I understand it at any rate, all of the expense would fall on the respective political parties, is that not correct, rather than upon the Territory or this convention fund?

McNEALY: Mr. President, in answering that, the expense there would fall upon the political parties.

JOHNSON: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think Mr. McNealy outlined the position of the Committee quite fully. The only thing I wanted to say is that the Committee had a desire to use the primary machinery if at all possible; and then, within the last couple of days, we discovered that it looked like it was almost administratively impossible, and the Committee, of course, was aware of all the legal obstacles, subject to a taxpayer's suit, whether this Convention could alter the existing election laws and require the Governor to allow the filing dates on February 20. I think the opinion of the Committee now is that we probably can't use the primary machinery, except we wanted to get it out on the floor and let the Convention make the decision. If the Convention felt like it was possible, well, fine; but we just wanted the Convention to make the decision. I think that was right, wasn't it, Mr. McNealy?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, that is correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. McNealy some questions merely to point out the problem. First of all, Mr. McNealy, are you aware that at some of our public hearings, some people indicated favoring the Tennessee Plan if the primary plan is adopted, that is the Tennessee Plan, where you have a regular primary election? You could anticipate that, could you not? And people might be opposed to the Tennessee Plan if it were based -- the selection of candidates that were to run for the Plan were picked by party convention.

McNEALY: Mr. President, that has been called to the attention of the Committee.

McLAUGHLIN: Has the Committee considered the possibility that the party convention plan might not be representative?

McNEALY: My answer to that, Mr. President, we feel it is not as unrepresentative as some think, for the reason that there is provisions for party convention due to death or disability of any person who is already in office here in the Territory, and then further, there still is the opening there for the independent candidates to file. However, I believe, in answer to Mr. McLaughlin's question, we all realize, at least to my knowledge, it has been a great many years since an independent candidate has been elected to any important office in the Territory.

McLAUGHLIN: Has the Committee considered the possibility that in some parties you might have several conventions? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin, do you have another question?

McNEALY: Is it necessary that I answer that?

McLAUGHLIN: I will pass over that. Another question, Mr. McNealy: you based your premise of a primary election on the date, holding it on the 24th of April, 1956. Had the Committee considered other independent primaries, either this year, let us say, special primaries, or primaries in subsequent years, and the possibility of having money available to pay for those primaries?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, that is one thing that the Committee very early in the Convention kept almost as much an eye on the funds under the control of the Administration Committee as they did themselves, hoping there would be sufficient funds to hold a special primary election. The other alternative there for a primary and the only one that we know would be the primary election in 1958. I won't speak on that at this time except that we felt that, if the primary election was delayed until 1958, there would be no need of the plan at all. It would have lost any effectiveness that it might have. Mr. President, if I might state as a point of information to the delegates, there have been a number of states who have elected their representatives and senators to Congress on the same day that the people ratified the constitution. That was done in Michigan, California, Minnesota, and Tennessee where there was no enabling act; and, to speed up the processes in the seven states where there was an enabling Act of Congress, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, Montana, and Oklahoma also elected their representatives to Congress on the same date that they voted to ratify their constitutions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: May I ask Mr. McNealy a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. McNealy, did your Committee consider something else that seems to me might be a serious problem here? Even if we adopted this today, there would still be about only three weeks left before the final filing date, and some of your substantial residents of the Territory, the type of people you would want to file, often are very involved in their business or profession, whatever it might be, and it might take them considerably longer than three weeks to even know whether they could arrange their personal affairs so that they could do a thing of this type, so you might end up on February 20 with a certain number of people who had filed, but not what you could consider an adequate list of candidates.

MCNEALY: The Committee had considered that point also and that there was that possibility of getting candidates who might not be the most suitable or the most representative candidates. However, since the direct primary had to be considered and that most everyone knows there has been talk about this particular plan, at least the possibility of its being adopted, and while it may cause inconvenience to some, in answer to Miss Awes' question, while it would be entirely possible that we might lose some good candidates, at the same time, it was just a question of what was the greater good for the whole is the way the Committee felt on that point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: May I ask Mr. McNealy a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Have you also considered the possibility, Mr. McNealy, that you might not get very good candidates through a political convention?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: The Committee felt this way: that through the Convention system, we probably would get political candidates with the emphasis on the political, Mrs. Hermann.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think the Committee generally felt that through the party convention we would possibly get the best available candidates in the Territory. I think Mr. McNealy was probably just joshing, but I think this is a serious matter. I think we will get the best qualified people in Alaska through party conventions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I rise to speak in favor of the amendment. I have been interested along with most of the others in the Tennessee Plan for a long time, and it is wonderful to me to see at the outset that we are all agreed unanimously on the advisability of undertaking the plan, and, in that connection, I think its only merit, its only usefulness to us will be if we go through with it as soon as possible; so, in my thinking, I have long since discarded the possibility of putting it off until the next general election in 1958. Now, I am not a lawyer, but in my mind there is no doubt as to the legality or power of the Convention to undertake the plan in the first place and, in the second place, to provide any system that is deemed workable. The Enabling Act of the Convention distinctly says, "...the Convention shall have power to make ordinances and to take all measures necessary or proper in preparation for the admission of Alaska as a State of the Union." Further along, "...at which election the persons entitled to vote for delegates under this Act shall be entitled to vote on the ratification or rejection of the constitution and the ordinances submitted, under such rules and regulations as the Convention may prescribe." And, in an opinion submitted to us by the Attorney General on another matter, I find these quotations: in a decision rendered by the Supreme Court of Minnesota, "In a territory, the source of all power is Congress. But in the formation of a constitution and state government the power emanates from the people,"; and in a decision rendered by the Supreme Court of Mississippi referring to a convention, "It is the highest legislative body known to free men in a representative government. It is supreme in its sphere. It wields the powers of sovereignty, specially delegated to it, for the purpose and the occasion, by the whole electoral body, for the good of the whole commonwealth." So, I think that it is within our power and it is legal to provide a primary system, to provide a separate filing date if that is necessary, and to provide for nominations of candidates for these offices at the same time the constitution is being ratified. I have, since the outset, hoped that we would be able to go the primary route on this matter because I think it is preferable. I don't share the opinion expressed here a minute ago that we would necessarily get the best candidates at party convention, but I am impressed by the decisions, the opinions of the Ordinance Committee that, because of the date, that this whole thing might fall down administratively on a timing basis, and that should it fall down or should certain individuals vitally concerned with the carrying out of the primary system not hurry to perform their duties, the Convention would have no power to force them to. Now, the next thing that is before us for consideration is the inclusion of both of these systems, but, in considering them, it seems to me that to leave in the provisions for a primary election and then make provision for a party convention should the primary election fall down might lead to chaos. Who is going to decide when it has fallen down? I can envision all kinds of difficulties arising from leaving both sections in, so it appears to me that we must strike one or the other. Early in the Convention, I was interested with others in looking into the possibility of the Convention having enough money left over when it got through to provide for a separate primary so that we could vote on the ordinance and the ratification of the constitution at the regular primary election in April, and then hold another primary specifically to choose these candidates at some subsequent date; but, as you all know, I am sure, I am advised by the Administration Committee that there is no possibility that we will have enough money left over at the end of this Convention to pay for a separate (separate) primary, which would cost, I understand, approximately $40,000. So, it seems to me, in weighing all these factors, we would come at last to the convention system, and I think that, if this body decides that the convention system in this case is the only orderly and safe way to approach this matter, that the public, in its wisdom and in favoring the Tennessee Plan as we are all sure they do, will accept this system in this instance as being the most practical, or the only practical way of approaching the matter. I think there is plenty of precedent for a convention system and that with an approach seriously by both parties, as I am sure it will be, our chances of getting good candidates from party conventions are probably at least equal to getting good candidates from a primary election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart had been trying to get the floor for some time.

STEWART: Mr. President, most of what I would say has already been said, but we have gone on record here as being in favor of the Tennessee Plan, which means sending of two senators and a representative to the United States Congress, and the general understanding of the plan is that that should be as soon as possible. At the earliest possible date, those men should appear there, and we must send to the Congress in those capacities the men who will represent the Territory in the best possible manner by their character, by their abilities. They must be outstanding men. They will have serious duties to perform. Now, I think that it has been amply demonstrated here by what has been said that the primary election system, which we would all like to follow if feasible, may work out disastrously, and the filing date, for one thing, is so early -- so soon now -- the necessary filing date -- that I doubt that the kind of men we are talking about could possibly make up their minds and decide they would take the chances that are involved in this primary procedure and file; whereas, by following the method of nominations, the eyes of the Territory will be focused on those two conventions. I don't believe those party conventions would dare, in the face of that public observation, put up men except those that they are pretty sure of -- or quite sure of -- as sure as possible will be the type of men that we want to send back there as senators and a representative. Therefore, I think this amendment should carry and we should go right ahead on this basis, boldly and earnestly, on the basis of having them nominated by conventions. Then the uncertainties will be largely wiped out. I don't think anyone is going to object on a legal ground when this Convention decides to go that route, and I urge you that that is the best way to do it in my estimation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr President, I am on the Ordinance Committee, and one of the first items and perhaps the item that took up most of our time for the first three or four weeks of this Convention was this matter. I never dreamed that I would be standing on the floor of any public body and recommending that we not use a primary system for election of officers, but I find myself entirely in agreement with Mr. White in this particular case. I think the only proper way and logical way for us to proceed is to provide for nomination of these candidates by party convention. Some of the fears which I had to begin with when we found ourselves in the position of having to consider party nominations was that perhaps the parties in Alaska are not, in my opinion, truly representative of all of the voters. I have always felt that Alaskans are by nature independent and for that reason are quite apt to vote not on strict party lines. I was somewhat worried about the general idea, but the more thought I gave to it, the more I was convinced that this is the only practical way to solve our problem. The hearings that I held and the immediate criticism of the Tennessee Plan, the way we had reported it out for the hearings, was that parties would nominate the candidates. Fortunately, I had an opportunity to explain the reasons why this was adopted temporarily, and I had no opposition after it was fully explained. The other thing that I feel very strongly about is that, if we do eliminate the primary system for this particular election that two things follow: one is that the political parties have a duty to the voters of the Territory to nominate their candidates at a special Territorial convention after having gone to the grass roots of their party system and nominated -- elected their delegates from the various small areas to convene in the manner of the democratic system. I think it would be a blow to the confidence of the people if the hierarchy of the party system in rump session were to decide on the candidates to be put on the ballot. They owe it to the people to start from the beginning. In my own mind, I am yielding to what I am not entirely proud of in order to get this job done, and, if these political parties react in the manner that they should, I feel that they will do a great justice not only to themselves but to the people of Alaska. There is one other item which gives me great fears concerning the primary election; that is, electing these candidates at the regular primary and that again goes to the matter of the calendar. I note that there are only five days allowed for the closing date for filing of candidacy and the certification of those candidates to the clerks of the court in the four judicial divisions. I am reasonably sure that a complaining party could obtain a temporary injunction for the distribution of these ballots for five or six or ten days with very little grounds, and on that basis destroy the whole procedure of the primary election. It has been mentioned before that the Committee gave great thought, intense observation to the finances, attempting to figure out how we could finance a special primary election. We decided it could not be done, so the only alternative was to recommend the party convention and that was done before the recess. After recess there were reverberations, just as I had mentioned, about the convention system. Very recently, some of the people who I thought would be the last to complain about the party nomination system have complained vigorously, but I feel that the Committee has considered all of the facets of this problem, and in presenting these alternatives to the floor, I think desires that the floor express themselves one way or the other; because, as Mr. White so aptly pointed out, there is quite apt to be a waste of money and considerable confusion if we allow both systems to remain in our ordinance. I therefore feel that we should support the amendment that is offered to strike from our ordinance the nomination for the special offices by primary election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I favor the course advised by Mr. White, Mr. Stewart, and Mr. Hurley, not only for the reasons stated but for an additional set of reasons. Even if we had the money, even if it were legal, and even if we had time, I believe it would be ill-advised to elect the people who would be our members of the Congress at the very same election where voters would be casting their ballots for or against the Tennessee Plan. Inevitably, the Plan would become involved with personalities, at least in the minds of the voters, and when they were looking at the Plan, they would also be looking at the list of candidates, they would be fearful of some of the candidates. Anybody can file in this Territory. All you need is the desire to do so and $40. And I would venture that, if we opened this up to a primary, we might have a list of 15 or 20 people there, maybe some of them just running for the free advertising involved, and some of them in the hopes that they might get in. But in any event I think we might have a great list of screwballs and crackpots at this first election where all they needed, as I say, would be the desire to run and $40, so I think the thing to do is to support Mr. McLaughlin's amendment and to go straight out for nomination by party convention the first time around. If we do that, I think it might be desirable to provide that the initial terms for the senators might be somewhat shorter than are provided in 17/c, Revised, but we could get to that in due course. But I do support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to ask a question of Mr. McNealy or Mr. Hurley.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: The question is; Did the Committee consider that the question as to whether or not, if this Convention sets up whatever dates it might feel desirable for a special primary, if the people voted in favor of the ordinance, would there be any doubt but what the legislature would appropriate the necessary moneys to carry out the primary?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, yes, we certainly did. The reason we went off of that track was because of the simple fact that, unless there was a special session called by the Governor, there would not be a meeting of the Territorial legislature until after the next general election, and we hesitated to expect the Governor to call a special legislative session in order to appropriate the money, but we did feel that, if this plan was accepted by the people and if there were a Territorial legislature available and funds available, that they would certainly appropriate the money for a special primary. But we discarded the plan because of the fact that a regular session will not come until after the general election.

SMITH: Thank you, Mr. Hurley. My thoughts had run in a little different direction; that it would be quite a bit cheaper to hold a special general election also, but since the discussion here, I have no fears at all but what the people of the Territory will accept this Plan either way. I think that they will accept it if the nominations are brought about by convention, and, actually, I have no doubts whatsoever that either way will be acceptable after being fully explained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan, the Chair would like to declare a 20-minute recess at this time. The stenotypist has been going very steadily here and, if there is no objection -- are there committee announcements? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Local Government Committee will meet immediately upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Local Government will meet immediately upon recess. Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: The Committee on Ordinances will meet in the back of the gallery. If there are any questions, we can answer them at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Ordinances will meet in the back of the gallery immediately upon recess. If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess until 4:15.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, I am against Mr. McLaughlin's amendment striking out the primary system at this time. There are a number of reasons that come to my mind. One of them is that the Republican party at this time has two committees; we don't know if they will be able to get together to pick a candidate. If one group picks a candidate, the other group might file some kind of injunction against them to prevent them, and I can't see anything in here that would take care of that, and I think its a rather serious situation at this time; and the other reason is that I think it is a rather dangerous step to deprive the people of the primary right. I think that the Committee's original proposal here of allowing the two plans is very good, and I think that the people who are interested in filing for this office would have lots of time, because this plan will probably be adopted by the Convention by February 1, which would give them 25 days to make up their minds and file instead of the five days, and, in fact, I think the people that would be interested in filing have practically made up their minds already. I also think that the question of legality of it or whether there would be enough time can be determined in two or three weeks, and then, if it was found out that the primary plan wasn't feasible, the people would know it through the papers that there was no other alternative but the convention system. I think if the Convention itself came right out and said, "The only way that you can have senators and a representative is by the convention system", I don't think that would set so well with them. It might tend with a lot of people to have them vote against the adoption of the Tennessee Plan. That is why I would like to see both the primary system and the Convention system stay within the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, we have been...

KILCHER: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I believe Mr. Buckalew has spoken once.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Have you spoken on this amendment, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then your point of order is well taken, Mr. Kilcher. Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I would like to ask Mr. McLaughlin a question, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Peratrovich, you may ask your question.

PERATROVICH: If your proposed amendment should carry, the intent of that is just a one-time operation as to the method of nominating the candidates. Am I right on that?

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Peratrovich, my intent is to raise the question of whether or not we want a primary. If my amendment is successful, no primary is possible under the circumstances; that is, you have to rely on party conventions.

PERATROVICH: But I mean that is only for a one-time operation?

McLAUGHLIN: That is a one-time operation.

PERATROVICH: That's the point I want to make. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I don't believe I have spoken on this matter before; I did ask a question. So, if I may make just one observation --

PRESIDENT EGAN: If all you have done was asked a question, you may speak on this.

JOHNSON: Senator Nolan has raised the point that perhaps the Republican party would not be able to hold a convention and nominate any candidates. I fail to see that that is any argument against this motion, because, as someone else has pointed out here today, it is certainly the responsibility of each political party to hold conventions, duly constituted, and to nominate the best men available, and I am quite certain that that will be done not only in the Democratic party but in the Republican party. So I don't believe that Mr. Nolan's fears are well taken; I am for this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I thought for a while I might be the only one to speak against the amendment, but I hear Senator Nolan speaking against it. It seems to me we have become victims of circumstances here as far as the elimination of this paragraph. The way it has been explained now by Mr. McNealy and others is that there is such a fine line of possibility of having a primary that we had better forget about it. I think, if we had thought of this a little sooner or at least brought it out on the floor sooner, gotten the Tennessee Plan adopted sooner, we could have gotten in under even this first primary filing date of February 1. I received the information when I was home on the recess and read every word of it and was sold on the plan, providing that we could follow through with the proper procedure for elections, having the primary and the general elections. I was rather disappointed that the plan didn't come out as soon as we got back, but for some reason it was postponed and postponed and postponed -- maybe so that the filing date would be too near on us -- I don't know. But I think the first two senators and the first representative that we send should be the people's choice right from the beginning to the end. It may be, and probably will be, our most important ones we ever send out there, and I think they should be the ones that the people have a right to pick in the first place. If we vote for this amendment, we are precluding any possibility of the people's choice; it is going to be just a party caucus, a party choice, and the people will have to vote in the general election on someone the people as a whole had no say-so about. Now a lot of things have been brought up through the question period; for instance, the possibility of having our own primary election after the ratification of the constitution. Now we are informed that we wouldn't have enough money to do that. Well, it seems the legislature appropriated a certain amount of money that was to be enough to include a special election for ratification if necessary. Evidently we have gone overboard on our spending so that we can't even have a special primary election. I think we should have checked in on that. Figuring that we would gear it along with the regular primary election, it probably gave us a little extra money to spend and it's evidently spent. It seems that another question has been raised that we wouldn't be able to provide for another legal filing date; the one mentioned was February 20. We have the right to do as the law states; we have the right to set a special election date or ratification date if we want to; and, if we don't have the right to provide for a legal filing date or even another legal primary, then I don't think we have the right to put in these candidates on with the general election either. It has also been mentioned that there may not be enough filing time between now and the 20th of February. I think sometimes, if you have a shorter filing time, you might get your best candidates. They are the ones that are going to say, "I will go regardless of what it will cost." If you give them enough time to think about it, then you may get, as somebody said, 10 or 20 of them going in just for the ride and the free advertisement.

The longer you have, why, perhaps the more you will get in there. It's just like what one fellow said about another's crowded cabin, "If it was any bigger, there would be more junk in it." I think the same could be true here. You might be assured of getting the best ones. I think Mr. McNealy's remark that it would be a political candidate, although it was inferred that remark was humorously put, I think it is a very well-put remark. It would be a political candidate -- it would be a politician in the strictest sense of the word. Otherwise they wouldn't be nominated, I don't believe, at a party convention. It seems to me that we would have just as good a chance to get as good, if not better men elected in the general election if they are nominated in the primary. That has been the system that we have used up here in Alaska, and I don't know if we should give it up just because we are on a fine line as far as the schedule is concerned to make it and rule this out entirely. Someone mentioned that, if they can have a nomination by party convention, that you will get better ones; and that, if they have a whole bunch in the primary, they will vote against the Tennessee Plan because they see a bunch of names and they don't like those particular people. I am not so sure but what there will be a few voting against the Tennessee Plan because they are not certain, and they'll never know until the middle of summer who the party is going to put up. That is really getting a pig in the poke. I think we have a lot better chance of selling the Tennessee Plan when this constitution comes out for ratification if the people could be assured of nominating their candidates for these two senate offices and the representative office on the primary election, and I think this amendment to strike this section should be voted down, and that is the reason, by the way, that I objected to Mr. McLaughlin's withdrawal of the other one because I think that is the one that should be struck. It wasn't because I didn't understand it or hadn't read it, but I think that is the one that should have gone out. I think we all ought to give a lot of serious consideration to this before we just throw away our primary system. Someone said it would get down to the grass roots if we have it by the party, but I think we would go to the brass most probably, just whoever happens to be the party chief, they are the ones who would do the picking.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, with the Chair's permission, I would like to direct a couple of questions to Mr. Londborg.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. Londborg. do you belong to a political party?

LONDBORG: Mr. McCutcheon, yes I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I object on a point of order to that line of questioning here. We are here under a nonpartisan ballot and I don't believe it is proper.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the question is not frivolous. I am attempting to evaluate Mr. Londborg's comments and there are two questions that I require to have answered before I can evaluate properly his comments on this subject, which is pertinent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess, Mr. McCutcheon, for a minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there further discussion? Mr. Walsh.

WALSH: During the previous recess, I went to the Chairman, Mr. McNealy, with these thoughts in mind -- before any of this argument started in this Convention -- and I talked and expressed myself to Chairman in these terms -- these words: If the McLaughlin amendment carries, then we wouldn't have any names on the primary ballot for these offices, is that right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right.

WALSH: But we would have on the primary ballot a referendum for or against the Tennessee Plan. My fears were then, at that time, and I think so again, that there would be a sufficient, or could be a sufficient number of people disappointed because they were not allowed to vote on the primary ballot for these candidates who would be subsequently nominated by the convention system, and it might possibly -- these are my thoughts, nobody else's but my own -- cause our Tennessee Plan to be rejected as a result of that and I think we should give more thought to it. Now, I approached the Chairman of the Committee with those thoughts in mind before this argument started, and those are still my thoughts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I have had a good deal of experience in the process of sending ballots out for both primary and general elections, and I am convinced that there is absolutely no possibility of getting the ballots out in any orderly fashion. I can foresee the regular primary ballots going out to the precincts; these ballots coming along later; the tally sheets and the certificates of judges getting lost in the shuffle; and it being a very disorderly and an ineffective sort of thing, which could do much more damage to the Tennessee Plan than if we just forget it and go ahead by party convention. The people who are so afraid of party organizations should stop and think that, in a convention, which starts with a caucus in the town where all members of the party are free to go and express themselves, and moves on to the division and then on to the Territorial convention, the people who attend that convention are going to give a good deal of very serious thought to that individual whom they wish to carry that party label into the Congress of the United States. And in the meantime, the people who do not have any party affiliation and who do not believe in the party system of government have plenty of time to seek among the independent members of the population for someone to represent them, and it is no difficult task to get a petition signed and to get out and back that candidate in the very same manner that the political parties back theirs. So, I don't think anyone has any need to fear not good representation from the whole population in a general election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

BUCKALEW: I had a question for Delegate Nordale.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I, as a member of the Committee, should like to say a few words on this. I somewhat feel like Mr. Walsh does, that we have a critical situation to take care of. We have learned apparently that the only organized opposition to the Tennessee Plan is being directed to the possible lack of a primary. Now, I think it is sufficiently serious that this Convention should weight this very carefully before adopting Mr. McLaughlin's amendment, because, as Mr. Walsh points out, there may be many people who for one reason of propoganda or otherwise might call this thing a rigged election. Now, I also would like to point out, as our Chairman has, the difficulties of getting the ballots out to the precincts. Normally here in the Fourth Division, if I remember correctly, at practically every election there are one or two precincts that do not even get their ordinary ballots in time for election. Now, we should very seriously weight whether or not an elimination of a possible primary is going to build up a vocal opposition to the Tennessee Plan, seizing upon any feature which they might serve to defeat the plan, or whether we should leave it in and, if it works, fine and dandy; if it doesn't work, then revert to the party system. If Mr. McLaughlin can come up with an amendment or another idea which will still give any independent, any NP [no party], who wishes to protect his rights, then fine and dandy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: One suggestion that I would like to ask of Mr. McNealy which might clarify some of the objections to the amendment is this: Mr. McNealy, what is required under the provisions of page 5? It say, "The names of qualifying independent candidates for these offices shall also be placed on the ballot for the next general election." What is the requirement to file as an independent candidate; what are the qualifications?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President. Mr. McLaughlin, if I am incorrect on this statement I know that Mrs. Nordale can clarify it. My remembrance of the law is that they would be required to have a petition, I believe its 200 signatures on a Territory-wide basis, and to pay a filing fee of $40 with the Director of Finance to have their name placed on the ballot. It's either 150 or 200 signatures and the $40 filing fee is the only requirement.

McLAUGHLIN: Now, assuming that we struck out the primary system as being unworkable at the moment, and then on page 5 we provided that the chairman and secretary of the central committee of each major political party shall, immediately upon such nominations being made and in no event later than July 15 -- if we changed July 15 to July 1, 1956, that would mean, would it not, that the conventions of both, shall we say, the Democratic and Republican parties will have been held and the chairman and secretary of the central committee will have reported to the clerk of court the names of candidates nominated by the conventions. And, if you have left open until July 14 the time for filing independent candidacies, would that not mean that anyone who felt that he had been deprived of his right to run by virtue of the failure of the party to nominate him at the convention, that would give him, in substance, 15 days to secure the 200 signatures to get on the ballot, would it not?

McNEALY: Mr. President, that is entirely right; it would. As I remember it, if that amendment were made, it would give the independent candidate an advantage that he doesn't have at the present time. He could see who was nominated and, if he wasn't satisfied or if he wasn't nominated, he could then file.

McLAUGHLIN: Then in theory, if that convention in nominating Mr. A and Mr. B were not following the will of the party, then Mr. C would have substantially 14 days to secure the signatures of 200 dissenting Democrats or Republicans and secure $40 to put himself on the ballot?

McNEALY: That is correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mrs. Hermann had been trying to get the floor.

HERMANN: I intended to stay out of this hassle, but I think we are losing sight of the principal factor involved, and that is whether or not a vote for this amendment will tend to convey to the people of Alaska that we are scrapping the primary system. I can't vote for the amendment; I am going to vote against it, not because I think we should choose between the primary and the convention system of nominating, but because I think that, as long as there is any chance whatever of our being able to proceed by the primary system, we should not scrap it by any vote in this Convention. If it fails, if the time element is too close and it fails to work as we hope it will and as the Committee says it has a chance of working, although maybe not a 50-50 chance, then I think we should keep it along with the convention system, and we can at least say to the people of Alaska that we tried to keep the candidates nominated by the primary election system. If it won't work, we still have the convention system to fall back on. Now, I know a whole lot about convention systems of nominations, and when they are not backed by a primary, they tend to become somewhat corrupt, and that is a masterpiece of understatement. I don't know who the respective Republican and Democratic parties in Alaska would nominate for officers under this plan, but I do know the sentiment every place I have heard it, both here in Fairbanks and in my travels to hold hearings, is distinctly against nominations by convention. I think we will have an awfully hard time convincing the people of Alaska that we are on the up-and-up in this desire of ours if we right now rule out the primary system and say, "No, you have to choose your candidates by the convention system." Let's keep it in the ordinance and, if it doesn't work, even if it costs some money, as everybody seems to be a little bit worried about, what it costs in money is going to be worth many times that amount in public relations that are going to be generated in favor of the Tennessee Plan. Even if it costs some money to keep it, let's keep it. Let's use it if we can and, if in the final analysis we find it won't work, we still have the convention system that we can resort to. I don't take too much stock in this independent filing, because I think that most people who would want to run for the office of United States Senator and Representative won't want to run on the Independent ticket. I think that most people who aspire for such high office desire to be associated with a party and not to be eliminated from it, either through the choice of the convention for someone else or because they deliberately withdraw from it themselves. I don't think that is the answer, providing that independent candidates can file. What we are asked to do here today by this motion which Mr. McLaughlin has put before us for the sole purpose, he says, of letting us make a determination and not for any interest he has in it himself one way or the other -- what we have to do here today is to decide whether we are going to say we are not trusting to the primary system; we would rather have the convention system. I cannot vote for the motion and I hope that less than 28 people will vote for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I respect Mrs. Hermann's opinion in these matters, but this is one time I will have to say I disagree with her. Personally, I think there are so many risks connected in putting this matter in the primary election that we should hesitate about keeping the primary provisions in the article. We are not scrapping the primary system. It just happens that circumstances are such that time alone makes it hazardous to scrap the convention system and let the convention system come on in. And then, another thing, we know the primary elections are handled by the clerks of the court; they are paid out of federal funds. Now, we do not know whether all of the clerks of the federal court, of the United States courts in Alaska, are going to react favorably in handling, in addition to the primary election of the Territorial officials, the added problem of distributing these ballots to the election judges, who are also paid by the United States, and whether they are going to be zealous in the discharge of their duties if they do, to see that these special ballots are put out to the election judges in the various precincts both near and far. Furthermore, this Convention has no mandate to do this. We have no authority to expend the money which they say it would take to have these ballots printed and distributed. We might have to go to the next Legislature with our hat in our hands and say we made a mistake; we spent $4,000 or $5,000 on the printing of ballots, but we didn't get them in the hands of the election judges in time and now we would like to have you bail us out. I think the members of this Convention would receive a lot of censure from all directions if we did that when we stand here and know and have been informed that the time is so short that it is well nigh impossible to use the primary, and I believe that the people of Alaska understand that. Now, I don't see that there is anything too terribly wrong about a convention system, especially where any person that doesn't believe in conventions has a right to get his group together to sign a petition for an independent. Now, those people that don't belong to one of the great parties actually have no business selecting the candidates for those parties. If they cannot take enough interest in political affairs to align themselves with one of those parties, they should run independently or support independent candidates. And now we go back, and for many many years candidates were selected only by conventions. All of our presidents were selected by convention. Lincoln and Roosevelt were both selected by conventions; Wilson, and all of the great presidents as well as the mediocre and the poor ones have been selected. We have selected men by the primary, wonderful men, and we have also selected some failures, so the primary is no criterion -- the use of the primary is no criterion that we are going to get good men always. And I think in this first election that, when the word goes out -- down to the precincts where the call goes for the delegates to a divisional convention to select candidates for a territorial election [convention] to select the nominees for Senators and one Representative for Washington, D. C., that they will immediately start thinking as to who would be the best person that they could send back there, or the best persons, and I think we can get as able a person out of the convention as we will be a primary. Another thing, I think every person in Alaska, regardless of whether Republican or Democratic, is going to be intensely interested in their candidates for the positions of the Senators and Representative. It will be the biggest convention ever held in the Territory, and they will go there for the purpose of selecting the best and the ablest men they possibly can to go back, because, when those men get back there, they are going to have to be men of knowledge and of influence, because they are going to do a selling job upon our constitution and our admission to the states. I would hesitate very much to risk our chances of having candidates before the general election this fall by attempting to subject the selection of these candidates to the primary. I think we should support Mr. McLaughlin's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I haven't lost faith in the convention of the political parties, either Democratic or Republican, of which I am a member, although I have probably been thrown out of more conventions than any other person here. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

ROBERTSON: I am going to stand by our Alaskan time-honored system of the primary in this matter, and I think what Mr. Walsh suggested, and also Mrs. Hermann, should bear great weight with us in casting our votes upon this matter, so I will have to vote no, against this motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: I fully concur with the remarks of Delegates Hermann, Walsh, Nolan, and Robertson, and I am going to vote against this amendment because I think we are throwing away our birthright.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I had not intended to speak on this, but I feel that, when the people of Alaska go to the polls, faced with the question of "for the Tennessee Plan" or "against the Tennessee Plan", and let us say they vote for the Tennessee Plan, the people will then have indicated clearly and unequivocally (unequivocally) that they desire the plan to be instituted through the use of the party convention. The people will have their chance to speak on this matter, and, if the people vote for the plan, and I hope that they will, I think that they will then remove any doubt. In the last analysis, the people of Alaska will decide this thing. I would feel like Mr. Robertson if the people were not going to have a chance to express their wishes at the referendum, but since they are, I feel that this motion should be carried and the matter should be left to the political conventions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: We have unanimously voted only a little while ago that we are in favor of the Tennessee Plan. Our job right now is to find what is the most workable way to put that plan into operation. Numerous questions have been raised about whether the primary process can work in this case. I am sure every delegate here, or almost every delegate, wants to have the primary if possible. But since the primary may very well spell defeat of the Tennessee Plan because of the machinery not being able to operate properly, I believe that we should adopt Mr. McLaughlin's amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I have intended to speak all along on this question, and having learned a few things I think is some advantage in letting others speak first. It relieves me of commenting on a lot of things that I was going to because others have already said it. However, I think I have to reply to some of the previous speakers, some of their arguments or shades of arguments, rather, and I would like to make the theme of my little speech a note that I jotted down a few minutes before Delegate Hermann has spoken, and I am pleased to note that in this particular instance that we had almost a totally identical idea. My little note says here -- a little catch word, "at least we have tried"; and I have to go back to the time of our Christmas holidays, of our hearings at home, and there are a lot of us to our great surprise have found not only little opposition to the Tennessee Plan but have found that the Tennessee Plan had been a boost to the general statehood idea as such. And like Delegate Hermann, I have found that the main -- possible -- objection to the plan was that it might be handled too politically, and politically I mean in the more evil sense of the word. In other words, the need of the primary has been stressed. I have received letters only a few days ago where this very need was stressed again. I have, ever since we came back, been holding in favor of the Tennessee Plan. I have tried to find a solution whereby the primaries, if possible, could be worked in, and I think we have found such a solution. It is before us now. I am sorry that the plan, as such, had not been brought before the Convention sooner. I personally think it could have, but that is spilled milk; there is no use to talk about it even. Now as to the question at hand, the amendment of Mr. McLaughlin's -- for me the question boils down simply to the following: Which course will insure us greater success for statehood? And, in a narrow sense, statehood now means the Tennessee Plan. Which course will insure greater success? That is for me the only consideration. I am, I think, in the enviable position of having no ax to grind. I can afford to be unpopular. I actually can't lose a thing by saying what I am going to say, so I say that to point out that my arguments in the matter are based on quite a deal of observation and study, as a member of the Committee and otherwise, and I have come to the conclusion that this plan as it is before us is workable, and not only workable with some degree of success, some chance of success, but it is desirable, a desirable plan, even if it should not work out. Now to start with its technical aspects, it has been stressed all along, and I think it has been stressed too long. Too much time has been lost in stressing that point; time lost that actually makes the point more stressed. Namely, that it technically is impossible to have primaries; for instance, 30 days are legally necessary for the ballots to be available before the election date. Somebody is welcome to interrupt me if I am wrong -- I would appreciate it. Now, in the elections in which we were chosen as delegates to this Convention, I recall that out in the outlying areas the ballots only came in from three to seven days ahead of the election, entirely illegally as far as I am concerned. Also the names on the ballots were not properly rotated the way I understand they should be, a matter than I didn't even know about until this very thing occurred. They happen to be more precise in Seldovia; officials connected with the elections have been worried and bets have been put as to whether that very election would not be enjoined against for the fact that several things were not quite up to law; not enough notice given, notices not posted, etc. Well, nothing has happened. I don't see why, in a similar situation, if it should arise in our primary process, anything should happen either. I don't see any difference in the situation and, if something should happen, I think this plan would have the added advantage of getting the opposition out of the brush. Let them fire an injunction; let them stop that particular ballot. That won't stop the whole primary process for our Territorial legislature; that wouldn't stop the other ballot titles. It could possibly stop this little ballot that is limping a little bit behind the others. It might stop it from being printed, in which case we wouldn't lose so much money. It might stop it after it has been printed, in which case we might lose a couple of thousand, which is trivial, but it also might be possible that this ballot would go out. If there is passive resistance of the officials involved, let's point at them; if an injunction is brought forth, let's point at them; and, if the poor little ballot makes all the hurdles, which I think it could well make, we would have the primaries and you all seem to agree that would be a beautiful thing to have. Personally, I believe so myself. We have primary elections about a matter that is very important to all of us and we have agreed on the primary system. The primary system has not been attacked officially as far as I have heard. Our sole contention the last few weeks and today seems is it possible, not is it desirable. It may seem to some of the members to be undesirable, but this is not the official question on the floor, but, "Is it possible?". I think it is possible, and in case it should be technically impossible, administratively, or legal obstacles should be thrown in our way, which could be well exploited by the pro-Tennessee Plan, pro-statehood propaganda, if obstacles should be unsurmountable, we have provided for an alternative. The people then will know exactly why there are no primaries. We have honestly tried, and as far as one of the other minor arguments is concerned that the possible candidates will be taken by surprise, that is, I think, a slightly facetious argument to start with. It will be three weeks from tomorrow that the papers will report our action of today. It will be three weeks from tomorrow when these people in question can make up their minds to file. If they are sincere, and we only want sincere and serious people as our ambassadors to Washington, D. C., then they will file and will gladly do so. As to the convention next summer a few things have been pointed out that I would like to go into. This party convention next summer, as Delegate Nordale has pointed out, could be and will probably be preceded by a precinct caucus. As we all know, the precinct caucus is taken part in by a small percentage of the people in the parties, by the active party members. Each party has five or ten times more actual voting members than are active on the precinct level -- we know that. And whereas this convention plan -- great interest is generated -- might be a good way of raising the interest in direct party work, we must also think that summer is a bad time for this added little spurt in political activities. Most of us are very busy in summer. Not only the people that everybody know are specifically busy, the farmers, construction workers, homesteaders, fishermen, even people in town haven't as much time in summer as they have in the winter, so that a caucus, even if people were very much interested, wouldn't be too much of a success. And those people that do not take active part in caucuses, as I tried to point out, are not necessarily independents. I think the independent in Alaska is more or less of a myth as far as its vast numbers are concerned. There are a lot of people who are party members, or rather party sympathizers. They belong in the heart of the party without making much fuss about it, and it is those who, at the primaries, play an important role. I might even say the primaries have been established for those, not so much for the independents, and I think the people of Alaska are watching us. They will read the papers tomorrow and if they realize that they are going to have a choice, the public officials involved in the machinery of the primaries know that they are watched. I think everybody will make as good an effort as possible; we will have successful primaries; we will have excellent candidates; and, if it should not work -- and I think there is a small possibility that it won't -- we will have a convention this summer and at least we will have tried.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, two of the delegates have suggested that the Tennessee Plan might have been brought on to the floor earlier. One of them went so far as to suggest that possibly there was some ulterior motive in holding it until this time instead of bringing it out before. I would like to suggest at this time that, in this as in all other things, first things come first. Now, until we have a constitution, there isn't any reason for a Tennessee Plan. There isn't any reason for electing Senators and a Representative. So far as I as an individual am concerned, it wasn't until 10:00 o'clock last night that I was convinced we were going to have a constitution. It now appears to me that we now, at least, are almost to the top of the hill, and that after tomorrow or the next day, we should be on the downgrade, and, for that reason, I think it is now proper to consider the Tennessee Plan. I think it would have been highly inadvisable to do so before this time. Now I, personally, am in favor of party primaries as against conventions. I started out thinking that probably the Committee's plan of presenting alternatives here was the best way to do it and that we should keep both plans. After hearing the arguments that have been made on both sides, I am convinced that the chance of a primary being held is so small as not to be worth the effort, and so far as I am concerned I am going to vote for McLaughlin's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I think in either way we would vote on this that we would have the support of the press in giving the story as it is reported here on the floor. If we should vote for Mr. McLaughlin's plan, as I will vote for it, I do not believe that there will be a report come to the voters of Alaska that we have deliberately tried to scuttle any plan or any procedure that is authorized by our people. I think, too, that this shows the need of statehood. The thing that we have talked about today shows that we are politically immature because we have not had the responsibilities of statehood, and I believe we are stepping forward as we vote for this amendment. I believe that we are taking the direction of sending the men from a party to the Congress the way Congress would want us to do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: I yield to Mr. Lee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: I have little to say. I would like to explain my position on this. I happen to concur with Mr. Davis and Mr. Armstrong. It is against my lifelong convictions to deny people the primary elections. In this respect, I know the people who sent me to this convention will understand the situation when I explain it and I am not concerned -- I think they have faith in all of us here. There have been many instances when they have shown complete faith in our job, and I think that all the people respect us for it, and I think they are going to understand my vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. President, I have not spoken on this before and I feel we are facing just two issues here where there might be others involved. I am a hearty supporter of the Tennessee Plan. I think it is American; I think it is Alaskan; and I think under the particular circumstances, it is very, very practical. This Convention is unanimous in their thinking that way, and I am certain that we will find a strong majority support in the Territory as a whole for it. I have heard a great deal of support for the primary system; I want to add my support to that. I have also heard a great deal of argument for the caucus or convention plan of organization. I think it is pretty much a matter of grasping for straws if we go after it because of the time element involved. I have wondered if the Committee, or, perhaps, if this delegation here as a whole had given proper consideration that there might be an alternative plan available to us. This very Convention was brought about at the conclusion of the Territorial legislature last year. An election was held and this body evolved from that election. My suggestion is that we put the Tennessee Plan on the ballot and let them vote "yes" or "no" on it. Following their "yes" or "no" on the Tennessee Plan, we write in another block whereby we provide that the Governor of Alaska shall arrange for the selection of nominees' names to appear on the ballot at the general election by one of three methods: first, a primary or special election to be held; secondly, a party convention to be held; and, third, a nonpartisan convention to be held. I can see many merits in this system. We are not taking away at all from the value of the spotlight on the Tennessee Plan by such an arrangement. I don't think that, if any instance, under any given circumstance, should be a matter of issue, I think it should be set out where the people can vote "yes" or "no" on it, just as it has been prepared in the committee proposal, but I furthermore feel that the people have the prerogative of saying how those nominees will appear on the general election ballot in the fall, and I feel that this is the only fair way to present the question to the people. If Mr. McLaughlin's amendment does carry, I shall introduce and I shall support an amendment to strike the appearance of the mandatory caucus selection of nominees on the ballot and support a plan whereby that choice is left up to the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Point of inquiry. Are the questions that I answered counted against me on the privilege of speaking on this amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair does not recollect that you spoke to the amendment, Mr. McNealy. Questions were directed to you and would not be counted against your time.

McNEALY: Mr. President, I had hesitated and hoped it would not be necessary and didn't want to speak on the amendment because, both in the Committee and in the earlier presentation on the floor, I had endeavored, or thought I was endeavoring at least, to be as impartial as possible. Since there has been a divergence in the opinion of two or three of our Committee members, then at least as an individual I will just briefly express my views here, and one of the parties said he had no political aspiration or anything so could therefore vote against the amendment here --

KILCHER: Point of order. The party alluded to is no doubt myself and I made no such allegations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy has not -- your point of order is not well taken. Mr. McNealy, you may continue.

McNEALY: The point is I have been more or less in politics in a small way and I would like to have this direct primary system. I think a lot of the people that I know as voters in this Division might be somewhat opposed to my taking a stand on this, but the administrative difficulties and the legal difficulties are so great that I have been long convinced of the practical impossibility of holding this direct primary. Now, there never has been any intention of the Committee to hold up the advancement of this Tennessee Plan to the body, and Mr. Davis more ably stated it than I could. As you all know, the ordinances and those things connected with it come at the tag end of the constitution and the reason this Committee has been coming in here with 17/a and 17/b and 17/c and Revised is that ordinances that we had drawn prior to the recess we had to revise in order to fit the stable parts, the permanent parts of the constitution which you delegates have drawn. And in that connection, had the Tennessee Plan come out before this time, it would have come out as it was in the interim report that was sent to you at home or that came out before the recess, which contained only the convention plan because we were convinced at that time of the impossibility, and it has only been in the last few days that the Committee has dug in and tried to do everything we could. We were afraid that, if we came out of Committee or the majority of the Committee suggested only the convention plan to the floor, that this body would feel that our Committee had been unfaithful in the performance of its duties in not endeavoring to spread the full picture out upon the floor. I am seriously afraid here that, if a direct primary system is attempted here, and that it can fall on its face, and the discredit that will be given by failure to put the names on the ballots, or failure of the ballots to get out, or failure of getting the ballots out in one Division, or failure of the Director of Finance to certify the names, or even attacks as to legality by any taxpayer bringing an action to enjoin putting on the names, that the publicity out of that is going to hurt the whole of the Tennessee Plan and will discredit it to such a point that the convention system provided for as an alternate can very well fail or lose a great deal of its effect and, as Mr. Delegate Kilcher so ably stated that, at Seldovia in his area there, the ballots got there only seven days ahead of time in a well-planned and a well-organized election, and how possible, not only possible but how very probable it is going to be of Seldovia and the areas not getting any ballots at all under this type of an election. Now I don't want to belabor this point or take up the time of the Convention, but the important things that we have given such a great deal of study to, if an attempt were made or it was thought by any member of the body that an election can be held at a later date then, if this body should say that there should be elections held later than at the general election to actually elect these men at a general election, then I, for one, would be the first one on the floor to move to strike the whole of the Tennessee Plan for this reason that, if it is going to have any effect, it must follow in logical sequence with the constitution, and our Senators and Representative must be back there at the opening of the new session of Congress. I know the delegates here understand that there is a chance and an opportunity that, when a new session of Congress opens up the first half of the session, that there is a period there of three or four months where it's a possibility of getting some work done and getting in new bills. If we have to go over into the second session in 1958 to have our parties back there, then each and every Senator and Congressman has his own measures carried over from the 1957 session and is going to be tied up, so we will get no consideration for statehood at all. In conclusion, the Committee at least did this much, ladies and gentlemen: we realize that the point here is the great difficulty -- the Director of Finance under the law and we tried to tie this in with the existing law -- certifies to the clerks of the court by June 25, I believe it is, of each year to these parties in the primary elections; and if there is any difficulty in the party machinery of the National Committee of the Republican party or the National Committee of the Democratic party, there is a question of whether a convention can be authorized between the dates of June 25 and the dates of July 1 or July 15. We have done one other thing that we thought would help out here. A suggestion came to us from political-minded persons, we'll put it, to say that the convention held earlier by the Democratic party and the convention to be held shortly by the Republican party would constitute the conventions to nominate these candidates, and our Committee felt that it would be very unfair because, if we require them under this convention plan to hold new conventions, it would certainly bring the interest up at a precinct level, and, as I believe Mr. Taylor so aptly stated here, the convention would be full of people there, and there would be great interest in that convention, and everyone interested would then have a chance to take part for the reason stated. I feel, and against my will, that I am going to have to support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: May I ask a question of Mr. McLaughlin?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question.

HILSCHER: Should your amendment win and the primary election be eliminated, do you contemplate any further amendment, any outlet which might be helpful to those who are inclined to favor the primary system or the independent filing system?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: I do plan, tentatively, if the amendment carries, to move to strike on page 5, line 15, the "15" in July 15 and substitute the words "July 1"; my intent being, subject to more intelligent amendments, to allow -- authorize a 14-day period in which discontented candidates who were not nominated by their party could, in substance, file, secure 200 signatures, and file as independent candidates; and, upon recommendation of the Convention, possibly make an amendment authorizing any candidate to submit any party label under which he might desire to run except two specific party labels, to wit, Democratic or Republican.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, you have already had the floor.

KILCHER: May I ask a question of Mr. McLaughlin?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may ask a question.

KILCHER: Did you intend to reserve this 14-day period only for discontented party members?

McLAUGHLIN: Not for discontented party members; for discontented party members and all others so that there will never need be any assertion that any person didn't have the opportunity, with the assistance of 200 adherents and $40, of being placed on the ballot.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin be adopted by the Convention?"

SUNDBORG: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 14 - Collins, Cooper, Harris, Hermann, Kilcher, Knight, Londborg, McNees, Nolan, Reader, Robertson, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh.

Absent: 2 - Coghill, R. Rivers.)

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 14 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it, and the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit your amendment, Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Beginning on line 7, page 5, I move to strike beginning with the word "party" all the material down to and including the word "election" on line 20.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees moves beginning on line 7, page 5, beginning with the word "party"...

McNEES: Again recognizing that some rearrangement will have to be made of the last six lines on page 5 in the body of the text so that the discontented party members, etc., might have room to file ahead of whatever deadline is set up for filing by the Governor's office, but I think that could well be done by moving it up and into the old Section 3 perhaps, or create a new section in there. Furthermore, I would like to add to that amendment that another bracket where a vote might be made be added following the old Section 8, with these words inserted --

McNEES: Section 8 on page 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, if he is going to rewrite this thing, I think he ought to have it mimeographed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees, that would be something that would be awfully confusing. It would be better if you would offer your amendments one at a time. That would be on page 5, the deletion of all the words beginning on line 7 with the word "party" through the word "election" on line 20.

McNEES: That is correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: It is past the time when we usually adjourn. I move we adjourn until 7:00 o'clock and then Mr. McNees could get his amendment mimeographed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves that the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I have a committee announcement. There will be a Local Government Committee meeting immediately on recess in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Local Government, if recess carries, in the gallery. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee in the gallery immediately upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting Committee immediately upon recess in the gallery. Are there other committee announcements? Is there a second to the motion for recess? Do you ask unanimous consent, Miss Awes?

AWES: I do.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m. All those in favor of standing at recess until 7:00 p.m. will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Doogan, Emberg, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNees, Poulsen, Rosswog, Smith, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 36 - Armstrong, Boswell, Cooper, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White.

Absent: 2 - Coghill, R. Rivers.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 36 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the Convention is still in session. The Chair would like to announce that it is the understanding of the Chair that there is a bus scheduled to leave the University at 6:20. The Chair would stand corrected if that is not correct, and it might be that the delegates should decide whether or not they want to work tonight or attempt to catch that bus; or later at a time that would enable the delegates to catch the late bus. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to inquire whether anyone has determined whether the cafeteria is in shape to feed this large group tonight in case we decide to recess through the dinner hour.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chairman of the Administration Committee is not here. The question is -- Mr. McNees, on your amendment -- it seems that Mr. McNees was -- are you speaking to your amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: It hasn't been seconded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you move the adoption of your proposed amendment, Mr. McNees?

McNEES: I so move the adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

BARR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Barr. If there is no discussion --

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: May we have it read again, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, line 7, strike the material beginning with the word 'party' through the word 'election' on line 20."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: The particular merits as I would see that this amendment would have, knowing full well that this present Convention was organized, the election for it was organized and carried through during a period of time equal to that that would be available following the April 24th ratification of the Tennessee Plan, that the time element would be present during which the Governor's office could carry forth, hold a special election for the nomination only, mind you, of candidates for these three very, very important offices. I furthermore feel that it is the voice of the people as a whole that should nominate and in turn elect these three candidates to the first United States Congress that the proposed State of Alaska would be permitted, either by mandate of their own or by actual seating in that Congress, to participate in it. I therefore feel that the plan has merit. I would like the support of those on the floor that can see it as I see it. I will admit that this amendment alone stands for very little; that there will have to be some rearrangement; that there will have to be a new block on here providing where people may say in what way these candidates for these two offices as Senators to the United States Congress and Representative to the United States Congress shall be elected.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is. "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McNees be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. The Chair has just received a note which says the cafeteria can handle the delegates -- it looks like fried chicken. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I move that we recess until 7:05.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate Barr moves that the Convention stand at recess until 7:05. Is there a second?

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mrs. Hermann. The question is -- unless there are committee announcements --

HILSCHER: I wish to ask what the rest of the program is for the evening if they're able to tell.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it would be the plan we have before us, Mr. Hilscher. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Is there any necessity of having an hour and a quarter -- such as the boiler room problems -- are they working today?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, some of them are working upstairs. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. President, the Local Government Committee meeting will be held in one of the committee rooms upstairs rather than downstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Local Government in one of the committee rooms upstairs. Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, couldn't we pass this plan by 6:15 and then adjourn until tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock. Most of the arguments are over now.

3535

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question before us, Mr. Nolan, is this motion for recess. Do you have a committee announcement, Mr. Doogan?

DOOGAN: No, I would like to ask Mr. Barr to change his recess time until 7:30. The Local Government Committee has a meeting that might take a good half-hour. For information, Mr. Chairman, we ...

BARR: I thought that the final vote was coming up on this right away. I withdraw my motion altogether.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Barr?

BARR: I ask unanimous consent for the withdrawal of my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr asks unanimous consent that his motion be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I move that we recess at 6:10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: At 6:10?

TAYLOR: Yes.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Recess or adjourn?

TAYLOR: Adjourn, I mean, at 6:10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Adjourn at 6:10 you mean, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: Until 9:00 o'clock in the morning.

SUNDBORG: I think the motion should be that it will be the policy of the Convention to adjourn at 6:10 this evening until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves that it be the policy of the Convention that the Convention adjourn at 6:10 until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning (morning). Is there a second?

STEWART: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart seconds the motion.

KILCHER: Point of information, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information.

KILCHER: Isn't there any other work before us that we could do even if we --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, we could bring up 17/a if it was the wish of the Convention, but we have before us the motion to adjourn, that it be the policy for the Convention to adjourn. All in favor of the motion as offered by Mr. Taylor signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is in session. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: May I ask Mr. McNealy a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. McNealy, will you tell us how it is planned that this Senator, or these Senators and this Representative will be paid if and when we elect them?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, that is an excellent question. If we are going on this matter historically, Mr. Davis, the best of information that the Committee has been able to find, those that had been elected in years past this way, were without compensation, and they had to work doubly hard to get themselves seated in Congress so they could get on the federal payroll. We had considered these and we believe that it is very questionable whether or not -- we doubt the legality of this very much whether the legislature could provide -- any future Territorial legislature could provide salaries for them. The only possible way would be for them to receive any compensation or their expenses, would be if the Territorial legislature should pass a bill appropriating money for their expenses.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to partially answer Mr. Davis' question there and at the same time bring something on the floor. Thought has been given this very question, Mr Davis, of that you may be certain. And personally, I think one of the plans might be, to solve this problem, that the Statehood Committee might even organize even a campaign to get the support of the people behind that and that might at the same time be added evidence of interest in statehood. That could be started before ratification in April too.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Another question, Mr. McNealy, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If no objection, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. McNealy, in the original 17/c which was presented, the following language appeared: "The duties and emoluments of these offices shall be as provided by law". So far as I can see, that language does not appear in the revised 17/c, and I am wondering if it was left out on purpose or whether it was an oversight in redrafting the Article?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, we had it in the other Article, and out of that one was -- referring to the top of page 3 of the revised 17/c, it is stated there "...provided that such a person shall receive the compensation assigned to only one of the positions held". Now this was done rather hurriedly, Mr. Davis, and the reason the other was left out was, on rather hurried thinking, was that we didn't want to have too much in this plan as to compensation, but I believe, since you mention it, that your point is well taken there and should definitely be considered.

DAVIS: I would like to know whether the Committee would object to offering an amendment to place the same language in the revised 17/c. If we did it would, I believe, now come in Section, subsection 6 of Section 29, line 5, beginning with the sentence "The candidates receiving the largest number of votes cast for the office shall be elected". That same language appears in the original 17/c and immediately following it appears the sentence I just mentioned. I would like to know if the Committee would object to my offering an amendment to replace that language in the revised section?

McNEALY: Mr. President, after looking it over, and I think the Committee would agree with me, I believe that that language should be replaced and the Committee would support such an amendment.

DAVIS: I would like to state that I, too, have some doubt as to whether the legislature could provide for paying a senator and/or two senators and a representative if there wasn't any such office, but I would like to have it tied down that, unless provision is made, there won't be any compensation. Now I, then, Mr. President, would like to offer the proposed amendment.

BARR: Could I ask Mr. Davis a question before he offers the proposed amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to see that amendment worded so that the legislature is not the only one that can provide expenses or pay. For instance, I had in the back of my mind that perhaps these men could be employed by the Statehood Committee for the purpose of furthering the cause of statehood. In that case it wouldn't be provided -- well, it may be indirectly -- by law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, would you object to a two-minute recess? If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, in the course of recess, I have talked to members of the Style and Drafting Committee and have learned from the Committee that they are hopeful, if given an opportunity this evening, of having the bulk of the remaining work in shape for return to the floor tomorrow afternoon. It has occurred to several of us discussing this matter during the recess that, if we were to stay in session this evening long enough to complete the second reading of the Article now before us, and then, if it is the will of the body to suspend the rules and advance to third reading, that there will be ample time left for Style and Drafting to do some work this evening; that the Convention may take up its regular order of business tomorrow morning; and in all likelihood considerable time will have been gained. Accordingly, at this time I should like to suggest that we pursue that course -- we continue now in second reading and defer any immediate action to adjourn until the matter before us is passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to proceeding in that manner? If not, are there other amendments to be proposed to Committee Proposal No. 17/c as revised? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I ...

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Davis.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 29, subsection 6, line 7, page 6, insert the following sentence after the word 'elected': 'The duties and emoluments of these offices shall be as provided by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, what is your pleasure?

DAVIS: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second? Seconded by Mr. Kilcher.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall Mr. Davis' proposed amendment be adopted?" Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Davis, my thought on this amendment -- I think the legislature has got to have more leeway to your -- I wanted to offer an amendment. I think the legislature would be able to do something for these individuals if the amendment read, "The legislature may provide expenses for these offices". I don't know, I don't think we can probably -- it is just a thought.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I think it is highly undesirable to mention the legislature here at all. We are proceeding on the basis that these are United States Senators -- this is a member of the House of Representatives. When you say, "provided by law", we are hoping they are going to be paid for by Uncle Sam.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Davis be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying Aye; all opposed by saying No. The "Ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have a short amendment to subsection 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, subsection 5, line 8, after 'made' insert 'for this election only'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, what is your pleasure?

HURLEY: Having cleared this with the Chairman of the Committee, I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment, seconded by Mr. Riley. Do you ask unanimous consent Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 12, strike 'the regular' and substitute 'an initial short'; and on line 13, strike '1963' and substitute '1959'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that little portion there as it would read if the amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg were adopted?

CHIEF CLERK: On line 12, "one for an initial short term expiring on Jan. 3, 1959".

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is how that portion of the section would read if the amendment were adopted; rather than "one for the regular term expiring on Jan. 3, 1963". Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the amendment.

BARR: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion?

SUNDBORG: My thought here is that, since these officers will be elected under an election procedure which is not the usual one in Alaska, it might be best not to elect a Senator for the whole six years at the very first election where there would not be a primary. This would provide that there would be one short term of two years and another short term of four years, and certainly by that time we would hope to be a State and could elect under our regular procedure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor of adopting the amendment signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, "No". The Ayes have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: From Mr. McLaughlin: "On page 5, line 15, strike the words 'July 15' and substitute the words 'June 30'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, what is your pleasure?

McLAUGHLIN: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

McNEALY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked.

McNEES: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: My objection was raised on this basis. I understand this amendment is being introduced, as Mr McLaughlin stated earlier, so that any disgruntled or left out candidates from the party caucus as might be given room to file between June 30 and July 15. My thinking on the subject is this: the provision is made for the introduction of independent candidates on the ticket as well as party nominees. Furthermore, I feel that this should be a matter where a man chooses between the party or maintaining his independent role and given the equal opportunity by the choice which he cares to make. If he decides to go with the party, he should accept party mandate; if he decides to file as an independent, he is given up until July 15 in which to file as an independent. I do not feel that this extra 14 - or 15-day period should be allowed for the rejectees by the party caucus to be given time to turn coat and file as an independent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I think Mr. McNees has spoken very wise words there. I think it goes against the whole theory of independent candidates' filing. The person desiring to run for office should make up his mind independently and decide to run for that office, and support himself for that office, and should not be -- the privilege should not be made available to those who have sought nominations through the channels of their political parties and failed to prevail. I think the amendment is ill-advised and should be voted down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I am prepared to use my privilege of summing up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, Mr. McNealy has been attempting to get the floor. Mr McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, I second the amendment for this reason: In line 15, because July 15 is the date that the director of finance is required to certify candidates to the Clerk of Court, and I don't know just how necessary it is, possibly the conventions would go ahead and hold their conventions prior to July 15. However, since that is the required date it would require them to hold the convention by June 30, which falls on a Saturday. However, if this amendment should carry, I would propose, then, that on line 25 the same date be included, June 30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: The reason I made this amendment is, first, that I assured this Convention I would do it, and, secondly, since we have in substance of necessity deprived the people of the right to enter their names in the primary, we prevent the injustice that many people say could exist through the use of the party convention. If this amendment is adopted, it means this: that the Chairman and Secretary of the Central Committee of each major political party, immediately upon such nominations being made, and in no case later than June 30, 1956, will have to file with the Clerk of the Court the names of the candidates who have been approved by the Convention. That means that, if any person feels he was unjustly deprived of his right to be nominated by the convention, he has substantially 15 days thereafter to secure the requisite number of signatures and file as an independent. As it stood, the convention could meet on July 14, designate its candidates, and then, in spite of popular clamor, the persons who felt they should have been designated, or who the public felt should have been designated, would not have an opportunity to file. This merely -- it does no harm, and meets a lot of the criticism that we may have on the subject of the party convention. It's helpful because it gives 15 days in which anyone in substance rejected or not considered at the Convention will have an opportunity to secure support and file as an independent.

McNEES: I would like to ask a question through the Chair if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no objection, Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. McLaughlin, in the event, we will say, that the party caucus was pretty heavily contested and one man came out with a narrow margin behind the selected candidate, wouldn't there be real danger of this candidate who came close to, shall we say, being nominated by his party group turning and filing as an independent and thereby splitting the party vote in such case when it comes to the general election?

McLAUGHLIN: Yes, quite a possibility. But what of it? You have answered all of the objections then for the primary system. In substance, you have some way -- you have an opportunity to go in and file. One of the criticisms that would be directed against this article is that the convention might be unjust. Well, if it is unjust, then those people who have been unjustly deprived of one of their rights or privileges will have an opportunity to file. You are meeting criticism of the conventions.

McNEES: One more question, if I may. The thinking in my mind on this is that we would have a ticket in the general election, in November that would be cluttered perhaps with numerous names and none of them truly independent.

McLAUGHLIN: That's quite possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: It appears to me that this particular amendment serves no useful purpose, because the person who was to be a contender in a party convention for the office, were he astute enough in politics and otherwise to be a contender in such a thing, he would have secured prior to the time the convention ever met sufficient names to have his name placed on the ballot if he, in effect, was going to bolt the party and run as an independent or under some other banner. So, it's of no merit as far as I can see.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other delegates who wish to be heard before Mr. McLaughlin closes. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I think the idea of providing for independents to run for the offices if they like is good, but I do not think it should be tied in with the party conventions so that the people who failed to be nominated at a party convention become candidates, and by so doing, probably become branded by the party ever afterward and are in a bad state politically to the end of their days. I think the provision for independent candidates should be made entirely apart from the idea that disgruntled candidates who failed to make nomination by the party convention will then have an opportunity to run. If the party turns them down and they want to bolt the party, that is their own business. But they should do it -- if they are astute enough to know politics very well, they should know before the convention whether they are going to get turned down or not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have no objections to it because I don't think it is applicable to my party, and it might be helpful to the other party; I can see where they could use it. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENENTHAL: I think the same logic that was so successfully applied to the use of the word "nonpartisan" should be applied to this amendment. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there others who wish to be heard? If not, the question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No". The Noes have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 17/c, as revised? Are there other amendments to be offered at this time? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask unanimous consent that on page 3, line 7, the words "primary and" be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer moves and asks unanimous consent that on page 3, line 7, the words "primary and" be stricken. Is there objection? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: A question, Mr. Fischer. Would you consider, Mr. Fischer, to include into your unanimous consent request any similar possible inconsistencies that might be erased by the Committee on Style and Drafting, to save time that we should hunt through it now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor

Fischer has asked unanimous consent. Is there objection?

MCNEES: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer so moves, seconded by Mr. Metcalf, that the amendment be adopted. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: I wasn't objecting. I just wanted to ask a question here for clarification. Would it be your understanding, Mr. Fischer, that, in the event the party caucuses came up with three candidates for the three offices in each party and several independents would have filed also, that this $40 filing fee to enter the general election would not be applicable?

V. FISCHER: I moved to strike "primary and" in line 7.

McNEES: I know, but doesn't that, if I may ask another question, come right back to the point whereby these candidates then would in turn be required to put up such a fee, and doesn't the word here "...governing primary and general elections applicable..." pertain to that point as well as others in the handling of that election?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I move and ask unanimous consent to include the word "general" on line 7 in that motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves and asks unanimous consent that in his proposed amendment to include the word "general". Is there objection to that? If not, then you may quote it as part of the amendment.

V. FISCHER: I now renew my request for unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer renews his request for unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Mr. McNees.

McNEES: There is still, I believe, a question unanswered here. It will be necessary for anyone filing generally, outside the caucus group, to provide the $40 fee and two hundred signatures. I do feel here, too, that any other candidate going up should be required to put up this fee. We struck it in section 4 here on page 3 along with some of the rest of the material. I do feel there are gaps in here that might well be referred to Style and Drafting. They could come back in their redraft of the copy and perhaps fill in those points that were lost that should be retained, so I am not objecting to the unanimous consent, but I am raising that question on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that this particular amendment be adopted. Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered. Are there other amendments to be offered at this time. Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Mr. President, I also have an amendment and ask for unanimous consent that wherever the words "Tennessee Plan" occur in this Article be stricken and "Alaska Plan" be inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen asks unanimous consent that where the words "Tennessee Plan" appear in this proposal, that they be stricken and the words "Alaska Plan" be inserted. Is there objection? Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Poulsen? Mr. Poulsen so moves, seconded by Mr. Buckalew. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I think the idea is very good, but the whole background of the proposal that we have -- that has been presented by the Ordinance Committee has used this name because undoubtedly the legal precedent for the thing is going to be put before us, and we felt that by using that terminology we would point the finger at previous actions of a similar nature. I certainly concur with Mr. Poulsen 100 per cent in his desire to make it our plan and not somebody else's plan, but unfortunately somebody else has already used it. And the fact that they have used it is extremely important in giving us precedent for the action, so in this particular case, I feel that it would be better to retain the present terminology.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: A great deal of work has already been done in Congress and with the newspapers of the country. They know the Tennessee Plan; they know that Alaska is interested in the Tennessee Plan; and I think that we will gain great favor if we continue the use of the words "Tennessee Plan".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I will submit that the program as outlined here by the Committee is not the Tennessee Plan, period. And for us to label it as the Tennessee Plan is to be misleading our people. The people may possibly vote against this plan if we proceed here to adopt our two Senators and one Representative, because they may think that we are going to elect our whole state government to boot. So I feel we are not adopting the Tennessee Plan, because our approach has not been bold enough. We have a very, very watered-down version here and it has nothing to do with the Tennessee Plan, except that there was no better name to call it, and I am in hearty concurrence with Mr. Poulsen, because, if we offer it as the Alaska Plan, we are not only going to be misrepresenting things to our voters.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I hate to agree with Mr. McCutcheon. I was on the -- now that might sound funny, but I -- this isn't a Tennessee Plan. It's a watered-down version of the Tennessee Plan. I saw Mr. Poulsen last night, and I promised him on that occasion that I would support his proposal to change the name from "Tennessee" to "Alaska". I will give those hillbillies credit, they went all the way; and I am a little disappointed that we have elected to modify the plan, but I think we had no other choice. I think that we would probably be more honest with Congress and with the people in Alaska to call it the "Alaska Plan".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: If we adopt Mr. Poulsen's proposal, and especially if it should work, it will gain a little honor and glory for Alaska, but we are not in great need of honor or glory right now. We badly need good publicity and lots of it. That publicity has already been started and we have used the Tennessee Plan. A great many of our people yet are not fully acquainted with the Tennessee Plan or the one we are proposing, but, if they know that some other state has already had elected their Senators and Congressmen before being granted statehood, it will establish a precedent. It will show them we are not trying to do something that is too radical, and they will be willing to go along with it, no doubt. So, rather than gain a little honor and glory for Alaska, I think we should be able to take advantage of the publicity that we have.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Briefly, in spirit I agree very much with Mr. Poulsen. I certainly would like to support that. I would like to call this, however, the Alaska version of the Tennessee Plan. But I do want to point out in connection with Tennessee and the other states that used it that they had to go all the way and elect the state senate and house of representatives because in those days it was the legislature who appointed the two Senators, so they had no alternative. Whether or not they would have felt it necessary to go all the way is another question. But there has been such wide publicity given that we will have to agree with Mr. Barr, and neither have he and I agreed too often.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENENTHAL: Did the Committee give thought to calling it the Alaska-Tennessee Plan?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Rather than adopt the name to suit a maverick plan here, I would rather see us perhaps go on a little bit stronger --

I wouldn't require too much -- and let these party caucuses, when they meet, and our independent would-be governors file their names at the same time and elect the governor and secretary of state. I don't see any reason why we shouldn't. Perhaps they could prevail upon Congress when they get back there, then, to name our governor as the appointed governor for the State of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, are you just asking a question?

BUCKALEW: I just wanted to ask ...

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no objection if you wish to ask a question.

BUCKALEW: Mr. McNees, would you have any objection then to adopting an ordinance in which we repudiate the Organic Act?

McNEES: No, I wouldn't. That has occurred to a lot of us many times.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Poulsen be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No". The Noes have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to proposal No. 17-c, revised? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. McNealy a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question. The Convention will come to order.

NORDALE: Mr. McNealy, do you think it would be advisable to insert, since we have stricken the portion of this ordinance that requires the $40 fee -- do you think it would be wise to insert it somewhere, for the reason -- I believe that the Territorial law requires a percentage of the salary, but not less than $10 nor more than $40? Is that right?

McNEALY: I believe that is correct.

NORDALE: Yes. It seems to me that we should decide on a fixed amount since there is no fixed salary attached. We should either say it's $10 or $40 or somewhere in between. Don't you think?

McNEALY: It was the thought of the Committee that the filing fees for all candidates should be $40.

NORDALE: I think it should be $40 all right, but don't you think it should be in the body of the Constitution?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess while the amendment is prepared.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe there are a good many things in addition to the $40 that will have to be worked into this by reason of the fact that we have stricken the procedure here for a primary election. There is some language in there as to what should be said on the ballot, and I believe it applies equally well to what should be said on the general election ballot. So I wonder if the Style and Drafting Committee could not have authority of the Convention to make such changes as are necessary to carry out the intention of the body so that this plan will be workable, since it will be without the primary election feature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: First, Mr. Sundborg, before you ask the Convention to do that, are there other amendments that you would like to offer from the floor? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to move to rescind our action taken awhile ago on an amendment by Mr. Sundborg when we accepted the amendment that the terms should be shortened by two years. If I may, I would like to move that we rescind this action. I think the matter hasn't been given sufficient thought and is a very pertinent question that has not been debated. It has passed our attention and our study, and I think it should come on the floor once more in the form of debate on rescission.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the Convention rescind the action taken on Mr. Sundborg's motion wherein we shortened the term of office of one of the proposed Senators. Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Buckalew. The motion is open for discussion.

KILCHER: My stand is this. I was on the point of debating the question when it was on the floor and decided against it. I expected others might do it. In other words, I slept at the controls. I would like to get the attention of the delegates and think this over carefully. I think Mr. Sundborg had a good intention in this respect, but possibly didn't give it enough thought as he might have if he had had more time or be conversant with the Committee's thinking of weeks past. As has been brought out by Delegate McCutcheon, our Alaska style Tennessee Plan is a watered-down version of the Tennessee Plan. I may say to you delegates that our Alaskan version of the Tennessee Plan has been even more watered down at a time past in the Committee than it is now. The water has a little color to it now; maybe even a little substance. I think that the amendment of Mr. Sundborg's unintentionally has contributed to further water down our Alaskan adaptation of the Tennessee Plan. We must mean to quite an extent what we say in that Tennessee Plan idea. For me, the whole plan can't be bold enough. I am 100 per cent for it, and I think that the very fact that the plan, prima facie as it may be, has looked to be a 100 per cent bold action, is the reason why it has appealed to the people who normally are not very active or even lukewarm to statehood sentiment. It is a thing that catches the fancy of the people. The people will go for something if it is whole or as whole as possible and not a shadow of a substance only. I really think that in a little way to add a little bit more substance to our Tennessee Plan we should leave the terms full. We should leave the terms full as an added indication that we mean business.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: It may or may not interest you to know that I am hungry. I moved for recess a while ago, and then this policy was established that we would recess at 6:10; that was half an hour ago and I find now that they quit feeding in the cafeteria at 7:00 o'clock; so I am going to move for recess again and then go up and eat. I move that we recess until 20 minutes to eight.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 20 minutes to eight. Is there objection?

SUNDBORG: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move?

BARR: I so move.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the convention stand at recess until 20 minutes of eight?" All in favor of recessing until 20 minutes of eight will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed by saying "No". The noes have it and the Convention is still in session. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I think it is about time we either recess or adjourn or Mr. Kilcher will start sleeping at the controls. I really don't think that Mr. Sundborg's amendment in any way whatsoever waters down this plan we have here. That is merely, I believe, a well worthwhile amendment that puts our Senators and Representatives back on the primary basis a little sooner. I think that was the intent and I think we should vote down the rescinding action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: As the only person who voted against Mr. Sundborg's amendment, I didn't bring the matter up again because I felt, if I had any logic, I could convey it to Mr. Sundborg at a recess and I still think I can. I think he is wrong, but I would just as soon not take up the time of the Convention telling him.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I think we should make some provision in this Article, either by Committee or perhaps giving Style and Drafting a little bit of license, and make these offices perpetual, at least provide for the re-election of the delegates to Congress and to the House in, respectively, 1958 and 1962.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I believe there are so many things throughout this plan here that it should go to Style and Drafting with the authorization of this body to carry out -- in even such matters as Mr. Kilcher suggests. On reflection and word from off the floor, I believe that Mr. Kilcher's motion probably should carry, because there are a great many things to resolve there and, if the Style and Drafting Committee had the whole of the Article and, as was so ably shown the other day when Mr. Davis took a matter off the floor and came back with something we could unanimously agree on, and then we could bring our various ideas to that Committee and possibly Mr. Barr could go -- but I see he has already gone.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, if there is no further discussion -- Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to conclude the debate by stating shortly that the whole basis and justification of the Tennessee Plan is this: that we assume that we are a state; we act as a state; we elect our two Senators and one Congressman for whatever term we think they have coming.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now the Chair will state that if you vote yes on this rescinding motion, you will restore the regular term expiring on January 3, 1963, rather than the amendment that had been adopted changing it to January 3, 1959. The question is: "Shall the convention rescind its action taken in adopting Mr. Sundborg's amendment?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

Yeas: 29 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Robertson, Smith, Sweeney, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 19 - Boswell, Cooper, Cross, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hilscher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, Marston, Metcalf, Reader, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Walsh.

Absent: 7 - Awes, Barr, Coghill, Collins, R. Rivers, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin changes his vote from no to yes. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Is it too late now to call for the rest of the house?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, it is too late now for anything except if anyone wishes to change their vote before it's announced.

CHIEF CLERK: 29 Yeas, 19 Nays, and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the yeas have it, and the action has been rescinded. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move that this Proposal 17/c Revised be referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting with the power to suggest amendments of substance preserving the right to treat those matters of substance recommended by them by majority vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the unanimous consent request of Mr. Hellenthal. Is there objection? Is there objection to the unanimous consent request to refer the proposal to the Style and Drafting Committee under the conditions stated? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move we adjourn until 9:00 or 9:01 a.m. tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves that the Convention stand adjourned until one minute after nine tomorrow morning. Is there objection? Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal so moves, seconded by Mr. Robertson, that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:01 a.m. tomorrow. All those in favor of adjourning until 9:01 tomorrow will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "Ayes" have it and the Convention stands adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 30, 1956

SIXTY-NINTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning Chaplain Shaner of the Air Force of Ladd Air Force Base. Chaplain Shaner will give our daily invocation.

CHAPLAIN SHANER: Almighty and eternal God, we lift our hearts and our voices to Thee this day for all of Thy blessings and all of Thy privileges, and for the riches of Thy grace which Thou hast bestowed upon us in the past, and with the promise that Thou will continue to bestow it upon us in a special way this day in the few remaining days that lie before this Convention and these Thy servants. We invoke Thy blessings upon them. Give them continued strength, courage, and devotion; that the things which they have done in the past and will do today and they will do tomorrow may be to the glory of Thy holy name, and for guidance and for the direction not only of we of this generation but of the generations that will follow. And may there come from these halls that document which shall give to mankind that freedom and that right and that justice and that peace which we, Thy children, do greatly long for, and which has been instilled into us by Thy great love. And grant, O God, that this great land of ours may have unity and solidarity and that we may be fortified by Thy great power and those truths and those precepts that alone Thou dost give to us. Ever keep us in Thy grace. In Thy Name we humbly pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Five absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the Special Committee to read the Journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: Reading the Journal of the 63rd day, Tuesday, January

24, I make the following correction in the fourth line from the bottom: The word "Mirth" should be M-y-r-t-h instead of M-i-r-t-h. With that correction, I ask unanimous consent that the Journal be approved and passed unanimously -- the Journal for the 63rd day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight asks unanimous consent that the Journal for the 63rd Convention Day be approved with the correction as noted by the Special Committee to read the Journal.

Is there objection? If there is no objection, the Journal for the 63rd day is ordered approved. Are there reports of standing committees? Of select committees? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Your Committee on Style and Drafting reports back to the Convention its redraft of the Article on Local Government. Copies will be down from the boiler room shortly. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Your Committee to prepare a reply to the communications of sportsmen has prepared a statement, which, together with the enrolled copy of the Resources Article, has been sent out under a covering letter by the President, and there will be copies of this statement for the delegates later in the day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other reports of Committees? If not, are there communications or petitions from outside the Convention? Are there any motions or resolutions to come before us at this time? Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Mr. President, yesterday afternoon we turned over the Tennessee Plan to the Style and Drafting Committee and I tried to put a motion before this body to change the name to Alaska instead of Tennessee. I wonder if I am out of order to put in a new motion and add "Alaska-Tennessee Plan" instead at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen, at this time the Tennessee Plan, the Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, has been referred to the Style and Drafting Committee. The only thing that could possibly be in order would be that, if unanimous consent was granted to -- if your motion included a unanimous consent request that the Committee be instructed to do such a thing -- Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: I want to ask consent of the body to allow Mr. Poulsen to present his motion at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Unanimous consent is asked that Mr. Poulsen be allowed to present his motion at this time, which would in effect instruct the Style and Drafting Committee to make that change if the motion were adopted. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? If there is no objection, then, Mr. Poulsen, you have the permission of the body to make such a motion at this time.

POULSEN: Mr. President, I then move that the words "Alaska-Tennessee Plan" be adopted and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen moves and asks unanimous consent that the words "Alaska-" be inserted before the word "Tennessee" wherever it might appear in the proposal. Is there objection?

R. RIVERS: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Poulsen?

POULSEN: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. White. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Poulsen.

R. RIVERS: May I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Poulsen, we are relying on the precedent that Tennessee has given us, and I know that, having been followed by other states and now having been followed by Alaska, is what puts us in a fairly strong position -- by using Tennessee Plan. Is it going to help at the polls when we try to sell the plan at the polls, in regard to the publicity, to call it the "Alaska-Tennessee Plan"? Or would we be better off just to call it the "Tennessee Plan"?

POULSEN: Yesterday I asked to strike "Tennessee Plan", possibly not thinking it through too clearly. It is true the Tennessee Plan in the last two or three months had quite a bit of publicity. But, on the other hand, the word "Alaska" means a lot to us and it really is an Alaskan plan. This goes back maybe as much as 150 years when this first was adopted, and the last time it was used was maybe a little less than 100 years ago, and I think the old-timers -- if you had the word Alaska ahead of it would be a tremendous so-called sales plan, maybe, to get it over.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of Mr. Poulsen? Hearing no objection...

METCALF: Yes, I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf objects. Then the motion is open for discussion. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I think Mr. Poulsen has a good idea here. I don't think it will hurt us at all to put "Alaska-Tennessee Plan" as a title on here. We will gain all Tennessee has for us and we will gain what Alaska has for us. I am going to vote for Mr. Poulsen's plan to call it the "Alaska-Tennessee Plan".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would just like to point out to the members here that, when most of us came to the Convention, we had heard of this idea; we had discussed it ourselves; but nobody to my knowledge called it the Tennessee Plan in those days. The name caught on within the last five or six weeks.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not -- Mr. Barr?

BARR: I had heard it called the Tennessee Plan before I came here and I had objected yesterday to dispensing with that name because it had already received immense publicity. However, in adopting Mr. Poulsen's name "Alaska-Tennessee", we are not dispensing with it; we are just saying we approve of it and are a part of it. Now, actually it is more descriptive because we are using about 50% of the Tennessee Plan, and I believe it would be a good idea to call it the "Alaska-Tennessee Plan". And I would like to point out that it has been so long since it has been used and it has been revised, I think that the proper name is "Alaska-Tennessee".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: A number of people still don't know how I feel about it. I am for "Alaska-Tennessee".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Do you ask for a roll call. Mr. Robertson? The question is, Mr. Robertson, we have before us a motion by Mr. Poulsen to change, or to add the words "Alaska-Tennessee Plan" to the proposal wherever "Tennessee Plan" might appear. And the question is: "Shall the motion presented by Mr. Poulsen be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 50 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 1 - Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Cooper, Doogan, Hilscher, McCutcheon.)

CHIEF CLERK: 50 ayes, 1 nay, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the Ayes have it and the amendment is ordered adopted by the Style and Drafting Committee. Mr. Sundborg, at this time we have nothing before us -- Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, after a hasty consultation with Style and Drafting this morning, the calendar has gone to the boiler room. Perhaps, if we could have a few minutes recess ...

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is it the desire of the Convention that we take up Committee Proposal No. 17/a, the ordinance that has to do with fish traps, and other matters at this time? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I don't see Mr. Riley, but I was told by him that that was the recommendation of the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we now have before us in second reading Committee Proposal No. 17/a. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: The Committee had another amendment -- I think it was PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, we have, Mr. Buckalew, Mr. McNees's reconsideration. He could bring it up if he so desired -- the vote on the proposed amendment, Committee Proposal 17/a. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: There is the probability, Mr. President, or at least the possibility that a committee amendment might be submitted and not make necessary my reconsideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you desire to wait, Mr. McNees?

McNEES: I would just as soon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I move then, that the provisions pertaining to violations be stricken in its entirety -- "Violations of this section shall be punishable by", etc., be stricken, and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew asks unanimous consent. Is there objection? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: To which copy is the motion directed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: To which copy, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: I have half a dozen here. The one I have in my hand -- is it 17/b?

CHIEF CLERK: No, it is 17/a. the January 25 amendment.

BUCKALEW: 17/a.

CHIEF CLERK: The last sentence. January 25. You changed yours, Mr. Hellenthal, to the 26th, but it is actually dated the 25th.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The one I have is dated the 24th.

BUCKALEW: If there is no objection then --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, many of the delegates evidently haven't found their copy dated the 25th. There have been several amendments adopted as the Chair recalls the situation. Now where does your proposed amendment come in at?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second? Seconded by Mr. Knight. Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: As I remember it, we have already stricken the second sentence on page 2 as well. Is that right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Davis. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: The other time when this -- a similar motion was made by Mr. Kilcher, I asked a question which I don't think was very thoroughly answered as to what does this leave in the ordinance to make it enforceable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If this amendment is adopted? Mr. Buckalew, can you answer that?

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, we felt that it would be enforceable in the courts; if there would be a violation they would have to go by some civil action, by injunction. But, from the lawyers around here, we felt that the state, during that interim period, could probably turn an injunction out, and in that sense it would still be enforceable and serve its purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would also like to ask Mr. Buckalew whether it would not be desirable then to provide a specific directive to the Governor to enforce this particular provision?

BUCKALEW: I think, Mr. Fischer, that the elected Governor would certainly see that the provisions were enforced, and he would have the authority without writing it in. It would be his duty, and he would discharge his duty.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: shall the proposed amendment be adopted? All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying Aye; all opposed by saying No. The Ayes have it and the motion -- the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. I have before me this amendment to Committee Proposal No. 17/a, dated January 25. Am I right in assuming that the words "pending the establishment of the first state legislature" have already been stricken?

BUCKALEW: You are right, Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: And further, that the words, "until otherwise provided by law", and then everything following the use of the words, "until otherwise provided by law"? Have there been others? Is the word "accepted" changed to "ratified" in the ...

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal, if the Chief Clerk would read the proposed amendment as it has already been amended --

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 24. If this Constitution shall be accepted by the electors and a majority of all the votes cast for and against the ordinance to abolish fish traps shall be cast for adoption of the ordinance, then the following shall become effective upon the entry into force of this constitution: 'As a matter of immediate public necessity, to relieve economic distress among individual fishermen and those dependent upon them for a livelihood, to conserve the rapidly dwindling supply of salmon in Alaska, to ensure fair competition among those engaged in commercial fishing, and to make manifest the will of the people of Alaska, the use of fish traps for the taking of salmon for commercial purposes is hereby prohibited in all the coastal waters of the State'. Sec. 25. Each qualified voter who offers to vote upon this Constitution shall be given a ballot by the election judges which in substance shall contain the following proposition: Shall the constitutional ordinance prohibiting the use of fish traps for the taking of salmon for commercial purposes be adopted?"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Could the Clerk read just the amendments in the first four lines?

CHIEF CLERK: Change "proposition" to "ordinance" in lines 3 and 4, and after "effective" add "upon the entry into force of this Constitution".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: There was another amendment, "ratified by the voters". Did that fail? Instead of "accepted by the electors".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have a note on my copy saying that was offered, and then the person who made the motion asked unanimous consent that it be suggested to the Style and Drafting Committee that they make the change, but it wasn't officially changed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to be proposed for Secs. 24 or 25? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: My copy indicates that, at the end of Section 25 in the question, that the language "upon the entry into force of this Constitution" was added. I believe that it was a motion of Mr. Taylors; I'm not sure. Perhaps I put it in the wrong place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Could I ask whether in Sec. 25, just before the colon, whether "proposition" was also changed to "ordinance"?

CHIEF CLERK: No, it wasn't. I have it in the question, but I don't have it in Section 25.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I ask unanimous consent that in line 3 of Sec. 25, "proposition" be changed to "ordinance".

JOHNSON: I object.

V. FISCHER: I withdraw my request.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The request is withdrawn.

BUCKALEW: Maybe I am mistaken, but I thought in the words "shall the proposed constitutional ordinance", I thought the word "constitutional" was stricken. I ask unanimous consent that the word "constitutional" be stricken, so then it would read "shall the ordinance prohibiting the use of fish traps" etc.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves and asks unanimous consent that the word "constitutional" be stricken in the provision that would provide for the referendum. Is there objection? Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment? If there is no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be offered. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: We adopted -- in the question we struck out the word "proposed" -- we changed the word "provision" to "ordinance", we struck out the last two lines and said "be adopted".

CHIEF CLERK: That is the way I read it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other proposed amendments? Mr. McNees. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I am unhappy about the expression "upon the entry into force of the Constitution". That sounds about as awkward, and out of the usual legislative expressions as I have heard and

I would -- does this take unanimous consent or, I should say, a suspension of the rules at this stage of the game?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it does not, Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I move that on the line, next to the bottom line of Sec. 24, the word "effective" be changed to the word "operative" and that the words "effective date" be substituted for "entry into force".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read back the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: In Section 24, line 4, change the word "effective" to "operative" and change "entry into force" to "effective date".

R. RIVERS: May it be read as it would read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that part of the Section as it would read if the amendment were adopted?

CHIEF CLERK: "The following shall become operative upon the effective date of this Constitution."

R. RIVERS: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second.

GRAY: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate Gray seconds the motion. Is there further discussion?

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I don't think I'll object, but as I recall it, Mr. Ralph Rivers offered the original amendment which he now seeks to correct.

R. RIVERS: Point of order. I certainly never even dreamed of such a thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I rise to my own defense. Mr. Sundborg said that I had offered that amendment. I had never heard those words. In fact I objected to them at the time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I will take full responsibility for that language. I have seen it in many other constitutions. It may seem strange to Delegate Rivers, but it is a very common expression.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment signify by saying Aye; all opposed by saying No. The Ayes have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, at this time I would like to have the reconsideration of my vote taken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees moves the reconsideration of his vote on the amendment that had been offered by Mr. Boswell. Is there a second to the motion?

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Doogan. The question is open for discussion; the amendment is open for discussion. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment that had been offered by Mr. Boswell.

CHIEF CLERK: Strike Sections 24 and 25.

MCNEES: The amendment, which was a motion to strike the Article, came up quite early in the assemblage and was voted down by a vote of 19 to 30 with 6 absent. During the course of the voting much hesitancy in the vote was noticeable on the floor. There are many other ramifications of this. There isn't a person on this floor, and very few people in Alaska who are Alaskans, who feel that fish traps should not be abolished at the earliest possible date. I do not feel seriously that it belongs in the Constitution, this particular Committee proposal. Neither do I feel that it will do any good particularly nor speed the abolishment of fish traps. There are many many other ramifications of this problem. I was in strong hopes that the amending process to strike, to strike, to strike, would go on and on to where I wouldn't have to bring up my reconsideration. But I feel obliged to do so after talking to many on the floor here and in informal discussions at numerous times since the 26th, and would like to hear further debate from the assemblage before the amendment is again put to a vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr President, I am somewhat confused. At the time we voted on Mr. Boswell's amendment, we had two full sections. They have now been substantially amended, and I am quite certain that my vote now would be considerably different from what it might have been at the time the amendment was first offered. Now, voting on this reconsideration, are we talking about the section as it existed at the time Mr. Boswell's motion was made or as it now exists?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Davis. As the Chair recollects, Mr. McNees served his notice for reconsideration right near the end of the session that day. Now after that, we had adopted several other amendments, but what would happen to the amendments that had been made in between -- the Convention will be at recess for two or three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there is no objection, the Convention will now take its regular recess for other work that might be done. The Convention is at recess until ten minutes to eleven.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may read the communications that are before us at this time.

(The Chief Clerk thereupon read letters from Governors William G. Stratton of Illinois, Goodwin J. Knight of California, and Arthur B. Langlie of Washington, expressing thanks for the invitation to attend the closing ceremonies and regretting that they would not be able to attend. Such communications were ordered filed with Convention records.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communications will be filed. Mr. McNees, with relation to your move for reconsideration, there are obstacles in that we have gone ahead and adopted other amendments to that -- those particular sections of the proposal. Now, if there could be unanimous agreement that the motion for reconsideration would be on the question of these sections as they now appear before us, then it could be accomplished without too much difficulty. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would so move and ask unanimous consent that, if Mr. McNees' motion fails, that the material now before us be still before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves and asks unanimous consent that, if the move for reconsideration fails, that we would then have before us the proposed amendment as it now appears, as amended. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would have no objection to that. The statement I would like to make in that connection is this, however. My feeling relative to the present sections as they have been amended finally are just as strong as they were to the original sections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, it seems to me we might take care of this matter by having Mr. McNees withdraw his motion for reconsideration and letting somebody move to strike the sections as they now stand. It seems to me we would be getting to exactly the same place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That could be accomplished in that manner if Mr. McNees would so agree. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would go along with Mr. Davis' suggestion. I would like to get this matter out of the way and on to matters of the Convention. I think somebody should make a new motion and we will get it over with.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I will withdraw my motion momentarily, but ...

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees will withdraw his motion temporarily, at least.

JOHNSON: Point of order. Unless the motion to reconsider is withdrawn, completely, no further action could be taken on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, your point of order would be well taken. We have arrived at this point in parliamentary red tape because of the fact that we allowed amendments after Mr. McNees served notice that he was going to reconsider his vote.

MCNEES: I will go a bit further then. I will place my trust in the floor with full confidence that such a motion will be made.

R. RIVERS: Point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: If Mr. McNees withdrew his motion for reconsideration, could he not himself make a motion to strike the paragraph as it now stands?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. He certainly could.

R. RIVERS: There is no trust required, Mr. McNees. You might be the one who would like to strike this particular amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers -- you withdrew your motion, Mr. McNees, with the understanding that another motion would be made to strike this section? Mr. Victor Rivers, is this a proposed amendment to accomplish what -- the Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: Strike Sections 24 and 25 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Section 24. Provision shall be made for the elimination of commercial fish traps operated in the coastal waters of the state by the first state legislature prior to its adjournment".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment; seconded by Mr. Metcalf. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I would like to know if that meets Mr. McNees' objections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees assented to the move. The question is -- Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: This motion to amend goes straight to the heart of what I mentioned the other day. I do not think, by establishing within the Constitution itself, either by ordinance or provision, a direct mandate having the force of law and immediate operation, that the Congressmen would accept such a proposal or proposition. I do not believe that it would accomplish the purpose that this would accomplish. This is a mandate for the first Territorial Legislature that before they adjourn they shall abolish or eliminate fish traps, commercial fish traps, fishing in the coastal waters. I think it expresses the intent of this body to do away with fish traps as quickly as possible and in an orderly manner. It is my fixed conviction that, if we put in the Constitution, either as an ordinance or a section, the outright and immediate abolition of fish traps, that the least Congress will do will be to eliminate that from the section. I can foresee that they might do other things including substantial delay to getting statehood. I do not believe that, by putting the provision that is now before us, not the amendment but the unamended section, into the Constitution, that we will gain any time in the elimination of fish traps. I think we have a very good chance of losing substantially in the matter of time and in the matter of consideration of statehood by Congress. That is my firm opinion. I know there are others who do not agree with my thinking on that, but I cannot escape the idea that Congress is going to insist upon an orderly performance of our duties of government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I am somewhat bewildered by the position that Delegate Rivers has taken. I mean, there is nothing disorderly about a function of government by cutting off fish traps instantly, because the law is well-settled that there is no property right in the fish traps. It is an annual right, it's renewable each year.

And my second objection is that it is an improper method to approach the problem, because we don't have any authority. All that is is a referendum; that's outside the scope of our authority; that is not a constitutional function. In the first place, I think they can strike that referendum from the ballot. I don't believe -- and I am certain that they can't strike the ordinance in the form it is in because there is a reason for it; it's a proper subject. We are allowing people to vote on the ordinance to abolish traps. There is a reason for that. We don't have the authority to set out a referendum, and there is all kinds of precedents for similar ordinances. We have had them for prohibition and you have had them for women's voting, and they have all stood up, but I have never seen a constitutional convention that has been convened like this one that has the authority for a single referendum. Now, that's all that is. Now I would ask all of you to vote that down because it's meaningless. How could you enforce it? Can you mandamus the First Legislature to abolish fish traps? You cannot. You might as well forget it. You might as well do it by a memorial. It has the same effect -- none. You couldn't enforce legislation to do anything with a memorial. You can't force them to do anything with this proposal. We are wasting our time. We are either going to take a legal step and give the courts something to work on -- traps are abolished; the people vote on it; they exercise their sovereignty; and it's a proper subject. And I ask that this amendment be voted down. Now, Mr. Rivers said a couple of days ago that he didn't think traps were a proper subject in the Constitution. Well, the way he has it now they are certainly improper; there is no reason for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Buckalew a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no objection, Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. Buckalew, is there any thinking, possibly, in your mind, that any legislature that would be elected by the people of Alaska would not put at least among the very first items taken up, and abolish them directly?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I was hoping you wouldn't ask me that question directly. I haven't had much experience in Alaska; I was in one legislature. And I know that, when you get any legislation that has to do with fish traps and send it to the Senate, it's like sending a stick of dynamite with a short fuse. I am not convinced the First Legislature would abolish them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I believe it would be wholly undignified to instruct the Legislature what they should do. Legislators, when they are elected and sent to the capital to serve in the Legislature have to vote on each question that comes before them in accordance with their own conscience and belief at the time, and, if we elect a bunch of people who do not believe in abolishing fish traps, how could they abolish them and vote to do it? They couldn't do it. So I agree with Mr. Buckalew that this is meaningless and is not the way to approach the problem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Awes.

AWES: I also agree with Mr. Buckalew. I think fish traps are one of the things which the Alaskan people feel most strongly about, and I don't think it is something we should straddle the fence on. Either we should state that it is not within our province and leave it alone, or we should do something that has some effect, and I think Mr. Rivers' resolution would not be effective because you couldn't force the Legislature to take action. And, as I said before, I think it is straddling the fence and I think it's an improper way to handle this problem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Lee.

LEE: I would like to address a question to Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no objection, Mr. Lee.

LEE: You used the expression, I believe, "in the orderly performance of government". I was wondering how he feels about the calling of this session here, for a constitutional convention. and I was also wondering how he feels about the Tennessee Plan.

V. RIVERS: I think the record speaks plainly about how I feel about both. I think this is not pertinent to the question. I really feel -- I notice that Mr. Buckalew referred to my motion as a referendum, and I also notice that Miss Awes referred to it as a resolution. It is neither. It is an ordinance. We have a number of mandatory provisions in the Constitution mandating the Legislature to do certain things. This is another mandate from this body. And as far as how I feel about the orderly process of government, I think I have demonstrated how I feel about it. I would like to see it done in an orderly manner based on good judgment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have a question of Mr. Rivers. Perhaps I didn't hear the reading of the resolution too correctly, but is this a resolution, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: This would be an ordinance to go in the transitory provisions, or it could go in the body of the Constitution; it wouldn't matter. It is a mandate to the First Territorial Legislature that before adjournment they shall take action to eliminate fish traps.

HELLENTHAL: And you propose it either as an ordinance or provision of the Constitution?

V. RIVERS: I don't care which, where it goes. I proposed it as an ordinance to Section 24.

HELLENTHAL: Then, how do you propose that there be a referendum on the ordinance?

V. RIVERS: Not a referendum; this is a mandate without a referendum. A referendum would merely be a mandate anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I would like to speak against Mr. Rivers' position. As I stated before on this question, it is not a matter we can take very lightly, and I think it deserves a very careful, honest consideration, because I don't have to repeat here what others have stated already. It concerns the livelihood of people and I think it deserves fair consideration. For that reason, I think the ordinance that we have amended on the floor here takes care of the situation adequately, and I don't think my friend Mr. Rivers' amendment is the answer to it, because he said the Legislature will take care of it, and we have no guarantee that may pass a law to abolish traps, we don't know. The point is, the problem is here and it is very serious, and we have an opportunity to express our opinion in behalf of the people who are concerned, and I don't think we should pass up that opportunity. I am against the amendment, and I hope you folks vote it down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: It occurs to me, just on hearing the words "final adjournment" in the ordinance of Mr. Victor Fischer's [Rivers'], that the one advantage remaining in Mr. Buckalew's proposition is the 30-day feature which Mrs. Hermann touched on the other day. There is some certainty that there will be a thirty-day advantage under the Buckalew proposal. This refers to the Ordinance, Committee Proposal No. 17/a. Mrs. Hermann pointed out that that thirty days may come in the middle of winter, but, on the other hand, it may occur in the middle of the salmon fishing season. It might occur at the outset of the fishing season and be most effective. Now, in the ordinance just proposed, final adjournment would mean there is a 90-day lapse over the Buckalew proposal. In the one case, we are certain that action would be had immediately on attainment of statehood, thirty days prior to the Legislature's convening. The Legislature, it has been stated here by many, would probably consider the matter early in the game, but it would not be obliged to, even though that ordinance obliged it to, do anything until the 60th day. So, for that reason, just a mechanical operation alone, the 90-day advantage enjoyed by the Buckalew amendment, I shall vote against the pending one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I had intended to speak along the same vein as Mr. Riley did, and I have to correct some of his figures. By carefully going over the schedule here, section by section, I have arrived at entirely different figures, figures much more substantial than Mr. Riley has indicated. Within 30 days after approval, the Territorial Governor may call a primary election. These elections will be held within 40 to 90 days; that is, 30 and 90 at the outmost. Within 90 days, there may be general elections. The results would be in within 30 days and within 30 days after the certification of results, than the Legislature will convene, and the Legislature may well not pass a fisheries act for 2 or 3 or 4 or 5 months. So you would have a time lag of possibly 12 or 14 months after attainment of statehood before the necessary steps might be taken. That is taking a dimmer view, but all maximum figures are used. If you used the shortest possible figure, assuming that we might obtain statehood early in late winter and Congress convenes in D. C., let's say, February or March, the deal might go through, it still will be within 30 days after approval of the ballots or call for the primary election. Let's say after 10 days, 10 days instead of 30. Now within 40 to 90 days primary elections would be held. Let's take the minimum of 40. Already we have 50 days and then within 60, within 90 days, general elections will be held. You can safely assume there will be 60 days, two months. Yesterday we heard about the mechanics of elections. It is very improbable that it could possibly be done in less than two months. The general election has lagged 110 days and then the results couldn't be cut to less than a month. That would be 140 days, and then, if the Governor called the Legislature within 30 days, the Governor's call of the Legislature, let's say within 10 days instead of 30; it's the shortest possible term, and you get a minimum of five months elapsed by that time. And if we should attain statehood in May or June, the traps would be in that season; and if we take it longer, the longer possible terms, 12 to 14 months, they will be in two more seasons, and for certain one season -- a substantial difference. So, whether it is one or the other, I want you to be aware of the impact of these figures.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I haven't spoken on this. Mr. Kilcher, as I listened to your figures, to your time schedule, it occurred to me you were under the impression that the Constitution would become effective at the time Congress passes the enabling act. Is that your understanding?

KILCHER: No.

SUNDBORG: When do you think it becomes effective?

KILCHER: If this ordinance, this proposal as it is now were passed, the fish traps would be declared illegal the day the Constitution is approved by the President.

SUNDBORG: When is that, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I am no prophet, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Hasn't every enabling act always said that the Constitution becomes effective and statehood is granted only after we have elected all of our state officials and the First State Legislature? The answer is "yes".

HELLENTHAL: Point of order. I think it is a bit strange to ask questions and then answer them yourself.

SUNDBORG: May I address a question to Mr. Riley?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Riley, you spoke of the 60 days of the session. Is there any provision in the Constitution for that?

RILEY: I stand corrected on that; I was pleased to stand corrected by Mr. Kilcher as a matter of fact.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I had planned to speak on this before, but after Mr. Peratrovich spoke, I felt that everything had been very well expressed. However, in discussing amendments, Mr. Riley referred to "Mr. Victor Fischer's amendment". I want to disown and disavow any connection with it. I am very much opposed to it. I think fish traps are one of the most important things in our fight for statehood. This means a tremendous amount to the people of Alaska. I think we can be honest about it; I think we can tackle the problem directly. I feel that this ordinance does that in part. I would go a step farther. I think the fish trap problem has been of such proportions in Alaska that I think it should be put into the body of the Constitution, because it is an expression of the people as to why they want statehood. I think it is important to have it become effective.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President. Is Mr. Fischer discussing this thing on the floor now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: I believe Mr. Fischer is discussing it. He is explaining why he is supporting this proposed amendment, I believe.

V. FISCHER: I feel that we should vote this motion down, and I hope then we will face this issue squarely and put the provision in one sentence into the Constitution itself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: If I remember correctly, and being on the Ordinance Committee, this whole matter started out on December 5 with Proposal No. 33 from Mr. Eldor Lee, and that proposal reads as follows: "Resolved that the following is agreed upon as a part of Alaska's State Constitution. The use of fish traps for the taking of fish for commercial purposes is hereby prohibited in the waters of the State of Alaska." We then come on to Mr. Buckalew's amendment. Am I correct, Mr. Buckalew? May I ask Mr. Buckalew a question? Do I understand, Mr. Buckalew, that you have removed the violations clause of your proposed amendment?

BUCKALEW: Sometimes I think I might be an effective delegate, but I don't have the authority to remove anything once it has been submitted. The Convention voted to remove the violations section and I voted in favor of it.

HILSCHER: Both for the $5,000 and the confiscation of fish traps?

BUCKALEW: The Convention did, yes.

HILSCHER: Thank you. Now I have before me here a proposed amendment which has been signed by a considerable section of this group.

LONDBORG: Point of order. I believe that that is not before us at all. I believe there is another proposed amendment before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I am against putting anything in the Constitution regarding fish traps. I might say, in order not to confuse you, however, that I am against fish traps. In one place in our Resources Committee Article, it says we will manage our resources on the principle of conservation, and in another place it says we will manage our natural resources on the principle of conservation, and in another place it says we will manage our resources on the principle of sustained yield. In another place it says that all of the people shall have a common right to our resources. Now those three things cover fish traps. I think -- I know that the First Legislature will abolish fish traps, probably the first thing they do. I have been in several sessions of the Legislature and I am sure they will. The Senate has always had that feeling with the exception of perhaps one or two members, although the Senate never has become hysterical about anything, which doesn't agree with some people. They believe in going about it in an orderly manner and, if it will help Mr. Buckalew any, I will give him my solemn promise that if I am there at that time I will vote for the immediate abolishment of fish traps, but I do not believe it has any place in our Constitution, that there is no need for a referendum whatever. We know how the people feel, and I do not believe we should have an ordinance here affecting fish traps. We want to become a state because by becoming a state we can correct a long list of grievances. Fish traps is one injustice under which we have suffered and when we become a state we can correct it immediately. If we go ahead and put it in the Constitution or enact an ordinance here to abolish fish traps even before we become a state, some people will think the only reason we want to be a state is to abolish fish traps. That is not correct. Now, when we were considering sport fishing or wildlife, there were certain people in the Territory concerned with those matters who wanted us to put it in the Constitution the way they wanted it, and have a commission to administer the affairs of sport fishing, and most of us didn't believe it had a proper place in the Constitution. The fishermen, as much as I sympathize with them, are another group of people, and I cannot blame them. If I were a fisherman, I would want it in the Constitution too; but they are another group of people, a little more important to them and to us, because it is an industry and a means of livelihood, for that matter. But it is still one group of people who want a better safeguard put in the Constitution, and it is a legislative matter. It is a matter which I believe the First Legislature will take care of and take care of in an orderly manner. I believe in first things first and last things last. First we must become a state and then we will immediately correct all these injustices.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: May I address a question to Mr. Barr.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Lee.

LEE: The only reason I had risen before was to address a question. Mr Barr, in our Constitution we have one statement saying that debtors -- well, there will be no imprisonment for debt except in the case of absconding debtors. Do you think people will feel that is the only reason we want statehood -- to take care of that? And, also, we have the statement that the Legislature shall control lobbying. We have that in the Constitution. Do you feel that people will think the only reason we want statehood is to control lobbying?

BARR: No, I don't. I don't think so because that comes under the Bill of Rights, and that is the main reason for the Constitution, to protect the rights of the people, and in our Resources proposal we protect the rights of the people as far as fish are concerned, when we say all of the people will have a common right to fish.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any further discussion? Does anyone wish the floor at this time? The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Sections 24 and 25 and insert in lieu thereof the following: Section 24. Provision shall be made for the elimination of commercial fish traps operated in the Coastal waters of the State by the first State legislature prior to its adjournment."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the adoption of the amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 12 - Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Hilscher, Johnson, McNealy, McNees, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson.

Nays: 42 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight. Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - Cooper.)

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 42 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the Nays have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to be proposed for Sections 24 or 25?

CHIEF CLERK: There is one from Mr. White.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: Strike Sections 24 and 25 as amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

SUNDBORG: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Sundborg. Mr. White.

WHITE: I approach this with the greatest reluctance. I have a feeling that perhaps it is something I cannot afford to do, but then I had the greater feeling that those who said we should face this issue squarely are right, and I think the issue before us is whether or not we should treat this matter in any way, shape or form in the Constitution, and, if we feel we should not, to have done with it; and, if we feel we should, to do it in the strongest way possible. The vote the other day was certainly the most reluctant vote that was taken, in any opinion, during the entire session. I voted the other day against striking this section, and I have been sorry ever since. I think we have faced this kind of problem time and time again during this Convention and, in my opinion, have solved it the right way in each instance. I think we come to it again here in its most serious form, because there is no question but what the fish trap question is very emotionally involved with all of us. It is probably Alaska's greatest grievance against the Territorial form of government, and it is a most difficult one for us to consider objectively because of those reasons. But I firmly feel that in taking an action here, which I really believe a large number of us feel is not a Constitutional matter, we do ourselves more harm than those we are trying to get at. Now I don't know if anyone in this body is for fish traps or not, but I do know it is next door to impossible to be for immediate statehood and the Tennessee Plan, and be for fish traps at the same time, and I think, if we leave the matter alone, we cannot be misunderstood by the Alaskan people. I think very few of us came here with any mandates from the people to write anything concerning abolishment of fish traps into the Constitution. The Resources Committee had this before it for a couple of months and after calm and deliberate consideration, the Resources Committee decided unanimously, as I recall it, with possibly one exception, against including this matter in the Constitution itself, and unanimously, I believe, with one exception, against treating it as an ordinance, and finally decided perhaps the best way to handle it was to treat it as a resolution to the First State Legislature. Now I agree with those who have said a resolution is a poor way out. I don't think that is facing the issue squarely, but I think, since it has come on the floor, it has become more difficult to decide; but if we had a chance to go through the same calm orderly process of reasoning on this matter as in others, we would eventually come to the same decision as the Resources Committee did. We have had advice more than once from prominent Alaskans, who have every reason to be as violently opposed to fish traps as any one of us here, that it would be better left unsaid as far as the Constitution is concerned. I would agree with Mr. Barr that this is only one of many grievances that the people of Alaska have against the Territorial form of government. It happens to be probably the most emotionally charged one. I think we do damage to ourselves by submitting in this case to our emotions. I don't know what more I can say, but I do feel strongly that we would be strictly in line with the kind of thinking and kind of action that took place in this body over the past months. I do feel strongly that no single one of us here would be misunderstood by the Alaskan people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I am among those who voted in favor of Mr. Boswell's amendment the other day. I voted in favor of that amendment not because I was in favor of fish traps, but because I felt the provision as it was was not the way to handle it. However, we have now spent considerable time in amending that provision and, so far as I am concerned, we now have it at a point that is, to my notion, workable, and to me it is acceptable. I am going to vote against Mr. White's amendment. Mr. White's motion to strike, and that doesn't mean I am in favor of fish traps. I think they should be abolished, and I believe the overwhelming majority of Alaskans feel the same way. It is just a matter of how to get at it. And, so far as I am concerned, I think the proper way to handle it is by constitutional ordinance and not by placing it in the body of the Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to state at this time, before further discussion, that this is the third time that the Chair has been placed in the position of allowing the body, through their -- if this question is put -- through their willingness to act on the policy that the Convention wants to put such a question. Now when Mr. Boswell offered the amendment striking these sections, on Saturday, I believe it was, or Friday, it was indicated at that time that the body wished an expression of what the policy of this Convention was going to be, and in the mind of the Chair, striking these sections without -- and not offering amendments or new sections in their place, was, from a parliamentary standpoint, was out of order in that it completely kills the proposal. Yesterday, when Mr. McLaughlin offered his amendment to the other proposal, 17/c, Revised, it was definitely the understanding of the Chair that it was the wish of the body that at that time they be allowed to vote on the policy as to whether we desired some type of Tennessee Plan. Now we are in the same position again. From a parliamentary standpoint, it is not in order to completely destroy an Article or proposal in second reading. Amendments can be offered substantially changing the meaning, but you cannot kill a proposal in second reading unless by suspension of all rules of procedure, it can be done and that, in the two previous instances, was indicated was what the body wanted to do. They wanted a statement of policy at that time. The Chair makes that statement only to let the body know that this has been allowed in these two instances previous to this time because it seemed to be, without objection, the wish of the body that they desired to make that as a statement of policy. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER. Mr. White referred to the deliberations of one Committee. I think we are 55 members here who have all been thinking in terms of fish traps. We have been discussing this matter for days. I don't think it is right to imply that if we act on this now it would not be on our considered judgment, if we do include something in the Constitution, even though one Committee early in the session felt it should not be included. I personally know that many members of that Committee now feel otherwise. I would further like to refer to just one other statement Mr. White made. He referred to this as probably the most emotionally charged grievance that we have. It probably is, and that in itself makes it worth including in the Constitution. We have a good example of similar action. Take a look at the United States Constitution. There are items in there which were included because those were grievances at the time this Nation was founded. Let me read you just one -- "No soldier shall in time of peace be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war but in a manner to be prescribed by law". At that time that was a real grievance. That was included in Article III in the Bill of Rights. I think we have the same right to include statements like this in our Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher, are you asking a question? Have you spoken before?

HILSCHER: Yes, I didn't speak before. I spoke on the previous amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher, you have the floor.

HILSCHER: I believe that this body should be entirely aware and cognizant of some points which Mr. Lehleitner pointed out to us -- where the cells of opposition to Alaskan statehood come from, and the bearing that highly controversial issues such as this will have on the possible effect of our statehood aspirations in Congress. He pointed out that 25% of the control of Congress is in the South; that, between the southern Senators and Representatives and those from New England, there are two hard cores that we are going to have a hard time to bust. We know that a good deal of the financial interest of canneries -- of the industry -- comes out of New England and, with the effective lobby we have seen in Congress for the past 25 years or longer, and if we place this in the Constitution, we are just adding fuel to the anti-statehood fires. I am just as much opposed to statehood (laughter) as the fishermen represented here or anyone else.

McCUTCHEON: If Mr. Hilscher is opposed to statehood, I think he should resign from the Convention. (laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I am just as much opposed to fish traps as is everyone in this entire organization and I just hate to see something go in here which can be handled in an orderly manner. I hate to see it go in, because it is going to add fuel to those who oppose our efforts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I'd like to ask a question. You said that it was the purpose of this amendment or motion to give the body a chance to vote on policy. I don't know who I should ask, but I would like to know what particular policy we are voting on. Are we voting against fish traps or are we voting against handling it in this way?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, it would be -- the only way such an amendment could be considered, is if there is, without objection, it is handled in the vein that it is an attempt of the body to determine whether it shall be the policy to handle the fish trap question through an ordinance of this Convention, would be the feeling of the Chair. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Well, our policy in the past has been to approve Articles as a whole in third reading. Therefore, unless we do have the possibility of striking individual sections as we go along in second reading, we would never have a chance to strike again, and it seems to me this would be the proper time to strike sections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I voted with Mr. Boswell the other day on his amendment to strike the section. I think I explained as we amended the Article why I voted the way I did. I have seen the abuses. Some of you who have not lived close to the water are not aware of how serious some of these abuses may be. But I believe this is no time in the white heat of something that seems to be one that you can get some great support on to place this in the Constitution. It isn't that any one of us are fudging on it. It's a case that we feel we are marking a milestone here of having clear heads, and I ask that everyone of us will approach it from that basis. This is highly emotional, and you can go on record if that is what you want. You can have your name down as being against fish traps, but that doesn't make for a good Constitution, and I feel that it's an injustice to the total program we are pursuing here to keep this in, and so I will vote with Mr. White. I hope you will remember that, too, Mr. White.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In answering Mr. Fischer's suggestion, the Chair realizes the Chair has this committee amendment before it known as i7/a. However, there are other sections relating to many different things in the Proposal 17/a. In particular, the Chair has been worried about this all morning, thinking the Chair had been allowing something that wasn't right to go on here, on the floor, but the Chair forgot that this was merely a portion of the ordinance that includes many, many things and which is not an Article. If this were completely deleted, then the motion is in order and an objection would not take the motion off the floor. The Chair stands corrected. Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. Davis, in your opinion, now that all reference to the enforcement provision has been stricken from this section, do you think this ordinance is enforceable by injunction or any other way?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, in my opinion, it is. I think it can certainly be supplemented by the Legislature if anything further is needed. So far as I am concerned, I do have some doubts as to whether we even ought to have an ordinance, but, if we are going to have anything at all, I think an ordinance is the proper way to do it, and I intend to vote against Mr. White's amendment.

AWES: Do you think it is enforceable as it stands right now?

DAVIS: I feel it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I don't agree with apparently the majority of the members of this body. As far as I am concerned, I favor fish traps. I think fish traps have been one of the greatest sources of our tax money for many years. There has been a fight on fish traps, to my personal knowledge, since the First Session of the Legislature in 1913, and I think, as a matter of fact, that it would be just as successful to put in an ordinance of prohibition against mobile power boats that are ruining the industry down in Cook Inlet. They are ruining the industry in Bristol Bay because there are too many of them. They are too mobile and they can come up, as I stated the other day, in spite of Delegate Peratrovich's statement, the boats coming up from Puget Sound and the coast of California are one of the most serious menaces to our fishing industry there is. It isn't the fish trap. I presume I have been involved in more fish trap litigation, or as much as any lawyer in Alaska. I attended the hearings that were held in Hydaburg, Klawock, and Kake in the fall of 1944 before Judge Hanna. I submit it didn't show that fish traps were destroying the salmon at all. Mr. Taylor spoke of 400 traps in the waters of Alaska. I have known when there were over 800 traps, and even after we had 800 traps our total catch totaled eight million cases. In fact, we produced regularly in the First Division for years over several million cases, and the fish traps have been lowered all the time. They are diminishing. The Secretary of the Interior right now has some kind of a new proposition before him to cut them down another 50 per cent. And that doesn't restore the salmon. The fact is that the salmon being used today -- the greater part of the salmon that is being used today are being used for fresh fish purposes. Much of it is being shipped out frozen. It is being taken by the freezer ships and canned down in the States. Now you ought to have a prohibition against all of those. I submit to you that Mr. Victor Rivers suggestion and my view of this is it ought to be left to the Legislature. I have no doubt what the Legislature will do -- I probably wouldn't be a member of it -- but I realize the Legislature will probably immediately abolish fish traps. But they will make some provision so that, if it is in the middle of the season and a person is operating a fish trap, there will be some definite date; it will either be cut off before the commencement of the season or at the end of the season and not under this provision. As I understand the proponents of it, they would say that, if we became a state on the first of August of this year, or next year, that the minute you put a fish trap in, you should have taken cognizance of this threat here, and not knowing when we would become a state, and not put in your trap and I submit we ought to support Mr. Barrie White's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: I would like to direct a question to Mr. Robertson through the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If no objection, you may.

McCUTCHEON: As a matter of fact, Mr. Robertson, the year we packed over eight million cases, isn't it a fact that there were over five million packed in Bristol Bay and there are no fish traps in Bristol Bay?

ROBERTSON: There have been no fish traps in Bristol Bay since 1912, it is my recollection, but they do have staked gill nets along the shore.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move the previous question.

BUCKALEW: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves the previous question, seconded by Mr. Buckalew. The question is: "Shall the previous question be ordered?"

BUCKALEW: I'd like to withdraw my second, I forgot that Mr. White hadn't an opportunity to close.

HINCKEL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel seconds the motion.

V. FISCHER: I move and ask unanimous consent that Mr. White be permitted to close.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I think this motion is out of order. It's actually the same motion as putting the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is at this time: "Shall the previous question be ordered?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 16 - Awes, Barr, Coghill, Gray, Hellenthal, Hinckel, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Sundborg, Taylor, and White.

Nays: 38 - Armstrong, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, and Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - Cooper.)

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 38 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the Nays have it and the previous question has not been ordered. Is there anyone else -- Mr. Peratrovich has been attempting to get the floor. Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I just wanted to clarify a statement -- a reference Mr. Robertson made about the boats coming to Alaska. I think he stated that there were boats coming up, but they don't find it profitable for the simple reason our fish are depleted to the point where they can do better down on the Sound. That is my answer. And his explanation implied that we had an over-run of boats coming up, and I don't want that opinion conveyed to the delegates. Now, there has been mention made here of the taxation angle, that we have to lose should we eliminate fish traps. But I would like to remind those of you that share that opinion that the individuals and families of those that are involved are also taxpayers. Some of them own property. They have boats and seines they have to pay taxes on and, if you don't give them an opportunity by replenishing this resource, you are going to lose that tax also, and perhaps the families, perhaps. They'll move elsewhere. Now that is the thing you have to consider. As far as having a fear that we may have dissenting votes on our proposed Constitution on account of our language regarding the traps, I have no fear of that. I was under the impression when I was elected to this Convention that one of the more important subjects would be our resources. I still feel that way. I felt that way about mining and timber and I certainly put the fisheries question in that classification. I don't feel that we should try to evade this question and, as I stated before, the problem is here. You know the people that are involved and it is up to the delegates to do something in our Constitution so we can remedy this. That's my opinion and that is the reason I am supporting an expression from this Convention. At the present time our Delegate has a bill pending in Congress -- I understand it is in Committee now -- that seeks to eliminate fish traps, and -- this is my own opinion -- perhaps an expression from this Convention would strengthen his position. I don't know, but that certainly is my opinion, and I am going to use that for an argument. And, furthermore, it is the first time in the history of the question of traps that we have some sort of expression from one agency of our National Government. It is not very favorable, but, nevertheless, it is an expression recognizing the fact that there is a serious problem. In the past they always told us the only concern the Department had was the conservation of fisheries. On that grounds they didn't want to air any question, any hearing, on any traps at all. The minute you invoked the economic side of it, you were ruled out of order. I am very much impressed now that they finally recognized the fact that that angle has to be considered. It seems to me we are going to lose an opportune time to have an expression from the body of this sort if we were to pass it up and disregard even the mention of the traps. For that reason I think this ordinance will cover the thing, and I am sure it will be satisfactory, and I don't think any real Alaskan will vote against our Constitution on that grounds.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I am going to vote against Mr. White's amendment, but I want to say I know Mr. White is sincere in his feelings on this subject. As he said, it was discussed in Committee and, again, I know that there was a dissenting vote within the Committee. The main thing I wanted to call attention to was, in contrast to the eight million case pack referred to by Mr. Robertson, I noticed just the day before yesterday in one of the newspapers that the salmon pack on the entire Pacific Coast during the past year was the smallest in 50 years. That includes all fish packed in freezer ships in Alaska and Puget Sound and everywhere else, and actually that is all I have to say.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I am against Delegate White's motion; and I would like to make a remark in regard to the Bristol Bay situation, which was mentioned by Delegate Robertson. In 1946 an Assistant Secretary of the Interior, a Mr. Gardner, appeared before the House Insular Affairs Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, reported in H.R. 38, part 1, and he made the following statement in regard to Bristol Bay: "There are valuable salmon runs and real conservation problems in that area. The system that has grown up there is very nearly equivalent to the trap system". I have been shutting my eyes to it because I have had the feeling it is perhaps more than I could swallow now. Certainly, mobile gear has contributed to the problem of conservation in Bristol Bay. But I will point out this: that in Bristol Bay it was these large fleets operated by these same corporations that are operating the large trap aggregates and in other areas that have led to the depletion of the fish. No one here has said that this trap abolition is going to be the sole answer, but we have to start somewhere on the problem of conservation of our fisheries, and that is the place to start. I don't believe we can afford to or should be silent on the matter by striking this section. Not only in regard to our problems here in Alaska, but presently there are two bills now pending in Congress, one for the abolition of fish traps, and one for the transfer of the fisheries to Alaska. Both of those are tied up with the trap question and the question of trap regulation. If we are silent on this matter, what if this Constitution doesn't go into effect for 10 or 15 or 20 years? I think this is the time to talk across these thousands of miles to Congress and tell them that as Alaskans we want fish traps abolished, and that is why I think in this Constitution, whether by ordinance or in the body, it is perfectly proper that we deal with it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I just have a few thoughts to leave with the delegates. In my estimation, one of the important things of this Convention is to prove to the United States, to the Congress, that we are politically mature. I think they are looking at that very thing. I believe this is one of the first immature actions that has been taken, and it has been taken because the voting has been on an emotional basis and for expediency. I would like to have everyone to consider the effects that the inclusion of anything in our Constitution may have in regard to statehood. We have heard Mr. Hilscher's comments on this. We know he is a public relations man. It is his business to analyze the impact of this sort of thing, and I think he has hit the nail squarely on the head when he says this may very materially delay statehood. And I would say to the people from the fishing districts, who are close to this problem, that they should realize we are not going to get rid of fish traps until we get statehood, and anything that we do here that will delay statehood is going to delay the abolition of fish traps. I would much rather see Mr. Buckalew's ordinance than something in the body of the Constitution, but I would much rather see nothing said about it, and I will support Mr. White's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson

JOHNSON: May I direct a question to Mr. Emberg through the Chair?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Emberg, you referred to a report of some Committee hearing before the Congress, I believe, and read from that report. Do you believe from what you have read and what you stated afterward that it would be also advisable for this Convention to take some action on the mobile gear situation that exists in Bristol Bay?

EMBERG: I would be perfectly willing, if this Convention were willing, to establish a basis of industrial regulation in the Constitution to deal with the situation. In answer to that question I may go a little afield. It has been said here that the Territory -- the people of the Territory have lots of grievances against the federal administration, against the Territorial setup. I believe that it is true. But most of the discrimination has some basis in law. We are excluded from certain benefits under the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Act because it has been held by the courts that the Congress of the United States can discriminate against the Territory. Therefore, it's legal. But the basic thing about fisheries is that they are open to all, and under underlying philosophy should be that no one should have a greater right to reduce these fish from the status of public property to private property than any other citizen. That is what we are getting into here, and that is why I believe it is a matter of philosophy that we can treat with here. If you had a parallel case in the game court that you have in the commercial fisheries, you'd have a setup or a set of regulations about moose hunting that said that I could hunt moose with a BB gun and someone else could use a 50-calibre machine gun and a tank if they wished. That is the thing we are getting at. You are getting at something that is definitely un-American; it's a perversion of the law. Actually, the way I feel about it, and I don't care whether I am speaking with any immunity here as a delegate, I feel it is a question of fraud. That is what I believe. I don't believe this system of regulation that we have is American. I don't think it's even legal under the delegation of authority to the Secretary of the Interior and the Department of the Interior to regulate these things. Two years ago, in 1954, in Bristol Bay again, the Fish and Wildlife Service, the administrator, Mr. Farley, met with the operators of the canneries in Bristol Bay, in Seattle, and they divided up the amount of gear that was going to go into the fisheries in Bristol Bay for that season. They decided on 350 units or boats for the Naknek-Kvichak. The companies divided that quota up among themselves, and they brought in nonresidents from the coast of the United States to fish them. I personally know of over 100 resident fishermen, Natives most of them, from the Illiamna area who, when they came down to fish that season in a fishery in the maritime public domain where the right of fishing was supposed to be extended to every citizen of the United States, and they were told by these companies, "We don't want your fish at any price". I tell you, the manipulation that is going on in fisheries is something that we will have to get away from and eliminate as soon as possible. I think we are on the right track to start here on the elimination of fish traps.

BARR: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Actually, Mr. Emberg hasn't been debating the question here; he has been debating fish traps. The reason I didn't interrupt him was because I agree with him, but I don't believe we should have any more debate on the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg was answering a question. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I haven't spoken on the matter before. May I have the floor? I just wanted to point out that there seems to me to be a little bit of inconsistency in the arguments that have been presented, particularly on the question of whether or not the subject before us is a matter of legislative concern and whether or not it is properly included in the Constitution. I note that a statement was issued this morning by the Resources Committee concerning what should properly be included in the Constitution, and they start out by saying that the Constitution shall be a document of basic principles and fundamental law, and go on to support their position that any mention of commissions to regulate the fisheries thereby was not properly included in the Constitution. Now, I believe that argument applies just as well to the question before us. Now, I am not trying to cry in my beer, so to speak, because I happen to support that fisheries commission amendment, but I would like to say that not only on that occasion but on one other occasion when I suggested that we ought to have something in the Local Government Article about protecting the present school system and school districts, and I recall very clearly at that time, the amendment which I had offered was overwhelmingly defeated, and I took it to mean that the people in this Convention felt that it was a matter for the Legislature. Well, I feel the same way about this fish trap business. I think it is strictly a matter for the Legislature, and certainly, for that reason alone, I am in favor of Mr. White's amendment. I do feel, however, that, if there is any attempt later to include this prohibition in the body of the Constitution, that that would be a complete about-face on the part of the members of this organization who have heretofore ruled out such matters as fish commissions and school districts, because then we would certainly be taking an anomalous position to what we have in the past. I believe if we are going to handle the situation at all, as Mr. Davis has said, it is best handled by way of ordinance, but I believe it should not be mentioned at all and, therefore, I feel that Mr. White's motion is good.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: There has been mention of emotionalism here, and it often comes up when we are faced with a problem with which one does not agree, or secondly, a difficult problem. It's immediately characterized as a problem that we cannot consider except on an emotional basis, and, therefore, whatever one is opposed to should be voted down. Now, life is emotional. When some of the gentlemen who cast disparaging remarks about emotions chose their wives, I imagine they did it on an objective basis. They look at their children somewhat emotionally. I see nothing wrong with living with our emotions. Like Mr. Fischer suggests, I would hate to read a Constitution that did not have some emotional consideration in it. It would be a pretty dull document. I know people that get pretty emotional about the price of gold, and about the freezing of production, some war production orders during the war, and I don't think we, let alone any human beings, can just divorce these disagreeable emotions from our consideration. I think Mr. Davis, who believes that this ordinance should be passed and that the referendum should be held, has solved this proposition soundly, logically, and perhaps somewhat emotionally, but sensibly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I am talking now because I made an understanding with a group of people awhile ago and I want to get it clear now. I don't want to go along with that agreement I made here on the floor -- a group of us. All great documents that have been written in the world met the problems of the day; they met the issues; they divided the people. We are now up against a problem of the day. The ills of the people of Alaska are right here and now, and I want to tell the gentlemen here who have gotten along so fine together that we are coming to the crossroads, that we either put it in the body of the Constitution or put it as an ordinance and leave it up to the people, and I think your voting should be governed on that basis now. We are coming to it, and I don't see anything wrong about meeting the problems of the day by putting it up to the people, and I prefer to go along with this ordinance the way it is written now, the so-called Buckalew or Committee Proposal, and I am going along with that because I see it as the better way of the two.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I am going to raise the point of order that this motion to strike is not valid, and I predicate my remarks on the fact that the arguments that have been presented so far this morning have been in exact point to the arguments that were made several days ago on the same matter. Consequently, I feel that, while there have been a couple of amendments to this matter, we are arguing on the same point that was brought to issue previously.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, you have a point, and the Chair will leave that ruling to the Rules Committee, even though there have been amendments made to these sections. The Convention will be at recess until 1:30 p.m. Mr. Sundborg, you may make a committee announcement.

SUNDBORG: Committee on Style and Drafting immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery.

WHITE: Point of order on a subject for reconsideration by the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A point of order on the subject that you would like to have the Rules Committee consider, Mr. White?

WHITE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it is the duty of the Chair when a point of order is raised to have that point of order determined. Mr. White.

WHITE: My point of order, Mr. President, is that Mr. McNees gave notice of reconsideration of his vote the other day at the proper time and in the proper manner. By general consent the reconsideration was carried along until this Article came before us again. When the situation arose this morning as to what situation we were in because amendments had been allowed subsequent to his notice of reconsideration, general agreement was granted Mr. McNees that he would be allowed, if he withdraw his motion --

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order.

WHITE: I have a point of order and I am not through.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will have to rule that Mr. McCutcheon raised the point of order. If there are other points of order, Mr. White, you will be allowed to present another point of order, but it is the duty of the Chair to have the original point of order determined, and the Chair thought that you were raising an additional point of order on this question to be determined to be presented to the Rules Committee. Any member may appear before the Rules Committee when they have this particular point of order under discussion.

MCCUTCHEON: The question of privilege is this: a motion has been made for recess, and Mr. White's point of order is not a valid consideration predicated on the motion for recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. McCutcheon, it is the remembrance of the Chair that someone asked unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m. Are there Committee announcements? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Would Mr. Rivers have any objection to changing his motion to recess to 1:00 rather than 1:30?

WHITE: I object to a unanimous consent to recess and raise a point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, a point of order is already on the floor. It is the duty of the Chair to have that point of order resolved before any other business can come before the Chair. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Local Government Committee will meet exactly at 1:00 in the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Local Government at exactly 1:00. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Rules Committee will meet immediately upon recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: According to the Rules Committee in respect to the matter referred to it, the point of order raised by Mr. McCutcheon, it is the view of the Rules Committee that the point of order was not well-taken in view of the fact that the matter sought to be stricken by Mr. White's amendment has changed substantially over that in consideration last week.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The ruling of the Rules Committee will be the ruling of the Chair. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 17/a, Sections 24 and 25, an amendment seeking to delete those sections from the proposal. If there is no further discussion -- is there anyone else? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: What is the effect of -- what's the interpretation of the ruling now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That the amendment is in order, the proposed amendment as it is now before us, the amendment we have been debating.

BUCKALEW: Then this will settle the question once and for all?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: I would like to say a few words on this question. In 1938 the salmon pack for Alaska was roughly nine million cases; in 1955 it had decreased to less than three million cases. I can recall in 1923 at Ketchikan when large scows came up the coast and about 12 inches of crushed ice would be put on the floor of the scows, and truck tenders would come up and unload their fish, probably three feet deep, and an additional 12 or 18 inches of ice would be placed on top of the fish, and they moved up to the cannery site waiting to unload. In 1941 at Sitka, I can recall the 12 seine boats operating at that time for the canneries were ordered to take their gear ashore, as the story went, because the traps were supplying the canneries with more fish than they could handle. In 1954, I have been told, that there were 11 million fish caught in the Fraser River where there are no traps. Now, I also have been told that in the last 5 years about two hundred people have been compelled to leave Petersburg because they could not make a living fishing; also that some families have been compelled to leave Ketchikan and Metlakatla for the same reason. The families have gone to Seattle and the Puget Sound country where they do have a chance to make a living. So, there is no doubt in my mind that this is a very serious economic condition we have to face, so I am compelled to vote against Mr. White's amendment.

METCALF: May I speak a little on this subject?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I believe the fish trap subject is a very important one, very important, and just as important to us and to large segments of our population as the subject of quartering troops during the revolution in private homes. I believe, therefore, that something should be put into the Constitution. I believe that it is a cancer upon our economy and because it deprives the small fellow of a chance of making a living, it creates a monopoly with the assistance of the government, whereas the big operator competes on unfair terms with the little fellow, and I think again that something should be put into our Constitution. Now referring back to the Declaration of Rights, in this first paragraph, your inherent rights -- it talks about the rights of the people. Now, whether this is a declaration or something to be talked about just on patriotic occasions, I don't know, but let's read it over and especially the last section. It says, "...all persons are equal and entitled to equal rights...". Now, if you give a fish trap to every fisherman, I am all for it, but if you can't, why, just cut them out. It says, "...all persons are equal and entitled to equal rights, opportunities, and protection under the law; and that all persons have corresponding obligations to the people and to the State". I feel this is a serious problem, especially to a large segment of our population, and some mention should be made of it in our Constitution, especially in the matter of eliminating traps.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, have you had the floor on this question yet?

BARR: Mr. President, we have been talking on this so long I can't remember. I would like to ask Mr. Metcalf a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. Metcalf, you quoted from the Constitution there. Don't you believe that quotation covers fish traps, and that, if we carry out that provision in the Constitution, we will abolish fish traps?

METCALF: It doesn't work that way though, Mr. Barr. Only a few have fish traps.

BARR: We haven't had this Constitution in effect though. I mean that, when this Constitution goes into effect, there is sufficient in it so that it will be mandatory upon the Legislature to abolish fish traps?

METCALF: No, I don't think so, Mr. Barr. I don't like to take a chance on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: May I ask Mr. Metcalf a question through the Chair? You do not fear that the Legislature, when established, will not abolish fish traps, do you, Mr. Metcalf?

METCALF: I like to deal in certainties. I would like to have it in the Constitution. This is a serious cancer on our economy. Just remember, it not only affects the little fellow who fishes out in the bay; it affects the little business man up here in the country, too, you know. It affects the Welfare Department we all have to support.

MCNEES: One other question, Mr. President, if I may. Do you not feel there might be some general jeopardization to the Constitution itself if we make an issue of this in the Constitution and thereby forestall the opportunity of abolishing them at an earlier date even yet?

METCALF: It might, a little, but, if you have a serious ailment, you might as well tell people about it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who hasn't been heard on this amendment? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have just two observations. I have stated in essence before that I feel that, if this is included in the Constitution, we have a very good chance of having it stricken by Congress, and if it should come back to us, we would then have to strike it ourselves and would have to again resubmit it to amendment -- I mean resubmit it to the people for ratification. As I said, I can see a possibility, a great possibility of a major delay. Now, we realize, and I agree with the previous speaker, that we have a cancer, a malignant growth on our economy here. The only question in my mind is whether we should use a meat axe, as we are doing here, or a scalpel on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who has not been heard as yet? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I haven't been heard on it this time. I want to bring to the body's attention -- I have a letter dated October 7, 1955, and signed by Douglas McKay, Secretary of the Interior, and the letter is written to the Honorable Herbert C. Bonner, Chairman of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. Now, I will read from the letter. In the body of his letter he says, "For example, it is sometimes argued that the traps should be abolished as a conservation measure. Years of experience give no support to this argument. The basic conservation problem is one of permitting escapement of sufficient salmon to maintain runs" and so forth. Then, he says the reason he thinks that fish traps should be abolished is an economic argument. It is an unreasonable burden to force the Alaska fishermen to compete with traps. Later on in his letter he says that the situation is critical and that we have had relief areas, emergency areas, and emergencies declared; but later on he says we ought to extend the life of the traps ten years. We'll let them suffer along for ten years. Then, I have a letter signed by Mr. McKay on the third of January, 1956, and in this letter he takes this position, "As you know we have had very fine cooperation under our program of conservation by which many of the trap owners in the interests of conservation have voluntarily closed down many of their traps for the last year or more". Now we see the position that the Secretary takes and it is an inconsistent position. I believe that the ordinance is a proper ordinance and citizen Peratrovich, Delegate Emberg, Delegate Smith, and Delegate Lee have convinced me this is a real emergency and, if this ordinance will eliminate the traps 30 days -- if it only eliminates them during a 30-day period -- if we can get at them 30 days sooner, we have a duty to do it. Now, these gentlemen tell me that even that 30 days might mean the difference between not having a salmon industry or having a salmon industry. For that reason, I think that the amendment should be voted down, and we should stick by this thing; adopt it and send it out and let the people vote on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard before Mr. White closes the argument? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I just wanted to comment on some of the comparisons that have been made here, particularly one by Mr. Robertson, who,

I think he said something about he was in favor of abolishing fish traps although he felt the failure of the salmon run was entirely caused by other fishermen, men with big boats coming up, and also he mentioned, I believe, that the set nets on Bristol Bay, which are usually a net out a hundred feet or more in the Bay and usually tended by one woman who goes along the net after the tide goes out and picks the fish out -- that they have depleted the run to the point where it is now an emergency in Alaska! I think we all realize the problem, and, as Mr. Victor Rivers says, it is a question of whether we are going to use a meat axe or a scalpel to cure this festering sore. I don't believe that that comparison is well-taken because the matter before us attempts to ignore the existence of an emergency. Now, Mr. White's amendment would more or less give us the ostrich's view of the situation. We can't see it because it's buried in the sand -- our heads are buried in the sand. But I think from the remarks of all of the members here that talked on this matter are cognizant of the situation that exists throughout the entire coastal area of Alaska, and it is something we can't stick our heads in the sand and ignore. We have got to bring it out in the open, and I think the way it is out in the open now and in the Constitution as an ordinance is the only way for us to recognize the problem and also to make that problem known to every person that reads the Constitution, and I believe we should not make any changes in that ordinance and should vote Mr. White's amendment down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard before Mr. White closes the argument? Mr. White, you may close.

WHITE: Mr. President, if I were an ostrich with my head buried in the sand, and couldn't see the problem, I also couldn't hear it, and I have heard quite a bit about it in the last couple of hours. One thing I haven't heard, Mr. Taylor, is one single letter, telegram, or any other communication to this body suggesting that this action be taken. I think the issues here pretty well outlined by Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Boswell, and other people. I would like to say to Mr. Armstrong that I am glad to have his support on this amendment, but I have never felt at any time that we were operating on other than the same team. I can't claim any first-hand acquaintance with the problem; I haven't been a fisherman or lived in a fishing community; but I think I understand the problem and sympathize with it. But I think the issue here transcends whether it is a problem or not, or whether we can correct it or not, and whether this is the time and place to correct it. And, I think that there is a greater issue here than just the correction of one problem. Moreover, taking the action of putting in this ordinance does not solve the whole problem. Mr. Emberg's problem in Bristol Bay is entirely outside of the issue. There are no fish traps in Bristol Bay and there haven't been for a long time. Mr. Poulsen is connected with the fishing industry and pointed out that there are other problems this ordinance wouldn't correct.

It just goes to one part of the problem. I just can't conceive of the first Legislature doing anything other than taking proper action to correct the over-all problem and get Alaska on its way towards reasonable management of its fisheries in all its phases. The situation is going to exist in the first Legislature. For the first time they will have the opportunity to do something about it. I can't conceive of a majority, or anything close to a majority, in any first State Legislature doing anything other than correcting the problem as it exists because their political lives would be at stake, and if the problem is not corrected they will never get elected to office again. Moreover, I think the Resources Article, contrary to Mr. Metcalf's opinion, as it stands now provides every needed basis for abolishing fish traps and correcting any other problem that may occur, and I think the framers of that Article will bear me out. Now, I wanted so badly the other day to put my name on record as opposing fish traps that I voted against the motion to strike. Since then, I wrestled with the problem, and I have decided in this instance that it is more important for me to be able to live with myself than it is to vote on the popular side of this particular question. Now, I don't intimate or suggest for one moment that anyone who votes against my amendment would be doing so for reasons other than those of deep conviction. But I do suggest that, if you feel that this action might bring this Convention and this Constitution down off the high plane on which it has been to date, if you feel that this is not the time nor the place to correct the problem, and if you feel this action does not correct both problems, we have done with it here and now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

Yeas: 16 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Harris, Hilscher, Johnson, Laws, McNees, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Stewart, White.

Nays: 38 - Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - Cooper.)

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 38 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Nays have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like the privilege of the floor for a few minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer, you are granted the privilege of the floor.

(Mr. Fischer spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to announce that there is a photographer who will be here around 2:00 p.m. He would like to have pictures of all the Committees and all the employees of the Convention. Does that meet with the approval of the Convention that that be taken care of at this time -- that those photos be taken? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Could we take one Committee at a time and continue with the debate?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it would be pretty hard, Mr. Hellenthal, to take a whole Committee out and continue with the debate, but it all depends on whether the delegates desire to have pictures of the delegates in committees at this time. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I move and ask unanimous consent that we follow the suggestion you have just made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent that we arrange at this time to have the committee pictures taken, and also that the employees get together in order that their photographs may be taken. It might be well if each Committee Chairman would see that his committee members are available for those pictures after each photograph has been taken. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: There will be a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee at the rear of the gallery, and I ask you to leave us till last and as you need members of our Committee...

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. Sundborg, would you watch the photographer then, and see that your members come each time? Of course, that would be pretty hard -- SUNDBORG: I wonder if some other member of the Convention would do that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Sergeant at Arms could do that. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: It might be well to suggest that the Committees be taken by number; that way you wouldn't be missing out on any Committees in order for their pictures to be taken by number.

PRESIDENT EGAN: First, then, you might arrange to have the Rules Committee be the first on the list, and Style and Drafting Committee next, Preamble and Bill of Rights, Legislative, Administration, Ordinances, Suffrage, Executive, Judiciary, Finance, Direct Legislation, Resources, Local Government, and then Resolutions. The President will stand out then and call the name of the Committee after each photograph is taken. The Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The convention will come to order. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I believe that the members of the Constitutional Convention would be pleased to meet Mr. Lawrence Davies of the New Your Times, who is here to cover the remaining days of the Convention, and his stories will appear in the New York Times, as well as other newspapers covering it. Mr. Davies.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davies, we are pleased to meet you and happy to have you with us. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 17/a. Are there other amendments to be proposed for Committee Proposal No. 17/a? Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I believe I anticipated the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no other amendments for Committee Proposal No. 17/a. it will be referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment; and if no amendment, it is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. We now have the -- Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I would like to rise to a point of personal privilege and just say one word about 17/a...

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Not as a point of order, but I think the reference is a little premature. It's just out of second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: The subcommittee on fish traps has been firing grapeshot for three days now. (laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 10, the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on the Proposal relating to Local Government. Mr. Peratrovich, would you take the Chair at this time.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: We have the Committee Report on No. 10 before us. Would the Chief Clerk please read it?

(The Chief Clerk read the report, dated January 30, 1956.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Does the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee have a statement?

SUNDBORG: This Committee redraft was prepared initially by a subcommittee consisting of Mr. McLaughlin, Mrs. Nordale, and Mr. Johnson. We have asked Mr. McLaughlin to explain it to you and to answer any questions by the delegates.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. Mr. President. I ask that a Committee of three or five with plenary powers be appointed to look into the matter of arranging for a present for the President of the Convention.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I believe the suggestion is a very good one and I believe we should authorize the Administration Committee to take care of it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You would have to do that in the form of a motion.

(The Convention unanimously agreed that further action in regard to the matter just preceding be not included in the record.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. McLaughlin was about to seek recognition, Mr. President.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I would like to -- if the members of the Convention would pick up their copies, I would like to make certain insertions which will expedite this proceeding and I will explain them as I go along. First, I request that at the end of Section 6, bottom of page 2, that you insert, subject to your objections later, the following words: "It may exercise any powers or functions in an unorganized borough which the assembly may exercise in an organized borough". So that you have an additional sentence now to Section 6 which reads, "It may exercise any powers or functions in an unorganized borough which the assembly may exercise in an organized borough." I request, additionally, that on page 3, line 3, the first word "borough", that one "r" be stricken. I request that on line 5 of page 3, after the word "classified", a comma be inserted and the word "reclassified comma", so that the line will read, "They may be merged, consolidated, classified, reclassified, or dissolved in the manner provided by law." On page 5, I request on line 1, that the words "At the time a borough is organized", be stricken. Then, on line 2, the words "performing local functions" be stricken. Then, on line 2, capitalize the first letter of "special", we're starting a new sentence, and substitute for the stricken words "performing local functions", "existing at the time a borough is organized", so that section now reads, "Special service districts existing at the time a borough is organized shall be integrated with the government of the borough as provided by law." And on page 1, Section 3, line 12, at the end of line 12, after "economy comma", add the word "population comma". Mr. Chairman, prior to the asking of questions on the sections, I desire to point out what are substantive changes, whence they came, and what may not be substantive changes but might be subject to that interpretation. What may be, although the Committee says no, a substantive change, are the words we have just added to Section 6 at the bottom of page 2. Those may be: the Committee says no. The reason Style and Drafting presents them is in order to expedite the discussion, and the debate if there should be any. That is the sentence which I have just added, at the end of Section 6 on page 2. There is a substantive change on page 4, commencing on line 5. We have inserted a sentence which is a substantive change: "The change shall become effective 45 days after presentation or at the end of the session, whichever is earlier, unless disapproved by a resolution concurred in by a majority of the members of each house." I think the necessity for the change is patent. It arose on another matter. It became necessary, since we may have year-long sessions, to make the proposed changes effective some time possibly before the termination of the session. So we have substituted, with the consent of the Local Government Committee, those words. Section 15 -- I shall read you the original Section 15 from the enrolled copy so you may determine whether or not it is a substantive change. The original language in Section 15 as it was enrolled reads, "The Legislature shall provide for the integration, consistent with the provisions of this article, of special districts performing local government functions with the government of a borough at the time a borough is organized." The credit for the punctuation, Mr. Chairman, although never mentioned by or overlooked by the Chairman of Style and Drafting, and the work that is done on these, is attributable to those people in the boiler room, Mrs. Betty Jean Miles, Carolyn Oakley, Louise Gooch, Charlotte Taylor, Bernice Black, Sherry Hoopes, Doris Ann Bartlett, and Willou Bickel. They haven't received recognition for the work they have done. All of the changes in here which may have been substantive and the style changes have been consented to by the Local Government Committee in full.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I should like to point out, I think Mr. McLaughlin meant to do it but he hasn't, that as a member of the Style and Drafting Committee, while I signed the report, I did not concur in the changes in Section 15, on the grounds that they were substantive.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Johnson's statement is correct. As a matter of fact, Style and Drafting did not author any substantive changes insofar as is known, but they put them in there, approved them only as to style, not as to substance. Do you desire that we go down section by section? Do you want me to call the sections?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may proceed right along, Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Are there any questions on Section 1? Section 2? Section 3? Section 4? Section 5? Section 6? Section 7? Section 8? Section 9? Section 10? Section 11? Section 12? Section 13?

HERMANN: Section 12, I'd like to ask a question.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may ask the question, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Line 9, the last part of the word at the end of the sentence, does that have to appear in the Constitution with a hyphen after the double "m"? If it does, I want to object. I move that the hyphen appear after the first "m".

McLAUGHLIN: And where do you desire the hyphen, Mrs. ...

HERMANN: After the first "m" instead of the second.

McLAUGHLIN: After what, Mrs. Hermann?

HERMANN: After the first "m" in the word "commission".

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The second word in the last sentence in that paragraph.

McLAUGHLIN: Line 9, the hyphen after the "c-o-m-m"?

HERMAN: That is what I am objecting to; after the "c-o-m" I want it.

McLAUGHLIN: I am sure that by unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that the Convention will consent to the deletion of the hyphen. Something tells me that this is going to be reprinted and that "commission" will be made whole again.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objections, the request will be granted.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I don't think Mr. McLaughlin has the point yet, have you, George?

McLAUGHLIN: I don't know what the point is.

HERMANN: The point is that the syllable should be c-o-m and you don't put a hyphen in the middle of a syllable; you put it after a syllable.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I am sure the Convention consents to inserting the hyphen, moving the last "m" down from line 9 to line 10, and inserting the hyphen after the first "m".

TAYLOR: May I rise to a point of information? Now, in the printed copy of this, if "commission" happened to be in the middle of the line, would they leave the hyphen in there?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McLaughlin, would you care to answer this question?

McLAUGHLIN: I am sure that the Committee on Style and Drafting will pick up such a notable error at the time we review the whole Constitution.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: The Committee on Local Government has no objection. (laughter)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions? You may proceed.

McLAUGHLIN: Section 14?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: In reading the first sentence in Section 14, just previously here, it says, "An agency shall be established by law in the executive branch of the state government." Of course, if you go on and read the rest of the section, then you get the idea, but by setting this sentence apart don't you think that "an agency" might feel just a little lonesome, Mr. McLaughlin?

McLAUGHLIN: That is in terms of style that you feel that we should combine the first and second sentences?

SMITH: It just occurred to me that it would make the meaning a little more clear merely in the matter of style, and I merely raise the question and call it to the attention of the Committee Chairman.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McLaughlin, could you answer that question?

McLAUGHLIN: It's purely a matter of taste Mr. Smith, I agree, and possibly yours is superior to mine, but if you would yield on that one point, I think it would expedite the passage of this. Do you feel it's grammatically bad?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I just wanted to call attention to Section 12 -- we have the same situation and I thought that Style and Drafting had made Section 14...

McLAUGHLIN: We had in the past, Mr. Smith. It is true we had the establishment of these two agencies and we conformed the language; that is Section 12 sets up the local boundary commission or board which shall be established by law in the executive branch of the state government, and we carried on down the form at least down to Section 14 and we added the words "of the state government" for fear there might be some confusion with the executive branch of the local government or some such thing.

SMITH: I am completely satisfied, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to say I think there is a slight difference at least between the first sentence of Section 14 and the first sentence of Section 12. Looking at the one in Section 12 it makes pretty good sense, "A local boundary commission or board shall be established by law in the executive branch of the state government". There is some description of what it is all about. In Section 14 it says "an agency shall be established by law" and there is no reference within that sentence as to what kind of agency. I would ask unanimous consent that in line 21 after "government" strike the period, strike the word "it"; on line 22, strike the first word "shall" and in its place insert the word "to".

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, may we have a two-minute recess.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If I had the floor -- I am making the same unanimous consent request, which I renew, and add to it the following: on line 22 change the comma to a period after the word "government" and insert after it "It shall" starting a new sentence. The section then would read: "An agency shall be established by law in the executive branch of the state government to advise and assist local governments. It shall review their activities, collect and publish local government information and perform other duties prescribed by law". I ask unanimous consent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections; if not, it is so ordered.

McLAUGHLIN: Are there any further questions now, as to Section 14? Are there questions as to Section 15?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I ask Mr. McLaughlin a question?

McLAUGHLIN: May I inquire of Mr. Coghill whether this is a question as to existing style or a change in substance.

COGHILL: That was the question I was going to ask you. What do you consider a substantive change in that section?

McLAUGHLIN: I have not said, Mr. Coghill, that there is a substantive change. I have pointed it out as a possible substantive change. If, through the Chair, you will withhold your question, I am prepared to ask an acceptance of the report of the Style and Drafting Committee, so that the necessary amendments or remarks addressed to the Chairman of the Local Government Committee Chairman would be in order. I would like to inquire if there are any questions as to style on Section 15, Mr. Chairman, since there are no further questions, I ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted as to style only.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Did you ask unanimous consent?

McLAUGHLIN: I do.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have heard the request; do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, is this the proper time for amendments.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: It depends on what type of amendment it is. I understand one is by two-thirds, the other is by majority.

BUCKALEW: I don't know whether this is -- I think it is an amendment to form probably.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may offer your amendment and determination will be made.

BUCKALEW: That is just a rough guess. Will the Clerk be kind enough to read it?

CHIEF CLERK: Change "borough" wherever it appears in the article and insert the word "county".

DOOGAN: Point of order. This has already been decided.

JOHNSON: Point of order.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Johnson, would you state your point of order, please.

JOHNSON: Under suspension of the rules it would be perfectly proper.

BUCKALEW: Is it proper now to ask that the rules be suspended? I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for that particular amendment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have heard the motion for the suspension of the rules. All in favor signify by saying Aye...

HERMANN: Point of order.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: What is your point of order?

HERMANN: My point of order is that you can't suspend the rules by a voice vote.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Sometimes that is left to the Chair, Mrs. Hermann. In this case we will order it. Will you call the roll, please.

(The roll was called with the following result:

Yeas: 20 - Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Londborg, Metcalf, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Wien.

Nays: 31 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Cross, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White.

CHIEF CLERK: 20 yeas, 31 nays, and 4 absent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The motion has been lost. Are there other amendments? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I move that we stand at recess until five minutes to four.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is there a second to that?

COGHILL: I second the motion.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if we do recess, I want to announce a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee immediately at the rear of the gallery.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other announcements? All in favor of recessing say Aye; contrary? We stand at recess until ten to four.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr.

BARR: May I have the privilege of the floor, not a personal privilege, for a moment. An amendment has just failed changing the word "borough" to "county" in your absence. I would like to say on this subject: during the hearings it was brought out by the people in some places that they disapproved of the word "borough" and I, in speaking to my friends around Fairbanks, have never known anyone who favored it except those on this floor. Now, we took a vote the other day and the word "borough" got the highest number of votes, but I still don't think it is really indicative of what this body wishes and for this reason. There were several words offered and the vote was divided. The word "county" came second and I know there were lots of people who had a second choice second to the choice of "county", and who thoroughly detested the word "borough". The vote on borough was 27, which is not a majority in this body. Now I am going to submit another amendment. I don't know whether it will pass, in fact, I doubt it very much, but I am willing to go to any length to keep from living in a "borough" the rest of my life; and I am sure my constituents who sent me here, if this should succeed, will figure I earned my money for the entire Convention if I can get that passed because they don't want to live in a "borough" either. This word "borough" is foreign to Alaska; it has no connection with Alaska. It is used as a division of a big city; it is used in England. It has nothing to do with Alaska; and I am going to ask for a suspension of the rules and submit the word "Division", because that is Alaskan and that is a simple word that everybody knows and it doesn't conflict with anything like District does. District conflicts with election district and so on, but Division is a good word and I think a lot of people who voted for county would vote for that. Now I would like to ask a question of the Chair. When we change the name "borough" to something else, it seems to me it is merely a change in styling because we are not changing the form of government or anything else. We are changing the word to describe it so it should only take a majority vote. I should like to have a ruling of the Chair on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I make a point of order in reference to that. We have already had an amendment that submitted the word "District" or "Division" or whatever it was, and we voted it down, so it is subject to that point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: That name was one of several that were submitted and was not voted on according to this system. In other words, the votes were badly divided at that time; now we would be voting between two names.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, the Chair does not -- it is not entirely clear in the Chair's mind whether changing the name would be a matter of substance or a matter of phraseology, but the point raised by Mr. Sundborg, that we have voted as individual delegates on every one of these names, if a new name were submitted, then, different than the ones we had actually voted upon, the Chair would be in a position that it would have to rule one way or the other on the substance or phraseology, but we have already voted on county, district, borough, province, and division. We actually voted on those names, Mr. Barr, the Chair could not go along with seeing that an amendment offering one of those names would be in order.

SUNDBORG: I raise another point of order and that is that we, I think by unanimous consent or at least nearly that, adopted a special rule which provided the manner of choosing the name of this unit of government, and it would require a suspension of that rule by a two-thirds vote to choose any other name since we have made our decision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: That is correct, Mr. President. That special rule applied to that vote. We have passed that point and are in another stage of the game, and it doesn't apply any more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr, the Chair has no other alternative but to rule that, in any event, the Convention has already voted on using the word "Division" that you offer, and it would take a suspension of the rules in order to offer that amendment because we have already voted upon it.

BARR: If a different word was submitted which had not been submitted before, is it then a style and drafting matter?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well the Chair would have to hold that, if an amendment proposing that a different word be used, that it wouldn't be substance; it would be phraseology; and the Chair understands from the record that the phraseology changes or the substantive changes have not as yet been adopted; so a phraseology change would take a majority vote, yes.

BARR: I would now relinquish the floor on my privilege, and I would like to move an amendment which is simply this: strike the word "borough" wherever it may appear in the Article and substitute therefore the word "area". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves and asks unanimous consent that the word "area" be inserted wherever the word borough appears in the Article. Is there objection? Objection is heard. Is there a second?

KILCHER: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Kilcher that the word "area" be used wherever the word "borough" appears.

HERMANN: Musn't we ask for suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, the report of the Style and Drafting Committee has not yet been adopted. It has been accepted, but has not been adopted by the Convention.

HERMANN: That is a style amendment then?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair cannot see that it is possible to rule otherwise, because it doesn't change the make-up of the particular entity of government. Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, I think it is, and under these circumstances a change in substance -- it is not just picking the best word for the purpose. The Committee, and then the Convention worked on a name. It is not just a word; it's a name for a unit. Logically, if it were just a matter of style, then it would have been up to the Style and Drafting Committee, and I can imagine how that Committee would have liked it if it had all been left up to that one Committee without our say-so. I think it is a matter of substance, because I think it is a name and not just a word or phrase.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair cannot see where it is a matter of substance and has so ruled. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to point out further -- I happen to have the Style and Drafting report open to page 2 -- and the first sentence I looked at would read, "Service areas to provide special services within an organized area may be established". What would it mean?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, what was your question?

V. FISCHER: What I am trying to point out is the substitution of the word "area" could very well disrupt the operation of the whole Article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In using that particular word, you mean?

V. FISCHER: That is right. Therefore, it can be a substantive change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Because of the particular word. Mr. Barr.

BARR: This word "area" I believe is a good one to apply here. A "division", for instance, as we now have it in Alaska means a particular division of the government, or the area of the country. Of course, the word "division" in its broader sense means just a part of anything as the word "area" Mr. Fischer is speaking of means. It means any area. But if we used this word "Area" capitalized in this Article, we would know what we were speaking of as we use the word Judicial Division capitalized at the present time. An "Area" wouldn't be confused with any other division of government, and it is well-known what area means. It would be applied, say, to the "Juneau Area" and "Fairbanks Area". We would not be saying "Eagle Borough" or "Beaver Borough", and the people outside of Alaska, when they come here, they will know it is an area of Alaska -- a certain area -- whereas, if we speak of "borough", they don't know whether it is south Fairbanks we are speaking of or a larger political subdivision. They are used several ways. And they might think they were back in jolly old England for that matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, the Chair is not withdrawing from the ruling that a proper wording change would be a substance change. However, Mr. Fischer has raised a point of order with relation to the particular word that you have chosen -- that because of the particular word you have chosen, a very serious difficulty could be encountered. Now, for that reason, the Chair could see that using that particular word that you have offered could become a matter of substance, because it could conflict throughout the Article with any mention of other service areas by using that word.

BARR: Mr. President, if the word I am using were capitalized wherever it was used in the Article, wouldn't it be the same as the word "Division" now, when it is capitalized? It doesn't mean anything else.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I might say that the style we have adopted and used consistently throughout this Constitution with reference to capitalization is that nothing in this Constitution is capitalized except the first letters of first words in a sentence, the word "God", the word "State", and the words "United States". We don't capitalize "congress"; we don't capitalize "legislature"; we don't capitalize "governor"; we don't capitalize anything, and I would certainly resist capitalizing the word "area". I have a couple of other dandy things that would happen if we were to use this. It would say, "An entire area of the state shall be divided into areas", and "Each area shall embrace an area".

BARR: You wouldn't say that Mr. President. You would say, "The entire area of the State will be divided into political subdivisions called areas".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, the Chair would have to rule that that particular amendment that you offer as of now is out of order because that particular word would create confusion and cause undoubtedly substantive difficulties.

BARR: Mr. President, I don't exactly agree with the Chair. It seems to me instead of a ruling, that is part of the debate. However, I ask for unanimous consent for the withdrawal of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may withdraw it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to be proposed for Sections 1 or 2? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment, but it will take just a little while to write it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a little while.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr, if it is all right with you, we will proceed with other amendments which might be proposed...

BARR: That is all right, but first I would like to make a motion that we rescind our action when we voted for the word "borough", and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Borough -- Barr (laughter) -- Mr. Barr moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention rescind the action taken in voting upon the motion that eventuated the use of the word "borough" throughout this Article. Is there a second to the amendment?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the proposed motion. Mr. Barr.

BARR: The reason I believe we should rescind this is because a lot of us would like to change our selection from the word -from the one word that we voted for and that failed at that time to a second choice. Since the word "borough" only passed by a vote of 27, we may very well vote for a different word the next time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the Convention rescind its action taken in adopting the word 'borough' throughout this Article?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Now if you vote "yes" you will be voting to rescind the action taken with relation to the word "borough", and would then throw before the Convention a vote on the same question we had at that time; that is, whether or not it should be "borough", "county", "division", "province", and so forth. If you vote "No", you are voting to retain the word "borough" throughout the Article. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: May I ask a question before we vote on this? In the event the action were rescinded and the names put before us again for a vote, would the Chair give us a ruling as to a person who has voted for a particular name getting up and changing his vote to another name, without going through another vote, such as happened last time? I do not think that that was exactly what was intended in the beginning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper, anyone may change his or her vote prior to the time the vote is announced. That is the right of any delegate or any person in any assembly, that prior to the time the vote is announced, they may change their vote if they so desire.

COOPER: I realize that, but on this particular vote it was not really a vote "aye" or "nay"; it was a vote for a name, and the change -- of course I understand the name would be in a sense a vote, but the change of their vote was a change from a name to another name.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair cannot see that there would be a difference. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I questioned that voting the other day, too, because we drew up some rules that we would follow a certain order and drop off the low name each time and continue on. And it seemed to me at the time that we didn't follow our rule as we laid it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell, on the other hand, the rule is that anyone has a right to change before it is announced. If it had been announced, then after that no one could have legally changed the manner in which they voted. Actually, their vote is not counted or tallied until it is announced by the Chief Clerk, and it takes some time to tally any ballot. The question is: "Shall the Convention rescind its action?"

(The roll was called with the following result:

Yeas: 20 - Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, H. Fischer, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Londborg, Metcalf, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Wien.

Nays: 35 - Armstrong, Awes, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Buckalew, Hilscher, McNealy, and Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 35 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the nays have it and the Convention has failed to rescind its action. Are there other amendments? Mr. Barr.

BARR: I still would like to put in an amendment, but, as I say, it will take a little time to write it out. I suggest the house continue with its business and that I be allowed to submit it a little later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed amendments to Sections 1 or 2? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: In Section 2 we have a reference here to the name we have just been voting on. How would you put in an amendment as to pronunciation?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg, in the opinion of the Chair it isn't necessary to put in such an amendment.

LONDBORG: I was just wondering, because remember when the proposal was before us, it was said the official pronunciation was bor-o, or something, Now I have this letter before me and it's very confusing. "Borough" has gone out in newspapers all over the world, no doubt, and now we have this as official. I thought Mr. Doogan was certain about it, and now he has this letter and I am wondering if it shouldn't be officially changed to what it should be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In the opinion of the Chair, the majority or plurality had the right idea when they called it "burro". (laughter) The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to be offered for Sections 1 or 2? Section 3? Are there amendments to be proposed for Section 4? Or for Section 5? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I ask Mr. McLaughlin a question regarding Section 4? He got a little ahead of me. Section 3, at the top of page 2, line 2. Here we again refer to boroughs organized, incorporated, merged, consolidated, dissolved, or classified. Do you want to get the word "reclassified" in there?

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Rivers, just to expedite the amendment, I am sure the Committee would have no objection if you struck the word "merged" and left merely "consolidated", and I am sure the Convention would unanimously consent to removal of the duplication.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I believe we went over that in Committee, and "merged" has a definite meaning in there. It's different from "consolidated".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I withdraw. I overlooked the fact that on line 1 the legislature classifies them in the first place, and classify doesn't have to be in on lines 2 or 3, so I back up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions with relation to Sections 3 or 4? If not, are there questions relating to Section 5 or amendments to be offered? Are there amendments for Section 6? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I have a question I would like to ask before I make an amendment. It states here that the Legislature shall provide funds for services in unorganized boroughs. Before this was rewritten, it stated that the Legislature shall provide those services deemed necessary. To me that makes a difference. It looks to me now as though people in unorganized boroughs could demand services such as garbage collection and so on that might be rather expensive, whereas before, it was discretionary on the part of the Legislature whether they would furnish these services.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: The Committee did strike "it deems necessary or advisable" -
- "The legislature shall provide for the performance of services it deems necessary or advisable in unorganized boroughs". It was believed by the Committee when we struck that, that the Legislature in its wisdom could determine what was necessary or what was advisable. As I understand it, your objection is it makes it mandatory that they provide all services...

HINCKEL: I thought possibly it would be all right to strike the words they did -- but I think we could possibly substitute "may" for "shall", so there would be some discretion permitted.

McLAUGHLIN: I am sure the Committee would have no objection to striking the word "shall" and substituting the word "may", subject to objections from the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. McLaughlin, isn't it a fact that that would possibly mean that the legislature would provide a manner in which unorganized boroughs could provide their people in that borough with these certain services? The legislature is not going to provide the services or performance of services, are they?

McLAUGHLIN: When they say they "shall provide for the performance of services", it means they shall make provision for them.

TAYLOR: Then in an unorganized borough then, if they were in need of garbage services, the legislature would hire garbage men? Is that right?

McLAUGHLIN: It doesn't necessarily mean that. There are two possible meanings. If we said the legislature "shall" provide the services, that would be one thing; but if we say the legislature shall provide for the performance of services, I think that that means another thing. That is, they can set up the rules and conditions and circumstances under which the services will be provided.

TAYLOR: Would that mean there is some way in which the unorganized boroughs could enter into a contract for the building of a power plant or light plant, or garbage service, or whatever was needed in the line of a public utility?

McLAUGHLIN: No, I don't think it does mean that.

TAYLOR: You gave two different meanings you could impute to it. Which one are we adopting?

McLAUGHLIN: You are adopting the one which is before you; that is, "The legislature shall provide for the performance of services in unorganized boroughs, allowing for maximum local participation and responsibility".

TAYLOR: Well, your definition a few moments ago was that you could impute two meanings to that. Which one do we have here?

McLAUGHLIN: The same meaning that they had in the enrolled copy, because the language is identical.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin and Mr. Taylor, Mr. Rosswog has been attempting to get the floor. As Chairman of the Committee, do you have the answer, Mr. Rosswog?

ROSSWOG: Well, maybe I can clarify it a little bit. It wasn't our intention that the unorganized boroughs could demand services of the State, but that the State could supply those services. If they were unorganized, they would not have an organization to demand it. But that is one of the reasons we wanted to go on and make the addition to that paragraph, so that it would be possible for the State to allow the setting up of special service areas. But the first sentence there as it was in the copy, I don't think it would make much difference whether it was qualified by putting "necessary services" or not in there. There would be no way to demand services if you were an unorganized area.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Rosswog, in the Style and Drafting Committee proposal, Section 6, line 23, do you know whether your Committee would have any objection to substituting the word may" for "shall"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog, could you answer that?

ROSSWOG: I believe we did discuss that in the Committee. We -- it may change the meaning of it there a little. We felt it would be necessary in an unorganized area, such as outside of a city today, the Territory has to supply some services, and if we placed it "may", it might leave it that they would supply none at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, unless possibly Mr. Taylor might possibly want to amend and insert the word "necessary" before services on line 24, then he would raise the issue as to whether or not this was a substantial change by Style and Drafting -- a change in intent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I think I am about to propose an amendment. I think our trouble stems from the fact that the words "it deems necessary or advisable" were stricken. Mr. Rosswog says if you simply say "may", you are leaving a void as to whether or not the Territory or State government will perform any services. Presently the Territory performs -- renders school -- complete school services outside of organized districts, the state Health Department exercises some jurisdiction in regard to health control, and in regard to highways and things like that. We should leave the word "shall" if we don't want to change the meaning, but then we don't want to say "services" without any modification, because we don't know what kind of services are being referred to or how detailed the services would be. We are saying "shall" so we have to limit what it is we're telling them that they shall do. So I move the restoration of the words on line 24, Section 2, after the word services, "it deems necessary or advisable".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: Insert the words "it deems necessary or advisable" after "services" on line 24.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

McLAUGHLIN: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection?

DAVIS: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Seconded by Mr. White. Is there further discussion? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I would like to ask a question of the Style and Drafting subcommittee on this. Would it not take care of it in the amendment you just offered a while ago where it says it "may exercise any powers"? Wouldn't that be within the scope of the legislature then?

McLAUGHLIN: I think that Mr. Rivers' language and the Committee's original language -- this is my personal opinion -- is better; that "it deems necessary or advisable" will put the intent unquestionably exactly where it was when we first approved this when it was enrolled. That is the only reason why I do it, to clarify any question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No". The Ayes have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be proposed for Section 5 or 6? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, may I ask a question of the Local Government Committee? Mr. Rosswog, in going over the report of the Style and Drafting Committee, I haven't found where the intent of the Committee lies as far as organized taxing authority not within organized boroughs. Would you point that out to me, where that language is, whether a health district or a school district could be organized and have taxing powers outside of an organized borough?

ROSSWOG: I believe that would be shown in the amendment that we have for Section 6. Mr. McLaughlin, were you going to propose that amendment?

McLAUGHLIN: Yes. I was prepared to propose one. I inserted for convenience in the sentence following Section 6 on page 2, "It may exercise any powers or functions in an unorganized borough which the assembly may exercise in an organized borough". Is that the one?

ROSSWOG: Yes, that is the one.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I move the addition of the sentence quoted to Section 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is moved, seconded by Mr. Doogan, that the amendment be adopted. Is there discussion? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: This amendment has the approval of the Local Government Committee. It clarifies this section, and I would like to ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and the amendment has been adopted. Are there other amendments to be proposed for these sections? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: No amendment, but another question. It is still not clear in my mind that this would extend taxing powers to a service area inside of an organized borough.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Maybe I can answer that. It is felt here that all powers of local government are established in organized boroughs and cities, and stating here that the legislature may exercise any powers or functions in an unorganized borough which the assembly may exercise in an organized borough would place it right there.

COGHILL: If I may carry on the question -- this allows the legislature to do it, but we don't want the legislature to do the taxing, or we don't want the new state to do the administering of this particular special district. Now let's just take for an example a health district set up in an unorganized borough. They should have some sort of fiscal and administrative values to their organization and that wouldn't do it; that would be providing that the legislature would do it for them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, if you will look at this section, at the last sentence, and insert the word "legislature" for assembly, you would have it, that they would authorize the levying of taxes. They can give that power then to a service area as I understand.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be offered for Sections 5 or 6? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The answer to Mr. Coghill's question in part. I think will be found in Article 17/c, a provision there for transitory activities of existing districts of which you speak.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I don't wish to continue this on. I thought there might have been an intent here that I had not interpreted. It's not my concern with the districts we now have, Mr. President, it's the districts that might be formed in an unorganized area. It's not provided for in this article as far as I can see, and I thought we had provided for it. Mr. Fischer might be able to enlighten me on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: All I can do is restate what Mr. Londborg just said that by putting the legislature in the same position as the assembly in Section 5, they could establish service areas or provide for the establishment of such service areas and grant them taxing powers.

COGHILL: That is not in the Article right now.

V. FISCHER: Yes it is. It is on page 2, line 20.

COGHILL: Yes, but that says the assembly may. The assembly is not the legislature; the assembly is the governing body of the borough.

V. FISCHER: Well, we are saying in the sentence that was just unanimously added that it, the legislature, may exercise any powers or functions in an unorganized borough which the assembly may exercise in an organized borough.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is an amendment that has been adopted. Maybe you don't have that written down.

COGHILL: I have it written down, but it seems to me it is kind of backwards. You are allowing the legislature to do something which the local government could do. I see the intent now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions or proposed amendments to those two sections? If not, are there amendments or questions relating to Section 7 or Section 8? If there are no other amendments to Sections 7 or 8, are there amendments to be proposed for Section 9? For Sections 10 or 11? Are there amendments for Section 12? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I wonder if it was ruled under the Style and Drafting that the change shall become effective within 45 days, if it was accepted, or would that be a new amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: To clarify that, I move that the assembly adopt the substantive change made by the Style and Drafting Committee, commencing on line 5 of page 4, and reading "The change shall become effective 45 days after presentation or at the end of the session, whichever is earlier, unless disapproved by a resolution concurred in by a majority of the members of each house". I so move, and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves and asks unanimous consent that the change made by the Style and Drafting Committee be adopted. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I am going to make an objection for the time being.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

DOOGAN: I second.

TAYLOR: I guess I will withdraw this. There is a question I wanted to ask, but I assume they mean that the presentation -- I see. I will withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the change is ordered adopted. Are there other questions or amendments for Section 12. Are there amendments for Section 13? Section 14? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I have a question. Section 14 originally stated that provision shall be made by law for an agency in the executive branch of the government to render assistance and advice to local governments and charter drafting agencies. During the discussion it was particularly brought out that cities or boroughs would probably need assistance in charter drafting. It was expressly stated that they would be able to get that assistance, and I just wonder if Style and Drafting feels that their language covers that fully so that there will be no question about their being able to get that assistance.

McLAUGHLIN: That specific question arose, and we consulted with the Local Government Committee and it was the consensus of the Committee, with no one objecting that there was no point in mentioning any specific agency of the local government, such as a charter drafting agency, and that the advice and assistance would automatically be advice and assistance to any subordinate boards, commissions, or agencies of the cities.

HINCKEL: Just as long as it is in the record, then, I am satisfied.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 14, or amendments? Are there amendments to be proposed for Section 15? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I move that the original language reported by the Style and Drafting Committee as to Section 15 be restored.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The original language as reported by the Local Government Committee, you mean, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: No. I meant as it appeared in Section 15 of the Style and Drafting Committee report. There was a change made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You move that the...

JOHNSON: I move that Section 15 be changed to read: "At the time a borough is organized special service districts performing local functions shall be integrated with the government of the borough as provided by law".

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would only take a majority vote to reject the Committee's report as to that section. Is there a second to the motion?

COGHILL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Coghill; moved by Mr. Johnson. Mr. White.

WHITE: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. I don't think we have adopted that change in Section 15.

JOHNSON: It was adopted as to style but...

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been accepted...

WHITE: There is some question. We have been using the words, "accept the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting and adopt the changes". That language has not been used here today. There is a question in the minds of some of us as to just where we stand. We have so far only accepted the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder if Mr. Johnson would consent to withdraw his motion while I put the usual motion that the changes be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Probably, Mr. Sundborg, that would be proper, inasmuch as Mr. McLaughlin has offered some of the other Committee proposals -- already offered the amendments -- the adoption individually, that Mr. Johnson withdraw his motion, and then Mr. Sundborg move that this Committee change be adopted.

JOHNSON: I will withdraw.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then it wouldn't create any confusion in the minds of the delegates. If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson's amendment is withdrawn.

SUNDBORG: It is understood then that Mr. Johnson's amendment would still be subject only to a majority vote? Is that correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct.

SUNDBORG: I move now, then, Mr. President, that the amendments or changes represented in the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on the Article on Local Government be adopted. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, that isn't what the Chair meant. The Chair meant that now we have already adopted some of those changes by individual motions. It would be better if you would ask that this particular substantive change asked for in Section 15 be adopted at this time -- that alone.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, there are probably a thousand or more changes which have been made since the enrolled copy was passed upon by the Convention, and usually what happens here is that a motion is made at the proper time that the report of the Committee be accepted, and that the changes represented in that report be adopted, and then the Convention takes on the work from there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, the Chair erred a moment ago when you asked a question, would it then only take a majority vote. If we adopt your motion now, any changes after that would take a two-thirds vote. So the Chair didn't realize that that's what you were asking -- for the adoption of the entire report of the Style and Drafting Committee.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the motion I just made, and I will ask that the changes in language --

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the motion is withdrawn.

SUNDBORG: ...the changes in language noted by Mr. McLaughlin when he was presenting this Article, in Section 15, be adopted by the Convention. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent.

JOHNSON: I object.

SUNDBORG: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is so moved by Mr. Sundborg, seconded by Mrs. Hermann. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I don't wish to belabor the point too much, but I feel a decided substantive change has been made by this proposed language, because as the section read originally, not only the enrolled copy, but Section 15 as originally proposed by the Style and Drafting Committee, the special service districts performing local functions should be integrated with the government. Now, it is conceivable there might be within a borough, an organized borough, special service districts which were performing state functions, and if you change the language to read as they want to "existing at the time a borough is organized", instead of "special service districts performing local functions", you are changing the meaning, the original intent, and I feel it should be left as it was when it went off the floor after second reading, and that only special service districts performing local functions should be integrated with the government of the borough as provided by law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: We approved this change as it has been proposed because it plugged a loophole which the Committee originally intended to plug, but we found we didn't have exactly the right language. The argument that could be construed if we left the language as it is: Is a school district a local function or isn't it? And our purpose was that all districts be under the jurisdiction of a borough. So that was the reason for the change, and that's the reason we approved it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I should state here that this change, while offered by the Style and Drafting Committee, was not the invention of the Style and Drafting Committee. It was proposed to us and urged by the substantive committee, the Committee on Local Government. We reviewed it as to language and phraseology only and agreed to offer it in connection with our report, but it is their suggestion and not our suggestion, and I have no feelings about it myself and I am sure no member of the Style and Drafting Committee does.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, it will be necessary to carry your motion that it be carried by a two-thirds vote, because it is a substantive change.

SUNDBORG: And you rule then, that it is a matter of substance?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seems to the Chair that it is a matter of substance. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment again?

CHIEF CLERK: "Delete 'at the time a borough is organized', and start the sentence with 'Special' on line 2, 'Special service districts', and insert 'existing at the time a borough is organized, shall be integrated with the government of the borough as provided by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, it originally would have meant that any borough, regardless of when it came into existence, would come under this section. Now, it means just those boroughs that existed at the time. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I am going to raise a point of order on the question. It was the intention of the substantive committee and it was explained on the floor that any districts existing at the time a borough was organized would come under the jurisdiction of the borough, and I think if you will look in the record you will find that that is so. So I maintain it is not a substantive change. It is a change in wording to carry out the intent of this body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan, if we can go back to the record -- now the Chair does not recall, naturally, exactly what was stated for the record on this proposal. If it was made clear at that time and is on the record, then it could be classified as a clarifying phrase, but in the absence of the record, it is, in this wording, a change in meaning if the delegates feel that there is a change -- the Chair can see by reading the section that there is a definite change in meaning, right off-hand. Unless you ask that we go back to the record, the Chair would have to rule that it is a substantive change. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If that is the ruling of the Chair, then I will withdraw my motion, and the motion should be phrased, "I move to suspend the rules and to submit an amendment which would be as has already been read by the Chief Clerk".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves that the rules be suspended -- unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended for the purpose of submitting this proposed amendment. Is there objection?

COGHILL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Sundborg so moves, seconded by Mr. White, that the rules be suspended. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Would it be possible to ask a question of the Chairman of the Local Government Committee before this vote is taken?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I just wanted to know whether special service districts includes school districts.

ROSSWOG: We did feel that special service districts would cover all special districts, and that the wording "performing local functions" -- it was our intention, I believe, to cover all districts. We felt they were doing local functions and should be covered, but in reading it, why -- it may limit or be a question there, and so we thought those words should be deleted and rewritten.

SMITH: The question in my mind, Mr. Rosswog, was that even with the new wording where you say "special service districts", do you mean school districts along with all the other service districts?

ROSSWOG: Yes, we do. We mean school districts, health districts, or anything along that line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: My understanding is this article is on local government, and to me this isn't a change in substance. It is exactly the same thing. It's a change in phraseology. Local functions is local government functions; it is not city. It is rural functions.

JOHNSON: Point of order. There is a motion before the house that is not debatable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The roll was called with the following result:

Yeas: 43 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, and Mr. President.

Nays: 8 - Coghill, Cooper, Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Lee, Marston and Peratrovich.

Absent: 4 - Buckalew, McNealy, McNees, and Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 43 yeas, 8 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Yeas have it and the rules are ordered suspended. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I now move the adoption of the amendment.

GRAY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr Sundborg moves the adoption of the amendment, seconded by Mr. Gray. The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, reference has been made to what transpired before. My notes indicate that when Section 15 was considered by the Convention before, the only amendment that was offered and passed had reference to the addition of some wording which says, "consistent with the provisions of this Article". Those words were added to the original Committee report. Otherwise it remained unchanged, and I have no recollection that the point as raised now by the Local Government Committee was ever considered at any time. I believe that the language as adopted in the original instance and as was reported by the Style and Drafting Committee is the proper language in this section, and that this motion should be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted?" All those in favor of adopting the amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed by saying "No". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The roll was called with the following result:

Yeas: 36 - Awes, Barr, Collins, Cross, Doogan, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 15 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Emberg, Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, Marston, Nolan, Peratrovich, Reader, Stewart.

Absent: 4 - Buckalew, McNealy, McNees, and Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 36 yeas, 15 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Yeas have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments for Section 15? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Could I ask a question on Section No. 14 of the Committee Chairman? In the agency to be established by law in the executive branch of the state government to assist and advise the local governments, would that include the unorganized boroughs, the unorganized cities, the unorganized districts that wish to become organized?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I believe it could come under that. It states, "and can perform other duties prescribed by law".

COGHILL: It would be "yes", wouldn't it?

ROSSWOG: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I now ask unanimous consent that the amendments and changes made by the Style and Drafting Committee in the Article on Local Government in connection with this report back to the Convention, so far as they pertain to phraseology, be adopted.

BARR: Point of order. I have an amendment to make which was put off so that the business could be carried on. I would like to submit that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This morning it was more or less the general feeling that Mr. Barr, rather than having us recess, would be working on any amendment he might have.

SUNDBORG: If it is not an amendment of substance, this is the time for it; if it is an amendment of substance, I would like to have my motion acted on first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If it is an amendment of substance, it doesn't make any difference, Mr. Barr.

BARR: It is not an amendment of substance.

SUNDBORG: I then defer my motion.

BARR: The Secretary has my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the secretary please read the amendment, that Mr. Barr would offer?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 1, line 7, strike the word 'borough' and substitute therefor the word 'section', and take like action .wherever the word 'borough' may appear throughout the Article."

BARR: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Barr?

BARR: Mr. President, this word "section" doesn't conflict with anything. It is recognized political subdivision. The dictionary gives it as "a division or part of a people or political division". It is used throughout the United States, usually to designate an area of the countryside, a section of land. All states of the Union, 47 of them, use county. I don't know why we have such antipathy here toward the word county, although some of us don't like the government. Louisiana, of course, uses the word "parish" to designate its political subdivisions. To this point we have adopted "borough". New York City is divided into boroughs, and I suppose maybe some other cities. I don't know which ones they are. Most of them are divided into wards. There is no reason we shouldn't have adopted the word "ward". Now, I will admit that New York City has some points, but really, as far as I am concerned, it's just a big overgrown stone prison that is overcrowded and noisy. I never did go there, although I have been in New York State, because I don't like to be in that kind of place. That is why I came to Alaska. Alaska is just the opposite; it's the opposite in every way, so I don't see why we have to adopt New York City's boroughs. "Section" is easily understandable and there is no mistake in what it means. It is a good solid American word and won't give us any trouble at all. I propose that we adopt the word "section". It will sound good; we will be speaking of the Fairbanks Section, Anchorage Section, and the Klawock Section, and when we say that, we will know what we mean.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: the first time this matter came up I voted for county. I was overwhelmingly voted down. It's true that some of the other folks changed over to borough, and we finally got the name of borough. Now, this is the fourth time, I think, this afternoon that we have taken this matter up on different names, and I think there are several thousand names in the dictionary, a good many of which could be applied. I want to know how long we are going to go on offering different names and bringing up this same question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I want to call to the attention of the body that the word section is a term very generally used in the rectangular system of surveys used by the United States Survey and Land Office. There are 36 sections in a township, and a section is six miles square, and it is a very common term used in land descriptions, and would be very confusing to find that you had Section 36 in Township 13 North, Range 2 West, lying in the Section of Anchorage or the Section of Fairbanks. It's part of the problem that the committee ran into. Both of the words that the delegate has submitted, both area and section -- both came into drastic conflict with other very common uses.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to congratulate Mr. Barr on his ingenuity in groping for a word to describe local government -- just any old word, as long as it isn't borough; but I think there is another score against section, and that is that it is a word that is used throughout our Constitution, referring to a part of the Constitution. We say, "As used in this section", or "In referring to Section so and so". I think it would be most confusing if we used it to describe a unit of local government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would confuse it with the Caesarean section. (laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr.

BARR: That was just my point, Mr. President. You can find arguments against anything if you look long enough, but the arguments against borough are better than any of these that have been brought up. It is true that there are many words in the dictionary that could be adopted, and any one of them would be better than borough. That's my point. (laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

BARR: I am trying to get rid of the word "borough" because I want to be able to walk down the streets without having people throw rocks at me. I am not the only one who doesn't want to live in a borough. There are nine-tenths of them here. If people wonder why I am sticking to this and trying to get something else adopted, that is the reason. I think it is important to the people what we call these political subdivisions. It seems that a great many of you here don't think it is important, but the people in Alaska do. I doubt that this will pass. I am beginning to have my doubts, but it is a more serious problem than most of you think, and you will hear of it when you get home.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr be adopted by the Convention? All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by "No". The Noes have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments for Article No. 10? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I have a very small amendment and will make it orally. It is the same subject and might have a chance to go through. I suggest that as a last compromise, a small compromise with the bigger ones we have made, that we at least change the spelling of this borough to b-o-r-o. I don't see any reason at all why we should stick to this u-g-h spelling. It hasn't changed since Chaucer used it. It has a nostalgic reference looking back towards New York and further beyond the ocean towards England. The spelling of b-o-r-o is commonly used in connection with and affixed to town names. I don't want to reiterate --

SUNDBORG: Point of order.

KILCHER: I am making a motion, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you move and ask unanimous consent?

KILCHER: Yes.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Moved by Mr. Kilcher, seconded by Mr. Buckalew, that the amendment be adopted. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I realize that this matter has been stretched out slightly too much. And nonetheless, I am sure the problem is a little more serious than it appears, and I am sorry that "borough" has been actually adopted. It is a stop gap probably, from the Committee, and has been handed along as a dark horse choice, and there we are, we have it, and in order to alleviate the school children's spelling in the future, and in order to some extent undo the damage that we have done by adopting this "borough", a change of spelling I think would be welcome. It is George Bernard Shaw himself who said that if all the u-g-h's in the English language were cut out, the amount of secretarial work, print, ink, and paper that would be saved would amount to half of the English war debt in ten years. Of course, the problem is not as great with us, but certainly we could be modern in this respect. America has always been modern in changing the English spelling wherever it could, and this little amendment I think would clear up the air to some extent and it wouldn't harm nobody, and...

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting it will signify by saying "Aye"; opposed by saying "No".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Noes have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move that the rules be suspended and that there be no further consideration given to the names of the local government units as given in the local government article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves that the rules be suspended. Is unanimous consent asked?

LONDBORG: How can that be possible? We can always reach it by a two-thirds vote later. (laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there objection to the suspension of the rules in order that no more amendments can be offered on this subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. The question is: "Shall the rules be suspended in order that no more amendments can be offered upon this subject of the change in name of the Government entity?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The roll was called with the following result:

Yeas: 18 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Davis, V. Fischer, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Rosswog, Sundborg, Taylor, and Mr. President.

Nays: 34 - Armstrong, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, Metcalf, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, and Wien.

Absent: 3 - McNealy, McNees, and Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 18 yeas, 34 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the Nays have it and the rules have not been suspended. But on a question like this, the Chair does not feel it necessary to ask for a suspension of the rules and then -- what would be the question after that? Because it would take -- you would carry the meaning with your suspension of the rules and it isn't necessary -- it isn't a compound motion in a sense, but a compound motion is meant. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I move that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee as we have it before us now, be accepted, be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves and asks unanimous consent that Article X, the Article on Local Government, the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting with relation to that Article, be adopted. Mr. White.

WHITE: I object, but only for a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your question, Mr. White, if there is no objection.

WHITE: Mr. McLaughlin, you pointed out only one change in substance in the mimeographed copy, that is on page 4. Is that the only change of substance made by the Committee on Style and Drafting in the mimeographed material?

McLAUGHLIN: That, to my knowledge, is the only change of substance made by the Style and Drafting Committee.

WHITE: Mr. President, I remove my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to adopting the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting with relation to Article X on Local Government?

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves, seconded by Mr. Victor Rivers, that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting in relation to Article X, the Article on Local Government, be adopted. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The roll was called with the following result:

Yeas: 49 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, and Mr. President.

Nays: 3 - Barr, Johnson, and Laws.

Absent: 3 - McNealy, McNees, and Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 49 yeas, 3 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting on Article X has been adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article X be advanced to third reading, be read by title only, and placed on final passage.

JOHNSON: I object.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves, seconded by Mr. Doogan, that the rules be suspended, that Article X, the Article on Local Government, be advanced to third reading, read the third time by title only, and placed upon final passage. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The roll was called with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, and Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Barr, Coghill, Johnson, Laws, and Londborg.

Absent: 3 - McNealy, McNees, and Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 5 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the Yeas have it, the rules have been suspended, and Article X, the Article on Local Government, is now before us in third reading and up for final passage. The Chief Clerk will read the title of the Article.

CHIEF CLERK: Article X, Local Government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr Barr.

BARR: I would like to explain my vote. I believe that the system of government as outlined in this Article is very good. I believe the Committee did very good work. I voted "No" because I believe that the people who sent me here -- it is not acceptable to them with that word "borough" in it. Now, that may not be very important, but I believe it is important to them, and I just wanted it on record that I voted no. Perhaps you think I am stubborn. I will agree with you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further debate or discussion of Article X, the Article on Local Government? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I also believe that the Local Government Committee did a wonderful job here. However, I will be constrained to vote against the Article because the provisions outlined do not provide for an equitable system of fiscal school operation within the Territory, and I believe, as it has been stated on the floor before, that our biggest resource is our children, and that we should provide for them through a system that will be nondiscriminate upon the administrators of that system. Therefore, I will be constrained to vote against this Article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is: "Shall Article X, the Article on Local Government, be adopted as a part of Alaska's State Constitution? The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The roll was called with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, and Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Barr, Coghill, Johnson, Laws, and Nolan.

Absent: 3 - McNealy, McNees, and Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 5 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Yeas have it, and Article X, the Article on Local Government, has been adopted as a part of Alaska's State Constitution. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we stand at recess until 7:00.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves and asks unanimous consent that we stand at recess until 7:00. Are there Committee announcements? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Style and Drafting immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. I wonder if the President of the Rules Committee, or the Chairman or someone informed, could tell us what work is ready for us to work on tonight so we will have an idea whether we will be able to work tonight, or whether we will have to wait tonight?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have the calendar -- the Chair has lost its calendar. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I think an expression from the Style and Drafting Committee would perhaps be appropriate as to what is out or soon will be out of the boiler room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe that by 7:00, the Article on Natural Resources will be out of the boiler room and on your desks so we can consider it tonight, and that, I think, will be the only one which we will have for tonight.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I seem to be in some doubt. There is a long calendar in front of us. Isn't there some of this material?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It's in the making, Mr. Ralph Rivers, and whether or not some more of that might be completed by the time we might possibly complete the Article on Natural Resources -- if there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 7:00 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom were referred Committee Proposals No. 14 and 17/b have compared the same with the original and find them correctly engrossed. On the first enrolled copy of Committee Proposal No. 14, there was one error by the Engrossing Committee we did not catch, and that correction has been made in ink rather than running it over again. It is a simple word. As concerns Committee Proposal No. 17/b, I hope the delegates will understand that the sections will necessarily have to be renumbered when all the sections are considered as a whole, so that they won't be too worried about the wrong numbers on there. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the report of the Committee be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney asks unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment with relation to Committee Proposal No. 14 and Committee Proposal No. 17/b be adopted by the Convention -- supplemental 14 -- be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the report is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we have already, I believe -- no, I guess we have not. I would now like to report from the Style and Drafting Committee the return to the Convention of the Article on Natural Resources, Article VIII, copies of which have been distributed to delegates. Although this is not according to our calendar the next order of business, it is the next one which we have ready for consideration by the Convention, and I ask unanimous consent that it be considered at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, Article No. VIII, the Article on Natural Resources, will be -- the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting with relation to Article VIII, will be considered at this time. The Chief Clerk will please read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee.

(The Chief Clerk read Article VIII in its entirety.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Sergeant at Arms please determine whether there are any other delegates in the building? Mr. Sundborg, does your Committee have a report to make in explanation of any changes that might have been made by your Committee?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we believe that no substantive changes have been made in this report. It was worked over, first of all by a subcommittee of our Committee, which consisted of Mr. Hurley, Mrs. Hermann, and Mr. Armstrong. It has been discussed with and reviewed by members of the Committee on Resources, and I believe that they agree with us that no substantive changes have been made. We have asked Mr. Hurley to explain the changes incorporated in the Article and to answer the questions of delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like first to call attention, which you probably already noted, to a typographical error on line 15, page 2, in which "of" should be "or"; line 15, page 2.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that "recreational or scientific"; is that right?

HURLEY: Yes, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask that unanimous consent be given that that change be made at this time?

HURLEY: I do, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request that the word "of" be changed to "or"? Hearing no objection, the change is ordered. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I also call attention to line 7 on that same page and the first word in line 8, we have an extra "the"

in there. One of them may be stricken. It's immaterial to me which one you strike.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent to strike the last word on line 7?

HURLEY: I do, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

HURLEY: To the best of my knowledge, Mr. President, that is all the typographical errors I have found. I would like, however, to call your attention to an exception to the statement by our chairman, which is sort of in between a substantive change and not a substantive change, and that is the matter on line 3 of page 4, which reads as follows: "necessary for the extraction and basic processing of mineral deposits." That change was not made as a substantive change, but was made at the request of the members of the committee who were working with us who indicated that that was what they intended for it to be. However, it may be that their minds have been changed in the meantime, so I would call that to their attention in case they wish to make some change in that particular item. It is no particular concern as far as style is concerned. Very few changes were necessary in this Article. I might say that very few changes in style could be made because of the predominance of technical terms in the article, and it was very difficult to try to make them readable to a person who was not conversant with the terms. In fact, we felt it impossible so we did not even try after a while. There was some change in the arrangement of the sections, which may necessitate the delegates going from one part to the other in following us, but it was felt they were more logically grouped the way we have them. I will start out with the report of the Style and Drafting Committee and, in going through the sections, tell you where a particular section came from. Section 1 is a condensation of the preamble which was not labeled as such but what amounted to such in the enrolled copy. We think we have clarified it without changing the substance or leaving out any item which was part of it. It follows our general policy of not having preambles to articles in the Constitution, and it did seem to us to say something of sufficient importance to incorporate it in a section. Section 2 is the same as Section 2 of the enrolled copy. The only change was the state to the legislature. Section 3 of the report comes from Section 4 of the enrolled copy and again is worded practically identically with the other one. The words "administered, utilized and maintained" have been "utilized, developed and conserved" in line with previous sections where they have used those words in the same context. Section 5 came from Section 5 of the enrolled copy; it is practically identical. Section 6 came from Section 8 of the enrolled copy. It is the same except for the last paragraph, which has been shortened some to cut down repetition. If I am going too fast, someone can stop me; if I am not going fast enough, I will be glad to go faster. Section 7 of the report came from Section 7 of the enrolled copy. Section 8 came from Section 9 of the enrolled copy. There was some change in wording of the last half of that, but we agreed it says the same thing. Section 9 came from Section 10 of the enrolled copy. Section 10 came from Section 11, and Section 11 of the report comes from Section 12 of the enrolled copy down through line 9 on page 4 of the enrolled copy. There are considerable changes in phrasing but no changes in substance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, may I ask a question. Line 22, page 3, Mr. Hurley, does the word "transferable" refer both to licenses and leases, or is it...

HURLEY: It did not in the enrolled copy. It only referred to licenses.

NORDALE: Leases are not transferable?

HURLEY: I would have to refer that to the substantive committee. It was my thought, anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I inquire, Mr. Hurley, if you, don't think that, without the comma after the word "licenses", that the transfer both modifies licenses and leases?

HURLEY: You please me no end, because I had a comma in there and my Committee struck it out.

R. RIVERS: Your Committee changed the meaning then. I submit without the comma that the word "transferable modifies "leases" as well as "licenses".

HURLEY: I think that possibly the leases, too, would be transferable, so I submit the question to Mr. Riley, if he would care to answer it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, could you answer the question?

RILEY: Subject to correction from any of the Committee, I would say that "transferable licenses" went in as a committee amendment, perhaps, in which the Committee had gone along with a floor suggestion. Earlier leases as mentioned had not been intended to be transferable. I think perhaps it would be clarified by transposing "leases" and "transferable licenses".

R. RIVERS: I agree with that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers agrees.

HURLEY: Can we accept that as a motion on the part of Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that that change be made at this time, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I think it is a matter of style and, while we are on it, it would speed things up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the change then?

RILEY: Line 22, following the word "permits", add "leases, and transferable licenses"; striking "and leases" later in the line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chief Clerk have that proposed amendment? Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of the amendment?

HERMANN: I don't think it needs the comma myself.

R. RIVERS: With that transposition it does not need the comma.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is that correct, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I would have a comma after "permits"; "permits, leases and transferable licenses".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Without the comma -- then the amendment would strike the comma you had asked for after "leases"?

RILEY: I don't think I asked for one, but in any event there should be none there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Chief Clerk will strike the comma that was originally asked to appear after the word "leases". Is there objection to adopting the amendment as offered by Mr. Riley -- the unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Section 12 comes from line 9 on page 5 at the end of the old Section 12. We did some damage to the repetition of these various minerals, but took care of the proposition by referring to "these minerals", so there seems to be no dissent from the committee on that. Section 14 comes from Section 14 of the enrolled copy; Section 15, from Section 15 of the enrolled copy; Section 16, from Section 16 of the enrolled copy. Section 17 comes from Section 6 of the enrolled copy. Section 18 comes from Section 17 of the enrolled copy. Section 19 comes from Section 18 of the enrolled copy. Section 20 comes from Section 1 verbatim of the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to Mr. Hurley with relation to the Committee's report on Article No. VIII? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I might ask for his remarks again on Section 11, where in the enrolled copy it says "extraction or basic processing", and here they have changed it to "extraction and basic processing".

HURLEY: That is what I mentioned before, and I feel that it could be construed as a substantive change which -- I understand the Committee may have some remarks concerning it. If we don't have any remarks concerning it from the Committee, I will then move that this change be adopted. I give them the opportunity to object to it first if they want to. They may have changed their minds. Hearing nothing from them, Mr. Chairman, I would at this time move that the rules be suspended and that the insertion of "and" for "either" and "or" on line 3 of page 4 be accepted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Line 3 of page 4. What was your amendment, Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: That the word "and" after the word "extraction" be approved as a substantive amendment to the enrolled copy, which said "either the extraction or basic processing".

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Hurley's -- did you move, Mr. Hurley? Or ask unanimous consent.

HURLEY: I move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves and asks unanimous consent that that proposed amendment be adopted.

KNIGHT: I will object for the moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second?

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann seconds the motion. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Well, I have not heard from the substantive committee on this yet. I would like to hear from them. I consider that a substantive change, and I would like to hear what they have to say about it.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I might suggest that their silence is more eloquent than words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then the question is at this time: "Shall the rules be suspended?" Is there objection to suspending the rules in order that this amendment be considered? Unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and you move the adoption, Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment, seconded by Mrs. Hermann. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: With respect to the question raised by Mr. Doogan, if he has the enrolled copy nearby, on page 5, lines 6 and 7, it will show the problem. The first word on line 7, the word "either" was thrown in in the process of some hasty floor amendment, and we felt that it arrived at a situation that was not desirable by imposing unnecessary restrictions. Now, in discussing the matter with Style and Drafting, we proposed that "either" be removed, and there was some difference within the Committee a few minutes ago as we read this over for the first time in final form as to whether the word "and" or the word "or" was preferable in the completed copy -- "extraction and basic processing" or "extraction or basic processing". Personally, I favored "or", but I believe it was the consensus of the Committee that it be left alone, and for that reason I would not question Mr. Hurley's proposed substantive change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I direct a question to Mr. Riley?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Riley, what is the practical effect of the change?

RILEY: Well, reading first, Mr. Johnson, from the enrolled copy, "Surface use of such lands, by the mineral claimant, shall be limited to those necessary to either the extraction or basic processing of mineral deposits." I think that is clear enough, that assuming that one is operating on one claim, it would suggest that he could either extract or he could do his basic processing on that claim. It might be language of limitation. The same thought might be carried over as to the two adjoining claims -- that the employment of the word "either" in that passage is a little narrower than without it, and we did not seek to be restrictive. Now, in the language of Style and Drafting, "Surface uses of land by a mineral claimant shall be limited to those necessary for the extraction and basic processing of the mineral deposits", we escape the limitation of the word "either", but I personally think there is still limitation in the use of the word "and" which I would prefer to see "or", but speaking for the Committee, the Committee did not demur to "and".

JOHNSON: Then may I ask this: if the word "and" were changed to "or", that would be less restricting?

RILEY: I would be pleased.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: May I just say that the Style and Drafting Committee has no compunctions on this one way or another? We only put it in like we were told to put it in by members of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I might remind the Convention that in the first form brought out by the Committee it was "and" and the Convention amended the first form to strike the "and" and insert an "or".

RILEY: Well, I have not my earlier copy right at hand as to the "or", but the complication did occur with the "either", and the "or" may have gone in at that time or may not have, but in any event, speaking for myself alone, I think the whole situation could be cured now if the amendment sought by Mr. Hurley were changed to substitute "or" for "and".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, if the Chair may, the Chair would like to ask a question. Supposing a person was out on a quartz deposit and he extracted the ore, that if you used the word "or", would that keep him from milling that ore at that site on his own right?

RILEY: I rather doubt that this language, using the word "or", "o-r" in this case, would, I think, give you the utmost opportunity for the use of your surface. I don't think that the other would ever be construed against a mineral claimant, but I think that there is likelihood that it could be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, a point of inquiry. Is it permissible under a suspension of the rules at this time to offer an amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Amendment to the amendment? Well, the previous manner in which we have considered that, Mr. Johnson, unless there was further unanimous consent, that it could not be done. That has been the manner in which we proceeded previously.

HURLEY: I would ask unanimous consent that my amendment be withdrawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment he had offered be withdrawn at this time. Is there objection?

HURLEY: I ask a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess before we act on this.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, Mr. Hurley has just delegated his prerogative of asking for suspension of the rules for purposes of making a specific substantive amendment. A huddle of about fifty-four people (laughter) has come up with this language in line 3: "extraction or basic processing or both".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, do you move the adoption of the amendment?

RILEY: I do. That means striking the word "and", substituting for "and" the word "or", and after "processing", inserting "or both".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

R. RIVERS: I object just for the moment. My understanding was it would read, "extraction or basic processing of the mineral deposits or both". Put the words "or both" on the end of the line.

RILEY: I will refer that to Style and Drafting.

R. RIVERS: Does that go to Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for one minute. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: At the risk of muddying up the record, Mr. President, I will withdraw my request for suspension of the rules on that specific amendment and try another one for size. I will ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended to amend the passage as follows...

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley has asked unanimous consent that he be allowed to withdraw his previous request. If there is no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Lines 3 and 4 to read under this amendment, "necessary for the extraction or basic processing of the mineral deposits, or for both".

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that you might submit that amendment?

RILEY: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

RILEY: I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment and asks unanimous consent. Is there objection? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information. Mr. Riley, I would like to ask a question, if I may, about the implications of this thing. There are certain types of mineral clays, for instance, to take an example, that are considered minerals for certain purposes, and the processing of these mineral clays takes acres of land for sheds, piles, and so on. Now, assuming that somebody files a mineral claim on two different pieces of property belonging to somebody else -- let's say two farms, for instance -- and he's extracting -- he files a claim on each. Let's assume this mineral deposit is underlying both places. He is extracting the mineral in one, and he prefers the location further down for processing purposes. Will he be allowed to get the use of the second parcel of land, possibly a wheat field or a pasture, to build himself five or six acres of sheds under this construction?

RILEY: In the first place, Mr. Kilcher, I doubt that your illustration would amount to basic processing -- the five or six acres of shed. I would expect also that when the question arose, the matter of concurrent use would come in, the matter of which was the highest beneficial use of the land, and whether the mineralization of the second area, the second claim, was actually established, or whether it was simply staked as a more convenient spot for processing, perhaps, closer to water or closer to the highway. There are a number of questions there of a hypothetical nature that I would not pretend to answer. I think basic processing is the key to this.

KILCHER: I overlooked that angle of basic processing. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Does the Committee have other amendments they would like to offer? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: No, Mr. President, we have no further amendments. If there are no further questions...

R. RIVERS: There are. I would like to refer to Section 14 and ask Mr. Hurley a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Line 3 says, "Free access to the navigable or public waters of the State, as defined by law, shall not be denied any citizen of the United States". Is it your impression, Mr. Hurley, that the legislature could define "navigable waters" as not including the smaller lakes that are within the boundaries of the homesteads?

HURLEY: May I submit that the wording except for changing "legislature" to "law" is identical with the enrolled copy, and I would refer the question to the substantive committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Rivers, the answer to your question is "yes", and the language was inserted pursuant to a request from Mr. Poulsen and others that conceivably the legislature might set a minimum area, shall we say on back yard ponds, to which free access would be afforded.

R. RIVERS: Do you agree with me that there is a great deal of case law on the subject of navigability, and that there is great diversity of opinion of the courts as to what is meant by "navigability"? Do you think the reference here "by law" could possibly refer to that big jumble of case law?

RILEY: That is what bothers me. "Public waters of the state" is what was intended to be defined by law. Your calling it to our attention in terms of "navigable waters" is one point which should have further consideration.

R. RIVERS: I also wanted to ask you if the "navigable" -- I thought we were avoiding that term and sticking to "public waters as defined by law" -- and I am wondering how "navigable" got in there.

RILEY: It has been there from the outset.

R. RIVERS: Don't you think it would be better to use the word "legislature" to define "navigable waters" so all this case law won't get all balled up in it?

RILEY: I don't think you can escape judicial determination from time to time.

R. RIVERS: We were going to define it by the legislature, were we not?

RILEY: We were going to insert legislative definition to accommodate such instances as that described by Mr. Poulsen. I think that you are getting into hot water when you start making legislative determination of navigable waters in view of the libraries full of decisions on navigability of waters.

R. RIVERS: Then why are we about to do it then?

RILEY: Your point is well taken, and, as I say, we should have further consideration before this goes into third reading, only because of the use of the word "navigable".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I can see the problem of which they speak, and I might suggest that the striking of the comma after the word "State" would probably make it clear that the definition refers to public waters and not "navigable", if that would be possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, do you think it would be wise to have a recess at this time so the Committee and Mr. Rivers and other delegates could get together on that question?

HURLEY: In view of the fact, Mr. President, that it might be well taken care of by a style change, it might be well to have a one- or two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention is at recess for two or three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the word "law" on line 4 be stricken and the words "the legislature" be substituted in its place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves and asks unanimous consent that the word "law" on page 5, line 4, be stricken and the word "the legislature" be inserted in its place. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I object for a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: I so move.

POULSEN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Poulsen. Your question, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Hurley, is this amendment intended to eliminate the possibility of any definition of free access, and so on, by means of the initiative as against the legislature?

HURLEY: No, Mr. Johnson, it is not, and I think it is covered by the final article in the miscellaneous provisions which we will have before us tomorrow.

JOHNSON: What is the purpose of the change?

HURLEY: The purpose is to put it back the way it was before we got it in Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Question, Mr. Hurley. As I read this article now, then the legislature could define "navigable waters"?

HURLEY: That is correct, Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Was that the intention of the Committee?

RILEY: I don't think that was the intention of the Committee, Mr. President. If I conveyed that idea, Jim, I am sorry. It seems to me that restoration of the word "legislature" for "law" is one that developed the thought that legislative law as distinct from case law should have the stress, but, as I stated earlier, I am not entirely satisfied with the situation we find ourselves in, and I am not content with an offhand settling of it here. We had decided earlier in the Committee that it would be desirable to hold this out of third reading tonight for such questions as might arise in seeing for the first time the finished draft. Now, this language did not change substantially, but I think I know the point that Mr. Buckalew is on, and I share his views that navigability is not one that should be handled lightly or hastily.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, could I ask Mr. Riley a question? I am not trying to hold things up, Mr. Riley, but it seems to me if, after the word "navigable", we inserted the word "waters" and then inserted a comma, that would probably cure it.

RILEY: We were virtually at that point once, Mr. Buckalew, here in the last few minutes, and then Style and Drafting decided to return to the "legislature" to cure the one proposition so far as it would, and that was the pending amendment. I think that your point could be picked up properly from that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Buckalew?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: I am not a lawyer so perhaps I should not get too involved in this subject, but as a member of the committee, I am interested in the general subject and am particularly interested in this wording here. Would you contend that any action, in view of the fact that there appear to be libraries full of definitions of navigable waters, would you contend that the action of a state legislature could possibly have no effect on the definition of navigable waters if it affected that state?

BUCKALEW: That is not my position at all, Mr. White. I think that if the state legislature got into the proposition of defining navigable waters, we would have a pyramid of -- another series of cases. I think it would just cloud the issue. Certainly, the legislature could define navigable waters and it would be controlling if the courts could understand the definition.

WHITE: How do you arrive at a situation as mentioned here earlier where in the state of Washington navigable waters was defined as something that would float a shingle boat? Possibly other definitions in other states. How do you arrive at the different definitions of navigable waters if some attempts by state legislatures have been made to define navigable waters?

BUCKALEW: Mr. White, that is about a five-thousand dollar question, and it would take three weeks' research. I am not in any position to give you an opinion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I would like to ask the Chairman of the Committee a question. It is my understanding that navigable waters are under the jurisdiction of the United States Government, and is this "navigable necessary? As long as waters are determined as being navigable, they are immediately beyond the jurisdiction of the state. I am not sure. I am just asking.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: It is with the greatest pleasure I refer that question to Mr. Riley.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I thought that Mr. Buckalew's remark was most felicitous about the five-thousand dollar question. There is a large area of federal jurisdiction over navigable waters. At the same time, the state courts have defined "navigability" of waters time and again. The one referred to here this evening was one of literally thousands. This particular problem arises by our having inserted the amendment the other evening "as defined by the legislature". I think that in returning to the legislature we make a partial -- from "by law", we make a partial step toward correction. I don't think that here on the floor this evening we are going to correct the thing altogether. But my own thought would be to proceed, and to hold this point in abeyance, perhaps for the first recess, when thoughts can be organized, and we might come up with something yet tonight.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Could I ask Mr. Riley a question on this? In your opinion, Mr. Riley, does the new state acquire the rivers and harbors area of the new state, or does that still stay under the jurisdiction of the River and Harbor Bureau of the Army?

RILEY: Navigability for purposes of commerce is still a federal jurisdiction.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Point of order. I think a motion was made to change "by law" to "by the legislature". I don't think the discussion has been pertinent at all to that request. The request would put this in line with the enrolled copy, and I think the only discussion should be on should this be "by law", or should it be "by the legislature".

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have a motion that has been made and seconded before us to change the word -- delete the word "law" and insert in lieu thereof the words "the legislature". Is there further discussion? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Riley, that does not include initiative law, does it? The legislature?

RILEY: Subject to interpretation of the so-called idiot rule by Style and Drafting, I only wish to say that the amendment -- that Style and Drafting is going back to the word "legislature" which the Committee had used initially, and it is my impression that our use of the word "legislature", if it is adopted, is to confine it to the legislative law as against case law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

RIVERS: It seems to me -- has the motion been adopted here now -- on the legislature?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has not been adopted yet.

V. RIVERS: I will hold my comments then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion on the proposed amendment? The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hurley be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adoption of the amendment will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed by saying "No". The "Ayes have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have no more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I rise to a question. We are talking here not about navigability as I see it; we're talking about free access. So it would seem to me, if we struck the comma after "state", we would accomplish what we want. We would discriminate between the public waters and navigable waters. The sentence would then read, "Free access to the navigable, or public waters of the State as defined by the legislature shall not be denied any citizen of the state. Then, regardless of the amount of case law you have pertinent to navigable or whatever the legislature may pass which is pertinent to the state law, it would still be a matter in this section at least only of the free access to those waters.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I don't think this is before us, but just to clear the air a bit, four or five of us were pretty much in harmony with the thought expressed on the floor by Mr. Buckalew during the previous recess. We would carry it a little farther than Delegate Rivers has just suggested. Perhaps a recess at this time for about two minutes would put the show on the road again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have another slight phraseology amendment on page 1, line 10. Strike the comma after "wildlife". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

HURLEY: Now, Mr. President, if there are no further questions as to Style and Drafting...

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I feel an amendment coming on, but I am going to try to forestall it here by a little question. In Section 8, Mr. Hurley, it says, "The legislature may provide for the leasing of and the issuance of exploration permits". We hashed over the word "exploration" before and there is no doubt what that means when we are speaking of mining, or anything of that sort. But if you picked up a magazine and read an article on some subject and came down to the middle of the article and it said that a permit could be issued for exploration, you might assume that somebody was outfitting an expedition to explore the Arctic, or anything else. That has a very broad meaning. This is just a matter of styling. In this article, we read all the way through it down to this Section 8, you are speaking of lands, of fisheries, of objects of natural beauty, of historic or cultural value, etc. Then you say, a permit may be provided for exploration. Of course, if you read clear on down to the tail end of it, you find out that exploration there pertains to mining. It seems to me another word could go better in here. Do you know if it was the intent of the Resources Committee to provide this permit only for exploration as we know it, or did that include development? Could development replace that word? Or do you know of another word that would be better.

HURLEY: Mr. Barr, I have failed on many occasions to be able to grasp the intent of the Resources Committee, so I waive the question to Mr. Riley.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley or Mr. Smith, Mr. Barr's question?

BARR: In that particular section it does not mention minerals or anything else.

RILEY: Mr. Barr, I am just looking for my pre-enrolled copy which I don't spot readily. I recall that you expressed interest -- perhaps it was your amendment in the first instance.

BARR: That had to do with mining, and in my mind there was no doubt then what "exploration" meant because it dealt with mining, but in this, when you first stumble on to it, you naturally take it in its broadest meaning.

RILEY: I suggest -- I was looking for an earlier edition which may be coming up. I had in mind that possibly this represented some reorganization on the part of Style and Drafting. I do not know that this is the case. It would appear to me that one word, perhaps "mineral exploration", would satisfy your objection.

BARR: I don't have any particular objection except that it sounds awkward to me. I would say "mineral exploration", or if you are speaking of other things as I think you are here, such as forestry and fisheries, you could say "exploration and development", or just plain "development" if the intent went that far. I am not going to offer an amendment, but I wish somebody would look into it the next time you have a recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: That was put in at the time they were talking about exploration regarding burial grounds, etc., that they did not want the public digging up promiscuously. That sort of exploration was the subject of conversation at the time it was put in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: So far as I can see, the language here used is identical with the enrolled copy, and it is outside of the scope of the inquiry at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are correct, Mr. Davis, if it is identical with the enrolled copy.

HURLEY: It is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to the report of the Style and Drafting Committee? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I have no questions. (laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is hard to tell...

HURLEY: If there are no further questions, I would move that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on the Resources Article be adopted as to phraseology only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting with relation to the Natural Resources Article be adopted with relation to phraseology only. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the report has been adopted. Are there proposed amendments for Section 1? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder about this procedure in third reading of going through and requesting amendments section by section. We did not do that until the very last article considered, I do believe. It requires a suspension of the rules any time an amendment is offered, and I believe that anybody who has a substantive amendment should have the burden of coming forward with his motion to suspend the rules and offer it. This thing has been through second reading which is when amendments should be made. I don't believe it is proper to call off here section by section and in essence here invite amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr Sundborg, it is the recollection of the Chair that we have done that after the Convention has accepted your report, that that has been the procedure right along. Because it actually is not in third reading; it is some sort of in-between. But we have been doing that.

SUNDBORG: The point I want to make is that we should not lightly be considering amendments here. The time to make amendments was when this was on the floor and really in second reading and subject to amendments. Any amendment now requires a suspension of the rules and should not be offered unless there is some very good reason for offering it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, but that has been the procedure under which we have entertained this matter right on through. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would have a feeling that this is very proper to go through it this way inasmuch as these articles returning from Style and Drafting have only so recently come in our hands. We have waived the factor of having it in our hands for 24 hours prior to consideration at this time. I do feel that going through it section by section is very advisable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments for the article for any of the sections at this time? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Has Section 14 now been settled? The question of Section 14 as to phraseology or substance?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Has that been settled so far as the Committee is concerned, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: The Committee has nothing else to submit on Section 14 Mr. President. We have a couple of other one-word amendments to submit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I think what Mr. Kilcher was getting at is it your feeling that Section 14 is in good shape now?

RILEY: Section 14 reads as printed with the exception of the return to the word "legislature" instead of "law on line 4, page 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to be proposed? Does the Committee, the substantive Committee have an amendment to offer?

RILEY: Mr. President, on page 3, Section 9, line 8, at one point this was discussed on the floor, apparently without action. It reads, "Reservation of access shall not impair the owners' use,"; the Committee feels that the word "unnecessarily" should be inserted between "not" and "impair". Obviously, any access will represent some impairment, and we feel that the use of the word "unnecessarily" will in part correct that. Accordingly, the Committee requests a suspension of the rules, and will thereupon move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked by Mr. Riley that the rules be suspended for that purpose. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, Mr. Riley, the rules have been suspended and you might offer your amendment.

RILEY: The Committee asks on line 8, page 3, the word "unnecessarily" be inserted after the word "no". We ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Line 1, page 6.

RILEY: The sentence starts on the preceding page and reads as follows: "Just compensation shall be made for property taken or for damages to other property rights." We feel that the word "damages should be qualified, and I ask unanimous consent for suspension of the rules in order to make the specific amendment, "resultant damages".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended.

RILEY: Now, Mr. President, the Committee asks unanimous consent that line 1 of page 6 be amended by inserting after the third word, the word "resultant".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

RILEY: The Committee has no further amendments at this time. Mr. President, but we specifically do not ask that the rules be suspended for advancing the article into third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You desire that this article be held and let take its normal course? If there is no objection the article is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar in third reading. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I rise to ask a question again in connection with the article, of the matter brought up by Mr. Barr. I can see leases and sales and grants here, but this leases and issuance of permits for exploration seems to limit the field of leasing. I see sales and grants of public lands, but for instance, I am thinking in terms of a headquarters site or trade and manufacturing site or some other area in which you might possibly want a development lease. Do you feel we have development leases for different things other than exploration for mineral purposes and oil?

RILEY: The question raised by Mr. Barr, Mr. Rivers, is specifically why we do not ask that the matter be advanced tonight under suspension of the rules.

V. RIVERS: You think it does not cover that type of lease...

RILEY: We think a question exists which merits attention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the article is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar for third reading. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: May I ask a question? It is on page 4, lines 3 and 4, we made a change and put in "extraction or basic processing, or both". I noticed on page 3, line 23, we run into the same question again, and it looks again to me like the word "and" is a limiting word.

RILEY: Is that a question addressed to me? My quick reading of that sentence would suggest to me that the question is not there as significant as it is on the next page. There again we will make a marginal check.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions before this article is definitely taken off the calendar for today? If there are no other questions, it is referred to the Rules Committee. Mr. Riley, as Chairman of the Rules Committee -- the next bus does not leave here until ten minutes until 10:00; is that correct? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The next bus leaves the University at 9:50.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, is there anything that could be brought before us that might -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have just been advised that the article on General and Miscellaneous Provisions has been completed in the boiler room and is on its way down here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection then, the Convention will be at recess and we might consider that article until time for adjournment.

McNEES: Before recess, inasmuch as I was inadvertently absent from the floor when the final roll call was taken on the Article on Local Government, I would like to have the record show that if I had been present on the floor I would have voted "Yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the record will show that if Mr. McNees had been present he would have voted "Yes" on the Local Government Article. If there is no objection, it is so ordered. Another item that the Chair would like to bring to the attention of the delegates before we recess is that it will be necessary after the Constitution is in its final form, it will then be necessary to vote on the complete document in its final form and have at least 28 votes in favor of it in order to adopt the final complete document. Now the question is: is it the intention of the Convention that that final vote be held at the signing ceremonies which will just take a few minutes? It has arisen in the mind of the Chair that it might be an impressive part of that ceremony if that final vote on the document is taken over at the gymnasium that afternoon. Mr. White.

WHITE: I so move.

DOOGAN: Would that entail the reading of the final document over there too?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is another question now -- that's a good question, Mr. Doogan, and inasmuch as we might as well decide here -- would it be in order that the final document be read by article only down through, or what is the intention of the body as to that final document and how it will be read? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Has anybody an estimate ready how long it would take to read it, slightly slower than our Chief Clerk usually reads?

SUNDBORG: We estimate it will contain about thirteen thousand words. I would guess it would take the Chief Clerk a good hour, maybe an hour and one-half to read it, all of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing in the rules that would prevent. We have read it in its entirety more than once, we will have read it in its entirety more than once, and there is nothing in the rules that the Chair can see that would keep it from being in order to read it article by article with such a motion being offered. I don't mean in its entirety, but just each separate article.

KILCHER: I think it should be looked into. If it were technically possible at all, I think it could be an impressive part of the ceremony for everybody present and concerned to hear it, to have it read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Is it not possible that we might circumnavigate this technicality by taking care of the reading of the document, if that is necessary, on Saturday, and on Sunday read it by title and use the preamble as part of that ceremony, and at that time it will be made public as part of our ceremony?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That could be done. There is plenty of precedent for the legality of such action. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: If it was read over there, maybe somebody might have the bright idea of amending it. (laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: It does not seem to the Chair that it would be possible to read it over there. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: The thought occurs to me that possibly the tape recording equipment and the Stenotypist record would not be available at the gymnasium that day. It's just a question. Possibly they will be available, I don't know.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: They will be. They will be taking the proceedings of our signing ceremonies on tape at the station that day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Inasmuch as according to the rules it is open for amendment until final passage, it might be well to preclude an amendment on Saturday. Somebody might want to change something at the last minute. We could get into a long argument.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would like to ask unanimous consent to revert to the matter of motions, and would like to make a motion on this thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may offer a motion at this time.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I move that the final reading and vote on the Constitution for the State of Alaska take place in this hall on or before Saturday.

CROSS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves, seconded by Mr. Coghill and Mr. Cross, that the final reading and vote on the Constitution be taken in this hall not later than Saturday afternoon. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to make a motion that we read the Constitution by title -- preamble and title of each article just prior to signing. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Just by word of explanation, is it on the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is on the floor.

HURLEY: What I had in mind is that I think it would be fine to read the title and preamble and vote on it over there, too, but I would like to get the thing finished up so that if somebody had an amendment at the last minute he could not say he was precluded from making that amendment because of the circumstances.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean, Mr. Hurley, that the intent of your motion is that we do the necessary legal work right here, but over there we call the roll on the adoption again and have the preamble read and the title of each article read, and then call the roll adopting it again as part of the ceremonies?

HURLEY: Yes, with the understanding that the Rules Committee would provide that no amendments would be offered. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I was wondering if we could not still take the final vote over there if we read it here and got up to that point where there were no amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair is certain, Mr. Boswell, that there would be no delegate who would attempt to offer a specific amendment to move it back into second reading on that day. Also, if such a move were made, that it certainly could not get the two-thirds vote at that time. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: It might be a good time to make a change on "borough". You would get the feeling of the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, should not the final reading and the vote go on this tape and on the stenotypist's record? Are we going to move everything over there and continue this particular tape?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, the feeling of the Committee on Administration is, and we are going to discuss that tomorrow, that the Chief Clerk, the Secretary, and the stenotypist will be sitting just forward of the President's chair, but the tape recording will be done at the KFAR studio, because they are going to broadcast the whole program and they will in turn dub the tape from the broadcast.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will be recorded. Mr. Cross seconded the motion as the Chair remembers it. The question is: "Shall the Convention adopt the motion presented by Mr. Hurley and amended by Mr. Victor Rivers?" All those in favor of adopting the motion as amended will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No". The "Ayes" have it and the motion is adopted. If there is no objection, the Convention -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Could we revert to the order of business of committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Committee on Style and Drafting reports back to the Convention Article XII, General and Miscellaneous. Copies have been distributed to delegates and a copy is on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will proceed with the reading of the committee report.

(The Chief Clerk read the report on the Article in full.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, there is one additional miscellaneous provision, which has passed through second reading and is not included in this draft. It is the provision pertaining to the disclaimer as to Native rights. It is still being redrafted in the Style and Drafting Committee and being considered by our consultants, and will be brought on the floor just as soon as it is ready. I would like to inquire whether any of the substantive committees, and particularly Mr. McNealy's committee, have additional general and miscellaneous provisions which they intend to introduce to be included in the Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, we have none in the Ordinance Committee.

SUNDBORG: If any other committee chairman knows of miscellaneous provisions to be presented, we would like to know about it in Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Well, you probably are aware of it, in Resources the last two are supposed to be added to this section. One is already in, but I can't find the other one. Section 19 in Resources, there is the enumeration of specific powers, which is taken care of in Section 7, and then the state boundaries. which was No. 20 in Resources. I do not find that in this one.

SUNDBORG: We are aware of those two, and we will take care of them appropriately here. I was just wondering if there may be some others that in the course of the Convention have been given to some committee or have been assigned for further study and have not come before us again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I do not recall seeing the one in regard to suffrage and elections, which referred to the election of 1924. Does that belong here or in Ordinances?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I believe it has been passed in third reading, and will be among the provisions in the schedule of transitional measures and ordinances. I believe it was reported out again by Mr. McNealy's committee along with the Alaska-Tennessee Plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers had one he was working on. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Well, I have in mind what I consider to be a problem of omission, and that is the question of financing in the transition period. I mentioned that the other day. I also have in mind as to whether or not we should have a sort of a severability or savings clause in here, so that if the Congress should find they are not able to accept certain clauses, such specifically as the fish trap clause, that we would not lose the balance. I was just thinking about that and I mentioned that before dinner. I have talked it over with a few. I wonder if it might not be well to have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, do you have a Committee explanation to make in relation to this article?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the general and miscellaneous provisions have been gathered from all points here in the Convention and collected in the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee and turned over to our Committee. Some of them have been drafted in the first instance by Style and Drafting, and we gave those just as critical a going-over as we did the others as to language. The redraft was prepared by a subcommittee consisting of Mr. Davis, Mr. Fischer, and myself. And we have asked Mr. Fischer to explain the changes that have been made and to answer any questions by delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, there are no basic changes in the various sections as they are before you. There is an additional section inserted, as you will note, Section 9, that is a clarification of the use of the terms "by law" and "by the legislature" as they are used in this Constitution. It was deemed desirable to include this provision to make sure that the courts do follow the intent of this Convention in deciding upon various questions that may come up. We will ask for a suspension of the rules to consider this matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking for that suspension at this time? You mean for the inclusion of this section?

V. FISCHER: Yes, I think it properly should come after the language has been approved. If you would like me to, I can just run through quickly and advise the members where the various sections came from. Section 1 is Section 1 in the enrolled copy; 2 and 2 are the same; 3 comes from 3; 4 is the same as No. 4 was before -- in most cases they are practically the same wording; 5 has the same number as previously. Section 6 is composed of what were Section 7 as well as Section 8 in the enrolled draft. We combined those into one section. What is Section 7 now previously was Section 9. What is Section 8 previously was Section 10. Section 9, as I mentioned, is new. Section 10 comes from Section 11; Section 11 comes from 13; Section 12 comes from 6; Section 13 comes from 6; and as Mr. Sundborg mentioned, Section 12 of the enrolled copy is not as yet ready for presentation and will be brought in as an addendum to this report at a future time for separate approval. I will be glad to answer any questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions to be directed to Mr. Fischer on any of the sections? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, in line 21, page 2, Section 6, should not the words "persons of" be stricken?

V. FISCHER: They probably could be. I don't think that they add very much to the language as it stands here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Article XII? If not, are there any committee amendments to be offered at this time? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for the purpose of considering the inclusion of Section 9.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for the purpose explained. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, the objection is merely a technicality, but on page 2, line 21, "including persons of both sexes.", should not that read, "shall be construed as including either sex."? (laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I think I would rather not answer that question while we are in the middle of a request for the suspension of the rules.

McLAUGHLIN: I will withdraw that objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that he might offer Section 9 as an amendment to this article. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the rules are suspended. Mr. Fischer, you might offer your proposed amendment.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I move that Section 9 be approved for inclusion in Article XII of this Constitution. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves and asks unanimous consent that Section 9 be adopted as a part of Article XII, the Article on General and Miscellaneous provisions. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other committee amendments, Mr. Fischer?

FISCHER: Mr. President, on page 2, line 7, change the word "dischage" to "discharge".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Fischer, you ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that change? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask the grammarian of the Convention whether "construing" is properly spelled on line 19 of page 2.

HERMANN: Yes.

V. FISCHER: The committee has no further amendments, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: I think that the Committee on Style and Drafting is avoiding the issue, and it may cause some embarrassment in future generations. I move that the word "both" on line 21, page 2, be stricken, and in lieu thereof the word "either" be inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I ask a question of Mr. McLaughlin? And use the singular for "sex"?

3657

McLAUGHLIN: And strike "es" from the word "sexes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is a phraseology change. Do you move and ask unanimous consent?

McLAUGHLIN: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

SUNDBORG: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard, Mr. Sundborg. Do you move, Mr. McLaughlin?

McLAUGHLIN: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second? Mr. Kilcher seconds the motion.

V. FISCHER: I ask for a one-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Mr. McLaughlin and I have during the recess exchanged our thoughts with respect to "sex". I understand that Mr. McLaughlin has a motion to offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I am in doubt as to the procedure, but I shall presume it rather than cause any embarrassment. I shall ask suspension of the rules and ask unanimous consent to strike on line 21, page 2, the words "persons of both sexes" and substitute the words "either sex".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended. Does the Chief Clerk already have that?

CHIEF CLERK: What happened to his other motion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: What happened to the other motion?

McLAUGHLIN: It is entirely withdrawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, it is entirely withdrawn. Is there objection to the suspension of the rules? Hearing no objection the rules have been suspended. Mr. McLaughlin, you might offer your proposed amendment.

McLAUGHLIN: I now move to insert on line 21, page 2, to strike "persons of both sexes", and substitute the words "either sex".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be offered? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "A new Section 14. 'Should the Congress of the United States invalidate any ordinance or transitory provision attached to this constitution the balance of the constitution and its attached ordinances and transitory provisions shall not be impaired thereby.'"

V. FISCHER: Point of order. It seems to me that should be in the article on Transitional Measures and Ordinances.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, would that be your feeling, too? Now where is that, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: Part of that is still in second reading and is supposed to be out late tomorrow or Wednesday morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, could you hold your amendment until such time as that article is before us?

V. RIVERS: I shall be glad to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the proposed amendment will be held until the article on transitional measures is before us. Are there other proposed amendments to Article No. XII? If not -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there are no amendments as to phraseology, I ask unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting as to the first thirteen sections of Article XII, General and Miscellaneous provisions, be accepted, and that the amendments and changes therein made by the Committee on Style and Drafting be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the phraseology changes made to Article XII by the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted, and that the substantive changes made by the Style and Drafting Committee be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Lee.

LEE: I don't object. I would like to have something clarified here which was pointed out to me. In line 8 page 3, Section 9 -- Oh, I am sorry, I have been fighting over another article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of Mr. Sundborg's motion? Hearing no objection, the report is ordered accepted and adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I will not ask for a suspension of the rules to advance this article in view of the fact there is at least one other section to be added to it before it goes into the Constitution. Mr. President, I have been asked by several of the delegates what article number should be assigned to the article on the Judiciary which went through third reading and was adopted before our Committee began its practice of putting the article number on the committee report, and for the information of delegates I will state that the article on the Judiciary should have the number, Article IV, Roman numeral IV.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that it have the Article No. Roman numeral IV?

SUNDBORG: I do, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to giving the article on the Judiciary the number, Roman numeral IV? Hearing no objection, the number Roman numeral IV will be given to the article on the Judiciary. What would the Style and Drafting Committee desire now as to the Convention procedure?

SUNDBORG: We have now put before you everything that has been referred to our committee with the exception of the apportionment schedule, and I have just been informed that that will not be ready for consideration tonight, but will be, tomorrow, and the part of the schedule of ordinances containing the Alaska-Tennessee Plan and several other sections, which was referred to us last night in second reading for some additional drafting. We have not had a chance within our committee to do a great deal on that as yet, and would require several hours of work before we would be able to bring it on the Convention floor. So it would be our suggestion that the Convention adjourn until possibly tomorrow afternoon to give us the morning in which to finish that work. I think there is nothing else on the calendar or ready to go on the calendar except the resolution on friendly relations with Canada.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I want to correct Mr. Sundborg. 17/b does not include the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. That is 17/a and that has not come out yet. All you have is 17/b right now. 17/a is enroute to Engrossment and Enrollment, and 17/c is, I believe, in Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: 17/c Revised is the Tennessee Plan, as the Chair recalls it. Is that right? And it was referred directly to the Committee on Style and Drafting?

SWEENEY: That is right. 17/c.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would seem to me that the suggestion of the Style and Drafting Committee Chairman would be well taken at this time inasmuch as the work is pretty well along and it would enable that committee and the Committee on Resources to really more or less clean everything up if we did adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow, at the time that we do adjourn. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I will move and ask unanimous consent, subject to committee announcements, that we stand adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell moves and asks unanimous consent, subject to committee announcements, that the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, before adjourning, I think it might be helpful if anybody who might have proposed amendments on the Resources Article meet with the Resources Committee sometime before 1:30. I think that would expedite the work tomorrow afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels if anyone has any suggestions to Style and Drafting with relation to the Tennessee Plan, for instance, the Committee Proposal No. 17/c Revised, that they also report to the Style and Drafting Committee meeting tomorrow morning. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Resources Committee to meet for just a few moments immediately after recess, and I am sure that we will meet again tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith announces that the Resources Committee will meet immediately upon adjournment in the gallery. Are there other Committee announcements? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet at 9:00 in the morning in one of the large committee rooms upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Will the bus be at the Nordale at 1 o'clock tomorrow?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, will you arrange for the bus calling at the Nordale Hotel at 1:00 p.m. tomorrow?

COGHILL: 1:00 special bus. All right. The Committee on Administration would like to have a meeting in town tomorrow at 11:00 a.m. in the Polaris Building. I hope we can get Tom Stewart's Apartment No. 1012.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to mention this one thing that has been mentioned several times and was brought to the attention of the Chair today. That is the one question we might overlook, could possibly overlook, and that is the signing on Sunday of the final document or documents. It would seem that it might be best that we just sign the first original document at the gymnasium, that we come back here and sign all the rest of the copies in this building. It has been suggested that all the copies be laid out upstairs on tables in order to facilitate the expeditious signing of the documents. Is that agreeable to all the delegates? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: You want them all signed in the same order, no doubt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, Mr. Victor Rivers, and if that could be the general understanding of all delegates that after the ceremony on next Sunday afternoon is completed, they will come back here for the purpose at that time of signing all the documents.

DOOGAN: You mean clear upstairs?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, did you have some idea as to...

SUNDBORG: I don't believe it was my suggestion, but I did overhear it. I believe the suggestion was that we line up a bunch of tables in the cafeteria and lay out the 100 or 104 documents, or whatever it is, and the delegates file by and sign each document.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Why couldn't they be laid out right here on the tables that are available? Somewhere in this building. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would suggest that the details be worked out to expedite that function and it would seem to me the prerogative of the Administration Committee to arrange for that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, one thing we will have to decide tomorrow is that we have one hundred copies being printed of the printed copies of the constitution, of the original. We can have the plate that we signed the other day for the newspaper to fix on the remaining copies or we can have the delegates try to have their original copies that they wish to keep, the 55. We have to have five copies for the record officially, according to Rule 51, and then we figured 55 of them, one for each one of the delegates. Is it the wish of the delegates that they have those signed individually by the delegates, or should be affix the printed signatures on them?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: It was the recommendation of the Administration Committee the other day that we sign the official copies and we sign 55 for the delegates, and the balance of 40 would be signed by name plates; that report was adopted by the Convention, and I think we should hold to that.

COGHILL: We have these other 40, and we are going to have to dispose of those someplace and so, if anyone has any thoughts of where they wanted to take those, if they would filter through the Committee -- should we have those signed by name plate, all of them?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It might be, so long as we are going to sign 55 copies, that we sign enough additional so that we can give the employees all one of them.

SWEENEY: It was a very strong opinion in the Administration Committee that 55 be signed outside of the official copies, and the balance by name plate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: That was also mentioned specifically in the report that was adopted on the floor that the official five documents, or 6, would be signed, the one in parchment and the other 5 for the various records, universities, and museums, and the 55 documents hand-signed for each delegate, and no other duplication of that process of hand-signed document, but 40 extra ones available for distribution with printed plates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I just got off the phone from talking with a prominent man down in Anchorage and he said he had heard much criticism of the fact that we were not having enough of the large size copies of the Constitution printed. We are talking about the one-hundred size now. He stated that he felt every school in Alaska would like to have one of those, not to hand-sign them but with the plate signatures on them. He says he sees no reason why we should not have five hundred of them printed. They would be willing to buy them. Everyone would be willing to buy them to have a facsimile of the original copy. It would be something for the Administration Committee to work out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: Mr. President, I really think we should present a copy to each one of the clerical staff or employees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight, you are on the Administration Committee, are you not? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Before we give all these away, I would suggest that the various four district judges have a copy of the Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: What I want to know is do we have to supply our own pens or are there pens -- a common pen?

COGHILL: Pens will be supplied.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is nothing else to come before the Convention, the Convention stands adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 31, 1956

SEVENTIETH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, today I understand Alaska has lost a very good friend and many of us a close personal friend -- a man who I knew since he first came to Alaska as a young man, who I think was a very loyal American and a very loyal Alaskan. I ask that when the Chaplain gives the invocation, it be in honor of General Noyes and that we all stand in honor of General Noyes at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have with us today Chaplain Henderson of Ladd Air Force Base who will deliver our daily invocation. Today's invocation will be spread upon the Journal in memory of the passing of General John Noyes.

REV. HENDERSON: Let us pray: Our heavenly Father, we thank Thee that in all the occasions of life Thou has told us to come unto Thee in prayer. So on this day as we would pause to honor and pay tribute to one who has served loyally in this Territory, we would pause for a moment of silence in honor and in the memory of General Noyes. Bless, O God, our Heavenly Father, all who are serving Thee and serving our country and this Territory. Bless these members of the convention in the progress which they have made and in the duties of completion that are now near at hand, that in all things Thy divine guidance may be evidenced. Through Christ, our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: All present.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, yesterday I tried to put through a certain measure, which was a marked failure, and Mrs. Barr was very much concerned about my lack of success, and in order to secure a little better support next time she whipped up a big batch of fudge, and you will see two boxes on the Secretary's desk there for the members.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may tell Mrs. Barr that the Convention really appreciates the thought, Mr. Barr. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: As a result of this gesture I propose that at the proper time the name of "barr-boro" be considered. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: We might consent to change the name to "barr-o". (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there communications or petitions from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Your Committee on Style and Drafting reports back to the Convention Article XV, Apportionment Schedule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the report.

SUNDBORG: I believe the report is only to be assigned to the Rules Committee at this time for a place on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the report is assigned to the Rules Committee for its place on the calendar. Are there other reports of standing committees? If not, are there reports of special committees? Are there motions or resolutions to be presented at this time? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I have one on the docket, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have -- the calendar shows the resolution "Friendly Relations with Canada" before us in second reading. Is that correct, Mr. Riley? That is your calendar?

RILEY: It is, Mr. President. I might add for the information of the members that, while this calendar may appear to take daily adjustment, the adjustment is dictated only by the output of the boiler room and the pressure on Style and Drafting, and it represents pretty much their convenience.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the resolution "Friendly Relations with Canada". It has to be read by the Chief Clerk.

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution in full.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed amendments for the resolution? Or is there a report of any committee with relation to the resolution? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Could I make a little talk on this?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, the proper thing to do, if there are no amendments, would be to suspend the rules and advance the resolution to third reading. At that time you may talk or any person may talk. Is there an amendment? Mr. Marston, do you have an amendment?

MARSTON: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If it is an amendment you might present it at this time. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment. Mr. Marston, this is a new resolution -- is that correct?

MARSTON: There is a little change -- a very small change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, you might ask unanimous consent that the original resolution be withdrawn, and then after that is accomplished you might ask unanimous consent to introduce this.

MARSTON: I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the first resolution and introduce this new one on Friendly Relations with Canada.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered; the original resolution is ordered withdrawn. Now, Mr. Marston, you might offer the new one. You might ask unanimous consent.

MARSTON: I ask unanimous consent to offer this new resolution on Friendly Relations with Canada.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston asks unanimous consent that this substitute resolution be offered to the Convention at this time. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the Chief Clerk may read the resolution for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: Resolution, Friendly Relations with Canada.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent that it be advanced to second reading at this time, Mr. Marston?

MARSTON: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it be advanced to second reading at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing none, it is so ordered, and the Chief Clerk may read the resolution for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution in full.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to the resolution? If there are no amendments to be offered, Mr. Marston, it would be in order, if you so desire, to move to suspend the rules and ask that the resolution be advanced to third reading, be read by "resolve" only, and placed in final passage.

MARSTON: I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and this be advanced to third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended as to the resolution "Friendly Relations with Canada", that the resolution be advanced to third reading, read the third time by "resolve" only, and placed on final passage. Is there objection?

HERMANN: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I am not sure about this, but has this been in Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The new resolution, as far as the Chair knows, Mrs. Hermann, has not been to Style and Drafting. But by unanimous consent, if the unanimous consent request carries, it would not be necessary to send it back to Style and Drafting unless Mr. Marston would like to see that it be further styled.

HERMANN: Well, in the absence of the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee, I think I will have to continue to object to the unanimous consent request.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Marston?

MARSTON: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston so moves. Mrs. Fischer seconds the motion, that the rules be suspended, the resolution be advanced to third reading, read the third time by "resolve" only, and placed in final passage. The question is -- Mr. Barr.

BARR: I think it is rather important that Style and Drafting does look this over. After all, it's -- you might call it social correspondence between this country and Canada, and style is fairly important.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, it would be -- under the rules with relation to resolutions, it probably would not be out of order even after it had passed the body for it to go to Style and Drafting for phraseology changes. Mr. White.

WHITE: I feel the same way as Mr. Barr. I have nothing against the wording of this resolution as it stands. But there will undoubtedly be lots of other resolutions, and I see no reason why they all shouldn't follow the usual course of committee proposals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, that is up to the body. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and the resolution advanced to third reading?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 34 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 14 - Barr, Cooper, Emberg, Gray, Hermann, Hinckel, Knight, Laws, Metcalf, Reader, R. Rivers, Sweeney, White, Wien.

Absent: 7 - Davis, V. Fischer, Johnson, McLaughlin, McNealy, Nordale, Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 34 yeas, 14 nays, and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rules have not been suspended. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I move that the resolution be submitted to the Style and Drafting Committee for consideration and report to the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves that the resolution be referred to the Style and Drafting Committee for consideration and report to the Convention. Is there objection? Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: On this motion that we just took, was it two-thirds of the membership or two-thirds of the members present?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was two-thirds of the membership to which the body is entitled, Mr. Peratrovich, under the rules. So it would take 37 votes to suspend the rules. If there is no objection, the resolution is referred to the Style and Drafting Committee. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I should talk a little on this because it has more than a social correspondence her, as suggested here, so Style and Drafting could get the moment back of this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, it would probably be well, and the Chair knows that the Style and Drafting Committee would welcome your appearance before the Committee at the time they consider this, and you will get an opportunity to speak fully on the subject when it comes up again in third reading, but you can be heard before the Style and Drafting Committee at the time it is before them.

MARSTON: I have some things that this body ought to have now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to hearing Mr. Marston at this time? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, would it be in order to suspend the rules again and consider this resolution, and then after it has passed refer it to Style and Drafting and polish it up if necessary?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, it seems we just voted on a motion to suspend and until another meeting the suspension of the rules for that purpose would be out of order, but if there is no objection, Mr. Marston, you might -- if there is objection, of course, you would have to be heard before Style and Drafting Committee. If there is no objection you might speak your words.

MARSTON: I appreciate it. I think you should have it. This is more than friendly relations -- it is friendly relations, but we are becoming a sovereign people here. We have made the first step and there is no return. It's a chain action, and we are going forward, and this has relation to all of what I say right here, this friendly relations with Canada. We have a great land here with billions of dollars of wealth in pulp and timber and oil and coal -- hundreds of billions of dollars, and it's a bigger piece of land than most countries in the world, and we are sending three men down to Washington, D. C., to see if we can't join up with those people there and become a sovereign people as we should be. We are tired of the colonialism we have had here. We have made the effort; we have made the first move; and I am very proud of this group of people here. They have moved forward and they have taken the first step. Now, these three men who are going down will meet a problem down there. I was down there one time with a group of business people. I saw a fellow named Joe Martin, who was sitting on the lid, and we tried to get to the Senate, and they would have taken our deal then, but we couldn't get to the Senate. He sat on the lid. We saw the President, but somebody was cramping his style and we didn't get beyond that. They didn't roll out the red carpet and play the band and music to us, and our fellows are going to meet the same thing when we send them down. We have got a piece of ground here that is worth hundreds of billions of dollars, and I want them to come back, if they don't make a success of the deal there, by way of Canada and talk to the Canadian people there. They have a great land and they adjoin us here, and this is just a gesture to them. And if we don't make a deal in Washington, D. C., our boys will come back, our salesmen, by way of Canada, and talk to them. Maybe we can join up with them; if we don't we can make a treaty with them, and they will be our neighbors. You know, when I was in Washington, D.C., I met some other people down there -- some Hawaiians -- and they were in there trying to join up with the United States also -- a fine bunch of fellows. They got only lip service, and I saw them last winter after five years and they were a very much discouraged people; they had given up; they couldn't make it; they are in worse shape than we are. Well, here we are a big piece of land. We have got land bigger than most nations, and we can make friendly relations if we don't make a success of it, by joining with Canada. We can make friendly relations with them and have a treaty with them and we can have the greatest nation in the world and the people will come from all over the world -- hundreds of thousands of people -- and join us. We will be bordered on the east by the great land of Canada, and we will make friendly relations with them; bordered on the south by the Pacific Ocean; bordered on the west by the Bering Sea; and on the north by the Arctic Ocean and the aurora borealis -- a great big land that can stand out by itself. That is the third course we can take. I am just giving the courses so we can think it through. The time has come to think it through as a sovereign people. We have tried to succeed with the United States. We have complied with all requirements to join them and we have completely complied, but somehow we haven't made the deal with them yet. If they don't want a deal -- well, all right. Then we have got a piece of land that is wealthy, and hundreds of thousands of people will come and join us if we open the gate and let them come in. We can be a sovereign people, and I say "Give us men to match our mountains, and we will be a sovereign people, an independent nation." I really prefer the third course. Let's try the first way if we can, and that is what this little thing means -- a gesture to Canada. We will follow it up. I am going to Canada after the Convention is over and I'm going to talk to the folks there. I used to live up there. They are much interested in what happens across the line; more so than people in Washington, D. C., are interested in what happens up here, those Canadians are. It's a big land, and we are going to keep friendly relations and we are going to be a sovereign people and this little document is the first leader on that. We are on the way and there is no return; we are going to be a sovereign people. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Marston. (Applause) We now have before us Article No. XV, the Style and Drafting Committee's report on the Apportionment Schedule. Do we have the report available for every delegate at this time, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, it might be advisable to read this. It would serve, I think, to pick up errors since there are a lot of proper names with which many of the delegates would be familiar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee in relation to Article XV.

(The Chief Clerk read the report in full.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee have any reports to make at this time?

SUNDBORG: As the delegates will notice, there has been almost no style and drafting involved in our reporting the Apportionment Schedule. The only portion of this that is new or changed is that appearing at the top of page 3, which is the section heading, the subhead under section -- the introduction saying, "The election districts set forth in Section 1 shall include the following territory:" is all that is new. We have corrected from the enrolled copy several typographical errors and other errors in spelling which had not been caught on the floor in second reading. If you would like, I could call attention to each of those in case any of the delegates might have different versions of what should have been done. There are only very few of them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You might, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: On page 3, we changed the spelling of Kosciusko, which was incorrect in the enrolled copy, having contained an extra "e". It may be that has been corrected by the Engrossment Committee before it came on the floor. In any event, there was an "e" in Kosciusko, which was purely a boiler room error and did not belong. And then, in the next line we, instead of Kashevarof Islands as in the enrolled copy -- we have been assured by the chairman of the Apportionment Committee that it should be Kashevarof Island without the "s". In four places we have dropped the capital "M" down to a small "m" in the word "mainland", since that is in accordance with our policy on capitalization. In Election District No. 16, the Bethel District, on page 7, in the last line, we have corrected the spelling of Saint Matthew which in the enrolled copy had been Saint Matthews, M-a-t-t-h-e-w-s, which is, we are assured, incorrect. The greatest change was made in the Election District No. 21, Barrow District, where the enrolled copy said "The area drained by all streams flowing into the Chuckchi Sea and the Arctic Ocean" and so on, and this was done on the advice of geographers as the Chuckchi Sea is a part of the territory of Soviet Russia, and no streams flow into it, speaking in the exact sense, from any part of Alaska. We have changed that to say "The area drained by all streams flowing into the Arctic Ocean". It is, of course, exactly the same boundary line but a slightly different expression. Those are the only changes, Mr. President, from the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. Sundborg, in Section 24, Wade Hampton, I notice "The area drained by the lower Yukon River and its tributaries from Tuckers Slough to the mouth of the Bering Sea..." I don't know what the mouth of a sea is, really. Doesn't it mean the mouth of the Yukon at Bering Sea.

SUNDBORG: That is a mistake in typing, apparently. The enrolled copy said "to the mouth at the Bering Sea". That would be correct, and I would ask unanimous consent that the Style and Drafting Committee Report with respect to Election District No. 24, on page 8, on the second line of the description of Election District No. 24, be made to read "at the Bering Sea" instead of "of the Bering Sea".

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent request. Is there objection?

ROBERTSON: Which one is that -- what page?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Page 8, Section 24, second line in the section. Mr. Robertson, change the word "of" to read the word "at". Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment? Hearing none it is so ordered. Mr. Cross.

CROSS: May I call the Committee's attention to a spelling? The Goodhope River is one word; it is written here as two words. That is in Section 22, next to the last line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It appears both in Sections 22 and 23.

SUNDBORG: It was in that same form in the enrolled copy, but if Mr. Cross is certain that it should be one word --

CROSS: Yes. It should be one word instead of two.

SUNDBORG: It would be satisfactory to the Chairman of the Apportionment Committee, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Cross is dead right. The book which is used as a guide is the Geographic Dictionary of Alaska, United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior, prepared by Marcus Baker, and it shows it as the Goodhope, one word, River.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that on line 8 of the report, or page 8 of the report of the Style and Drafting Committee, in the description of Election District No. 22, the Kobuk Election District, next to the last line of that description, the words "Good Hope" be stricken and a single word "Goodhope" be inserted in their place, and that the same change be made on the fourth line of the description, of Election District No. 23, the Nome Election District; make "Goodhope" one word instead of two.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I just wanted to ask Mr. Sundborg -- on that Suemez Island, there, Section 1 --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross, did you have another question before we adopt this?

CROSS: I see we have overlooked this Chamisso Island.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will have to act on this request first, Mr. Cross. Mr. Sundborg has asked unanimous consent that the changes changing Good Hope in both cases to read as one word be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the change is ordered adopted. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I notice the other day we had made a change and I had it in my copy that Section No. 18 and Section No. 19, in describing the east boundaries of Section 18 and the west boundaries of Section 19, the Clear Creek question was brought up. In Section 19 we had it near Blair Lake, but on the other copy we didn't. In Section No. 18, it is not; it just says "including Clear Creek on the east". Was that intended to be that way?

SUNDBORG: I am sure it should be carried into both sections, so I will ask unanimous consent that in the description of Election District No. 18, the Yukon-Koyukuk Election District, on the fifth line of the description. after the words "Clear Creek" that there be inserted ", near Blair Lakes,".

PREISIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that those words and the commas be added to Section 18. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the change is ordered adopted. Are there other questions? Mr. Cross.

CROSS: Chamisso Islands is a collection of about three small, rocky islands less than a mile off from the land that is included in the Kobuk area. The way it is here, it is in the Nome area; that is in Section 23, enumerated among the islands. That could be stricken from Section 23 and the words "and Chamisso Islands" added to the Kobuk area. That would be a substantive change. That is a small bird refuge of only a few acres altogether, and less than a mile off from the Kobuk area.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Undoubtedly Mr. Cross is right. However, we have had the map posted and repeatedly asked people to go over to Room 404 of the Mines Building to bring these matters to the attention of the Committee. Oftentimes what appears to be a very innocuous change develops into a free-for-all. I doubt very much if this is that type of change, but I think we should leave something for this redistricting board to do. I know they have a few other problems, and I think no harm would be done in leaving it as it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross.

CROSS: This is really unimportant; it's a bird refuge. No one is allowed to live on it. It's largely a matter of technical drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: On that same question, I must say I tried to check the spelling of that because there was a change made there, and I couldn't find it on the map at all anywhere in the Nome District where it should have been.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Chamisso - it's spelled correctly. Chamisso Island,

231 feet high, named after Dr. Louis Adelbert von Chamisso in 1816. The native name is E-ow-ick.

SUNDBORG: Where is it?

MCNEES: On the north shore of Kotzebue Sound; the northeast shore of Kotzebue Sound.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in view of the fact that it is uninhabited and certainly of no importance here, I would like to ask unanimous consent to strike it entirely from the description of Election District No. 23 and not put it anywhere else.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I am going to object and go along with Mr. Cross and get the birds in the right district. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

SUNDBORG: I withdraw my unanimous consent request then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray, did you have a question?

GRAY: I have no question, but I have an explanation which might help the Committee on these things. In the apportionment there, we felt that the islands belonged to the closest mainland group. Because there are islands from one end -- and if you start in, where are you going to stop? Now Chamisso lies right in the heart of Kotzebue Sound; it couldn't belong anyplace but in Kotzebue Sound. We have Nunivak Island, we have the Pribilofs, and we have the Aleutian Islands, and around the Kenai -- they all belong to the mainland right across from them. There is Chamisso only about a mile off shore; it couldn't be anyplace else. It becomes quite a problem to Southeastern, and actually a lot of names could be left out. For instance, in my own district, there is no particular point in including Douglas, Shelter, and Benjamin Islands; they could not possibly be anyplace else; they are only a half-mile to a mile off the mainland. I don't believe there should be any confusion about these islands. You could name islands until -- until -- well, I couldn't figure out the exact number. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

GRAY: But I believe if there is any question on these they just be stricken from the record. They would not go anyplace else -- and the birds will be in the right place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to renew my unanimous consent request that the word Chamisso in the next to last line of the description of Election District No. 23, the Nome Election District, be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the word Chamisso be deleted from Section 23. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: Mine is very minor. I just want to ask Mr. Sundborg about Suemez in Section 1. Did you check the spelling on that? I notice on the local charts it is spelled S-u-m-e-z.

SUNDBORG: I defer to Mr. Hellenthal who has the geographical dictionary in hand.

HELLENTHAL: "Suemez; Island, in Bucareli Bay, Prince of Wales Archipelago. So named by the Spaniards, 1775 - 1792"; and it's S-u-e-m-e-z according to this book.

PERATROVICH: It must be correct then. I am just going by the charts we have.

HELLENTHAL: I might suggest this: where there is a variance between this book and the charts, we have taken the further precaution of checking the amendments to this that have been made by the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and perhaps Mr. Sundborg could ask unanimous consent to do that, and ask permission to correct it if there is an amendment changing this.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that if the word "Suemez" in the description of Election District No. 1, Prince of Wales District, is found to be incorrectly spelled here, that the Style and Drafting Committee be authorized to correct it before it goes into the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent request relative to the spelling of "Suemez". Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the Style and Drafting Committee is ordered to make the change if it is necessary. Are there other questions relating to the schedule? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President. I would like to ask the Apportionment Committee about Sections 4 and 6; I don't make a point of it, but Chichagof -- of course there are very few people there at the present time but it again may become populated -- is on Klag Bay and my recollection is that Klag Bay empties into Lisianski Strait and I don't think Lisianski Strait empties into either --

GRAY: Point of order. It does not empty into Lisianski Strait; it is south. It empties into Chichagof Bay, but I think Mr. Stewart can take care of that for you, Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I was just wondering which district it comes in.

GRAY: It is in the Sitka District. Mr. President, if I may have the floor for a few minutes. When we froze the lines last night, we ran into something that I would really like to have a little consideration on. We have frozen the lines and moved Hoonah completely out of the Sitka District. That didn't give me too much concern before, because in the redistricting we felt they would be able to get in their own district. Hoonah is sitting in a place that might be in the Sitka District, it might be in the Juneau District, and it might be in the Yakutat-Skagway District. Now when we froze those lines -- there are good points with every one -- but it doesn't take much of a change and doesn't make any difference to the apportionment of the schedule on whether we include in the Sitka District all of Chichagof Island, or all of Chichagof Island except that flowing into Icy Straits. I hesitate -- I would like to request five minutes' recess, and I'll see Mr. Knight from Sitka. Mr. B. D. Stewart from Sitka, and Mr. Frank Peratrovich who is interested in that area because they are his people, and with what we have here and as long as Hoonah is not represented -- what we have -- we delegates here well, the point is, let's put Hoonah in the right district, because it is going to be solidified.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May we also take up the matter of Livengood at the same time? I feel that an injustice might possibly have been done there, and I would like to be able to deliberate that during the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for five or six minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I beg the indulgence of the members here, but we feel that we have Hoonah in the right place. Now, the main concern I had, I was on the Apportionment Board that placed Hoonah where it was and I just wanted to be assured that the other members interested in that area had had a last-minute opportunity to say where Hoonah was, and we all agreed that under our system of watershed apportionment we have Hoonah in the same place and I am pleased to announce that there will be no change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I would like to ask a question of Mr. Sundborg about in Section 12 on page 6. That was a section that was considerably changed in many small ways, and the picture wasn't clear on the hand-amended copy. Now, I know what should be in this article, but I wonder if a person that 's not acquainted with the area could offhand see what it means, so I will try it on you, Mr.

Sundborg. If you are reading actually the whole article, in the center of it, in line 4, there is mentioned "to but not including Resurrection Creek on the north and the area east of the confluence of the Kenai and Russian Rivers and that area west of Cook Inlet". What is qualified by "not including"?

SUNDBORG: On line 4?

KILCHER: Lines 4, 5, and 6. I have a hunch that maybe a comma or something is needed.

SUNDBORG: May I be given a moment to read it? I am sorry, Mr. Kilcher, I can't help you out; I don't know. Of course, we didn't change any of these descriptions; we took them from the geographers and assumed they are correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I believe no one could describe, or could follow the description of these unless they had a quadrangle description placed by the Geophysics Institute or the Geological Institute over here, that "not including Resurrection Creek", it would show where Resurrection Creek was coming in -- the line would be drawn so (indicating). I don't think you could offhand describe it; it would have to be a map.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: It's one of the amendments we have written in there and just wondered if -- the fact is that "not including" refers to "Resurrection Creek ... and the area east of the confluence". That was the way it was understood to be if these two areas should be included, but then, unless there is a comma after Russian Rivers, it might also be assumed that the area west of Cook Inlet comes in -- it might be assumed that would also be included.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, if there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in line with the conference I had with the Chairman of the Committee on Apportionment during the recess, and with Mr. Kilcher, I ask unanimous consent that in the description of Election District No. 12 on page 6, this being the Kenai Cook Inlet Election District, that, on the sixth line of the description, after Russian Rivers, a semicolon be inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent that that change be adopted?

SUNDBORG: I do, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? If not, the change is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have two other minor changes which I would like to ask unanimous consent to have made. On page 7 in the description of Election District No. 16, the Bethel Election District, in the next to last line, the word "Saint" in "Saint Matthew" be changed in form to the abbreviation "St." I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed change. Is there objection? If there is no objection the change is ordered adopted.

SUNDBORG: In the description of Election District No. 23, the Nome Election District, page 8, in the next to last line of that description, I ask that a similar change be made in the name "Saint Lawrence"; change it from "S-a-i-n-t" to "S-t-." I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the change be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the change is ordered adopted. Are there other questions relating to the apportionment schedule and description of the election districts? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If there are no questions, I ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with respect to Article XV, the Apportionment Schedule, be accepted, and that the amendments made in the article be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting with relation to Article XV, the Apportionment Schedule, be accepted, and that the changes made therein be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the report is ordered accepted and the changes have been adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I now ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article XV, the Apportionment Schedule, be advanced to third reading. that it be read by title only, and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended as to the Article XV, Apportionment Schedule, that the article be advanced to third reading, be read the third time by title only, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended and Article XV is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will read the title of the article.

CHIEF CLERK: Article XV, Apportionment Schedule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article is now before us for discussion or debate. If there is no debate the question is: "Shall Article XV, the Apportionment Schedule, be adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 48 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Barr, McCutcheon, Nolan, V. Rivers, Robertson.

Absent: 2 - McNealy, Nordale.)

CHIEF CLERK: 48 yeas, 5 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and Article XV, the Apportionment Schedule, has become a part of the Alaska state constitution, has been adopted as part of the Alaska state constitution. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May we revert to the order of business, committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will revert to the order of business.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee reports back to the Convention that portion of Article XIV, Schedule, which contains the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. This was recommitted to the Style and Drafting Committee or was referred --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Article 17/c, Revised.

SUNDBORG: -- was committed to the Style and Drafting Committee in order to make some changes in language. I would like to report that most of the work in effecting those changes was done by the Ordinance Committee with which we conferred in coming up with a new draft, a copy of which is on the desk of each delegate. It is now designated in the upper righthand corner as Committee Proposal 17/c, S.R., which means second revision, I am told by the boiler room, and it carries the title Article XIV, Schedule. I should say that we have held back in the Style and Drafting Committee what were Sections 27 and 28, which dealt with entirely different subjects, and we have combined and confined this to the Alaska-Tennessee

Plan alone, the material which is now before you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, is it the Committee's pleasure that the article be placed before us in second reading at this time?

SUNDBORG: I believe it has been assigned to that place by the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the report of the Style and Drafting Committee as it relates to Article XIV, Schedule.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal 17/c, S.R., Report of the Style and Drafting Committee, in full.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, does the Style and Drafting Committee have a report to make on their work on this schedule?

SUNDBORG: Actually, Mr. President, while we might make a brief report, I believe that the questions should really be handled by Mr. McNealy or some member of the Ordinance Committee since in substance this is their work, and this is really second reading where substance is what we are concerned with. I might say that what our Committee has done to it is change the order somewhat. As we got it from the Ordinance Committee, they provided for the ballot form and for the election, referendum election, on the Tennessee Plan itself at the end of the section, and we have brought that up right after the statement of what the Alaska-Tennessee Plan is about. That appears as subsection 1 on page 1. I would like to ask unanimous consent that on lines 10 and 11 on page 1, parentheses be placed around the term "Alaska-Tennessee Plan", so it will read, "Shall Ordinance No. _____ (Alaska-Tennessee Plan) of the Alaska Constitutional Convention" and so on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that that change be made. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the change is ordered adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Our Committee has added to the to the draft as we got it from the Ordinance Committee the provision in subsection 2 that the balance of the ordinance becomes effective if there is favorable vote upon it at the referendum and if, in addition to that, the Alaska state constitution is ratified by the people. Aside from that, the changes we have made are, I think, wholly with respect to phraseology except, if you will turn to Section 8, we have provided a section there requiring that all candidates for senators and representative must file declarations of candidacy by a certain time and pay the same prescribed filing fee. That differs slightly from the treatment given this by the Ordinance Committee, which would not have required the candidates of the major political parties to file such declaration. We felt it was desirable and probably the intent of the Convention that every candidate should file a declaration in which he has to state that he is a qualified voter and meets the qualifications for the office, and that then, as provided in Section 10 of this draft, the party conventions would certify that he is the nominee of that party. It is our thought, of course, that the person nominated at a party convention would not file his declaration of candidacy until after he had been nominated by the party. We have put the provision on filing of independent candidates ahead of that for major parties just as a matter of style, and I believe subject to further comment by Mr. Davis and Mr. Fischer who served with me on the subcommittee and who worked with me this morning, that that is all our Committee has to report or explain about it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I would like to ask Mr. Sundborg a question. Section 1, or subsection 1, whatever it is, isn't that a Roman numeral I? My copy is blurred.

SUNDBORG: Mrs. Hermann, I believe that is just purely a typographical blurring or something there and wasn't intended. It is an Arabic 1 inside of parentheses on line 6 -- or it should be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I ask Mr. Sundborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no objection.

METCALF: Will this entire schedule be printed on the ballot and be given to each voter on April 24?

SUNDBORG: May I ask Mr. Metcalf, would this entire ordinance?

METCALF: The whole thing -- yes.

SUNDBORG: My understanding, Mr. Metcalf, is that nothing would be printed on the ballot except the wording which occurs in lines 10 through 12 of the first page and lines 1 and 2 of the second page.

METCALF: Is every voter presumed to know what is contained in the balance of the ordinance when they vote? I wonder -- is that legal?

SUNDBORG: I am sure that most questions that are put to voters by referendum are put in a very simple form like that and, yes, they are presumed to know.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: In Section 12 I think Style and Drafting failed to clarify when it speaks of "regular" or "short" terms. There is no regular term; we have changed it, you know. I wonder if he figured the present language covered the situation.

SUNDBORG: If I may answer Mr. Hinckel -- we did here on the floor the other evening provide for two short terms. Then, on motion of Mr. Kilcher, we rescinded the action and put back one full term and one short term, and we have done the same thing. While we are on that section, Mr. President, I would ask unanimous consent on line 14 to strike the word "of" at the end of the line. It's repeated as the first word of line 15.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the word "of" has been stricken. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I address a question to Mr. Sundborg or anyone else concerned? I note that the qualifications for senators and representatives in paragraph 5 of page 2 are such that the qualification for being elected governor of Alaska is more strict than the qualification for becoming a United States Senator. Was that the intention?

SUNDBORG: Mr. Hellenthal, yes. And so are the qualifications for being elected a senator or representative of the Alaska state legislature, where a three-year residence requirement is applicable. But this is in the very words -- I think that we got it from the Ordinance Committee, and maybe Mr. McNealy would like to answer that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the language there is based upon the Constitution of the United States which prescribes the qualifications, and so nothing we could say in here would have any effect on the qualifications set out -- I forget what article of the constitution -- for senators and representatives to the federal congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to be directed to the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee or to the Chairman of the Ordinance Committee. Mr. White.

WHITE: May I address a question to Mr. McNealy? In section 4 the following words appear: "unless when they are seated the senate prescribes other expiration dates". Would you give us an explanation on that?

MCNEALY: Mr. White, the reason for including that wording is that the rules of the senate now provide that one-third of their body be elected every two years, and by adding in two additional senators, it will possibly upset the normal schedule, the normal rule of the senate, and it was the thought of the Committee that the senate of the United States might provide some different terms and this would leave it open so they could.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: The last section, Section 15, I am not quite clear on the necessity for that section at all, because Section 1 is referred to which I think says, "This constitution shall be in force immediately upon the admission of Alaska into the Union as a state". Now, in any event, regardless of what precedes our admission, won't a proclamation by the President be necessary for the admission of Alaska into the Union, and won't that, in any event, be the time that we will be admitted?

MCNEALY: This Section 15 has taken a lot of -- there has been a lot of thought and a lot of argument in the Committee on this particular section, because the courts are not in agreement when a state actually becomes admitted. We know positively that a state is admitted when the President of the United States gives his final proclamation. But should these senators be seated, and the representative, which has happened in a couple of the other states that went into the Union under this plan, then we would have our foot partly in the door and the Committee felt we would be partially admitted, that is, we would be admitted up to the point then of the election of senators. And in the instances where the senators have been recognized by the Congress, the enabling acts have been spelled out a little differently. It has been a very difficult one there, and we can only hope we have arrived at the steps, and the next step would be the election of officers and then the balance of the constitution would take effect after that date, but to say when the elected governor takes office, we assume at or about the time that the President would issue his proclamation, if in this instance one were necessary.

WHITE: If I understand you correctly, there have been instances when states have come into the Union under the Tennessee Plan where their senators have been seated and no proclamation by the President has been necessary?

MCNEALY: To my knowledge, I believe there were a couple of those states.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Might I direct a question to Mr. McNealy?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. McNealy, please look at Section 9 of the Style and Drafting Report. That has to do with the filing by independent candidates, and it says that independent candidates who are qualified according to the provisions of 38-5-10 may file. I suspect that the section also sets forth how the filing is done, but I am not familiar with it. Are you familiar with that section without looking it up?

MCNEALY: Yes, Mr. Davis, that is the section which sets out the requirements they must meet. I made a statement the other evening here in which I was in error and I would like to correct. I believe I said that on a territorial-wide basis an independent candidate must have 200 signatures, but it requires a petition of 250 signatures which, together with the filing fee, must be filed with the director of finance.

DAVIS: I think, as close as I can tell by comparing the two, while we have turned the language around some in the proposed Section 9, it says the same thing as the equivalent section said in the rough draft copy that you prepared, but it seems to me that we ought to make it clear that the independent candidate is filing under the provisions of that section as well as being qualified under those provisions. I wonder if you would agree with that.

MCNEALY: I hadn't thought that before, Mr. President, but I believe you are correct, Mr. Davis. This apparently -- the section before, I see, provides for the declaration of candidacy, but the --

DAVIS: Well, I guess we had better amplify that a little bit then; get the code and make sure what section we are talking about then, if it isn't the same section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, if the Chair might ask a question, do you know whether or not there was an amendment to 38-5-10 in 1953 when there was an election revision, or perhaps that could be --

MCNEALY: I don't believe it was amended, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I would like to ask Mr. McNealy a question. Does Section 38-5-10 of the compiled laws give a deadline for independents to file that is compatible with the dates set here for nomination by conventions?

MCNEALY: I believe the section does. It requires -- candidates filing for the primary must file by February 1 and independent candidates must also file their petitions by February 1 in order to have their name on the ballot for the general election; that's in the use of the direct primary.

HERMANN: It seems to me, Mr. President, that in order to forestall any difficulty the independent candidate might run into, that there should be a deadline set for his filing, an actual date such as has been set for the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I checked 38-5-10 and it has not been amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: May I address a question to Mr. McNealy? On page 3, subsection 10, line 17, the remainder of that sentence is on lines 17 and 18, unless that is the language of the statute, would you not consider it clearer if the word "made" were substituted for the word "occurring"? I see the word "made" is used in the same sense on the second line of that paragraph. As I read it, just to continue, there is a little doubt as to where vacancy -- the relationship between vacancy and occurring might be, for filling a vacancy in a party nomination occurring in a primary election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I might explain in going over this the "in" should be changed to "after".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer, would you object to a recess for a few minutes? The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: On behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee. I request unanimous consent to change, on page 3, subsection 10, line 18, the second word "in" be changed to "after".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Would you repeat it again, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: Page 3, subsection 10, line 18, change "in" to read "after", "a-f-t-e-r".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other questions? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: In Section 9 where it is a question of requirements as set forth and so on, I wonder if we might have to add additional requirement referring to section blank of our own constitution? I wonder whether it is understood automatically or whether we should state it that the residence or other requirements -- whether they would have to apply or whether only the voters' residence requirement under the Territorial act should apply to those who file. I wonder if this has been given any thought; I haven't.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: So far as I know, up to the present time, we don't have any qualifications listed for senators or representatives. Actually, the qualifications are set by the United States Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to the article - the Style and Drafting Committee's report? If not, if there are no other questions -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: This is in second reading, and I believe it would be subject to calling it section by section for amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This was sent as a special case to Style and Drafting. Are there amendments to Section 1 of Article XIV? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. President, at this time I would like to speak on a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rosswog.

(Mr. Rosswog spoke upon a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog you are not under personal privilege now; you have withdrawn from that, but the question as to whether that could not be the question at this time, Mr. Rosswog. You might offer amendments. Now, the other day when Mr. McLaughlin offered an amendment the first thing, that was substantially the same motion that you are making now, the Chair knew at that time that it was actually out of order from parliamentary procedure because it was, in effect, an amendment that killed the whole article or the whole proposal, but by unanimous consent, as the Chair remembers it, the amendment was accepted and no question was raised. In other words, it had become the wish of the body that, in effect, the rules were suspended and they desired to hold on that policy at that time, but unless you could first have a suspension of all the rules, such a motion would be out of order. I mean you would have to have a suspension of the rules to make such a motion.

ROSSWOG: I do feel that unless there is a further discussion on the whole thing, I would have to vote against the ordinance, so I will move now that we strike Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Rosswog moves that Section -- Mr. Rosswog, do you mean the little subsection 1 be deleted from the proposal or the whole section?

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to withdraw my motion. I would like to ask unanimous consent that my motion be withdrawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog asks unanimous consent that his motion be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Now I would like to propose that Section 29 of Schedule 17/c be stricken. That is the original number of this section.

COOPER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper seconds the motion. Mr. Fischer.

FISCHER: Point of information. I would just like to point out that the Alaska-Tennessee Plan as it appears here is Section 29 according to our previously numbered schedule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Well, I would like to tell the delegates that when Mr. McLaughlin's motion came up I felt that we had, as a courtesy to Mr. Lehleitner and the Committee, to hear the proposal through, although at that time I did have some doubts and reservations on the proposal. Now as it has been changed, I feel I could not vote for it. The thing is, by deleting the primary, I do not feel that we would have true representation from the people of Alaska. I did not want to see the primary as proposed in this ordinance, because we would be just fooling the people to tell them that an unworkable primary was going to be tried. There is one other thing in there that I do not like, and that is that the legislature shall provide money for this plan. We are directing the legislature to do that, and we open the way -- we do not know what the plan is going to cost, and we are opening the way for accusations that we are using money of the Territory, that we have money to use on these purposes. We right today have men from these cities back in Washington requesting increased appropriations, and for money that is very necessary for the Territory, and yet we are willing to go along blind and say we are proposing a plan of this type and we still do not know what it is going to cost. I believe it will cost quite a bit to properly put it through. Another thing, we are setting up such a plan. There are people I know that would run for it, but we have lots of men in the Territory who are working and trying to get Alaska ahead right now. I am sure they would be competent, but they would not take the chance of running for some office that has no authority and is still not set up. I admit this plan is very good publicity. It is a very fine publicity plan, and it also may help us to get statehood, and that is in favor of it. But on the other hand, there is harm that could be done with it. I still have my doubts about it, and without the use of the primary -- that is the main point -- also not knowing what it will cost.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: May I have the privilege of the floor for a minute?

(Mrs. Hermann then spoke upon a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I move that we recess until 4:00 and all of us go up and drink a cup of something -- for tonic.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, the Convention is at recess until 4:00.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Will the Chief Clerk please read the communication that is now before us.

(The Chief Clerk read an invitation from the Department of History and Political Science to an informal coffee hour at 3:30 Thursday, February 2, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the delegates? The request is that the delegates are invited to be the guests of the History Department at our regular recess at 3:30 tomorrow afternoon -- Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we accept the invitation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention accept the invitation. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and Mr. Moberg will be notified. We have before us Mr. Rosswog's proposed amendment to Article XIV. Is there further discussion of the motion that is before us? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, the amendment before us is to strike this section, so the question before us is: "Shall we or shall we not have the Tennessee Plan?" I think we have all found that anything we do is subject to question as to detail. I think the procedure we have arrived at is to work out the details to the best of our ability, and then to decide the question on its merits. In my mind there is no question as to the merits of the Tennessee Plan or to the advisability of our following it. I think Sunday afternoon it was clear -- amply clear that possibly all 55 of us would prefer to have a primary if possible, and Mr. Rosswog in making his presentation of this amendment rightfully said, to my mind, that the reason we could not adopt the primary system is because it would be fooling the Alaska people into thinking that we felt something would be practicable and workable that we knew very well would not be workable, and the only other alternative to go through a primary is to have a separate primary, and there is no question but that this Convention does not have the funds to pay for and organize a separate primary. There is only one other alternative, and that is to delay this whole business for another two years, which I think we're all agreed would defeat its very purpose. Now, as to the cost of this plan, we have not said anywhere that I can find in this Revised Schedule that the legislature shall do anything. The cost of the two senators and a representative at the full salary they receive under the federal government is $22,500 apiece per year. We haven't said that the legislature will have to appropriate that amount. Possibly they would. There is also, of course, the possibility that these people will be seated and paid by the federal government in the normal manner. But, in any event, and also in Section 14, we have provided that the unexpended funds of this Convention be applied to the increased costs of the general election or the increased costs of holding a referendum. That is perfectly proper. These funds were given to us under the authority of the act passed by the legislature to do everything necessary to prepare Alaska for statehood, and we are doing no more or no less than that. But I submit that whatever the cost might be, and I cannot see that it would be excessive, it is well worth paying. Alaska has certainly never gone overboard in throwing money around in its fight to gain statehood. The Hawaii Statehood Commission, by contrast, has spent several millions of dollars. The 1949 appropriation, I believe, was $500,000 for the Hawaii Statehood Commission. I recall that when we took a trip to Washington in the spring of 1954 and paid our own way, Hawaii called a special session of the legislature and appropriated, if memory serves me correctly, $150,000 for that purpose. I feel that any money that this costs us will be well worth spending, and I would remind the delegates that we have -- the people of Alaska have deliberately decided to hold a constitutional (constitutional) convention in advance of the passage of an enabling act and have appropriated for that purpose the sum of $300,000. Apparently the overwhelming majority of the people of Alaska felt that that expenditure was well worth while, because if we had waited for passage of an enabling act, the Congress would then have paid the expenses of our constitutional convention. Now I submit that the next logical step is to go after statehood. Else why have we spent $300,000 and come here to write our constitution at the earliest possible date? The only logical answer is that we should go on from here and do everything we can to enhance the day when we get statehood, and I think a consideration that possibly Mr. Rosswog is overlooking is that what small sum is necessary to carry out the Tennessee Plan will be many times repaid to the State of Alaska by gaining statehood at an earlier date. We could go on all afternoon, but under the enabling act we immediately become eligible to receive half the proceeds of the Pribilof Islands. That amounts to well over a million dollars a year. We become eligible to participate in the Federal Highway Aid Act. That will be a considerable advantage to the state. We get control of our resources. We'll get control of our fisheries. Who can say what the advantage to Alaska in terms of dollars would be for each day that we hurry the admission of Alaska to statehood? I see no indication here that anyone in this party is opposed to statehood at the earliest possible moment, and I submit that the way to get it at the earliest possible moment is to go after it with every tool at our command.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I have had a very deep admiration for Mr.

Rosswog up to the time he made his statement, and I will say that admiration has increased since he made his statement. I think that he has brought something out that should have been brought out. Otherwise, we would not have heard the fine statement made by Mr. White, and I think every one of us knows we are going to face difficulties; we are going to face opposition; we are going to face criticism. That can all be taken as a part of carrying forward the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, and I am sure that the majority of the delegates and all of the people of Alaska -- I should say a majority of the people of Alaska will feel exactly the same way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not -- Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think that a few words are in order on this subject. In the earlier days of the statehood movement, back in '47 and '49, this problem of having an election and senators and representatives being chosen and sent to Washington came up. At that time I was one who opposed it, mainly on the grounds that we did not have a suitable enabling act. The enabling act at that time was patterned after that of states that had been admitted 50 years before, and did not allow us proper assistance to make the transition from the present stage to the stage of government which we had reached. However, in considering this matter at this time, my main thought was: What good can it do? Will it do us any harm? I have thought along with the balance of the majority of this Convention that this would be a substantial step toward statehood. In considering the possibility as to whether or not it might do harm, I wondered if it might affect the enabling act or any of the provisions of the enabling act, because we do need certain assistance in transition from a territorial to a statehood status, especially when government has assumed the proportions in our everyday lives that it has at this date. But I made the decision at that time and I said nothing during the debate on the floor. I made the decision that this was good for Alaska. I also wanted to see the primary, but in losing the primary it was a matter of the time element and workability. I also accepted the fact that we lost the primary, but in putting the program up to the people, they have the choice of rejecting or accepting the plan if they have any objection to the type of nominations. As far as the cost goes, I don't think we can afford to be without statehood. From the many, many problems that have arisen on this floor from our everyday considerations of them, we must view statehood not only as a right to exercise the privileges of voting citizens to elect our senators and our congressman and our Presidents, but also I think we must view it as a vast economic advance. It has been my observation in a long time of reading that those territories that got statehood immediately began to make economic progress. It has been my further observation that if we have statehood we are bound and sure to have greater amounts of private capital seeking investment in the territory for the long pull at lower rates of interest. We are bound to bring into production some of the vast resources which those of us who have lived here for a long time know exist, and which are waiting to be brought into the service of mankind. I do not see how we can afford to overlook any step which would delay us achieving the goal of self-government that we hope to achieve, and will achieve when we get statehood. I also believe that, while it will not solve all of our problems all of the time or immediately, it will help us solve a great many of them, and we can then go forward on the basis of a democratic government on the free enterprise system, which has proven so successful throughout the whole United States. I favor pushing through with the Tennessee Plan to the ultimate end, the achievement of statehood.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Sourdough Jack says in his column tonight, "I vowed to let my whiskers grow until Alaska is a state. When we finally get statehood, I am going to stand in Nome and have the end of my beard trimmed by a Ketchikan barber." I feel that he, along with many others of us feel, that the cause of statehood is pretty hopeless unless we act pretty drastically. I am heartily in favor myself of the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, feeling that it is our only recourse as a colonial empire to go ahead and act with a positive forthrightness that will attract some attention. For the sake of the record, I am going to invite this Jack to Nome on the day statehood is finally declared, and I will guarantee that he can at least have his beard trimmed in the borough that surrounds Nome.
(Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I was not here when we argued -- the Convention argued the Tennessee Plan the other day, and I feel that Mr. Lehleitner is very conscientious in his efforts towards admitting Alaska through this particular plan. However, I have some of the same concerns that Mr. Rosswog has as to the primary plan. I feel that the people of Alaska are individuals and are not acceptable to compromises, and that some sort of an equitable primary plan should be worked out by this Convention. I don't believe that the party convention form of selecting these particular candidates is going to work out. I believe that that is the largest question in my mind. However, there are several other questions in my mind, and one is the legality of the ballot as to when it goes on the ballot in the October election. Have we got provisions in our statutes to take care of that? Not being an attorney, I am not familiar with that form. However, I believe there would be some question of legality as to whether this Convention here can put such an ordinance to the people without having a legal clearance to get the official ballot and title on the October or the general election. The third question that comes to my mind is: Where is the money going to come from? Now as far as running the election or the prorated part of the election, we will without a doubt have $25,000 or $26,000 -- we don't know yet. We still have an awful lot of commitments to make to the Alaska Statehood Committee, to the P.S.A., and other things that the Convention is going to have to handle, and although in our last financial statement that we and the Committee on Administration brought out, we had around $12,000 in miscellaneous. However, this is going to be reduced tremendously this week because we have so many commitments to the Statehood Committee which are legal and binding commitments. Now, as to the question of money as far as the candidates themselves are concerned, if we elect two senators and a representative to go back there we are certainly not going to expect them to go back and pound the floors of congress for a flag for Alaska statehood on their own money. Otherwise, you will find they will be suffering financially from their outlay of money as well as their business that they have left behind in Alaska. I believe that if it is provided by law we would have to have a special session of the legislature or such measures as that. I believe that this thing needs a lot of consideration; we have flown through it. We have listened to an argument for it; we have heard of letters commending the Tennessee Plan; but we haven't seen anything saying to the other side of it, and I believe the delegates here should act wisely on this as they have on all the other articles of this constitution. We have scrutinized everything well before we have acted upon them, and I believe the fears that are expressed by Mr. Rosswog and other delegates should be held at this Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I mentioned Sunday that I think we are victims of circumstances, and it looks like we find ourselves in the same situation today. Some of the arguments that were used against the primary system Sunday seem to hold out just as well against the election next fall. For instance, they said, "How can you have men run on a primary and not have any assurances that the clerk of court will handle it because they don't have to?" I don't know what different status they would have next fall. Would they have to handle it for us then? If they will handle it then, why won't they handle it now? It seems like there are so many, many arguments that you can put in there that if you throw them out you can throw the other one out; that is, if you weigh the two of them equally. I believe that the thing should be given a little more consideration -- the possibility as far as having these first men selected for this important post to be selected on a territory-wide basis in the proper manner.

KILCHER: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg was speaking. Mr. Hilcher, your point of order?

KILCHER: I would like to retort to both delegates Coghill and Londborg. Mr. Coghill, I fully share some of your fears that arise when we consider the implications of the Tennessee Plan. I don't think there is any man who has not some fears when he treads untrod territory. It would not be normal if this were not the case. However, in life -- sometimes in the life of the individual, and in this case in the life of a political body, we have to take a step into the unknown, and these steps always are coupled with some amount of fear. There is no such a thing as a guarantee. We cannot go to a crystal ball gazer or to a lawyer or to a title trust company and tell these fellows, "Now you are bonded -- you guarantee us this thing will work." Nothing in this world has ever been gained without some amount of gambling, without some willingness to risk something, and I think the risks should be weighed that what we are doing, but ultimately we have to make a decision, and I, for one, am supporting the plan. I would have preferred primaries; I still think it might have worked. It might have been a little added risk, that is true. But as things stand, considering all points in question, I think we have only one course to take and that is to walk on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate Davis has been attempting to get the floor, Mr. Barr.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to rebut the inference that was made here a minute ago that this matter hadn't been thoroughly considered. After all, we considered it for five hours Sunday afternoon, and if anybody thinks it wasn't thoroughly considered he is wrong. Now I realize Mr. Coghill wasn't here; but that is the fact. It was thoroughly considered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I want to speak mainly on Mr. Coghill's objections. No one here has abandoned the principle of the primary election. We all agree it should be used if possible, but in this case it is utterly impossible. In my business I get around to the outlying sections quite a bit, and during election, just before election time I am kept busy checking to see whether the different precincts have obtained their ballots and election material. Many of them obtain it just at the last minute, and sometimes one or two of them miss. We would have even a shorter time on this occasion, and we could not hold such an election and be within the law in this case because the Territorial law says that the notice of election shall be posted at the precincts 30 days before election day, which would be impossible. Mr. Coghill doubts that we would have the authority to place this question on the ballot. The law authorizing this Convention says we shall write a constitution and any necessary transitory measures or ordinances connected thereto. In other words, the authority is delegated to us to do what is necessary to bring this constitution into being and to advance statehood. So we do have that authority, I believe. As far as the pay for the senators and congressman is concerned, the people who will run for these positions, I believe, will be willing to make some sacrifice to go there. There may be some who are not independently wealthy, but if we can arrange for some method of paying their expenses, I know there would be a great many people who would be willing to take on that job, and there are several ways to do it. The Statehood Committee, of course, has authority to hire assistants, public relations people, or anybody for advancing the cause of statehood, and if a man goes to Washington to serve us as a congressman or senator he could certainly come under that and perhaps get his expenses paid. That is by law too, by the way. Now, if you want to save money, of course, there is one man in Washington who is already on the federal payroll and if he is elected we will save quite a bit. As for the necessity of this Alaska-Tennessee Plan, we have been told by people who know, including delegate Bartlett, that our position right now is not very secure. The outlook is pretty dark for statehood. We should use any method available to us. Alaska in the present day is in the same position as a turtle; it just won't get anywhere unless it sticks its neck out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I wonder if I can read a paragraph of a letter to Mr. Rosswog before he makes his closing statement. It's from Kirkley S. Coulter, who is the acting director of the Office of Territories, Department of the Interior. In a letter to me that was dated in December he said, "The holding of a convention to draft a constitution prior to the enactment of an enabling for statehood legislation by the Congress has several precedents. The latest is the Territory of Hawaii which, some years ago, held a constitutional convention. However, neither Hawaii nor Alaska can be admitted to the Union as a state until the Congress enacts the necessary legislation." And then this sentence stands out: "There is, of course, no assurance that the Congress will accept the constitution (constitution) that may be written at the Alaska convention. You may be assured that the President is entirely sympathetic to the political aspirations of the people of Alaska. He is also keenly aware of the obstacles which must be surmounted." And I offer this suggestion to all of you: I don't think he is keenly aware of all of the obstacles, and I think we need someone to interpret to not only the President but to the Congress our feeling of how desperately we want statehood now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog, you may close.

ROSSWOG: If I may just say a few words. I don't think any of the delegates would think that I was doing this to -- that I didn't wish to have statehood or would want to delay it in any way. I haven't spent my life in Alaska and not want statehood. I do feel, though, that we may not agree on the ways we go about it. And it had been my feeling that the Tennessee Plan -- we were given the choice of taking it at any price, and up to now I did not feel I was willing to pay that price. I hope you will vote as you wish.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Rosswog be adopted by the Convention? The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 6 - Coghill, Laws, Londborg, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog.

Nays: 48 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wein, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 6 yeas, 48 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the nays have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to subsection 1 of Section 29? Or subsection 2? Subsection 3? Or 4? Subsection 5? Subsection 6? Subsection 7? Subsection 8? Subsection 9? Are there amendments to be proposed for subsection 10? For subsection 11? For subsection 12? Are there amendments to be proposed for subsection 13? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I don't have an amendment right now, and I don't know if one is necessary, but I would like to ask a question if I may. What date are these two senators and representative supposed to start their work in the capital?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: If elected at the fall election they would take office, I believe, the third of January or the fourth of January next year.

LONDBORG: What date does the legislature meet here in the Territory next?

MCNEALY: I believe on the fourth Monday.

LONDBORG: Somebody said January 20. I want to ask a question. It doesn't make a great deal of difference to me but who is to tell these men what to do between January 3 and January 20, when the duties are to be prescribed by the legislature or by law? Are they going out there with nothing to do, or just do what they please, or are we going to have a special session to write a law for them to give them a job?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I suggest that the duties of senators and representatives are prescribed by the laws of the United States, and that is the only law we can mean in that case.

LONDBORG: Is it necessary, then, that we have here duties for them to do from our end?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Can anyone answer that question? The question was: Is it necessary, I believe, to have Section 13 in the ordinance? Is that your intent, Mr. Londborg?

LONDBORG: Yes. I was wondering. Now I am informed that they get their duties from the United States; then why do we prescribe duties for them?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I think it is reasonably conceivable that the people of the State of Alaska, through their representatives, might insist that they do additional work on behalf of the Territory of Alaska, or possibly even on behalf of the state if they are successful. I know -- with very limited experience I know that there has been some tendency for some time on the part of many people from both major political parties of the Territory to request that the Territory set up a publicity or public relations department in the District of Columbia, and they might have those additional duties imposed on them.

LONDBORG: Well, Mr. President, what I am getting at is this: If they go out there on January 3 without any specific authorization by law, whatever they do they are acting on their own. It might be the wishes of the people but not an official task as far as specifically telling them what to do. Who is going to be liable then for anything they do or say? In other words, if a person has a specific job prescribed by law, if he is elected to it and serves in that capacity, then he has something to fall back on. But here we have a lapse of some several days that they are going to be acting without anything specific for them to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask Mr. Londborg a question? Are these oratorical questions?

LONDBORG: Well, I don't know the meaning of the word "oratorical" so I can't answer that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to say that it seems to me that the people who are elected under this ordinance will have a job. Their job will be to get statehood for Alaska. Anybody who runs for this position, anyone who is elected will have a full and complete meaning and knowledge of what his tasks are, and it is not only to get statehood for Alaska but to do everything possible to assume their rightful seats as United States senators and representative, and I don't think any of us, or even the legislature, could proscribe the best way for them to accomplish that. Possibly the legislature may assign additional duties if they are not seated, but in any case, they will have a job to do as of January 3, 1957

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I make a brief comment. It seems to me that the senators and representative have a very definite job to do. It's laid out for them. They have to get an official entrance into the halls of Congress, and that is a big job; just that alone.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I would like to ask a question of Mr. McNealy, if I may. Mr. McNealy, when you say "as prescribed by law", who are you referring to here? The legislature of the Territory or what?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, that refers mainly to the laws of the United States but also includes such laws as the Territory might pass. It was written that way so it would be all-inclusive.

HARRIS: I would like to ask you one more question, if I may. As I understand it, you cannot legally hire a man, no matter who he is, without paying him some type of salary. Is that correct? Whether it's a dollar a year or a hundred thousand dollars a year, you still have to pay him something?

MCNEALY: Well, we have quite often in court cases come up against this, and the defense is that they were working gratuitously. There have been a good many cases that have supported that if a man wants to work for nothing, why that's his privilege.

HARRIS: Well, the question in my mind is whether he is actually an employee of the Territory of Alaska unless he is being paid something, and if he is not being paid anything, if he can work these 20-odd days for the Territory of Alaska. That is the point I want cleared up.

MCNEALY: Well, I would say he would be working. Going back again, Mr. President, to the historical precedent, the man is not only working for the Territory from which he came, but he is also working for himself to get on the federal payroll. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: The other day we put this in by specific amendment and it was inadvertently omitted before, under the previous discussions of this system.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to be proposed for Section 13? or for Section 14? For Section 15? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I ask a question of Mr. McNealy?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. McNealy, could you point out to myself and the other delegates under what legal portion of the Alaska laws would allow this Convention to pass ordinances and have an election placed on the official ballots of the general election?

MCNEALY: The provisions of the Enabling Act calling this Convention would be the one authority which gives the Convention power to make ordinances, which has been mentioned here on the floor a great number of times. Secondly, the number of court decisions which set out the inherent powers of the Convention to order elections, and which I would be glad at recess to show any of the delegates, and third, and what I consider most important, is the fact that this very Convention, there was a question in the halls of the legislature whether or not this would be on the ballot, and the delegates be on the ballot, and whether the governor would see that they were put on. There was no hitch there, and with the cooperation that we have had before from the governor, I think we have reason to expect this cooperation.

COGHILL: Mr. McNealy, is it then true that the ordinances that we pass out of this Convention and are voted and are ratified at the primary election, are they considered statutory law?

MCNEALY: They are considered, in the language of the courts, as fundamental law.

COGHILL: Fundamental law passed by the people?

MCNEALY: Yes, because the people by putting their stamp of approval on them are higher of course than even the legislature.

COGHILL: In Section 13, then, of the Enabling Act or the act providing for this Convention, I notice it says shall have the power to make ordinances or to take all measures necessary or proper in preparation for the admission of Alaska as a state of the Union". Would that then hold over, this being a part of the statutory law of Alaska, then, would allow this Convention to make an ordinance which, if it is ratified at the primary election, would then become a law of the land and the people would abide by it?

MCNEALY: It would become a fundamental law for the purposes for which it is granted.

COGHILL: For which it is granted? In other words, then the ballot going on the general election would then be legal through that channel?

MCNEALY: That is definitely my opinion. It is a mandate of the people then to place it on the ballot.

COGHILL: That would be the legal procedure to go through. That was one of the big questions that I had in my mind. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions or proposed amendments for Article XIV? If not, the article is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, since there have been no amendments or anything to it, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that this Proposal 17/c, S.R., be referred directly to Style and Drafting without going through Engrossment and Enrollment, to save time and since there is so little to do on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mrs. Sweeney's unanimous consent request? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have no objection, Mr. President, but it seems to me that in outlining here what we consider to be our powers as a constitutional body, I would like to read into the record a couple of comments. It relates to the work of a Judge Story. Judge Story, in his work on the constitution, Volume 1, Fifth Edition, 338, declares "The true view to be taken of our state constitutions is that they are forms of government ordained and established by the people in their original sovereign capacity to promote their own happiness and permanently secure their rights to property, independence, and common welfare." Under that clause I feel we are proceeding along the path we are now following in adopting the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. In the case of Sproule vs. Fredericks, 11 So. 472, 69 Miss 898, the Supreme Court of Mississippi in discussing the powers of the Convention says, "It is the highest legislative body known to free men in a representative government. It is supreme in its sphere. It wields the powers of sovereignty, specially delegated to it for the purpose and the occasion by the whole electoral body, for the good of the whole commonwealth. The sole limitation upon its powers is that no change in the form of government shall be done or attempted." I will finish that quotation: "The spirit of republicanism must breathe through every part of the framework, but the particular fashioning of the parts of this framework is confided to the wisdom, the faithfulness, and the patriotism of this great convocation, representing the people in their sovereignty."

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Article XIV is referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting. We have -- Mr. Sundborg, the Chair notices on the calendar Article XII, the General and Miscellaneous Provisions section. Are you ready to have that report?

SUNDBORG: I will have to report to the Convention that the Style and Drafting Committee has nothing else in shape to report to the Convention at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And the three items that appear on the calendar, Mr. Sundborg, are not available to the body for action as yet?

SUNDBORG: That is true, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have here a communication. If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk will read the communication at this time.

(The Chief Clerk read a letter from Olaf Halverson of Nome regarding the application of a percentage of the resources income to educational purposes.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the communication will be referred to Mr. Coghill. Is there anything else to come before the Convention at this time? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: If you desire to fill in at this point until our usual recess time, Resources could come on at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was Resources sent to Style and Drafting?

RILEY: No, it was not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then, if there is no objection, we will bring before us the article on Resources, Article No. VIII, at this time. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Do we propose to work this evening, and possibly could you tell me about how long?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, it is the feeling of the Chair, if the Chair might state, that we probably will not work this evening, but the Rules Committee chairman might have something to say.

RILEY: In that event we could perhaps get this out of the way in the next half hour, Mr. Barr, and not carry it over on the calendar tomorrow.

BARR: That is the extent of our work, you think?

RILEY: I don't believe it should take any longer, if that long.

BARR: There is nothing after this, you mean?

RILEY: Not on Resources, and Style and Drafting just advised us they had nothing further on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: May I ask the Style and Drafting Committee a question? This Article XIV which we have just been working on -- I note this is headed up as a report of the Committee on Style and Drafting. Has this or has it not been through the Style and Drafting Committee, or does it have to go back again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, it would seem to the Chair that Mrs. Sweeney included that in her motion for unanimous consent -- the unanimous consent request that it be referred back to Style and Drafting. It is the feeling of the Chair only that the Style and Drafting Committee might look it over again and then refer it to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar in the morning. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we do feel there are several places in it where it does need some work.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Point of clarification. Mr. Sundborg, are there only three articles left to work on, to come out of Style and Drafting?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Mr. Coghill, we have left, really, only parts of two articles; namely, part of the General and Miscellaneous Provisions, and part of the Schedule of Ordinances and Transition Measures. All that we have in our committee at the present time on which we are working is one section of the General and Miscellaneous Provisions, that is the section dealing with the Native lands disclaimer, and several portions of the Schedule of Ordinances and Transitional Measures of which the Alaska-Tennessee Plan is one, and the other ordinances, the fish trap ordinance, the capital provision, and so on, and that is all we have in our committee.

COGHILL: This chart, in other words, is up to date?

SUNDBORG: I would have to ask Mr. Hurley who is in charge of keeping up the chart.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: The chart, as far as I know, is up to date.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, does the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee have anything at this time?

SWEENEY: No sir, although we have some scheduled for engrossment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I direct a question? I don't know how else to discuss the matter for a little bit except by directing a question to Mr. McNealy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: There is one thing that I have seen no evidence of in our proposed constitution and that is any provision for filling vacancies in the United States Senate and the United States Congress. I am not sure whether it is necessary, but I don't know whether any thought has been given to that matter or not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: As I remember, it has been some little time since I have read the federal constitution on that particular point, but I can't remember whether it states that vacancies in office shall be filled by the state legislature, as provided by the state legislature, or as provided by law, and the mention of that brings this thing to mind, that we might mention, with permission of the President, to the Style and Drafting Committee, that there certainly is no provisions for vacancies in case these interim appointees are elected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: It has been a matter of some concern to the Style and Drafting Committee whether there might not be a provision required in our constitution about the election of members of the Congress, not just in connection with the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, but permanently, so we have had our consultants look into that, and they report that, I think, there is only one constitution, or there may be a handful that mention the subject at all, and the reason for that is that there is a specific provision in the United States Constitution which says that a vacancy shall be filled -- Mrs. Nordale, do you have the reference? It says, "When vacancies happen in the representation from any state, the executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies". Now in most states, we are advised, the legislature does provide methods by which vacancies will be filled, but this is back-stop provision. When there is no provision of law the federal constitution provides that the governor, in effect, fills the vacancy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Would that apply also then to a vacancy under one elected under the Alaska-Tennessee Plan?

SUNDBORG: That is one I can't field, Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I was just wondering.

SUNDBORG: I think Mr. McNealy would be your man on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, could you answer that question?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, on that I believe under the present wording of the plan, we can only hope these officers will live. It is very likely that there should be some provision made for filling that office. However, it would take a little mechanics to work it out, I would say.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Do we not have before us the article on natural resources?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is the next article to come before us, Mr.

Hellenthal. The Chair would like to state at this time, though, that this is the time when each delegate should be thinking of any questions he or she might have with relation to anything that may have been overlooked, and if any question arises in anyone's mind, they should appear before the Ordinance Committee or notify the chairman of the Ordinance Committee and bring their subject matter before that committee. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in other words, it would be my position to go before the Ordinance Committee to fill the ramifications of the letter referred to me?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That might be well and good, Mr. Coghill; you might let the Ordinance Committee have a look at it. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: With further reference to the question asked by Mr. Londborg, Mrs. Nordale has pointed out to me that the 17th Amendment to the United States Constitution provides in greater detail about vacancies in the offices of senators and representatives. It says "When vacancies happen in the representation of any state in the senate, the executive authority of such state shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, that the legislature of any state may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct. This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the constitution." It has occurred to some of us, Mr. President, that if the governor of Alaska were sufficiently energetic and were of a mind to do so, he might proceed on the assumption that, upon the ratification of the ordinance on the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, a vacancy would be created in the office of senators and representative, and he might fill the offices by appointment until such time as we would have an election in October; it's a possibility.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We now have Article VIII, the article on natural resources -- Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I don't want to belabor the point any more, but all of those references were to a state and I was wondering if -- say now next spring, if one of the men should die before we are granted statehood, would there be any way to fill that vacancy? These references are to a state and we would not be a state until -- or are we going to worry about that if we lose a man?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to state that that might be a matter for the interested parties to take up with the Style and Drafting Committee and with the chairman of the Ordinance Committee before the article comes back on the floor again. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to announce that it is the intention of the Style and Drafting Committee to bring this particular matter, the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, back on the floor first thing tomorrow morning, and we will be meeting immediately upon adjournment to work on it, so anyone interested we would advise to meet with us at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I was going to ask unanimous consent that we delegate the authority to Style and Drafting and they confer with Mr. McNealy, and they take care of the case if something happens to one of our senators.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection it is so ordered. We have Article VIII, the article on natural resources before us. What was its position at the time it was -- was it in second reading, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Yes, it's still in second reading. The Style and Drafting report has been accepted, and the Committee has some substantive material yet to be considered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now then, are there any amendments or questions with relation to the article? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I would like to present the committee amendments, and in each case will ask for unanimous consent for suspension of the rules to consider a specific amendment. The first would be on line 14 of page 1, where the Committee seeks to restore the word "maintained" instead of "conserved", which was introduced by Style and Drafting. Originally, the word "maintained" appeared on line 14 and had been changed by Style and Drafting to "conserved", and the Resources Committee felt that the word "maintained" gave far greater meaning with relation to sustained yield than did "conserved". I ask unanimous consent for suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for that purpose. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, Mr. Riley, you may offer your amendment.

RILEY: I now ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that the word "conserved" on line 14 of page 1 be stricken and that the word "maintained" be substituted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed committee amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Only temporarily, to state that Style and Drafting didn't change that just to be changing something, but if you will look at line 6, there is a parallel construction where it says "utilization, development and conservation of all natural resources". We attempted to carry out the same thought here by saying "utilized, developed and conserved" and we certainly have no objection to the amendment which Mr. Riley suggests.

RILEY: We appreciate the reasoning employed by Style and Drafting and I should have touched upon that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: On line 20 of page 2, the Committee wishes to change the wording slightly so as to read in this manner "Leasing of, and the issuance of permits for exploration of, any". I ask unanimous consent for suspension of the rules to submit that proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for that purpose. Is there objection? Mr. Riley, will you read the amendment again?

RILEY: The Committee proposes to change the language of line 20 to read as follows: "leasing of, and the issuance of permits for exploration of, any".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that sentence then, as it would read if the amendment were adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "The legislature may provide for the leasing of, and the issuance of permits for exploration of, any part of the public domain or interest therein, subject to reasonable concurrent uses."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for that purpose. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the rules have been suspended. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Now, Mr. President, I submit the Committee amendment as read by the clerk. I might add that this amendment has been cleared by those delegates who raised the question yesterday. I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: As read by the clerk -- I didn't understand the amendment. The amendment will insert a comma after the words "leasing of" in line 20 and involves deletion of the word "exploration" in line 20 and the further deletion of the words "to any"?

RILEY: It involves this, Mr. Hellenthal: the comma after the word "of", the insertion of the word "permits" between the next "of" and "exploration", "permits for" goes in at that point, and striking of "permits to" later in the sentence in the line, and insertion of the word "of", so that it reads "and the issuance of permits for exploration of,".

HELLENTHAL: "any part"?

RILEY: Right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adoption of this amendment? If there is no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other Committee amendments?

RILEY: Mr. President, on page 3, the sentence commencing on line 19 and ending on line 23, the Committee asks suspension of the rules for purposes of deleting the last two words of that sentence on line 23. Those words are "and processing". Those words, I believe, were inserted while the matter was under consideration by Style and Drafting, perhaps for purposes of paralleling as mentioned later, but the Committee does not feel they are essential, and accordingly I ask unanimous consent for suspension of the rules for submitting that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for that purpose. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on line 23 of page 3 the two words "and processing" be stricken and that a period be placed after the word "extraction".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other committee amendments?

RILEY: On line 24, same page, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for purposes of inserting the word "or" before the last word of the sentence, so that it reads "shall depend upon the performance of annual labor, or the payment of fees" and so on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, Mr. Riley, you may offer your amendment.

RILEY: I now offer the amendment for the Committee, that the word "or" be inserted just ahead of the last word on line 23.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked by Mr. Riley --

RILEY: Line 24 -- excuse me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: -- that the Committee amendment be adopted. Is there objection? If there is no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

RILEY: Mr. President, on page 4, I will ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended for the introduction of an amendment which the Committee believes necessary by reason of rather a major overhaul of this particular section -- Section 11, I refer to. In the process of organizing this section -- and I do feel that the section was in many respects improved as to structure by Style and Drafting -- the Resources Committee feels that one gap was inadvertently created, and accordingly, the sentence which starts on line 4 of page 4 will, under this amendment as offered, be stricken, and in its place will be substituted this sentence: "Discovery and appropriation shall initiate a right, subject to further requirements of law, to patent of mineral lands if authorized by the state and not prohibited by Congress."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read that proposed amendment back?

METCALF: May we have it read very slowly so it can be copied?

(The Chief Clerk slowly read the amendment as requested.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that the Committee might submit that amendment. Is there objection to suspension of the rules? If there is no objection Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Just a second while we digest that. Might I ask a question of Mr. Riley, what the exact intent or effect of the amendment is?

RILEY: In earlier drafts, Mr. Kilcher, referring now to page 3, the language which starts on line 19, "Prior discovery, location, and filing" and so on shall establish a prior right to lease and in the minerals and the rest of the series included the initiation of a right to patent if not prohibited by the Congress or if authorized by the Congress. In other words "prior discovery and appropriation" would lead to any of those possibilities. The reference to patent was stricken during the last revision, and while it may by implication be picked up in this sentence, starting on line 4, page 4, we don't feel that it is positive or that it's clear, and for that reason only, to restore the earlier intent, we suggest this substitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for suspension of the rules? Hearing no objection the rules have been suspended. Mr. Riley, you may offer the Committee amendment.

RILEY: I submit the Committee amendment as read by the clerk and ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley offers the committee amendment that has previously been read. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adopting the amendment? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I will next ask unanimous consent for suspension of the rules for offering a further Committee amendment to Section 13. The sentence commences on page 4, line 23, and has to do with the appropriation of water. Now earlier, when in second reading, before this article went to Style and Drafting, the end of the sentence which is now on line 2, page 5, was made subject to the general reservation of fish and wildlife. That was stricken by floor amendment, that general reservation of fish and wildlife, and the Committee has since given the matter further consideration and has cleared with the delegate who offered the amendment to strike that language, and I understand he has no objection to its restoration, and our amendment will read as follows, when offered: that on line 2 of page 5, a comma be substituted for the period and this language added: "and to the general reservation of fish and wildlife".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that the Committee might offer that amendment?

RILEY: I have, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for suspension of the rules? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended.

RILEY: I now offer the amendment and ask unanimous consent for its adoption, Mr. President, that the period on line 2 of page 5 be stricken, a comma substituted, and the following language added: "and to the general reservation of fish and wildlife."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the Committee amendment be adopted. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: A question, Mr. Riley. It appears that -- isn't that one of the concurrent uses that actually doesn't need specific mentioning? Is it a substantive matter in your opinion, or is it just a further explanation or a securing of an interpretation or something?

RILEY: We felt that for the purpose of clarity that that general reservation should have mention in that particular section having to do specifically with the appropriation of water; that such appropriations are subject, nevertheless, to the general reservation of fish and wildlife when occurring in natural state.

KILCHER: Wouldn't that be self-evident under the general clause of general concurrent uses?

RILEY: I shouldn't say that concurrent uses has application there. The general provision for concurrent uses has. It might be held the general reservation would cover it, but we are in doubt, and some of the consultants who initially assisted the Committee recommended its restoration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have one question. Where a small lake is entirely surrounded by land in private ownership, owned by one owner, would the legislature be able, under the wording as now appears, would the legislature be able to keep the general public out of that lake?

RILEY: Well, it is getting right back to matters earlier discussed -- I don't know that they are specially resolved in anyone's mind. The legislature has, under another section, been given authority to define what waters access should be given to. By long-established doctrine, the general reservation of fish and wildlife in its natural state is maintained in this article, and the matter of the actual ownership of waters is not upset -- I should say the age-old doctrine is not upset -- except as we have given power to the legislature to define where access shall be allowed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I don't think that quite answers my question. I know we attempted once by adding two words to take care of this pond surrounded by single ownership. Then we changed that and used some other language. Now we have changed it again. Can you tell me where the legislature -- just point to me the section or the wording --

RILEY: It's not in this section, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Anywhere in here?

RILEY: Section 9 is the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your question relates to this section we are on now, Mr. Hellenthal?

RILEY: Section 14, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Yes, it does, Mr. Egan. That the legislature may by general law regulate and limit such access?

RILEY: You weren't here last evening, I believe, Mr. Hellenthal, when in Section 14 the word "legislature" was restored on line 4 in place of the word "law".

HELLENTHAL: Oh. I am happy now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: May I direct a question to Mr. Riley?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: This wording, "general reservation", does that mean that fish and wildlife will be given first consideration among beneficial users?

RILEY: No, I should say not. But I would say that the general reservation which applies, I believe, is set forth in Section 3. Section 3 states "Wherever occurring in their natural state, fish, wildlife, and waters are reserved to the people for common use." This reiterates that, as concerns the appropriation of waters, "appropriation of water shall be limited to stated purposes and subject to preferences among beneficial uses, concurrent or otherwise, as prescribed by law, and to the general reservation of fish and wildlife". This doesn't set up an order of beneficial uses. The legislature in its wisdom may some day do that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: May I ask Mr. Riley a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. Riley, if a city were to appropriate a water supply for domestic use, and for purposes of public health and welfare and for protection of the water supply to regulate the trespass on the watershed, would the fish and game that were within the area be available to the public for hunting and fishing?

RILEY: Well, I should say that we make that exception; that might perhaps be implemented by the legislature as to your whole drainage area -- your whole watershed -- that the legislature could, under this language, forbid fishing, we will say, in a reservoir for public water supply.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Another question, Mr. Riley. I have two specific inquiries from my home district; one from a man for whom three years ago I drained a lake a 16-acre lake within a 40 subdivision, and another man had a seven-acre homesite near Homer with a three-acre lake on it. There are no creeks going in or out but strangely enough there's fair fish in there. Now, in order to understand the possible impact of this amendment and illustrating this case, I would like to ask you if either one of the two men could possibly be stopped by future legislation or stopped automatically by this amendment here, if it passes, from draining his lake for agricultural purposes, or any purpose. It's shallow land, very little work, and can make seven easy acres available where normally land is hard to clear. It would make fine agricultural land. That is a question that will come up hundreds and thousands of times on the Kenai Peninsula where this practice will become popular, of acquiring cheap farm land by draining shallow lakes.

RILEY: I won't undertake, Mr. Kilcher, to anticipate what the legislature may prescribe, but there is considerable law to the effect that ownership of lakes does not vest in the property owner. That isn't necessarily uniform across the country, but I should say that the question you propound is one which the legislature is going to have to meet.

KILCHER: That's what I am driving at, Mr. Riley. I have asked a similar question before -- I don't want to repeat it myself -- that is weeks ago, but this amendment here if it passes will it tend to make it harder, is it capable of putting more obstacles in a man's way, to give fish and wildlife interests more of a chance to restrict that man's specific uses? Would this amendment have an effect, in other words, in law, as you see it, making it more specifically difficult to achieve what I was driving at?

RILEY: I would say as concerns your own illustration of the drainage proposition that this language will not pose any difficulties there beyond what the article already does in the general reservation. Section 3 contains a general reservation. Now, I would not consider the draining of a lake to be an appropriation of water because there would be no continuing use.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adoption of the amendment? Hearing no objection the Committee amendment is ordered adopted.

RILEY: Mr. President, the only other point which the Committee wishes to bring up is that the Committee, responsive to a suggestion made last evening by, I believe, Style and Drafting -- maybe not -- wishes to go on record for the retention of Section 19 which spells out residual powers which are drafted in terms of natural resources. There will be another provision in the constitution much the same and with general effect concerning the residual powers of the state, but it is the Committee's wish that this particular expression of residual powers bearing on natural resources alone remain in the article. That concludes the Committee's amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment which I would like to propose under a suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you state the amendment -- what the amendment would be, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: If the rules are suspended, I shall submit the following amendment: Add a new section, "Regulation and administration of wildlife, including game fish, shall be delegated to a commission under such terms as the legislature shall prescribe."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that he might offer this amendment.

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Knight, that the rules be suspended. The question is: "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 18 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, H. Fischer, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Peratrovich, Sweeney.

Nays: 36 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 18 yeas, 36 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the nays have it and the rules have not been suspended. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I was going to wait and see if there were further amendments or questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments or questions to be offered for Article VIII, the article on natural resources? Mr. King.

KING: Mr. Chairman or Mr. Riley, am I to understand that pollution isn't mentioned anywhere in the resources article? Is that a general police duty of the state? I understand there is a law now.

RILEY: Mr. King, the Committee has gone on the assumption that the general police powers of the state can be invoked to provide whatever supplementary legislation is necessary beyond what the Territory now follows, its own statutes.

KING: And you don't think there is any necessity to mention it in these provisions?

RILEY: No further necessity, no.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions or proposed amendments? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: If not, Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that Article No. VIII, Natural Resources, be advanced to third reading, read by title only, and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended as to Article No. VIII, the article on natural resources, that the article be advanced to third reading, be read the third time by title only, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended and Article No. VIII is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will read the title of the article.

CHIEF CLERK: Article VIII, Natural Resources.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article is now before us and open for discussion and debate. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Delegates, sometimes during this Convention it is a very difficult thing to speak what a person feels in his heart. I have had occasion to watch this resources article develop over the many weeks prior to our recess and subsequent thereto. I know there has not been a harder working or more dedicated committee than the one that has been devoted to natural resources. I know that in their hearts and in their minds they have had one goal in mind and that was to allow the opening up and the use of the natural resources of the state to be. And yet, in my own mind, I feel that inadvertently they have, instead of opening it up, placed a great many padlocks on the resources which will, in the future, offer stumbling blocks to their development. I think that the efforts to satisfy the ills which have been thrust upon us by the federal government had caused the pendulum to swing to such an extent as to defeat the purpose which we sought. I feel in going over this article, as I have had occasion to do in a very precise and detailed manner, that much of the material that is included in the resource article is properly matters of legislation. Many things that are of great importance to the future State of Alaska have been disposed of with a short phrase. Other things which are of perhaps equal importance to the State of Alaska have been put forth in much detail. Each word is said to have a specific meaning, to have only one construction, and I feel that is a very bad thing for a constitution. A constitution to my mind is a framework for a government, not a complete structure of government. I sincerely hope that this article will provide the ends which are sought. I am not going to vote against the article because I feel it is the best effort of the Convention, but I am, in my own heart, sorry that the words could not have been put down in a manner in which they could have been construed to fit the needs of the state as it develops.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I think several of us feel the same way, and it just goes to show one more reason why we should have statehood. Those people three thousand miles away have laid down rules that aren't too workable. We have had to take it and we're taking it and we are going ahead. We want statehood and we can develop the country a whole lot better if they leave it to us, and we wouldn't have done a lot of things in that resources committee if it hadn't been for restrictions from Washington, D. C.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Perhaps I shouldn't say anything because I know every member of the resources committee would like to speak on the subject. It is their last opportunity. When this committee proposal came on the floor and the chairman of the committee, Mr. Smith, introduced the members and outlined their special interests or skills and he came to me and he could not think of any special skill, he referred to me as the member of the committee to represent the public interest. I don't know how well I have done that, but that has been my interest and my endeavor in this committee, and throughout our work which has been long and detailed -- I won't say longer or more detailed than any other committee -- I have often had the same feeling, the same fears, the same thoughts, perhaps, as expressed by Mr. Hurley. I have always had in the back of my mind that emphasis should be placed on our opportunities and duties to open up the natural resources of the State of Alaska to development and use by and for all the people, and that we must constantly guard against overreacting against abuses that have taken place in the past. We have had a basic framework in mind. I have tried, and others of the Committee have tried, I am sure, as we have gone along with our work, to do what was set out in Section 2, to "provide for the utilization, development, and conservation of all natural resources belonging to the state, including land and waters, for the maximum benefit of its people." I sincerely believe, and the Committee can fully testify to the fact that I have been a sniper, perhaps, above all else, but I sincerely believe that that intent can be carried out under this article of the constitution. I think all of us are aware that the article itself could have been shortened, could possibly be less detailed, but balanced against that we have always kept in mind the newness of the subject to Alaska, the newness of the opportunity to deal with the subject, and the great problems that will evolve and the great opportunities that will evolve when we gain statehood. I think, in the final analysis that this section provides the framework and the opportunity for the state legislature, the people by the kind of representatives we hope to have, to carry out the intent expressed in Sections 1 and 2 of this article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I certainly am not opposed to this article in any way except in one point. However, that is not sufficient now to make me vote against it. I do want to point out, however, that I feel that the article in its present form overlooks the wishes -- or ignores the wishes, let us say, of a large segment of our population who happen to like to hunt and fish; and I don't believe, in that respect, if we pass the article in its present form, that we are exactly making friends for the article, but I do believe that the resources committee has by and large done an excellent job, and I think that the resources of the State of Alaska will be properly taken care of with that one exception.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, I just want to remind the delegates of one remark that Dr. Gabrielson said, I think it was in committee meeting rather than before the Convention, but, as he saw our article, he said that we had things in it, principles in it, that the states had worked for 45 years the hard way to get, and that is what we were trying to accomplish.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I have felt throughout the Committee deliberations that we probably might not be able to see the results that will come from this article, but I have felt that if my children and my grandchildren say that it was a good article, that is what will count.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Well, Mr. President, I want to say a few words on this. My first choice of committees fell with resources. I withdrew from that committee because there were a number of others who were keenly interested. I have not spoken on the resources article except on the very basic amendments. I realize that some of the more impatient and, perhaps, the more irascible and dyspeptic members would like to have the question called. However, it does not seem to me that on this matter, which is the basic wealth of our whole territory and upon which the well-being and success of our people depend, that we should pass it over too lightly. We have seen in the Territory of Alaska under the guise and the name of conservation an outright reservation and withholding of practically all of our natural resources and wealth by our national government. We have followed through the history of that, and I believe it is probably best outlined in a book by the uncle of one of our delegates, old Jack Hellenthal, in which he points out the abuse of the term "conservation" in which we hold out and actually the resources have been withheld in the guise of outright reservation. It seems to me that here we have the foundation and the framework for a real orderly development and utilization of our resources, and I, for one, feel we have laid the foundation here for the future success and well-being of all of our citizens. I realize that it must be implemented by the thoughts and the efforts and the energies of men and manpower and by their honesty and sincerity of purpose, but I, for one, in watching this article, feel that we have laid here the foundation and the groundwork for the great success of the future state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate Buckalew moves the previous question. Is there a second?

COLLINS: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Collins that the previous question be ordered. The question is: "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the previous question is ordered. It's a majority vote question. The question is: "Shall Article VIII, the article on natural resources, be adopted as a part of Alaska's state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 53 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 0 -

Absent: 2 - Taylor, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 53 yeas and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and Article VIII, the article on natural resources, has been adopted as a part of the Alaska state constitution. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask Mr. Sundborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

HELLENTHAL: Do you feel we could properly recess until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon without neglecting any portions of our work remaining unfinished and allowing maximum utilization of time?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I wonder if I could ask unanimous consent for a one-minute recess before answering Mr. Hellenthal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to state that, in the opinion of the Chair and if the delegates agree, that it might be better that we adjourn at this time until 9:00 in the morning and possibly work until noon and then adjourn, and it will give the substantive committees the afternoon and also delegates who might want to take care of some things in the afternoon; but if we came in the morning it might be better for the committees that might have other work to do. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, in view of the statement of the Chair, I move that the Convention stand adjourned until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, in all innocence, may I ask a question? After this beautiful flow of oratory, when is the last day we can file for the legislature?

PRESIDENT EGAN: February 1. Are there committee announcements?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I announce a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee immediately upon adjournment at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting immediately upon adjournment at the rear of the gallery. Are there other committee announcements? The Convention will come to order. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I direct a question to Mr. McNees? Are you willing to have an Administration Committee meeting tonight or would you prefer tomorrow afternoon?

MCNEES: Tomorrow afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Administration tomorrow afternoon. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I would like to announce a meeting of the Ordinance Committee around the desk here immediately upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Ordinance Committee right here immediately upon adjournment. If there are no other committee announcements, unanimous consent is asked that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the Convention stands adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

February 1, 1956

SEVENTY-FIRST DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Chaplain Henry A. Foss of Ladd Air Force Base is with us to give our daily invocation.

REVEREND FOSS: Eternal God and everlasting Father, Who has been our sustaining power in our lives during the past generations, we look up to Thee for guidance and direction of our minds and hearts in the preparation of these great plans; that may contribute to the welfare of our lives in the generations to come and the strengthening of our Nation. In His Name we pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Five absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White.

WHITE: No, Mr. President, not yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That report will be held in abeyance until later in the day. Will the Chief Clerk please read the communications before us.

CHIEF CLERK: A telegram from Governor Averill Harriman expressing regrets that he could not attend the signing of the constitution and expressing his continued support for statehood for Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed. Are there reports of standing committees? Reports of select committees? Are there motions or resolutions to come before the Convention at this time? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the Committee on Ordinances has a resolution to introduce and it was presented in the Committee by Delegate Victor Rivers and it has been approved by the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the resolution may be introduced at this time. The Convention will be at ease while the resolution is distributed.

(The Convention was at ease for a few moments.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the resolution for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Resolution: Orderly Transition from Territorial to Statehood Status; addressed to the House of Representatives, the United States Senate, the Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions of the House and Senate, the Honorable E. L. Bartlett, Delegate in Congress from Alaska.

"NOW, THEREFORE; Be it resolved that, we the people of Alaska, through our Delegates in Constitutional Convention Assembled respectfully request and urge: That the Congressional Act admitting Alaska as a State of the Union provide and allow for the continued use of Federal appropriations for payment of the costs of these normal functions of government during the Federal fiscal year in which admission of Alaska as a State of the Union is granted, or until the operation of such functions is earlier assumed by the State."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that the resolution be placed in second reading for Committee amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that the resolution be placed in second reading. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the resolution is now in second reading and the Chief Clerk may read the resolution for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution entitled "Orderly Transition from Territorial to Statehood Status" for the second time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be proposed to the resolution? Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. President, I have just noticed something here that ought to be called to attention. It refers to H.R. 2535 and S. B. 50 as the pending bills. Would that not be H.R. 2535 and S. B. 49, which are both in the same session of Congress? S. B. 50 is the previous session.

V. RIVERS: I will certainly accept the amendment if that is the case. I had only "50" before me; I thought it was the last one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart, do you ask unanimous consent that S. B. 50 be changed to read S.B. 49?

STEWART: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Are there other amendments to the resolution? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, I just wondered about that word "pending", if these are actually pending bills or if they are just proposed bills and if there may not be another bill that may be introduced.

V. RIVERS: While we mention those two bills in the "whereas" in the body matter of the resolution, in the "resolve" part we say that any bill admitting Alaska to statehood contain these provisions, so those happen to be the two that are pending before the body for consideration. If you read before "consideration" -- "the pending bills presently under consideration by Congress " I think that covers the point. We are not necessarily implying that those will be the ones passed. Any one that is passed should, I believe, take consideration of this short time transition period which has been entirely overlooked. I might say that they have done a very good job in providing for the long range transition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would like to ask Mr. McNealy a few questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: How many resolutions have been passed on by the Committee on Resolutions?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, this resolution was handed to our Committee by Mr. Rivers, and we thought it was in the nature of a transitional measure, and in fact, it is the only resolution offered from our Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Would there be any other committee that would have jurisdiction over the resolutions?

MCNEALY: Mr. Cross's committee. Mr. Cross is Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions and Recommendations.

HELLENTHAL: Perhaps I could direct my question to Mr. Cross. Do you know of resolutions other than this one and the one about Canada that will be presented here?

CROSS: No, we have none in Committee.

HELLENTHAL: One more question. Were these resolutions, in case our resolutions are printed like Hawaii's Constitution. will they be printed with the constitution?

CROSS: It is my understanding that they will, although I am not certain.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: May I add a word for Mr. Hellenthal's information?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: At the committee chairmen's meeting, Mr. McNealy and I were requested to discuss and cover this subject; that is how it happened to be passed into the Ordinance Committee, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: All right, thank you. Does anyone know the answer to the question of whether these resolutions will be part of our printed constitution?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There hasn't been any definite understanding. so far as the Chair knows, to that question as yet. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: My observation on the other constitutions that have had resolutions is that they have been in the form of the appendix. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Then they will be a part of the little printed book then?

V. RIVERS: I understand so, but then they are not actually a part of it, they are an appendix -- subsequent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other proposed amendments for the resolution? If not, is it the desire of the Committee that it be -- Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent that this amendment be allowed to follow the usual channel to Style and Drafting. Is that correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Under the ordinary procedure, Mr. Rivers, it would go to Engrossment and Enrollment, first. Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I would suggest that it bypass Engrossment and Enrollment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection -- Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Maybe I am a little confused here. What are we doing? Has this thing been passed already?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No. It hasn't been passed as yet. It has been read the second time; amendments have been offered.

BUCKALEW: I thought somebody asked unanimous consent. I wanted to have an opportunity to vote against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Buckalew, the Chair will refer the resolution to the Style and Drafting Committee. If there is no objection, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: May we revert to the order of committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee reports to the Convention its redraft of the first 24 sections of the Schedules of Ordinances and Transitional Measures. It also reports to the Convention its redraft of Section 25, the Alaska-Tennessee Plan of the Schedule of Ordinances and Transitional Measures.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Article XIV, Section 25 of the schedule will be read before the Convention and the report of the Style and Drafting Committee will be read at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article XIV. Schedule.

"Section 25. The election of senators and a representative to serve in the Congress of the United States being necessary and proper to prepare for the admission of Alaska as a State of the Union, the following is hereby ordained, pursuant to Chapter 46, SLA 1955:

(1) Each elector who offers to vote upon this constitution at the ratification election shall be given a separate ballot by the election judges which shall contain the following proposition:

'Shall ordinance No.____ (Alaska-Tennessee Plan) of	_____ the Alaska Constitutional Convention, calling for	Yes
the immediate election of two United State Senators	_____
and one United States Representative, be adopted?'	No

(2) Upon ratification of the constitution by the people of Alaska and separate approval of this ordinance by a majority of all votes cast for and against it, the remainder of this ordinance shall become effective.

(3) Two persons to serve as members of the senate of the United States and one person to serve as a member of the house of representatives of the United States shall be chosen at the 1956 general election.

(4) One senator shall be chosen for the regular term expiring on January 3, 1963, and the other for an initial short term expiring on January 3, 1961, unless when they are seated the senate prescribes other expiration dates. The representative shall be chosen for the regular term of two years expiring January 3, 1959.

(5) Candidates for senators and representative shall have the qualifications prescribed in the constitution of the United States and shall be qualified voters of Alaska.

(6) Until the admission of Alaska as a state, the senators and representative may also hold or be nominated and elected to other offices of the United States or of the Territory of Alaska, provided that no person may receive compensation for more than one office.

(7) Except as provided herein, the laws of the Territory governing elections to the office of delegate to congress shall, to the extent applicable, govern the election of the senators and representative. Territorial and other officials shall perform their duties with reference to this election accordingly.

(8) Persons not representing any political party may become independent candidates for the offices of senator or representative by filing applications in the manner provided in Section 38-5-10, ACLA 1949, insofar as applicable. Applications must be filed in the office of the director of finance of the Territory on or before June 30, 1956.

(9) Party nominations for senators and representative shall, for this election only, be made by party conventions in the manner prescribed in Section 38-4-11, ACLA 1949, for filling a vacancy in a party nomination occurring in a primary election. The names of the candidates nominated shall be certified by the chairman and secretary of the central committee of each political party to the director of finance of the Territory on or before June 30, 1956.

(10) The director of finance shall certify the names of all candidates for senators and representative to the clerks of court by July 15, 1956. The clerks of court shall cause the names to be printed on the official ballot for the general election. Independent candidates shall be identified as provided in Section 38-5-10, ACLA 1949. Candidates nominated at party conventions shall be identified with appropriate party designations as is provided by law for nominations at primary elections.

(11) The ballot form shall group separately the candidates seeking the regular senate term, those seeking the short senate term and candidates for representative. The candidate for each office receiving the largest number of votes cast for that office shall be elected.

(12) The duties and emoluments of the offices of senator and representative shall be as prescribed by law.

(13) The president of the Alaska Constitutional Convention, or person designated by him, may assist in carrying out the purposes of this ordinance. The unexpended and unobligated funds appropriated to the Alaska Constitutional Convention by Chapter 46, SLA 1955, may be used to defray expenses attributable to the referendum and the election required by this ordinance.

(14) If the Congress of the United States seats the senators and representative elected pursuant to this ordinance and approves the constitution before the first election of state officers, then Section 1 of Article XIV shall be void and shall be replaced by the following:

'The provisions of the constitution applicable to the first election of state officers shall take effect immediately upon the admission of Alaska into the Union as a State. The remainder of the constitution shall take effect when the elected governor takes office.'

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, does your Committee have a report to make on this matter at this time?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Style and Drafting had already worked to some extent on this section prior to the time it was before the Convention yesterday. It was given another going over at a very late hour last night. I notice that on page 3, line 3, there is a typographical error. I ask unanimous consent to correct the spelling of the word "provided".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the change is ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the last time this was before us it was identified as Article XIV, Schedule, and the section number was blank. It is what has been known to the Convention as Committee Proposal No. 17/c, Revised, and later as Committee Proposal 17/c, Second Revised. It is now given Section No. 25, which may prove to be tentative in the final arrangement of the constitution, but we do have every number filled now -- one through 25 of the Schedule of Ordinances and Transitional measures. Very few changes have been made in the draft since we received it last night. I call your attention to one change on the first page, on line 7. Previously the section said "each qualified voter". It has now been changed to "each elector". Throughout our constitution we have used the term

"qualified voter" and we described that in the constitution so there is no doubt what it means, but since that is a provision which if ratified will go into effect prior to the time our constitution will, we thought it best to use the terminology of the present Organic Act and the Alaska statutes, and they use the term "elector", so we used the term "elector". On lines 9 and 10, page 1, we have reinserted a phrase which was in the original form of the section as it came to us from the Ordinance Committee. That phrase is "by the election judges", the provision being that each elector will be given a separate ballot "by the election judges", which we believe is probably necessary as something of a mandate to those conducting the election. On page 3, the most important change in the redraft will be noted. What was Section 8 has been dropped entirely. I will read Section 8 as it was in the draft that was reported to you yesterday. It was the section dealing with filing -- rather the subsection. This is all one section and these numbers are subsections. Subsection 8 said: "All candidates for senators and representatives must file declarations of candidacy with the Director of Finance of the Territory on or before June 30, 1956. Each candidate shall pay a filing fee of $40." After a great deal of discussion and consultation with our advisers, the Style and Drafting Committee decided to drop any requirement that persons desiring to become candidates for these three offices would have to file declarations of candidacy. This was done in line with the present Territorial law which does not require a declaration of any candidate except those who desire to run in the primary on party ballots. The requirement, further, that a $40 filing fee be posted has been dropped and this also is in line with present Territorial law. The filing fee is required only of candidates who desire to have their names on the primary election ballot and we are advised that the theory is that the federal government, which conducts the elections, runs the primary rather as a matter of convenience to the Territory, and in view of that, it is advisable or appropriate for the candidates who desire to have their names on that ballot to pay a filing fee. At the present time, anyone who wants to run as an independent on the general election ballot need not pay a filing fee, and that is the same provision which we think should govern this election of senators and a representative for Congress, so what was Subsection No. 8 has been dropped entirely. I am sure some of you will have questions about that, but if I may go on and tell you what else we have done to the draft, we will be available to answer questions after that presentation. What is now Section 8 is almost identical with what was Section 9 of the former draft. The thing that is new about it is that we have provided in this section for a date by which the application for getting a man's name on the ballot must be filed with the Director of Finance. That was formerly in the old Section 8 which has been dropped. Section 9, again, is practically identical with what was Section 10 of the former draft and again we have added the date by which the application must be filed. What is now Section 11 is changed very slightly from what was Section 12 of the former draft. Section 12 formerly had a first sentence which said, "Each declaration of candidacy shall clearly indicate whether the candidate for senator is seeking the regular or the short term." And since we are proposing to drop the requirement that there be a declaration of candidacy, we have dropped that sentence. Mr. President, I believe those are the only changes except for minor changes in phraseology which have been made in this redraft.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Sundborg a question. Mr. Sundborg, line 23, page 3, Section 9, my notes indicate that we had "as amended" following the reference to the statutes. I think that section has been amended and I think we should put in the words "as amended" which seem to have been left out of the new redraft.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, it is true that we did have that in one of our working papers, but I had understood from a remark by Mr. Johnson that he had checked the matter and that section had not been amended. I would like to ask Mr. Johnson if that was his understanding.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President and Mr. Sundborg, I believe that is correct as to Sec. 38-4-11, ACLA 1949. In checking that section last night we found that that particular section had not been amended. However, the section in the previous article or previous subparagraph (a) which is designated as 38-5-10, ACLA 1949, I believe that one was amended. However, I am not in a position to state definitely. I only checked the one section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I checked 38-5-10 yesterday and it had not been amended if the little slipsheet in the code prepared by the Legislative Council is correct. I checked the other reference that was made yesterday. I don't remember it being 38-4-11. Is that a new reference that came in last night?

JOHNSON: It is the same one.

HELLENTHAL: Well, then it has not been amended either, because, as this appeared in yesterday's version, it was not amended according to the Legislative Council pamphlet, and I cannot vouch for its accuracy.

SUNDBORG: We checked it in the same place, Mr. President, and that was the reference. Now in order to check it thoroughly, it would be necessary to look at each volume of the session laws since 1949 and we do recommend very strongly that that be done, and that all references to sections of the statutes be checked before this is finally printed. We will do that as a matter of course.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, yesterday, I think it was Mr. Riley, in former Section 10, line 18, page 3, he changed the word "in", as I recall, to the word "after". There was some explanation given. I notice that you use "in" again now. I was just wondering why you went back to the "in".

SUNDBORG: That is an error if we used "in", Mr. Robertson. What line was that in the new draft?

ROBERTSON: In yesterday's draft it was on line 18, page 3, and in today's, it's line 24, page 3.

V. FISCHER: In the new draft it's on line 3, page 25.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on the report you have before you in Section on page 3, line 24, the word "in" after the word "vacancy" be stricken and the word "after" inserted in its place.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: That's the wrong one.

SUNDBORG: Is that the wrong one?

DAVIS: That is the second "in".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: In the "in" near the end of the line after the word "occurring".

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I withdraw my unanimous consent request, and ask that the word "in" after the word "occurring" be changed to the word "after".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the change is as ordered.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, "nominations occurring 'after' a primary election"? It means after the party conventions have made the nominations. What primary is involved here?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, maybe if we read the whole sentence we can get the idea. It says "Party nominations for senators and representative shall, for this election only, be made by party conventions in the manner prescribed in Section 38-4-11, ACLA 1949, for filling a vacancy in a party nomination occurring after a primary election."

R. RIVERS: Thank you, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: In other words, under the present statutes, if a candidate's name which was to go on the ballot following a primary cannot go because he has resigned or died or something, the parties do, by conventions, propose somebody for that place, and it is in the same manner that the party conventions would operate here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the proposed change? If there is no objection the change is so ordered. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Sundborg? Mr. Sundborg, don't I recall that yesterday the Style and Drafting Committee was given authority to look into and deal with the matter of providing for filling of vacancies that might occur in these offices after elections thereto?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I do remember a comment to that effect. I don't think we were actually by action of the Convention given that authority and I would have to report that we haven't given it any particular attention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is not the recollection of the Chair that the Committee was so instructed. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: My best recollection was that I made a motion and asked unanimous consent to that effect.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess while the Chief Clerk checks the record.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will please read from the record with relation to this subject.

CHIEF CLERK: "Mr. Buckalew moved and asked unanimous consent that the Style and Drafting Committee be authorized to take care of the matter that had been presented by Mr. Londborg and to confer with the Ordinance Committee." The question had been raised by Mr. Londborg.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to the report of the Style and Drafting Committee?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I thought I had this straight in my mind. The Committee introduced 17, they then withdrew it and introduced 17/a, and then they introduced 17/b and 17/c at a later date. I am trying to get straightened out on the resolve clause. I notice on this 17/c we have, it says "Resolved, that the following sections be adopted as a part of the schedule of the Alaska State Constitution." That has to do with the Tennessee Plan. Now on the 17/b I notice it says, "Resolved that the following be agreed upon as apart of the Alaska State Constitution." And the word "schedule" again appears there. The enacting clause here is somewhat different. I am trying to follow the chronology of this thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please explain what happened.

CHIEF CLERK: What happened was that 17 was withdrawn and 17/b takes the place of 17. 17/a and 17/c were presented later for action, but 17/b is what takes the place of 17.

V. RIVERS: Well, now are they all schedules? Do they all have the same enacting clause or is there some difference between a, b, and c?

CHIEF CLERK: They all go under Article 14, part of this schedule.

V. RIVERS: I want to understand that because in the Executive we withdrew an article and then we marked it "a" to show that it was a substitute it had been replaced for. I am wondering about the difference in the enacting clause here of these two.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, that is a question which arose in our Committee last night. The rules of the Convention provide that all proposals must carry an enacting clause and the wording of that enacting clause is set forth in our rules. Now one of our members brought up the question, "Are these actually a part of our constitution -- these ordinances?" If they are not, probably our standard enacting clause which says -- I don't seem to have it. I believe the standard enacting clause says, "Resolved, that the following be agreed upon as part of the Alaska State Constitution." And the question was raised, is that really correct? Of course that is the only thing provided in our rules. Now I can't explain when these words a part of the schedule of" got into the enacting clause on the schedule. They weren't put in by our Committee, I believe. It may be they were in that form when we received them from the Ordinance Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the Ordinance Committee may have -- in some little haste I believe, I think the correct manner is that it should be -- of course they possibly will have to confine with the rules. I believe the wording "the following sections be adopted as a part of the schedule of the Alaska State Constitution" is the correct language that should be used because all of the court decisions refer to the schedule of ordinances as being appended to the constitution. They are not considered a part of the main body, and I believe there should be that little differentiation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would it be wise at this time to take a brief recess? The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other questions to be directed to the Committee? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: At this time, Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rule of the Convention concerning the resolve clause be amended in respect to the schedule to the constitution so that the words: "Resolved, that the following sections be adopted as a part of the schedule of the Alaska State Constitution," rather than saying that "the following sections be adopted as part of the constitution".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, the Rules Committee took it upon itself to meet during recess and we haven't as yet gotten in touch with Mr. McNealy, but his thinking parallels ours and we should just like to throw this out just for his views of it. We thought we should pursue the same course but include ordinances, transitional measures, schedules, in proposing a rule to cover the situation. Our language would be of this nature: "For purposes of schedules, ordinances, and transitional measures, the enacting clause shall be: 'Resolved, that the following be agreed upon as part of the schedule accompanying the Alaska State Constitution.'" I might ask Mr. McNealy through the Chair, if I may, if that would be agreeable to him?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have objection to that wording, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: I wonder if Mr. Riley would consent to using the word "appended" rather than "accompanying".

RILEY: Without objection from the Committee it is agreeable.

MCNEALY: In that event then, Mr. President, I will withdraw my motion for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed unanimous consent request then, with the change being the words "appended to".

RILEY: "As part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution."

CHIEF CLERK: "For purposes of schedules, ordinances, and transitional measures, the enacting clause shall be 'Resolved, that the following be agreed upon as part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution.'" "Schedule, ordinances and transitional measures" would go in there?

RILEY: I did not hear your last question.

CHIEF CLERK: Well, "For purposes of schedules, ordinances and transitional measures, the enacting clause shall be 'Resolved, that the following be agreed upon as part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution.'"

RILEY: Yes, and I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the unanimous consent request of Mr. Riley. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in line with the action just taken, I now ask unanimous consent that in the schedule now before you, Section 25 of Article XIV" on the first page, in the enacting clause, we drop the word "A" before "part" on the second line, and after the word "the" before "Alaska" we insert "schedule appended to the" so that it would read: "Resolved, that the following..." I also ask unanimous consent to include in the request the dropping of the word "sections" from the first line of the enacting clause as it appears, so that it would read "Resolved that the following..." I see that this differs in several respects. I also want to include striking "adopted" in the first line and substituting "agreed upon" so that it would read, "Resolved, that the following be agreed upon as part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the change be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. McNeese.

MCNEESE: May we have that read again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the resolve clause as it would read now.

CHIEF CLERK: "Resolved, that the following be agreed upon as part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Article XIV? If not, what is the pleasure of the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, to handle the question of filling vacancies which I had overlooked and which was assigned to us yesterday by unanimous consent, I would like to request a brief recess during which the Ordinance Committee and Style and Drafting Committee can meet to consider this. I do not think it would take us more than a very few minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Perhaps we could combine it with the normal morning recess so we wouldn't be playing musical chairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess until 10:25 a.m. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Engrossment and Enrollment will meet, also, at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Engrossment and Enrollment Committee will meet at this time in the gallery. Are there other committee announcements? If not, the Convention is at recess until 10:25.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment, to whom was referred Committee Proposal 17/a, has compared same with the original and find it correctly engrossed and the first enrolled copies will be placed on the delegates' desks immediately. I ask unanimous consent that the report be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney asks unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment be accepted and adopted. If there is no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, reporting for the Committee on Style and Drafting, we have considered together with the Ordinances Committee during recess the problem of whether the section about the Tennessee Plan should contain any provision with respect to vacancies in office and we desire to present a Committee amendment. Since it is substantive I would first ask that the rules be suspended and that the Committee on Style and Drafting be permitted to present an amendment, which would be as follows: on page 2, line 19, that is in Section 4, at the end of the line, add a new sentence as follows: "Any vacancy in these offices may be filled as prescribed by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that this amendment might be offered. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended. Mr. Sundborg, you may present the amendment.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I now, on behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee, offer the amendment. I wonder if the Chief Clerk would read it, to be sure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 19, in Sec. 4, at the end of the line, add a new sentence as follows: 'Any vacancy in these offices may be filled as prescribed by law.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I do not object, but shouldn't it say, "shall be filled as prescribed by law" rather than "may"? This is mandatory that the office "shall" be filled.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, it was our feeling and also that of the Ordinance Committee and I believe it was unanimous that there should not be a mandate that the office had to be filled. We wanted to leave that to the judgment of the legislature in view of the situation at the time a vacancy might occur.

COOPER: I realize that, Mr. President, but the people of Alaska will elect two senators and one representative and certainly we shouldn't have a job being done by two-thirds or in case where it might be possibly a third. Mr. President, I move that the word "shall" be inserted for the word "may".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, do you so move the adoption of the amendment?

SUNDBORG: I do move, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

HERMANN: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mrs. Hermann. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I'm sorry, I was out of order. Mr. President, I have an amendment.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, could I suggest that we first vote this one into the article, then if Mr. Cooper wants to change "may" to "shall", to do it after that, just to keep from getting it balled up here. I renew my unanimous consent request that this sentence be added.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have an amendment. I propose to strike the word "may" and insert the word "shall".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper moves that the word "shall" be substituted for the word "may" in the amendment just adopted.

KILCHER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Kilcher. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I feel that the word "shall" should be in there inasmuch as these men are going to, these representatives of Alaska are going to Washington D. C., theoretically, and they have a battle. They have a big battle and they certainly should be there in force.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Should not the rules be suspended?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, you are correct, and that is why we had to go on with the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Cooper, first you would have to ask that the rules be suspended.

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that the rules be suspended for the offering of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended in order that Mr. Cooper might offer his amendment. Hearing no objection, the rules are ordered suspended. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: May I offer an amendment, that the word "shall" be inserted for the word "may"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may offer it, Mr. Cooper.

KILCHER: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper offers an amendment changing the word "may" to "shall"; the motion has been seconded by Mr.

Kilcher. Is there discussion? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I don't think if we insert the word "shall" for "may" that it is a mandate that these men should have to be replaced. It is a mandate only to follow the law. If the legislature should make a law pertaining to this question, then the law should be observed. If the law that the legislature enacts says we don't want them there any more, then that law shall be observed. "Shall" has only a bearing on the observation of the law and not on the substantive question of whether there shall be any future senators sent to Washington, or their successors.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I want to close by saying that I interpret it as any vacancy "shall" be filled as prescribed by law. I don't interpret it as Mr. Kilcher interprets it.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other questions or amendments to be offered? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have another Committee amendment. I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended to permit the Style and Drafting Committee to submit an amendment which would be an amendment to Subsection 1, page 1, line 9, to strike the word "separate". I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent.

HELLENTHAL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves that the rules be suspended.

HERMANN: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mrs. Hermann that the rules be suspended. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended in order that the amendment might be offered?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 42 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 7 - Laws, McCutcheon, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog, Taylor.

Absent: 6 - Coghill, Doogan, V. Fischer, Marston, Peratrovich, R. Rivers.)

CHIEF CLERK: 42 yeas, 7 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the rules have been suspended. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move on behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee that in Subsection 1, page 1, line 9, the word "separate" be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves on behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee in subsection 1, page 1, line 9, the word "separate" be stricken.

KILCHER: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Kilcher. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if I may? The Style and Drafting Committee together with the Ordinance Committee gave quite a bit of thought to this during the recess and our thought is that we feel that each of the propositions to be presented to the voters in connection with the Alaska State Constitution should be on a ballot which is separate from the ballot which will contain the names of the primary election candidates, but we believe that each of these questions, and we are assuming that there are three of them, should be on the one ballot so that the election officials won't have the task of sorting and getting out to the precincts all over this Territory three separate slips of paper; one on "shall the constitution be ratified," one on shall the fish trap ordinance be ratified," and one on the Tennessee Plan. We just thought that would be more confusing to all concerned than if the three propositions could be set forth on a single piece of paper, and that was our purpose in striking the word "separate" here. We would want to propose an amendment when we get to Article XIV, the first 24 sections of the schedule, which would specifically set forth that there should be a ballot separate from the primary election ballot, but that all propositions dealing with the constitution be on that ballot.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I might also add that the conservation of costs was involved. It might make a difference of two or three thousand dollars.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask Mr. Sundborg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Sundborg, I know is much more familiar with printing than I am. Would it save two or three thousand dollars?

SUNDBORG: It would cost considerably more, Mr. Hellenthal, I know, to print them on separate ballots than it would on a single ballot, but I couldn't say how much without knowing how many ballots would be printed.

HELLENTHAL: Would it be more than $100?

SUNDBORG: Oh, much more than that.

HELLENTHAL: How much more?

SUNDBORG: I couldn't say without knowing --

KILCHER: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: We dealt with this question in the Administration Committee a couple of months ago and the proportionate share of a ballot of this kind involved, the Convention's share of the printing would be several thousand dollars and we arrived at the difference there. It is not only the cost in printing but also the cost in the election. It would take more time, it would take more time involved for the election judges. The accrued total costs involved would possibly be two or three thousand dollars.

HELLENTHAL: Are election judges paid by the hour now?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other questions or proposed amendments for Article XIV of the schedule? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there are no further questions, I would like to ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Section 25 of Article XIV, the section dealing with the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, be advanced to third reading, be read by title only, and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, before the Chair puts that, have you moved to accept the report yet?

SUNDBORG: I'm sorry. I withdraw the motion just offered and ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with respect to Section 25 of Article XIV, the schedule, dealing with the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, be accepted and that the amendments therein be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to Article XIV, the schedule, be accepted and that the changes therein be adopted. Is there objection? Your question, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: Did you have another amendment, Mr. Sundborg?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I am not aware of one, but I would ask Mr. Buckalew to call one to my attention if he thinks we do.

BUCKALEW: I thought you had some additional language that Mr. Davis had prepared with reference to a separate ballot for the question pertaining to the constitution, the three propositions and the candidates for congressional offices?

SUNDBORG: Mr. Buckalew, our proposal was that that be inserted, not in Section 25 but in one of the first 24 sections of the schedule which we are going to consider next on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The report of the Committee on Style and Drafting is ordered accepted and the changes adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I now ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Section 25 of Article XIV, the section dealing with the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, be advanced to third reading, be read by title only and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Section 25 of Article XIV, the section dealing with the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, be advanced to third reading, read by title only and placed on final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended and Article XIV, Schedule, Section 25, is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will read the title.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article XIV, Schedule, Section 25."

LONDBORG: Mr. President, are the other sections of Article XIV going to be taken individually, or is this the only one?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg, as the Chair recalls it, there is a long list in one of the schedules that will be known as Article XIV. They will all go together in the appendix of the constitution, though. The question is open for discussion. Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: May I ask the Chairman of the Committee a question on Section 12?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Where the duties and emoluments of the offices of senators and representative shall be as prescribed by law, was it the thinking of the Committee that this would be a moral obligation on the part of the Territory to pay the full senatorial and congressional salaries and expenses and so forth, or is this asking the Territorial legislature to set up a certain sum to take care of that?

MCNEALY: Mr. Nolan, there may be others on the Style and Drafting Committee that could add further to what I might say here, but it was the thought of the Ordinance Committee that the legislature might do as they see fit regarding the prescribing of duties and emoluments of office. However, our primary thought in this was referring -- it may be a little ambiguous here but possibly purposely so -- that the federal government when they were seated, this was also tossed in to take care of that; their duties and pay would be prescribed by federal law and it actually is no directive in one sense of the word to the legislature, because the feeling of the Ordinance Committee was that, in our opinion, that the legislature has no power to provide salaries for these men. Mr. Davis expressed it very well in a joint meeting here, I think, in that regard when he said that, if the legislature hadn't passed such a law providing salaries and other expense that he thought the members of the house and members of the senate would go into the law at that time to see if they had the power to do so.

NOLAN: Does the Committee feel that Congress would, or has there been any precedent established that Congress would make it retroactive? Suppose it takes three or four years for us to achieve statehood?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, in the precedents to this, the senators and representatives selected were only paid from the time they were seated and I assume that would be the same here.

NOLAN: Well, that is one thing I would like to have made clear for the record here so that maybe the next legislature would have something to go on. I have always been in favor of our Delegate having an assistant, at least one assistant back in Washington, and quite substantial help with money appropriated from the Territorial legislature and I was wondering whether it was the intent of the Committee to have the next legislature probably increase the appropriation to the Statehood Committee and let the Statehood Committee pay these people; or whether the Committee actually felt that these three people going back to Congress should receive the $22,500 plus their expenses, or whether it would be up to the legislature. The legislature could turn over a certain amount of money to the Statehood Committee to see that these people's expenses are paid. If they only get paid by Congress from the date they are seated, and it might be three years and someone is going to have to take care of that, and I think the people of the Territory should know whether this is going to cost a full Congressional salary at the time these people are sent back by the legislature.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I believe that Mr. Nolan, in fact, answered what was the majority, at least the majority opinion of the Ordinance Committee that we felt that possibly the better and safer way for the legislature to handle it would be to make an appropriation to the Statehood Committee who could in turn possibly provide them with per diem and their expenses in Washington.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, the Section 12 that Mr. Nolan has been talking about is in this article by action that I initiated Sunday here. I wanted to make it clear that these senators and representatives were only going to be paid as provided by law. I didn't want to leave it hanging that anybody was going to pay them their salaries as such from the Territory. I look at it this way: if and when these folks are seated as members of Congress they will be paid by the federal government as other senators and congressmen are paid and until that time they won't get anything at all from the federal government, and in my opinion, certainly any action by Congress will not be retroactive; it will only run from the time they are seated. Second, if the Territory sees its way clear to make some provision for these folks, then that will be according to what provision they make, but in making the motion Sunday it wasn't my intention that we were making any obligation on the Territory, moral or otherwise. These folks, as I see it, are strictly on their own as far as salary or expenses go until and unless some provision is made by law for them, and I think that is the way it should be, and I just wanted to make it clear that we are not obligating anybody by this action to pay these folks either salary or per diem until and unless the legislature provides for it by one manner or another, whatever may seem wise or until they are seated as members of Congress, in which case they will receive their regular pay and expenses as members of Congress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a debate on the question? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to say a few words, and a very few only, on behalf of the Alaska-Tennessee Plan itself. I think all of us have become well aware of just what is involved here. I think it is a plan which has captured the imagination of this Convention. I am sure that it will capture the imagination of Alaskans to just about the same extent and that it will be adopted by them at the ratification election in April and I am very hopeful that it will similarly capture the imagination of the people of the United States. I feel that it is a bold plan, a forward-looking plan, which is in the best traditions of Alaska and also in the best traditions of the Nation and I hope it will be the avenue to statehood for Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper?

COOPER: May I ask Mr. Davis a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Cooper.

I know that this Subsection 12 has been discussed several times on the floor but I can't possibly see how a representative -- three representatives of the people of Alaska that are going to go to the expense, or be put to the expense of going to Washington, D. C. for an unknown amount of time, duration of time, to be subjected to considerable expenses, I cannot see how the men, or the representatives could possibly seek the positions without some form, shall we say, of guaranteed reimbursement for expenses or for salary and certainly the candidates that will be put up by the parties should have some remuneration for the contract that exists between the people of the Territory of Alaska and their representatives at the Congress. Couldn't this possibly be explained, even if it has to be in detail, so that there can be some allowance or some provision made by the legislature for salaries or expenses for these representatives that we are sending to Washington, D. C.?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President and Mr. Cooper, to begin with I do not envision that we are making a contract with anybody. These folks who desire to be senators and representatives are strictly on their own. They will know when they run exactly what they are up against. They may or may not be paid expenses and they may or may not be paid a salary depending on what develops. In the second place, I think that we are not proceeding any different here from the proceeding that has taken place in the other states that have used this same plan. The parties go in hopes that through their efforts their territory may be granted statehood. If their hopes are fulfilled and statehood is granted by Congress, they are seated as full-fledged senators and representatives. If their hopes are not fulfilled, then, of course, they are ambassadors of good will. Now, it would be my belief that, whatever may happen on the Tennessee Plan, that the folks of Alaska would be well served by having additional men in Washington and I am assuming that we are going to send the very best men that we may have to do the job. To my notion, almost anytime that a congressman or a senator has come to Alaska, has met our people, has seen our problems, he has gone away a friend of Alaska. I know of no exceptions to that. I think the same thing is true of senators and representatives who have met our people in Washington and have taken time to talk with them. Almost without exception they have been our friends. Our problem in Washington comes because people do not understand us. I think we have to realize that many, many people in the states still think that this is a barren land of ice and snow and people up here are somehow different from other Americans, and whatever it may cost, in my opinion, will be well worth the cost to have senators and representatives back there with, so far as we are concerned at least, the titles of senators and representatives; back there meeting the national figures, meeting the senators and representatives and presenting our problems and our points of view to these folks. I think that when they are back there the folks in Congress are going to find that after all we are just like anybody else. But as far as pinning it down now and saying we are going to pay the senators and representatives any stated amount, or any amount at all, for compensation or for salary, in my opinion, would be unwise, beside the fact that we certainly don't have any money and we certainly don't have any authority to bind the legislature one way or another. For that reason I think we should go no farther than we have here, to say that their compensation shall be as provided by law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: May I elucidate on that answer?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: The Federal Constitution had this same problem, Mr. Cooper, and some of the states were unable to send their delegates to the Constitution because they didn't have the money, but in one case a wealthy merchant put up the money and they finally arrived, late, at the Federal Convention. There are enough men with enough enthusiasm in the Territory of Alaska to find the money to pay the expenses, at least, of these men down there if necessary, much like the missionaries raise lots of money from the public to come to this land, we are in turn going to send missionaries back there and tell them we eat meat and wear clothes just like they do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. President, I just want to say a few words. I think this is a very good publicity plan but I still cannot give it my wholehearted support and I will have to vote against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I'd just like to bring in a thought or two here as

I see it. The first consideration we gave this plan was two or three days ago and I went in support of it then because I hoped as we had it presented it could have been amended to make it more workable, but it went the other way and yesterday I deviated from the support of the plan. There are still some things that I think we are asking for that may lead into trouble just because we want to sidestep the issue, or whatever the reason it may be, as far as taking time to work it out. With no guarantee at all, it has also been more or less mentioned here that these three men that go out there will be on their own. They may not be supported at all as far as we know if the law does not guarantee it or the law does not provide: that is going to leave it up to the ones who can see their way clear financially unless they have a friend or group of friends that will do as Mr. Marston said, sort of get back of them and say, "Well, if you get back there and don't get the support, we will back you up." I don't know if that is best. This selection of candidates will take place in a very short time, within about three months and these men that volunteer their services will be doing that without any guarantee whatsoever. Now, anyone that would be willing to do that and spend their money or time with nothing definite -- well, I will say we will have to give them a lot of credit for that and I hope they will be successful within a few days after arriving there so that they can be seated and be on the federal payroll the same as the rest of them. But looking at the other side, if that is not the case, then we have a situation where these men will be volunteering, one for a period of two years, one for a period of four years, and one for a period of six years with no guarantee whatsoever of support, and our people are not going to know when they vote on this how much they are going to be obligated. Also, as I mentioned yesterday, in Section 12, regarding the duties, there is a period of time when these men will be out there and they will have no prescribed duties; they will be on their own. The Statehood Committee cannot prescribe their duties and neither can anyone else. It will have to be as prescribed by law and they will be out there and I don't know who they will be legally responsible to one way or another. I think we could have clarified some of these points. Now, I bring them out just for the matter of the record, that this plan isn't as complete as I believe it should be. However, as I voted Sunday, I am in favor of the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, and I think we should have one. I am going to vote in support of this one although my better judgment tells me that there are certain portions very unsatisfactory and very unworkable, but, if this is the best we can do, I will give it my support.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: May we have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move?

MCNEES: May we extend that a few minutes, Mr. President, and call a short Administration Committee meeting during recess?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no motion for recess. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Is there a question of recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. Cooper didn't move.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves the previous question.

BUCKALEW: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Buckalew. The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the previous question has been ordered. The question is, "Shall Section 25 of Article XIV, Schedule, be adopted as a part of the Alaska State Constitution?" No, that is not the question -- the Chair stands corrected. "Shall Section 25 of Article XIV, the schedule, be agreed upon as part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Collins, Cooper, Laws, Reader, Rosswog.

Absent: 3 - Coghill, Peratrovich, R. Rivers.)

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 5 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so Section 25, the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, has been agreed upon as a part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution. Is it the wish of the Style and Drafting Committee or Rules Committee that we proceed with Article XIV, Sections 1 to 24 of the Schedule of Ordinances, at this time?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we are prepared to go ahead.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then we have before us Article XIV, the Schedule, Sections 1 through 24. The Chief Clerk may read the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting. The Convention will come to order.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article XIV. Schedule. To provide an orderly transition from a territorial to a state form of government, it is declared and ordained:

Section 1. This constitution shall take effect immediately upon the admission of Alaska into the Union as a State.

Section 2. The capital of the State of Alaska shall be at Juneau.

Section 3. All laws in force in the Territory of Alaska on the effective date of this constitution and consistent therewith shall continue in force until they expire by their own limitation, are amended or repealed.

Section 4. Except as otherwise provided in this constitution, all rights, titles, actions, suits, contracts, liabilities and civil, criminal or administrative proceedings shall continue unaffected by the change from territorial to state government, and the state shall be the legal successor to the Territory in these matters.

Section 5. Cities, school districts, health districts. public utility districts and other local subdivisions of government existing on the effective date of this constitution shall continue to exercise their powers and functions under existing law pending enactment of laws to carry out the provisions of this constitution. New local subdivisions of government shall be created only in accordance with this constitution.

Section 6. All officers of the Territory, or under its laws, on the effective date of this constitution shall continue to perform the duties of their offices in a manner consistent with this constitution until they are superseded by officers of the State.

Section 7. Residence or other qualifications prescribed by this constitution shall be satisfied by corresponding qualifications under the Territory.

Section 8. The seal of the Territory, substituting the word "State" for "Territory", shall be the seal of the State.

Section 9. The flag of the Territory shall be the flag of the State.

Section 10. This constitution shall be submitted to the voters of Alaska for ratification or rejection at the territorial primary election to be held on April 24, 1956. The election shall be conducted according to existing laws regulating primary elections so far as applicable.

Section 11. Each elector who offers to vote upon this constitution shall be given a ballot by the election judges which in substance shall contain the following proposition:

'Shall the Constitution for the State of Alaska prepared and agreed upon by the Alaska Constitutional Convention be adopted?'	_____
	Yes

	No

Section 12. The returns of this election shall be made to the governor of the Territory of Alaska, and shall be canvassed in substantially the same manner provided by law for territorial elections.

Section 13. If a majority of the votes cast on the proposition favor the constitution, then the constitution shall be deemed to be ratified by the people of Alaska. The governor of the Territory shall forthwith submit a certified copy of the constitution through the President of the United States to the Congress for approval, together with a statement of the votes cast thereon.

Section 14. When the people of the Territory ratify this constitution and it is approved by the duly constituted authority of the United States, the governor of the Territory shall, within thirty days after receipt of the official notification of such approval, issue a proclamation and take necessary measures to hold primary and general elections for all state elective offices provided for by this constitution.

Section 15. The primary election shall take place not less than forty nor more than ninety days after the proclamation by the governor of the Territory. The general election shall take place not less than ninety days after the primary election. The elections shall be governed by this constitution and by applicable territorial laws.

Section 16. The officers to be elected at the first general election shall include two senators and one representative to serve in the Congress of the United States, unless senators and a representative have been previously elected and seated. One senator shall be elected for the long term and one senator for the short term, each term to expire on the third day of January in an odd-numbered year to be determined by authority of the United States. The term of the representative shall expire on the third day of January in the odd-numbered year immediately following his assuming office. If the first representative is elected in an even-numbered year to take office in that year, a representative shall be elected at the same time to fill the full term commencing on the third day of January of the following year, and the same person may be elected for both terms.

Section 17. The first governor and secretary of state shall hold office for a term beginning with the day on which they qualify and ending at noon on the first Monday in December of the even-numbered year following the next presidential election. This term shall count as a full term for purposes of determining eligibility for reelection only if it is four years or more in duration.

Section 18. The returns of the first general election shall be made, canvassed and certified in the manner prescribed by law. The governor of the Territory shall certify the results to the President of the United States.

Section 19. When the President of the United States issues a proclamation announcing the results of the election, and the State has been admitted into the Union, the officers elected and qualified shall assume office.

Section 20. The governor shall call a special session of the first state legislature within thirty days after the presidential proclamation unless a regular session of the legislature falls within that period. The special session shall not be limited as to duration.

Section 21. The first members of the judicial council shall, notwithstanding Section 8 of Article IV, be appointed for terms as follows: three attorney members for one, three and five years respectively, and three non-attorney members for two, four and six years respectively. The six members so appointed shall, in accordance with Section 5 of Article IV, submit to the governor nominations to fill the initial vacancies on the supreme court, including the office of chief justice. Once the chief justice is appointed, he shall assume his seat on the judicial council.

Section 22. Until the courts provided for in Article IV are organized, the courts, their jurisdiction and the judicial system shall remain as constituted on the date of admission unless otherwise provided by law. When the state courts are organized, new actions shall be commenced and filed therein, and all causes, other than those under the jurisdiction of the United States, pending in the courts existing on the date of admission shall be transferred to the proper state court as though commenced, filed or lodged in those courts in the first instance, subject to applicable acts of congress.

Section 23. The provisions of Section 5 of Article II shall not prohibit any member of the first state legislature from holding any office or position created during his first term.

Section 24. Citizens who legally voted in the general election of November 4, 1924, and who meet the residence requirements for voting, shall be entitled to vote notwithstanding the provisions of Section 1 of Article V."

V. RIVERS: We have adopted a rule that ordinances shall be headed with that particular type of enacting clause, and the point of order is that it is automatically adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order would be well taken, Mr. Victor Rivers, inasmuch as we adopted a rule by unanimous consent this morning when it was discussed. Mr. Robertson, do you recall if it was adopted? That question came up.

ROBERTSON: I would like to know what Mr. Riley's position is on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, was it your recollection that we adopted such a rule?

RILEY: The Rules Committee wasn't instructed to act but it did act during the first recess, I believe, this morning, anticipating the question would be referred to it. Then when ordinances came in, Mr. McNealy proposed language very similar to that which the Rules Committee had arrived at, as an amendment to the rules covering this particular feature, and I believe it was adopted on the floor by unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question was adopted without objection, so is there still objection to it? If there is no objection and inasmuch as it is a rule, it would take a two-thirds vote to do away with the rule. Hearing no objection the change is ordered. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I would like to ask either Mrs. Hermann or Mr. Sundborg about a little punctuation on line 13, page 1. It just seems to me that there should be a couple of more commas in there to make it more interesting. For instance, after the word "liabilities" and after "criminal" would that be better? It would be for me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: With the word "or" following "criminal" would it be necessary?

BARR: After "liabilities" and after "criminal" there should be commas, I believe.

SUNDBORG: I might just say that the Style and Drafting Committee is breaking up now that we have gone through all the material before us, into three subcommittees. One will be a subcommittee on punctuation; one will be a subcommittee on arrangement; and one will be a subcommittee on uniform use of language throughout the constitution; and we will be going over every article, looking at them from a uniform point of view, and there may be some changes in punctuation for which we will ask unanimous consent before the constitution is adopted as a whole. Now as to the particular question Mr. Barr asks, I am not prepared to answer it. Maybe Mrs. Hermann is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley has been attempting to get the floor. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I am prepared to answer it and the answer as far as I am concerned is "no". There are two things we are talking about in here; one is rights, titles, actions, suits, contracts, liabilities and civil and criminal liabilities; and the other is civil, criminal or administrative proceedings, and that is why the "and" separates the two types of things. Now perhaps the punctuation isn't proper but it wouldn't be improved by putting a comma after the word "criminal".

BARR: Mr. Hurley, that is what I am objecting to. It is not separated, those two ideas there. Unless there is something put after "liabilities", I would prefer a semicolon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I can give Mr. Barr the rule of punctuation that is followed on these. There are two sets of two series there.

The first one consists of the words up to "liabilities" and the second consists of the words up to "administrative". Now the rule of punctuation is to have a comma except between the first and last; the next to last and the last of the series that is connected. Because of the fact that we have omitted an "and" and put commas in all the way through here, and any time you omit a word you replace it with a comma. Now I don't know if this is very clear to him or not, or to anybody else, but the series is what we are working on. Now we come here to "liabilities and"; then we have "civil, criminal or administrative proceedings". Whenever the conjunction is added we do not put a comma in, also. That is the rule we have adopted and it is a sound rule of punctuation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, it might be just my own

HELLENTHAL: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Didn't we kind of get off before the report was completed here? I think the Committee was in the process of making an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, were you still reporting?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I take it the addition on the mimeographed copies of the words "schedule appended to" in the resolving clause was agreed to?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct.

SUNDBORG: I will say for the Style and Drafting Committee that these sections were redrafted by a subcommittee consisting of Mrs. Nordale, Mr. McLaughlin and Mr. Johnson, and that we have asked Mr. McLaughlin to explain what changes have been made and to answer any questions from delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, insofar as I can recall, there weren't any substantive changes made by the Committee on it. If the Chair desires to ask section by section, if there are any questions, I shall attempt to answer them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I would like to ask a question of Mr. McLaughlin. On page 2 on the section on local government, in the enrolled copy you start out "pending adoption of measures to carry out the provisions" and so on "of local government there shall be instituted..." Now in our Style and Drafting copy, Section 5, you have two sentences there. The first is very apparent. Now beginning with line 12, "New local subdivisions of government shall be created only in accordance with this Constitution." Now if this is an ordinance, would that have any effect until after the constitution was adopted?

MCLAUGHLIN: This would have no effect until after the constitution is adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have a question in connection with page 6, Section 20. Now it says there, "The Governor shall call a special session of the first state legislature unless it is already in session." How could the legislature be in session if it is the first one? In the first place, this clause could apply to a state that was already a state in adopting amendments to a constitution where a state legislature might be in session. But under the system we have set up the first state legislature will be elected and if the Territorial legislature were already in session, the first state legislature would undoubtedly have a different composition, so I wonder if that is substance matter, Mr. McLaughlin, or whether it was the arrangement worked out this way in Style and Drafting Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I am rather hazy as to what took place last night, Mr. Rivers, but my recollection was that the discussion was that unless a regular session of the legislature falls within that period, it was the intent of the governor --

V. RIVERS: We have got no state so there couldn't be a state legislature in session and there would be a new legislature if it is a state, so what would it matter? He would still have to call the first session period, wouldn't he, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: This refers to the governor of the state, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Yes, I see that.

MCLAUGHLIN: He "shall call a special session of the first state legislature" only unless a regular session of the legislature falls within that period; that is 30 days after the Presidential proclamation declaring Alaska as a state and its officers have been elected, then the governor shall call it.

V. RIVERS: I think that clarifies it; in other words, if he has called it previously while it is in session, or if it is a regular session under the constitution --

MCLAUGHLIN: Another matter on that, incidentally, that the Committee considered was the following sentence: "A special session shall not be limited as to duration." My recollection is that special sessions or the recollection of the Committee was that a special session would have to be limited in the call, that is, as to the subject matter; but we didn't attempt to change it and in substance, as it stands now, the governor can call it and limit the subjects which are to be discussed by it.

V. RIVERS: That answers my question, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I wonder if I may direct a question to Mr. McLaughlin? My question is with reference to Section 21 and I believe I shall direct it to you as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee rather than Style and Drafting because I believe it involves what I believe is a substantive change necessary in Section 21. On lines 13, 14, and 15, etc., do you recall in the discussion of the Judiciary Committee whether or not it was the belief of the Committee that the first court system should be set up before the chief justice of the supreme court was appointed and seated?

MCLAUGHLIN: My recollection of that is so, and in fact Mr. White has asked me several times whether or not we were prepared to propose an amendment making sure that the superior court, the vacancies then existing, should be filled. The first vacancy should be filled and vacancies on the supreme court filled before the chief justice is authorized to cast a vote, that is, participate in the proceedings of the judicial council. That is my recollection and, if you propose it, as I know you are, as an individual, it will be a substantive change.

JOHNSON: Well, I am prepared to propose such an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, the transitional measures with regard to the election of the state senators and representatives, Mr. McLaughlin, my mind is hazy on those. Are they somewhere else in the constitution?

MCLAUGHLIN: Those, Mr. Hellenthal, were knocked out because they appear in the article on apportionment.

HELLENTHAL: Will they later be inserted in these transitional measures?

MCLAUGHLIN: They will be, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: That will come before us again as a supplement?

MCLAUGHLIN: That won't be necessary, will it, Mr. Sundborg, because of the fact it has been adopted?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, our rules provide that after all of the articles, schedules, etc., have been adopted separately, that they are referred to the Style and Drafting Committee who shall arrange them according to an order which it suggests to the Convention and then all of that material, that is, the finished constitution as we suggest it as to order will be brought back before the Convention and the Convention will pass upon our suggestions as to the arrangement before adopting the constitution as a whole.

HELLENTHAL: That answers my question. One more I notice on the last page -- it's extremely minor but style has been departed from there in referring to the applicable "acts of congress" and the "A" in "Acts should be capitalized and the word Congress" should begin with a capital "C", I should think.

V. RIVERS: I have one further question, Mr. President, and I would direct it through the Chair, and that is in the first two lines, "To provide an orderly transition from a territorial to a state form of government, it is declared and ordained..." I notice that is somewhat different from some of the words that have been used in that similar clause in other state constitutions and I wonder if that follows now the wording that we originally acted upon, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: No, the wording that we originally acted upon, Mr. Rivers, the original preamble if you want to call it that, read "that no inconvenience may result because of change from a territorial to a state form of government, it is declared and ordained..." We substituted "To provide an orderly transition from a territorial to a state form of government..." It was not the belief of the Committee that that was a substantive change and it was concurred in by the Committee on Ordinances and Transitional Measures through its Chairman, Mr. McNealy.

V. RIVERS: I notice there is considerable change and I cite from Oklahoma in that matter. "In order that no inconvenience may arise by reason of a change from the forms of government now existing in Indian territory and in the Territory of Oklahoma, it is hereby declared as follows." I am wondering as to the interpretation of this wording here now. You feel that the Ordinance Committee has said there was no substantive change -- is that correct?

MCLAUGHLIN: That is my understanding: if Mr. McNealy desires. to contradict me. We kept it in, incidentally, in the preamble because Mr. McNealy said it was essential under the decisions of many courts; it would be helpful to have it in there, that is, the preamble itself. Mr. McNealy might be able to answer whether or not the Committee completely concurs.

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask Mr. McNealy what his opinion is in relation to the present preamble in regards to the one originally brought in by his Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Rather early in the proceedings here, the Ordinance Committee thought we would have that matter come up before Style and Drafting and they didn't want to use the double negative, but we, however, probably would have preferred to keep the old language in but in checking up on it, I liked the words "that no inconvenience" and it was the same wording as other constitutions, as used by other courts, but in the checking up we did we found no indication but that the words "to provide for an orderly transition" were substantially the same as the use of the word "inconvenience".

V. RIVERS: And there have been legal interpretations of the other wording, is that correct?

MCNEALY: The other wording as occurred originally, of course, has been determined many, many times by the courts. The purpose behind it though, if the President will permit, that so no inconvenience may result, it conveyed, in effect, the words that it would provide then for orderly transition. I don't believe necessarily that this present wording would be subject to any other interpretation.

V. RIVERS: You think the words "orderly transition" essentially mean the same as "no inconvenience"?

MCNEALY: That was the opinion of the Ordinance Committee.

V. RIVERS: Do you think the words "declared and ordained" mean the same thing as "declared"?

MCLAUGHLIN: If I may interrupt, "declared and ordained" is identical. We are using the identical language from the enrolled copy.

V. RIVERS: I wanted the record to show his answer on that "declared and ordained", Mr. McLaughlin.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, we felt that it was necessary to include the words "declared and ordained" because those have been specifically passed upon.

V. RIVERS: They have been interpreted?

MCNEALY: Which, in effect, makes all of the provisions of the schedule as ordinances. The words "transitional measures" have been used in some of the court decisions but only in referring to ordinances and in this manner, just in a byline, they might mention an ordinance as a transitional measure, and we felt we were much safer to keep the thought of ordinances in the foreground, and transitional measures as sort of a secondary interpretation.

V. RIVERS: It is true, is it, that transitional measures, ordinances, and schedules have all been interpreted to mean the same thing legally?

MCNEALY: That is substantially true. The use of the words "transitional measures" is one interpretation of an ordinance, but it is not so all-inclusive as the word "ordinance".

V. RIVERS: "Schedule" -- what about that?

MCNEALY: The words "schedules and ordinances" have been, Mr. President, connected together in a majority of the court decisions on matters arising under the schedules of constitutions. Its a very fixed meaning in the decisions of the court.

V. RIVERS: That answers my question for the moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to be directed to the Committee in relation to Sections 1 through 24? Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, for the information of the Convention, Section 23 and Section 24 -- in the copies before you, Section 23 is taken from Section 26 which was Proposal 17/c, of the second revision, and Section 24 was taken from Section 27, which was the proposal in 17/c, second revision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to Mr. McLaughlin? If not, does the Committee have any proposed amendments? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we will have an amendment to, I believe, Section 11, and I believe we are pretty well agreed on what it will be, but if we could have a five-minute recess so that Style and Drafting Committee could meet, I believe we could present that to you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. It is the feeling of the Chair, if it is agreeable to the delegates, that we might proceed with this ordinance and complete it.

SUNDBORG: And then adjourn for the day?

PRESIDENT EGAN: And then adjourn for the day if that would be the wish of the body. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee has agreed on some language it wants to submit in the form of an amendment to Section 11. It contains several sentences and we have sent it upstairs to be mimeographed. We would be perfectly willing to submit that, since it is a matter of substance, after our report as a whole has been accepted, and along with any other amendments as to substance, so we would like now to know if there are any other suggested amendments or questions as to phraseology, and then I will move the acceptance of our report and get on to amendments as to substance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other questions or proposed amendments as to phraseology to be offered? Mr. Londborg?

LONDBORG: Did Style and Drafting Committee work on that one sentence that Mr. Barr mentioned? I surely can't make it out.

SUNDBORG: We will.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? If not -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee as to the first 24 sections of Article XIV, Schedule, be accepted and that the amendments therein be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee as to the first 24 sections of Article XIV, Schedule, be accepted and that the amendments therein be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I rise for a momentary objection and I, the other day, under the resolutions tried to submit an amendment for an additional section. At that time I was told that it should be placed in ordinances, as you recall. I still have that amendment; I submitted it to the Ordinance Committee and I haven't heard any further report on it. It's a separability clause which I mentioned previously.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I hadn't risen because Mr. Sundborg asked only as to style and drafting matters. Just a few minutes ago an amendment proposing eight lines of substance and also Mr. Rivers' amendment was presented to the Committee and I think on both of those it is going to -
- the one came up just the last few minutes, and I think the Committee should pass on it.

V. RIVERS: If this is not the right time, I will withhold my request then, but when I submitted this I understood the article I submitted it on was in second reading. Was that correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was the situation?

V. RIVERS: I will withhold that question and we can look it up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Sundborg's unanimous consent for acceptance and adoption? If not, the first 24 sections of the report of the Style and Drafting Committee is ordered accepted and the amendments contained therein are ordered adopted. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, if it is in order, I have an amendment as to substance regarding Section 21. I move that the rules be suspended for the purpose of submitting a specific amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you state the amendment, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: The Chief Clerk has it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment that would be offered.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 21, page 7, line 13, after the first 'the', add 'superior court and the'; line 14, strike the word 'once' and insert the following: 'After the initial vacancies on the superior and supreme court are filled'; line 15, strike the comma and insert the word 'and'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that he might offer this amendment. Is there objection to the suspension of the rules? The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment before the rules are suspended.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment by Mr. Johnson again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the rules be suspended. Is there objection?

DAVIS: I haven't got all of that down, would you mind repeating it.

(The Chief Clerk then read the amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read, beginning at the comma on line 11, how that would read then.

CHIEF CLERK: "The six members so appointed shall, in accordance with Section 5 of Article IV, submit to the governor nominations to fill the initial vacancies on the superior court and the supreme court including the office of chief justice. After the initial vacancies on the superior court and supreme court are filled, the chief justice is appointed and he shall assume his seat on the judicial council.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: May I ask a question of Mr. Johnson?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Johnson, does this improve the matter and to your way of thinking remove a situation that might otherwise be difficult?

JOHNSON: Yes, Mr. Rivers, it does.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, the Chair does not mean to interrupt, but is there objection to the suspension of the rules? Hearing no objection, the rules are ordered suspended. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I now move that the amendment be adopted as read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves the amendment be adopted as read.

ROBERTSON: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Robertson. Is there objection to it?

DAVIS: I would like to have Mr. Johnson explain what he has in mind here and why he thinks this is desirable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Well, during discussions of this matter in the Judiciary Committee, the question came up on a number of occasions as to whether or not, in setting up the first court, the superior and the supreme court, with the chief justice a member of the judicial council and voting on the appointments or the nominations of members on the superior and supreme courts. that he might, if he were appointed first and sat in his capacity as a member of the judicial council and did vote on nominations presented, that it might create a situation where some of the judges of the superior court and justices of the supreme court might be obligated to him in some way; and in order to obviate any chance of that situation arising, we felt, I have felt all along, that something like this should be inserted in this transitory provision in order that all of the vacancies on the superior court shall be filled by the first six members appointed to the judicial council, and also the two vacancies on the supreme court other than the chief justice could be filled, and then the appointment of the chief justice made and he then take his seat on the judicial council. In that way, the entire initial court system would be set up without the chief justice having participated in any way either in the appointments or the selection of the members of the bench, freeing the chief justice and the members themselves of any possible political or other obligations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: If I may ask Mr. Johnson a question. Doesn't this make it twice as likely that the six-man board will become deadlocked?

JOHNSON: I don't believe so.

HELLENTHAL: You don't think the three attorney members will square off against the three nonattorney members?

JOHNSON: No, I do not.

HELLENTHAL: Like the ESC?

JOHNSON: No, I really don't. I don't think that is a problem at all. Does that answer your question?

HELLENTHAL: That will, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Johnson?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may. Mr. White.

WHITE: As you know, Mr. Johnson, I have been very much interested in some correction here, too, all along. The only problem I see with your amendment is one that was pointed out to me by Mr. McLaughlin, I think, sometime ago, and that is with two or more nominations for the chief justice having to go to the governor eventually, it means that the judicial council will have to save out from selection on the initial court system at least two names, and presumably they should be the two best names available, and with all the other positions filled first, it means that one of those two best candidates will not be eligible to fill any initial vacancy in the entire court system. Do you think that your amendment to correct the problem that might arise transcends the difficulty that I pointed out here?

JOHNSON: I believe that is a matter of a practical application of the system and if the judicial council goes ahead and attempts to fill these vacancies, certainly they are going to screen the entire Bar Association in Alaska and right now I understand we have about 125 or 150 members, so I see no real objection to the amendment on that basis, because I am quite sure the first judicial council will do everything they can to get the best men and will save back two of the best for the chief justice position.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I request a half-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for 30 seconds.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have a parliamentary inquiry. Under this suspension of the rules, will it be permissible to offer a slight amendment to the amendment or must I --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Under the manner in which we have been proceeding, Mr. Johnson, no. But by unanimous consent, of course, which would be a further suspension of the rules, if there is no objection, it would be possible because it would be a further suspension of the rules for that purpose, to offer an amendment. If there would be no objection to offering a further amendment, by unanimous consent, we could allow you to do so.

JOHNSON: Then, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to suspend the rules for the purpose of offering an amendment to the amendment that is now before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for suspension of the rules? Would you state what the proposed amendment would be to the amendment, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, the present amendment which is on the Chief Clerk's desk says, "line 15, strike the comma and insert the word 'and'". In lieu of that, in line 15, I would ask to change the original amendment by striking the words "is appointed, he", so that the sentence then would read beginning on line 14 : "After the initial vacancies in the superior and supreme courts are filled the chief justice shall assume his seat on the judicial council."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for suspension of the rules in order that Mr. Johnson may offer the amendment to the amendment? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended for that purpose.

JOHNSON: I move that the original amendment now be amended so that in line 15 the words "is appointed, he" are stricken from line 15.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent for adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Now I ask that the amendment as amended be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson asks unanimous consent that the amendment as amended be adopted. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would appreciate having it read in its entirety as it now reads.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that sentence again, please.

CHIEF CLERK: Starting on line 9, "The six members so appointed shall, in accordance with Section 5 of Article IV, submit to the governor nominations to fill the initial vacancies on the superior and the supreme court, including the office of chief justice. After the initial vacancies on the superior and supreme court are filled the chief justice shall assume his seat on the judicial council."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adoption of the amendment as amended?

KILCHER: A question, Mr. President. Mr. Johnson, shouldn't you possibly have said in the beginning of your amendment "the initial vacancies on the superior courts and supreme court"? Both courts are in the singular there. Is that correct in accordance with our judicial article?

JOHNSON: Well, I thought that later the Style and Drafting Committee could correct the variance between the original article and this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment as amended? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to hear from Mr. McLaughlin as to what he thinks about it as to the standpoint of the Judiciary Committee.

MCLAUGHLIN: I think we discussed this in the Judiciary Committee and we added various interpretations on the floor. I personally believe that it is a good amendment because it prevents this situation from arising. As it stood, if the judicial council is formed and they submit names to the governor for all the superior court judges and all the supreme court judges, the first thing a wise governor might do would be to designate the chief justice immediately. Then he would have a weighted council where he had two appointees plus a chief justice who had been appointed by him and he could repudiate all other nominations and then he would have control of the judicial council. The net effect of it would be that most of the appointments on the superior and the supreme court bench would be determined by the chief justice designated by the governor, and the only way you could possibly avoid it would be to designate all your superior court judges first and then designate your supreme court judges, but there is a possibility that you would have exhausted all your good men. Your best man whom you desired as chief justice might be repudiated at the last by the governor. So, under those circumstances, we feel that this is the adequate solution for those first appointments; that is, there would be little likelihood of a complete control by the chief justice, or indirectly, by the governor. I believe it is a good amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

SUNDBORG: May I direct a question to Mr. McLaughlin? Mr. McLaughlin, as I read it, as it would be after being amended, the eventuality that Mr. White assumed here, or suggested, would not arise? Do you agree with me?

MCLAUGHLIN: No, it would not, and I believe that Mr. White is quite happy now about the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the amendment, as amended? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the amendment as amended has been adopted. At this time the Chair does not recollect having referred the Committee Proposal No. 17/a as it was reported out of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to the Style and Drafting Committee. That Proposal No. 17/a is referred to the Style and Drafting Committee. Are there other amendments for this proposal? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting has a substantive amendment. I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended to permit the Committee on Style and Drafting to offer an amendment, the text of which has been placed on the desk of each delegate. It's an amendment to Section 11.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that this proposed amendment might be offered. The Chair might state at this time, too, that perhaps it would not be in order to leave here without eating. Undoubtedly the people upstairs have prepared lunch for the delegates and it would not be a very good move to leave without having eaten. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, was unanimous consent given to suspend the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the suspension of the rules? Hearing no objection the rules are ordered suspended. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I now offer the amendment. The Chief Clerk has a copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 11, page 3, line 14, strike 'in substance' and all of line 15, and insert: 'will be separate from the ballot on which candidates in the primary election are listed. Each of the propositions offered by the Alaska Constitutional Convention shall be set forth separately, but on the same ballot form. The first proposition shall be as follows: '"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, what is your pleasure?

SUNDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the amendment and asks unanimous consent. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I move the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30. Is there objection? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I object.

BARR: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Barr that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30. Are there Committee announcements to be made if we do recess? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: In the event of recess the Ordinance Committee will meet immediately upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In the event of recess the Ordinance Committee will meet immediately upon recess. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Style and Drafting Committee has nothing further for the Committee to work on. It might be there is some other work that some of the other committees want to do at 1:30. It was my thought that we would adjourn now until tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 1:30? All those in favor of recessing until 1:30 will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. Are there other proposed amendments for this proposal, Article XIV? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If there are no other amendments, I ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that the first 24 sections of Article XIV, Schedule, be advanced to third reading, be read by title only, and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended as to the first 24 sections of Article XIV, the schedule, that those sections be advanced to third reading, read the third time by title only, and placed on final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended and the first 24 sections of Article XIV, the schedule, are now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will please read the title.

CHIEF CLERK: "Resolved, that the following be agreed upon as part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution. Article XIV, Schedule, Sections 1 through 24."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any discussion? The Convention will come to order. Is there any discussion with relation to these 24 sections? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I believe it is the opinion of all of the members here that in adopting these ordinances and transitory provisions under the title "Schedule" that they are all subject to being self-executed and finishing themselves off in that manner, or subject to change by law, meaning either the legislature or the initiative. Is that correct in your opinion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be the opinion of the Chair with relation to the interpretations given on the floor, yes, Mr. Victor Rivers. Is there further discussion? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I do not believe the Chair correctly stated the question. You used the phraseology appearing above which has been corrected by new rules, has it not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Johnson, you mean in advancing this article?

JOHNSON: Yes, you stated that the question before us, as I understood you, was: "Resolved, that the following be agreed upon as a part of the Alaska State Constitution."

PRESIDENT EGAN: I hadn't stated that yet, Mr. Johnson. We haven't put the question because it is still open for discussion if any delegate wishes to discuss the article.

JOHNSON: I beg your pardon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any discussion? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If I may comment on the question addressed to the Chair a few moments ago by Mr. Rivers, he asked you, as I recall it, sort of a double-barreled question. First of all, are these provisions self-executing, and then, are they subject to being changed by the legislature? I think you answered that it was your understanding that it was "yes" on both counts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: They are self-executing. It is the opinion of the Chair that they are self-executing, Mr. Sundborg, and they are subject to change by the legislature wherever any provision by law is made in a section.

SUNDBORG: In the section itself?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes. It would be the opinion of the Chair in answering that, that they are not bound by the constitutional provisions forever as the provisions in the constitution are. That was the intent of the Chair in answering the question. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, as I recall it the question was to this effect: Did not the body feel this situation as described by Mr. Rivers to exist, and I think it should be pointed out that the Chair in replying said, "in the opinion of the Chair", and that is as far as it has gone.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the first 24 sections of Article XIV, the schedule, be agreed upon as part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 51 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fisher, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 2 - Laws, Robertson.

Absent: 2 - Peratrovich, R. Rivers.)

CHIEF CLERK: 51 yeas, 2 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the first 24 sections of Article XIV have been agreed upon as part of the schedule appended to the Alaska State Constitution.

JOHNSON: What was the result again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: 51 yeas, 2 nays and 2 absent. At this time the Chair would like to remind the delegates that we have accepted an invitation of the History Class of the University to have our coffee with them tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I now move we adjourn, subject to committee announcements, until 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves that the Convention stand adjourned, subject to committee announcements, until 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: On the dollar apiece that we collected the other day for the "cokes" and that stuff, we will declare a dividend of $15.80 and that probably will be at the Oasis of the Traveler's Inn on Saturday night, should there be an entertainment or a general clambake there.

HERMANN: I move we apply it to our senators' salaries. (Laughter)

DAVIS: Mr. President, this is not a committee announcement but I would like to know what this paper is that is going around here.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: The paper is for delegates' signatures to be used on souvenir tablecloths.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to ask: Do you write "tablecloth" every time you sign your signature under it? (Laughter) Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Committee on Administration will meet at 5:00 o'clock in Apartment 1012 of the Polaris Building, this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Administration at 5:00 o'clock this evening in Apartment 1012 of the Polaris Building. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the Committee on Ordinances will meet in the gallery immediately upon adjournment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Ordinances will meet in the gallery immediately upon adjournment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Committee on Style and Drafting will meet in one of the large committee rooms upstairs at 1:30 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting Committee in one of the large committee rooms upstairs at 1:30 o'clock. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: For the information of the delegates, there are more invitations on hand upstairs in the message center room and if anyone has requested them, they can pick them up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no other committee announcements and if there is no objection, the Convention stands adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

February 2, 1956

SEVENTY-SECOND DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us today Reverend Powers of the Totem Park Church of the Nazarene. Reverend Powers will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND POWERS: Our Heavenly Father, once again we come to the meeting at this time; once again we come in the name of good government. We pray at this time that Thou will give our delegates guidance from Heaven; that Thou will give them the necessary help from above that we might have a good constitution. We thank Thee for the work they have done in these past months. We pray that Thy blessings will be upon them, and may we have a state, Lord, that will lift up God and the things that are of righteousness. Be with us at this time. Bless every family that is represented. In Thy name we ask it. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: 2 absent. Mr. Taylor is ill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with the regular order of business. The Chair would like to announce at this time that we are very pleased to have with us today the eighth grade class of Main School of the Fairbanks public schools. We regret that the loud speaker system has been taken out of the gallery in order to facilitate plans for the signing ceremony on Sunday, and we hope that it will be possible that the people in the gallery can somewhat understand what is taking place here on the floor this afternoon. Mr. Lee.

LEE: At this time I would like to have the privilege of introducing an eminent legislator from the first division, Mr. Ed Locken of Petersburg, in the gallery. (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair and delegates are happy that Mr. Locken has seen fit to come all the way from Petersburg to Fairbanks, Alaska, to witness the Constitution of the State of Alaska in the making. Mr. Locken, we are happy to have you with us. Does the special committee to read the Journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White.

WHITE: No report at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That report will be held in abeyance. Are there reports of standing committees? The Chief Clerk will proceed with the reading of communications.

(The Chief Clerk read the following communications: Telegrams from Senator Warren G. Magnuson and Hon. Samuel W. King, Governor of Hawaii, expressing regrets at not being able to attend the signing ceremony; letters from Governor J. Bracken Lee of Utah, Governor Charles H. Russel of Nevada, Governor Lane Dwinell of New Hampshire, Governor Phil M. Donnelly of Missouri, Governor G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, Douglas Fisher, Executive Counsel for Governor Frank Clement of Tennessee, and Phillip T. Drotning, Executive Secretary for Governor Walter J. Kohler of Wisconsin expressing regrets at not being able to attend the signing of the constitution. The communications were ordered filed. A letter from Delegate E. L. Bartlett expressing gratitude for the invitation and regrets at not being able to attend was also read and ordered filed. A letter from Ancil H. Payne, President of Operation Statehood of Anchorage, endorsing the Tennessee Plan was read and ordered filed. A telegram from Walter J. Hickel and Alex Miller, Republican and Democratic National Committeemen, inviting the delegates to a no-host dinner Saturday evening at the Travelers Inn was read.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communications will be filed. The Chair has just been handed a note in which it is stated that the matters on the floor cannot be heard at all in the gallery, and if there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there reports of standing committees? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, in the absence of Mr. Sundborg, the chairman, and on behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee, I would like at this time to introduce a Style and Drafting Report concerning Article XIV, Section 26 of the Schedule. That has to do with the Fish Trap Ordinance. I also would like to report the Style and Drafting Report on Section 14 of Article XII, General and Miscellaneous. Now on the calendar as set up, Section 14 of Article XII is listed as the second order of business. Due to a matter which has come up since noon, I would like to request that consideration of that matter be held over until after the second reading of Ordinance 17/Z. We may or may not be ready to take it up later this afternoon, to take up this Section 14.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the Style and Drafting Committee's Report on Article XIV, Section 26.

(The Chief Clerk read the report as requested.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, do you have a report to make on the work that the Style and Drafting Committee has done on this?

DAVIS: Mr. President, on behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee, I would like to call on Mr. Fischer to make explanations and to answer such questions as there may be on this article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee made no substantive changes in the rewrite of Section 26. The format has been somewhat changed since the enrolled copy was before you. The Committee has made this uniform with the other ordinances that will be coming up before the voters; in other words, stating the proposition first and then what the result of it will be. We have designated in the whole of the ordinance itself, in the proposition, we have numbered it Ordinance No. 3, with the adoption of the constitution being Ordinance No. 1, and the Alaska-Tennessee Plan being Ordinance No. 2, and Fish Traps being Ordinance No. 3. You will also note that in the proposition itself we have inserted the words on line 3, "in the coastal waters of the state". That is not a substantive change. It puts it in line with the ordaining clause. The purpose of this was to make sure that no one who votes on this particular proposition does so with the impression that this will automatically abolish fish traps, even before we become a state. It's just a matter of clarification. Otherwise, Mr. President, the resolution -- the section is the same as before.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions to be directed to Mr. Fischer with relation to the work the Style and Drafting Committee has done on this section? If there is no question -- Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: If there are no questions, Mr. President, I move at this time that the Style and Drafting Report on Section 26 of Article XIV may be accepted. There were no changes so I won't ask for any adoption of changes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to Article XIV, the Schedule, Section 26, be accepted by the Convention. Is there objection?

ROBERTSON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson objects. Mr. Davis, do you so move?

DAVIS: I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Knight, that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted by the Convention. Is there discussion? If there is no discussion, the question is: "Shall the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting with reference to Article XIV, Schedule, Section 26, be accepted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 50 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew,

Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 3 - Laws, Reader, Robertson.

Absent: 2 - Sundborg, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 50 yeas, 3 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the report has been accepted by the Convention. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: At this time, Mr. President, I would move that the rules be suspended, that Section 26 of Article XIV be advanced to third reading, and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves and asks unanimous consent -- or did you, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I forgot to ask that it be read by title only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: -- that the rules be suspended as to Section 26 of Article XIV, Schedule, that it be advanced to third reading, read by title only, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended and Section 26 of Article XIV of the schedule is now before us in third reading. The Chief Clerk will please read the title of the matter before us.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article XIV, Schedule, Section 26, ordinance to abolish fish traps."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The section is now before us and open for debate. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, my remarks will be very few and in consequent with my statement on the floor of the Convention a few days ago. In my opinion this schedule is penal in nature; it is legislative in nature; it's based upon fallacious premises; it violates the first policy resolution adopted by the Convention, that our constitution should consist of a framework of government and not of legislative law; and I think it does a disservice to the people of Alaska and to the industry of Alaska; and I shall vote "no" against the adoption of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the previous question. Is there a second?

POULSEN: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "noes" have it and the previous question has not been ordered. Is there further discussion or debate? If not, the question is: "Shall Section 26 of Article XIV, the schedule, be agreed upon as a part of the schedule appended to the Alaska state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Ayes: 46 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 7 - Boswell, Johnson, Laws, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson.

Absent: 2 - Sundborg, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 46 yeas, 7 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and Section 26 of Article XIV, the schedule, has been agreed upon as a part of the schedule appended to the Alaska state constitution. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: In accordance with what I said a while ago, I would ask that you pass Section 14 of Article XII at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will pass that. At this time the Chair would like to bring to the attention of the delegates that we have this invitation from Mr. Hickel and Mr. Miller requesting that the delegates be their guests at the Travelers' Inn on Saturday evening, and of course we should dispose of that in one manner or another. The delegates should decide whether or not they wish to attend the invitation, inasmuch as Saturday is not far off and the Chair would -- Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move that the invitation be accepted.

R. RIVERS: Point of clarification. That was a no-host invitation?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Rivers.

RIVERS: They did not indicate what hour we were to be there for dinner, but I think if a few did not show up it is not strictly the kind of an invitation that you are obligated to no-host yourself at. Now I intend to go and pay for my own dinner, and appreciate their organizing the affair, but I am not sure that this is just a straight-across social invitation that we have to all accept and bind ourselves to. I think we ought to have a show of hands, though, as to how many intend to go.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was there a second to Mr. Hellenthal's motion?

HILSCHER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Hilscher. Is there a discussion of the matter?

HILSCHER: To help out this matter, it was the thought that we might pass around a piece of paper to see who would like to attend that evening. Would that be satisfactory?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, could that be done at the recess, Mr. Hilscher, this afternoon, the 3:30 recess? The Chair would also like to remind the delegates that the delegates are to be the guests of the history class of the University at coffee time at 3:30 this afternoon upstairs in the cafeteria. Dr. Patty also would like to know how many delegates and their wives will be present Sunday evening at the buffet supper upstairs, and perhaps that could be accomplished some time later this afternoon by having a sheet prepared in which the delegates might signify whether they will be present. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Could inquiry be made by some of the secretaries for us to determine if this dinner is, in fact, a no-host dinner? I would assume from the invitation that the contrary was true.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It said in the invitation, Mr. Hellenthal, that it was a no-host dinner. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: In view of the President's statement a few days ago that we probably would work all night Saturday, I just wondered if he would like to amend that before we decide.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mrs. Hermann, at that time it appeared that we definitely would very likely be working Saturday night. At the present time, unless there are delegates who feel to the contrary, it does not appear that it will be necessary for the Convention to be convened on Saturday evening, and it seems, then, that it is the desire of the delegates -- is that correct -- that we do accept the no-host invitation? Of course, as Mr. Ralph Rivers said, on the no-host invitation it is up to the delegates whether they can attend and we will at some time later in the day have each delegate indicate as to whether or not he will attend on Saturday evening. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I was wondering if you have any idea what time this signing ceremony will be over and how much time will be left Sunday evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris, it probably in every likelihood would be before 4:00 in the afternoon. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The Committee on Administration figures that the signing ceremony will take about an hour and a half to two hours, and it was the feeling of the Committee that we would recommend to the Convention that, upon the adjourning over at the signing ceremony, that we group here at the Convention hall in plenary session and sign the remaining copies, and we will have a report tomorrow for you on the full proceedings for the consideration of the Convention. However, we had held Sunday afternoon after the signing ceremony we would sign the remaining copies of the constitution in this hall.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Another question that has to be definitely decided -- there was a motion the other evening, as the Chair recalls it, that we actually approve the document in its final form here, and then go over for the signing. Now, many delegates have made the question since that time as to just what we have decided to do, or will decide to do, in relation to that matter. The secretary would like to know for certain in order that the programs can be sent to the printer this afternoon for printing. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, if this is the time to take that up, I have a motion prepared to bring the issue before us in terms in which we can decide. Now I went back to the record yesterday and got the motion as offered by Mr. Hurley and amended by Mr. Victor Rivers and passed by this body, and it appears to kind of leave the question up in the air. The motion was that final reading and vote on the constitution for the State of Alaska take place in this hall on or before Saturday, amended by Mr. Rivers to read that the constitution would be read by title and preamble prior to signing. In that motion there was nothing definite about taking the final vote over in the gymnasium. If it is the wish of the body, Mr. President, I would like to move that we rescind our action on that motion in order to offer another one. Would it be in order to read the one I wanted to submit if we rescind the action?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be in order, Mr. White, in order to allow the delegates to know what the subject is going to be -- brought before us if the action is rescinded.

WHITE: Mr. President, the motion to be submitted if the action is rescinded on the previous motion is as follows: that it be the policy of the Convention to have final reading, debate, and amendment of the constitution in this hall at such time prior to 2:00 p.m., February 5, as the Convention may decide. We then move and vote upon the calling of the previous question, and that following this vote, the Convention adjourn until 2:00 p.m., February 5, at which time the final roll call vote will be taken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, in that motion did you intend that the motion mean that the final draft of the constitution would have been advanced to third reading and then open for debate, that the debate be completed here, and then the motion for the previous question be made, and to hold over until the question be put at the gymnasium? "Shall the final draft of the Constitution of the State of Alaska be adopted?"

WHITE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the motion does not state that it be in the position in third reading, if that was your intention. Will the Chief Clerk please read the motion as Mr. White would offer it.

CHIEF CLERK: "That it be the policy of the Convention to have final reading, debate, and amendment of the constitution in this hall at such time prior to 2:00 p.m., February 5, as the Convention may decide; to then move and vote upon the calling of the previous question and that, following this vote, the Convention adjourn until 2:00 p.m., February 5, at which time the final roll call vote will be taken."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Those two words would probably clarify the matter. Do you move, Mr. White, that the Convention rescind its action in adopting the policy motion that was adopted the other evening?

WHITE: I do. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

R. RIVERS: I'll second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Ralph Rivers that the Convention rescind

F. FISCHER: I'll ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the previous action with relation to this policy be rescinded. Is there objection?

LONDBORG: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll. It will take 28 votes to rescind the action.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 52 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew,

Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 1 - Londborg.

Absent: 2 - Sundborg, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 52 yeas, 1 nay, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it, and the action has been rescinded. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the motion that is now on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

R. RIVERS: I'll second it.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to change the word "adjourn" in that motion to "recess".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that the word "adjourn" in the motion be changed to read "recess" and, in order to clarify that matter, undoubtedly this proposed amendment is offered because it might be necessary that that time might be made known to us that it wouldn't be wise to adjourn. We might just recess until 8:00 Monday morning in order to be certain that we have accomplished everything. Well, Yes, Mr. Victor Rivers, you had the same identical opinion as to the motion that the Chair had, but it refers to the adjournment on Saturday until 2:00 p.m. on February 5, so it would not interfere with the other final adjournment.

V. RIVERS: I will withdraw.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the motion be adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that the motion be adopted as a policy of the Convention. Is there objection? Mr. Ralph Rivers seconded the motion; it was the understanding of the Chair that Mr. Victor Rivers asked unanimous consent with the one change ordered. Is there objection? Would you please read the motion again?

CHIEF CLERK: "That it be the policy of the Convention to have final reading, debate, and amendment of the constitution in this hall at such time prior to 2:00 p.m., February 5, as the Convention may decide; to then move and vote upon the calling of the previous question and that, following this vote, the Convention adjourn until 2:00 p.m., February 5, at which time the final roll call vote will be taken."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, the Chair feels -- unanimous consent is asked. Is there objection?

COGHILL: May I request a two-minute recess before the vote is taken?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there objection to adopting the motion as made by Mr. White as a matter of policy? Hearing no objection, the motion has been adopted. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee is now ready to go ahead with Section 14 of Article XII.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk will read the Style and Drafting Committee's report of Section 14, Article XII.

(The Chief Clerk read the Committee's report in full.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, do you have a report to make at this time?

DAVIS: Yes, Mr. President. The delegates will remember that the two pending enabling acts, one for the House and one for the Senate, require the insertion of language in the constitution concerning lands held and owned by the United States and lands held and owned by the United States for the trust and benefit of Native Alaskans, and concerning taxing of such lands, both the lands of the United States and the lands of the Native Alaskans. We ran into several problems there. In the first place, the section in either of the proposed bills is quite lengthy and actually rather confusing. In the second place, the House bill differs quite seriously from the Senate bill and of course we have no way of knowing which one might finally be adopted. In reading both of the proposed bills, we find that there is no suggestion that we follow the exact language they have used. But they are each quite specific that certain thoughts shall be included in the Alaska state constitution. With all of those things in mind, we took the two bills and broke them down as to what they said, and the rewrite which we have here, we believe, includes all of the salient points in both bills in language that we believe is understandable to everybody concerned, and for that reason, we believe that the Section 14, which we present here, will meet the requirements of either bill if it were to be passed. At this time, then, I will attempt to answer such questions as there may be and, since I didn't personally do the job on this, if there are other questions, I will pass them over to Mr. Fischer who did most of the work on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to Mr. Davis? Does any delegate have a question? If not, Mr. Davis --

DAVIS: If not, well, at this time, then, I will move that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee on Section 14 of Article XII be accepted. There were no changes made in that report. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent that the Style and Drafting Committee's report as to Section 14, Article XII, the general and miscellaneous provisions, be accepted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

EMBERG: Objection

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Emborg.

EMBERG: This came a little quickly and I haven't been able to find the draft here that I was going to compare this with, but I do notice one thing, that in the previous draft that we have had before us, there was a reference to the property rights and also the inclusion of fishing rights. I would like a few minutes of recess.

DAVIS: I think it would be wise to take a recess. We want everybody to be sure that everything is in here. I might state for Mr. Emborg's benefit that we are satisfied that the general word "property" we have here also includes the fishing rights, but we want to be certain that we get everything in here that the Congress has required.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Davis has asked unanimous consent that the rules be -- Mr. Emborg.

EMBERG: I will withdraw my objection I have made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emborg withdraws his objection. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Emborg has withdrawn, but there are other delegates who feel that it should be in there and certainly we don't want any mistake on it, so we would like at this time to offer a Committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you withdraw your unanimous consent request at this time?

DAVIS: Yes, at this time. On line 8, after "property", insert "including fishing rights".

PRESIDENT EGAN: That could be interpreted as a phraseology change inasmuch as it is the opinion of the Committee that it means that, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: Incidentally, Mr. President, it has been called to my attention that this is more phraseology here. Actually, we have rewritten the whole section so when it comes time I will make a motion to include the changes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now as to this motion, Mr. Davis, it's merely a clarification clause that you are asking to be adopted.

DAVIS: I did not add the word "and". Does somebody want the word "and" in there?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the motion. Did you make it as a motion, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I did.

PRESIDENT EGAN: As made by Mr. Davis.

CHIEF CLERK: "on line 8, Section 14, insert after the word 'property' the words 'including fishing rights,'".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Metcalf.

DAVIS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

DAVIS: Now, Mr. President, on behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee, I would ask that the report of that Committee as to Section 14, Article XII, General and Miscellaneous Provisions, be adopted and the changes in the language be approved, and I ask unanimous consent for the adoption and approval.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves and asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee as to Section 14,

Article XII, the article on general and miscellaneous provisions, be accepted and the changes therein be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the report has been accepted and adopted.

DAVIS: Possibly later this day, Mr. President, we may ask that this be moved to third reading but at this time we want to hold it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk, then, at this time may read the report of the Committee as to the Ordinance No. 17/z.

(The Chief Clerk read the Committee's report dated February 2, 1956, in full.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Committee on Style and Drafting have an explanation? Are there amendments? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, point of order -- that was the first reading was it not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the Chief Clerk will then read it -- Mr. Riley, would you like to have this referred?

RILEY: I don't recall that it was done so formally. Was it by the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair had been of the understanding that the proposal had been previously offered and that the number had been changed. The Chair stands corrected. The proposal, then, is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar.

RILEY: I am sure it would be in order at this time to undertake second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The chairman of the Rules Committee asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that the Convention consider Committee Proposal No. 17/z in second reading at this time. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the Chief Clerk will read Committee Proposal No. 17/z for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk then read Committee Proposal No. 17/z for the second time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to be proposed for Section 30? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have an amendment which can be made orally because it is short. On line 9, the last word on the line, change the word "shall" to the word "may" on line 9. Oh! I am sorry, Section 31 is where I happen to be now. Are we taking it section by section?

HELLENTHAL: Point of order. We have never heard from the Committee on Section 31 or 32. I am very anxious to find out the thought that went into these.

R. RIVERS: I would like to withdraw my motion until we go through the preliminaries.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Committee chairman wish to make a report in relation to these sections of the proposal? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I can report in part and then that part I cannot furnish I am going to ask Mr. Hurley, the vice chairman of the Committee, who spent considerable time on this, possibly, to amplify it. Section 30 had been referred to the Committee by some of the delegates. The first paragraph of Section 30, the Committee felt that it would not mean a great deal, that if the Congress simply rejected a part of it, it would not impair the rest of it, but they still might send some ordinance or provision of the schedule back for the people to vote upon or possibly might even force a compromise. But if it were merely a matter of changing something in the schedule or some transitory provision thereof, that this body might like to go on record as trusting the legislature to make that change in order that it would not be necessary, then, for a Territorial wide referendum, or it would not be necessary to call another constitutional convention in the event that it was only affecting the schedule. The further thought was that in the event some material part might be required in the constitution -- that what would normally be in the constitution that Congress could go so far, if they wanted to be lenient about the matter, is to state that it could be changed and could be put into an ordinance provision here if there was some additional thought or requirement of Congress that we haven't seen in any of the enabling acts that have been before this body. As to Section 31, it wasn't in the committee room at the time that one was worked over. I would rather leave that to Mr. Hurley. As to Section 32 and a proposed Section 33, I might state that the purpose there is that we have adopted the Tennessee Plan and this appears that it gives a little stronger force to the plan. In effect, we haven't gone all the way through with the Tennessee Plan. As you all know, we have just provided for the senators and representative, but, in the event that in two years Congress had seen fit not to give us statehood, this would be sort of a directive to Congress of what the Territorial legislature might do. I use the word "might", certainly, and to provide for the officers and proclaim the date on which the constitution shall become effective. In conclusion, there has been a little laughter about the Proposal 17/z because we wanted that to be known as the last proposal, we trust, from the Ordinance Committee, and we didn't want to put in another proposed ordinance that, if we were not granted statehood within a period of two years, that a plebiscite should be made to the United Nations to declare us a sovereign nation. We thought that might be just a step too far and we had better close the ordinances at this point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to the chairman of the Committee? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I wonder if, as a substitute for Section 32, the Committee gave thought, perhaps, to providing for a hunger strike?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments for Section 30? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to hear from Mr. Hurley on Section 31.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, Section 31 was at one time in a similar form in the transitional measures which were offered by the Committee. I could never find out what happened to it, but on looking over the transitional ordinances that we had, it appeared that there were many gaps that could arise, and it was suggested by a number of people that some provision be made for giving the authority of the Constitutional Convention to the various people who might be in a position to facilitate the change-over from territorial to state government. Now, we recognize that we are in no position to point our finger at federal officials or territorial officials and say "you shall do this", but we also think that the acknowledgement of the importance of the transitional period is a desirable thing to include in our constitution. The wording that has been used here has been purposely kept broad and as to -- speaking a little closer to Mr. Rivers' question, he had reference undoubtedly as to whether it should be "shall take necessary action" or "may take necessary action". It is really rather immaterial to me, because we can't tell them to do it anyway, and whether or not they do will depend to a great extent on their own desire to cooperate, and that was the reason why it was included.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed amendments or questions to be directed to Mr. Hurley at this time? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: May I make some remarks on behalf of the Committee on Section 32?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may if you so desire.

HURLEY: Mr. Chairman, it is undoubtedly a feeling of general humor, there has been throughout in consideration of this proposal. I think that, if we stop to consider that we have spent some 3,725 man-days and $300,000 in writing a constitution for the State of Alaska, that we ought to give a little bit of consideration as to why we are doing it. We have adopted by a vote of some 53 or 52 to 2, or some tremendous majority, the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. We have said we want to become a state. We want to send two senators and a representative to represent us in the United States Congress, and then we have stopped. Then what are we going to do? The Tennessee Plan is doomed to failure if we don't send those people back there as representatives of the State of Alaska. If we send them back there as missionaries or as public relations agents, they are going to be completely ineffective. Unless we think in our own minds that we are a state, we will not be as effective. Who has the answer? What are we going to do if these people are not seated, if we don't become a state? Forget the whole thing? Or are we going to have another punch ready to pull if it is necessary? I don't think this is revolutionary; I think it is sensible. The idea isn't my own; the idea was unanimously passed in Committee. The proposal was made to us by a great many other people who feel the same way. I think we should give serious thought to the possibility that our first blow may not result in statehood. We should keep in the back of our minds what our next move is going to be, and I think this move would be very desirable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Hurley?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Hurley, when you first read this it sounded as though we were going to proclaim ourselves a state, but I see in the last four lines, the "legislature shall provide for the election of officers under this constitution and for proclaiming the date on which the constitution shall become effective". Does that mean that they might provide that the President of the United States shall proclaim Alaska to be a state, or what are you getting at there?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: In the first place, we have to recognize the same thing I said about Section 31, that we as -- the Convention has no authority to tell the Territorial legislature what do to at all. In the second place, what we had in mind particularly there was that the legislature would have authority, if they so desire, to provide for the election of officers of the state and, depending upon the timing, procedures, and the situation that existed at the time, to say, in effect, that upon election of the officers they shall operate under the constitution as prepared for the State of Alaska. It has nothing to do with the President of the United States.

R. RIVERS: Would the word "may" on line 15 --

HURLEY: To answer that question, wherever you want to put the word "may" in here, I am sure the Committee will have no objection.

R. RIVERS: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to be proposed for Section 30? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I move that the word "shall" on line 9 of that page be changed to "may", in Section 31.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves that the word "shall" on line 9 be changed to read "may". Is there a second to the motion?

MCNEALY: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. McNealy. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

MCCUTCHEON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

R. RIVERS: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It's been moved by Mr. Ralph Rivers, seconded by Mr. McNealy, that the amendment be adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, Mr. Hurley has put it clearly enough when he said that we can't point our fingers at federal officials and tell them they "shall" do something. Neither is the Territorial legislature under our thumbs so that we can point to them and say they "shall" do something. I think it is a good idea to have Section 31 and flag the point that we are going to have cooperation from both the federal officials and Territorial officials to attain an orderly transition, but I don't believe in the discourtesy, we will say, or the presumptuousness of saying "shall" when Mr. Hurley and Mr. McNealy and the Committee members apparently are entirely favorable to the word "may", and when we have no jurisdiction to say "shall", but where we do actually make a polite request when we say they "may" cooperate with us. Now I have reserved making a comparable motion to Section 32 because I don't want any compounding here. I want a good clear point. So now we are on Section 31 and that is where I'd like to see the word "shall" changed to "may".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I'm afraid I have to be at least slightly out of order here in making reference to the word "shall" in Section 32.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, we have before us the proposed amendment to Section 31.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I am aware of that in connection with the word "shall" in Section 31. The word "shall" in Section 31 has been alluded to the word "shall" in Section 32 by Mr. Rivers himself. He says he would refrain from mentioning it because it would be compound. I disagree that these two words "shall" could be compared at all in any way. In Section 31 the word "shall" expresses a mandate and should express a mandate. It is perfectly legitimate within the conventional language of other constitutions. It is an ordinary transitional measure. The transitional government, whatever it may be, has a duty to insure the orderly transition from one type of government to the other. It is not optional at all; it is mandatory. Whereas, in Section 32, this word "shall" could be argued. It is definitely a "may", but in Section 31 the word "shall" is mandatory. It means exactly what it says. It should stay.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I'd like to explain to Mr. Kilcher that this Convention was created by the Territorial legislature and they prescribed our duties and told us what we could and could not do. We cannot turn around and tell them what they can do. This section refers to the territorial and federal officials. We can't tell the federal people what to do and neither can our Territorial legislature because they come under the federal officials. Now it is true this constitution we are writing here is the basic law for the state. The state legislature will have to do what we say here, but not the Territorial legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would just like to say, with respect to Section 31, we should make it just as strong as we can, and I don't feel we are going too far in using the word "shall" here since it is modified by the word "necessary". As I read it, I read it to mean they shall take action which they deem necessary to insure the orderly transition. If it were necessary, they will take it; if it is not necessary in their judgment, and they are the only people who will have the judgment, they won't do it. I know the Territorial legislature, time and again, have told federal officials such as United States Commissioners, election officials, and so on that they should do certain things; they should register the property of everybody in Alaska that owns any property, and things of that kind. And they always do it even though they don't have to. So I would favor retaining "shall".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Sundborg, you are aware that the United States Commissioners act in a dual capacity? Sometimes they put on their federal cap, other times they put their Territorial cap on, and, if -- when they are acting in the Territorial sphere the legislature may properly tell them what to do.

SUNDBORG: May I address a question to Mr. Hellenthal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, if there is no objection.

SUNDBORG: Similarly, do the election officials in the general elections act for the Territory or are they always federal? Do they always wear only a federal cap?

HELLENTHAL: Generally only federal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I only have one comment to make and it's sort of directed at Delegate Barr. This Convention is not telling the Territorial legislature to do anything. The people of Alaska are going to adopt this constitution and adopt this schedule, and the people of Alaska are directing the legislature to take this action and I think it's certainly proper. I have always gone on the theory that we are sovereign, whether Congress agrees with me or not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment the Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 20 - Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Gray, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh.

Nays: 34 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - Taylor.)

NORDALE: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale changes her vote to "no". The Convention will come to order.

CHIEF CLERK: 20 yeas, 34 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments proposed for Sections 30 or 32? Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question in regard to Section 30. I will read the first sentence here, "If the Congress of the United States rejects any provision in the schedule of this constitution, the constitution and the remainder of the schedule shall not be impaired thereby." What would happen, for instance, if the Congress of the United States rejected our Alaska-Tennessee Plan and the delegates that are there representing us elected under that schedule?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I have the privilege of answering that question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you so desire.

R. RIVERS: I helped draft this so-called separability clause for the reasons that the Committee stated, so if some minor point arose they couldn't just throw the whole constitution back at us and force us to have another convention. The Tennessee Plan will be an executed affair by the time the enabling law is passed or is about to be passed. We will have already elected these people. Our senators and representative will have been back there working to get an enabling law through Congress so that that is a fait accompli before Congress ever gets a chance to reject one of our particular clauses. If they reject the Tennessee Plan two years hence and are so close to passing an enabling act, we have already accomplished our purpose with the Tennessee Plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: Won't the Congress have to consider the constitution, the schedule, and all of that before they can seat these representatives?

R. RIVERS: Yes. They could even send them back home to be reelected. They did that in one other state. But you can see that, if they are about to give us an enabling law, and they say "we reject the Tennessee Plan", then we would have to re-elect them, I suppose, but I feel that we are accomplishing practically every purpose of the Tennessee Plan in promoting statehood even if after two years hence, or at the time they are about to pass an enabling law, they do reject it. It is already over the wheel by then. You see, Mr. Emberg, that is why the Tennessee Plan is not jeopardized by this savings clause.

EMBERG: Well, I am not so sure, myself, and I would like to make a few remarks in regard to this. I notice in Section 11 of the general and miscellaneous provisions we have a general clause for consent to the enabling act in which we apply this whole thing to any rights or powers that are reserved to the United States. That is backstopped by the federal constitution in adopting it, as I understand it, that all the states will be as equals. But here in this -- frankly, in this whole field of ordinances and in the schedules, it seems to me that these ordinances are provided as a way that we can legislate legally. And, if some of the things in the schedule like the Tennessee Plan, the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, like the fish trap referendum, further go to the people separately for ratification, it doesn't seem to me wise to set up a procedure that says we don't mean some of these things we have done. I will, at the proper time, move to strike this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any amendments for Section 30?

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment for Section 31.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no amendments to Section 30 -- Mr. Emberg, do you realize that we are in the amendment procedure right now? If you so chose to offer an amendment to Section 30, it can be offered at this time. It is your privilege.

EMBERG: Well, I thought perhaps there might be some amendment offered that would meet some of my objections to it and, in that case, I would hold my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, your right will not disappear by passing that section. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "On line 8, after Section 31, insert the following: 'To provide an orderly transition from a territorial to a state form of government it is declared and ordained that any ordinance or provision of the schedule appended to this constitution remain in effect until changed by law or, if the nature of the provision requires, until other action or lapse of time renders it inoperative.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then, Mr. Rivers, your amendment did not strike anything in Section 31?

V. RIVERS: It was an addition, Mr. President.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order. I request that the amendment be reduced to writing and distributed.

V. RIVERS: I have no objection, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, then, the Convention will be at recess. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I now offer the amendment and so move, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers offers the amendment and moves its adoption. Is there a second?

V. FISCHER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer seconds the motion. The Convention will be at recess while the mimeographed copies are being prepared. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Are we going to continue the recess through this Department of History invitation?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, if it doesn't take -- that would mean then that the Convention would stand at recess until possibly 4:00 p.m.

DOOGAN: Couldn't we possibly go on and consider other sections for a little while, while this amendment is being mimeographed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair has some business to attend to at this time. Mr. McCutcheon, would you take the Chair?

MCCUTCHEON: Why don't you ask Mr. Peratrovich? He is the vice president.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich, would you take the chair?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I believe that we were recessed for the purpose of framing an amendment.

COGHILL: Are we continuing into Section 32?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: As far as the Chair known, we are, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I would like to offer an amendment. Strike Section 32. I so move.

MCLAUGHLIN: I second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have heard the motion. Are you ready for the question? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I heard Mr. Hurley say that this was recommended unanimously by the Ordinances Committee and I rather liked his explanation of their purpose. I think it doesn't demean this Convention at all to include something of this nature in the schedule of our constitution, which consists entirely of transition measures. I think if we contain in the bill of rights a section which Mr. Hellenthal can read to his children to the tune of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic", we ought to at least have one in the miscellaneous provisions which Mr. Buckalew can read to his grandchildren to the tune of "Dixie".

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the opportunity has finally come in this Convention to give the full expression of the will of the people of the Territory of Alaska for their desire for statehood, and this section expresses it very nicely. Actually, this Convention should have gone on record as favoring a full Tennessee Plan. Now it has been advanced many times on this floor that this Convention cannot direct a Territorial legislature. I cannot agree with that. The Territorial legislature merely set up the means and set up the money. It has been reiterated time after time on this floor that the constitutional convention has the ability to create the highest law of the land. Because this constitutional convention is unlike a legislature in the fact that sections of our Territory that have never had representation, in this Convention have representation, so that we do have the will of more people in this Convention floor than has ever been expressed in any legislature, it is my firm conviction that, if the Congress of the United States does not see fit to extend us statehood in view of the fact that we send back our duly elected officials to the United States Congress, then we just have to take some other act which is more forceful and carries yet again the further will of the people of Alaska for statehood. Hawaii some six years ago adopted their constitution, and what have they? Virtually nothing yet. And yet Hawaii spent nearly a million dollars in prosecuting their desire for statehood, but they have yet to take the bold steps that the other states have taken and sent their duly elected officials to Congress. By sending our two senators and one representative to, in effect, lobby for the admission of statehood, we give a pleading, so to speak, that we want statehood now, and certainly it appears to mean that the plan has worked for other states; that time is not to be lost. If we do not get it by January 1959, we must take another step, go further, set up our own statehood constitution, set up our own judiciary, anything that isn't in absolute conflict with the laws of the United States, and proceed as if we were a state; elect again new members to go to Congress; and by that time I am sure the will of the people of the whole United States will properly have expressed itself so that Alaska will become the 49th state of the Union.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Well, Mr. President, I have been quite pleased that this Convention all during its sessions has maintained a high level of maturity, and without a great deal of emotionalism on the subject. I am fearful now that, having exhibited that maturity, we are now in the position of school children and, having beseeched Congress and made preparations to send our representatives before that august body, we are now sticking out our tongue at them like small children and telling them what we are going to do. There is no validity; there is no assurance of anything under this Section 32. It, in substance, can make us the laughing stock of the Territory. I think that this matter was once before attempted in the legislature when certain people hotheadedly made the assertion that we should become a republic. If we are so indignant, we should declare our independence now. But, if we look at it with intelligence and maturity, we should vote down Section 32 and strike it as an insult to all Alaskans. Everything we have done here will be negative by passing upon this article, and regrettably, even now we are negating a lot of our good work by even discussing the matter. It is painful that the matter had to come up, but personally I am violently opposed to it; it means nothing, and it can be a constant and unceasing source of embarrassment to this Convention and to the very people that we send to Congress, whose laws we subscribe to. Frankly, it is an insult to the people of the Territory of Alaska, and I request that you strike it from the schedule.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: It seems like every time we start to really express ourselves that we are acting like children. Now we have several Biblical scholars here, and I am sure that Delegate Londborg will agree with me that one time a fellow by the name of Paul of Tarsus was traveling through the province of Palestine, and he got arrested for some infraction of one of the local rules and they called him before the Jewish Tribunal on this specific charge, and Paul got up and told the judge, he said, "I am a citizen of Rome." Because he was a citizen of Rome, the Jewish Tribunal didn't have any jurisdiction. Now, even the Ceasars gave to their citizens, no matter where they were, all the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the Roman Empire that were living right in Rome itself. That was many, many years ago. I think the Ceasars were wise, and I think it's time now that we really expressed ourselves. I don't think you could read this section and play "Dixie" because it's not strong enough. We are just asking the legislature to again reaffirm our position. I don't think Congress or anybody else will look startled at such a section. I think the people in Alaska ought to fully realize that the United States would be privileged to take us in as full citizens. We can look at the citizens of the State of Mississippi. They must be a bunch of degenerates from the way they have acted, and yet they deny the same privilege to us that the people of the state of Mississippi already have. I think it is high time we get up on our feet and act like we are real Americans. There is nothing distasteful about this; there is nothing radical about it. I think we ought to adopt in unanimously.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, Delegate McLaughlin spoke about maturity of the thoughts and voting and talks of the various members of the Convention here right up to this moment. There have been many other delegates here who spoke about the immaturity of action heretofore taken. Delegate McLaughlin spoke about the emotionalism that now causes to arise. I agree that it does with me and I think with many of the delegates here that Mr. McCutcheon amply spoke upon it. It does cause a certain emotionalism to arise, but I want to state that I felt similar to what Mr. McLaughlin says he thinks on the matter of the fish traps. Yet the fish trap proposal was one of a double-barreled deal, something like if you stop beating your wife, when you come to vote on it. And I think we are all in favor of the abolition of fish traps, and I am, but thought that possibly the long fight to abolish fish traps shouldn't be in the constitution, but when I saw the sincerity here of the members, that even if it was on the legislative side, and even if it was a little emotional, and even if it might not be the best proposition in the constitution as far as form or wording is concerned, if it is the view of these delegates here in the long fight for rights which we as citizens of the United States are entitled to, then that was the reason I voted for the ordinance here to abolish fish traps and to submit that to the people. That is the reason I think we are being mature in considering and in leaving in this Section 32 and leaving the words in there that the legislature "shall" do this. I tell you, my friends, that in the convention of the legislature in Virginia when Patrick Henry was speaking, and in speeches throughout the United States in 1775 and 1776, if the emotionalism was immaturity in those people or if they hadn't been emotional and immature, we wouldn't have been citizens of the United States today, and I, for one, am willing to go on record this way, and this is not a speech for the record -- I wish there wasn't a tape recording to record it as far as going down for the record -- but I do want to say this, and with all my heart, if I am a member of the legislature in 1959 and we haven't achieved statehood, you will hear some Patrick Henry speeches on the floor, and I, for one, will vote that, if we can't get in this way, I am willing to go along with that former legislature and declare ourselves a republic. We have got a right to it; and we have got to get behind it; and this is one way to back it up, to back up the Tennessee Plan and to fight for it. If we are going to go along wishy-washy and hope that Congress admits us, we may as well give up right now. Every person in the Territory of Alaska has got to fight and fight continuously, and let the Congress and the people of the United States know that we are sincere. I only regret the wording couldn't be made stronger in Section 32.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, I was the leg man that introduced this to the Committee on Ordinances. However, I have no pride of authorship in it because I found, much to my surprise, that many people had thought about the same thing. I approach it from the point that we would elect these congressmen to go back to the Congress of the United States and they can knock on the doors, but supposing that that group of southern senators that we have been told about doesn't choose to do anything about it. What can they do, actually, outside of act as salesmen and missionaries as has been pointed out? I got to considering the problem from the position of, what could a future legislature do about it? And I found that as we had written our constitution -- nothing. A group of us were out to dinner one night and I happened to bring up the subject and, as I say, much to my surprise, I found that the other members of the Convention who were at dinner with me had somewhat the same ideas although they were approaching it in a more logical manner than I was. They were approaching it in the manner that we, or this Convention, would fix it so that the future legislators might put themselves in a position, looking at the problem two or three years from now, where they might be able to do something about it. Maybe they won't choose to; that I don't know; and we can't direct them to. I have been accused of trying to start the Irish Republican Army here. I am not trying to create an insurrection. That isn't my point. I think the main thing that this does as we realize that we of Alaska are not going out and declare a shooting war on the United States -- there are too many people to get on the other side -- but the main thing that this does, I think, is point up to those people in Congress that we want statehood as our right. There is no reason why we should be any different than the rest of the people of the United States. As it has been pointed out, we have watched Hawaii who, some six years ago, adopted their constitution. They didn't adopt the Tennessee Plan or anything that went with it because they were so certain that the minute they adopted their constitution they were going to be admitted as a state of the Union, and you see what has happened. We are in exactly the same position. In essence, this Section 32 doesn't make our position any stronger, but it does one thing. It points up to the congressmen of the United States that, when we send our congressmen back to knock on the doors to be admitted, they are not going to be there for about a year and then somebody pull the rug out from under them and then they are going back home again, defeated. It points out to them that we in Alaska want and demand statehood, and we are going to keep rapping on their doors until they get so tired of seeing us that they are going to admit us.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I never thought that we would have to express our views on this subject before this body, and I am rather embarrassed that at the eleventh hour the occasion arises. We have heard Biblical quotations. I never regarded Christ as an anarchist or a revolutionist and I think that Christ said we should give unto Caesar what properly belongs to Caesar, and I don't recall that he took the path of the wild man. I was taught that we belonged to a government of laws and not to a government of men, and I am proud of Alaskans because we respect the laws and we follow the orderly intelligent route in attaining our ends, not the part of the wild revolutionary or the immature person that Mr. McLaughlin so aptly described. Hawaii can adopt the Tennessee Plan, if it cares to, later. There is nothing in its path to prevent it from so doing. We have many other avenues ahead of us if this fails, and I don't think we should threaten or hold a pistol or a club over Congress. I don't think we should make damn fools out of ourselves. Now the South once threatened to secede from the Union and we fought the bloody war of the States. I can't see that anything can be gained by adopting this wild course of conduct, nothing whatsoever. Now don't forget that the statehood movement in Alaska is a comparatively young movement. Now some of the younger people that want to be leaders in the statehood movement and always a little bit ahead of the pack, they may not want to hear that but it is the truth. Governor Ernest Gruening, who I regard as the foremost exponent of statehood, never once in a public utterance or in a message or in a report to the people of Alaska or in his reports to the Interior Department, never once mentioned statehood until 1946. I have read every message and every report he ever gave, and statehood is mentioned for the first time in 1946. Now ask yourselves why. It was inconceivable that any intelligent man could advocate statehood immediately for Alaska, until the advent of sufficient population to make the demand sensible. We only experienced a proper population growth at the close of the war. We couldn't have done it during the war, and it was only during the war that we gained the people. Don't forget that in 1940 there were only 70,000 people in Alaska -- of every type -- 70,000, and it was with the advent of the war and the settlement of the Territory that it became a practical possibility, and Governor Gruening's record so shows. Now, if we had been under the iron heel of a tyrant -- it seems strange that we should have to distinguish our government from the government of a tyrant -- but had we been under the iron heel of a tyrant and had been held back for years and years and years, then a revolutionary language might properly be used but it certainly is out of place at this time. So I ask you here in the eleventh hour -- and it is the eleventh hour -- to give this thing deep and continued thought. Don't try to please someone or say, "He is a nice kid; I'll go along with him. And after all, there are going to be enough votes on the other side to take care of it anyway." You have never done that before, and I know you won't do it now. Give this your mature, deliberate consideration and consider it as a good citizen. Consider it as a mature, grown-up Alaskan. And when we send our people back under the Alaska-Tennessee Plan to make a proper demand -- I don't even like to use that word -- a proper petition for statehood, don't arm them like gangsters. Send back intelligent, reasonable men, and let's act reasonably and intelligently here this afternoon.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Just a moment. The Chair wants to announce that the body has a commitment at 3:30. Now I think you all know what that is for, and I just want to ask the body what is your pleasure at this time? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Prior to moving for a recess and while Delegate Peratrovich is in the Chair, I would like to suggest that we defer further amendments on the matter now before us just for a few moments to being out another matter as a special order of business.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you ask unanimous consent?

RILEY: I do.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any objection? If not, it is so ordered. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: We as a body here a few days ago when the President wasn't in the Chair --

KILCHER: Point of order. Is it possible that you go into a committee of the whole for that purpose and cut the record off?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Your point of order is not well-taken. We have already voted on this thing.

(Mr. Doogan requested and received permission to speak off the record for a few moments.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I move that we recess for the time requisite to fulfill our engagement.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you ask unanimous consent?

RILEY: I do.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any objections? If not it is so ordered.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The chairman of the subcommittee on the Committee on Administration, Mr. John McNeese, will be making the collection from the individual delegates this afternoon -- $10 apiece -- for the painting of the portrait for President Egan.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All delegates will please take notice of this announcement by the chairman of the Administration Committee. If there are no further announcements we will proceed with the article before us, Mr. Coghill's amendment, I believe. Will you read that amendment, please, Secretary?

CHIEF CLERK: Strike Section 32.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: That is before us now for discussion. Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am not going to call the proponents of Section 32 immature or emotional, but I think this is important enough that most of us should stand up and be counted. I think that even wise men can be foolish. Sometimes you can get an overemphasis on a particular approach. Now, this section would state that, if Alaska is not admitted to the state before the fourth Monday in January 1959, the Territorial legislature shall provide for the election of officers under this constitution and for proclaiming the date on which the constitution shall become effective. In order not to look foolish ladies and gentlemen, in the eyes of the public and in the eyes of the editors who are going to be commenting on this for public consumption, and in the eyes of Congress, who is going to gauge our understanding of our law and our proper province, let's analyze and see what could the Alaska legislature do in 1949 or in 1950, as the case may be. Our constitution provides for the election of a governor and a secretary of state. Are those the state officers that our legislature shall provide for the election of in 1949 -- I should say in 1959 or 1960? You will have under the existing Organic Act -- we are talking about a time now when we wouldn't be a state; they haven't given us an enabling law by January of 1959. We have got an appointed governor in the mansion and in the federal governor's office. We have a secretary of Alaska, also appointed federally. I suppose we are going to tell our legislature that it must provide for the election of a state governor and at that point, provide for the election of a secretary of state who would be secretary of Alaska. What are they going to do? Are they going to move in, and move out the federally appointed governor and take over his office? What purpose can they serve or perform? We can't reconstitute the courts because the courts are created by Congress. We have to become a state before we can create the courts. We cannot create any courts that detract from the jurisdiction of the courts now established by Congress. We certainly are not going to be able to do anything except perhaps elect a state legislature. Well, is that state legislature which our Alaska Territorial legislature will provide for the election of going to go down there and take the place of the duly constituted Alaska Territorial legislature? Or are they just going to run around and look foolish? We are asking our Territorial legislature -- we say it shall provide for the election of state officers, and all it could do at that stage of the game would be to elect a governor and secretary of state who cannot even move in and take their desks, and there are no other state officers elected except the members of the legislature, and our Territorial legislature must provide that we shall go ahead and elect a state legislature which can't take the seats of the Territorial legislature until we get to be a state. Now the question is: How foolish can we make ourselves look? And that is not based on immaturity or emotion. That's only based on the proposition that wise men can make mistakes. So, I am giving the proponent of this Section 32 the advantage of that classification.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: There is no question but that the people of Alaska have complied with all requirements to being a member of the United States of America. We have complied with their agreements that they have made, a contractual agreement has been put up, we have complied with all the agreements and we should be admitted. And we will be admitted. I don't know when, but we will be. I know one thing, that we have got to stand all together. Right or wrong, we have to be together as a solid block or I am not moving from any place from here. We are together now and we are going to stay together for right or wrong, and we are going to ride the throne or the gallows together all of us -- and that is why we are going to get some place. We can't do it by dividing our forces, and I would like to leave this to the two, three people we elect to send down there. They'll tell us what to do and they will know what to do. We cannot tie their hands now. We want them to do something more drastic than this thing calls for maybe, but I would leave it to our three men, the two senators and the congressman we elect to send down there to tell us what to do at the end of one year, not two years. That is my thinking on it, but we are all going to stay together. I am going with the group.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I want to speak on this briefly. It seems to me that, at the time we entered upon the study of these and transitory provisions, I asked the chairman of the Committee for some information which he very generously furnished. It seems to me there are a number of cases in point here that seem to indicate that we wouldn't be able to take the step in addition to the things Mr. Ralph Rivers, Mr. Hellenthal and Mr. McLaughlin have said. We couldn't take the step that is set up here, and quoting from this matter I received from Delegate McNealy, it reads as follows: "Under all circumstances it seems to be the unanimity of authorities that it is absolutely necessary that Congress expresses its assent before a state can enter the Union and a state does not come into existence until such assent is given." It says, "There was some early authority which held to the effect that when a state was admitted to the Union upon the approval of Congress its constitution took effect from the date of ratification by the people. The later cases however held that such principle was not applicable to the territories which are deemed to be under control of Congress until their admission to the Union and that the time of taking effect of their constitution is ascertained from the construction of the enabling act." Quoting from other parts -- this is a decision rendered back by one of the other courts for which the reference is here: "While the territorial condition continues, whatever political power its people exercise must be by authority of Congress. In all governmental affairs, whatever the people of a territory do must be authorized, and they must abstain from doing what is forbidden.... In the compact for statehood, the people of the territory act for themselves and their successor, the people of the future state, and the latter are bound by the conditions accepted by the former...." There are a great many more instances that cite similar material, but it seems to me that in taking this step we would be doing something that would be very unwise in the face of existing legal opinions and decisions in similar matters. There were states after the Civil War which were readmitted. They had been states previously. They seceded and were readmitted. However, we don't fall in that category. We fall in the category of a territory, and as such we have accepted certain powers from Congress and we cannot exercise beyond those powers until such time as we actually become a state. It is beyond our power and authority to set up and constitute some of the things we say we are going to do in here. I believe we could elect a governor and a secretary of state. I don't believe, however, we could set up a system of courts as the constitution provides. As has been previously pointed out to you, I don't believe we could constitute another legislature that would have anything in its doings of the effect or force of law. Therefore, I must oppose this provision No. 32.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I feel that the people of Alaska sent us here to write a constitution and not take this sort of action as proposed by Section 32. We have passed the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, and one of the saving things about that is the fact that we have given the people a chance to pass on that by referendum. Now here we are taking an action entirely on our own. We are speaking to the people of Alaska on something that I feel goes away beyond the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, and I certainly agree with Mr. McLaughlin and all the others who have spoken against this Section 32, and I certainly don't think it should be in here.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, this doesn't go way beyond the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. This is the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. In every instance that the Alaska-Tennessee Plan has been used formerly, according to my understanding, this procedure has been followed. The only difference is that they did it right away, and a number of us have been bothered by the fact that the Alaska-Tennessee Plan as we have adopted it is a highly watered down Alaska-Tennessee Plan. To my own mind, when the full plan was proposed, I cast it aside because I couldn't see that we could go ahead and elect our full state legislature and state officers now without incurring a great additional expense, the money for which we didn't have, and without having to bypass the primaries in that respect too, and I felt that that was going too far in bypassing the primaries. I like to look at this as the Alaska-Tennessee Plan pursued in an orderly fashion. Now the statehood movement may or may not be of recent vintage, and Mr. Hellenthal says. As a matter of fact, the first statehood bill was presented in Congress by Delegate Wickersham, I believe, in 1916. The statehood movement has been a series of progressions. Now, I haven't been in the Territory here as long as Mr. Hellenthal or a lot of the rest of you. I have been here since 1947, but I have experienced in that time a series of progressions in the statehood movement, from one in which a lot of people who perhaps wanted statehood were opposed to it under various enabling bills that were then current, to gradual acceptance by the vast majority of the people under -- as the statehood bills, enabling acts improved and became more generous. I think it is fair to say that not too many years ago you would have been hard put to find too many people in favor of holding a constitutional convention in advance of the passage of a statehood enabling act. Now we have come to the point where the vast majority of the people are in favor of such a thing, and we are here today. You would have been hard put not too many years ago to find very many people in favor of even the position of the Alaska-Tennessee Plan that we have here adopted. We have now come to the point where we are virtually certain of overwhelming acceptance. This additional section provides that should nothing happen by 1959 the legislature shall then in effect consider what additional steps might be necessary, and it backstops the national representatives that we seek to send to Congress asking to be admitted through the Alaska-

Tennessee Plan, with the knowledge and with the message being broadcast to the people of the United States and to the Congress that we are serious about this; that this isn't a publicity gimmick or anything else. And Mr. Hellenthal said we are operating under a government of laws; I like rather to think of it as a government of consent by the governed, and the amazing thing to me is that the people of Alaska have been patient so long. I have in the past acted as chairman of a group when we were referred to as acting as something other than ladies and gentlemen, and I have been told that we should approach Congress with our hats in our hands. The truth of the matter is that Alaskans have always approached Congress with hats in hands, and they have always acted as ladies and gentlemen, and I deny anyone to prove differently at any time on any floor, and the amazing thing is that the people of Alaska have been patient for so long. I think that this section is no more than a suggestion that we have finally faced the facts and we have come to the decision that should we want statehood we must proceed step by step, acting as ladies and gentlemen in an orderly fashion at each step, but that we don't intend to back down. I didn't come here to sit for 75 days as an academic exercise. Now, I think that if it is disorderly to hold a Constitutional Convention at this time, that we had better give up the idea of asking for statehood, but if it is not disorderly I would suggest that sometime in the future an additional step should be taken. Now this section can be amended if the people feel it is a little too strong, but I am highly in favor of leaving its essence in the body of our ordinance.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: There have been a number of things come to my mind as I read this section over. It's too bad that we didn't have it a few days ago to study and get it before Style and Drafting had to spend too much time on it. There are some things here that I think we ought to consider. We have the Tennessee Plan as outlined. It will be before the people and if they adopt it we will send our two senators and the representative out to Washington. Now, if they succeed in getting us statehood before this date, January 1959, then certainly we don't need Section 32. They will have accomplished their purpose. But if they fail, if we have not been granted statehood by that time, then it seems like we have wasted a lot of money sending them out there for one thing, instead of working this double-punch business, sending first the three out there and then holding this threat behind them and behind Congress. It would seem a lot better than if we say that in January 1959 we're going to elect officers and declare a full statehood and in the meantime give Congress a couple of years to make up their minds if they are going to let us go in or not. It seems like that would be the better thing to do and save a lot of money. But what if the United States Congress doesn't grant us statehood at that time? What are we going to do then? I think we are lining ourselves up to look awfully foolish. We say, "Well, here we have our whole set of officers; the constitution is going into effect." I think that Ralph Rivers brought out some of the roles that will be played here then. We will have two sets of legislators. We will have a double court system. We will have a lot of other things. Actually we wouldn't because, as Mr. Victor Rivers brought out, the United States Congress must act before certain things go into motion. This Section 32 is as much as saying that, if they don't give us statehood by that time, we are going to set up our own sovereign state and if they want to let us in, all right; if not, we are going to go elsewhere, probably to Canada as was suggested the other day, or maybe just all by ourselves. What if the United States doesn't let us do that? I'd like to know how in the world we are going to back up Section 32 when the time comes. Are we going to mobilize or start building jets or something like that? This is dynamite in here, and I think Section 32 should be dealt with wisely right now and be voted out of this portion of the constitution.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I think we have overlooked a very important fact. The Library of Congress has supplied us with a great deal of background material, and I would suggest that -- I hate to suggest that possibly some of our members haven't even read this. Just as a matter for the record, may we look and see what Tennessee did? On page 5 of this report is said --

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Just a minute. Does that have any relation to what is before us?

HILSCHER: Yes, it has. It has a very complete bearing on it, because I want to point out that Tennessee, Michigan, Iowa, California, Oregon, and Kansas went the whole way on the Tennessee Plan. They didn't chicken out at the last hour on this thing. They went the whole way. They established their state government. So that we have this clearly in mind, may I please refer to the record in a couple of places? Tennessee: "The sixth section of the first article will inform you that the first General Assembly to be held under this constitution is to commence on the last Monday in March next. The object of the Convention, in determining on this early day, is a representation in the Congress of the United States... and that same convention arranged for the election of state officers. Michigan: At the same time a governor and a state legislature were elected they elected representatives to the national Congress. All we have here in Alaska is a watered-down version of the Tennessee Plan, and I would just like to say in all sincerity that one of our good members here whose life is built entirely upon faith, and I think the future of Alaska can be built of faith just as well. Iowa: "In this election, the Governor and two Representatives to Congress (as well as other officials) were chosen. California: "...the same year a general election was held to ratify or reject the newly drafted constitution, and to elect a governor, lieutenant governor, two congressmen, and members of the state legislature." Oregon: "The Constitution itself provided that, once the instrument had been ratified, another special election was to be held in June 1858 for election of members of the legislative assembly, of state and county officers..." as well as representatives for Congress. Kansas: "...an election was held for State officers, a State legislature, and a Representative in Congress.' Thus was made ready a State Government for Kansas'." I submit, Mr. President, that this Section 32 is simply a declaration of our intent. We are desirous of having statehood, and we are going to declare ourselves a state, and I am in favor of Section 32.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I think you spoke twice on the subject, Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I want to ask a question.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Confine it to a question, please.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Hilscher, are you aware that it was only with the enactment of Amendment 17 to the United States Constitution that United States senators were first elected by direct popular vote, and prior to that they had to be chosen by the legislatures of the states?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you care to answer that, Mr. Hilscher?

HILSCHER: I will refer that to my legal counsel to answer.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hinckel, you have the floor.

HINCKEL: I would like to make the statement that I think that most of us did read the material that Mr. Hilscher mentioned and I think most of us decided that we did not care to take those steps right no. We didn't care to elect our governor and other state officials and, had we decided to do that, I might have gone along with it. I might have approved it. I might have approved of some such drastic step in the future, but I disapprove of threatening to do it in the future, and I don't think anybody likes to be threatened and I don't like to threaten people. If I am going to do something I just go ahead and do it. I think people admire that sort of aggression, but they don't admire threats; and, therefore, I disapprove of this section and would like to see it stricken.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Like Delegate McLaughlin, I deplore the fact that this subject even had to come before us on the convention floor here, and I sincerely hope that our constituents and the people who sent us here will not question other acts that we might have taken when they learn that we considered such a proposal as this. A few days ago, yesterday perhaps, when we took final action on the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, I think we took bold action at that time. I think the action was proper; it was an orderly action, and it was an action, I think, that will bring results. If we should take the action as suggested in Section 32, it would be a defiant action, and I don't believe statehood will ever be acquired for Alaska in a defiant manner and I urge the delegates not only to vote this down but to vote it down unanimously or as close to unanimously as possible to show the people that we have no intention of taking such a defiant and out-of-order action. I shall certainly vote for the striking of this section.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Lee.

LEE: I haven't been influenced by any of the arguments that have been presented this afternoon. I am going to have to vote to strike that section because in my mind I feel that, from the people that I represent, I have had no expression that they would endorse me to authorize favoring any action such as this. I discussed the proposed Tennessee Plan with the people and they were willing to go along with that, but I don't think that I could take the responsibility of going this far without some indication from the people. If we had had this before us at an earlier date so we could have had an expression of the people, then I would feel, perhaps, I could vote to retain this section, but I am going to have to vote to strike it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I have often wondered in studying history how revolutions get started. I think this would be a good way to start one. In the first place, we are not talking about something we would like to have here; we are talking about mutiny. The legislature that we have is set up by the Congress of the United States of America. If we set up a legislature alongside that and say, "This is what is going to rule Alaska", it would be nothing less than mutiny. I urge that we vote against it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I can't speak emotionally, but as I look at the situation here objectively and try to weigh the advantages against the disadvantages, it seems to me that we should not strike this section. It should be amended, however. The way it reads now, it does sound like we are getting a little too big for our breaches. But what it seeks to do is all right. We are all American citizens in Alaska and we believe we have the rights of citizens. Now, when you want a privilege, you go ask for it, but you are entitled to rights. If you don't get them, you are entitled to insist, and that is all we are doing. Some mention has been made here of mutiny or secession. Why, I think it is ridiculous to even bring that up. We are doing exactly the opposite. We are not insisting on separating ourselves from the government. We are insisting on the Union of States taking us into the family where we belong, and, if they don't want to do it, we insist on it as a right, to be included in that family. I don't see how anyone could consider that disloyal. We want to become full-fledged American citizens, not half-and-half. This section says that "the legislature shall" etcetera. Of course we cannot tell the legislature what to do. The only government organization that comes under us is the future state government. I think that the legislature has the authority to do anything regarding statehood that they may wish, but I do think it is in proper order for us to make a suggestion or to signify what our wishes may be. I would not like to see this section stricken; I would like to see it amended. Of course, I have an amendment on my desk, like several others have, no doubt, and it seems to me that, if we don't have statehood within two or three years, that the legislature should then take some other steps, such steps as they may deem necessary to hasten statehood, and that doesn't include any revolution or anything of that sort. But by that time, with our three representatives in Washington, they may have enough information then that they can suggest to the legislature what to do to help matters out.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any further discussion? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I agree very much, 100 per cent with what Mr. Barr just said. We are not talking about secession. There is a big difference between a man and a woman getting married or being divorced. That is what we are talking about. I think that this is a good provision. I think it can be improved. I think that we should not put in an automatic clause or make it sound like an automatic clause. Let's put it on the basis of asking the legislature to take appropriate steps two years hence, but let's not vote this down and say, "We are going to elect two senators; we are going to elect a representative; if that doesn't get us statehood, we don't really care about statehood." We are all here because we believe in statehood. I think we should not only tell the legislature, but also tell the people of Alaska that we aren't going to lie down and die when this is all over; that we want to keep striving for statehood; and I think this section lends itself to improvement in that direction.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, I would like the floor for a minute on personal privilege if I may have it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objection, you may have it.

(At this point, Mr. Davis spoke for a few minutes under personal privilege.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The secretary may read the amendment before taking a vote on it.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 32."

COGHILL: As mover of the motion, I reserve the last argument. I feel that this Section 32 is very important to this whole Convention. I feel that we 55 delegates came here on November 8 and we had a great task to do, and I believe that each and every one of us are very much concerned with the passage of statehood for Alaska. I don't believe that there are any of the delegate here that are opposed to statehood. I think the statehood movement will get into high gear as soon as this fine constitution that we, the delegates to the Alaska constitutional convention, have slaved over for many weeks, and I think that this would be a fatal blow to the Alaska constitution. I see the Tennessee Plan which the delegates passed here the other day, and they say that this Section 32 was a part of that that had been watered down from the Tennessee Plan. However, the delegates will have to agree that the Tennessee Plan was set forth to be ratified by the people on a separate ballot. We have here stuffed Section 32 into the transitory measures and are going to make it mandatory that, if the people don't like this section, they are going to have to vote against the full constitution. Now we know there are certain sections of the constitution that certain segments of the population are not going to agree on, and we here as delegates have not agreed upon all of those sections. However, compromise has been the keynote of this Convention and we have come out, in my mind, with a very good constitution. I think that by setting this section in here we are also admitting defeat to the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. We are saying that it will not work; we have a doubt in our minds. In order to push something and be 100 per cent behind something, you cannot have any doubt. You have got to go straight forward, and I think the pressure that we can bear on the Congress of the United States with our two senators and our representative and with a good constitution behind it and with the full faith of Alaskan people we will be able to obtain statehood at an earlier date without putting a gun behind their backs such as we have done in Section 32. We have a vast country here and we have a very small population, but this is the 20th Century, delegates, and we shouldn't take a 17th Century action towards obtaining statehood. Let's look at it sensibly; let's look at it with an intelligent and open mind. Let's win them over with friendship and not with threats. I think that Alaska, under the laws, the enabling acts -- the acts that provide for the legislature are somewhat unfair. I was born and raised under them, I have done business under them, and I think we would be violating a very sacred trust that the American people have bestowed upon themselves by trying to overthrow any, or any part of it. I think that we, as delegates to this constitutional convention, should keep our feet squarely on the ground and vote this thing on our conscience. I think if we passed this section that we would be doing just exactly what Sourdough Jack said the other day. He said the next meeting of the constitutional convention delegates will be when the Department of the Interior lines us up to shoot us for treason. Remember that this is in the transitory provisions. If the people don't like it, they will be voting against the whole constitution. I move the previous question.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Let the Chair make a ruling. Under our rules, I believe, the maker of the motion has the last say. For that reason I shall put the question. The question is, "Shall we strike Section 32?" The secretary will call the roll.

MARSTON: Mr. Chairman, can't we comply with Mr. Davis's request and hold this over until tomorrow? I am not ready to vote on it yet.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I have to be fair in the matter. As much as I would like to allow him to talk, it is the rule so I have to enforce them. You will call the roll please.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 16 - Barr, Buckalew, Doogan, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, McCutcheon, McNealy, Nordale, Riley, Stewart, VanderLeest, White.

Absent: 2 - Taylor, Mr. President.)

MCNEES: May I change my vote to "yes", Mr. President?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McNees changes his vote to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 37 yeas, 16 nays, and 2 absent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: So the "yeas" have it and the motion is lost. Mr. Davis.

COGHILL: Mr. President, you called the vote wrong. You said the motion lost.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Oh, I'm sorry; it was just the other way around. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: At this time, Mr. President, I move that the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow at 1:30, subject to committee announcements.

MCNEES: Prior to adjournment I would like to give notice of reconsideration of my vote on Proposal No. 17/z for tomorrow.

HERMANN: A point of inquiry. What Convention day is this?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Will you give that information, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The 72nd day.

HERMANN: A motion to reconsider cannot be given after the 72nd day according to our rules.

MCNEES: I believe I am in order on this, Mr. President. The reconsideration will be on Section 32 of 17/z.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: According to the explanation here the motion is in order, so the secretary will make a record of this notice.

HERMANN: I think we ought to refer it to the Rules Committee.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You can appeal the decision if you want to, but to satisfy everyone we will call a minute recess and refer it to the Rules Committee.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. I will ask the chairman of the Rules Committee to interpret the rules in that respect. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I don't recall the number of the rule we just verified. The fact is, however, that the motion for reconsideration would not be entertained after the 72nd day, which would mean that, unless the motion were allowed today, that there would not be an opportunity to do so tomorrow or after today.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McNees, do you understand the explanation of the Rules Committee chairman? As far as your notice is concerned, it is all right, but, since your motion would be outmoded by tomorrow, the deadline is today.

MCNEES: I see, I thought it was notice of reconsideration couldn't be given after the 72nd day. It could not be reconsidered tomorrow?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: No it can't.

MCNEES: Could rescission?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You would have to ask for suspension of the rules.

MCNEES: All right. At this time I would like to give notice of rescission of our vote on the morrow. Twenty-four hours' notice then will require tomorrow suspension of the rules for reconsideration of our vote tomorrow.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You give notice now?

MCNEES: I give notice now, and that will require a majority vote on the morrow, and for purposes of specific amendment to Section 32.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I rise to a point of information. If Mr. McNees wishes to water down this section with his amendments, if this section was voted out and they resubmitted a new section tomorrow, that would take care of it without a two-thirds vote.

MCNEES: That is what I stated.

COGHILL: Then why have the rescission? Why not let the section go out and resubmit a new section tomorrow?

MCNEES: That is right as long as it is not assigned to Committee, that would be true. But I would like to correct Mr. Coghill. I don't care to water this down. I want to leave some teeth in it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you still maintain that you give notice of rescinding? That's in order because you cannot reach it with reconsideration due to the fact that the deadline is past. Are there any other amendments?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I thought there was a motion to adjourn.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: There was no second to it as I recall it.

SUNDBORG: I'll second it if it is still on the floor.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you wish to renew it, Mr. Davis?

DAVIS: I will renew it, but I don't think it is still on the floor because we have done other business. I move that the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

SUNDBORG: I second it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have heard the motion. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor signify by saying "aye"; opposed "no". So ordered.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

February 3, 1956

SEVENTY-THIRD DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us today Chaplain Swaffer of Ladd Air Force Base. Chaplain Swaffer will give our daily invocation.

CHAPLAIN SWAFFER: Almighty God, Creator of our great universe, we invoke the richness of Thy blessing upon this assembly today. Would Thou bless each individual with clarity of thought and each action that is manifested today with purpose for the future. We pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The roll was called by the Chief Clerk.)

CHIEF CLERK: Seven absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I note in the gallery an outstanding Alaskan, a person who has done more than most to bring the Kenai Cook Inlet Election District's major fraction close to the full quotient my wife. (Laughter and applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Kilcher, we are happy to have you here with us. Does the Special Committee to Read the Journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, reporting on the Journal for the 64th Convention day, Wednesday. January 25, there is one correction on page 6, the second paragraph from the bottom, where it says "If there be no objection it is so ordered." Strike "it is so ordered" and insert in lieu thereof "the amendment was adopted". Mr. President, with that correction we ask unanimous consent for the approval of the Journal for the 64th day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent that the Journal of the 64th day be adopted along with the suggested corrections as offered by the Special Committee to Read the Journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the Journal of the 64th day is ordered adopted.

HERMANN: May I make an additional correction to the Journal? On line 19, it reads, "Mrs. Hermann requested permission to abstain since she had been absent during the debate." I wish to have stricken "since she had been absent during the debate". I was here all the time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the additional change is ordered in the Journal of the 64th day. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, reporting on the Journal for the 65th Convention day, Thursday, January 26, the following changes are requested: on page 1, the third paragraph from the bottom, second line, where it says "Mr. Harris --"

DAVIS: I don't believe it is here, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Isn't the Journal of the 65th day available for all the delegates? Perhaps we could hold that in abeyance, Mr. White, until later in the afternoon.

WHITE: Has the 66th day been distributed?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No.

WHITE: Well, we will hold them both until later in the day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: They will be held until later in the day if there is no objection. Are there reports of standing committees? Reports of special committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I have a resolution. May the Chief Clerk please read it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to reading the resolution? Is it offered by the Engrossment Committee, Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: No, it is offered by Mr. King and myself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is offered by Mr. King and Mrs. Sweeney. Hearing no objection, the Chief Clerk may read the resolution.

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution offering the thanks of the delegates to the people of Fairbanks and the Tanana Valley for making their stay so enjoyable.)

SWEENEY: Mr. President, Mr. King and I would like to ask that all rules of the Convention be suspended at this time, that the resolution be read a second time, that it not be sent to Engrossment and Enrollment, or even to Style and Drafting. We feel that whatever changes are made it will still come out the same. It's an indication of appreciation to the people of Fairbanks, so I would like to move at this time for a suspension of the rules and the advancing of the resolution to third reading and final passage, and I ask for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney asks that all rules be suspended, and that the resolution be considered in third reading, be read by "resolve" only, and placed in final passage. If there is no objection, all rules have been suspended and the Chief Clerk will read the resolution for the third time.

(The Chief Clerk then read the resolution by "resolve" only.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the resolution be adopted by the Convention." The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

R. RIVERS: Wouldn't a voice vote suffice?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

DAVIS: I would ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, and then we won't have to call the roll.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that this resolution be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the resolution has been adopted by the Convention, and the copies that are to be made are ordered reproduced and mailed to the proper individuals. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we revert to the order of business of communications from without the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will revert to the order of business of communications and petitions. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I now ask for unanimous consent that the Convention extend to the messenger, Mr. Ben Potter, the courtesy of the floor for presenting a proclamation to the President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Potter, you have been granted the courtesy of the floor in order that the resolution may be presented.

MR. POTTER: Mr. President, on behalf of the City of Fairbanks and its people I wish to have this proclamation from the Mayor read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Potter. The Chief Clerk may read the proclamation as offered by the City of Fairbanks through Mr. Potter.

(The Chief Clerk read the City of Fairbanks Proclamation designating Sunday, February 5, 1956 as Alaska Constitution Day in the City of Fairbanks and conveying appreciation and congratulations to the delegate for a job well done".)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The resolution will become a part of the records of the Convention. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move and ask that the following resolution be submitted to the appropriate committee for adjusting as to substance, to wit: that the Fairbanks Daily News-Miner and its president and publisher, C. W. Snedden, and its staff and all other papers or agencies that reported the progress of the Constitutional Convention be commended for their honest, scholarly, objective, and courteous reporting of matters dealing with the progress of the Convention.

COGHILL: A point of information. It was directed by the President that the Committee on Administration would set out a set of resolutions to be passed on by the Convention Monday morning in an orderly manner so that there would be no parties left out. It is the feeling that, if any one has any ideas on resolutions of thanks that they can contact the Administration Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenthal, your proposed resolution is referred to the Committee on Administration. The Chair would like to state that, if delegates have particular resolutions they they are interested in, that they confer with the Committee on Administration as the Committee on Administration has this matter before them and is diligently working on it. The Chief Clerk will read the communications that are now before the body.

(The Chief Clerk read the following communications: a telegram from Robert F. Kennon, Governor of Louisiana, appointing Professor J. Kimbrough Owen to serve as his personal representative at the signing ceremonies; a telegram from G. Mennen Williams, Governor of Michigan, extending best wishes to the delegates on the occasion of the signing of the constitution and expressing hope that the occasion may speed the day when Alaska becomes a state; a letter from Congressman Olin E. Teague of Texas expressing regret at not being able to attend the signing ceremony; a letter from Luis Munoz Marin, Governor of Puerto Rico, expressing regrets at being unable to attend the signing ceremony; a letter from E. L. Rankin, Jr., secretary to Governor Luther H. Hodges of North Carolina expressing regrets at the governor's being unable to attend the signing ceremony; a telegram to George Sundborg from Joseph T. Flakne, Programming Director, Arctic Institute of North America, congratulating the delegates, thanking them for writing the constitution, and expressing hope that soon Alaska would be a state; a telegram to Mr. VanderLeest from Louis Middleton of Grand Rapids, Michigan, stating he would be arriving to attend the signing ceremonies.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. VanderLeest.

VANDERLEEST: Mr. President, I would like to state that this young fellow, at that time in 1908, took over my job as a pharmacist in Grand Rapids, Michigan, and we have been friends all of these years. I sent him one of those cards and that is what I get. I sent him a telegram 20 minutes ago with a hotel reservation if he can make it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. VanderLeest. (Applause)

(The Chief Clerk read a telegram from Mrs. Buckalew to Delegate Buckalew stating that the Dallas [Texas] Democratic Women's Club had passed a resolution for immediate statehood for Alaska as a result of a speech she had made.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other communications to come before the Convention at this time? If not, is there any other unfinished business? We have before us then Article XII, Section 14, of the general provisions. This article, Mr. Riley, took its regular course into third reading, is that correct?

RILEY: I believe all that is required is just assignment to the calendar for third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read Article XII, General and Miscellaneous Provisions, Section 14, for the third time.

CHIEF CLERK: Section 14? It's the whole thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I think a motion is perhaps in order that it be advanced to third reading at this time, read by title only, and placed on final passage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, did it not take its normal course into third reading?

RILEY: I don't recall that it has ever been assigned in so many words or that a motion has been entertained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it doesn't take any motion if it goes to another meeting. The Rules Committee just assigns it to the calendar as in --

RILEY: Referring to rules is what I have reference to here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection -- Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: When we adjourned yesterday, we were on No. 17/z. Now I haven't got it clearly in my mind yet what we are about to start on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the calendar shows, Mr. Ralph Rivers, that 17/z is still in second reading but it shows Article XII, Section 14 of Article XII -- the Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair regrets that the Chair just had that part of Article XII which dealt with Section 14 before it. We have before us Article XII, General and Miscellaneous Provisions, in third reading. The Chief Clerk will read the title of the article.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article XII, General and Miscellaneous Provisions."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The article is open for discussion and debate. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, the members were asked the other day if they had any thought on points that might have been omitted to bring them forward. I have a point which I can put in the form of a question to Mr. Davis, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Davis, the expression, "a two-thirds vote of each house" is used in many places in this constitution and I was wondering if it would be advisable to insert under miscellaneous provisions the following: "The expression ' a two-thirds vote of each house' wherever used in this constitution means a two-thirds vote of the membership to which each house is entitled."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Fischer, I think, can field that one better than I can.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, as we explained when the Style and Drafting Committee reported back the legislative article, the reference to "the members of each house or a two-thirds vote of each house" means two-thirds of those present and voting upon a particular issue. When the term "two-thirds of the membership of each house" is used, that means two-thirds of the number of members to which the house is entitled. There is a difference between those two terms, and when it is used as "two-thirds of each house" it is not the total membership to which the house is entitled.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to ask Mr. Fischer if we should simply rely on the record explanation or if we shouldn't put an extra section in the miscellaneous and define those two terms for clarity's sake.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I doubt if it is necessary because the term "membership" is specifically defined in the first section of the article on the legislature. In that article it starts out that the legislative powers shall be vested in a legislature which shall consist of a senate with a membership of 20 and a house of representatives with a membership of 40. In other words, the term "membership" is defined right there, and I think that the uniform differentiation between those two terms as you go through the constitution is a pretty obvious sign of the different intent all the way through.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I would like to clarify one point. We brought in Article XII in two or more different sections. We now have Article XII that we presented some time back and then one portion of Article XII which yesterday, I believe, we called Section 14 of Article XII. Now I presume we are considering the entire matter including what was Section 14 yesterday. Is that right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, as we have it here before us, it does not show Section 14 within it. Is that the wish of the body, that this Section 14 be included at this time as a part of Article XII in its entirety?

DAVIS: Mr. President, we have previously accepted both the body of Article XII and Section 14 so far as the Style and Drafting report was concerned, and I would suggest and, if necessary, will move and ask unanimous consent that the Article XII as originally presented and Section 14 of Article XII be considered together at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent that Section 14 become a part of Article XII, General and Miscellaneous Provisions, as we are considering Article XII at this time. Is there objection, in third reading? Hearing no objection it is so ordered, and we have the entire article before us open for debate and discussion. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I address a question to Mr. Sundborg?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Sundborg, I understand there were some amendments, not particularly of substance, to be made in Sections 4 and 5 with relation to the word "affirm", and with relation to omitting the last sentence of Section 5. Would it not be a good time to take those up now?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, with relation to Section 4, the Style and Drafting Committee, purely as a matter of form, will -- when we bring the final constitution before you, we'll show the words "or affirm" in brackets rather than in commas, and I don't believe it would require any particular action by the body; it is just a matter of punctuation. On Section 5, my understanding is that the chairman of the Committee on the Executive is going to make a motion to strike that final sentence. It is not our Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have Article XII before us in third reading, the General and Miscellaneous Provisions. Is there a discussion? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, in the Committee chairman's meeting this noon or this morning, we talked about the advisability of retaining, on page 2, certain lines as follows: "The governor shall act as the agent of the state in all intergovernmental relations involving the state." I have polled the Executive Committee on that and out of six members polled, five agree that it would be just as well to strike it. The other member had not yet decided. In view of that fact, if we are in the proper order of business, on page 2, I will recommend that on lines 15, 16, and 17, those words be stricken, starting with "The governor".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, it would be necessary that you ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that the proposal be placed back in second reading for specific amendment.

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent for suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that Committee Proposal No. XII be placed before us in second reading for specific amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the rules have been suspended and Committee Proposal No. XII is now before us in second reading for specific amendment. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will now restate my motion that lines 15, 16, and 17, page 2, the sentence beginning with "The governor shall act as agent of the state..." be stricken in its entirety.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I object for a matter of information. What is the purpose of striking this, not having the governor as agent?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, would you explain that?

V. RIVERS: The general discussion was some what along this line: that by putting that section in it made everything in the way of activities with other governmental agencies funnel through the governor or his delegated representatives. Some of us had the thought that he could delegate his authority, and I brought that out the other day on the floor in our discussion. Discussing it with our committee chairmen and consultants, it was pointed out that the governor could not and should not act as the agent of the state in such intergovernmental relations as those carried on by the National Association of Legislative Service Agencies, the Conference of Chief Justices, and other similar related matters, and that this clause might have a restrictive effect, and that, in any event the strong executive as we have him set up could and would have all the powers of a full agency for the people of the State of Alaska, so for that reason it was felt that they limited somewhat his ability to function by leaving it in, and it was more effective to leave it out. Those are the points.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adoption of the amendment? If there is no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers, do you now ask that the rules be suspended and that the proposal be placed back in third reading?

V. RIVERS: It automatically goes back, does it not, Mr. President? It was suspended for specific amendment only. I will ask unanimous consent that we now place the measure back to third reading if the record should show it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that Article No. XII, General and Miscellaneous Provisions, be advanced to third reading, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and the article is now before us in third reading.

ROBERTSON: Does that include Section 14?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That includes Section 14, Mr. Robertson. The Chief Clerk will please read the title once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Article XII, General and Miscellaneous."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion or debate? If not, the question is: "Shall Article XII, the article on general and miscellaneous provisions, be agreed upon to be appended to the Alaska constitution?" Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, is it too late to make an amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: At this time, Mr. Robertson, it would be necessary again, if an amendment is proposed, to ask that the rules be suspended and that the article be placed back in second reading for specific amendment. While we are waiting, the Chair would like to ask of the chairman of the Rules Committee that on this question relating to general and miscellaneous provisions, should it show that it was adopted as a part of the Alaska state constitution, or should it also be an appendage?

RILEY: As you stated first, Mr. President; no, not appended, as a part of.

PRESIDENT EGAN: As a part of the constitution? As differentiated from the matters relative to the schedule?

RILEY: Part of the body of the constitution, as most articles.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, did you have a question? Then, the question is -- Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I have a question I would like to ask anybody that could answer it for me. On Section 11, we have discussed this in great detail on the floor. However, there is still a doubt in my mind and I might clarify it before asking a question of whoever might wish to answer. It is my understanding that this section was left out of the Hawaiian state constitution because they were quite confident that they were going to be admitted into the States right away. However, it is on the grants of land or other properties of Alaska, and we are consenting to fully, by the state and people, to any kind of a proposition that the Congress of the United States might give us. Now, Hawaii, under their state constitution, by leaving it out, were provided for in the enabling act of H.R. 2535 that all of the lands that belonged to the state at the time of admittance were theirs, and under our section we might very well lose the lands that the University already has under their land grant and we might also lose Sections 16 and 33 under our school land grant. Now, if I am wrong on that, I wish somebody would correct me, but it seems to me that if we left this section out and had the Congress of the United States provide for our disposition of lands as they have under the Hawaiian constitution that we would be better off.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I might try to answer that in a way. The situation regarding Hawaii was very different than Alaska. Hawaii was taken in under a different situation, a different treaty arrangement than Alaska. They had their homelands which belonged to Hawaii, much the same as Texas lands belonged to Texas when they came into the Union, so I don't believe you need have any fears, because it's what will be in the enabling act and it won't have anything to do with what we have already been granted; I think it's two different situations and that is why it's different in the two enabling acts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I don't know the motives that the people of Hawaii had in leaving this section out of their constitution; however, they did leave it out. But I think, in answer to your question, the question as to whether or not we should leave it out has more pertinence for Alaskans because we are dealing with much more land that we do not now have. Therefore, Congress could change our enabling act more radically in that respect some time in the future than they could have changed or could yet change Hawaii's.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I might say, Mr. President, insofar as the school lands, sections 16 and 36 of surveyed sections have been granted to the Territory and are now administered by the Territory for the benefit of the schools. So far as the University land is concerned, it is my understanding that the same thing is true of them except insofar as what is known as "in lieu" lands where the federal government has taken back or used some land for some other purpose, and given the right to the Territory or University to choose other lands in lieu of those that have been taken. Whether or not that could be abrogated or not I do not know. Those sections that are surveyed that are presently administered by the Territory will continue to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is: "Shall Article XII, the article on general and miscellaneous provisions, be agreed upon as a part of Alaska's state constitution?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 51 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 0 -

Absent: 4 - H. Fischer, King, Londborg, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 51 yeas and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and Article XII, the article on general and miscellaneous provisions, has been agreed upon as a part of the Alaska state constitution. We now have before us in second reading Ordinance 17/z, additional transition measure. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, a point of inquiry and possibly a point of order. Although the Rules Committee has placed 17/z on the calendar and shown it in second reading today, I should like to address a question to the Chair for a ruling as to whether 17/z was ever properly before the Convention? Was it ever offered by the Committee as a Committee Proposal, and in that event, when?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean, Mr. Riley, was Ordinance 17/z ever offered officially from the Committee to the floor?

RILEY: Yes. Would the journal reflect such an offering by the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk will refer to the record and, if necessary, have a short recess to accomplish that.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, didn't the chairman of the Ordinance Committee get up and say it was No. 17/z because of the fact that it would be the last one, and he asked that it be considered?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is the recollection of the Chair, but did the chairman make that statement after the ordinance was before us or at the time we were discussing the ordinance? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, that was made upon the matter of discussion of amendment or in talking in regard to particular proposals. I do not recollect having offered the proposal formally on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The record shows as to Article 17/z that it was never formally offered to the Convention by the Committee. Now, what happened was that the calendar showed 17/z on it yesterday. The Chair thought when it saw the letter "z" that it was a typographical error that might have occurred somewhere along the process of mimeographing the calendar, and it wasn't until Mr. McNealy explained the reason for having the "z" later as we were discussing the article, that the Chair realized that the "z" was really meant. However, at the time we took this matter up, it was read twice in its entirety. The Chair recalls that because at that time it was recognized that the first complete reading was actually that, the first complete reading instead of the second reading, but in order that the record be cleared, that the chairman of the Committee introduce the article at this time. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, at this time, if this is the order, the Committee will now report and introduce Proposal 17/z, except that it is requested that Section 32 appearing in the copy of Section 17/z be deleted and in lieu thereof, for purposes of discussion, that the Committee amendment which is on the desk to insert a new Section 32 be considered in place of the present Section 32. Mr. President, it might be a point of order. Possibly I should introduce the proposal and then later ask unanimous consent. I will introduce at this time Proposal 17/z.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, the chairman of the Committee on Ordinances asks at this time that the Committee Proposal 17/z be placed before the Convention for its consideration. Is there objection? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, a point of inquiry. Is it permissible at this date in the proceedings to introduce a proposal of this kind without a suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I will have to refresh myself on the rule, but I don't believe we have such a limitation on a committee proposal, have we? I might be in error.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, it is the recollection of the Chair that the motion that was adopted with relation to committee proposals, that stopped the introduction of committee proposals on January 8 from the floor, that it was delegate proposals specifically stated in that motion. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, seeing that there was a parliamentary slip up here, would it be in order to move that actions taken on this Committee Proposal No. 17/z be referred to as an action of today? Otherwise we would have to expunge the record of yesterday because we did have two amendments. Would it be in order to move and ask unanimous consent?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson, the two-thirds rule would not apply to committee proposals, that has been determined. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the actions taken on Committee Proposal No. 17/z of yesterday be confirmed by the body as actions taken today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the actions taken relating to Proposal No. 17/z yesterday be confirmed as actions that were taken today under the same proposal. That would bring the proposal, if the motion of Mr. Coghill's was adopted, it would mean that the proposal would be brought before us in the same position that it was when it left the body yesterday afternoon. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

RILEY: I object.

COGHILL: I so move.

COOPER: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill so moves, seconded by Mr. Cooper, that the actions of yesterday with relation to Committee Proposal No. 17/z be confirmed as though the actions up until that point were taken today.

R. RIVERS: A point of information. Does that involve suspension of the rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It does, Mr. Rivers. It would take a two-thirds vote to carry that particular motion. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, an inquiry. If we don't take such an action, would it then not have to be possible for this group to expunge the record of yesterday?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, it would not be necessary to expunge the record it probably would be desirable -- but it would mean then that, if this motion fails, that we would have the Committee Proposal No. 17/z before us in first reading as it was originally introduced.

COGHILL: As it was yesterday?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct.

COGHILL: It would seem to me that the motion that I made would save time of the Convention floor and we could start just where we left off last night, because we had two amendments to it and they were adopted, and that is why I presented the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: A point of inquiry. Under Mr. Coghill's motion, then would that, in effect, validate an invalid action, the fact that the proposal was never properly before the body?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, it would validate an action that was taken, and by suspension of the rules, which is included in the motion made by Mr. Coghill, the action that is taken on anything is taken under the rules that we are operating under, and it would be the opinion of the Chair that it could be accomplished. It wouldn't be validating an invalid action; it would just be validating an action that had been taken by suspending the rules. It is within the province of the body to do so. The Chief Clerk will call the roll on Mr. Coghill's motion. If you vote "yes", you vote that we consider Committee Proposal 17/z today at exactly the same point that it was left here before the body last night. If you vote "no", you vote to receive Committee Proposal 17/z as it was originally introduced today. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 34 - Awes, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis,

Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rovertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 17 - Armstrong, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Doogan, Hilscher, Knight, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Riley, Smith, Stewart, VanderLeest, White.

Absent: 4 - H. Fischer, King, Londborg, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 34 yeas, 17 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the motion has failed of adoption. We now have Committee Proposal No. 17/z. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move that we strike Section 32.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, the proposal will have to be read for its first time. The Chief Clerk will please read Committee Proposal No. 17/z for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 17/z, introduced by Committee on Ordinances and Transitional Measures, Schedule, Sections 30 to 32."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I move and ask unanimous consent that Committee Proposal No. 17/z be advanced to second reading and open for amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves and asks unanimous consent that Committee Proposal No. 17/z be advanced to second reading at this time, and that the rules be suspended. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, there is an amendment to 17/z on the -- PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, Mr. White, first we have this motion for suspension of the rules in an attempt to get the proposal before us in second reading. Is there objection to Mr. McNealy's unanimous consent request?

JOHNSON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy so moves, seconded by Mr. Knight, that the rules be suspended and that Committee Proposal No. 17/z be placed before us in second reading at this time. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, are we now in second reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are not in second reading, we have to vote on this motion to suspend the rules and place it before us in second reading. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, it says 17/z on our calendar is in second reading. I can't quite follow why we haven't got it there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is what we had all this confusion over. Mr. Victor Rivers. It had never been introduced by the Committee properly in the first place. The question is: "Shall the rules be suspended and Committee Proposal No. 17/z be placed before us in second reading at this time?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 31 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Cross, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, VanderLeest, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 20 - Armstrong, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Emberg, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Johnson, Lee, McLaughlin, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien.

Absent: 4 - H Fischer, King, Londborg, Taylor.)

WIEN: Mr. President, may I change my vote to "no"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Wien changes her vote to "no".

ARMSTRONG: I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong changes his vote to "no". The Convention will come to order while the Chief Clerk tallies the ballot.

CHIEF CLERK: 31 yeas, 20 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rules have not been suspended. Committee Proposal No. 17/z is referred to the Committee on Rules for assignment to the calendar. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I was just going to ask, Mr. President, whether the Rules Committee can advance 18/z to second reading today or whether it has to carry over in second reading tomorrow, and third reading on Sunday to take its proper place?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is a question that the Rules Committee is probably more familiar with under the circumstances. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, the matter isn't covered fully in the rules. As the body will recall, the Rules Committee happens to have the calendar assignment by delegation from the Chair. It goes back to the period when the secretary was absent, prerecess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing in the rules, so far as the Chair recollects, that covers the question as to whether or not the Rules Committee can put anything on the calendar during the day, and, in the absence of a specific rule, it would seem they can and have the authority to put anything on the calendar that they wish to go on that calendar at any time they say so. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, a point of inquiry for the Chair. Would it be in order to move that Committee Proposal No. 17/z, under suspension of the rules, Sections 30 and 31 be advanced to second reading at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper, the Chair would feel that that would not be a proper procedure under suspension of the rules or anything else. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, to resolve this question, we have had the Rules Committee arrange a calendar a number of times for the same day on which we were operating. I would ask unanimous consent that we recess for the purpose of allowing the Rules Committee to arrange a calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves that the Convention stand at recess in order that the Rules Committee might arrange a calendar, seconded by Mr. Victor Fischer. The question is: "Shall the Convention stand at recess for that purpose?" All those in favor of recessing signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

RILEY: The Rules Committee has met and placed Ordinance 17/z in second reading for today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Rules Committee has met and placed Ordinance 17/z in second reading for today. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposal for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal 17/z for the second time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments for Committee Proposal No. 17/z? Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: A point of order. The proper order and procedure is for the chairman of the Committee to give an explanation of the proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy isn't here.

COGHILL: I believe that 17/z has plenty of explanation over the past two days so I move --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, the point of order was raised and so long as the point of order is before us, the Chair will have to rule that, if the chairman of the Committee desires to give an explanation prior to the time amendments are received, it is in line with the rules. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the only explanation the Committee chairman has to make is that Section 32 as it is written should be stricken and appropriate amendments made therefor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

WHITE: Mr. President, point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

WHITE: Hasn't it been the procedure in the past that committee amendments to any committee proposal would be accepted first?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: A point of information. We have two amendments on our desks; which one is the Committee amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, the point of order has been again raised and the Chair will have to hold that the point of order is well taken, for the time being at least. Does the Committee have an amendment that the Committee would like to bring up? Which amendment is it?

MCNEALY: It would be the longer amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The one striking the word "shall"?

COGHILL: A point of information. If my motion deals with the whole section, will that supersede an amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, the Committee does have the right, if they choose to exercise it, of offering an amendment before an individual delegate does. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed Committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 32 and insert a new Section 32 as follows: 'If the Alaska-Tennessee Plan is approved by the voters of Alaska and Alaska has not subsequently been admitted as a state of the Union, the Territorial Legislature shall enact such additional measures as in its judgment are necessary and proper to assure attainment of that end.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. McNealy?

MCNEALY: I move the adoption of the amendment.

VANDERLEEST: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the amendment, seconded by Mr. VanderLeest. The motion is open for discussion. Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to say that yesterday I got up and spoke about the need of some provision to show the people of Alaska that we do intend that this constitution not just be adopted and put on the shelves in the library, but that we hope that our action will be followed up, not only by the Tennessee Plan but that the people of Alaska do continue to take steps toward statehood. I also pointed out that the Section 32 that we had before us yesterday, the one that is proposed to be amended, is not the best thing for us. I think the amendment proposed by the Committee is the kind of a thing that deals with this in temperate terms; it shows our intent; I don't think it will be offensive to anyone; and I certainly hope that the Committee amendment will be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not -- Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I won't discuss this in detail because I think that we all understand it. I would like to point out one difference, however, between this and the original section and that is that the original section contained the words "fourth Monday in January, 1959". Now, under the Tennessee Plan as we have adopted it, a representative from the State of Alaska to the United States House of Representatives will be elected. His re-election, if thought proper, will be necessary in 1958, October of 1958, so that, if that is thought proper to keep his position in being coincident with the terms of the two senators, action by the next Territorial legislature will be necessary. This new section, if adopted, would make that allowance. I would also say that there certainly is nothing defiant or improper or unusual or different in what is contained in this new section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I ask a question of the Committee? Isn't it within the power of the legislature at any time to take such an action without having it put in the constitution? We have been trying to cut down on words and phrases and paragraphs and make the number of words in our constitution as short as possible. I think this is unnecessary because the Territorial legislature has that power at any time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I should like at this time to offer an amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson offers an amendment to the amendment.

JOHNSON: The amendment to the amendment is to strike all the matter that is enclosed in the quotes of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposed amendment to the amendment would be out of order at this time, Mr. Johnson. It is not an amendment to the amendment, Mr. Johnson; it is a complete obliteration of the proposed amendment, and it is out of order to offer such an amendment to any amendment. The Chair will have to rule that.

JOHNSON: A point of inquiry. Doesn't the Committee amendment amount to the same thing? They are obliterating the entire Section 32 as it stands.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Johnson. This is an amendment to the amendment -- to any amendment cannot take that kind of a classification. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I would just like to point out one effect I think this section now has, particularly to the proponents of the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, that you are asking the people of Alaska to take this along with the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. As it was before, you were asking them to take the Alaska-Tennessee Plan and I think this is going to bring a lot of votes against the Alaska-Tennessee Plan as it originally stood before us, but when people see this tacked on to the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, I can't help but think that there are going to be a lot of negative votes just because of this addition.

WHITE: May I address a question to Mr. Boswell?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. Boswell, could you explain to me just what in this new paragraph, in your opinion, would cause the defeat or the lessening of the number of votes for the Alaska-Tennessee Plan?

BOSWELL: Well, I noticed in last night's paper a letter to the editor criticizing our action in proposing the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. I expect that is just a beginning, and I expect there will be considerable opposition to it, maybe. Now, as it stands I think the Alaska-Tennessee Plan is all right. I am all for it and I hope the people of Alaska pass on it, but I do feel that when they have to pass on further action such as this proposes, if they approve the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, I can't help but think there will be a number more that will take that same point of view. They might take the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, but they wouldn't take it with this additional proviso.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: It doesn't appear to me that this amendment is radical in any respect. It would appear to me that it says nothing more than, if statehood is not granted, that a subsequent legislature may provide by law such necessary further measures to attain statehood. Now to me, that could mean nothing more, necessarily, than the appropriation of additional funds for the prosecution of statehood. It may be that the legislature would see fit under those circumstances to set up a consulting bureau in Washington with the proper funds and with the proper type of personnel, as Hawaii has done for a number of years in an endeavor to bring facts to various congressmen and senators. It doesn't appear to me that there is anything in here that would cause anyone to vote against the Tennessee Plan, because it leaves everything in the judgment of the legislature. It doesn't advocate any revolutionary measures. It isn't inciting anyone to rebellion or anything of that nature. I can't possibly see how it could affect anyone adversely. It merely suggests to the legislature that they shall take even further measures than they have already. So far they have set up the laws which provided for this constitution as one measure in prosecuting statehood as far as we could. This Convention has suggested that we send our congressmen and senators back to Washington in order to get statehood for us. If that fails, then this item right here states that we shall do something else. It may mean that we will implement the delegate from Alaska with more funds and personnel in an endeavor to prosecute our desire for statehood. I can't see why this should be tied together with the Tennessee Plan as such and be detrimental to it in any respect.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I am a bit puzzled. Now, either it means something and, if it does, what does it mean? Does it mean the legislature shall do that which it can do anyway and, if it doesn't mean anything, why should it be in the constitution? Now the previous speaker said that the legislature "may". The words here are "shall" in the mandatory sense that the legislature must do something, and I am a bit puzzled in light of our vote yesterday as to what is intended by this thing. If it intends nothing, if it merely instructs the legislature to do that which it can do anyway, then it is thoroughly pointless, and, if it instructs the legislature to do something that it has no power to do now, then what is it that it's instructing the legislature to do? There is complete confusion on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I think Mr. McLaughlin is belaboring the question. It points out to the legislature what, in our opinion, they should do, and the people of Alaska will then point out to the legislature that they want them to act on the subject. There is nothing improper about it; it just brings to their attention. I don't see anything novel or unusual about it and I think it is probably necessary.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed Committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 23 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Hilscher, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Riley, V. Rivers, Stewart, VanderLeest, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 26 - Armstrong, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Johnson, Laws, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien.

Absent: 6 - H. Fischer, King, Londborg, R. Rivers, Smith, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 23 yeas, 26 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. McNealy, chairman of the Ordinance Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may if there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. McNealy, in your opinion would the next Territorial legislature have authority to provide for the re-election of the representative called for under the Tennessee Plan in the general election of 1958?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, can you answer that?

MCNEALY: Mr. President, in answer to Mr. White's question, it strictly would be my opinion, and it's only a personal opinion, that I would -- putting it this way -- that if I were a member of that legislature, I would very likely hesitate to take any action of that kind that hadn't been in some manner approved by the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move that Committee Proposal No. 17/z be laid on the table.

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves. Mr. McNealy seconds the motion, that Committee Proposal No. 17/z be laid on the table.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I'll ask for a call of the house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks for a call of the house.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: I believe that under our rules a call of the house is only permissible in accordance with Robert's Rules of Order, and no one delegate can request a call of the house. It must be acted upon by motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, in the absence of a rule, the Chair recalls that one night we acted on an amendment that would have made a rule of that kind but it was not adopted, so your point of order is probably well taken, that we will have to have a motion adopted by a majority vote. The Convention will be at ease for a moment.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: In order not to hold up the proceedings and after discussing the matter with the mover of the previous motion, I will now ask to withdraw my request for a call of the house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers serves notice that he is withdrawing his call of the house. The call is ordered withdrawn.

KILCHER: I move that we take our regular afternoon recess.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

KILCHER: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher so moves.

V. RIVERS: Point of order, Mr. President. There was another order of business on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A motion for recess is in order, Mr. Victor Rivers. Is there a second?

POULSEN: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Poulsen that the Convention stand at recess for its regular recess. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess?" All those in favor of standing at recess at this time will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, with the consent of my second, I would like to withdraw my motion to lay Committee Proposal No. 17/z on the table.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill asks unanimous consent with the consent of his second that his motion to lay on the table be withdrawn. Is there objection?

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: I so move.

COOPER: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves, seconded by Mr. Cooper, that the motion to lay on the table be withdrawn. The question is: "Shall Mr. Coghill's motion to lay on the table be withdrawn?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 35 - Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 16 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Emberg, Harris, Hellenthal, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, Marston, Robertson, Sundborg, Wien.

Absent: 4 - H. Fischer, King, Londborg, Taylor.)

WHITE: May I change my vote to "yes"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White changes his vote to "yes".

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson changes his vote to "no".

MCNEES: I'll change mine to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees changes his vote to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 35 yeas, 16 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the motion is ordered withdrawn. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, now I move and ask unanimous consent to strike Section 32.

SUNDBORG: A point of order. The point of order, we have a rule that says that no amendment may be offered unless it has been cleared with the Committee involved, on second reading. Mr. President, on second reading any amendment must be cleared with the Committee involved before it may be offered, under a special rule adopted by this body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was after it comes from Style and Drafting, wasn't it, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I will --

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 17/z?

CHIEF CLERK: It is Section 30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Oh, the Chair does not have a copy. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I move on behalf of the Committee to strike Section 30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves on behalf of the Committee that Section 30 be deleted from the proposal. Is there a second?

COGHILL: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Coghill. The question is, "Shall Section 30 be deleted from Committee Proposal No. 17/z?" Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I have assumed in advance that there has been a reason for every proposal and section that has been brought before the Convention, and I certainly couldn't support a motion like this without an explanation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the reason that I and other members of the Committee were favorable to this Section 30 was because of Section 32 and, if Congress thought necessary to strike Section 32 or it should be off, then we'd have the means to do it under Section 30. Section 32 is not going to be, certainly, I can see, adopted as is or in any milder form, so I can see no reason or purpose. And I might further add as to Section 30 that the only constitution which has anything in it of that particular nature, a somewhat similar provisions, is that of Puerto Rico. We haven't copied after the Puerto Rican constitution to any great extent here, and I feel that with Section 32 out, it was advanced by one or two parties to the Committee that possibly Congress would look with jaundiced eye upon the fish trap ordinance, and that it might be a good thing to have it in so the fish trap ordinance could be struck out, and others have said, possibly as to the Tennessee Plan. However, I submit on both of those that they will go to a referendum of the people and I don't think that Congress would insist or even mention the fact that the legislature should attempt to override something that had been passed by the people, and based upon those reasons and especially in anticipation of Section 32 being out of here, there is no reason whatsoever for Section 30 to remain in. In fact, I think it is meaningless and very likely is an improper matter to retain. Otherwise, other constitutions would surely have contained provisions of this kind, except that instance stated of Puerto Rico.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves the previous question.

BUCKALEW: Second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Buckalew. The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill,

Collins, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, Knight, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Rosswog, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 24 - Armstrong, Cooper, Davis, V. Fischer, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - H. Fischer, King, Londborg, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 24 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the previous question has been ordered. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McNealy for the Committee be adopted by the Convention? The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 36 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 15 - Armstrong, Buckalew, V. Fischer, Hermann, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, White.

Absent: 4 - H. Fischer, King, Londborg, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 36 yeas, 15 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the amendment has been adopted. Are there amendments for Section 31? Does the Committee have an amendment? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the Committee has an amendment for Section 31. The amendment is to delete Section 31, and I so move the adoption of the amendment.

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves, seconded by Mr. Hellenthal, that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I didn't realize that all of these sections were brought in as a guise to cover up Section 32, and I don't think that's proper if that is what was done. It was my impression that Section 31 was brought in with a specific purpose of authorizing the legislature by vote of the people upon ratification of this constitution to provide for the transition period to accomplish such things as continuing the welfare program, continuing the health program, paying teachers, and everything else after the Territory as such has ceased to exist and before the first state legislature has appropriated the funds. If I am wrong I would like to hear so from the Committee chairman, but I certainly don't think that if there was no more reason than to cover up 32 that it was very good to bring in all these extra sections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, frankly, Section 31 there which I may have possibly -- I was out of the committee room when it was considered because I have no recollection of it until it came on the floor and I was in and out of the committee. However, we do point out that going back in the schedule we have made provisions to continue the former laws in force, and to continue our Territorial officers in office until the state takes over, to continue school districts and health districts and all of those things are provided for already in the schedule, and this is, in effect, meaningless because the combination of what we have already provided in the schedule for the orderly transition plus that that will be written into any enabling act of Congress makes this Section 31 totally useless and of no avail. And I apologize to the Convention at this time for bringing 17/z out at all, and I think since it is meaningless and since others have expressed the thought here about taking up wordage in the constitution, it certainly should not be included, and the committee amendment should be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: We have already provided for the orderly transition of government from Territorial to the state government. We have stated that the Territorial laws will carry over into the state government and those Territorial laws take care of practically everything, the payment of teachers, the work of the commissioners, and each department within the Territory. That will continue, so I don't see any reason for restating it in this section.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McNealy for the Committee be adopted?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. The amendment is to strike Section 31 from the proposal.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, Knight, Laws, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 12 - Davis, V. Fischer, Harris, Hurley, Kilcher, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Poulsen, V. Rivers, White.

Absent: 4 - H. Fischer, King, Londborg, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 12 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the amendment has been adopted. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I move that we recess until 4:05 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that the Convention stand at recess until 4:05. Is there a second?

KILCHER: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Kilcher. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 4:05?"

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, if there is a recess, there will be a meeting of the Judiciary Committee in the rear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is a recess, there will be a meeting of the Judiciary Committee in the rear. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: There will be a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee also in the rear of the gallery if there is a recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee in the rear of the gallery if there is a recess. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 4:05?" All in favor signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. Are there committee amendments for the proposal? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I move that the Committee Proposal No. 17/z, as amended, be indefinitely postponed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves that Committee Proposal No. 17/z, as amended, be indefinitely postponed. Is there a second?

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. McNealy. The question is -- Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: A point of information. Does that mean that the proposal can be brought before the Convention by motion or does that kill it permanently and indefinitely?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It could be brought before the Convention by a motion, Mr. Fischer. The Chair's recollection is that it takes two-thirds to bring it back, but the Chair wouldn't state that as a definite statement at this time, but it is the recollection of the Chair that, if the matter is indefinitely postponed, then it just takes a majority to bring it back. Mr. White.

WHITE: Is the motion debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion for indefinite postponement is debatable, that is correct. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: A vote to indefinitely postpone is a vote to kill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it would be if you didn't bring it back from indefinite postponement.

HERMANN: If you didn't rescind your action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. It has been moved and seconded that Committee Proposal No. 17/z, as amended, be indefinitely postponed. The question is open for debate if there is any. Mr. White.

WHITE: I don't like to pursue this too far. I realize that people are getting tired of all this, but I want to raise one question -- I have raised it partially before -- to be answered by anyone who is able to answer it. It appears to me that, if the Territorial legislature is unable, without further action by this body, to provide for an election of a United States representatives in the fall of 1958, we will then find ourselves in the ridiculous position, under the Tennessee Plan as we have adopted it, of having a senator until 1961 or 1963 and no representative. Now if the Territorial legislature is unable to provide --

COGHILL: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: State your point of order, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: The point of order is that under a motion to postpone indefinitely, you can't discuss and debate the merits of the main question.

WHITE: This has bearing on the main question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are in order, Mr. White. You may have the floor. The Convention will come to order.

WHITE: If somebody can satisfy me that the Territorial legislature can so provide, I am perfectly willing to drop the matter. But, if we can't I submit that it will be a ridiculous situation under the Tennessee Plan to have two senators and no representative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. White invited anybody who could answer that to answer. I would like to give what I think is the answer. If Congress seats our senators and representative, there is no problem because then we are granted statehood. If Congress doesn't seat them, the senators aren't sitting either, and I don't think there would be any particular reason to have a representative re-elected who wouldn't be recognized by Congress. That would be three years from now. If they are not seated by then, I don't think we need any, including the representative.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Committee Proposal No. 17/z, as amended, be indefinitely postponed?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 42 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 10 - Buckalew, Doogan, Kilcher, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Nordale, Riley, V. Rivers, White.

Absent: 3 - H. Fischer, Londborg, Taylor.)

CHIEF CLERK: 42 yeas, 10 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and Section 32 has been indefinitely postponed. Mr. Victor Fischer

V. FISCHER: I would like to rise to ask a question, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. Mr. Fischer, you may ask your question.

V. FISCHER: We have just taken action that would preclude any indication on the part of this Convention that we desire that further steps be taken by the legislature to advance statehood. I wonder if, among the resolutions, some of which seem quite unessential, whether we have any resolution in the works calling upon Congress to grant us statehood or calling upon the legislature to take whatever action it deems necessary to advance statehood as an expression that this body does want further action by someone.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, we have the Tennessee Plan in the ordinances, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: No, I mean, Mr. President, as a resolution that the elected senators could take to Congress or that someone could present to the legislature. I am just asking a question whether there is any statehood resolution going to come out of this Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, do you have the resolutions in your committee? Do you care to answer that?

COGHILL: It doesn't go to that extent, Mr. President, I don't believe.

GRAY: I move that we recess until 4:20.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 4:20. Are there committee announcements? Style and Drafting at the rear of the gallery; Judiciary Committee at the rear of the gallery immediately upon recess. The question is. "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 4:20?" All in favor signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes have it and the Convention is in recess.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Before we proceed with our regular business, I think the Convention has some communications. Will the Clerk please read them.

(The Chief Clerk read a telegram from Ernest F. McFarland, Governor of Arizona, expressing regret at being unable to attend the signing ceremonies, and a telegram from Congressman John P. Saylor of New York also expressing regret and sending congratulations for taking another step toward statehood.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Secretary will file the communications. On our calendar we have come to the point where I think a report from the Committee on Style and Drafting is in order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Committee on Style and Drafting reports to the Convention the complete constitution in the order which we recommend for its printing in the final document, and copies of our report, which have been struck off from the type set by the printer who is preparing the actual constitution for signing, have been placed on every delegate's desk. I might say, Mr. President, that members of the Style and Drafting Committee worked practically all night last night getting the final copy out and into the hands of the printer, and that the people at the News-Miner also worked through the night in order to have this available today. There will be several Committee changes in this document which we will ask to have made when it is considered.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Sundborg, would you care to make those recommendations now or how would you wish to proceed?

SUNDBORG: Yes, Mr. President. On behalf of the Committee on Style and Drafting, I ask that, on page 38 of our report, that the sections which appear as Section 18 and Section 19 be stricken from the report and that the succeeding sections to the end of that article be renumbered accordingly. This was in accordance with floor action taken here today deleting those two sections after we had assumed they would be going into the constitution and were printed up in this form.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you ask unanimous consent that that be done?

SUNDBORG: I do, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered. Do you have any other corrections?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, there is a typographical correction on page 39, Section 26, next to last line of that section. There is a word that says "voter"; it should be "voters", plural. It's the new Section 24, yes, in accordance with the renumbering we just did, page 39. I ask unanimous consent for that correction, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, on page 28 at the top of the page, Section 2, I ask unanimous consent that the last sentence of that section be stricken from the report. This also was in accordance with floor action taken today by the Convention. It's the sentence reading "The governor shall act as the agent of the state in all intergrovermental relations involving the state." We ask that that be stricken.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you ask unanimous consent?

SUNDBORG: Yes, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if you desire, our Committee can explain to the delegates the very few changes we have made in phraseology in putting together this final report of our Committee. There have been a few changes and then of course there also have been some changes in rearrangement of sections and we would be glad to point all those out if the delegates would like to have us do so.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair feels that the delegates should decide that question. What is the pleasure of the delegates? Do you wish to have that done?

HILSCHER: I so move.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any second to that?

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have heard the motion. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor signify by saying aye"; contrary "no". The motion carried. You may proceed, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: We have incorporated in the report all the changes which were made on the floor in second reading in language and approved by the Convention. We have in numerous places reinserted the word "shall" to change slightly the form of expression which we used in many places. For instance, I am looking at one now where it says "The grand jury consists of at least twelve citizens." We are using that kind of sentence structure, and we have changed and in places such as that we say: "The grand jury shall consist of at least twelve citizens." It is just a change of phraseology, and I believe one that most delegates will welcome. It does not change the meaning in any case. In Section 16 of Article I, Declaration of Rights, that appears on page 3, there is one change which has been made by our Committee since the article left the floor and that will be found in the third line of this section where the words "a jury of twelve" have been added. It formerly said "In civil cases where the amount in controversy exceeds $250 the right of trail by jury is preserved to the same extent as it existed at common law. We have made it read now: "The right of trial by a jury of twelve is preserved to the same extent as it existed..." etc. That was done, Mr. President, at the suggestion of the consultants and, I believe, many of the lawyers from the body suggested that that be inserted. It is not a change in substance because a "jury of twelve" is what was meant here by the Convention and I believe is what has applied in Alaska, but we thought for clarity's sake we should mention the number at that point because later on in the sentence we speak of juries which might be of as few as six members, and so I would like to ask unanimous consent that the addition of the words "of twelve" be approved by the Convention.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in Section 14 of the article on the legislature, which appears on page 6 in the fourth line of that section, you will find that it reads "No bill may become law unless it has passed three readings in each house on three separate days." Formerly it read "No bill may become law unless it has passed three readings in each house on separate days." We have inserted the word "three" before the word "separate" to carry out what we are sure was the intention of the body, that is, that there should be only one reading each day, and it was pointed out to us by the consultants that it was ambiguous in that there might have been three readings in two days under the language, because two days are separate days, and I am sure that it was the intention here that the readings be on three separate days, so we have inserted the word "three" and I will ask unanimous consent for that change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in the article on legislative apportionment, Article VI, in Section 1, page 15, the reference formerly was to Section 1 of Article XV, and we have changed the order of the articles slightly at the end so that the apportionment schedule is now Article XIV, so we have changed the wording both in Section 1 and Section 2 on page 15 to read Article XIV, which is just harmonious with the order of the articles as they now appear. I will ask unanimous consent for approval of that change at this time.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: On the next page, page 16, the same change has been made in Section 7. It now speaks of the senate districts described in Section 2 of Article XIV, where it formerly said Article XV. I will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in the article on finance, Section 8, page 22, in the third from last line of the section, it formerly read "meeting natural catastrophes". We have changed the word "catastrophes" to "disasters" in accordance with the suggestion from the consultants. We don't feel that it is substantive and it's probably a better description of what was intended by the Convention. I will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: In the apportionment schedule, on page 35, in the description of the Nome Election District, formerly the section started: "All of the Seward Peninsula..." etc. It was pointed out to us after this passed third reading that it was incorrect to say "All of the Seward Peninsula". That had been correct at one time, but the Committee on Apportionment had changed slightly the boundaries of the election district so that not all of Seward Peninsula was included. So we have changed the first part of the description to say "That part of the Seward Peninsula", and then there is a description of the exact part. The only words we have changed have been the substitution of the words "That part" for the word "All" and this was made particularly at the request of Mr. Walsh. I might say that it has also been cleared with the chairman of the Apportionment Committee and with the geographers who agree that it is now correct where it was not fully correct formerly. I will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: In the article on initiative, referendum, and recall, it starts on page 26, in Section 6, which is on page 27 -- previously, I believe it said that "a majority of the votes cast are required for the adoption or rejection of an act referred", and at the request of the Committee chairman and of the consultant, we have dropped the reference to the "approval of the act referred" and have now made it read: "If the majority of the votes cast on the proposition favor the rejection of an act referred, it is rejected."

DAVIS: That would also change the language on the approval.

SUNDBORG: Perhaps Mr. Davis is more familiar with just exactly what was done there.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I don't have the exact language in front of me, but it did read, "If a majority of the votes cast on a proposition favor the initiative, it is adopted, or the rejection, it is rejected." We broke that down into two sentences to make it clear. "If a majority of the votes cast on the proposition favor its adoption the initiated measure is enacted. If a majority of the votes cast on the proposition favor the rejection of an act referred, it is rejected."

SUNDBORG: I am sure that this was always the intent of the body. Mr. President, and it is just the language which clarifies, and I will ask unanimous consent for adoption of the change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: In the general provisions, Section 5, that is on page 30, which is a form of oath, we have supplanted the commas which formerly set off the words "or affirm" in the fourth line of that section by parentheses, which is a standard form of oath and was suggested to us by many delegates and also by the consultants. It is not a substantive change and I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in the article on amendment and revision, page 30, Section 2, Section 2 previously read "The legislature may provide for constitutional conventions." I believe it was always intended by the Convention that what was meant was that the legislature could call conventions and set them up. But some of the people who read this, particularly the consultants, said that our language was somewhat ambiguous and it could be argued that they could only provide for such constitutional conventions as had been called for by the people through the referendum provisions of the amendment and revision article. But I am sure it was always the intention of the body that the legislature itself could actually call constitutional conventions. So we have proposed changing the language to "The legislature may call constitutional conventions at any time." I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: In the transitional measures, Schedule of Transitional Measures, page 37, Section 10, there is again a reference to Article XIV. Previously this said "Article XV" because the schedule on apportionment was Article XV. But it is now Article XIV, so in two places in Section 10 on page 37 we have changed it to Article XIV, which is the correct reference. I will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in Section 17 of the transitional measures, on page 38, the section previously ended "subject to applicable Acts of Congress." We propose changing that to "except as otherwise provided by law." This again was a change which was recommended by our consultants, and today at the meeting of committee chairmen it was unanimously endorsed by the committee chairmen. We believe it makes more clear the intent of the body that the arrangements on transfer of court jurisdiction would be accomplished not only by acts of Congress but also by some acts of the Territorial legislature or the state, and we feel that the term "unless otherwise provided by law" covers both federal law and Territorial law and is a better description of what is needed in this place. So I will ask unanimous consent for adoption of that change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, on page 39, the new Section 24, which appeared on the printed copy as Section 26 of the Schedule of Transitional Measures, that is a wholly new section which was introduced at this point by the Style and Drafting Committee, and it refers to the fact that three ordinances appearing after the signatures on the constitution will become effective if the people ratify each of them. It was pointed out to us by the consultants that, unless we had a section such as this ahead of the signatures in the constitution, that there would be no provision for those ordinances, even if adopted by the people, to go into effect, including the ordinance on ratification of the constitution itself. And so the section which we propose be inserted at this place reads as follows: "Section 24. Ordinance No. 1 on ratification of the constitution, Ordinance No. 2 on the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, and Ordinance No. 3 on the abolition of fish traps, adopted by the Alaska Constitutional Convention and appended to this constitution, shall be submitted to the voters and if ratified shall become effective as provided in each ordinance." Mr. President, since this is, I feel, substantive to introduce this section, although it is necessary to be introduced, I ask that the rules be suspended so that the Style and Drafting Committee may submit that amendment. I ask unanimous consent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have heard the request for suspension of the rules. Are there any objections?

R. RIVERS: A point of inquiry. Mr. Sundborg, these three are coupled here and I was wondering if, on the last three lines, we should say "shall be submitted to the voters and if ratified respectively" or something like that. Now there is a slight hint, a slight suggestion here that they all three have got to be ratified. I would like to hear either from you or Mr. Davis. I just want to be sure.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Davis wasn't responsible for this language. It was put in about 3:30 this morning. Mr. Fischer, would you care to comment on that?

V. FISCHER: I would say, if I may, in reply to Mr. Ralph Rivers, that the language would seem explanatory since it refers to the particular ordinances. In each ordinance a separate ratification and effective clause is contained, so that simply by reference to the ordinance one can see that there is no relationship between them, necessarily, except for one thing, and this would involve very complicated language if we tried to clarify it here. Both the fish trap and the Tennessee plan ordinances will become effective only if the constitution is ratified, but not the other way around, so that the clearest way is to leave it just as it is and leave the reference within each ordinance.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers, does that clarify it?

R. RIVERS: Yes, that satisfies me.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Sundborg, I notice what might be an inconsistency in style. In Section 27, I think it is now Section 25, page 39, you said "admission of Alaska into the Union as a State", capitalizing the "S". However, on page 41 in Section 7, you refer to "state" in the same sense and do not capitalize the "s".

SUNDBORG: You caught us, Mr. Hellenthal. As used in Section 27 the word "state" should not be capitalized. The "State" or reference to the "State of Alaska" when speaking only of this state according to our rules of punctuation calls for a capital. But if we are speaking of "a state", any old state, it is down style.

HELLENTHAL: The common variety.

SUNDBORG: The common garden variety of state. So I ask unanimous consent that on page 39 -- excuse me, I think I had another unanimous consent request pending.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I would like permission, before passing on the unanimous consent, to ask a question of Mr. Sundborg.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may, Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. Sundborg, what was the thought behind listing ordinances as numbers 1, 2, and 3, rather than just leaving them in sections? I ask this in all sincerity because, when going back to the other constitutions and similar matters, they are listed just as sections, not as separate ordinances. I might add further that the Committee's legal interpretation is that everything down to and including Section 27 is an ordinance.

SUNDBORG: Mr. McNealy and Mr. President, we have had the same theory explained to us by Mr. Hurley who was a member of our Committee as well as of the Ordinance Committee, and I have no doubt that you are correct and I am sure you must be and I know you have given it a lot of study, that each of these matters mentioned in the transitional measures is an ordinance. But we desired to set off the three ordinances which would be voted upon by the people of Alaska so that they could clearly see, at the very end of the constitution and after the signatures, what the three separate propositions would be. Our proposal is that in the constitution which is signed, the signatures would come at a point which occurs here on page 39. It would be after what is now Section 27 of the Schedule of Transitional Measures -- excuse me, renumbered Section 25 -- and before any of the ordinances. And our reason for suggesting that is that the ordinances are not a part of the constitution and will not become a part unless and until they are acted upon favorably by the voters at referendum elections. And so we felt they should be set out clearly afterwards so we have set them up as Ordinance No. 1, and since it was -- especially the second ordinance, that on the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, rather long and complicated, we felt it was preferable to refer to it as an ordinance and to the various parts under it as sections so we could set it apart more clearly, for the citizens of Alaska to understand than would be possible if we ran it all into one section. It's just a matter of style and arrangement, I believe, and has no bearing on the legal standing of the ordinances or of the transition measures.

MCNEALY: Has there been any precedent in other constitutions for any of the ordinances appearing after the signatures rather than before? I recognize that this Convention I know this would be a legal fact -- that we can adopt ordinances outside of the constitution itself and they can be submitted to the voters. I wondered in ordinances of this kind if there had been any precedent for -- if they're to be considered set apart, or is it the opinion of the Committee that Section 26 does bring them within the purview of the signing?

SUNDBORG: Mr. McNealy, that, of course, was our purpose for inserting Section 24 ahead of the signatures, so that we could incorporate the three ordinances which will be subject to referendum by reference and, if they are approved by referendum or after referendum, they will become a part of the constitution. They will go into effect as each of them states. But we just felt it was a matter of clarity. Now, as to your question of what is the precedent for arrangement in this way, I can't answer you. I can only say that it is quite unusual, and we haven't found any cases where ordinances as long as these, particularly the one on the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, have ever been written up at the time that a constitution has been drafted. Most of the ordinances we have seen have been very brief and usually dealing only with the fact of ratification. I just haven't seen ordinances of this kind.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, may I ask a question of the Chair? What is the unanimous consent question before the Chair at this moment?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Suspension of the rules, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: For what purpose?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: In order to sanction the Committee's action.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask for a two-minute recess to talk over some matters with the Committee on Ordinances.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Well, Mr. Kilcher, we are in a stage here where you can ask questions. You can't amend yet. If you care to draw up an amendment, you can do that after we hear the Committee report.

KILCHER: But since we have arrived at the point where the Committee report is asked to be accepted by unanimous consent --

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: We haven't suspended the rules yet. You are free to ask any question you want. But you can amend later on if you care to.

KILCHER: Can't you amend under a majority rule?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: We will have a two-minute recess.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher, you have a question to ask?

KILCHER: Yes. Mr. Sundborg, am I right -- If I remember that in our enacting clause of transitional measures and ordinances we had the words "appended hereto" included in the enacting clause and I wondered why it had been omitted now ahead of the schedule.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the enacting clause does not appear in the text of any constitution. As you remember, we had an enacting clause required by our rules at the head of every committee proposal that came in. There is a provision saying that every proposal must have an enacting clause saying so and so, and they aren't in here in any of the articles. And I have never seen a constitution that kept putting in enacting clauses. The thing speaks for itself. It's enacted by us. It is ratified by the people.

KILCHER: Ordinances 1, 2, and 3, are they part of Article XV?

SUNDBORG: They are by reference, by virtue of the language of Section 24, but they will become part of Article XV only if they are ratified by vote of the people of Alaska.

KILCHER: Thank you.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I bring out another point? Mr. Sundborg, will there be something inserted on page 39 after the schedules to the effect "We, the undersigned delegates, adopt and establish this constitution." Will we have some enacting language stuck in at that point when we sign tomorrow?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President and Mr. Rivers, that is correct. We have been looking over the constitutions of various states to get some appropriate language that will say "agreed upon and signed this fifth day of February, 1956, at the University of Alaska" etc., just ahead of the signatures.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The suspension of the rules has been requested by the chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee. Do I hear any objections?

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Sundborg.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. Go ahead.

KILCHER: Mr. Sundborg, in your opinion is the arrangement of the schedule of transitional measures and ordinances -- has in no way changed the legal position of Section 22 dealing with the capital of Alaska? In other words, that Section 22 dealing with the capital of Alaska still is understood to be a transitional measure and as such to be changeable by law as we have stated formerly on the record?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Mr. Kilcher, the section you refer to, I believe has been renumbered Section 20, is the one on the capital and it appears in the schedule of transitional measures and the heading on that is to provide an orderly transition from a territorial to a state form of government. It is "declared and ordained" and then we have each of these things which is transitional in nature. The arrangement here is exactly in the place where it was as it passed on the floor and there has been no change in its legal standing by reason of where it is placed in the constitution.

KILCHER: In other words the legal standing is the same as previously stated on the record?

SUNDBORG: It is just exactly as it has always been when passed by the Convention.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections to the request for suspension of the rules? If not, it is so ordered. What is your pleasure, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I now offer on behalf of the Style and Drafting Committee an amendment consisting of the insertion of Section 24. I ask the Chief Clerk to read that section.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 24. Ordinance No. 1 on ratification of the constitution, Ordinance No. 2 on the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, and Ordinance No. 3 on the abolition of fish traps, adopted by the Alaska Constitutional Convention and appended to this constitution, shall be submitted to the voters and if ratified shall become effective as provided in each ordinance."

BOSWELL: In my copy it is Section 26, not Section 24.

CHIEF CLERK: It has been changed.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Boswell, a little earlier, unanimous consent was given to delete what was printed as Section 18 and Section 19, which were rejected this afternoon on the floor, and we renumbered those subsequent sections. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, for the adoption of the amendment submitted by the Style and Drafting Committee.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered. You may proceed, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in the language dealing with the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, which is Ordinance No. 2, on page 41, Section 4, previously the section read: "Two persons to serve as members of the Senate of the United States and one person to serve as a member of the House of Representatives of the United States shall be chosen at the 1956 general election." This seemed to raise the question in the minds of some whether these persons were actually United States Senators and a United States Representative in the view of this Convention, and since we feel that that is our view, we wanted to make it stronger by changing the language to what now appears, "Two United States Senators and one United States Representative shall be chosen at the 1956 general election", not just three person who would serve in those positions. And so we suggested making that change in Section 4 on page 41, and I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg, the Chair would interrupt you for a little while. Do you have very many more amendments?

SUNDBORG: No, sir. I am almost finished.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Well, you may proceed then.

SUNDBORG: On page 42, Section 15, previously the reference to an article number at the fifth from the bottom line was to Article XIV. We have changed that to Article XV because of the change in the arrangement of the articles making the transitional measures Article XV instead of Article XIV as previously. We ask unanimous consent for adoption of that change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection?

CHIEF CLERK: Was that XV?

SUNDBORG: It should be Article XV as it appears in the printed copies. Excuse me. That is in Section 15 of the Ordinance No. 2 on the Alaska-Tennessee Plan appearing on page 42.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objection it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have another change to request unanimous consent for adoption and that is that, on page 42 in that same section, Section 15, where it now says Section 27, by virtue of the fact that we have renumbered the sections in the transitional measures, the correct reference is now Section 25, and that should be changed on the copies of delegates, and I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that change.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, there is one additional amendment which does not appear on the printed copies and for which I would like to ask unanimous consent. This has to do with Article XIII dealing with constitutional amendment and revision on page 30, Section 1. In the second sentence it now reads, "The secretary of state shall prepare a ballot title and proposition summarizing each proposed amendment and shall place them on the ballot for the next general election." At the suggestion of the consultants and by unanimous endorsement of the committee chairmen, we striking the word "general" and inserting the word "statewide" so that it would read "shall place them on the ballot for the next statewide election". The reason for this is that when the "legislature shall by two-thirds vote of each house propose a constitutional amendment" we don't like to require that the people wait for what may be a period as long as two years before they can vote upon the matter if it is that far to the next general election. We feel that it is necessary that they be voted upon at a statewide election, and we think it might be desirable to leave it open for the legislature, if it desires, to provide for a special statewide election at which the proposed amendment to the constitution could be considered or at the primary election if it should fall within a time when that would be a practical way to handle it. So, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for adoption of the amendment which would strike the word "general" and insert in its place the word "statewide" in Section 1, page 30.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, this is purely typographical. The delegates may wish to make a correction on page 40. The final section in the question which will go on the ballot with respect to the Alaska-Tennessee Plan, the word "ordinance", the second word of the question or proposition should be capitalized, "Shall Ordinance No. 2" should be capital "O". Mr. President, those are the only changes in our report and if the delegates have other questions we will attempt to answer them, but those are the only requests we have to make for changes.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Before we proceed further, we have a problem here to take care of while our President is absent. You will recall that we had a special nominating committee appointed yesterday to come in with nominees to make presentation to our President and, in his absence, I feel that we should settle the matter now. If it is agreeable with the delegates, we can call for the report of the nominating committee. Hearing no objections, we will proceed in that manner. The chairman of the nominating committee --

V. FISCHER: I ask unanimous consent that no recording be made of the proceedings now to take place.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

(The Convention heard the report of the nominating committee at his time.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I don't have an announcement, I have another matter.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: We will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Davis has the floor.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I would like to call attention to another change that was made that Mr. Sundborg overlooked in making his report. I would like to refer you to page 36 of the printed copy, Section 5 at the top of the page. Now that section as it originally read in the draft said Residence or other qualifications prescribed by this constitution shall be satisfied by corresponding qualifications under the Territory." Our consultants felt that that probably did not say exactly what we wanted it to say and did not cover the ground it was intended to cover. For that reason we took language from the Hawaiian constitution which we thought would cover, added to it a little bit to cover what we thought the Convention wanted done in this place, and made it read Residence, citizenship, or other qualifications under the Territory may be used toward the fulfillment of corresponding qualifications required by this constitution." In other words, if a person has to have a residence requirement of seven years to be governor and he has been five years a resident of the Territory, then after two years under statehood he would be eligible to be governor without being seven years under the state. That is what I am sure was meant by the thing as adopted and I believe that the language we have used probably makes it a little more clear. With that in mind, I would like at this time to ask unanimous consent approving the action we took in amending the wording of that section.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: During recess two errors in typography, purely mechanical errors, were pointed out to me. On page 20, the article on natural resources, Section 11, occurring at the top of the page. This is not a change. It was just an error that the words "leases, and" were inadvertently dropped; the top line on page 20 after the word "permits", this should be inserted, "leases, and". Those words appeared in that place in the enrolled copy and in our former Style and Drafting Committee report and they were just omitted by the printer, apparently. I ask unanimous consent that they be inserted here where they belong.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections? If not, it is so ordered.

SUNDBORG: In the same section, Mr. President, in the fifth line from the bottom, the line begins "to patents". The "s" should be stricken on the word "patents" so it would read "patent of mineral lands". This again is a typographical error and I ask unanimous consent for adoption of the correction.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Are there any questions the delegates would like to ask the chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee? Any further questions?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, there have been a good many changes in the rearrangement of some of the sections, particularly in the sections dealing with the miscellaneous provisions. We put them in a slightly different order. We have moved into the transitional measures a few things from the articles themselves which were transitional, purely transitional in nature, and we have put back in the general and miscellaneous provisions a few provisions from the separate articles which we felt more properly belonged there. I woulder if I could ask Mr. Fischer of our Committee to explain such changes as have been made of that kind.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, in Article I, the Declaration of Rights, a number of sections were changed in sequence only. The sequence was changed to follow a pattern of going from criminal actions to civil actions that were covered in that article, rather than having criminal actions, then some miscellaneous sections, and then going into civil action. In the judiciary two sections were deleted. They were already covered in transitional measures, those dealing with offices of profit and with the first judicial council. The provision in Article V on suffrage and elections dealing with special voting provisions for those who voted in 1924 was transferred to the transitional measures article. Similar transfer was made of three sections from the legislative apportionment article, those sections dealing with the election of the first senators, the election of first representatives, and the first reapportionment. In Article VII on health, education, and welfare, we brought in two new sections that were previously in General and Miscellaneous. Those were the sections dealing with the state university and the board of regents. It was felt that this would be a more proper place for those two sections rather than in the general and miscellaneous. We placed those two after public education and before public health and welfare. In the article on natural resources, Article VIII, we deleted Section 19 covering residual powers, as that was covered in the section on residual powers in the article on general provisions. The section in the natural resource article referred to the residual powers dealing with, if I remember correctly, the utilization, development, and something else of natural resources. The residual powers section in the general provisions deals with all residual powers and, therefore, would include those in the natural resource article. We also transferred Section 20 out of the resource article and made it Section 1 of Article XII on the general provisions, since that is a provision that deals with the general aspect of the state. The provision in Article IX on finance and taxation dealing with Territorial assets and liabilities which was amended also to include records of the Territory, was moved into the transitional measures since that is a provision that deals only with the transition from the Territory to the state, no matter how long such transition might take. It was further felt that any obligations or assets covered by that particular section would be contractual obligations in any case. There were no further changes in the next several articles. In Article XII on general and miscellaneous, there was some rearrangement of sections to take into account the subject matter of each section. Previously the sections had just been tagged on, one after the other, and as I mentioned previously, the sections on the state university and the board of regents were transferred out. On Article XV, Transitional Measures, there was a substantial amount of rearranging again to follow a logical sequence of sections. There were no further changes aside from those that I have mentioned in connection with moving certain provisions from specific articles into Transitional Measures, except for the removal of the four sections dealing with the ratification of the constitution and putting those into a separate ordinance, subject to adoption by the people of Alaska.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: What is the wish of the Committee in regard to these changes?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for approval of the order or the arrangement of the constitution as suggested by the Style and Drafting Committee.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections?

HINCKEL: I object, temporarily. I would like to ask a question. It isn't a change exactly in there by Style and Drafting, but it hadn't occurred to me to ask it before. But we have always referred to these transitional measures as being "appended to" the constitution and not considered as part of it, but the way the final arrangement has come out, we still have it as Article XV of the constitution and it appears to me that is setting up substantial grounds for the people questioning in the future the fact that those things are a part of the constitution. Therefore, we would not be able to change them. There are some things in these transitional measures which I know it is not the will of the majority of the body that they shall always remain unchanged. I would like an explanation on that.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hinckel, the fact that article numbers are given to the transitional measures is not changed. That was formerly always called Article XIV and we have put it back to become Article XV, and what we have done, we have switched the order between the transitional measures and the apportionment schedule. The apportionment schedule was previously referred to and went through the Convention as Article XV and it now becomes Article XIV as we felt it should be a little farther ahead in the constitution than the transitional measures, which will drop out of effectiveness as time goes on as the limits of each are reached by just the workings of time. Now the words here, "appended to the constitution", I believe, didn't come up at all until yesterday. I don't think it was ever before the body until we brought up the matter of just what we should say in the enacting clause having to do with the transitional measures and with the ordinances.

HINCKEL: I realize the statement you just made is true, but is it customary in the other constitutions for these transitional measures to be handled as an article of the constitution or are they headed up in a little different manner? I haven't studied that myself and I imagine you already know and you can answer it yes or no.

SUNDBORG: I would say, Mr. President, in answer to that that they are handled both ways. They are sometimes given an article number and then sometimes just referred to as the schedule. But in either case, they appear before the signatures in the constitution and the only thing that appears after the signatures of the delegates is the material which is subject to further and separate ratification by the people, as is the case with the three ordinances which we suggest be after the signatures.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I believe I might clarify that one point with the Chair's permission, as to the wording of "appended". It's a language of the court and we had never used it here. It has been the common usage of all the courts to refer to the schedule as being appended to the constitution and regardless had we never used that language here, since we do call this a schedule and since it is a schedule of ordinances, the courts will always refer to this as being appended to the constitution even though it is assigned an article number. That is the law since the earlier state constitutions had that.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Does that explain it, Mr. Hinckel, to your satisfaction?

HINCKEL: I am satisfied.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I direct a question to Mr. McNealy?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may.

R. RIVERS: I agree that when we enacted these transitional measures we said that we were enacting them to be appended to the constitution. Would it not be better then, if we struck the designation "Article XV" and just don't call it an article, and then the schedule of transitional measures positively show it is appended. Striking "Article XV" here would be consistent with the enacting language which we used when we said "appended to".

MCNEALY: Mr. President, we used mainly the western states which had comparable situations or conditions with ours in the Ordinance Committee, and they had used the word "schedule" and also "articles" and we considered the language of those particular states, and I would very much fear to upset the balance any further by any indication that this schedule wasn't considered a part of the constitution because the Ordinance Committee relied entirely on court decisions. The decisions of all these courts where they have been given an article number, as offhand, in Oregon the schedule is Article XVIII, and there are a large number of court decisions there which hold that that is a schedule of transitory ordinances appended to the constitution, and we have already a great number of decisions along that particular line. To not call it an article might not have such great effect but it would require me, at least, to go back to the law books to be satisfied that we didn't somehow endanger the transitional ordinances.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: The arrangement here was worked out in the first instance by a subcommittee composed of Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Johnson and myself, and we looked into this matter of should these be called schedules, should they be called articles, or what not. Now, if you will note on page 29, Section 10, Article XII, there is a specific instruction: "Titles and subtitles shall not be used in construing this constitution." From that standpoint it wouldn't matter too much, then, in terms of the actual arrangement. We did for a while consider calling the apportionment schedule "Schedule 1" and the transitional measures "Schedule 2", and the ordinances "Schedule 3". However, the effect would not really matter. We, last night, went through the same process as Mr. McNealy described, with Mr. Owen, checking through a number of constitutions and found that, generally, these provisions are included before the signatures and are called all sorts of things. But the legal effect is the same. They are transitional measures. The important thing here is the preamble to Article XV, page 35, which reads, "To provide an orderly transition from a Territorial to a state form of government, it is declared and ordained:", and that is a lot more important than the terminology of whether it's an article or schedule or whether you call it a transitional measure or transitional ordinances. That is the major thing. Now, while I am on the subject, also I will refer to a question previously asked about the separation of the three ordinances. By reference they are included in the constitution through Section 24 of Article XV. That reference will also serve as a historical marker. However, once they have been ratified and most of their provisions almost fall out of effect since they deal primarily with the election and what takes place immediately; from that standpoint they are part of the constitution and at the same time they can fall off without affecting any other part of the constitution. The transitional measures are incorporated above the signatures as I think they are in most, if not every constitution, because in some of these cases their effect may be lasting for quite a while and is properly included, but these three substantial ordinances are incorporated by reference only.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: May I ask Mr. Fischer a question?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may.

MCNEES: Did you consider the possibility of the use of the word "addendum" there in place of "Article XV."

V. FISCHER: No, that was not considered. Frankly, I never saw that in any of the constitutions.

MCNEES: It means a part of but added to, to be deleted later.

V. FISCHER: No, we did not consider that.

MCNEES: May I further ask my question of Mr. McNealy? Do you think that word might satisfy the floor, as long as there is some question there of wanting to set it apart; if that word in place of the words "Article XV might be added, it might set it further apart?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McNealy, do you care to answer that?

MCNEALY: Well, Mr. President, regardless of what we called it, it wouldn't be set apart any more than it is, and when it comes to my reading and interpreting court decisions the old language that has been used time after time, I think, would be preferable rather than attempting to use entirely new language at this period out here without knowing what -- unless we would go on record here, we might say that we on record here by saying that "addendum" would mean a "schedule"; if we wanted to go through that. I believe that all of the particular points -- if any of the delegates have any questions as to the schedule and want to read any of the law that I have available here, I would be glad to furnish it here at the desk.

MCNEES: I would like to give a correction though to a mis-impression I might have given. I didn't mean to change the words "Schedule of Transitional Measures" at all, just change the article -- strike the article number and put in the word "addendum".

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear objection to the unanimous consent for the adoption of this change as made by the Style and Drafting Committee? If not, it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Before asking that our report as a whole be accepted, I would like to say in order that the finished constitution can be printed and ready for signing on Sunday, we have to have finished proofs in the hands of the printers tonight; and there is a crew working at the print shop waiting for corrections from the Convention. I think it would be highly desirable, before we ask that our report be accepted, that the constitution be read through, word for word, by every delegate, preferably that it be read here on the floor of the Convention by the Chief Clerk or some others who would like to spell her at that task, so that we could, all of us, look at it and make sure it says just exactly what we want it to say, because this will probably be our last chance to make corrections.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you request that?

SUNDBORG: I do request that we read the constitution all the way through tonight.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections?

R. RIVERS: I object for the moment. I am a little concerned about the boiler-room work on the rest of the journals which I guess are fairly far behind and whether or not we could read this tomorrow instead -- work out something -- anyway stop and think for the moment...

SUNDBORG: The print shop tells us very definitely that unless we get these corrections to them tonight so they can print this material on the parchment paper which is going to be used for the signing, that paper will not be dry enough to handle and put together in the form of the finished constitution for signing Sunday afternoon. If we don't read it tonight and get all the corrections in, we will just have to sign blank sheets of parchment paper. So I recommend strongly that if we are going to make any further corrections in this, we do it tonight.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers, your objection?

RIVERS: I have no objection.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. White.

WHITE: I think it would be a good procedure but it also occurs to me that each committee member going over his or her own section of the constitution in some detail, comparing it to the enrolled copy, I mean the report of the Style and Drafting Committee, might also be of some benefit, and since this is going to be a long procedure and we have to eat anyway, I wonder if we might not recess for the purpose of eating and for the purposes of committee members going over their own articles in some detail and then when we come back read it all through on the floor. Would that suit your purpose, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President and Mr. White, we are certainly agreeable to that.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Would you put that in the form of a motion then?

WHITE: I move and ask unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 7:30 p.m.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any objections?

KILCHER: I object.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you so move, Mr. White?

WHITE: I so move.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have heard the motion. Are you ready for the question? Before we vote on this I would like to announce that some of the ladies have some tablecloths that some of the delegates have failed to sign, and they are very anxious for them to come back in the rear and sign these tablecloths. I wish you would take note of that at recess. Mr. Hurley, do you have an announcement?

HURLEY: I would like for the special presidential and nominating committee to meet immediately upon recess.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I don't have a committee announcement at the time, but there was a pair of black zipper galoshes or rubbers taken from the cloakroom last night, size 9. If anybody has taken a pair, will they please return them to the Administration Committee and I will return them to their rightful owner.

KILCHER: May I ask a question of Mr. White?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: This is just an announcement period. However I would grant you that time.

KILCHER: I would like to ask Mr. White if he would object to advancing the time a half hour in a new motion for we have nothing else to do but eat lunch, and no committee work.

(Objection is heard.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All those in favor of the motion signify by saying "aye"; contrary "no". So ordered.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Will the delegates take their seats, please? Sergeant at Arms, will you see if there are any delegates around.

CHIEF CLERK: We don't even have a quorum.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will be at ease. We don't seem to have a quorum. Does the special committee on the minutes have a report to make at this time?

WHITE: Mr. President, reporting on the journal for the 65th Convention day, we ask the following changes be made. The journals are on the delegates' desks in new folders, starting with the 65th day, I believe. There should be new folders on your desks starting with the 65th day. In the journal for the 65th day on the first page, third paragraph from the bottom, the middle line, where it says "was Mr. Harris' consideration", change that to read "reconsideration". On page 10, paragraph 4, reference to "Mr. Kilcher", strike the "s". Page 11, fifth paragraph from the bottom, the paragraph beginning "Mrs. Sweeney", in the next to last line after "be adopted." insert "Without objection it was so ordered". Page 13, second paragraph, beginning "Miss Awes", second line between "substantive" and "phraseology" insert the word "or". On the journal for the 66th Convention day, Friday, January 27, we ask the following changes be made: Page 1, third paragraph from the bottom where it says "Mr. Rivers", it should be "Mr. R. Rivers." Page 3, paragraph 1, second line, "Miss Sweeney" should be "Mrs. Sweeney". Page 13, paragraph 5, beginning "Mr. V. Rivers", second line, after the word "amendment" insert "to Article III". Mr. President, with those corrections, we move and ask unanimous consent for approval of the journals of the 65th and 66th Convention days.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered. Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: May we have a recess for about 30 seconds?

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Knight, did you accomplish your objective?

KNIGHT: Yes, sir.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: We have the constitution before us, and the Secretary, I believe, will proceed to reading it as requested prior to recess.

SUNDBORG: I would like to suggest as we read this, we pause at the end of each article to give the clerk a chance to get her breath, and also ask that the delegates who have found any errors or what they consider to be errors in that article call them to the attention of the Committee at that time.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you mean as to punctuation, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Yes, anything at all

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: No amendments though?

SUNDBORG: No amendments.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Secretary, will you please read.

(The Chief Clerk read the Preamble to the constitution and Article I of the constitution as contained in the Report of the Committee on Style and Drafting dated February 3, 1956.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any questions on Article I? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Section 1, should there be a comma after "opportunities" in that series? "equal rights, opportunities and protection"?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Mrs. Nordale, who is a member of the subcommittee which has been attending to punctuation, tells me that it would be proper to have a comma after "opportunities". That is page 1, Section 1, after the word "opportunities", on the third from last line, insert a comma.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: The word "equal" I think should apply to "protection under the law" as well as to "rights and opportunities". I don't like to see "and protection under the law" separated from the word "equal"; "equal rights and opportunities". What is the "and" for?

SUNDBORG: Our style in this, I might say, is that we do use a comma before the "and" in a series throughout the constitution and this is one place we seemed to have missed.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You do recommend the change then?

SUNDBORG: Yes. I would ask unanimous consent to place a comma after "opportunities". It is also called to my attention that in the Preamble after the word "civil" in the third line there should be a comma - "civil and religious liberty within the Union of States". I would ask consent to put a comma there.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Would the delegates please make that correction. I don't think it needs a motion there. Any other questions? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Is that consistent now, throughout the constitution? I don't think much of that rule.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, that is a rule that our subcommittee on punctuation did accept and adopt; this style of punctuation, to put a comma before the final "and" or "or" in a series, not when there are only two things like if there were only "civil and religious" there wouldn't be a comma with the "and", but if there are three like "political civil, and religious liberties" there would be a comma before and". Are there any other questions?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: I would like to ask Mr. Sundborg a question - perhaps I missed - was a comma just put in after "opportunities" :

SUNDBORG: I asked permission to, Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: Was that for the reason that it does not mean equal rights, opportunities, and protection under the law?

SUNDBORG: It means all three.

WIEN: Even with the comma it means that?

SUNDBORG: That would be my thought, Mrs. Wien.

HURLEY: I think the Bill of Rights Committee is the one that should answer that question. If they mean that all persons are entitled to equal rights and opportunities and protection under the law, and "opportunities" is not a separate item, why I think we should know it now. I don't know what they mean, but it makes a lot of difference.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Chairman of the Preamble Committee, would you care to answer that?

AWES: We do mean all three. I think that means they are entitled to equal rights, equal opportunities, and equal protection under the law.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hurley, does that answer your question?

HURLEY: Yes.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any other questions?

HURLEY: Mr. President, I noticed something that may have been a result of printing. In Section 9, the subtitle, I ask Mr. Sundborg, is self-incrimination a hyphenated word and if it is should incrimination be capitalized?

SUNDBORG: It is a hyphenated word. I would say that it should be a capital "I" in incrimination occurring in that form.

HURLEY: I notice in other subtitles where hyphenated words are used, the second half of the hyphenated word is not capitalized.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder if in those other cases though, the hyphen came between two parts of a hyphenated pair of words. I know in lots of places here where the word is so long that it must be continued on the second line, then of course the second line doesn't start with a capital. If it's a new word -- page 23, I am told, there is one. Oh, well, it's only when it's the first letter in a line that it's capitalized. I mean if self-incrimination could all have gone on one line, incrimination would not have been capitalized, but since it does start the second line -- page 21, in "nondiscrimination" I would say if that was all one word, it would be as it's shown here. It's a hyphenated word "discrimination" should be a capital "D". Maybe the Committee can tell me if that is used as one word or a hyphenated (hyphenated) word.

COGHILL: In the finance article I do think "nondiscrimination" is a single word.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Nerland, would you care to answer that?

NERLAND: I'm sorry, I wasn't following the discussion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Would you repeat that, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I don't blame Mr. Nerland a bit. (Laughter) On page 21 it was pointed out that in Section 2, the subhead "nondiscrimination", that the "d" in discrimination is not capitalized and I was asking if "nondiscrimination" is not a single word, and it's only hyphenated in this way because it's too long to go on a single line. If it is one word it is used correctly here, and if it is a hyphenated word there would (would) be a capital "D".

NERLAND: Well, Mr. Sundborg, I think this is one of the finest compliments that has ever been paid me. (Laughter) Thank you very much.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Chief Clerk tells me that the dictionary says that nondiscrimination is a single word and so it is used correctly here. And I would say that the question that was asked in regard to Section 9. page 2, it is correct as shown, "self-incrimination". It is two words.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions? If not, the Secretary will proceed with the next article, Article II, The Legislature.

(The Chief Clerk read Article II of the constitution as contained in the record of the Committee on Style and Drafting dated February 3, 1956.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any questions on Article II? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: With permission of the chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee, I find that the comma committee has a bag left over here. I might say that this debatable process of putting commas before "and" in a series was not finally agreed upon before we got up to Article IV, so in the first three articles undoubtedly, to save people from jumping up and saying "You are inconsistent", I will call your attention to some commas. I do not personally care whether they are put in or not, but we should do so to be consistent, I guess. On page 4, fourth line from the bottom, after "elected"; page 5 Section 6, third line from the bottom of the section, after "to"; page 6, Section 13, third line from the top, after "revising".

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: In concurrence with Mr. Hurley, I will point out one more that we have overlooked. At the top of page 5, after the words "secretary of state", second line.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The delegates will please make the corrections. I don't think it's necessary to make a motion on that. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to ask a question of Mr. Sundborg. Would you care to consider the suggestion I made regarding line 1, page 5, or do you think it is all right?

SUNDBORG: Mr. Hinckel wondered -- if you will turn to the first line of page 5 -- Mr. Hinckel suggested that it might sound better instead of saying "or holding the office of governor, secretary of state, or member of Congress", if we said "holding office as governor, secretary of state, or member of Congress". I must say I don't have any strong feeling one way or the other myself.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you wish to give your reasons, Mr. Hinckel?

HINCKEL: Well, if you read it without -- leave out the governor and secretary of state and say "seeking or holding the office of member of Congress", it just struck me as sounding rather odd. I am not a grammarian, but it just didn't sound right to me and I thought possibly it might be worthy of consideration.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I really think that if it were only holding "of" office, it would sound equally good to say holding office "as", but since it also includes "seeking" I don't think we could say "seeking office 'as' governor or seeking office 'as' secretary of state". They are seeking the office "of". I really believe it is better the way it is.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions or corrections? If not, the Secretary will proceed with Article III, The Executive.

(The Chief Clerk read Article III of the constitution as contained in the report of the Committee on Style and Drafting dated February 3, 1956.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any questions in regard to Article III? Let's have order, please. Mr. Hurley, do you wish --

HURLEY: Mr. President, in these series did the body desire that we make the official corrections or that the proof readers make them. I am asking the chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I just think that if they were pointed out here, maybe some of the delegates would like to correct their copies so they would all be alike.

HURLEY: Well, Mr. President, if I can correct them I am sure anybody can, but I will point them out. Page 9, Section 10, first line, after the word "resigns"; same page, Section 14, third line, after "duties"; Section 16, next to last line, after "department"; excuse me, on also the third from last line, after "duty". I ask the indulgence of the Convention when we come to the next article. I think we have taken care of these. Page 10, Section 21, after "commutations" on line 2; Section 22, line 3, after "powers"; same section, third line from the bottom, after "quasi-judicial". It has been called to my attention that there is one in Section 6, page 8, after the word "State" in the last line of the section. Mr. President, I ask that these be accepted.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Delegates please make that correction. It does not require a motion. Are there any other corrections or questions? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I address a question to Mr. Sundborg? Mr. Sundborg, perhaps this is unnecessary, but I notice that there is more space between sections than there is following the last section and the designations of the Article IV, and that seems to be pretty consistently followed. Is that the intention in the final printing, that that narrow spacing be used?

SUNDBORG: No. There will be greater space between the articles in the final printing than is shown here, and the one you pointed out on page 11, I am sure that is just a mistake in spacing, that there is a greater space between Section 26 and Section 27. I think that the extra spacing there should have been inserted after Section 27 and before Article IV.

HELLENTHAL: Then, if anything, you will provide for more spacing to separate articles off?

SUNDBORG: That is true, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions or corrections? Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I think it is appropriate to say a word or two in regard to an item of omission on this. A number of the delegates asked about a clause that they think should have been inserted in this article and I want to say that that was a conflict of interest clause. However, it was decided in discussions by a lot of us and some members of the Committee that that should be left for legislative matters. They felt that heads of the principal departments -- suppose the head of a principal department, the head of the Purchasing Department should not also be the head of a wholesale firm. But those things we feel, and I want the record to show, we feel should be handled by the legislature.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Rivers, will your Committee have a committee amendment to request in this section in line with the recommendation made in today's meeting of committee chairmen?

V. RIVERS: That was to remove from the article "The governor shall be the agent of". We have already done that. We have changed the words "general election" to "statewide election".

SUNDBORG: Was that the only one?

V. RIVERS: Those were the only two.

SUNDBORG: How about absence from office?

V. RIVERS: Oh yes. Absence from office. I understood that you were going to handle that in Style and Drafting. I will have to ask for a few moments on that, Mr. President, a minute or two.

SUNDBORG: While we are doing that I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon whether his Committee had a brief amendment to request on the preceding section, the one on the legislature.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Our Committee met and seems to be about evenly split on whether it's necessary or not. We could propose the amendment, give the background of thinking by the experts, and let the body make their decision. Mr. President, before I request a suspension of the rules for offering this amendment, I am going to give some of the background on it. In the final checking of the whole article of the constitution, a number of items were brought to our attention. The one that concerns the legislative branch is that on page 6, Section 12, our article provides that each house may choose its officers and employees and so forth, and goes on to set out that the houses may be the judges of their elections and qualifications. It has been pointed out to us that our article here does not make specific rule for the ejection of any member of either the house or the senate by that body, their expulsion. In our Committee it was our thinking that in the process of establishing the rules for each of the houses, that the houses could provide for the expulsion of a member for certain causes. It has been brought to our attention that if we leave this silent, the courts may hold that the houses could not set up their own rules to expel a member. We have had a brief Committee meeting here and it seems that our Committee is about split on the matter of whether it should be in there or not. Some of us felt in the Committee that there was ample provision in here in various houses, setting up rules that they could expel a member for cause and could establish the causes for which a member could be expelled from the body. And some others felt that it would be necessary for us to specifically state in the constitution that a member could be expelled before a court would hold the expulsion could take place. Therefore, Mr. President, in order to present this matter fairly before the group, I will ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that the constitution be referred to third reading, and then to second reading for the purpose of specific amendment, which we will offer at this time.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: In other words, you want --

MCCUTCHEON: You will have to suspend the rules and move it clear back to second reading before we can offer this amendment. That will require probably unanimous consent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you ask unanimous consent?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, Mr. President, I do ask unanimous consent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered.

MCCUTCHEON: On page 6, Section 12 of the legislative article, at the end of line 4, delete the period after the word "members" and add "and may expel a member with the concurrence of two-thirds of its members". That line will then read "Each is the judge of the election and qualifications of its members, and may expel a member with the concurrence of two-thirds of its members". For the sake of presenting this matter for the consideration of the body, I will move that the amendment be adopted.

NORDALE: Second the motion

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have heard the motion. Is there any discussion? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I direct a question to Mr. McCutcheon?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may.

JOHNSON: I believe in the course of your discussion you mentioned the fact that as it stood now the section did not permit either house to expel a member for cause. Yet, the amendment which you have just proposed does not say "may expel a member for cause". I wonder if you had intended that?

MCCUTCHEON: The amendment which was just offered, Mr. President, in answer to Mr. Johnson's question, was drafted by the Style and Drafting Committee in conference with the consultants that we have. I am not going to ask unanimous consent. Mr. President, because I wish to leave the matter up to the body.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: If I may ask a question of the chairman of the Legislative Committee? What circumstance did you give as a theoretical circumstance where such an act would be necessary?

MCCUTCHEON: It is not practical to impeach a member of the legislature, but it may be that a legislator may have been taking some consideration from a lobbyist, or he could have been particularly and consistently obstreperous on the floor to the point where he is no longer a desirable member of the body. He may be a user of narcotics, or a habitual drunkard, and not attending for other reasons. It's possible the body could expel him for that. They could expel him, I think, as the rules provide now for moral turpitude, as Mr. Rivers says, or conduct unbecoming a member of the legislature. It could take into consideration a number of things. It could be, if he had committed a murder, they might feel it was necessary to expel him.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: May I ask a further question, Mr. President? Do you think there is anything that could not be reached by Section 8 on page 27, recall of elected public officials?

MCCUTCHEON: The only -- no, I don't think there is; I think that recall could reach him. The only thing is that the expulsion of a member by the legislature would certainly be a good deal more immediate, and it might not come to the attention of the public as soon as it would by expelling a member themselves. As I say, the Committee felt that we had the matter amply covered, but it was felt that for legal reasons that the matter should be in there. And, as I say, at this particular point our Committee is about evenly split as to whether it should be in or whether it has been covered.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT; Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: May I ask a question of Mr. McCutcheon? Wouldn't you consider that where each is the judge of the election and the qualifications, that that judge of their qualifications would be a continuing purpose and that a person may be qualified when they entered upon the body to do the work of the body, but if some of the things that you speak of happened during the course of a session, that by judging his qualifications, you could disqualify him then from serving?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I believe it is the feeling of the Committee that this matter of qualifications here applies here only to the fact of whether he is of proper age, sufficient residence, and meets the other necessary qualifications to actually sit in a legislature.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. McCutcheon, couldn't the qualifications Mr. Doogan has brought out here have a dual meaning?

MCCUTCHEON: It's my personal opinion that it could not.

COGHILL: It could not have a dual meaning?

MCCUTCHEON: Not in the fashion in which this sentence is constructed, I don't believe it could.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Through you, Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of Mr. McCutcheon. In checking with the other state constitutions have you found that there has ever been any abuse of this clause, under those that did have it, in any manner whatsoever?

MCCUTCHEON: I am not aware that it has been. Of course, it is difficult to look behind all legislative acts over a period of years that have been predicated on each constitution. I don't know if it has. It's my understanding that this matter has not been abused. It's pretty difficult to throw a person out of a legislative session, as I can personally testify to. (Laughter)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I just wanted to ask Mr. McCutcheon if it is not true that most state constitutions do have a provision of this kind?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes, Mr. President, it is true that most state constitutions do have this provision in them.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: It occurs to me that from what Mr. McCutcheon has said that the intent of the Committee was to provide for some means of expulsion for cause. Now, if that is the case I think the wording should be clear in that respect, because otherwise it's conceivable that this "cause" business could be stretched to the point where, let's say, the situation might arise where the Republicans would expel a Democrat because of his party affiliation. I think if any language is to be added to this section that it ought to be clear, and I do not believe the proposed amendment is in that respect.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President. I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon a question. Would you not agree to having the words "for cause" inserted in your proposed amendment?

MCCUTCHEON: I have no objection to it. The only thing is that it would appear to me, and I think it would probably appear to the rest of our Committee, that in establishing uniform rules for the legislature, that that cause would be established in those rules. Now, as I say, personally I have no objection to adding that term on there.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I just checked the federal constitution in this regard, and clause 2 of Section 5 of Article I, the Legislative Department of the United States Constitution, contains the following language, "Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior", and here is the important part, "and with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member". They have no qualifications in it, apparently.

MCCUTCHEON: The language of our proposed amendment appears to be exactly in point with the United States Constitution.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Will the Secretary please read the amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 6, Section 12, at the end of line 4, delete the period after members' and insert 'and expel a member with the concurrence of two-thirds of its members'."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You have a motion for adoption before you. Is there any further discussion on that? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to ask a question of Mr. McCutcheon. An expulsion under this amendment -- can it be appealed in court?

MCCUTCHEON: I can't answer that question.

KILCHER: Who could answer that question?

BUCKALEW: I think you have had it once they have expelled you.

KILCHER: Pardon me?

BUCKALEW: You have had it; you don't have any appeal. It wouldn't do you any good. The legislative body is the final authority. If they expel you, you are expelled. You wouldn't have the right of appeal to anybody.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it would appear to me that, in the event of an expulsion, the chances of a legislator, if he attempted to be seated again, would be that recall would likely overtake him.

KILCHER: I am not satisfied with the answer, Mr. President, I would like to have some of the other legal capacities here answer the question.
(Laughter)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I concur with Mr. Buckalew. Under the theory of the co-equal powers of the three principal branches of government, the legislature would be the final authority. There would not be an appeal to the courts on that.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. McCutcheon, when this amendment was written, or when you were considering it, was it thought that a two-thirds vote was proper? Was a three-fourths vote considered, for instance? Of course we do not take our politics up here as seriously as they do in some South American countries, perhaps, but it occurred to me that sometime in the dim, distant future, if one party was in power and they wanted to expel some other member because they didn't agree with him because of some reason or perhaps some party -- not the Communist party, but some like party -- would want to expel some member so that they would maintain more of a majority. It would seem that it should be more than a two-thirds vote to me to take care of an eventuality like that. We have provided for some things here that would require a three-fourths vote. It seems to me that this is about the most serious question that could come up in the legislature.

MCCUTCHEON: Technically, I think it would be more than a two-thirds vote, because the man under consideration probably would not be able to vote on it, but in any event, Hawaii has set up exactly the same quantity provision in expelling a member, and two things I have here at hand is Hawaii and New Jersey -- use the same number; the State of Missouri shows the same two-thirds group, so I assume that the consideration was predicated on what the bulk of the other states have.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, in regard to the Hawaiian constitution, I notice that for "qualifications of its own members and shall have, for misconduct, disorderly behavior or neglect of duty by any member, power to punish such member by censure or, upon a two-thirds vote of all the members to which such house is entitled, by suspension or expulsion of such member". So, it is further qualified in the Hawaiian state constitution.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Secretary will call the roll, please, on the question. Mr. Kilcher, do you have a question to ask?

KILCHER: I would like to speak on the question.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: You may go ahead.

KILCHER: And I have a question to ask also. I assume it is out of order to make an amendment to this amendment? Am I correct in that?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I think we have a ruling that you cannot amend a Committee amendment. I don't know if I am correct on that. It would be out of order, Mr. Kilcher, because this is for specific amendment under suspension of the rules.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I am still not convinced by the answers I have had from the lawyers here that such an expulsion could possibly not be appealed in superior court or in any court. I don't think our three branches of government are so independent. For instance, the laws that are made by the very legislature - they are not the supreme law; they are subject to the constitution; to the interpretation of the supreme court if attacked as such, and I don't see that possibly the rules of the legislature could be set arbitrarily and could not be contested in the supreme court. That I personally feel is not quite right, but since there is a doubt I feel obliged to speak against this amendment coming at such a late hour. I cannot feel but that the thought must have been among the Committee members and other members before, and it should have been brought on the floor sooner, so that more debate, more deliberate debate could have been heard on the subject, and also under the rule where only a specific amendment is permitted, where in order to amend this amendment a lot of suspension of the rules would be necessary, seeing we are so tired and we want to see the end of our labors here. It is unlikely that due consideration for further amendments that might be necessary would be forthcoming. Consequently, I think for one reason that it takes two-thirds only, I think it should be more than that - three-fourths, four-fifths, something akin to a jury. It takes 12 men on a jury to condemn a man. I don't think that nine should do it - that would be, rather, eight, that would be two-thirds. I think two-thirds is not enough specifically because it doesn't state here for what causes like in the constitution of Hawaii. There it is specified. Here it just says "may expel". It doesn't say for what cause. It doesn't even specify causes. It "may expel" period, and two-thirds may do so, which I think is by far not enough. It is giving the legislature too great a power. We have a strong executive and I think we shouldn't have an equally strong and potentially overbearing legislature. We don't know what in 10, 20, or 30 year what the times will bring and I can see that this clause might bring very undesirable results, and we should think it over very carefully, and vote it down.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any further discussion? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I want to say just one word and that is, when this proposal was first brought out of the Committee - I am a member of that Committee - we had a section in there with fancy words to take care of those who were not able to take care of their work, either through senility or drunkenness or some other things, and that was put out. Now this insert that we are talking about now, I believe, is to cover those same things. Now if there is anything stronger than that, I believe it should come under impeachment or recall. I am very much opposed to this because there is no definite statement as to what will be the cause, and I think if we put it in as it is now and the house sets it into their rules, they will also use vague terms. I am very much opposed to allowing the legislature to have quite that much power over their members.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is there any further discussion? Mr. Lee.

LEE: I have been going through as many constitutions as I can find, and I find that every one of them has this language in it, and this is what we had in mind with our original proposal, but we neglected to get it back in. This oversight was pointed out to us by the consultants, and they advised that it's the only way we can take care of this problem of people being senile or alcoholic or in some manner unfit for office without being criminal, and we were very definitely advised that it should be in.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Does the chairman of the Committee wish to close the argument?

MCCUTCHEON: No. I don't propose to close the argument.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Will the secretary please read the amendment again?

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. Does this take a majority vote or two-thirds?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: As I understand it takes a majority vote.

CHIEF CLERK: "Sec. 12, page 6, delete period and add at the end of line 4, the following: 'and may expel a member with the concurrence of two-thirds of its members.'"

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The secretary will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, Walsh.

Nays: 18 - Barr, Cooper, Gray, Harris, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, McLaughlin, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Rosswog, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, White, Wien.

Absent: 10 - Collins, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, King,

Londborg, Reader, Robertson, Taylor, Mr. President.)

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 18 nays, and 10 absent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: So the amendment has been adopted. Are there any further questions? Mr. Barr.

BARR: For a moment there I thought three of us had already been expelled. (Laughter)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: In fairness to the chairman of the Legislative Committee who was so impersonal in his recital of the matter and yet took no position, I think he should be allowed the opportunity to strike from the record every reference to the obstreperous legislator. (Laughter)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other amendments or questions? Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I have a question. Are we returning to the Executive article?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Yes we are.

EMBERG: I have a question in regard to Section 5, Limit on Tenure. It is on page 8 - just a question of phraseology. I wonder if "has intervened" is the best term. I don't know whether that is a transitive or intransitive verb or can be used as either, but it seems to me that the word "elapsed" would be preferable.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Sundborg, could you answer that?

SUNDBORG: I really believe that "intervened" is more nearly the correct meaning. "Elapsed" would just mean passed. Intervened means that it has come between, but will not again be eligible to hold the office until one full term has come between the time he was last in office and the time he is again seeking office.

EMBERG: I thought the "again" covered that. I am not - if no one else has any feeling with regard to that, I withdraw.

SUNDBORG: I don't feel strongly, Mr. Emberg.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any other questions or amendments? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, in regard to the mention a few moments ago in regard to the amendment discussed in the Committee chairmen's meeting this afternoon, I would ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and pass this back through third reading, back to second reading for the purpose of specific amendment as follows: Page 9, Section 12, it reads now "whenever for a period of six months, a governor has been continuously absent from the state...." Now it was thought that the words "from the state" should be changed to the words "from office", so if the rules are suspended without objection, I will submit that amendment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you ask unanimous consent?

V. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objection? If not it is so ordered. You may proceed, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The secretary has a copy of the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, substitute the phrase 'from office' for the phrase 'from the state' in the first sentence, so as to read 'Whenever for a period of six months, a governor has been continuously absent from office....'"

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, for adoption of the amendment as submitted. I move and ask unanimous consent.

HARRIS: I think I am going to object.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you so move. Mr. Rivers?

RIVERS: I so move.

BUCKALEW: Second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Harris, you may have the floor.

HARRIS: What would be the definition of "office" here, Vic? Say if his office was in Washington, D.C., if he worked, for example if he was working there?

V. RIVERS: Well, that was not the intent. The intent was here that he might well be absent from office and not discharging his duties and still be within the state. So if we put the qualification that he is absent from office outside of the state, why he could still be absent from office and not performing his duties, so this amendment would correct that; whether he was in or without the state, if he were absent from office and not performing his duties, he would then be deemed, after six months, to have left the office. I might apologize to Mr. Harris who is a member of the Committee. He is the only one I did not get to discuss this with.

HARRIS: I withdraw my objection.

MCNEES: May I ask the Chair a question? Mr. Rivers, would it not also be true that he could be absent from the state for a period of six months or more and still complete the duties of his office indirectly?

V. RIVERS: Yes, that is true. So this would eliminate that objection also.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is there further discussion? Unanimous consent has been requested. Do I hear any objection? If not, it is so ordered. Are there any other amendments or questions? If not, the secretary may proceed with the next article, Article IV, The Judiciary.

(The Chief Clerk read Article IV of the constitution as contained in the report of the Style and Drafting Committee dated February 3, 1956.)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any questions? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would like to ask "Judge" McLaughlin a question through the Chair, if I may. On page 13, Mr. McLaughlin, Section 8, will you explain this sentence to me: "No member of the judicial council, except the chief justice, may hold any other office or position of profit under the United States or the state."

MCLAUGHLIN: That was specifically put in there because if you didn't you would be contradicting yourself right in the paragraph there. The chief justice couldn't hold the office in the judicial council if you didn't except it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Does that answer your question, Mr. Buckalew?

MCLAUGHLIN: Whether it accomplishes the purpose or not is open to question.

BUCKALEW: What does it do to the other members of the council though? That eliminates them from holding any positions at all. For example, if one of the members, attorneys or nonattorneys, was on the judicial council, he couldn't hold any position with the state or the United States.

MCLAUGHLIN: That is true, that is true, Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Is that what you intended?

MCLAUGHLIN: That is what we intended, yes.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any other questions? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: There is a comma missing in Section 14, page 14. Of course, I think they ought to all be missing in that category.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Any other corrections or questions to be asked: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to inquire of Mr. McLaughlin as chairman of the Judiciary Committee, if his Committee or he as an individual has any amendments to propose to this excellent article?

MCLAUGHLIN: That is an indirect method, I presume, Mr. Sundborg, of inquiring what the Committee recommends on the recommendation of the Committee chairmen. There were two proposed to them. One was the suggestion which was made by the consultant to the Committee chairmen that in this article the only place where a citizen - the residency - one of the requirements of office holders, of judges is the requirement in here that they be citizens of the state. That is in line 3 of Section 4, and I think a similar requirement was stricken from the legislative or executive article, that is, citizenship of the state, on the grounds that it is confusing. The other recommended change by the Committee of chairmen was the recommendation that in the rule-making power as set forth in Section 15, these rules may be changed by the legislature by two-thirds vote of the members elected to the house. It was the belief of the Committee of chairmen that that was too stringent. They believe that the rules -- the amendment in substance should be that these rules may be changed by law, meaning that by passage of a law the legislature could revoke any rule put into force by the supreme court, instead of by two-thirds vote of the members elected to each house. I shall report, individually, that we called a meeting of the Judiciary Committee, and the Judiciary Committee unanimously is opposed to any amendment to Section 15. They say that is the way they intended it, and that is the way they would like to keep it. That was unanimous, but Mr. Warren Taylor was absent and he is a member of the Committee and he did not vote. I don't know his views on the subject. On the subject of state citizenship, the Committee, with one exception, and that is Mr. Ralph Rivers, wanted to keep the requirement of citizenship of the state. Otherwise, the Committee unanimously rejected a recommendation that they change the rule-making power because they intended it to be that way and they felt the Convention felt it should be that way, and on the citizen of the state requirement, we were opposed to it with the exception of Mr. Rivers. I think, Mr. Rivers, I fairly state that, do I not?

R. RIVERS: I will modify that when I get up.

MCLAUGHLIN: That is the report.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I am going to ask for unanimous consent to suspend the rules to put this back through third reading, to second reading for a specific amendment. I will tell you what that proposed amendment is. It is on line 3 of Section 4 on page 12. It reads now "Supreme court justices and superior court judges shall be citizens of the United States and of the state. I am going to move that the word "residents" be inserted between the words "and" and "of" so that it will read "citizens of the United States and residents of the state", if the rule is suspended, Mr. President.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you ask unanimous consent?

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent to present this.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear any objections?

HARRIS: I object.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you so move?

R. RIVERS: I so move.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Is there a second.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you wish to speak further on it?

R. RIVERS: I am only asking now for suspension of the rules.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The secretary will call the roll on that.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 34 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Walsh, White.

Nays: 11 - Armstrong, Harris, Hermann, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Lee, Metcalf, Sweeney, Wien.

Absent: 10 - Collins, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, King, Londborg, Reader, Robertson, Taylor, Mr. President.)

CHIEF CLERK: 34 yeas, 11 nays, and 10 absent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The motion has failed of passage. Are there any other amendments? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I have a question I would like to ask Mr.

McLaughlin for the purpose of clarity of the record. I brought the subject up once before but in the meantime the language has been juggled around until to me it's no longer clear. In Section 6 on page 12 it says a supreme court justice would not have to be confirmed by all of the voters of the state, and I know that the intent is that he would only have to be confirmed by those voters in his jurisdiction. If I am correct, I would like to have it in the record again so that it would be clear.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Hinckel, for your purposes and for the benefit of some who are listening, you have already been quoted this day, and it is the intent of the judiciary article, specifically, that judges -- that the legislature may create districts and judges may be appointed for those districts, and that, thereafter, they will stand for election or for approval or rejection in those same districts. That is specifically understood. That was the intent and it has been so interpreted.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any further amendments?

HELLENTHAL: Is there a section that says that?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Yes. I am about to show it to Mr. Hellenthal.

JOHNSON: May we have a short recess?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: We'll have a two-minute recess.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order, please. Are you ready, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I request that Mr. Rivers make the motion.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I decline the honor.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I move and ask unanimous consent to suspend the rules and bring the article on the judiciary back to second reading for the purpose of making a specific amendment in line 3, Section 6: inserting after the word "ballot" on that line "in the manner provided by law", so it will satisfy the substance of the requirement that heretofore had been made and would assure Mr. Hinckel and the Convention. And I ask unanimous consent for that purpose.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear an objection?

MCLAUGHLIN: The amendment would be, inserting after the word "ballot" on line 3 of Section 6 of the judiciary article as it appears on page 12 the words "in the manner provided by law".

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any objections? If not, it is so ordered. You may proceed, Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I now move that Section 6, Judiciary Article, be amended on line 3 by inserting after the word "ballot" the words "in the manner provided by law".

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you ask unanimous consent?

MCLAUGHLIN: I ask unanimous consent.

JOHNSON: I object to unanimous consent.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do you so move?

MCLAUGHLIN: I so move.

METCALF: I second.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, the purpose of that is that heretofore we had assured Mr. Hinckel and the Convention as it appeared in the original enrolled copy, that the legislature could provide that these judges appointed in the superior court would run in their districts. In substance, their names would appear on a district ballot in the district where they were appointed for retention or rejection, and in the course of style and drafting some of the words disappeared. And in order to restore Kodiak to its rightful position, and Nome, in the judicial system, we would like to have that back in. It was our intent all the while that that be done.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I ask Mr. McLaughlin to drop his hat as chairman of the Judiciary Committee and pick up his hat as a member of the Style and Drafting and read that sentence as it would appear with that insertion.

MCLAUGHLIN: I am wearing neither hat at this time.

V. FISCHER: Well, I would like to suggest that that sentence be read with that insertion. I am somewhat concerned about how the meaning of it would be if amended.

MCLAUGHLIN: "Each supreme court justice and superior court judge shall be subject to approval or rejection on a nonpartisan ballot in the manner provided by law at the first general election held more than three years after his appointment."

V. FISCHER: The way it would sound, unless you insert some commas or rearrange it somehow, some other way, it would be "in the manner provided by law at the first general election".

MCLAUGHLIN: We can insert, and I am sure this will have the approval of Mr. Hurley, ", or in the manner provided by law" and a comma after "manner provided by law".

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Does that answer your question, Mr. Fischer?

FISCHER: It does in part.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would like to ask Mr. McLaughlin a question, if I may. As I recall there is a provision in the judiciary article for the transfer of judges from court to court. Wouldn't it be rather difficult to decide which particular court is going to vote on the retention of a particular judge?

MCLAUGHLIN: It would not. As a matter of fact, that transfer, as you recall, it says "temporary", and temporary was inserted there specifically with the intent that the chief justice, as I said before, couldn't remove a judge who was appointed in the Nome District to Ketchikan for two and a half years, and then return him to Nome the day before his name appeared on the ballot for rejection or retention. And that was the purpose of it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Are there any further questions or amendments? Mr. Cooper

COOPER: May we have a 30-second recess?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: A 30-second recess is in order.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin, your motion is for suspension of the rules, is that right?

MCLAUGHLIN: I think I secured them, but I think I will attempt to secure them again. Mr. Chairman, I asked unanimous consent, but since there has been an objection, I will withdraw my motion to amend, and I again move that the rules be suspended and that the article on the judiciary be withdrawn to second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves that the rules be suspended for the purpose -- Mr. McLaughlin, first, the proper procedure would be that you move to rescind the action on final passage of the article and then get it back into third reading and then move to suspend the rules to get it back into second reading for specific amendment. Isn't that correct?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I think this could be simplified if we just asked to suspend the rule that requires that the article can be amended only in second reading. We could suspend that rule and then we could amend it right here in final form.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Actually, Mr. Sundborg, in its final form we have adopted that article in third reading, so it would be necessary to rescind the action and then that would bring it back into third reading, and then move to suspend the rules and take it back into second reading for specific amendment. If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent of the over thirty-seven members present to revert the article on the Judiciary back to second reading for the purpose of a specific amendment to wit: to insert on line 2 of Section 6, after the word "shall", the words ", in the manner provided by law,".

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. McLaughlin's unanimous consent request for referring the article back to second reading for specific amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the article on the Judiciary is now before us in second reading for the specific amendment as stated by Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I move that on line 2, Section 6, after the word "shall", the following words be inserted ", in the manner provided by law,". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk will please continue with the reading of the constitution.

(The Chief Clerk read Article V, Suffrage and Elections, as contained in the report of the Style and Drafting Committee dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions or proposed amendments for the suffrage and elections article? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I can't understand the comma in Section 4. I address that question to the chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee. Mr. Sundborg, could you answer that?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I defer to Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Well, it was our feeling that there are two separate and distinct thoughts in the sentence and, therefore, they should be separated.

HELLENTHAL: Would a semicolon be consistent with the book?

NORDALE: No. I think if you had a semicolon you would have to have -- follow it with another subject and have a complete clause.

HELLENTHAL: What rule other than the series rule permits a comma to precede an "and" or any conjunctive article?

NORDALE: I would have to refer you to the book. I am sure you would find many, many examples of cases where a comma precedes an "and", Mr. Hellenthal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions in relation to this article? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I notice in this article we use the term "as prescribed by law" several times, and Mr. McLaughlin just put in an amendment "in the manner provided by law", and in the previous section it is "as prescribed by law". I just wanted to call attention to Style and Drafting, if they couldn't change that "in the manner provided by law" to fit the rest of it. Would that be within their right to do that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe there is quite a distinct difference between "as prescribed by law" and "as provided by law", and I believe it is used correctly in each case here. There is a distinction. I see Mr. McLaughlin champing at the bit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Well, Mr. Sundborg, I don't think a "manner prescribed" and "manner provided", I don't think it means a whit of difference.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I think when we were working on these various and sundry expressions in the Style and Drafting Committee, we decided we ought to have a little variety now and then, so part of the time we used one and part of the time we used the other. They mean exactly the same.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other questions with relation to this article? If not, the Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Article VI.

(The Chief Clerk read Article VI, Legislative Apportionment, as contained in the report of the Style and Drafting Committee dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: There is a serious typographical error on page 15, Section 1, the third line, the first word in the new sentence which appears as "Under" should be "Until", "Until reapportionment". It's purely a typographical error and I will ask the delegates to correct their copies and I don't believe it requires consent, page 15, Section 1, third line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I direct a question to Mr. Hellenenthal? Mr. Hellenenthal, I call your attention to Section 10, the last three lines. The last sentence reads, "The reapportionment and redistricting shall be effective for the election of members of the legislature until after the official reporting of the next decennial census." Now, don't you mean "and thereafter until changed"? You don't want those people to be disfranchised 10 years later, do you?

HELLENTHAL: I think that is implicit in the article -- reading the entire article as a whole.

R. RIVERS: It doesn't say so.

HELLENTHAL: Perhaps it doesn't in that one sentence, but in reading the entire article I think it is clear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal, do you think a one - or two-minute recess so you might talk that over would be important?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I am going to ask suspension of the rules, putting this back to second reading, under our rule 50, for the purpose of a specific amendment which would be as follows: at the end of Section 10, page 17, change the period after the word "census", change it to a comma, and add "and thereafter until changed".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that Article VI, the article on Legislative Apportionment, be referred back to second reading for specific amendment.

V. FISCHER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to Mr. River's motion? Mr. Metcalf seconds the motion. The question would be: "Shall the rules be suspended?" The Chair notes that there are quite a number of delegates not present; there might not be 37 here.

HELLENTHAL: I have no objection at all to making it very clear that there shall be only one reapportionment between the official reporting of each decennial census. I hardly think that this proposed amendment does that.

R. RIVERS: I would like to explain it, Mr. President, but I understand a motion to suspend the rules is not debatable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you might explain it, Mr. Ralph Rivers, if there is no objection.

R. RIVERS: It is simply this: that at the end of 10 years within 90 days following the official reporting of a decennial census, the board shall submit to the governor a plan for reapportionment and redistricting. Now, at the end of one 10 years the board may find that there are some changes required in a particular district or as to the boundaries between a couple of districts, and then the next 10 years may go by and that particular change may never be touched. That may remain for two or three census periods. Maybe the next time the board meets they will change some other boundary affecting some other district. What I am getting at here is that if the last sentence in Section 10 simply said that when the change is made that change shall be effective until the next decennial census. Well, what happens at the end of that time, when the next decennial census comes along? Those people are either going to be disfranchised or you have got the suggestion that something else has to be done in order to keep them afloat as to that particular change after that 10-year period has gone by, and I cannot seem to get this thing to penetrate the minds of a couple of members of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I have permission to point out the reasons for my objections?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to point out that in the next to last line it says "until after the official reporting", which says exactly the same thing that Mr. Rivers would try to accomplish in his amendment. It says "until after". That may be effective for a hundred years after, but the main point is that during that 10 year period there may be no change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am assured that every 10 years the governor will recertify every election district in the territory, and then all of them will be good for another 10 years; and that will be done every 10 years, so with my apologies to the members of the Committee who know more than I did, it finally penetrated my mind. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers asks unanimous consent that his request for suspension of the rules be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the motion for suspension is withdrawn. Are there other questions relating to Article VI? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: In Section 7 of Article VI, I would like to have an explanation of the wording from anyone who would like to answer. It reads "The senate districts described in Section 2 of Article XIV may be modified to reflect changes in election districts. A district, although modified, shall retain its total number of senators and its approximate perimeter." Now, I am trying to figure out just what that means. It says they "may be modified", and I can see considerable changes in the election districts. In the next sentence it says it is to retain its approximate perimeter. Can somebody explain what that means?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, in the event that the election districts will be redistricted at a later date through the apportionment board it's very possible that the senate districts which are comprised of the two election districts, shall be modified to a minor extent. This clause is in there so that the boundaries of these election districts are not frozen absolutely as is right at this date. It does allow a little modification in the future and, therefore, the words "approximate perimeter".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Article VI? Mr. Poulson.

POULSON: I move we recess for 15 minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulson moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess for 15 or 20 minutes. The Convention will come to order. The question is: "Shall the Convention stand at recess?" All those in favor of standing at recess until 10:10 will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

3888

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: May we revert back to committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert back to committee reports at this time.

KNIGHT: I would like to report back for the Journal Committee. I move that due to the fact that Committee Proposal No. 17/z was never formally introduced last night and the subsequent action was therefore out of order, that all reference to Committee Proposal No. 17/z from that time until -- from the time it came before us last night until the time it was correctly introduced this morning, be expunged from the record. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight is asking that due to the fact that Committee Proposal No. 17/z had not been properly presented to the Convention yesterday, that all reference to Committee Proposal No. 17/z up to the time we considered it today be expunged from the record. Mr. Knight asks unanimous consent. Is there objection?

HELLENTHAL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Knight?

KNIGHT: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seconds the motion that the reference -- now, actually, it was all out of order and there shouldn't have been anything in the record, so this motion -- Mr. Helleenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I don't think anyone here....

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that all reference to it be stricken from the record.

HELLENTHAL: I don't think there is anyone here would be more anxious to see this accomplished, because of my feelings that have been made well-known on this section. However, we have never yet expunged the record of anything. If so, I certainly want it brought to my attention. We have not expunged the record of anything. Furthermore, it is a very dangerous thing to do. We have taken improper action before, and we have not expunged the record of that improper action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. White.

WHITE: If improper action was taken before, when a vote was incorrectly announced, then all subsequent action was out of order and was expunged from the record.

HELLENTHAL: No, sir, it was not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The motion is in order, but Mr. Hellenthal has the floor.

HELLENTHAL: And my point is that we have kept our record intact. We will be suspect if we expunge the record. There are two sides to every question. Although I didn't disagree with the proponents of this measure, I don't think that they should be banished because they mentioned it. Their position is reasonable. Now you will recall that this came up in the opening days of the session when there was some business about having secret meetings. It all ties in. We are up here, as we said earlier in the session, we're up here to stand up and be counted, to express our opinions. Expunging the record is foreign; it is not a democratic thing to do; and I think we would be making a grievous error if we were to do it, and we would be suspect to the people of Alaska if they thought we had expunged the record or altered the record or tried to cover up something. They would look askance at us and I think it is a very, very dangerous thing to do and not warranted.

KILCHER: Is that motion debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is debatable.

KILCHER: Well, I personally would not mind if some of the things and errors that were made in the last few days were not on the record. On the other hand, I have to agree with Mr. Hellenthal that good actions or possibly bad or erroneous actions that we have taken should be on the record. There was nothing particularly regrettable done; there were no bad actions taken. There were actions taken partly in error and possibly unwisely. They were reputed today but the newspapers have taken notice of these actions. We can't expunge the record in libraries and newspapers and so on. It would be just as well, in order to avoid making a mystery, to leave the record as it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I think I will have to agree with Mr. Hellenthal and Mr. Kilcher. I think it would look worse for us to expunge a whole day's session than if we left it in the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Speaking as one of the minority on practically the whole measure -- Article 17/z -- I would dislike very much to see the record expunged.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Is this a suspension of the rules or....

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it's just a majority vote, Mr. Rivers. Is there any other discussion? If not, the question is: "Shall all reference to Committee Proposal No. 17/z taken yesterday be expunged from the record?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 7 - Awes, Buckalew, Knight, Nordale, Riley, Smith, White.

Nays: 38 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 10 - Collins, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, King, Londborg, Reader, Robertson, Taylor, VanderLeest.

CHIEF CLERK: 7 yeas, 38 nays, and 10 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the nays have it and the motion has failed of adoption. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: While we are in this position I have news for you. "University of Alaska, Office of the President, November 30, a meeting of the regents, this is officially Constitution Hall, so named by the regents". (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Let the communication as read by Mr. Marston become a part of the record. The Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Article VII, the article on Education, Health, and Welfare.

(The Chief Clerk read in its entirety Article VII of the constitution as contained in Style and Drafting Committee Report dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Article II? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I have a question with relation to Style and Drafting. Mr. Sundborg might be able to answer it. On page 18, the first two words at the top of the page "body corporate"; that strikes me as slightly redundant. It sounds to me like "body embodied", corporate meaning a body. I wonder if there couldn't be a more lucky version of this idea to express it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, it's a common legal term, I know, and its exact language is contained in the Hawaii constitution about the University of Hawaii. We would certainly be open to suggestions from anyone who might want to use a more lucky word, but I can't think of one myself.

KILCHER: Well, I admit that it would take more than a moment's hesitation to find something better, but it only strikes me now that it actually is superfluous and redundant language. Even if it is common legal usage, that is no excuse because legal verbiage is known not to be too good in style very often.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I don't think it is redundant. If it were redundant you could leave out one of them and it would be the same. You wouldn't want to say "it is constiuted a body" or on the other hand you wouldn't want to say "it is constituted a corporate".

KILCHER: Mr. President, if it is in order I would suggest that it simply be called a corporation.

SUNDBORG: Constituted a corporation? I will have to ask somebody else to comment on that. I don't like the sound of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would only like to comment on the fact that this went through first, second, and third readings in exactly the same state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Article VII? If not, the Chief Clerk will read Article VIII.

(The Chief Clerk read in its entirety Article VIII as contained in Style and Drafting Committee Report dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions to be directed to the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to Article VIII? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we have noted a place where a comma should have been inserted: page 18, Section 3, after the word "wildlife".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before "and", Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, before "and".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask that the rules be suspended and....

SUNDBORG: I think it was already taken care of.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Article VIII? If not, the Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Article IX, the article on Finance and Taxation. If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will proceed with the reading of Article IX, the article on Finance and Taxation.

(The Chief Clerk read in its entirety Article IX as contained in Style and Drafting Committee Report dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to the Committee on Style and Drafting with relation to the article on Finance and Taxation? Does any delegate have a question? Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to ask the grammarian in the Style and Drafting Committee about Section 11. It seems to me that there is one comma in the first sentence which doesn't seem to be placed right. If so, there should be a couple ahead of it, "The restrictions on contracting debt do not apply to debt incurred through the issuance of revenue bonds by a public enterprise or public corporation of the state or a political subdivision, when the only security is the revenues of the enterprise or corporation."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Who is the grammarian, Mrs. Nordale?

SUNDBORG: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Well, actually, if you put commas in there you would change the meaning of it, at least our understanding of it. They do not apply to debts incurred through the issuance of revenue bonds by a public enterprise or public corporation of the state or political subdivision. You see the whole thing is tied together. It could be either a public enterprise of the state or a political subdivision, or public corporation of the state or a political subdivision.

BARR: Why is the comma before the word "when"? What does it separate?

NORDALE: That just separates a clause that applies to the whole sentence.

BARR: Yes, but there is no separation of thought there.

NORDALE: Well, restrictions do not apply when the only security is the revenues of the enterprise or corporation.

BARR: Then you wouldn't have a comma. I wouldn't.

NORDALE: Well, wouldn't you like to stop to take a breath?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to the article? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: That same question bothers me a little, when it says, "when the only security is the revenues". Would it be "is the revenues" or "are the revenues" or what?

NORDALE: Mr. Rivers, the subject is singular, "security is".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? If not, the Chief Clerk will proceed with the reading of Article X, Local Government, Article X.

(The Chief Clerk read in its entirety Article X as contained in Style and Drafting Committee report dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to Article X? If not, the Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Article XI, Initiative, Referendum and Recall.

(The Chief Clerk read in its entirety Article XI as contained in Style and Drafting Committee report dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to Article XI? If not, the Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Article XII, General Provisions.

(The Chief Clerk read in its entirety Article XII as contained in Style and Drafting Committee report dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Article XII? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I ask Mr. Sundborg, in Section 4, on line 3, after the word "advocates" that comma isn't necessary, is it?

SUNDBORG: What page, Mr. Metcalf?

METCALF: Page 28, Section 4.

SUNDBORG: It is our belief that that is necessary. If you will notice. there is one after "advocates" on the first line and one after "advocates" on the third line. Now if we just left out the material in between the two commas, this section would read "no person who advocates the overthrow by force or violence" and so on. We set off the material in between those places off by commas because it is equivalent to the word advocates, "no person who advocates or who aids or belongs to any party or association which advocates". I believe it is necessary and I know it is the standard way of punctuating this identical phrase which is used in many state constitutions and in the federal document. I wonder if that satisfies Mr. Metcalf?

METCALF: Well, looking at it that way, I believe it does.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: In Article XI will there be a comma placed in the title following the word "Referendum"? Article XI, I revert somewhat.

PRESIDENT EGAN: After the word "Referendum"? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: There could very well be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Articles XI or XII? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder if we could have a brief recess. A problem has come up which Style and Drafting needs to take care of.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will have a brief recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there are no questions, the Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Article XIII, Amendment and Revision.

(The Chief Clerk read in its entirety Article XIII as contained in Style and Drafting Committee Report dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Article XIII? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: In the last part of line 6, Section 1, how did you read that?

CHIEF CLERK: "Unless otherwise provided"?

METCALF: No, "for the next general election".

CHIEF CLERK: That was "statewide" election. That was changed this morning by motion of Mr. Sundborg.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? If not the Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Article XIV, Apportionment Schedule.

(The Chief Clerk read Article XIV in its entirety as contained in Style and Drafting Committee Report dated February 3, 1956.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to the article on Apportionment Schedule, Article XIV? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I notice in the description of the Upper Yukon on page 34, in speaking of the Alaska-Canada boundary in both 19 and the first sentence of 20, it is called the Alaska-Canada boundary and then in the last line just the Alaska boundary. I wonder if we should keep that uniform.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: It's a violation of the principle of consistency but not that of clarity.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does that answer it?

BOSWELL: Yes, it does.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Article XIV, Apportionment Schedule? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I would just like to call to Mr. Sundborg's attention that in Section 1 there is a slug, or whatever the printers call it, between "Number of" and "District" and "Number of" and "Representatives" which is not present in the bold face type there in Section 2. It violates the principle of consistency and, furthermore, I think there was something wrong with the linotype machine because when the "o", consistently through Section 3, and "Kosciusko" is the first illustration of it, the "o" is dropped. There are about 8 or 9 different places where the "o" does not line up correctly, and when they redo it for punctuation I think they should fix the machine in that respect.

SUNDBORG: It appears that a wrong font "o" somehow got into that machine. It occurs here at regular intervals and we will see that it is taken out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Article XIV, the Apportionment Schedule? If not, the Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of Article XV, Schedule of Transitional Measures.

(The Chief Clerk read in its entirety Article XV as contained in the Report of the Style and Drafting Committee dated February 3, 1956, and the three ordinances.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair notes that the Style and Drafting Committee has some amendments. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I didn't hear the observation of the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, the Chair noted there are mimeographed....

SUNDBORG: Oh yes. I was about to submit a committee amendment or to ask that the rules be suspended so that we may do so, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that Article XV. Schedule of Transitional Measures, be referred back to second reading for specific amendment, and the proposed amendments by a further suspension of the rules. If there is no objection, we might consider the amendments that are mimeographed and before us. Is there objection to that procedure? If not, is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Is this substantial, or does it only have to go back to third reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it has to go back to second reading in any event now, Mr. Kilcher. Is there objection to the suspension of the rules? If there is none then the article is now back in second reading and open for specific amendment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: We submit the committee amendment, and I will ask Mr. Fischer to explain the necessity for it. I do submit the amendment which I will ask the Chief Clerk to read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "That Article XV be amended as follows: Page 37, Section 10, strike last sentence; page 37, Section 11, strike section and substitute the following: 'Terms of First State Legislators. Section 11. The first state legislators shall hold office for a term beginning with the day on which they assume office and ending at noon on the fourth Monday in January after the next general election, except that senators elected for four-year terms shall serve an additional two years thereafter. If the first general election is held in an even-numbered year, it shall be deemed to be the general election for that year.'"

SUNDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

V. RIVERS: I second.

SUNDBORG: Now I would like to ask that Mr. Fischer explain for our committee the necessity for submitting this amendment.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, in considering the transitional provisions on the election of first legislators, the Style and Drafting Committee took the two sections that you see here numbered as Sections 10 and 11 out of the article on apportionment. At the same time, without very thorough study, a section was deleted from a proposal of the Committee on Ordinances. It was Section No. 16 dealing with the terms of first legislators, which appeared to cover approximately the same ground. However, it has just been brought to our attention tonight, and after further review, it seems like a very serious problem could be created. As the sections now stand, with the omission of the section as originally proposed by the Ordinance Committee, taking the last sentence of Section 10, which reads "If the first state general election is held in an odd-numbered year, the terms set forth in this section shall be increased by one year." That means, for example, if we are granted statehood by 1959 and the first election is held in February, that will be an odd-numbered year. Then, a two-year senator, for example, will have a term of three years; that term would carry him to February of 1962, but the election in 1962 will not take place until October of that year, so that from February through October you would have a gap without any state legislature. The problem is a very serious one and the Committee has therefore reverted to the language proposed by the Ordinance Committee, which is contained in the proposed substitution for Section 11. That takes care of both the deletion of the last sentence in Section 10 as well as Section 11, and provides for the termination date of the first terms. I will be glad to answer any additional questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to be directed to Mr. Fischer with relation to this matter? Does any delegate have a question? If not, the question is....

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent that the proposed committee amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have another committee amendment to offer. I will ask unanimous consent to suspend the rules and place this article in a position where a specific amendment can be offered. The amendment would be on page 36, Section 9, the third line, strike the word "qualify" and substitute the words "assume office"; third line on page 36, Section 9, so it would read "with the day on which they assume office and ending at noon".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the article again be -- that the rules be suspended and the article again be referred back to second reading for specific amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the article is now before us in second reading for specific amendment.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I offer the amendment to strike the word "qualify" and insert in its place "assume office" on the third line of Section 9 of page 36. Mr. President, this is to make this section uniform with the usage throughout the transitional measures and particularly to make it uniform with Section 13.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, you moved and asked unanimous consent, is that right?

SUNDBORG: Yes. In Section 13 you will notice that there is a provision that the officers elected and qualified shall assume office at the time the President of the United States issues a proclamation announcing the results of the election, and we don't want the first officials to have their terms begin from the date they qualify but rather from the day on which they assume office. I ask unanimous consent for adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg requests unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted.

SUNDBORG: I have another....

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, before we proceed, the chair has been wondering about the manner in which we have been proceeding. The Chair mentioned it earlier in the day when this first came up -- referring back to second reading -- that, in order to get it back into the final reading form, a motion would have to be made that it be advanced again. It just doesn't go back automatically into final reading after you've suspended the rules and sent it back to second reading. But if that has been the procedure this evening, if there is no objection, by unanimous consent I guess it could be inferred that the rules were suspended without objection and without a statement. The Chair would just want to be sure that the record is straight on that so there would be no objection to it later. Do you at this time, then, Mr. Sundborg....

SUNDBORG: I wish to submit another committee (committee) amendment. This one actually is simply to correct a typographical error on page 38. In the section at the top of the page, which is Section 16, in the next to last line of the section some erroneous language has been inserted by the printer, and the line should read -- after the word "filled" in the next to last line, a comma should be inserted and the word "and" stricken, and then, after the word "justice" in that same line, the words "is appointed he" should be stricken, so that it would read "After the initial vacancies on the superior and supreme courts are filled, the chief justice shall assume his seat on the judicial council."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, if there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I was calling attention to an error in printing on page 38 in Section 16. This is not an amendment, because we just want to reproduce the language which was agreed upon here, and it has just been printed with a couple of extra words in there. So I ask unanimous consent that the correction be made on the copies before the delegates. The line should read, that's the next to bottom line of Section 16 on page 38, "are filled, the chief justice shall assume his seat on the judicial council".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, that had already been adopted, is that correct?

SUNDBORG: It was adopted by the Convention yesterday, I believe, and just printed wrong here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does everyone have that correction?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, there is a purely typographical error on page 40 in Section 1 of the Alaska-Tennessee Plan. At the very end of the section, after "1955", a colon instead of a period should appear "pursuant to Chapter 46, SLA 1955:". I just point this out so the delegates may correct their copies. Mr. President, those are all the corrections which the committee has. There is another matter which I think the delegates may want to consider. On the first page of the constitution the type used for the line "Constitution of the State of Alaska" has been criticized by some delegates as being too old-fashioned in the style of type, and I just thought the Convention might want to consider: Do they like it or would they like a more modern face. The proposal of the printer is just to use that style of type on the official document which we would sign, and we could have a different type face if that is the desire of the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, that will appear differently -- or will it appear? It won't appear "Report of the Committee on Style and Drafting" in any....

SUNDBORG: Mr. President there will be nothing at all above it, above the large line saying "Constitution of the State of Alaska".

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would make it appear quite differently to anyone if they were considering that. It would make the type take a different appearance, even that old-fashioned type, with that removal.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I move that we keep it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves that the type remain as is. All in favor will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, another problem. You will notice the heading of each article, both the article number and title are centered on the entire width of the type, including the subheads. You will notice, for instance, Article I, Declaration of Rights, it is not over the center of the text, but it is over the center of the text plus the subhead, and some delegates have suggested that it be centered over the text only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: With regard to that suggestion, does anyone have a motion in order to clear the question? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I move that it be centered on the column of type.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Rather than on the center of the page?

BARR: I second it.

V. FISCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It's been moved and seconded that it be centered on the column rather than on the center of the page. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I might only suggest that those delegates who might not fully agree, not only look at the first heading of "Declaration of Rights", but look at some of the longer ones like "Initiative, Referendum, and Recall" which look very much askew.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the motion as offered by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the motion will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying no". The "noes" have it and the motion has failed of adoption. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I am going back to my own seat. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, we have one other problem. The constitution will require some language which will appear immediately preceding the signatures, and the Style and Drafting Committee has been studying a number of state constitutions trying to devise such language and we have several alternative suggestions which we would like to consider in our committee for a moment if we might have a brief recess before suggesting some language to the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, before we do have that recess, the Chair might forget to ask it, but suppose that a delegate or delegates decide not to sign the constitution in its final form. Just say that such a case would arise. Do they just say "Not signing" when they are voting, or do they sign as not agreeing with the constitution? Mr. Hurley, if that should occur....

HURLEY: I had occasion, for no particular good reason, to check on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is better to know than to be thinking about it on that day.

HURLEY: And from what I can find out -- most of these were old constitutions, matters of historical value -- that, as far as the vote is concerned, it was recorded on the journal whatever the vote was, and anyone who didn't care to sign the document, just didn't sign the document. That's all there was to it and I think that is the way we should proceed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is the way the Chair felt it should be, but we wanted it to be clear now rather than have any circumstances arise at a later -- Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: In the federal constitution the men who did not agree did not sign it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Does the Style and Drafting Committee have any other report to make?

SUNDBORG: I have a report to the Convention. This is on the subject of the enacting clause or, at any rate, of the language which would immediately precede the signatures of the delegates. First, I will mention where that would appear. If you turn to page 39, following Section 27, now renumbered Section 25, it says this constitution shall take effect immediately upon admission of Alaska into the Union as a state. The Style and Drafting Committee suggests that the following language be used, and I would like to ask each delegate to write this down. I will read it very slowly. It's one rather long sentence. You might just write it on a blank piece of paper because it may not be agreed upon. Here it is: "Agreed upon by the delegates to the Alaska Constitutional Convention at the University of Alaska, this fifth day of Feburary (February), in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fifty-six, and of the Independence of the United States, the one hundred and eightieth." Mr. President, this is the suggestion of the Style and Drafting Committee. It is a compromise between the standard language of the old constitutions, all of which use the language such as "year of our Lord" and "of the independence of the United States", but practically all of which start out with the word "Done" instead of "Agreed upon", and it was the feeling of our committee that in the modern times it sounds a little more felicitous to say "Agreed upon". This is our recommendation, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What do you wish to do with your recommendation?
(Laughter)

HERMANN: I move that the recommendation of the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves that the recommendation of the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted. Unanimous consent is asked that the recommendation of the -- objection is heard. Mrs. Hermann moves, seconded by Mr. Hilscher, that the recommendation of the committee on Style and Drafting be accepted by the Convention. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I can appreciate the sentiments of Mr. Johnson and Miss Awes. They would like to say "Agreed upon and done", or I think maybe they would. That is what I would like. "Agreed upon" sounds kind of vague and indefinite; we are signing on a particular date so it is agreed upon and done upon a particular date. I would like to hear what other objectors have to say.

AWES: I don't particularly care for "Agreed upon and done". I don't admit that "done" is an old-fashioned word. I think it's a word that goes back to Anglo-Saxon times, but some of the strongest words in the English language go back to Anglo-Saxon times, and I think it is a word that takes in everything we have done from the first day we met until we put our signatures on it, and I don't think we could find a more all-inclusive word.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I think that the words "Agreed upon" should be stricken out of this proposal and the word "Done" substituted in favor of it. Certainly it is all-inclusive and describes exactly what we have been doing and will accomplish.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: If Mr. Johnson would make an amendment to that effect I would like to second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Before Mr. Johnson makes a motion, which I suspect he is going to do, I would like to explain why I, at least, thought

"Agreed upon" was the better expression. If you will go back and look at our rules that we adopted early in the session and we have followed with reasonable diligence ever since, you will find that we again and again use the expression when the proposal is agreed upon or when they are in agreement on the proposal. Now this completed document, which we will certainly read by title only and agree upon, I hope, as we have agreed upon entering all these other separate articles into the constitution, will be agreed upon. Now maybe "done" is all right. I stick it on practically every legal paper I write, but this constitution means to me a great deal more than any legal paper I ever drafted for myself or for anyone else, and I would like to use phraseology that would be consistent with the words we have used as we went through the 75 days that we have been here, and finish on a note of agreement because, after all, that is the most important thing that we have done -- is that we have agreed almost unanimously on the major things that have come up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I don't know, but I have a feeling that this word "done" is just a habit with some of the attorneys. It is true we have been doing this for 75 days and on the 5th of February it is done. However, on the 5th of February the last act when we vote to accept this constitution, then is when it is agreed upon, and that is what we are speaking of. That's what happens on the 5th we all agree to what we have done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I would like to move that the motion here be amended to incorporate Mr. Ralph Rivers' suggestion that it be "Agreed upon and done" for a specific reason, that I would like to collaborate on the amendment.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves, seconded by Mr. Ralph Rivers, that the words "and done" be added after the word "upon".

KILCHER: Yes, Mr. President, the reason being the following: "Agreed upon", I think, would be sufficient if we didn't have the Tennessee Plan, but I think we have definitely done something in adopting the Tennessee Plan and personally I think we didn't do quite enough, but without wanting to seem facetious in this matter, I really think that the word "done" in its simplicity is a powerful word and it means what it says. We have, in adopting the Tennessee Plan, not only agreed to certain things, but we have committed an act; we have done something; we have stated something; and I think in view of that fact the word "done" would have its rightful place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would only like to point out that page 39, Ordinance No. 1 is ratification of the constitution, and Section 1 starts out, "The Constitution for the State of Alaska agreed upon by the delegates to the Alaska Constitutional Convention on February 5, 1956, shall be submitted" and so on and so forth.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I have risen once before, but that was on the main motion. I would like to comment just briefly on this amendment to the motion. I appreciate very much Mr. Kilcher's support for the idea that I had, and if he had included in his motion the striking of the words "Agreed upon" substituting the word "done", I certainly would have gone along with it because I think that it's exactly what we want. But putting the words "and done" after "Agreed upon" is simply adding phraseology that doesn't need to be there. It's just redundant. And I am a little bit surprised to hear one of my colleagues on the Style and Drafting Committee object to using one word for two, because most of the time during our deliberations he has always been in favor of using one word in place of two. Now that's the point; if we could substitute the word "done" instead of "Agreed upon" we would have accomplished the whole matter with just one word, so I am opposed to Mr. Kilcher's amendment because it doesn't go quite far enough.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the word "prepared" appear in this proposed amendment? It doesn't? The question is: "Shall the amendment to the motion as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment to the motion will signify by saying "aye". The Convention will come to order. All opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the amendment to the motion has failed of adoption. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I should like to offer an amendment, and strike the words "Agreed upon" and substitute the word "Done".

MCNEALY: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is moved by Mr. Johnson, seconded by Mr. McNealy, that the words "Agreed upon" be deleted and the word "Done" be inserted in lieu thereof. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I ask Mr. Sundborg a question? By placing the words "Agreed upon" starting in the front of the closing sentence there, that would in turn infer that this Constitution was prepared by the delegates and all the work that has gone into it in the last 75 days has been done by us - - and we're not just coming here on the 5th day of February and agreeing upon it, are we?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: We were conscious of some difficulties here because, of course, everything isn't done on the fifth day. It is just the day on which the document is executed, and we do feel that it is the day on which it is finally agreed upon. Of course, "done" does mean executed, concluded, adopted, agreed upon. I do agree it means the very same thing. We have tried for a while in our Committee to work in the terminology "Constitution Hall", but it was a little difficult in view of the fact that the actual signing which will take place on the 5th of February will not occur here but in another building. But, to answer your question, I think that either "done or agreed upon" would carry out the thought of what we will be doing on the 5th of February.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment to the motion as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment to the motion signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: In my new role as grammarian, I would like to submit an amendment. Earlier this evening you posed a hypothetical question which was answered by Delegate Harris regarding the possibility of what would happen if all the delegates didn't sign, and to take that possibility into consideration in this wording, I think we might perhaps add something to the sound of it, too. I would like to make an amendment to the motion that the fourth word "the" be stricken and in its place we substitute the word "these", so that the sentence would read then "Agreed upon by these delegates to the Alaska Constitutional Convention", so that any delegates who might not sign still would not be included in the original wording; only those who signed would be included in that sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption of that amendment?

NERLAND: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delegate Nerland moves the adoption. Is there a second?

MCCUTCHEON: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. McCutcheon. Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think this is kind of like an invitation to people not to sign, and, secondly, an agreement of a group like this doesn't have to be unanimous. Nobody assumes that this need be unanimous, and the word "agreed" leaves room for a recalcitrant delegate. I would hesitate to issue that invitation to people or indicate it. What if everybody did sign? It would look then like someone had been omitted or hadn't signed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel, we have Mr. Nerland's amendment before us at the present time. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I find myself in a position of disagreement with Mr.

Nerland in spite of his recently acquired status as grammarian and my demotion from that same position, but I don't believe that that word expresses what we want expressed. If you say "these" delegates, you don't even have an idea of how many delegates there were. It might be that only half of the delegates sign, that is as this document may appear to people in the future who don't know the full, the history of the case, and I think if you say "the" delegates you know at least that a majority of those attending this Convention have signed the document. "These" does not convey to me the idea of a majority. It is a selective word rather than a general and all-encompassing word, and I think the word "the" -- well, we might have one or two or maybe more, but I don't think we will, who don't sign the document, but still it is signed by delegates to the Convention in sufficient number to indicate to the world that the decision was made by a majority.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: I didn't like the way Mrs. Hermann grasped that rolling pin when she sat down, and her words have sufficiently impressed me so that with the consent of my second I will withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland has asked unanimous consent with consent of his second to withdraw his amendment. Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Hinckel has been attempting to get the floor to offer an amendment.

HINCKEL: Preceding the words "agreed upon", I would like to have inserted these words "Done and". My reason is that it was first done and then it will be agreed upon. I didn't like the order of the words when it was offered the other way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel moves the adoption of the amendment, placing the words "Done and" before the word "agreed".

R. RIVERS: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: For a point of information, I have here the U.S. Constitution and the way it was signed by the gentlemen back there in 1787 was that Article VI states "The Ratification of the Conventions of nine States shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the same". Then it says "Done in Convention by the Unanimous Consent of the States present the Seventeenth Day of September in the Year of Our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven and of the Independence of the United States of America the Twelfth. In witness whereof We have hereunto subscribed our names". That's the way the federal constitution is signed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: If you say here or will say that it is done on the 5th day of February, of course that word "done" could mean "finished" or "done for". That would be on the 5th. However, this was actually done over a period of 75 days. That is the way I look at it. Another reason I have against adopting the word "done" is that it is hackneyed legal phraseology which we have been trying to keep out of this constitution all the way along.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment to the motion as offered by Mr. Hinckel be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment to the motion signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption.

MCCUTCHEON: I move the previous question.

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon moves the previous question, seconded by Mr. Buckalew. All those in favor of ordering the previous question signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I am going to belabor this point a little but here we have agreed upon, by the delegates to the Alaska Constitutional Convention, and I will quote my old friend Anthony J. Dimond who always objected to being a delegate "to" Congress. He insisted he was a delegate "in" Congress. We are in constitutional convention assembled. When we are together here we are not delegate to this Convention, we are delegates in Convention. It would seem to me that it should be "agreed upon by the delegates in Constitutional Convention assembled at the University of Alaska, this fifth day of February, the year of our Lord" and so forth and I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, you are moving that this motion be amended to read that way? Did the Chief Clerk get the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment to the motion. Is there a second?

BARR: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Barr. The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment to the motion as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" Would the Chief Clerk please read the motion as it would read if Mr. Rivers' proposed amendment were adopted?

CHIEF CLERK: "Agreed upon by the delegates in Constitutional Convention assembled at the University of Alaska", etc.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a discussion? If not, the question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 32 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Harris, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Buckalew, Cooper, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nordale, Riley, Rosswog.

Absent: 10 - Collins, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, King, Londbord, Reader, Robertson, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 32 yeas, 13 nays, and 10 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the amendment to the motion has been adopted. Would the Chief Clerk please read the motion now as it will be?

CHIEF CLERK: "Agreed upon by the delegates in Constitutional Convention assembled at the University of Alaska this fifth day of February in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fifty-six and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and eightieth".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to direct a question to someone in Style and Drafting. Is it correct to say one thousand nine hundred and fifty-six. I know that in speaking of an amount of money you say one thousand nine hundred fifty-six, without the "and".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: We adopted this from language of other constitutions. Here is the State of Washington's "one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine"; Iowa, "one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven", that is from the federal constitution. They all seem to use "and", I believe.

BARR: Of course I came from Iowa, and I might not be more intelligent than they are. What did the national constitution say?

SUNDBORG: They used the word "and".

BARR: Well I will go along with that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed motion as amended and offered by the Style and Drafting Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed motion will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the motion has been adopted. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Report of the Committee on Style and Drafting on the arrangement and final language of the Alaska State Constitution be accepted, and that the changes made in the document as it has been agreed upon -- as they have been agreed upon tonight, be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the unanimous consent request of the chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I have a matter of some importance for the record. Today some curiosity was exhibited as to how long it would take to read the constitution. I can now report for those who are interested that the Chief Clerk, reading "in a dignified manner", took exactly one hour and twenty-six minutes to read the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Just for the sake of compliance with Rule 50 under which we seem to be operating this evening, would a reference be in order?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be in order, Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Well, I ask simply that in view of the fact that we have accepted certain amendments offered by Style and Drafting that it be ordered, the document in its entirety, back to Style and Drafting at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, the Chair will have to admit that the Chair has had the wrong copy of the rules all the way through the Convention. We do not have the amended copy.... (Laughter) The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley, the Chair just discovered that tonight, that the copy here is not the amended copy.

RILEY: May I observe that I have known right along that there must be some fundamental reason.... (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Does the rule say that we accept the report and then refer it back to Style and Drafting, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Rule 50, Mr. President, says "Should the proposed document be amended it shall again be referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting." This refers to amendments in the process of the Style and Drafting report, and since it is patent that the Committee will be overseeing its conduct to the printer, I think that it's just a matter of showing it ordered on the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the report of the Constitution of the State of Alaska is referred to the Style and Drafting Committee. Now that will automatically come before us at convening time tomorrow, is that your understanding, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I should say yes, Mr. President

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I note that it is eight minutes after one. However, I am good for many hours yet, and this might be an opportune time for me to start a filibuster on the question of boroughs. However, out of consideration for some of the rest of you, I will move that we adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, didn't we change the name of that to "Barr-os" the other day? (Laughter)

BARR: An error in the spelling....

KILCHER: Point of order. Aren't we going to meet any more today?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moved that the Convention stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. Did you say that you ask unanimous consent that we stand at recess until 2:30 p.m.?

BARR: Until 1:30 p.m. today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the convention will be at recess for one minute right at the present time.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, before the motion to adjourn is renewed, I wish to move in recognition of a very impressive performance that we have seen here that this Convention go on record as extending a vote of thanks to Style and Drafting for diligent, brilliant, timely, and valiant service.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Under fire!

(Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the unanimous consent request of Mr. Ralph Rivers. If there is no objection, such a vote of appreciation will become a part of the record. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I was afraid for a minute that Mr. Ralph Rivers was going to end his unanimous consent request with some reference to commas, and I was happy when he didn't. I just would like to say for our Committee that I feel and I think all of its members feel that we haven't worked harder or done anything more than every committee has done, and the product is not any more our work, and probably not as much our work as it is that of each of the substantive committees, and all of the delegates who make up the Convention, but we appreciate your very kind thoughts, nevertheless.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, as far as I know I didn't get a second to my motion, so there is nothing before us, so now I will make a motion that we adjourn until 2:00 this afternoon.

KNIGHT: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves, seconded by Mr. Knight, that the Convention stand adjourned until 2:00 p.m. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Before you put the question, are there committee announcements? Your Committee on Administration will meet at 11:00 and transportation will be provided at the front of the Nordale at 10:30 for delegates to the Administration Committee. I might also mention that tomorrow morning at 9:00 your platform will be gone so when we meet at 2:30 you will be on the same level with the rest of the delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I just wanted to be sure that the Administration Committee made the proper orders for the bus to bring the people out tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will you see that (to Mr. Coghill) that is taken care of at 1:30. Bus at the Nordale at 1:30. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I might call attention to this, to the arrival tomorrow morning of two planes from Anchorage. Barrie, I think you know more about this than anyone else.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, would you care to report on that?

WHITE: I should refer you to my wife in the gallery. She knows all about it. Mr. President, two planeloads, charter loads, of people from Anchorage under the auspices of Operation Statehood will arrive tomorrow morning, I believe at 11:00, on Alaska Airlines charter. Anyone who is interested in meeting them should check with Alaska Airlines to find out what time they are getting in. In view of the time of convening tomorrow at 2:00 p.m., I am not sure whether they will come here for lunch as previously planned. However, they might, and if any delegates plan to be here, I am sure they would be delighted to join them for lunch. All of the people arriving on those two flights, as far as I know, will be staying at the Traveler's Inn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Point of information - I'd like to ask Mr. White -- what airline did you say, Mr. White? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: One other time that the Committee on Administration has been confronted with is that there will not be any reserved seats at the signing. It looks like we are going to have an overflow crowd, so we are going to provide for the immediate families of the delegates, and tomorrow afternoon we will have a show of hands or a count of how many delegates will have their families up here and how many that will consist of, and those will be seated right behind the delegates at the signing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Point of inquiry. Does that mean the representative of the Governor of Louisiana will get to sit on the platform?

PRESIDENT EGAN: This means he will get to sit pretty close. If there are no further committee announcements the question is: "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 2:00 p.m.? All those in favor will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention stands adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

February 4, 1956

SEVENTY-FOURTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us today the Reverend Ralph Disch, minister of the Church of Christ. Reverend Disch will give us our daily invocation.

REVEREND DISCH: Our God and our Father of all mankind, at this, the close of the session that has been meeting for the framing of this great Constitution for the State of Alaska, we ask Thy good guidance as this group continually meets together. Our Father, we pray Thy richest blessings upon us at all times. May we ever have the freedom we now have enjoyed in worshipping Thee and not being afraid of any man. Grant us, our Father, that the privilege we have enjoyed may continue throughout the rest of our lives. Our Father we pray that we may at all times never be afraid to work together for the good of Alaska as we walk down the pathway of time. We ask Thee to guide, guard, and direct our steps and the future destiny of our endeavors here. In the name of Christ, we pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk then called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: One absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, just prior to recess at 1:00 o'clock this morning, Mr. Barr addressed a question to me, and during the recess, Mr. President, I have been doing a little checking up and, Mr. Barr, on that charter flight from Anchorage, some airline, the name of which escapes me for the moment, arranged for the flight, but I think the information you wanted was this: the first flight came in on Cordova Airlines and the second flight on Reeve Aleutian Airways. (Laughter) Mr. President, I note the occupants of those two flights with us today in the gallery. They came here under the auspices of Operation Statehood and I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that Mr. Ancil Payne, President of Operation Statehood, be given the privilege of the floor to address us briefly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Payne, you may come forward and have the privilege of the floor.

ANCIL PAYNE: Mr. President and delegates, it is a great honor to appear here in behalf of Operation Statehood. Many members of Operation Statehood who could not be here have watched closely every action that you have taken and regret that they cannot be in attendance with us. As this Convention draws to a close, it is perhaps singularly unlike any other Convention wherein the last few days, everyone comments about "the words that have been spoken here will soon be forgotten but we will carry the spirit forward". In this particular instance as you gentlemen are only too well aware, every word that has been spoken here will go into history for study in the future. Perhaps it has seemed difficult for you from time to time, to draw decisions that were free from political impact. Many of us have not been unaware of the fact that innumerable decisions that perhaps would prejudice people interested in their political futures, forever have been made at this point, fairly, unbiased, and unselfishly. I say many of us have been aware of this because thousands of people have watched the actions of this Convention, on a day in and day out procedure, those people who could not perhaps attend on a regular basis, but have watched closely every action that has been taken. And for the fact that we have here delegates who have been unselfish and honest, we can only thank God. As we landed today, and there were 56 of us coming in, we were greeted by the Fairbanks High School choir, which gave a rendition of the Alaska Flag. And I think it was extremely touching that these high school students were singing the Flag in the city where the constitution was being written. These are, after all, the students who will live under the laws which you have, in these past days, put into writing. They are the ones who will study the actions and the words of each of you through many years in the future as to what you have intended to do and what you have meant in the statements that you have made. Mr. President, some way, it is a touching thing to see those students as they actually stood there singing The Alaska Flag. Perhaps it is somewhat fitting to recognize that in the opening days of your session we presented you with a flag, and now in the closing days we have come back to see the completed document which you have written. We intend to stay over tomorrow for the final signing of it. We recognize that in between those two acts a tremendous amount has been accomplished, and now you are coming within 24 hours to the completion of your work. But it is recognition of all the things that have gone in between that we want to make today, because, after all, following the signing, then we move on to something else which means that this too is an in-between step. We recognize that it is perhaps another one of those steps that all through history men have fought for, way back in biblical times with the prophets down to modern times with the Jeffersons, and the Hamiltons and the Burkes. You fall into the same category of people who have untiringly given your time and your efforts so that you, too, might make a better government under which we might live. For this, then, is a stepping stone to our next step. This document must be ratified. It must be passed by the people. It is a complex thing. We, as members of Operation Statehood, assure each delegate and you, Mr. President, that we will give untiringly now of our time to be sure that this is ratified and understood and that your actions might not just go to no good. For this is our objective as probably one of the very few pressure groups that have only one single pressure to offer, and that is the pressure for ever better government and for the ultimate end that we seek which is statehood. So we cannot thank you enough; we cannot thank you enough for your work and your time, and we only reassure you that we have been in spirit with you and we will continue with you up until the time your work is fully culminated, and we say only this thing and I speak for all our group: "Thank God we have men and women like you doing this splendid work."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Payne, we are very pleased and proud to have you 56 Alaskans from the railbelt area here with us this afternoon. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move the speech we have just heard be spread upon today's Journal as part of today's proceedings, and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent that the speech we have just heard be spread upon the pages of today's Journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Are there any communications or petitions before us at this time? If so, the Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of the communications.

CHIEF CLERK: A telegram from President Eisenhower as follows: "Thank you for your radiogram concerning the work of the Alaska Constitutional Convention. In the event that the proposed Alaska Constitution is ratified by the voters in April, I am certain that Congress will take due cognizance of it in connection with its consideration of any statehood legislation for the Territory. In the meantime, I can assure you that the ratified constitution will receive careful consideration by the Executive Branch. /s/ Dwight D. Eisenhower"

(Further communications read by the Chief Clerk were: letter of appreciation from the Fairbanks Women's Club; telegram of Governor George M. Leader of Pennsylvania expressing appreciation and regret at not being able to attend closing ceremonies; letter from the Governor of Massachusetts expressing appreciation and regret; letter from Governor Aronson of Montana expressing regret at not being able to attend closing ceremony.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other communications? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the telegram from President Eisenhower be spread upon today's Journal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent that the telegram from President Eisenhower be spread upon the pages of today's journal. Is there objection?

McNEALY: I object.

ROSSWOG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson so moves, seconded by Mr. Rosswog, that the communication received from President Eisenhower be spread upon today's journal. The question is, "Shall the communication be spread upon today's journal?" All those in favor of spreading the communication upon today's journal will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the communication is ordered spread upon today's journal. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I have the Journals for the 67th and 68th Convention days. In the journal for the 67th day, on page 20, paragraph 3, second line, starts out "Mr. Kilcher rose to a point of order". That should be "Mr. Hellenthal". For the 68th Convention day, page 4, paragraph 3, bottom line after "Mr. Sundborg", strike the word "and"; after "Mr. Smith" insert a comma and add "and Mr. Hurley period". Those are all of the corrections. Mr. President, and with that I move that the journals for the 67th and 68th days be approved as corrected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr Doogan moves and asks unanimous consent that the Journals of the 67th and 68th days be approved as corrected by the special Committee to read the journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the journals have been approved. Are there reports of standing committees? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration has met and considered many of the things of the closing ceremony, and in accord with the wishes of the delegates, we are only reserving seats in the small gymnasium at the University for the delegates and their families, and this will include a guest of a person who should not have any of his immediate family here. These seats will be immediately behind the delegates' seats in the hall, and we would like to know how many seats we will have to reserve, so at this time I would ask unanimous consent that the delegates be instructed to come forward to the Chief Clerk's desk in alphabetical order and present the number of guests or members of family that they will have, and Mr. Knight will officiate by presenting them with a gift from a friend of the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, are you asking that the Convention be at recess during that time?

COGHILL: At ease.

WHITE: I may not have been listening carefully. Was that just immediate families only, Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at ease.

(The Convention was at ease while the requested reservations were placed with the Committee on Administration and while the delegates were presented with souvenir pens donated by Mr. Charles R. Griffin.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, continuing with the committee report, your Committee on administration would like to inform the delegates that, although the gymnasium at the University is quite small, we are going to try to have 765 seats in the Convention, or in the gymnasium for the closing ceremony. Now how many of those will be taken up by the reserved section for the families or guests of the delegates and the delegates themselves will probably come to about 125. Your Committee on administration would also like to inform the delegates that we wish to have the delegates and their families or guests on the campus at the University at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon so that we have time to place you in alphabetical order in the seats, and also to be able to outline the program before the crowd starts assembling in the hall. It is the recommendation of the Administration Committee, also, that immediately following the official signing in the gymnasium that the 55 delegates will retire to this plenary room here, and we will immediately take up the task of signing the other 61 copies that we have to sign. This will be done by joining these tables that we have here together, and to have the delegates start out with "A", Mr. Armstrong, I believe, being the first one on the roll call, to start down the table where the documents will be laid, and signing the individual documents, which will take probably about an hour and a half. One other thing that the Committee on Administration would like to do, Mr. President, under committee reports, we would like to have a recess at this time for possibly a half hour, to meet with the Rules Committee and the President of the Convention. If that is in order, I would so move at this time, that the Administration Committee and the Rules Committee, along with the President of the Convention, meet in the large committee room, 108, upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill asks unanimous consent. Is there objection? Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: An inquiry, Mr. President. Will there be a bus at 1:00 tomorrow?

COGHILL: We can arrange that, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess until 3:25 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other reports of standing committees? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Style and Drafting Committee would like to request that any delegates who have in mind the introduction of individual resolutions or any committees which may be planning to introduce resolutions do so, if possible, at this session today so that the Style and Drafting Committee may have an opportunity to have a look at them at meetings which we will hold this afternoon and tomorrow morning if necessary. The time it seems to us will be growing very short for any resolutions to be introduced after today if they are to go through the regular course and be scrutinized by our Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, didn't Mr. Coghill state that the Administration Committee has several resolutions? Are they going to be routed through the Style and Drafting Committee? It seemed to be in his statement that they felt that if everyone would first give their resolutions to the Administration Committee that they would all be in one place.

SUNDBORG: I'm not aware of that, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: As the Administration Committee is not here -- if there is no objection the Convention will be at ease for a few minutes.

(The Convention was at ease for the time specified.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other reports of standing committees? Mr. Coghill, do you have a further report to make at this time?

COGHILL: The only thing we have to report at this time is that the Style and Drafting Committee has requested that our resolutions be filtered through them first so that there will be only one presentation on the floor, so that all resolutions that we have will be forthcoming at a little later date of the day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee reports? If not, are there reports of select committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, we have a resolution on "Friendly Relations with Canada" that has been pushed around for a long time, and I think it should come up now. It has passed the Style Committee and all of it. I think the Secretary has it. Could it be read now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, as Chairman of the Rules Committee --

RILEY: Mr. President, the matter hasn't been referred to the Rules Committee. I believe it went from the floor to the Style and Drafting Committee last week.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, it's still in the Style and Drafting Committee and it was being styled as recently as a minute ago. I know it is not ready to be reported to the Convention floor yet. We expect to have it out -- we could have it out later today if there would be a recess, or we could have it at tomorrow's session.

MARSTON: Mr. President, one more little piece of business I would like to get on its way and I have tried to put it through the Committee, but they tell me it is too late to go through the Committee of resolutions and asked me to present it direct to this body from me, as a representative of this body. It's a resolution which we took two hours on one night here and tried to put it into the Constitution and failed. I would like to have this read now and placed out. It came back to me from the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking that copies be passed out to each delegate?

MARSTON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Sergeant at Arms please distribute copies of the resolution?

COGHILL: While the Sergeant at Arms is passing that out, is there any special resolution of thanks that any of the delegates would wish the Committee on Administration to consider or write up, at our next recess if they would contact me, I have a list of the resolutions that we have prepared, and to assure that there is a complete list so submitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, are you asking that the resolution be accepted by the Convention at this time?

MARSTON: Would the secretary read it? I would like to have just two minutes on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the resolution that would be offered by Mr. Marston?

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution introduced by Mr. Marston, entitled "Native Land Grants".)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I tried to put this in the body of the Constitution and I failed, but I think we could do no less than we are doing here. Future historians --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, do you ask unanimous consent that it be received by the Convention?

MARSTON: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it be received by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the resolution will be considered before the Convention in first reading at this time. The Chief Clerk will read the "Resolve" clause.

(The Chief Clerk then read the "Resolve" clause.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, it would be in order now, if you so desire, to ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended in order that the resolution be considered in second reading before us.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I ask that the rules be suspended and that this resolution be considered in second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that this resolution be considered in second reading. Now it is open for amendment if there are any proposed amendments to the resolution. Are there amendments to be proposed for the resolution? Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: If there are no amendments to the resolution, I will ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that the resolution be advanced to third reading for final consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that the resolution be placed before us in third reading for final consideration, and be read by title only by "Resolve" only, and placed in final passage. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the resolution is now before us in third reading and is open for debate. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Future historians and students who study this Constitution will never understand why we don't mention the great people who lived here before we came. Most lands are acquired by the clash of arms and a treaty was made. With outstretched hands they welcomed us here. We wouldn't be here now if it wasn't for those people who came ahead of us, and I think we must recognize those people some way in this Constitution. Otherwise, this Constitution will lack some of its soul and heart that it should have and I think we have this obligation and we might do it even this way through a resolution. Let us not draw about us a cloak of righteousness and stick our heads in the sand and do nothing about it. The fishermen who were in distress -- we did something about that, and I think this Constitution will live because we are doing some of the things that need to be done about people today, and not so much about the founding fathers, which were great fathers. But we bring it up to a living document. We recognized the fishermen in distress and did what we could about it. I hope we will do something about this resolution that we have in here now. I told you about George Lockwood who had good title but our new civilization that has rolled in here and destroyed his title, his squatter's rights. He had been pushed off the beach where he fished and his children played on the beach. His blueberry patch in the back of his fishing camp has been destroyed by big "cats" going through it, and I would like to restore George Lockwood on to his property, which he is entitled to, by giving him a new title under the new civilization. I want you to remember George Lockwood and that story we told you an hour and a half here one night. And that is all I have on this resolution just a salute to these people and a suggestion. And I think the Constitution will be shortcoming if we don't mention this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, as Mr. Marston has pointed out, this resolution was belabored for a matter of a couple hours, not only once but twice, trying to have it adopted into the Constitution. We had other points that may or may not come up by resolution, that we have been trying to adopt into the Constitution, and some of us got some knots on our heads and didn't make it. My personal feeling is that any resolution of substance that we have tried to adopt into the Constitution and have failed in so doing, should not now come out as a resolution for the first Alaska State Legislature. I feel that we have a good Constitution, and I feel that any resolutions of this nature that we bring out now doesn't add to the work that we have done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Kilcher

KILCHER: I would like to speak in favor of the resolution. If I remember correctly, a lot of us delegates who ultimately decided when the matter was on the floor before that it should not be included in the Constitution, we understood that it was rather a matter of a resolution and a lot of us I think silently agreed to that, some of us openly. I think it is really a good mannered resolution and a good gesture towards our Native friends and I am very much in favor of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion, the question is, "Shall the resolution introduced by Mr. Marston be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 44 - Armstrong, Awes Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 9 - Cooper, Doogan, V. Fischer, Laws, Nerland, Poulsen, Reader, Sweeney, Walsh.

Absent: 2 - Robertson and Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 44 yeas, 9 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the resolution is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, with Mr. Marston's acquiescence (acquiescence) I ask that this matter be referred to Style and Drafting solely for the purpose of correcting minor errors in form. I note one in the resolving clause, and if that is agreeable with Mr. Marston, I would like to make that request a matter of unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal asks unanimous consent that the resolution be referred to the Style and Drafting Committee for the purpose stated. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. We now have before us the Constitution, the proposed Constitution for the State of Alaska. We have the report of the Style and Drafting Committee with relation to the proposed Constitution. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, Mr. Sundborg, the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee, is presently at the News-Miner working on the final format of the Constitution. In his absence, on behalf of Style and Drafting, I would like to report orally that the changes and corrections and amendments made last night have all been made and are presently being incorporated into the printed draft. At this time Style and Drafting has completed its work on the Constitution and we request approval of the document approval of the form that we have made in styling the document. I ask unanimous consent at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee be approved by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

DAVIS: Now, Mr. President, are there other items of business to come before the Convention at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The only thing, Mr. Davis, that the Chair knows of at this time is that there was a general agreement that, if there were to be any statements, they would be made at this time, relative to the Constitution, and then a motion for the previous question would be made and that we would call the roll at the ceremony tomorrow afternoon.

DAVIS: I am prepared now, Mr. President, to make the motion for the previous question, but I will hold it if there are any comments to be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone who wishes to be heard at this time relative to the Constitution? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, would it be in order to revert to the business of the committee in order to pass out these pass cards for the delegates' families for the Convention tomorrow?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we might hold up the move for the previous question.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: As far as I know, there is no question before the house at the present time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well there is none, but if there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal, but before the question is put, we might take a recess in order to let the Administration Committee distribute their cards.

HELLENTHAL: Might I suggest that the question be put by the oldest member of the group.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The request asking that the previous question be ordered you mean, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: No. I mean the question itself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Oh. You mean tomorrow?

HELLENTHAL: No, I imagine it will have to be put today.

RILEY: May we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. Egan -- Mr. President, from the very beginning of this Convention it had been my hope that there might be from this Convention a statement or pledge to Alaska's children. I believe that it is time at the close of this Convention to say to the children of Alaska, in light of this completed Constitution, that we do solemnly make a promise to them and with them in our future State, and so, sir, I would move that a committee be appointed to draw up a resolution that would be known as a pledge to Alaska's children, this pledge to be signed by you, sir, as the President of this Convention; a pledge that would be able to be placed in every school room; a pledge that would say to them that we call upon them for their cooperation as we move toward statehood, because they will be the future citizens. I would hope that this would say that we are providing for them a place where they may practice the faith of their choice; an opportunity for education to meet today's problems; a country filled with trees and streams, bounded by adequate laws to help them in the future; and the possibility of a future state that can be theirs where they can operate as the citizens of tomorrow. So I move, sir, for this committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong moves -- do you ask unanimous consent, Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I ask for unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That a special committee be appointed for that purpose. If there is no objection, the Chair will appoint Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Coghill, Mr. Walsh, and Mr. Victor Rivers as such committee. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would suggest that we call it a bequest instead of a pledge. We are bestowing something upon them; we are not pledging something to them. They, in turn, are going to be pledging to us to carry out the framework which we have afforded them. Just a suggestion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would move for suspension of the rules and proceed to the consideration of the resolutions which the Administration Committee has in its possession, and that suspension of the rules would be that we bypass the Style and Drafting Committee with the reservation that they might look them over for any defects in phraseology, or grammar or punctuation. I think that would expedite the business of the Convention if we could dispose of that today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean, Mr. Taylor, you are asking suspension of the rules and asking that the resolutions be placed before us at this time; then if they are adopted, referred to the Style and Drafting Committee for any phraseology changes?

TAYLOR: Any grammatical changes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Taylor's unanimous consent request. Is there objection? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to know just how many resolutions will be before us; exactly what they contain, if they are to come up for adoption immediately. I think it would be more proper if we could see them, work them over, and then adopt them tomorrow afternoon or Monday morning. Therefore, I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor so moves. Is there a second?

EMBERG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Emberg, that the rules be suspended and that we consider the resolutions that are now in the Administration Committee at this time. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Coghill? Can you let us know when it is your intention, should this motion not pass, to bring out such resolutions as may be in the possession of your Committee?

COGHILL: It was the feeling of the Committee on Administration that we should bring out these resolutions today, and it was brought to the Committee's attention that it was desirable that they should first be looked over by the Style and Drafting Committee as to form. Now I have six resolutions here and we have at least four more, and I was hoping that the immediate statehood resolution would be on the floor, but it has not yet come out of the boiler room, and that is the one I would like to present first as our first resolution, requesting statehood at the earliest possible time. We have two mimeographed and four not mimeographed that we can work on right now if it is the body's wish.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, we have set a precedent already. We took prompt action on Major Marston's resolution and then by unanimous consent we just let Style and Drafting have a last look at it, I presume with more or less full power to act, and that would be the case here. And I think if we have a half hour to spend we ought to get to work on this stuff.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and the resolutions that are ready in the Administration Committee be placed before the Convention at this time." The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Smith, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 6 - Buckalew, Doogan, V. Fischer, Poulsen, Reader, Riley.

Absent: 2 - Robertson and Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 6 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the resolutions may be placed before us at this time in first reading. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that we reserve Resolution No. 1 for the statehood resolution, and assign No. 2 and so on to these others which we are about to consider.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Ralph Rivers unanimous consent request. Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Rivers, we already have some other resolutions that have been numbered.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Coghill. You spoke of having No. 1 for the statehood resolution. We have already adopted some resolutions. Was it your intention that we should renumber the others and assign No. 1 to the statehood resolution?

COGHILL: Mr. President, we didn't have any authority or jurisdiction over the other resolutions. We just thought that we would lead ours out with the statehood resolution.

R. RIVERS: Well, that wouldn't get yours at the top of the -- my way, would it? I withdraw my request.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers withdraws his request. The Chair has just been informed that a bus is waiting for our friends from down along the railbelt. Would the Chief Clerk please read the first resolution for the first time by "Resolve" only?

(The Chief Clerk read the "Resolve" in the resolution pertaining to a memorial following the election of senators and a representative under the Tennessee Plan.)

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that this resolution be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that the first reading be considered the second reading, that the first reading also will be considered the third reading, and that it be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the resolution is ordered adopted. Will the Chief Clerk please read the next resolution in its entirety?

(The Chief Clerk read the next resolution by the Committee on Administration, entitled: "Recognition of the Services of Dr. Moberg.")

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I move that all rules be suspended and ask unanimous consent that this resolution be passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill requests unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that first reading be considered the second and third readings, and that the resolution be adopted unanimously by the Convention. Is there objection? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, just one point. Should this not be the Convention "acknowledges" with deep appreciation, instead of "acknowledge". It's a point for the Style and Drafting Committee, no objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the resolution? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the resolution has been adopted. Will the Chief Clerk please read the third resolution?

(The Chief Clerk then read the resolution by the Committee on Administration, entitled: "Press, Radio and Television".)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I move that all rules be suspended and ask unanimous consent that this resolution be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the first reading be considered the second reading and that the resolution be adopted unanimously by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the resolution is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk will please read the fourth resolution.

(The Chief Clerk then read the resolution by the Committee on Administration entitled "Chaplains".)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move that all rules be suspended and ask unanimous consent that this resolution be adopted.

KILCHER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves that all rules be suspended and that this resolution be adopted. Is there a second?

SWEENEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mrs. Sweeney. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended that the first reading be considered the second and third readings, and the resolution adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 51 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien and Mr. President.

Nays: Kilcher

Absent: 3 - Riley, Robertson, Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 51 yeas, 1 nay, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the rules have been suspended for the purpose stated and the resolution is ordered adopted. Are there other resolutions? The Chief Clerk will continue with the reading of the resolutions.

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution by the Committee on Administration entitled: "Students of the University".)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move that all rules be suspended and ask unanimous consent that this resolution be passed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that all rules be suspended, that first reading be considered second and third reading, and that the resolution be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the resolution is ordered adopted.

(The Chief Clerk then read the next resolution by Committee on Administration entitled, "Officials of the University".)

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President. I move that all rules be suspended and ask unanimous consent that this resolution be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended, that first reading of the resolution be considered second and third readings, and that the resolution be adopted. Is there objection. Hearing no objection the resolution is ordered adopted. Are there other resolutions?

COGHILL: Yes, I have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of the resolutions.

(The Chief Clerk then read a resolution introduced by John Coghill, Chairman of the Committee on Administration, for the orderly disposition of the property and records and other unfinished business of the Convention.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I ask for a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that this resolution be placed in second reading, and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and we consider this resolution in second reading at this time. Is there objection? Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, I haven't any objection, but it has come to my attention and I think it was brought up in the Administration Committee about the members being able to get copies of the transcript and sections of the tape, and I thought maybe there would be some statement made as to how they were going to get that at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan, as far as the Chair is concerned, the Chair feels there is nothing that prohibits it. If a member wants to pay for a certain portion of the tape and so long as he or she has the proper operators to do that recording for them, there is no prohibition against that at any time. But it might be a subject which it would be well to discuss.

NOLAN: That is why I brought the subject up because I thought that someone should be in charge so they could do that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, we in the Statehood Committee have talked about that, and we feel that it is an obligation of the Convention in completing its business that we should have a transcript of the substance matter of the stenotype record. I see in here that it provides for two typed copies. That would be verbatim of all of the hassles, committee meetings, and floor procedures. We already have the formal journal which shows all final action taken on each article, each amendment, where it was adopted, as amended, and so forth. But in the State of New Jersey, they took the substance matter, and taking just substance, they amended out a great deal of the floor procedure. They then had the substance matter of the discussions to supplement their working Journal. It was the thought of myself and the other members of the Statehood Committee, and I have discussed it with the Administration Committee, that we would like to see that done, and perhaps have one hundred mimeographed copies made up and bound, one for distribution for each member of the Convention and perhaps to each court and a number to be placed in the files of the Secretary of the Territory, later of the State, for reference matter by the legislature. It is our conviction that there are funds available to do that and it is an obligation of the funds of this Convention. At some later date we might even be able to have it printed. I am going to move that this Section (d) be amended to cover that particular process so that such information will be made available. I do believe with the Committee that two identical typed copies or as many as could be run in one typing, say one original and four carbons, should be made up and placed on file as a record in the Secretary of State's office, verbatim down to the last period.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Point of order. The resolution hasn't been advanced to second reading, has it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It hasn't been advanced, but Mr. Nolan

V. RIVERS: Well, I think I have said all I have to say on it anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and the resolution be placed before us in second reading at this time?" Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I move that further consideration of this resolution be deferred at this time, and that it be continued in second reading until tomorrow.

RILEY: Second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have the unanimous consent request before us -- oh, it is in second reading. The motion is that further consideration of this resolution be deferred at this time, and that it be placed before the Convention tomorrow. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I saw Mr. Coghill nodding his head so I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the resolution be deferred until tomorrow. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. The resolution is deferred until tomorrow. Are there other resolutions? Now with relation to that, Mr. White, do you have any suggestions as to when that would be taken up tomorrow?

WHITE: May I ask Mr. Coghill if those are all the resolutions he has?

COGHILL: Mr. President, those are all the resolutions that we have, if my memory serves me right, but I think we have three more coming down. However, Mr President, the schedule for tomorrow, and convening over at the gymnasium at 2:00 which will take approximately an hour and a half, we could recess and come back here. We have 55 more copies -- no, 60 more copies of the Constitution to sign here and at that time, if it is the pleasure of the Convention, we will have those other three, plus this, that we can consider.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, with resolutions still in the Administration Committee not ready for distribution at this time, I move that it be the policy of the Convention that at the close of the ceremonies tomorrow, the proper motion to adjourn or recess, that there be a motion that the Convention recess to the call of the Chair. That is the end of the motion -- with the purpose in mind that we can then come back here and when the signing is over, we can go back into session to consider further resolutions or any other business to come before the Convention, because I think it appears to most people that on Monday morning prior to 10:00 a.m. we probably won't have time to finish up all that needs finishing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now, Mr. White, before placing the motion, if the Chair may, when we come back here tomorrow afternoon, we will probably get back in here around 4:30. That would just be the guess of the Chair. Then we will have all the copies to sign which might take anywhere from an hour and a half to two hours. It's possible that it might take longer than that even. Then we are to be guests of the University upstairs at 6:30. Is that right? At 7:00 p.m. It might be necessary in order to accomplish what you have in mind that we have a night session, possibly real late tomorrow night. The Chair just wanted to bring that to the attention of the delegates, that the time schedule might not work out in any other fashion other than we have a late night session on Sunday night. Did someone second your motion Mr. White, or did you ask unanimous consent?

WHITE: I heard no second; I will ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I want to raise a point of information. As I understood Mr. White, he said we would come over here and sign the documents and then if we had time that we could convene the Convention. Well, won't we convene and then sign the documents? It seems that that ought to be done while we are in session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are probably correct, Miss Awes, and we will undoubtedly be in session while the signing of these documents is taking place. Unanimous consent is asked that the motion of Mr. White be adopted as the policy of the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and that is the manner in which we will proceed. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: One other item that the Committee on Administration would like to convey to the delegates, that this evening upon adjourning we would like to have them clear their tables off so that we will have all of the papers and whatnot cleared off of the tables in order to expedite this signing procedure that we will have to go through tomorrow afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: It was brought forward earlier in the afternoon that we were to take some action now in regard to putting the question tomorrow. I think that ought to be brought up again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: I move that this Convention now consider the adoption of the Constitution for the State of Alaska in its present form.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Walsh.

WALSH: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Collins moves, seconded by Mr. Walsh, that the Convention agree upon the Constitution for the State of Alaska in its final form at this time. The question is, "Shall the Convention agree upon the Constitution -- the proposed Constitution -- for the State of Alaska in its final form?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Roll Call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: If there is no further debate on this matter at this time, I would move that we put the previous question and then, as we have previously agreed, adjourn, or recess the Convention until tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis moves and asks unanimous consent that the previous question be ordered at this time. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered, and the previous question is before us. Mr. White.

WHITE: I move the Convention stand at recess until 2:00 p.m. tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 2:00 p.m. tomorrow. Is there objection? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Is there a question of recess or adjourning?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, there is no question in the mind of the Chair but that, with this agreement, you can adjourn and have the previous question, as has been set as a policy of the Convention, before us at that time.

R. RIVERS: We can adjourn as usual and not recess until tomorrow? Then that recess will carry us over until Monday morning?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: If this motion carries we will be adjourned until 2:00 p.m. tomorrow afternoon?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right.

COGHILL: We have several items on the Committee on Administration that we would like to bring before the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, before the question is put, Mr. Coghill, you may.

COGHILL: One of them is that we have the official pens for the signing of the documents and it is the request of the Committee on Administration, that upstairs in the message center room are the pen points for these pens, for the individual delegates to pick out the type of point they are used to writing with. That is number one. Number two is that if any of the delegates have not got return travel orders to their homes, or they are going to go by a different route, they are to leave the information with the Chief Clerk or one of the designated people upstairs in the secretariat area. Number three is that they shall have to know how they are going to go home and when they are going to go home in order to make this out for the per diem, and this all should be taken care of this afternoon before the delegates go into town.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I think that nearly all of the delegates are in the same shape that I am, we all have excess baggage now. I wonder if the Administration Committee has done anything toward taking care of paying for the excess baggage which we may have over our allowance.

COGHILL: Your Committee on Administration will be meeting immediately upon adjournment and we shall take that subject up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Before adjournment I would like to announce a very short meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Style and Drafting Committee in the gallery immediately upon adjournment. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: To get this point cleared up, I would like to ask exactly where and when we assemble tomorrow afternoon.

COGHILL: The Committee on Administration has recommended previously that all the delegates and their guests will assemble at the University gymnasium at 1:30 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: To clear up a point that was left dangling, I suggest that it be understood by the Convention that Style and Drafting has the usual authority to change the numbers on the resolutions and rearrange the resolutions as to style.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to that? Hearing no objection, Style and Drafting is authorized to do that.

KILCHER: May I make a short statement for the record?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Kilcher making a short statement for the record?

BUCKALEW: I will object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

KILCHER: Then I will ask for a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Kilcher, you may have the floor.

(Mr. Kilcher then spoke for a few moments on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is nothing else to be announced now, at 6:30 this evening there will be -- at 6:30 at the Traveler's Inn, the guests can assemble. At 7:30 there will be a no-host dinner. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, what is going to happen at 6:30?

PRESIDENT EGAN: They will assemble. (Laughter) The Convention will come to order. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I ask Mr. Coghill a question? The bus leaves the Nordale Hotel at what time tomorrow?

COGHILL: We will arrange for a special bus to leave the Nordale at noon -- excuse me -- at 1:00 p.m. for the delegates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I was wondering if that dividend that Mr. Hilscher declared the other day would be the same today.

HILSCHER: Yea, verily, sir. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I made the motion to recess because of considerable discussion that had taken place about the effect of a motion to adjourn. Upon the ruling of the Chair that a motion to adjourn will not kill the action of the previous question, I ask that it be amended to read that we adjourn until 2:00 p.m. tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand adjourned until 2:00 p.m. tomorrow. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the Convention stands adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

February 5, 1956

SEVENTY-FIFTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order (2:00 p.m.). The Reverend John Stokes, would you come forward please and give the invocation.

REVEREND STOKES: Let us pray. Almighty God and Father of all mankind, Thou who doth sit upon the throne of righteousness and dost deal justly with all men, we invoke Thy divine blessing upon this, the signing of the Constitution of the State of Alaska. In doing so, with thanksgiving for those who have prepared it, it is our earnest plea that Thou wilt use it in the affairs of the citizens of this State in the years and ages to come; through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. The Chief Clerk will please read the communications that are before us.

CHIEF CLERK: Telegram from Delegate E. L. Bartlett: "The seventy-five days which began on November 8 and conclude now will become as meaningful in Alaska's future chronicles as they are now to each of you personally. When the Convention began, it was with the best wishes of all Alaskans. As time passed, there was growing comprehension of the immensity of the task upon which you had started. Today, when you sign the document which you have fashioned, there is, I believe, general understanding not only that you have worked diligently, faithfully, and with civic virtue, but also successfully, in writing a Constitution dedicated to the best American principles and to the furtherance of the mighty state to be. I thank you for extending the invitation to be with you today as the Constitution is signed. For both Mrs. Bartlett and me, it is as hard as can be to be here when we want to be there. We congratulate you for a job well done. You have earned the grateful thanks of your fellow Alaskans. Our congratulations go likewise to the loyal members of your staff whose assistance I know has meant so much to you all during the Convention."

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are delighted that we have so many distinguished guests with us as spectators today. There is one though whom we know each individual present is extremely happy to welcome. Let me present to you Mr. Benny Benson, a Native

Alaskan, who as a young boy designed Alaska's Flag. Benny, would you stand, please.

(Mr. Benson stood, and audience stood and applauded.)

At this time I take great pleasure in asking that Mr. Buckalew, Mr. Johnson, Mr. King, and Mr. Reader escort the Governor of Alaska, the Honorable B. Frank Heintzleman, to the rostrum.

(The gentlemen escorted Governor Heintzleman to the rostrum at this time.) (Standing ovation)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Governor Heintzleman, we are extremely gratified that you are here with us today. We know that through your long years in Alaska you have, probably as well as any one in Alaska, comprehended what this day means to our future. Governor, we are again happy to present you to the people who are present today.

(The full text of the speech given by Governor Heintzleman will be found in the appendix.)

(Standing ovation)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. As you know, when we adjourned last night the previous question had been ordered. We now have before us the proposed Constitution for the State of Alaska in its final form. The question is: "Shall the proposed Constitution for the State of Alaska be agreed upon by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 54 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, and Mr. President.

CHIEF CLERK: 54 Yeas, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "Yeas" have it and the proposed Constitution for the State of Alaska has been agreed upon by the Convention. We will now have the signing of the Constitution. The Chief Clerk will call the roll and as each delegate's name is called, that delegate may come forward and affix his or her signature to the Constitution.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll and each delegate and the Secretary came forward and signed the Constitution as his or her name was called.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the proposed Constitution for the State of Alaska in its final form has been signed by the delegates and the Secretary. The Chair would like to at this time call on our own Reverend R. Rolland Armstrong to give our prayer of dedication. Reverend Armstrong.

REVEREND ARMSTRONG: Let us be thankful to Almighty God. Almighty Father, Lover of men, we thank Thee for creating us after Thine image. Thou hast breathed into us the breath of life. Our souls are Thine. We are wholly Thine. Thou has ordained that the delegates of this Convention should be assembled to write a charter of life for Alaska. We bow in humble reverence, for this task has been great, and we have constantly realized the importance of our actions before Thee. Nothing less than a miracle from Thee has kept us together in mind and spirit. We have, under Thy guidance, acted as many facets of thought and passion to mold this one document. The anvil has rung with the hammer of compromise, and there has come forth a statement of our belief. Today we place the work of our hands before Thee. We ask Thy blessing as we dedicate this Constitution. We set it apart from any other plan ever ordered in Alaska as the foundation of our State. We ask that it may speak our hearts, that it might find favor before Thee and the people of this "Great Land." The days and nights have been long. The strain has been at times almost too great to bear, but Thy sustaining power has given us strength. We thank Thee for Thy hand of love, the everlasting arms that have kept us within Thy will. Father, we dedicate this document, mindful of the one who has been given to us as our President. We thank Thee for him. We thank Thee for his wisdom; it has been wisdom from above. We cherish his undaunted courage, the courage he has displayed before us as delegates. We thank Thee for him. And now, O Father, Lord of all, within these pages of this Constitution, we pray that the weak might find strength, the name of justice might be upheld, the lands might be preserved, the governed might find liberty, the life of all might be made bearable and workable. We send this statement of faith unto our people, dedicated in Thy presence. Do Thou sanctify it by Thy grace. In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, Amen.

RILEY: Mr. President, in order that the Convention and its guests may hear an address from the President at this time, I ask that the Chair be relinquished to one of the Vice Presidents. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. Mr. Peratrovich, will you take the chair, please?

(First Vice President Peratrovich took the chair at this time. The full text of the speech given by President Egan will be found in the appendix.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: "Alaska's Flag" will be sung by the Ladd Choral Group.

("Alaska's Flag" was sung at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to request that the Most Reverend Francis D. Gleeson come forward and deliver the benediction.

THE MOST REVEREND FRANCIS D. GLEESON, S.J.: Almighty God, our Father in Heaven, Master and Ruler of the universe, Who has planted deep in the spirit of man an abiding hunger for freedom and justice, we humbly pray that the long wished-for day may soon dawn when our beloved Northland may be recognized as an equal among the states of our Nation. Deign, this day, to bless with Thy divine approval the instrument of government devised by the long and dedicated labors of our chosen representatives. Grant to all who now dwell or shall ever dwell under its protecting mantle the generosity to spend themselves freely, the determination to work together harmoniously, the intelligence to promote wisely the peace and the prosperity and the glory of our State.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: I move and ask unanimous consent that the Convention recess to the call of the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Wien moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess subject to the call of the Chair. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the Convention stands at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Everybody is here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair has been informed that some lady left her purse back on the table where the photographs are. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that the invocation given by Reverend Stokes, the address by Governor Heintzleman, the prayer of dedication by Delegate Armstrong, the address by the President of the Convention, and the benediction by Bishop Gleason be spread upon the Journal of today's plenary session, and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, would you include Delegate Bartlett's wire in the motion?

JOHNSON: I would be very happy to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the unanimous consent request of Mr. Johnson. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, where could I get the speech by our President today? I think it is delightful, very thoughtful.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will be in the Journal. The Chair at this time would like to bring to the attention of the delegates the fact that this lamp that is on the Chief Clerk's desk at the present time is something really special. It is made of Alaska jade, gold, and silver. There is nothing like it in existence. Mr. Marston had that made for himself and his wife, and it is something really fine. Mr. Stewart, would you like to explain to the Convention how you believe we should proceed with the signing of these documents?

SECRETARY: I think the safest way to get the signatures on properly is to lay the documents out, one in each place, and then for the delegates to move along in the chairs, signing exactly the same place as they did before. One caution -- there is a blotter like this for each document so after you sign it, it should be moved down to protect the sheet because if perspiration gets on this parchment, you can no longer write on it, so be careful not to put hands on the signatures or your hand on the document otherwise. If you pass them out, we can get it started. Number one would be where Mr. Kilcher is, and down the line that way, back this way, and then down this way to the end. Start alphabetically. There is one other piece of parchment which is the parchment for the handwritten copy that will be laid here, and you can sign it with the others.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: It seems that the proper way to do would be to have the Convention be at ease and to have all the delegates leave their seats and retire to the rear of the plenary hall, and as the roll is called, they will take their position, like "A", Armstrong will take position number one, and start signing, and then come on down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, that is the manner in which we will proceed. The Convention will be at ease and the delegates will line up in accordance with the roll sheet.

(The Convention was at ease while the delegates signed the parchment copies of the Constitution.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to announce that it is the intention to keep the copies that you have just signed here and distribute them in the morning. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I would like today's Journal to show that we had a representative of the Governor of the State of Louisiana present at the signing ceremony, Mr. Kimbrough Owen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan asks unanimous consent that the record show that Mr. Kimbrough Owen was present at the signing ceremonies and represented the Governor of Louisiana. If there is no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I think we should show the story of the man and his wife who came all the way from Grand Rapids, Michigan, to see Mr. VanderLeest sign this document. I think it is the farthest individual trip made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What were the names? Mr. VanderLeest.

VANDERLEEST: I will go in and bring him out, and let him do his own talking.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. VanderLeest, you might get Mr. Middleton, and offer him the privilege of the floor for a moment or two. The Convention will come to order.

(Mr. Louis Middleton came into the Convention hall.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Middleton, we are happy to have you with us and if you would like to make a few brief remarks, we would be happy to hear them.

MIDDLETON: I have had such a good time, Mr. President, I would like to. Mr. President, and members of the Constitutional Convention, it was quite an honor, I think, when I was invited to come up to this gathering just as an onlooker, not as a talker. Herman [VanderLeest] has been a friend of mine for over 50 years and he has never lost a chance to come and see me when he could, and he has sent me little souvenirs of this Convention and I appreciate it. When I got the card I didn't look at it as a common ordinary card. I looked at it as an invitation to come to a convention that we would never have the opportunity of witnessing again in America itself. We may have some island or group of islands adopt a constitution to become a state, but this is the last chance we have to have some territory on the mainland to aspire to becoming a state, and I know that it has got to go through. The reason it appeals to me -- I think that Michigan and Alaska follow the same trend in one way -- the State of Alaska has had this historical event of "54-40 or fight", and the State of Alaska has held the line. The State of Michigan also has the "Toledo War", and we lost out. The government -- or the powers that be at that time -- persuaded the State of Michigan to accept the upper peninsula in place of our valuable territory that was laying in the southern part, and it was a very poor trade at that time, but things have come up so it hasn't been so poor. Then we followed along an equal path the same as the State of Alaska. The State of Alaska was called "Seward's Icebox", and it was considered quite a place of wide open spaces and for big game hunting, and that was about all until the gold rush came. After the gold rush, the people that went to Alaska to get involved in that gold rush aspired to have nice homes, big farms, nice mercantile institutions and factories, and so they progressed to a wonderful degree. The State of Michigan had the same thing happen with our upper peninsula. Our upper peninsula was a place that God forgot, everybody thought, except when fall came and you could go up there deer hunting, until finally they found mineral deposits up there. The mineral deposits caused people to want to come to Michigan and to come to northern Michigan, and we have people aspiring to better things just like they have in Alaska, until now we are going to have the longest bridge in the world, reaching from northern Michigan to Michigan proper.

Michigan, you know, is the only state in the Union where a portion of the people had to go through three other states to attend the meetings of the legislature in the wintertime. They did it. The people from northern Michigan had to go through Wisconsin, Illinois, and Ohio to get to Lansing. Now, there is only one thing that I just hope about this analogy between Michigan and Alaska is that, Michigan had a sad experience when they applied for statehood. They were put off about two or three years. Now, I just hope that doesn't happen with the State of Alaska. I hope that it just goes through and parliamentary rules are suspended and the chairman invokes the entire vote of the assembly for the question on the floor. I have one good friend in Congress -- Jerry Ford [Gerald H. Ford, Jr.]. Jerry Ford is quite a businesslike man. He is practical in every sense of the word. He is hard as nails when anything comes up for finances, but he is a good honest Congressman; and I have another one there -- Senator Potter. Senator Potter and Jerry Ford helped me get these two stamps through, and I would be very glad if you like to mention this fine entertainment I have received up here, and at the same time, I am going to assure you that it isn't going to do you a bit of good because I think the fellows are for it anyway. (Applause) Thank you for allowing this time and I don't want to impose on you people any longer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Middleton. (Applause) The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, may we revert to the order of introduction of resolutions?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Coghill, we will revert to the order of introduction of resolutions.

COGHILL: I have three resolutions on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the first resolution?

CHIEF CLERK: In full?

PRESIDENT EGAN: In full. It can be treated as a motion.

(The Chief Clerk then read the resolution by the Committee on Administration, entitled "Immediate Statehood".)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and that this resolution be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the resolution be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. President, wouldn't it be possible to amend this so it would get a wider distribution than just to the two Speakers and the President? Perhaps every Congressman might receive one to good advantage.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I have no objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have an amendment to offer, Mr. McNees, to the resolution?

McNEES: I would like to move that copies of this resolution go to each Congressman in both the Senate and House of Representatives.

PRESIDENT EGAN: First, if we are going to have a change by your motion - a resolution can be adopted as a regular motion, Mr. Coghill. So you move that the resolution be adopted?

McNEES: Yes, I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

R. RIVERS: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Ralph Rivers. Now, Mr. McNees, you move that the resolution be amended in order that a copy might go to each Congressman and each Senator?

McNEES: That is correct, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment to the motion be made. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered, and the amendment to the motion has been made. The question is: "Shall the resolution be adopted?" Mr. Coghill had asked unanimous consent. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the resolution has been adopted. Will the Chief Clerk please read the second resolution?

(The Chief Clerk then read the resolution by the Committee on Administration, entitled, "Alaska Statehood Committee.")

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and this resolution be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the resolution be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Will the Chief Clerk please read the third resolution?

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution by the Committee on Administration thanking Mr. Chalres R. Griffin for donating pens to the delegates.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the rules be suspended and this resolution be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the resolution be adopted. Is there objection?

R. RIVERS: I object for the moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: That resolution suggests that we did use the pencils to sign the constitution. They were never so used. May we hear it read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the resolution again?

(The Chief Clerk then read the resolution again.)

R. RIVERS: Why don't we just say "for use by the delegates"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Aren't they talking about these. Mr. Ralph Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Oh, I was thinking about the others. I withdraw.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Style and Drafting Committee are going to go over all of these resolutions that the Administration Committee has introduced and see if they can pick up any objections at that time on intent.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I apologize. I was referring to the ballpoint pens which Mr. Griffin also gave us, so I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Incidentally, that is what the resolution refers to, but Style and Drafting could make the necessary changes if it is satisfactory. If there is no objection, the resolution is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk will please read the fourth resolution.

CHIEF CLERK: No, there were just the three. I have those telegrams though.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the resolutions will be referred to the Style and Drafting Committee. The Chief Clerk may read the communications that are before us at this time.

(The Chief Clerk then read telegrams from the City of Seward, and from Bill and Anna May Vokacek, Kodiak.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communications will be filed. Is there anything else to come before the Convention at this time? Mr. Hilscher?

HILSCHER: Mr. Earl Wyman of Wyman Studios has presented this to the Convention, and we can substitute the signed photograph and this can be presented to the University from the Convention if the Convention so desires.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Convention as to how this will be presented to the University? And another problem we might have, in case the Chair might forget it, is do you think we should have Dr. Patty in tomorrow morning, to be sure that he is here, and present this gavel to the University?

HILSCHER: That would be a good idea.

TAYLOR: He will be here tonight for the dinner.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it might be that the morning session would be more proper. Mr. McCutcheon?

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, inasmuch as we have signed a copy of that same print for the University, it would appear to me that it might be advisable that this particular picture be presented to the Territorial Museum.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, Mr. Wyman knew that we were having one signed by all of them, and he is perfectly willing to transfer the two pictures so that we will have a signed copy to present to the University.

PRESIDENT EGAN: When do you wish to have this accomplished, tonight or at the morning session? What is the pleasure of the Convention as to how to present these items to the University? Miss Awes.

AWES: I think it will be better to do it in the morning and then the picture will be transferred. I don't think it will be a good idea to do it at the dinner tonight because then it won't be on the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I move and ask unanimous consent that we give Mr. Wyman a vote of thanks for his donation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, it is so ordered. (Applause) Is there anything else to come before the Convention at this time? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, we do have another resolution that was introduced by the Committee on Administration yesterday, and it was left in second reading, and we could bring that up before the Convention at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Coghill, and we still have another hour before we would be obligated to go to the dinner, so if it is the pleasure of the Convention that we consider that resolution in second reading at this time, we can have it brought before us. Is there objection to bringing that administrative resolution before us at this time? The Convention will be at recess while the Chief Clerk has the copies placed on the desks.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: If we have a little time here, I have a souvenir I think everybody would like to have, and to fill in time I could tell the story of that jade lamp and give you a souvenir of it. I have 55 pieces here. If you have a little time I will tell you about that jade lamp?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Marston, you may proceed to tell us about the lamp.

MARSTON: In 1941 I arrived in the Arctic, and I met Tom [last name inaudible]. He's been a trader for half a century in the Kobuk River valley, he had a long curly white hair down to his shoulders, a delightful character, he had an Eskimo family. He lived at Kotzebue then. He told me about an Eskimo who was going to make the finest jade lamp ever made. This Eskimo, according to legend -- the legend was 250 years old -- and it was a real legend because they produced the lamp. This Eskimo said, "I'm going to make the finest lamp ever made," and he went away from his village about 75 miles -- I figure it was Kiana -- Jade Mountain is about 75 miles from Kiana -- and he got a 75-pound jade nugget and started back home. It was kind of awkward, and he went back and got another 75-pound piece, made a basket of willow roots and hung over his shoulder, one nugget in front and one behind so they swung freely, and he walked back to his village and he carved this jade lamp. Then when he died, as the custom was, the lamp went on his grave. It became a shrine, and the Eskimos, as they were going by in the wintertime would throw it a ptarmigan, those going by in the summer would throw it a fish, and this story persisted for 250 years, and Tom had heard this story over and over again. Then an Eskimo said, "I know he knew where the lamp is." Tom said "I'll give you 100 pounds of flour if you'll get it." In the course of months this Eskimo came in with that lamp, and Tom sent word to [name inaudible] of the Smithsonian Institute, and in a couple of years he showed up. He made the remark, "It's too young." Tom said, "I was a little discouraged and the man wanted a piece of jade and I just broke a piece off and gave it to him, and I gave away this piece, and in my big storehouse I'll find you a piece." I told him, "I don't want a piece. It was a great story, you shouldn't have done it, Tom." He said, "I know, I made a mistake, I should have kept it." Two hundred and fifty years that story lasted and lived and proved to be true, and I couldn't get a piece of jade from that lamp, so I said, "I'll make myself a jade lamp." This took 12 years and it was finished just yesterday. I didn't know where Jade Mountain was, a mythical mountain there, but Eskimos told me the general area and finally I went to Jade Mountain about the year '42, and I went up Jade Creek up to Jade Mountain and I found a piece of jade that looked like about 100 pounds. Now, I don't want to brag, but I broke all records -- Harvard and Yale records -- in the leg and back lift. I had a straight board packsack and I got in in and I could hardly get it up. I finally got it up on my back and hiked back down to Lloyd's place on Dall Creek -- old man Lloyd -- and I put this down on the old bench, and he had a fish cooked for me. Then I started on back to the village of Kobuk with this jade nugget in my packsack. Then the bridge broke down, the log bridge. I didn't yet know what was wrong. I knew I was getting along to where it was rather tough going, and I thought maybe I was beginning to lose a little of that strength I had, and it wasn't a very happy feeling. Then the screws on that straight board packsack pulled loose, and I had to let it down on the low flat tundra land, and I put it on a hump of ground. I reset the screws, and then I couldn't get that thing back. I began to suspect I was really losing my strength, and I wasn't happy, but I said, "Buddy, you and me is buddies and you go with me or I'll stay with you." I lay down in the late spring sunshine and took a sleep, and then said, "Come on, let's get the hell out of here," and I couldn't get it up. It wouldn't come, so I was still stubborn, and I put the shoulder straps over a little on my back and then I fiddled it off the hummock and it pushed me down in the tundra. I couldn't hardly breathe. I said this is a blankety place to get into on your own doings, but I talked myself up, and I made tracks down over the frozen ground. I was discouraged and despondent, just like we get on statehood sometimes. I was pretty well washed up, and it is no fun to think that at that time of life your strength is gone. So I moved on and I rested by a tree -- I got down where the tree line began a little above timberline -- and I finally arrived discouraged and despondent and pretty well given up, whipped by strength at that time of life that was gone, I thought. I came into the Harry Brown's trading post at Kobuk Village, I put it on the scales, and it weighed 164 pounds. I've got good legs yet and a good back; I'm all right. So, be of good cheer, we will be a state not too long hence. I have a feeling we're going to make it within the next two years or less, and the man from Grand Rapids encouraged me very much. Now, I have a souvenir that took 12 years to make. It is made of pure silver and gold and jade, and it was finished just yesterday -- the man stayed up all night -- Ted [last name inaudible] that lives up in the Kobuk River country. He and [name inaudible] have been prospecting for 22 years. They're a couple of bachelors, too. Sid cut this out by a water-driven saw. When I brought that nugget out, the jade [business] boomed up there. Everybody knew where Jade Mountain was; it is a business nowadays. Half of those people up there are carving jade now -- some of those people are doing nothing but that. We have Eskimos and white men making a living out of carving jade, and it's very interesting how business was started. This jade nugget I brought out, a war correspondent wrote the story and the business started. It's still going on. I have this nugget here to give you each a souvenir. How shall we distribute this, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: I've got mine.

MARSTON: You have got yours, have you? This is good jade and there are 50 or more pieces there. Take one apiece. I'm happy to have this lamp here. I think it makes the lamp really valuable that I could bring it here today.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease while these pieces of jade are being distributed.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us this resolution from the Committee on Administration. It has already been read. Its adoption has been moved. Are there amendments to be offered for the resolution? Mr. Victor Rivers, did you have an amendment to offer yesterday?

V. RIVERS: I relinquish to Mr. Burke Riley of the Rules Committee who has an amendment which will cover the point we talked about.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, this has nothing to do with the Rules Committee, but I'll be glad to make the suggestion. The amendment that a few of us have discussed is that Sections 1 and 2 be stricken and in lieu there be inserted: "The President of the Convention, with such assistance as he may require from among the delegates or the staff of the Convention be authorized to conclude the unfinished business of the Convention, and to expend such funds from the authorized appropriation as may be necessary to complete the work of and carry out the purposes of the Convention." We think that would give wider latitude to the President to meet a situation which will occur as the members start to disperse around the Territory, and that full coverage may be had without spelling the matter out so rigidly. It might be more conveniently and efficiently handled. Now, another suggestion while I'm putting these on the floor is that in paragraph (d), page 2 of Section 3, the third word, "two" be stricken, in other words, just an authorization to arrange for copies, such number of copies as may seem desirable. I regret that we haven't had this in time to have copies distributed. Oh yes, another one on page 2 of paragraph (d) would be the addition after the word "type" of the two words "and mimeographed", striking the semicolon after "type" and inserting it after "mimeographed." I ask unanimous consent. Mr. President, for the adoption of those amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendments back to the Convention?

(The Chief Clerk then read the amendments as proposed by Mr. Riley.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does everyone have that proposed amendment? The Chief Clerk will please slowly read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk read the amendments again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, what is your pleasure? Did you move the adoption of the amendment?

RILEY: I move the adoption and I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Is there objection?

LONDBORG: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to the motion?

WHITE: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. White. The question is open for discussion. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Could we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. It has been moved and seconded that -- Mr. Londborg said he removed his objection -- it has been moved and seconded that the amendment be adopted. The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted?" All those in favor of adopting the amendment will signify by saying "Aye". All opposed, by saying "No". The "Ayes have it and the amendment is adopted. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I should like to rise for a point of information. Our work is now drawing to a close. We are going to scatter commencing tomorrow. We probably never will meet again as an entire body. We have a terrific job to do between now and April 24 --

BUCKALEW: Excuse me, Mr. President, point of order. He got the floor for information. Let him ask his question and sit down.

HILSCHER: If Mr. Buckalew will hold his breath for 30 seconds, I'll ask my question. My question is this, Mr. Buckalew, what is going to be done between now and April 24 to sell the Constitution and to get a large vote out for ratification? That is my question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I believe this resolution has come before us in the amendment process?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That amendment was adopted. The resolution is still before us, that is correct, Mr. Riley.

RILEY: For other amendments I'll defer to Mr. Fischer at this point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I move that Section old number 3 [new Section 2] be amended to read as follows, the first paragraph before the colon: "That the President of the Convention, or a person designated by him, shall carry out the following duties:". The purpose of the amendment is -- as everybody knows, our Secretary will be leaving shortly. Some of the items covered here will have to be carried on after his termination date, and the duties will have to be taken care of by someone else, and so we should not just state "secretary" here. I discussed this with Mr. Coghill previously. I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Hearing none the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments for the resolution? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I had earlier indicated on page 2, subsection (d) that the third word of subsection (d) be deleted. That word is "two", and that on the following line the semicolon be stricken, the words "and mimeographed" inserted at that point, followed by a semicolon. I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that amendment to subsection (d).

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I object temporarily just to ask a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

SUNDBORG: By the term "the proceedings," is it intended to mean the verbatim record of everything that was said here throughout the 75 days we have been meeting, Mr. Coghill? Excuse me, Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Coghill a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask Mr. Coghill a question, Mr. Sundborg.

COGHILL: The arrangement for the two copies -- yes, it was -- for the verbatim copy of the stenotype and those two copies would be kept on file so that the Statehood Committee or the next legislature could make a revised verbatim journal if they so wished. That was the purpose of the two copies. Right now, under our rules, the stenotypist is making two copies.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Riley a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Riley, was it your understanding when you were suggesting that the copies be mimeographed that it was referring to the verbatim record which I think will run into thousands and thousands of pages?

RILEY: I should perhaps relay that question to the gentleman on my left. The thought was that if they were being typed perhaps they could be typed on stencils, but if the process is already well along on a two-copy basis -- this was simply referred to me to submit -- if she is well along already on two copies, speaking for myself, I would withdraw the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, simply for the sake of putting the matter on the floor and objection having been heard, I will move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Knight. Will the Chief Clerk read it?

CHIEF CLERK: "Subsection (d) of Section 2 on page 2: delete the word 'two' on the first line and insert the words 'and mimeographed' after the word 'typed' on the second line."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, this part of the resolution was more or less for the orderly handling of the tape recording and of the journal kept by the stenotypist, or the verbatim record kept by the stenotypist, and in the rules we have two copies. She made -- in transposing her notes she had a carbon copy which she was to keep and the only thing that this section (d) brings out is that these two copies, and the tape recordings will be in the files of the Convention documents -- including the Journals -- will be deposited with the Secretary of Alaska to be turned over to the secretary of state when we become a state. There is nothing restrictive in this that the Statehood Committee or the legislature could take these records and have a revised journal made out of them and distributed to the delegates or to anyone that is interested. I believe that the motive behind the amendment was so that there would be a full proceeding of the Convention in the hands of each one of the delegates, but it might turn into quite a large package of paper by the time it would be done. I don't think that section (d) restricts anything such as what is trying to be brought out by this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, it is up to me to close, after the matter is clarified for me, I could not support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask then that the amendment be withdrawn. Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I'm simply going to vote against it, Mr. President, on the basis of cost.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment be adopted?" All those in favor of adopting the amendment will signify by saying "Aye". All opposed by saying "No". The "Noes" have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I do not have an amendment, but in paragraph (c), it refers to the fact that 5,000 copies are to be printed and distributed. I should like to suggest that at least ten copies be sent to each delegate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson suggests that at least ten copies be sent to each delegate. Do you offer that as a unanimous consent request?

JOHNSON: If necessary, I'll offer it as a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection if the President and those who are responsible for this send ten copies of the Constitution to each delegate, whether they request it or not? If there is no objection then, it will be the understanding that at least ten copies will be distributed. Are there other amendments to be proposed for the resolution? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, some delegates seem to feel that under section (c), 5,000 copies conceivably may turn out not to be enough, so I move and ask unanimous consent that just prior to the number "5,000" that the words "at least" be inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves and asks unanimous consent that just before the figure "5,000" appears that the words "at least" be inserted. Mr. White asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Just to ask a question. [Question inaudible] (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I didn't see this extra sentence, so I'll withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White withdraws his unanimous consent request. Are there other proposed amendments for the resolution? It will be sent -- if it was adopted -- to the Style and Drafting Committee and if any other changes were needed they could be made there to comply with amendments that have been made. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I address a question to Mr. Coghill?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Coghill, referring to section (b), it mentions that facsimile copies are to be distributed as directed by the Committee on Administration. Is that the 40 facsimile copies which are identical with the ones we signed except that the signatures have been printed in instead of signed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Yes, that is correct.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Coghill, will your Committee indicate to the Convention what type of distribution it plans with those?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mrs. Sweeney has the notes on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: The notes of the meeting indicate that this was to be taken up by the President of the Convention, the Secretary of the Convention, and the Chairman of the Administration Committee, and the feeling was that before any actual distribution was made that word would reach these three as to where some of the delegates desired that they should go. It was mentioned on the floor that the judges should have them, that was considered, and some of the schools and things like that, but no final and actual disposition was made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, if it will do any good, possibly we can get together this evening and we can bring it on the floor and report it out tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would certainly appreciate that very much, Mr. President. For instance, I think we will find that 40 copies are not too many by any means. I want to be sure that Delegate Bartlett will get one, and Governor Heintzleman will get one, and some of the others, and that we don't overlook people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Where does it call for 40 copies, Mr. Sundborg?

COGHILL: Mr. President, we have 100 copies of the large size ones.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, may I ask a question of Mr. Coghill?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. Coghill, in the second sentence in subparagraph (c) on page 2, the words "and of an explanatory summary thereof" -- what will that "explanatory summary" consist of and who will prepare this "explanatory summary"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, can you explain that?

COGHILL: Mr. President, the experts are working on that now. They are working on a summary of the Constitution as written, and that should be ready by tomorrow and, if not, it will be mailed to each one of the delegates along with the rest of the Journals and papers that are being reproduced by the Convention after we are adjourned.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to be proposed to the resolution? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I have not as yet any amendment. I have a question in mind as to the propriety of the last part of subsection (c). I have nothing against the Chairman of the Committee on Administration; however, what we are doing here is making a broad delegation to the President. I just wonder whether the Chairman of the Committee could have a veto power on the President?

COGHILL: No, Mr. President, I think that Style and Drafting would take care of that, but it was set up as you know in the first part of the resolution that the powers would be delegated to the Chairman of Administration, the President, and under him would be the Chairman of Administration and the Secretary. Now, with those two sections knocked out, Style and Drafting would have to take that out, also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I rise to protest. This instruction is an interoffice memo, nothing else and they are prepared to send it in to Style and Drafting to be reworded. Frankly, if it is directive merely to the President of the Convention, I think if it is bad English, he should let it ride as it is, because the next thing we'll be doing, we will be requiring Style and Drafting to edit the speeches on the floor. This is an interoffice memo and I don't want to establish the unnecessary precedent that this be referred to Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I do want to say that I am deeply touched with the great amount of confidence the Convention has suddenly developed in Style and Drafting. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: In section (c) where it says "explanatory summary thereof" -- I question the wisdom of having somebody interpret the Constitution for us and to publish the interpretation for wide distribution. I am not too sure that that is a wise thing to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, some time ago I was trying to think through what the problem would be of selling the Constitution to the people of Alaska. In looking through some of the journals of other constitutions, particularly the one of New Jersey, I found that they had over a million copies of the constitution printed and 600,000 summaries. The summaries were used in discussion groups, in PTA's, and civic organizations. It was used as a handbook for an intelligent understanding of the constitution. You read the summary, then you could go to the constitution, and you were able to interpret the motives and the procedure. This is something that is done in almost every printing of a constitution, to have a supplemental handbook. I'm told by our friend from New Jersey, Mr. Bebout, that the summaries have almost disappeared from New Jersey because they were so popular, and they are on the fringe of having to have some reprints because it has become such an interesting and helpful tool in understanding the constitution. Now, that is just part of the history of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I'm not questioning the advisability of having the summary printed or of having something to go along with it, but I think that we should delegate some group or check into it very thoroughly before we have it printed. I just don't like the idea of telling our advisory staff and just saying "you write up a summary and we'll send it out" and distribute it all over the country. Their interpretation might not be the exact interpretation of the body. They weren't here all the time and I think that somebody -- a committee of the membership -- should review it before they print it. That is just my personal opinion, but I just don't feel too sure that we should do this without knowing exactly what we are doing and with the consent of the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, this resolution gives the authority to the President and the Secretary to review this work as I visualize it. Also, this summary is a popular version of the contents of our constitution, and if we don't have such a summary, I can readily realize that there will be a great many such summaries made and there will be a lot of guesswork done by those who do not have such a summary available. I, for one, would much rather see us have prepared under the auspices of our officers such a summary for wide distribution so that everybody will be clearly informed as to what the contents cover and what they actually mean. This popular version I think would be one of the biggest assets we could have in helping sell the Constitution, through the schools and into the private residences of the private citizens. I think it would have a great deal, probably more readability and interest than would the bare document itself. I would very much favor our keeping this summary idea in this resolution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would have to agree with Mr. McLaughlin that there is no need to move this resolution through Style and Drafting, and therefore, I move that in subsection (c) that a period be placed after the word "printed" and that the rest of the sentence be struck, and I ask unanimous consent.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Let's have that again.

(Mr. Fischer repeated the amendment.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Are there other amendments to the resolution? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, if there are no further amendments, I move that this resolution be adopted and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves that this resolution be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and the resolution is adopted. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I just received word from Dr. Patty that we should be upstairs in ten minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will entertain a motion for recess. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Prior to the motion for recess, Mr. President, may I call the following delegates' attention to the fact there is a note in their mailbox: Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Egan, Gray, Hellenthal, Hilscher, King, Laws, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Rosswog, Sundborg, Taylor, and Walsh.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was that, Mr. McNees? There is a note in the mailbox?

McNEES: There is a note in their mailbox that I would like to have them pick up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, have any of the staff expressed a desire as to what time they wish the membership to return tomorrow morning or afternoon?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, it is the feeling of the Chair that we can't return tomorrow afternoon -- but it is the feeling of the Chair that we should attempt to convene at 8:00 a.m. in order to be sure, as the Chair understands it, the Chamber of Commerce has something they want to do out here and to be absolutely certain that we are finished by 10:00 a.m. That is just a suggestion. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, in that event, I move that the Convention adjourn --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Recess.

JOHNSON: Recess until tomorrow morning at 8:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent -- before we put the question, though, the question has been asked by the bus company as to what the desire of the delegates will be as to bus transportation this evening. Dr. Patty has informed Mr. Stewart that he felt that we might be through upstairs by 9:00. It might be that if the bus was here at 9:30 it might be about that time. In the morning there is a 7:30 regular bus, but that would not be big enough.

COGHILL: We will have a bus in front of the Nordale Hotel at 7:30 in the morning to pick up the delegates. I would like to announce that, if we are going to convene at 8:00 in the morning, I would like to have a Committee on Administration meeting at 7:00 in the morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

COGHILL: There will be transportation to pick them up at the Nordale Hotel at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 8:00 a.m. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I ask Mr. Johnson a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Would you not think that it might be better to get together for an hour tonight and not get up at 6:00 in the morning?

JOHNSON: I'm following the suggestion of the President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, the thing is that the Chamber of Commerce would like to come out here in the morning, and so, under those circumstances, the Chair felt that something might come up that might take time. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, would they advise coming with a full or an empty stomach?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 8:00 a.m. tomorrow?" All those in favor will signify by saying "Aye". All opposed, by saying "No". The "Ayes" have it and the Convention stands at recess.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

February 6, 1956

SEVENTY-SIXTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Reverend Londborg, would you give the invocation?

REVEREND LONDBORG: Our Heavenly Father, we would pause before Thee for a moment this morning as we begin this session. We pray that You would be with us as we conclude the business of this Convention this day. We thank You for Your leading and Your guiding hand throughout the past days and weeks, that You have brought us to the close of this Convention with what we believe to be a successful constitution. Heavenly Father, we pray that You will be with us now as we bring our deliberations to a close. Bless each of us as we go to our respective homes. We pray that we may look back upon this time together with thankfulness in our hearts for having learned to know one another, for having been privileged to work with one another. Bless us, we pray, as we continue in Thy name, Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I move that the prayer we have just heard be spread upon the minutes of today's proceedings.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves and asks unanimous consent that the prayer we have just heard be spread upon the pages of today's journal. Hearing no objection it is so ordered. At this time does the chairman of the Committee on Administration have a report to make? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration had its final meeting. The records of the Committee have been turned over to the officials of the Convention, and in our final report of expenditures we are happy to announce that $33,818.76 will be turned over to the President for his disposition of the rest of the Convention. Out of this fund we have, as allocated on our estimated budget for salaries, we allocated $61,325. We went in the hole $406 on this amount. The delegates' per diem was $88,620, and we have left in that fund $1,488.28. The travel of the delegates was estimated at $9,182.98. We have left in that fund $1,796.88. Social Security for the delegates was allocated at $1,247. We have a remainder of $13.70 in that fund. The salaries for the secretariat we allocated $31,739. We are returning $5,403.10. Other staff expenses were $3,532.12. We are returning $2,841. Technical and consultant expenses were allocated at $25,000. $6,381.48 is being returned. Equipment for the Convention was allocated at $1,500. We went in the hole $3.00. Supplies and postage was allocated at $3,500. We went in the hole $1,887.64. Recording of the plenary session allocated at $12,000, and we have spent the full amount of that money. Other convention expenses -- the printing of the constitution was allocated at $9,000. Not being in our jurisdiction to spend this, we are returning to you the full $9,000. We had miscellaneous other expenses of $17,978.90. We are returning to you $12,412.07, a grand total of $33,818.76. Mr. President, at this time we would like to also announce to the delegates as soon as we adjourn sine die that the delegates will please go upstairs and see Miss Goad in the message center room and be sure that all vouchers and per diem and travel are signed. Otherwise, they will not be able to fulfill their paper work. And the Committee on Administration has also agreed not to pay excess baggage home for the delegates. At this time, Mr. President, we would like to ask permission of the Chair to retire the Committee on Administration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, before doing that, now the $9,000. that you mentioned, is there any of that obligated at the present time?

COGHILL: Mr. President, there will probably be several hundred dollars of the $33,000 obligated that will have to be taken care of after we adjourn sine die, but it is not in the jurisdiction of the Committee on Administration. There will be other staff expenses. However, on the secretariat this is projected through this week for you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Through Saturday, is that right?

COGHILL: Through to Saturday of this week. However, there will be additional expenses for the stenotyping and there will be additional expenses as to the transportation and storage of materials, of the papers to the Secretary of Alaska, and the $9,000 was a budget item for us on the printing and ratification of the Constitution. A portion of that is obligated by the printing of these one hundred copies. However, we felt that any amount of the $33,000 that is left is now in your jurisdiction to dispose of.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, is there any amount -- or are there any of those funds that are obligated at this time to the Alaska Statehood Committee or have all those obligations been completely cleared up to this point?

COGHILL: As far as the Committee on Administration knows, all the obligations to date to the Statehood Committee have been taken care of.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to announce that, in order to keep the record straight here, that the vouchers for January have not yet come to the Statehood Committee and there will be at least $6,000 of that that is already obligated. So that would be $6,000 less than the figure that you mentioned, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, the Administration Committee is aware that there will be other obligations. However, we felt that it was not in our jurisdiction; that it was in yours, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair just wants to make it clear that there are many thousands of dollars of that already obligated and then the February obligations to PAS through the Alaska Statehood Committee will also entail considerable amount of those funds. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder whether we may not have copies of this tentative report of the Committee on Administration as to expenditures mimeographed so that every delegate could have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: It is the plan that we will have them, that the bookkeeper worked last night to get this program setup for us, and we will also note on that that there are obligations to be incurred out of this, that this is not a clear fund.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I believe the one thing that Chairman Coghill forgot to mention that the Committee went on record of approving the supplying of one large apportionment map to each delegate. They will have that for their work at home.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Show that as a matter for the record. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, along this same line, it seems to me it would be very well if this Convention went on record authorizing the President to have a postaudit made before he closes his records so that he will have a complete record to his own satisfaction of all expenditures when the work of the entire Convention is completed and the balance reverts to the Territory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

V. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent. Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, I wonder if it would not be a good idea to contact the present legislative auditor that we have. He could probably do that.

V. RIVERS: It might be a very good idea.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan, the President will certainly do that, and if it is possible to have the audit conducted through him, it will be done. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I feel this matter is sufficiently important that it should be in the form of a written resolution of the Convention that there should be an audit. I would like to suggest that the Committee on Administration prepare such a resolution now so that we can act on it before adjourning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, it would be necessary to have a few minutes' recess at this time in order that such a resolution may be drawn. The Convention will be at recess for a brief time in order that that be done.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in this request of Mr. Rivers on a resolution for an audit, we had talked about that and felt that the Territory would make an audit. I believe that it is in the act that a report will be made to the next legislature, and it was at that time thought that there would be an audit. However, we have prepared a short resolution that would read: "WHEREAS it is necessary to provide an adequate report on the expenditure of appropriated funds by the convention; NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the President is authorized and directed to secure, at the earliest possible time, an audit of the funds expended by the Convention. DONE at College, Alaska, this sixth day of February, 1956, by direction of the Convention." Mr. President, it might be well to state at this time that a lot of these funds that we are turning back to you, it was not the intent of the Committee to report out that we were in the clear $33,818.76, that we knew there was the "Tennessee" plan, the election that will come in the fall, the ratification election, and the printing of the documents, the $5,000 that was directed in a resolution yesterday or as much as might be needed, and that there will be additional expenses as to steno-type help and other help as well as the reimbursement of the Statehood Committee. Those things were not projected by the Administration Committee because we do not have the figures. It was felt that the interim committee or the committee after the Convention has adjourned that will be appointed by the President will be able to take care of that, and the funds will be of course published in a public report to the next legislature. I move that this resolution be adopted, Mr. President, and ask unanimous consent.

LAWS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves and asks unanimous consent that the resolution be adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Just for the moment, Mr. President, I wonder if we might not include in there that that audit be by a legislative auditor, suggest it or something like that. Now this legislative auditor is on the payroll anyway. We are the creature of the legislature. They have asked us to give a report. Let their auditor give us the postaudit; that might save a few dollars. If we would suggest that in this resolution, would that be helpful?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, that was brought up in a discussion here during the recess and we know it will definitely be done by the legislative auditor. By law he will have to do it anyway; he would have to make that audit; but if we mentioned it in there at this time, inasmuch as some of the cost won't be known until after the election, possibly until going into the fall, that if we implied that the audit should be made right at this time, there would be no real way that he could get the true picture, and if that was mentioned in there it might imply that we wanted the complete audit at the time, and under the circumstances where these costs will not be possible to project the true cost for several months.

R. RIVERS: I mean to say, nobody is going to do an audit until we have the job done anyway. What is this about the "earliest possible time" anyway?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It shouldn't be there.

COGHILL: "Earliest possible time" would probably be right after the costs of the Alaska-Tennessee Plan are known and projected for the fall election, but it would be at the earliest possible time after the President was sure there was not going to be any more expenses. You could not very well set a date on the audit, but it will be for the next legislature.

R. RIVERS: Why don't you say "in time for the next legislature" instead of "earliest possible time"?

COGHILL: That would be the earliest possible time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of this resolution? Hearing no objection the resolution is ordered adopted.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in respect to the directive by the President that we should make the resolutions, the Committee on Administration has three more resolutions. These are all, I promise you, that the Committee is going to bring out, and we would like to revert to that business at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection then we will revert to the business of introduction of resolutions at this time. The Chief Clerk will please read the resolution.

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution, by the Committee on Administration, entitled: "Operation Statehood.")

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was that word? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I move and ask unanimous consent that this resolution be adopted.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second to the motion?

MARSTON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Marston. Could you explain what this word means and where it came from?

COGHILL: I will refer that to Mr. Marston.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, will you explain the words?

MARSTON: That [kee-see-voot-mootichi] means "Operation Statehood". It has more punch than anything else in this deal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it Eskimo?

MARSTON: I don't know, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection was heard to the passage of the resolution. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would like to speak on this. I am not going to vote for any of these resolutions. I am going to object to every one that comes up because I am afraid we are going to miss somebody along the line. We have included I don't know how many people; and we are liable to miss somebody and make somebody unhappy. We can go on and make resolutions by the barrel-full, and we'll have more resolutions than we have constitution. Those people in "Operation Statehood" were treated well up here. They were welcomed by all the delegates and this is a useless act, and I am going to vote against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the resolution be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No". The "Ayes" have it and the resolution is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk will please read the next resolution.

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution, by Committee on Administration, entitled: "Convention Consultants.")

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I move that the resolution be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves that the resolution be adopted.

GRAY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Gray. The question is, "Shall the resolution be adopted by the Convention? All those in favor of adopting the resolution will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No". The "Ayes" have it and the resolution is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk will please read the next resolution.

(The Chief Clerk read the resolution, by the Committee on Administration, entitled: "Staff of Convention Secretariat.")

COGHILL: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that this resolution be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill asks unanimous consent for the adoption of this resolution. Is there objection?

BUCKALEW: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second?

H. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Fischer seconds the motion. The question is: "Shall the resolution be adopted?" All those in favor of adopting the resolution will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No". The "Ayes" have it and the resolution is ordered adopted. At this time the Chair would declare a one-minute recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I have just been lobbied again. Here some time earlier in the Convention Mrs. Hermann had some complaints to make about lobbying tactics around here. I want to report I have been lobbied again. I feel we might offer at least some commendation, however, in this respect. It seems like the faithful wives of the Convention feel that, inasmuch as there are so many resolutions going around here, that the Convention should offer a resolution to the faithful wives of the Convention. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I notice the presence in the gallery of the man who represents the institution which has been our host throughout this session of the Alaska Constitutional Convention. I ask unanimous consent at this time that we grant the privilege of the floor to Dr. Ernest Patty, and invite him to come forward to receive the thanks of the Convention for the services which the University has extended throughout the session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Adhering to the unanimous consent request, Dr. Patty, would you please come forward at this time? (Applause)

(Dr. Patty shook hands with President Egan.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Dr. Patty, we are extremely happy to have you with us at this time, and it is with great pleasure, and it will ever bring memories to each one of the delegates to this Convention of the kindness that you and your faculty and student body of the University have extended to us over the 75 days, and of the hard work and real effort that you have made each one of those days to help us make this Constitutional Convention a success. There is not enough that we could say to really express our appreciation to you and everyone else on campus for the fine job you have done for the Territory of Alaska in making your services available for all this long length of time, and I am very happy to present to you for the University a copy of the Constitution of the State of Alaska, one of the original copies; also to extend to you for the University the official gavel of the Convention.

DR. PATTY: President Egan and members of the Convention, in behalf of the University I am extremely pleased to accept these. Our labors have been a labor of love, and you can realize how much we have appreciated having you here, and how much we think of the fine efforts and the fine accomplishment you have made. It will be our plan to have a suitable glass case made so we can display this Constitution with the Preamble, and with your signatures, probably in the new library when it is built, and in the meantime in the museum, so that our young

Alaskans who are here will be inspired as all of us have been inspired when we have gone to the Library of Congress in Washington and stood before a copy of the Constitution of the United States. Thank you very, very much. (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may we revert to committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will revert to the order of business of committee reports.

SUNDBORG: Your Committee on Style and Drafting to whom was referred two resolutions prior to their passage, reports them back to the Convention at this time. One is the resolution dealing with friendly relations with Canada and the other, the resolution dealing with orderly transition from Territory status to statehood. Copies have been distributed to each of the delegates, and as I mentioned, these resolutions have not been officially adopted as yet by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that the report of the Committee adopted?

SUNDBORG: I ask that our report be accepted, Mr. President, and I move that first the resolution "Friendly Relations with Canada" be adopted by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the report of the Style and Drafting Committee be accepted, and moves and asks unanimous consent that the resolution with respect to "Friendly Relations with Canada" be adopted by the Convention. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the resolution dealing with "Orderly Transition from Territorial Status to Statehood" be adopted by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the resolution be adopted by the Convention.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Haven't these resolutions already been adopted by the Convention?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, there were two that somehow in the process were not really adopted, and these are the two. I so move.

H. FISCHER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg so moves, seconded by Mrs. Fischer, that the resolution dealing with transitory measures be adopted. The question is: "Shall the resolution be adopted by the Convention?"

RILEY: Mr. President, are we speaking of the first one proposed, or are we speaking of the "Orderly Transition"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "Orderly Transition".

RILEY: I would like to speak on this just a moment, if I may. The matter of orderly transition to statehood status, as it is entitled, is certainly a desirable objective, but I think that the language and the thought and the sponsorship of such a resolution is especially poor coming at this time from this Convention. I think it is politically unwise and psychologically poor, and I don't think that factually it is too good. I think it gives us a hat-in-hand position in going to the Congress at this time, and it undermines what dignity we have had up to now. I don't think the resolution will have any effect whatever, and I don't believe that it has discriminated particularly in the type of program to which it is directed, and I feel rather keenly that it should be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. R. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, the enabling legislation with its grants-in-aid for highway construction and maintenance provides a long-range transition, and something that will enable the new state to make a go of it. There is this proposition, however, and it is reflected in the last paragraph of this resolution. Congress appropriates on a fiscal year from July 1 to July 1 for carrying out of Road Commission activities, the operation of the courts, the accounts with the recorders' offices, and perhaps in connection with the fisheries and resources. Now, if it could be argued that the moment that we become a state, or are declared a state, that the federal appropriations for that fiscal year might come to an end and not be available for further disbursement. Now, this paragraph to my mind makes sense and there is nothing in the present enabling law that says anything about it, and it reads this way: "...that the act to admit Alaska as a state of the Union be amended (we are flagging this for Congress) to provide for the continued use of federal appropriations for payment of the cost of the normal functions of government during the fiscal year in which admission of Alaska is accomplished, or until the operation of such functions is earlier assumed by the State." I don't like to see, just because of a void or a gap in there, an argument come up as to whether the money is appropriated for these Alaska functions might have a stop-order put on them by the Comptroller General or somebody else before that particular fiscal year for which those funds were appropriated expires, and I think this does serve a useful purpose. Let's flag it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: I would like to ask a question of Mr. Rivers through the Chair. Is it not true, Mr. Rivers, that in the previous admission of the states that Congress has always taken such precaution as to appropriate certain funds for transitional purposes, and that the states have not had to go on their knees asking for those funds? It has been a matter of natural function of Congress to make the transition? Is that not true?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have not looked into detailed appropriation procedures in connection with past constitutions. There has not been any since 1912, but I do know that Congress appropriating for a fiscal year is going to appropriate as though the Federal Government were going to continue those funds until the end of the fiscal year. If we get admitted during the middle of the year, we just want to be sure that the enabling law or some related legislation will say the appropriations are still available to be disbursed until the end of the fiscal year for which they were appropriated.

McCUTCHEON: Are you in a position, Mr. Rivers, that you wouldn't accept statehood unless the government did such a thing?

R. RIVERS: This is part of the orderly transition and we are pointing up something that would be important for the orderly transition. Your other question is argumentative.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it is argumentative, and that is what I propose to argue about. I feel that under the circumstances that I must support Mr. Riley's remarks, and that I feel that at this time that Alaska should be able to stand on its own feet. Congress is not going to be so derelict in its duties that if they are going to give us statehood that they are going to overlook the proposition of providing the proper transitional funds. Under the circumstances, I think this particular document here that we are to consider is absolutely ill-advised. We have taken a bold step in setting forth the "Tennessee Plan". We want to become a state, and we want to become a state immediately if we possibly can, and that does not mean ten years from now, that means immediately, tomorrow, if they will grant it to us. And I don't think that our Territory at this time, in view of the action we have already taken, should hesitate for one second to accept statehood whether or not the Federal Congress will give us the funds to make such a so-called orderly transition. If they won't do it, let us do it ourselves and take statehood now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I mover the previous question and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the previous question be ordered. Is there objection?

KILCHER: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

MCLAUGHLIN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. McLaughlin. The question is: "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No". The "Ayes" have it and the previous question is ordered. The question is: "Shall the resolution be adopted?" All those in favor of adopting the resolution will signify by saying "Aye"; all opposed, by saying "No". The "Noes" have it and the resolution has failed of adoption. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, still under the heading of committee reports, your Committee on Style and Drafting reports to the Convention that it has redrafted, following their passage, resolutions on Certification under the Alaska Tennessee Plan; Alaska Native Lands; Press, Radio, and Television; Students of the University; and Recognition of the Services of Dr. Moberg. And copies have been distributed to the delegates. Mr. President, I don't know whether we were instructed to restyle or redraft the resolutions adopted last night and today, which we have not had a chance to work on. If that is the desire of the Convention we will be glad to go over them and put them in possibly a little better form.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the suggestion as made by the Chairman of the Style and Drafting Committee? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, temporary objection. Can I direct a question to Mr. Sundborg?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

BOSWELL: Would you read your first paragraph of the resolution on the students of the University?

SUNDBORG: "Students of the University. WHEREAS the Alaska Constitutional Convention has acquired the building." (Laughter) Obviously there is something wrong with that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the boiler room very valiantly tried to read the handwriting of one of our members, maybe our secretary, and has inserted the word "acquired" which should have been the word "occupied", so if I may be excused from reading the rest of that paragraph, we will make that correction, Mr. Boswell.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Without objection the change will be made in the resolution. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, on this "Friendly Relations with Canada", you put an extra "A" in Alberta. Would you take that out? The last line.

NORDALE: We will take it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other resolutions? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, as my wife keeps reminding me, the task of housekeeping is never an easy one, and when that house contains fifty-five hardheaded individuals, each of whom is sure he know how it should be done, it does not get any easier. I would lke (like) to move and ask unanimous consent that the Administration Committee and its Chairman, Mr. Coghill, receive the appreciation of the Convention for a difficult and detailed task well done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent and hearing no objection the motion is orderd adopted. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, before my voice gives out, may we revert to committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, the Committee to read the journal would like to report the Journal of the 69th Convention day, Monday, January 30, with the following corrections: On page 19, third paragraph from the bottom, correct a typographical error in the word "Article". The journal for the 70th Convention day, on page 1, in the prayer, on the second line, capitalize the "t" in "Thee"; on the 6th line, same correction; and on the last line, capitalize the "t" in "Thy"; on page 1 still, third paragraph from the bottom, the last line, where it says "Rule Committee", add an "s" to "Rule"; and on page 7, in the first paragraph, after "3:30", insert "p.m.". The journal for the 71st Convention day, no corrections; the journal for the 72nd Convention day, likewise no corrections. Mr. President, we ask unanimous consent for the approval of the journal of the 69th, 70th, 71st, and 72nd days.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves and asks unanimous consent that the journals of the 69th, 70th, 71st, and 72nd Convention days be approved along with the suggested corrections as made by the special committee to read the Journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the journals are ordered approved. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, the Committee would like to announce that the journals for the last three days are not yet ready, that they will be mailed to the delegates, and the committee would like to move that the President with the assistance of Mr. Doogan be authorized to correct the Journals for the last three days prior to that mailing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the motion as made by Mr. White. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. Chairman, since it seems to be in order to extend thanks to everybody today, I would like to extend the thanks of the Convention to the Committee that read the Journal day after day and did the correcting. (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann has asked unanimous consent that the thanks of the Convention be extended to the special Committee to read the Journal. Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Is there anything else to come before the Convention? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: One other thing that we discussed this morning before coming into session is the extra 40 copies that we have with the signatures printed by plate. Now, we had a 100 copies made for the Convention, 60 of which were signed yesterday by the delegates and 40 that had the printed signatures on them. Fifty-five of these went to the delegates, five were the official copies, and we have 40 left. Now, it is a big question as to where those 40 are going to go. It was referred to the Committee on Administration and the Committee on Administration referred it back to myself to get together with Mr. Egan, the President of the Convention, and the Secretary. We discussed it this morning and the five originals go to: one to the Secretary of Alaska to be transmitted to the Secretary of the new state; the second one to go to the Congress of the United States; the third to the University Museum as was presented this morning; the fourth to the Territorial Museum; and the fifth to the Department of Libraries. That is the disposition of the five originals. Now, the other 40 it was felt by the group that this should be discussed thoroughly on the floor. We thought that perhaps four of them could go to the district courts, one to each District Court, to be filed with the Clerk of the Court so it could be referred to at any time. It was felt that one should be presented to the Governor, and one should be presented to Bob Bartlett, our Delegate in Congress. Now, that would take care of six of the 40, and there are 32 school districts in Alaska, but there are more high schools than 32 high schools, because of Wasilla and Bethel and there are several other high schools. So it was more or less left up in the air by the Committee on three to bring it out on the floor and find what the Convention delegates wished to do. It would be nice to have the schools each get one, and I planned this morning to try and find out how many libraries there are in Alaska and it was felt that maybe a few more copies could be made as the press is still set up in the News-Miner printing room. Mr. President, I place this on the floor for discussion with no alternative in mind.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, it is getting late. I move and ask unanimous consent that the Convention delegate the authority to determine what we're going to do with the 40 copies to Mr. President and Mr. Coghill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to say that Mr. Sundborg has informed us that the plates are still available and there could be enough additional copies made easily enough so that all the schools would have one and that the libraries, the judges, and those that have been mentioned, without any real difficulty. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, the last year the Cook Inlet Historical Society has organized a live membership of about four hundred. They have a nice quarters at Anchorage, and the President of the Cook Inlet Historical Society is right here. We would like to have one for that society. We put a request in right now for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to suggest that each of our consultants have one of these. I know Mr. Sheldon Elliott, for instance, would treasure it very highly and Mr. Bebout, and the various other consultants.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In reference to this motion made by Mr. Buckalew, now everyone would like to have one of these, we know, everywhere in Alaska and everywhere else, and it would seem to me that unless there is specific instruction to the contrary, that the schools and the libraries ought to be the ones; otherwise, we will run into a very difficult problem, and the President or whoever is charged with the responsibility would probably have to move out of the new state. (Laughter) Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I was wondering, Mr. President, if Mr. Buckalew would amend his motion to allow the President to have as many extra copies as he sees fit printed.

BUCKALEW: I trust the President's judgment. I will consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I do not object to Mr. Buckalew's request. I would like to further move, however, since we would be putting the President on the spot as to who gets copies and who doesn't, that each high school in Alaska and that each public library in Alaska and the Library of Congress receive a copy of the Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, do you accept that amendment to your motion?

BUCKALEW: One question, Mr. Fischer, that will include the court libraries, won't it? Every library in Alaska; that will probably include the District Court library?

V. FISCHER: I meant primarily public libraries. I wasn't too concerned about the court libraries, they can get a regular printed copy. I think the public libraries should have the first priority. That is where the people at large go to look at things like this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the amended motion? Hearing no objection then the amended motion is ordered adopted. Is there anything else to come before the Convention? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I will ask for a five-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. All you delegates will please take your seats. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have been selected by the Convention to present our final respects of this Convention to our great beloved President, William Egan, for a job well done. It seemed a little strange that I should be chosen for this position, and yet when we think about it, I perhaps represent those of us that are new in this field, and for that reason am perhaps best able to express the greatest appreciation which we have for the way in which our President has brought this Convention to a successful closing. He has maintained an academic atmosphere throughout the Convention, and yet has been always willing to accept the practical matters which must come before us. He has carried the whole Convention forward in a way that no one else could possibly have done. I think this occasion is somewhat similar to a group that has been through a major battle. We have earned a respect for our leader that can only come from having gone through all of the trials and tribulations of presenting to the future State of Alaska the document that they will live by for many years. And to Bill, we have arranged this present which Mrs. Wien will present in the form of a resolution.

WIEN: "WHEREAS for seventy-five Convention days, the Honorable William A. Egan has served as presiding officer; and WHEREAS in this capacity he has demonstrated to all, his parliamentary skill, his unwavering fairness, his personal friendliness, and his untiring devotion to duty; and WHEREAS the delegates and officers of this Convention desire to express their gratitude for his outstanding leadership, in a form that will endure along with their admiration, and in a form that will enable them to indicate their gratitude to his charming wife and son, as well as to all other Alaskans; NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the Honorable William A. Egan, President of the Alaska Constitutional Convention of 1955, be asked to accept, as a token of our thanks, admiration, and affection, a portrait of himself, painted by the distinguished artist Christian von Schneidau on commission from the delegates, and that a copy of this resolution properly inscribed be presented to our esteemed President Egan." (Standing ovation for President Egan)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Since this is in the form of a resolution the Chair will ask what is the pleasure of the Convention. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the resolution.

BUCKALEW: This is one resolution that Buckalew is certainly not going to object to.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Hearing no objection it is so ordered. The resolution is adopted unanimously.

PRESIDENT EGAN: All I can say is that I certainly appreciate it. I will never forget a single one of you. You have done a wonderful job. (Standing ovation)

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair will declare a recess for the congratulations that are in order.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that the remarks of Mr. Hurley and the resolution be spread upon the pages of today's Journal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the remarks of Mr. Hurley be spread upon today's Journal. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: At this time I think it is only fitting that the gentleman be introduced to this floor. He is the artist who painted this very fine portraiture of our President. I would like to introduce to you at this time, to those of you who have not met him, Christian von Schneidau, the artist who painted the portrait of our President. May I ask for the privilege of the floor, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. (Christian von Schneidau came on to the Convention floor at this time.) (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. von Schneidau, would you like to come forward?

(Mr. von Schneidau came forward and shook hands with President Egan.)

VON SCHNEIDAU: I would like to add to this feeling too. I am very deeply touched myself with this wonderful man, Mr. Egan. I thank you all for the privilege of being here and seeing that I am being pictured with my wonderful model, Mr. Egan. Thank you very much. (Standing ovation)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that President Patty be instructed to take a message over to the former President Bunnell and give him good greetings and the story of the Convention. He's over here on his sick-bed. I ask unanimous consent that that be done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston asks unanimous consent that Dr. Patty be requested by the Convention to take that message to Dr. Bunnell, if he will. Is there objection to requesting Dr. Patty to convey the good wishes of the Convention to Dr.

Bunnell? Hearing no objection the request will be made of Dr. Patty. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: At this time I would like to ask, Mr. President, that the delegates stand and give a bit of applause in honor of the Secretary of our Convention, Mr. Tom Stewart, for his untiring efforts toward making this Convention a success from its inception. (Standing ovation)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Reverend Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, the committee you appointed a couple of days ago has tried to work in time to have some type of a charter for Alaska's children. It has been almost impossible under the pressure of our schedule to arrive at a final document, but we would like to present a tentative statement and ask that this continue to be referred to the committee where it will take final form, and that you be given the opportunity to distribute this to our school children throughout Alaska. The content of the final document would read something in this order: "You are Alaska's children. We bequeath to you a state that will be glorious in her achievements, a homeland filled with opportunities for living, a land where you can worship and pray, a country where ambitions will be bright and real, an Alaska that will grow with you as you grow. We trust you; you are our future. We ask you to take tomorrow and dream; we know that you will see visions we do not see. We are certain that in capturing today for you, you can plan and build. Take our constitution and study it, work with it in your classrooms, understand its meaning and the facts within it. Help others to love and appreciate it. You are Alaska's children. We bequeath to you the land, the mountains, the lakes, the skies. This is your land and we ask you to possess it." Signed by the President of the Alaska Constitutional Convention. I ask, sir, that this come in some final form that will be after this fashion. I move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked and if there is no objection the matter will be attended to by the President. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we now grant the privilege of the floor to one who has very faithfully attended I think every session of our Convention, in order that we may pay our respects to her and make a presentation. I make this for Mrs. Florence Douthit, of the Fairbanks Daily News Miner. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Mrs. Douthit, would you please come forward. (Mrs. Douthit went forward and she was given a standing ovation. She shook hands with President Egan.)

SUNDBORG: Mrs. Douthit, on behalf of the delegates to the Convention, we are very happy to present this to you. I will tell you without your even opening it that it is a baby cup, and we intend to send it outside to be inscribed with the following message: -- do you want to read the message or shall I? -- "Bestowed by grateful delegates upon an unborn child named Douthit who abided quietly throughout the Alaska Constitutional Convention and never offered an amendment." (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: After the final adjournment, the Chair would like to state that at that time, it might be best for everyone to go to the coffee shop and have coffee, but it is felt that we might meet here informally to discuss various matters before you might leave for your homes, say around 10:30 this morning, if it is satisfactory with the delegates, so if none of the delegates would leave the campus in order that we might all have this discussion here it would certainly be appreciated. Is there anything else to come before the Convention at this time. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question that the answer might be placed upon the record, and that is that the news report as it has come to us at the Convention is that a resignation was tendered by Mr. Robertson to the Convention. At this time have you received that resignation?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Nothing has been received, Mr. Armstrong; so far as the Chair knows, Mr. Robertson is here and just absent. There has not been one word of resignation or anything else received relative to that matter. Is there anything else to come before the Convention? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: This is not meant to be facetious, and I believe it is entirely proper. I have sat here for seventy-five days of the Convention. There has been one member of this Convention who, to my knowledge, and I am sure that I am right, has never taken the floor to speak upon any subject or to utter a word into the tape recording. At this time if the gentleman I am about to name does not care to say a word or two, I do trust that he will rise and take a bow because we have appreciated his quietness as much as some people have appreciated my talking. I refer to you, Mr. Peter Reader of Nome. (Applause)

READER: I certainly enjoyed my knowledge which I gained from this Convention, and I don't think anyone could ever buy it. (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I especially appreciate Mr. Reader's performance because I don't believe that he offered an amendment all during the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there anything else to come before the Convention? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I make a brief remark? There has been some talk during the days of our Convention about selling this Constitution we have made, and I know for one, myself, I am going to try to get duplicate tapes of Governor Gruening's speech on American Colonialism as well as Senator Knowland's remarks on statehood and have them played on the local station. Whether that suggestion is good or bad it might be worth something to folks in other cities who might like to do likewise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anything else to come before the Convention? If not -- Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: Bear with me just a moment. I realize that this has been a great emotional scene. It brings back to my mind the organization of the First Territorial Legislature. We met there, as the members of this Convention have met here, to organize a First Session of the Legislature forty-three years ago; to bring back to my mind that there are only three surviving members of that legislature. We wound up our duties with the same emotional scene as I have experienced here today. In that legislature we formed a friendship that was enduring, and little did I think that forty-three years from that date that there would be only three surviving members of that legislature -- the Honorable Henry Roden of Juneau, the Honorable Charles E. Jones of Nome, and myself. In all those years that friendship has become stronger and closer between the three of us, and I can see here today that the association and the friendship and the existence that are here within this Convention is going to bind the personalities of each and everyone of you that will endure for time to come when we enjoy the statehood of Alaska. Little did I think at that time, forty-three years hence that I would be a member of a Convention that was drawn here by the people of the Territory of Alaska to draft a constitution for the first statehood, and I say to you, it has been a wonderful experience, and as years go by the younger members will remember the meeting of the individuals of this Convention, and it will be cemented in friendship that will endure to help carry on the workings of the future State of Alaska, and I think it befitting at this time that we have another member of this Convention, one who has taken part in many of the public affairs of this Territory, and I think it would be fitting for this Convention to give the privilege to Mrs. Hermann to make the motion for the final adjournment of this Convention. (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before the motion is put, the girls in the boiler room have a few pictures they wish the delegates to sign. Those pictures are on the press table and if possible when the meeting adjourns if the delegates would do so, it would be very much appreciated. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, pursuant to a motion already made on this floor and carried, I move when we go forth from this assembly today, we do so in memory of two great Alaskans who pioneered the statehood movement -- Judge James Wickersham and Judge Anthony J. Dimond. Mr. President, I now move that we adjourn sine die.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I second that motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris seconds the motion. The question is: "Shall the Constitutional Convention of Alaska adjourn sine die?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 54 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 0

Absent: 1 - Robertson.)

CHIEF CLERK: 54 Yeas, 1 Absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the Convention has adjourned sine die.

(Applause)
