METCALF: Mr. President, I'm in favor of Mr. McLaughlin's amendment. It seems to me if there is such an unfortunate person that probably the legislature would cut off his pocketbook.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to give a little idea of how I feel about this. I don't ever remember seeing the original source of this article; we discussed it, however. Right here I found in the Constitution of the State of Wyoming, which states who may be impeached: "The governor and other state and judicial officers, except justices of the peace, shall be liable to impeachment for high crimes and misdemeanors, or malfeasance in office, but judgment in such cases shall only extend to removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under the laws of the state." I think that is where our Committee fell down by neglecting to include that. It states in another section: "Removal from Office. All officers not liable to impeachment shall be subject to removal for misconduct or malfeasance in office in such manner as may be provided by law." Now that amounts to much the same thing, and is just about as much un-American as I can think of, since it can be done by law and by the legislature. And I think that we were lax on this job, but I can see where there was some justification for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, under this section, where the legislature removes a department head or any other civil officer, it was brought up here that there would be less notoriety, less publicity in case he was a well-meaning individual. Now, we'll take the case of where the governor wants a person removed and the legislature wants him removed, and if you have to go through this process, you will get publicity. This flouts the theory of a strong executive, which I believe the majority of this body wants, a strong governor who is able to appoint his own assistants in order to have a more perfect team, harmony, and cooperation and, if that governor is not allowed to remove his appointees without going through this, he's going to be burdened with him until the next meeting of the legislature. And if he does not want a department head removed, and the legislature does want him removed, they will remove him. In other words, it takes it out of the governor's hands, and it removes the strong executive system from our government altogether.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all those opposed by saying "no". The ayes have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there amendments to Section 15?

JOHNSON: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT: Could the Chairman of the Committee then give an explanation of the reasons for having Section 15? Mr. McCutcheon?

MCCUTCHEON: The thinking of this Committee, and it was not a unanimous thinking, was that from past experience we felt that the authority of the senate should be diluted to a certain extent by requiring that the vetoes of the governor shall be heard in both houses and that it shall require the vote of both houses sitting as one body to override the veto of the governor, the theory being that with a small senate, it required so few to sustain the governor, that it gave an extremely strong executive arm more power and authority than he should have. If we were to have a weak executive arm, then it appeared to the Committee or at least I should say a portion of the Committee that the governor should have strong veto powers, in as much as it was the general consensus that we were to have an article which dealt with an exceedingly strong executive branch, then authority of that branch, as it applied to legislation, should be reduced to a certain extent. You will observe that the provisions of the article require that it will take three-fourths of the membership to override the governor's veto on a budget matter; any other matter will require two-thirds of the combined houses sitting as one house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Could I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Fischer, if there is no objection.

V. FISCHER: On line 1 of page 6, Mr. McCutcheon, we have a reference to an item or items in the general appropriations bill. Is it the intent of the Committee that Section 15 grant the governor to veto items in the appropriation bill without vetoing the whole bill?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes.

V. FISCHER: But not reduce amounts, just veto in entirety?

MCCUTCHEON: That's right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson to Section 15.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 19, strike the word 'The', then insert 'Each house of the'. Strike the word 'as' at the end of line 19.

Line 20, strike the words 'one body', insert in lieu thereof the word 'separately'. Line 23, strike the words 'the state' and insert in lieu thereof the words 'each house'. Page 6, line 3, strike the words 'the state' and insert in lieu thereof the words 'each house'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, what is your pleasure?

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves for the adoption of his proposed amendment. Is there a second?

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg seconds the motion. The question is open for discussion. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Johnson a question? Mr. Johnson, in question of a veto, it's an action that has been concurred in by both houses and by the senate so that actually the veto is against the joint action of the combined legislative body. Why should it not, then, be reviewed by both bodies sitting together? In other words, I'm asking for an explanation of your amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I don't agree that joint action is the same in both instances or both examples that you gave, Mr. Armstrong. Certainly a bill is acted upon by both houses but it's acted upon usually by each house separately and voted on by each house separately and then sent to the governor for his consideration. When it comes back, it seems to me that the bill should have the same treatment. In other words, his veto should be considered by each house sitting separately, since they have considered the original legislation in the same manner as in the beginning or during its passage. It is the customary way of doing things, I think; and, I believe we have set up here in this legislative act a bicameral system of legislature, and we are continually, it seems to me by joint session, invading that province and reducing one of the checks and balances that we should continue to preserve in our form of government. And when Mr. McCutcheon says that he would like to dilute the authority of the senate, I don't know of any reason why it should be diluted any more than should any other branch of our government have its authority diluted. Each branch ought to stand on its own, and certainly ought to act independently of the other, as far as that is possible; and, with this amendment, it simply puts the consideration after veto by the governor back so that it will be acted on by each house separately as was the original legislation when it was passed. I don't see that there is anything wrong with that system. Certainly, it's worked out extremely well, and I have known of instances when the house of representatives acted as a check on the senate. So I think it works both ways.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I'd like to amplify that statement as to why such matters should not be acted on in joint session. The answer is that it merely takes more time. Every time there is a joint session, the senate has to negotiate with the house, or vice versa, as to what time, for instance if the senate wants to sit with the house, the senate has to find out what time the house would be able to sit with them, and so forth. And if this matter is acted on separately, each house can act on it as it comes up in their regular order of business without any delay whatever. In our last session I believe there were several bills vetoed by the governor; some were sustained, and some were not, but there was no joint meeting, no hassle, or delays.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I think there is another good reason for supporting this amendment. Going on the assumption that the numbers will be as we have seen them in proposals as far as your house and senate, it almost takes the overriding out of the hands of the senate, and they have to sit with the house that is twice as big. And if your house is largely leaning one way, they only have to pick up only two or three seats or voices in the senate to override. And putting it this way, it lets each house act separately. That's why we have two houses.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I might also add that under the present system a bill that is vetoed by the governor is returned to the house of origin, and, if it happens to be the senate, the bill will go to the senate, and if they do not override the governor's veto, the bill is lost. Under this system it would go back to joint session, and, regardless of whether the senate wishes to override the governor's veto or not, it probably would be overridden since the house is going to be so much larger than the senate here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSWOGG: Mr. President, I'd like to move in favor of this amendment. If my figures are correct, a bill that passes the house and senate under our present setup could carry in the larger house a vote of 30 to 10 and in the smaller house of 11 to 9. And then if it was vetoed and returned to joint session, it could be still passed by the same vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I don't like to take up the time to talk on this, but I may state here just what my interpretation is for the reason this part of the section is in here. By one example, in the last legislature where the house by a vote, I believe, of about 21 to 3 passed an appointments bill requiring the governor to make his appointments in a certain fashion, or submit the names, and then if the names were not approved, why, he had another choice, and if he failed then, why, the house and senate would make the appointments for him, if he didn't do it in two tries. Now the house passed the bill, as I remember, about 21 to 3. It went to the senate, and the senate also passed the bill, and as near as I remember it was almost, or it was possibly two-thirds majority in the senate, but the governor vetoed the bill, and the bill came back to the house of representatives and we passed the bill, this appointments bill, over the governor's veto, again by a vote of 21 to 3. The bill went back to the senate and failed to get the two-thirds majority, and so the governor's veto was sustained. I don't feel too strongly on this particular point. I felt a little strongly at the time when that bill I'm speaking about, but the thought behind this is that where you have that difference between the two houses, you could see where adding either 50 per cent of it or slightly over 50 per cent of the senate vote to the overwhelming house vote where it would be possible to override the governor's veto.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Could we have the proposed amendment read again, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk read again the proposed amendment by Mr. Johnson.)

HELLENTHAL: May I ask a question of Mr. McCutcheon?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hellenthal, if there is no objection.

HELLENTHAL: How many states have provisions for veto where both houses meet jointly, such as the proposal before us?

MCCUTCHEON: Nebraska. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention? The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 25 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Cross, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 25 - Awes, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Sundborg, White, Wien.

Absent: 5 - Collins, R. Rivers, Robertson, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 25 ayes, 25 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that we adjourn until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand adjourned until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. If there is no objection, it is so ordered, and the Convention stands adjourned.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 11, 1956

FIFTIETH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning the Reverend Gambell of the Pentecostal Holiness Church in Fairbanks. Reverend Gambell.

REVEREND GAMBELL: O God, we pray that we may hold our liberty in high esteem remembering how Thou has blest this nation. We thank Thee for this wonderful country in which we are privileged to live. Inspire our people to hold sacred this glorious heritage of freedom and rights. Keep us free from jealousy and free from strife within and from wars without. Bless, we pray Thee, each member of this Constitutional Convention. Give wisdom and strength for this great task which is nearing completion, recognizing Thy great Providence and guidance may we say "Hitherto the Lord hath led us." Give us peace through the Prince of Peace, for His sake. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Six absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with the regular order of business. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I was wondering if it would not be in order to suggest each morning that as you introduce the minister, that the delegates might retain their seats so that we might have a clear introduction, not only for ourselves but for the record and not to rise until after the introduction.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you very much. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Journal for the 45th Convention day. Corrections on page 4, after the words "After Recess", insert the following paragraph: "Mr. Hellenthal asked unanimous consent to withdraw his amendment. There being no objection it was so ordered." With this inclusion in the journal I ask unanimous consent that the journal be approved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the report of the special Committee to read the journal. Unanimous consent has been asked by Mr. Doogan to approve the journal. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. At this time the Chair will refer Committee Proposal No. 7 to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. It had been held over inasmuch as one delegate had served notice of reconsideration of his vote. The reconsideration was not brought up by the particular delegate and at this time Committee Proposal No. 7 is referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Reports of select committees? Are there any proposals to be introduced at this time? If not, we are down to the unfinished business on our calendar which is Committee Proposal No. 5. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I was asleep I guess but I have a report on the Nome hearing that I wish to file.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the report of the hearing will be filed. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 5, Section 15. Are there amendments to Section 15? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there are no amendments on the Clerk's desk, I have an amendment to Section 15.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, you may offer your amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 15, page 5, strike all of line 21 and the first two words on line 22 and insert in lieu thereof the words 'although vetoed'. Strike all of line 24 and 25 on page 5; lines 1, 2 and 3 on page 6 and the word 'entitled' on line 4 of page 6."

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, as the proposal has been reported to us by the Committee, it sets up two classes of legislation, one of which requires a two-thirds vote of the legislature to override a veto by the governor and another class which requires a three-fourths vote of the legislature to override the veto. My observation of legislatures, not only of the Alaska legislature, and I think of every session since the 1939 session, and of several other legislatures in action, that it is very rare that any bill, that the veto is overridden by the legislature anyway, and to make it necessary that a three-fourths vote of the legislature be obtained on certain classes of legislation would I think insure that those classes of legislation, once vetoed, would never be overridden by the body. So I believe we ought to stick to the uniform rule that it takes a two-thirds rule of the legislature rather than a three-fourths vote in some cases. Now, the kinds of bills which would not be subject to overriding of veto by two-thirds vote would be all bills carrying appropriations, and I would say probably that maybe one-third of all the bills that have gone through the Alaska legislature do carry appropriations. It does not mean it would have to be a bill with nothing but appropriations, but it may be a bill setting up a new department, and at the very end of it, it says that an appropriation for so many thousands of dollars for the purposes of carrying out the purpose of this act. That whole bill would fall in the second class that the Committee sets up here and would require a three-fourths vote of the legislature to override the veto, any bill dealing with taxation or any bill affecting payments of money under existing statutes or an item or items in the general appropriations bill. I feel that we would avoid a great deal of confusion, and we would have a better and more workable constitution if we provided as the Alaska Organic Act has always provided, that the veto may be overridden by a two-thirds rather than three-fourths in some cases.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I have no objection to this motion to strike except for one thing. I think it is generally agreed that a provision for an item veto in appropriations bill is desirable and the further provision that reductions can be made as the need may arise because of lack of revenues. I don't know if Mr. Sundborg intends to follow this amendment with another one making some provision. Some of us have been working on one. I don't think it is ready to present yet, but I intended to do it the second time around, but with that understanding I will support Mr. Sundborg's amendment. But I would not support it if the intention was to leave this big gap in the veto section. We discussed this in Finance and have left out any reference to an item vetoed in the finance section with the understanding that it would be inserted somewhere else.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The matter of whether a constitution is better or more workable in one fashion or other is strictly a matter of opinion. I do not agree with Mr. Sundborg's remarks in many respects. It appears to be the intention of this group, at least so far, if we can understand the discussions, that is that there is an intention for a strong executive arm. If I understand the fiscal reorganization of our government here as it took place in the last several years, there is quite a strong device in a budgeting fashion wherein the governor's arm will develop the budget for the state, and in presenting this budgeted item obviously the governor's office will have gone quite thoroughly into all the aspects of the budget for the state and consequently, having put in as much design as will be necessary to develop not only the expenditures but the revenues necessary to meet them, we in the Committee felt that there was a necessity to require a greater number if the proposition of the house meeting in joint session were to stand, a greater number required to override the veto on money matters. Now, the fact that there are many, many bills as Mr. Sundborg says, that will be carrying appropriations, it is my opinion that as we get into our new state legislature that the chances of many bills carrying individual appropriations, as there has been in the past in the Alaska legislature, will not stand. That practice will probably be abolished and the bills carrying appropriations for new departments will come at once, and they will come either through the budgeting office from the governor or they will derive from the appropriations or finance committee of the house or senate, and will be considered in the light of the total revenues and the total of expenditures of the state, rather than in the hodgepodge fashion in the past. If it is the desire of Mr. Sundborg to make this a uniform veto overriding procedure, then of course he will have to abandon the idea that the veto will be considered by both houses of the session together. We feel that in supporting a strong executive arm it should require a greater number than two-thirds of the total number of legislators to override the governor's veto on a matter of budget because you cannot exercise a strong executive arm unless you have a strong control on the purse strings.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I also want to mention that I think that possibly under this act the appropriations bills will be handled separately under an appropriation bill. In fact, in Section 16 it says bills except for appropriations shall be confined to appropriations. Now, the effect of that will be that a lot of independent bills carrying appropriations will be merely passed as enabling acts and then later on the appropriations will all come in under appropriation bills, at which time it will be in a pattern similar to that handled in Congress. In the past there has been a great many bills that came in during the session which carried appropriations, and for that reason it was very hard to determine how much money had been authorized and committed and what money should then go into general appropriation bills against those that carried special appropriations. I favor this procedure and I favor also the three-fourths majority to override a veto in the matter of appropriations because we have now diluted the veto power on one hand and are trying to stiffen it in regard to moneys on the other. I want to point out here there is a great deal of difference between the power to tax and appropriate and spend money, and the power to legislate as our founding fathers found when they rebelled against the taxation procedures of the mother country which was at that time England, and they would permit and allow the legislation but they did fight and oppose the taxation, and so here again we have the distinction between the power to tax and spend, as against the power to legislate, and I think the Committee has rightly adopted a provision in regard to the appropriation and spending of money which would allow somewhat more power to lie in the strong executive.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will "signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The noes have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have an amendment on the Clerk's desk I would like to have read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 15, line 17, after the word 'Legislature' and the period, strike the rest of line 17 and all of lines 18, 19 and 20 except the last word 'Bills' and substitute the following: 'within five days after vetoing a bill, the governor shall return it to its house of origin for further action, and if passed by a two-thirds majority, it shall be transmitted to the other house for its consideration, and if like action is taken it shall become law.' Line 23, strike the words 'the state' and substitute the words 'each house'. Page 6, line 3, strike the words 'the state' and substitute the words 'each house'."

MCNEES: Point of order, Mr. President, I believe this action was taken last night. The verbiage only has been changed.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I submit that this is a close point of order. The only difference in the matter that has been submitted is the fact he has changed it from a period of being returned to five days. I submit it as a close point of order, but I challenge it on the basis of the fact that it is the material that has been considered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has close resemblance to another amendment, but as Mr. McCutcheon says there might be a point there that should be referred to the Rules Committee because of that one thing. The Chair just is not completely certain. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I do not remember the exact wording of Mr. Johnson's amendment but I believe that this one also specifies that it shall be returned to the house of origin. I believe that there are two points different in that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will refer this question to the Rules Committee. The Convention will be at ease. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I believe the Rules Committee has a report to make first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, in the absence of the Chairman of the Rules Committee, I have presided, and I report on behalf of the Rules Committee that we believe that Mr. Barr's motion in effect is exactly the same motion that was made last night and defeated, and for that reason, although we recognize that it is a mighty close question, we consider that Mr. Barr's motion is out of order and that the point of order is well taken. We feel that Mr. Barr has another remedy which he can use if he so desires.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The ruling of the Rules Committee will be the ruling of the Chair.

BARR: I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr asks unanimous consent to withdraw his proposed amendment. Is there objection? If there is no objection, it is so ordered.

BARR: Now I would like to give notice that I will make a motion to rescind our action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr serves notice that he will make a motion to rescind action.

DAVIS: I. think, Mr. President, Mr. Barr ought to make it clear what action we are talking about.

BARR: To rescind our action on Mr. Johnson's amendment to Section 15 which we took last night.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr serves notice he is going to make a motion to rescind the action that was taken on the motion of Mr. Johnson with relation to Section 15. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for the suspension of the rules so that I can make a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What motion are you going to make, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I move that the Rules Committee be instructed to report out this evening at 7:30 any recommendations that they may have for the purposes of expediting proceedings of this Convention.

COOPER: I second the motion.

DAVIS: The Rules Committee is not ready and will not be ready by 7:30 this evening to make any such report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is "Shall the rules be suspended and the Rules Committee be instructed to make recommendations as to how to expedite the proceedings of the Convention?" It is not debatable because it is a suspension of the rules.

HERMANN: Point of order. I think we have a rule that says any time we want to call out a report of the Committee you have to have 14 people, if I recollect, requesting it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, this request by Mr. McLaughlin, Mrs. Hermann, is in effect a suspension of the rules.

V. FISCHER: Point of information. Is such a motion amendable by Mr. McLaughlin to provide, instead of 7:30 tonight, to have it as soon as possible?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, the Chair will allow you to make a statement.

MCLAUGHLIN: I shall amend it with reluctance to read "as soon as possible" instead of "7:30 this evening".

BUCKALEW: I would like to ask Mr. McLaughlin to withdraw that. You know they are going to get it out as soon as possible. Why don't you withdraw it?

MCLAUGHLIN: I shall withdraw my motion and rely on the speed with which the Rules Committee produces recommendations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, hearing no objection, your proposed motion has been withdrawn. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: At this time I will announce a meeting of the Rules Committee for the morning recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Rules Committee during the morning recess. Are there amendments to Section 15? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

ARMSTRONG: May I suggest again that the Chairman of the Committee be asked to speak to this section and if there are to be amendments to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: He has already spoken to this section.

ARMSTRONG: I am sorry. I thought it was 16.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 15, line 20, after the word 'shall' insert the word 'immediately'."

NORDALE: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, or I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 15, line 20, after the word 'shall' insert the word 'immediately'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, my feeling is that I don't know that it is too important, but it seems to me that it is of enough importance to insert the word. If the bill should be considered immediately after the veto, then if the veto is sustained, there is an opportunity for those who still believe in the substance of the bill to introduce a revised bill incorporating such amendments as will coincide with the governor's attitude on the bill. Otherwise, it could be just delayed and not taken up in sufficient time to reconsider something that might be of value.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I address a question to Mrs. Nordale. Would you consent to the word "promptly instead of "immediately"? You don't know what the business is or what kind of jam they are going to be in for the next 24 hours.

NORDALE: I would consider that if the word would be interpreted reasonably, so that at the first possible recess the bill would be considered.

MCCUTCHEON: I don't see why we are heckling about one particular word. The house does not even have to receive the bill as far as the floor is concerned for some period of time. If there is a matter under consideration, it does not even come before it except if the president calls it up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: There is something else here. This, as we have it here, maybe we are going to change it tomorrow. It says they are going to sit in joint session and you can't consider --

NORDALE: It says "immediately".

SUNDBORG: "The legislature sitting as one body shall immediately reconsider the passage of the bill." He returns it to the house of representatives together with his objections and the legislature sitting as one body and now it is proposed immediately to reconsider the passage of the bill. Would that mean that once the governor's veto message hits the clerk's desk in the house of representatives, that all business of both houses ceases at that moment and they go into joint session to immediately consider this matter?

NORDALE: Mr. President, rather than waste any time I withdraw the amendment. I think that almost every section of every constitution that talks about reconsidering a vetoed message says "immediately".

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor objects to withdrawing. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I object to withdrawing. I think that word should be in there. I have seen the times in the legislature where there was an attempt after a bill had been vetoed by the governor, and it came back down to hold it so it could not come up for a hearing. It would be forced out and many times that happens. I think it should be "immediately" or some word which will denote the same meaning or say "within the following day", or "within 24 hours", but I think it is very imperative that we have this in here so when it goes back to the house of origin nobody in that house can sit on the bill and allow the veto to kill the bill. I object to withdrawing it and believe it should be voted on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mrs. Nordale be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Stewart, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 12 - Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Harris, Laws, Poulsen, Reader, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, White.

Absent: 4 - Coghill, McNealy, Riley, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 12 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 15? If not, are there amendments to Section 16? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I have an amendment to Section 16.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chairman of the Committee then please present us with an explanation for the reasons for Section 16. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: There are several matters in this particular section. I wonder if we could have Mr. Johnson announce which particular matter he chooses to amend.

JOHNSON: Actually it is an addition, not an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We might have the Chief Clerk read the amendment first. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Has the Chairman of the Committee explained the section to us yet?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Not yet, but we thought it might be better to have the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, line 22, after the period add the following: 'The enacting clause of each law shall be, 'Be it enacted by the legislature of the State of Alaska.' No bill shall become law unless it shall pass three readings in each house, on separate days.'"

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

ROBERTSON: I second the motion.

MCCUTCHEON: The first sentence of Section 16 provides that the legislature, like the United States Congress, shall set up the procedure for enactment of bills into law. It requires that a journal be kept and that the votes on the final passage of the act shall be entered into the journal. That part is included because a journal must be had in order that the court requires to search into the background of the law to seek its validity, they ascertain as to whether it legally passed. The theory of requiring that all bills be confined to one subject with certain exceptions here, as shown, is that nothing can be gotten through the legislature under the guise of some other things. Often times a bill that is very popular and has a great deal of public support and sentiment will have a rider attached to it which may defeat the very purpose of the bill or may pertain to some other idea entirely, and the theory behind the requirement that each bill be confined to one subject indicates the thinking. Insofar as the matter of Mr. Johnson's addition here. there are only three states that do not include in their constitution the matter which Mr. Johnson seeks to insert into this article. The United States Constitution does not set up this procedure either but leaves it to Congress to establish the manner in which bills shall be enacted into law. We have here in one of our foregoing sections, if it is finally adopted, a statement that both houses of the legislature shall have uniform rules of procedure and in such instances we relied upon the fact that the legislature would follow a given pattern once adopted, they would follow that pattern of enactment and under that theory we felt that this material need not be included in the constitution, relying on the fact that the United States Congress did not use it and three other states did not use it. I don't think the Committee has any necessary objection to this type of amendment. It does not aid, in our opinion, it does not aid the article any, nor if included would it hurt it.

JOHNSON: Well, I believe the proposed amendment contains what I feel are minimum safeguards to be included in the constitution under the legislative section because if they are left out, and it is left up to the legislature to determine what or how a bill shall be passed and become law, or the method of procedure to be used in having a bill passed and become law, then it is conceivable that each legislature might change that rule and the courts then would be filled with cases construing the legality of various acts of the legislature, and you would not know from one session to the next just exactly what the procedure might be or was going to continue to be, so it seems to me that as Mr. McCutcheon has pointed out, 45 states in the Union, and I know Hawaii includes it, and I have the Oregon Constitution and the Illinois Constitution, and they all include this type of language, and I see no reason why we should leave it out because I feel that we are going to save a great deal of trouble and legal action if we do put it in, and there will then be no question as to what procedure is to be followed for a law to be introduced in the legislature and passed and become a law of the state, and the interpretation of the method used in passing laws will be a settled matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I wonder if we could have the question divided. I don't want to do it against Mr. Johnson's desire, but I think we are dealing with two things. One is having an enacting clause in this section, the other one specifying readings, and I believe that we should consider them separately. It is up to you, Mr. Johnson.

BUCKALEW: That is what I was going to raise -- I just wanted to ask Mr. Johnson. I can't see any sense in putting in the constitution that the state legislature shall caption their bills, "Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Alaska." I don't think it should be in the constitution, that portion.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think that we have all agreed that we want flexibility in the constitution. This amendment, however, is one thing which I believe should give uniformity or would give uniformity if it is adopted to the methods by which bills are enacted and I favor such uniformity. I see no reason why the method should change from time to time, and it doubtless will unless we have such a clause. This is nothing there that would prohibit the enactment of any type of legislation, but the form and the approach and the handling would be uniform, and in this particular case I favor such uniformity.

MARSTON: May I ask Mr. Johnson a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: If your amendment passes, would you not have to change the first two lines. "The legislature shall establish the procedure for enactment of bills," if your amendment passes?

JOHNSON: I don't think that would make any difference, this is just a minimum safeguard. There would still be other procedures that could be provided for.

SUNDBORG: May we hear it read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, line 22, after the period add the following: 'The enacting clause of each law shall be, 'Be it enacted by the legislature of the State of Alaska.' No bill shall become law unless it shall pass three readings in each house, on separate days.'"

SUNDBORG: There is something in that that I think is bad, and it is the provision that each reading must be on a separate day. Anyone who has served in the Alaska legislature or who has observed it, I think knows that probably 99 per cent of the bills that are considered there are advanced to third reading by a suspension of the rules of the house so that the third reading may immediately follow the second reading if there have been no amendments or if the amendments are well understood by the membership, which of course they are, because they have just been talking about it. To require that the house has to get off that subject and go on to a new one and not take it up again until the following day, as between the second and third readings, I think is unnecessary and time-consuming and that it would in a sense cripple the operations of the legislature.

I don't know how many state constitutions contain that provision, that each reading must be on a separate day. If we write it into the constitution it would not be possible for a house of the legislature to suspend the constitution so as to advance a thing to third reading and vote on it the same day they have considered it in second reading or completed the second reading. I don't object at all to writing in some procedure into the constitution, but on that one point I think this procedure would be bad.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, is it your pleasure to offer an amendment to the amendment in that respect?

SUNDBORG: I hadn't intended to, but I would be willing to if I could have a few minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move to amend Mr. Johnson's amendment by striking the last three words in it, namely "on separate days".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection?

JOHNSON: I object to the amendment.

MCCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

SUNDBORG: I have here the New Jersey Constitution which I think is a pretty good one, the last one revised. and its provision on this matter is as follows: All bills and joint resolutions shall be read three times in each house before final passage." Some state constitutions do say on separate days. I am afraid that if we leave in "on separate days" we are going to run into a lot of trouble. I know now for instance we would never get a general appropriation act passed if our experience in the state is what it has been in the Territory. A general appropriations act is always being considered in second reading right down to past midnight of the last day of the session. If it were impossible to suspend the rules of the house so as to advance it to third reading and final passage, the session would end and we would have no appropriation act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I would like to ask Mr. Sundborg a couple of questions.

He said that the general appropriations bill is carried right down to the last day of the house. What is going to be the last day in this new legislature we have set up?

SUNDBORG: It is a very good point which I had not considered.

LONDBORG: I was just wondering. The procedure of the legislature is actually new to me. I have not had the privilege of sitting in on many sessions. I don't see that it would cripple it, and to make it allowable for the suspension of the rules and ride it all through, I think by the time they get to the last day they should really be spread out over three days to do a serious thinking on the subject.

SUNDBORG: They do a lot of serious thinking, Mr. Londborg, even though it is a pro form of motion, really to suspend the rules and advance it to third reading and final passage. Everybody knows by then what he wants to do and to have to stop then and put it over to another day, I think adds nothing and takes up time.

V. RIVERS: Point of order. The New Jersey Constitution does contain the point which Mr. Sundborg brought up. It says, "No bill or joint resolution shall be read a third time in either house until the intervention of one full calendar day following the day of the second reading." So it says all bills and joint resolutions. So actually I believe that would have to be read in context here so this body could understand that they do have a one-day intervention between second and third reading in the New Jersey Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 24 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Hilscher, Kilcher, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, Smith, Sundborg, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 27 - Armstrong, Boswell, Cooper, Davis, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh.

Absent: 4 - Coghill, McNealy, Riley, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 24 yeas, 27 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Now I hope, Mr. President, that we can defeat the amendment. I think that the rules can properly be drawn by the legislature. I think that if anybody bothers to look into some of the background material that has been prepared for us, other studies of the subject, they will find that the three-day rule for three separate readings are a carry-over of the time when legislators could not read and legislators had to listen to someone who was more educated read the bills to them. They had to be read three times so they could understand what was going on. The procedure should not be spelled out in the constitution because we don't have to protect our legislators. They can now study the bills themselves. They can establish whatever procedure is necessary and I don't think we should encumber the constitution with a thing like this reading business or the enacting clause.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I would like to point out that I for one can read and I would like to take the model state constitution which goes even further than having to have a particular law or bill being read to me three times. It states that no bill shall become a law unless it has been read on three different days and has been printed and upon the desk of the members in final form at least three legislative days prior to the final passage, and I think it would very possibly clean up and give us some good legislation if they knew exactly what was taking place at the last few minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I will have to take exception to Mr. Fischer's remarks. If it is true, there must be a high degree of illiteracy in both Missouri and Hawaii because in the Missouri Constitution, which was just adopted a few years ago, every bill shall be read by title on three different days in each house. Now the Hawaiian Constitution, which was adopted by the people of Hawaii, but of course is not in effect yet, theirs says that no bill shall become law until it shall pass three readings in each house on separate days. Now that is either that the people want to be sure of their legislation, or they are extremely illiterate, and I think the fact is they wanted to be sure and know what they are passing.

ARMSTRONG: I believe there is something that needs to be added -- that sometimes the delay between second or third reading may be the entrance of public opinion into the persuasion of the legislators one way or another in the enactment of a bill. I am sure at times even in our present status that the time that would be demanded between second and third reading could mean the persuasion of a vote one way or the other when the public opinion would enter into it. I believe we should give that right to the public, that expanse from the second day to the third day in these readings. I shall vote for the amendment.

MARSTON: That is exactly the reason I am going to vote against it, because it gives time to the lobbyists to get in there and do their work. On the basis of the previous speech I am going to vote against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, the New Jersey Constitution has been quoted several times on this matter, and I would like to point out that there is a provision for a vote of three-fourths of the members suspending this particular thing so I think that it is bad to put it in the way it is without some sort of modification.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I think that the delegates are laboring under the feeling that you have to read the bill from beginning to end three different days, and there is nothing to preclude the legislature from establishing the system they have now. The bill is read the first day, the day it is introduced, and that is the title; the second time that it is read might be a week or two weeks or even a month later, and it is read section by section and amended. That is your second reading. You are certainly not going to cut that out. Then it is put up for third reading, and if you have to wait for the next day that is not going to hurt you any. It is read by title only. There is nothing in here that will prevent the legislature from adopting that same procedure. I think it is very important that we have plenty of time for the study of our bills and those who watched this last session I think will feel the same way. There is a tendency to speed things through, and I certainly go along with Mr. Armstrong that it is not going to hurt us to take a little extra time, and it is not as detrimental as some would make it sound.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to address a question to Mr. Johnson. In introducing this amendment, was it your intention that in using the word "read" that bills might be read by title and not in entirety?

JOHNSON: Oh, yes.

HELLENTHAL: I move for the usual 15-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I have an amendment to offer to Mr. Johnson's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale has an amendment to offer. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Add to Mr. Johnson's amendment: Strike the period, and add 'except that any bill may be advanced from second to third reading by a three-fourths majority of the house having the bill under consideration.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I move that the amendment be adopted.

MCCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked.

JOHNSON: I object.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I am offering this amendment because I feel that the legislature should have some means of avoiding the rigidity of the amendment as it was first proposed. This amendment, I would like to point out, will not rush the bill from first to second reading at all. The bill will have to be introduced and referred to a committee. But when it comes out on the floor, if it is a fairly routine matter and is not amended and is a thing that appears to have the obvious agreement of the house, I believe that it should be passed on to third reading on that day if three-fourths of the members of the house agree to it. It should be borne in mind that when one house finishes the bill it passes on to the second house which again goes through the same procedure. I think there is very little likelihood of any damage being done if this amendment is added to Mr. Johnson's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I don't know if that routine that they are so worried about is such a bad thing. I can certainly see where all precautions should be put right in the constitution to avoid any possibility of rushing things through. If something is of such trivial nature that it does not matter, if it practically skipped all readings, they ought to get it in early enough so they have successive days to work on it. If it is of such importance, then there ought to be a limitation and at least give a person overnight time to think on it. Mr. Marston wants to go from second to third reading so the lobbyists don't have a chance to get a foot in there. We have already passed over Section 11 while the legislature has the power to regulate lobbying. And then also, I would like to speak on a remark made by Mr. Fischer where we said that we are going back many, maybe a hundred years or whatever it was, to the days when the legislators could not read. According to our present proposal here, a legislator can be elected if he is a qualified elector, and let's not forget that we are allowing people to be qualified electors whether they can read or not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I think the original purpose of Mr. Johnson's amendment will be destroyed in this amendment, if it goes through. The idea behind the whole thing as I understand it, or what it means to me is the fact that Mr. Johnson's amendment will prevent steamrolling anything through the legislature. It is only a matter of a day, but a matter of a day in public opinion can make a lot of difference. I would like to see the successive days kept due to our transportation, wire facilities, mail facilities in the future State of Alaska, it takes a little time sometimes for the public to know what is going on. I think they should have an opportunity of knowing what is going on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention? Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: May we have it read please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Add to Mr. Johnson's amendment. Strike the period, add 'except that any bill may be advanced from second to third reading by a three-fourths majority of the house having the bill under consideration.'"

LONDBORG: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention? The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Armstrong, Coghill, Cross, Harris, Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, Poulsen, Reader, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh.

Absent: 3 - Cooper, Riley, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 13 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: A number of people have said or implied I was talking before about the fact that some of our legislators can't read or that those in other states can't read. Nothing of the kind. All I was pointing out is that what we are proposing now is a provision that may be traditional and that has been carried over from the days when legislators could not read. I would further like to point out that we have just gotten into a position where we adopted another rule to qualify a rule which was proposed in the amendment. That is exactly what we should get away from, tying the legislature down to certain rules. I would further like to point out that 13 states make no provision in their constitutions for reading of bills. But by rule, 11 of them require three readings, and the remaining states require two. The point is that just because we omit it here does not mean we will not have three readings of bills.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?"

V. RIVERS: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 35 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 17 - Awes, Buckalew, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hinckel, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Sundborg, Wien.

Absent: 3 - Cooper, Riley, VanderLeest.)

AWES: I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes asks that her vote be changed from "yes" to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 35 yeas, 17 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment to offer to this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it before us? The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment to Section 16.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, line 16, delete first 'a' and insert 'an affirmative'."

ROBERTSON: I move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

V. FISCHER: I second the motion and ask unanimous consent.

TAYLOR: I object temporarily.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment once again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, line 16, delete the first 'a' and insert 'an affirmative'."

TAYLOR: How will it read then?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read it as it would read if the proposed amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "The legislature shall establish the procedure for enactment of bills into law. No bill shall become law without an affirmative vote of a majority of the membership of each house."

MCCUTCHEON: It seems to me that a motion could not be put in a negative fashion, so therefore it would have to be "an affirmative vote", would it not?

ROBERTSON: A vote is when you cast your vote, whether it is affirmative or negative. It is just simply to clarify it, that is all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

TAYLOR: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 16? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I ask Mr. McCutcheon a question? Does "membership" mean a quorum present, or does it mean the entire membership of the house?

MCCUTCHEON: Entire membership of the house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no more amendments to Section 16, are there amendments to Section 17? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may we return to Section 15 for a minute for an amendment which I do not think will be controversial?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to returning to Section 15? Hearing no objection, Mr. White's amendment may be read by the Chief Clerk.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 15, page 5, line 17, after the period insert the following sentence: 'The governor may veto appropriation bills by item, by striking or reducing specific appropriations.'"

WHITE: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

TAYLOR: I object.

WHITE: I so move.

NERLAND: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, you might quarrel a bit with the language but I think it sets forth the idea clearly, and I am willing to have Style and Drafting work it around a little if they want to, but the idea is perfectly clear. This is something that the Finance Committee, I am sure I can say, was unanimous on. It is something that I also understand the Executive Committee approved. At the time we discussed it in the Finance Committee, the Executive Committee had such a provision in their article. It was subsequently removed which we did not know about. I would only go on to say that in this section further down we recognize the difference between general appropriation bills and other bills in that we make provision for passing such bills by item over the governor's veto. In line 1 on page 6, and in Section 16 we recognize the same difference in the sentence beginning on line 18, "Every bill except bills for appropriations shall be combined in one subject. The reverse of that obviously is that appropriation bills are not confined to one subject. Therefore, it seems only sensible and logical to recognize the fact that appropriation bills deal with necessity of a number of different subjects. So why not allow for an item veto and then allow for passage item by item.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I think Mr. White's amendment is all right in one respect, but I don't believe in another respect that it is within the province of the governor to do so. I think he should be allowed to a right to veto an item in an appropriation bill, but I do not believe he should be entitled to the right to amend, because when he amends he usurps the prerogatives of the legislature, because the legislator is the only person who has the right to amendment of such. He could send it back, he could veto that and with a message of why he did veto it, and if it was amended to such and such figure then the legislature would possibly go along with it if you show good reason, but I don't think he should have the prerogatives of the legislature and amend an appropriation act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?"

SWEENEY: May we have it read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: (Section 15, page 5, line 17, after the period insert the following sentence: `The governor may veto appropriation bills by item, by striking or reducing specific appropriations'.")

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 30 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Doogan, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McLaughlin, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 22 - Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Hermann, Hilscher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Sweeney, Taylor, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Cooper, Riley, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 30 yeas, 22 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there amendments to Section 17? Are there amendments to Section 18?

HURLEY: Mr. President, you have gone to Section 18?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have an amendment to Section 17?

HURLEY: I would like to ask a question of the Chairman. I don't know as I read thoroughly enough this matter of an emergency clause. It says, "which emergency shall be expressed in the act". Now sometime before, I think it was on the initiative and referendum we were concerned with the same subject. As I recall the present system in the legislature, the wording is something to the effect that an emergency is hereby declared to exist, when in fact in my opinion in many cases no emergency should exist at all. Is it the intention of this particular paragraph that the full emergency shall be set forth, a very simple clause shall declare an emergency?

MCCUTCHEON: It was the intention of the Committee that the actual case of the emergency shall be cited in the act and it is an endeavor to get away from this pat phrase of "an emergency is hereby declared to exist" and where in effect no emergency actually exists. That is the thing we are trying to do, is to have the actual emergency recited in the bill so that it will stand for a true emergency and not just as a matter of course by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Is it not true that the difference is, one is the emergency bill and the other one just simply an emergency clause, and in this instance it is the emergency bill?

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I can't follow Mr. McCutcheon on that because when a bill says "emergency is declared to exist", that by a declaration of the legislature is equivalent to saying something that actually does. Of course, you can follow the same reasoning of it. I know when I was in the army I used to take exception to the fact that the Congress by an act would make a gentleman out of somebody because they pinned a bar on his shoulder. They made him a gentleman by an act of Congress. Why, the legislature can still declare an emergency by an act of the legislature. I think the mere declaration is all that would be sufficient even under this present bill.

R. RIVERS: I think that is the way it should be. The present Organic Act says that an act shall not become a law until 90 days after its passage and approval unless it becomes earlier effective by the legislature. Now our legislature has used an "emergency is hereby declared to exist" and it shall become effective immediately upon passage and approval. If we leave it the way it is the legislature can declare an emergency. If we make the 90 days mandatory all the way through, then the legislature has no power to say that the act shall become effective at any shorter time. I think the legislature should be able to fix the effective date of every act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 17, or Section 18? Are there amendments to Section 19?

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question on Section 18 of Mr. McCutcheon. The last sentence there gives me pause, and I wonder if in the case of an appropriation for some special type of building in a district like a school building, if it would then have to be submitted to a referendum before they could receive the money? It looks to me like we might be injecting a lot of local processes in there on things that would be beneficial to them, where I think the only thing they might be interested in voting on would be those things that might impose an additional burden on them and they would want to measure the burden in relation to the benefits. I wanted to ask your opinion on the effects of that line.

NERLAND: Were you addressing your question to Mr. McCutcheon?

MCCUTCHEON: I will yield, Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: It is my understanding that the Legislative Committee included several sections in their proposal until such time as they were sure they were covered by other proposals. Sections 19 and 20 are covered in the finance proposal. Section 19 is covered in Section 7 of the finance proposal and Section 20 is covered in Section 4 of the finance proposal, and the natural assumption is that the finance proposal would be the logical position for those sections, and I don't know whether -- I will yield to you, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. Nerland, did you say that Section 18 is also included in the finance proposal?

NERLAND: No. Section 19 and Section 20 are the ones I meant to refer to.

MCCUTCHEON: Well, in answer to Mr. Rivers, the intent of the Committee was that no special legislation should apply and that in the case there was some special necessity that it should be a matter of judicial determination whether or not some existing statute could not cover the particular matter. In the case you raised I think that judicial determination would be that inasmuch as a school house is needed at this particular point, that that could be built under a blanket law as it applies to construction of public buildings. I would assume that would be the case. This last sentence is designed for protection against any differential of taxation, I believe that was the intent of our Committee.

SUNDBORG: May I ask a question of Mr. McCutcheon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Section 18, as I read it, permits local and special legislation rather than prohibits it. The title says "prohibited". What it says is that "The legislature shall pass no local or special acts in any case where general acts can be made applicable." What if a general act can't be made applicable. It would follow they could then pass local or special legislation.

MCCUTCHEON: That is true if the judiciary determined that no general law could apply, but in the event they did pass that special legislation, it would then have to be referred to referendum to the people of the area concerned.

SUNDBORG: I follow you. I think that is what the section says, but I don't think the content of the section is at all described by the title you have here.

MCCUTCHEON: I am sure that the Style and Drafting Committee could have some interest in the matter.

SUNDBORG: We will work on it.

SWEENEY: May I ask Mr. McCutcheon a question, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: In Juneau the question was brought up by someone in the gallery concerning the matter "judicial determination". They wanted to know who made the judicial determination and when, and I was unable to answer the question. It appears that you mean our judiciary. I believe Mr. McKay answered from the gallery and said the bill would be passed if the legislature had a local or special bill in the hopper, they would pass it, and the judicial determination would be made afterwards. It would have to be tested.

MCCUTCHEON: I assume it would have to have some sort of an act prior to the time, otherwise there would be no determination.

SWEENEY: I understood you just now said the bill would pass through some judicial determination before it went into the legislative hopper.

MCCUTCHEON: If the legislature set up a procedure whereby the bill would be submitted for instance, to the justices of the court, I assume that would be the case.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. McCutcheon, is it not true that this Section 18 is a verbatim statement of the recommended section in the model state constitution except for a transitory matter that I assume is taken care of in our transitory provisions?

MCCUTCHEON: This was I believe lifted verbatim from some constitution. I don't at this minute have it under my fingertips.

HELLENTHAL: I have here the model state constitution, and it is verbatim with the model state constitution.

SWEENEY: May I have an answer as to who makes the judicial determination?

HELLENTHAL: The court.

SWEENEY: Our court after the bill has been enacted?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

JOHNSON: Just a point of inquiry of the Chairman. Was it the Committee's intent when they included a section of this kind to generally prohibit the passage of local and special legislation? Do you believe that that objective is guaranteed by this section as it is presently written?

MCCUTCHEON: Unfortunately, not being an attorney I could not tell you.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe there should be -

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing before us.

TAYLOR: I am going to put something before us. I am going to move that the last sentence of Section 18 be stricken, and I ask unanimous consent.

ROBERTSON: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor asks unanimous consent that the last sentence of Section 18 be stricken. Is there objection?

SMITH: I object.

TAYLOR: I so move. I would like to speak briefly. A local act of the legislature can consist of many things. It might be providing for the construction of a bridge in a particular area. It might be providing for a road maybe to connect two other roads or to give access and egress to a particular area, and they are too numerous to mention. Now, if the proper representation is made to the legislature that this bridge should be built or this access road should be built, or this or that should be done, that is strictly a local improvement, which the people of the district cannot do themselves, and if there is a sufficient showing as to the necessity of having this improvement put in, if the legislature then passes a bill maybe to provide some money and provide for the Road Commission or the Bureau of Public Roads or whoever is to do this work, I cannot see why there should be approval of a majority of the qualified voters of the area of the district to be affected. This is a little bit confusing or a little bit hard to understand as to what district. Now say we were going to build a short road or a small bridge that had to be built. Now where would you hold the vote? Would it be in the entire Fourth Division or the Third Division? Would it be in the precinct in which that improvement is made or would it be within half a mile of where the improvement is going to be put in? Or would it be a Territorial-wide vote as to whether or not you were going to build a bridge that maybe costs two or three thousand dollars or more? I cannot see any necessity for that last paragraph in there because after all when sufficient representation is made to the legislature, who are usually very reluctant to appropriate money or to authorize something that way unless a very good showing is made for the necessity of it. I cannot see why that should be in there. Now if the legislature passes the act, the people in that area can't nullify an act of the legislature. They can't repeal that act. Why would you have a vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I rise in support of Mr. Taylor's motion. I think that can only cause trouble.

SWEENEY: As I recall the Committee's thinking on it, we did not consider roads and bridges as being local or special. You could have a road and have everybody in the Territory have access to it or if it takes you off on to other places. What we had in mind were actually some rule or law for a certain group and they should not be forced to have a law without some approval. Is that right, Mr. McCutcheon?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I would like to direct a question to Mr. McCutcheon. The way I take this to mean is that it would be for example if the legislature authorizes, for the sake of something better, they authorized by law that sewer districts could be set up and built and that they would be paid for by assessments in the local area; then in that case this would give the people in that area the right. Is that part of the thought?

MCCUTCHEON: That is part of the thought. They would have to support some special project themselves that they would have an opportunity to referendum. In answer to Mr. Taylor's argument, that particular question that he brought up would come under a matter of general law. The state would have the right to build roads and bridges. It would be the administration of the state highway department or department of public works or whatever to build the bridges here or there or elsewhere. The legislature would not specifically authorize a construction of a bridge here. The money would be appropriated in a lump sum and because of their budget would have established these various projects.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I might mention here that under the local government article we have one section that covers legislative acts that should not become effective, that is increasing expenditures, unless approved by the local government. I think this section in the legislative article is much broader, but possibly ours could cover it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon one question. What was the Committee's understanding of a special act?

MCCUTCHEON: I think Mr. McNealy has made it very plain that to create a special act, to create a law to establish a certain district in this particular area, that is a special act applying only to this area, an area that must support this thing.

BUCKALEW: That is not my understanding of a special act. That is the reason I asked.

HINCKEL: I was on the Committee, and it was my understanding in the Committee regarding a special act that it would be something that benefited or pertained to a special group of people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: In looking the sentence over which is sought to be stricken by the amendment, my opinion, for what it may be worth, is that the legislature could still provide for referendums on local measures as they passed them, and it occurs to me that the sentence as it occurs here could be construed much wider than that and cause some detrimental effect. I therefore feel that I shall vote for the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the delegates will excuse me, Delegate Peratrovich will please take the Chair.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I think that the sentence as stated in here in this general prohibition of local and special legislation is designed primarily to eliminate the abuses that have taken place in so many states where local and special legislation have taken place. A lot of those have been to the effect for example, any city located on the Chena River may not license motor vehicles or any city located along such and such parallel must pave streets to a certain width. I am not making those up. If you go through the books you will find plenty of such statutes on the books in lots of states. I think that kind of statutes are to the detriment of the local population or of any group and should not be allowed, and if they have to take place, let the people vote on them. The same thing, if this is something of special benefit. I think that should be restricted, and I think we should leave this as it is.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I wonder if there could not be an amendment worked out so it would only be referred to them where it would involve a local budget. It seems like some are arguing for striking it because it just involves a lot of machinery thrown into gear when they already want the bill. I just suggest this.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, in answering Mr. McCutcheon's attempted interpretation of this act, I say that the particular situation as cited by Mr. McNealy and concurred in by Mr. McCutcheon, like a sewer improvement districts in Alaska to the formation of them and their powers and their duties and their obligations. It is a general act they would come under, a general law to which all sewer improvement districts from Ketchikan to Point Barrow would have to follow, and as I see it here, that particular sentence in there is going to lead to hopeless confusion as to what is a local act unless it is spelled out. It is confusing and ambiguous and I don't believe in its present form, regardless of what the Committee was attempting to bring before this Convention, should pass until it is radically changed to give us a good idea about what it is all about.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: This is a hot potato, this whole matter of local and special legislation. If we wanted to take off on it, we could spend a week on this. There is no question as to what is a local or special act. They are both particular acts as opposed to general acts. One is a particular act based on localities. The other is a particular act based on specific persons or specific problems. Now the second sentence again is a matter of compromise. This was compromised in the model state constitution, wise compromise. The second sentence tends to prohibit the practice of back scratching, logrolling. In other words, you vote for my local act and I will vote for your local act, and this tends to restrict that practice, which is generally considered unhealthy. It puts it up to a majority of the people affected. There is nothing wrong with that. No abuses can be taken of that, and with that in view in this case I would certainly bow to the weight of the professors, you might say, and the students of government.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I rise once more. Mr. Victor Rivers pointed out that many special acts and most special acts are for the benefit of a particular locality in case of disaster or this or that, and I can't see making people vote on something that they want and that is for their own good. The legislature does not go around passing special acts and butting into local affairs anyway unless they are asked to, and so unless these referendums, unless modified, will be detrimental to their budget, this is not good.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Barr.

BARR: There are several kinds of special acts. A special act may refer to a particular locality, and if it should be an emergency such as relief of suffering in certain sections, we would simply not want to have it go before the people before it is approved. It would be too late. There is another type of special act which is for the benefit of certain persons. I have seen several acts passed to reimburse a certain person in money he had put out of his own pocket for the benefit of the state. I don't believe that should go to referendum, but I do believe that it should be passed by a fairly large vote in each house to prevent its abuse, so I am in favor of striking this.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I still can't get away from the thought here, and I don't think it should be overlooked, that is, if the legislature passes a bill and authorizes, say sanitation district and the state agrees that they will pay half of the cost if the community will pay the other half. Let's leave out boroughs of the first class, but we get over into a borough of a third class there or one that is not organized, and they say they have set up sanitation districts in the village and the state would pay half of the cost of setting up the sanitation district, then I think these people in the village who are going to have to pay the other half, I think they should have the right to vote whether or not they want to pay the other half. Maybe some amendment or some little change is needed, but I believe that is the intent, and I don't think that the state should be able to come out and say, "You must form a district and you must pay for it here." If the people are going to have to pay for something within a district, they should have the right to vote on it, because it affects the taxpayers in that local area.

TAYLOR: I call for the previous question.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear a second on that?

BARR: I second it.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All in favor of ordering the previous question signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". So ordered. Will the Secretary state the motion please.

CHIEF CLERK: "The last sentence of Section 18 be stricken."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: All those in favor of the question will say "aye", all contrary "no". The "noes" have it.

TAYLOR: Roll call.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: I have already made a ruling and it is the opinion of the Chair that the "noes" should have it.

TAYLOR: I appeal the ruling of the Chair.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The question is now, "Shall the ruling of the Chair be sustained?"

BARR: Would the Chair tell me, the ruling is that you cannot call for a roll call after the vote is announced? What does that mean after it has been announced? If the call is made while it is being announced, while the President is in the middle of his sentence, has it been announced?

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair would hold that is correct there. I think Mr. Taylor is perfectly in order in his appealing the decision of the Chair, so the question now is, "Shall the Chair be sustained in his ruling?"

TAYLOR: Roll call.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Secretary will call the roll on that please.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time with the following result:

Yeas: 43 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 5 - Boswell, Laws, Metcalf, Robertson, Taylor.

Absent: 6 - Cooper, Marston, Riley, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Mr. President.

Abstain: 1 - Mr. Peratrovich.)

CHIEF CLERK: 43 yeas, 5 nays, and 6 absent and 1 abstaining.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: So the Chair has been sustained in his ruling. Are there any further amendments to Section 18?

R. RIVERS: I have one.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: The Chief Clerk may read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 7, line 8, after the word 'act' insert the following: 'calling for use of funds to be appropriated by a political subdivision'."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of that proposed amendment.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Do I hear a second?

LONDBORG: I second the motion.

SWEENEY: May we have it read just once more?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 7, line 8. after the word 'act' insert the following: 'calling for use of funds to be appropriated by a political subdivision'."

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: The purpose, Mr. President and members, that according to the explanation of the Committee, the object of calling for a vote on a local act which affected the people in the local district was to protect them against having the state tell them that they had to put money of their own to match funds without having a referendum on these matching programs with the state. It is so broad now they would have to take a referendum as to whether they could accept a benefit from the state, and I know that's not our intention. Where it would affect the expenditure of local funds, then, of course our thinking is that they should require a vote of the people in that local area, so what I have said here is that no local act involving appropriations of money by political subdivision, and that is the kind of area you are talking about, it is either a city or a borough, shall become the law without that referendum. I hope I made myself clear.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, as I see the proposed amendment it does limit the ability to prohibit the legislature to make local laws affecting only appropriations and requiring that vote of approval. I have before me the Constitution of California which in Article 4, Section 25, prohibits certain special acts, and I think that perhaps we have forgotten some local acts that might vitally affect a community, affecting the fees or salary of any officers. That is prohibited in California, they detail it. In substance the legislature could pass a local act changing the fees of officers in one specific community without the approval of the community. They could provide for the management of common schools. The legislature theoretically then could provide for the management, direct management of certain common schools in an independent school district, let us say Fairbanks or Anchorage, changing county seats, in this case it would be borough seats, specifically saying in so and so borough that seat could be changed; providing for conducting elections or designating the places of voting except on organization of our counties. In other words, they could specifically provide the polling places without the approval of the local areas; regulating county and township business or the election of county and township officers, specifically providing that in x, y, or z borough that the conduct of business should be such and such, as different from the stated laws; authorizing the laying out, the opening, altering, maintaining highways, roads, alleys, parks, cemeteries and graveyards, or public grounds. That could specifically apply to a local community. The legislature could without the consent of that community specifically provide for the laying out of the streets in the community. I think I express an opinion neither way, but I think the Convention should consider whether or not they are giving the legislature by indirection that express power to exercise all of those local powers without the consent of the local people vitally affected by it.

BUCKALEW: Mr. McLaughlin, is it your interpretation that the way the Committee has drawn the act that it prohibits, as I understand it, the legislature from usurping any of the local discretion of any of the political subdivisions on any question, the way it is drawn now by the Committee, and Mr. Rivers' amendment would then have the effect of limiting it.

R. RIVERS: I was going to ask Mr. McLaughlin if what he said appeared to be in point with my amendment. My amendment would require voting only where it involved the expenditure of local funds and that would leave it open for the legislature to handle all these other things without the consent of the community. Do you support my amendment?

MCLAUGHLIN: I don't know yet. I merely pointed out what the effect of it would be.

R. RIVERS: The effect of this situation now is that they can't get by with any local law without a referendum.

MCLAUGHLIN: For your information, Local Government I believe in their proposal has a similar provision, somewhat similar to yours in the proposal that they withdrew from the floor.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: In explanation, the way it now stands, it is going to call for an election on every little thing affecting local government, such as Mr. McLaughlin just outlined for us, and he says that he possibly wants to see it reserved to the state, to pass certain local laws without making it necessary to go to the voters in the locality, and he just listed a whole lot of things that the states do in the way of local laws without having to take a referendum. The way the thing is set now it says no local act shall take effect until approved by the voters in the district. I am trying to limit it a little bit and say that no local act involving expenditures of local funds shall take effect until the voters in the district have approved it. You see what I mean.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Could it be that the good people of Juneau would have to approve the moving of the capital were that left to the legislature?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Yes.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 1:30 p.m.

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT: If there is no objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there any communications?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, a telegram from Delegate Bartlett. "Please allow me to congratulate the Convention for splendid wire to President. It constitutes temperate, yet eloquent presentation of aspirations of Alaska's people for statehood. I shall distribute it immediately and widely in accordance with your request."

PRESIDENT EGAN: It may be filed.

CHIEF CLERK: Letter from Gray Tilly, Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, to all men of the Constitutional Convention, an invitation to a no-host dinner at the Travelers Inn, Saturday evening, January 14, 7:00 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to ask whether the word "men" also includes women. Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would like to draw the attention of the body here

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask the floor on a question of personal privilege?

KILCHER: No, Mr. President, I think there is something that should be dealt with on the floor and also be part of the record. Our stenotypist isn't here by the way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The stenotypist was having trouble with her machine. However, she will take the proceedings from the tape, I hope. Mr. Kilcher, if there is no objection, you may have the floor.

KILCHER: I am sorry that at this time something that has to be brought up that I hoped would not have to come before the body. I have here an issue of the Anchorage Daily Times of January 7, which in my opinion, contains a very bad example, a good example rather, of an irresponsible press, and I would like to know the opinion of this body what in such a case, could be done, if possibly we should not consider press representatives as lobbyists and as such, they should be possibly registered.

COOPER: Mr. President, a point of order. I don't know just exactly what my legal stand is on this, or any other stand that I might have, but I do feel that the delegate should be on the floor on the standpoint of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair asked if there was objection to him having the floor, and at that time there was no objection. Of course it is up to you.

COOPER: At that time, Mr. President, the issue was not clear.

HARRIS: I request a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher has the floor.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I ask for the floor on a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher asks for the floor on a point of personal privilege.

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent that we permit the tape to run while Mr. Kilcher makes his forthcoming statement. I ask that the rules be suspended.

BARR: I object.

BUCKALEW: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

SUNDBORG: I move that we permit the tape to run while Mr. Kilcher makes his statement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the tape be permitted to run while Mr. Kilcher makes his statement under a question of personal privilege?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll. The motion is not debatable, Mr. Barr, the motion to suspend the rules. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 34 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Harris, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 17 - Barr, Cooper, Davis, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Johnson, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, Marston, Metcalf, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson.

Absent: 4 - Hilscher, Hurley, Rosswog, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 34 yeas, 17 nays and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the rules have been suspended and the tape will be permitted to run while Mr. Kilcher has the floor on point of personal privilege. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Point of order. The suspension of the rules, if I am correct, requires 37 affirmative votes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, if I'm not mistaken, there is no rule that requires suspension. This is simply a resolution and agreement that was adopted early in the session by the members. I don't think you will find anything in the rules that requires suspension on this point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was under the impression that we had adopted a portion of the rules on this point. The Chair stands corrected. Mr. Barr.

BARR: If it's not a question of the suspension of the rules, then I demand to be heard on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr is entitled to be heard then.

MARSTON: May I have the same privilege then, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you're recognized, Mr. Marston. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I'm not acquainted with all the details of what Mr. Kilcher is going to say, but I have some general knowledge of his complaint and I sympathize with him, but I don't believe that this body should take sides in any controversy, especially before we know that that controversy is, or what the complaint is. If any one person here feels that he has been maligned or libeled or what not, I believe that is up to him, and he can take such action as he sees fit. If the whole body were libeled, then that is a different matter, and I believe that he should be allowed the privilege of the floor to tell us what it is about, but it should not be publicized.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I want to explain my vote. I voted "no" because I wanted to know what the program matter was, I might be for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, do you wish to answer that question?

KILCHER: Mr. President, I am sorry but I think I started out the wrong way in saying what I had to say. I had intended to read the short article in question and then let the delegates decide for themselves if I had a point. Mr. Barr, my saying here is to ask two or three committee chairmen questions that have to do with this. I don't intend to have the Convention sit in judgment about anything whatever. I intend to ask a couple of questions. This is the reason. On these answers, I would like to have on the record, that is all. I wanted substantial answers as to what happened in a committee, that is all, and I didn't want to argue the subject matter itself, neither did I intend to state my intentions, what I intend to do later.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I request a one-minute recess, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will stand at recess for one minute, but Mr. Kilcher has the floor.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I don't intend to read the whole article in this paper because all of you are conversant with the subject matter. There is only one paragraph I would like to read and before I do that I will state here that it is not Mrs. Douthit who is responsible for this article as far as I understand. The paragraph in question reads as follows: "Thomas Harris of Valdez made a motion to restore the word 'Almighty' before the word 'God' as it was in the original proposal. Yule Kilcher of Homer, who has told friends he is an atheist, argued against it. He said the preamble without the word 'Almighty' is more acceptable to the various shades of religious belief. During committee sessions he had argued strongly against any mention of God." Now I would like to state here that I have not argued in any committee against the mention of God, and also, I have never told anybody, least of all any friends, that I am an atheist, which I am definitely not. Thank you. I will stand corrected by any of the committees or committee members, if what I said is wrong.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us Section 18, and there is a pending amendment. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 7, line 8, after the word 'act' insert the following: 'calling for use of funds to be appropriated by a political subdivision'."

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

RILEY: Mr. President, this is just to serve notice that I will refrain from voting, not having heard any of the discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 18?

If not, are there amendments to Section 19? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: I move and ask unanimous consent that Section 19 be stricken and that the same subject matter be taken up when we arrive at the finance proposal under Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Nerland's unanimous consent request. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have a question, Mr. President. Would you mind reading the Section 7 that you refer to?

NERLAND: Section 7 in the finance proposal reads as follows: "Taxation for public purpose. No tax shall be levied or appropriation of public money made or public property transferred, nor shall the public credit be used, except for a public purpose."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Nerland's unanimous consent request. If not, Section 19 is ordered deleted from this proposal. Are there amendments to Section 20? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: I will move and ask unanimous consent that Section 20 be stricken, and taken up in the finance proposal under the provisions of Section 1 and part of Section 4, and with the permission of the Chair, I will read those sections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

NERLAND: Section 1 of the finance proposal reads, "The power of taxation shall never be surrendered; and shall never be suspended or contracted away, except as provided herein." That is probably the specific part of the proposal that refers to the exact thing that the Legislative Committee had in mind, I believe. It is my understanding that their intention in Section 20 is to prohibit the remission or reduction or settlement at a lesser figure of any delinquent taxes or things of that nature, and it was certainly the intention of the Finance Committee that such things be prohibited by the first section when we said, "The power of taxation shall never be surrendered".

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Nerland's unanimous consent request. Is there objection?

HINCKEL: I object.

NERLAND: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland so moves, Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I object merely for purpose of information. It doesn't seem to me that the section in the finance article covers the situation as completely as we intended to cover it in Section 20. It is quite possible when we come to his section in the finance article that we could amend his to cover all of these things, but of course I am not an attorney and maybe some of the attorneys here could state whether or not the simple verbiage as used in the taxation article does do all the things that we would do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, would you care to answer that?

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hinckel, I think it does far more than you ever intended to do and I think it would be advisable in terms of time if we do, at the moment, delete it and then possibly you might want to add your amendments when it comes up on the hearing on the taxation proposal.

HINCKEL: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The objection to the unanimous consent request has been withdrawn. Is there objection to Mr. Nerland's unanimous consent request that Section 20 be deleted from the proposal? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Just an inquiry, Mr. President. If we approve this unanimous consent request, will there be any foreclosing on the right to further amend the articles as they appear in the finance section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you mean, for instance, would this same wording be used?

JOHNSON: Yes, or suppose that you wanted to add some words that now appear in Section 19, to Section 7?

PRESIDENT EGAN: As far as the Chair is concerned there would be no objection under the discussion that has been held here on the subject.

NERLAND: It certainly isn't our intention to exclude it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection then, Section 20 is ordered deleted from the proposal. Are there amendments to Section 21? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to request that the Chairman of the Committee explain the intent of the first sentence of the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, would you care to explain the intent of the section? Section 21.

MCCUTCHEON: The intent of that sentence in Section 21 is that in the event, for one reason or another, the legislature has had a bill under consideration, and the bill fails of passage, that the governor may take this bill, write into it any of the amendments that have been under consideration on the floor of either house of the legislature, and submit the bill, to referendum to the people to see whether or not they should make the bill into law.

V. FISCHER: May I address a question directly to Mr. McCutcheon?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

V. FISCHER: It seems to me that this brings the governor very directly, and possibly too much so, into the legislative process. He can have one senator or one representative introduce a bill and even if he can't get two votes in the legislature, he can put the measure before the people. I have an amendment drawn up to authorize the governor -- I'll read it. "Any bill which passes one house of the legislature but fails to pass the other before the end of the session, may be submitted to referendum by order of the governor." Do you feel that something along those lines would be unreasonable to require passage by at least one house of the legislature?

MCCUTCHEON: The terminology is taken directly out of the model constitution. The point is that at the time our Committee was drafting this particular section, or considering it I should say, there was some doubt in my mind, and I think in the minds of others on our Committee, that there may not be an initiative device in the constitution. With the initiative device, this certainly may be stricken in toto. You do have initiative protection. This device was placed in the legislative article in the event that there was no initiative. It was a device that was designed to get good legislation out before public opinion to react on, but since there is an initiative device, the public can take any bill that is offered in the legislature and put it as an initiative measure.

V. FISCHER: With an initiative then, you don't think it would be too restrictive if there were a requirement that at least one house of the legislature passed the measure before it could be put by the governor onto the ballot?

MCCUTCHEON: My observation is Mr. Fischer, that if you're going to fiddle with it, strike the whole sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 21? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Taking Mr. McCutcheon's suggestion and word, that if this article is unnecessary, if it is already cured by initiative, why I'll make a motion to strike Section 21 because it is superfluous.

HELLENTHAL: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 21 be deleted from the proposal. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment "will" signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The ayes have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Section 21 is ordered stricken from the proposal. Are there amendments to Section 22?? Miss Awes.

AWES: Section 22 deals with freedom of religion which is a matter for the bill of rights. First I should say, I move that Section 22 be stricken and I ask unanimous consent. This is a matter for the bill of rights and it was taken care of in the bill of rights, so I think it is a dead issue.

MCCUTCHEON: I object. I would like to have the Chairman of the Bill of Rights Committee read the section of the bill of rights that covers this particular matter.

AWES: Section 5 of the bill of rights: "No law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you so move the deletion, Miss Awes?

AWES: I move the deletion and ask unanimous consent.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. Chairman, I'll raise objection. It appears to me that the terminology of this section is better than the one in the bill of rights. I'll withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of Miss Awes? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered and Section 22 has been stricken from the proposal. Are there amendments to Section 23? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President. I move that Section 23 be stricken from this article and referred to the Committee on Ordinances and Transitional Measures.

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith moves, Mr. Hellenthal seconds the motion that Section 23 be deleted from this proposal and submitted to the Committee on Ordinances.

V. RIVERS: I don't like the word "stricken" Mr. President. In that case, I think "suspended for consideration" would be the proper terminology.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, your exception is well taken, and in this case, the word "stricken" should not be used. However, it has to be stricken from this, or deleted.

SMITH: Mr. President, I will defer to any amendment necessary to clear that matter up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to make a brief statement on this. I don't know whether I would be out of order, but when this subject is considered at some later date, which I understand is the intent of the body, I would like to call attention to the very last statement of the section. It says, "Nothing in this section shall prevent this state from accepting any payments in lieu of taxes that may be authorized by the Congress." I know that some of the other articles that pertain to this subject do not say that and I think it is very important, and I asked that it be put in there and I would like to see it stay in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that Section 23 be deleted from the proposal. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, I would like to make an amendment to the amendment. My amendment is that, line 8, "page 9 of Section 23, after the semicolon following "alienation the balance of the section be taken up under Section 5 of the Finance Committee proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That sort of compounds the issue, Mr. Nerland. Inasmuch as one is asking to become an ordinance and one to go to a committee Mr. Gray, your point of order?

GRAY: I believe that as long as we're deleting the measure, any section is open to whatever group they want to pick up. If we just delete the measure, Mr. Nerland can pick up his half and Mr. Smith can pick up his half.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. You would not be precluded in offering any part of this section as an ordinance, nor would

Mr. Nerland, if he so desired later, be precluded from offering it as an amendment to some section in the finance article.

NERLAND: What I was particularly concerned about was that I assume that the finance proposal will come up before we consider any ordinance proposals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, if I might say just another word, this is actually one of those requirements of the enabling act. This section is required to go into the constitution by the latest enabling act. If this wording had been taken verbatim from those enabling acts, and if I recall correctly, the Committee on Ordinances and Transitional Measures was the committee which was made responsible to see that all those requirements were met and that was the reason why I had moved that this be referred to that committee. Now I think this committee can take the matter up with any other committee, whether it be Finance, Style and Drafting, or any other committee, to determine what committee shall consider it and where it shall go.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, in view of the fact that this language is required, at least under the present enabling act bill, and since we have agreed generally all along here that we would have to adopt that language as part of the constitution, it seems to me we might well consider it here and adopt it and then let Style and Drafting place it where it belongs in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, we do have to consider this, that is true, but this section deals with two subjects. Now for instance, the latter half deals with taxation, purely with taxation, and the Taxation Committee has considered that question much more thoroughly than the Legislative Committee I would imagine, and I don't believe it has any connection with legislative matters other than to say they "shall not pass such and such a law". It seems to me that the Legislative Committee is supposed to plan a legislature and provide for the elections, terms of office, etc., and provide for the procedure perhaps, but when it comes to setting out specific laws they can make and cannot make and that sort of thing, and treating with these transitional measures, it seems to me they belong in other committees, it just wouldn't look right in here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The only question before the house at this time is, are we going to take this section out of the article or are we not. I would like to call the question if anybody is interested in voting on the subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: This article belongs right where it is, and I'll show you why it's necessary. This is a restriction upon the legislative power of the State of Alaska. The restrictive phrase might be in the wrong place, but if you will read down, it means that no legislative act by the State of Alaska shall be taken thereon. That means that they shall not attempt to tax the matter that Congress says they cannot tax. They have put in here something which the enabling act says we have to put in and what they are putting in there is a restraint upon a legislative act and so the legislative article should be the one that contains that. I think if the Committee had taken this phrase, that the State of Alaska shall pass no act restricting these matters that touch in on this particular section, I don't think anybody here would have claimed that it was anything but a legislative act that belonged in here. It was just phrased wrong, because if it said the legislature can do this, why naturally they would assume and agree that it was a legislative act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I agree with Mr. Taylor that this is a restriction upon the legislature, but I think probably two-thirds of the constitution poses restrictions upon the legislature. The purpose of this article is to organize, set up the structure of the legislature and set forth its functions and I think that, well for instance, the latter half of this deals with taxation and I think it can be much better viewed when you have the whole of taxation and finance before you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, the phrase, "and no legislative act by the State of Alaska shall be taken thereon on lines 15 and 16 was put in by our Committee and not a portion out of the enabling act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross.

CROSS: Mr. President, point of information. If we vote this language down here, can we adopt it later on less than a two-thirds vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Later in some other proposal, yes, Mr. Cross. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to endorse the view of

Mr. Davis that whether this belongs here or not, it is language which Congress has said we shall have in our constitution. If that is true, why not consider it here. We are going to have to put it in anyway, and Style and Drafting is anyway going to arrange how things appear in the constitution. Let's get it over with and not refer it to some other committee. We have it in front of us and we have no choice but to adopt it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to say one more thing and it will be very short. This may be a matter for inclusion in the Legislative Article, but other constitutions insofar as I know have not handled it that way. They have, in fact, handled it as an ordinance. I have before me, four state constitutions containing almost identical language and in its entirety, it is handled as an ordinance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Section 23 be deleted from this proposal and referred to the Committee on Ordinances?" All those in favor of adoption of the proposed amendment shall signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 29 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 24 - Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, Hermann, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh.

Absent: 2 - Hilscher, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 29 ayes, 24 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Just in the interest of saving time, I would like to repeat a recommendation of the Rules Committee that was adopted the other evening and in connection with which I received only one committee question so far, and that is that all committee chairman, as they anticipate or foresee conflicts, notify the Rules Committee so that Rules in turn may recommend assignments to other committees so that the proper committee, in the event of conflict and I think we might thereby save some time-consuming discussion on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information, Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Through the Chair then, would it be permissible for the Committee on Ordinances to contact the Rules Committee with reference to transferring a portion of this to the Taxation and Finance Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, actually, with what we have just done here, it probably would be in order that the Chairman of the Taxation Committee and the Chairman of the Ordinance Committee get together and decide how this will be brought up later, because we, in effect, with the adoption of this original amendment, carried Mr. Nerland's proposed amendment to the amendment with it and under this circumstance, why, if those two chairmen can get together and resolve the question as to when it will be brought up again, would solve the issue. Are there amendments to Section 24? Mr. Barr.

BARR: This is a short section and the language is the same as that in the Taxation Committee's report. Would it be in order to ask that that be referred to the Rules Committee to see which report it should be considered under?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Chairman, without objection from members of the Rules Committee, I might state that that question has been referred to us by the Finance Committee, and, if I may presume to speak for the rest of the Rules Committee, I would feel it should be assigned to Finance and, without objection from the other members, I so recommend to the body that Section 24 be referred to Finance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Deleted from this proposal and referred to Finance?

RILEY: Yes.

BARR: Is that a motion, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Yes, I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that Section 24 be deleted from this proposal and assigned to the Finance Committee for consideration. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Section 25, are there amendments to Section 25? Oh that was held over. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 5? The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment that was held over.

CHIEF CLERK: This is Mr. V. Rivers' amendment. "Section 8, page 3, line 14, add the following at the end of the section: 'If the two houses cannot agree on the time of adjournment, the governor may, on the same being certified to him by one of the houses adjourn the legislature, subject to the provisions of Section 9 hereof.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was that particular amendment moved and seconded, was it moved and seconded that the amendment be adopted?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes it was.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Well, I discussed this at some length so unless there are some questions in regard to it, I will be glad to try and answer any questions. I think that I have covered the point that I feel it is necessary in the case of a continuing legislature without a set period of time for adjourning, that there should be such a clause in this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted.

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

RILEY: Mr. President, are we going to start with Section 1 then and go right through?

PRESIDENT EGAN: I think it would be best if the Chair called for amendments to Section 1. Are there further amendments to Section 1? Section 2? Section 3? The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, page 2, line 1, strike the words, '2 years' and insert in lieu thereof the following: 'four years, and one-half of the members shall be elected each two years.'"

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard to the unanimous consent request. Is there a second?

COGHILL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill seconds the motion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I think that the matter of the amendment is self-evident to all the body. It would make the terms of the house four years, half of them would be elected every two years, and my basis of presenting this amendment is that I feel that the extra session, the extra two sessions that would come under this legislative group by the reason of having four years would pay off in the value of the experience they receive and also I feel that there is too drastic a change in the two-party system when you have the one complete swing to the other complete swing. We've had two examples of it from 1953 to 1955 and whether we like it or not, the two-party system is an essential part of our government and I feel that a reasonably strong and vocal opposition, whether it be of either political faith, renders the output of general legislation better than if you have an absolute majority in one party and in both houses. It seems to me that it is essential to the operation of good two-party system of government that the opposition not always be changed en masse. I went through some of the legislatures in the states last February, Washington State, Oregon State and Utah State legislatures and I observed their rosters and they had their rosters prepared in such a way that you could tell how many terms they had had in the legislature and I found that the average of those states, that about one-third of them had been there from three to five sessions, another third had been there from one to two sessions and the other third was new. Now under those circumstances where they have a fairly politically mature group always sitting in both houses, you don't have the disadvantage of a drastic swing, but up here, we don't have a great tier of experienced legislators to draw from and it seems to me that if we could retain the value in the house of representatives of those first two sessions for another two sessions, that we have gained substantially in the stability of our governing body. For that reason, in all sincerity, I present this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would like to speak on this amendment just for a second. I'd be embarrassed to vote against it because nothing that has come out of this committee report has been adopted by the Convention and I think this particular section is all right and we have fiddled, as Mr. McCutcheon has said, with this proposal to where it doesn't look like anything that came out of the Committee anyway, and I'm just tired of fiddling with it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I am not embarrassed in any way, shape or form about our committee proposal. We put in our work and if it is the desire of the body, and apparently it is, to hack away at it, they have done so. However, on the term of the members of the house of representatives, in being four years with half elected every two years, it was the unanimous decision in the Committee, and the understanding was that the house of representatives is the closest connected body to the people, most subjected to the will of the people in that they are elected every two years and that if the people desire this complete change which was mentioned, then it is their will, it is their right to express themselves to that extent. Inasmuch as the house of representatives will probably have somewhere in the number of 40, a good majority of the house will be as elected every two years, will be incumbents or certainly will be representatives that will have had some experience, so I don't think that is too much of an argument in favor of a four-year term. I believe the people have the right to electing their representatives, at least in one house, every two years in its entirety.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I can't help but favor the Committee's proposal here in this respect, except, maybe, for one point. It would prorate the campaign expenses over four years instead of two years to get in, but aside from that, it seems to me that they should be subject to recall by having to run for election if they don't prove out the first two years. We have heard so much said that the house is where they get started and mature and so on and so forth, and it seems that if they show signs that they are not going to mature and you see that after two sessions, now they'll be meeting every year instead of every other year certainly they ought to stand for re-election after two years of perhaps, bad legislative work.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I stand in support of the amendment from the standpoint that it is in the best interest of the new State of Alaska, for which we are bringing about this legislature, and in effect, it would allow the house of representatives to have an organized group at all times. We wouldn't have the radical change. As a member of the 1953 legislature, I think there were only three members of that body that came back from the 1951 and the legislative group were pretty well uninformed as to procedures and practices and this would not allow a radical change to that point and it would allow the continuance of legislative practice, with the people getting a much better representation out of their representatives with this plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I believe this is an important subject. This is part of your basic law and we shouldn't take it lightly. This is distinctly the voice of the people. One reason you see this enormous change in the First Division is the voice of the people. That is the importance of the thing. Now the house has a shortage every year, due to two main reasons and you're going to get hooked with them. One is a person who has run and he has found out he is not interested in it, he doesn't want any more of it. You've heard it yourself, "I'll never be a part of the legislature again." Something due to his general attitude of living, some can keep away from that type of political organization, and so you have this man who doesn't want any part and parcel of the legislature. There is no way to get out, he has to serve four years. The other one that doesn't show up is the one that the people have turned down. And before you vote on this or accept it, I should say, serious consideration should be given and I should like to hear more debate on this subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President. I think one thing we shouldn't lose sight of and that is we are going to elect our governor. And when the sentiment changes from one party to another, the governor is going to be a part of the new administration. He is going to have half the senate left over who may be completely opposed to his policy. I don't believe he should be faced with the possibility of having half of the house of representatives also opposed to the policies that he wants to inaugurate when he comes into office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, for what it may be worth, I note in 1950 that four states had four-year terms for their house members -- Alabama, Louisiana, Maryland, and Mississippi.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I agree with Mr. Gray that this subject is too important to pass over without making a comment or two, and this may be one of the very few amendments I will support. If I support it at all, it would only be for this purpose and I think every delegate here who has served in the legislature will agree with me on this point and that is that we have certain parliamentary rules and procedures that we are using here in the Convention but these rules here are practically child's play with the parliamentary procedures that go on in the legislature. When I went to the house of representatives, I thought with a good many years of background as an attorney and different organizations. I thought I knew something about parliamentary rules and it took me with that background, and that advantage and having lobbied and having appeared before bodies over a good many years, both in Territorial and Federal Congress, it took me the first 40 days before I knew what was going on there. They slid bills under me and through me and around me and I was in an awful mess. I voted for things that afterwards, towards the end of the session, I wondered how I ever got myself in that position that I got there, and it was simply on account of ignorance, and I might go a little further and say that during the full 60-day session that there were some that ended up at the end of 60 days that still didn't know what had gone on. This isn't foolishness. I believe that every member that has served in this Territorial legislature will agree that if you're reasonably fast on your feet you'll pick up something of what is going on in 30 days, and be able to more or less compete and get a bill through yourself once in a while, and I can see the advantage of this in gaining the experience. Now, we can put it this way, however, that the taxpayer invests a lot of money in this legislator going down there and spends a lot of money on him while he is there, then if he doesn't come back again, then that has been lost. If he chooses not to run or if the voters turn him down, why that is their prerogative. The only thing I can see under the bill as we have it here is at least he should be efficient the second year of his term.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I am a little surprised at Mr. McNealy's comment on the last legislature. I was in the last legislature and I got the impression that Mr. McNealy had his feet on the ground the first two or three days. There might have been other causes, but I think he had his feet on the ground and knew what was going on. Now, I think it should be just like it is, because we have a two-party system and the people, as Mr. Coghill says turned them all out in 1953 and in the 1955 session, I think they turned them all out but one, but the party that was in has the responsibility for a legislative program. Now, you're going to have half of them held over from the preceding year, and even though the people come in and vote 20 members of the same party in, the holdovers are going to block any legislative program, and I think it's going to destroy the will of the people to express their desires through their elected legislators, because the people that they elect won't be able to carry out their legislative program because of the holdovers. Now, you've got enough holdovers in the senate to give some stability to the legislature. You've got a two-house system, and there is one more thing I want to point out. I think this is important somewhat, but I think it is overly stressed. I don't think this prior experience is as important as some of the old legislators will have you believe. Now, I can look around this assembly and see people who have never served in the legislature and I can frankly admit that a lot of them are doing a lot better job than I am, and I have served in the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I feel impelled to call to the attention of the assembly here that our Territorial legislature as we have known it would permit a legislator to serve only one session in the house. He served a two-year period but chances are that he served only one session in the house in that term. Under the article as we have designed it here, there will be a session each year so that actually he will serve two sessions in a house, possibly more if there are special sessions, so that as we get into the legislature, we will find that a little different situation exists and that the density of legislators will be a little deeper after we get to be a state than it is right now, so I would say that, while the four-year amendment may have some merit, I don't think it is quite as important in our new state as it would have been under the Territory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, it appears to me that the situation in the state will be a little different in another respect, also. I think that in the past any violent fluctuations that we have had in the membership of our legislature have been in part attributable to reaction to national trend and reaction to the administration's prime attitude towards Alaska. I think under statehood we will be much more concerned with our own affairs and that if the people will be inclined to turn out an entire house, it would be more in on the grounds that that house had not been conducting Alaska's affairs properly and so I am in favor of retaining the present committee proposal.

PRESIDENT .EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I ask Mr. McCutcheon a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

METCALF: Isn't the term of the house of representatives in the national Congress two years?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes.

METCALF: It seems to me if you make this four years, you are taking something away from the people. I notice in the re-election of people to the city councils, half of them scarcely ever make the grade to be elected again, and they are elected on the basis of two years and it seems to me the proponents of the proposal for four years, if they want to help the poor legislators to handle themselves, they ought to set up a school, a special school for legislators.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Rivers has introduced this amendment through knowledge gained by experience in the legislature. I feel that the two years, or the two-year term is inadequate, as a person may only serve one term and might serve 30 days more under the state, but I have been in the legislature quite a bit and I think the men that have served only one 60-day term will know a great deal more of what it is all about when they get out of there than when they went in. I know I did when I first went in there. Now somebody says that if they don't do what they should, they are retired after one term, but maybe they went there in good faith, good conscience and tried to do what their constituents wanted them to do, but were unable to do it because they did not have the experience and know-how to wrangle a bill through the house. Now that's true and I think that anybody who has served in the legislature a few terms, can easily see that the new man is at a disadvantage, he is out-manuevered in parliamentary procedure and along about the end of the session, he might be getting on to the why's and wherefore's of these things, and when he goes back to his constituents after the legislature adjourns, the people want to know why didn't he get this bill passed. He'd said it was the first thing he would do. Well, he's got to give some specious excuse that blames somebody else, whereas the fact that he did not have the experience was the primary reason that he didn't get it through and get it favorable consideration. I think that Mr. Rivers is on the right track here and I think that the objections voiced by some that we should allow the people to do this or do that, but under our setup here, the people every two years will elect 20 representatives and 10 senators. And if a four-year term is good for a senator, why isn't it good for a representative? You need experience, you need stability, you need knowledge in the house, just the same as you do in the senate, because the senate passes bills sometimes and they are not infallible. We saw lots of bills come down from the senate that were poorly drafted, in no way express the intent of the maker and we would have to doll it up down in the house and send it back up there. So the brains of the legislature is not confined to what they call the "upper house" because I often times thought of it as the "lower house", and if you want to promote efficiency in the legislature, have men of experience, give them the four-year term just the same as before, but if you want to play politics, leave it the way it is. If you want an efficient state legislature, let's pass the amendment of Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

AWES: Mr. Rivers, do you know how many of the states elect their representatives for four years?

V. RIVERS: Only four at this time.

AWES: Do you know which states they are?

V. RIVERS: Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and Maryland.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I address another question to Mr. Rivers? Do any of those states provide for annual sessions of the legislature?

V. RIVERS: That I can't answer without looking it up.

SUNDBORG: I am not as interested in efficiency as Mr. Taylor says he is. I think you could take the arguments by Mr. Taylor and by Mr. McNealy and carry them to their logical conclusion, that once you got a man elected to the legislature you could never remove him or give the people a crack at him. He gets more efficient every session. I think the whole basis of our democracy that we have to have men stand on their records and in one of the houses it is proper that he do it at every general election, that is every two years. We have a balance against that because in the senate we provide that the members have four-year terms. I oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I would like to say about Mr. Taylor's and Mr. McNealy's talk that if you take the talks where they should go they would go out on the campaign stump for re-election. Reelect a man because of his experience and let that be weighed by the people, the experience as to what he has done, give him a chance at the end of two years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: As the introducer of the motion, I want to say a few words before we vote on it. My intent in introducing this motion was to try and see if we could not achieve greater stability based on longer experience in the lower as well as the upper house. Now if you realize, practically all of the appropriations in these bills, originate in the house, and I have seen in the last four years, two legislatures in which they did not have enough older, experienced heads available to constitute any more than one or two experienced members on the appropriations committee. Now they go in there entirely new, some of them very competent, professional men, business men, men in other walks of life, while they can handle their own affairs very well, it is an entirely different situation than they have been previously faced with. Mr. Metcalf suggested that perhaps we should send them to school. I think that is a good idea, but they are actually in school in the legislative processes when they are in the legislature for the first one or two sessions and of course, I think that the men and the women who go there are generally quite mature and have gone a long way in the school of life or they would not be elected by the people who know them. That in itself is not enough. The broad general idea of theory must be backed up by a lot of practical application as you are all finding out right here in this body. It seems to me we should consider that the stability in government is an important element, and I believe that because of the two-party system and only the two-party system in the United States, we have these extremely drastic swings. For instance, I do not believe that if we had seen somewhat different situation in World War II, we would have had L208 order that would have wiped out all of the gold mining completely and absolutely until the war was over. I believe that if we had had a little more experience in thinking and handling that, that probably we would have had an order which would have restricted materially gold mining, but would not completely wipe it out as it did, and as it now turns up, we have a very much diminished gold mining industry. However, those extremes bother me not only at the national level, but I think they would be equally improved if we handled them somewhat at the state level. It's not my thought here, and I might say that I have heard the term that we are discussing this general thing and in trying to handle it in the democratic way resolved the opinions of all delegates, I have heard it referred to as "piddling". That is a very inelegant, and I don't think very expressive term. It seems to me to infringe upon the sincerity of the members of this body in trying to follow through and carry out the democratic process. I might say that in a general way I object to that word as you probably gather. However, I am trying to keep on with this process as I see what I think could possibly improve or better what we are trying to do. I am going to present my thinking, as I am only one citizen of this state and one member of this delegation. I don't expect it to have a great deal of influence but I want to present it for consideration and with that thought in mind I have presented this. I might say that I have talked to some members of the Committee who introduced this section and they did not indicate to me that they had too strong an issue involved. I don't want to misquote them but my implication and understanding from them was that it was not a highly controversial issue in committee and that their convictions on it were more or less subject to further discussion. For that reason also, I felt free in introducing this amendment. I hope, from my personal point of view and from my experience in observing these things, I hope the amendment carries.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

Yeas: 11 - Coghill, Cross, V. Fischer, Hermann, Hinckel, McNealy, Nolan, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Taylor, Mr. President.

Nays: 42 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 2 - Hilscher, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 11 yeas, 42 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask for the personal privilege of the floor for just a moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers, you have the floor on personal privilege.

(Mr. Victor Rivers spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will revert to the business of introduction of committee reports at this time. The Chief Clerk will please read the committee report.

CHIEF CLERK: "The Committee on the Executive Branch met on January 10 to consider Delegate Proposal No. 44, which would provide for the election of the Commissioner of Labor, and Delegate Proposal No. 45 which would provide for the election of the Attorney General. The Committee members in attendance at the meeting voted as follows on these proposals:

Delegate Proposal 44:

Do Pass: Delegate Barr
Do Not Pass: Delegates Boswell, Harris, Nordale, and V. Rivers

Delegate Proposal 45 :

Do Pass: Delegate Barr

Do Not Pass: Delegates Boswell, Harris, and Nordale.

No Recommendation: Delegate V. Rivers.

Executive Committee
Victor Rivers, Chairman"

PRESIDENT EGAN: The report will be filed. Are there other amendments? Are there other amendments to Section 3?

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Is it our usual procedure to file these proposals or will they come up on the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: This was just a report.

BARR: I see. Isn't it the usual procedure for the Chair to assign it to the Rules Committee? What happens to the proposal now, in other words?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The reports indicated that the Committee had rejected the particular proposals. Now, as to the questions as to what happens to those particular proposals, the same thing would be that happened to other proposals that have been considered by the committees. I suppose the Committee felt that the subject matter had been covered adequately in other proposals. Of course, that is just what the Chair feels.

BARR: I will admit the fact that the subject matter of one of these was not discussed in Committee, that is it was the one part of a general subject that was discussed. The other one was discussed. It seems to me that the body ought to have some right to express themselves on it. I admit they should give great weight to the committee recommendations but some cases the body might here take exception to reports, as they have done here this afternoon, in one or two cases.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seems to the Chair that the Chair had no other alternative, Mr. Barr, than to order this report be filed in its entirety owing to the nature of the report. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Is there anything before us?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing before us except that Mr. Barr questioned the manner in which the President handled this particular committee report.

RILEY: I think the Committee is free to report as it sees fit, but I think also that subject matter, whatever it may have been, might still be discussed on the floor via amendment when the time comes. I don't see that Mr. Barr has been foreclosed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, neither does the Chair. The Chair feels that in the consideration of the various proposals that have come out of all of the committees that wherever it might be proper to insert the subject matter, it would be proper to offer amendments at that time of course.

BARR: I see. I had assumed, I may be wrong, that all delegate proposals, if they were not incorporated in a committee report would be considered on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair has assumed that the reasons for many or most of the amendments that we have had so far, is that in many instances, the committees did not include in their committee reports, the proposals exactly as the delegates had submitted them.

BARR: That's agreeable to me. I can always submit an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, page 1, line 17, delete 'fourth' and insert 'first'; line 18, delete 'January, unless otherwise provided by law' and insert 'December'."

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

V. FISCHER: I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer seconds the motion. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment is to provide that legislators' terms of office shall begin on the same day as the term of office of the governor as proposed in the article by the executive. The purpose of this is that there is no reason why a man elected by the people should not take office as soon after the election as it is possible to canvass the votes and certify the results, and that I presume is what the Executive Committee had in mind when they were setting a date for the governor to take office.

V. RIVERS: May I inject a thought here? I might say that Mr. Sundborg asked me this and I think he misunderstood my answer. I did not say the first of December, I said the first Monday in December.

SUNDBORG: That is what it now says. If my amendment is adopted it would say, "The terms of office shall begin on the first Monday of the following December." That is, following the election. Now we have had occasions in this Territory where it became necessary following the early part of December and the time that a legislature would normally convene, that an emergency arises and you must have a special session. Then the question comes up, who do you call to the special session? Do you call these lame ducks" who have just been repudiated at the polls or do you call into session the new legislature which has been elected by the people? One of our governors, proceeding on the assumption and having been advised that he was correct by the attorney general, did call into session in the early part of January, the legislators who had been elected in the foregoing October, and some years after the session was held, there was a ruling by the District Court in Juneau that he had called the wrong bunch of legislators together. What he should have done, he should have called the bunch of fellows who had been elected more than two years before, who had been repudiated at the polls, almost without exception. I don't think there were very many overlapping in the membership of what those two bodies would have been, and that everything that had had been done by the legislature which met in January, even though it consisted of legislators who had been elected in October, was illegal. So I don't think it matters too much when a legislator's term begins, because he doesn't begin to serve really until a legislature is called into session, but, since there is the possibility that a special session might be held some time before the fourth Monday in the following January, I think it is proper to get these legislators into office, to have their terms start as early as possible after the election and I suggest the same day as the governor. Now it doesn't mean that they are going to meet, they don't have to go to the capital city of Juneau at that time, all it means is that their terms begin. We have also provided in here, I want to point out, we have provided an annual salary for all legislators. Are we going to continue to pay the annual salary of the people who have lost out at the polls clear up until the fourth Monday of the following January, or don't you want to put on the payroll the new fellows who had just had the endorsement by the people at an election?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I want to direct a question to Mr. Sundborg.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

PERATROVICH: I can see the advantage of this amendment, but I would like to clear one thing up in my mind. You say that if your amendment is adopted, it doesn't mean they necessarily have to go to a session, yet they'll be considered members of the body. Where will they qualify them, where will they take their oath, do they have to go to Juneau, or will the oaths be sent to them to insure them that they are members of the body?

SUNDBORG: I must say frankly, it is a question that did not occur to me. Mr. Rivers says he has an answer.

R. RIVERS: If I may help, after the canvassing board has certified the persons who are elected, that could be regarded as the body. If we fix the term, anybody who is certified by the canvassing board as having been elected, his term would start. I'll admit that he won't start rendering services until he is sworn in, and you swear them in when they get to Juneau, but fixing the term is proper at any time after they are certified.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich hadn't finished his question. The Chair didn't realize that.

PERATROVICH: The fact that they had taken the oath would be sufficient grounds to be considered a member of the legislative body? The reason I ask that is because I know in the past, I think the attorney general swears them in, they take an oath before they can participate, and be considered qualified legislators.

R. RIVERS: Well, that is true of your administrative officers. They say that they shall qualify by taking an oath, but I looked into the law in several states, on when the terms of legislators begin and it is according to their organic law, or constitution, as the case may be. If their terms are to begin after they are certified by the canvassing board, then that is when their terms begins. Actually you swear them in when they go down to the capital and start performing their duties, but there is nothing to stop this, Mr. Peratrovich. You can say they have got to be sworn in, but if we don't say they have to be sworn in, they could go to the nearest justice of the peace and take their oath as far as that is concerned, but if we simply say that they may be members of the legislature from the time they are certified by the canvassing board to be elected, then if an extraordinary session comes along the newly elected group is the group that would go to the capital, not the old group.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: The reason I asked that question was that it implied there that you carry it out, I don't disagree, it is just through implication.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have a couple of questions directed along the same lines. Now I wonder, Mr. Sundborg, if you have accomplished your purpose. Is it not possible that a "lame duck" session could be held between election day and the first Monday, during those two months?

SUNDBORG: It is certainly true that it could, Mr. Hellenthal, but the reason, of course, that the man doesn't take off the day after the election is that it is impossible to find out what the results of the election are until a reasonable period thereafter.

HELLENTHAL: Wouldn't it be highly preferable then to tie it in, as Mr. Rivers deems to suggest, with the adoption of the canvass by the canvassing board?

SUNDBORG: I would have no objection to that. My purpose in offering this amendment is to get the legislators' terms of office to begin as soon as feasible after the election. If somebody can offer some language which would achieve that, which he feels is preferable to mine, I'd be willing to go along with it.

PRESIDENT EGAN Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Sundborg.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. Sundborg, in the event this is adopted, who decides when each legislature shall meet in actual session?

SUNDBORG: It is provided in a later section of the article -- Section 8 -- "The legislature shall convene on the fourth Monday in January each year unless otherwise provided by law." It's in the constitution.

WHITE: You didn't want to change that?

SUNDBORG: No. I just wanted the terms to start earlier so that in the event there is the necessity for a special session we have the fresh bunch newly elected by the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I would like to call the attention of the body to Section 11, which we went over yesterday and nobody made any objection, at least to this particular language. In that section it says, "Each house shall be the judge of the elections and qualifications of its members.... Now if you had a person begin his term sometime before the house met, we are nullifying that provision. Now that provision that I have just read is common in legislative bodies, in fact it was part of the law that created this body. None of us were actually elected until we met and agreed to accept the results of the election and seated the members.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to call attention, also, to the fact that there would be two months when we would have no Legislative Council. I don't know if that would make any difference to anyone, but it seems kind of odd to me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, it appears to me we are spending some time on a matter that isn't necessary. As a matter of fact, this could possibly be only just once that Mr. Sundborg's amendment would have effect because we have it written in here "or as provided by law". The legislature may change it back to this or to some other date. I don't see why we are hassling so much about just the first legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: There is a point that occurs to me in this matter that I wonder if Mr. Sundborg has considered. For instance, if the term were to begin on the first Monday in December, the first session begins on the fourth Monday of the following January, and there would be another session beginning in the next year on the fourth Monday. Then by the first Monday of that December in the second year, the legislators' terms would expire. Now you've got a period from that time until the fourth Monday of the third year, who would you call in the event of a special session?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I think that is clear under my amendment. If you recall, the group that would have been elected at the general election in that second year of which you speak. Now if we leave it the way it is and there is a necessity for a special session in December, the governor would have no choice but to call the group that had been elected two and one-half years earlier than that.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: This is just a point of information right now. Mr. Davis called up something and I would like to have it clarified a bit. If each house is the judge of its own election, I can see where there isn't a problem on that if you start paying them after they get there, but if you start on an annual salary basis, we are paying for two or three months, maybe they are disqualified down there. What happens to that money then? Actually we are starting a payment before they are certified as to their seat.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: If I may answer, as the thing stands now, they go into session the same time as their term begins.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, the term begins the fourth Monday, that would be the same time all right, I see it now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I move and ask unanimous consent that we stand at recess for two minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT. EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Section 4? Section 5? The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: By Mr. Emberg. "Section 5. line 8, delete word 'hold' and substitute 'be nominated, elected, or appointed to'."

EMBERG: I move the adoption of this amendment.

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg moves the adoption of the amendment, Mr. White seconds the motion. Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: Mr. President, the reason I moved the adoption of this amendment is in regard to a possible conflict that may arise with the executive article in regard to the succession to the offices in case of vacancy of the secretary or governor, in which it would be expected that the president of the senate, the speaker of the house, would be in line of succession, and if during that legislature, the salary of either the secretary or the governor had been raised, you would be blocking that orderly process of succession.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as proposed by Mr. Emberg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 5? Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon a question. On line 15 it seems to me that the words, "his services have" do not clearly express the meaning. I think it should be "his term has".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Miss Awes.

AWES: I am wondering if we're not getting into matters that belong to the Style and Drafting Committee.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I think Mr. Robertson is concerned with the thinking of the Committee, and I think I can say this with the unanimous point of view of the Committee that they are to be separated from their positions, period. No longer hold the job, no longer receive the pay or other emoluments. In other words, they are not connected with the state any longer, period.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read Mr. Hurley's proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, page 2, strike the second sentence."

HURLEY: Mr. President, I move the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves the adoption of this amendment. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. It seems to me that in our first amending session here that the same amendment was offered.

SUNDBORG: No, it was not offered.

MCCUTCHEON: I yield then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I certainly don't seek to create a wild campaign program on the part of elected officials, but I do, after having consulted with other people, recognize that the legislature will have the power to regulate such abuses of this thing as may occur. I do recognize that where we have a state executive that it is very desirable that we should have the ability to advance in the ranks and we also will have plenty of break between the time of filing for an election and the time that the election is actually held and the position be terminated, in which we might lose the services of a rather good governor, so the thought that I had here is that we might cure the ill as it occurs by the legislature and not prevent something good from happening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to ask the Chair what the Chair's ruling was on the original point of order raised by Mr. McCutcheon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair didn't rule. The Chair felt that Mr. McCutcheon withdrew his point of order when he discussed the matter with Mr. Sundborg. That was the feeling of the Chair that in effect, he withdrew it. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I agree with Mr. Hurley and support his amendment and agree with him in stating that my supporting his amendment is not the thought of throwing the gates open to abuses of the nature suggested in this sentence. I do feel that the matter can be solved by the legislature. We have seen in recent years such control exercised, but a great deal has been said here this afternoon of the value of experience in government. I believe, as I read this sentence, that if it is to remain in the constitution, we will deprive ourselves of what ever experience a great many people have gained in government. As Mr. Victor Rivers and others have stated this afternoon, the legislative process is educational to all who are so engaged. So, too, is other government service educational. The Territory and the State have an investment in a great many people who may be disposed to stay with the government and give the benefit of that education to whatever jurisdiction they serve and I feel we would freeze in place many many people, 60 members of your legislature, perhaps an equal number of administrators if they can seek no other place, no advancement, no other utilization of the experience they have gained in government. I recognize that there is every prospect of occasional abuse, but I do feel that that abuse can be curbed by the legislature and that we should not freeze the whole public service in place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the intent of the Committee was to protect the public funds from political use, and if you will reread that sentence carefully, you will find that this was designed to insure the public funds not be used for public use for the purpose of furthering political office. If it is the will of this body to strike this out, I just want to point out that if the legislature doesn't act in this field, that your Legislative Branch Committee has sought to protect the public funds from political use and the furtherance of political office as has been done in the not too distant past in the Territory of Alaska. Strike it out if you wish, but we serve warning to you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I move an amendment to the amendment, and that is to strike out the last sentence of Section 5 along with the second, or rather, last sentence of the paragraph. I move its adoption.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I object. I think that could be taken up in its place after we have disposed of this one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no second to the motion.

MCNEALY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy seconds the motion. Mr. Taylor has the floor.

TAYLOR: This sentence applies to the preceding sentence and if there is an amendment to strike that sentence both of them should go together because that sentence standing alone doesn't mean a thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I submit that that sentence applies not only to the sentence which we would strike under Mr. Hurley's amendment, but to the first sentence of the section, where it says, "No member of the legislature shall hold any other office which has been created etc., "while he was a member". Then it says down here, "This section shall not apply to positions of employment in or elections to any constitutional convention." I think it is necessary that it remain in there whether or not we strike out that middle sentence which Mr. Hurley would strike.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I have spoken once on this, but if there is no objection,

I would like to comment just briefly on Mr. McCutcheon's expression. I have every respect for the view of the Committee and for their intention, and I agree fully with Mr. McCutcheon that no doubt that thought was in their mind. I think that that too, may be curbed by the legislature, and within recent months the legislature has acted, in at least one instance, to correct such a situation. I submit though, that this goes far beyond what is necessary and it puts us in the position of sinking the ship to drown the rat.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: With the consent of my second, I'll withdraw the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment to the amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is ordered withdrawn. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hurley be adopted by the Convention?"

MCNEES: Roll call, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 26 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hurley, Johnson, King, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, White, Wien.

Nays: 26 - Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Hilscher, Rosswog, VanderLeest.)

COLLINS: I wish to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Collins wishes to change his vote to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 26 yeas, 26 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I notice in the gallery we have a member of the Territorial government, a man that we should all recognize and know. I would like at this time to introduce Mr. Don Dafoe, Commissioner of Education and ask unanimous consent that he be granted the privilege of the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Dafoe, we are happy to have you with us and if there is no objection, you may come forward and make a few brief remarks if you so desire. (Applause).

MR. DAFOE: It is a privilege to be here and I appreciate the introduction and the privilege of the floor. I happen to be in Fairbanks on other business and took the opportunity to come out here. I had the opportunity of attending the hearings in Juneau and enjoyed participating in them and as far as my only personal viewpoints, I filed those in the form of depositions in connection with the hearings. If there is any value that I could be to the Convention in the form of answering any questions or of any of the body or any committee member, I am glad to be of that service. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Dafoe. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, line 14, insert 'nonregulatory' before 'board'."

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I move its adoption. I don't know whether I did it right or not, but there was an amendment offered by Mr. Johnson which carried, and excepted members of boards. My amendment excepts members except those on regulatory boards, rate-fixing boards. I move its adoption.

V. RIVERS: I second the motion. I should like to ask a question. Would you consider the Board of Governors of the bar a regulatory or a nonregulatory board?

BUCKALEW: That would be a nonregulatory board.

V. RIVERS: Are you sure of the terminology "nonregulatory"? That is what concerns me, Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Perhaps, just for discussion, maybe "rate-fixing" would be better. We will have boards under the state that will be fixing rates, and those are the people that will be running around for office and can use that office for terrific advantage. Maybe I should change it to "rate-fixing". That was what I was trying to reach.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, if the mover of the motion has no objection, I would ask for the usual 15-minute recess now and we could discuss that a little further.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: With the understanding that we will have an evening session tonight, there will be a committee meeting of the Administration Committee upon recess.

RILEY: There will be a meeting of the Rules Committee in the rear of the gallery on recess.

SWEENEY: There will be a meeting of the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee at 6:45.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, at this time, I would like to move that we rescind our action on Mr. Johnson's amendment to Section 15, which we considered as the last order of business last night.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that the Convention rescind its action with relation to the amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson, which was the last action of the Convention last night.

BARR: I so move and ask unanimous consent.

RILEY: I object.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as it was offered by Mr. Johnson.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 15, page 5, line 19, strike the word 'the', then insert: 'Each house of the', strike the word 'as' at the end of line 19; line 20, strike the words 'one body', insert in lieu thereof the word 'separately'; line 23, strike the words 'the state' and insert in lieu thereof the words 'each house'; page 6, line 3, strike the words 'the state' and insert in lieu thereof the words 'each house'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind its action as regards the action taken on Mr. Johnson's proposed motion." A vote of "yes" means that you are voting to rescind the action. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: We voted his amendment down didn't we?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair recalls that it was a tie vote, 25-25. It lost. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Is this question debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is debatable. A motion to rescind is debatable. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, my reasons for asking for us to rescind this action are these. There were two or three points that weren't brought out in debate and I don't think that we had time to consider it. It is a very important question. It was lost by a tie vote which means that half of us here were for it, and it was done as the last order of business, the last thing we considered last night after a long day of work and some of us were a little weary and some of us were, perhaps, a little hasty, so I thought we should have the opportunity to think this over again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have also thought the thing over and the time that was taken, and even now, I certainly am willing to abide by the decision regardless of how small it is in this matter, because there are a lot of things I don't know about it. I did make an effort to find out some more about it, however, and I recall the question was asked of Mr. McCutcheon, if any other states had this provision and he said, "Yes," paraphrasing Mr. McCutcheon, Nebraska", which was of course highly amusing since they had to have it, they only had a one-house legislature, but my thinking behind the thing was that we are presumably, we have assumed this, we are going to set up a rather strong executive department and my thought was in that case that perhaps it would be wise to make the overriding of a veto a little more simple procedure and I thought that this procedure did do that, and that was probably the only reason. Now, on investigating the situation in other states, I do find that 15 of the states provide for the overriding of a governor's veto in each of the houses of the legislature by less than a two-thirds majority. Seven of them provide for a simple majority of each house and eight of them provide for two-thirds majority of those present at the time the vote is taken, so that means to me that at least 15 of the states have chosen to make it a little simpler to override the veto than to have two-thirds of each of the houses. That information tended to at least strengthen my position, however tenable it may be that it will be a little easier, at any rate, to override the veto, so I think I shall vote, perhaps, against rescinding our action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I don't think I spoke on this yesterday, but I don't like to see this committee article changed because if you do change it or rescind the action, the governor and six senators can control the action regarding the passage of bills.

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I think if the motion to rescind the action should prevail, that does not mean that the section as it stands will be changed. The amendment will be in order then, or any other amendment might be in order then, is that correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The amendment of Mr. Johnson's will then be before us, because we are rescinding the action taken, which was the vote on the particular amendment. Mr. Hinckel is in order in speaking on this motion to rescind. The motion to rescind does not pass the amendment, this brings it before us. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, it is certainly debatable, however.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, and Mr. Hinckel is in order.

HINCKEL: Well, the point I am trying to make is that as we on the Committee submitted the article, we were trying to prevent this thing happening as I started to describe, the governor with six senators could override the passage of a bill and we felt that as it came back after the veto and the whole 60 legislators discussed the thing and decided that it should be passed, that the people of the state would get a better shake and probably get a truer representation than they would by permitting five or six people to control something that was that important.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I would like to point out that this manner of considering the governor's veto now becomes more important than it was before because we have taken out the automatic referendum clauses by striking that one section that pertained to either the governor or the legislature passing lost bills at referendum. So it becomes now more important that the governor's veto shall be considered in the two houses combined because it would make it easier for the legislature to control the action of the veto.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I can see Mr. Hinckel's argument that six could do it mathematically, but I think that is just the thing. After all, a veto should be relatively strong, and if we do it the other way with the combined house and senate then we are going to leave it up to largely the house to control the overriding of the veto and I think it has been argued time in and time out that the house, according to the way it is set up, the lesser house and it is the more inexperienced, etc., and I think that such action should be passed on by the senate as it has been done before by two-thirds of each house. I can't see that we can do it any other way if we are going to uphold our bicameral form of government but to rescind our action.

RILEY: Mr. President, as Mr. Hurley just suggested, a strong executive article is in prospect, at least a strong executive has been provided in the article which has been presented by the Committee, and from what discussion I have heard I think it will be the consensus of this Convention that we emerge with a strong executive article. I believe in a strong executive, but certainly not in a runaway executive and certainly, too, I believe in our traditional form of coordinate branch amongst our three branches. I think if we are to have a coordinate branch as between legislative and executive, we must have a legislature that can be effectual. Mr. Cooper was speaking in an argument earlier this afternoon about the legislature's being the most responsive to the people because it was the most recently elected, it was the people's most recent expression as to whom they wish to have performing their necessary functions of government. I think that if the legislature is to have coordinate rank and authority with the executive, that it would be very improper to allow a handful of men to thwart any action that the majority, the overwhelming majority might prefer. All of us in Alaska and all of us here, I think, remember when this problem was even more acute, when we had only eight members in the senate. In fact, I can see at least one person here who served in that eight-member senate and I am sure he and others appreciate full well what I am trying to point up; at a time when three members of the senate could force the will of the entire legislature, or three members of the senate with the governor, if they happen to be his supporters, could pretty well run the show. Now under our existing legislature of 16 it requires six in the senate and should we adopt 20 for the state, it would require only seven, which would mean that seven men of a total of 60 in the legislature as proposed, would have the whip hand on any tough decision, or the ones that a responsible executive feels are clearly against the public interest, which receive the veto treatment, but any seven men under the proposal we have adopted as to the composition of the legislature can overcome the views of the 60; and I think it is academic that if you believe in the democratic process, that that is not right. Now, we discussed here a few weeks ago, this matter of the unicameral system versus the bicameral system and there is no question about how the body felt at that time, but it was pointed out there that there was very little to fear from lobbyists, for example, because there never was a time when lobbyists seem to exert their influence over both houses at the same time, so that doesn't begin to touch on the real problem here. I think one of the most effective lobbyists in recent history is known to most of the people here, a very low-pressure type of lobbyist, one who I don't believe has ever outraged anyone's sensibilities. Following the 1953 session -- I was not a member but I was in the corridors of the closing evening, I spoke to him in the hall and he appeared to be very well pleased with the way things were going. I inquired as to what he had accomplished and he said, "I haven't accomplished a thing, I wasn't seeking a thing, but there were 14 measures that I did not wish to have passed." He hadn't introduced a thing and he said he was very well pleased. There had been a number of vetoes sent down in that session and most of those vetoes had been overridden, and I submit that if we feel that a democratic process is being observed in sending a legislature down there, that a mere handful should not be allowed to control the operations of the entire body and I expect to vote against the rescinding of last night's action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: By the same token, it seems to me that we ought to retain this type of check if only seven people can do it, as Mr. Riley seems to think. I believe that is equally as valuable a break upon a runaway legislature as anything else could be. That was the purpose of the founding fathers when they set up our form of government. They put one house as a check against the other in the matter of passing legislation and certainly we're not deviating from that in the matter of the amendment that has been offered. I see no reason to fear any seven people in the senate anymore than I would have reason to fear the other 53, and believe me, the only way that we're going to have any check and balance in favor of a minority, which is just as much a democratic process as favoring the majority, then we ought to vote to rescind our action and place this amendment in the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I've heard the expression, "founding fathers" many times in this assembly, and I am quite well convinced that if our founding fathers could have seen to what extent our checks and balances had backfired and if our founding fathers could observe what has happened to Alaska over the years, as a result of what Mr. Riley has been talking about, I am sure that our founding fathers would vote overwhelmingly for this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: It is even worse than Mr. Riley says, because we have the provision in our constitution here, which was supported by the majority of the body this morning, which provides that a three-fourths vote is necessary on all bills having to do with taxes, all bills having to do with appropriations or monies. In that event if we are going to leave it that it requires a three-fourths vote of each house, as Mr. Johnson would require, any five members of the senate, if we have a 20-member senate can thwart the will of the other 55 members. There is another thing that hasn't been mentioned here and that is that it takes the affirmative vote of three-fourths of the members to which the body is entitled, to override a veto. In other words, every man who is absent, every member who may have died during the course of a session, everybody who is sick in bed, his vote counts "no". In the senate you would need 15 affirmative votes and you would have to have them all there in order to carry through the will of the legislature against the veto of the governor. I believe it is bad and I believe the provision that the Committee has written in here is the proper one, so I am going to vote against rescinding.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I think that if they really wanted to change this system, rather than to go into a body of the whole, they could have changed the percentage for overriding the governor's veto. If they want, they could have changed it to a majority vote in the house and a majority vote in the senate, but I still believe that they should be separate, a vote in the house and a vote in the senate, as check and balance. And I am going to vote to rescind our action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I want to say a few words on this. I was one of those last night who voted for the amendment and I intend to vote to rescind our action on this ground, that we have in the governor, the highest elected official, the most directly answerable to the people of all the officers of our government, including the legislature. Now we have set up here, in the matter of overriding his veto, a unicameral type of action which is very much in the thinking of many of our people and I personally don't see too much wrong with it except we are now diluting, as the Chairman of the Legislative Committee stated to you, the authority of our strong executive but I can't share the fears of some of the people that he is going to abuse that privilege. It has not been the case in the past. I was a member of some of the eight-house senate sessions in the legislature and in the two terms that I served, there were no veto messages that came down from the governor at that time. There was no abuse of it then. Now if we are going to sustain the strong executive, if we are going to make him responsible and answerable for his administration to the state as we have visualized it necessary for a modern and efficient government, it is my opinion that we must, in cases of real crisis, allow him enough authority to function, and in the case of these bills that have already been passed through to him, I want to point out to you that they have already been passed by a majority of both houses, so you already have the 11 in the senate and perhaps the 21 in the house that have gone on record as favoring the bill, then if after he vetoes it, they take the opposition position that his strong stand on this matter is not in the best interest of the people, then they can override his veto but by a two-thirds majority of each house. It seems to me that each house should consider this matter separately as they considered it in the original instance. I do believe if we are going to sustain and maintain a strong executive in these crucial decisions, the real critical decisions of the administration, then we must support the fairly strong veto, which would be the bicameral veto such as we have in the legislative action. It doesn't seem to me that the feeling that the governor is going to abuse this and veto everything down the line of minor interest, just for the purpose of overriding the legislature, applies. These are times of extreme and critical emergency only. Then the question is, whose final judgment in the matter of such emergency should prevail, and I favor the executive. I favor the veto power based on the two houses separately.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to state that if you vote "yes" on this motion to rescind, we will then have Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment before us for discussion once more and it will take 28 votes to pass this rescinding motion at this time. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I would like to close if no one else wishes to speak. I think the question here is whether we favor the unicameral or the bicameral system. According to the committee report where they meet in joint session to consider a veto, that is a unicameral process. Now, if we believe in a system of checks and balances and a two-house system, where a bill originates in one house and then passes on to the other house for its action, we should naturally give those houses a chance to reconsider that same bill separately. It was stated here that it would be a simple procedure to override the veto of the governor under this joint session and that was the purpose of it. It is, it is a simple procedure but it works both ways. It depends on whether your party is in power in the house or whether they are out of power because the house has complete control. Do you want them to do something or do you want them to prevent something from being done? Now under this joint session system where the house, we will assume, has 40 members and the senate 20, the house has complete control of the entire legislature. Is that our wish here? If a bill originates in the senate and goes to the other house and then is transmitted to the governor and he vetoes it, the senate has no say in overriding that veto. It goes into joint session and if the house is for it, O.K., if they're against it, O.K., their will is done right there. I do not think that is right in a two-house system. I wish to remind you, too, that the house being elected most recently at the same time as the governor, is more likely as it has been said here, to reflect the wishes of the people. In other words, if there has been a landslide, the governor certainly has complete control in that case, in spite of anything anyone can do. I don't think that is good no matter what party he belongs to. I believe it should be considered in both houses which can look at these things objectively. We may like it the way it is one time but the next time we won't. Now, as to not submitting these things to the people on a referendum, it can always be done. The governor may not be able to do it directly, but we have provisions for initiative and referendum and if the governor's veto is sustained it can be submitted to the people. If it is overridden, it doesn't have to be. The term, "runaway executive" was used here. I claim that that could happen with the aid of the house, and the senate would have no power to put the brakes on the runaway executive. They would sit silently by and listen to the house go just the way the governor wanted it to. I do not object to having, say a three-fourths vote for overriding the governor's veto. I believe that is the way it should be settled, but we should not abandon the two-house system and the system of checks and balances.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I think there is something more important than this question right here -- that of finishing this constitution. I am frankly worried about the time slipping by, the work ahead of us. When we go back after we have made a thorough decision, we have voted, and then you come back and put it on the floor again, I think you are jeopardizing the entire constitution, and I am going to vote against this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I would like to point out to Mr. Marston here that the reason that I brought this up today was to avoid delay. I tried to give this body every consideration in that I would like to allow them to reconsider it because it was a tie vote and taken at a late hour and I also considered them in bringing it up today instead of holding this over for another 24 hours as I could have done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Should the Convention rescind its action with relation to the vote taken last night on Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Gray, Harris, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 25 - Awes, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Smith, Sundborg, Taylor.

Absent: 3 - Hilscher, Rosswog, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 25 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "nays" have it and the proposed rescinding action has failed to pass. Are there other amendments to Section 4? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I voted on the prevailing side on Mr. Hurley's motion as to Section 5. I think I made a mistake and I now give notice of reconsideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis gives notice of reconsideration of his vote on the particular amendment that sought to delete the sentence from Section 5 beginning on line 13 and ending on line 17. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I address an inquiry to Mr. Davis?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Davis would you object to having the matter of your reconsideration taken up at this time?

DAVIS: No, I would not.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move that we suspend our rules so we can take up Mr. Davis's announced motion of reconsideration with respect to Section 5, at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves that the rules be suspended and that the Convention take up Mr. Davis's proposed reconsideration of the amendment at this time. Is there a second to the motion?

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked.

JOHNSON: I object.

TAYLOR: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Taylor seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and Mr. Davis's reconsideration come before the Convention at this time?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes. Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross. Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer. Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, King, Knight, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees. Marston, Metcalf. Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 5 - Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee.

Absent: 3 - Hilscher, Rosswog, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 5 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "yeas" have it and we have before us Mr. Davis's reconsideration of his vote on the proposed amendment. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, I think nearly everything has been said on this thing that could be said.

BARR: Point of order, Mr. Chairman, is the motion to reconsider debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion to reconsider, to order the reconsideration at this time passed and the amendment is debatable at this time. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I think everything that could be said has been said about this, so I am not going to speak at any great length, except to say we apparently had a tie vote and my vote was pivotal on it and I am of the opinion that we have covered too much ground in saying that no elective or appointive official of the state should be entitled to run for office without resigning his present office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment. Someone asked what the amendment was.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page two, Section 5, strike the second sentence."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

Yeas: 29 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hurley, King, Knight, McLaughlin, Marston, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Walsh, White, Wien.

Nays: 24 - Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Reader, Sweeney, Taylor, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Hilscher, VanderLeest.)

DAVIS: Mr. President, I wish to change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis changes his vote to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 29 yeas, 24 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 5? If not, are there amendments to Section 6? Section 7? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: In Section 6, on line 24, I would like to ask Mr. McCutcheon why the word "treason" was omitted before the word "felony". Is it the theory that treason is a felony?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any amendments to Section 7? Section 8? Section 9? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Yesterday a question was directed to Mr. McCutcheon as to the word "directed" in line 17, and whether or not he would be agreeable to having the word changed to "administered" as I recall it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was changed to some other word, "conducted" I believe. Section 10, are there amendments to Section 10? Are there other amendments to Section 11? To Section 12?

MCLAUGHLIN: I would like to withdraw the amendment that I submitted yesterday and submit another in lieu thereof.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. McLaughlin's amendment of yesterday is ordered withdrawn. Have you drawn your amendment yet, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: I know exactly what I want, if I may read it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Perhaps we can continue until you have it prepared. Mr. Helleenthal did you have an amendment to submit to Section 13, did you say?

HELLENTHAL: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: This is just a point of inquiry. I had thought the Committee was considering an amendment to the first sentence of Section 11. I know we've gone past it, and my only query is, is it practicable for the two houses to have identical or uniform rules of procedure? I shall address that to Mr. McCutcheon, if I may, as to whether further consideration was given to simply stating they should have uniform rules insofar as practicable or language to that effect. They certainly aren't identical today and I don't know if that is his purpose.

MCCUTCHEON: Obviously there will be on some matters that they couldn't be identical, but insofar as they could possibly have them identical, it was the intention of the Committee that they should be identical.

RILEY: Then it was your thought, Mr. McCutcheon, that as the language stands, uniformity but not identical? You had no thoughts that this language would suggest that they should be the same rules?

MCCUTCHEON: The reason that the next sentence was established in this part of the act was to give them the out of establishing different fashions in setting up the context of their employee groups and so forth, but the matter of handling the procedure of the bills in the course of their processes, and the transmission shall be identical. That is what we intended.

RILEY: Simply those matters where their actions touch on one another?

MCCUTCHEON: Yes.

RILEY: That satisfies my query. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I don't feel quite that strong about that. My interpretation of this first sentence is that the rules governing the house, shall be the same rules governing the senate. Now you have a difference in interpretation of rules simply because they are not exactly the same and I think it is very important that the rules under which the house is operating are the same as the rules that the senate is operating. The second part of that sentence gives the house or the senate leeway as far as their help and the boiler room and things like that, but for operation of the legislature, the houses should have uniform rules and that was what my interpretation of it was when we wrote it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I was on this Committee. One reason that that first sentence is in here is because inasmuch as the two houses are throwl in joint assembly in several instances throughout the Legislative Committee report, it was thought this was a very necessary item in Section 11.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does Mr. McLaughlin have his amendment before us at this time?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, line 17, strike the words 'and in what court' and in line 18 strike the words `or agencies thereof'." The section then reads, "The legislature shall direct by law in what manner suits may be brought against the state."

MCLAUGHLIN: I so move the adoption of the amendment.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

SUNDBORG: Now being able to understand this, I ask for unanimous consent.

R. RIVERS: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, perhaps we can straighten this out. Mr. McLaughlin you have said the legislature shall direct the manner in which suits may be brought against the state? Doesn't the legislature also decide what liabilities the state will assume or what actions, when the state will be sued as well as the manner?

MCLAUGHLIN: I leave that up -- it was my understanding, Mr. Rivers, from the Committee that they wanted to direct that the sovereign state could be sued and that the legislature couldn't prevent it. It is my understanding that they can place a limitation on the liability. I am not changing, I'm sure, the meaning, but I am removing an apparent or apparent at least to some, conflict with the judiciary article. The amendment that I submitted the other night was unacceptable to many members, but this overcomes most of their objections.

R. RIVERS: I was thinking that the way it is now written it leaves the state open to be sued at all times and I didn't know the body had arrived at the idea of letting the state be sued at all times.

MCLAUGHLIN: That was the intent as I understand it, of the Committee, who originally drafted this article.

R. RIVERS: I withdraw my objections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Boswell?

BOSWELL: What were the words to be struck there in the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment again?

(The Chief Clerk read the amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection at this time to the unanimous consent request? If not, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there amendments to Section 13? Section 14? Section 15?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 15.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 15, page 5, line 18 after the word 'it' insert 'within five days (Sundays excepted) after it is delivered to him'."

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Just exactly, according to the words that you have suggested, Mr. Sundborg, does that read now? Will the Chief Clerk read it as it would read with the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "If the governor vetoes a bill he shall return it within five days (Sundays excepted) after it is delivered to him to the house of representatives together with his objections."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, as the article stands, there is no limit on the time within which the governor must return a bill to the legislature if he is vetoing it. There is no time limit that he must return a veto message. It is true that over on the next page and in the same section, there are provisions that while the legislature is in session, "If the governor neither signs nor vetoes a bill within fifteen days (Sundays excepted) after it is delivered to him it shall become law without his signature." There is a further provision that, "If the legislature is not in session and the governor neither signs nor vetoes a bill within twenty days" it shall become law as if he had signed it. Now I want to insure that the legislature will have the right, right down to the fifth day before the end of their session, to override a veto if it is their desire to do so. Unless we write this language in. every single thing that the legislature does in the last 15 days of this session is going to be subject to a pocket veto. The Governor, without any reference back to the legislature at all, can handle as he sees fit any piece of legislation that goes through the legislature in the last 15 days of the session. He doesn't have to return it to them at all. He can veto it, and I believe that allowing him five days, in the case of bills that he desires to veto, is long enough.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: . I disagree with Mr. Sundborg. It seems to me that in a busy session of the legislature with lots of bills being passed, and presented to the governor, he ought to have more time than five days to consider a matter, particularly if it is a long tax measure or some other bill that is of great length and five days wouldn't be nearly enough time and I think the provision ought to remain as it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I seconded this motion. I think it has merit. I think it will keep the session more smoothly because then the legislature will know exactly where they are. They know when they get a bill to the governor, they're going to get it back in five days and I think it would have a tendency to stop this backlog at the close of the session. I think it's time enough for the governor, he has assistants, specialists, he isn't up there all alone. He'd probably have somebody else write the veto message anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would agree with this amendment except that there can't be a backlog at the end of the session because there is no limit set for the session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe that if a bill is of such a nature that the governor would veto it when it finally got through, that he would no doubt have his eye and his mind on that bill from the day that it was first introduced in its first house and that he would have kept track of all the ramifications of that bill and the amendments and when it got to his desk, he would know as much about it, this bill, as the men in the house and the senate that passed it, and I think within 15 minutes he could veto it, because he would know whether he was going to veto it or not, and I think five days is giving him ample time to veto that if he is going to veto it and get it back to the house in which it originated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I would like to ask a question. It seems to me there is an inconsistency, and maybe it's me, but if he didn't veto the bill within five days, say it was eight days before he vetoed the bill, what about it? What are you going to do about it? It gives him, a little later on here, 15 days to veto it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, the governor at present has three days in which to veto a bill and that has been the case ever since 1913. We give him five under this amendment, a fairly decent amount of time. I want to ask Mr. Sundborg if the intent is to change the language on the following page here, "...if the governor neither signs nor vetoes a bill within fifteen days (Sundays excepted) after it is delivered to him".

SUNDBORG: I did not intend to change that Mr. Rivers, I did give it some thought overnight and I believe that is a good provision. That gives him -- of course the legislature would know. If they haven't heard back from the governor in five days, the act they have passed on to him is going to become law. There is nothing else he can do to it to kill it, and they will know that after five days, but he has 15 days in which to sign it. He can let it become law without his signature or he can sign it.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I can't understand how he has got to return the bill with his objections in five days, which I understood would be the veto message, and still have 15 days in which to sign it. I am mixed up here someplace.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, it was pointed out in Committee that at one time, in the State of Colorado, the governor had four employees writing veto messages because the number of bills that were piled up in front of him, he could not possibly handle within the 20-day limit that he had, and that after these four employees working day and night wrote his veto messages he merely signed them and sent them back to the legislature. If you want your governor to veto a bill you will have to give him 15 days, if you want a hired employee to veto it and present the message to the legislature you will give him five days.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the amendment as proposed by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask unanimous consent that in Section 15, following the word "legislators", line 23, page 5 a period be inserted and the words "to which the state is entitled" be stricken, and that likewise in line 3, page 6, a period be inserted after "legislators" and the words "to which the state is entitled" likewise be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read back the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk then read the proposed amendment by Mr. Hellenthal.)

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent.

BUCKALEW: I object.

HELLENTHAL: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: All I wish to make is a very brief statement to the effect that if you take out this terminology, you are saying that two-thirds of the legislators in attendance at the time the veto has taken effect, not two-thirds of the total number of the legislators.

HELLENTHAL: I am positive that it means two-thirds of the total number because that is what it says. It says in line 23, "two-thirds vote of the total number of legislators". Now the only reason I make my objection is this, this is the only place in the constitution where any of the proposals in which the language, "to which the state is entitled" is used. It presupposes some apparent country permitting us to have legislators and specifying the number. This is predicated on organic act thinking, not on constitution thinking.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as proposed by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" nave it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 15? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: On line 18, did we change the word "representatives" to "origin"? Was that motion made?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair recalls that some amendment of that nature was made. Just how it was made, Mr. Rivers, I don't recall.

V. RIVERS: Well the amendment yesterday had other matter that may have been objectionable. It's a little questionable in my mind why a bill originating in the senate should be returned to the house of representatives when it is vetoed. I would like to ask that question of any member of the Committee that would like to answer it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, could you answer that question?

MCCUTCHEON: Because it had in the article as originally written, the fact that it would go to joint session and the joint session would be held in the house. Therefore it would be returned to the house and the senate notified.

V. RIVERS: I would ask unanimous consent to change the word "representatives" in line 18 to "origin". Section 15.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that the word "representatives" in line 18 be changed to read "origin". Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 15? If not are there amendments to Section 16? Are there amendments to Section 17? Section 18? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question on Section 18. What happened to the amendment to Section 18 offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers?

CHIEF CLERK: It was voted down, it failed on voice vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 5? Mr. Stewart?

STEWART: Did we consider Section 25?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Section 25 was held over until the apportionment article comes before us. That is the understanding of the Chair. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to object if that is the Chair's ruling on this. I believe it was stricken from this article and the subject matter is to be considered at the time we take up the apportionment article, but this article is now complete. We have stricken Section 25.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I did not happen to be present when that happened, I was told that it was held over. If that is correct, then that section was deleted and the article is now complete unless there are other amendments to be offered at this time.

LONDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that the session recess for two minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 5? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I don't want to unnecessarily delay the progress of another article but I am very deeply worried about one section here and I think I would be derelict in my duty if I didn't bring it up. I am referring to Section 18, the last section on page 7, commencing on line 8. I want to report that this morning I moved a certain amendment and I will identify it. It says, "No local act shall take effect until aproved by the qualified voters in the district to be affected. I moved that "no local act calling for appropriations by the local areas to be affected" would become the law until the people voted on it. Now, in order to reopen that, I am going to move that we rescind our action which rejected my proposed amendment and I want to be heard once more on it briefly, in the hope that I will be doing some good. I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves that the Convention rescind its action taken in voting on his proposed amendment this morning. Is there a second?

V. FISCHER: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer seconds the motion. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, in the first place the legislature here must act by general law whenever possible but where it is not possible to act by general law the legislature may pass local legislation. Local legislation is generally with regard to a particular town or a particular borough or a local political subdivision. Most local laws are in the nature of relief to disaster areas or solving some very acute problem like subsidizing a hospital in a certain particular locality which generally could be by general law, but maybe it can't. In other words, in most instances a local law is for the benefit of a particular locality. Now why the people that are in the disaster area and the legislature appropriates money for that area should have to take a vote on whether they can receive that money or not is more than I know. Certainly, as Mr. Fischer said this morning, if the legislature is going to try to levy some money impositions on a locality without the consent of the people, then by all means let the people vote on it, but unless the local act involves the disbursement of local funds or unless the local act calls for an appropriation by the affected political subdivision then don't make the people have a referendum on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind the action taken on voting upon Mr. Ralph Rivers' proposed amendment this morning?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hurley, King, Knight, Londborg, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh. White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 16 - Davis, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hinckel. Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Peratovich, Poulsen, Robertson, Smith, Sweeney.

Absent: 2 - Hilscher, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 37 yeas, 16 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "yeas" have it and the Convention has rescinded the action taken. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Barr.

BARR: Point of information. I don't have that amendment before me now. Did that apply only to the first sentence?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 7, line 8, after the word 'act' insert the following: 'calling for use of funds to be appropriated by a political subdivision'." This is to Section 18.

BARR: That answers my question. I was worried as to whether that was in that particular position or not. I think it is highly necessary that it should go there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, this business of relief to a disaster area, wouldn't there be general legislation allowing the government to provide relief to this disaster area?

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I went in to some of those Texas cases where the Texas legislature gave a remission of property taxes to particular counties which had had disasters. That was strictly local legislation and it is hard to visualize ahead of time what particular local acts would be taken, but most of them would be for the benefit of a community, not to abuse a community, so I only want the referendum to be held when there is going to be a financial levy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, the question in my mind is one that was raised by Mr. McLaughlin's explanation during the last discussion on this proposition. At that time he pointed out that if this amendment is adopted, the legislature could sit back and change the county seat or the capital perhaps, or do anything in the way of special or local law without having it submitted to the voters. The only way it could be submitted to the voters is if it involves an expenditure of funds, as I understand it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, let me explain. I am in favor of Mr. Rivers' amendment. I was merely explaining what people were confused on what local acts are -- I was giving them an explanation from California -- what they are, and what special acts are. The legislature is still prohibited. even with Mr. Rivers' amendment under the first sentence, from passing any local or special acts. Obviously the intent of this article is not to go into the detail, pages upon pages of defining what special acts or local acts they meant. They merely say it is a matter for judicial determination, that is, the court can determine whether or not the legislature had the power to pass those acts. Now the local act that takes effect, I think Mr. Rivers has pointed out a defect in the language in that where if you are deliberately trying to benefit an area that desires to be benefited, needs the benefit, in substance we say you have to go through the expensive process of voting upon the thing, having an election held in the community, in order to receive the benefits that obviously you desire. I think this is very commendable and almost necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?"

METCALF: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer. Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, King, Knight, Londborg, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan. Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers. V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White. Wien. Mr. President.

Nays: 13 - Cooper, Davis, H. Fischer, Hinckel, Johnson, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Poulsen, Robertson, Sweeney.

Absent: 3 - Hilscher, Kilcher, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 13 nays and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 5? If there are no other amendments, then the proposal is ordered referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. The Convention will now take up Committee Proposal No. 14, the proposal that deals with suffrage and apportionment. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I am wondering, since it is so close to our recess time if we would be better off recessing now until 7 o'clock, before we start on this new proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: One thing about it, we will have to read this in its second reading, Mrs. Sweeney, before any amendments or any explanations could be made. If the delegates so desire, and the Chief Clerk so desires, we could continue with the second reading until 5:30. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I recall also that Mr. Hellenthal promised us an hour or so dissertation on his explanation of what this is all about and I think the sooner we get at this, the better.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, I believe we should read it for the second time first, and then allow for the dissertation. We will read Committee Proposal No. 14 for the second time, and then we will recess. The Chief Clerk may proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 14.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 14, introduced by the Committee on Suffrage, Elections and Apportionment for the second time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would entertain a motion for recess. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Since we still have a few minutes and I am wondering if it is possible to have the Chief Clerk read the letter from Curtis Shattuck on apportionment, which is on file on the Clerk's desk.

HELLENTHAL: I have no objection to Mrs. Sweeney's request but the Section 1 of the schedule and Section 2 of the schedule are as much a part of the constitution as the matters that were just read and they too, should be read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will proceed with the reading of the sections.

(The Chief Clerk then read the balance of Committee Proposal No. 14, Schedule.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, now what was your request, a letter that was on file from Mr. Shattuck be read at this time?

SWEENEY: Yes, since we read the letters on the education portion, I think it would be well to read this one.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

SWEENEY: I so move.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I thought we had agreed once and I think we should stick to the decisions we made that before we start in with the arguments for or against or criticism of these articles, that we would hear from the chairman of the committee so that he could give us the story and I think that we should do that. I don't think we should start in with arguments before we hear the complete story and explanation, then we won't get off on the wrong track and waste a lot of time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We know that the Chairman is going to make a lengthy dissertation. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President. Seeing that we are going to have an hour and a half or two hours of discussion on the apportionment article this evening, why in moving for recess I would like to have the delegates to the Constitutional Convention consider moving to recess into a Committee of the Whole do away with the stenotypist and shut the tape machine off for this whole discussion for this evening only. It would save three hours of tape and a lot of worry on the stenotypist, and I think we could possibly accomplish more this evening by going into a Committee of the Whole, discussing thoroughly the article on apportionment and then coming out tomorrow morning with our decision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the body? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: He'll have to ask --

COGHILL: I so move.

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

SWEENEY: I think we'll probably have to check with Secretary Stewart to find out whether the stenotypist for tonight has already been ordered.

COGHILL: I am certain we can cancel him because we have an hour and a half.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconded the motion that the Convention resolve into a Committee of the Whole after the dinner recess. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Is that motion debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is debatable.

KILCHER: I should like to argue against the motion simply because I think, if anything, it would be of value in the future to be on record. I would like to get a record of my stand on apportionment in every respect, that is one of the things that will have the furthest bearing in the future.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: In making this suggestion, I was not thinking of Mr. Kilcher or any other delegate's record. There is still tomorrow when this proposal comes out. You've still got time to verify yourself on the record. It's a matter of convenience to the delegates and a matter of economy as far as the Convention is concerned.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I would like to support Mr. Kilcher to this extent, that I believe this will probably be the most controversial article to hit this floor and if any one sentence at some future date can be referred back to the record, I think it is a minor expense that we should have tonight. I don't believe it is going to take any two hours and as soon as the conversation is over with, we can get down to business and accomplish something tonight at the end of the discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I agree with Mr. Coghill as far as the Committee of the Whole and just an informal discussion. I think that would be very profitable, however, I can't help but support Mr. Kilcher in that I would like to have it on the tape. I think it is going to be valuable in the future. I would like to save the money but I think it is worth the money.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I also have supported the idea of general discussion in Committee of the Whole, but with the full record for the purpose of further consideration and I believe that we should have the tape and the stenotypist here.

BUCKALEW: I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the previous question.

COOPER: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye", all those opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the previous question is ordered.

COGHILL: Mr. President, can I legally withdraw the question, now that it has been ordered? I would like to withdraw my motion if it is at all possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is before us. The question is, "Shall the proposed motion as offered by Mr. Coghill be adopted by the Convention?" The motion is that the Convention resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole following the dinner recess and allow a full discussion by the committee chairman of the apportionment article.

V. RIVERS: Are we voting to suspend the rules and go into this meeting or not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion stated that we would dispense with the record at that time. The question is, "Shall the motion as offered by Mr. Coghill be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 23 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Coghill, Cross, Gray, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, McNealy, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh.

Nays: 30 - Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Kilcher, Knight, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Hilscher, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 23 yeas, 30 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I move that the Convention stand at recess until 7 p.m. this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves that the Convention stand at recess until 7 this evening. Is there a second?

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, we will have a Local Government Committee meeting at 6:10 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the recess until 7 p.m.? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the Convention stands at recess until 7 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White, you may have the floor on the question of personal privilege.

(Mr. White, under personal privilege, introduced Mrs. William A. Egan, wife of the President.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention now has before it Committee Proposal No. 14. The Chairman of the Committee, Mr. Hellenthal, will you care to present --

HELLENTHAL: I will read a letter first of all that was requested.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, wasn't it the intention that you would have this letter read after Mr. Hellenthal is through with his presentation?

SWEENEY: Yes, whenever we come to the portion where we need it.

MARSTON: Can we have this whole program presented without interruption? I think it is for the good of all the people if we do this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease for a moment. Mr. Armstrong?

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, while we're off the record here, is it necessary to have a letter read of this type when the hearing was held in a town and it was open to everyone to come and present their views?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is up to the Convention, Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: It seems to me that it is taking up our time here when we have already given two and a half days of our time to this type of thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I agree with Mr. Armstrong on that. We did have a public hearing and we had the sentiment and the Juneau members received the sentiment and a copy of a deposition was filed with the group. I can see that there may be 50, 75, or 100 of these letters, if you set a precedent this way. I am fully acquainted personally with the feeling and I think the Juneau representatives are.

SWEENEY: I will withdraw my request to have it read if we will follow that practice but we had already started the practice of having some letters read, so if we adhere to this policy, it's fine. I'll withdraw my request.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the Convention resolve itself at this time into a Committee of the Whole with a full record for the purpose of hearing the discussion of the committee proposal on apportionment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection?

MARSTON: I object.

1833

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. White?

WHITE: I so move.

KNIGHT: I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that we acted on this before supper.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is a different question, Mr. Doogan, in that the question was that we go into the Committee of the Whole without a record. This motion is that we resolve ourselves into a Committee of the Whole with a full record, transcribed, and stenotype record be made of the proceedings. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I was going to make the appeal to this body of men and women that we do not interrupt the committee chairman until this Committee has had a full presentation. I saw this happen in the debate on initiative and referendum and I almost gave up when we attacked that from all angles here and no control, and I don't think we got any place with it until we got back into regular floor work, so I am going to request and ask unanimous consent that we let the Committee go clear through this and get the whole picture before you start tearing it apart, limb from limb, and what not. I'm going to request that, give a full story before you tear into it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I see no real advantage of going into a Committee of the Whole as long as we are going to have the full record. I can't see where we can do anything but waste time. We might just as well stay in session and then we won't have to have a report of the Committee of the Whole. I'm going to vote against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: The reason I objected, I was wondering now if we do go into a Committee of the Whole, will the record be in our minutes or is just a record kept?

PRESIDENT EGAN: A record of soundscribing, transcribing, and in the stenotype report.

ROSSWOG: Would we be given a copy of the minutes?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, you will not Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Then I will still object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, just a point of information. If we don't go into a Committee of the Whole, and stay in session, then a motion for amendment is in order at any time, is that right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Londborg. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would favor this suggestion that we would go into the Committee of the Whole for several reasons. We tried it once with the initiative and referendum and I think we were all a little disenchanted by the process because we didn't seem to get very far and it took us days and days thereafter to go through that article. I think we've had about the same experience on other articles when we haven't tried for an explanation in the Committee of the Whole. One reason I think it would probably be profitable for us to go into that kind of a session tonight is that the Chief Clerk, now that we are meeting day and night, has no opportunity in which to write out her journal of the proceedings except by staying at it in other hours when we are not in session and, as we all know, there are not very many such hours. If we're in the Committee of the Whole, no journal is kept. There is a record on the steno-type and a record on the tape but we could let the Chief Clerk go and try to catch up on the day's journal, which is a big job.

COOPER: I feel impelled to say this and that is. I for one will vote against this issue because I strongly feel that the President now presiding in the Chair can conduct the meeting much better during the evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole at this time?" All those in favor of resolving the Convention into a Committee of the Whole at this time will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" seem to have it and the Convention has not resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole. Mr. Hellenthal, would you care to begin your explanation?

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I do appreciate that questions will not be asked until we conclude the presentation of the Committee, and I should at the outset like to invite the delegates to the two maps that were mailed to them during the recess. I have them before me, one is the map with 24 Arabic figures on it, one is a map with 12 Roman figures on it. Each map is of Alaska, and I know that there are other copies available. If all of the members do not have copies now, they can get them from the Sergeant at Arms. There is also a paper entitled "Method of Equal Proportion", which was distributed to each member. And if some of the members do not have that, I suggest that you get it now from the surplus copies.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, would it be helpful to bring the map up where we can see it here?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Where do you think would be the best place?

(The map was then situated next to the President's table.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, at the outset I should like to point out that I feel that this matter is not so controversial, it is more technical, and that's why the Committee appreciates an opportunity to present the plan as a technical plan in the form of an integrated whole, because any apportionment plan must be carefully integrated. Now all apportionment plans are the results of weighed and considered compromises, and I want the members to bear in mind that this plan -- after careful and long decisions by the Committee members, after consulting for weeks with advisors -- is a weighed and considered plan and is made up like all other apportionment plans -- with compromises. And remember that in your considerations. Now the goal of all apportionment plans is simple: the goal is adequate and true representation by the people in their elected legislature, true, just, and fair representation. And in deciding and in weighing this plan, never lose sight of that goal, and keep it foremost in your mind; and the details that we will present are merely the details of achieving true representation, which, of course, is the very cornerstone of a democratic government. Now at the outset, the Committee met, analyzed the situation, read their bible -- the manual -- and determined to analyze the composition of this body created under the provisions of the 1955 Act of the Territorial legislature. They felt that it would be a good taking-off point, not that they had great pride in that body, but that they were more familiar with it than any other, and, furthermore, that it was the first body that had been created by the Territorial legislature and was born of Territorial and Alaskan experience. So they felt that that above any other bodies would be the body to study to determine and get hints as how to achieve truly representative government. They analyzed in turn the election districts that were created under this act. You will recall that there were 17, I believe, election districts as set up under the 1955 Act; you will recall that they consisted of, in the main, of recording districts; you will recall that the recording districts were ancient creatures in Alaska, that they are created by the district judge, and that in general they follow watersheds and in general they bring together a little sociological economic unit of the people of Alaska. They analyzed the composition of those districts, and those of you that were in the Territorial legislature probably realize the problems that arose. I suppose that the reason they call apportionment a difficult problem is that it is a case where a legislator -- and in the sense we are all legislators in the sense that I use that term -- it is where you are confronted with your selfish desires. You have on the one hand the people of the greater whole; on the other hand you have the people -- your neighbors, your friends who always urge you to help them to the greatest extent possible. And the problem generally is, "What can I do to help the greater good of the State?" And someone is going to be hurt. Now when I say "hurt", the language is intended to mean you can't, on an apportionment plan, I don't think, that if you were given the problem of apportioning the heavens, or heaven itself, that you could please all of the occupants, but you just have to try. So anyway, that's the way the thing started out. They went through each district, analyzed it back and forth. It was generally agreed that the plan which indicated the composition of the house of representatives was a sound one, and that the watershed-boundary principle, which was the principle used in the recording districts principally, should be adhered to, with one modification -- it was pointed out that in Southeastern Alaska. traditionally, the steamship routes have been used as boundaries and that generally a traveled route such as a steamship route was not a boundary, but it was a route piercing a valley, like a highway more. And so they recommended and felt at the outset that the watersheds should be used as far as land masses are concerned, but in an area such as Southeastern Alaska, and to a very limited degree, the Aleutian area, that if possible the boundaries of the election districts should be adopted, and with that in mind, the boundaries of the six election districts in Southeastern Alaska were drawn. Now after studying and going through the different districts, adhering to the principle of compactness -- in other words that a district should be as compact as possible adhering to the boundary principle of watersheds, adhering to what they call a socio-economic principle, and all that means is that where people live together and work together and earn their living together, where people do that, they should be logically grouped that way. They have come up with a plan calling for 24 election districts in Alaska. The population of those districts -- and population was an important factor in determining the boundaries of the districts is available, and for any of you that are interested, we have it and we can furnish it to you at any time any member has any questions later in which population is a factor. Now the 1950 census was the basis for population figures used. As we all know there have been great changes in Alaska since the 1950 census. So we knew that we would have to have some figures to reflect those changes. There are no official figures, as you all know; the census is determined decennially. There are no provisions in Alaska for a five-year census, so we must be bound with the ten-year United States government decennial census. So the advisors studied the school enrollment of the various cities of Alaska in 1954, and using school enrollment as a base. brought the 1950 census figures of the various election districts up to date, so that the Committee was well aware and had a firm basis -- the firmest available -- upon which to reach conclusions as to the present and projected population of the election districts. and those factors, those figures, were all taken into consideration in determining the election districts that are shown before you. Now in this map -- the reason for that map, the prime reason, is to show the delegates the watersheds of Alaska and their connection with these 24 election districts. The map that you have -- the small map, if your eyesight is very good -- you can detect the contours and can see the topography of the Territory, but this map shows it beautifully and adequately. And I think that any determination of the boundaries of these districts hinges upon seeing them in relation to the topography of the future State. Now based on the population and the districts, and based on projected populations of the State, and the projections indicated that the population of Alaska would be in the neighborhood of 230,000 following the 1960 decennial census and that the present population was in the neighborhood of 203,000. Now, based on those figures, it was determined, after studying them in relation to the 24 districts, that the composition of the house of representatives should be 40. Another factor entered into the picking of that number 40, and that was the factor of wieldiness; it was a wieldy figure. Was it such a figure that would be workable, not too expensive and yet which would adequately serve the representative areas of the state? Analysis was made of the 48 states, and as far as the Western states are concerned and the states that in geography compared to Alaska, it was indicated that 40 is right in line. It is, in the opinion of the Committee, workable, economical, and in line with the modern thought and the, prevailing composition of similar lower houses in the states. Now, again, I may have gotten a bit ahead of myself. Still another element entered into the selection of the number 40 -- that was the problem of reapportionment. As we all know, as there are shifts in population and shifts in economic stress in any state, there must be changes in its representation to meet the basic test of representative government; and various reapportionment plans were considered. We'll put aside, for the moment, the question of what agency of the government should conduct the reapportionment, but reapportionment was definitely in order. As an area fell off in population, it should be given less representation; as it increased in its population, it should be given more. The situation of the rotten boroughs was analyzed. Where boroughs with fixed limits had been set up, particularly in England and some of the states have them, and it was determined at any cost to avoid that in the future state. So it was determined that as the population grew, additional representation would be allowed to areas that grew; as it fell off, representation would be lost. But the Committee, after great consideration, felt that at the outset, that each of the 24 election districts should be assured representation in the new state, and they will be, and I don't think that any other scheme could be devised for that matter. Each of the 24 will have one representative. If after the 1960 census, or after the first meeting of the legislature if statehood occurs following 1960, the reapportionment board will meet, and, according to a plan set out in the constitution and recommended by the Committee, the reapportionment will take place. The number will remain, of course, at 40. But if the population of Alaska falls below a figure known as the quotient, and it is a true quotient that is the total population divided by the number of election districts -- but if it falls below one-half of that quotient, then the area, the election district that had representation at the first meeting of the state legislature will lose it, and that district will be combined with a district adjacent to it and contiguous to it until its population again grows. And that raises the second principle, which is, where within one of these areas - for example, take Area 23 -- that's the one north of Fairbanks here and not a part of 24, which is the Fairbanks district. Should an oil boom occur there, and should it be determined that there are two economic areas within the larger whole, the board that is recommended to you, accepting principles in the constitution, will create a new election district approximately within the confines of the older district, provided that the two segments of the older district, each in population exceed one-half of the quotient. So provision is made in the plans submitted to you, and it is in Section 2, for growth and the creation of new election districts, and for decline in growth and the suspension or possibly elimination of representation of the area that has been passed up with progress. Now in cases of population growth, there must be some true and fair method devised for apportioning the representatives to the election districts that have grown in population. Now this problem is the identical problem that the United States Congress faces when its membership, which you all know to be 425 or 435 -- one or the other figure. It escapes me --

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Four hundred and thirty-five.

HELLENTHAL: Four hundred and thirty-five. As the population of the nation increases, that figure is adjusted between the districts -- the representative districts of the nation. Congress gave many, many years to that problem, many years of careful study, and in 1942 they came up with what, in the opinion of Congress, is the very best method for handling it, the method of equal proportion, which was very adequately explained by Mr. Gray the other day. It is a well-known, clearly defined method, it is the method used by the United States Congress, and it's fair and just. The Committee felt though that there should be a modification of that plan to take care of our peculiar Alaska situation, and they proposed the modification and the modification is set out in the report: "...that any area with a major fraction of the quotient and no representation is to be considered more deserving than an area with a larger major fraction but which already has at least one representative." That is a concession to the smaller areas, the smaller election districts. It gives preferential treatment to the little fellow instead of the man who otherwise, under the strict application of the method, would get the extra representative first. The method of equal proportions has been applied to Alaska by Congress and it is no stranger to us. Now on the method of the composition of the reapportionment and redistricting board, because redistricting, as we have explained would be necessary, the Committee recommends that the stress be placed on the executive in determining which of these election districts and where redistricting shall take place, or reapportionment, and it recommends the creation of a five-man advisory board to advise the governor with regard to the redistricting and reapportionment. It sets up very, very careful standards and limiting factors so that the governor and the board will not run away and will be acting within the limits -- within clear limits -- and are not given wide discretion. Those limits are set out in Section 2. The reason that this plan was adopted is that the students and writers seem generally in accord that reapportionment, for some reason or other, I don't know why, but it has been neglected where it has been left to legislators. Maybe it's that human element I spoke of earlier, but anyway the experience of the nation shows that the thing is delayed -- procrastination; that in the State of Washington they waited for years and years and years, and finally, only by resorting to the courts and the initiative were they able to reapportion Washington. It was costly, the people suffered. And based on that experience and the recommendations, and it's almost universal of the advisors, and by advisors I don't mean the men that were here necessarily -- but the writers throughout the country, the executive board was chosen, an advisory, board. If for some reason or other the governor fails to follow the advice of the board and redistricts or reapportions, original jurisdiction is vested in the Supreme Court, on application, to compel it by mandamus, so that the duties and the principles set out in Section 2 can be followed and that errors can be corrected. I think that, in general, covers the plan for the house. As I say, I know there will be many specific questions as to particular election districts and the committee members are ready to answer those, and the population data are ready for anyone who wishes to question that. Now the next question, and the logical question, was the composition of the senate. Now the composition of the senate is shown on the second map that you have, and it is also shown on the reverse side of this map. Now an analysis was made of the present judicial divisions which are the matters that have guided Alaskans in their history in its senate, and the Committee, after that analysis and studying it believed that the major criticism, among others of the judicial divisions, was that it permitted a situation to develop where tundra could elect senators; and, further, where the hinterlands within the divisions could not, where a situation developed where frequently -- not always, but frequently -- those hinterland countries were left to the voting strength of the urban areas, and frequently, a definite tendency, the senators were chosen from the urban areas of Alaska, and the Committee felt definitely that that situation should be avoided. And with that thought in mind -- after considering many plans for electing senators -- a plan evolved in which the senators would be chosen from combinations of election districts. Starting from the tip of Alaska, from Southeastern, and working up you will notice, the districts were numbered 1 to 24. They take combinations of those districts in pairs. The first two, Prince William Sound and Ketchikan -- Prince of Wales Island, rather, which becomes the first step in the first senatorial district. Then the combination of district 2, Wrangell and Petersburg, with Sitka the second step. And the third step would be a combination of the Juneau Election District with the Icy Straits Election District. You'll notice that those senators are not chosen at large from the greater geographical area, but that they are chosen from the subdivisions of those areas. To take the first judicial division -- and it happens that the boundaries were identical the first senatorial district there would be one senator from each of the combinations of two election districts, two chosen at large, for a total of five. The constant factor is that from every greater senatorial district there are two senators chosen at large. Otherwise, the senators are chosen from these combinations of two. And the second election district, 17 to 20, compose the senatorial district. This roughly is the northern shelf of Alaska and encompasses this area two senatorial districts for a total group of four senators. In this connection I want to make one correction -- and you might make it on your map -- that District 20 on the map of the election districts is the Arctic Slope Election District rather than Noatak. And so if you could just on the schedule, where the name is found, refer to it as Arctic Slope. Through some error Noatak was used where Noatak is actually the Kobuk recording district. And then in the great river area of Alaska comes the Fourth Senatorial District, sweeps like the Yukon through the heartland of the interior, and it's made up of the Bethel and Bristol Bay Election Districts, the Kuskokwim Election District, of the Fortymile Election District and the Fairbanks Election District; and it has a two at large, three from combinations of two among six, for a total representation of five. And the remaining senatorial district comprises the Southwestern Alaska, and is as indicated on the map, and it consists of Election Districts 7 to 14, inclusive. And its total number of senators would be two at large and four chosen from combinations of eight. Now it was felt that Section 2 of the proposal made it clear that in cases of population growth, that this plan would accommodate itself to all such changes; but, to remove any doubt the Committee has determined to place in the report language that will provide that should new election districts be created resulting in. say, nine election districts in Southeastern Alaska, that the total number of senators from that senatorial district will remain the same, but that within that total, adjustment will be made, so that a fair combining will be made. If there were one extra, the problem is that you'd have an uneven number, so that the combination would be made so that in all cases there would be combinations of two, wherever possible preference given the combination of two; if that was impossible, that three would be used -- combinations of three, rather than one. One would be an unhealthy situation, of course, because that would permit a senator from an election district in addition to the representative, and would not fit in with representative government. So to clear this matter, which is implicit in the report and which may need possible clarification, the Committee has that language ready and will incorporate it in its proposal. Now the question arose again, like it did in the house, as to what number the senate should consist of. Now we will recall that in the early days of Alaska the senate was composed of eight senators and later that number was increased to its present form of 16. We will recall that 16 seemed to violate the principle of wieldiness, in that it led to the frequent statements that a small group was able, on certain instances -- isolated instances -- to thwart the will of the majority of the people, which is a clear violation of the principle of representative government. And for that reason -- that among many other reasons -- it was felt that 20 should be the composition of the senate. The two principle factors that led to the selection of 20 were the principle of trying to give the nonurban areas an assurance of representation in their senate, and the principle of making the senate large enough so that it couldn't be pushed around, so that it would be truly representative and not easily misled. And with those factors in mind, the number of 20 was chosen. Now on redistricting, on reapportionment, the approximate perimeter of senatorial districts will remain the same, but there are provisions made for some flexibility in redistricting should the occasion warrant, and it would be an isolated occasion. Now there were a few changes made in the composition of the house from 17 districts recommended and found in the present 1955 Act. Now, as an illustration, I want to pick the one that was first mentioned at the committee hearing and the one to which attention was first directed, and that is the situation regarding Ketchikan and Prince of Wales Island. Now Ketchikan had a population of 5,754 on the 1950 census. On the 1950 census Prince of Wales Island had a population of 3,364; that population has greatly increased -- and I don't have the figures with me right now, but Mr. Rogers is going to bring them down -- it has been a substantial increase. And for that reason a change was made in the 1955 Act to permit the creation of a separate Prince of Wales election district, which consisted of, in the 1950 census, of 3,364 people, and today probably consists of in excess of 3,500 people. The reason for that, as you know, is the logging activity that has come there with the pulp mills, and hence, that situation was recognized. Similar recognition was made to other areas in Alaska, and in general I might say it seems this DEW-line activity was one of the principle contributing factors to that recognition. Now I think that we have covered the plan in general. I will not go in at this time to the rather elaborate transitory provisions. It all hinges on whether the first legislature meets in an odd-or even-numbered year, and adjustments must be made in that case, and we feel we have made the most logical adjustments to take care of any eventuality there. The schedules. I want to emphasize, are a part of the constitution. Hawaii had a very similar program and a schedule which you have in the Committee report and which gives the districts and describes them and gives their composition. Those are printed in the back, or included in the back portion of the constitution, but they are a vital and stated portion of the constitution, and it is the Committee's recommendation that they so be included here. Now I hope I have given a general idea of this matter. Other Committee members are going to elaborate on other points and pick up anything that I have omitted. And Mr. Coghill, Mr. Peratrovich, Mr. Gray. Mr. Cooper. Mr. Marston. Mike Walsh -- they're all here and they will all be happy to help you. And we just hope that by trying to piece the thing together that it will make your ultimate decisions easier.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Hellenthal. The Chair was about to suggest that we not attempt to accept amendments tonight, or that the delegates not attempt to offer any amendments, that they just go ahead with questioning of the Committee members and hearing from other Committee members, if necessary; and. any delegate who has a question may ask it of the Chairman of the Committee or other Committee members. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may we have a short recess. I'd like to check the maps.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 7 has compared it with the original and finds it correctly engrossed, and the first enrolled copies will be placed on the delegates' desks in short order. I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard the report from the Chairman of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Unanimous consent is asked that the report be adopted by the Convention. If there is no objection, it is so ordered. The Committee Report No. 7 is now referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I speak to the Chairman of the Apportionment Committee. Would you call on Mr. Cooper, another member of our Committee to explain further the senatorial districting. I think he can improve a little on that.

HELLENTHAL: I wish Mr. Cooper would, then after that have Mr. Gray and Mr. Coghill and Mr. Peratrovich, all of whom could add to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: There's not too much that I can add to the explanation that Mr. Hellenthal gave on the senatorial division plan, with this exception: it must be realized and remembered by the delegates that the house plan -- the 24 election districts -- is based on population, and that the senatorial plan as offered to you here, is based primarily on geographical representation. The senatorial plan is the one measure that will eventually guarantee the outlying areas representation when the population will increase in great numbers in fairly minute areas such as Fairbanks and Anchorage at the present time. I shudder to think what would happen if at any time the outlines or the perimeters, as they now stand, might be attempted to be modified or amended by the delegates from the floor, in that this entire map of election districts and senatorial districts is tied together in one plan that provides for the representation that the people of Alaska have never enjoyed in the past. I don't believe that there is much more to be said on that subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have a question. I notice that we have used 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 numbering on the map but not on the committee report. You might explain that.

COOPER: I don't quite follow this.

MCLAUGHLIN: What the question is is this: I just asked Mr. Hellenthal -- we have two excellent maps, one with Arabic numerals and one with Roman numerals, and the Roman numerals are numbered 1 to 12 on the one map, and I can't relate it to anything in the text. Can you explain that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper, would you care to explain that?

COOPER: Roman numeral 12 is the senatorial district which is comprised of Election Districts No. 23 and 24 on your map with Arabic figures.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does that explain your question, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: It does not, Mr. President. What I want to know is, when we use these Roman numerals from 1 to 12, it is unrelated to anything that they have in the text. Now as I understand it from Mr. Hellenthal, those numbers don't relate to anything, they are just something you put down on the senatorial districts during recess, is that right?

COOPER: Yes, sir, to make it easier for the delegates to relate the senatorial districts with the election districts, which they are very closely related to throughout this entire program.

COGHILL: Maybe I can explain to the judiciary head the ramifications of this. The two maps were drawn during the recess, and we tried to photostat them from this here. We brought out this map of 12 Roman numerals representing the districts to clarify to the delegates the schedule that you will find on our schedule report, page 2, where we allow for two at large for, say District No. 1, which we have referred to as "A" on this map here. These maps are not going to be a part of the article, they are only for clarification for the understanding of the delegates. Your District No. 1 is actually the "A" district. It says that two at large will be elected from that "A" district; that one senator will be elected from Election District No. 1 and 2, which is, in turn on our senatorial map Election District No. 1, and so on through the whole map outline. Does that explain your question, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Coghill. Are there other questions? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President. I notice that on this little map where they have an "A", "B", "C", and "D" -- it seems to be a very logical succession. Over here in the schedule, I is "A", II is "D", III is "B", and "C" is IV.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, would you care to answer that?

COGHILL: Yes, sir. In bringing about our Roman numerals on page 2, Election District No. 1 is set at one. Two is referring to the old judicial division of Alaska. Election District No. 2, Election District No. 3, or Senatorial District No. 3 refers to the old or part of the old judicial district of Alaska -judicial divisions numbers 3 and 4 in turn.

NORDALE: Was it your intention then to retain those old labels?

COGHILL: No.

NORDALE: Or are you going to call "A" Senate District No. 1; "B", Senate District No. 2; "C", Senate District No. 3; and "D", Senate District No. 4?

COGHILL: Well, if I might say, that has very little point, Mrs. Nordale. It could be called that, but I believe that the reason why the Committee set it at this was not to bring about a point of confusion with the other members here delegates and referring to the old judicial divisions.

NORDALE: The only thing is, it seems illogical to me. We all know how they happened to be numbered in the very illogical way that they are right now, and it seems to me that now that we are ready to start again, it would be much more sensible to go 1, 2, 3, and 4.

COGHILL: I'm sure that the Committee has no objection to that. I'm not speaking for the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Coghill a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I was concerned, Mr. Coghill, because while we have a map, and while we have a list that lists certain election districts, none of these election districts were defined. Now it's my understanding that the Committee is preparing and will have to go in -- as actually part of these schedules or boundaries of these various districts a schedule bounding the various election districts. Is that right?

COGHILL: I might refer that question to Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Yes. Mr. Rogers is preparing the final description of each of the 24 districts this evening, and they are prepared and have been made up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I might also add that upon adoption of our plan by the Convention, the Cadastral Engineering Office in Juneau will make the official definition of the lines. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I'd like to ask a couple of questions. First of all I'd like to say that I think the Committee has done a phenomenal job. I think everyone who has followed their work is quite impressed that they were able to come up with as good a solution. There may be minor disagreements, but as a whole, certainly the plan for the representative districts is very good. One thing that concerns me about the representative districts is that in Section 2 of the proposal, on page 2, on line 8, the governor is granted authority to create additional districts. I think that anyone who listened to Mr. Gray's explanation the other day and realized its full implications understood that Juneau, according to this schedule, is losing a representative to which it should be entitled because of the modification that the Committee has agreed upon to provide representation to more thinly populated areas. And I'm not disagreeing with that concept. What concerns me is that even greater injustice can be created if the governor, taking this authority, went all the way and created 40 representative districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President. Yes, the governor may further redistrict by the creation of two or more districts from within the larger geographic socio-economic areas of the state. That language all alone would permit the creation perhaps of a full 40 or 48, if it weren't for the restriction of 40. subject to the following limitations and here they come: "...the new election districts so created shall be formed of contiguous and compact territory, shall contain a population at least equal to the quotient obtained by dividing the total civilian population by forty.." That's one, and still another: "... shall contain as nearly as practicable relatively integrated socio-economic areas.. That prohibits gerrymandering which would have to take place were 40 districts arbitrarily set up by the governor. That would prevent it, and the principle of compactness and contiguity would also prevent it, and, furthermore, another limiting factor, the governor -- and mind you when I say the "governor" it means the governor on the advice of this advisory board "shall use drainage and other geographic features in describing boundaries wherever possible." On behalf of the Committee, the Committee feels that gerrymandering is definitely prevented by these restrictive limits.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I believe the language is clear in intent; I question its actual legal limitations upon the governor or the board that may be advising him. I think that you can put up a good argument taking these standards set up here, with a little bit of population added you can divide Haines from Skagway, if they reach a little bit more population. I could just go through and name quite a few, but I mean the thing is you can create a lot of small districts all over Alaska. The point that I'm trying to make is that when you create four more districts or six more districts without even having to go to 40, you're automatically going to create injustices in other areas, especially within a few years after that new redistricting has taken place. As you add another district -- Ketchikan, Kodiak, Anchorage, Nome, and Fairbanks, you may very easily lose another representative. What I would like to point out is that the other day Mr. Gray, in his explanation said that this system of equal proportion works most ideally when you have twice as many representatives as you have districts. The more districts you create, the further you get from the ideal; and,

I still would like to have some more committee consideration -- more strong limitation upon the governor's powers to create additional districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I might take the prerogative to try and answer that question. Mr. Fischer, there is one thing that you must bear in mind at all times, that when the population of one particular area grows, so does the population of all of Alaska. The total amounts become higher, and by dividing that by 40 you have, in turn, a higher quotient -- your quotient becomes higher. Your districts that do not grow will automatically lose their representation, not in the sense of losing complete representation; they will be joined with another district and will be represented that way. They will always have a vote, but you will never get to the point where that you will have more population than your districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Well, Mr. Coghill, do you agree with Mr. Gray's statement of the other day that the ideal set up is when you have twice as many representatives as you have districts? I mean, that's the closest you can come to the ideal.

COGHILL: What is probably the ideal situation, I wouldn't venture to say, Mr. Fischer, because the concept of watersheds and socio-economic areas is still a big factor in the reapportionment.

GRAY: I said that it was in my opinion. I had valued it out where in no case should your districts take more than your population. In my opinion in the little work that I have done, I didn't want the districts, like if we had 40 members, if you get 30 districts or 35, the less number you have for population upon population or multiple figures of the quotient.

V. FISCHER: While you're up on your feet, do you think that since the house of representatives is supposed to be set up on the population basis, and accepting the committee proposal modification, in order to keep that, there should be a maximum number of districts in the constitution, be it 25 or 30, or 24?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray, do you care to answer the question?

GRAY: If I follow you on this, like anything else, it is what do you want? The members divided into the population gives you the quotient figure. We have one representative for every 2,724, and every representative has that much and if multiples are exact figures of 2,724, then you come out even. That is the system of the quotient. Now when you have a modification, the Committee thought was, it provides that any area with a major fraction, and they don't have enough and no representation at all, is more deserving than an area that has a major fraction and already has no representation. You put the modification in and then you start stretching your equality of systems. You have a mathematical premise. and then you are imposing a moral premise on it. Now you either have to take the moral premise or a mathematical premise; you can't have both. Do I explain myself?

V. FISCHER: Mr. Sundborg shakes his head. You did explain yourself to me, and I understand you fully. In accepting the moral premise, the question is how far shall we stretch the mathematical premise. And my question was, would it not be feasible to set a maximum limit as to how far we'll stretch the mathematical principle that you established?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I followed this Committee pretty much. If I asked for the privilege of talking a little more than I ordinarily have, it's because I was attending every meeting and I find I know pretty near as much about it as the committee members. In this article, if you will notice, Mr. Fischer, it says that when they form new districts, they can only do it when the population is at least equal to the quotient obtained. It didn't say half the quotient. Now if they had gone ahead with that thinking, that they could use the half-quotient, then I could see where your contention would be right, and by continually making new districts and using a half-quotient, why they could eventually use up all the representation and deprive the larger centers of their just and fair due. But unless I'm mistaken, it wouldn't work that way in this case, because any new districts that are formed in the future state will not have the privilege of having that half-quotient deal which would gradually eat up all of the surplus. Does that answer your question?

V. FISCHER: I understand your reasoning. I will yield my point. I'll discuss it with Mr. Gray later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, my only point was that if a limitation on the governor, who acts on the advice of this civilian board, and is subjected to the checks contained in Section 2, as well as the other checks of the constitutional provision, and the check of public opinion, and the check of recall and re-election, and everything else, if the governor, on the advice of the specialists, were to flaunt the thing, I think that there would be a very quick remedy. But if the group felt that a limitation on the number of districts that could be created were in order, I'm sure that the Committee would have no objection; but I know that the Committee feels that there are sufficient checks on any abuse of that power in the proposals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think it might be a good idea to get that blackboard down here that we had a while back. We never used it as much as now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking if we can stand at recess and get the blackboard, if it's available?

COGHILL: The blackboard is behind your stand, behind the maps.

KILCHER: I have figures here which it might be well to draw on the blackboard; they have no direct bearing on the map, just on the problem in general. And if a chalk were available, I would like to use it, if there is a chalk available?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking the Committee to take their map off? Is that your request? Behind it is another map, Mr. Kilcher. The Convention will come to order. Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. President, I ask for a two-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two or three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher, do you wish to use the blackboard?

KILCHER: Yes, sir, I would like to use the blackboard.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I'd like to hear from more of our Committee. This plan was born out of heat and strife, and it is a good plan; and, if you start kicking that around, we are going to be in for days of working and getting it back together. It's a plan that will make the constitution live. And you kick that around and throw a lot of foreign matter, you will not come up with as good a plan, and I hope that you will think thoroughly on that before you go into a lot of foreign matter. I was hoping we could spend the whole evening on this and go home and sleep well, and tomorrow the sky's the limit. The plan will grow with the population of Alaska. I hope that you think thoroughly on it before you throw it into days of lost time and then come back to this plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, it's been by general agreement that there will be no amendments offered to this plan tonight.

Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, in the nature of this evening's session, I would like to make a few remarks in the nature of questions, the same as Mr. Fischer did awhile ago. I'm worried about possible outcomes of the apportionment system as proposed. Maybe tomorrow somebody will find a solution; maybe I'll be convinced that we will have nothing to worry about, but in the nature of an inquiry for my part and possibly also suggestions, I think I'm very well acquainted with the problem at hand, and one problem that was possibly my main interest in the Convention, and I would like to make a few remarks. The first thing that comes to my mind is that I'd like to address to Mr. Gray. When you mentioned that the system of equal proportion of the United States had been applied, with a minor modification, I agree, except that the word "minor" -- that this modification, I think, is a basic one. We may be in favor of it, and yet we may not; but I'd like to point out the basis of this modification, and a few other basic problems. I think it is good luck that we have this opportunity to talk for once about basic issues, if you recognize them, before we amend and amend. We might make slight changes -- changes in the system of apportionment and possibly everything that's on the map -- maybe minor changes, maybe as it is, we will sail through nicely, tomorrow. I don't think there will be very much argument, personally. But the main disagreement I would have with Mr. Gray is there, in the case of the United States, they are assuring one representative to each state at least, whereas we have potential collapsible districts. I would like to make one illustration here as to what very likely might happen under this system of collapsible districts by bringing in a few figures. In other words we have to decide, maybe tomorrow, whether we want or do not want this collapsible district or whether we want a guaranteed representation in the lower house, period. That's the decision we have to make. Now if we are assuming here, as statistics have shown over the last 50 years, especially over the last 20 in Alaska, rural populations are fairly static in certain areas; they are even dwindling -- absolutely dwindling -- and urban populations are skyrocketing. I can see that in Alaska the skyrocketing would rather be the rule of the future. Now I have here a letter from the Office of the Governor, which indicates that in certain areas of Alaska the population may have shrunk the last five years, from 1950 to 1955. We are going from the assumption here that the Alaskan population is 108,000 people. Mr. Hellenthal tells me that he has available the submitted correct figures for 1954, which I had hoped we might have by now and have mimeographed for comparative purposes, it would save time now. But if we go from the assumption of 108,000, as your paper shows, a major fraction is 1,362. Is that right of that quotient of 1/40?

GRAY: That's right.

KILCHER: And 1,363 would not be a major fraction --

GRAY: Put it at 62, it makes it even. That's not a major fraction, that's 50 per cent.

KILCHER: Now on the assumption that the present population is about 200,000 -- is that roughly correct?

GRAY: Roughly.

KILCHER: If it is about 200,000, a major fraction would be 2,501 and a minor fraction would be 2,500, and the assumption that Alaska will double its population in 25 years which I think it will -- it will only be 400,000; if it doubles in 50 years it will be 800,000 people. You may well have a situation where a major fraction would be 10,001; the minor fraction 10,000. It's quite possible that of a population of 800,000 people there will be 100,000 in the rurals, that would be twice as many as there are now, or half again as many as there are now. In some areas there will be developments, and other areas it will be a stationary figure. Now if 800,000 people should be distributed, for instance, over five major cities -- industrial cities, boomtowns, or something, or solid cities with a variety of industry in them, it will be quite possible that these five cities which are in five districts would have 35 representatives in the house -- 35 representatives from five districts. That would leave 19 districts to have five. Nineteen districts would have five delegates to get a total of 40. In other words, 14 districts will be collapsed. It's quite possible.

GRAY: Rightly so, I might add.

KILCHER: Now also it is possible that three or four districts might collapse and pick them up two senators, so they will be super districts of -- let's say three former districts, not to be too harsh three former districts, they would have one -- (writing on blackboard) let's take four to illustrate the worst possibility. They have two senators and one representative. As a matter of fact there might be a district that has one senator and no representative whatsoever. So this is a possibility we have to foresee. Now this is projecting in the future, but I'm afraid that already now -- with the available (writing on blackboard) I may be one -- (Mr. Hellenthal then handed Mr. Kilcher a piece of paper) Mr. Hellenthal, thank you. With the available corrected figures, we now have a district that should be collapsed, now possibly?

HELLENTHAL: You mean that would be under 1,301? I know of no such district.

KILCHER: Of course, if you go to 200,000 it would be 2,501.

HELLENTHAL: On a population of 200,000?

KILCHER: Yes.

HELLENTHAL: If the 200,000 people all went to other areas and none of them went to this area (indicating on map), I think that there are one, two, three, four, possibly five or six districts that might lose their representation on that assumption.

KILCHER: I mean on your corrective figure for districts, too?

COGHILL: Mr. Kilcher, I think that you're making the issue a little too far on this in taking things on assumption. We have to go on a true decennial figure. Every 10 years, why, they take a census of the Territory, and that's what we are going on. We can't project what there is going to be. I can foresee many developments in the Fourth Division or the Third Division that will take place. You can't assume that there is going to be five greater urban areas and all the rest of Alaska is going to become wasteland. I think that your argument is completely invalid.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, is it permissible to ask questions and answer questions to keep this issue clear?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct.

COOPER: Mr. Kilcher, there are two facts that have come out of the Apportionment Committee that by no stretch of the imagination can be amended on this floor, and that is, that you have two houses. One will be apportioned on population; and, one on geographical area. Those two facts have been established. That, in a sense, is apportionment. I don't care if Anchorage, tomorrow, has ten million people; the outlying areas and the balance of Alaska will have their representation by geographical. Now if Anchorage or Kenai or Circle City, or Point Barrow, or Klawock, tomorrow has 10 million people, then they rightfully are entitled to the entire 40 representatives in the house of representatives, because it's based on population and population only, but the balance of Alaska is not going to secede to the East or West or North or South. They will still have their representation in the senate, because it's based on geographical.

KILCHER: I agree, Mr. Cooper, I fully agree. I was only pointing out a possibility that this urban area may get their two shares in population based on representation in the lower house; however, on the other hand, we in the senate, as the proposal has it, are making compromises to population, also. I'm trying to show the picture -- the potential in the admitted extreme by pointing out that if one house is potentially almost exclusively based on population, the other can hardly be based enough on area, and I'm afraid that the senate proposal -- I'm driving at the senate proposal with these figures (indicating) -- I'm afraid that the senate proposal is not quite enough based on area. I just submit that for now. I would like to let somebody else present their figures in other respects. We'll come back to that maybe later on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I'd like to make one comment here. Mr. Kilcher is getting up into 50 years in the future. Possibly in the next 50 years there may be another constitutional convention and they'll bat it out all over again.

KILCHER: I'd like to answer that question, if I may?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Proceed, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Namely, as I said before, Mr. Hellenthal seems to have estimated the figures of the actual Alaskan population of all of Alaska and the districts in question as much as can be estimated with school enrollment figures. The estimate, I think, is within about two to five per cent, which is as accurate as we can have things with our fluctuating population, and I maintain that we should not stubbornly base an apportionment system on figures that we know now are quite inaccurate with the present. In other words, why should we create an apportionment problem already for certain in 1960, when we can possibly adjust certain figures now and delay the apportionment problem maybe a generation or one and a half generations, and that's what I'm driving at. And as far as the amendment goes, Mr. Harris, I don't want to allude to the failure of my amendment to pass, granting an automatic convention, but apportionment and an apportionment problem and the change of apportionment is one of the main reasons why history has shown that constitutional conventions are so hard to arrive at in the state where questions of the house and conflicting interests are involved. They are the main reasons why we might not get a new convention when we most need it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to ask of the Committee? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I'd just like to say one thing. If within the next 50 years you don't have a constitutional convention, this plan will at least adopt five reapportionment committees which will meet and advise the governor in the changes that should take place or would be necessary for apportionment of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I'd like to say just one thing in return to Mr. Kilcher's plan here, that I say again, that we are working on the 10-year census basis, and according to Mr. Kilcher's proposal, he's trying to infer to the delegates that we must have a reapportionment each year. I can't foresee in 1960, what is going to happen between now and then in the Territory of Alaska. I think that he was just begging the issue and trying to confuse it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have an inquiry that I'd like to direct to the Chairman of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may direct your inquiry, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Hellenenthal, first let me say that I think your Committee has done a very excellent job, and I have this question in mind, however, and it isn't quite cleared up yet as far as I'm concerned. I understand that under our proposal now, the membership of the house is limited to 40 members. That is a constant figure, as I understand it, until changed by amendment of the constitution. Now the plan also contemplates the creation of 24 election districts from which the members of the house will be elected. That is correct, is it not, Mr. Hellenenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

JOHNSON: So far as the initial election goes, at least, there will be one representative from each district, plus some additional representatives in the more populated districts, is that right?

HELLENTHAL: Correct.

JOHNSON: Is the plan that you have presented here designed to -- I know that the governor is given the right to change districts or rearrange them, but is it the thought or plan of the Committee that the number of districts would also remain constant or might that change up or down? That's election districts, that's what I'm talking about.

HELLENTHAL: Depending upon population increases or decreases and the method of creating further districts to keep in pace with those declines or growths set out in Section 2: "The Governor may further redistrict by the creation of two or more new districts from within the larger geographic socioeconomic areas of the State." and that means the entire statement. "or by otherwise changing the size and areas of districts, subject to the following limitations: the new election districts, so created..." and then follow the limiting factors.

JOHNSON: I understand that language. The thought occurred to me, however, or rather I was going to ask, has the Committee considered the possibility that there might be some way of keeping the number of election districts at 24, even though you might rearrange them from time to time, the number might remain constant if it I don't know wether that is possible actually, but --

HELLENTHAL: It's possible, and it has worked to the disadvantage of those states that have tried it, and it was because of that fixation that the method of equal proportions and apportionment were created. It was because of the great evil that arose from that situation and they would probably arise here in Alaska with increases in population or decreases, so for that reason you have this flexibility. That's the "Why" of apportionment and redistricting and equal proportionment. You will notice, perhaps it wasn't brought out, that in the modification of the method of equal proportions, there was a great concession made to the election districts to make it a little more difficult for them to lose by population decreases. It was a concession to them because of their socio-economic areas, and it was a departure in that sense from a strictly population apportionment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, I would like to explain something that probably hasn't come up. One reason why you figure this 24, it shows in this modification that this lesser group having no representation was deserving on a moral issue. Your major fraction base is, for true representation, would be on a house of 80. Your half of a quotient is 40 times two halves, which gives you 80. Why can't he hold down to 13 or whatever it is? Because you run into a moral issue. If in your section you allow one man to vote twice or three times or four times, that is illegal--it's a crime against suffrage. So indirectly you have the same thing because this representative for this 1,400 people has exactly the same voting power as this other group with 2,800, indirectly. So there is just so far you can go with this moral issue without creating a worse moral issue. Do you follow me, Mr. Johnson?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. Gray, the other day you gave an illustration of a case of a 75 per cent error and 71 per cent error. Would you explain that, why you chose which one of those two, between the 75 and the 71?

BUCKALEW: Could Mr. Gray use the blackboard, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you care to, Mr. Gray?

GRAY: Sure. Anyone else that wishes to multiply with me may.

(Laughter by the Convention.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

(Mr. Gray then stationed himself before the blackboard with chalk in hand.)

GRAY: The example I used was Sitka and Juneau, and following the report we received from the census, Sitka had 4,148 and Juneau had 7,116. I think you will find those figures on that board there. Now what we have here, if we have one representative from Sitka and three from Juneau, Juneau has three times the representation as Sitka has, and they do not have twice as much population. Obviously unfair. So we give Sitka two representatives and Juneau two representatives. And now Sitka with only 4,000 population has the same representation as Juneau. Still unfair. And so the question is on differences, and getting to the fine point, which one is the most unfair. They are both unfair. Both propositions are unfair. It's a question of which has the greatest error. As long as you're handling mathematical figures and leaving the moral aspects out, it can be solved by mathematics, and take the difference and divide by the smaller, and you get a percentage of error. Take the other way around, and take the difference and divide by the smaller and you get your percentage of error, and of course, the assignment with the smaller error must therefore be the most fair distribution. Well, we'll go back and do it the other way first (indicating figures on blackboard) with this one, and that one -- bringing this representation down to per representative, you have 4,148, and three into seven I'm ahead of you. And so you have 1,776. So 1,776 is the absolute error. Now we tried to tell you the other day that they found I could use absolute error, but we found out by advice from the experts that percentage of error is a finer distinction than the relative error. So we take the 1,776 and we divide it by the smaller number, and I get 74 per cent error.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Gray, might you point out what you mean by that.

GRAY: This is the percentage of differences, if you wish the word.

HELLENTHAL: In other words that it might be off somewhat from true philosophical niceties, but it isn't mathematical error?

GRAY: No, it's an error in relative position. If these two figures were the same, it would be zero, and it's a question of relative fairness. If these two figures were the same, it would be absolutely fair. As long as you have one representative representing 4,140 and one representative for 2,372, the difference in representation, the relative difference is one representative is representing 1,736 more than the other, and you just work it down to percentage. So if you establish the one at 74 per cent, now we'll use the other figures here (computing figures on blackboard). It gives a difference of 1,484. Take your 1,484 and divide it into these smaller numbers 2,074, and you come out with a 71 per cent difference. The other one was 74; this is 71. The error in representation was larger than the other, this being smaller, this must be the more nearly fair of the two.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, may I ask a question of Professor Gray?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Aren't the two numbers reversed? The 2,074 should be divided into the 1,484?

GRAY: Correct.

(Laughter by the Convention)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

GRAY: The answer came out the same. The idea is to come up with the right answer no matter how it's done.

(Laughter by the Convention)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other questions? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, just so it will be clear now, if I understand what Mr. Gray has just said, on the sheets which have been passed out, on District No. 5 should now be changed to 2, and District No. 4 should also be changed to 2 instead of as they are in the sheet.

GRAY: That would be taken care of at a regular amendment, and the first system, as set out there was the Benton system, which was the greatest major fraction, and that is correct under the Benton system the old discarded system. Now in applying this equal proportion method to the same figure, they all came out the same, with this one exception. This is the one exception, otherwise, the Benton system and the equal proportion system would give you the same answer.

DAVIS: I understand that, but that -- but the actual figures --

GRAY: The actual figures here are as we reported it, and when the amendment comes up, we'll amend the thing so it will appear in the record as why it was amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to be asked of the Committee? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, it's going to be very difficult for me to ask a question when I say what I have to say, but I will attempt to. I refer back to a little while ago to remarks by Mr. Kilcher. The figures he put on the board which were alluded to as being somewhat absurd. I don't think the figures were absurd at all; and neither do I think that they necessarily sink the particular proposal as brought out here. I think the differences can be reconciled. Now they can't be reconciled morally and they can't be reconciled mathematically, but practically, as times goes on and our population increases -- I'll come to my question -- is it not reasonable to believe that the apportionment board that you have set up and the pressure of the growing area will have to make some compensations for this thing? That situation could happen that he showed. In fact, there is a tendency now that if it is carried on, it would happen, but yet, at the same time, we can't devise a system that is going to work forever. And I think the thing that we should keep in mind is that as these situations come up they will have to be met by the best minds that are around. If it takes a constitutional amendment, then that's what it's going to take.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other questions? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I'd like to ask Mr. Hellenenthal if he had explored any other method of having the apportionment commission appointed. My viewpoint of it is that the governor, who is the head of the executive branch of the government, chooses his own board and then makes a reapportionment as the commission reports to him. Why did you necessarily select the governor with his own commission? Had you thought of any other method of commissions?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, Mr. Taylor. Great thought was given by the Committee to other methods. It seems that historically -- well, first of all in the history of the nation, the legislatures met and did their own apportionment and reapportionment, and redistricting. That method was a total failure, and it has been a failure in every state of the Union. So various modifications crept in in order to assure that the reapportionment will be made and that there will not be neglect, and that rotten boroughs won't creep up, and that irrepresentative government develop. Now in the State of Illinois they even went so far as to provide that if the redistricting and reapportionment was not made forthwith by the legislature, that every legislator would be chosen at large until the reapportionment was completed. A drastic, drastic step, but that's the only way they felt that it could be forced. Now a lot of it comes from the principle that you can't mandamus the legislature, and in many states they just sit there. Washington was a good example. They just sat back and figuratively thumbed their noses at the people, and the reason for it was that they just couldn't resist selfishness, and the enormous pressure that was brought on them by their constituents, and a deplorable situation developed. In Washington, as I stated, it took the initiative to reapportion, and only after countless law suits and immense harm to the people. Now there are other plans. There is no end of variations of plans that can be devised for the reapportionment with the mandamus feature, and you could have variance where a board can be picked -- three from the legislature, three nominated by the judicial council, if you want, three of them nominated by some other group of civilians, some appointed by the governor, and get a good cross-section, and they could have the authority themselves to make the redistricting and reapportionment. There is no end to it, but the best thought seemed to indicate that the people would be best helped if it were an executive function. Now the legislature has a powerful check. If two-thirds of them don't like it, they can call for a constitutional convention -- or rather a constitutional amendment. There are lots of things the legislature can do to indicate their protest, and if their protests are valid, there are lots of things they can do to make their point. But it is the inaction of the legislature, as testified to by the universal history of the 48 states, that we're trying to overcome.

TAYLOR: Did the Committee realize that at the time they selected the governor and his commission of five, that the commission, or constitution would confer upon the governor a law-making power for years and years to come until there would be a constitutional convention, or the constitution be changed?

HELLENTHAL: Well, as I said, I think the governor is subject to many checks. Of course, in my mind the most powerful check is the check of public opinion, and I can't imagine a governor just disregarding the constitution, and there are so many other checks -- his re-election is another check, his recall. It wouldn't amount to address, but you could impeach the man, if he just flagrantly disregarded your constitution. I don't think he will.

TAYLOR: One other question: This is not too important, except we happen to be looking at it from the law viewpoint. Why in this proposed article, did you confer upon the supreme court of the State of Alaska original jurisdiction to try disputes as to reapportioning?

HELLENTHAL: That language came identically from the language of the Hawaii Constitution which was recently adopted, and we felt that the matter of such supreme importance as this should be conferred on the supreme court and that they should be given original jurisdiction. There might be a better court.

TAYLOR: Do you not believe that the superior court could be more available to any disgruntled voter living in these areas which have been reapportioned and they thought it was wrong to bring it in the district court or superior court and allow the supreme court of Alaska to be the appellate court in case anybody was disgruntled with the action of the district court?

HELLENTHAL: Of course their review would be confined to review of legal matters and not facts. Perhaps it was thought that the supreme court was a bit more detached than a superior court.

TAYLOR: But if the district courts abuse their discretion, you can always raise that in the appellate court.

HELLENTHAL: But as you know and I know as lawyers, to raise the question of abusive discretion you have got to be awfully right.

TAYLOR: Could you not in your proposal put it that the superior court should have original jurisdiction and that the supreme court would be the appellate court and also could find as to the facts?

HELLENTHAL: Try it all over again? Sure. But I think it would be a bit expensive.

TAYLOR: But try it on the record.

HELLENTHAL: It would delay things, but it would give you two courts instead of one.

TAYLOR: Mr. Hellenthal, as Chairman of the Committee, I think that you and your committee have done a wonderful job. There are just a few of those little, minor things that could be ironed out and should not take us very long. I feel now, from the explanations that you and Mr. Gray and other members of the Committee made, that I believe I would be willing, at the present time, with a few minor changes along the lines that I thought of or that have come up. I'd be willing to adopt this proposal in very short order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President. I'd like to ask a question of Mr. Gray. I'd like to pursue this matter of the ability of the governor, with advice of the board, to subdivide election districts. Now if I'm correct, in none of the 24 election districts as established by the Committee, is there more than one center of population, with a population greater than the quotient. Each election district just contains one major center of population or more?

GRAY: I believe so, in the areas that I know. What happens in that Anchorage area? I see they have a population of 23,210. I couldn't answer your question. I would refer that to Mr. Hellenthal.

WHITE: That isn't my main point. I'm on the way to it. Taking that for granted at the moment, I would assume that this provision for subdividing would be to allow for cases that might arise where there are two major centers of population within an election district, each of which might grow to have more than a full quotient, let's say in the case of Haines-Skagway, or Petersburg-Wrangell?

GRAY: I would assume that is the point, because if they have a quotient, they are entitled to a representative; that's the basis of the whole idea.

WHITE: Now my question is, would it hurt the provision for subdividing these districts by saying that such subdivision would only take place in the case of there being two or more major centers of population with a population greater than the full quotient?

GRAY: Well, that's a restrictive clause. You restrict a population area well, take an area like Haines for instance, back in my country. Now Haines by itself would have 2,724, the rest of the district the nonurban area would have the remaining quotient. If you have to have two populated cities, you can't divide that district because you would have just one population center just spread out. Now the point is, could you isolate the populated areas from the other districts? Under the present program you could.

WHITE: I should assume that it was the Committee's intent to allow that kind of subdivision to take place?

GRAY: Speaking for myself. I understand that that is true.

WHITE: Now would it be normal procedure under this subdividing provision to subdivide an area, let's say like Election District 15. for example, in which there would be a number of smaller population centers, none of which have a major quotient?

GRAY: Yes, that's quite true.

WHITE: Is that also what you wish to make possible?

GRAY: In my opinion it was. If you'll look on the map to your Alaskan peninsula, in the Aleutian Islands you have a district there that runs 1,400 miles. In that one district you could have 2,700 people, and 1,400 miles from the population of Attu Island, although there is no one center of population; and in that case -- that happens to be an extreme case -- but in that case, as pointed out, you would divide the section and have the same socio-economic areas as a compact unit and have the quotient creating a district.

HELLENTHAL: How many could you get, or could the board get if they chose to get the maximum, say in that District 15, or which is Bristol Bay, or 14, which is the Aleutians?

GRAY: Well, just under the general practice on account of your population, and using your quotient, the number of districts that you will create under any group will run between one-third and one-half of your districts only with that full quotient. Now you can possibly see, like Mr. Kilcher did, on extremes with figures you can run any way you wish. But in our experimental work on this we found that the total districts, like you have in District No. 1 -- I believe you have 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 -- you have 14 complete districts out of 24 with a good representative example; and that's a good reason why you could presuppose, and all this redistricting that will come up in 1960 and 1970 will run about the same way with your redistricting.

WHITE: Let's say we have a legislative district that is fairly homogeneous, and with socio-geographic factors, could you still, in the absence of any major population centers whatsoever within that district, take a line and divide it down the middle under this provision for subdividing so long as you wound up with the major quotient in each house?

GRAY: Well, as pointed out here, a newly formed district, you have these four provisions and the redistricting board. You would have to follow the requirements in the constitution.

WHITE: If you got an egg and cut it in half, you still got the egg in both halves.

HELLENTHAL: The point is, it would be impossible to arbitrarily cut a line down through any election district, because it would violate the very clear principle that the new election districts must each be compact. It would violate compactness; secondly, it would violate the principle that they should be socioeconomic areas. It would be only the most remote sort of interplanetary coincidence that would permit an exact line to be drawn down through the heart to coincide with socioeconomic boundaries. It just doesn't happen.

WHITE: My purpose was accomplished, Mr. Hellenthal, by getting that on the record. One more question, taking the case of Fairbanks area, would it be suitable grounds to subdivide here between Slaterville, let's say, outside of the city and Fairbanks, inside the city?

GRAY: In my opinion, no. That was brought up whether we should isolate the city, and that was clearly thought out and discarded. And it may be my background, but I don't believe the isolating of the city, the municipality, appears in this form; and it was my understanding in the discussion that we discarded the isolation of the municipality because the fringe people are the part and parcel, economically, of your city.

WHITE: That would be my understanding.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have a question of Mr. Hellenenthal. What is the advantage of working through the governor to reapportion rather than having the board of reapportionment doing it directly itself?

HELLENTHAL: It was felt that it was primarily an executive function.

SUNDBORG: Would it not still be so even if they were a part of the executive branch of the governor, even though appointed by the governor?

HELLENTHAL: It is conceivable; it could be worked that way.

SUNDBORG: Is there some advantage to saying that they shall report to the governor and he shall do it?

HELLENTHAL: Well, yes, in a sense it keeps it under the executive arm of the government; it does away with a permanent board. It was felt that it was a proper executive function as contrasted to the legislative, although I think the objections would be greater to turning it over as a legislative function than to having it as a board function.

SUNDBORG: Well, I wasn't suggesting that it be turned over to the legislature, but why bring the governor into this, except to say that he shall appoint the board?

HELLENTHAL: Possible. You might feel that the governor should appoint the board. But it's nice to have one man, it would seem to me, I'm trying to think of the recommendation, that one man be ultimately responsible and that the ultimate responsibility would be placed there.

SUNDBORG: Now as I read this, although it says that the board shall act in an advisory capacity to the governor, actually he has no discretion, does he, except to carry into effect whatever plans of reapportionment that the board of reapportionment submits to him?

HELLENTHAL: I think that the governor does have discretion, and, as I said before, he could, I believe, theoretically, disregard the advice of his board. I think he could, but he would have to answer to the courts because of any error in redistricting is subject to review; any departure from the limitations imposed in the constitution. Theoretically, he'd have a discretion, but he'd have that mandamus as a check; public opinion as a check; recall, and so on as I stated before.

SUNDBORG: The language on page 4, the second paragraph of Section 5 says: "The board shall submit to the governor a plan..."

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

SUNDBORG: And the governor shall "...issue a proclamation showing the results of such reapportionment or redistricting, which shall be effective..." Now where he has any discretion in there, I don't see.

HELLENTHAL: Well, we think in the entire language it clearly vests discretion in him. It says, Section 5, line 7: "...and act in an advisory capacity to him."

SUNDBORG: Advise him what to do, I see, but I would say under the second part of that section he has no discretion but to follow their advice.

HELLENTHAL: We felt entirely different on that. This use of the word "advisory" made it purely an advisory board, and we wanted the plan though to be submitted in writing so that if the governor did go off, there would be a record of what he went off from, and we could show the people could show where he departed from the considered judgment of this advisory board. You will notice, too, there is a provision made for the employment of assistants. Now the reason for that is that the Census Bureau has a staff set up in a special agency in the Census Department with specialists who make their livelihood of applying the method of equal proportions and they send them to areas where they are desired; and we want to be sure that these services will be available to the new state.

SUNDBORG: What advantage is there to permit the governor to depart from the plan of apportionment which this nonpartisan board, which has studied it, recommends to him?

HELLENTHAL: Very very little, but he might think of something they didn't think of.

SUNDBORG: I'm afraid he would, and that's why I think it should be done by the board, or else to allow the governor no discretion. When an election district collapses, does it lose its identity?

HELLENTHAL: No, it's joined with the next adjacent district, and the people are members of that district until their population grows again so that they can once again be represented.

SUNDBORG: Until such time as they again get enough population, they would automatically become an election district?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. Here it is here: "Should the total civilian," reading from lines 2, 3 and 4 from page 2, "population within any election district fall below one-half of the quotient, such election district shall be attached to the election district adjoining it having the least civilian population and the reapportionment shall be determined for the new district as provided above." So no person will ever be disenfranchised.

SUNDBORG: I didn't ask that, I realize that no person is ever disenfranchised but say, what if Election District No. 22 falls below the required number and collapses and is attached to Election District No. 24, is it still an Election District No. 22 which, once it gets one-half of the quotient automatically comes back in?

HELLENTHAL: No, because you can't tell what will happen. It loses its identity, in other words, and it should properly lose its identity. A good example I think that is near to us all is Big Delta. Say Big Delta might possibly, as a little economy is growing there, people are gathering down there and from my own observation, it might grow in population so that it could go over the hurdle and be a separate election district. It is a very good example of a separate socio-economic district within a greater one. It is in its own little watershed area, which in turn is within a larger watershed area. Now Big Delta might grow and then fail. Tok might grow up in the meantime and the emphasis would be shifted to Tok which is still in the greater watershed area, then it would spring in and it might rise, or perhaps fall. That is up to the redistricting board, according to those four or five principles set out in Section 2.

SUNDBORG: Did the Committee give thought or consideration to the possibility of providing that when one of these election districts collapses, instead of being attached to the one adjoining it or having the least population, that it would be attached to the other part making up the senate district?

HELLENTHAL: May I defer answering that for a minute, because I may have made a mistake.

COOPER: An election district does not lose its identity; it is still a half of the senatorial district and as such has its definite boundaries and perimeters. So it's still an election district even though it doesn't have the population representation.

SUNDBORG: I see, and the governor could not give it back under the provision where the governor can create districts. The right to elect a representative or be a representative or election district, it would have to reach the full quotient?

COOPER: Yes.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Hellenenthal, did the Committee consider, or is there any merit in the suggestion that when a district collapses it be attached, not to whatever one of four or five contiguous areas which has the smallest population, but to the one within the same senate district?

HELLENTHAL: Which one?

SUNDBORG: Well, your election --

HELLENTHAL: You mean within the first step process?

SUNDBORG: Yes.

HELLENTHAL: Yes, sir, and in every instance it would work out exactly that way.

SUNDBORG: Wouldn't it make it simpler from the standpoint of distributing ballots and so on to have it in the same senate district than in one across a senate line?

HELLENTHAL: I think it's just a choice of language. I think the same result follows in any case.

SUNDBORG: Except, that say 1 and 2 together now would elect a senator, wouldn't they?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, sir.

SUNDBORG: What if number 2 -- for the sake of argument -- collapses and you attach it to 3, because it is the one adjoining it which has the smallest number.

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

SUNDBORG: Then you would have the situation where 1 would be electing some representatives and 2 and 3 together would be electing some representatives, but No. 1 and 2, which is not in the same senate district -- wait a minute -- 2 and 3 which are not in the same senate district are electing the same representatives.

HELLENTHAL: The area concept would prevail there. I think that was the point Mr. Cooper brought out that I didn't bring out too clearly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I think Mr. Sundborg's assumption there is correct. We went over that in the Committee, and they would be joined with the contiguous areas within the senate area.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to bring to the attention of the delegates that the hour of the arrival of the bus is drawing near, and if it is the desire of the delegates, we could continue this at this point in the morning -- this discussion about the proposal, and finish this before we proceed with any proposed amendments to this article. Is that the feeling of the delegates? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I do have two or three simple questions I'd like to ask, but I also want to go home. If I'll be given an opportunity to ask them in the morning, I'll make the motion to adjourn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is evidently general consent that we proceed in that manner -- no amendments will be offered until all delegates have had ample opportunity to have asked their questions of the committee. Are there committee announcements? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Coghill of the Administration Committee as to whether there was a decision on working tomorrow night?

COGHILL: No, Mrs. Sweeney, there was no decision. I thought we would bring that up on the floor tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I move that we adjourn until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements before we actually adjourn? If there is no objection, the Convention stands adjourned until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 12, 1956

FIFTY-FIRST DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Reverend Armstrong, would you give our daily invocation?

REVEREND ARMSTRONG: Our loving Father, we ask Thee to use us in this day, we pray, that in the service of our future state that we might mark well those sign posts of life and liberty and pursuit of happiness for those yet to come. Keep us vigilant, keep us peaceful, and make us progressive in our thinking, for this we pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: One absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Are there any communications from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Reports of select committees? Are there any proposals to be introduced at this time? The Chair would like to state that General Dean will make his speech in the college gymnasium this afternoon at 1 o'clock. Following that speech over there he will come here and we don't know the exact time, so we will just have to hold that in abeyance, but General Dean will be here this afternoon to make a few brief remarks. We invited him to do so. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Would it be in order to make a committee announcement at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith, you may make a committee announcement.

SMITH: I want to announce that the Committee on Resources will meet Sunday at 2:00 p.m. at Apartment 504 in the Polaris Building. I would like to announce also that the Committee on Resources will meet tomorrow at 12:50 during the noon recess in one of the committee rooms upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Resources will meet Sunday at 2:00 p.m. at Apartment 504 in the Polaris Building and at 12:50 p.m. tomorrow in one of the committee rooms. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, it has been brought to the attention of the Committee on Administration as to whether the delegates wish to meet this evening. It seems there is some feeling among the fair sex of the delegates that they would like to have this evening off for purposes of getting their hair fixed and what not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was the motion made on Sunday that was generally agreed to? That we go through the week or through Friday, what is it? What is the feeling of the delegates as to the evening meeting? We should let the committee chairman know so he can notify the lunch room upstairs. Is there objection to meeting this evening? If there is no objection we will proceed on the assumption that the Convention will meet this evening at 7 o'clock.

COGHILL: I will notify the food center.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, that is the procedure we will follow. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 14. It is not open for amendment at this time, and we will proceed with the discussion that we began last night. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have a few simple questions which I would like to have answered. I won't ask them of Mr. Gray, I am afraid I will be confused by figures. I would rather ask Mr. Hellenenthal, our able defender of principle. I agree with the Committee's report on all the detailed work they have done. I will have to make a little statement first to give you an idea of what I am getting at. I agree to their formula for proportionment of the general boundaries. I think they have done a good job on boundaries. I am acquainted with the people and the topography. The doubt in my mind has to do with your basic approach to the thing. For instance, the number of members in the legislature. It seems to me that rather than having the Apportionment Committee decide the number, the Legislative Committee should decide the number, taking into recognition the procedure in the legislature, what kind of men you want there, and terms of office and all that. Once the number was decided, that should have been turned over to your Committee and then they should be apportioned. The other thing is the number of election districts. Of course, we must have everyone represented, the different areas and small villages. I am strongly for that, but I don't see why one of these representatives could not represent a little larger area. Can you tell me how it was decided that we should have that number of election districts and that number of representatives?

HELLENTHAL: I will try, Mr. Barr. Your first question was aimed to determine why the number of legislators should not have been fixed first and then the apportionment made. Well, the Committee felt it was like the question of the chicken and the egg, and that the two could not be separated, and that an analysis of the necessary election districts must precede the fixing of the figure, and the Committee firmly so believed. Now for the moment let me pass any further discussion of that first question and get into your second, because it is kind of co-related. Now on the second question, as to why was the number of election districts fixed at 24 and not some smaller number -- well, I don't want to repeat any matters that we went into last evening, but it was felt, first broadly, that to give adequate representation to Alaska with its many facets and many little distinct areas, that "24" was a necessary figure. Perhaps to approach it from the legislature, the legislature made the analysis and felt that "17" was a necessary figure coupled with certain representation from areas at large as represented by the judicial division at large and further representation from the Territory at large. I think there were seven chosen at large from the Territory in this body. So looking at it from that analysis, the legislature felt that was the way to do it. The Committee felt there were 24 separate socio-economic units with sufficient population at the present time to merit a representation based on present population figures.

BARR: Do you say with sufficient population? Now I notice from your figures here in the less densely populated sections, at least, your lowest figures, one representative should represent about 5,000 people. Now, where do you get that figure and how many states use that figure? It seems to me that in Illinois, the city of Chicago would be represented by 1,200 people in the legislature.

HELLENTHAL: We do not have that figure, one for 5,000. That was not the approach used.

BARR: I saw that figure somewhere.

HELLENTHAL: No, I don't know where.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, if the Chair may, is it not true that as the population increased that figure would automatically increase?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

BARR: I understand that. Well it seems to me, as I said, I approve of your boundary lines, but I disagree with the number of districts and the number of representatives for the reason I don't think they are necessary at the present time, and as long as you have provisions to increase the number of representatives with the increase in population that would be sufficient. And our first cost during the first years of statehood concerns me on the salaries -- we show concern here about the high salaries paid the members of the legislature -- well, they increase in number as well as increase in costs. The large number of election districts might have an indirect bearing on cost also. I have a feeling that future political subdivisions will take their cue from that. There might be more of them smaller, and I mean such as boroughs and what not where we might have more courts and all. What was the representation you figure on population?

HELLENTHAL: It was not approached in that manner, but working back on it I would say, subject to correction by any of the mathematicians here, that excluding the two very large cities of Fairbanks and Anchorage, that the average election district contained approximately 3,500 people.

BARR: Just one other question, sort of important to this division, I just question your boundary in one place. As the boundary goes north from Fairbanks here, takes a jog around Livengood -- now I can see if you wanted to throw one village into another area, that would be okay with me. Livengood is connected to Fairbanks by a road; it is connected by scheduled airline. They get all supplies and mail from Fairbanks. Now I can see you followed the height of land there more or less, but Livengood is just in the edge of the hills, and you would not necessarily have to abandon that principle if you just came down off the summit down to the foothills there.

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Helleenthal, would you like me to try to answer that?

HELLENTHAL: You certainly know all about it, and I know nothing.

COGHILL: Mr. Barr, we used the watershed principle in drawing these lines. The water from the Livengood area flows into the Tolovana River, and the Tolovana River flows into the Tanana River at the community called Tolovana. It is on the south side of that range. The watershed flows this way. There will be no question in anybody's mind if these boundaries are preserved as to what election district they are in because on one side of the line all the water flows to the Yukon on the north side of the range and all the water flows south into the Tanana and into the Yukon on the other side.

BARR: I understand that perfectly. And you used that method in utter disregard of the social or economic aspects of the case?

COGHILL: I don't believe so, Mr. Barr. I believe it would be just as contiguous to Fairbanks as Manley Hot Springs or Rampart.

BARR: No, there is no road to Manley Hot Springs. There is no comparison at all. I think you have abandoned your principle of boundaries in that decision there.

HELLENTHAL: Livengood was never mentioned as such in committee discussions, and you may very well have a point there. That is one of the aspects of this plan. That is where your redistricting would be an adequate subject for redistricting that, and I imagine there will be other similar cases. Whittier was a dandy. I ask you to focus your attention on the problem of Whittier which was on the other side of the watershed where the mountain was pierced by a tunnel, thus eliminating the barrier. Your point would be Livengood and similar points. If an error has been made, that is a beautiful job for the redistricting boards, and a good illustration of flexibility. In that connection I do point out, although this is of minor importance, that according to the 1950 census, Livengood had a population of 40 people and in 1939 had 153. From what I have heard I imagine the curve is declining somewhat there.

BARR: It has declined but I don't believe it will any further. You say this is a good job for the board. It is also a good job for your Committee right now, because I imagine when the election comes up the referendum on this constitution, the people of Livengood will object.

COGHILL: I would like to point out to Mr. Barr also that although we have maybe violated the socio-economic concept there and provided for the watershed, if you will go further down onto the Yukon River basin or the Kuskokwim basin you will find that the district between 22 and 21, we have provided for the socio-economic area, and we have violated the concept of watershed. You have to take and weigh one against the other in every instance.

BARR: The watershed will not complain but the people of Livengood will.

COGHILL: I don't think so.

MARSTON: With your permission, and the chairman of our Committee, I would like to elucidate just a little further on Mr. Barr's first question. We took for making these districts the patterns laid out by the legislature that made possible this Convention. It was a beautiful program they gave us, but we merely corrected that by adding to Cape Prince of Wales Island, the Kuskokwim River, the Bristol Bay, and the great Barrow district and took their plan and corrected the errors and gave representation to all of Alaska. Now to make these larger -- that Barrow district up there, that one voting district is larger now than half of all the states of the United States individually, so they are big pieces of ground we are throwing around, and I think they are plenty big enough right now. I merely add that to what Mr. Hellenthal said.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: May I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question? Mr. Hellenthal, in the report of your Committee and in your explanation you have several times mentioned the term "socio-economic". Now I think that I know what you mean, but I am wondering if that is a term, a political science term, or something with any definite meaning; if it is a term that is used someplace else so that when somebody looks at this they can tell what we are talking about?

HELLENTHAL: It cannot be defined with mathematical precision, but it is a definite term, and is susceptible of a definite interpretation. What it means is an economic unit inhabited by people. In other words, the stress is placed on the canton idea, a group of people living within a geographical unit, socio-economic, following if possible, similar economic pursuits. It has, as I say, not mathematically precise definition, but it has a definite meaning.

DAVIS: I agree, but I still want to know whether or not it is a term that is used. Is it a political science term, so that when somebody uses it they will know what we are talking about?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, definitely. It is in common use among political scientists.

SUNDBORG: A few minutes ago when Mr. Barr addressed a question to you, Mr. Hellenthal, I heard him say, and I did not hear you say otherwise, that you had made provision here for an increase in the future for a number of representatives. Is that correct?

HELLENTHAL: No, that is not correct.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Barr stated there is no provision in this proposal for an increase in either the number of representatives or senators. There would always be 40 representatives and always be 20 senators?

HELLENTHAL: Correct.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Hellenthal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Johnson, if there is no objection.

JOHNSON: In connection with this word "socio-economic", I had a question also as to whether or not it has ever been defined on a legal basis. In other words, do you know of any court that has ever had occasion to define it in an opinion?

HELLENTHAL: I do not.

JOHNSON: I can see where this might come into play if this particular section gets into a state supreme court, and I just wondered if there were any legal precedents for this type.

HELLENTHAL: I think it is a political and economic term rather than a legal term.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Hellenenthal a question. In your Committee's thinking did you give any consideration to the possibility of holding back out of your 40 members of your established house, holding back a proportion or some few of that 40 pending the 1960 decennial census? In other words, we are about midway, currently, of the decennial period and my thought was that if a certain reserve, three, four, five, or six of these 40 might be held back pending that actual population figure establishment at that time -- did you give any thought to that?

GRAY: Mr. Hellenenthal, I think there has been a little confusion on that. By a matter of equal proportions, after the first group is set up, in this case it is 24, from then on all additional senators are on a priority list. With this same list you can pick the top 40, top 41, 86; if the basic in this is 24 we can pick out the 25th and from there on to infinity so that as long as you have a system you pick the top 40, why the first 40 on the priority list; that is it and the 40th man will always go to the most deserving district as the factor is there. Does that make it clear to you?

HELLENTHAL: In other words it would destroy the method of equal proportions and it would throw the remaining representatives and their distribution completely out of harmony.

MCNEES: I fail to see in my thinking your last statement where it would throw it out of harmony. It would seem to me you could hold your 24 currently or any figure beyond that as your house and add to it only as population warranted it in the future. In other words, say you take on three or four more added at the end of 1960, maybe another couple at 1970, and maybe the last one in 1980, and make it available then. You feel it should absorb the full amount now? That is the Committee thinking?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

GRAY: It does not make any difference, Mr. McNees, and in the redistricting you have another group. I do have one of these schedules made out. I will have it mimeographed, and I think you will follow the importance of this priority list. I think it will explain the question. The individuals or the districts that deserve its 40 now might as well have them because there is no further claim. After another district is made, why there will be a district that will deserve the 40 representatives and you save nothing by holding back.

HELLENTHAL: Might I suggest, Mr. Gray, that the delegates contact you and see the list rather than wait until it is mimeographed because I anticipate only a relatively few specialists will want to analyze it. It is available and has been as announced for several days, so be sure to see Mr. Gray about it.

COGHILL: This might clarify a point that in order to find out what the fair representation is, Mr. McNees, you have to have a common divider. The common divider is the total amount of representatives. There are 40. If you divide the population by 40 the figure you get is what each representative is truly representing in our population by numbers, and therefore, if you only give 35 representatives and you are using the 40 figure, there are five quotients that are unrepresented in Alaska. Does that explain your point?

MCNEES: Yes. The only reason the question came in my mind at all, I appreciate the Committee's thinking on this, but in the Legislative Committee we came up with a maximum figure of 40 for the house, where you established it as a fixed figure. That was the only question in my mind. I like the work you have done in this. I think it is splendid and the only question in my mind was where we established it as a maximum figure you took it as a fixed figure and I just wanted a little bit more of the Committee's thinking on it. I have it clear now I think. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to point out to Mr. McNees and anyone else who might be thinking in terms of reducing the number of house seats at this time, that following the method of equal proportions as you decrease the number of house seats allocated at this time, the quotient increases and if you knock it down to 37 the immediate result would be that Yukon Flats, Arctic Slope, and Cordova would lose the representative to which they would be authorized immediately under this plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I may have missed something along the way, but I would like to ask somebody on the Committee if they had considered reapportionment, but not redistricting. Now as I understand it, if a district loses or goes below the major fraction or quotient, they lose their representative and they are bound to the next smallest district. In the case of the senate actually being a district, it does not lose its identity because they still maintain their senate representation, and I am wondering if they had given some thought to setting these 24 districts as permanent districts and considering reapportionment in the future on that basis.

COGHILL: I think Mr. Gray could probably answer that question, but I would like to interject the point, Mr. Doogan, it would violate the concept of equal proportion from the standpoint that if a district does not come up to the standard or the amount of 40 divided into the total population, why then they would not be eligible and a representative would not be representing an equal amount of people.

ROBERTSON: I would like to address a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: In my Proposal No. 6 I proposed that the senate consist of 16 senators and that the present judicial divisions should be made into legislative districts. Now, first, I would like to ask, have you not in your proposal entirely ignored the theory of having representation at large as our federal government has in senatorial representation? Also, have you not entirely ignored the experience we have had since 1913 in having senators at large from each division?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think that we went into these matters last night, but I will repeat them briefly again. The Committee has not ignored the principle of representation at large. In fact eight of the recommended 20 are chosen at large. Furthermore the remaining 12 are chosen at large perhaps from a smaller area than historically chosen in Alaska, but they are nevertheless at large. Now, the figure of "20" was chosen with the thought in mind of wieldiness, wieldy or unwieldy. After the analysis of other similar states with particular emphasis on western states with mountainous terrain and with scattered population, such as Alaska, and the principle being kept in mind that the Committee felt strongly that emphasis should be placed on giving representation in both the house and the senate to a degree to representatives from nonurban areas; I use the word "representatives" in the comprehensive sense, to include both senators and legislators in the house, and with those principles in mind, the rigid plan, the historical plan which you followed in your proposal and which was carefully considered by the Committee, it was in those respects that I have outlined, and for the reasons stated, the broad reasons, departed from.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. Hellenthal, I believe that Mr. Fischer misunderstood me a bit. I did not propose to reduce the number of representatives without reducing the number of election districts. I would like to ask, suppose we cut the number of election districts in half or reduce them greatly and the Yukon Flats area was combined with another district, then they would be represented, would they not?

HELLENTHAL: Oh yes. I am sure you had that in mind. I cannot conceive of anyone in this group who would want to leave any portion of the state of Alaska unrepresented.

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question or two to clear up my own thinking. In connection with the election districts, as I understand it, under the redistricting clause -- the governor's board will have a chance to adjust not only the number to divide and subdivide them and add together, but also will have a chance to adjust somewhat the boundaries and area, is that correct?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

V. RIVERS: In connection with the senate districts inside of the over-all districts, that will also apply to those districts inside the senate districts?

HELLENTHAL: To a very very minor degree and subject to the five limiting factors set out in Section 2 and the additional limiting factor that the approximate perimeter must be preserved.

V. RIVERS: That's what I'm leading up to. Now on these main four districts, do you consider the boundaries of those four districts as fixed political subdivisions of the state?

HELLENTHAL: No. They are to be used only for the purpose of senatorial representation of a certain type; namely, the at large representation and that is primarily concerned with the eight recommended senators chosen at large from these senatorial districts.

V. RIVERS: In the over-all boundaries of the senatorial districts there is some slight flexibility?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, slight flexibility.

V. RIVERS: That could be made then to more or less fit into the boundaries of local government districts as they might be adopted later?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. Say there is a change on an election district on a perimeter of a senatorial district and the redistricting board feels that a change is in order. Take the Livengood matter. Assume Livengood is on the perimeter of a senatorial district, and it were determined that Livengood should be encompassed in the Fairbanks district; then that senatorial district to that very limited degree, its perimeter should be adjusted in keeping with the decision of the redistricting board.

V. RIVERS: Did you gear all other subdivisions of government to the boundaries of the election districts -- could we make them coincide with boundaries of adjacent local government districts in slight degree in this same area?

HELLENTHAL: We did not try to gear it with any other committee or any other subject matter, but after reading the committee reports of those committees that pursue similar subjects, I was impressed, and the committee was impressed, with the similarity, almost the identity of the conclusions reached in that regard, so I think that they are, although not intentionally, I think they are geared completely.

V. RIVERS: You agree though that there is certain flexibility in the boundaries of these over-all four political subdivisions?

HELLENTHAL: To the degree outlined.

V. RIVERS: I, of course, note and I think everyone else does, that this representation plan is heavily weighted in proportion to people at least, not area, in the favor of the rural areas. I wondered if you thought how long it would be in the general trends of population before the urban areas and representation would catch up with the rural areas. Now, I don't state that as a criticism. I am merely asking you for information because I know that the general trend and tendency in a new area like this is to grow and to certain centralization. As my analysis shows it, 75 per cent of the present population and 75 per cent of the taxing power, you have approximately 18 representatives of the 40. Is that somewhere near your figures?

HELLENTHAL: I think so, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Would it be 10 or 15 or 20 years before they might reasonably balance out?

HELLENTHAL: Frankly, I don't know, but you could say in a real sense that the urban areas will never become equalized with the hinterland areas and deliberately so. The committee deliberately made that concession to the hinterland areas feeling that the gain was well worth it.

V. RIVERS: I wanted to fix in mind where there was any coordination first with other local concepts of government boundaries and just how fixed and inflexible these boundaries might be.

HELLENTHAL: In that connection, representatives of other committees that are concerned with similar problems have worked closely with our group and observed its progress and apparently they are in accord and they find nothing contradictory with the conclusions that are recommended by this Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: May I address a question to Mr. Hellenthal? I note that the senatorial districts follow somewhat the same as our old judicial divisions in numbering. We jump from one up to two and back to three and up to four. Would there be any objection to following some orderly procedure in setting up those districts?

HELLENTHAL: No, the Committee made no recommendation as to the designation to be applied to the senatorial districts. You will notice that in the committee report they are referred to as "A, B, C, and D" in one place. In another place with the Roman designation "I, II, III, and IV", and in still another portion of the report they are referred to as "Southeastern Alaska, Southwestern Alaska, the great River section of Alaska, and the Arctic Slope of Alaska". This group could feel free to adopt designation it sought. Another designation might properly be "Southeastern, Southwestern, Central and Northern".

BOSWELL: Then that is to be taken care of when we start working on the article?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, indeed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions of the Committee? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Hellenthal if on this map of the senatorial districts, say for instance, the "D" Section should all of a sudden take a great spurt and have a great increase in population, their senatorial representation does not increase, is that right?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

SWEENEY: If the First Division or a division down here had a drop we would never lose our five?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

SWEENEY: A few minutes ago you said that there was a possibility that the Livengood area, which is in Legislative District 23, might be joined to Legislative District 24, "or is Livengood in 22? I don't know, but anyway it is in that "C" section, and it might be joined to a "B" section, and then at another point, say Legislative District 16 be jointed to 17, you are losing two legislative districts out of the "C" section. Now would there not be some question on senatorial representation? You are losing districts to two senatorial districts.

HELLENTHAL: Very careful attention was devoted to that problem, and in a few minutes some clarifying language will be submitted by the Committee in connection with that very proposal, so the intent of which is to make it crystal clear that there will be no loss in senatorial representation.

SWEENEY: My point is that, I understand if the population increases they get increased representation, but there is none in the house?

HELLENTHAL: That is unless the population of every other district in Alaska likewise increased proportionately in which case there would be no increase. It is a relative increase for which the award of extra representation is made.

SWEENEY: But there is no increase in the senate?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

SWEENEY: I put in a proposal, you will recall, to keep the representation in the senate on an equal basis and I am wondering if it would be possible to leave your lines as A, B, C and D and not call them judicial divisions but keep your plan just as you have but instead of giving five in the Southeast and six in the Southwest and five in the Central and four in the Arctic Slope or the North Section, whatever you called it, make it equal?

HELLENTHAL: It would be possible but the Committee definitely recommends against it.

SWEENEY: I would like to recommend to the Committee that they consider this again; then if you want to have your 20 you can have them at large. I would like to see the senatorial representation equal.

V. RIVERS: Equal to what?

SWEENEY: To each other. On an area basis. On your A, B, C, and D districts you would have equal representation in the senate except for the four at large -- you might have unless you want to make them five in each district and use up the 20.

GRAY: May I help you on this? The Committee had two distinct plans. One on one extreme and one on the other extreme, and like everything else with our multiplication factors there are compromises. The one plan on the one side was the four areas with four senators from each area like you have stated. On the other side we had 24 districts and a senator to each district. So by taking half of one plan instead of taking one senator from each of the 24 districts, we took half of it, one for each two or twelve from the area spread. In the same way we took half of the other side instead of four from the major districts we took two. So what you have here is a compromise between your plan and a compromise from somebody else and their plan. I think Mr. Coghill's, but this is a compromise, half of your plan in this senate composition and half of the plan in the other extreme. It can be changed, but this is a compromise factor, and this is how they reached the two systems of senators, senatorial representatives encompassed in this one plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, do you relinquish the floor?

SWEENEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: May I inquire of the Committee along the line that Mrs. Sweeney has been approaching that if I understand her question correctly and if the plan that she was talking about were adopted, it probably would mean that five senators would be assigned to Division A, five to Division B, five to Division C, and five to Division D. I think that is what she means by this equal proportion, or equal division. But did you consider the possibility of that sort of an arrangement when you were discussing and preparing this plan?

HELENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: Mr. Chairman, I don't know if I can answer anything that has been presented here by our able Chairman, however, as a member of this Committee, I would like to say a few words on this work that has been presented here for your consideration. As has been related here already, we had proposals from practically all parts of Alaska before commencing our work into committee, and I assure you it was not an easy matter to come out with a report that we have here before you. Some of you will recall that at times we had to have some peacemakers in on our committee meetings. But the result was we came out with a compromise program that I feel can't be much improved on. As far as I am concerned, I happen to come from a small community, a small area, and I presented my view. Fortunately we had other problems similar to mine throughout Alaska, and we compromised there. Consequently, in the house, Prince of Wales Island, incidentally the largest island under the American flag, will have one representative, etc., all through the Territory of Alaska, where a similar condition exists they shall have a voice in the government in the future State of Alaska. That is the object your Committee had in mind. In forming this new state, we wanted all sections represented, and I think we were successful through compromising here and there to give that representation to all areas of the Territory as far as the house was concerned. Now we come to the senate and as you well know, the primary concern of all of us here was to keep our expense down. Your Committee was very much aware of that also, so it decided perhaps a 20-member senate would be sufficient to conduct our government. On that basis we went to work and arrived at this conclusion that is now before you. Personally, I can't keep away from referring to my own area because I am most familiar with it. In my particular area I am joined up with Ketchikan and Hyder. We will be entitled to one senator and we go up the line, Petersburg, Wrangell, and Sitka would be in the same situation -- Juneau, Haines, Skagway, etc. Now we were confronted at the time before making decision here whether we should have representation elected at large from the entire Territory; some of you requested it and a few of us from the hinterlands you might call it, felt that this would be unfair. We realized that perhaps once out of 20 or 30 years perhaps we would have a timber that would be competent to participate in the state senate, but we did not rule out the fact that such a condition would be possible. Again we were asked, how would you guarantee that. My answer to that is I don't care where you come from, how small a community, if you participate in your own party, take an active part, your voice will be heard, and if you are a good man you will be recognized. I am willing to gamble on that. I am sure that these little so-called hinterlands will participate in the future State of Alaska on these grounds. I therefore support this issue. I have no fear of it being abused in one way or another. You put your checks and balances in there by redistricting and reapportionment in the proper time as provided herein, but I do think that your Committee labored in earnest here and considered all of your problems and we came out with something that I am sure will be acceptable to everyone throughout the Territory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, if I could ask Mr. Hellenenthal, I think I like the plan. Just take the Seward and the Kenai area, the Kenai Peninsula, east and west side. Suppose some unfortunate circumstance would happen. The railroad has pulled out of Seward for instance and the population on the east side of the Peninsula should drop to less than a thousand, would our district collapse and join with the sister district, the Homer district, is that right?

HELLENTHAL: District No. 10, the Kenai-Cook Inlet District.

METCALF: And then the east side would become a dormant house representative district is that right?

HELLENTHAL: Dormant in the sense that if its population reasserted itself and other facts remained constant, the redistricting board would probably create it again.

METCALF: Supposing in 1960 when this reapportionment comes up, the Seward side of the Peninsula is still dormant, what would the reapportionment board use as a divisor? Instead of "24" would they use "23"?

HELLENTHAL: Forty divided into the total population. That is the fixed number.

METCALF: But it would only be 23 districts then, house districts?

HELLENTHAL: There would be only 23 house districts.

METCALF: Then the senatorial districts of Roman numeral VI, the boundaries would still remain fixed in the same and never lose its identity as a senatorial district?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

METCALF: Then supposing you find some oil over on the Seward side and 10,000 people moved back into the district; then redistricting again, would Seward come to life again and be an active house?

HELLENTHAL: Correct.

METCALF: It sounds very good to me.

WHITE: I just want to get something clear in my mind. If I follow Mr. Metcalf correctly, in the case of the Seward district collapsing it is contiguous to districts 8, 10, 11 and 12, and under the current plan, it would be joined to the contiguous district where it is the smallest?

HELLENTHAL: To a senatorial pair -- that might be good language to use. I think I anticipate your question. At the meeting which unfortunately delayed us this morning and for which the Committee apologizes, clarifying language to make it "the senatorial pair" in that case has been made up and will be handed to you on this slip sheet following whatever recess may be taken this morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: One little thing I might like to suggest here that we do not continue to use that word "collapse". There is going to be no part of Alaska collapsing. Alaska is not going to collapse. I don't like the word already on tape for so long. Areas increase and decrease and this plan will take care of it. There is going to be no collapsing of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I just wanted to ask Mr. Helleenthal a couple of questions. One of them is along the same lines as Mr. Marston just spoke of, about a collapsing or a particular area losing its identity as election district number so and so. I feel that it would be wrong for any particular part of the Territory which has been districted to lose its identity as a district. I think that possibly we could refer to it as suspended representation in the event that a census would show that they were below the number that they must have for their representation, but that area should still remain area No. 22 or 23 or whatever representative district it is, but the representation in there is suspended.

Then because on the next 10-year decennial census, then if the census indicated in that particular area that the population had recovered its former status so that it was eligible for representation in the legislature, then the commission would then certify that they were and would retain them. I think there should be a very serious objection to any geographical area in Alaska losing its identity.

HELLENTHAL: Perhaps we were not too clear on that point. The answer to the question is that they will not lose their identity for representative purposes in the house. It would be suspended but for the senate it would be continued, and that appears very clearly in the Committee's opinion.

TAYLOR: As I see it, they would still have senatorial representation because they are a part of a senatorial district.

HELLENTHAL: Suspended animation you might call it.

TAYLOR: This thought here of collapsing or as I would say, suspending representation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Maybe I can attempt to answer your question.

TAYLOR: You don't have to answer it because I know the answer to it now, but anyway they talk about eliminating an election district; now that could only be, that change could be made only once in every 10 years, is it not?

HELLENTHAL: Correct.

TAYLOR: There is no method in the interim between the decennial census that you could do it?

HELLENTHAL: No.

TAYLOR: So any area is assured of a 10-year representation until the regular census shows otherwise.

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I think this has gotten through my head that the senatorial districts remain fixed. On looking into the future, it was stated here that the area representation was taken into consideration with senatorial districts. I question that area played any great part at all in the Committee's thinking, and I state that merely in preface to my question, and I am not afraid to continue to call these at least for the time being, to call the four districts of Alaska "divisions". The Fourth Division of Alaska, this area from all of this district down through here (pointing to map), to which has been added to what we have always called the Bristol Bay Area, is now as far as area is concerned, you can take all of the rest of Alaska and put it inside of the Fourth Division and possibly have nothing more than the St. Lawrence Island left over, and then for this whole area of the Fourth Division it is a matter of five senators. Then in this very small area here in the First Division is entitled to five senators which could be placed -- the whole First Division could be placed in representative districts of 15 and 16 of the Fourth Division. Now the only query that I have in mind is this, and possibly looking too much into the future, but at Rampart, for example, we will say that the hydroelectric plant was built and the population of the area in here gets to possibly 100,000 people, then regardless of the fact that the Fourth Division as a whole, still calling it that, was as large as the rest of Alaska put together and regardless of the fact that its population increased so that the population was twice as large as the rest of Alaska, then still the senatorial districts would remain the same.

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

MCNEALY: And there would be a great possibility that they would never change?

HELLENTHAL: I would not attempt to say that.

MCNEALY: I guess that is a political matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: It appears to me that the matter here has been belabored long enough. I don't see that we are developing anything new, and I would like to move to proceed to the consideration of the bill for amendment.

SWEENEY: I object.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon moves, Mr. Taylor seconds the motion that we now proceed to the consideration of the proposal and allow the offering of amendments. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Is a motion to a recess in order?

PRESIDENT EGAN: A motion to recess is in order.

KILCHER: I might move our 15-minute recess at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess for 15 minutes?" All those in favor of recessing for 15 minutes will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "ayes" have it, and the Convention stands at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: I respectfully ask unanimous consent that the journal of the 46th Convention day be approved with no corrections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the journal of the 46th day will be ordered approved. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. We have before us Mr. McCutcheon's motion that we proceed to the amendment of Committee Proposal No. 14.

SWEENEY: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request that we proceed to the amendment of Committee Proposal No. 14? Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: I object temporarily. I have a couple of questions to ask. It won't take very long.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, do you have objection to that?

MCCUTCHEON: No.

NOLAN: This graph of 25 people, or over, is projected on 1955 figures isn't it? You know the table that we have, I think?

HELLENTHAL: Populations of all cities and towns and villages, 1950 and 1939.

NOLAN: That is right. I think part of that is 1955, is it not?

HELLENTHAL: No, it is all 1950 or 1939, according to my understanding. It was prepared by Mr. Rogers.

NOLAN: Some of the figures I wrote up did not quite jive. The second point is that the cost as I understand by Mr. Peratrovich, the cost of this increase from 40 to 60 was considered by the Committee.

HELLENTHAL: Yes, that is from what materials we had available at the time. A more approximate cost estimate can be made now. I am sure.

NOLAN: The third question is, I think it was answered in response to a question by Mr. McNealy, that the senatorial districts are fixed permanently without a constitutional amendment?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct, subject to the minor modification that we discussed last night and this morning, and which will be handed to you on this slip sheet this morning in a few minutes.

NOLAN: And that in arriving at the combination for the senatorial districts is a combination of area and population?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. While I am on my feet, Mr. President, the Committee has prepared a slip sheet containing changes in the committee proposal. One way of handling this would be to ask that the report be withdrawn from second reading, returned to the Committee for insertion of the slip sheet and resubmission with the slip sheet contained, and that is one method. I can conceive of others.

NOLAN: I don't think that is necessary. We are not in second reading yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are not in second reading for purposes of amendment yet. No.

HELLENTHAL: We would want to make that a part of the committee report before the consideration begins through some parliamentary device or unanimous consent procedure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: It is not necessary to amend and not mandatory to amend. If you are going to proceed to amendment here, that is the order of business. He who does not amend also serves well here, and it is not mandatory that we amend, is it? (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I think this question has been answered, but there seems to be a little confusion in a few minds, and I would like to ask the Chairman a question if I may. When a district loses its present population and is joined to another, then in order to resume its representation, that is, apart from the combined district, it must gain the full quotient? It does not get preferential treatment when new districts are established?

HELLENTHAL: In reasserting does it get preferential treatment, Mr. Gray?

GRAY: Under my understanding it does not. It must come up, because the idea of the major fraction gives a little leeway, drops down. The major fraction is a holding thing. Once you lose it you would have to go back and get full quotient for recognition next time.

NORDALE: Otherwise it would upset the whole thing.

GRAY: Because it immediately puts the whole program on an 80-member house. The major fraction is just a protection for that particular district which loses its identity over a short figure. If they lose half, then they have lost, but up until then it gives them a little time to recover because otherwise, with a drop of one person it might lose its representation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would like to ask Mr. Hellenthal a question. Mr. Hellenthal, I have looked at your boundaries as close as I can and I am pleased to say I think you did a fabulous job. There is only one glaring error, and I think it is an error which might upset your whole plan if this matter is ever litigated. I mean this doctrine you have set up of socio-economic units, and I direct your attention to Election District No. 20, and I invite you to inspect Election District No. 20. You call that the Arctic Slope Election District. The boundary runs along the Arctic Slope and then you cut it off and the balance of the Arctic Slope area is penetrated by Election District No. 23

Now Election District No. 23 is drained by the Yukon and Porcupine Rivers. Now of course those rivers don't cross the Brooks Range and you have violated both of your principles of the natural mountain boundary, you have violated the principle of watershed, and I don't see any logical reason for it, and the thing that frightens me about it is that I think the courts would look at Election District 20 and 23 the first thing when they went to determine this socio-economic.

HELLENTHAL: I want to turn that over to Mr. Cooper; that matter was discussed at length, and Mr. Cooper and Mr. Coghill were the ones who were fully informed.

COOPER: I definitely want to hear from Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in bringing that line up and along the river, I forget the name of the river boundary we followed there, the river that we brought this boundary right up to divide from 23. Above the Brooks Range on the other side is more closely related, the southern part of that is more closely related to the Fort Yukon-Porcupine area than it is to the Khotol River area. It is just another one of the exceptions of the watershed. This in turn leans from the watershed to the socio-economic area. We have Barter Island; we have several communities up there where they all transport their goods from Fort Yukon or commute over the Range. Does that answer your question, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: Unfortunately it does not.

HELLENTHAL: Was not your recollection that the census showed 20 people were concerned in that area?

COGHILL: Yes.

BUCKALEW: You are making an awful concession for a few people. It just is not logical. I can't see it. In looking at the map and knowing how many people are up there, the only socio-economic unit up there would be between that little area you have got and part of Yukon because I think a bunch of caribou move back and forth up there; that is the only socio-economic unit, and it is confined to caribou.

COGHILL: We had the line across the top to begin with and we felt that by increasing the population in the 23rd district, bringing this over, that the people on the northern side of that slope who are more closely related to the Fort Yukon people in the socio-economic concept.

BUCKALEW: I can see that a lot of the people on the Arctic Slope have now migrated toward Barrow, but you have got to cross the mountain range and if there are so few people involved, just looking at it on the map, it does not make sense.

MCLAUGHLIN: I think perhaps Mrs. Wien is acquainted with the area; perhaps she could express her viewpoint.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: I don't know what the thinking in the Committee was, but that area of the Arctic Slope and that side is served from the Fort Yukon area by air and your only connection with the other Arctic Slope area would be by dog team or your once-a-year, mostly undependable boat transportation by the Bering Sea and along the Arctic Coast, so that area is definitely served first by air from Fairbanks to Fort Yukon and then from Fort Yukon and on out.

COOPER: In addition to that, in the Committee it was discussed and brought out that last winter for the first time, certainly, a new type of method or a try was used and accomplished in your over-all winter routes by the Alaska Freight Lines up through that region, and it was definitely tied into the Fort Yukon trading center, that entire area there. The line now, as it is on the map, is where it has been in the past, but it was not changed due to the fact that Fort Yukon is the center of that entire area.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, the 64-dollar question is, "How do you pronounce the name of that river?" I have taken it off the map and I think we had better call it the "Joe Blow" River because of the way it is spelled. Would you pronounce that, Mr. President?

BARR: Does the boundary go along that river? It seems to me it goes along the Sagavanirktok.

HILSCHER: That is it.

GRAY: I believe in resolving a question like this, Mr. Buckalew has an absolute valid question there, but I think it should be resolved in, which is the fairest to the people concerned, and I think the fairest to the people concerned, as Delegate Wien has pointed out, is the Fort Yukon district. You are going to run into several of these where there is a conflict of ideas. The eventual solution of this is to represent the people and which method is the fairest concerned to those people involved, and I think that will settle most of the arguments.

BUCKALEW: At least I have accomplished one thing; the thinking of the Committee on this particular problem will be available.

HELLENTHAL: Might I add this? I think this is a very good illustration of the fact that the factors that the redistricting board are to use in redistricting that no priority is assigned to any one factor. They are to weigh it and there are the four or five principles to be weighed out to accomplish the result -- again representative government. It is fortunate that there are illustrations and this is not the only one of where a watershed boundary was deemed less important than another principle of districting, and that would guide the court, and it would show the court forcefully that it was not the intent to assign priorities to the methods, but to balance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: In looking over this area, I see that Barter Island is included and that is evidently the largest, most heavily populated area entered at the present time. There is an army project going on there and that is served from Fairbanks, and I believe that this whole area has far greater communications facilities with Fairbanks than any other. It is true that they go along the coast by boat in summer, but that is only for two, or three or four weeks, and they can go by dog sled in the winter, but the vast expanse of tundra is just as much a barrier as the mountains, especially if you go over the mountains in an airplane.

MARSTON: I have worked that area for 10 years and only once did I go from Barrow over to that district of Barter Island, and it was John Cross who flew me over, and I waited one week for him to get the weather just right before he would take off, and there were only two families between Barrow and Barter Island. It belongs where it is as far as I can see, and John Cross knows that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have the motion before us. The unanimous consent is asked that we now proceed in second reading with the amendment of Committee Proposal No. 14. Is there objection?

HINCKEL: I don't object. I would like for the purpose of information to ask, are we going to consider this slip sheet as an amendment?

HELLENTHAL: As I understand it a moment ago, that when action is taken on this motion, then this matter will be taken up and we hope it will be considered as a supplement or amendment to the committee proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This matter will be taken up at that time as to whether or not this amendment will be offered as an amendment or whether or not the Convention will allow the Committee to withdraw its report and bring back its report with this proposed amendment included as part of the report.

HINCKEL: I have several other amendments to the same section, and it will make a difference as to how I will write my proposal.

HELLENTHAL: We don't mean to foreclose other amendments by this action, but we wanted to use it as a device to show the Committee was unanimous with regard to these problems, and wanted to supplement its report accordingly.

V. RIVERS: Is your slip sheet ready now?

HELLENTHAL: I believe it is before you or should be.

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask unanimous consent then that we consider the slip sheet as a part, for the record, as a part of the committee proposal at this time and adopt it as such and then go on and amend from there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that this slip sheet -- we have a motion on the floor at the present time asking unanimous consent that we proceed on to Committee Proposal No. 14 for purposes of amendment. Is there objection to that? Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I was just going to suggest, why don't we act on Mr. McCutcheon's proposal and then immediately before we go into the other business, act on Mr. Victor Rivers' proposal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to proceeding with Committee Proposal No. 14 for purposes of amendment? If there is no objection then Committee Proposal No. 14 is before us at this time for amendment. Mr. Victor Rivers do you renew your motion?

V. RIVERS: I will ask unanimous consent, and although I personally have something to say about the matter they are instituting, I still would ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that this proposed amendment be included as a part of the proposal.

HERMANN: I will object for the moment, just by way of asking for some information. The only one I have is amendments of Proposal No. 9, and that is the finance proposal, and I just want it cleared up a little bit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for one or two minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. On this proposed amendment, if there is no objection, the Chair will order that where it says "No. 9" that it read "No. 14". Is there objection? Hearing no objection that is so ordered. Unanimous consent is asked that this particular amendment become a part of Committee Proposal No. 14 at this time. Is there objection to that request? If there is no objection it is so ordered, and the amendment has become a part of Committee Proposal No. 14. Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, we pretty thoroughly discussed this. I for one can see nothing wrong with the committee proposal as it now stands. I think if we start fooling around and amending it we are going to have trouble and therefore, I am going to move that this proposal be turned over to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment.

MCCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris moves and Mr. McCutcheon seconds that Committee Proposal No. 14 as it is now before us be referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: That takes a suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair does feel that it takes a suspension of the rules because it states in the rules that the proposal shall be open for amendment. It would take a roll call vote and 37 votes to suspend the rules. Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, along the same line, it would take two readings.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would take a suspension of the rules.

V. RIVERS: Is this matter open for discussion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is a suspension of the rules, Mr. Victor Rivers, and it is not debatable. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Under the circumstances and seeing that it requires a suspension of the rules, I would withdraw my second.

HARRIS: I withdraw the original motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and Committee Proposal No. 14 is before us and open for amendment. Are there amendments to Section 1? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have a question on Section 1. I am bothered by that word "first" which appears in line 6. The sentence says, "Until the first and subsequent reapportionments, the election districts and the number of representatives to be elected from each at the first State election shall be..." Is it not the intention that in any state election which occurs, until the first and subsequent reapportionments, that the number of representatives and the election districts shall be as set forth in the schedule?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: What this means is that the number of representatives at the first state election will be as set forth in the schedule. After that the process of reapportionment will have set in and we don't know what they will be.

SUNDBORG: Why would it have set in? It does not set in until after each census.

HELLENTHAL: "And after the first election." You can't have it until you have your state government constituted, and the only people that can constitute the state government is the first elected body, and that must be governed by the schedule. You can't reapportion until you have an election. You have to have your governor, your legislature set up. It must come first. Then following that comes reapportionment and everything else, but you have got to have a body constituted, a legislature constituted to get the ball rolling.

SUNDBORG: Won't it say everything you intend to say if you strike the words "at the first state election", so that it will say "Until the first and subsequent reapportionments the election districts and the numbers of representatives to be elected from each shall be as set forth in the schedule in article so and so"?

HELLENTHAL: No, I don't think so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I am a little confused now. What happens if we don't get statehood until 1961?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: If we don't get statehood until 1961 and, a further qualification, now it is possible in 1961 that the results of the decennial census will be available, but it is not probable.

WHITE: Say '62 then.

HELLENTHAL: In other words, you envision a situation after the results of the decennial census have been certified. All right, if we get statehood before that, the schedule and the number of representatives fixed in the schedule will be the composition of the legislature. If we get it after that it will still govern the first legislature. For the first meeting of the Territorial legislature, following the certification of the results of the decennial census, the schedule sets out the number of representatives. It has to. There is no other way you can do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I want to pursue the same thought. If we got to be a state in 1961 and we had a first state election, would there be an apportionment right after that before the next semiannual election took place?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, immediately following, and that is why this language was so carefully chosen with that precise problem in mind, and I will admit at first flush it looks clumsy, but when you see that explanation I think it clarifies it.

R. RIVERS: If we got to be a state in 1965 we would have a first election. Would there be a reapportionment immediately thereafter referring back to the 1960 census?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I might answer that question. Mr. Rivers, in Section 2 it qualifies that, the first few lines of Section 2.

R. RIVERS: I was just wondering if Mr. Sundborg's language did not accomplish the purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I don't know how to go about this parliamentary-wise, I am sure in my own mind, that Mr. Sundborg has a perfectly legitimate point, and I think that the problem is more obvious if we say we become a state next year. Then is it your intention that the apportionment board would redistrict before the next election?

HELLENTHAL: No, it could not.

HURLEY: I think you have said two different things here. Does it mean they must necessarily apportion before the second state election even though it is before a census?

HELLENTHAL: If the second state election is following the release and certification of the official decennial census, then they must reapportion.

HURLEY: If the second state election is before 1962, then what happens?

HELLENTHAL: And following the release of the certification of the census?

HURLEY: If the second state election is before the release of the next census, I think that you are ambiguous because you have said that first state election here when you really mean any election held after we become a state and before the results of the census are known.

HELLENTHAL: We may be there. I did not understand Mr. Sundborg's remarks though, as directed at that point.

SUNDBORG: That was my point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was wondering if it might be best to take a three- or four-minute recess and you people get together on that. If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess in order to let the chairmen get together.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to Section 1? If not, are there amendments to Section 2? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section No. 1, and I can assure you it has nothing to do with the number of representatives. I thought we would probably still be on this section until after recess. I would like during the noon recess to confer with the members of the Committee and the Chairman and make it more acceptable. When we go through this will we go back to Section 1 again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will, but we are still on Section 1.

BARR: Will we come back to Section 1 as we have been doing?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is the manner in which we have proceeded, but a motion such as Mr. Harris has made, if it were adopted by a two-thirds vote, the Chair could not prevent that.

BARR: I move then that this section be held open until after the noon recess.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I inquire if the Committee is going to sit today where anyone with personal questions could speak to them during the noon hour, so they might eliminate a lot of questionable amendments that wouldn't be submitted if people understood.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was wondering if the Committee had such intention to sit say, now between 12:00 and 12:30.

HELLENTHAL: I think it would be better to sit between 1:00 and 1:30. I would like at this time to announce a meeting for the purposes requested for between 1:00 and 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the time has almost arrived for the noon recess.

BARR: Then I will move that we recess until 1:30.

RILEY: Rules Committee in the rear of the gallery immediately.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Rules Committee will meet immediately in the rear of the gallery. Are there other committee announcements? If not, hearing no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Would the Chief Clerk please read the communications we have before us.

(The Chief Clerk read a communication from Colonel Ray J. Will, Commander of Eielson Air Force Base, thanking the delegates for their contribution to the relief of the recent disaster victims.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed. Are there other communications? Are there committee reports to come before us at this time? If not, we will proceed with Committee Proposal No. 14 in second reading. Do we have an amendment before us at this time, a proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 1? Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have no amendment to Section 1 if we are able to amend the schedule later on, outlining the districts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will come to the schedule in second reading, Mr. Barr. Are there amendments to Section 2?

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, you may offer your amendment.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order. The Committee has met and recommends three amendments to Section 2 and the process might be expedited if the committee amendments were put before the body first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If Mr. Victor Rivers would accede to that. Mr. Rivers was recognized, his amendment was accepted here.

V. RIVERS: I appeared before the Committee. They had already taken action on the matter. They did not cover what my amendment covers. After I got there, five minutes before their adjourning time, I was not permitted to discuss it. I think we would like to discuss it on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you wish it to come before the body at this time?

V. RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: Page 2, this is an amendment to the amended Section 2, this slip sheet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You will recall we adopted that committee amendment this morning. This is an amendment to that. You all have copies of that original amendment before you.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 2, after the first word 'districts', insert the following sentence: 'Boundaries of election districts and senatorial districts as herein instituted shall be adjusted insofar as practicable to coincide with boundaries of local government areas as redistricting is accomplished from time to time.'"

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, I will move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of this amendment.

HELLENTHAL: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, with considerable reservations and a number of things in mind that I would possibly see further discussion on, I have to go along in entirety with the substance of the committee report. My intent in this matter is merely to amplify upon the idea that they have set up their districts, and they are pretty much inflexible. There are certain minor adjustments that can be made along the boundaries. I have in mind those should not be conflicting with the boundaries of other local government agencies or districts, such as recording districts. They should coincide insofar as practicable. I have given broad leeway for minor adjustments in boundaries so they could reach and match up with other local government boundaries. As you will note, the intent is not to alter anything in the substance or the intent of the whole system of apportionment and representation which they have adopted, but it does flag the idea that they should try and not have a mass of boundaries that are more or less with the same general purpose in mind but have a separate purpose within each boundary, try to coincide the boundaries insofar as practicable. I know that there will be cases when that can't be done. It seems to me if we are going to have boundaries we should try to keep as few of those boundaries as possible. That authority should be specifically stated. The Committee adopted a line which I understand from Mr. Hellenthal which says "They may give consideration to coinciding so far as possible." This says, "They shall give consideration to coinciding insofar as possible." It is a minor amendment intended to amplify the understanding of the interpreters of this constitution. The boundaries of the election districts will be established once about every 10 years we expect. The other boundaries of local government will be established and carefully thought and studied out, and it seems to me at the end of the 10-year period of time the boundaries in the election districts should be more or less geared in the matter of minor adjustments to the boundaries of the local government areas. That is why I submit the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: The matter was presented by Mr. Rivers in the morning and we went over his amendment and we went over it carefully in the Committee. It is a matter of emphasis. The Committee felt and some few felt that there should be no language along this line at all, but the Committee felt that the principle should be expressed in Section 2 but that it should be deemphasized, and they were willing to adopt and recommend this language that "may give consideration to local government boundaries". Note, not to their coincidence but merely that "may give consideration to local government boundaries". That language the Committee felt would be appropriate if it were necessary to include any such language, but that from an emphasis viewpoint the other language proposed might result in a situation where too much emphasis were given to the considerations of the local government boundaries and to whatever boundaries have been fixed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, the way that I understand the amendment, the word says "shall" be adjusted. You have hamstrung the apportioning board as set up in this article whereby they "shall" adjust the future election and senatorial boundaries to the local government boundaries. I was one that was, that actually did not particularly care in Committee to see any mention of this. It should be in the Local Government Committee report but inasmuch as it was presented by a delegate, I thought it should at least be watered down. The seed has been planted. It should say "may be" not "shall be adjusted". I would like to amend with the permission of the delegate that submitted this amendment, amend the word from "shall be" to "may be". I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper moves that the proposed amendment be amended to change the word "shall" to "may". Is there a second to it?

GRAY: I second the motion.

V. RIVERS: I want to point out that Mr. Cooper took "shall be adjusted" out of context because the whole sentence reads "may be adjusted insofar as practicable." Both points cover the same substance. I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: The reason I say "may be" is on line 17 and 18 of the committee report on page 2, it says, "shall contain as nearly as practicable relatively integrated socio-economic area", and it is literally covered in entirety right there. This amendment is that. That is why I move the adoption of "may" instead of "shall".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I think Mr. Cooper has overlooked the fact that Mr. Rivers is not talking about the district lines as the Committee has done it but he is talking about future apportionment, reapportionment, redistricting, and I think it is imperative that any redistricting or reapportionment of lines in the future give very noticeable cognizance of the boundaries which by then have been established as local government boundaries. I would be very much upset if somebody tried to change the local government boundaries of the area in which I was operating and attempting to be mayor or something else.

1900

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: The way I see this is that it does not seem to me it would be practicable to divide a subpolitical district like a borough with a major election district or a senate district. I don't really believe that any such condition will ever come up or ever exist. I believe the word "may" preferable to "shall" because we are protecting ourselves with the unknown and in case there may be some good reason and it is practicable, I think the districting board has all the authority under "may" as they have "shall" and "shall be" is a restricted clause. The only answer to any redistricting is what is the fairest to the people concerned. That is what we are trying to do. We are trying to bring fairness to the people and the only way they are going to have fairness is to have the board of apportionment with a little flexibility. That is the reason I prefer the word "may".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Cooper. Is there further discussion? If not the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will now withdraw my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I want to first go over them all together and then singly but there were three amendments to Section 2 that the Committee met with and recommends. One is that in Section 2, at page 2, line 18, following the comma and after the word "areas" add: "may give consideration to local government boundaries."

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask that that be taken up as an individual amendment?

HELLENTHAL: I thought I would give all three first and then we can take up them individually. The second amendment is lines 5 and 6, page 2, strike the words "adjoining it having the least civilian population" and insert "within its senate district". The "shall" is misplaced but I will trust Style and Drafting to that limited extent.

DAVIS: It does not make sense.

HELLENTHAL: I think it does.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. What is your pleasure, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: I think you will find it does make sense. Now the third amendment will be on line 3, page 2, Section 2, after the word "quotient", add "but only then" to "such election districts shall be attached". I am sure Style and Drafting will come out with "only then shall such election districts be attached." But we will overlook that for the moment, but add the words "but only then". Those are the three amendments that are proposed by the Committee following its hearing this noon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hellenthal?

TAYLOR: Just for a point of information, Mr. Hellenthal, would it not be better in that second amendment that the line 4 on page 2, so that it would read "such election districts shall be attached to another election district within its senate district." So that it would be attached to another election district within its senate district. That is just an idea, but I thought it might be worthwhile.

HELLENTHAL: How would it go?

TAYLOR: "Shall be attached to another election district within its senate."

HELLENTHAL: I think it would accomplish the same purpose.

TAYLOR: Another election district within the senate district.

HELLENTHAL: I think it would accomplish the same purpose and if no Committee members object, I would agree to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption of the proposed amendment?

HELLENTHAL: Yes, as with Mr. Taylor's suggestion. In other words, that "the" in line 4 be stricken and the word "another" inserted in its place.

1902

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the proposed change?

WHITE: May I ask a direct question? Mr. Hellenthal, this did not occur to me when we discussed this earlier. In view of the fact that an election district sometime in the future might be subdivided, and that you would therefore have three election districts within a senate district, is there any merit in retaining the words "having the least civilian population"?

HELLENTHAL: That has been omitted.

WHITE: I understand that. I am asking if there would be any merit in retaining those words?

HELLENTHAL: I don't think so.

WHITE: When you subdivide an election district in the future you would then arrive at a situation where you had three election districts within a senate district and if one of those election districts ceased to exist and you wanted to attach it, you would then have an option of two election districts within the senate district to attach it to.

HELLENTHAL: No, on the theory that was advanced for purposes of senatorial representation, the election district maintains its identity, you remember in response to Mr. Taylor's questioning. I don't think there is any problem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I would like to clear that up a little bit. Before there could be three election districts within a senatorial district the third election district in being redistricted would have to have the quotient; therefore, you would not have your minimum population in any one of the three before it could be redistricted. Do I make myself clear?

COGHILL: Maybe I can help. Mr. Hellenthal, I think the point Mr. White is bringing out there is that supposing a senate area which we have now, having two election districts in it, should have another election district added, making three. Well, then supposing something happens to the economy and another one of the districts should decline. Well, his point of asking, adjoining to the least civilian population is within that senatorial district, where is that third or that one with the minority amount of population? Which district is it going to join to get its representative area?

GRAY: I believe this case we are projecting ourselves too far to the future. We are projecting ourselves beyond three or four, beyond 30 or 40 years. We have an apportionment board to take care of those things, and I believe that the apportioning board is in a better position to handle this situation. It may be better for them 30 years from now; there may be a reason why it should go to one district or the other. Let's leave that to the apportioning board of the future.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We actually have nothing before us. Mr. Hellenthal, do you ask unanimous consent that your proposed amendment be adopted with the wording changed as suggested by Mr. Taylor?

HELLENTHAL: I was going to move on behalf of the Committee that each amendment be considered by the body in turn, and I would then go back to the first amendment and I think it was the one involving lines 5 and 6, at line 3 of page 2, after the word "quotient" insert the words "but only then", and I move, Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee that in line 3, page 2, of Section 2, after the word "quotient", the words "but only then" be inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent?

HELLENTHAL: No, I do not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves. Is there a second to it?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

GRAY: I did not agree with the rest of the Committee on this particular item. This particular item is more important in the three words that are there, but only then. What we have used here from a mathematical basis is a quotient that represents one representative district. In order to allow a little leeway so that if you drop one behind the quotient you are not out. They fall and they can fall down to 50 per cent before they are depopulated sufficiently to lose their identity. In order to create a new district, or in this case re-create, before you are authorized or qualified to receive a representative, you must have the full quotient. In this particular one here, as soon as you get back to your half quotient you get a full representative. Now you must remember that when you give a representative to a half quotient you take it away from someone else. They necessarily don't earn it. They necessarily don't earn it until they have a full quotient, and you are taking, in respect, away from some more deserving area. In other words, if you create a new district, they have to qualify with a full quotient. When one of these districts falls below the 50 per cent, it loses. To re-qualify it must be a full quotient. Another thing you are going to get to the point, a family moves into town, they have no representative. A family moves out of town, they lose it. You have an absolute ratio of one person who makes a difference whether you lose your representative or gain it. I don't believe that is the proper way to look at it. They maintain their election district and you give them 49 per cent leeway until they lose it, but when they start to regain it, they must come up with a full quotient to regain their adequate and full representation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I don't quite understand why the addition of these words would in any way strengthen this particular sentence. It seems to me that the words, "Should the total civilian population within any election district fall below one-half of the quotient" is just as direct as adding the words "but only then". I don't see the addition of the words in any way clarifies the section or makes it any stronger or less strong than it is. I may misunderstand what the Committee had in mind. I would like to ask Mr. Hellenthal or someone on the Committee.

HINCKEL: I asked that the three words be put in so I will try to explain it as I did in the Committee. I just wanted to be sure, I don't care how it is done, I thought the three words would do it. But I wanted to be sure that it was fully understood that only when a district population of the district dropped below the one-half of the quotient could they lose their individual representative. I did not want some strong governor in the future to decide that he would abolish a district for some political reason and that was my reason for asking it. It was not the reason Mr. Gray gave, and I don't agree with him that it would have that effect, although it might, but if it did, I would still agree with it because I tried to get that put in in another place but it failed. In any event, I don't care how you accomplish it. Style and Drafting can change the wording around as long as they accomplish the purpose I had in mind. That is, once you have your district established as they are established now, that nobody can take that representation away from you at all. You have got to qualify for losing it by having the population of your district drop below the minimum figure that we set up which is half of a quotient.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I agree with Mr. Johnson that the section already said exactly that. The condition, the only condition under which the governor or the reapportionment board could hesitate to use the term "collapse an election district" would be should the total civilian population, etc., fall below one-half of the quotient. Adding "but only then" adds nothing to it in my view. I wonder if the Committee does not have the same view, so we could dispose of this without having to put it in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: That protection is already restated before. What is coming out of this thing is the implication on re-creating new districts on the 51 per cent. That is the way I read it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Is it not a little dangerous to put that in? It seems to me it implies that the provisions of the article will all have to be strengthened by some kind of a phrase like that, while as it reads now, I can't see there could be any other circumstances to cause a district to lose its representation except that it falls below the quotient.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I think the section or the article could be construed to mean, with or without that phrase, I think it is emphasizing, attempting to emphasize the fact that is the only way, the only circumstances under which the representative of an election district can be merged in with another, is that when it falls below one-half of its quotient. It is just an emphasis you might say upon something that is already in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I think here again we are working ourselves into a pretty funny position that we have done several times before. We read a section, go over it and a member thinks that it is not clear enough and everybody is agreed on what the intent is. A delegate gets up, and proposes a few words to clarify it. We argue a long time. We vote them down and by voting them down we then create a doubt as to what we meant all along. Why not let them go in and let Style and Drafting take care of it. I think once the matter is brought up, if we are all agreed on what the intent is, why not let the wording stay in there if there is no danger.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I think for the purpose of the record, we need to clean up right now what we mean here with respect to what Mr. Gray said. Mr. Gray said if we put in "but only then", we are saying that once a district has been collapsed, because it falls below one-half of the quotient, that when it gets back to one-half of the quotient, it shall be restored. I don't read it that way at all but that is what Mr. Gray said was the purpose of the amendment. I think we should have a clear agreement here that is not the purpose of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I feel the way that Mr. Sundborg does that this in no way infers that a district, once it goes below the 50 per cent of the quotient and then rises again, has any chance of coming back into existence until it has reached the full quotient. That is the feeling I got in the Committee and is the intent all the way through.

1906

GRAY: If that is true, I withdraw my objection. That is the only point I wished to make.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I differ from what Mr. White said. It seems to me if we adopt these words, Style and Drafting will not be able to take them out, or at least will not be able to take out words of some similar importance. If we don't want them in there we had better not vote them in. If they don't add anything or subtract anything, then we probably should not put them in in the first place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments?

HELLENTHAL: I would like a one-minute recess to confer with Mr. Taylor with regard to this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair notes in the gallery the Eighth Grade class from the Parochial School, and we are happy to have you here with us this afternoon. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 2, lines 5 and 6, the following words be stricken 'adjoining it having the least civilian population' and insert the following: 'within its senate district'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: On behalf of the Committee, I move the adoption of the amendment.

COGHILL: I second the motion.

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent.

HURLEY: I object.

1907

TAYLOR: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May we hear the amendment again?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, lines 5 and 6, strike the following: 'adjoining it having the least civilian population' and insert 'within its senate district'."

KILCHER: Point of information, Mr. President. I am frankly confused about senate district and senatorial district, and I think from observation some other delegates are also confused. I wonder if we could not possibly use two less equal sounding terms? Will the Chairman please explain the exact meaning of the senate or senatorial districts or areas?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a few minutes. I think our guest has arrived. The Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We are extremely fortunate this afternoon to have as our honored guest a great American, a great soldier. He represents everything that we hold so dear in freedom, in loyalty, in courage and devotion to duty. He has suffered and represents all of those who have suffered so much for each of us. A grateful people, in humble recognition, have bestowed upon him our nation's highest tribute, the Congressional Medal of Honor. It is a great privilege to present to you Major General William F. Dean.
(Applause)

GENERAL DEAN: Thank you, Mr. Egan. Friends, you make me feel very inadequate in this generous tribute. Would that I felt that I merited it. I deem it a great honor to have this opportunity to meet you and to address you here today. I know that you have a full schedule and that time is of the essence, so I won't talk too long. Since my visit here to the Fairbanks area I have been keenly interested in the work you are doing; in the thoughtful consideration that you are giving this problem of devising a constitution. I had a similar experience as military governor of South Korea. It fell to my lot to advise, I say I did not do the advising, I had experts employed by the United States government, doctors of philosophy in government and in political science, specialists who had had experience in the building of constitutions of newly freed states, but we were in an advisory capacity. We were trying to devise what we thought best for the Korean people, but we were only advisors. You have an advantage here. What you arrive at you can decide upon and put before your people by referendum to be accepted or to be denied. The way you are going at it I know you are going to come out, I am convinced you will come out with a sound constitution, and I hope you every success in your request for statehood. You are right up here, the closest United States Territory to our most likely enemy. You are the looking glass of the United States. What you do is not only being watched in the United States, it is being watched across this narrow strait up here to the northwest. What you do here is important and what pleases me is that you yourselves are impressed with its importance. That is why I know you are going to do so well. I congratulate you. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, General Dean. (Standing Ovation) The Convention will be at ease. The Convention will come to order. We have before us Mr. Hellenthal's proposed amendment. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, while the language is very simple, frankly it seemed to me, particularly in view of the fact that as I understand by the schedule there are four senatorial districts established, each of which has more than one legislative district, it seems to me that you would not know without that qualification adjoining it having the least civilian population. I can't see how you still would arrive at which one it is going to be joined to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I have wondered if the Chairman of our Committee, to avoid this confusion, we used the word "senatorial" district and "senate" district to differentiate between the two. Is that what you had in mind?

HELLENTHAL: I don't recall the Committee ever making that distinction.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: A thought occurs to me on the matter of distinguishing between the four large senatorial districts and what I have called subdistricts. I wonder if the phraseology could be changed. I think what they intended to include here or what they mean is within its senate subdistricts, smaller area. Now if the word "sub" could be inserted in front of "district" or some other nomenclature that would indicate a smaller district, I think that would make sense.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: We are all agreed on the intent within this subdistrict where it formally existed; we all know what we mean. We have had difficulty with the choice of the proper word, and I would accede for the time being until we can place this problem with Style and Drafting and our advisors, I would on behalf of the Committee consent to such temporary use of the word,

1909

"subdistrict" so there will be no confusion here in this group.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I was the one that objected and I recognize that my objection to this is not exactly proper in that it has been stated before and may be stated in the article, I don't think it is in so many words, that these senate subdistricts are inviolate. They will always remain except for very minor changes. So with that in mind I can't very well object to this and still be consistent. I would like to point out that with the situation as it stands here where a legislative district having lost its quotient, half quotient in this case, having lost its half quotient will be consumed by the contiguous district in its same senate subdistrict. There are only three legislative districts in the Territory that are apt then to lose both their legislative representative and their senate representative. Now, admittedly they don't lose their senate representative, per se, but by reason of the fact they are swallowed up by an extremely large population they will in fact quite probably lose their senate representation. Those three are the ones that are along side of Fairbanks, Anchorage, and probably Juneau. As I say, I can't object to this, but it is, I make this statement, I think it is an imposition on our area which I will accept because for the better good of the Territory. I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Point of inquiry. Is the word "sub" to be inserted in front of "districts"?

HELLENTHAL: If it has not been inserted I ask that it be inserted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What word is that?

HELLENTHAL: The amendment will read "within its senate subdistrict".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection it has been added to the amendment.

METCALF: Roll call please.

COOPER: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of inquiry. Has the Committee given any thought to work out a system whereby the districts involved would have a choice, a referendum choice as to where they would be attached to? According to our theory of a fairly strong local government and local independence, I think it should be given some thought.

1910

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I thought of it. The people do have a chance. They elect the governor that appoints the reapportionment board that will take care of this problem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: If I can be convinced of that I will rest assured. I think this amendment here makes it mandatory that the annexation will have to be within that district, so according to Mr. Hurley's idea the Talkeetna - Palmer area would have no choice, and I don't even see that the governor would have a choice, Mr. Cooper, or any apportionment board would have a choice unless by constitutional amendment. If I am wrong I am glad to stand corrected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of this proposed amendment? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I should like a half-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for 30 seconds.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: The Secretary has another committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 2, line 18, following the comma after the word 'areas' add: 'may give consideration to local government boundaries'."

HELLENTHAL: On behalf of the Committee I move and ask unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mrs. Hermann.

1911

HERMANN: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the introduction of the President and the remarks of General Dean be spread upon the record of this day's proceedings.

MARSTON: I second the motion.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection it is so ordered. Are there other amendments? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I move that on line 4, Section 2, page 2, that the word "temporary" be inserted after the word "be".

PRESIDENT EGAN: On line 4, page 2, Mr. Kilcher? The word "temporary" be inserted between the words "be" and "attached".

HINCKEL: I second the motion.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: There is only one word -- on line 7 delete the words "new district" and substitute the words "combined district".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Delete the words "new district" and insert the words "combined district". You have heard the proposed amendment.

HINCKEL: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

METCALF: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: My reason for this is the same as some of the reasons I have given before on some of the things I have spoken on, that I do not conceive that it is the intent of this article that the districts we have on the map here be abolished. Now apparently it is the intent of some people here that just as soon as a district population drops below a certain point that that district be abolished, just wiped off the map, and I don't think that is the intent of the majority. I have tried to bring it out in several different ways, and I don't seem to be getting any place, but I am trying it again in this manner to get it into the record that we have established districts here that are from now on to remain and have an entity. They may lose their right to individual representation but at some future time when they regain their population they will again regain the right to individual representation. Now, by inserting this change I have just asked for, it does not in any way state they will regain their individual representation as soon as they get the half of the quotient again but they can by going along for possibly 50 years which is apparently what Mr. Gray wishes, that they can eventually at some time get their individual representation back. I ask that you change these two words from "new district" to "combined district" so it will be known to the people in the future that it was our intent that they have this right to regain their individual representation when the time comes that they have the population. That is all I care to say on that subject, but if you will permit me the privilege of saying a few more words I would like to say that I can't understand why when a population drops below, say five or ten persons below the minimum required, which would cause them to lose their individual representation, you are going to make them wait possibly 50 years to get individual representation back. I don't understand why it is necessary to do that. I think when the population of the individual districts get back up to the point where they have the half again they should have it. I don't think on the other hand new districts which somebody might conceive someplace should be stuck in hit or miss all over. That would ruin the whole proposition. I have never been able to find out from anybody why it is those individual districts we have established now cannot regain their right to representation when they again have the minimum requirements that the other districts do. But anyway, forget that for the minute, if you will put that "combined" back in so the intent will be known, which I think is obviously our intent. I will soon find out whether I am right or not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I certainly sympathize of course with Mr. Hinckel, but I think that maybe I have an idea that might do just the opposite. I am thinking now, and forgive the terminology again, that our legislative district is collapsed and then when the next census comes up we still do not have enough people in the old district to make the full quotient, but we can still, or the board can, by observing the four precepts that we have set here, set those district boundaries up differently so as to give us enough to make a district again. So I am not particularly concerned with the abolishment of that district because it may be to my advantage that the next time we come about, call it gerrymandering if you want, but gerrymandering within these limits, and I can show you our own election district where we certainly have not followed these four out now, we can gain enough population to have a new one; whereas, if we had to keep our old district lines we would not get a new one. I am inclined to think on that basis I am better off by leaving it as it is than if I would be if I put in a restriction here which tended to keep the old concept that we have drawn on that map.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hinckel be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 7, delete the words 'new district' and substitute the words 'combined district'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 2? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry. What does the shouted word "question" mean?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The only thing it could mean, Mr. Hurley, is they are calling for the vote at that time. Are there other amendments to Section 2? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I believe I would like the personal privilege of the floor for a minute on account of my proposition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Gray you are granted the personal privilege of the floor.

(Mr. Gray spoke at this time under personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 2? If not, are there amendments to Section 3? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit your amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, delete all of Section 3 and insert the following: 'The Senate shall be composed of sixteen senators four from each of the present four judicial divisions which are hereby created into Senatorial Districts. Senators shall be elected by the qualified electors of the respective Senatorial district wherein they reside.'"

ROBERTSON: I move that the amendment be adopted.

H. FISCHER: I object.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I don't know whether I am in exact procedure or not, but I move that the motion be laid on the table.

H. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall Mr. Robertson's proposed amendment be laid on the table?" The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, delete all of Section 3 and insert the following: 'The Senate shall be composed of sixteen senators, four from each of the present four judicial divisions which are hereby created into Senatorial Districts. Senators shall be elected by the qualified electors of the respective Senatorial district wherein they reside.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is undebatable.

HELLENTHAL: I move that we have a one-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection -- Mr. White.

WHITE: Parliamentary inquiry. Under our rules when can you move to take from the table?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You can move to take from the table -- whether you could do it today --

WHITE: I mean the outer limit, for how long a time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You could take something from the table at any time before we adjourn sine die.

WHITE: Actually a motion to lay on the table, if it should pass, it would leave the matter open for further consideration until the day of final adjournment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unless it never was taken up again. The Convention will stand at recess for a minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, with the consent of my second, I withdraw my motion to lay anything on the table.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper asks unanimous consent that his motion to lay on the table be withdrawn.

ROBERTSON: I ask for a roll call on my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I believe it might be in order to hear a communication read, and if it is the will of the assembly I would like to have Mrs. Sweeney offer Mr. Shattuck's letter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the communication can be read at this time.

MCNEES: I object.

ARMSTRONG: I so move.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed communication from Mr. Curtis Shattuck be read to the Convention?" All those in favor of reading the communication at this time will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

JOHNSON: May I have the floor on the question of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson, you may speak under the point of personal privilege.

(Mr. Johnson spoke under personal privilege at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I don't know how to vote. Does voting "yes" or "no" mean --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Voting "yes" would mean that we have the communication read. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Inasmuch as I made the objection, may I answer Mr. Johnson's question? The communication was passed around the floor yesterday. I read it and the two gentlemen on the other side read it. It was passed down and I assume it has been pretty much around the floor. That is my reason for objection.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, may I speak on the privilege of the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

(Mrs. Sweeney spoke under the question of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the communication presently before us be read to the Convention?" Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. Chairman, Mildred Hermann had a very hard time getting some very fine letters read here onetime. I worked against her. I said then I wanted all the letters read or none of them. I think we open the way to a lot of propaganda here from various organizations.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order. The matter of reading a paper is not debatable, Mr. President, according to the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If that is what the rules say, Mr. McCutcheon, the Chair would stand corrected. The Chair did not have any idea that the matter of reading papers was not debatable.

MARSTON: I am going to vote for the reading of this letter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, the Chair will uphold the delegate who has read from the rules and we have before us the matter of reading this communication. All those in favor of having the communication read will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Chief Clerk may read the communication.

SUNDBORG: May I have the floor on a matter of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg, you may.

(Mr. Sundborg spoke under the question of personal privilege.)

SWEENEY: I think the statement was hardly necessary. This is nothing more than a statement by a member of the audience or a gallery attending our hearing in Juneau.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading of the proposed letter.

(At this time the Chief Clerk read the complete text of the Shattuck letter.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be filed. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, speaking in support of my motion, I would like to say that I think that this attempt to base the senatorial representation whereby population is involved in the method of arriving at the senatorial representation almost avoids my necessity or desire to have a bicameral system. I can't see any particular value if you are going to elect both senators and members of the house based entirely upon population. Now, while it is true this purports to be based partly on geography, I think one house should be based entirely upon geographical representation and be elected at large. As Mr.

Shattuck's letter has said, the smaller communities have been well represented in the senate. We not only have Doris Barnes from Wrangell and James Nolan from Wrangell, we at the present time have Marcus Jensen from the small community of Douglas, and I feel it has worked out very well that they do represent the entire division, and that is only the right way to do it. Furthermore, it seems to me we are losing sight of the value of the experience of the Territory of Alaska since 1913 in so electing, at least our senate, and I believe that we should not ignore that experience; furthermore, this constitution as necessary will be permanent, at least until it is amended, and under this principle one division gets six senators, two get five senators and or one gets four senators. Now based upon population alone can justify that differential; and furthermore, the proponents of the proposal conceded this morning that no matter how the population of the Fourth Division might increase, it is perfectly imaginable that in less than 10 years the population of the Fourth Division can be twice that of the Third or First Divisions. The Second Division one time, some 50 years ago, was the big populated division of the Territory of Alaska, no matter how small it is now. Juneau, of the First Division with pulp mills coming in, it is entirely foreseeable that within the next 10 years we will have 50,000 more permanent people there with their homes, and I submit that the permanency of it is in error. It is a mistake to make this permanent so we are going to have a different senatorial representation. The senators ought to be elected on the basis of representing their particular senatorial district and also representing the Territory, and we should not do it at large. We should confine it to the geographical situation. The judicial divisions have worked out satisfactorily in this Territory since 1909, and there is no reason under this Section 2 if they don't work out satisfactorily why this apportionment board cannot correct them. It seems to me that every delegate from the Second, the Fourth, and the First Divisions ought to be behind this amendment, and there is nothing wrong about it. It is meritorious and supports the bicameral system of legislation. Also, based upon our past experience it gives us all equal representation in the senate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 4 - Barr, Nolan, Robertson, Sweeney.

Nays: 50 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, ' Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 4 yeas, 50 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I explain my vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Kilcher, you may explain your vote.

KILCHER: Mr. Robertson, I would have voted in favor of this amendment of yours but I recognize it is only one-half of a very good proposal that you had in the beginning of the session, a proposal that on the other hand had in mind a larger house. I don't want to say a lower house, a larger house that gave considerable recognition to the principle of area, but since that part of the proposal is not existing anymore I naturally had to vote against your present amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I see In the gallery that we have a senior senator from the Fourth Division, Senator Butrovich, and I would move and ask unanimous consent that he be granted the privilege of the floor and be greeted by the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair also notes that we have in the gallery the Territorial Commissioner of Health, Dr. Albrecht. We are happy to have you here with us. (Applause) Are there other amendments to Section 3? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I have an amendment prepared but if you will permit me to ask another question or two, perhaps I can save some time on voting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: On line 15 of page 1 It says, "Reapportionment shall be by the method known as the method of equal proportions except that each election district having the major fraction of the quotient obtained by dividing total civilian population by forty shall have one representative." The word "reapportionment" to me means that not the apportionment that has been done by our Committee but the reapportionment that will take place in the future. Two or three times already I have tried to get this thing clarified and each time I am voted down. To me it does not make any sense whatsoever. In one sentence we say we are going to have 50 per cent of this quotient that will entitle an area to representation, and then they get up on the floor and say it does not, so I have prepared a proposal that says we shall strike on line 16 the word "except" and then strike all of line 17, 18 and line 1 on the following page. Then the thing is in line with common sense; whether or not it expresses the intent of the Committee I don't know, but it was not my Intent, but since they tell me that it is not possible for area to have representation on 50 Per cent of the quotient, I don't see why it should be in the article. If somebody will explain to me that I am wrong, I will not submit this; otherwise, I will submit this proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray, could you explain it?

GRAY: I would like to explain it. Mathematically you need a full quotient. Now we had these areas selected out, there were just a couple of votes behind, and they had a major fraction, this other group had a major fraction, and from a moral standpoint, as explained last night, it is a deviation from exact true representation, but the moral factor comes in, the fact that we will allow these people of this first representation. Now, when you are creating new representation, that is a different problem. That is where the difference comes in. In creating new representation, if we had created on the created districts, on the half quotient basis, we would have a house of 80. We created on a basis of the full quotient, with these isolated areas as we saw giving representation on the major fraction. It filled out our representation. That was a modification of the present plan, but with your previous suggestion, you create a membership of a major fraction which is not the purpose of creation.

HINCKEL: I have never at any time, sir, asked that any new areas that are created be created on the major fraction basis. I have never suggested that, I merely stated that those areas which we have created in this plan of apportionment, if they lose their major fraction and then regain it, that they be permitted to regain. I will grant you voted all that down, still cannot reconcile this statement that I am now forced to ask be stricken with the fact, with the statement you just made prior, that in reapportionment you are going to use the method of equal proportions, with exceptions.

KILCHER: May I ask for a minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

1920

1920

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments?
Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I would like to ask what is the article of "blank" that is referred to in the last line of Section 3. Are we buying a "pig in the poke" or what are we getting on this?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I believe the article which you are referring to, sir, is the definition of the boundaries of the map of the districts that we have set forth in the maps.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Section 25, is that the one it refers to?

ROBERTSON: The documents are attached to the back. One is No. 2 and No. 3. Is that what we are buying if we adopt Section 3?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal, can you explain?

HELLENTHAL: The matters attached are the schedules referred to. For example, in Section 1 we refer to the schedule set forth in article "blank". Then article "blank" is the schedule referring to the house which is cross referenced as provided in Section 1, article "blank", etc., and the same principle applies with regard to Section 3 and the next schedule which is referring to the senate. They are a part of the constitution, but they are set out in the back of the printed constitution. We are following the Hawaiian pattern here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: May I ask a question? Then in referring to the boundaries of the election district you would refer to Section 1 of the back schedule, is that correct? Section 2 deals with the senate.

HELLENTHAL: Section 3.

BARR: If you want to refer to the boundaries of the election district you refer to Section 1 of the attached schedule?

HELLENTHAL: You refer to Section 1 for the boundaries and Section 2 for the names and composition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 3? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I have an amendment if we could be at ease for a minute.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will be at ease.

If there is no objection, the Convention is in session and Mr. McNees may proceed with his question.

MCNEES: In speaking of the four or five, and I am using these two numbers, the four or five districts as laid out currently in the house plan, as Mr. Hellenthal suggested this morning, you referred to those four or five when you spoke of them as Isolated areas. I would like to know your definition of that term as used there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I do not understand your question.

MCNEES: You mentioned these four or five that would be low, possibly in reapportionment, as isolated areas. I see one in what would be Southcentral, possibly two in what would be Northcentral, one in Northwestern and possibly one in Southern. I wonder what you meant they are isolated from?

GRAY: This was trying to explain a portion of the group. Now there is one thing that should be apparent to everyone. They do not lose their representation. They lose the opportunity of selecting their representatives from their immediate surroundings. No one loses his personal or her personal representation. They just lose the privilege of selecting the representative from their own immediate geographic group. What I had in relation to was in trying to explain that reapportionment shall be by the method known by equal proportions, with the proviso that except that each election district and the major fraction shall be represented. That word should be "existing". Now when the reapportionment comes up in 1961 It may so happen that some of the remote areas or low populated areas may drop below this major fraction and they will be combined. There are other sections that will drop below the full quotient but remain above the major fraction and so they will keep their representation. That was what I was trying to explain at the time I mentioned this.

MCNEES: In conjunction with that answer then Mr. President, I have here in this hand manual, American State Legislature, which is the thinking behind the model constitution, two or three very short excerpts that I would like to read to the group, because I think it is appropriate. "in any consideration of reapportionment of the state legislature, the allocation of seats, which it means primarily, the question arises, what should be the basis of representation? Should it be all the people or only the citizens, or would it be better to consider only qualified voters, or only those who bother to vote? The state constitution makers are not in total agreement regarding the solution of this problem, but population and area are the most commonly accepted criteria." The second excerpt, "Population is also the principal basis for representation in the lower chambers, although many state constitutions contain provisions and make reapportionment very difficult. Twenty-one state constitutions specify population as the basis of apportionment and various other states use various other means." Third excerpt, and this will sound very strange coming from a person very much interested in unicameralism three weeks ago, but as I promised you at that time, that if we went in favor of a bicameral legislature I would give it my entire weight; therefore, I have to present this argument in order to be fair. "If bicameralism is retained by our states, and if it is to have any vital significance, the two chambers should have fundamentally different representative basis or they serve no useful purpose as a check on each other. The democratic ideal of equal representation and our traditional acceptance of bicameralism are in conflict. It may be necessary to abandon the second if the first is accepted. If we are to retain and invigorate bicameralism there may have to be a modification or rethinking on the theory of popular representation." Then what are the possibilities for a different basis of representation for a second chamber, speaking now of the house or the upper chamber, I prefer to use the word "senate". "A number of diverse bases have been suggested. Among these are land, property, political or governmental units, political parties upon some type of proportional representation, occupational or functional representation and suffrage and voting performances and behavior rather than the relatively inert basis of population. No one seriously desires to represent land, called 'lands', and the present contention that acreage is favored in many of our state legislatures at the expense of the people served but to highlight difficulties" - I beg your pardon, "does not tend to serve, but to highlight difficulties inherent in popular representation and its realization. The day is passed and properly so when any purely property or tax-paying basis could be rendered acceptable or effective for the upper chamber in order to make it different from the popular lower chamber. Hence it might be safely concluded that land and property should be eliminated as a feasible alternative basis of representation." And therefore, in this Committee proposal, the only possible flaw that I can see in it is that we have tried to introduce a unicameral legislature based now upon 60 people in it in a bicameral legislative program, and I can't see that it will work. Any time you interpose your senate districts over the top of your house districts you are using the same factors in representing both houses. I throw that out only for the information that it is worth. I do not intend to submit an amendment. I have told the Committee that I would support them, at least for time being, but I do want you to stop and think about that.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit your amendment, Mrs. Sweeney.

The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2 of the Schedule, after the first paragraph delete the schedule and insert --

SWEENEY: That is the schedule that is attached to the back, the first paragraph of Section 3 which states that there will be 20. I don't think it needs any change on this. This would be the schedule that is attached.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The schedule referred to in Section 3?

SWEENEY: Yes, and then it is marked "page 2, Section 2", near the end of the article. I believe that is the correct place to put it; if not I will change it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment. It refers to that schedule in Section 3, and Mrs. Sweeney is offering a proposal for that schedule.

CHIEF CLERK: "Delete and Insert the following:

1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	I
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	II
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	III
1	at large	from Senatorial	District A		Total	4
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	IV
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	V
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	VI
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	VII	Total	4
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	VIII
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	XI
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	XII
1	at large	from Senatorial	District	C	Total	4
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	IX
1	senator	from Senate	sub-district	X
2	at large	' from Senatorial	District	D	Total	4
4	senators	i from State	at large		4
						Grand total 20"

SWEENEY: I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment.

COGHILL: I object.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, in the same manner, this is the same plan I discussed during the time I had the privilege of the floor. I was a little hot under the collar then, but I have cooled off a little, and the only change now in this plan is that I have raised the total to 20 by giving you four senators from the state at large. This will give us equal senatorial representation from each of these senatorial districts as pro-posed by the Committee on Apportionment. I believe that this plan takes care of everyone, those in the city and those in the outlying areas. Mr. Peratrovich's objection I believe is taken care of in here. It was not really an objection really, but that is what he spoke on this morning. I don't believe anyone is hurt, and I am sure the plan is a little better than the one proposed in the proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, would you agree to a recess to see just how -- what is the wish of the body? That is quite a long amendment.

GRAY: I make a motion that we recess for two minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Mrs. Sweeney's proposed amendment. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I don't know that there is anything more to offer on it except, Mr. President, I do want to emphasize that I am not picking any brick out of the foundation of the proposal that the Apportionment Committee has put out. The only thing is I have arranged the senators under the schedule. Each senatorial district will start out even, and who gets the four from the state at large is anybody's guess. You all have an equal chance for that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I think after I say these few words I am going to paraphrase Mr. Ralph Rivers the other day and "let the tail go with the hide" as far as the balance of the bill is concerned, but had I known at the time that Mr. McNees advanced the matter of a unicameral legislature that the idea for senators would be proposed and apparently accepted by this body, as it is in this committee proposal here, then I should have, regardless of what I thought about the unicameral legislature otherwise, I would have gone for the unicameral legislature. The point is, as I see it here, that where two of these election districts are made into the senatorial district and you have a senator who is responsible only to his senatorial district. When he goes to the capital and the legislature, then his first interest is going to be right in his own particular little area because that is the part he has to please in order to be reelected. He is not answerable to any other part of the Territory. If we are going to have a bicameral system that the senate and I have not had many kind words to say about the senate during my talk here, but I do firmly believe that we should have one group, if we are going to have a bicameral legislature, there should be one group elected from a larger area which represents a larger number of people because you are going to have your special interest group there in the form of the house of representatives. One more point and I will close and promise to speak no more upon this bill, but when it comes to a matter of saying the people here who are from the outlying areas, and the outlying area is the place that has elected me to this Convention, and to the legislature, and they are the ones I support the greatest, but we are overdoing the outlying areas here forgetting the point that these delegates here, and I am going to speak to you and could call you by name, who have political ambitions and who are in the outlying areas and want to carve out for yourself a little district. That is fine, but I want to call attention to this: when you say that by electing a senator from a division at large or from the Territory at large, you say he is going to be elected because he is from Fairbanks or Anchorage or the bigger city. How about the delegate here, and I will mention the one where we have no delegate present -- we will say here in District 16 of our division here in Bethel. Now Bethel controls the vote in that particular area. How about the little fellow from up here in Akiak, he wants to file he does not stand a chance to be elected as representative in that district because he does not come from Bethel. That is the big city, and all things being equal the resident of Bethel is going to be elected. I submit there is no unfairness on the part if a senator happens to be elected from Fairbanks or Anchorage, you have the same system. In closing I will say it is just one of those deals where "big fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite them", etc.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: My name has been mentioned as to objecting to a certain program here. I want to make my position clear. I was elected at large from the First Division, and we have some delegates here that were elected from precincts and then you have some elected at large from the entire Territory, and we have been in session now for over 40 days, if I am correct, and I have not seen any distinction whatsoever. No one has asked you if you have been elected from the precinct. We have all participated here for the good of Alaska. I think that is what will prevail in our future state. I for one have no ambitions to be a senator from Klawock, but I do want to feel that when I go back that I can tell the people, "You are going to be represented if you can produce the timber. It is up to you to get down and dig." I can't foresee anyone there now that can participate and do a good job. Maybe you have the same condition up here, but do not try to confine it to the First Division. I have no feeling here that I can use what I accomplish here, if I can, to my own advantage. My interest here is trying to equalize representation in our government. The thing can work both ways. Mr. McNealy says we are paying too much attention to the outlying districts. That may be true. Can he guarantee there will be a senator from these little areas it was just an accident that I was elected. I will go back to what I said this morning. I think the reason I was elected was because I participated in my party to the fullest extent. If you are active, I don't care what organization you belong to, you are going to be recognized. I think they should have that opportunity. I am not guaranteeing there is going to be a senator from these little areas, but I think they should have that opportunity.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, at one time I might have had political ambitions, but I could not get the Cooper homestead made into an election district so I have given it up. The $1,750, roughly, that I have earned to date, to the greatest extent I have earned because of the time that I spent on the Apportionment Committee trying to redistrict, reapportion Alaska as of the 1955 Act under which we are here. The Apportionment Committee has had literally everyone of the delegates in and out of its Committee meetings presenting their views, some at first selfish and later they understood that for all the people to get representation, two concessions had to be made. The election districts that were established would primarily represent the representation for the house of representatives, that would be based on population. Secondly, when it came to districting for the senate, the primary consideration would have to be given then to geographical area. We came up with a plan, 24 election districts for the house of representatives, and 12 senatorial districts for the senate. There was such high feeling in this body for having senators elected at large that your Committee in grouping the election districts together allowed that feeling a very great amount of consideration and came out with the proposal that within the former old judicial division lines, if I might refer to them as such, as nearly as possible on our new schedule, there would be two senators elected at large, that in a way was an appeasement, but it also in my estimation and in the Committee's estimation served the purpose that the voice of the people would be heard but not heard to the extent that the senators, the representation in the outlying areas would be taken away from the people. There was a reference made to, I think it was Akiak versus Bethel, that a man in Akiak could never be elected a senator. I would like to give to you another condition. I will call it Valdez versus Anchorage.

The man now In the Chair presiding at this meeting was not elected from Valdez. He was elected from that area by the people, a greater number of people in another area. The Committee's proposal takes that into consideration in that you have two senators running at large and if a man is capable of being elected from without the highly populated area; he will be elected. The people in a highly populated center, I would like to use the Fourth Division right now, as it now exists, in Bethel certainly haven't a prayer for ever getting representation if the districting continues to exist as it is now. In the last legislature your four senators from the Fourth Judicial Division and the five representatives from the Fourth Judicial Division came from within the city limits of Fairbanks. Is that any kind of representation to go back and offer these people? This amendment that is before us, in juggling the number of senate districts where there were not enough, we just add one at large which made four. In one instance there happened to be enough election districts so they were not allowed one at large but they still had four senators, but it was dispersed out geographically. In another instance there was not enough election districts to have more than two, so we merely doubled the ones by allowing two at large. Those two at large in this particular case on the senate plan, which would be in "D", I can very easily see where three senators undoubtedly would come from Sub-Senate District No. 9. Is that allowing the proper representation to Sub-Senate District No. 10 or to the people disbursed throughout Senate District No. 10? It is not. To even pile on to that higher, then you elect four additional senators at large from within the state. There again you are piling population control higher and higher and higher, as you go. The plan that the Committee has submitted to you is the result of four weeks of solid, steady work. It is the best plan, so I urge all of you to defeat any amendment whatsoever that comes on the floor for this senatorial plan as submitted to you now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I want to say again that I appreciate the work that the Apportionment Committee has put into this proposal, and I am not disrupting it in any way. Mr. McNealy says that those who are elected from the outlying districts because of the vote that comes in from the outlying district, it seems to give the impression that you are representing just that little area, and the same with Bethel. He says there might be a man in Bethel who wants to be elected or a man in Akiak might want to be elected, but he can't because Bethel is bigger. Does he mean to imply that the man in Bethel is not going to represent Akiak? There is not a delegate here, I don't care where he is elected from, who is representing any small area, he is representing what is going to be the State of Alaska. I don't care where you come from, you are not localized in your attention to Territorial affairs. Now Mr. Cooper mentioned the President being elected from Valdez but he was not elected from Valdez; his vote came from another district. That does not make any difference with the plan I have. He will come from District No. 4 If he were to run again. His district would be smaller and there is absolutely no reason why he could not be elected again. His district is smaller and he does not have to have quite the vote he had, but they will get a senator out of that district. Now, as to Plan "D", he says you will get one from District 9 and one from District 10 and that the two would probably come from Nome and maybe he is going to put them in Kotzebue. Anyway, he says there is a possibility you will have three from one of those places, but I want you to remember that is the plan in the proposal. I have not changed that. In the proposal they still get one from District 9J one from District 10 and one at large. I have given District D the opportunity, if they have qualified men, to place in nomination men for the state at large, senators from the state at large. If they have men in that D division or section who are well enough known throughout the Territory, they can run, and there is nothing that we can say or do here that will say they cannot be elected. I am not changing the committee proposal as far as Section D is concerned. I just want in closing to say this, that we have men from isolated areas, and I think that if you would just look around, you will find they are the finest representatives we have from those isolated areas. You can't look at them and say they are considering just one place or another and those people who appeared before the Committee concerned about their particular area did not go in there with an idea of pulling their weight through trying to get representation for their district. They wanted to know the plan as it was building up. They helped the Committee with all the questions in their minds, and I am sure the Committee approved their coming in there and giving suggestions, I don't believe anybody went in there with an axe to grind or with an Idea of forcing the Committee to subdivide the Territory In any way that any particular place would have a representative that they weren't entitled to. I hope you will all vote for this senatorial plan. It does not disrupt the proposal that you have before you except as to the shuffling of the senators.

ROBERTSON: Roll call please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mrs. Sweeney be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 9 - Armstrong, Barr, Hermann, Johnson, Lee, Nolan, Robertson, Sundborg, Sweeney.

Nays: 45 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper,
Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer,

V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 9 yeas, 45 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption.

BOSWELL: I have an amendment on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as proposed by Mr. Boswell.

CHIEF CLERK: "That the schedule referred to in Section 3 be amended as follows: Strike 'No. of District' and insert in lieu thereof: 'Name of District'. Change Roman numerals to names as follows: I - Southeastern, III - South Central, IV Central, II Northwestern. Renumber election districts on page 1 to follow above in numerical order."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption of your amendment?

BOSWELL: I move the adoption.

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion. Mr. President, this amendment has the support of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: My purpose in proposing this amendment is to get away from some of the confusion that we have already had in discussing the amendment. We have had Roman numerals, letters and the proposal that mentions names, and it seems that perhaps to get away from the confusion with the old judicial division numbers that it would probably be best to use names entirely. And I have always felt that our judicial division numbers were rather disorderly due to the fact of the way they were formed, and now that we have a chance to straighten this out, I feel we should.

KILCHER: May I ask a question of Mr. Boswell?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

KILCHER: This is factually unimportant, yet geographically important matter, I would like to let you hear my wish about this. I have given the similar thought about it, and I am wondering if you could possibly be acceptable to an amendment for the second of your areas there. Southeastern, Southcentral, Northwestern. You had suggested "Southcentral". It is considered the Aleutians and the whole coast area between the Aleutians and Southeastern. It is mainly Southeastern Alaska, if you consider Cook Inlet penetrating way in, it is still coastal area largely and only lightly touches into the central area. In this area we do not have Bristol Bay any more, which originally belonged to the Third Division. So to make it simpler, Just call it "Southern" or "Southeastern" would be sufficient and in one instance simpler to have a "Central", and the others would be "Southeast" and "Northwestern". I wonder if you would object to that?

BOSWELL: I have no particular objection to changing these names, and I think if the body would like to change any one of those names that perhaps we could do that very simply. Since this is written out I would suggest that we go ahead and act on it. If it does not pass, fine; If It does, then we can change those names. I talked with several and we talked about Southwestern Alaska, which If you look down the Aleutian Chain, it is southwestern, and then you have that large area up around Prince William Sound, that is Southern Alaska. It seemed like "Southcentral" might describe it better, but I have no particular objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I wonder if Delegate Boswell would come over and show us those areas so we can make up our minds, on the map.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Boswell, would you care to do so? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to request the Chief Clerk to read the last part of the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Renumber election districts on page 1 to follow above in numerical order."

BOSWELL: In referring to the map, this would be Southeastern, Southcentral and Northwestern, and due to the fact that Central follows in here, we would start that numbering 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20, and then 21, 22 and 23 and 24, so we would have numbers running in sequence along with it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I think if we gave the matter a minute or two thought, I would like to hear somebody else from the Southcentral area because in the geography books it will be applied, and it will be well known, so if we call one "Southcentral" here, there we might call the other "Northcentral"; we might give it some thought before we establish it as definitely historic.

HILSCHER: I think "Southcentral" for the Anchorage-Kodiak area is a good name. I would not favor "Southwestern" because it would give you the impression of being farther away. I see no reason why "Southern" or "Southcentral" would not be all right. I think Mr. Boswell has a good idea.

HELLENTHAL: "Westward" Alaska, to observe the tradition.

HILSCHER: I am sorry I have no stock in the Westward Hotel.

SUNDBORG: I suggest that we vote on Mr. Boswell's proposed amendment and then if it is adopted, if any delegate wants to change any one of these names, it would be subject to change.

MCCUTCHEON: The question is Mr. Boswell's amendment without any other amendment, is that true?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. The question is, "Shall Mr. Boswell's proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment to the schedule. It speaks of District No. 24. I guess we have changed that, and I don't know what it is going to be, but I suppose we could refer to "24" for this purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 1 of the schedule be amended: 'that the boundaries of Election District 24 be changed to include the Village of Livengood and immediate vicinity, and the Livengood road and adjacent area'."

BARR: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Did Mr. Sundborg have a question?

SUNDBORG: Point of order. It doesn't belong in Section 1, Mr. Barr. There is no reference to any boundaries and we are not incorporating this map by reference. I understand that there is to be a subsequent article or section proposed by the

1932

Committee which will be the section which will outline the boundaries, and I think that is the place where we should make the amendment, which you propose, if we desire to make it,

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal,

HELLENTHAL: I think Mr. Barr has accomplished his purpose with sufficient clarity, so if the amendment were to pass it could be included in the schedule and I see no reason for not considering it at this time.

SUNDBORG: I withdraw my point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I was just going to suggest that Mr. Barr add to his amendment the name "Fairbanks" since we have changed the numbers in a previous amendment and that will designate it as the name of the district; it would be the Fairbanks district regardless of what the number is.

BARR: Is that the Fairbanks election district or senatorial district?

BOSWELL: It is the election district.

ROSSWOG: I would like to ask for a couple of minutes' recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the figure "24" be changed to the word "Fairbanks" and make it read the "Fairbanks Election District".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Don't we have the original motion before us at this time? Did you not make another motion prior to this time? You are asking unanimous consent that this particular amendment be amended? Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. The amendment to the amendment. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to talk on this. It is pretty hard for anyone who does not know that country to visualize it or to understand the socio-economic conditions, etc. I would like to go up to the map and explain it, but I would rather have someone else talk or ask questions first so I can answer those questions while I am up there.

COGHILL: Mr. Chairman, I feel that being born and raised in this area that I could probably talk on it just as intelligently as Mr. Barr, and I am opposed to his amendment from the standpoint that the Election District No. 22 is an accumulation of small villages and small towns in the central part of the Territory and needless to say we are going to need every one of those communities we can possibly have in there in order to obtain our equal right to obtain one representative out of that area. I see no reason at all why it should be engulfed into the Fairbanks large metropolitan area. The people of Livengood are mining people. If you will notice by your map, the valley follows down and the Tolovana River is a separating point between the Tolovana valley and the Yukon on the Rampart side. There are mining developments at Eureka, American Creek, Manley Hot Springs and Livengood and several smaller creeks between Livengood and Eureka. There is quite a lot of prospecting going in there. They have a survey of a road from Livengood to Eureka which is already connected with Manley Hot Springs. This area is a compact unit, it is served by airplane from Fairbanks, and so is all the rest of the Fourth Division served by airplane from Fairbanks. I believe that you are violating the Committee's thought of watershed here. The people who are living in the Livengood area will not have to go to a map and look to see where this superficial line is. They will know by our concept that all the waters that are flowing into the Tolovana River are a part of a No. 22 Election District. Everything that is flowing on to the Yukon side from Livengood is in the 23rd Election District. I believe that the point is opening an issue where that anyone of you delegates from your area can say that this little town does not belong there because we of the big city, we of another community are serving it and therefore it belongs to our socio-economic unit. I think that could apply to any place. I beg you not to vote for the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would like to ask Mr. Coghill a question. You have this legislative districting map in front of you. What is the southwestern boundary of that legislative district? Is that geographic, socio-economic or what is it? The bottom part of 22, it wanders across the countryside there, between 21 and 22, COGHILL: Yes, that is the watershed of the upper Kuskokwim River to the lower part, that is all of the watershed. In fact, it encompasses Lake Minchumina which also I might say is serviced by Fairbanks. It follows down, and it takes in on the northwestern side, takes in the watershed of the Innoko River and cuts across at a divide of the Yukon just above Kaltag. It is a definite watershed boundary.

SUNDBORG: Can anybody on the Committee tell me whether, if we adopt Mr. Barr's amendment, it will make any change in the number of members that would be assigned to either the Fairbanks or the Nenana Election District, based on the 1950 census?

HELLENTHAL: No change.

SUNDBORG: I would have great difficulty in trying to decide which way to vote on this because I feel I have no information. I think it is a local problem. I wonder if we could not suggest that the members of the Convention here from the Fourth Division decide what they like and I will go for whatever that is.

BARR: You will notice that the names of three people from the Fourth Division are on this amendment, and I have not contacted them all. Mr. Collins said he was going to vote for it. I imagine they all will; of course, I can understand Mr. Coghill's not voting for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the proposed amendment by Mr, Barr and Mrs. Wien and Mr. Johnson. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: May I have the floor briefly on a question of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Sundborg, if there is no objection.

(Mr. Sundborg spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

BARR: After I get through talking he may have something to base his decision on. May I be allowed to go up to the map to talk?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Barr, if there is no objection.

BARR: Now you wonder why I am concerned about Livengood and why I consider myself competent to talk on it. I will tell you. I was asked if I knew anybody in Livengood. I do. I know everyone there. I have carried the mail to Livengood by air for the last 10 years, and I think that I know pretty well the way they think and what they want. I also know quite a bit about the economy there and the terrain. I know every tree between here and Livengood. I maintain that the Committee inadvertently overlooked their socio-economic theory, or at least they leaned to one side in putting the line where they did. Their method was to follow the height of land or some stream or some prominent feature of the terrain like that or to group the peoples In a certain economic area, and if one overbalanced the other then they went by that. In this case the height of land is not very definite. There is no great mountain range along there. You are crossing over ridges, low hills and what not. There are two or three single mountains that stand out but the economic situation is definite. It is linked to Fairbanks. The only way you can get out of Livengood, really outside of by air, is by road and you have to go to Fairbanks if you go on the road. If you go by any scheduled airline you probably go to Fairbanks also, and if you send any mail out it will go to Fairbanks by scheduled airline. The population is very small. It is around 20 permanent population, and during the summer, it may reach 50. It did not this summer, so by cutting that off of Election District No. 22, Mr. Coghill's district, you are not cutting off many people, and John here said it would not change the representative situation, and it would not gain a great deal for the Fairbanks district either in the number of people, but I am speaking here because I know what the Livengood people would like. Now there are only, as I say, about 20 people, and the money invested in Livengood is Fairbanks money and always has been. A great many of the people that live there also have homes In Fairbanks. Sometimes some of them spend the winter in Fairbanks. They are connected in every way with Fairbanks and they are not connected with anything else. Mr. Coghill states that there has been a road surveyed from Livengood to the Eureka mining area and that is true. Some people have plans that some day there will be a road through there; so far that is only a dream. That has been surveyed for quite awhile, just like the Chena Hot Springs road. If that is ever put through, it does not change the situation. It connects Livengood with the Eureka mining district which is a group of small mining camps and then it goes on to Manley Hot Springs which is a small village, but it is still connected with Fairbanks by road and Fairbanks is still their main source of supply. Now, the idea was advanced to me that this Fairbanks district, which is a fairly long district, an irregular outline extending northwest and southeast, if it were extended to the northwest a little more, narrowed down, it would look like we were gerrymandering, reaching out to get a few more votes. You would not get more than 20 votes and I submit to you that now is in this angle up in here, and to include Livengood in this corner they have taken it in and it is not connected with anything. If you want to get out of there now and get into this area, you have to walk through swamps and tundra, so there is no case of gerrymandering there. In fact, I think It Is just the opposite. We are just putting them back where they belong in the first place. By the way, we had a little talk over here, most of the members of the Fourth Division are for it. Mr. Taylor advanced the idea, well, give it to the 23rd because more villages need a few more votes. He does not care to have it particularly, but I say that the people in Livengood care, and that is who I am speaking for here. Now, the argument was brought up on the floor too that I would say or that the feeling here was that it was connected to Fairbanks by air, and that was no argument for its inclusion. I am not using that argument. It is connected by air, it is served by air, like the other small villages around here, but it is also served by road, and that makes a big difference and Fairbanks is a source of supply. It does not make any difference whether it is by air or road or any other means. Another argument against this Idea is that if this is done it might open it up here so that other members here would want to cut off a certain bit here and add it over there. I don't think anybody will vote for that unless it is a good argument, and this Committee has done a very good Job in outlining these boundaries, going by the socio-economic theory and by the terrain, and I submit to you that they did not adhere strictly to that in this particular situation, and I can understand why, because there isn't any prominent mountains or what not through here. They just went across the hills, and you can go across the hills in the same manner about five miles over here and still be in the foot hills and take in Livengood and the Fairbanks voting district and the highway. There is no great problem there at all. I don't see that would open it up. Also, to representation, would the people in Livengood, would they want to be represented by people in Fairbanks or by people elected from Livengood or Fort Yukon in case they were put in that district? All I can say to that is that some of the people in Livengood live here part of the time in Fairbanks; they know everyone in Fairbanks. Since their economy is linked with Fairbanks and a lot of Fairbanks money is invested there, Fairbanks is going to represent them better than anyone else.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Just before you leave the map, would you indicate where you suggest that boundary should go.

BARR: Livengood is a little bit above the junction here as it is shown on the map. In my amendment I say that the boundary of the Fairbanks district should be changed. In other words, it would continue on both sides up here a little bit and then come together like that, just to take in the road and the immediate area around Livengood. I don't want to take in a very great area. You can do that and still adhere to your method of outlining boundaries. I want the Committee to do it. I don't want to do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Collins.

COLLINS: I want to say at this time, fundamentally, I wish to support the report of the Committee in all matters that come before this Convention. I say that the Committee in this respect has done a wonderful job, and I am going to support it other than this amendment, and I am doing that because I think that I have the knowledge of this situation. The Livengood district was discovered by Fairbanks people; it was developed by Fairbanks money. The people, 90 per cent of the people who live there are Fairbanks people, and when they cease their operations, the first place they come is to Fairbanks. We consider the Livengood section as a suburb of Fairbanks. There is no reason in my mind why they should not yield in this small respect, the Committee, to allow the Barr amendment to pass. I am for the Barr amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: May I ask a question of the Chairman of the Apportionment Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. White.

WHITE: In your opinion, Mr. Hellenthal, within which district would the people of Livengood have the best chance of electing one of their own to the legislature?

HELLENTHAL: I don't know enough about it to answer that question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, could you answer that question?

COGHILL: Why certainly, I will answer that. Election District 22, Election District 22, the district it is in now. There is no large centralized block of votes in an urban area in this district. We are all small communities and the people are elected at face value. It takes an awful lot of money to get elected from the hinterlands. I don't want to take up 15 minutes of the Convention's time arguing this plan. You know how I feel about it. It should be in 22.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: If I recall my position on the next roll call, I am in a bit of a spot, and I would like to take a second to explain how I am going to vote on this. I think if I recall correctly, we heard three members of the Committee testify this morning that they had taken into consideration all of the factors that have been brought out here and still drew the line where they drew it. I am from Southcentral Alaska and don't know enough about Livengood. It is removed from my own sphere of activities. I am impressed by the argument that a number of slight alterations should perhaps be made in the boundaries as drawn by the Committee, but I suspect when we get into one, we will get into many more. I am inclined to feel that the proper place for those adjustments would be before the first reapportionment committee, therefore I am going to vote against the amendment.

V. RIVERS: Some years ago in the town of Livengood there was a member elected to the senate from the Fourth Division. His name was Senator LaBoyteaux. He is now dead. Some years ago I was engaged on a survey of a route from interior Alaska to the Nome and Seward peninsula area for a location of a road or railroad. We took off from Dunbar, skirted the toe of those hills and crossed over the Yukon slightly beyond Rampart. That is the line Delegate Barr has shown as the logical geographical division of that area. It is, I believe, the logical socio-economic boundary of the area and for that reason I will support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr be adopted by the Convention?"

COGHILL: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

METCALF: I wish to abstain from voting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I would like to point out to the delegates here who desire to abstain from voting that their voting counts as a no vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing in the rules that says their vote is counted as a "no" vote. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If there is any doubt about it, I hope the record does show that I have also announced that I will abstain from voting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The President feels the same way. The President is not convinced that this boundary should be changed, neither is he convinced that it should not be changed, so how can I vote on it? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: About the only way this Convention could be convinced one way or the other is to get somebody from Livengood into the Convention and I don't think that is proper because the fact is we would have the same situation happen some place else, and we can't get people in here from the areas, it is up to the reapportionment board. If the Livengood area feels they should be in the Fairbanks area, there is a reapportioning coming up, it can be taken care of at that time, but for the present time it should be in 22 because they can be and should be elected from that area.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: If I lived in Livengood, I would want to stay in 22 where I would have some effect on the elections. If they are in this district here they will be political oblivion. There they are a small group of people, and I would like to stay in there. The methods are in this document, if there is some glaring error, it can be corrected in this document itself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, this half-hour discussion about a small matter has shown how hard it will be in the future apportioning board to make minor changes when we here in a large body, well acquainted with facts, can hardly reach a decision. Since this place of Livengood is so well represented here with the people who know the place and are lucky enough to have a friend who speaks in their favor, I am strongly in favor of this small amendment. It is too bad that others, if there are others in the same situation, have no advocates here; they will have a bad time in the future to get adjustments, but here we have a fortunate case where it is comparatively easy to reach adjustment, and those people who know the case most intimately seem to be in favor of it, so I strongly urge that the amendment be adopted.

COGHILL: I think that I could just as truthfully say that the people of Livengood want to say in the 22nd District as Mr. Barr can say that they want to be in the Fairbanks District.

HELLENTHAL: This is a good illustration of some of the problems that, as Mr. Kilcher says, can be settled in an apportioning committee or board. I will tell you, the Committee voted to hold with their original analysis, and I will be perfectly frank, as we have always been among ourselves in the Committee, I will tell you why I voted that way. Mr. Rosswog told me that he had a similar problem down in Chitina. I know similar problems were presented from time to time to our Committee. I voted to leave it to the redistricting board, confident that the omission would be cured there rather than open the door to a series of such amendments. Now, I would like to know, are there any other amendments that are being considered if this amendment, which I think is very worthy, if it is adopted? If it is adopted are we going to be deluged with similar requests? I would like to ask John Rosswog that question. I have great respect for him and I wonder just how immediate his concern is.

ROSSWOG: I do think we have a little problem in the Valdez and the other area there. I have discussed it with the member from Valdez and he is very willing to go along that we make a slight change, a little jog in the river there. Because it was in a recording district it was put in the Valdez side where I thought it should be on the Cordova side, but I of course would like to have it changed at this time but I will withhold it.

HELLENTHAL: I wonder if there are any other similar requests. I think an intelligent decision will hinge largely on whether there are or are not.

1940

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, before this would come up, I certainly would want to talk to Mr. Rosswog again. I would like to consider that particular question before it ever came up on the floor, that I speak to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, In view of the fact that there seems to be quite a little doubt raised by this one particular question, I would move that we would recess until 7 o'clock.

BARR: I object.

LAWS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m.?" All those in favor of standing at recess until 7:00 p.m. will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the Convention is still in session. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I want to call attention to committee announcements when we do recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I hoped I was not going to have to speak upon this matter, although I am conversant with the conditions that exist at Livengood and I also know the conditions that exist in other parts of District No. 22. Now this might be the start, if we adopt this amendment, of another little chopping here and a little chopping there and finally with a couple of more choppings on District 22 they will not have a major fraction of the population necessary to function as an election district. Now that is a district that has few settlements and they are all very small. I doubt at the present time if they will barely qualify as an election district. Now Mr. Barr says there are about 20 people residing there. Maybe somebody down there in that jagged line in the south boundary of the area of No. 22, perhaps will think that maybe one of those villages along the Kuskokwim should be down to give the Bethel area a little more voting power. Maybe they take 30 votes off of that. That is 50 gone out of poor old 22. So we will finally wind up that the reapportionment commission is going to find that 22 is not populous enough, so we are going to join that either on to 21 or 24 or possibly on to 23, which is the large sparsely populated area north of the Yukon River and bordering on the Canadian border. I think we would be doing the voting District No. 22 an injustice if we took those 20 or more people out of their present location and put them in 24. And I think that people of Livengood would certainly be having a feeling of importance if they knew the furor they are causing on the floor of the Convention today. I think they would be very difficult to get along with from now on, If they knew that they were the topic of conversation here and used up a couple of thousand dollars worth of the Convention time.

1941

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to close. I can't understand the concern over poor old District No. 22 there. According to these figures the 1950 census was 2,677. Now if we did want to put that in some area that needed 20 more votes, you could put it in the Yukon Plats area, which is adjacent. They only have 1,419 votes, but I say those people want to belong to the Fairbanks area because they know the Fairbanks people and the Fairbanks people know them and are connected with them in every way. I don't think they are worried about representation. It was pointed out that there was a Territorial senator elected from Livengood at one time. There is probably no one there who would want to run and if they had somebody else to represent them, I am sure they would like to have some of the friends in Fairbanks do it. I would like to state for Mr. Metcalf's benefit, that when I was at the map, I said that Mr. Taylor did not favor bringing in a Fairbanks election district but the majority of the people from this area are in favor of it; he was worried about the majority. He may not take it at face value, but I will say it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr be adopted by the Convention? The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 16 - Armstrong, Barr, Collins, Doogan, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, McNealy, Nerland, Nolan, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Sweeney, Wien.

Nays: 35 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal-, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, Walsh, White, Mr, President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.

Abstain: 3 - Harris, Metcalf, Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 35 nays and 1 absent and 3 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has not been adopted. Mr. Johnson.

1942

JOHNSON: I move that the Convention stand at recess until 7:05 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 7:05 p.m. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Do you wish announcements?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Riley.

RILEY: The Rules Committee will meet immediately in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to Section 4? Section 5? The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment to Section 5.

CHIEF CLERK: This is an amendment by Committee VI on Apportionment. "Section 5, line 21, page 4, following the comma after the word 'redistricting' add: 'giving explanation for all changes from the Board's plan,'.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: I move the adoption of the amendment.

COGHILL: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves the adoption of the amendment, seconded by Mr. Coghill. The motion is open for discussion. Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, the Committee offers another amendment to line 6, page 4, Section 5, and the amendment is to add the words 'with at least one chosen from each of the four senate districts', following the word "general public".

CHIEF CLERK: You didn't have "chosen" in here, but do you want it in?

HELLENTHAL: No, I was relying on my memory. It should be "With at least one from each of the four senate districts". I move the adoption of the amendment.

COGHILL: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal moves the adoption of the proposed amendment, Mr. Coghill seconds the motion. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Do you mean "senate" districts or "senatorial" districts?

HELLENTHAL: I use the language "senate" districts, Each of the four senate districts and the grammar and consistency, I think, is a proper matter for the Style and Drafting, if we have offended in that regard.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?". Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Was that just an insertion after "public" -- the rest of it stays the same?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye". All those opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I have a few questions to ask, primarily about the intent of the Committee. This board of reapportionment is appointed by the governor and is to act in advisory capacity to him. Is it your intent that it be a standing board or just be appointed for purposes whenever necessary for each decennial census?

HELLENTHAL: It was the intent that it be a standing board.

V. FISCHER: Another question I have, in the executive article, in Section 16, it proposes that members of regulatory and quasi-judicial bodies shall be nominated and appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate. This was not included as a regulatory or quasi-judicial body.

HELLENTHAL: That is correct, and it was not our intention to so include it.

V. FISCHER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 5? Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment that's on her desk?

CHIEF CLERK: It's from Mr. Taylor. "Line 2, page 5, change word 'Supreme' to 'Superior'. Page 5, Section 5, add a new paragraph as follows: 'Appeal may be made to the supreme court of the state, by the applicant, In the event of an adverse decision by the superior court. The supreme court shall review the said cause upon the law and the evidence and make and file its findings of facts in conclusion of law and decree based upon the same.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the first amendment which will change the word "Supreme" to "Superior".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves the adoption of the first amendment changing the word "Supreme" to "Superior." Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

TAYLOR: I would like to explain the reason for that change. In the event that there was a dispute as to whether redistricting, any redistricting act of the reapportionment act of the commission was contrary to the thoughts of residents in any one of the districts affected, that they would have the right to take the matter to the superior court in the area in which they resided. Now, in the original text here it was said that the supreme court would have original jurisdiction, but in thinking it over, I felt it was better to have the one judge or the nearest available judge of the superior court have jurisdiction, and then if there was an adverse decision against the petitioner, that he could appeal it to the supreme court so that a person would have the right of appeal if the decision went against him and that way they could have the full use of the court procedures, and I think it would be better because to give the supreme court the original jurisdiction all suits affecting any reapportionment would have to be filed in Juneau, and whereas in the superior court the petitioner could file it in the nearest superior court. I feel the change should be made. And then the other paragraph is to the paragraph inserted that after the original matter here was merely to give the supreme court the right to entertain the appeals from the superior court and decide the matter upon not only the law, but it could also take the facts into consideration. They could try it upon the record to see if the superior court had abused its discretion and had found against the petitioner when he possibly should have found for it. Now on that paragraph that I put in, I think Mr. McLaughlin showed me a draft in which that can be cut down considerably and I'd like to have --

MCLAUGHLIN: You haven't moved that one yet.

TAYLOR: Well, I would move the adoption of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, we have this one before the house, Mr.

Taylor, the first one is before the house now. Is there further discussion? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: In connection with this amendment, I might say that the language that we employed came from the Territory of Hawaii's provision on this subject. There the whole matter is taken care of in the one court, the supreme court. The Committee Is Indifferent as to whether It Is more consistent that the first go to the superior court, then the same problem all over again to the supreme court, and we will abide by the decision of the body towards -- Its just a dual review and that they have no feelings on that subject. However, as Mr. Taylor indicated, if it is the intention to accomplish this result,

I think that it is done much briefer as Mr. Taylor suggested in Mr. McLaughlin's rewrite of the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: But this particular amendment would not be affected.

HELLENTHAL: Yes it would. I think Mr. Taylor and Mr. McLaughlin have gotten together and wish to simplify it somewhat.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have Mr. Taylor's amendment before us at this time. Mr. Ralph Rivers, your point of order.

R. RIVERS: As I understood Mr. Taylor divided his question and moved that we change the word "supreme" to the word "superior". That's all, but he's also submitted the rest of the stuff too.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It's here, but it is not before us.

R. RIVERS: In that case all that is before us now is changing the word "supreme" to the word "superior"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: In that case I would like to be heard for a moment and that is that mandamus or other comparable remedies are generally proceedings for a court of general jurisdiction. The judge sitting there is the man that issues the writs of mandamus and that sort of thing. The supreme court is primarily an appeal court, so I certainly favor the amendment that we are approaching now if we change the word "Supreme" to the word "Superior". Then I want to hear Mr. McLaughlin's draft on the appeal powers of the supreme court in case any party appeals. I would like to ask one question. Mr. Taylor, is it your intention to only let the petitioner appeal in case he loses, or could either party appeal?

TAYLOR: Either party could appeal.

R. RIVERS: I think we should so state it.

MCLAUGHLIN: In my proposed amendment to his proposed amendment, I have stricken any comment about adverse decision.

1946

R. RIVERS: Very well, then, I support --

TAYLOR: If we adopt my first amendment here, we will necessarily have to adopt the next one.

R. RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. Chairman, I want to hear this amendment before I vote on this one right here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston has the floor. For informational purposes you would like to hear the proposed amendment that is proposed by Mr. Taylor.

COGHILL: Mr. President, for informational purposes I would like to hear from the Chairman of our Committee as to this. He is an attorney and this is a legal matter and I will abide by your decision on this as to the ramifications of the law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, if there is no objection.

HELLENTHAL: I would say that as a matter of indifference, but I do think that Mr. Taylor's amendment, as modified by Mr. McLaughlin's condensation of it is certainly good.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin, would you care, for informational purposes, to read the amendment that will be proposed later if this amendment carries.

MCLAUGHLIN: Taking the printed amendment as submitted by Mr. Taylor, I would delete: "Appeal may be made to the supreme court of the state by the applicant in the event of an adverse decision by the superior court." I would delete that entire sentence. The following sentence would be: "The supreme court, on appeal, shall review the said cause upon the law and the facts." Then anybody can appeal it and the remainder I would strike, "and make and file its finding of facts and conclusions of law in decree based upon the same", on the grounds that It is mere verbiage.

DAVIS: Would you give it to us again?

MCLAUGHLIN: I would strike, on Mr. Taylor's amendment, "appeal may be made..."

DAVIS: I've got that, just start with "the supreme court".

MCLAUGHLIN: After the words "supreme court", insert the words "on appeal, shall review the said cause upon the law". I have stricken "evidence" and substituted the word "facts", inserted a period after the words "facts" and stricken the remainder of the sentence.

JOHNSON: May I address a question to Mr. McLaughlin?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

JOHNSON: Wouldn't the object of your appeal, or rather your proposed amendment, be substantially accomplished by simply putting a period after the word "state" in the second line, and striking the entire balance of the paragraph so that it would read: Appeal may be made to the supreme court of the state"? Wouldn't that cover it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We don't have anything before us on this right at the time. Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: I believe, Mr. Johnson, in answer to you, there was one addition that Mr. Taylor desired. He desired not only a review on the law, but he wanted to make sure that the supreme court could review all the facts as presented in the superior court. He wanted in substance a trial de novo without any other evidence than the evidence presented in the superior court. That's why he insisted that the law and facts appear there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I just want to ask Mr. McLaughlin why we needed a sentence about appeal — most things are appealable. Is it just because it is a trial de novo that we have to have it in there?

MCLAUGHLIN: I believe that that was Mr. Taylor's intent.

TAYLOR: The reason I put it that way is the fact that ordinarily on appeal to the supreme court you go up upon the transcript and the law part, and they will review the law part, they will review this way if the lower court has abused its discretion, why they say that they hold that to be that he made an erroneous reflection or opinion, but in this, it preserves the right so that the record can go up and the appellate court can review both the facts and the law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, since we are continually going into the whole matter, I wonder if we couldn't get Mr. Taylor to withdraw his motion, and present the whole matter to us so we can properly consider it. Actually, we only have before us one very small phase of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Davis, but the Chair felt that actually, as you say, the amendment that's going to be offered will affect the decision of the body as to what they will do on this, so it would probably be more -- Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Could we have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Did you ask that your original amendment be withdrawn, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor asks unanimous consent that his original amendment be withdrawn. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 2, page 5, change word 'Supreme' to 'Superior'. Page 5J Section add new paragraph as follows: 'The supreme court, on appeal, shall review the said cause upon the law and the facts. '"

TAYLOR: I move for the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

R. RIVERS: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers seconds the motion. The amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Fools rush in where angels fear to tread, but I'm going to take a chance at it. It occurs to me that by doing this we are virtually assuring what amounts to a double trial, if I understand Mr. McLaughlin's Latin right. I see no reason why the supreme court should not have original jurisdiction in a matter of apportionment which will affect the whole State of Alaska. Hence, I am reasonably certain that if anyone brings an action in the superior court of the district in which he is concerned with and judgment is against him, that he will appeal the thing. We must recognize that if we change any of these boundaries, we are liable to change the whole apportionment on the whole state, and I think it is a reasonable place to have the original jurisdiction. Now, the judicial article hasn't provided, but at least it hasn't avoided placing some original jurisdiction in the supreme court, and I think this is a pretty good place to put it. I have no objection to the other thing, but it looks better to me to be there in the first place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I can see, in effect, that you're putting it in the superior court and that it's closer to everyone's home. However, I agree with Mr. Hurley that actually what you are doing is duplicating the process because either the applicant or the state, the governor, will have to appeal the decision. Now, another thing that concerns me is that a very definite time factor may be involved in all this. I can easily imagine where the apportioning board may receive its information during, say, 1972. They may meet all the deadlines, the governor may issue its proclamation as required in this article in time for the 1972 fall elections, and then by a process of tying the apportionment up in the courts through the superior court and then appeal to the supreme court, we may be introducing a lag in there which may deprive the state of the benefit of a reapportionment for a period of two years, and since there will be a repetition of the presentation and consideration of facts, I certainly go along with Mr. Hurley's stand on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I'd like to ask a question, Mr. President. It appears to me, from what little I know of supreme courts, that it is their right to either accept or reject a hearing of a case. I'd like to ask one of the attorneys in this body if the supreme court has to hear the appeal if they don't choose to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: No one has said anything that isn't true. Including Mr. Hurley. The supreme court under this would be compelled, it is a direct constitutional mandate, it would have to hear the cause on appeal, just as it would have to hear the cause on mandamus as provided in the Committee's proposal. I agree with Mr. Hurley that there's nothing in the judiciary article that prohibits the supreme court from having original jurisdiction. That is, it isn't precluded from exercising original jurisdiction, and I agree with Mr. Fischer that there is a possibility of delay - that is, bringing it into the superior court and taking it up to the supreme court might encounter some delay. I would agree with Mr. Taylor when Mr. Taylor says that if you are going to have it tried, you ought to have it tried in the superior court so at least the problems can be threshed out and the supreme court will have the benefit of all the argument that took place in the lower court. But definitely anything you put in the constitution requiring any court to do anything, they're compelled to do it because they are the creatures of the constitution.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. McLaughlin just one other question to carry that thing forward. If the original jurisdiction is in the supreme court, can't they hear the arguments in the first place?

MCLAUGHLIN: They definitely can. No problem at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher has been trying to get the floor over there.

KILCHER: The one angle we shouldn't forget in this consideration is that the cost accruing to the people, possibly a small group in outlying impoverished areas, might accrue to the people if they have to try the case twice, which is almost automatically the case here. Who pays then if they lose - if they win I assume that the state might, under the law, in the future pay the cost if they win a case. If they lose, they are burdened with heavy costs, which is an added obstacle in the way of reapportionment. I would like to have this on the record and explained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Something tells me that if they win, there will be no provision ever made for them being reimbursed. It would be a matter of statutory law and I am sure if they win there will never be any provision for securing costs against the state or against the person, the government that they mandamus. Whether they win or they lose, it is based on law of averages and experience. I think that every attorney in the place would agree that they will pay all their costs whether they win or they lose.

HELLENTHAL: I want to clear up perhaps a misunderstanding here that I may have created in Mr. Kilcher's mind. I told him that under present Territorial law, the prevailing party in this suit, even though the defendant happens to be the state, is entitled to be reimbursed for his costs and a reasonable attorney's fee and I told him that since that law was now on the books of Alaska, that presumably it would be continued over in the new state, so I don't quite agree with Mr. McLaughlin's conclusion or maybe I am wrong. I might say maybe we have a more serious problem here than I had thought.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: The reason I brought it up is if nobody deems it important enough to make, not an amendment, but an addition of some form or shape to guarantee this situation in one way or the other, I would like to have at least brought this thing up as a matter of record. I would certainly think that it should be given some small thought. It puts the burden possibly on the people who can hardly bear it and that obstacle in the way of getting just correction of the boundary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I am indifferent. I can see advantages In both but I might point out to Mr. Kilcher that Mr. Taylor in moving to put it into the superior court, is moving the action to your home community and literally when you produce your witnesses it is less expensive under Mr. Taylor's system than it is going to the capital, wherever it may be, and flying all your witnesses to the capital from your own community so literally, putting it into your local court, generally you may assume it is going to be cheaper. Where the expense might be added on is the expense of appeal to the supreme court.

KILCHER: I concede a point from a sense Mr. McLaughlin, but on the other hand, the areas involved will be outlying areas, the inhabitants of which as a rule do not care to fly another 200 miles and chances in this instance would be greatly for the probability that two trials would be involved. I think I would vote against the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I think I have the right to make the closing argument on this. It seems like all the speakers against this amendment have lost sight of one fact, that in our judiciary act, we set up a court of original jurisdiction of which we'll have the judges in various divisions and when Mr. Kilcher can say that you can fly a witness down to Juneau, or four or five witnesses down to Juneau cheaper than you can fly 15 or 20 minutes into Fairbanks or into Nome or some other place where a judge is sitting, we certainly will have changed the methods of charging for plane fare. Now another thing you have lost sight of is the fact that if we had these courts of original jurisdiction with seats, headquarters in various places, why, for the convenience of the people who are engaging in litigation and they have their trial in their home locality, because it is going to save them money, and another thing, these courts of original jurisdiction, which we will call the superior courts are the courts that are supposed to try things like that. Now if you try one in the supreme court, you have got to go back and amend your judiciary articles and say that the superior courts will have original jurisdiction in all matters except in cases involving reapportionment or redistricting and if you want to do that, it is just as easy to start this down in the superior court where it is more convenient for litigants, where it is going to be cheaper and where if you get beat in there, you do have the chance to go up to the supreme court on the record. You don't take any witnesses up there, you only take the record and why deprive a person of his right of appeal. He has a right of appeal in every other case that he is going to try in a district court in the Territory of Alaska but he is denied the right of appeal in a reapportionment appeal. I think the amendment should pass.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: In case you go overlapping from between two court districts like the Northwestern and the Central one, then which are the two courts to go to if it is a boundary line between? It is a point I would like to find out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to answer that. Mr. Londborg, every superior court in the state will have concurrent jurisdiction of any part of Alaska. You can try it, if something might happen here, if you want to you can file it in Nome if you wish, because we have concurrent jurisdiction.

MCLAUGHLIN: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment, signify by saying "aye", all those opposed by saying "no".

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE? Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Hermann, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 21 - Awes, Cooper, Cross, Davis, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hurley, Johnson, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, V. Rivers, Sundborg, Sweeney, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Collins, H. Fischer, Hilscher, Poulsen, Robertson, VanderLeest, White.)

LONDBORG: I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg asked that his vote be changed to "no". The Convention will come to order.

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 21 nays and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Hellenthal a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: With no objection, Mr. Hurley, you may ask the question.

HURLEY: Mr. Helleenthal, on page 4 of the proposal, Section 5, line 6, you refer to "public employees and officials". What did you have in mind when you spoke of public employees or officials? Any particular group of them?

HELLENTHAL: No.

HURLEY: You just don't like or didn't want public employees in general, is that right?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

HURLEY: I would like to offer an amendment,

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, you may offer your amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, page 4, line 6, strike words 'but not public employees or officials.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, what is your pleasure?

HURLEY: I move for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves for the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

LEE: I will second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee seconds the motion. The amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. Chairman, this is not a matter of substance but a matter of principle. I realize that there may be certain officials of the Territorial government which would not be properly on a reapportionment board but I also realize that there will be probably a few thousand other public officials working throughout the state who are public utility districts and local, state, and city governments or various other things who are perfectly conscientious citizens of the State of Alaska, and the situation at present you will find throughout the Territory a number of city councils who have public employees on them who are in my mind doing a very good job and, I think it relegates all public employees to second-class citizens and I don't think the statement is warranted in there and I therefore think it should come out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any further discussion? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I can only say that I believe that the reason that the statement is in here is because the Committee was very much afraid of the legislature getting their hands on reapportioning and if this phrase is stricken from this report, the reapportionment of Alaska at some future date will end up in the hands of the legislature and the election districts will undoubtedly be unmercifully gerrymandered.

GRAY: Mr. President, may I ask a few questions of Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: I would like to answer his question first. I would be quite happy to offer an amendment stating "legislators",

GRAY: I was wondering if you have any objection to the word "state" instead of "public", the introductory word "state employees" which was the intent of the Committee.

HURLEY: It would certainly be a lot more restrictive.

GRAY: I believe it was the intent of the Committee to use the word "public" but I think they meant the state employees which are directly under the governor and to keep it out of the governor's control.

HURLEY: Mr. Gray, that would be better. If the amendment fails, that would be better. However, if you are talking about legislators, why not say legislators? Now if you are talking about somebody else, then make it "state employees".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: It was simply to mean any public official or employee, it wasn't the intention of the Committee to keep it on the state level but it meant just what it said.

PRESIDENT. EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Hurley and Mr. Hellenthal Jointly. This phrase has bothered me also and right now I am inclined to support Mr. Hurley. However, I think with some modification that we could probably all get together here and provide that certain state public employees or officials might be exempted by law. Certainly we should exempt those members of city councils, those members of road boards and one thing and another that will be serving throughout the whole Territory. Those are the interested men of the Territory in the government. They will be the interested men in the state government. I think there should be a proviso put in here at least I want you to think about this for just a minute, Mr. Hellenthal. There should be a proviso in here at least .that would not make this so all-inclusive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees, are you asking that perhaps we have a few minutes recess and you can all get together?

MCNEES: That might be very wise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: It looks like a lot of people don't want to vote on this question. Mr. President, I would like to withdraw my amendment and substitute one therefor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: With no objection, the amendment as proposed by Mr. Hurley is ordered withdrawn. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to then strike the same words and substitute therefore, "but not state officials".

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: I move for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

MCNEES: I will second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees seconded the motion. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I recollect the Committee thinking on this quite well and the thinking is this. Now you may or may not agree with it. The object of this board was to get as objective a board as was possible and as nonpolitical a board as was possible and to achieve this end, extremes were taken. It was felt that a public official was too politically inclined, lived in too much of a, political atmosphere to fit the test and that his employees and his service likewise would be subject to political pressures. Now I will be one of the first to say you can't erase politics from anyone's life nor should you, but the whole purpose of this was to take any emphasis away from politics. Now the board felt that there are many, many people in the Territory who would fit the bill, many many people who were not members of city councils, who were not city managers and who didn't work for them as secretaries or clerk-typists, who were not in the political arena and that those people should be chosen for this board, this objective, studious board, this board that was supposed to be divorced from pressures and that was the reason and maybe they went a bit too far in seeking that objective but frankly, I don't think so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, obviously Mr. Hellenthal's acquaintanceship with public employees is quite limited. The very thing that you are doing here and as I say, this is not substance but there is a matter of principle, is the reason that you are relegating those people that are interested in serving on these boards and are interested in being good citizens and are not connected with politics, from feeling inferior and of second-class when the constitution of the State of Alaska comes out and expressly prohibits them from holding a position on a board.

HELLENTHAL: Now Mr. Hurley, I am excluded from any type of jury service. So is my wife but we do not feel that we are second-rate, we do not feel that we are being discriminated against. We feel that it was a very wise move on the part of the legislature of Alaska to make that exclusion and many other states do the same thing so I don't think you should feel hurt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to make one point. This would prohibit, as I see it and, if I am wrong, Mr. Hellenthal, correct me. This would prohibit a man who served on the Board of Regents for the University of Alaska from serving, am I not correct?

HELLENTHAL: Sure. I think it should.

MCNEES: You think it should?

HELLENTHAL: Yes sir.

MCNEES: Why? There is a man who is territory-wide and will be state-wide in his thinking.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The session will come to order. Mr. McNees has the floor. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: There is a man who would be state-wide in his thinking and you could not call him a sectionalist necessarily, any more than you could call a man who perhaps mines in the Kougarak north of Nome, lives during the winter in Anchorage, prefers to spend the great bulk of the winter in Washington State, a sectionalist. No, I feel that this is just too broad and therefore I will have to vote against it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, as long as the matter isn't closed I would like to offer this comment, that this is the same type of a thing that the Committee on the Legislative Branch feared about politics in government. This is a little different type of thing but it is related. Now we have in our Territorial and I assume we will have even more in our state level of society, we will have many of these REA cooperatives, a great hierarchy of officials working for these cooperatives who are going to have special interests in seeing whether these things are formed in one fashion or whether formed in another as far as apportionment is concerned. We are going to have many police working for the state. We are going to have many school teachers who may be concerned with how the apportionment is going. We may have a number of Territorial board members who seem to be Innocuous enough but nevertheless they all have their little principles that they are going to be working on. We have many of the city officials who may choose to join with another area because they are convinced that by so joining up they are going to gain an advantage in some fashion or another or defeat another area in their purpose. There are a good number of these types of things and I think that in the citizenry of the new State of Alaska we are going to find ample people. It is not a case of making a second-class citizen out of anyone. Mr. Hellenthal has just recited that he is a second-class citizen but he does not feel ashamed of it. The Hatch Act makes second-class citizens out of a great strata of people in the Territory but I do not think many of them are ashamed of the fact that they are working for the government. I can't see where we have to defeat the intent of the Committee here in making this thing tight. I think it is a good thing. It is one small board that sits once every 10 years and certainly we should be able to find five or six people out of the whole of Alaska that would qualify for this thing and who will be objective in their consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hurley be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: May we have the amendment read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hurley.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may call the roll on the adoption of the amendment.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 13 - Armstrong, Barr, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, McNees, Reader, Rosswog, Smith, Sweeney.

Nays: 36 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, Gray, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy,

1958

Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale,
Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Stewart,
Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - H. Fischer, Collins, Poulsen, Robertson, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 13 yeas, 36 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed to be adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers,

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question. I would like to discuss the word "nonpartisan" for a moment. We have now eliminated all Democrats, all Republicans, and all public officials from holding any of these offices. I would just like to have an explanation of the Committee's thinking in connection with the use of the word "nonpartisan".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

PIELLENTHAL: The word was chosen deliberately. Now an alternative and perhaps the one that the delegate has in mind would be chosen from each of the major parties. That alternative was specifically rejected because it felt it placed emphasis upon political considerations on this board which as has been pointed out, it is hoped to keep as objective as possible. Now it is true and the Committee realizes that "nonpartisan" doesn't mean that you cannot belong to a political party. Some of the finest men that I have the privilege of knowing are nonpartisan although they belong to a political party and that I think is very, very clear, but the contrary to use the political language would emphasize politics and it is the whole purpose of this article to de-emphasize politics.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. V. Fischer. You may ask a question.

V. FISCHER: Your intent then actually is the appointment of a board without regard to political affiliations? That is really what you have in mind?

HELLENTHAL: I think we have accomplished that by the use of the word "nonpartisan" and the board so felt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to ask Mr. Hellenthal a question. On line 8 and 9 on page 4, it says, "Members of the board shall be compensated". Is there any thinking in the minds of the Committee that the fact that they are compensated, that they either are or are not public employees?

HELLENTHAL: Frankly, at the time that language was placed in there, it was the current feeling around here that such language had to be in a board article to remove a constitutional hurdle to compensation but that could be stricken in its entirety because since then it has been determined that it is not necessary and that is a legislative problem and I know that the reason for it was to overcome a technical hurdle which no longer exists.

AWES: May I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Miss Awes.

AWES: Going back to this word "nonpartisan" again, when I read that, I was a little puzzled and I am still puzzled. You are going to have your board appointed by a governor who is certainly going to belong to one of your major parties and he is going to appoint all these members. He obviously is in a position where he knows the parties of the type of person that he would choose for this and it seems to me that it is going to be impossible to get a board that would be called nonpartisan. It seems to me that it's something that would be challenged in court with every apportionment board you have.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe that possibly some of the members that are raising perhaps a specious voice towards the word "nonpartisan" forget the fact that the legislature provided for a nonpartisan election to delegates to the Convention where we are sitting now and I don't think anybody raised any question as to what was nonpartisan then. They are sitting here and drawing their $35 per day and they knew that it was nonpartisan and then they quibble about a nonpartisan board of five people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I am well aware of that and I thought of that at the time I read this word, but that was an election. We determined ourselves that we wanted to run, we were on a ballot where no parties were mentioned and I think that is an entirely different matter than the matter of appointment.

HELLENTHAL: But I think that should forever bury the argument that a member of a political party cannot be nonpartisan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have nothing before us at this time. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, another question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question.

V. RIVERS: Along that same line couldn't you readily visualize that if we had a Republican governor we would have a nonpartisan board of all Republicans or a Democratic governor and a nonpartisan board of all Democrats?

HELLENTHAL: That is entirely possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, if I may have the Convention's ear for a moment, it is my understanding based upon reports that I have heard as to what the Style and Drafting Committee is doing to the judicial article. We had happily provided for nonpartisan board and they struck the word "nonpartisan" as being somewhat superfluous under the circumstances.

HELLENTHAL: Perhaps debates like this will teach the facts of life to the -- PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Section 5?

TAYLOR: I move that this Article 14 be forwarded to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment.

MCCUTCHEON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 14, the proposal is ordered referred. Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: It has been general procedure, has it not, to go through these articles on a second reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right.

MCNEES: I assumed as much anyway.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A motion has been made and seconded that it be referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment at this time. The motion is one that would suspend the rules. It is a suspension of the rules because it has to be open for amendment until all members say that they have no more amendments to offer. Are there amendments to Committee Proposal No. 14? Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Amend Section 2 of the schedule." Do you mean to strike it and then put this in? Is that what the amendment is? To strike what we have, is that what you mean?

MCNEES: In general the substance, yes. It would be up to Style and Drafting to make any further adjustments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What does the amendment say?

CHIEF CLERK: It just says "Section 2, I move that Proposal No. 14 be amended as follows: Section 2 of schedule." It does not say to strike or add or what.

PRESIDENT EGAN: State whether it is to -

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the schedule in Section 2 and substitute the following: Section 2 of schedule:

Southeastern	5 senators
Southcentral	5 senators
Central	5 senators
Northwestern	5 senators

To be elected as follows: One senator to be elected from each of the Senate Districts as established. The balance to be elected at large within each of the established geographical areas."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it your intention Mr. McNees to strike Section 2 and Insert in lieu thereof, this?

MCNEES: No, this is just the schedule in question, Mr. President. It is a suggested method for determination of a senate of 20 members as suggested by the Committee.

TAYLOR: I move to a point of order that this matter was already acted upon today and defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was this matter acted upon?

TAYLOR: It was passed as a motion for equal number of senators, five from each of the areas, A, B, C and D.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees what is your pleasure relative to this?

MCNEES: I would like to move the adoption of this amendment.

BARR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: How was it to be stated in Section 2?

MCNEES: In Section 2 of your schedule it has a proviso at the beginning as provided in Section 3* Article blank. "The senatorial districts and the number of senators to be elected from each shall be as follows...", and this is the material to follow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption of the proposal?

MCNEES: I do and Mr. Barr seconded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr seconded the motion. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I am in doubt and I would like to ask Mr. McNees as to what he means by "senate districts". Are you talking about what we talked about a while ago as being subdistricts or the entire district which combines the various subdistricts?

MCNEES: If I may, I would like to explain my position on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: We have here established by the Committee all senatorial districts based upon the 24 house districts. My thinking on this is pretty much as has been outlined by numerous members on the floor today in debate. We have house districts as outlined on the map on the other wall, superimposed upon top of those house districts connecting any two contiguous house districts merely for the sake of convenience, we have superimposed lines that we now call senate districts. My thinking is this, that based upon population alone, taking into consideration perhaps other factors -- watershed, ethnological factors, socio-economic factors, but still the prime basis for the determination of your senatorial districts was that of population. I would like to comment here very briefly a little bit about the history of Alaska and what has occasioned these population shifts that we have now determined our apportionment article is on. Alaska was acquired in the purchase from Russia in 1867. At that time there were very, very few people anywhere in this whole interior section of Alaska, very, very few people. Most of them were on the coast but I submit that there was a good sprinkling of people all the way along the coast of the entire section of Alaska. There were some people in interior Alaska but most of them were the aborigines who had been here before. Some movement had already taken place up the rivers but water was your prime means of entrance and exit. Times have changed. In 1900 we saw the first census that was taken in the Territory, the first real indication of that change. The 1900 census was the first in which any place in Alaska had a population of 2,500 or more people. The two places of this size, mind you, in 1900 were Nome and Skagway. They had a combined population of 15,605 people or 24.5/5 of the total population of Alaska. In 1910, the two places of 2,500 or more were Nome and Fairbanks. In 1922, only Juneau had more than 2,500 people and the proportion of the total population living in places of this size had dropped to 5.6%, the lowest percentage during the period of 1900 to 1950.

1963

In 1929, Ketchikan obtained a population of 2,500 for the first time. In 1939, and again I point to the times, a large mass of military moved into this area, creating many jobs that otherwise would not be in existence. In 1939, Anchorage qualified for the first time and Fairbanks again obtained a population of 2,500 or more. The four places of 2,500 or more in 1939 had a combined population of 17,374, which is only 2,000 more than existed in the entire Territory of Alaska in 1900. In 1950, two villages, Eastchester and Mountain View, had more than 2,500 people, bringing the number of urban places to six. The 34,262 persons living in these six places represented an increase of 16,888, or 97-2% over the population places of this size in 1939. But the thing that I want to point out is this, when gold mining was it, Southeastern, Northwestern, Northcentral. Now we are based upon a military economy and there isn't a person in this room that hopes that that is going to last forever. That is why your population factor is here and here and certainly as long as it is here and here your feed-lines which are prime yet, your waterlines, your road lines, are going to continue to feed that population but we are going to have to settle along those feeder lines into those recognized heavily populated areas of today. I am very much disturbed by the apportionment article on that one basis whereby we have superimposed our senatorial lines over the top of house districting lines merely on the basis of population. It isn't true, it isn't good. For a unicameral setup it would be beautiful. For a bicameral setup it is, I won't say worthless, but it comes next thing to it, on a bicameral house, because you have the same two types of houses, again meeting at two ends of the hall, mind you, trying to accomplish the same thing. That isn't my quarrel. My quarrel is that we have a Territory that is growing, is growing into a state. It is my firm belief that in a very, very short time, it will be a state. Much sooner I think than some of us will realize. That will be a happy day for all of us. That is why we are here. Many of you are here because you have shared the same dream that I have, ever since we have been up here. Someday, we would like our rights as citizens. Times are going to change again. I could go into figures after figures in this little pamphlet which is a recognized work, a Territorial publication, by the way. I could go into this and quote you many, many figures. I could show you why during the depression years, the late 1800's, and existing right up until World War I, where your population was based upon the basic economy of this area that we now call the Territory of Alaska and which we will soon call the State of Alaska. I could furthermore show you the war economy and the war situation, existing over the entire world I'll grant you, but none of us hope it will last forever, is primarily responsible for the heavy concentration of populations that exist in the Territory today. I remember Anchorage when it was smaller than Nome is today and I haven't been up here too many years. I came to Nome soon after it was greater than Fairbanks is today and that still wasn't too many years ago and I submit that If we Interpose our senatorial districting lines on top of our house districting lines, we might just as well have a unicameral setup and I know you are all going to smile because that sounds very strange coming from me but I am interested in good government and that is why I took this rather drastic measure after seeing vote after vote take place here today holding to the Committee thinking, which I did, hoping that this might come from somebody else other than myself because I knew what harm it might do if it came from me. Therefore, I would like to submit for your very serious consideration this plan. I would like to go further; I would like to point out to you that in this area along which we now call Southeastern, is 34,391 square miles. Southcentral this area through here, as we laid it out, 142,031 square miles making a total in this area of 176,422 square miles. We have through this area here, Central Alaska, a land area of 247,508 square miles. We have in the area we laid out as Northwestern Alaska, a land area of 147,135 square miles. Those two combined make a total square mileage of 394,643 square miles. You take this area and subtract this area from it on the land factor alone and you have a difference of 218,221 square miles. In other words, you could take these two areas, fit them into these two areas, you would have twice as much land up here as you have in these two combined and you would have 41,799 square miles left over. I live here. I know how minerally, potentially wealthy that area is. I know of discoveries up here so rich that they are fabulous. So the Navy has withdrawn Pet 4 from private development. What will the future bring to Alaska? I hope it will bring population to this area. It cannot bring any more square miles to this area. We have, down here, a limited square mileage, acreage, square mileage basis to contend with and it is developing beautifully. I am glad to see it, I am heartened to see it but the point I want to make is that our present economy which is wartime economy, is a thing that has deprived population increase since 1939 to this area. Therefore I have submitted, if for no other reason than to get this on the record, that if we go ahead right now and establish in our constitution a senatorial district based upon the population factor, knowing that the house -- which should be on a population factor -- we are establishing two houses on the same basis and 50 years from now they are going to be trying to settle the problem. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr?

BARR: I also support this amendment. You all know of course that I favor a fewer number in the senate and in the house. I would like to have enough there to represent the people but the smaller body of course is more wieldy and more efficient. We'll get more done and it will cost the Territory less. I believe in statehood but I believe we should start out and be conservative at first. Now this provides for 20 senators. I know we are going to have 20 senators. Our Committee has told us so and that settled it, so I'll go along with this If we are to have 20. I believe that the senate apportionment should be according to area. Under the present system it is according to area with some consideration given to population. In my opinion that is wrong. The representatives are elected according to population and they represent the population. Each senator is supposed to represent a certain area whether the population moves in or moves out. If It is an area of small population that assures the people that live there of getting some representation. That is particularly good for Alaska because our population here shifts rapidly from one place to another. But this, under this amendment, that area would still get the same representation in the senate. That Is the method used on the national scene. It is the usual method and it is the best method. It is tried and proven so I am going to support this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Being a member of the Apportionment Committee, I will oppose this amendment. We thrashed this all out In the Committee. We worked hard in our Committee to come up to a means and we had to take concessions on each side. On our house of representatives, we gave to the outlying areas, to the hinterlands, we gave concessions to them or I should say the Committee provided for a means of the major fraction of the quotient. You can't go on a senate basis of saying we are going to divide a town into square miles. We made a chart on that and we found that it was not feasible. We brought out on our house plan a compromise and in turn, on our senate plan a compromise, taking into mind both area and population on both plans and I think it is a good workable plan. I oppose the amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I haven't spoken on the proposal at all. I feel I am entitled to a couple of minutes. I have followed the Committee's work quite closely and I feel that they have done a very, very good job in working out these various districts and such. I have gone along with them on it. There is this one little discrepancy as Mr. McNees pointed out and I'll just state my case and let It rest right there. We do have the two-house system which definitely should be upheld. There have been many moves to swing toward unicameralism and I think the majority agree that the two-house system is the best. The house as it is now is on population and granted that there is concessions to the outlying areas on this major quotient deal that we have had well explained, let us also say that the senate Is on a population basis in contrast. By that I mean that you can take your actual area. I do believe that we will have to agree that two of the senate districts, their combined total In area, will not equal the other districts. I know what some will say and I have heard it said here many times that the mountains can't vote but it is not all mountains up there, as Mr. McNees pointed out. Some are going to say it isn't fair. Some have mentioned to me that, "You got all you deserved." If that is so then the vote of the group here will say it is so. But I just appeal to you on this basis, that we also are asking to join the great United States. We are asking that they let us seat two senators on the basis of our area, along with two senators from New York, two senators from Pennsylvania, two senators from California and on down the line. I don't think it is too much to ask for equal senatorial representation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I have listened to all these arguments and I'll have to admit that sometimes they get pretty impressive. I had always had in the back of my mind that all the senatorial representation should be based on area, too. But Mr. McNees and Mr. Barr, to follow your argument to its logical conclusion I submit this to be the case, and I have been looking for these areas all day, I am glad you gave them. Southeastern Alaska with 34,000 square miles should have one senator. Southcentral with 142,000 square miles should have five senators. Central Alaska with 247,000 square miles should have eight senators. Northwestern Alaska with 147,000 square miles should have five senators. You get one, five, eight and five, roughly. We should have a couple of half senators to make it come out right.

MCNEES: I don't follow your thinking there, Mr. White.

WHITE: If you add up the total area of Alaska as has been given by you and divide it by 20 senators and see how many square miles each senator should represent and then go back to your division here and see how it works out.

MCNEES: I am not submitting my plan as the best plan. I am submitting my plan as one that takes into consideration two different bases for apportionment for two houses which should be quite different. We have before us here the Committee plan and to explain this plan and if it is all right, Mr. President, I will take this time also rather than just answer Mr. White's question, to close the debate because there seems to be some feeling before the question.

MCCUTCHEON: I think there might be some other comments to be heard on this.

MCNEES: Pine. I will answer Mr. White's question as I have then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: In a manner of breaking back into the figures in the proposed amendment here, it appears to me that in Southeastern Alaska there will be area-wide distribution of three senators with two elected at large. In Northwestern Alaska, there will be area representation by two senators and three elected at large. Southcentral Alaska, there will be four senators elected in basic districts with one elected at large and In Central Alaska there will be three senators elected from the several areas and two elected at large. I subscribe to Mr. White's logic that If we are going to put it on a strictly area election, okay, fine and dandy, let's divide the 580,000 square miles of Alaska up into equal parts and elect our senators from that and I would submit to electing five senators from each equal portion of Alaska but I think the plan as it is submitted here is not entirely fair at all. It gives some highly populated centers in Northwestern Alaska a distinct advantage of being able to name three particular men. It gives another area in Southcentral Alaska, which has several highly populated centers, the opportunity only to name one man at large and it seems to me that the discrepancy there militates against Mr. McNees's amendment here. It appears to me that as far as a matter of fair representation, that in this thing the large population centers are militated against. But there is no other way to predicate the general spread of representation other than in the fashion which has been developed here or else to arbitrarily slice Alaska up into its equal square miles of area and elect your people from those equal square miles of area so that your representation will be fair from an area standpoint.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to point out that there is not a complete lack of area representation or representation of general geographical areas. I have every reason to think that the five senators that would be elected In Southeastern Alaska, although they are elected from each of three districts plus two at large - all of those men would have the Southeastern view point. They are all Southeastern senators. All under the present plan that the Committee has proposed, all of the senators from what we have known as the Second Division, Northwestern Alaska would be familiar with their economy and their general area so that in a sense those people are going to be representing the general areas which we formally know as divisions, by numbers. Speaking of trying to get a few senators from some place except the main cities, take the case of the Second Division. Under Mr. McNees's plan you have only got two districts up there, two senatorial districts. Two could be, one from each of those districts with five, three could be elected at large in the division and maybe Nome, as a populous center, would get all three of them plus its own in the particular senatorial district it's in. Under his plan I can visualize four senators from Nome. Well, that's got its points but the thing is, that without trying to discredit Mr. McNees, because he mentioned that he hoped it would come from somebody besides himself because the harm it would do; well, I follow Mr. McCutcheon entirely that we have had to compromise and we can't very well just knock over that whole compromise after the Committee has worked this thing out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross.

CROSS: I believe this Committee has done a remarkably good job. I would hate to see this thing torn up after the Convention has done so much work on it because I believe we'd go right back and after two or three days, get back to the same point. I would like to call the assembly. I think this is a question that should be decided by all the delegates except of course, Mr. VanderLeest, whom I understand is ill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross asked for a call of the assembly. That will mean that the business of the assembly will cease until the absent members other than Mr. VanderLeest...

COGHILL: May I inquire?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: The call of the assembly automatically stops all business until the assembly can be fully seated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The assembly can vote to proceed with other business if it so chooses to do so Mr. Coghill, other than this business at hand.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I didn't know we had that rule in the rules, a call of the assembly?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well, it's in Robert's Rules if it isn't in ours.

LONDBORG: If I read Robert's right, that it would take a majority vote here to call the assembly, I stand corrected on it, but in other words it would be up to the majority here if you want the assembly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it doesn't take a majority vote to call the assembly. Usually, the remembrance of the Chair is that in Robert's that anyone can call the assembly. In different assemblies they make different rules as to the number it takes to call the assembly possibly, if there is no objection ...

SWEENEY: If we are operating under Robert's Rules of Order, I would suggest sir, that, I would like to move that this be referred to the Rules Committee for a definite answer.

1969

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Rules Committee will take this matter into consideration.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to clarify this call of the house rule. The Chair had in mind the rules of a different assembly. Under Robert's Rules of Order, you move if you wish to call the house or call the assembly, you have to make a motion and it has to carry by a majority vote, in the absence of any other rule in our rules. Mr. Cross?

CROSS: I wish to withdraw my request.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross asks unanimous consent that his call of the assembly request be withdrawn. Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: I would like to make just one statement before we get off this No. 14. For some reason the feeling is rampant here that Proposal No. 14 is almost Holy Writ and we should not do anything to it, amend it or anything. Now I recognize that they put a lot of work on it, but believe me all the rest of the committees did too and they are not treating any committee or should not treat any committee proposal any different than they do the others and if this one has to be amended, I think it should be amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper?

COOPER: I would like to point out that the delegate that submitted this amendment has merely taken the committee report, transposed the senate districts on top of the election districts, but in some cases has not allowed senators to be elected at large and in other cases has allowed more senators to be elected at large. It is not fair, and in his argument he pointed out that senate districts should not be superimposed or transposed on election districts and that is exactly what the man has done. I urge you to vote against this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: May I close the debate?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may close the debate.

MCNEES: In answer to Mr. Cooper, that was my concession to the committee report, to superimpose or to accept for the basis of the election of 12 senators I made that concession to the Committee plan, for the simple reason that I feel that the Committee plan with one or two exceptions was a very good one. The concession that I will not make is to the population of Alaska 50 years from now, 100 years from now, or 150 years from now because I know this is forever,, as far as the senate is concerned. I took into consideration before I brought this up and I brought it up reluctantly. I'll admit that I brought it up reluctantly, but I felt impelled on the other hand to bring it up. I took into consideration the land factor alone and threw it out the window. I took into consideration the property factor alone and threw it out the window. I can show you millions of dollars of investment equipment sitting over there waiting for this war hysteria to die. It is prevalent in the world today,, millions of dollars of gold mining equipment and other equipment related to that industry that can again return to its fabulous days up there, sitting up there only waiting for this hysterical period to die and we can get back on to a normal footing again. By the same token, when that day comes I submit to you there will be millions upon millions of dollars of outmoded equipment sitting in many other areas of Alaska that I can point to. Some of it is sitting right there now because the necessity has passed. I took into consideration the political or governmental units. We had the old judicial lines. I for one, and I say this quite frankly, I am not too displeased to see that old thinking go out the window. The lines have been drawn on a watershed factor, ethnological factor, socio-economic factor, recognizing that certain areas have their place in this new proposed and great state to be. I took into consideration political parties but I can think back to the time of the Whigs and the Tories in my period as a student of history. Many, many other parties came and went. I am a firm believer in the two-party system but I am not a believer in the two-party system to the exclusion of a third, fourth or fifth or any other minority party. I took into consideration the occupational or functional representation of these areas and again, standing alone, I had to throw it out the window. I took into consideration and I probably gave this particular thought more consideration than any other, that of the suffrage and voting performances of the people who live here. That I think has some very real merit. But again I did not feel that it could stand alone. Knowing that history has that capacity of oftentimes repeating itself, I came back and started looking first at the histories of Alaska right from its inception and I found a pattern of rise and fall, of decline and rise in population, of wealth, of any other single factor with the exception of land area. Since we have included the tidelands, why possibly we could extend that many miles. There is only one single factor that stands out but in no way possible could we use it as a basis for determining senatorial apportionment, and that is the one of population alone. So looking at these two maps we have on the wall, we have represented in many factors and in your own thinking here on the floor you came up with four well-defined geographicals, and I submit that the word "geography" has a much wider connotation than that of land alone. Why has so much of our area become settled so quickly? I submit to you, primarily for two reasons. One is that distance frequently discourages settlement.

Certainly the area west of the Alleghenies was settled before the Far West was settled. Alaska has waited until the last to be settled but I furthermore submit to you that the time will come when Alaska will play a role in the world of free peoples far beyond any of our current dreams. There have been concessions made in Committee on many occasions. You well know I sat there and watched these concessions made, hoping that there would be some plan that would come out that would satisfy everyone. I finally realized in my own thinking that if there was going to be a plan come out that could satisfy a majority, that would be the absolute most that could be hoped for. In looking at the present plan and seeing the superimposition of two units for functionally two different purposes superimposed, I couldn't quite bring myself to submit without, shall we say, doing what I could to educate or to bring to your attention the very facts that were disturbing me the most. I refused in my own thinking, I sincerely feel this way, otherwise I wouldn't be up here. I sincerely refuse in my own thinking to make any concessions to what I think the future of Alaska will hold. Therefore, I had to say what I just said. The concession I made to the Committee is on the basis of their house plans, and again I am making concession to population but I recognize that as a very important factor, if we are going to give each one of these senatorial districts one man. Furthermore I would like to point out In Mr. McCutcheon's argument, relative to the fact that three at large are going to be elected in what we now describe as Northwestern Alaska, we've always called it that up there, by the way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

MCNEES: That is the fact that three will be elected at large from the area from which I am a delegate to this Convention. I don't feel it is a valid argument for this reason. We made our concession to population in the house. Now we must take other factors into consideration. That would be the sole answer that I could give to Mr. McCutcheon on that question. So these concessions have been made on either side and now we have arrived at a point where we are going to vote one way or the other. I think we are all trying to be fair on this, I know you have been more than fair with me on time. I appreciate it, but I feel this had to be said. These four geographical areas which we now have, and geography to me represents many things. It represents rivers, mountains, inlets, bays, estuaries, peninsulas, it represents gold and silver, it represents game, it represents coal and oil, it represents wheat and potatoes, and cattle. It represents so many things that when I saw the crystallization of this Convention mind on four geographical areas, I found the key to what I thought might possibly be the solution and I still submit to you my plan is amenable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. McNees be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption -- the Chief Clerk will call the roll. The Convention will come to order.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 11 - Barr, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, McNees, Nolan, Reader, Sweeney, Walsh.

Nays: 39 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Collins, H. Fischer, Poulsen, Robertson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 11 yeas, 39 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The nays have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 14?

WHITE: I have no amendments but just during a recess I observed that the Committee has, in their deliberations, certainly taken in a great deal of territory. I notice that not only have they included all of Alaska but they have also included the Big Diomedes Island and I am wondering --- PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill, could you explain that? The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: There are two questions I would like to ask of Mr. Hellenthal, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, ask your questions.

KILCHER: I notice something here that I had missed before in Section 2, page 2, line 8, "The governor may". Do I read this straight, do I understand that the governor redistricts without a board in this particular instance? Or that the board is only used for boundary correction?

HELLENTHAL: No. The board acts as a reapportionment and redistricting board and advises the governor in both particulars and the action occurs immediately following the census and the language of Section 2 is, I believe, firmly qualified by the language of Section 5. This is an integrated article.

KILCHER: In other words, If it is not a matter of boundary change but if one area that is entitled to two representatives in the house decides it wants to split up into two areas, each having one, they will appeal to the governor?

HELLENTHAL: I don't know of any language in here which permits an area to decide it's going to split up.

KILCHER: I mean we have to assume that the governor will not get the idea of creating a new district, in a dream for instance. I mean the matter will have to be submitted to him somehow and the only thing that I can see is that an area, or the population of an area rather, will express their wish in some form of a petition or referendum, is that right?

HELLENTHAL: Pardon me?

KILCHER: I can't see that the governor will have this idea all by himself and not consider the wishes of the population. So if a petition to create a new area should stem from the people involved, would that petition be tendered to the governor?

HELLENTHAL: I have difficulty in understanding your question.

KILCHER: My question to you is, how should it be done?

HELLENTHAL: Oh, the mechanics of the thing? Say you represented an area in Alaska and you felt there should be some redistricting, or reapportionment take place in that area, your area, say, KILCHER: Let's take one of Mr. Coghill's areas, that would be suitable for the purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

HELLENTHAL: Well, are you asking me a question or arguing? Which area do you want me to take and I'll take them?

KILCHER: Well, take Yukon Flats which is a large area and it might develop in the future.

HELLENTHAL: If the people there feel that reapportionment or redistricting is necessary, they should write to the redistricting board.

KILCHER: Well, is the governor appointing the board?

HELLENTHAL: They could write to the governor and ask him to send it to the board.

KILCHER: That's what the language means, that the governor may redistrict through the board? He will employ the board to

HELLENTHAL: That is correct. The governor acts on the advice of the board. If he differs from their advice he has to state his reasons in writing and so on.

KILCHER: Thank you, I just wanted it on the record so our people in the future might know how to act. I have another question here. Has the Committee given any consideration to the possibility of establishing the quotients necessary for these 2b districts, not on the basis of actual civilian population, but votes cast like Arizona had and so on?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

KILCHER: And what was the reason for the Committee turning down this possibility?

HELLENTHAL: It was felt that the method recommended was more suitable to afford proper representation for the Territory of Alaska.

KILCHER: Based on actual numbers of population and not based on the political activity of the areas involved?

HELLENTHAL: That is correct.

KILCHER: Well, I had an amendment ready which would be based on the count of votes cast in the gubernatorial election and I think it might have merits, in that it would tend to reduce what has been so aptly called "political illiteracy". It will certainly keep people on their toes. It might even give the people in some of these dangerous areas that are threatened to lose their identity in the house, it might give them an added chance because the record shows they have in the past voted, percentagewise better --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you offering such an amendment Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I think I will, yes, for the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 1, line 8, strike the word 'official'. Strike all of lines 9 and 10 and 11 to the comma, and substitute 'first gubernatorial state election' and line 18 strike word 'civilian' and on page 2, line 1, strike 'population' and insert in lieu thereof 'number of ballots cast for governor'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher?

1975

KILCHER: I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the amendment be adopted. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I might like to add that this idea is not a novel one, that the State of Arizona has considered this idea quite long ago and I had thought that in our particular case of Alaska, that there are some similarities between it and Arizona, a large area with diverging economic interests. It might be a good idea to consider. It would also make it readier, it would give us readier figures for reapportionment every four years instead of every 10. It would be of greater justice to the possible boundary changes and that I said before. It would give these districts that are now barely hanging on by the skin of their teeth a chance to make up a lack of noses with a lack of political interest in their destiny and affairs. It will give a truer representation I think,

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the section then as it would be if this proposed amendment were adopted? Page 1, beginning on line 8.

CHIEF CLERK: "immediately following the first gubernatorial state election and after every subsequent census the governor shall reapportion the house of representatives according to the civilian population as required by the census within each election district. Reapportionment shall be by the method known as the method of equal proportions except that each election district having a major fraction of the quotient obtained by dividing total number of ballots cast for governor by 40 shall have one representative."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: There is an error in the amendment on page 1, line 12, it shouldn't say "subsequent census" but "subsequent gubernatorial election". I failed to put that in. The idea is plain, I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: With no objection, the change can be made. Mr. Cooper?

COOPER: Is that now the form of a motion and it has been seconded?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's right.

COOPER: Then it's open for debate? We have now arrived at the point where any election district having a total number of 675 people for the quotient -- incidentally you can divide that by two and have one -- will be eligible for representation in the house of representatives. I am basing that on 27,000 votes in the last vote for the legislature divided by 40, and that is, in effect, your motion, is that not right?

KILCHER: I had not intended that, I had intended from the first gubernatorial state election on. I would accept this plan. It would give these areas a chance to hang on longer because as I have pointed out last night I am convinced that if we care really about these districts for the lower house which I think we don't, we're to squabble here --

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, is Mr. Kilcher closing the argument at this time?

KILCHER: If I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you closing the argument now, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I am answering Mr. Cooper's question and closing the argument at the same time. If we truly care as much for the districts of the lower house as much as we care for the senatorial problem, we could easily see by taking a fairly accurate census, not census but estimated population of 1955, that several of these districts are right now, if not already in jeopardy, already have lost their identity as a house district. If my amendment were adopted, by diligent political activity, these districts might survive 1960. If anybody doesn't understand what I mean, I will gladly elucidate. If you're not interested, well, that's that. But I have watched the work of the board and the work that has been put in it is one of the problems that I was mainly interested in, in this Convention. I am sorry I was not on the board. Maybe it was the board's good luck. A lot of work has been done. A lot of battles have been fought in it, and I am sorry to say that the fear of losing senatorial seats has clouded, rapidly clouded the issue of fair apportionment for the house districts. As a matter of fact some of these house districts, in my opinion, have been created out of a necessity to get enough pairs within a senatorial district. I wonder what would have happened if the idea of having senatorial pairs of districts hadn't been espoused. It possibly would have ended up with 21 or 23 districts. Now, well the fact is we have 24. I am not quarreling about it. I certainly cannot be accused of grinding my own axe because the area I am from certainly gets very good representation, all they could ever ask for. But I am truly trying to highlight the danger that some other areas are in that I never intend to live in as far as I know now but they would have a better chance of having their identity as a district for the lower house if this plan were adopted because history has shown, statistics show, that the rural areas take the voting on the average more serious than urban areas, so that would give them a slight predominance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is: "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption -

KILCHER: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 4 - Barr, Hinckel, Kilcher, Reader.

Nays: 46 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Collins, H. Fischer, Poulsen, Robertson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 4 yeas, 46 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 14? If not. If there are no other amendments, Committee Proposal No. 14 will be referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: A five-minute recess would enable the Rules Committee to bring out the report yesterday requested by Mr. McLaughlin.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there be no objection the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: Gentlemen the time has arrived, I therefore move that the Convention stand adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements? The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers, do you have a committee announcement? Are there committee announcements to be made at this time? If not, Mr. Johnson has moved and asked unanimous consent that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow. Is there objection?

DOOGAN: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move?

JOHNSON: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson so moves, is there a second?

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It's been moved and seconded. All those in favor of adjourning until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow will signify by saying "aye". All opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the Convention stands adjourned.

1979

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 13, 1956

FIFTY-SECOND DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning Reverend Wilson of the Assembly of God Church in Fairbanks. Reverend Wilson will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND WILSON: Our God and Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for thy grace that Thou hast so wonderfully bestowed upon us in the giving of Thy own Son Jesus Christ our Lord that those who believe upon Him might be saved. We thank Thee not only for Thy grace, but Thy special favor. Thy patience and mercies toward us, we thank Thee that Thou hast especially blessed and helped in this Convention. We pray that the grace of God shall continue upon each one. Guide the deliberations of this day. Thou hast said, "The meek will he teach his way, the meek will he guide in judgment." Grant that special favor, that special grace of God resting upon every deliberation of the day, that the wisdom of God shall be manifest and this constitution when completed, that it shall be acceptable and pleasing in the sight of God Almighty. May we be able to live a quiet and peaceful life in all godliness and honesty. May that which is accomplished in government be acceptable and honorable to Thee. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: One absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I would like to suggest again that all delegates remain seated until the President has introduced the minister of the morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The President would like to state that it was really not the delegates' fault this morning. The President went a little too fast. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time?

WHITE: The Committee has read the journal for the 48th Convention day and recommends the following corrections: Page 1, line 1, change "1955" to "1956". Bottom line, same page, same correction. Page 2, first paragraph after the roll, second line, insert "Mr." before "V. Rivers". Page 3, fourth paragraph, add at the end of the last sentence: "There being no objection, it was so ordered."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure?

WHITE: There are more. Page 4, fifth paragraph, "The question was called and on voice vote the amendment", insert "to the amendment". Page 6, third paragraph, first line, after the word "motion" insert the words "to reconsider". Page 13, second paragraph, line 2, change the word "in" to "for".

SWEENEY: What day was that again?

WHITE: 48th day.

DAVIS: It has not been distributed yet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If it has not been distributed, would you ask that it be held in abeyance.

WHITE: I am sorry, Mr. President, I thought they had been distributed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the report will be held in abeyance until all delegates have copies of the journal in their possession. Are there reports of standing committees? Reports of select committees? Are there any petitions or memorials or communications from outside the Convention? Are there any proposals to be made at this time? Motions or resolutions? If not, we are down to unfinished business, and we have before us Committee Proposal No. 10, the report of the Committee on the Executive Branch. If there is no objection, we will proceed by having the report read the second time and then the Chairman of the Committee may give the delegates an explanation of the article. The Chief Clerk informs the Chair that the proposal had been revised, and the rerun has not been completed. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I just checked that. They were running on the last page before we started to meet. If there is any other business to fill in, they should be down right soon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any other business that we might fill in at this time? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to announce a meeting of the Committee on Style and Drafting during the morning recess at the rear of the gallery.

COGHILL: Mr. President, one thing we might fill in a little bit with is on our recess time for this weekend. Find out what the pleasure is of the Convention, of the delegates as to whether they want to meet tomorrow, all day, tomorrow evening and take Sunday off, or if they want to take Saturday evening and work Sunday afternoon. I think we should discuss that now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seems to the Chair that the delegates have worked awfully hard this week, worked every night and probably including tonight you will have had night sessions. That would mean that for each one of these days we have been here for 13 hours from the time you left town, and inasmuch as there are a few committees that seem to need some little time in meeting, the Chair would suggest that you might discuss whether or not it would be wise not to work tomorrow night and Sunday. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I am reporting for Mr. Riley who is busy, just making a suggestion. At the request of Mr. McLaughlin the other day, the Rules Committee was requested to set up rules that might expedite the transaction of business a little, and I think they are going to have that report out in a little while.

RILEY: It won't be out immediately, Mrs. Hermann, but today, I dare say. I might add that the Chairman was a little optimistic last evening in hoping to come back this morning with a report, but I think the Rules Committee should meet at first recess to consider the matter a little further.

HERMANN: I think it might be advisable to wait until that report is out to decide what you want to do about tomorrow. It will certainly be out in plenty of time for that. It might be that if the report is adopted by the Convention that the necessity of nightly night meetings might be averted, and we could probably meet occasionally at night meetings instead.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no discussion to come before the Convention at this time, the Chair would declare a recess until the committee proposals are available for the delegates. If there is no objection the Convention stands at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to state that the mimeograph machine has broken down and it will be some time before that will be working again, and you have before you Committee Proposal No. 10 up to or through Section 11. Now we might proceed in this manner, that we read in second reading the revised article through the section that we have before us and then have the chairman of the committee and the committee members offer their explanation which might take a good deal of time, and proceed that far at least, if it is the wish of the Convention. If there is no objection, the Chief Clerk may proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 10.

JOHNSON: New 10 or 10a?

PRESIDENT EGAN: 10a.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 10a at this time.)

V. RIVERS: Would you call a five-minute recess? We now have additional sections and they shall be distributed and just put in additional matter with the first section, and you shall then have a complete section.

(The Chief Clerk continued with reading of Committee Proposal No. 10a.)

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, we don't have this copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess until the copies have been distributed.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Clerk may proceed with the second reading.

(The Chief Clerk continued with reading of Committee Proposal No. 10a.)

COGHILL: Mr. President, in the gallery today we have a group of students that traveled from Nenana to visit the Convention. They boarded the train this morning at 6:45 in order to arrive to visit the proceedings of the Constitutional Convention. At this time I would like to have the Convention welcome the Nenana group and I believe that the president of the student body would like to address the group, and I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, would the president of the student body please come forward and be recognized. Miss Gloria Fredericks from Nenana School.

GLORIA FREDERICKS: Mr. President, Delegates to the Alaska Constitutional Convention and friends, I feel that we today are highly favored people, especially those of us fortunate enough to call Alaska our home. Certainly the privileges of living in this great northern fringe of American civilization are as great as those possessed by any of the other 48 states.

Alaska is not only the geographical crossroads of the world but is herself at the crossroads of her destiny. She can become a equal state under the great flag of our forefathers or she can be longer subjected to the tyranny of American colonialism so eloquently spoken against by our former Governor, Mr. Gruening.

Everyone today is searching means of conserving resources, both human and physical. Today the youth of our land constitutes a far more serious problem of juvenile delinquency. They constitute the sole means of perpetuating the continuity of our way of life. I feel that today's youth are more alert, more self-conscious, and more capable than the youth of any other nation in the entire world. Were we to doubt our advancement over other generations, we wouldn't admit the failure of our great American principles. We, the youth of 1956, are indeed alert to the changes of our day. We realize the significance of this Convention here at our great and growing University. Just as the University symbolizes our determination to enlighten our future generations, so does your work here provide basis for our hopes of the future. We feel highly honored to be able to attend this Convention. Perhaps it might convey to our minds something of that great group of men who sat in Philadelphia almost two centuries ago to draw up a constitution for our infant nation to be governed by a revolutionary type of government. Your task, though not as tremendous as theirs, is as important to the destiny of this portion of America. Some of us have never been fully Americans. Some of you have been colonials all your life. We can look forward to a great spiritual and physical growth under the new status of citizenship, full citizenship. Many of us here today will no doubt live to be able to vote for those who decide our economic and cultural as well as our political destiny. We will be citizens of the largest and eventually the greatest of all states, Alaska. I feel that your grandchildren will see your names on streets of the new state. Possibly towns and cities will be named for you. The future will judge your work here, and we are part of that future. Because of the work you are doing here I feel that some of us will help legislate according to this constitution. I feel we will amend it and flower it into full stature of American citizens.

We, the students of Nenana Public Schools, would like to thank you for the opportunity of appearing here before you and seeing you at work. It will be a day few of us will ever forget. Thank you. (Applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Miss Fredericks. We would like you to know that we are very happy to have each of you here with us this morning. We hope that you will be our guests at the noon luncheon and if Mr. Coghill will present the President before our recess with the names of each of the students, the President will see that a delegate will take each one of you individually to lunch. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that the talk which we have just heard be spread upon the journal of today's proceedings. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson asks unanimous consent that the talk we have just heard be spread upon the pages of today's journal.

Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. We will proceed in the same manner that we proceeded with Committee Proposal No. 14. There will be no amendments accepted or offered until after we have heard the Committee explanation, after the delegates have had an opportunity to ask questions of the Committee. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will attempt to give you first a general discussion of the article on the executive. I want to say that there are no bricks or cornerstones in this which if you desire to change, you cannot do so with a reasonable degree of not failing to perform the functions we are trying to set forth. The Committee has produced a committee report in which we all concur. I do want to say, however, that there are minor points within the article which some of the members of the Committee did disagree and do desire to disagree on or may have amendments on, so I want the Committee members to feel free to inject their comments at such time as we come to those sections. We are all strongly agreed on the principle of the strong executive. In arriving at that principle some desired higher degree of strength in the executive than the others. We have tried to bolster the executive to where we can function efficiently and effectively as the head of the state government in these modern times. I might say that in first approaching the problem, the Committee went through all of the various constitutions that were available of the different states. We went through all material on the matter of reference and we also had consultants to advise with us in regard to modern practice and the best practice. As you must realize, however, there are many arbitrary decisions to be made in an article such as the executive. There are 55 opinions on this floor, and I assume that various of you will have opinions that you will want to express and try, if possible, to make it a part of this article. We went through the various state constitutions and in so doing we found that the older state constitutions with their many elective officials and many restrictions upon the powers of the executive could almost in their entirety be eliminated from consideration as reference matter. By the same token, we also found that the newer constitutions, such as the revised Constitution of the State of New Jersey, the Constitution of Hawaii, the model constitution, and some of the newer state constitutions, had in them matter we felt should be referred to and possibly some parts of it used in the section which we are presenting to you here. So in the matter of your reference to other state constitutions, you will find that if you keep as reference matter before you the guide book prepared for us by the PAS, and the constitutions of the State of New Jersey and Hawaii, and the model constitution -- occasionally we have referred to other constitutions and as we go along I will try to point out where we have referred to or used matter in other constitutions. In going through the article, we first, as you notice, invest the executive power in the governor, which is a formality, setting up his powers and functions. He is the head of the executive department, but as such he has certain confirming powers in the judicial department, and he has certain appointing powers which are later confirmed by the legislature in joint session. He has certain appointing powers in the various functions of government, and he also has certain removal powers. In the matter of setting the governor's age, it was decided that he should have certain experience and certain background in order to be eligible to become governor, and we settled on the age as shown in here. We also felt that he should have considerable residence in the Territory of Alaska, so he would know the problems of the people from the broad and actual acquaintance with them and that he should have qualifications by reason of residence here that he could obtain in no other way to be governor of the Territory. For that reason you see a residence clause. We have provided for a standard election clause there and in the cases of a tie we have provided for the majority of both members of the houses in joint session to resolve such a tie. There are also provisions for the settlement of any contested elections. We have provided for the term of the governor's office to be a four-year term elective once to succeed himself, and after that not again to be elected until there has been a four-year break. We will discuss each of these sections as we come to them in more detail. We have provided for the governor to take office in the off year of the national election or the off second year of the national election rather than the on second year so he will be elected at the time when the presidential elections are not under way. Then the matter of the next elective officer came up for discussion. The next elective officer, as we have shown it in our article, would be entitled a secretary of state. He would not preside as the presiding officer of the senate. They would elect their own presiding officer. The term "secretary of state" to many of the Committee members was deemed to be a broader description with less restrictive connotations than the term "lieutenant governor". The majority of the committee decided for the title "secretary of state". In order to enforce and bulwark the strong executive, it was felt that we should provide some means by which he would come from the same political party which the governor came from, so, in the manner in which the President and Vice President is elected, we selected the joint ballot type of thing. They run jointly on the ballot and are elected jointly as is done for the President and Vice President of the United States. We also find that is the practice in the State of New York. Other states use different methods. Now the matter of other elective officials was discussed at considerable length. As you realize, the ideal of the strong executive is the one efficient head of government, the governor sitting there elected by the people and responsible to the people for the functioning of the executive department. Now, in theory, that is a strong executive and a very strong talking point. However, we felt there should be at least one other elective official and many of the committees felt there should be possibly two more elected officials. However, we show the elected official in second place here to be the secretary of state, as I have mentioned, elected in the manner and jointly with the governor. I will reserve further discussion on that section until we come up to the actual section itself, but the intent there was there be two elective officers as the head of state government. That gave us a succession officer in the case of the removal or the death of the governor, it gave a succession officer who had been elected by the people of the entire Territory. The next order of succession would be the president of the senate, another elected official from the legislative body, but normally under our apportioning plan he would be elected from only a portion of the Territory. The fourth order of succession in case of loss of the other three would be the house speaker. He also would be an elected member of the house of representatives but there again would be a member elected from only a portion of the Territory and not all of the Territory. So that is the order of succession we have set up in this article. We have set up also the matter of qualifications of the governor, or if he fails to qualify, what shall take place. We have also set up an arbitrary period so when the governor leaves the Territory or is gone and absent from his duties for six months, the office will automatically be deemed to be vacant. This is done in some states and it is designed primarily to remove from office without any disgrace or discredit a man who may have become ill in office and who for sympathetic reasons could not otherwise be removed. Compensation of the governor and the secretary of state we have left up to the establishment by the legislature. Some other state constitutions, they set minimums, they set maximums, they fix salaries, so any change then must be made by an amendment to the constitution. We have left that matter open. Now contrarily, Hawaii in adopting their constitution set a minimum salary for their governor of $18,000 and a minimum salary for lieutenant governor of $12,000. We have left both of those salaries open to legislative action. They may not reduce them for the term in which any one governor is elected. That is the only qualification we put upon the handling of salaries. In order to enforce the strong executive and to bulwark his power we have given him power by appropriate actions or proceedings in the court, brought in the name of the state, to enforce compliance with any constitution or legislative mandate. That is specifically written into the constitution because we want to have a broad interpretation of the powers of the strong executive. He has no authority however to act in that manner in any proceeding against the legislature. The legislature is the supreme elected body and as such he is answerable to them and to their interpretations and handling of matters of law. We have provided that the governor will give a message to each legislature when they meet setting forth the things that he deems of value to them in solving the problems of the state. In addition to that, after much discussion, we decided to put in a clause that any governor should at the termination of his term provide a written report for the records of the state with his comments as to the conduct of his administration and the recommendations that he might have to help guide future governors and the governor taking office. That came about, partly, because in the matter of seating the governor, and his term of office, we deemed it desirable to seat the governor on the first Monday in December. That would give him a term in office of perhaps seven weeks as we now have it set up now before his first legislature would convene. It would give him time to review his various departments of government, to go over and provide his program and his message to the legislature. It would give him a chance in other words, to get his feet on the ground, so that is one of the reasons for seating him in the first week in December. We have made the further provision that he shall be commander in chief of the armed forces which is more or less a formality. That makes him commander in chief of the National Guard and of any state militia we may have in peace times, and he has also the appointing power in the National Guard and in any militia we may have, subject to any requirements of the National Guard under the National Guard of the United States Department of Defense. We have a clause in here that the governor may proclaim martial law. You find that in some of the older state constitutions where there was conflict going on and where there was a possibility of rebellion or invasion. You don't find it in many of the intermediate states' constitutions. You don't find it in the Hawaii Constitution. You do find it in Puerto Rico. Feeling that we are located geographically like we are, the majority of the Committee felt the governor should have the power to declare martial law on short notice, so we have given him that power. The question is whether or not that power would possibly not be executed or handled first by the armed forces of the United States actually resident in Alaska at the time of any such rebellion or invasion, but even then it was felt and deemed desirable to specifically spell that power into the constitution for the governor. We also handled the matter of granting reprieves, commutations, and remittance of fines and forfeitures. That is a broad clause and was adopted after much discussion in Committee. We felt that the governor would possibly be very desirous of having a pardons and parole board to sit with him and make decisions along with him in the matter of pardons, reprieves, remittances, etc., so the section has also provided for the establishment of such a commission or body to whom he may delegate certain of his powers in arriving at his pardoning decisions. Now in the matter of the setting up of the state departments, the Committee in order to help effectuate the strong executive did not name department heads or departments as such. We established, as is done in the more recent constitutions, a group of principal departments not to exceed 20. In that matter of 20, it is a maximum figure and probably would never be arrived at in the foreseeable future because in the case of principal departments in the matter of major functions, any major function that could possibly arise could be handled under some branch or some section of those 20 principal heads. So as we envision the state now, it would never have more than 20 principal departments, although there might be a great many subdivisions thereof. We vest in the governor the appointive power for the heads of these departments. That is subject to confirmation by the houses of the legislature meeting in joint session. All the way through here you will note that we have given the power of approval of the governor's appointments to a joint session of the legislature. We did so after checking with the department on the legislative which was following a similar procedure in the matter of approval of appointments. I might also add that the approval of appointments has been done in Alaska in that manner for many years by a joint session of both houses. In the matter of the major department heads we have left the power of removal in the hands of the governor. That I believe could be implemented by certain legislative law in regard to certain restrictions or hearings or appeals from the governor's removal powers, but it was intended that he should have a strong enough power to remove from office anybody without disgrace, mind you, we are not talking about impeachment, we are talking about just the removal of somebody who might prove to be incompetent or unable to perform the duties of the office. We have given certain power to the governor in setting up the executive or rather the administrative departments in that he may, in order to effectuate the strong executive and not be tied into any one of these departmental heads with any particular functions, reassign the functions to the different departments as the occasion and need might rise, but he will make those changes and would set them forth in an executive order which would not become effective until after it has been before the next succeeding legislature, and if they desired to, they could take an action disapproving that. If they did not take such action of disapproval, then the executive order as issued by the governor would become law, so he cannot go into the departments and make a quick shuffle without first having it submitted to the legislature and having their general consent by reason of their taking no negative action. That brake was thought necessary in order to maintain the stability in the administrative offices. Now we have set up in practically all cases, we hope the principal departments will be headed by a single executive, but we have also made provision that if there are multiheaded principal departments that they will be appointed by the governor, there again approved by both houses of the legislature, and they in turn may appoint an executive officer to perform as their functioning head. He will be subject to removal not by the governor but by the order of the board under such rules and regulations they may adopt. I might add, however, that we have left the removal powers of the board members of the heads of these principal departments in the governor's hands. I wanted to mention that the heads of all principal departments, along with their ability to perform their particular functions, will also have to have an acquaintance and a knowledge of Alaska under this requirement. We have set up that they shall have been a resident of the state for at least three years preceding appointment to office. There again it was deemed by the Committee that any man who is to have a close hand in the handling of the Territory affairs, especially in regard to making policy, should have a close acquaintance with our country and with its people and with their needs and their desires. Three years was thought to be an absolute minimum for heads of principal departments who would assist in effectuating and carrying out departmental or state government policies. Now we have given the governor the power to fill any vacancy occurring during a recess. You will notice there are certain limits upon his power to fill those vacancies. If at the end of the session any of his ad interim appointments expire, or at the end of the next regular session is the way we have put it, but if he nominates somebody and they are sent down for confirmation to the legislature, the legislature does not confirm them during the session, then he may not nominate that same man for an interim appointment after the legislature has adjourned. We felt it was necessary there to have that restriction in order that the governor might not bypass the approving power of the legislature and make an ad interim appointment of somebody the legislature had refused to approve and did not confirm. I would like to ask if from my description here or my comments if I have omitted anything, I would like to ask any member on the Committee to further amplify upon the intent and thoughts of the Committee at this time before we go into a detailed discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I think that we overlooked putting something in our last paragraph here, did we not? We first talk about appointments to be made by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate, or legislature in joint meeting. Our thought there was that possibly the legislature might pass an act providing that some certain appointee would be approved only by the senate, but then later on we neglected to put in the legislature in joint session. I am sure it was our intent that beginning with line 17 on the very last paragraph, the last page, "After the end of the session no ad interim appointment to the same office shall be made unless the governor shall have submitted to the senate or the legislature meeting in joint session," and then the very same thing in the very last line, "If the nomination shall have failed of confirmation by the senate or by the legislature meeting in joint session", that is the intent?

V. RIVERS: That was the intent and we will make a correction at the next recess on that so just keep in mind that it is the intent of the Committee that it shall read, "the legislature in joint session" there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions? Mr. Johnson.

1990

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I direct a question to the Chairman of the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson, you may.

JOHNSON: Mr. Rivers, with reference to Section 12 which gives the governor the right to declare martial law, I notice that it is restricted to two instances, that is in the case of rebellion or invasion or imminent danger thereof. Did the Committee consider the possibility of giving the governor the right to declare martial law, for instance, in the event of disaster such as floods or earthquakes or volcanic eruption, or something of that sort, or was that discussed?

V. RIVERS: That was discussed at length, and it was decided against for the reason they thought there might be under certain cases an abuse of the economic power, an abuse of that martial law power in declaring a disaster due to economic problems of any one or two segments of society. We thought the only two reasons should be invasion and rebellion.

JOHNSON: Mr. Rivers, in Section 16, in line 23, you provide that the heads of all departments shall be citizens of this state. I don't know whether that expression would require the appointees to be citizens of the United States as well as the state.

V. RIVERS: That is the terminology we intended to use, "United States, and residents of the state".

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I rise at this point only to suggest that we might start the discussion with Section 1 and go through section by section rather than skipping back and forth. I think that will eliminate a lot of problems.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will adhere to that as much as possible. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, my question was on Section 16 so I will wait until that time comes up.

V. RIVERS: I would first like to ask if there are any other members of the Committee, who worked faithfully on this and who may desire to answer or may have something to say in a general way before we start the detailed discussion. In addition to myself, the members of the Committee are Mr. Barr, Mr. Boswell, Mr. Harris, Mr. Londborg, Mrs. Nordale, and Mr. VanderLeest.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do any of the Committee members wish to make a statement on Committee Proposal No. 10a? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

1991

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Rivers, I was going to ask what the Committee had studied about the question as to requiring the approval, confirmation of heads of departments by light of both houses of the legislature in joint session?

V. RIVERS: That is as we had intended, and there is a place or two in here that says "senate". Actually, we mean by joint houses and by confirmation of the legislature in joint session, and I will make a few corrections on those items which I notice have gotten the word "senate" still there.

TAYLOR: The Committee then did mean the two houses in joint session?

V. RIVERS: Yes. There is one place where we say, "The governor may call both houses of the legislature into session or joint session or may call the senate into session alone". As you realize, under the legislative power the senate has been allowed the power of bringing the motion for indictment or impeachment, so if in the case of an impeachment proceedings it was felt to be imperative, and the motion was to be handled before the senate, the governor could call the senate into session alone in case he felt the situation was drastic enough to require a hearing by them as to whether the impeachment should be brought out. Then, if they brought it out, he could then convene the house in session and could have the hearing as the matter has been set up in the legislative section.

TAYLOR: There is one other matter in regard to impeachment of the state officer, what was the thinking of the Committee upon the reversal of the historic precedent in which the house brings the charges and the senate sits as the judges?

V. RIVERS: We had included a section in the executive covering impeachment which was set up in that manner, that the house would bring the charge, the senate would hear with one of the supreme court justices presiding. Under the majority of this body, myself and some others dissenting, that has now been reversed, so the charges will be brought before the senate and tried before the house, so we have provided in here that the governor may call the senate into session by itself if necessary to sit on that one particular problem only, that is, may call the session of the senate alone into session. That would be the only purpose or reason for them being called into session alone.

TAYLOR: Was the reason they reversed that, they felt the house had the more mature judgment to judge those matters than the senate?

V. RIVERS: I don't know whether you were here that day, but that was discussed at considerable length on the floor, and I was one of those who spoke against it. Others who spoke for it could repeat their statements but they had reasons for feeling that the final trial should be before the house and that the indictment proceedings should be brought from the senate.

TAYLOR: Thank you, Mr. Rivers.

BARR: I want to add a little to what Mr. Rivers said. When this procedure was first brought up, I was against it, too. I suppose just from tradition, but the more I thought it over the more I thought that it made little difference whether the proceedings began in the house or in the senate. It was said that the senate had the older people in it and would use a little better judgment, they were a little more reserved and they might not do anything radical, but that also applies to starting the proceedings. They would not bring forth an indictment either for that very reason, so I can't see that it makes much difference, and there are more members of the house and the justice of the supreme court will preside and I believe that the larger the jury, the more fair the verdict, perhaps.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess for 15 minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for 15 minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Does any delegate have a question relating to Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 10a?

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I have a question of Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it relating to Section 1?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. Mr. Rivers, was it the intention of the Committee in framing the suggested executive article, that the view of the United States government, the federal government, be adopted with regard to the executive, namely the view that the executive had inherent powers other than the powers expressly conferred upon him by law and by the constitution?

V. RIVERS: I think that was the intent of the Committee that they would have the powers normally delegated under a constitution of this kind within the limits of a state governorship. By that I mean to say we have adopted identical phraseology with some of the other state constitutions in setting up his powers without limitation. It might be that due to legal interpretations there have been other things crept in and some powers might be more broadly interpreted under some courts than others. If there is any reason for doubting the value or the completeness of this phrase, we are certainly open and willing to have discussion on it.

HELLENTHAL: You note in Section 10, "The governor shall be responsible for the faithful execution of the laws." That enumeration of the power of the executive might possibly be construed as contrary to the view of Alexander Hamilton which is the view of the inherent power of the executive and the view which the Committee apparently recommends, so with that thought in mind, do you believe that the language added to the first section, "subject only to the exceptions and qualifications expressed in this article" would be objectionable?

V. RIVERS: Speaking for the members of the Committee with whom I have discussed this, I think they would like to hear it discussed at more length, and there is no set conviction in regard to any change in this statement that would make a better defined statement as to his powers. Do you think that, "He shall faithfully interpret the laws..." etc., might be a limiting factor upon the interpretation of this phrase?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

V. RIVERS: We are certainly open for discussion on that point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there more questions on Section 1? Section 2? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I understand, Mr. Victor Rivers, as inquired of you by myself during the recess, it is the intent in Section 2, that the governor shall be a citizen of Alaska. Would you have any objection to inserting after the words "shall be", line 3, Section 2, the words "a citizen of this state"?

V. RIVERS: If it accomplishes a useful purpose I would say that we have no objection. We gave it some thought and the question as to whether or not by being a citizen of the United States, and a resident of Alaska for that period of time, he would also be a citizen of the State of Alaska. If there is a reason that justifies putting it in to clarify it we have no objection, Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I think that legally there is a distinction between a citizen and a resident. A citizen of Alaska is necessarily a citizen of the United States, but a citizen of the United States is not necessarily a citizen of Alaska. There is a difference between residency and citizenship.

V. RIVERS: I might point out if we decide to adopt that qualification there is one other place in the bill where it should also be applied in a like manner.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I would be afraid of inserting this because I don't really understand this dual citizenship. It seems to me that you are liable to raise a terrific legal question. I think seven years of residence should be enough protection. When does a man become a citizen of the State of Alaska?

ROBERTSON: He does not become a citizen of Alaska by simply residing here. He has to actually become a citizen of Alaska but residency does not make citizenship of Alaska, and there is a dual citizenship. When we become a state the federal District Court of Alaska in certain cases provided will have jurisdiction over suits between citizens of Alaska and a citizen of the State of Washington because they have a different citizenship, although both are citizens of the United States.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Robertson, as this Section 2 is written, would you not think the courts would interpret this seven years to mean he would have to be a domiciliary of Alaska, and if he was a domiciliary of Alaska he would be a citizen of the State of Alaska?

ROBERTSON: Not necessarily.

BUCKALEW: What would be your definition of a citizen of Alaska?

NOLAN: Don't you have to declare intention of being a citizen, for instance, to take out a residence license?

BUCKALEW: That is residence again. That is residence for the particular purpose of hunting. I would not have any objection to putting it in except I'm afraid it would cause a lot of confusion.

NOLAN: I know of a case where a man obtained residency in Alaska although he lived in the State of Washington for 15 years.

TAYLOR: I don't believe it would be necessary to put that in this article. The fact that a man maintained a domicile in the Territory of Alaska for seven years, it would naturally be assumed legally that he is a citizen of the Territory of Alaska. Now I might say that the case of Texas, the States of New Mexico, Texas, and Florida vs. New York in which was a case deciding which state was to collect the inheritance tax from the son of Colonel Teddy Green, a United States Supreme Court case, and it finally held that although Teddy Green's son had been a colonel in the New Mexico National Guard regiment and had maintained a residence for a good many years in one place and then another and finally went back to New York and built a home on the Hudson River, and that is where he died and the Supreme Court held that although he had taken no affirmative action to relinquish his citizenship of either one or the other states, Florida, Texas or New Mexico, and as he had come back to New York where he originally started from and built his home there, it took no further action on his part to be considered as a citizen of the State of New York because he lived there for four or five years prior to his death, but those other states, who perhaps had an eye on this juicy morsel from his estate, well they lost out. They felt he was a citizen of their state.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, it might clarify matters -- I have just been handed the Constitution of the United States -- it says under the heading on page 965, National and State Citizenship. "With the ratification of the Fourteenth amendment a distinction between citizenship of the United States and citizenship of a state was clearly recognized and established. 'Not only may a man be a citizen of the United States without being a citizen of a state, but an important element is necessary to convert the former into the latter. He must reside within a state to make him a citizen of it, but it is only necessary that he should be born or naturalized in the United States to be a citizen of the Union.' It is quite clear then that there is a citizenship of the United States and a citizenship of a state which are distinct from each other and which depend upon different characteristics or circumstances in the individual." On that grounds, if this is an authoritative document, which I believe it to be, we probably should add the words "citizen of the state" as suggested, in order to bring this state citizenship into focus.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 2? If not, are there questions relating to Section 3? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I just want to inquire, are we now offering amendments?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Section 3, I would like to ask whether the last sentence is necessary regarding contested elections. In the legislative article when we discussed elections we had no similar phrase. Is this not a matter most generally handled by law anyway?

1996

V. RIVERS: As I recall the legislative article, it set up distinctly that they should be the judges of their own elections and should provide so by law, which would cover identically the matter here, in a sense that there would be a law provided for the handling of contested elections. We did, however, feel that by being silent on the matter there might be an implication that the contested election could possibly not be provided for by law. It was the general consensus of the Committee that it should show there. Now if the body decided it should be stricken, I am sure it will not materially alter the final handling of this matter by law.

McCUTCHEON: The matter that was in the legislative article pertained only to the legislature, no other office at all, so I think this is fitting and proper in here.

V. FISCHER: My question was not whether it was fitting and proper. My question was, is it necessary?

V. RIVERS: Speaking for the Committee, I believe we could say we are open to discussion on that and if the arguments bring out that it would be necessary for the legal effectuation of the constitution of that power, then, of course, we would try and leave it in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: We had a shining example of the absence of a law governing a contested election in the last election, and it took a long time for the governor's office and the attorney general and everybody concerned to make up their minds how it should be handled. Our thought was, if this is here, it is a duty to the legislature to set up some kind of a procedure immediately to decide contested elections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I am wondering if a general clause could not be in the article on franchises and elections that would pertain to all elective officers. If that were planned, then this could be deleted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: That article already provides as follows: "It" -- by that is meant the legislature, and I am reading from Section 2 of the article, "The legislature shall provide the manner of determining contested elections by court of competent jurisdiction." Now Mrs. Hermann nods her head. The grammar of that is under review in the Style and Drafting Committee, and I think it should properly be reviewed, but we are dealing with principles here, and this has already been treated in the constitution.

1997

HERMANN: That was amended on the floor to say, "including the right of appeal to a court of competent jurisdiction".

R. RIVERS: A contested election oftentimes involves a recount which is a check-over by the canvassing board, and that should in any case be done before going to court, but if it says "including", as Mrs. Hermann states, then our general clause would cover this.

McLAUGHLIN: To clarify any doubts to the question, on the proposed Style and Drafting redraft -- Committee Proposal No. 1, under Section 3 we have "Secrecy of voting shall be preserved. Methods of voting including absentee voting and the manner of determining election contests, which shall include a right of appeal to competent jurisdictions, shall be prescribed by law." That is, the substance will be there, even if it is again reedited.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I am sorry I was not able to catch some of the conversation, but Mrs. Nordale called my attention during the recess to the words "by law". Whether or not that would permit a contested election to be decided by initiative or referendum because certainly the laws passed under the initiative and referendum are laws.

McLAUGHLIN: I think I can resolve that. In Style and Drafting they do not say that the contested election shall be determined. It merely says, "The manner of determining election contests shall be prescribed by law." That is, the authority is only given as to the manner, but not to the specific election contests. I suspect that might be one of the special laws that are forbidden under the constitution.

ROBERTSON: I don't think that meets the objection. It seems to me a statement of this kind ought to be by the legislature, specifically. You couldn't possibly put a contested election back out for a referendum to decide it. I think I would rather say "by the legislature".

SUNDBORG: I should mention here that in Style and Drafting we are having some trouble with this phrase "by the legislature" because I believe that the intent of the body in nearly every case where that was mentioned was merely that we were not spelling out a procedure in the constitution but we were leaving it for later legislation, and that later legislation could be either by the legislature or by the initiative, except in those cases where in our article on the initiative it is definitely precluded. That is, there are certain subjects which cannot be covered by initiative. I think I understand what Mr. Robertson is asking which is, can the specific election contest be determined by an initiative. It could not. As Mr. McLaughlin said, under the proposed language that the manner of settling all election contests shall be provided by law. That is, a procedure would be set up for settling election contests, and each contest would not be settled by initiative or by the legislature necessarily, although the legislation on it, whether it comes from the legislature or by the initiative, could involve the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 3? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have a question relative to Section 3, lines 11 to 16. There is a provision written in there for an eventuality which I think would never occur. I doubt whether it has ever come up before any state in the nation in all the years they have been electing governors. That is an absolute tie on the vote for the governor of the state. I am wondering if it is necessary or if it is, whether we should not put it in elsewhere governing all elections. That is an absolute tie for two candidates for the legislature or for two candidates for delegate to Congress, or I mean for senator or representative.

V. RIVERS: Well, that is a good point. It was discussed in Committee at some length. The phrase was taken, after discussion, from the New Jersey Constitution adopted in 1947. Now, as Mr. Sundborg points out, there is a possibility that that situation would never occur. If it did occur the language should probably be applied to all elective officials competitively running for office. I think that will have to be decided after further discussion by a majority vote of this body as to whether or not you desire to have it as a part of the constitution or whether you desire to broaden it. As I say, we discussed it in Committee, and there were some dissenting opinions but the majority of the Committee felt it was a worthwhile provision in the remote contingency that such a situation should arise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 3? If not, relating to Section 4? Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: May we revert back to Section 2? I have two questions here I would like to ask in regard to the age of 30. Was there any consideration set to the age of 35 and also to the age of seven years to be a resident of the state? Was there any consideration to lower that to five years?

V. RIVERS: There was considerable discussion on these things and this particular item is somewhat arbitrary. We felt that the individual allowed to run for office should be old enough to have had a fairly good background of experience, and we also felt that he, in order to qualify for office, should have quite a good knowledge of the Territory of Alaska. There was a divergence of opinions in regard to the time ranging from five years, I believe from three years up to a period of ten years. One of our elder members said he thought it should possibly be 50, which brought a good laugh. Anyway, the Committee took a vote on the number of years of residence and the majority of the Committee arrived at the number of seven years, so that is why you see it in the report here. The matter of 30 years of age was that 35 was discussed as were younger years, and 35 was the oldest age discussed as an age limit. That was the one decided upon in Hawaii, and we there again arrived at the majority opinion of the Committee being 30 years in order to have had the background of experience and general knowledge necessary to make a good governor. We had considerable discussion as to the value of age and background of knowledge and experience. There are some extremely outstanding examples of young men like the younger William Pitt who was prime minister of England at the age of 24, if I recall right, but those were considered to be extreme exceptions rather than the general rule, and we wanted a general rule that would apply and have a mature candidate for governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I want to ask Mr. Rivers a question. Do you think that you should prescribe such a long length of residence of seven years for the governor when a person can become a chief justice of the supreme court of the Territory in one year?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Well, yes, I do. I think actually that the man who sits at the head of our government should have a broad general knowledge of Alaska and of its people and in order to do so, he should have an acquaintance directly by actually being here with the problems of all parts of the Territory. Now a judge of the supreme court I also felt and so argued on this floor, should also have such a background of experience and contact with the people and the Territory and its problems. However, the majority of this body held, I believe, it could be provided by law but they only require that he be admitted to the bar, as I recall it now.

NORDALE: As one member of the Committee who disagreed with these restrictions, I would like to just say a word or two. I feel that when you have a man running for office it does not matter too much how long he has been a citizen of the United States or how long he has been a resident. Naturally you want him to be a resident long enough, but I think the fact that he has to get a majority of the votes in the Territory is quite a determining factor and he could not just come here and overnight be elected for governor.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. Some think we wasted a lot of time when we voted on the voting age, and I remember many people said they wished they would have an opportunity to have voted originally on whether or not the recommended age in the committee report should have been adopted. Now here we have three numbers -- 30, 20 and 7. Could consideration perhaps be given by the Rules Committee to permit in this case that the matter come up for discussion? I move that the committee report requiring seven years residence in Section 2 be adopted. I think it would save an awful lot of time of discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, the Chair certainly does not understand how we could adopt a section as such that is in the proposal because we will have to vote on the whole proposal in third reading, and we might even vote the whole proposal down in third reading, and I don't see how you could vote on that, and with regard to the statement of 20 years, I think it should be in the record, if the Chair may, you did vote on the 20-year clause that you had in your suffrage article because when the delegates voted to take the age of 20 years out of that proposal, they voted on, in effect, the 20-year clause that they did not want, the 20 years and changed it, so they did vote on that question.

HELLENTHAL: They first voted on whether the voting age be 18, was my recollection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: But it was set in your article at 20, so they said they did not want 20.

HELLENTHAL: I don't want to belabor the point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair felt that should be in the record in light of that statement. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to further explain the Committee's feeling on this matter. It is as Mrs. Nordale said, she favored a lower residence, I believe, a lower residence requirement and a lower age, but some of the Committee also felt that the candidate for governor should be a little older. I believe 35 was the highest figure mentioned and ten years was the highest figure on residence. This figure on the committee report I would say was an average of the opinion within the Committee, and I also feel that if this body voted on it we would come out with an average.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 2, and 3? If not, are there questions relating to Section 4? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I understood Mr. Victor Rivers to say that this article provided that the governor should be elected biyearly as far as presidential election, but I don't see where that is provided for.

V. RIVERS: I didn't say that, Mr. Robertson, and I am not just sure what the discussion on that was, whether it would be determined by another section or why it was not put in here, but that was the intent discussed at the final decision of the Committee. It is in transitory provisions. There was some reason for it and I could not recall.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Section 5? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have another question relating to Section 4. The last sentence provides that no person who has been elected governor for two full successive terms shall again be eligible and so on. I am wondering in the case of a man who might have again been elected governor after being out of office for four years, as I read this, there would be no restriction on him thereafter being elected to the office forever more.

V. RIVERS: That is correct. We discussed it at some length and it seemed that as I recall it, about 65 per cent of the cases where a governor ran to succeed himself he was not successful. It was quite a high percentage. Mrs. Nordale worked up the figures on that as I recall, and we also felt that after the elapsed period of 12 years, if he wanted to seek two more terms, that would probably be limiting by the very nature of the actions of old "father time". He would not be in there after the second period of four terms in office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I can see Mr. Sundborg's point in that. However, I think it was the intent of our Committee that after the lapse and taking office, that it was not going to leave it then that he could just run and sit forever. I think the same should apply if he would go in again, two successive terms, I believe that was my understanding of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I agree with Mr. Londborg that that was the general opinion of the Committee. It would be a limit of two successive terms at any one time.

SUNDBORG: You do agree that it does not now say that? It says, "No person who has been elected governor for two full successive terms..." That is the man who once has held two terms, shall be again eligible until the first Monday in December of the fourth year.

V. RIVERS: The two full successive terms clause would still apply in the thinking of the committee. A question of phraseology there might be discussed, but we thought the two full successive terms was enough to cover not only the first group of successive terms but the second and possibly the third.

SUNDBORG: I don't think it would ever come up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions in relation to Section 4? Are there questions relating to Section 5? Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question, "The governor shall not hold any other office or employment of profit under the state, or the United States, during his term of office." Now, what is the intent of the Committee, say the governor has served two years of his term and he runs for United States senator; his actual term of office is not over even if he is elected and resigns, is it? You want to permit him to run for Congress and be elected if he resigns, of course?

V. RIVERS: That was the thought of the Committee. By the very nature of filing he would not start office as a senator, but it was the intent of the Committee that he would be allowed to run, but if the term there means any term in which he ends his service, either voluntarily or by the nature of the end of the period set up as we visualize it.

V. FISCHER: It does not apply necessarily to a four-year term, it is while he is actually in office?

V. RIVERS: That is right. If he wanted to resign at any one time, the resignation would be the termination of the term, would you not agree?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I thought not. I thought our point was that he could not, while he was governor, be elected to the United States senate and serve as a senator and governor at the same time, but the term of office is a four-year term.

V. RIVERS: Whenever he stops being governor.

NORDALE: He resigns when he is elected, but he can run while he is governor.

2003

V. RIVERS: He can run but not actually take office.

V. FISCHER: I just wanted to clarify that the term of office does not necessarily refer to the four years but only to while he is actually holding office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: That raises a question in my mind. Does the governor have the right then to file for let's say as a candidate for the United States senate, campaign for office, and then does he still act as governor right up until the time of election or until the time he is sworn in as United States senator, or must he resign the minute he files?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Under the terminology here he would have a choice. He would have, I believe, a considerable moral obligation to resign at the time he filed, but there is nothing that says he must do so. It is common practice that most of the states observe that many of the governors run for senator while they are actually governor in office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. Rivers, has the Committee given any thought to the position of the governor in regard to another office not under the state or the United States, but under a private corporation?

V. RIVERS: We limit this only to public office. There is probably small doubt that a man who would be governor might have an interest in some small business or he might sit as a director on a private corporation, and that should probably be covered under a conflict of interest clause if there is a desire by this Convention to write in a conflict of interest clause. We have discussed that in various committees, not so much in the Executive, but we have seen a lot of conflict of interest discussion in the last few years, and maybe or maybe not would they desire to either set up a law or write a subject covering that into the constitution. However, it did not appear the desire of this Committee as a majority to bring that in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: If the constitution does not contain a conflict of interest clause, can the legislature pass a statute to that effect and bind the governor?

V. RIVERS: That is something I would have to call upon some of the legal minds to answer.

2004

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do any of the legal minds care to attempt to answer that question? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am not an authority on that subject, but my conception is you are setting up three coequal departments of government, and you are setting out the basic qualifications in this article, and I doubt that the legislature could start throwing strings regarding the qualifications of the executive. If you are going to have that conflict of interest clause, I think it should be in the constitution.

BUCKALEW: On this occasion I am inclined to agree with Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 5? To Section 6? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have a question I would like to ask Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Rivers, don't you think that Section 6 makes it possible for a political hack with no qualifications whatsoever, except maybe that he comes from a different geographical area than the governor, to become the chief executive of the state?

V. RIVERS: I suppose that in all elective offices there are chances that they would be filled by hacks. That was discussed I might say. There was some question and considerable discussion on this point. It is, as I might point out, the case in the State of New York. New York was a prize example which we used. It is also the condition under the national administration, by which the Vice President runs with and on the same party ticket with the President. It has been my observation and after general discussion in the Committee, we accepted this particular type of thing in order to enforce or bulwark the strong executive. It has been my observation that some of the best chief executives in the United States as state executives have come through the chair of the governorship of the State of New York, first generally as the secretary of state, or rather as lieutenant governor, and next as governor. As you know, it is one of the states along with Ohio, which has supplied the greatest number of men who have been elected to the Presidency of the United States of any state in our union, so I think the experience has not been bad.

BARR: We also have a choice of whether or not we should have a lieutenant governor. It was generally conceded in the Committee that the general conception of a lieutenant governor is a man who has an honorary title without much work to do. That office is very frequently given to some political hack, to someone to whom the party owes a debt but not particularly qualified. Our conception of a secretary of state is a man who does work under a governor, not just an honorary title, he is, in effect, the general manager of the state under the governor, and in that case he will have a knowledge of all the work that is going on and all the problems, and if he takes over as governor, he will be highly qualified.

R. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question, when we tie the governorship and the secretary of state position together, I am wondering if they are separately nominated in the primaries?

V. RIVERS: The answer to that would be that they would be nominated jointly and elected on a joint ballot as they are in the State of New York and nationally, because you could not in any manner tie them together under a separate primary nomination and then have them run jointly in the general election.

R. RIVERS: I think to the contrary. The public ought to have something to say about nominating the person who is going to be secretary of state and then tie them together.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I'd like to ask Mr. Rivers a question. How many states nominate and elect their secretary of state and governor jointly and then, secondly, how many states merely elect them jointly?

V. RIVERS: I will have to do a little digging on that to get the exact number for you. I keep referring back to the State of New York. I don't know what others there may be. I did look it up but I don't recall.

HELLENTHAL: Is it a modest number, a great number, or an average number?

V. RIVERS: I would say a very low number, possibly not more than two or maybe just the one. It might be three.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Well, some of the Committee thinking was along this line. Within the same political party you often have very opposing elements and our thought was that if you are going to have a governor who is going to carry out a policy, he is going to be elected, the person who succeeds him and works with him should be in the same faction of the party so that if anything happens to the governor the same, more or less, the same policies will be carried on, and he won't walk in and toss out the heads of all the departments and completely reorganize the government. I think any governor who wants to be elected is not going to saddle himself with a partner on the ballot who he thinks is just an incompetent or a political hack. He is still going to want to win the election for governor.

2006

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: One more question. Where does it say in here that the secretary of state is to be the general manager of the state, as suggested by Mr. Barr?

NORDALE: It does not say that.

V. RIVERS: It does not say that. The implication here and the Committee's thinking was all along the line of a strong efficient executive and in order to bulwark that strong executive we have given him broad powers and he would have a secretary of state who we hope and believe would be a competent effective individual preparing for possibly running for governor and who would actually learn and know the state and be a good second in command, and he is the successor to the governor when the governor is out of the state. I think that is what the general implication was by Delegate Barr.

BARR: In this section it does say that the secretary of state shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law. Therefore, the legislature can outline his duties and also he shall perform such duties as may be delegated to him by the governor. The thought there was that he shall be the assistant to the governor.

V. RIVERS: That is correct.

BUCKALEW: I just wondered what the functions of this secretary of state are. He goes to work at 9 o'clock in the morning -- what is he going to spend his time doing?

V. RIVERS: I could very easily give a broad general answer. At the present time our government is handling in the neighborhood, the Territorial government handles some 16 to 18 million dollars a year. It is a big business and it has to be properly and efficiently administered. There are certain other things that could be considered the duties. First, you have a group of duties in the executive office which are executive duties, the meetings with the various department heads and the establishment of policies in various segments and areas. There is a recordkeeping function. There is a function, I believe, of intelligently working out a program and keeping a record of any problems that might arise in some parts of the Territory that might or might not be solved by the executive or might be subject to the legislative matter. I think any good executive handling the affairs of a state as large as Alaska should continually be studying the situation and preparing along with the governor a program for the betterment of the state, and I think that has been the function of all secretaries of state and that is the implication of the title. It is a broad general policy-making situation and also a program-arranging situation, and it is second in command to the governor. Now I think that you could either make that office as effective or as ineffective as the legislature and the governor desire it to be, but in the concept of the strong executive, we had the concept of a strong efficient second-in-command.

BUCKALL.W: One more question. Don't you feel that you would get a better secretary of state if the governor was allowed to appoint the secretary of state subject to approval by the senate?

V. RIVERS: Well, Mr. President, there we come back again to that problem of just how strong should a strong executive be. Theory and the ideal say that the strong executive should be a governor elected with the appointive power of all other officials. That has, we believed in the Committee or some of us did, there are exceptions, that that had a disadvantage in that there was no particular individual known to the people who had been exposed to the elective process being prepared to succeed to the governor, and we also felt that the people wanted an expression in the matter of just more than one individual as their elected representative. We also felt that an elected representative would make a better second-in-command in the absence or the death of the governor, that he would have then been elected by the popular will. So whether I believe or not that the lieutenant governor should be appointed -- personally, my stand was against just the one single elective head of government, the governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I want to get Mr. Rivers' thinking in this. Do you feel as an over-all picture that in the line of succession we would probably get a better man if the first person in line of succession was the president of the senate?

V. RIVERS: My personal thinking was and I think the majority of the Committee thought that as the third succession, that was sufficient because of the remote possibility that he would ever be an acting governor, but we all felt that there should be an elective official who had been elected by all of the voters over the entire Territory to be the second succeeding officer in the event of the death or absence or resignation or failure to qualify of the governor. And that expresses my personal feeling also.

WHITE: Mr. President -- Mr. Rivers, you said that under the sentence, "The secretary of state shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law", the legislature can make that as powerful or as weak as they wished. Couldn't that phrase be used to assign to the secretary of state duties that might be the prerogative of the governor? Could it not be used to breach the idea of separation of powers, and couldn't a situation arise where the governor and secretary of state might have a falling out and the legislature could use this phrase to transfer almost all of the powers of the governor to the secretary of state?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, there again that is a matter of opinion. I do not believe those circumstances possibly could arise. In the first place, in order to effectuate such a situation in view of the falling out between the governor and secretary of state, it would take a considerable lapse of time and a lot of legislative action. We are trying to visualize this strong executive in which we are not pinning down the duties of the secretary of state. We are trying to make them flexible enough so they can be assigned to fit into the scheme of the strong appointive department heads, appointed by the governor and confirmed by the legislature. We tried specifically not to enumerate the duties of the secretary of state but to give enough broad authority so he could be put to work and be given plenty of duties and kept busy. In order to effectuate this strong executive we felt there must be flexibility in the assignment of powers and duties of the secretary of state. So for that reason we have not just made him the keeper of the great seal, we have opened it so he could be given adequate duties to perform useful functions in the administrative departments. I don't fear the things you mention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Do you know offhand, Mr. Rivers, how many states give their legislature a carte blanche to assign duties to the person who might be second in succession?

V. RIVERS: I can't tell you how many states do, but in keeping with the modern thinking of a strong executive, it is certainly the policy not to establish offices by name and to narrow down their functions in the constitution. The policy is to leave them broad and general and flexible enough so they can be adjusted to meet changing times and changing circumstances. That is a general answer, but I can't give you a specific answer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: There are two ways to make it adjustable. One would be that their powers would be adjustable within the executive department. The other way of making it adjustable is to give the powers to the legislature. I just wanted to get your thinking on the two different methods.

2009

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, this raises an interesting point. Perhaps we could say he should have such duties in aid of the governor as may be prescribed by law. When we come to that, we'll think of it some more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, in looking through this manual for Hawaii it appears to me that there are very very few states that take constitutional provision for defining the limit of powers and duties of executive officers, and it says they are to be provided by law. On the other hand, too, I notice there are 38 of the states that elect their secretaries of state, which seems to indicate that they feel that is a strong measure. I just give that as a rough survey of these facts as they are established here, but when it says, "limits of powers and duties of executive officers" again and again it says, "no definition in the constitution -- to be provided by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I think that if we have an elected secretary of state we must be sure that he is a good man to fill the position of governor, and I think that as has been pointed out, there might be a danger that the governor who desires to be elected may very well choose somebody representing a different faction in the party rather than the same faction to fill out his thinking, just so as to attract additional voters. It would seem to me that a better way of electing and hearing them prior to the primary would be to take the top man who may run in the primary for governor in a particular party, take the top man who ran for secretary of state and then pair them for the general election, and the chances are that you will get a secretary of state who represents the same faction as the governor, and in that case the people have had a chance to already express their opinion. When we otherwise talk of an elective secretary of state we are actually, the people don't have the opportunity to vote for the secretary of state. All they are doing is voting for the governor and the other person just happens to be on the ticket. What I would like to point out, and I would like to know if you agree, that the language as stated in Section 6 refers to elected, line 20 for instance: "He shall be elected at the same time and for the same term as the governor, and the election procedure prescribed by law shall provide that the electors, in casting their vote for governor shall also be deemed to be casting their vote for the candidate for secretary of state shown on the ballot as running jointly with the respective candidate for governor." Actually, that would appear to leave the way open for the legislature to prescribe a separate primary for the two and pair them for the general election.

V. RIVERS: That is the thinking of the Committee Chairman, that this does leave the way open. I believe in the Committee we discussed that they run jointly through the primary and the general election. This wording would appear to me to leave it open to be prescribed by the act that was adopted in regard to the legislation. Maybe all the Committee would not agree with me on that, I am speaking from my own opinion.

NORDALE: My conception was that they would run just as the President of the United States and the Vice President run. I think when you invest a governor with as much power as this is and the full responsibility that you should not run the risk of electing his partner who might have very, very opposite views on many things, even though he might belong to the same political party. If you are going to carry it to an extreme, you will have to divorce them from the same party.

V. FISCHER: Actually, as I tried to point out, I think you are liable to get the person who agrees more with the governor if you take the top man who ran in the political primary. I would like to point out when we elect the President of the United States and the Vice President, these have not gone through the primary process, they have only been nominated by a political convention as a pair. This is a perfect example of where the people never have a chance to vote for the Vice President. Actually, they are voting for the President; very seldom is very much attention given to the Vice President.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I agree with Mr. Fischer that this section does leave open the method which the law would prescribe, at least that is my personal opinion, so the legislature could decide as to how the nominations would be made as I see it.

COOPER: Mr. President, this is really not a question, it is just merely an enlargement upon the word. The same interest or same faction within a party -- I personally believe that two individuals having the very same thoughts or within the same faction within the party, such as Mr. Fischer pointed out, is not good. You have one of these elective officials tied to the shirrtails of the other. One of the two will be weaker. Which one of the two I do not know. The secretary of state will be subordinate to the governor. The fact is that one of the two officials could represent another faction or a minor faction within the same party.

V. FISCHER: Point of order, Mr. President. This is not a debate. This is merely a discussion and it seems to me this enters the field of debate.

COOPER: I pointed out I do not have a question to ask.

HELLENTHAL: Additional point. He mentioned the minor faction, that has no part.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If Mr. Cooper is merely trying to get around to a question that he is bringing up to the Committee, it is in order.

COOPER: Don't you think then that the two factions, if there are two factions within a party being represented, it is a good policy of checks and balance?

V. RIVERS: With the elective primary?

COOPER: Yes. I am not particularly in favor of the elected primary. I happen to be in favor of something different altogether.

V. RIVERS: I did not quite get your question.

COOPER: The idea is, as I understand it, the way you have it now, you have the governor, representative of the party, to him you are tying another man with very similar thoughts and attitudes.

V. RIVERS: Yes, they are elected jointly in the general election. As I stated awhile ago, the method of nominating could be prescribed by law. Whether this is the best procedure or not, it was decided in the Committee at least we felt in order to effectuate the strong executive this was the best proper procedure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, it was felt that the body here did want a strong executive and he should be able to appoint his department heads or most of them so he could carry out his program efficiently. Now, if we believe that we should have checks and balances to the extent that the secretary of state should perhaps represent another faction within the party to present an opposite view, then why not have 50 per cent of the department heads Republican and the other 50 per cent Democrats? Then we would have lots of checks and balances, but you would not get anything done.

LONDBORG: I would like to point out something else that went on in the Committee thinking, the possibility of leaving it open for someone other than maybe someone right within the party. There may be an independent or someone who has no particular affiliations. The one running for governor may wish to choose that one, or maybe work as a team or maybe a strong independent who would have a very good chance of becoming governor. We left all reference to party out of this, I think, for that purpose that whatever team could win the election should be the one in office and above all, the governor should have one working with him with like mind. If the people want something else for a check and balance then they don't want that man, and they don't want a strong executive, but with this you have not only someone working in harmony right in the office, but should the governor leave the office vacant through death or some other reason, you have someone to step in and there should not be such a disruption of the function of the office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair notes that the hour of 12 noon has arrived and before we might recess, these visitors from Nenana are to catch the 12:50 bus to go out to the Fairbanks High School. The Chair would like to announce at this time the manner in which he has delegated the noon luncheon to the different delegates. There are 18 children and two of the teachers, including the superintendent, Mr. Gavin.

(The President assigned a guest to each delegate for the noon luncheon.)

SUNDBORG: Subject to any further announcements, I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 1:30 o'clock.

V. RIVERS: The Executive Committee will meet at 12:50 upstairs in the large committee room. We would like to have you who contemplate amendments that are not too controversial to bring them up, and then the other longer amendments can be brought on to the floor.

RILEY: The Rules Committee will meet immediately to set a time to meet during the noon hour.

SMITH: The Resources Committee will meet at 12:50 in one of the committee rooms upstairs.

McNEALY: The Committee on Ordinances will meet at about 1 o'clock in the gallery here, and we are going to take up the subject of the ordinance of the location of the state capital. Four delegates at least have proposed ordinances. Those who want to speak to us or anyone else who cares to be in on it at 1 o'clock in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now if the delegates will try to find the students named as their guests, the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to revert to the business of reading the journal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will revert to the business of reading the journal at this time. Mr. White.

WHITE: The Committee to read the journal has read the journal for the 48th Convention day and recommends the following changes: Page 1, line 1: change 1955 to 1956. Page 1, bottom line: same correction.

HERMANN: I do not have a copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Sergeant at Arms will please bring Mrs. Hermann a copy, the journal of the 48th day. Mr. White.

WHITE: That same line, bottom of the page, should be changed from 47th to 48th day. Page 2, first paragraph after the roll call, line 2: insert "Mr." before V. Rivers. Page 3, fourth paragraph, add at the end of the last sentence: "There being no objection, it was so ordered." Page 4, fifth paragraph, the question was called and on voice vote the amendment -- insert "to the amendment". It should read "the amendment to the amendment". Page 6, third paragraph, first line, after the word "motion" insert the words "to reconsider". Page 13, second paragraph, line 2, change the word "in" to "for". Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the approval of the journal for the 48th day with those corrections.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent for the approval of the journal for the 48th day with these corrections. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the journal of the 48th day has been approved. The Chief Clerk will please read the communications we have before us.

(The Chief Clerk read the following communications: Telegram from the Cordova Fish and Cold Storage Co., recommending department of fisheries control sport and commercial fisheries. Telegram from the Cordova District Fisheries Union signed by Harold Z. Hansen, Executive Secretary, also recommending department of fisheries control sport and commercial fisheries. An invitation to the delegates by the Alaska Crippled Children's Association to attend a Silver Tea to meet Christian von Schneidau and to view his paintings. A letter from Sheryl Drake of Stockton, California, requesting information on the Constitution and Alaska for her history notebook.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to announce again at this time tomorrow evening the Veterans of Foreign Wars are having their stag party for men only and that Mr. Wilson, our Sergeant at Arms, or the messenger, would appreciate having the names of those people who will be present tomorrow evening, so if the delegates who are going to attend will do that, it will be appreciated. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I hope our secretariat will fill the request of the girl from California.

HERMANN: Mr. President, that is the function of the Alaska Statehood Committee, and I suggest it be turned over to them. We have sent thousands of these in answer to thousands of requests.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the communication from the girl in Stockton, California, will be turned over to the Alaska Statehood Committee. The other communications will be filed. Are there other communications to come before us before we take up Committee Proposal No. 10a? If not, we have before us Committee Proposal No. 10a. Are there questions relative to Section 6? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I wonder if it would be apropos at this time for the Committee to make mention of anything that was decided at the committee meeting. If so, it might do away with a lot of these questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, if you would so choose, you may report on your Committee meeting.

V. RIVERS: We had a meeting and a number of the delegates appeared. I might tell you that we discussed a number of things. One was the insertion of the line "a citizen of this state". That affects also the article on judiciary before the Style and Drafting Committee. It was thought that, as I recall, we would ask for the insertion of that wording and then leave it up to Style and Drafting as to whether or not after considerable research they had decided it should be included to effectuate the full intent of the section. We also discussed another amendment which would put certain limiting powers, certain limitations on the pardon powers so there would be no chance of abuse. That was discussed but not actually adopted. It is my understanding that one of the delegates is going to discuss it further in regard to the legal implications. At our next recess we will have a meeting of the Executive Committee, and will discuss it with them at that time. The matter of the resolution in connection with the possibility of a tie vote in the election of governor was also discussed and the motion of Delegate Sundborg was that we strike all that matter relating to a tie vote and the Committee agreed to recommend that it be stricken with the understanding that it be considered in the general elections clause now in Style and Drafting that will be put before us in third reading, a general clause saying that a law or laws will be provided to resolve contested elections or other election problems or something that will cover both possibilities of ties and contests. That was the effect of our deliberations this noon, and we had one or two other delegates we did not get to hear whom we will hear in the first recess meeting that we have this afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no other questions relating to Section 6, are there questions relating to Section 7? Are there questions relating to Section 8? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I did have a question relating to Section 7. In line 11 it mentions that when the secretary of state succeeds the office of governor, the powers, duties and emoluments of the office devolve upon him. I was wondering, is he in fact the governor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Well, I could not answer whether he would be considered acting governor or whether he would be considered governor. I presume either one of these terms would apply because he would fill out the term until the next general election when it would be submitted to the voters. I imagine they would say "governor" or "acting governor", if the governor is only temporarily absent.

NORDALE: I believe that in the first case he would become the governor just as the Vice President becomes the President, but you will notice down below when the governor is just absent, it is the powers and duties that go, not the emoluments, when it is only a temporary absence.

SUNDBORG: I have a question about the section down below. What it says is, "In case of the temporary absence of the governor from office, the powers and duties shall devolve upon the secretary of state." Do you mean temporary absence from the state, from the jurisdiction? How would a governor ever be temporarily absent from office?

V. RIVERS: He could very well be incapacitated in the matter of physical or mental capacity. He might still be in the state and not be able to perform functions of his office or he might actually be outside of the state.

SUNDBORG: When the governor is outside of the state does this sentence beginning on line 19, come into power? Is he not still the governor although he may be in Washington, D. C.?

V. RIVERS: That is correct, but this man would then have the authority to act in his place instead for the state and in the state.

BARR: On Mr. Sundborg's first question, on line 9, I would like to ask the legal profession here, the wording is "he has qualified and assumed the office of governor" -- not the duties -- does that carry the title of governor with it?

BUCKALEW: I would say yes.

V. FISCHER: I am sorry I also missed the call for comments. It was my understanding in conference with one of the committee members that if the governor was not able to serve the complete term, that if the secretary of state took over before the general election two years after the governor was previously elected, that the remainder of the term be filled through election. Am I wrong on that?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, Mr. Fischer asked me that question and without the draft of our section before him I answered him that I understood the election to fill the unexpired term would come up the next general election, but now that does not so read. It says "fill the unexpired term", so I will make a correction as to my statement at that time, but that was what was in my mind, the same as in yours.

V. FISCHER: In other words, the secretary of state may actually serve anyway up to four years as governor?

NORDALE: No.

V. RIVERS: This is the wording I referred to in Section 8, "If the office of governor becomes vacant and there is no secretary of state, the offices of governor and secretary of state shall be filled for the remainder of the terms at the next succeeding general election unless the vacancy occurs less than 60 days before the election; but no election to fill an unexpired term shall be held in any year in which a governor is to be elected for a full term." I understood that to cover it. That was what I was referring to at noontime's discussion.

V. FISCHER: Another question I have, in line 17, what does the word "removal" refer to? What other removal besides impeachment is there?

V. RIVERS: Impeachment or recall are the only two removal clauses we have.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 8? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I have several questions relating to Section 8. This provides that the president of the senate and the speaker of the house shall succeed the secretary of state. I am wondering in the event, say, that the governor has died and the secretary of state has become the governor and it is between sessions of the legislature and the president of the senate then becomes the secretary of state, is that correct?

V. RIVERS: We did not so provide. We left the matter of the secretary of state office vacant until such time as the man then acting as governor who had been secretary of state might die. It was the general thought, in the discussions of the Committee, I believe I speak for the entire Committee, there would be no filling of the office of the secretary of state after he had once stepped ahead into the governorship.

SUNDBORG: Take the hypothetical case here both the governor and secretary of state both may have died or not be able to serve. Then the president of the senate becomes the governor?

V. RIVERS: Yes.

SUNDBORG: What happens to the man who is the president of the senate, becomes that because he is elected by the senate from among the membership to be the president? In the event of a change in the presidency of the senate, does a different man become governor?

V. RIVERS: It was our intent that the man who was actually president of the senate at the time when the governor's seat was vacant, would succeed to the governorship until the next general election, as set up here.

SUNDBORG: This thing could happen though, after a general election.

V. RIVERS: Yes, it could. We discussed one instance in the State of Oregon where three principal officers were killed in an airplane crash, and they had then the considerable difficulty in deciding as to how the succession took place. That was one particular case under consideration in discussing this matter in the Committee. We have always the possibility that some atomic or hydrogen bomb might wipe out the entire executive department.

SUNDBORG: Was it the thinking of the Committee that the man who succeeded to the governorship by reason of his being president of the senate or speaker of the house should be the man who occupied those positions at the time of the tragedy and that there should not be a change later after a man had occupied the office of governor just because the senate wanted to elect one other of its members to be its president?

RIVERS: That was the thinking of the Committee that when the president of the senate occupied the governorship that he would then have to vacate his senate presidency, and they would elect a new president of the senate who would not become governor while the other one was still acting, as I remember it. Maybe one of the other Committee members would like to amplify.

LONDBORG: I think that is correct, Mr. Rivers, since you mention that due to the fact of the extra load of both the governor and secretary being out of office, that the man could not act as governor and still retain his job as president of the senate. He would vacate that office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I am curious about one thing. I think I see it, but I would like to have it explained. There could be no conflict to this process if there were a change of party in the power of the state and instead of having one party member as speaker of the senate you would elect another one from a different party. He would have no right to then claim the governorship for his party as having been elected speaker of the senate?

V. RIVERS: Not until the previous speaker or president of the senate had actually fulfilled the term or had been submitted to election and had either been elected or rejected by the voters.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions or discussion of Section 9? Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Excuse me for fouling up the rotation. The more I thought of the points brought up in Section 7, line 20, that in the case of temporary absence of the governor from office, the powers and duties shall devolve upon the secretary of state -- I would like to ask the Chairman of the Committee if that might not automatically give the secretary of state complete jurisdiction over the executive department to the point of firing the appointees of the governor while the governor is absent from the state or otherwise not present.

V. RIVERS: Well, we discussed how much powers and duties he should have, and in the governor's absence there is a chance of that, but that was another reason why we felt he should be elected jointly on the same general policies and principles as the governor so they would be more or less identical in their thinking in regard to the organization. It is a possibility that could exist, but it seems that we must make some temporary conferring of powers on the secretary of state in order to act as governor while there is an absence in that seat due to the governor being either ill or out of the state. It is very questionable in my mind that would take place for any great length of time, or if it did take place there would be an abuse of that executive removal power. Both being elected in this manner, I don't think there would be a tendency for abuse.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I believe he used the term right there. I wonder if in the case of the temporary absence of the governor from office, the secretary of state shall be acting governor -- would that not kind of limit the activities of the secretary of state by designating him acting governor? You could not take over the full program of the governor and still he could carry out the governor's duties. I think that is your own wording, Mr. Rivers, on acting governor.

V. RIVERS: The point does not seem to me to be too badly taken. It seems it might be more inclusive or more descriptive than the term "powers and duties". I can only speak for myself because I have not discussed it with the other members of the Committee. There might be some limiting factor on the term "acting governor", or it might be just as broad as it would be under the term "powers and duties". I would like to listen to some discussion on the floor on that point before we resolve it. "Acting governor" might well cover it. Maybe some of the other Committee members might like to comment on it. Mr. Barr, do you think the term "acting governor" would be much different than "powers and duties"?

BARR: I don't believe it would make any practical difference, but it might point up our thinking a little more and might be a little better in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a discussion of Section 9? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have one question on Section 8. Mr. Rivers, don't you feel that it would be wiser to put the speaker of the house of representatives ahead of the president of the senate in the line of succession for the reason that the speaker would represent the latest expression of the people by reason of his most recent election?

V. RIVERS: Mr. Buckalew, that line of succession was jockeyed around in Committee. We accepted the traditional pattern of designating first the presiding officer of the senate, based upon the fact that the senate was, by the law requirements of this constitution, older in years in order to first run and probably longer in experience. This being exposed to the popular sentiment is another aspect, and my personal opinion would be that we hold to the procedure we have set up here. I do not speak for the rest of the Committee.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Rivers, do you think this article is inconsistent with the other provision whereby we provide that the house shall try impeachment proceedings instead of the senate? We reversed it there.

V. RIVERS: I don't think this is inconsistent with that. I also, as you remember, did not vote on the prevailing side on that particular issue. I opposed it on the floor for the same grounds I have stated here.

BARR: Mr. President, may I read from the Hawaiian Manual here on that subject: "Forty-four of the forty-eight states specify a second successor in case the first named person cannot fulfill the duties of governor. They are in order of importance: presiding officer of the senate, twenty-six states; speaker of the house, nine states; speaker of the unicameral legislature, one state (Nebraska); and secretary of state, eight states. Twenty states name three specific successors, but only five states go beyond this number (Alabama names seven; Delaware, five; Kentucky, four; Massachusetts, six; and Washington, seven)." It is generally conceded that the president of the senate is the first choice. That is the way it has been in the past.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I ask Mr. Barr a question. What nine states are those that have speaker of the house?

BARR: I don't see that right here. If I find it I will let you know.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to ask Mr. Rivers a question. Has the Committee given it any thought as to the line of succession being to other officers of the Territory? We know the President of the United States appoints a cabinet and if the President dies the Vice President succeeds to the office; then following that, the Secretary of State who is an appointed officer, follows. Well, we have what we call a secretary of state, too, but I was thinking possibly that maybe the treasurer or some other elective official instead of the president of the senate or the speaker of the house should be designated. He is more familiar with the governmental matters. Had you thought about that, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: That was discussed in Committee. I might say that under the strong executive plan, all of the officers of the state except the officers named are appointive officers. It was not the majority opinion of the Committee that succession should go to an appointive officer, but should go down through the elective offices of the state.

TAYLOR: The Presidency of the United States would devolve on an appointive officer in the case of the death of the President and Vice President.

V. RIVERS: I would like to have that point clarified by some of the constitutional lawyers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: If my memory serves me correctly, Mr. President, it seems to me that Congress not long ago changed the order of succession. It is now from the President to the Vice President, then the presiding officer of the Senate and then to the speaker of the House. I don't believe that the Secretary of State is in that line of succession any more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: That was also the expression of one of the delegates, and it was his understanding that that the change had been made, and I was not entirely aware of it myself.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair does not wish to speak on this, but if the Chair may, it seems to the Chair that the president of the Senate did not come into that but the speaker of the House did. The change was made about 1950, but I don't think the president of the Senate came into it. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have something here: "The President shall not have been chosen before the time fixed for beginning of his term or if a President-elect shall fail to qualify then the Vice President-elect shall act as President until the President shall have been qualified, and the Congress may by law provide for the case wherein neither a President-elect or Vice President-elect shall have qualified, declaring who shall then act as President or the manner in which one who is to act shall be selected and such person shall act accordingly until the President or Vice President shall have qualified." That looks like everybody was wrong on that section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the date on that?

BUCKALEW: It does not have a date on it.

JOHNSON: That is the constitutional provision, but I am talking about an Act of Congress which was passed, I think, in 1950.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There was an Act of Congress passed somewhere around 1951 that would answer this question once and for all.

BUCKALEW: They left it up to Congress then.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to this section? If not, are there any questions relating to Section 9? Section 10? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I was wondering about the power of the governor to enforce compliance with any constitutional or legislative mandate. I am reading on the top of page 5, "...or to restrain violations of any constitutional or legislative power or duty, by any officer, department or agency of the state or any of its political subdivisions..." I was just wondering whether the power of the governor to restrain violations of the constitution should be applicable only to his offices, departments, agencies and political subdivisions. If we were to strike the clause beginning with "by" on line 5 through "political subdivisions", would we not be setting the governor up to restrain violations of any constitutional or legislative power or duty, or is that infringing too much upon the judiciary? What I have in mind there is that if there is a violation of any civil rights or anything like that, the governor would be authorized to step in even though he was not personally involved through damage.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, we have included in this, after careful discussion, this language for this reason. You see here, "to restrain violation of any constitutional or legislative power or duty, by any officer, department or agency of the state or any of its political subdivisions". Now in some of the older states they have not had that clause, and in many states -- you have seen in city government, county government, and other agencies of state government abuses grow up where you have heard of the various bosses of this city or that city, and they are practically immune from all executive control within the state, and this clause is a clause that was felt necessary to avoid any such occurrence in the State of Alaska, if and when it became a state. I speak particularly of men who have sat in high city and county offices, where they are practically unremovable. In the case of one mayor, he ran for mayor after having been in the penitentiary for a length of time. We have the case of a man named "Boss" Hague of a New Jersey city who had a great many convictions against him and was a man of extremely doubtful repute, but some of the actions of those particular bodies could not be even investigated by the state government because of the lack of such a clause in the constitution. The Committee went into this quite thoroughly and the wording as we set it up was intended to include such contingencies, that the violations of the constitution could be brought to the attention of the courts by the governor at the level of the state's political subdivision.

V. FISCHER: Mr. Rivers, my point, I fully agree with that authority. My idea was that possibly by this clause you are restricting his authority to go further and step in when the rights of any individual are being violated by another individual or of any group, even though no governmental agency is involved in it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Does not any individual have a right to go to court to protect his own constitutional rights?

V. FISCHER: That is right, but my thought was -- and I am not going to argue it too much -- my only thought was why not leave it up to the governor to also step in and to give him the chance to protect our civil rights even if no individual who made the first violation of civil rights steps forward in a case like that.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, could we ask one of the lawyers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, in the event of the violation of any constitutional right of the private citizen, this private citizen can bring an action and indict in the name of the relation of so-and-so, whoever the private citizen may be, and set up the fact that he has been deprived of his constitutional or legislative rights, for that matter. It will be brought in the Territory and then if he prevails in that it will be a binding decision covering that particular point. I think the wording of the section here is adequate for all purposes. The governor can't himself bring all these matters but any of his officers or agents can because they have the right when it is once into the courts, and then it will be the State of Alaska in certain matters against a certain person or in relation to certain proceedings, so then it is carried on by the legal department of the state. I cannot see that the section, as it is, isn't perfectly adequate to provide for any eventuality that might arise in regard to the violation of a legal right of any citizen of the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: I was going to ask a question on the subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was this on this other? Mr. Victor Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I could clear up this other matter about the succession in Congress or the national administration, if you would like. I have just been handed by Mr. Hurley and Mr. Doogan this book which is called The Constitution of the United States of America and of course it is the discussions of the decisions that have been made in regard to it. "By a Congressional Act of July 8, 1947, the Speaker of the House and the President pro tem for the Senate are ahead of the members of the Cabinet in the order of succession." Does that answer the question? "When either succeeds he must resign both his post and his seat in Congress." That is the Act of 1947, as Mr. Johnson mentioned it a short time ago and the President mentioned it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, who is the President pro tem of the Senate?

V. RIVERS: He is elected after the Vice President has succeeded to the Presidency. They elect from their own membership a President pro tem to function until the next Vice President is elected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That answers the question. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: I would like a little amplification of the Committee's thinking on lines 13, 14, 15, in Section 10. "He may convene the Legislature, or the Senate alone, or the two houses in joint session, whenever in his opinion the public interest requires." For what reason, Mr. Rivers, might he wish, say, to convene the senate alone?

V. RIVERS: As we discussed this briefly this morning, the reason as we have it set up in our legislative act now that the motion for an indictment for impeachment lies in the senate, that is the only reason he might desire to convene the senate alone -- if there is an emergency situation, or some drastic abuse of some official, had been called to the governor's attention -- he might call the senate into session to decide whether they would impeach, then it would go to the house for trial. He would then call the house or the legislature or joint session if he merely wanted confirmation of appointments in an emergency nature, to call the house or the senate in joint session.

McNEES: One other question. My thinking on this then was if that were the case, and I am only amplifying the thoughts that were expressed on the floor here earlier this morning, there might be an instance in which you might want to call the house alone as a follow-up to the senate's original call. You have particularly exempted the house here from call as such and I wondered about that.

V. RIVERS: We did not quite understand it as such. We discussed that briefly and I might say it was thought that if and when he called the senate he might also call the house shortly thereafter to follow out if they did indict. The senate would then, of course, be dismissed and the house would then sit in joint session. The only reason for calling the house would be if the senate actually did move for impeachment. It was my thinking that we figured it was covered under the call of the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there other discussion to Section 10? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, it occurs to me that after the senate has preferred these impeachment charges that it might be excused and go home, and then the house would come into the picture for the purposes of that trial, so it might be, we ought to say, "call either house in separate session". I am only flagging the point so we can be thinking about it before the amendatory process starts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 11? Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: One question on Section 10. Is the last paragraph deemed vital?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: We thought it quite important. We discussed it in Committee and the outgoing governor would retire from office some five or six or seven weeks before the next legislature convened. The incoming governor would then take office. He would necessarily, supposing there was some antagonism between the outgoing and incoming man, it would be rather difficult for the new individual to get facts behind the previous administration unless such a report were required. It is not too common a practice, but some states require the same thing.

HELLENTHAL: It would seem to me if there were antagonism, it would just give him an opportunity to perhaps take a lefthanded swing at him, and if he were happy he would make the report anyway, and the modern tendency is to have legislative councils and a permanent staff, so that there would be little information that the man would have that would be vital, it would appear to me.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order. I would like to find out whether Mr. Hellenenthal is asking a question or presenting his argument against the matter here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is hard to tell. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It is a matter of interpretation of the need. It was the thinking of the Committee that a reasonably sincere and honest man would try and point up the things that his administration had tried to do for his own justification as well as for the continuing record of the state, and that the new governor would have some advantage in the matter of preparing his program if he had that information rather than if he didn't have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 11? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, in Section 11, in the model state constitution it says that the governor shall be commander in chief of the armed forces of the state except when they shall be called into the service of the United States. Has that been discussed? There doesn't seem to be any exception here, in Section 11.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: When the armed forces of the state are called into the service of the United States, then they are no longer the armed service of the state. They are part of the army of the United States.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, Mr. Barr has expressed exactly the thinking that was brought out in the Committee at the time this was discussed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 12? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Rivers, what is definition of a flag officer? "All general and flag officers", it says.

V. RIVERS: It is a term that normally applies to the navy but we understood in general discussion we considered flag officers -- Mr. McLaughlin, did you care to answer that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: "Flag officer" is any officer of the naval forces of the states who is entitled to a personal flag or a personal salute. That would be a commodore, a rear admiral, a vice admiral, and an admiral of the fleet which would be the Haines-Chilkoot ferry. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 12? Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, under Section 12, one question was raised in Juneau as to how many times the governor could call for martial law without having the approval of the majority of both houses. There was a question they asked at that point. We tried to explain it to them, but I did not read it in here. It says, "shall not continue for a period longer than 20 days without the approval..." Could he stop if off at 18 days and then call it again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I believe that would have to lie on the interpretation of the intent, and it would be that the intent, I would gather, would be that he could call it once for 20 days, not to exceed 20 days, but that is a personal opinion. If there is a real need for martial law I presume by that time the national administration would have stepped in and taken over. That is a matter of opinion, also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 13?

TAYLOR: Are we off of 12?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are off 12 unless you have a question, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I just want to ask Mr. Rivers as to the thinking of the Committee in regard to Section 12. I ask where you have included certain circumstances or conditions under which martial law can be declared, then where you have enumerated them, you could not call them out in case of an emergency and it did not come under these but which they should be brought out. I was thinking that possibly that first sentence should be ended after the word "it" in the second line. Was that considered in the Committee?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, answering that question, it was considered in the Committee at some considerable length, and at the present time for any emergency such as the nature we mentioned, the governor could very well call into action the National Guard for the emergencies of flood, fire, or an act of God, Nature, but the martial law we felt should be confined to the call by reason of rebellion or invasion. He has other powers at his disposal for the cases you mention. The thinking was he should not be allowed to declare martial law for anything other than those two.

BARR: It might be that there is someone here who doesn't understand what martial law is. I would like to point out that if martial law is declared, civil law is suspended. The military is in complete charge, complete control.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Does "imminent danger thereof" apply to rebellion both and invasion?

V. RIVERS: We had a rather extensive discussion on that "imminent danger thereof" the other day. As we discussed it, I thought of our clause in this section. I would say that it applies to "imminent danger of invasion" or "imminent danger of rebellion", that it modifies both the words "rebellion" and "invasion".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 13? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, excuse me for rising, but I did have an awful lot of notes on the margin. Is the third sentence necessary: "A commission or other body may be established by law to aid and advise the governor in the exercise of executive clemency."? This would be strictly an advisory type or established by law. It would appear to me that the legislature has the authority anyway to establish that. Is that necessary in the constitution?

V. RIVERS: Well, we have discussed that in Committee, and I have discussed it individually. Some hold that the final responsibility for all of the pardon power should lie directly in the governor. Others believe it should be spread out in an advisory body that would temper his decisions and perhaps control any abuse of the pardoning power. The Committee as a majority group felt that the language should be there, that the pardon board should be separate from any other process that the law might establish, or the parole board, or that they might be made a joint board if the law so desired. We felt it was a wording that would have value, indicating intent. Maybe some of the other members of the Committee would care to mention that discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does any other member of the Committee wish to be heard? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Since I was one that wanted to put "shall" instead of "may" in there, maybe I had better give some reasons. I think that particular sentence was put in at my request because I thought a parole board should definitely be established to aid and assist the governor because the governor himself is never going to be able to go out and get the facts. There are some states, I believe, that do not have parole boards, it is entirely left up to the governor, but my thinking was at the time that there should be a parole board established and rather than use the word that a parole board "shall" be established to aid and assist the governor, it was decided in Committee to use the word

"may", but it was merely a matter of establishing the intent of the Committee that one would be established.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think it goes beyond what Mr. Harris just said. If you say that the governor may grant pardons, commutations, and reprieves and may remit fines and forfeitures without any qualifications I don't think that the legislature could then create a board which would necessarily process the pardon applications and have any general effect upon the governor. This is giving the legislature the specific authority, notwithstanding the grant of the pardons power to the governor, to set up a board or commission to handle these applications and assist and aid the governor in making his decisions. So I believe that should stay in there; then the parole is an entirely different thing. The parole is something which the legislature could set without any particular mention, but this says the legislature "shall" set up a parole system.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I don't have a question, but I have a remark along the same line that it is the governor that grants the parole, so I think that the word "parole" should go after the word "pardon" in the first line of that section. He can grant pardons, paroles, commutations, reprieves, and the governor now can at the present time grant a parole, he can grant a commutation, or he can grant a pardon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, a parole is quite a different --

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: We are not discussing the merits or demerits of the thing. We are asking questions and opinions of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: That's what I meant to do but I will still dispute Mr. Taylor's statement that the present governor can grant a parole; he cannot. I was on the pardon board for a good many years and understand that, but I think that that is necessary in there because parole is quite different from the other things that are mentioned up above and required the establishment of a board --

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. I insist that we are discussing the merits and principles here involved rather than asking for the opinions of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, I believe that your point of order is well taken. Hereafter the members will ask the Committee members their opinions, and when we get to the debate we will do that when we come to the amendment procedure. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Point of order, Mr. President. I think it is valuable if delegates do express their opinions. They certainly can do it in terms of questions, but the Committee has started the very desirable practice of going back into committee session and considering some of the ideas and opinions expressed on the floor, and if Mrs. Hermann can bring in a valid point I think it is worthwhile bringing it up instead of leaving it to future debate, which may take hours. In this case the Committee may decide one way or the other and just take care of the matter within minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, the Chair felt, was entirely within the jurisdiction inasmuch as Mr. Taylor raised the point, and Mrs. Hermann felt the point was not well stated, but whether or not we are going to have all the debate in this particular discussion, that is a question, or whether or not we are here to hear the reasons from the Committee members as to why the sections came into being. Are there questions relating to Section 14? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have a question. I would like to know just a few of the boards or departments that this particular Section 14 includes. Say, for instance, at the present time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers:

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, in answering that question, I might first make a broad general statement that in effectuating the powers of a strong executive, as I stated before, we figured there was a need for flexibility. Under this we have set up, as you see, the possible, not more than 20 principal departments. In setting up those principal departments, it was also our thought that we could possibly under the state government eliminate as much as half or maybe more of the existing boards and incorporate them within the various departments under functional setups of each department. Now in the past, as a Territorial government, we have had no manner of expressing self-government except through boards. We have had no manner of having citizen participation in government except through boards. Consequently, we have had lots of boards established to much of the disgust of a good many of our members of the legislature and citizens; however, we feel that this manner of establishment will help eliminate a number of the boards. At the present time we have some principal departments in government in the Territory. We have the Revenue Department; we have the Department of Fisheries, the Department of Labor, the Department of Mines, the Department of Health, the Department of Education. We also have divisions of Social Security under the Territorial statute. I believe that covers mainly the essential departments. Now it might well be that in establishing a department of mines, fisheries and things like that, they might all fall under separate department or division heads of the department of resources. I don't know what the final picture of state administration would look like. It seems to me that some of the functions I have mentioned would normally fall under one main head as a division of a main head rather than as a principal department.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Is it all right to go ahead to Section 16 because this has a direct bearing?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: It says, "The head of each principal department shall be a single executive, unless otherwise provided by law." Does that mean that then eventually literally everyone of these 20 principal departments which would be allowable with the make-up of same, would have to come from the legislature, isn't that right? In the event that it were more than one primary department head?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: We have provided for multiheaded departments in the next section, Section 17, which covers a board-headed department of which is possible to visualize there will be some, such as possibly the department of education, or the department of health or -- I just can't recall others that might fall into that branch, but we do provide for appointment of members to the multiheaded department if and when they are established by law.

COOPER: That was primarily what I had in mind, the department of education.

V. RIVERS: We covered that point after considerable discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will stand at recess in order that the stenotypist and others may have a slight break.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to bring to the attention of the artists among us once more that there will be a showing of art at the Traveler's Inn on Sunday. The Convention will come to order. Are there questions relating to Section 14? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, a question for Mr. Rivers. Is it the intent of Section 14 to limit the number of boards to 20?

V. RIVERS: No, that applies only to principal departments, principal departments of government. At the present time I would imagine we have not over five that could be considered principal departments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 14? If not, are there questions relating to Section 15? To 16? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in the executive article here on boards, I understand that through the conversation just a minute ago with Mr. Rivers and Mr. Cooper, that under Section 16 and relating to 17, that a department, such as the new state department of education, they could nominate a board, appoint a board by the consent of the senate and set up a board in that manner that they could provide for the executive offices. I also note that it is at the approval of the governor which comes right back to actually the governor approving it. My reason for asking this question, Mr. Rivers, is that in an administrative capacity such as the commissioner of education is, he should be answerable to a nonpartisan board. Has your Committee given that any thought?

V. RIVERS: Yes, we went into that quite thoroughly, Mr. President, and in connection with that we had a memorandum prepared showing the present setup under the Territorial law and in order to amplify on that, I think it would be best if I read it. With your permission I will. "Under Title 37, Article 1 of the 'Alaska Compiled Laws Annotated', the Territorial Board of Education, the Territorial Commissioner of Education, and local school boards are charged with administration of the public school system. The Territorial Board of Education consists of five members appointed by the Governor, one from each Judicial Division and one at large. These appointments are subject to approval by a majority of both houses of the legislature in joint session. The members serve for a term of six years which overlap. A board member may be removed by the Governor for certain specified causes, with the consent of a majority of the whole Board. The Board appoints and removes the Territorial Commissioner of Education and has broad powers over the policy and administration of the Educational system." Under the original proposal of the Committee we had, "All departments shall be single-headed departments, except as provided by law." That left the removal power of the multiheaded department in the hands of the governor. Under our revised version here now the existing arrangement provided by law for educational administration could continue, except that the appointment of the commissioner of education by the board of education would require the approval of the governor. The department of education would of course be subject to reorganization by executive order of the governor as would any other agency of the government. Now it also provides that the removal power of this multiheaded board member would be, or rather the appointing power of the principal executive officer of such board would be subject to the approval of the governor before he was appointed. The general consensus of the Committee was that this covered quite well the desire of both the strong executive and the multiheaded department such as the department of education. Does that answer your question?

COGHILL: Yes, but, Mr. President, that answered my question in part, Mr. Rivers. It is then the thinking of the Committee that like the head of the department of education, although the governor would only be able to appoint say one or two members to that board when he becomes the governor, that he would have the power to remove, without just cause a good executive head of that board?

V. RIVERS: He would have both, yes. He would have the removal power of the board powers and also would have the removal power of the executive officer, subject of course no doubt to some considerable agreement with the board. He has the removal power now for certain causes with the approval of the board, as I read to you.

COGHILL: Do I get it right then that he has the power to remove all board members when he comes into office?

V. RIVERS: Mrs. Nordale, you might care to answer that.

NORDALE: He can remove the board members but the head of this multiheaded agency may be removed in the manner provided by law, which could provide for hearings and all sorts of things.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Walsh.

WALSH: May I ask a question, Mr. Rivers? I think to clarify this in the minds of several people here it might be well for me, that one of those serving on the Board of Regents of the University of Alaska, composed of eight members, and the Board of Regents select the president of the University. The governor, as I understand it, does not have the power of the removal of the president of the University. It is a matter for the Board. Would this situation change that, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: No, in regard to the University, this would not affect their present setup. They are a private corporation, or rather a nonprofit corporation, and under the specific law providing for their make-up, and you would still have a board of regents appointed by the governor and confirmed by the legislature, and the powers as you now have them would be identical to what they now are as I visualize them.

WALSH: We still have the power to choose a president of the University?

V. RIVERS: Yes, this refers only to principal departments of government.

WALSH: There would be no change when this transformation takes place from the Territory to the State?

V. RIVERS: Unless it were made by law there would be no change, as I see it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. Rivers, was it the thinking of the Committee that if all department heads were single it might save a lot of trouble in the capital city?

V. RIVERS: The interpretation of many English words has great duality of meaning in many cases. Of course, this one here is one of those things that you could put most any interpretation on. The interpretation if you want the serious definition of that single department head, it was that it would help effectuate and make more efficient the strong executive type of government in the executive branch.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, in Section 17, in what Mr. Walsh was referring to, it says that such a board or commission and the members have been appointed by the governor and then approved by the senate, "Such a board or commission may appoint a principal executive officer when authorized by law, but the appointment shall be subject to the approval of the Governor." It has no provision in there whatsoever about the governor removing the executive head, but the procedure has been reversed; rather than the governor appointing this board and being confirmed by the senate, which it does down to a certain extent, and then letting the board have the choice of its executive, now all of a sudden the executive of this board has to be approved by the governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: That is correct. The approval power of the governor who is the strong executive head of the state would be required before the commission could appoint and submit the name to the legislature for approval, but you also have to have the approval of the legislature, and in the case of judges you have a very similar situation under our new judiciary. The judicial council recommends a judge to the governor who makes a selection from two or more and then it is approved by the legislature. I see no variation in the method particularly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: It does not say though that this executive officer is approved by the senate or any legislators. It is merely that the appointment shall be subject to the approval of the governor. There would be no appointment of a principal executive officer. There would be the appointment and the confirmation of the senate of the five members, that is what the board consisted of.

V. RIVERS: That's right. There would be no approval of the senate of the executive officer. I misstated, I was thinking of a board member.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Rivers, did you consider the use of the expression "administrative board" instead of "quasi-judicial body"?

V. RIVERS: Yes, we considered a great deal of terminology there -- regulatory boards, nonregulatory boards, administrative boards, quasi-judicial bodies, and we tried to arrive at the wording which would most nearly express the intent and "quasi-judicial" means one more board exercising powers as we visualize it, that are semijudicial in nature and have certain powers to make rules and certain powers to make rules and regulations that might have the force of law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: You are getting into the field of administrative law then, aren't you?

V. RIVERS: I presume that is the right place to put this matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith:

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Rivers, I am still not quite clear on what the difference between a principal department with a single executive, what the difference between that and the principal department under a board or commission. Now possibly I can make myself clear by referring to the Alaska Department of Fisheries. If that department were set up without a board, then would you say it was a principal department and would come under Section 16?

V. RIVERS: Well, it is a matter for the organizational setup of the state to decide what principal departments they are going to establish. As I stated before, we have a number of departments now headed up by boards where it might be eventually they will be single-headed departments. It is the hope of many that they will have such single-headed departments. I for one think the Department of Fisheries could probably and would qualify as a principal department, although it might well fall under a department of resources as one of the fields of that particular department.

SMITH: It would depend then on how the state organization was set up as to whether it would come under Section 16 or 17?

V. RIVERS: That is correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 16? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to go back just one, and I would like to ask Mr. Rivers, what is the purpose of Section 15? Why is it necessary at all? We have provided that each department head shall be appointed by the governor. Why do we need to say that each department shall be under his supervision?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, the governor under this setup is charged with the executive responsibility of the management of the state. As I recall, to effectuate that we felt that the phraseology of the model constitution was important, that he actually be indicated as being the supervisory head of all the departments under him. I will pick out the wording for you, if I can. I don't find it just at the moment, Mr. President. I will locate it and bring it out for you and show it to you as soon as I am able to locate it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions to Section 17? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question in regard to 17. I will start first by mentioning Section 15:

"Each principal department shall be under the supervision of the Governor." And then in Section 17 it says: "Wherever a board or commission is at the head of a principal department or of a regulatory or quasi-judicial body, the members thereof shall be nominated and appointed by the Governor..." etc. I am wondering if in the case of a department of education which had a school board made up of members confirmed by the legislature who in turn appoint a commissioner of education to administer the school system. I think probably the department of education would be one of the principal departments, even though it had a board to carry out the program, I am wondering if the governor is really the supervisor of that kind of a department. I might go along with saying the general supervision of the governor, or such, but actually I don't think he would be running the University through the Board of Regents either. I think the regents would be running it, and I think the board of education would be running the department of education, and it would be a very vague supervision that the governor would have in a case like that, and I am just wondering if there is any inconsistency there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: First, I would like to say that the University of Alaska is not a principal department of the government. It is something apart from this. And second, actually our present government is a very fine example of what can happen when a governor does not have any supervision over departments. I don't believe our present governor, if he sees a certain department of government that is wasting public funds, that is hiring a great deal of personnel that it does not need, he has no authority to go and say to the head of that department, "Now look, you had better reorganize this thing and operate it more efficiently." That is what we want the governor of the state to do, to be responsible for seeing to it that each department runs as efficiently and economically as possible, as well as carry out the laws.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: On the supervision of these various departments, it was the understanding and intent of the Committee that the governor could require reports, and if necessary, make investigations down in to the functioning of these departments as to whether they could be improved upon, and of course would naturally have to do the same with practically all departments. The report-making power requested by the governor and investigating power of the governor into the functioning of the departments is the main supervisory function he would have.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question in regard to that Section 15. Does that relate to the ability of the governor then to supervise these different departments in such a way as to coordinate their activities?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The governor is the responsible executive to all the people for the proper functioning of these departments. This supervision power we mentioned would be a broad general power of investigating them and asking them for reports in regard to their functions and how they are performing, and perhaps even having them looked over by an efficiency expert to see if they could do their business in a better manner. That is about all that I would say the supervisory power consists of other than advising.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Rivers, have you in your strong executive, have you looked over the other provisions of the other states to find out just how many of the states function as such toward the boards of education or the departments of education, departments of welfare or health? Do you have those figures?

MR. RIVERS: Not in their entirety. As you know, many of the state constitutions are very old and quite out of date. We did, however, go through all that we felt applied and we eliminated some of those older constitutions that did not apply. We tried to accept and take the best parts of the model constitution and some of the other constitutions that are designed along the strong executive, such as New Jersey and the recent amendment, and the Constitution for Hawaii. We did have the consultants in with us on this, and the general idea was to effectuate the strong executive. Now you must realize that the need for the strong executive did not become too apparent until the government began to grow more and more important in our social and economic affairs. That change began taking place along in the late 1920's. Since then until the present time need for effective government has pointed up the failures of the old state constitutions, so we studied as nearly as we could the failures of the old state constitutions to properly provide for an efficient executive department. In this we tried to adopt the items which would make ours effective and efficient. The precedent in the matter of the strong executive is rather limited.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask, Mr. Rivers, I note that in Section 16 for the single executive you have a qualification of citizenry and residency when the board or commission head of a principal department you do not require them to be citizens or residents. Is that the intent of the Committee?

V. RIVERS: The board or the commission would be established by law, and we presume they might have some requirements in the law, but that leaves it open to the legislature to make the decision on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: In Committee I assumed that this wording applied to all department heads, including a board. It says the heads of all principal departments appointed shall be citizens. Elsewhere here it stated that heads of departments shall be a single head or a board. The board is the head of the department. Therefore, they should be citizens too. That is the way I read it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: My thought, my doubt, Mr. President, was presented by the fact that in Section 16, in the last sentence it says that: "The heads of all principal departments appointed under the provisions of this section..." That is apparently Section 16.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Would the Committee have any objection to the substitution of the word "article" for "section" in line 23, page 7?

V. RIVERS: I can't speak for the Committee on that, we would have to discuss it. I for one would prefer to see the statute provided rather than the constitution provide for board member qualifications.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Rivers, do you think that in the event you set up a rather technical department of some kind that this provision requiring a three-year residence would be a restricting limitation on the governor and might prevent him from getting a qualified person?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, in answering that, I would say that all principals of principal departments of government are quite broad general administrative departments. They are not departments which have special technical men at their head and men who must have a broad administrative ability in a particular field, such as education, but I and a majority of the Committee members felt that they should also have an assured knowledge of Alaska, Alaska's people and Alaska's conditions, so we speak here of only principal department heads. We do not feel this forecloses those departments from obtaining the services of any of the best experts that they might need or desire.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Rivers, as a matter of fact, don't you think an elective governor would always take an Alaskan if he was qualified?

V. RIVERS: It is a matter of conjecture. He might or might not. However, in this case we felt that any member of the government in a policy-making position, broad administrative policy-making position should have certain requirements of residence, and these were the ones that the Committee by majority voted to adopt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. King.

KING: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. King.

KING: Mr. Rivers, Section 15, would this preclude the establishment of commissions, such as a game commission or commission for resources?

V. RIVERS: No, we specifically do not exclude them, we specifically include them under Section 17: "Wherever a board or commission is at the head of a principal department..." It could be a principal department and still be headed by a multiheaded department.

KING: One more question, Mr. Rivers. Then, the commission then has very little authority as I can see it because here it provides that, "The head of each principal department shall be a single executive", and further, "Such single executive shall be nominated and appointed by the governor...", etc. In other words, the governor does not have to go to the commission; he can appoint the executive under this commission himself?

V. RIVERS: No, it says, "Such a board or commission may appoint a principal executive officer when authorized by law..."

KING: And the governor can remove this director?

V. RIVERS: No, the governor cannot remove that director, but the appointment shall be subject to the approval of the governor, and that is only in the principal departments of government. It might well be that the department you are speaking of would be a principal department; then whoever would be appointed would have to have his approval, but they may appoint with his approval.

LONDBORG: For the record on Section 17, Mr. Rivers, if I may address him, "Such a board or commission may appoint a principal executive officer when authorized by law..." Then it mentions that the appointment shall be subject to the approval of the governor. Does the governor have the right to remove that particular principal executive officer?

V. RIVERS: I want to correct a statement I made previously in that regard. He would not have the power to remove unless the legislative act so provided. It establishes this commission by law. The constitution sets up his approval of the appointment but unless the rules of the commission he established or the law which established it, give him some definite powers of removal, as I interpret this, he would not have the power of removal.

LONDBORG: Unless the law would specifically give him that power this principal executive officer when appointed with his approval would be subject to removal by the board then, or whatever the law would state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: In this particular instance, the fact that it is subject to the approval of the governor does not seem to me to be a stumbling block. It is a little comparable to the governor's veto. It would be only if a man appointed by his own board were particularly objectionable in some respects that he would probably enter objection at this point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I believe Mrs. Nordale was looking at me when she was speaking. I was wondering, I was not referring to the appointment but rather to the removal to make it understandable that the governor would not just usurp his political power and remove someone to get in one of his own, make it a political deal on that. Just so we had it clear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I would like to ask a question of Mrs. Nordale. The principal executive officer then would be the one that would be, in effect, that particular officer would be serving at all times? In other words, he would be the department head officiating the action? The board would advise. They could meet over certain periods of time but this principal executive officer would be constantly on the job and as such, having been approved by the governor, would have the steady job. I am not saying exactly what I mean.

NORDALE: Maybe I can clarify it. It seems to me we are setting up principal departments, no more than 20. Most of them we hope will be single executives, but there may be departments that are headed by a group of people. Now that is the head of the department, and they are the ones that operate the department. Now then, they appoint, if the law provides that they may, they appoint an executive officer who carries out their policies. The executive officer is set up by law, but the head of this multiheaded department is in the same position as the singleheaded department. The rest of it is set up by law.

COOPER: In other words, the principal executive officer is the acting manager, so to speak, of this department?

NORDALE: That is right, but he does just what the head tells him.

COOPER: The board then would be only acting in an advisory capacity, so to speak?

NORDALE: No, it would be the head of the department. There might be advisory boards in other departments if the law provides it.

COOPER: That is where I'm not exactly clear. You have a five-man board for the department of education. Now is that five-man board, are they going to be constantly on the job?

NORDALE: No, not necessarily. It is like a board of a corporation and a president.

COOPER: Out of this board that is nominated and appointed by the governor, which the senate approves, then only the governor has the right to approve the executive head?

NORDALE: He approves it after his board presents it.

COOPER: By that I understand then that the governor certainly has the right to reject any and all with the exception of one of this board.

V. RIVERS: No, in most cases, Mr. President --

GRAY: Mr. President, I would like a two-minute recess. Maybe we can explain that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention is at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, as soon as Mr. Rivers gets to the seat, may I ask him a question. Mr. Rivers, one thing that I think I have heard two answers that you have given on a subject here, and that is on your Section 17 regarding the board appointing and who removes that executive officer. If we establish a board of education under this which the governor will appoint those board members, they will be ratified by the senate, then they in turn will meet and they will appoint their chief executive officer. The only difference between your provision and the Hawaiian provision is that there is no approval or rejection by the governor.

The Hawaiian board of education has full reign as our board today has, but does the governor have the power under your act to remove the chief executive officer or does he have to instruct his board to do so?

V. RIVERS: Under this constitutional clause the governor would have no power of removal, but it might possibly be in the statute which set up the board, where it is right now in fact.

COGHILL: Mr. President, may I clarify my reason why I am asking that? It is because we have to have the permission of the chief executive of the board, he has to be answerable to somebody, and it is to the board that is appointed from around the state. That is the reason why I am so concerned.

V. RIVERS: I can assure you there is no intent on the part of this article that the governor should remove the principal executive officer when appointed by the board and appointed with his approval.

BARR: Mr. President, Mr. Coghill's chief concern is to keep the board of education out of politics and not have the director removed for any political reason, and I believe that we provided for that all right in this report. That was our thought, too, and of course we at the same time wanted this board of education, shall I call it, or commission, to be one of the principal departments and to be responsible to the governor under his supervision, but the governor, we assume, will leave all of the details to the commission, and we only wanted an approval of the governor on appointment of the commissioner of education, so it would keep him under the governor as one of his department heads, one of his assistants, one of his group, his administration. There was no thought of removing him or allowing him to be removed for political reasons.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: If the governor can't remove him, why must the principal executive officer then be subjected to the approval of the governor in the original case? What was the reason behind that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, the main reason behind that, Mr. Cooper, is the fact that he can't remove him and he would like to have somebody in there he can get along with and work with just as the president of any corporation would like to have people working with him and under him, the people he can get along with and work with. That is the reason for the approval of the governor. While I am on my feet, Mr. Coghill made the statement "with the approval of the senate". It is not with the approval of the senate as we have it set up. It is with the approval of the legislature in joint session, and I'll make an explanation of that also. The reason for the legislature in joint session making the approval is the senate being 20 people, and if there were say, 20 appointments to be made for different boards, they would sit down and slice it up like a piece of pie and say, "I'll appoint my man here and you appoint your man there and if the governor wants the approval of the senate, he'll have to make these appointments." Therefore we have both of them in joint session so it would be the governor's selection and not the senate's or house's selection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Section 18? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. How do you call, "No further question"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Whenever the body wishes to proceed to the amendment procedure. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, may I revert to Section 6 and ask Mr. Victor Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection you may revert to Section 6 and you may ask a question of Mr. Victor Rivers.

NERLAND: Mr. Rivers, I believe it is conceivable that such a situation as this might arise in regard to the secretary of state: in one party's primary or both parties for that matter, there may be two candidates for governor. There might possibly be one person who would be a logical choice for secretary of state and he might go to these two candidates for governor and say, "Now I have no quarrel with you or with the other man, why don't you both put me on your ticket?" That could result in the people not having the choice for the secretary of state. Does your Committee contemplate any remedy for that situation or do you think a remedy is necessary?

V. RIVERS: That could come down to whether or not we set up any method of nomination in this article. The method of nomination would doubtless control that. Now, if we select, as was discussed here, the manner of nominating by popular ballot and then the two high men go in as governor and secretary of state, that would automatically be eliminated. The number of votes would determine who was nominated. It was pointed out to us during the noon meeting that it would probably be very unwise to pinpoint in the constitutional section here a method of conducting elections such as set up that the primary shall do this or that. There might not always be a primary. There might be some time when nominating conventions will be reverted to as they are in some states. So if we pinpointed the matter of a primary in this thing, we might then pin down the type of the nominating elections we would have in the state for all time to come. It did not seem to me that we should do that in the constitution, so in direct answer to your question, it all hinges up on how the primary nominations are made as to whether that condition could occur.

NERLAND: Do you think some provision should be made some place to avoid such a complication?

V. RIVERS: The election procedure prescribed by law is the terminology used in this line, and I think it would then be left up to the legislature to make a fair and just manner of nominating these individuals so they could run on a joint ballot.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, Mr. Rivers, do you honestly think, I am referring to Section 16, that the governor of Alaska, if this three-year provision was in existence today, do you think he could fill the position of Commissioner of Health?

V. RIVERS: I might answer that by adding that in filling the position of the Commissioner of Health by a man who had been in Alaska for some 12 years at the time he was appointed -- I refer to Dr. Albrecht. Prior to that time we had Dr. Council who had been in the Territory for some 24 years, and who was our Commissioner of Health. I think that of the some 42 doctors in the Anchorage area and perhaps 30 or 40 here plus those in the Southeastern end, he would have no trouble in filling the Commissioner of Health's appointment.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Rivers, would it shake your confidence in your article if I told you that I attended a medical convention and I talked to every doctor there and there was not one of them that would take the job?

V. RIVERS: There are a number of men in different fields of medical practice, some of them are in general practice and others in specialized fields, and others in the field of public health. In this Territory of Alaska we do have some men like that available. There are a number of men who have been city health officials who are engaged in that field part time. There are other men in the medical field who are engaged in that job full time. We have men associated with different agencies of government and we have other secondary men in the Department of Health who are creating the necessary experience in the Alaska field who would be qualified for such an appointment. I for one have no fear that in the general administrative heads of these principal departments we could not find someone who both knew his business and also knew the Territory and its people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I notice that in the letter of transmittal to the President it mentions that Proposal No. 15 as being outside the terms of reference and not included in this and says it should be referred to another committee for consideration. I wondered what committee that had been referred to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What was Committee Proposal No. 15?

HERMANN: Proposal by Mr. Smith that all the provisions of the constitution would be mandatory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would they have referred it to the Ordinance Committee, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I don't remember, but our secretary has the minutes upstairs if you want it looked up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I don't think that is necessary right at this moment, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, in mentioning quasi-judicial boards in one place, don't you think mentioning that in the constitution would be sanctioning forever quasi-judicial boards, and don't you think that it is possible to solve all the problems that occasionally are solved by these quasi-judicial boards in a different manner, to split the duties between the executive and the judiciary as we have it? It is a vital question that has come up, and I wonder if the board has given it any special consideration.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Kilcher, consideration was given to the different types of boards, regulatory, administrative, and quasi-judicial. There seems among some of the delegates to be considerable opposition, or rather I should say, question as to the interpretation of the term "quasi-judicial", and it seems to be a point of some controversy. If that field of boards could be covered by another equally expressive term or more expressive term, I feel that possibly it should be, but in the lack of any other such term for that group of boards we felt that this one did cover it, "quasi-judicial".

KILCHER: Since "quasi-judicial" seems to have a fairly concise connotation, has the question come up whether they are desirable or not, and if they possibly were not desirable, if they could be prohibited in the constitution?

V. RIVERS: Well, there is nothing here that says any board, regulatory, quasi-judicial, or administrative must be established. It merely creates the authority for the legislature and defines the certain restrictions if such boards are established by law, so we make nothing mandatory in regard to establishment of quasi-judicial boards. That would be up to the legislature in making the law.

POULSEN: I move for a 15-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen moves that the Convention stand at recess until 3:50. If there is no objection, the Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We now have before us Committee Proposal No. 10a in second reading and open to amendment. We will start with Section 1 for the purposes of amendment. Are there amendments to Section 1? Does anyone have an amendment to propose for Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 10a? Section 2? Are there amendments to be proposed to Section 2? Mr. White.

WHITE: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may present your amendment, Mr. White.

WHITE: I think maybe I had better present it in two parts.

V. RIVERS: Before you take up that amendment, there are two minor committee amendments which I mentioned in the discussion. I would like to bring them to the attention of the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chairman of the Committee asks that the committee amendments be considered first. If there is no objection that is the manner in which we will proceed. The Sergeant at Arms will please bring the amendments forward. The Chief Clerk will please read the first proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 11, place a period after the word 'governor' and strike the balance of the section."

BUCKALEW: Please read it again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 11, place a period after the word 'governor' and strike the balance of the section."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I will move and ask unanimous consent and I might say that that strikes all of the matter in relation to the solution of contested elections or tie votes. As I stated in the discussion, the intent of that motion was that Style and Drafting would include under suffrage and elections a general clause that would cover the matter of settling contested elections or tie votes, so we accede to this amendment on that grounds. I ask unanimous consent, and move the adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to bring a point of order. I don't think Style and Drafting has the authority to put anything into the constitution, Mr. President.

V. RIVERS: We discussed that and suffrage and elections is in second reading, but it will not come up for final vote, and it was brought out in Committee that if we desire to discuss this amendment into it at that time we would have to do so at a two-thirds majority under suspension of the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to adoption of the proposed amendment? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to be offered by the Committee? The Chief Clerk may please read the amendment as offered by Mr. White.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 1, lines 4 and 5, strike the words 'and shall have been for at least twenty years'."

WHITE: I move the adoption of the amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 1, lines 4 and 5, strike the words 'and shall have been for at least twenty years'."

WHITE: Mr. President, I don't feel it is a terribly important matter. I point out to begin with that the President of the United States has only to be a citizen of the United States for 14 years to qualify, so I did feel this was a little high.

McCUTCHEON: He has to be born in the United States.

WHITE: I beg your pardon. I feel we should set up as few barriers as possible throughout this constitution to service the people of the State of Alaska and that citizenship in the United States for a number of years is not a very necessary qualification for a governor of the State of Alaska. I feel he would be subject to election by the people of the state, and that in reference to citizenship in the United States, his qualifications should be obvious or not obvious. I don't think it has much bearing on whether or not he would make a good governor for the State of Alaska -- a resident of the state and some minimum residence requirement yes, but I see no reason for the 20 years as a citizen of the United States.

McNEALY: Point of inquiry, do we have anything before us?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have the amendment as proposed by Mr. White. The Chair would like to inquire if the Chair may, now in the discussion that was held here previously, there is a difference between a citizen of the United States and a citizen of the state. It might be well if we did get together on it.

V. RIVERS: We had some discussion on that and I read an article from the United States Constitution handbook on it. There is some difference based generally upon the residency as was stated in there and the Committee discussed whether or not to include the words "a citizen of this state" and we did not elect to do so. However, we believe it will be moved on the floor and discussed further by one of the delegates.

WHITE: Mr. President, I meant to add that 27 states have no number of years specified as a United States citizen for their governors, only two have as much as 20 years, and the others range on down to two years, but 27 states specify no period of years.

LONDGORG: Mr. President, I believe one of the reasons for the Committee putting this in is the fact of our isolation from the United States, and the fact that a person could come directly over here from another country, and it might add to their familiarity with the American way of government if they had that requirement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I want to recall to all of you that the Chairman of our Committee said that any member of the Committee who did not agree might feel perfectly free to express himself on the floor. This is a provision that I was opposed to right from the beginning because I never felt that anyone should have had to take out citizenship papers 20 years ago in order to be eligible to be governor of the State of Alaska. There are people who might come from Canada who are very familiar with us and our language and so on, and if they have lived in Alaska for seven years, I don't see why we should have to put in this requirement, personally.

FISCHER: Mr. President, the only thing I'd like to say is that I really don't think we will ever have a governor who has not been a United States citizen for 20 years, probably 30 or 40 years. I am opposed to this kind of provision because I don't think it is needed and in any case it is up to the people of Alaska, voting to express their preference whether they want a person who they feel is qualified, whether he has been a citizen for 19 years or 20 years or 50 years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question? Is it not true in the early history of the Territory there was a governor who was not a citizen of the United States?

V. RIVERS: Yes, we had a governor of Alaska who was not a citizen of the United States, a Governor Strong, a Canadian citizen. He was appointed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: That was the point that I want to establish -- Alaskans have no control over that situation.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I will yield to anyone who wants to discuss it further. I'd like to make a few remarks in closing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: My principal objection to this provision is that it looks like it's admission against entrance. It would appear that the people of Alaska ought to be directed in their selection, like we would not have enough sense to select someone who would know what was going on. You would think there would be danger of electing some foreigner for example. I think there is no reason at all for it because the people are going to vote and they are going to use their own good judgment. I think it is an unreasonable restriction and meaningless.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I agree that the people probably would not elect a man who was not a citizen or even one who had been here only a short time, but language such as this would keep him from filing and confusing the issue and taking votes away from another candidate. Now I believe that the highest position in our state government, as an elector I should want a man of great ability there, but I also would want a man who would represent us, we citizens of the United States and the State of Alaska, so I believe that it is also an honorary position, and it seems to me he should have been a citizen for some time, I wouldn't say 20 years, but I would say for some time.

WHITE: If I may answer two things that have been said. Two speakers have referred to the fact that the candidate for governor should be a citizen. I want to point out the language does not strike the qualification that he must be a citizen, it only strikes the words "twenty years".

V. RIVERS: It seems to me an amendment of this kind expresses a certain desire on the part of some members to be and appear to be quite liberal, and I don't entirely disagree with that field of thinking. However, the purpose of taking out citizenship or having citizenship for a certain length of time is, as I see it, merely to insure certain things, to insure that the individual in question is familiar with our philosophy, familiar with and approves of our institutions and is familiar and advocates our type of ideology. It seems to me that it's basic that the very act of taking out the citizenship paper means little except that he has been here that long and he has become acquainted with things which we stand for, the things we believe in, and the things we want to continue in our form of government. It is a very mild form of insurance I believe in having such a clause that we do provide and insure certain things in certain backgrounds in the persons whom we allow to file for public office, where he is directing the affairs of our people and the government of our people. I would not say that 20 years is an ideal number, or anything wrong with it. I think in 20 years the average person could become quite well-acquainted with American institutions and American ideals. It seems to me that maybe ten years would cover that period of time, but to strike the clause altogether does not appear to me to be consistent with the things that we believe in and that we stand for and want in our government and the people who run it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. Mr. Rivers yielded a little bit ago to permit others who had something to say, so that he could close the argument.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers did not make the motion.

V. RIVERS: I made a mistake. I was not the mover.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I had intended to enter this argument honestly, but I have some figures here that the delegates should well consider before they vote, so they can vote intelligently. Please, will the Clerk first read the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, page 1, lines 4 and 5, strike the words 'and shall have been for at least twenty years'."

KILCHER: Mr. President, I had, without conferring with Mr. White, an identical amendment, that is, almost identical. I did not strike "and shall have been" which would have left it seven years a resident. If you don't strike "and shall have been", it would leave seven years of residence citizenship. However, I am not sure whether I should introduce an amendment to Mr. White's amendment. The argument would be the same, so I think I'll argue in favor of his amendment, and if it fails, I will bring this up later. A man that becomes a citizen of the United States in Alaska as a rule has been in this territory, state or country more than five years. Only if he marries a citizen is it three years. It is more than five years, and often a man, even if he comes directly to Alaska from overseas, be it Canada, England or another part of Europe, I don't think it is a detriment that he has not been in the United States before. I think Alaska is as good, possibly a better place than many of the states, to get acquainted with the philosophy that Mr. Rivers has mentioned awhile ago of American government and the American way of life. I think it applies to me. If you consider that a man comes here in the first place, if he comes to Alaska directly or the states it indicates that he has a liking and a knowledge of the country before he gets here, and he senses an affinity, and the fact that he has been here five years and it still implies that he has been a resident of Alaska seven years, so he certainly has been in Alaska seven years. I think the man certainly should not be barred from becoming governor if he is so capable to climb the political ladder to a point where he is approved by the parties, he should also be given a chance to be approved by the people and chosen, if the people see fit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 29 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Stewart, Sundborg, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 25 - Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cross, H. Fischer, Harris, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland,

Nolan, Peratrovich, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 29 yeas, 25 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the table, I think. I misunderstood -- I thought the Committee would put the amendment in, my amendment which I will make orally: Section 2, line 3; after the word "be" insert the words "a citizen of this state". I so move, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson moves and asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be adopted.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, in the propounding of questions this morning, the Chairman, Mr. Victor Rivers and his Committee, and also in talking to Delegate Nordale, I had understood that the Committee itself was going to put in that amendment along with the committee amendments, but I submit, as Mr. Rivers read this morning from the book on the Constitution, that there is a dual citizenship; a person living today in Alaska -- we are not citizens of Alaska -- we are residents of Alaska and citizens of the United States. When we become a state, we will be citizens of Alaska; we will also be citizens of the United States. A citizen of a state necessarily must be a citizen of the United States, but a citizen of the United States does not necessarily have to be a citizen of any particular state, and that is the very reason as I mentioned this morning why we have the provision for the diversity of citizenship suits in the federal district court. Some years ago I brought a suit in the federal district court in Portland, Oregon, for a resident of Alaska who was a trustee in bankruptcy. My opponent challenged the jurisdiction of my suit on that very ground but fortunately he was trustee of a Washington corporation. Therefore, the court held that I was entitled to bring the suit, because there was a diversity of citizenship, in the federal district court of Portland, Oregon. A person might reside in Alaska for 10, 15, or 20 years and never become a citizen of Alaska. They can still retain their citizenship in Iowa, Nebraska, Washington, or wherever they come from. Citizenship is required when you commence to participate in those things that citizens become. It is true, taking up your residency and exercising those rights such as the right of suffrage makes you a citizen of the State of Alaska, and I submit, it is very important that we have the governor specifically qualified as a citizen of our new state, and I hope that the amendment carries.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, if I have it right, the proposed language is placed after "shall be" in line 3. I would like to ask Mr. Robertson a question then if I may. I am wondering why it is placed at that point, Mr. Robertson, rather than in line 5 after the "United States". Is there any reason for it?

ROBERTSON: There would not be now, Mr. Davis, since Mr. White's motion carried. It could be inserted just as well after "a citizen of the United States and of this state".

DAVIS: I am wondering if it would not read better if you would move it down to that place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment and then submit it again?

ROBERTSON: I move that I withdraw the amendment and add it to line 5 by deleting the comma, and adding the words "and of this state".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson asks unanimous consent that his original proposed amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Now he has moved that the proposed amendment be inserted after the words "United States" in line 5.

ROBERTSON: Just the words "and of this state".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The words "and of this state" be added. Is there a second to the motion?

TAYLOR: I second the motion and ask unanimous consent.

LEE: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: As I understand it, Mr. Robertson intends that the man must show three things -- that he is a citizen of the United States, a citizen of Alaska, and also a resident of Alaska. Is that right?

ROBERTSON: Yes.

AWES: Of course, when you get in this question of residence, it is one of the most complicated problems in the law, but I think used in this way that residence would be interpreted by the courts to being domiciled in the state. I think that is practically the same as being a citizen. I think the language is unnecessary.

ROBERTSON: I am unable to accept Miss Awes' theory that any court has held that domicile constitutes citizenship. It is true generally that citizens are domiciled in the state wherein they are citizens, but I submit that neither residence nor domicile makes you a citizen, you have to go further than that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: May I address a question to Mr. Robertson?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Lee.

LEE: My objection is based upon this fact that I have the Constitution of the State of Hawaii here and the Constitution of New Jersey, two of the most modern state constitutions, and each of these have language identical to that used in the original article proposed by the Committee. If it is so important, could you explain to me why they left it out in these two instances?

ROBERTSON: I can't explain that to you, Mr. Lee. I don't know why that is. It seems to me that it is a great mistake to omit it. In the Constitution of Hawaii it may not have occurred to them.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I can answer the question for Hawaii. Hawaii says that in order to be a qualified voter you have to be a citizen of the United States. It says in order to be governor you must be a qualified voter, so in Hawaii you must be a citizen in order to be a voter. Wait, I am mistaken; I have that on United States citizenship. I withdraw that.

AWES: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Robertson a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Miss Awes.

AWES: It is simple to prove you are a citizen of the United States, you are either born in this country or you have a piece of paper. How do you prove you are a citizen of the state if someone challenges you on that point?

ROBERTSON: You become a citizen of a particular state when you begin to exercise the rights to citizenship. For instance, voting -- that is a right of citizenship. Of course, you might never vote and you might still be able to maintain citizenship, but residence alone does not necessarily make you a citizen, and the only qualification here as to your relationship to the State of Alaska is being a resident of the State of Alaska, that is not necessarily as a citizen of the State of Alaska.

AWES: I think our article on voting, suffrage and elections, says that in order to qualify as a voter you shall be a resident. It seems to me only confusing to drag in another term.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: I know of a number of people myself that have lived in the Territory for five, six, or seven years and have always claimed their residence in the state from which they came. They have so signed citizenship and so signed papers to that effect. That is the reason I thought it should be in there. I know of a number of men who were in the Signal Corps the same way, they have always claimed their citizenship elsewhere while living in the Territory five, six, or seven years.

V. FISCHER: May we have a two-minute recess, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair was wondering if it might be wise in this instance to save time to appoint a subcommittee consisting of the Chairman of the Committee, Mr. Victor Rivers, Mr. Robertson, and Mr. McLaughlin to see if they can resolve this question as to whether or not the word "resident" adequately covers this problem.

ROBERTSON: I will eliminate all the delay. I will withdraw with unanimous consent, I will withdraw my suggested amendment.

V. RIVERS: I will object for a minute. I will explain my objection. The way we now have it, I understand that if the "citizen of the state" clause goes in, the "citizen of the state" carries along with it the "citizenship of the United States for seven years", as I interpret this. As we now have it with the 20 year citizenship of the United States stricken, an individual could come into the Territory of Alaska, take up residence and in five years receive papers and two years later file for the governorship of Alaska. I don't say that would happen, I say it could happen, so I believe that if this seven-year clause goes in the citizenship of the state naturally requires that he also be a citizen of the United States. For that reason alone, to defeat the possibility I have just mentioned, I would probably favor the insertion of this "seven years a citizen of this state" because that would carry along with it the seven-year automatic clause of United States citizenship.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: It does not say anything about seven-year citizenship in the state under the proposed amendment. The proposed amendment is at the end of line 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I would move the adoption of an amendment providing for seven years as a citizen of the United States. The amendment is on the desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson had asked unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection?

HELLENTHAL: I object.

V. RIVERS: I will withdraw my objection.

HELLENTHAL: I object and move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I will state the reason of my withdrawing. During the recess Miss Awes showed me that amendment which is in the Constitution, the Fourteenth Amendment, which on quick reading of it indicates to me that a citizen of the United States becomes a citizen of the state wherein he resides, so apparently it is already covered if he is a citizen of the United States and resides here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there still objection to Mr. Robertson's unanimous consent request?

HELLENTHAL: As a point of information, I have checked the New Jersey Constitution and the Hawaii Constitution, and in the New Jersey Constitution in Section 1, Roman numeral I, paragraph 3, refers to "any citizen and resident of this state". The Hawaii Constitution, in Section 7 of the transitional provisions, refer to "requirements as to residence, citizenship or other status or qualifications in or under the state", so both of them, Hawaii to perhaps a lesser degree, but both of these state constitutions do recognize state citizenship, and recognition should be given to it in our constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. We have before us Mr. Robertson's proposed motion. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 35 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sweeney, Wien.

Nays: 19 - Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Lee, McLaughlin, Marston, Nerland, Poulsen, Riley, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 35 yeas, 19 nays and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I think the question before the body was whether he should be allowed to withdraw the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question was, "Shall the amendment be adopted?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: What was the vote on that?

CHIEF CLERK: 35 yeas, 19 nays and one absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson asked unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Mr. Hellenthal objected and there was no motion made by Mr. Robertson or anyone else to withdraw the amendment. The Chair stated that the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I now offer my amendment to Section 2.

WHITE: Point of order. My original amendment was all on one page. I asked when I presented it that it be presented in two parts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, you are correct. At the time, some time ago when you offered your amendment you did state that, when you offered your first amendment. That is correct. Mr. Taylor, the Chair would have to adhere to the point of order raised by Mr. White. The Chief Clerk may read the other part of the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, line 6, page 1, strike the word 'seven' and insert in lieu thereof the word 'five'."

WHITE: I move the adoption of the amendment.

COGHILL: I object.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I doubt if this amendment -- I think it is in conflict with the section, after Mr. Robertson's amendment has passed, I think it is in conflict.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is not, no.

KILCHER: How can you be a citizen of a state for seven years and not be a resident?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no other seven years mentioned in this section.

KILCHER: But doesn't Mr. Robertson's amendment state "citizen of the state"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it does not. There is no point of order there. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I am going to rise to the point of order. I believe I made the first motion for the passage of the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What motion, Mr. Taylor? I mean what amendment?

TAYLOR: The amendment to provide for seven years as a citizen of the United States had nothing to do with Mr. White's and I moved the adoption of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, no other amendment has been read. Mr. White offered an amendment and at the time that he offered the amendment he said it was in two parts, and he would like to have the first part of the amendment acted upon first. In the meantime there was considerable discussion on Mr. White's amendment, and the Chair forgot Mr. White made that request. Mr. Robertson then offered an amendment; the Chair recognized Mr.

Robertson for that amendment, had it read and discussed, forgetting all the time that Mr. White had already offered his amendment and had this divided question before us.

TAYLOR: May I put in my order to be next on the list?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will try to get you in next, Mr. Taylor. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, this follows the first part of the amendment. I should logically argue that no residency be required, but in this case I feel that Mr. Rivers and others have given very good reasons why a candidate for governor of the state should have some residence. I merely think it ill behooves us in this great future state to put the barriers any higher than is necessary. The only difference I have is with the figure. I would go on to point out that in the legislative article we set a residence requirement of one year for representatives and residence requirement of three years for senators and it seems to me logical that the figure "five" should follow in sort of an arithmetic progression for the residence requirement for governor, and that it would satisfy both the requirement and the thought that our barriers should not be any higher than necessary. If a person is to be qualified from the point of view of knowledge and experience in Alaska in seven years he probably wouldn't even try.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: May we have the entire section read so we will know what we are voting on?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read Section 2 as it would appear if this proposed amendment were adopted?

CHIEF CLERK: "The governor shall be not less than thirty years of age, a citizen of the United States and of this state, and a resident of this state five years next preceding his election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I just want to point out that if this is adopted, a person who then comes into the Territory of Alaska, resides here for five years without citizenship in the United States, as I interpreted the last amendment we adopted, or as Mr. Davis interpreted it, you could live in the Territory of Alaska five years, take out your full papers and the day after you got them you would then be eligible, I say it might not happen but then again it could, you would then be eligible to file for governor of the State of Alaska as I interpret the present situation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: One brief word on this. We considered the various residential requirements, some of the states do not have them, but I think there is a lot of difference from moving from one state, Nebraska to Iowa or places like that, than in coming up to Alaska. We have an entirely different situation up here, and I don't think we should take lightly the thought of having the governor be up here a little while before he files for election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: There seems to be quite a movement to allow newcomers to come up here and take over our highest office. This is the land of opportunity. We welcome new people, new blood, and new money up here, but we must remember that the governorship is our highest office and a man should be entitled to it not only by ability but by his sympathy with our aims and ideals and his acquaintanceship with our problems here in Alaska. Let's let these new people come up here and give them good jobs and give them opportunities to make money, and then after they have some experience, let them take over some of our highest positions, but the governorship is a reward to be given, a reward to be earned, and it seems to me it should go to an Alaskan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: May I hear Mr. Taylor's coming amendment? I think it has bearing on this question. I also think that five years is not enough for residence and citizenship for this high position. I would like to hear his amendment. I think it would have bearing on the situation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to having Mr. Taylor's amendment read?

COOPER: I object. We have an amendment before us, we've heard the argument, if there is another amendment, let it take its order. I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to say that I have an amendment here which provides for seven-years-United States citizenship before a person can file for election of the governor of the State of Alaska, and I have also got my bid in for high priority in the introduction of an amendment, and I hope to have it considered.

2062

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Point of order. Mr. Cooper moved the previous question.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: It wasn't seconded.

BUCKALEW: I will second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There has been business that has transpired. There is no motion for the previous question.

COGHILL: I move the previous question.

BUCKALEW: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the previous question is ordered. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Taylor, your amendment will be read at this time. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, line 4, page 1, after the comma insert the following: 'and shall have been for at least seven years a citizen of the United States'."

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

McCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 4, page 1, after the comma insert the following: 'and shall have been for at least seven years a citizen of the United States'." Part of that is already in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What words were deleted previously?

CHIEF CLERK: We deleted before "and shall have been for at least 20 years".

PRESIDENT EGAN: How would the wording interfere with what we have there already?

CHIEF CLERK: It says "a citizen of the United States" twice.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask that that part of your proposed amendment be deleted, Mr. Taylor? Those words were still in there.

TAYLOR: Then I will ask "and shall have been for at least seven years". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that that become a part of your amendment, the deletion of those words? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the deletion of the words "a citizen of the United States" are deleted from the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I address a question to Mr. Taylor. Is it your intent that we now have the following three qualifications: that a governor be a citizen of the United States for seven years, a citizen of Alaska for seven years, and a resident of Alaska for seven years?

TAYLOR: That is right.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I want to say a word on this in view of the fact that I was one of those on our Committee that favored the residency clause and that citizenship clause both. I call to mind that at the end of World War II there was a great deal of talk of bringing into Alaska a large number of deported persons. At that time there was considerable discussion of locating 30,000 or 40,000 of those people in the Alaska area. Under the clause the way it now stands, if we had a large group of people come into our unoccupied areas, those people could take out their citizenship papers in five years and two years later would be eligible to run for governor of Alaska and with a large group of their own people with them might well stand a very good chance of being elected. For that reason I very much favor this seven-year clause as a substitute for the one that was stricken.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adopting of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I would like to call attention to something. Do you remember when we adopted Mr. Robertson's amendment it was originally to have been placed after "shall be" and then because that line was deleted it was placed down there after the words "United States", so we have actually changed the whole concept of thinking, it seems to me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: How would it read now? Would the Chief Clerk please read the section as it appears now.

CHIEF CLERK: "The governor shall be not less than thirty years of age and shall have been for at least seven years a citizen of the United States and of this state and a resident of this state seven years next preceding his election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is in there properly. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, if we become a state right away quick, do you have to wait five years to be a citizen of this State of Alaska before we can run for governor? Who is going to be eligible for governor? Do we have to wait seven years to have a governor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I believe that in the transitory provisions there will be an article which provides that residence in the Territory of Alaska shall count toward residence of the State of Alaska, so I don't think we need to worry about that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I predict that this clause will cause more litigation than any other clause in the constitution, because I don't think you are ever going to get a governor elected because the transitory measures can't cure this dual citizenship. We can't go back and create by transitory measures anything that does not exist, and we don't have dual citizenship here in Alaska.

TAYLOR: Point of order. There is nothing before the house.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Taylor.

BUCKALEW: I just want to say we really goofed, that is all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 2? If not, are there amendments to Section 3? To Section 4?

CHIEF CLERK: Wait a minute. What about this amendment of yours, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: No, I don't want it.

2065

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg's amendment to Section 3 will be read at this time. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, line 9, strike the sentence beginning 'The person' and ending on line 11."

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the sentence beginning on line 9 of Section 3, beginning 'The person' and ending on line 11."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Strike the sentence?

SUNDBORG: The sentence says "The person receiving the greatest number of votes shall be the governor." I ask unanimous consent.

NORDALE: I object.

SUNDBORG: I so move.

AWES: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I submit that the language as we now have it, if it means anything, it means that the person running at that election who gets the greatest number of votes, no matter what he is running for, shall be the governor. If it does not mean that, it is unnecessary to have it in there because the sentence ahead of it says, "The governor shall be elected by the qualified voters of the state." If he is going to be elected by the qualified voters, obviously it follows that the man getting the most votes for that office is elected and I don't think we want to say that the person receiving the greatest number of votes shall be the governor. It might be the candidate for the United States Senate or it might be one of the legislators or something. I think it is meaningless. I stand corrected if there is a meaning to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I would just like to say that if you want to say "the candidate for governor" I would have no objection, but is it not possible if you leave this to the legislature they could say that the candidate receiving a majority of the votes cast, and it is conceivable that there may be three tickets in the field for governor at some future time, and why allow the possibility of requiring a majority of the votes cast to elect the governor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, in reading this Hawaiian report a little while ago, I'd have trouble finding this same article right now, but it did state that in some of the different states there are different methods of selecting the governor: some say that a majority of the votes cast will select the governor; others state that the highest number of votes shall select the governor, and in case there are more than two candidates that complicates the question, and this solves it right here, I mean the committee report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Could I have the privilege of the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Buckalew, if there is no objection.

(Mr. Buckalew at this time spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, point of order. When the matter was voted here that the recognition of state citizenship be made, there was no requirement at that time of seven years' citizenship in the United States. The amendment that was later offered pointed solely to the one subject, seven years' citizenship in the United States, and it did not qualify the prior action, and the prior action was merely a recognition of state citizenship with no year requirement whatsoever, so the point is ill-taken.

V. FISCHER: The same point of order. I specifically got up and asked Mr. Warren Taylor did he mean seven years' United States citizenship, seven years' Alaska citizenship, and seven years an Alaska resident, and he said "yes".

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Taylor was mistaken.

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. Mr. Buckalew rose on a point of personal privilege and these other people are speaking without a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point is well taken, Mr. McCutcheon. Are there amendments to Section 3? Are there amendments to Section 4? To Section 5? Are there amendments to Sections 4 or 5? If not, are there any amendments to Section 6? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have an amendment to offer, Mr. President, and would like it read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 6."

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

HELLENTHAL: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Mr. President, I would like to hear some discussion on the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I offered this amendment for this reason. Here is my thinking on this problem. The man that is going to run for governor is going to have to make a deal with somebody to come along as secretary of state, and I don't think that he is going to be able to get anybody that will have the qualifications to take over the position in the event he dies. It will be one of these deals where he will have to take somebody from another area of the state, hoping that maybe he can maybe pick up a few votes by carrying this individual along, and I don't think that even though the man that is running for governor would try to select somebody who would be qualified, I don't think he would get anybody that would have the qualifications to take this particular job. Now, this particular job, I don't care what you say about it here in the further articles, is going to be an unimportant job, and you are not going to get anybody with any ability to take that job, and I just think that the whole idea of the succession falling on this individual is ill-advised, and I think that the succession should fall on the president of the senate or the speaker of the house, and I believe that if something happened to the governor we are going to end up with a real "nincompoo". I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, it seems to me that some of the discussion could be improved as to quality and the use of words. However, I want to say that Mr. Buckalew's opinion was not the opinion of the majority of the Committee as he has so moved by this amendment and as you can see by our proposal. Now, the question at stake is just how strong do you want the strong executive? Do you want the absolute one-headed form of government with one single elected official at the head of it, or do you want a certain amount of additional elected representatives put there by the vote of the people? We had a lot of discussion on that in the Committee. The ideal of the strong executive is the absolute executive, but there again if you will look back at our founding fathers with absolutism ruling, they had a great many problems and a great many difficulties. So for that reason they diffused all the powers of state down through many elected officials. They got a great deal of democracy out of that process but they didn't get much efficiency. Now we are trying to arrive at a situation where we get both a fair amount of democracy and a fair amount of efficiency. The question is to decide how strong do you want the strong executive? Do you want somebody also being groomed in the process of administrative government heads, such as this secretary of state who can succeed to the governorship, who will be qualified by experience, and if he does a good job will probably be eligible from the voters' point of view to become governor? Many people in this body think we should have more than two elected officials; some think we should have three or four. There is a good question there as to how many the people would like to have, but I believe that every time you start centralizing in the form of appointive power in the hands of one person, you take something away from the essential idea and principle of democracy. We approved of this compromise in Committee, showing two elected officials. I know there were two other proposals by a member of the Committee, asking for two more elected officials. They were submitted back to the floor. I presume there will be some further discussion and some further amendments in regard to the introduction of bills for elective officials. If you adopt the motion submitted by Mr. Buckalew, you go along with the intent of the absolute executive. I believe that there should be somebody else, second in command and elected by all of the people, who could take over the succession, and who would in the same process be training himself and becoming eligible to succeed the chief executive by election of the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: This amendment of Mr. Buckalew's is designed to do exactly what this section is designed to do, to eliminate a figurehead who receives a high salary and does nothing. Generally, most states have a lieutenant governor and he is a figurehead. Some of them have a secretary of state. The secretary of state traditionally is a keeper of records; most of them have an administrative executive who is the work horse and does all of the work. Now the Committee, we proposed a secretary of state as a governor's assistant, a governor in training or a general manager of the state you might call him, and we thought that he should have the duties of all three of those people -- lieutenant governor, secretary of state, and administrative executive. Naturally the governor, in casting about for someone to run for him as secretary of state, would necessarily want to pick the very best man available, a man of ability and a man who would go along with his policies. Now, if you consider that a secretary of state is the same as we have in some other states, then it is a relatively unimportant position, but here we give him all of the duties prescribed by the legislature and prescribed by the governor, and eliminate the lieutenant governor. We want a strong man in that position, and that is what we provided for, and we figure that we should have a strong man there. In case he should succeed the governor, he would then be a man of experience and be well acquainted with the former governor's policies and programs, and I don't think that Mr. Buckalew's amendment would improve it at all. It would tend to do away with what he is trying to do in his amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question? As I understand your argument, you said that the effect of adopting Mr. Buckalew's amendment would be to give us the absolute executive, in principle?

V. RIVERS: You would have one single elected executive with all the appointive powers in the executive branch of government. I would consider that almost an absolute power.

AWES: I don't quite follow that argument because, as I understand it, the purpose of electing a secretary of state is to have someone who will be in line to follow as governor if something should happen to the governor, but I think Mr. Buckalew's idea is to later submit an amendment that rather than the secretary of state, that the speaker of the house or president of the senate would rather succeed, and they are elective officers, also.

V. RIVERS: I would answer that by saying, Mr. President, that if you adopt this particular amendment of Mr. Buckalew's, you had better seriously consider the balance of the whole proposal, because there is substantially little left. I don't think that if he intended to submit additional amendments to reconstitute this committee proposal, that we should vote this out until we find out how he is going to reconstitute it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I hesitate to talk on this because I think this is a wonderful enactment, and this is the only amendment that I have to offer to the entire matter, but I think it is basic. Now, therefore, I should like the indulgence of the delegates. Now, at the outset I favor a strong executive, never an absolute executive, and I don't think that the amendment would call for an absolute executive. I favor that the attorney general be appointed, that all other department heads be appointed, and I have no other amendment to offer. I do not intend to follow this up, to use this as a play to get the attorney general elected, no. I believe in a strong executive. Now, this proposed proposal has many implications. Mr. Buckalew used the word "deal" several times, and the political implications are not encouraging in this proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you mean in this section?

HELLENTHAL: In the committee section, yes. I dispute the fact that the secretary of state would be elected by the people, which was stressed. It would not be exactly by the people. It would be a package deal. You would have to take him along with the governor, kind of a "buddy" system in the state, and the people would have nothing to do other than to elect their delegates at a caucus to the political convention, which would choose the "buddy", and I don't think that is very good. I don't think that is very good at all. Another point is this: It is a unique plan. Only one state in the entire United States seems to favor this system. Now, seven or eight, it is true, elect their secretary of state, but the "buddy" system is only found in one state. Now, why not just simply, and I don't think language is even necessary in the constitution, why don't we just let our governor hire someone to help him and fire him when he does not want him. Let him hire such other administrative assistants as he wants. What is wrong with that? It is conceivable that these pals might split up some time, that has happened before in politics, and go in different directions. Then where would we be? I don't particularly like this amendment, rather this section, and I don't think the alternative is despotism. I think that if we permit the governor to hire his assistants that we will secure efficiency; we will eliminate a tendency towards a rather undesirable political scheming process, and I think that we will bring about much better government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who has not been heard who wishes to be heard? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Being on the Committee that helped devise this plan, that we are now working over, we took quite a few things into consideration before adopting this particular plan. In the first place, under our apportionment article, which we knew something of before we adopted this plan, there has to be some succession.

If the succession does not go to the secretary of state, if you make it a succession directly to the president of the senate, the president of the senate is going to be elected possibly from one small senatorial district representing a very small majority of the total voters of Alaska. That will be your man who is going into your governor's office in case of the death of the governor, or the absence of the governor. The plan we have devised is this: That there is a man in training for the governor's position at any time, regardless of whether he ever takes the position or not, he is there when the governor is absent, he knows what the governor has been doing and he knows how to carry on. He steps into the governor's shoes when the governor is either called out of the state, is absent for physical disability, or in case of death of the governor; he has the ability to carry on the office of the governor. I can't see that it is a political football as Mr. Hellenthal or Mr. Buckalew would have you believe. The United States has been using this system for quite awhile in the same order, except for perhaps the nomination of the primary election, which in our article we have not set any definite rules of how they are to be tied up on the ticket. That is to be done later on by the legislature. Now, if this section is stricken, as Mr. Rivers says, most of the rest of the article might as well be stricken along with it because it is built primarily around your top executive and his successor. The whole form of government that we have built up is built around the governor, the strong executive, and if you have the absence of the strong executive, you move the president of the senate up in succession, then you no longer have the man in there that knew the job that is supposed to be our top man in the State of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: Mr. Chairman, what I have to say is very brief. I just want to say that I gather from the maker of this motion and also the proponents that they have something better that they will perhaps offer later on, and I think in fairness to the people that are opposed to such an amendment, before we take a vote on it, we should have some knowledge of what they have to replace it with. I don't think it is fair for anyone to get up here and say, "I want this stricken and sometime later on I will come in with something better". I think we should know if they want to make a deletion, I think they should have the insertion ready.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I think I would just as soon rise on a point of personal privilege. We have only 15 minutes before our usual recessing time and I just would like to say that I hope this doesn't come up for a vote before we recess so that we make a hasty decision on this. I would just like to ask that we might consider that, allow this for discussion time, and give the delegates an hour and a half to think it over because this will be the basic change in the whole plan if the amendment is adopted. We have worked on this proposal and it is the committee report; however, that doesn't mean necessarily that it is the wishes of the majority but I would like to have a little more time before we put the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anyone else wish to speak other than those who have spoken? Each delegate may speak once until everyone who wishes to speak has spoken. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I am very much in favor of the suggestion. It is very difficult to discuss this whole problem without discussing what you might be in favor of doing if Section 6 were left in. So I will speak against the amendment because the amendment would strike Section 6 and I think Section 6 should stay in, with some modification. The modification I am thinking of is the matter of making it perfectly clear in there that it is possible to have a primary election at which the voters will determine what men are to go on the general election ballot as secretary of state, and so therefore in hoping that will come about, I shall have to vote against the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: It is a controversial question, but not in my mind. I would like to see it stay as it is, but I believe we could save time and solve things and take care of Mr. Londborg's suggestion if the movers of the proposal would withdraw their proposal. You can always bring it back in again. We will come back to it again, if there is any question about more time to think about the thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I feel too that this should be given a little more thought, but I would like to say this: When we started, and I think the Committee members will agree with me, we were quite pleased with New Jersey because we felt it was a modern constitution and in New Jersey the governor is the only elected official. No other official is mentioned, I believe, except for perhaps a limitation on his being removed from office or something of that sort. But feeling that perhaps there were people in Alaska who felt that they wanted to elect the lieutenant governor or the succeeding officer, we introduced this idea of having two people who would run together, and so we devised this particular system to try to keep from weakening the governor and still please the people who might want to vote for his successor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, personally I believe this is a very ill-advised amendment that is before us at this time, and the reason for that amendment seems to be based upon mere conclusion or conjecture as to what a secretary of state is going to do, what his duties are, and perhaps Mr. Buckalew's crystal ball might be a little more powerful than mine; he projects himself farther into the future and can see possibly clearer in regard to the duties of the secretary of state. But we have many, many things for a secretary of state to do. He will substitute for the governor. He will see that at the session of the legislature everything is in order for that, and under our system I think he will have a lot to do. Now the more that Mr. Buckalew was talking about this sinecure that was going to be set up, I thought he had ambitions to be the secretary of state, and then when he finally termed what he felt a man trying to fulfill this office, then I was sure of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ignore the remarks just made and state simply that I basically agree with Mr. Hurley's stand. I would hate to vote in favor of such an amendment right now. I would like to see what we can make out of it. I hope the amendment will be withdrawn so we can improve it and make sure that the people have a chance in selecting such secretary of state as we might have. I would also like to say, Mr. President, that I don't think it is right to try to scare us by saying that if we knock out the secretary of state we have nothing left. I think there is a tremendous amount to this article, as was pointed out in New Jersey, they have a single elected governor. Here we have the model constitution we keep quoting from it. That provides for a single elected governor; it provides for a good executive branch, and I don't think that we must make a sweeping statement one way or the other. Anyway, I hope Mr. Buckalew will withdraw his amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair notes that Mr. Buckalew had attempted to get the floor. The Chair will recognize him if he wishes to withdraw the motion at this time or if he wishes to just give information about any other amendment he might be going to offer if this did carry but that is all until other members who have not spoken have had their chance to speak. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, to save time I will withdraw the amendment, but because I am withdrawing it doesn't mean that I have changed my mind or have been convinced by any illogical arguments that I have heard on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew asks unanimous consent that his amendment be withdrawn at this time for possibly just a limited length of time. Is there objection? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 7 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the amendment is ordered withdrawn. Did you ask unanimous consent now that we recess until 7 o'clock, Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: Yes.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I will object for a moment. I just noticed another amendment was handed in and I would like to hear what it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

SWEENEY: I will withdraw my request for a few minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6, page 3, lines 5 and 6, strike the words 'as may be prescribed by law and'."

WHITE: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I could stand corrected, but I don't think this is hurting the Committee's proposal any. As I understand it, in talking to a couple of them, they intended that the secretary of state be more than a figurehead and they were expressing the hope that he would be given some duties to do, but as I read these words, I am afraid they go beyond that. In Section 1 it states, "The executive power of the State shall be vested in a governor." Over here we come to the man who will in effect be the lieutenant governor and we say, "The secretary of state shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law", which means the legislature, I think, could give him considerable duties that he should not have and as I said this morning, I agree with Mr. Hellenthal when he says the "buddy" system could easily come apart at the seams, and the secretary of state be given duties that would put him at odds with the governor. If I'm completely wrong, I'll withdraw my amendment, but I think this wording is dangerous.

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President, I did not hear a second for that motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seconded the motion. It was made a matter of record.

BUCKALEW: I will speak up, Mr. President. I didn't know if I was in order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I had in mind offering an identical amendment, and when the Committee announced that it invited people who had amendments in mind to meet with them, I took advantage of that invitation and they convinced me it would not be a desirable amendment. It says, "The secretary of state shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law and as may be delegated to him by the governor." It does not say "or as may be delegated to him by the governor". It was pointed out in the Committee meeting that it might be the desire of the legislature to say that the secretary of state shall be the keeper of the seal and the one who shall keep certain records and shall do the sort of thing which we now under our Territorial form of government have our Secretary of Alaska do. I think it would be proper if the legislature could do that which they could not do if we make the amendment proposed by Mr. White.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, as I see this particular amendment, if it carries, I still believe the legislature could and would have the power to delegate certain authority to the elective officers of the state as well as the appointive officers. Under our department administrative setup, we will doubtless have a number of departments such as health, welfare, education, fisheries, resources, and I can readily visualize that the legislature from time to time will have to assign certain functions to each department. Now I can readily realize and visualize that such a thing will also be true under the department of state which will be headed necessarily and naturally by the secretary of state. It does not seem to me that there is any need to strike the words as specific authority to delegate powers to them is spelled out in those words, but I believe in all the other departments under the state government that the specific authority for the legislature to delegate duties to them will also be there, and that in itself is not spelled out. The governor is their supervisor and he is directly responsible for them, but I do not believe you can prohibit the legislature from setting up and assigning certain duties to each department.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: The way the Committee has this worded, allowing the legislature to prescribe duties for the secretary of state, I believe that would prevent the "buddy" system. It would prevent a governor just carrying along a secretary of state, taking him along for the ride, prescribing no particular duties. The legislature is the body that will want the secretary of state to go to work and they can prescribe his duties.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I seem to be doing a lot of the talking. One of the reasons we called this particular official a secretary of state was that we did not want to have a lieutenant governor sitting and doing nothing. Now if you don't let the legislature prescribe something for him to do, he is going to be, in effect, a lieutenant governor, and the legislature could very well set up a department under somebody who is not called a secretary of state who would do all the work that a secretary of state normally does, and we would be right back with a lieutenant governor that most states are saddled with.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, there have been a number of the delegates who have spoken about duties of the secretary of state. I think that there can be many duties imposed upon the secretary of state by the legislature; for instance, in the State of New York and the State of Washington the secretary of state performs the duties of what the corporation commissions, and that is quite a job as a matter of fact. The duties of our own Secretary of Alaska used to carry on those duties years ago. Of course now it is carried on under the auspices of the Territorial Director of Finance, but I don't think we need worry at all about the legislature being able to find plenty of real duties to impose upon the secretary of state for his performance.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to speak? Mr. White.

WHITE: I don't want to unduly prolong this and after Mr. Rivers spoke and Mr. Sundborg, I was about to withdraw the motion, but then two other committee members got up and they, if I understood them correctly, disagreed with Mr. Rivers. Now that is the same trouble I have with this thing. If I understood Mr. Rivers correctly, he said that anything the legislature prescribed would have to be approved, in effect, by the governor; then Mr. Barr and Mrs. Nordale say that the intent of this is that the secretary of state shall not merely be a figurehead, that he shall be more than a lieutenant governor. That is the danger I see in it. If I can be convinced that the governor cannot be circumvented by the legislature in designating powers to the secretary of state, I will be perfectly happy to withdraw any amendment, but as I understand the committee members, there is disagreement between them.

V. RIVERS: I would like to explain that I did not see any divergence between the statements made by myself and Mrs. Nordale and Mr. Barr. I think you might have misunderstood me, but if I'm not clear, I'd like to make it clear that in this we gave the specific authority to the governor and the legislature to delegate duties to the secretary of state, and I for one am fully confident that he can be made effective and kept fully busy under the qualifications set up here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to have the floor? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I move that we recess until 7 o'clock.

BARR: Mr. President, I would like to answer that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, under Rule 38, which the President is going to invoke from here on out, it says, "No delegate shall speak more than twice on one question or more than once until all other delegates who desire to be heard have been heard, and the mover of the motion may have the last say." That is why, in order to expedite things and keep the business of the Convention going more orderly, we are going to adhere to the rule. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Point of information. Did not Mr. White ask a question? He was trying to resolve a discrepancy between the statements of the different members of the Committee and he asked a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, and the Chairman of the Committee answered, Mr. Barr. The Chair only wants to say before we recess, the Chair brought this up only because, before we recess he wants to make clear in the minds of the delegates that they can only have the floor once until all other delegates have been heard who wish to be heard, then they are entitled to have the floor again. If they so indicate that they wish to withdraw a motion or something of that nature they will be recognized for that purpose. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I asked unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 7:30 p.m.

SMITH: I would just like to announce that the Committee on Resources will meet at 6:15 upstairs.

NERLAND: The Finance Committee will meet immediately in the upstairs committee room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements?

V. RIVERS: The Executive Committee will meet at 6:40 upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 7:00 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to bring to the attention of the delegates that we finally have some speakers in the gallery that really work so long as the doors are closed. The windows are back in. By keeping the doors closed, our visitors can hear everything that transpires on the floor of the Convention. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President and members, I call attention to the vote on the question of being a resident of the State of Alaska. I voted on the affirmative; that was the motion proposed by Mr. Robertson, and although he tried to withdraw it, it got voted in. I now serve notice that I will move tomorrow for a reconsideration of my vote on that question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers serves notice that he will reconsider his vote on that particular amendment. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Is that the amendment that says "a citizen of the State of Alaska"?

R. RIVERS: I meant "a citizen of the State of Alaska".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, if I may direct a question to Mr. Rivers through the Chair, will Mr. Rivers have any objection to voting on it at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Ralph Rivers?

R. RIVERS: I don't want to get into that two-thirds business, a suspension, and tomorrow will just take a majority to permit it. I'd just as soon present the merits of the matter now. It will come automatically tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: We could rescind with 28 votes.

R. RIVERS: I'd rather continue on reconsideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, that's such an embarrassing provision that I think I'll move at this time to rescind our action on that particular proposal.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Is the motion to rescind good where the matter has already been given on a notice of consideration?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair on that question as to whether or not the notice to rescind can be made after a delegate has served notice of his intention to reconsider tomorrow is in order or not, the Chair is in doubt on that question. It never has arisen before, so far as I know. The Convention will be at recess for a moment.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The motion to rescind is made when the time for reconsideration has passed. I mean when you can't do anything else to come back to the question, then the motion to rescind can be made, but the motion to rescind is out of order at this time. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I believe we have before us an amendment offered by me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have Mr. White's proposed amendment before us.

WHITE: During the recess I met with the Committee and have become convinced that the powers of the executive, of the governor, cannot be usurped by allowing the legislature to prescribe certain duties for the secretary of the state; therefore, I would, with the consent of my second, ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Are there any objections? There being no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper offers an amendment to Section 6. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, Section 6, line 19: delete the second word 'the'. Line 20, change the period to a comma, strike 'He' and insert 'Who' before 'shall'. Line 21: strike the word 'the'

before the word 'election' and insert the words 'under the same'. Line 22: after the word 'law' insert 'for governor'. Insert a period after 'governor' and strike the remainder of the section through the period after 'state' on line 4, page 3."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Cooper?

COOPER: I move the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper moves for the adoption of his proposed amendment. Is there a second?

HINCKEL: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel seconds the motion.

DAVIS: I'd like to have it again a little slower.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment once more.

(The Chief Clerk then read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper, do you wish to explain what you are attempting to do?

COOPER: Mr. President, this is the way it would read: "There shall be a secretary of state who shall have the same qualifications as governor, who shall be elected at the same time and for the same term as governor and under the same election procedure prescribed by law for governor. The secretary of state shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law and as may be delegated to him by the governor." I have very little to say on this; I think the people should elect the secretary of state such as the committee has proposed, but not tied to another elective official. The best argument that I have in support of this amendment are the very words of the Chairman of the Executive Committee earlier in the day "To get a reasonable amount of democracy and a reasonable amount of efficiency," he said, "I believe this would give you the greatest amount of democracy and the greatest amount of efficiency in that the people would elect an individual." The secretary of state will be an elective official, and for that very sake, I think that he should run on the merits of his own qualifications and seek office individually, not collectively, tied to another elective official.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, may I direct a question to Mr. Cooper?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: How would you get the secretary of state and the governor to be of the same political party with this arrangement?

COOPER: In this particular instance I would assume that the secretary of state and the governor would be of the same political party, such as the case of the governor and the lieutenant governor, or of the President and the Vice President. I didn't go into the workings or the details; I have heard conversations on the floor about primary elections and that can all be ironed out, but this is merely setting up two high elective officials.

BOSWELL: The important thing seems to be here that we need a system whereby the two elective officials would be of the same political party.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion on the proposed amendment? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, if you want to abandon our plan of having to run on the same ticket you might as well leave all this other out, because the same election procedure prescribed for the governor will be the election procedure that affects all elective officers, members of the legislature, and members of commissions, and you won't necessarily get two people who are going to be in accord at all, just as we have now in the Territory -- two Republicans and two Democrats in our elective officials.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I want to make my position clear in this matter. I'm going to vote against the amendment. I don't believe in an elective secretary of state. I can see no reason for it. The only reason that I can see that the Committee provided for an elective office was to take care of the succession. Everyone around here said that if you're going to strike this section, what do you propose? My proposal was that on the death of the governor, the secretary of state would take over and would be the acting governor, and he would call the legislature together, and the legislature in joint session would select the governor to fill the unexpired term, and that way you get the best man available. And I think that the people would certainly have a voice in it, because their representatives are the ones that are going to be selecting the governor; and not only that, the major political party that was in power would probably be the party that would be able to select the governor, which would mean that the functions of the government would proceed smoothly during the rest of the term.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, it occurs to me from what Mr. Cooper has said that he isn't going to accomplish what I think he intends to accomplish by this amendment, because, if I understood him correctly, what he wanted to do was to see to it that the secretary of the state and the governor were elected together, just like the President and the Vice President of the United States. Well, it occurs to me that the proposal as it originally came out of the Committee and as it is now, before amendment, accomplishes that purpose or comes more nearly setting up the required machinery for accomplishing that purpose. For that reason I can't vote for the amendment because I like the way the Committee set it up originally, and, if Mr. Cooper's purpose is to see to it that the governor and the secretary of state are elected from the same political party, then it occurs to me that the best way to handle it is as the Committee has suggested.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I support Mr. Cooper, at least his attempted amendment. I think it accomplishes the purpose of electing two officers of the state -- a governor and a secretary of state. Now I will readily admit that it is possible to elect a governor of one political party and a lieutenant governor of another political party. I can't help but admit that I have seen it happen on occasion at other times; but I'm very concerned that the people of Alaska should be able to vote for two of their state executive officials. Now I'm not entirely sure but what I might not prefer that they be nominated in a primary election, but as has been pointed out here, we may not some day have the primary, in which case they wouldn't be so. So I think this is the next best thing. I also call your attention to a thing that has been mentioned before that, "The secretary of state shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law and as may be delegated to him by the governor." Now I am not quite so naive as to think that if the two are of separate parties, and antagonists in the political scene, that they will get along as they would if they were elected under the proposal as submitted by the Committee. But I do think that the type of people who are running for office will put the interests of the State of Alaska at least sufficiently ahead of their own problems to see that it operates. Now I have worked on a premise of a very unusual situation. I question in the national election whether we would have had such a situation had we been voting separately for President and Vice President of having elected a President from one party and a Vice President from the other, but I will admit it's possible. I think this amendment will not interfere with the wording, the practical ends sought by the proposal, admitting that if you do get that separation that it could cause some difficulty. So in that respect, in order to give the voters a chance to choose two of their executives at the polls without having, as Mr. Hellenthal speaks of it, the "buddy system, I think I shall support this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, as Chairman of the Committee on Executive, I, this evening, polled the committee members in regard to their thinking on this general subject. I do not believe I'm misstating the case when I state that all the members that I talked to, I believe all of them except the one absent, felt that we wanted to see this procedure of joint election carried on in the general election; certainly had no objection to seeing the nominations for the office be made whatever manner of primary the law should prescribe or provide. So if this amendment fails, I will ask that we insert the word "general" before the word "election" on 21 which will accomplish the purpose of individual nominations directly by the voters or in any other manner which the legislature may set up by law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. Rivers, I understood you to say in your original presentation that the reason for putting in this second officer here on the ballot was because you just felt sure that Alaska wouldn't buy the procedure of electing a governor and letting him appoint the other officers on down. Am I correct in that? That is your conviction and feeling, that we should elect a governor, but putting in the second man on the ballot was a compromise for what you consider to be the feelings of Alaskans? Am I right or wrong at that point?

V. RIVERS: I purposely steered away from stating that I did not think the voters of Alaska would buy. I said I thought the voters of Alaska would prefer to have an elective officer in the second position in the order of succession, and I thought it would give them a more democratic expression to have the two elective officers there. But I want to correct the impression that I said I did not think the voters would buy the single elective executive. I did not intend to make any such statement.

ARMSTRONG: Well, I may have been paraphrasing you, but I got the idea from it that we were shying away from that concept, and I see difficulties in a number of these proposals that have been offered, and I have been in several dilemmas in voting through this Convention on many of these things where it seems to be a thin line of expression here; and at this point I find myself weighing many of these factors and come back almost certainly in my own mind to the fact that if we would elect the top man and let him form his cabinet all the way through that we would have a stronger administration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, may I answer that question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you care to, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: That was discussed at length, and of course, it hinges upon how strong you desire to make the strong executive and what degree of succession you may desire to provide in the manner of having an elective officer elected by the Territory at large to succeed the governor. The ideal, as I pointed out, by the theorists is the strong executive, and that constitutes the single elective head. Now that was done in New Jersey. We have only that one experience there to point to so far in the operation of the theory of that strong executive. Now as you know in the State of Hawaii Constitution, which they adopted and was ratified, they had an elective lieutenant governor as well as governor. They apparently faced the same general problem and idea that we had in the matter. But the question is how strong and absolute do you want the strong executive to be? Do you want to condition and temper that somewhat, or do you desire to have this one elective official at the head of everything?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, point of information. If I, as a member of the Committee, get up to add a point to what the Chairman's explanation is, have I lost my privilege of speaking on the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, if a question is put to a member of the Committee in a direct manner and the Committee Chairman asks that another member answer the question, or something like that occurs, the Chair will not adhere that strictly to the rule, not if it is strictly in answer to a question.

BARR: But the point occurs to me in this case that Mr. Rivers did bring out, as far as I know, in answer to Mr. Armstrong's question, so I won't bring it out. I don't want to lose my place.

ARMSTRONG: I'm still unsatisfied with it, Mr. President, and I'd like more information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In answering the question, Mr. Barr, you may answer the question if you can, without losing your chance to speak.

BARR: If I'm not mistaken, Mr. Rivers didn't emphasize or bring out the point that when the governor dies or is replaced, the man who succeeds him should be an elective officer. In other words, if the governor appointed all his assistants, including the secretary of state, and the secretary of state took his place, it would be an appointive officer taking the place of the governor, and we didn't feel that this was right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to address a question, if I may, to the Chairman of the Committee or to any member of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Fischer, if there is no objection.

V. FISCHER: There is a lot of stress laid here upon the matter of succession and the tremendous importance of succession to the governorship. I would like to have some statistics, if any member has them, as to how many governors during any given period have been succeeded by anybody having died in office or otherwise vacated the office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anyone have an answer to that question as to statistics?

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, only in a general way can I answer it. There have been a number of governors succeeded from lieutenant governorship to the governorship. I think the most prominent one was the recent succession of Mr. Knight after Warren was appointed to the United States Supreme Court. That's the most prominent one that I have in mind, but there are many cases where a governor is elected to a congressional seat or a senate seat, and the lieutenant governor or the next order of succession takes his seat. I can't give the exact number.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I was not going to speak, and I thought some of the members of the Committee might bring out a point that I have been thinking of here that causes me to believe that the present article should remain as it is. Now this article, if adopted, is going to be disseminated widely throughout the Territory of Alaska. The voters of the Territory know that when they go to the polls they are going to vote for a governor and they are going to vote for a secretary of state. They know that the secretary of state in the event of a disability or death of the chief executive is going to succeed to the governor's position; and when they go to the polls they are most likely going to vote for who they think is the best man, because there is a liability and possibility that that man is going to be governor. So they are going to give possibly as much consideration to picking the secretary of state as they are going to pick the governor, the fact that he's the heir-apparent to the office of governor in the event of a casualty. Now in Oregon the governor and the lieutenant governor were both killed in an airplane crash. And what did it cause? It caused Alaska to get Douglas McKay. He happened to be the next in line, and so he succeeded to the governorship by reason of the fact that those fellows got killed. The voters didn't do that, but I think that that should be a strong consideration -- the fact that the people know they are choosing a man that might be governor in a short time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

KILCHER: Couldn't the succession problem also be solved in the interim succession if the secretary were appointed? Would the people still have the privilege? For instance, an interim succession could take place and the people would still be given the satisfaction in the constitution to elect the successor. For instance, I was just thinking that that argument would fall away that the people are not given a chance to elect two officials, in that particular case. We are talking about succession now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you care to answer that, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: There are a number of interim programs in different states. For instance, in the State of Maryland the pattern is patterned very similarly after the proposal suggested by Delegate Buckalew. There they have the assembly gather and elect a successor to the governor until the people next have a chance to vote. A number of the old state constitutions -- I should say the older state constitutions have somewhat similar provisions. A number of the other states have the provision of electing a lieutenant governor, and we have followed generally that pattern.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I'm supporting Mr. Cooper's amendment, not because I'm entirely satisfied with it, but because I feel that we would get a better secretary of state if we had one that was not merely picked by the governor-elect as a running partner. I think if we had a chance to select him ourselves in a primary election or some other way, I believe we would get a better man. I don't think that a strong man ordinarily is interested in merely running as a partner or second horse from the same stable, or something.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, it seems to me that under the provision as provided in the committee's proposal that we are apt to get a man who is eminently more qualified for the position than if we leave it to the option of anyone to file for the office. Certainly anyone who aspires to be governor is not going to pick a nonentity or someone who is obviously incapable of handling the position properly; he's going to go out and pick the best man that he can find and induce him to run for that position, because if he doesn't, he's going to have to carry some deadwood into office with him, and he's not going to risk his own candidacy by having a poor candidate to run along with him on the ticket.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. President, I'd like to support Mr. Nerland's arguments on this, and also the committee proposal. I feel that if the secretary of state and the governor both were to be picked independent of one another but by the same voting public, even then you could have a situation develop whereby the effectiveness of one could well be canceled by the other. I firmly believe that the committee proposal as compared to the amendment, has great strength and I'm going to continue to give it my support in lieu of something better.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I wish to close.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone who wishes to speak before Mr. Cooper closes? You may close, Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: A lot of emphasis has been put on the primary election. There is nothing in here that states, or in any article that I know of on this constitution floor that deals with primary elections. The primary election doesn't concern me to any great extent. I asked earlier this afternoon of a person working for this Convention -- I asked for the figures of the last general primary election. I couldn't get them, and that person couldn't get them for me. I know the figures of the last general election. They were 27,000, that was the total number of votes, 27,000 in the last general election. The last primary election the votes were considerably less. Now as I understand a primary election, as under this committee proposal, there would be so many names submitted to the public on a certain party ticket for a governor; there would also be so many names submitted for the secretary of state. The most popular vote-getter for the position of secretary of state undoubtedly would be joined with the most popular vote-getter for the position of governor. Then that ticket, in turn, would be offered to the public on a party basis. The primary election doesn't concern me. The secretary of state under my amendment could be elected the same way as this "buddy" team as it was referred to earlier in the evening. As far as succession is concerned, there has been a lot made of that on the floor. I believe that the people will be voting and putting a lot of emphasis on the secretary of state, inasmuch as he is very liable to be the successor to the governor in the event of disaster or some other form of a loss of governor. As far as the successor is concerned, in that he should be the president of the senate, I don't go along with that. The people elect that man as a senator, not a successor to the governor. They elect him for senator; if he falls into the position of being a successor to the governor, it's only after an accident. Now as far as the secretary of state, he would be O.K as a successor to the governor, automatically, if he is tied to the governor at the time of election. I picture this -- maybe I'm wrong but I don't believe so -- a popular vote-getter running for governor, and that is going to be a consideration for a man that the party puts up to be elected to the governor, he'll have to be a popular man. The man that runs with him as secretary of state will not be running on his individual qualifications. He will be running with a popular vote-getter. This vote-getter within one year or any small period of time after he takes office as governor, assuming that he is elected, can resign and run for the United States Senate or United States Representative. There are any number of things that he can resign for, so you automatically get his running mate as governor. You elected him as secretary of state, but you automatically get him as governor. The "buddy" system, as it was referred to and I have to refer to that again in the same terminology as that is what I really think it is, in my estimation could be carried a little bit further on into the senate and the house of representatives, one senator with two representatives, and elect them as a team. The people are electing the senators and the representatives individually on their own qualifications, and that's why I ask that my amendment be accepted. I want the secretary of state, who is next in line for the governorship, or would succeed the governor in the event of an accident or his removal, I want the people to be able to elect that man. I ask for your support on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Cooper be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 19 - Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Metcalf, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Rosswog, Sundborg, Sweeney, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 33 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNeas, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, Walsh.

Absent: 3 - McNealy, Robertson, VanderLeest.)

METCALF: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "yea".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf changes his vote to "yea".

CHIEF CLERK: 19 yeas, 33 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "noes" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, you may offer your amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 6: strike all of the section."

BUCKALEW: I move for its adoption, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves for the adoption of his amendment to Section 6.

AWES: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes seconds the motion. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: We find ourselves in this position, we are leaving it up to the people to rubber-stamp a "flunky" selected by the man that's running for governor; that's what we've done. There is no earthly reason for electing a governor under this plan and I think it should be defeated; and if my amendment carries -- and I trust that it will carry because I think it is a sane amendment -- I think it's the only sensible move for this body to take now. Now if this amendment carries, I propose to offer another amendment which provides that in the event of the death of the governor that the secretary of state shall be the acting governor until he can convene the legislature, and then the legislature in joint session shall elect a governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to state at this time that the Chair feels that in choosing the language in which we refer to proposals, we should attempt to keep in dignity with this body here, and that it can do nothing but create friction to use any language in argument that is out of the ordinary or that might be reflected upon any committee's consideration of any measure. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, what language were you referring to? I don't remember what I said.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, I think that the language "nincompoop" and the language "flunky" comes within that category.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, "flunky" is a common expression, and has nothing to do with the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair still feels --

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon moves the previous question.

BARR: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the previous question be ordered?" All those in favor of ordering the previous question will signify by saying "aye". Opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 23 - Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hilscher, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Sundborg, Taylor, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 29 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, Marston, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, White.

Absent: 3 - McNealy, Robertson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 23 yeas, 29 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it, and the previous question has not been ordered. Mr. McNees has been trying to get the floor. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: I was going to ask Mr. Buckalew a question, but I'll let it pass.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I'm in favor of Mr. Buckalew's motion to strike that on the theory that if we are going to have a strong executive, I believe that the executive should not be burdened with a crown prince who substantially would be dictated by the body that runs or supports the governor. Normally, that second-in-command is someone who is picked, not because of ability, but because of political considerations. He inevitably will come from a different part of the state, or appeal to that class of voters which the candidate for governor does not appeal to. It's a history of the Vice Presidency, and I suspect it would be the history here. We would not have as a successor a strong secretary of state; he would make a poor governor largely because the consideration of his selection would be political. On the other hand, I believe that the governor has a right, after election, to appoint him; I also believe in conformity. I also believe that if we are going to have an elective governor that he should appoint every member of his cabinet, and that includes the attorney general. That is, you give him the power, if you vote for him and him alone, and not on the basis of the man who is supporting him, I believe that you will get an independent strong governor. And if you give him the power to appoint all of his cabinet, then in effect what you have done, you make him run on his record, but if we are going to talk about a strong executive and then dilute the thing by permitting every other cabinet member to run, you haven't got a strong executive at all, and apparently many of the decisions that we made here prior to this have been based upon the assumption that we should have a strong executive. I will vote for Mr. Buckalew's amendment on the theory that it will make the executive strong.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, I would probably have supported Mr. Buckalew's amendment, but in view of the fact that he qualified it by saying that he would then offer another amendment convening 60 members of the legislature merely to elect his successor, to bring them from all over Alaska for one proposition, I would have to vote against the amendment. I can see where the succession could be transferred to the speaker of the house or to some other cabinet member, but certainly we ought to have enough brains to write in some line of succession without bringing 60 people from all over Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, do you wish to clarify that?

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I do wish to clarify that for the record. I don't know whether you could put any qualifications on the amendment or not, but if Mr. Nolan will vote for my amendment I offer it without qualifications.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, may I make my position clear? I'm not committed to anything but voting this down, and frankly, I think if it is voted down that automatically, without further ado, the secretary of state, as such, is an appointive official.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, being brief, I'm for the committee proposal and against Mr. Buckalew's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. President, I'd like to direct a question now that I was going to direct to Mr. Buckalew a little earlier, to Mr. McLaughlin, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may, Mr. McNees.

McNEES: In the event Section 6 is deleted under Mr. Buckalew's amendment, will we any longer have a secretary of state?

McLAUGHLIN: No, you'll not have a secretary of state, no more than you'd have anything else. They will be created by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, reading from the News Miner, 13 January, 1956: "With two-thirds of their precious time used up and seven articles still to be considered, delegates of Alaska's Constitutional Convention are in the midst of a wild rush." Where are we rushing? We're just rushing around.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, does this have to do with the subject?

MARSTON: Right on the subject, yes, sir. I think we should be going forward here. "Geronimo" here is brilliant sometimes, but I wish he'd work these amendments out a little more carefully and I think I'd go for them, but under the present condition and as slow as we're making progress, for the good of this whole Constitutional Convention, I'm going to stick by the Committee and vote "no" on this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment, as offered by Mr. Buckalew, be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 26 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Smith, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 29 - Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Johnson, King, Laws, Londborg, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh.

Absent: 4 - McNealy, Robertson, Rosswog, VanderLeest.)

DOOGAN: Mr. President, may I change my vote to "yes"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan changes his vote to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 26 yeas, 25 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: 26 yeas?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And 25 nays. So the "yeas" have it, and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think at this time I'd like to move for a 15-minute recess to get together with the Committee.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move?

BUCKALEW: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the Convention stand at recess for 15 minutes? All those in favor of standing at recess for 15 minutes will signify by saying "aye". All opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 22 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Emberg, V. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, Marston, Nolan, Poulsen, Riley, Sweeney, White, Wien.

Nays: 29 - Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Johnson, King, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - McNealy, Robertson, Rosswog, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 22 yeas, 29 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it, and the Convention will stay in session. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, inasmuch as the rest of the article needs redrafting, I move we adjourn until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

TAYLOR: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves for adjournment and is seconded by Mr. Taylor that we adjourn until 9 o'clock a.m. tomorrow. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I have a committee report if it is possible to revert to committee reports. It will take a little time to distribute the matter which I thought we'd pass out during the first recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to submitting a report before we put the motion for adjournment?

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I'd be willing to go ahead and work on this Rules Committee business and then defer making my motion until after this rules business is over.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It might be that the Convention would vote such a motion down, or pass whatever you want to do.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my motion to adjourn be withdrawn, if my second will consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers asks unanimous consent that his motion to adjourn be withdrawn.

TAYLOR: No objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Where does that put us? Does that put us back with the Rules Committee or back to Committee Proposal No. 10a?

R. RIVERS: Well, my intention being that we can go on with this rules business.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I ask that we revert to the committee reports.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the Convention revert to the report of standing committees at this time.

Is there any objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I think it might be helpful to allow the members to stand at ease for a few minutes to digest this report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the report of the Committee on Rules. Would the Chief Clerk please read the report section by section, or by Roman numerals.

CHIEF CLERK: All the way through or just one at a time?

RILEY: One at a time.

CHIEF CLERK: "I.(a) After a standing committee chairman has explained an article and questions have been answered, a recess shall be called, if necessary, during which time Delegates with amendments may consult with the standing committee if they have not previously done so in order to reconcile ideas (if possible), consolidate similar amendments, and prepare amendments in suitable form. Proposed amendments shall not be in order during the initial section by section review of proposals unless previously presented for the committee's consideration or unless this requirement is waived by the committee chairman. Long or complicated amendments shall not be in order until mimeographed. (b) After the first section by section review of the proposal, another recess will be called to enable Delegates having further amendments to consult with the committees. In the second section by section review of the proposal, amendments may be submitted directly from the floor without previous consultation with the committee."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, what is your pleasure?

RILEY: I move for the adoption of the rule as read, Roman number I.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves for the adoption of subsection (a) under Roman numeral I.

ARMSTRONG: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong seconds the motion. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: To refresh memories, I'll say that these proposed rules or modifications are in response to a request or direction of the Convention a day or two ago.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's correct. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, point of clarification. I mumbled something about Sub. (a) but I notice that Chairman Riley had both (a) and of Roman numeral I read so we are acting on both (a) and (b).

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are we acting under both? Under the Roman numeral I, it includes both (a) and (b).

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed rule be adopted by the Convention?"

SUNDBORG: Since this is in fact a modification to the amendment of our existing rules, I suggest that it require a two-thirds vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there an objection to the adoption of this first rule?

RILEY: Mr. President, in view of the fact that it represents a procedure which in a large part has evolved here the last few days, I'll ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the first rule be adopted. Is there objection?

AWES: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Miss Awes.

AWES: There is only one phrase that I object to, and that's the phrase, "...standing committee chairman has explained an article and questions have been answered..." I object to that "questions have been answered." Is it all right for me to express my views at this point?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Miss Awes.

AWES: I think that it has been worthwhile to have the committee chairman explain the article, but it seems to me that the asking of the questions sometimes takes hours, and before we get through people are asking questions that they could find out for themselves if they read the commentary. The same questions are being asked three and four times, and since this provides for a recess to hold a meeting with the committee and interested people, it would seem to me that if the committee chairman has explained the article, we would save a lot of time if we didn't have it open for question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you still object, Miss Awes? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I think I may speak for the Committee in suggesting that the Committee would be agreeable to striking offending language, without objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent that that language be stricken?

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent that that language be stricken and that the unanimous consent request for adoption be renewed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to deleting the words "and questions have been answered"? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I'm temporarily objecting from the standpoint that I thought that that was the reason why we had the time to ask the questions to be able to project the intent of the committee's thinking upon the record for reference in future data of debate on constitutional matters.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I wasn't entirely in accord with the Section I personally, and this practice that evolved recently seems to me has been a fruitful one. But I wonder if the problem that Miss Awes brought up couldn't be solved by having, instead of a recess, a lengthy recess, afterwards having the chairman explain it, and have questions and answers in a special hearing or before the daily session or after even, or something, where five or ten people will bring in their main differences and where a lot of things could be reconciled as we have done here. I think that the same thought that is embodied in Section I - - the practice of the last few days could be elaborated on and save a lot of time without needless debates and get good results. I think the Committee on Rules is on the right track, but hasn't arrived there yet.

RILEY: I don't know if that question was addressed to me necessarily.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection seems to be raised as to the deletion of those words.

RILEY: We had in mind that for the last several days we have been utilizing the morning and afternoon coffee breaks to some measure, and also the noon and dinner hours for the members of the Convention getting together with the committee on just such propositions. And as far as this language, which is stricken is concerned, I don't think that there is a mandate there that questions shall be answered. I think that our rather informal procedure the last several days has indicated that the committee members will endeavor to answer questions. Certainly, the body isn't foreclosed from asking questions under this language, and I think that possibly if we rewrite the measure here on the floor, it will take a considerable time, but if there is still objection, I'll move that it be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I'll withdraw my objection, I was just more or less --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill removes his objection. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I ask a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Is it the intent of the Rules Committee that if this rule is adopted, it shall apply tonight to any amendments that may be submitted?

RILEY: It shall what?

V. FISCHER: It shall apply to any amendments to the article currently under consideration. In other words, no more amendments will be considered, even if they have been placed on the desk of the Chief Clerk under the pending article, if we adopt this rule?

RILEY: On the pending article, I should say no. Certainly an effective time would have to be given this, and the very fact that this brings in the consideration of an article would not, in my judgment make it effective during the consideration of pending amendments now on the Clerk's desk. I do think that the body, as a whole, should state when it becomes effective though.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I haven't withdrawn my objection. Mr. Riley, another question, this last sentence in (a) "Long or Complicated amendments shall not be in order..." That means practically that amendments have been foreseen, that have been submitted to the committee or amendments that you have foreseen, but not ideas that eliminate any idea that comes up through discussion because it would entail a long complicated discussion.

RILEY: Not entirely, I would say. For one thing, you're required under this, as you suggest, to anticipate your amendment insofar as possible. That isn't always possible, of course, because so often the direction of thinking will change during discussion; but, in that event the device has often been employed of asking for a recess, or deferring consideration of that point until your particular amendment can get to the "boiler room".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, you are asking now that the words "and questions have been answered", on line 2 of this be deleted from the rule?

RILEY: Yes, sir, to satisfy Miss Awes' objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher still objects. Is there a second to the motion as offered by Mr. Riley to delete the words, "and questions have been answered"?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the proposed rule be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it, and the proposed amendment to the proposed rule is ordered adopted. The question now is, "Shall the proposed Rule No. I be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 53 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 0

Absent: 2 Robertson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 53 yeas and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "yeas" have it, and the proposed rule is ordered adopted. The Chief Clerk will please read Rule No. II. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the following phrase on the first sentence: "The Committee suggests the following modifications to existing rules to become effective following consideration of Committee Proposal No. 10a in second reading."

2100

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg asks unanimous consent that these new rules will become effective after this Committee Proposal No. 10a has completed its second reading. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Is there any reason why it shouldn't go in effect immediately?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I was going to object to Mr. Sundborg's suggestion, because part of this certainly could go into effect immediately. Now, the first part that we just adopted should not properly go into effect because it involves these amendments that are now under way, but as to how many people can speak on a motion, etc., there is no reason why it shouldn't go into effect right now, if the Convention wishes to adopt it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I don't care to renew the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read proposed Rule No. II.

CHIEF CLERK: "II. A delegate may speak only once to any motion or amendment except the mover who may open and close debate thereon. The same restriction shall apply to amendments to amendments."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, to that I would attach the amendment proposed by Mr. Sundborg and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley would ask that this --

RILEY: That this rule become effective.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks that this rule become effective after we have completed second reading.

RILEY: I beg your pardon. Strike that, please. I ask unanimous consent that the rule, as read, be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of proposed Rule No. II. Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I wonder if it wouldn't be well to make it possible for the chairman of the committee to have more than one voice.

For instance, there is an amendment, and then you have the statement for the amendment, the chairman speaks, and then others come up, and the committee should, I believe, be entitled to the chairman giving an extra voice.

RILEY: Whenever the committee chairman handles his side of the debate, he can always close, and he does have a half dozen members on his committee who can fill in for him. That was the contemplation of the Rules Committee, that where a member not a member of the committee, has a proposed amendment which the committee opposes, the entire committee may speak to it if they see fit.

LONDBORG: I'll withdraw the objection. I just wanted to get a little information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the proposed Rule No. II be adopted.

KILCHER: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

KILCHER: For the purpose of information I mean. Mr. Riley, does this imply that you may speak only once about the question? I mean, what about information and questions about information. Would that be included in that once?

RILEY: I don't construe a question to be speaking on a motion or an amendment, and it has been so held here in the last few days a few times.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, on that question, if a man or a delegate rises and asks a question, the Chair will never overrule them; but if it might be apparent that the delegate might be using the question to go into a lengthy debate, well, the Chair would feel that --

KILCHER: I have no objection, Mr. Riley.

DAVIS: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley so moves and seconded by Mr. Davis, that the proposed Rule No. II be adopted by the Convention.

KILCHER: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Fellow delegates, the progress that has been made in the last few days has been slow. I think the voluntary acceptance of certain procedures the last few days has helped a lot in achieving results. I think that the Rules Committee has learned a few things, too, since we convened last fall. I think if the Rules Committee had spent more of its energy to organize the Convention, past, present and future, if they would get their material organized and lined up instead of expending its energy --

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: My point of order is that he is castigating the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will hold that your point of order is well taken. Delegates cannot make reflections about any committee or other delegates.

KILCHER: How about suggestions to a committee on the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You can make suggestions, if you wish, relative to this proposed amendment for proposed Rule No. II.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I'm very serious about this point, and we have wasted time for lesser matters, and not by me necessarily. I'm serious this time. The more substantial of the articles, as far as I'm concerned, are past. The amount of interest that I will have in those to come depends largely upon how they are treated. If we are going to resort to proposals practically accepted by committees, why don't we accept them by experts if you want to be efficient. I think by organizing the material, as it is, by applying the rules as they are, some of them voluntarily upheld by the delegates, we could get just as far, or further, than adopting rules that might backfire on anybody. And I think -- I'd like to state on the record -- the future historians will wonder about some of the proposals that have come and will come out of this Committee. I hope that some of the substantive proposals, some that have concrete meat in it, the political proposals and issues, the compromises are necessary on the political basis, others on the theoretical basis. Some of them have facts, unless like the proposal we have now and some of the others, unknown to me, unsuspected to me, a much more political and concrete time bomb than I suspect. I hope that the proposals in the future will be given theoretical consideration and not be influenced by a fear; the fear number one that some party might profit or gain in the very immediate future by the outcome, or lose in the immediate future by the outcome of the proposal; and that theoretical considerations, which will not have anything to do with the next five years, the next 50 years, shall be given due consideration. That's what I'm afraid of, and that's why I urge strongly to consider before we employ "gag" rules.

McLAUGHLIN: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, it is with some reluctance that I want to speak just briefly against this proposed rule. I have seen it happen too often here where delegates are in genuine doubt about an issue, perhaps not too many people are speaking on the issue. I've seen it happen too often when we need to hear badly a second time from some of the people who know the most about the issue at hand and have something to say about it. I have seen it happen too often where a delegate can't necessarily make his entire argument the first time he rises; new points are brought up that need to be answered. I have voted in the past and I will continue to vote for evening sessions, against unnecessary adjournments, but I feel that debate involves a certain amount of give and take, and with two times for each delegate, we have restricted debate enough. I think we can perhaps relax our reluctance to moving the previous question a little to move debate along, but I do think that speaking once, in all instances, is too restrictive and we'll find ourselves lots of times wishing we could suspend the rules.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I'm for speeding up the process as much as possible, and I stand corrected and say that I haven't tried to lag in any way through unnecessary talking which might have seemed unnecessary at times. I know I have talked more than some, and possibly less than others. I don't know, but I think our existing rules, if they are enforced pretty much by ourselves -- the President can't do it all, I think he's done a wonderful job -- but I think the existing rules, if we each one take them seriously, will speed the thing right along. But when we limit debate on a serious issue -- and it might be the one man that might hold the key -- in presenting very good evidence, he may not get it across the first time. About the only thing we can do is call for a recess so that he can pass information to another committee member, or can go and get help from someone else, take five or ten minutes that way and come back into session, so that someone else can take his information and pass it on that everyone needs to know. I don't think that speaking two or three times slows it down, if there is something worthwhile that should be on the record. Furthermore, if we have five minutes to speak, I think we will be more inclined to use the whole time trying to get all that we can possibly think of across, rather than say a pertinent point, sit down; and, if another thing comes up, get up and say it and sit down again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, far be it for me or from any member of the Rules Committee to want to gag anyone. If we had the time to do it I would only be too happy to allow us to go on and on until everything was said that could be said on any subject. The problem is that we are in trouble here. A sign over there says "24 days left". I don't know whether that is exactly correct or not, but in any event it is close enough to being correct, so we have got to watch what we are doing. Looking over on the board there, there are apparently, I think, five substantive sections that we haven't even touched. We are in the middle of a sixth one. Up to now we have been spending an average of about three days per section. By simple multiplication, if we took five sections at three days per section, that's 15 days, plus another day and a half on the one we are on, it's 16 1/2 days. Now, if we were done with our work here when we finished in second reading, we wouldn't have any problem. But it must be obvious that when we are meeting day and night, that Style and Drafting has no time to work on these things, except in recess. We have been doing it, in fact there are either two or three of the articles that have been presented to us that are practically ready. But we can't, I'm sure, keep it up indefinitely. There is still more than that. After the things come back to the floor from Style and Drafting we are going to give them another go-around, and we hope that they will be in such good shape when they come back that it won't take long, but we can't be sure of that. After that is all done, they go back to Style and Drafting again to place them in the entire constitution in their proper context. That is going to take some time. When we get it all done, everybody has to go over the complete constitution and sign it. Now if we go on as we have gone on, we just are not going to have the time to do it. And it is true, I think, absolutely true, that in the last couple of days we have been more restrained on our debates than we have been previously; but certainly, I think, everybody in the room will agree that we have -- and I'm talking about me, too -- we have made ill-considered amendments, we have made ill-considered arguments; we have, all of us, been guilty of arguing two or three times on a question when once would do the job. This is a device intended to make us think before we talk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, I want to support the proposed rule here. Just to state briefly, there have been many times when a subject has been up on the floor here where if it were a matter of law, on several occasions at least that I knew the answer, or as a matter of fact thought that I knew the answer, but it appeared it was going the right way; therefore, I didn't speak because others were, through the floor, taking up so much time speaking. Now this doesn't only apply to me. I talked to others here who have spoken a great deal less before the body than I have, whose opinions I consider very good. They expressed the same thought that there are a number that are speaking so much, up two and three times asking questions and carrying on long harangues, using points of personal privilege and taking up the time that many of us felt constrained to speak. And I think that under this proposed rule here it will divide up the time, and maybe we'll have the thoughts of a greater number of the body rather than just a small group.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I wish to clear up just a couple of points. First, I'm not aware of any five-minute rule. It has been observed a time or two rather informally; and second, there is no self-starting on the Rules Committee in suggesting these rules. The body will recall that it was a voluntarily directed thing, and just as if adopted now it would be voluntarily adopted by two-thirds of those entitled to vote. And just as if someone has something compelling to be considered sometime and has used up his time, two-thirds again will allow him to speak.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I would like to assure the delegates that this sign is correct. We are in our 55th day, and we have a calendar here numbered back down to the day. I might also, in support of this amendment, would like to state that if we go along as we are right now, we are going to run approximately 80 hours over our estimated 150 hours on the tape. We are running at the average of 6 7/8's hours a day in plenary session. If we continue the pace that we are going in plenary session, the tape recording of the Constitutional Convention is going to cost an additional $4,000 above the $8,000 that we have already got appropriated for it. I wish you would consider that also in argument favoring limiting debate and having substantial argument before you get on your feet.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. President, I speak very little at this Convention, and I do favor wholeheartedly Mr. Riley's motion. I believe in reading over the history of some of these constitutions that were made back in the days of Davy Crockett, and they were made in about 45 or 60 days, and it seems to me in our modern age of jets and tape recorders and everything, that we ought to be able to beat that record a little bit instead of going behind it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I don't like to speak against this amendment, but I do feel strongly about it. I don't like to be limited to only speaking once on a subject because apparently I don't speaking well enough at times so I can get it over the first time; but I think that we should speed up our operation, and I agree with practically every argument along that line, but I think we could save more time by stopping to think before we speak as to whether or not what we are going to say is absolutely necessary. It seems to me that lots and lots of time people get up and repeat the same argument that somebody else has already made and unless you can contribute something to the effort by talking, I don't think it pays to talk, but I would like to be able to speak in rebuttal occasionally when I make a statement that is apparently misunderstood or misconstrued or distorted by another speaker.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I want to say that I am going to support the committee proposals, but with this understanding: that on two subjects -- the subjects of resources and local government -- I believe they are very broad subjects and of great importance, and I'm going to at that time ask that we resolve into a committee of the whole for a more complete discussion. I think we have a recourse in the committee of the whole to discuss those things that are of vital importance to all of us for the future Alaska.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed new Rule No. II be adopted by the Convention?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 45 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 8 - Buckalew, Cooper, Harris, Kilcher, Londborg, Poulsen, Reader, White.

Absent: 2 - Robertson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 35 yeas, 8 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it, and the proposed amendment to the rule is ordered adopted. Inasmuch as the mention of the cost of the tape, which was correct, was brought up on the floor, the Chair feels that it would be in order to have in the record a statement relative to our finances at this time, to the extent that it appears at this time that we are going to have a good many thousands of dollars left over to turn back to the Territorial treasury when this Convention adjourns, possibly in the amount of $25,000 or $30,000. The Chair felt that some of the delegates might feel that that meant we were running out of money, and I felt that it should be in the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I regret to note that we need two-thirds; I think 35 fails.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would ask the Clerk again to announce the results; I think it was announced incorrectly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the tally.

CHIEF CLERK: It's 45 yeas, 8 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the announcement is correct. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed Rule No. III.

CHIEF CLERK: "III. When a question has been put by the Chair, a roll call shall be in order upon the request of 10 delegates evidenced by a show of hands, provided that the Chair may order a roll call vote at any time."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves for the adoption of the proposed amendment.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I have been advised that the full operation of a roll call vote requires five minutes or better of the Convention's time, and often times there may be 15 or 20 such occasions each day, which cost an appreciable amount of time. Now, if there is conscientious need for a roll call or a conscientious wish for a roll call, certainly it should be held. The figure "10" was arbitrary, it's true. In the house of the Alaska legislature, it's my memory that five are required, but that is a body that is less than half the size of this, and, therefore, the Committee decided on the figure "10".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, may I address a question to the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may address your question.

V. FISCHER: I will support the proposed rule if the delegates can expect that if one person calls for a roll call that enough time be given for ten people to raise their hands instead of putting the question before the body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would certainly attempt to give enough time that that could be accomplished.

V. FISCHER: I'll support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I'd like to point out that I timed the last roll call from the time the President asked the Chief Clerk to call the roll until the announcement was made by the President. It was one minute and thirty seconds. Now perhaps there are other roll calls that have taken longer, but I think it can be done in that time, and I think the time lag for a show of hands will run us overtime.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to support this rule, but I think there has got to be some consideration given as to substance. I know the Chair will do that, but a good many of us in the matter of final passage of things may desire a roll call, and many cases wherever a roll call is to be reconsidered, where you're going to reconsider or move for rescinding action, I believe you must have a roll call in order to know what the vote was. You must in reconsideration, in any event. So when you adopt this rule, you're dealing with major substance matters and final passage, and you're also dealing with your right to reconsider.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have the same objection as Mr. Victor Rivers, and besides that, it seems to me that this single request for a roll call is a fundamental right. It involves something that every one of us has the right to know about every other one of us, and I don't care what the question is, if anybody in this house desires to know how I stand on the proposition and wants a record of it, I think he's entitled to it the same way that I am. I'm against this particular amendment to the rule.

PRESIDENT: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I really had another question on this same thing. I have been a little confused not knowing about all this record business. I'm just concerned that the President may have heard differently than I did on something, and I think that maybe a roll call would be a good idea, and that, then, would come after the voice vote but before the announcement of the Chair's decision as to the results of the voice vote. And the way I read this, the roll call would only be in order when a question has been put by the Chair, and before the voice vote. Now I may be wrong on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now usually, Mr. Hurley, it is one of the main reasons why the Chair tries to put the question, even though he has put it before and someone has objected in order to be heard in debate, he says it again in order to give an opportunity for everyone to know right at that minute what is before them, and also to give them an opportunity to demand a roll call, if they so choose.

HURLEY: Am I wrong, Mr. President, in thinking that it is still possible to call for a roll call after the voice vote has been taken but before the President announces the results?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair has recalled one instance in which the Chair didn't hear the person asking for the roll call, but many times, as a roll is being called, or as the voice vote was being evinced, why the Chair has stopped and had the roll called because he heard delegates requesting a roll call. Now the Chair doesn't wish to be too strict on that part. If at any time the Chair hears someone asking for a roll call before he announces the results, he will then ask that the roll be called. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, if someone can answer my question, is it proper to call for a roll call between the voice vote and the announcement by the President, I'll be satisfied?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is questionable. The Chair has felt that before he actually announces the vote, that there is nothing anywhere in Robert's Rules or in our rules that says that you can't demand a roll call at any time before the Chair actually announces the vote. We looked it up one day and could find nothing on it, so the president would feel that if you asked for a roll call, you have every right to get that roll call, if the Chair has not announced a vote.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to take one more step and the reason for that is that a great many times -- and I'm guilty myself sometimes -- people do not vote on a voice vote, and therefore, if it's fairly close, why I would feel authorized, if I were particularly interested, to ask for a roll call at that time. On the other hand, I hesitate to request a roll call before the question is put on a voice vote, because if it goes so far the other way, why clutter up the record with a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, you're absolutely correct there. There have been many many votes in which I'll bet there haven't been 20 people participate even on both sides of the voice vote call, and in cases like that, why, you can't possibly refuse anyone the right to have a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, it's been my observation that the Chair has been scrupulous in calling for a roll call vote, whenever, in his estimation, the vote has been light, indicating that all the delegates aren't voting and in the other cases where the vote has been close. Now I know as we sit here in the house it often seems to us that the vote is some other way than it appears to the Chair, and I think the reason for that is that each of us is sitting adjacent to several delegates, and if three or four right around us are on one side, it seems like that side wins. Well, the Chair is not in that unfortunate position; he's up there in a neutral position and he can hear from the whole house and I think that he's called every single voice vote correctly during this session.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I have a question of Mr. Riley. If this rule is adopted now, an amendment to it would take two-thirds, if we should amend it now -- this rule?

RILEY: Yes, that is correct.

KILCHER: Well, I move to amend the figure "10" to "5".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the figure "10" be changed to "5". Do you ask unanimous consent?

KILCHER: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher asks unanimous consent that the figure "10" be changed to "5". Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and the proposed rule has been changed to read from "10" to "5" delegates.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed rule be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 33 - Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 20 - Armstrong, Awes, Coghill, Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Johnson, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Stewart, White.

Absent: 2 - Robertson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 33 yeas, 20 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the proposed rule has failed of adoption. The Chief Clerk will please read proposed rule No. IV.

CHIEF CLERK: "IV. Notices of reconsideration and of motions to rescind must be given within one hour of the vote sought to be reconsidered or rescinded and the appropriate motion made within three hours of such vote. Neither reconsideration nor rescission shall carry without at least 28 affirmative votes. The following two exceptions apply to this rule: (a) If a recess prevents adherence to such time limits, the notice or motion involved may be announced or made at the next earliest opportunity; (b) If a vote is taken too late in the day to afford the full time above allowed, notice and reconsideration or action to rescind shall be accomplished before adjournment that day."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Mr. President, this is the one on which I expected the oratory so I won't ask unanimous consent. I do move that it be adopted.

MCCUTCHEON: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I voted for every one of these rules so far, but I think if we adopt this rule we are hurting ourselves in trying to write a good constitution. I think that reconsideration is one of the most important tools that we have to correct errors in our own judgment. We have made some serious mistakes so far, and through reconsideration we have had a chance to go back and correct them. I think that we will find that we made an error today and we will probably correct it tomorrow. I feel that this three-hour limitation is fine in theory, "Let's get it over with," at the same time it presupposes that all a person does is go out in the corridors and talk to as many people as one can to change their minds about a certain vote. I think there are matters, the important ones, where research may be required, substantial research, to make sure that we are on solid legal ground. And I personally will vote against this kind of limitation upon our authority to write a good constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I'll make it brief. If this goes through, Friday the 13th will be a bad day in the history of this constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. President, I wish to support the two arguments that have just been made.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall proposed Rule No. IV, be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Barr, Collins, Davis, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hermann, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 36 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 2 - Robertson, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 36 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed rule is not adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I find myself in on awkward position. Mrs. Sweeney has called to my attention one of the backstopping provisions of Robert's, which states that, "Standing rules may be amended at any time by majority vote if previous notice has been given." The question is, has previous notice been given? Certainly, we all have been aware that this report was requested, and a couple of times it has been referred to on the floor. I feel constrained to mention this with respect to Roman numeral III, which was just announced to have failed for less than a two-thirds vote. I'll leave it to the body as to whether notice was had in compliance with that provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, the Chair would feel that the notice hadn't been properly given until the delegates all had copies available to them of what actually was going to come before them. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Furthermore, Mr. President, our own rules provide that in order to change them you must have a two-thirds majority vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are correct. Robert's wouldn't apply.

RILEY: I am in no doubt as to what our rules provide, Mr. Chairman, but I feel obliged to mention this because it is a provision that goes beyond ours, and it was called to my attention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the "Other Suggestions".

CHIEF CLERK: "Other Suggestions. (a) It is suggested that the Rules Committee prepare a tentative schedule for completing work on each proposal, and that the Committee announce the time to be allotted a proposal before the Convention considers it. (b) Adhere strictly to the period of time stated for each recess."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may we have about a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I give notice of my intention to reconsider my vote on Mr. Cooper's amendment to strike Section 6 of Committee Proposal No. 10a.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew's.

SWEENEY: I mean Mr. Buckalew's amendment to strike Section 6 in Committee Proposal 10a.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mrs. Sweeney's statement that she serves notice of reconsideration on the proposed amendment striking Section 6 as offered by Mr. Buckalew. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that we adjourn until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I don't believe we are quite through with the matter of putting an effective date on this report, and that would be to this effect: that paragraph Roman II shall become effective immediately, and paragraph Roman I shall become effective following consideration of Committee Proposal 10a in second reading. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You heard Mr. Riley's unanimous consent request that Roman numeral Rule No. I become effective immediately following the consideration of Committee Proposal No. 10a in second reading, not until then, but that Roman numeral No. II shall become effective immediately. Mr. Riley has asked unanimous consent. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I wonder about the wish of the body in regard to the suggestion that the Committee prepare a tentative schedule for our work upon these proposals?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there suggestions from the floor relative to the other suggestions as submitted by the Rules Committee? I don't hear any at this time, Mr. Ralph Rivers. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I'm more concerned with part (b) adhering strictly to the period of time stated for each recess. I don't care whether we recess for 10 or 15 minutes, as long as we get back here, and not wait around. I think if you want a 20-minute recess, ask for one; if you want a 30-minute recess, ask for one rather than elongate. I think we ought to get together on that, but I'm more interested in (b) than in (a).

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, is it the intention of the Rules Committee on this to -- if I may ask a question through the Chair to the Chairman of the Rules Committee -- to allot time and have a deadline date for a proposal, and we'll work all night to get the proposal out, or continue working on it until it is done?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Well, we had in mind in this suggestion, that a certain target date be established to be observed as far as reasonable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Is that just a suggestion?

RILEY: That was a suggestion that that authorization be given.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I move that we adopt it into the rule.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves that the suggestion under subsection (a) be adopted.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: How can a rule be a suggestion that another suggestion be made?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, there you have a pertinent point. (Laughter) Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I had in mind that if the body is interested in seeing how a schedule like that works out, the body would adopt it after we have submitted it in detailed form. That's what I was thinking.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, I'd like to make one comment on that motion. It seems to me that this evening we have adopted two new rules which will probably speed up our work considerably, and I don't think anyone, including the Rules Committee, knows what rate of speed we'll progress at, and I think it would be a good idea to go along for a couple of days and see how this works out, and maybe then consider this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Obviously Mr. Coghill's motion, as it was made, wouldn't work very good in rules. So what is your feeling, Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: My feeling is still strong, but I'll withdraw my motion.
(Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us Committee Proposal No. 10a. Do you wish to continue beyond Section 6 at this time? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I make a motion that we adjourn until tomorrow morning at 9:05.

V. FISCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer seconds the motion that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:05 a.m. tomorrow. The question is "Shall the Convention stand adjourned until 9:05 a.m. tomorrow?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it, and the Convention is still in session. Are there amendments to Section 7? Miss Awes.

AWES: Reading Section 7 through 9, they depend so much upon what we do with Section 6, so wouldn't it be possible to pass them for this evening and to go on to Section 10, and then come back to them?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to starting with Section 10 and deferring action on these three sections until we have handled the matter of the reconsideration? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I move and ask unanimous consent that we defer action on 7, 8, and 9.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Taylor, it is so ordered. Are there amendments to Section 10? Do any delegates have amendments to offer to Section 10? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: We have one committee amendment. This was submitted by one of the delegates during the recess. I have it here. I'd better read it to you. The amendment is in Section 10, page 5, line 5: strike the word "or" after "power" and insert a comma. After the word "duty" insert "or right". The line would then read "or to restrain violation of any constitutional or legislative power, duty, or right by any officer, department or agency of the state..."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, do you mean to insert a comma after the word "power"?

V. RIVERS: Yes, strike the word "or" after "duty" and insert the words "or right". It was thought by one of the delegates -- and it was agreed by the Committee -- that insertion of the words "or right" would broaden that particular power, and that he would then have the right to prevent possible discrimination, in that he would have the duty to enforce before the courts the rights under the constitution as well as the powers and duties of the constitution. I ask unanimous consent -- and the Committee is in unanimous agreement on this -- and I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment to Section 10. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, there was another amendment along the same general line, which I will submit on the floor for discussion. There is no committee recommendation on this particular item.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read it.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 7, after the words 'subdivision' insert 'or by any licensee of the state'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What page?

CHIEF CLERK: It's on page 5, line 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I'd like to move for the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves adoption of the proposed amendment.

STEWART: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart seconds the motion. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I'd like to explain briefly what the intent behind this motion was. As the section presently reads, we are granting the governor authority to enforce compliance with constitutional and legislative mandates; to restrain violation of any constitutional or legislative power, duty, or right. Now this provision, as is presently stated, applies to the departments of the state and the political subdivisions of the state. Now the intent of the proposed amendment would be to also give the governor the authority -- mind you, not require him -- but just grant him the authority, if he deems it necessary, he could step in and protect the rights of other individuals, the citizens of the state, whose rights may be infringed by any licensee of the state. I might just briefly explain the use of the term "licensee", and I have no pride of authorship that may be involved, but the state in performing its governmental functions gives its sanction to the carrying on of various businesses and functions. It seems to me that in compliance with the constitution, it would be quite proper for the state to require that whoever receives a license from the state, observes the mandates of the constitution, the bill of rights, or whatever other protections are granted in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Fischer a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

GRAY: You have a business and you get a $10 license: does that mean that the governor can come in and run your business for you under this?

V. FISCHER: No.

GRAY: Like it was one of his offices or agencies?

V. FISCHER: No. My point here is, he would not run your business for you, but if you in running your business, for instance, practice racial discrimination, that you will not sell to certain customers, then the governor can use the authority of the state to step in and prevent this violation of an individual's constitutional rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President. Mr. Fischer, although this section probably wouldn't allow the governor to run your business, it is intended by you -- is it not -- that this term covers anybody who holds a business license under the state?

V. FISCHER: Yes.

DAVIS: And that's everybody that has any type of business, including attorneys and all sorts of professional men, and that sort of thing?

V. FISCHER: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Couldn't it be so broadly interpreted, Mr. Fischer, to even a man who has a licensed automobile by the state?

V. FISCHER: I think it could. The point is, what does it apply to? It's not a matter of the governor using the authority of the state to discriminate against a man who has an automobile; it's the authority of the governor to step in when he sees a violation of somebody else's rights of guarantees of the constitution, to step in and restrain that violation through the courts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I can understand the intent here, but the power is far too broad. Every person, every citizen in Alaska is subject to the laws and subject to the constitution, including the bill of rights. Such a provision as this would set these licensees aside as being under additional restriction or additional supervision by the governor, which I do not think is right. Everyone has recourse to the courts if their rights are not taken care of; and I don't believe that any licensee, any businessman or any other licensee should be discriminated against by being further supervised; and, I just think it's too broad and gives too much power to the governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, may we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will stand at recess, if there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for several minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, after discussing this matter with 14 attorneys, I would like to withdraw the motion I made. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, there is one small amendment that has been called to my attention which I discussed in part with the Committee, I will insert it at this time. It has to do with instead of calling the senate alone, call either house alone. That's on page 5, lines 13 and 14. Our motion would be to strike the words "the senate alone," and insert in lieu thereof "either house alone". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Rivers, there was a paper that has been passed up to the Clerk which would strike the balance of the line, also. Is there any necessity of having "or the two houses in joint session"?

V. RIVERS: We thought there was a necessity for calling the houses in joint session at the times they were meeting or to call them for joint sessions alone for purposes of confirmation in view of the legislative act. It was discussed in Committee, we thought the words were of value.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any objection to Mr. Rivers' unanimous consent request for the adoption of the proposed amendment? Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment again.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the words on line 13 'the Senate alone' making it 'either house alone'.

V. RIVERS: And that was all there was to my amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have no objection. I would like to rise on a point of information.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of information, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: If we leave in the language "or the two houses in joint session", would that in any way conflict with the legislative article which provides for the calling of special sessions?

V. RIVERS: We in the Committee didn't think it would. We thought we should have, in view of the rather large number of functions which the joint sessions perform, authority to call them in joint session. Now that could be subject to some discussion. I'm merely expressing the majority opinion of the Committee after some considerable discussion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? There being no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have a short amendment here. I'm going to submit it so I may tell why, and then if there is any objection by the Committee members, I'll withdraw it. On line 17, Section 10, page 5, after the word "prepare" insert "and submit to the governor-elect". I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: After the word "prepare" on line 17 --

BARR: Insert "and submit to the governor-elect".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, my recollection may be faulty, but as I remember in Committee the idea of having the governor submit this in writing was to avoid any publicity in case he intended to castigate the incoming administration or to give weak excuses for his administration's performance of duty. In addition to this, the new governor makes an address before the new legislature, outlining his program. But the new governor has been in office only a very few weeks and really doesn't have too much information at his fingertips as to the past performance or the financial condition of the Territory; the old governor has that information. We thought that he should give that to the incoming governor so that he would have this at his fingertips and be better prepared to report to the legislature. But we realized there was a danger that the old governor -- if he were of a different party, or if he didn't see eye to eye with the incoming governor -- he might use that report, if it were published or broadcast, for his own personal reasons. So this amendment here is to point out that he is to submit this written report to the governor, and he is not to report it publicly to the legislature or to the press, or to anyone else. And that would obviate the possibility of him using it that way. Now does anybody in the Committee object to this or is my thinking wrong on it? May I ask the Chairman?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: In answering that question, there was some discussion on this point in Committee. We left the wording out after some discussion. I have no objection as an individual, but I can't speak for the other members of the Committee. At the moment I just don't recall their position on this.

BARR: Can you recall why it was left out?

V. RIVERS: Well, no. I just don't exactly recall the reason, but I remember we discussed it, but that was some time ago

BARR: The reason I submitted this, Mr. Chairman, is because I don't remember it being left out, and I think myself, that it is a little important.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, the Chair does not wish to interrupt and the Chair does not wish to admit that he's watching the clock, but your amendment is before us, and if you would so choose to do so, we could hold the amendment in abeyance, and maybe you could have time to see the committee members on it.

BARR: Mr. President, subject to committee announcements, I move that we recess until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee reports or announcements of committee meetings? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: This is not in the way of a committee report. The Veterans of Foreign Wars dinner is tomorrow night, and if the Convention is not going to be in session, we would like to have you leave your name with Mr. Wilson as to how many wish to attend. General Dean will be our guest at the doing.

ROSSWOG: I'd like to have a Local Government Committee meeting for a few minutes in the gallery as soon as possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other announcements? If there are no other announcements, the Convention will stand adjourned until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 14, 1956

FIFTY-THIRD DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning the Reverend Charles Powers of the Church of the Nazarene in Totem Park. Reverend Powers will give the daily invocation.

REVEREND POWERS. Gracious Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for this another day. We pray that Thou wilt bless us as we convene at this time and undergo the governmental affairs of our Territory. We pray Thou wilt bless each delegate, Thou wilt encourage them and help them. Bless their families back home. May the spirit of God bless them at this time. We ask these things in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: One absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. A quorum is present and the Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White?

WHITE: May we hold it in abeyance?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The report will be held in abeyance. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside the Convention? Are there reports of standing committees? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to announce a meeting of Style and Drafting for the 10:30 recess at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet in the rear of the gallery at the 10:30 recess. Are there reports of select committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to move at this time that it be the policy of the Convention to adjourn today at 5:40 p.m., to have no night session today, and when we adjourn to adjourn until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

GRAY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that it will be the policy of the Convention today to adjourn at 5:40 p.m. to have no night session and to adjourn until 9:00 a.m. Monday morning.

RILEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask the mover of the motion if he would consent to an amendment for the next earlier bus to enable many people to accomplish quite a few chores that have been accumulating.

SUNDBORG: Do you know when the next earlier bus is?

GRAY: I have that information, when I see which set of figures I will use here. It leaves the University at 4:05.

SUNDBORG: May I have consent, Mr. President, to amend my motion that it will be the policy to adjourn at 3:45 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the motion is amended to read that the policy will be that the Convention will adjourn at 3:45 p.m. this afternoon. Is it your reasoning, Mr. Sundborg, that Style and Drafting and Local Government, particularly, might have an opportunity of meeting over the weekend?

SUNDBORG: I can't speak for Local Government, Mr. President, but Style and Drafting definitely need a lot of time over the weekend and we will make use of those hours.

SMITH: I might say that the Resources Committee certainly will make use of that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Resources Committee will also be able to make good use of that time. Is there objection to that motion? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I have no objection, but I think while we are on the matter of policy, if we are going to continue these night meetings, and it is very apparent we are going to have to, that we have a break in the middle of the week. I would like to see us not hold a night meeting say on Thursday, that night the stores are open and there is an opportunity for anybody who wants to take care of their personal business, but I think the long drag from Monday until Saturday might well be broken in the middle of the week instead of necessarily on Saturday in the future.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That matter might be brought up on Monday, Mrs. Hermann. Is there objection to this motion before us that this be the policy today that the Convention adjourn at 3:45? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, it depends entirely on what we do today with this problem on our hands. If we go along and accomplish something, I think the plan is delightful, but if we don't do it and accomplish something, I propose we stay here all day Sunday.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it your idea, Mr. Marston, that we hold this motion in abeyance until later in the day?

MARSTON: I would be willing to, to see how they behave here on this floor.

SUNDBORG: It is only a declaration of policy and a motion to adjourn always is in order. We could keep meeting as long as there is no motion to adjourn, which would carry.

HERMANN: I don't think it is a matter one can vote on. It is just a declaration of policy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right. It is just a declaration of policy. If there is no objection, that will be accepted as the declaration of policy. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: As I understand it, when we adjourn this afternoon it will have to be on a motion this afternoon?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right.

METCALF: If we don't accomplish anything today, some of us who want to stay here can ask to continue to stay?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The delegates would have to in any event, Mr. Metcalf, vote with the majority vote for the adjournment. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 10a. Mr. Barr had an amendment pending at the time we adjourned last night.

BARR: That has been moved and seconded, Mr. President. I don't propose to take up much time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you state the amendment, Mr. Barr?

BARR: On page 5, starting on line 15 --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read it?

CHIEF CLERK: "After the word 'prepare' on line 17, insert 'and submit to the governor-elect'."

BARR: The only change that it makes is that it directs to whom this report is made; in other words, it does not necessarily have to go to the legislature publicly or to the newspapers. My only thought there was, as I stated before, was to prevent this report from being used for any ulterior motives or from belittling anyone. It is highly useful to the governor-elect to have such a report, so he will have the governor's opinion on what has been done, what should be done, the financial condition of the Territory, etc.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I would just like to inquire of the mover, do you think that your purpose is being accomplished by this language? I understand and I have no objection to the purpose of the amendment, but do you believe that this language would keep the report from getting into the hands of anybody?

BARR: It would not keep it from getting in the hands of a determined person, any reporters, etc. I thought it might be useful in case the governor did want to give it to a member of the Legislative Council to work on. It would not necessarily be secret but on the other hand it wouldn't be publicized, particularly.

JOHNSON: Do you think adding the word "only" after the word "elect" might tend to narrow it down a little?

BARR: That might be all right, then the governor could give it to some certain person if he wanted to. I would have no objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: May I address a question to Mr. Barr?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. Barr, in the event the governor is re-elected, to whom would you intend that he would submit this report?

BARR: No one. He has no successor.

NERLAND: Would you intend then that he submit it to the legislature, possibly?

BARR: No, that was not my idea.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to follow in with this in line of the Committee thinking, when we thought of this report, as I recall, it was to be given to the governor-elect, that was our intention. However, at the same time I think it was to be a report that might be of interest to history at the end of each term whether the governor succeeded himself or not. Whether it should be public or not, I don't think that should be the main issue.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 27 - Barr, Collins, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 26 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, White.

Absent: 2 - Doogan, McNees.)

HURLEY: I would like to change my vote from "no" to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley changes his vote from "no" to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: 27 yeas, 26 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I would like to move reconsideration of my vote on Section 6 which was to strike the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves reconsideration of her vote on Section 6.

DOOGAN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, yesterday I voted to strike this section because I was not too happy with it, and then after it was struck it appeared that, at least the feeling was drawn out that the whole proposal had almost been wrecked. I believe that section can be changed so it will be acceptable and for that reason I would like to have the reconsideration at this time with possible amendment afterwards if the section is retained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Section 6 is now before us once more. Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I would like to trace the evolution of this particular article through the Committee. Our first decision was, should we have a lieutenant governor? We decided that was a luxury which we could not afford in this new state. So our second decision was to try to set up a working successor to the governor, and it seemed a logical choice would be the secretary of state. Our third decision was regarding the election, whether this secretary of state should be elected or appointed, and we felt it would be a little more democratic, more acceptable to the public, give them more to say, if he were elected. Then the question was, how can we elect a secretary of state and be certain he would be compatible with the governor and be of the same party as the governor. I asked Mr. Cooper this question on his previous amendment, how he could expect this elected secretary of state to be of the same party and he could not answer. I realized I was tossing him a curve at the time because we could not answer it; so that was why we came up with this particular section and we decided then that we could accomplish the purpose we were after by nominating the secretary of state and the governor separately and pairing them to run in the final election so that we would at least be certain that they would be of the same political party, and I think that is the important thing on it. It would be obvious to all that if we had a governor of one party and a secretary of state of another party that they could not only not work together, but there would be terrific confusion if that secretary of state ever succeeded to the governor. I think when the people of Alaska have this opportunity to nominate a secretary of state and realize the important position that he holds, they are going to be very careful of the man they nominate, and I don't think he will be the type of man that Mr. Buckalew would have us think he would be. Now if you think the Committee approach has been illogical or if you want to "buy a pig in a poke", support Mr. Buckalew's amendment. If not, I think the committee proposal has merit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I seconded Mr. Buckalew's motion and I have always felt that Section 6, as worded for the reasons that we stated yesterday, injects an undesirable element in our constitutional government, and as far as a "pig in a poke", and I want to direct my remarks solely to that. There is an amendment on the desk which reads as follows: "That Section 6 be stricken and the following substituted: 'There shall be a secretary of state who shall have the same qualifications as the governor. He shall be appointed by the governor. He shall perform such duties as may be delegated to him by the governor. He shall perform such administrative functions as are prescribed by law'." The amendment goes on and deletes the words "person elected" in line 12 of Section 7, and that is all there is to it. Now that amendment prescribes a constitutional secretary of state. The reason for that is so that the order of succession is preserved. It makes him an appointee of the governor, so the objection as to political faith is immediately removed. He will be of the same political party. It makes him a working secretary of state, because as far as executive duties are concerned the governor may delegate some to him. Administrative duties which of course do not infringe upon the executive may be prescribed by law. That avoids any conflict between a secretary of state working contrary to his governor, so this amendment preserves the order of succession exactly as it was in the original proposal, except only that the secretary of state is an appointive official, but the order of succession is preserved. Everything of the original proposal is preserved, and it is not "a pig in a poke". There are other equally, I think, desirable alternatives. There is no magic about this thing. It is very simple. In answer to Mr. Marston's statement, I am quite sure by 12 noon we will be all through with this thing. We could adopt many healthy proposals in that time, too, all of them better than the present Section 6. I have talked to other people who have equally sound alternative methods, none of which require huddles or delay, very simple, very clear and generally unobjectionable, so I say that if we do reconsider this matter, there are sound alternates and I do think though, that the present section or the section that was submitted to us must be improved.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, it appears to me that the only difference between Mr. Hellenthal's proposal as he has talked about it here, and the committee proposal is the point as to whether the secretary of state is going to be elected or whether he is going to be appointed. I am afraid we are going to get ourselves in a box here if we vote on the motion to reconsider. I am afraid we may be foreclosing the possibility of considering Mr. Hellenthal's amendment. I am wondering if it might not be more orderly to hold the matter of the reconsideration until after we have heard Mr. Hellenthal's amendment. I am afraid we will be in the same position we were in yesterday where we struck certain language and then we had to have an amendment to put the same language back in. As it now stands, we have stricken Section 6. If we take the motion to reconsider and if that motion to reconsider is against Mr. Buckalew's amendment, we will be in the position then of having failed to strike the section and then we have another motion come along to strike the section over again. It seems to me that the primary question at the minute is whether the body does or does not want an elective secretary of state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONGBORG: Mr. President, I would like to speak another word for the committee proposal as we drew it up. As I see the difference in the remarks now of Mr. Hellenthal and his would-be secretary of state, and the one that the Committee provided for, is this, of a time element as far as when the governor picks his partner. In other words, has the Committee made it possible that the governor would have a perfectly compatible working partner; he would choose that man or the party would work together and pick that man before the election, or if the law so provided, he may be picked in the primary to be the running partner of the successful nominee of the primary for governor. Now, as I see it, the pressure that is going to come upon the governor in selecting a secretary of state will be just the same as the pressure if he were to pick him before he was elected as governor. This man that will be selected as secretary of state after the governor is elected, will be a man who can take over the governor's office for a period of three or three and one-half years, maybe even more should the governor die. You can be sure there is going to be just as much pressure on the governor to attach on to him somebody the people don't want but somebody to whom the party owes a debt; but if you have the secretary of state as just a working man and not succeeding to the governor's chair, that would be a different thing, but if he is to fall in line for the governorship, then we stand the chance of having a person become governor for a period of one, two, three, three and one-half, and a day short of four years. The people would as a whole perhaps reject just because of some pressures put upon the governor to put that man in as his secretary of state. I think the fair way to the people would be to have that man along with the governor on the general election ticket. Then if we don't feel that the governor chose wisely or the party chose wisely, they can both be rejected. The people have a choice. I can see that the strong executive would be one that would just pick all of his own men and those he doesn't want, he just throws away, but I think there are going to be pressures upon him in the selections, and that is one pressure that can be revealed before we take the whole "poke". We are going to know what we are getting and they can be accepted or rejected as a team.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: In the line of Mr. Davis's suggestion and as a point of inquiry, Mr. Hellenthal has read his proposed amendment and has suggested there are other proposed amendments, or will be. In order that we have the full picture before us, might it be possible that all presently prepared proposed amendments be read at this time?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, an instance such as we have before us at the present time arises, the Chair feels it is only in fairness and in keeping with proper information coming before the delegates that your request be granted, that it is in keeping with what is probably going on in the minds of most of the delegates if the proposed amendments were allowed to be known to the delegates. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Along that line, speaking for the Committee, as of yesterday I had an amendment prepared which would insert in Section 6 the word "general" before the word "election" in line 21. We discussed that and that would then leave the procedure as to the primary in the hands of the legislature, and it would prescribe only that the general election would be the one in which he would, by constitutional act, be required to run on the joint ticket. While I am on my feet, Mr. President, I would like to speak on this a little further. We put in rather a heavy day yesterday. Everybody was somewhat weary and probably somewhat tired of listening to me and others speak on this subject. We heard this referred to as a "pal", "buddy", "flunky" and a number of other package deal systems, but I just want to point out to you in all sincerity, regardless of the sarcasm or ridicule attaching to the presentation of this section by the Committee, it is the "granddaddy" system of the American system of government, inasmuch as it is a part of the national administration's original organization, which to my way of thinking has worked quite successfully. It is also the method adopted and used by the most populous and the wealthiest state of the union, the State of New York; and I want to say again that I for one feel that we have what you call the strong executive proposal in theory. It has been used in the State of New Jersey. However, in the time that it has been used it is quite evident to me that we have not yet had enough length of time to study the situation as to how it is actually working there. To amplify on that, I want to say that in the American system of political life and of government in the cases of where offices are opened up for the people to fill, there are in practically no cases any requirements for special skills, training or experience. But it has been my observation as you go through the elective life of our government, elected officers, that there are certain well established channels that present themselves through which the main group of your qualified people for handling government positions come. There are certain channels which set up a flow from a young, inexperienced individual to average maturity in the political life, to the higher positions that they later occupy in our political life. I also want to say that from the State of New York have come some of the greatest men who have held some of the highest positions this nation has to offer. I cannot go along with this theory that we are electing when we put in public office by a vote of the people the type of man that has been described here. I know at times he probably will not always be the biggest or the best man that might be available, but on a great many of the average times you will pick out men who have caliber for growth, and by reason of their experience in these positions do grow. I just wanted to follow through the method by which many of our people become eligible to hold high public office. It seems to me, as you look back on people around us here in Alaska that many of them are first elected to school boards, city councils; they later become the mayor; perhaps from that office they go into the house or perhaps they go directly into the senate. There they are exposed to a certain amount of daily contact during the sessions with the government functions. There they gather a certain amount of insight into, experience with handling, and understanding of our system of government. From there they might go into a Territorial office, either elective or appointive. Of course, they become eligible for re-election to the one top office to which our people elect the delegate to the United States Congress. I just wanted to point out to you that the honorable Anthony Dimond came through that channel more or less. He was a school teacher at one time, a prospector, later an attorney, then he became a member of the legislature, sat for a number of sessions and gained the confidence of the people and then became our delegate and one that was highly respected. The next situation that you might notice is the channel through which Delegate Bartlett came. It was somewhat similar. He was first the reporter on the Fairbanks paper; then he was the secretary to Judge Dimond; then he returned to Alaska and was in charge of certain functions of the FHA when it was first introduced in Alaska; next he mined; then he went back into public life as the Secretary of Alaska. Next he was elected delegate. Now it seems to me that as we set up this pattern of government, the ideal of the strong executive, one man sitting up here, unbiased, with freedom to make a choice of all these men he is going to appoint, without any strings on him, basing his appointments strictly on merit, experience, and ability, that you could well say that was the ideal situation, but in practical everyday political life, can you say that the governor who is elected will not have obligations, will not have favors to repay to certain individuals and groups, will not have endorsements of individuals which he must consider? It would be very naive for us to think that that were the case because there are going to be many considerations that enter into the selection of his appointive officials, as there would be if the people were to select an elective official. It seems to me that the states and the national government in their situation, similar to what we have proposed here, have provided for not only working individuals in those offices, they have provided an avenue of interest for experienced people to be presented to the voters of the Territory, men who have actually gone through the elective process, men who have held administrative office at the statewide level and men who are therefore generally qualified if otherwise acceptable to the people to be elected to high office. I feel that we must give consideration to allowing people to be presented to the public whom they know and whom they have every reason to trust based upon actual experience and knowledge of them. I know there is nothing more frustrating than to go into a ballot box and have a ballot and know one or two of the people and have before you all new untried names. They might be good names in business, in social or civic club work, but you don't know what they can and will do in the face of a government obligation, in sitting in a government office. It is very difficult to decide. Of course, the method of the American system of electing people to political life is that of trial and error, but as the trial and error system goes on into higher office, they gradually weed out some by reasons of failure of health, others by reasons of lack of desire or lack of interest, and others by reasons of inability or incompetence. It seems to me that in setting up some elective offices in the state you are preparing an avenue of ingress for the same people to be presented to the voters, and this method we have proposed is one of the methods used successfully in, as I said, the most populous and richest state in the union and in our national government level. So I personally do not feel you should attach too much importance to the "buddy-pal" package description of this type of administrative government, but weigh it strictly on its merits. I believe that by establishing this method we do open an avenue of ingress for people who have been subjected to the public will at the polls, and people who have been also subjected to day-by-day contact with our administrative government. I don't want you to get the impression there is one little channel through which people will flow to the head office of our state, but I think we must admit that in all high political offices other types of avenues have been opened. I think particularly in many of the states, it appears to me in the case of New Jersey for instance, the number of high appointive officials and the one elective governor, it seems to me the best avenue of ingress would then be through the legislature where they have been elected through part of the state, and that is always a fruitful field for people who are interested in and go to high places in our government, but also it seems to me that in casting around, the voters would probably indicate and select someone theoretically trained in political science. We have had the experience in our national life where men who come up for the offices of President or Vice President are men who have either been state legislators, then state governors, then congressmen perhaps, but very seldom ever does the head of an administrative department be nominated for office of President. The same applies to Vice President. There have been exceptions where, for instance, they selected and nominated Woodrow Wilson, who had been and was a political science professor. There have been men who have come into high public office through the academic field; there have been men who have come in through the business field; but through the years a general pattern establishes itself where the main portion of people trained for public office are drawn upon to be voted on by the people at the polls, and that general avenue determines the success and quality of men they choose, and I submit to you that the men who have been chosen for the chief executive and the assistant chief executive offices in the State of New York have been on the average good or better than any of the executives chosen in any states of our union. Therefore, I again urge that you seriously consider the plan the Committee has submitted. As you noted, I will submit the amendment after the word "election" stating that they will be elected jointly at a general election. Nominations then would be made in any manner prescribed by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I address a question to Mr. Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I have been trying to find out when the New York system was adopted. I see New Jersey instituted its system of a single governor in 1947. When was New York's adopted?

V. RIVERS: The New York Constitution is an old one. It was amended in 1948 and then amended again to its present form with minor modifications in 1953.

V. FISCHER: Was the joint election of governor and lieutenant governor adopted in 1958?

V. RIVERS: I can't answer.

HURLEY: 1938.

V. FISCHER: Thank you.

McLAUGHLIN: I would like to ask Mr. Rivers, in the last quarter of a century, could he tell me which governors of the State of New York served as lieutenant governors or in any subordinate capacity in the cabinet in the State of New York prior to their becoming governor? For your information Mr. Rivers, I'll give you the names. Thomas Dewey, Alfred E. Smith, Herbert Lehman and Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong, would you take the Chair? (Mr. Armstrong took the chair at this time.)

EGAN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that I realize that the Committee on the Executive has put in a lot of days, a lot of hours, just simply a lot of time on this particular question. What they have come up with they feel is the best that is possible. I know that and give them every credit and I have respect for their feelings, but I have not been completely in favor of this type of provision at any time since it was under Committee discussion. I am opposed to having the man who would be next in line in succession to the governorship not actually elected in some manner by the people of the new state. I would like to say as to that that I also have that feeling with relation to the Vice Presidency of the United States, that I am not in agreement with that particular means that we now use and have used all along through our history in providing for the Vice President of the United States. This feeling does not conflict at all with my feeling on the national level relative to that question. I feel that as Mr. Victor Rivers has stated, that if such an amendment -- I voted for the deletion of Section 6 -- with that feeling in mind, that actually a secretary of state won't be running for any office. The people won't have one thing to say about who shall be secretary of state under Section 6 as I read it. Someone will choose that particular man and he will become as Section 6 reads, "the governor of the State of Alaska." Now, if as Mr. Victor Rivers has stated, he will offer an amendment that will definitely guarantee to the people of Alaska that the man who will become secretary of state will be elected by the people in a primary election, then I would agree with going along with Section 6 if I knew that that particular amendment was going to be offered, and that we were going to have a chance to vote upon that. I also don't agree with the line of succession, with the secretary of state being appointed. I can see no reason why we should not have Section 6 as it is as well as accepting an amendment that would allow the governor to pick his own successor. I am not any more in agreement with that than I am with Section 6 as it is written now. In thinking this over, I am also not in agreement with having an amendment produced that will let the direct line of succession go from the governor, say in the manner that was suggested, that the secretary of state if the governor died, would call the legislators into session and then they would select the governor. I am not in agreement with that because the people do not elect the representatives to the legislatures and their senators with the idea that one of their number will become the governor of Alaska. I think that the best idea so far that I have heard is this particular proposal that we nominate, at least give the people some choice in the matter, it will be a real choice. Let them nominate the man who will run in the package with the candidates for governor in the general election. I think that that would be a proper means of allowing the people to elect their governor and also the successor to the governor. I would go along wholeheartedly with such a proposed amendment. That is my feeling on this question, and if I knew that that amendment was going to be adopted, I would then vote against the motion to strike Section 6 from the proposal.

CHAIRMAN ARMSTRONG: Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: May we have a five-minute recess?

V. RIVERS: I object. I wanted to just make a statement to Mr. Egan to this effect, that I had such an amendment on my desk. Out of deference to the fact that Mr. Buckalew had submitted an amendment and had then withdrawn it, I felt that he had precedence last evening in presenting this amendment, so I allowed him to present it before I put this one on the floor for the reason I felt he had precedence in his original submission and withdrawal.

CHAIRMAN ARMSTRONG: I believe if we would recess until 10 o'clock we could probably get this worked out. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

ARMSTRONG: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Egan?

(President Egan took the Chair at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I think that Mr. Davis put his finger on the problem when he said it was a matter of do we want to elect a secretary of state or do we want to appoint him. I am not too sure just how strong my convictions are, but I would like to say this, that one of the problems that has faced most of the states, and I think one of the reasons why there has been a swing away from elected officials is that for one thing, as the years go by the ballots become cluttered with elected officials. Of course, ours does not look as if it would be in much danger, except we do have our election of senators, representatives, and at least three members of Congress to elect plus initiatives and referendum and all that sort of thing, but the swing toward the appointment of officials has been to keep some sort of coordination in government. Any man elected by the people is pretty independent, and that is why you have a lack of coordination in government where you have a lot of elected officials. Another thing is that the voters become apathetic as time goes on and pretty soon you have a small percentage of people electing your officials, whoever they may be. One reason I don't think we should be too fearful of the governor's making a bad appointment is that we are giving him the authority to make all the other appointments. The secretary of state is actually an administrative official, really. Normally he has a lot of administrative functions, just as our present Secretary of Alaska has. He does not have to necessarily have the qualities that would make him a good governor, although he should be in very close touch with the governor as he would be under our thinking here, so that in the event of an emergency the executive department would continue to run smoothly when the governor was absent. So there is a good deal to be said on both sides, and so it seems to me it does boil down to just one thing, do we want the people to elect this man or do we want him appointed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, when the vote on the Buckalew amendment was announced, I was amazed. Do you remember when we were considering the initiative and referendum, how this body went wholeheartedly for allowing the people to have a hand in their government? It seemed to be the feeling of the assembly at that time that they should be allowed to initiate laws on their own without going through the legislative process. They should be allowed to recall officials and that certain matters should be referred to them by the legislature or the governor on occasion. Now the pendulum has swung the other way. We don't want the people to have a say in it at all. If we adopt this amendment of Mr. Buckalew's it will be the same as abolishing the republican form of government. It is true there is one official elected, only one, and he will be surrounded by his appointed satellites, and I would call that a dictatorship, in a mild form at least. Of course, his term runs out, but while he is in office it is a dictatorship. Now, it goes farther than that. If he appoints a secretary of state and the secretary of state succeeds him, he is appointing his successor. That is not done anywhere else under the American flag. It has been done in some South American countries. They tried to do it in Russia but one or the other of them is assassinated. That is not the American way. A dictatorship or ruled by one man, even if you don't call it a dictatorship, is efficient. The government can move quickly to accomplish anything. It is much more efficient than our usual government, but that is all that can be said for it. The American people have always chosen to elect their high officials, even if there are some disadvantages. They believe that it is worth it to have a say in their own government, and it is worth it in Alaska, too. I believe that the people should be allowed to elect more than two; not too many, we don't want to clutter up our government with elected officials whose interests might run counter to those of the governor, he should be able to work with his own team, but there is some point at which we must stop. If we do reconsider -- Mr. Rivers has an amendment -- I would like to point out that is a committee amendment. It was not just approved by one man, and we believe that it will correct a situation in that it will insure anyone being able to file in the primaries for the position of secretary of state without the necessity of the governor handpicking the candidate. I believe that we should vote to reconsider and vote against the Buckalew amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I will be brief. I agree with the line of demarcation as drawn by Mr. Davis and Mrs. Nordale. I think the thing to get settled here is whether we want an elected or an appointive secretary of state. I think the reason we got into this discussion probably was because the Committee compromised between a strong executive on the one hand and trying to give the voters another elected official on the other and I think we came out in all good faith, but as most compromises, it is something that is neither fish nor fowl. In answer to Mr. Boswell, I think it has been shown you can go the route of having a secretary of state elected; you can have candidates run in the primaries for governor and for secretary of state in both parties and then you can go on and say, pair up the highest in each race for each party and run them against each other in the general election; then you could have a truly elected secretary of state. The only trouble is that that promptly runs counter to the theory of the strong executive. As far as I am concerned, I don't have too strong of feelings one way or another, but this certainly has to be thrown in one direction or another. It appears to me that the Committee, in their anxiety to get this section back in, is talking more and more against the theory of the strong executive. I really feel that some amendment such as Mr. Hellenthal has suggested is more in keeping with the Committee's theory of the strong executive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have not spoken on this thing so far, and it occurs to me that maybe it is a matter of wording in our arguments here. I don't think the question is simply a matter of electing or appointing a secretary of state nor one of a strong or weak executive department. I think it goes a little further than that. In my mind it is a question of a very strong or a strong executive department. The word "strong" is a relative term. Certainly if we elected both officials at the general election separately we would have a stronger executive department than a great many states do who elect a dozen or so officials, so it is a relative term. Now, I think our executive government will be strong enough if we reconsider our previous action and adopt a method by which the people will elect the governor and secretary of state at the primary election; as Mr. White said, at the general election pair them off and put them in which will guarantee them being at least from the same political party, so I shall vote differently than I did before and vote against the Buckalew amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I'll speak once and forever more on this subject. To me, I feel that the Committee's plan is the best. We are talking about one thing, we are talking about the governor and his successor. The probability of a successor is possible but in general we can assume that the elected governor will carry out his term. There is a great deal of emphasis placed on the secretary of state becoming the governor. Now what we are talking about is efficiency in the state government, and we are selecting our man by the voice of the people and they are selected on a popularity basis with efficiency as a second regard. We try to get the most efficient man that is popular. In the Committee plan I do believe that you will receive the most efficient secretary of state, because if he is selected and if he is unpopular, it will be a detriment to the man running as governor. I believe like Mr. Nerland, I believe that in selecting a secretary of state we must select him for popularity but primarily for efficiency, which is the purpose of the whole executive department.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I support the Buckalew amendment and in turn the proposed amendment which Mr. Hellenthal is trying to submit. I feel that this issue is entirely a political issue within parties. I can see that under the particular system that we have here that we are just trying to pull a veil over the voters' eyes as to allowing them to elect a secretary of state because it ties them too closely to the governor. I could see that in a political convention that this Section 6, as written, would enable a party to set up a fairly strong piece of political machinery. I can't see where the primary election would do so good because we all know there are factions in political parties, and you know that from time to time in our past history we have had very strong feelings and splits in both major parties in Alaska, so I can see where we would have a strong man of one faction running for secretary of state and a strong man of the other faction running for governor, and if they were tied together in the general election it would not give you your Utopia of a strong executive. I feel that by appointing, that your governor-elect or your governor that becomes elected, would be more or less the leading figure of the political party that gained control of our government, and feel that to this end he should have the prerogative of choosing his own cabinet or major officials.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, along the lines of information as to what a proposed amendment will be if Section 6 is restored, I have drafted this at the request of the Committee.

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. It seems like we are getting too far afield from the matter at hand. I think we should vote on this thing. Everyone understands that there are going to be a number of amendments submitted to adjust this to what we hope will be acceptable to all. My point of order is that if we get aside and start reading a lot of other amendments and other material that don't pertain to the question at hand, I think we are just wasting our time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: As to your point of order, Mr. McCutcheon, we had gone on the assumption that this was so important that we allowed other amendments to be read by general consent. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Just for information, others have given information; I would like to give a little on behalf of the Committee as to what to look forward to if Section 6 is restored. Section 6, line 20, on page 2, after the word "governor", insert "he shall be nominated in the manner provided by law for candidates for other offices", and then we retain the rest of the section. That would mean that on any primary election system every candidate runs on his own candidacy. The secretary of state would run as provided by law for all other candidates, and if they ever abolished the system of primary election and went back to the convention system, your language would still be broad enough to make it flexible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I would like to say just a few words now. I think the matter of efficiency could be carried too far. If we wanted efficiency in government we possibly should hire a governor as well as the other officials. I think the people should have a chance to elect their governor and the second in succession and for that reason I would be against the Buckalew amendment, and would be in favor of Section 6 provided it could be corrected so that the people have a choice of who is nominated.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I have not spoken upon this matter before. I believe there has been a misconception as to the meaning of Section 6. I have been against the Buckalew amendment because I felt that the Section 6 possibly could be amended so that the objections that have been voiced to it could be met. Now, my thinking upon this particular matter is that the secretary of state would be nominated by his political party in the same manner that all other elected officials of the Territory would be selected; that is, at the present time we have the primary system and the person would be selected in the primary. He is selected in the same manner as the legislators and as the governor. Whoever chose to run for secretary of state upon the Republican party or for the Democratic party would be entitled to file his application or his nomination papers the same as anybody else and then after the primary election the man having the highest number of votes in that party would be automatically paired with the man who received the highest number of votes for the nomination for governor, and they would run as a unit but not individually, so that a vote for the governor would be a vote for the secretary of state. So now, after listening to all this argument, after talking to quite a number of the members yesterday and this morning, I think that there was a thought in the minds of many that the secretary of state was going to be a handpicked man. But I have never had that interpretation of it. If I felt that the secretary of state was going to be handpicked, the people were not going to be allowed to select that secretary of state by our system of nomination which at present is by the primary, I would be against Section 6, but where he is going to go on the ballot of the general election, how would he get on that ballot unless he was selected by the people in the primary? It is the only way he could do it. Now I have cooperated with Mr. Rivers here in that amendment. I think that should remove all objections here so that he could be nominated in the same manner as all other elected officials of the Territory, and then we can put in there that after nomination the man receiving the highest number of votes in the primary for secretary of state would be paired with the man receiving the highest number of votes for nomination for governor, and they would run by unit or along that particular line. I think that removes the objection of every person in this Convention, and I think an amendment along that line would meet with approval and get this matter settled and I think the only way to do it is to vote down the Buckalew amendment, and we'll get a new start by amending that Section 6, and get it back in there as amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I have heard a lot about this Buckalew amendment. I am not ashamed of the amendment even though one of the delegates referred to it as the "totalitarian amendment". I don't think I am a fascist because I introduced that amendment. If I said anything which was intemperate I apologize to this body, but I feel pretty strongly on this particular matter, and I seem to have strong feelings on practically everything that comes up on this floor. Maybe I got that from my mother. I don't know, but if I were the Chairman of this Committee and I had Mr. Hellenthal's amendment offered to me, and I had talked consistently and long for a strong executive, I would support Mr. Hellenthal's amendment without reservation. Now, I think that the Chairman of this Committee has got himself in an untenable position because even though we amend it according to the amendments that have been offered, you are going to, in effect, destroy the strong executive because we all know that in Alaska my party, which is the Democratic party, has splinter groups in it. The Republican party has splinter groups in it, and I can envision that you will have a secretary of state, although he is running under the same flag, who will be miles apart, and I support Mr. Hellenthal's proposed amendment, and I am for a strong executive, and I go along with Mr. Rivers' thinking on this matter to its logical conclusion. I think they should all be appointed.

SWEENEY: May I just have a few words to close, since it is my motion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I just wanted to say that I want to have a secretary of state elected. I want him compatible with the governor. I want him nominated in the primary and I want him teamed with the governor in the general election. That is all I want, and I do not believe that it is destroying the strong executive. To talk about splinters in either party, I think if you did happen to get one from one faction or one from another, it might be just the thing that would cement your party, and I hope you vote down the Buckalew amendment.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, point of clarification. Will the Chair explain what a "yes" vote means and a "no" vote means.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, Mr. Rivers, the Chair will. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?" Now if you vote "yes" you delete Section 6 from the committee proposal. If you vote "no" you retain Section 6 in the committee proposal. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, we have not voted on the reconsideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The moment Mrs. Sweeney moved her reconsideration it brought Section 6 before us automatically for debate, the amendment in its original form, and to vote "yes" you vote to delete Section 6 and if you vote "no" you vote to retain Section 6 in the proposal. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 9 - Buckalew, Coghill, Emberg, V. Fischer, Kilcher, Lee, Poulsen, Sundborg, White.

Nays: 46 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Tavlora, VanderLeest, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.)

CHIEF CLERK: 9 yeas, 46 nays.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption.

SUNDBORG: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 10:45 a.m. sharp.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, for the purpose of announcing and recognizing that in the gallery we have the Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the Department of Alaska, and the Department Service Officer, James Brunette.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Commander Brunette, we are happy to have you here with us. The Convention will stand at recess until 10:45 a.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, the Constitutional Convention has in the hall at the present time Sir Hubert Wilkins. He is not only a noted Arctic explorer, but he is one of us insofar as the first honorary doctor's degree, which he has accepted, from our own University of Alaska. I ask unanimous consent that Dr. Sir Hubert Wilkins be given the privilege of the floor at this time and be permitted to make some remarks.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Dr. Wilkins, we will be happy to hear from you.
(Standing applause)

DR. WILKINS: Ladies and gentlemen, I might pull an old boner and say this is an unexpected privilege, but I feel sure that all of you Alaskans have met with unexpected privileges since the time you arrived in this country, and all of us who are interested in Alaska are expecting many privileges as a result of your meeting here today, and because all the people that I meet in traveling around the various states of the Union and in other countries as well are turning their attention to this part of the world realizing its importance. I find that when people ask me to speak at public meetings they welcome the title I give them, and that is the "Importance of the Arctic in World Affairs." I believe this is a stage where the importance will be spread through the wide world, and its significance will be understood. I am looking forward as you are to the development. I am only too sorry that my time does not permit me to spend more of my work in Alaska, do more here for you, but you can be assured that my sympathy is with you and every opportunity I have I will try to help with what you are trying to produce in this great country of yours. It is a great privilege to be here and I want to thank you very much and very sincerely for this recognition. (Standing applause)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, in line with the remarks made before the last motion was voted on, to effectuate the ideas submitted and discussed in Committee and on this floor, I will submit an amendment at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit your amendment, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It is the committee amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "After the period following the word 'governor' on line 20 of Section 6 insert the following sentence, 'He shall be nominated in the manner provided by law for nominating candidates for other elective offices.' Delete the word 'election' on line 21; line 22, after the word 'law', insert 'for general elections'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Victor Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I will move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection?

HELLENTHAL: I object.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I might say this brings the matter up in regard to the election of the secretary of state in such a manner that he shall run in the primary in the same manner that the law shall provide for all other elective officials to run. It still also ties him into running on the joint ballot with the candidate for governor nominated for his party at the general election. That was the intent in discussing this that he would be nominated by the people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Miss Awes.

AWES: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may present your amendment, Miss Awes. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 18, page 2, strike the words 'secretary of state' and substitute 'lieutenant governor'; line 21, strike from 'and' through word 'governor' ending on line 2, page 3; line 2, page 3, strike 'secretary of state' and substitute 'lieutenant governor'; lines 4, and 5, page 3, strike words 'secretary of state' on both lines and in each case substitute 'lieutenant governor'."

AWES: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

LONDBORG: May we have it read again, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

AWES: Some of the delegates here were perhaps surprised at the amendment thinking that the idea of a lieutenant governor had been completely buried. That is what bothered me. I am afraid that the idea of a lieutenant governor was buried perhaps too soon. The only argument I have heard is that the lieutenant governor does not play too important a role and it costs money; therefore we should do away with him. Yes, it does cost something to have a lieutenant governor; you have to pay him a salary; you have a few extra lines on the ballot; you have to provide an extra room in the statehouse. When you come down to it, it costs only a drop in the bucket for the total cost of running a state. Therefore, I think the question is not what does he cost, but does he serve a purpose? I think he would serve one very real purpose. I agree we should elect a successor to the governor. I think Alaskans have been so fed up in the last 50 or 75 years with appointive governors that they don't want to hear the word again. However, it bothers me considerably to elect the secretary of state. I don't think we should put over what some people call a package deal and give the people the form of electing a secretary of state without the choice. On the other hand, to elect the secretary of state independently, we know there are not only different parties in Alaska but there is a lot of factionalism in the parties, and if you get a lieutenant governor who is of a different faction than the governor, because he isn't too effective while serving as lieutenant governor it would not make too much difference, but the secretary of state is right-hand man to the governor, and if you get a secretary of state who is of a different party or of a different faction in the same party, he can hamstring the governor and make our whole government ineffective for the whole four years he is in office, and I think the fact that we want a strong executive makes the problem even more pressing, and therefore I suggest that we consider or reconsider, as the case may be, the idea of having a lieutenant governor in the State of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Miss Awes be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: I am a bit confused. Would the secretary read the section as it would read if it were amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the secretary read the section as it would read if it were amended.

CHIEF CLERK: "There shall be a lieutenant governor who shall have the same qualifications as the governor. He shall be nominated in the manner provided by law for nominating candidates for other elective offices. He shall be elected at the same time and for the same term as the governor. The candidate for lieutenant governor who runs jointly with a successful candidate for governor shall be elected lieutenant governor. The lieutenant governor shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law and as may be delegated to him by the governor."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I would like to address one question to Miss Awes. In distinguishing between the two titles did you mean to distinguish between duties in your discussion, Miss Awes?

AWES: Yes, I did. I was proposing a lieutenant governor in the traditional sense and then have the usual appointment of secretary of state by the governor to perform the duties of a secretary of state.

RILEY: In the last sentence of the section, did you propose to submit another amendment in that respect?

AWES: Frankly, I did not know whether to strike that sentence or not, so for the time being I left it alone. If it is confusing it should be stricken because I am proposing a lieutenant governor in the traditional sense.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: "The candidate for the lieutenant governor who runs with the successful candidate for governor shall be elected" -- in leaving that sentence in, did you mean to retain the original idea that the two would run together at the general election? You struck that earlier part -- I just wondered what your thinking was.

AWES: I think maybe that sentence should be stricken too because I think the lieutenant governor should run independently the same as any other officers on the ballot.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask that one of the sentences be stricken?

AWES: Yes, I think the sentence Mrs. Nordale referred to: "The candidate for the lieutenant governor who runs jointly with the successful candidate for governor shall be elected." I think that should be stricken also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is that on page 3?

AWES: First sentence beginning on page 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask that the deletion of that sentence be added to your proposed amendment? Is there objection? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I was confused. I think maybe now I am straightened out. You intend it to be possible for a governor to be elected from one party and a lieutenant governor from the other party?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: Well, I think the two officers should be elected independently. I don't know too much about election procedures, I will frankly admit and the main thing is to get the idea of an independent lieutenant governor as they have in other states, before the people. As to procedure, if somebody wants to make further amendments to this section, I have no objection, but that was my idea that we have a lieutenant governor in the traditional sense as they have in most states.

WHITE: As your amendment now stands, it is distinctly possible to have a governor elected from one party and a lieutenant governor elected from another party, unless it is further amended?

AWES: As a practical matter I don't think that is apt to happen.

WHITE: But it is possible?

AWES: Yes, I think it is possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The addition to the amendment has been adopted and that is that that sentence on page 3, "The candidate for the secretary of state who runs jointly with the successful candidate for governor shall be elected secretary of state." That sentence has become a part of Miss Awes' original amendment. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I was just going to ask if the Chief Clerk read into this section the amendment that was just adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

TAYLOR: And I would like to ask Miss Awes one question if I could through the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Miss Awes, then you intend to offer a further amendment in this matter so that if you elected the lieutenant governor, then you will make other amendments in Section 7 where the secretary of state is named?

AWES: Yes. There would have to be some changes made in Section 7. If I may, I would like to request about a two-or three-minute recess and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the Convention standing at recess for two or three minutes? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Miss Awes.

AWES: If nobody else cares to speak, I will make my closing remarks.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I seconded Miss Awes' motion so I wanted to speak on it. I had no objections to changing the title of secretary of state to lieutenant governor, using the same machinery that we had, but as I understand Miss Awes' position now, he should run independently and perhaps even be of a different political party. I think that Miss Awes' amendment should be promptly voted down.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have always been a supporter of statehood, but, of course, I have always presumed that good sense would prevail, and in our first days of the statehood we would run it on a rather economical basis, and I would like to point out that Mrs. Hermann has stated that the chief objection to statehood by those who are against it has been the cost of supporting a state government. Now, if we had a lieutenant governor who, in the traditional method, has been nothing but a figurehead drawing a high salary, add that expense to the greater number of legislators provided, and the people reading this constitution, going to the polls to ratify it, I am afraid it will turn them against it. Now, if we merely change the title, if we take this same section and make the lieutenant governor a working man, give him the same duties as the secretary of state, but call him a lieutenant governor, that is still bad for the same reason that people know what a lieutenant governor is. Traditionally throughout the United States he is a figurehead, and I'm afraid they won't quite absorb this and they will think we are putting a man on the payroll to do nothing. They might understand the title, secretary of state. A secretary usually works I know our secretary does. I think this is bad policy all the way around. We should support the section as it stands.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Yesterday, during all the debate here I think there was no one that spoke about a lieutenant governor unless they mentioned it was a front, you might say a public relations man in a way, and some referred to it as a sinecure, and I believe that that connotation as to lieutenant governor has been perhaps deserved in many instances. So I think now if we would set up a lieutenant governor by this amendment of Miss Awes we are just adding, you might say, a cushy job to somebody as a sinecure just for the purpose of having the name, but we still have to appoint a secretary of state to do the work that is contemplated under the way the section is now without any further expense. I think it would just be an added expense and an unnecessary officer in the state government if we adopt this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I will make a few remarks in closing. I think that the question was asked and the remarks made indicate some confusion as to the purpose of my amendment. In the first place, I think that I answered in my opening argument Mr. Barr's objection to the cost. I agree we should not create offices just to run up the cost of government, but I think that first we should consider, is this an office that we need? Does this office serve a purpose? And I think it does, and again, as Mr. Barr said and Mr. Taylor perhaps indicated, I just wanted to change the name from lieutenant governor to secretary of state and let the lieutenant governor perform the functions of the secretary of state. There is nothing further from my mind. The whole idea is that I think we should elect not only the governor, but also the successor to the governor, but I don't think that that successor who may be somebody who opposes the governor in policy should be the righthand man to the governor as the secretary of state probably will be. Therefore, I do think the lieutenant governor does serve a purpose. Now the question has also been raised, would it be possible to have a lieutenant governor of another party? I think perhaps it is possible. I think that the way it is set up in the states that it is possible. As a practical matter I don't think it will often happen, and if somebody could provide an amendment that would assure that the people elected a lieutenant governor -- not just in form, but actually a lieutenant governor and still of the same party I would be the first to vote for such an amendment. I personally don't know how to do it, but I think the danger of having the two of separate parties, which won't happen very often, is still preferable to either not allowing in actuality the people to elect your successor to the governor or to let them elect independently someone who may hamstring the governor for four years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Miss Awes be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "yea", all opposed "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I now move reconsideration of my vote on Mr. Robertson's amendment to Section 2.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers now moves reconsideration of his vote on Mr. Robertson's amendment to Section 2.

HELLENTHAL: I thought we were considering Section 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The move for reconsideration, Mr. Hellenthal, is in order at any time that the maker or the person who served notice so desires.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, after the word 'states' on line 5, insert 'and of this state'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, after I voted for recognizing state citizenship yesterday, Mr. Buckalew came up with that rare stroke of brilliance which pointed out that thus far we have not been citizens of any State of Alaska; we are a Territory. Therefore, we have only enjoyed citizenship as citizens of the United States. After we injected in here that you had to be a citizen for seven years, a citizen of the state for seven years, we would be all disqualified to be governors for seven years, including the various proponents of that at the outset, and Mr. Buckalew said we had "pulled a boner" or words to that effect. I thoroughly agree with him. After we stop and analyze this thing we would have to wait seven years to be eligible in this particular respect, and it only confuses the matter. He said this was going to cause a lot of trouble and I think it would. So the purpose of the reconsideration is to have us vote again on that particular amendment. Mr. Robertson tried to withdraw it but encountered objection and it went to vote and we voted to insert "and of this state", but without fully comprehending what we did at that time, so I urge that we vote the opposite way this next time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: I don't feel too strongly. I would like the term "citizen of the state" to be left in. Whether it makes any difference or not -- the ordinance of transitional measures will contain an ordinance to the effect that citizens of the United States residing in the Territory of Alaska will become citizens of the state. That is one of our general clauses along with the continuation of laws, so that particular point will be provided for. Now, if it is the wish of the delegates to also provide for it here, it would have no effect either way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I supported merely an assertion somewhere in the constitution of the principle of citizenship in the State of Alaska. I don't concur with Mr. Ralph Rivers that we imposed the requirement of seven years' state citizenship as a condition for nomination for the elected governor, but I will gladly agree and fully at this point with Mr. Ralph Rivers because of Mr. McNealy's statement that recognition of state citizenship is given in transitional matters.

PRESIDENT.EGAN: I wonder if it would be in order if the Chief Clerk would read Section 2 in its entirety as it would appear at this time.

CHIEF CLERK: "The governor shall be not less than thirty years of age, and shall have been for at least seven years a citizen of the United States and of this state and a resident of this state seven years next preceding his election."

HELLENTHAL: I think that displays some weakness in our system here because it was only through the timing that that clause got inserted after the words recognizing United States citizenship because when the vote was taken we merely voted to recognize state citizenship. There was no qualifying language on it at that time, so it is merely a procedural weakness.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I spoke yesterday against using the phrase "citizen of the state" in Section 2, and I will speak again against it today. My argument is pretty much a legal argument. The whole question of residence, domicile and citizenship is one of the most confused in the law. We have not been as concerned about it in the past as we will be when we get statehood because in the past we haven't been a state and there has not been this interrelation with other states. But the Constitution of the United States says that, "A citizen of the United States shall be a citizen of the state wherein he resides." Therefore, before we put in the words "a citizen of the state" we provided that he would have to be a citizen of the United States and a resident of the state, and then by virtue of the words in the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution he thereby becomes a citizen of the state. I know enough about court interpretation to know that the court is interpreting a section of either a constitution or a statute, they say that the words were deliberately put in, they must mean something. They will say, "These people who drew up this constitution must mean something. What did they mean out of the ordinary in the words 'resided' and 'citizens'." It seems to me that there are two things we can accomplish by putting the words "citizen of the state" in there. We can cause confusion and we can make additional work for the lawyers for the next 50 or 100 years. I can't see we accomplish anything else. Yesterday, just before we voted, it was said that these words were used in two new constitutions, New Jersey and Hawaii. I got these two constitutions since we voted and I read them. In the qualifications for governor the language used is almost identical with what came out of the Committee. The particular sections in which the words "resident" and "citizen" were used in each case were dealing with an entirely different matter, and I don't think had any bearing on the particular problem before us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I would like to point out in studying the article that the Executive Committee has put out, in Section 16 on page 7, they have provided that the heads of principal departments appointed under this division shall be citizens of the state and shall have resided in the state for at least three years next preceding their appointment. I would like to address a question to the Chairman of considering this provision at that place.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Well, it seems to me that it is at the appropriate place now. The "citizens of the state" was adopted prior to the adoption of "seven years citizenship of the United States", and after considering, as we have, the insertion of those words and hearing the arguments against the insertion of those words, I think they should be removed and possibly right at this time is the best time to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The language of the Federal Constitution is brief and clear on this subject, and I think makes it unnecessary to have Mr. Robertson's amendment in the article. It says in the Fourteenth Amendment, "All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the only question that arises in my mind when we do attain statehood is, is there some fashion devised in some of the documents that are under consideration or will be under consideration wherein our residence in the Territory of Alaska carries over into residency of the state? If it is written up here that he must be a resident of the state, obviously we could not have any government until everybody had been here for three or five or seven years. The question is, in my mind, should we be a resident of Alaska to make it clear? Or is there a legal device in this constitution that will make a carry-over of residency into statehood?

BUCKALEW: The transitional measures will take care of that residence question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to call the delegates' attention to the fact that when I first offered this amendment I was going to insert it right after the words "shall be", and then Mrs. Nordale and Mr. Rivers asked me to put it in its present place, which I did, and my idea was not to make it citizen of the state for seven years, but to have him as citizen of this state. Now I submit to you, despite what the Constitution of the United States says, and I recognize its authority and its correctness, that you can be a resident of a state without being a citizen of that state and unless you have some qualifying language, modifying language of the word "governor", a person can become governor of Alaska under this section who is not a citizen of the State of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, we originally included the word "citizen" as one of the qualifications for judges in the judiciary article as a requirement that he be a state citizen. I agree substantially with everyone in the place who has spoken on the subject of citizenship and to support Mr. Robertson among others, I will quote after the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment they had cases that say, "The term 'citizen' is distinguishable from 'residence' or 'inhabitant'. One may be a citizen of a state without being an inhabitant or an inhabitant without being a citizen." They cite Travis against Yale and Towne Manufacturing Company, 252 US 60, which was decided long after the Fourteenth Amendment. Frankly, I am now in agreement with Mr. Rivers that if we put it in there now we will thoroughly and thoroughly confuse because the word "citizen" and "citizenship", however, usually include the idea of "domicile". We are running around in a circle for the sake of clarity, and to save confusion, I recommend very strenuously, since there is so much debate and so much confusion, the words "citizen of the state" be stricken from the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us the proposed amendment that has been offered by Mr. Robertson yesterday, and the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Robertson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adopting of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Is this section still open for amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: At the present time we had reached Section 6. We will come back to that. Are there other amendments to Section 6?

HELLENTHAL: I have an amendment to Section 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment to Section 6 as offered by Mr. Hellenthal.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 20, strike everything after 'nor' through 'state' on line 4, page 3, and substitute the following: 'He shall be appointed by the governor.' And on line 5 insert 'administrative' before 'duties'. Section 7, line 12, page 3, delete the words 'person elected'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: I ask that the Secretary read Section 6 as it would read if this amendment is adopted. I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

MARSTON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the section as it would read if Mr. Hellenthal's proposed amendment were adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "There shall be a secretary of state who shall have the same qualifications as the governor. He shall be appointed by the governor. The secretary of state shall perform such administrative duties as may be prescribed by law and as may be delegated to him by the governor." And then down in Section 7 take out the words "person elected" on line 12.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. As a matter of fact, he is seeking to amend two sections at the same time with one amendment. I have no objection; it is just a matter that I want to be sure we are not going to establish a precedent here by amending the whole article at one time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is an amendment that directly relates to this particular question, Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: I will yield.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I thought maybe somebody wanted to talk on this. I don't particularly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye"; all opposed, by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. There again the Chair noted that very few people voted; I mean the number that could have voted even in adopting the proposed amendment, while it was in the majority, it was easy to tell that lots of people did not vote at all. Are there other amendments to Section 6? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, just on that point, I wonder, is it not the duty of every person to vote on every question whether it is a voice or roll call vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, Mr. Sundborg. It is the duty of every delegate to vote on the voice vote same as a roll call. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Are we going to question Section 7 now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no other amendments to Section 6.

KILCHER: I just wonder whether Section 6 as it stands now is expressing what I understand to be the intent of the majority of the delegates. I for one am not seeing the issue clearly. I think we lost a lot of time and accomplished little this morning and last night. I don't know if that could be achieved.

GRAY: Point of order. What is the discussion before the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing before the house. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Question of the Chair, if I so may. Since the next sections are tied in somewhat with Section 6, I think we should now frankly consider if any amendments are necessary. I have none.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You mean to make these other sections conform with Section 6 as they now read?

KILCHER: Yes, and to make the intent that has been generally expressed here implemented. I am frankly confused.

HELLENTHAL: Point of information. Could Section 6 as it now reads be slowly read to us so we can take it down? Could you read it slowly so I could take it down?

CHIEF CLERK: That is right there in the copy.

HELLENTHAL: My copy is so butchered up I have no place for insertions.

CHIEF CLERK: "There shall be a secretary of state who shall have the same qualifications as the governor. New material. "He shall be nominated in the manner provided by law for nominating candidates for other elective offices. He shall be elected at the same time and for the same term as the governor and the procedure prescribed by law." Delete the word "election". "The procedure prescribed by law for general elections shall provide that the electors in casting their vote for governor shall also be deemed to be casting their vote for the candidate for secretary of state shown on the ballot as running jointly with the respective candidate for governor. The candidate for secretary of state who runs jointly with the successful candidate for governor shall be elected secretary of state. The secretary of state shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law and as may be delegated to him by the governor."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels that the question that was asked by Mr. Kilcher was, are there any other necessary amendments to the following sections in order to make them conform completely with Section 6 as it is now written. Is that right?

KILCHER: Yes, Mr. President. Is this the first time we are going over this? Are you going over it again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will attempt to go over it once more. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: In Section 7, starting on line 15, "In case of a vacancy in the office of governor because of his death, resignation, impeachment, or removal..." -- there is no mention made of temporary absence.

BARR: Point of order. I believe our usual procedure is to have the chairman of the committee explain the section. I know in this case it would answer Mr. Cooper's objections.

COOPER: I was just going to get to that. There was just one more thing I wanted to add to it. It was discussed yesterday and you asked if there were other amendments. Nobody got to their feet. Temporary absence should be covered in this section.

BARR: Look at line 19. If we could have the Chairman explain this Mr. Cooper would have his objections answered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, the Chairman has explained the whole proposal.

COOPER: May I have the floor on a point of personal privilege for one minute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Cooper.

(Mr. Cooper spoke on a matter of personal privilege at this time.)

COOPER: My reason for bringing this up is it states that the emoluments of the office of governor shall devolve upon the person elected secretary of state. He will get a higher rate of pay for serving during a temporary absence?

V. RIVERS: We discussed this yesterday and if you will notice in line 20, it says, "the powers and duties shall devolve upon the secretary of state. I believe it was Delegate Gray that made the suggestion that those words be changed: "Secretary of state shall become acting governor." That is only in case of temporary absence. That would cover your doubt, would it not?

COOPER: Yes, sir.

V. RIVERS: I was just drafting that amendment at this time to submit to the body. We talked this over at some length in Committee, and as I explained yesterday, I thought the words, "powers and duties" covered it. I see no objection to specifically stating that, "The secretary of state shall become acting governor", and I think I speak for the whole Committee when I say that I do not believe they would object to the wording either. It was your suggestion, was it not, Mr. Gray, along the same line as Mr. Cooper is speaking?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have such an amendment to offer at this time, Mr. Cooper? Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I have it written out except for a couple of words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: May I ask a question? Line 17, the word "impeachment" appears. Is conviction on impeachment, is that the same thing? Is impeachment only the process of leading toward conviction?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, do you have the answer on that?

V. RIVERS: I think I do. The actual act of impeachment is the actual removal from office. The motion for impeachment is brought and the hearing is had, and the impeachment itself, as I understand it, constitutes the actual completion of the process. There might be others who would care to add to that or differ from my interpretation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: It looks to me that this matter is taken care of as clearly as it possibly could be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have a proposed amendment here, or is this on this question of impeachment?

TAYLOR: Yes, on this particular question. Because in the sentence it says, "In case of vacancy in the office of governor because of his death, resignation, impeachment, or removal, his powers, duties and emoluments shall devolve upon the secretary of state." Now each one, in each instance there, that vacating the office of governor is permanent. He certainly can't come back from death or resignation or impeachment or removal, but it was necessary to put in line 19 in case of temporary absence of the governor from the office the powers and duties only devolve upon the secretary of state during that temporary absence. He doesn't get the emoluments of the office which is the salary. He only performs the duties, he has the power to perform the duties of the governor until he returns. That had to be stated that way because there is a difference. In one case he is coming back shortly, in the other case he is going away permanently.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, Section 7, lines 20 and 21, after the first word 'the' strike the words 'powers and duties shall devolve upon the secretary of state' and insert in lieu thereof 'secretary of state shall become the acting governor'."

V. RIVERS: I think, as I stated before, the Committee recommendation, "the powers and duties shall devolve upon", without mentioning the emoluments, and it states specifically what the secretary of state would become in the absence of the governor. I don't know whether the term "acting governor" would imply that by acting he should receive the emoluments or not. That is why we did not adopt that phraseology in the Committee. After further discussion, I feel that myself and many of the Committee members will desire to decide as to which wording is the more suitable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you move the adoption of the proposed amendment, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Now that there is something before the Convention, I would like to say that in other places here that in cases of death or the impeachment, or resignation of the governor, the secretary of state becomes the governor, not the acting governor. So he becomes the governor then, and that is why he is named as a successor of the governor in those particular cases, but for temporary absence he is not. I think that the amendment should be voted down and this should be left just exactly as it is because I think it expresses the sentiment of the Committee.

BARR: Could we have the amendment read, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, Section 7, lines 20 and 21, after the first word 'the' strike the words 'powers and duties shall devolve upon the secretary of state' and insert in lieu thereof 'secretary of state shall become the acting governor'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have an amendment to the amendment which I could submit orally. One line 17, after the word "removal", delete the rest of the sentence and substitute the following: "The secretary of state shall become the governor."

PRESIDENT EGAN: As an amendment to the amendment?

R. RIVERS: That adds a little wording at the same point in the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: But it is on a different matter, Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Then, Mr. President, I will assure Mr. Taylor and others interested that if the present amendment passes I will offer this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, may I ask one question. Is this a committee amendment?

V. RIVERS: This is submitted by the Committee only at request of delegates who feel it might clarify the wording. The Committee members should reserve their right on this in regard to their vote, because certainly we felt in bringing it out originally that the wording covered it. It is hard to interpret which is the better wording and so for that reason it is not necessarily endorsed by all of the Committee. They have the privilege of their own stand on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 29 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, VanderLeest, Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 24 - Barr, Boswell, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Harris, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Laws, McCutcheon, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Sweeney, Taylor, Wien.

Absent: 2 - Hilscher, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 29 yeas, 24 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have an amendment to offer.

NORDALE: May I have the privilege of the floor for a few minutes?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

(Mrs. Nordale spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, line 17, after the word 'removal' delete the rest of the sentence and substitute the words 'the secretary of state shall become the governor'."

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I move the adoption of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

POULSEN: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Just briefly, it would read as follows: "In case of a vacancy in the office of governor because of death, resignation, impeachment or removal, the secretary of state shall become the governor." I think it is clear and simpler than to say, "The governor's powers, duties and emoluments shall devolve upon the secretary of state." I think we might as well say that he shall become the governor so I put it this way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: I am beginning to agree with Mrs. Nordale. On the last amendment I voted "yes" because I thought it was the wish of the Committee. Now, if we amend this, going back to an original question asked by Mr. Cooper, the word "impeachment" literally translated means the institution of any charges. If anybody institutes any charges in the legislature under Mr. Rivers' amendment, then automatically the governor is out of office, and the secretary of state succeeds.

R. RIVERS: Will you yield a moment?

McLAUGHLIN: Yes.

R. RIVERS: It is merely to a fact that that sentence says "vacancy caused by impeachment", so there is no vacancy if the impeachment charges don't carry. Therefore, we are not in conflict.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: A question, Mr. Rivers, if I may. If impeachment charges are upheld, does that not mean removal automatically? Could we not just leave the impeachment?

R. RIVERS: Right. A vacancy would be caused only if the impeachment is upheld, and the mere institution of the impeachment proceedings does not cause a vacancy, so we are not in conflict here. This is perfectly all right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I just looked in the big book back here to ascertain what "impeachment" meant. I thought I knew what it meant, too. It says in part: "Calling before a proper tribunal for high crime." Now I agree with Mr. McLaughlin 100 per cent. He has exactly the same thing. Impeachment, if there is a proceeding instituted, it means in this case that the governor is out whether it carries or not. It is the actual trial of the matter, whether it carries or not.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, this is a littler book than he looked in, but "Impeachment of the governor", within the meaning of Section 16, Article VI of the Constitution, this is referring, I presume, to Oklahoma, "is the adoption of the articles of impeachment by the house of representatives, a criminal proceeding against a public office before a quasi-political court, instituted by a written accusation called 'articles of impeachment'." For example, a written accusation by the House of Representatives of the United States to the Senate of the United States against an officer, that is, the impeachment is the proceeding and not the conclusion, so literally under the interpretation of impeachment it means that you made the charges and he is automatically dismissed without a proceeding or a finding. That is why I recommend not changing the well-thought-out considerations of the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: The interpretation I gave on impeachment I based on impeachment proceedings in the United States Congress against President Johnson. Impeachment proceedings were instituted but he was not impeached. If there are different interpretations to the word, then I will certainly withdraw my interpretation because I am not adequately prepared to decide at this time whether or not the word "impeachment means the institution of the proceedings or the actual completion of the proceedings. I would like very much to have it clarified.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I want to ask Mr. McLaughlin if the institution of an impeachment proceedings would automatically cause a vacancy in the office of governor?

McLAUGHLIN: No. Under the interpretation here where we have impeachment or removal, the removal would seem to indicate that that is something that follows impeachment or results in a removal, but impeachment as such automatically the institution of charges would remove the governor under some interpretations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I can't follow Mr. McLaughlin's interpretation of the word "impeachment". We are not acting upon impeachment here. We are acting upon the vacancy caused by the impeachment. If you carry impeachment out to its logical end, its removal, he is removed by impeachment. The vacancy is caused by impeachment. It is the whole proceedings, when you use the word "impeachment", that lead to the vacancy in the office, the permanent vacancy, that the impeachment was upheld. It looks to me like it is kind of pontificating upon the obvious in this particular matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll, with the following result:

Yeas: 16 - Armstrong, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Kilcher, Laws, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, Sundborg, Taylor. Walsh, Mr. President.

Nays: 37 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, R. Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Wien.

Absent: 2 - V. Fischer, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 37 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I now ask for a minute on the privilege of the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Rivers, you have the floor on the question of privilege.

(Mr. Ralph Rivers spoke on the question of privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will try and answer the question in this manner, that it was the understanding as I interpreted the wishes of the Committee that his title, powers, duties and emoluments would succeed to the secretary of state. I don't believe that there was any controversy or dissension in the Committee on that point. As a matter of clarification of wording, I would say that the title was one of the implied things that would carry along with the title, powers, duties and emoluments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: I objected and voted against the amendment for the identical purpose in accordance with Mrs. Nordale's wishes that we wanted to have it transferred to Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I am a member of Style and Drafting and I am worried about this sort of thing. The section as it was clearly in my opinion stated the intent of the Committee. I think the amendment, either of the amendments offered, were totally unnecessary. Since they were offered, if they were adopted, that was fine and dandy, but if the amendments are offered and voted down as the last one was, I am fearful that Style and Drafting may not carry out the intent of the body by using that language because the body has voted it down. I think we should be careful about offering amendments where they are not necessary, where Style and Drafting can, in shorter language possibly or clearer language, state the intention of the body. I don't think we should offer amendments, but if they are offered, I think we should vote for them because we are tying the hands of Style and Drafting to take care of the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I think I might be able to clarify this. Follow the first part of Section 7 and this follows the thoughts as we had them in the Committee: "In case the governor-elect shall die", this is before that person takes office or in case he fails to qualify, "the powers, duties, and emoluments of the office of governor shall devolve upon the person elected secretary of state", and reading on down, "for the term which the governor-elect was elected." Now in that particular place we did not want to say he would become governor because then it would mean he would become governor in place of the one that was still filling out the remainder of his term. That applied to the governor-elect, and it might be that we carried that same language on into the second sentence. Now in that line I would say Style and Drafting could --

JOHNSON: Point of order. I don't believe there is anything before us. I therefore move we stand at recess until 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30. Are there committee announcements? Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Meeting of Ordinance Committee. I would like to have all members present in the gallery immediately following the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A meeting of the Ordinance Committee in the gallery immediately following the recess. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: There will be a meeting of the Executive Committee at 12:45 to hear any of the delegates at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A meeting of the Executive Committee at 12:45 to hear any of the delegates who wish to be heard at that time. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to announce that the Resources Committee will meet in the lobby of the Northward Building tomorrow at 2 o'clock instead of in the Polaris Building as previously announced. It is merely a change of locality.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Resources Committee will meet tomorrow in the lobby of the Northward Building at 2 o'clock. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Style and Drafting Committee will meet at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at room 1013 of the Polaris Building.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Style and Drafting Committee will meet at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in room 1013 of the Polaris Building.

SWEENEY: Engrossment and Enrollment at 1 o'clock today.

RILEY: Mr. President, a one-minute meeting of Rules immediately upon recess.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration would like to have the intent of the Convention as to their adjournment time this afternoon so as to notify the food service and also find out whether we could have our meeting. We would like to have a meeting this afternoon and I would call it for the 3 o'clock recess, but we might recess at that time for the weekend.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Convention know its intention at this time? Mr. McNeas.

McNEES: Is there any reason why we should not work through until 9:30 as we have been doing?

COGHILL: Could we have a show of hands for 3:45?

PRESIDENT EGAN: A show of hands as to the 3:45 time? Without counting hands it seems evident that the Convention will adjourn at 3:45 this afternoon.

COGHILL: I would like to announce a meeting of the Committee on Administration at 1:00 p.m.

NERLAND: The Finance Committee will meet at 12:30 tomorrow afternoon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is nothing else the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The President would like to inform the delegates that the stenotypist is ill this afternoon and will take the information off the tapes at a later time. Do we have a pending amendment? Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: Mr. President, may I revert to committee reports?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will revert to committee reports at this time. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 5 has compared it with the original and finds it correctly engrossed and the enrolled copy will be placed on the desks of the delegates this afternoon. There is one typographical error in the mimeographed enrolled copy which you will receive, and it is just a matter on page 4, line 14, changing the "house" of the legislature, should be the "houses". That is the only error and I think it is not too bad. I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the report.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the report of the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment with relation to Committee Proposal No. 5. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the report is ordered adopted and Committee Proposal No. 5 is referred to the Style and Drafting Committee. Is there pending amendment to Committee Proposal No. 10a?

V. RIVERS: I have a couple of minor committee amendments to be submitted in just a moment or two.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have them ready, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I have some of it ready.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit the proposed amendment. What section?

V. RIVERS: That applies to page 2.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, page 2, line 14, strike the word 'term' and insert in lieu thereof the word 'tenure'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I move and ask unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. It is a matter of definition of "term" and "tenure" came up and it was discussed and was decided that the term "tenure" was best suited to that use.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Point of information. Will it change the word "term" to "tenure" throughout the article?

V. RIVERS: No, only in that one particular case.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment? If not, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have another amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, line 17, strike the word 'impeachment'; after the word 'his' insert the word 'title'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It was felt in Committee that the word "impeachment" was covered by the word "removal" and that it was unnecessary in there and in view of the questionable interpretation of it during discussion, it was decided in Committee to remove it. The insertion of the word "title" was to cover the discussion from the floor this morning in regard to insuring that he had his title conveyed as well as the emoluments. I move and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent --

ROBERTSON: I didn't quite get that where the word "title" comes in.

V. RIVERS: The word "title" comes in between "his" and "powers", line 17. "His title, powers, duties, and emoluments shall devolve..." It clarifies any question as to whether the title succeeds with the office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of the proposed amendment?

V. RIVERS: Excuse me, Mr. President, that should be also inserted on line 11, the word "title", between "the" and "powers".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, that amendment will be included in the original proposed amendment, and if there is no objection, it is so ordered. If there is no objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment, it is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments?

V. RIVERS: I have one other amendment which I will read to you. I haven't got it completely drafted yet, but it is on page 4, line 4, after the word "acting", strike through the word "term" on line 15 and substitute the following: "A vacancy in the office of governor shall be filled as prescribed by law." Now the effect of this amendment is to wipe out the order of succession as established here after the secretary of state has become governor and allow it to be prescribed by the legislature. In Committee it was unanimous that that was agreeable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would include the insertion of a period after the word "acting"?

V. RIVERS: No, I believe the period would be stricken and the sentence would just be continued. It would read this way then, "If for any reason the secretary of state is incapable of acting, a vacancy in the office of governor shall be filled as prescribed by law." The line down at the bottom of that paragraph, "No election of a secretary of state shall be had in any event except at the time of electing a governor...", that would remain in. I will move and ask unanimous consent, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments?

V. RIVERS: There is one other amendment, Mr. President. On page 7, line 18, Section 16, place a period after the word "governor"; strike down to "successors" on line 20. That line would then read: "Such single executive shall be nominated and appointed by the governor, with the advice and consent of the legislature, and shall serve at the pleasure of the governor." I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mrs. Sweeney?

SWEENEY: There seems to be a little confusion. I'm not clear that what he told us is actually what he means. On line 17, you change the word "senate" to "legislature"?

V. RIVERS: That was changed in a previous amendment. I asked that in an amendment yesterday morning, I believe. I named a number of them and have them marked on mine. We had referred to "confirmation by the senate".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, with the cooperation of the Chief Clerk, we now have the amendment in the form that I desire to present it. I would now like to ask the Chief Clerk to read the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, page 7, line 17, delete 'senate' and insert 'legislature in joint session'. Line 18, strike from the word 'governor' through 'successors' on line 20."

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection. Mr. Rivers, first the Chair will ask unanimous consent that the original proposed amendment that we did not act upon, be withdrawn. If there is no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent and move the adoption of this amendment. This is a committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I object to the striking of the word "senate" and including the word "legislature in joint session".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

R. RIVERS: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers seconds the motion.

V. RIVERS: I might explain that. This section in its present printed form, was set up prior to the adoption of the legislative section so now in order to make it conform to the legislative section we have to change the confirmation of appointees by the senate to appointees by the houses of the legislature in joint session, so that would make it in uniformity with what we previously adopted, Mr. Johnson. That is our problem, to make it uniform with the legislative proposal that was adopted.

JOHNSON: I still object. I believe we have adopted a bicameral legislature and we ought to operate as one.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye". All opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I didn't get the part he struck.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment that we have just adopted. Read the section as it will read with the amendment in it.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16. The head of each principal department shall be a single executive, unless otherwise provided by law. Such single executive shall be nominated and appointed by the governor, with the advice and consent of the legislature in joint session, and shall serve at the pleasure of the governor, except as herein otherwise provided with respect to the secretary of state."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to the section? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I might add, before we close the committee reports, that there are three or four places in this proposal where we must change the word "senate" to "legislature in joint session". I will submit that at a later time so that we make this in uniformity with the legislative proposal we adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, while we are discussing Section 16, I have an amendment to Section 16.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, we hadn't yet really come to Section 16 except that the Committee was offering these changes in an attempt to make it conform, but you will have an opportunity to offer your amendment. Are there amendments to Section 7? Section 8? Section 9? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: In line 20, page 4, Section 9, it provides that, "The salary of the governor shall not be diminished during his term of office." In the judicial article we adopted a somewhat similar provision in which we have said the salaries should not be diminished during the term in office except on a general decrease as to all state officers. I am wondering if it was the intention of the Committee to make a difference in that respect as far as the governor is concerned. Now I have talked with some of the Committee and they said it was your intention to make the governor different in that respect from what we had adopted in the judicial article. I just want to know.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Yes, Mr. President, the Committee was unanimously of the accord that if the governor ran for and was elected to office for a term of office that his salary that was established at the time he ran for that office should not be diminished during that term of office, so if they desire to decrease the salary, the legislature would necessarily have to make it effective at the end of some one term.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 9? If not, are there amendments to Section 10? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit your amendment, Mr. Sundborg. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 10, page 5, strike lines 16 through 20."

BUCKALEW: I move the adoption of the proposed amendment.

SUNDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the adoption of the proposed amendment, seconded by Mr. Sundborg. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I had the identical amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I think this amendment speaks for itself. This is a paragraph which may have some merit. I am not sure that it does, but if it does, it can always be provided for by the legislature and at this point I might read to you, for laughs, something we did here early in the session, where we adopted a resolution saying, "It is the intent of this Convention that the constitution should be a document of fundamental principles of basic government and contain the framework for state government." This is a minor provision which I think could well be taken care of sometime in the future and not in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I agree with Mr. Sundborg that it would be better taken care of by the legislature than by the constitution. Now I'm not sure if I were in the legislature that I would approve such a law either because I don't think it means much. Here you have a governor who is going out of office; if his successor is someone he is glad to see, perhaps someone in his own party, he will cooperate and give him this information anyhow. If it is someone he doesn't want to cooperate with, I don't think there is any way you could make this effective. You might mandamus him, but by the time you got through your legal proceedings, he would be out of the office and the new governor would know what he had to know, anyhow, or he could write a report which was slanted in such a way that it might be more harmful than helpful, so I just don't think it's a good provision.

MARSTON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I do believe that this is fairly important. It could be left up to the legislature, but about 50 per cent of our other proposals in here could be left up to the legislature, also. It was expressly written so no harm would come from it. This report is written and it is to be submitted to the incoming governor. It's true that the governor could just fail to do so but what man in public life would violate a constitutional law? He would be dead as far as a political career is concerned after that. I think it's just a safeguard and that is what the constitution is, a safeguard, and this is one of them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I think this superfluous for another reason and that is if there has been a change in the governor's office, why the governor-elect will probably have been telling the predecessor all about the conduct of his administration throughout the campaign. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 10? If not, are there amendments to Section 11? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I asked yesterday about the armed forces after they have been called into the United States. I don't believe I had the exact question. This states that, "The governor shall be commander in chief of the armed forces of the state." There is a little doubt in my mind and I would like to have it explained a little further.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could someone explain this? Mr. Victor Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I will repeat what I said yesterday. Once they are called into the service of the United States, they are no longer the forces of the state, and he would naturally be superseded by the commander of the theater in which they were active. We felt in the Committee that this language covered the cases where they were called into active combat under the national government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I believe that is unquestionably an accurate statement of the facts. Under Section 8 of the Constitution of the United States, this is granting to the Congress: "To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining, the Militia," that is the state militia, "and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the Service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively, the Appointment of the Officers and the Authority of training the Militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress." They have the authority once they're called into service. They are lost to the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 12? Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I take it that in Section 11 that the Committee is leaving up to Style and Drafting the title in the margin. There is no title.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is evidently the case, Mr. Armstrong.

V. RIVERS: That will be left up to Style and Drafting. I think the title matter could well be and should be the subject matter for the Style and Drafting. It was an omission which I note, and I know it's been marked in. The original draft of our article has the titles on those paragraphs, I believe.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee would appreciate very much the opportunity to write some small part of the constitution. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to Section 12? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I have a question. If we, in line with the procedure to be consistent, on page 6, line 2, change "senate" to read "legislature", has that been done?

V. RIVERS: No.

V. FISCHER: Has it been sent to the Committee to alter that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: There are three or four places, as I mentioned to you, that were set up before the legislative article was adopted, in which I will cover all of them with Committee amendments asking that they be changed, where they are in conflict with what we have adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to rise to a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of personal privilege.

(Mr. Londborg spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: You do not yet have the engrossed copy of the article on the legislative, but if my memory serves me, the confirmation of the appointive offices of the state would be made by the houses of the legislature in joint session. Now it may be that I am wrong on that, but I thought that was adopted in the legislative section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I wish to confirm what Delegate Londborg says. I have the engrossed copy before me and I withdrew it at the time the statement was made. The vote was taken on "the legislature in joint session". I cannot find it in the legislative article. I think it would have had a bearing on the vote.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe the Convention did take action on this. They took it in the judiciary article at the place where it provided for confirmation by the legislature of the appointment of the lay members to the judicial council, and at that time I had thought that we were settling the issue of how confirmations should be voted upon by the legislature, but, of course, every time it comes up, I suppose it can be argued over again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This seems to be a situation where we should have a little recess and different people could get together and decide just what this amounts to. The Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, in checking with the Chief Clerk, it was my impression that yesterday I had made a unanimous consent request. However, it appears that that was not so. The records do not show that I had made the unanimous consent request to put these confirmations by the senate into conformity with what I had understood was adopted for the legislative article. I made this statement yesterday that conformity would be the approval of appointments by joint session of the legislature. Now it could be handled as we come to each one that we change it or we could make a motion here, I could make a motion here asking that the body go on record unanimously as to what method they desire to approve in confirming appointments. In that way, we could get this into conformity with the opinion of the body and of other sections. I would be glad to make the motion if that is the way you prefer to approach it, or we could approach it by each individual item as we come to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seems to the Chair that at this time the body should make a definite decision on the question and a motion should settle the question once and for all in our different articles. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Speaking yet, without a motion on the floor, for the Committee, the Committee decided after the discussion in the judicial article in which the confirmation was by joint session that we would, as a Committee group, go along unanimously with the approval of confirmations by joint sessions of the legislature, so I will move and ask unanimous consent that this group express as a policy the intent that approval of appointments shall be confirmed by legislatures in joint session and that we will correct our proposals to conform to that policy.

RILEY: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers moves, Mr. Riley seconds the motion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I'll speak briefly on this motion. I might just say that the policy of confirmation by both houses in joint session is the present method by which we now confirm appointees to the various Territorial positions. It has been used for a number of years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, this only applies to cases where provision is now made for confirmation by the house or the senate, period. It does not apply to all officers.

V. RIVERS: It does not apply to all officers. There is a paragraph in here that I might call your attention to. That is Section 18, where the governor fills vacancies. Now we don't know but what sometime there may come up a law which the legislature enacts that in the matter of filling vacancies they may be or may not be required to be confirmed by either or both houses, so it was our intent in that case on line 13 where it says, "...by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate or...". We were going to strike "of the senate or" and "with the advice and consent of either house". That would be the only exception where there is a possibility that the law would be enacted providing approval by one house, it's a matter of filling vacancies.

HELLENTHAL: Question. Do you realize we have set up the article on the composition of the advisory board on districting and those people are appointed by the governor. Now is it the intention that there be language superimposed there, by and with the consent of the joint houses assembled, or is this only to apply where in the present language the consent of one or the other body is required?

V. RIVERS: Yes, that is the intent. It reads this way: "The governor may fill any vacancy occurring in any office during a recess of the legislature, appointment to which is made by the governor with the advice and consent of..." We would have it "of either house of the legislature".

HELLENTHAL: Then it would not apply to the redistricting board?

V. RIVERS: It would not apply to the redistricting board.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Well, I perceive it is a little bit useless for me to argue this point too much. However, I am convinced that we are being slightly paradoxical because we have already declared ourselves firmly in favor of a bicameral legislature and yet in the legislative article we diluted that by saying that vetoes of the governor shall be acted on in joint session instead of by each house separately. Now when this executive article first came out it contained almost uniformly the provision that appointments were to be made by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate, something that occurred to me as being extremely good. I believe firmly that we should have a strong executive and there has been a great deal of argument around here about expense. If under this article the governor can call the senate back into session, there is no reason why appointments couldn't be acted upon when he did so. However, now if appointments are to be acted on in that manner, he must call together both houses of the legislature and have them in joint session, and I disagree that the apportionment board or redistricting board, or whatever you call it, would not be covered by this language because, as I understand it, we are now adopting a general policy to cover all appointments in the future or present, and if we do that, then it will certainly cover the matter that Mr. Hellenenthal raised. At least I can't see why that should be excepted from the general provisions. I am certainly against this type of amendment. I am against this type of procedure. I thought we were proceeding along the line of ultimately adopting a constitution that we would have no trouble in selling to the Congress of the United States and now I am not so sure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I agree with Mr. Johnson that this is a paradoxical situation; however, having seen this body change its mind several times, I'll say they are at least consistent in changing their minds. I am not in favor of this because I am in favor of a bicameral legislature. It is true that a joint session has been our method of confirming appointments, but I have never agreed with it because I have been there, seen it operate, and it operates more or less as a rubber stamp, except on certain occasions, because a great many of these names that are submitted are not known to the majority of the group. However, if this were taken care of by one house or by each house separately, they would have time to consider these names and discuss them. I believe that if we want to stick to our bicameral legislature that is the way it should be done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, in the original article, as we wrote it, had the word "senate" all the way through and I don't think there was any question until the judicial article went through calling for the joint session. Then I remember we discussed it in Committee and I conceded to the majority on that, not wanting to put in a minority report on such a possible minor thing. In fact, I went along supporting the whole thing, now it has been brought up and I am somewhat undecided which would be the best. I have not yet heard one good argument for joint session other than it has been done in the past here in Alaska. If we are going to do everything the way it has been done in the past, then we had better keep our appointed governor from Washington and a few other things. I would like to hear one good reason why we should run it with both houses.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: Mr. President, I would like to give Mr. Londborg one good reason as it was pointed out to me. I think if I recall it to his memory, he will remember why we changed the article. There are going to be several appointive officers under the state. I don't know exactly how many, but there will be quite a few. Our house is going to be 40 members, our senate is going to be 20 members. As I stated once before on the floor, I believe, if you leave it entirely up to the senate to confirm the officers, then the senate is going to get together and say, "Well, if you will appoint this man, I'll help you and you help me, and we'll slice it up like a piece of pie and we'll all get our friends in." That's what we didn't want. We want the governor to make the appointments, not the senate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I won't presume to suggest that this is a good argument, a strong argument, but I think it is a reasonable negative argument, and that is, I don't follow the suggestion that by strengthening the senate, you strengthen the executive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, had it not been one of the senators that spoke on this, I would not have spoken, but on the line of the house of representatives, I just want to call attention to one thing that in my opinion is in favor of both houses recommending on these appointments, and that is this, that your representatives will be elected from 24 representative districts and it may be that one of the governor's appointees may be next door or right in the bailiwick of one of the representatives where he might live at some little distance from one of the senators, and I think it's a certainty that every member of the house of representatives should know one particular appointee, anyone that is appointed from his particular district, every representative would know and would be able to advise and vote intelligently and in that manner assist the senate in this joint confirmation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, I personally haven't any particular preference whether it is a joint session or not, but I don't follow along where they say that it is necessarily going to help the governor out because the house was elected. I remember not very many years ago, in fact, only a couple of years ago, where the house that was elected was of the opposite party of the governor that was in then and he sent down the names and there wasn't anybody that was confirmed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Fischer.

H. FISCHER: Mr. President, the same thing could happen, in the particular instance where we have the hold-over senators and the new governor was elected and he desired to give his party the appointments, the same thing could happen if it was going to go back to just the senate. The senate could turn down all his appointments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. President, my point that I would like to make is that inasmuch as we have created a strong elected executive and the rest of our elective officials for the new proposed state would be your legislature, meaning both houses, that an appointment by your executive department and a confirmation by your legislature as a total would mean the truest reflection of your entire elective thinking. That is the best logical reason that I can think of for supporting the meeting of the two houses in joint session for approval of appointments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper

COOPER: Mr. President. Mr. Hellenthal asked the Committee Chairman a question that if certain boards or commissions were excluded. The answer was given as yes, but in Section 18 it says, "The governor may fill any vacancy occurring in any office during a recess of the legislature...", and Mr. Hellenthal pointed out that the board of apportionment, there might be a vacancy occur and before the governor could have a man seated on that board that could act with any legality whatsoever, both houses would have to be convened to confirm his appointment. Now you have a Legislative Council and it is my thinking that if the senate were to confirm at least some of these minor board members, the Legislative Council could poll the senate without even having to convene them. Certainly you do not want to have to fly 60 members to the state legislature to Juneau to appoint a member to the board of reapportionment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, the way I read Section 18, it says, "The governor may fill any vacancy occurring in any office during a recess of the legislature, appointment to which is made by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate or of the legislature in joint meeting." This refers to very specific appointments, not to just any old board, and so I don't follow that argument at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, you notice that the nonpartisan board of reapportionment does not require confirmation.

COOPER: I know that, but Mr. President, might I have the floor on a point of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Cooper, you may have the floor on a point of personal privilege.

(Mr. Cooper then spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President. Mr. Cooper and 175,000 other people have a perfect right to be confused, I believe. It was the intent of the Committee to exclude those appointments which did not have to be confirmed by the legislature, but according to the construction of this sentence, it is a little confusing. I would like to call it to the attention of the Style and Drafting Committee and I think they could take care of that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I think that it is clear, but probably not as clear as it could be. I know of two suggestions which will clarify, it beyond any question. The thing should read like this: "The governor may fill any vacancy occurring in an office, appointment to which is made by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate or of the legislature in joint meeting during a recess of the legislature." Now if you put the word "an" in instead of "any", I think Mr. Cooper's objections will be met and it will be clearer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment, or the proposed motion.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Rivers moved and asked unanimous consent that "The group express as a policy the intent that approval of appointments shall be confirmed by the legislature in joint session and we will correct this proposal to conform with the policy." That was the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, after hearing the arguments, it may be that some of the delegates feel it is just too broad a handling of this subject and they may desire to handle it individually. I might say, that in all fairness to all delegates, I feel that if the thought of the body is that it is too broad an approach of policy, then it should be voted down and we handle this individually. I was trying to expedite the matter by making this motion, not to exclude anyone from a fair chance to be heard on each point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I move and ask to withdraw the motion, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers has asked unanimous consent to withdraw his proposed motion.

R. RIVERS: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers objects.

R. RIVERS: The basis of my objection is that this is a fundamental proposition. We are not going to do it two or three different ways throughout the constitution. If we decide right now which way we will make all the articles conform. We've got it squarely before us which way we want to pursue. I think we just hashed it for 20 minutes, we've almost arrived at something, let's vote on this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed motion be adopted as the policy of the Convention in this matter?" Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I haven't been heard on this. If he wants to withdraw it, can't I second the motion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, it occurs to me from the wording that has been read to me that Mr. Hellenthal's original question is still a problem, where we provide in this constitution, as we may provide, that the governor shall appoint certain people without concerning ourselves with whether or not they are approved by the senate or house or both houses together. By adopting this thing, it applies to all of them that the governor appoints. If we don't mean that, I think we should stick in there that the governor appoints when such appointment is required.

PRESIDENT EGAN: I'll ask that we have a minute or two recess and try to work out that motion. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, after discussing this matter, some of the delegates felt that this motion should apply only to Proposal No. 10a, so I am going to again ask unanimous consent to withdraw my motion with the understanding that a similar one will be presented by Delegate Hellenthal.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I'll object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent for the withdrawal of your motion?

V. RIVERS: Yes, and I'll so move.

DOOGAN: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves that he be allowed to withdraw his proposed motion, seconded by Mr. Doogan. The Chair will rule that it takes a majority vote to withdraw it. The question is, "Shall Mr. Victor Rivers be allowed to withdraw his proposed motion?" All those in favor of withdrawing the proposed motion will signify by saying "aye". All opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed motion is ordered withdrawn. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move that where in this Proposal No. 10a, confirmation of a gubernatorial appointment is required of either or both houses of the legislature or both houses jointly, then in those cases it shall be the policy of this body that such confirmation be made by both houses of the legislature jointly assembled.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move the adoption?

HELLENTHAL: I so move.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed motion.

(The Chief Clerk then read the proposed motion.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, just a point of clarification, I would like to address to Mr. Hellenenthal. It is my memory that you used the term "it shall be the policy of" with respect to this article before us. Are you proposing a uniform amendment at every point covered by the language in your amendment relating to this article?

HELLENTHAL: I think that it is so proposed in this motion.

RILEY: The word "policy" is all I object to and only momentarily.

HELLENTHAL: I think that word accomplishes the purpose of the uniform amendment.

RILEY: Your motion is that we adopt such language in every such instance? Am I right?

HELLENTHAL: That, I believe, is the clear import of this motion.

RILEY: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That refers only to this particular proposal, is that correct?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the motion as offered by Mr. Hellenenthal be adopted as the policy of the Convention with relation to this proposal?" All those in favor of the motion will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no".

The "ayes" have it and the motion has been adopted. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like to ask for the purpose, at least for my clarification, a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley, you may ask your question.

HURLEY: Is it the intent of the Committee that interim appointments be approved by either house of the legislature or both houses of the legislature?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It was the intent of the Committee that interim appointments could be made under this clause by the governor subject to being filled in the manner provided by the constitution which we understood would be by joint session of the legislature.

HURLEY: I guess I didn't make my point. If there is a vacancy in any appointive office and the governor appoints someone else to fill it and the legislature is not at that time in session, will it be necessary for that legislature to reconvene and approve the appointment?

V. RIVERS: No, that was not the intent. We are referring to recess or interim appointments. He may appoint under this clause without calling the legislature and they will fill it until the legislature meets, and then the policy would be to confirm them in joint session of both houses. Is that clear?

HURLEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 13? Mr. White.

WHITE: I have a question of the Chairman, Mr. President, regarding Sections 11 and 12, just to make sure I understand it. Do I assume from these two sections that it is not necessary nor desirable to declare martial law in every event when the governor might wish to call out the armed forces of the state?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: As was pointed out yesterday, the declaration of martial law puts everything under the military and stops all the action of civil lawmaking and legislating bodies, and we felt that the intention here was that only in cases of invasion or rebellion or imminent danger thereof would he declare martial law. However, if you have an emergency such as was mentioned yesterday, he could still under these sections call out his armed national guard forces or militia, if there was one, and they could take care of emergencies without the necessary declaration of martial law

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 12? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I have an amendment for Section 12.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 12, page 6, line 6, strike 'or invasion or imminent danger thereof' and substitute 'and actual or imminent invasion'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, what is your pleasure?

KILCHER: In order to bring this proposal in line with the bill of rights, they have a similar provision, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent to have this language adopted.

TAYLOR: I object.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Miss Awes.

AWES: Mr. President, as I recall, this wording that Mr. Kilcher proposes does bring it in line with the bill of rights provision as amended. The language used in Section 12 as it now stands, I think was also used to make it consistent with the bill of rights and now the bill of rights has been changed and so I think this should be changed, too, and make the two consistent. I think Mr. Kilcher's amendment is a good one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Would you read the language in the bill of rights?

PRESIDENT EGAN: First, would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

AWES: That is exactly what it says in the enrolled copy of the bill of rights.

HELLENTHAL: What is that first word?

CHIEF CLERK: "...in case of rebellion and actual or imminent invasion..."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, that is not the exact wording of the bill of rights as we have it on the enrolled copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Miss Awes.

AWES: I would like to correct a statement I just made. I did not hear the whole amendment as read. She read "and actual or imminent invasion". That differs -- the first word in the bill of rights is "or" rather than "and". There is that difference.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I think this speech is necessary. I have just talked to Delegate Mildred Hermann and she says her Committee on Style and Drafting can take care of everything on this question now before us and they have the power to do it. I am going to throw it back to Style and Drafting.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, this is one instance on which we voted to change from "and" to "or".

HELLENTHAL: No, it never came to a vote. Pardon me, I am out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, the point is well taken. We should have the uniformity. As Mr. Davis said this morning, if we vote against this thing, then we have Style and Drafting in a "pickle". If we want the uniformity, let's vote for this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: We will secure uniformity, complete uniformity, if the word "and" in this amendment is changed to "or". Then the two will be identical.

KILCHER: I move and ask unanimous consent to have the word changed to "or".

R. RIVERS: Now I, ll support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye". All opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 12? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to inquire about something else. Where is the proposal containing the article on apportionment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is in the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee.

SUNDBORG: Did we ever read or adopt the part of that which contains the description of the boundaries of the election districts?

HELLENTHAL: No, and the reason for that is that it was prepared two days ago and it has been turned over to the geographers in the mining department here for checking. It is not something that need be passed on for this reason. The map that was used here set out the boundaries. They are now being reduced from the map to writing. They will be on the desk of every delegate here. It would have been possible to have them today, but I think it will be Monday now before they're out. At that time if there is any error whatsoever in the reduction of the map to the writing, each delegate will have the right to bring it to our attention, but we felt that it was merely the reduction, and just merely a mathematical thing. There was no discretion or use of judgment involved in it.

SUNDBORG: I believe, however, Mr. President, that in compliance with our rules, that should be read in second reading, whatever material it contains.

HELLENTHAL: It will have to be read, of course.

SUNDBORG: Then our record should show here that the proposal containing the article on apportionment has been referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment subject to later addition of the materials citing the boundaries of the election districts.

HELLENTHAL: Right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 13? Mr. Cross.

CROSS: I have an amendment on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Secretary please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Cross.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 13, line 10, after the word 'governor' add the words 'subject to procedure prescribed by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross.

CROSS: I move that this amendment be adopted.

MARSTON: I'll second that motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross moves, Mr. Marston seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Cross.

CROSS: As you will note under this section, the pardon power is the only one in this section that is not, by procedure, prescribed by law. This does not limit the governor's power. It simply gives the legislature power to prescribe a procedure that will be followed in exercising this power. It is largely a matter of protecting an honest governor from pressure. I might say that this brings this in accordance with the Constitution of Hawaii.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, how could this protect or change or in any way affect the governor's right to grant a pardon? That is an individual right and it is solely for him to determine and any law that might be passed by the legislature to devise ways and means to make up his mind. I don't see where that would be possible, let alone permissible. I think the language is perfectly adequate the way it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I believe this Section 13 is the governor's court of last resort and as soon as you prescribe anything by law, you may remove the individual's final chance of last resort in the case it is erroneous. I would prefer to see the section to remain as it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Cross to just recite precisely what he had in mind. I heard him tell the story to the Committee a while back and I would like to have tell this body.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cross, would you care to do so?

CROSS: I might say that at first, I put in language which would limit the governor's power. I was persuaded that should not be done and anything in the constitution should merely prescribe the procedure. I had in mind the objection that was just made, that this would interfere with the court of last resort. This in no way limits the governor's power if he wants to be in the open about it and wants to hear everything. A number of years ago, I had this matter brought very forcefully to my mind, because of a certain murder case of which I was interested in the prosecution. In this particular case, the man was convicted of murder and was sentenced to life. He served only a few years. That brought this situation to my mind, and I investigated the situation in that state. I found that the average man convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment, served shortly a small amount over 12 years. A great many pardons were made on the quiet. The people who were interested in the case did not know that a man was turned loose, or what became of him. In explanation, I might say that one of the great problems of law enforcement is the case of men who commit crimes over and over. We go to a great deal of trouble and expense to convict a man of a crime, he is sentenced, and in a comparatively short time later he is picked up again for the same crime. That is the thing I have in mind. If a court convicts a man, a judge sentences him, there should be a very good reason if he does not serve that term. I think the public is entitled to know just what happened. In the case that I mentioned, most people in the state knew nothing about the procedure and what was going on. It was a situation which could be easily corrected if a procedure had been set up so that the governor, who was in the "limelight", as we say, whenever he made a pardon or commuted a sentence or changed a life sentence to a certain number of years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, as an illustration of procedure, the person applying for a pardon would have to file an application in the governor's office or with an advisory board and that would be on file for 30 days pending final decision. In other words, an open proceedings instead of an under-the-table deal where they are slipping them out the back door without the public knowing anything about it, just because a few years have elapsed and the public memory has waned. I think that without actually cutting into his basic pardon power, that this is a good thing to have so I am going to support Mr. Cross.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I don't intend to argue, but I do have the Hawaiian Manual here and it shows that 16 states provide that the governor may pardon with the consent of some sort of council or committee and 20 some states provide that he shall issue a pardon in accordance with law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Cross be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all those opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I move that the third sentence in Section 13 be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves that the third sentence in Section 13 be stricken. Is there a second to the motion?

HURLEY: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley seconds the motion. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would only like to say that this matter is taken care of under the amendment that we have just adopted. The legislature will have the authority to establish an advisory board. If we leave this sentence in, it is just another expression of policy, and not even a very strong expression of policy, since we say "The legislature may..."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: May I ask a question of Mr. Fischer?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may ask your question.

R. RIVERS: Do you propose to strike clear to the end of the section?

V. FISCHER: No, just the third sentence.

R. RIVERS: Very good.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there amendments to Section 14? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment to insert after Section 13. It is on the Secretary's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Between Section 13 and Section 14?

BARR: Yes, it will be a new Section 14.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 6, line 16, after Section 13, insert a new Section 14, and renumber the following sections accordingly: "An Attorney General shall be elected at the same time and in the same manner as the Governor, and his term of office shall be four years. He shall be the chief law officer of the State, shall represent the State in all courts of law, and shall see that all laws are uniformly and adequately enforced throughout the State. He shall be legal advisor to the Legislature and all State officers, and shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law. He shall be responsible to the Governor and the Legislature for the faithful performance of his duties. The Attorney General shall receive for his services a compensation fixed by the Legislature which shall not be increased or diminished during his term of office. He shall devote his full time to his office and shall not receive any salary, fees or other compensation from any other source. In case of vacancy in the office of Attorney General for any cause, the Governor shall appoint his successor to complete the term of office with the consent of a majority of both Houses of the Legislature in joint session assembled, or, when not in session, a poll of the members may be taken by mail by the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Barr?

BARR: I move the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, as this is rather a long amendment --

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to make an announcement at this time, before you proceed, Mr. Barr. The News Miner just called and Guy Rivers, brother of Vic and Ralph, was found alive and safe about 30 minutes ago. (Applause) He has been picked up and is now on his way back to Fairbanks. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have had placed on all the delegates' desks a mimeographed copy of the text of this amendment. It is not the complete amendment showing the lines and paragraph, it is merely the text. It provides for the election of the attorney general, that is the gist of it. He shall be elected at the same time and manner as the governor. He shall be legal adviser to the legislature and all state officers, and shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law. It outlines his duties and it provides for his replacement in case there is a vacancy. Now, in presenting this amendment, I do not go against the thought of the Executive Committee in that we should have a strong executive. Some people will think so. I went along with their committee report and I still do not disagree with it; however, the reason I decided finally to put this amendment in was the fact that I met innumerable people, speaking to them privately, who thought that the attorney general should be elected. In fact, they stated it in broader terms, they said they would like to elect more officials than the state governor. None of them stated that they wanted to elect as many as we have now, that they wanted to reduce the governor's power, but they thought they should elect enough so that they felt they had a hand in the government themselves. I felt that if another official should be elected, it should be the attorney general. Why the attorney general? Because all these other department heads are there expressly to carry out the governor's program and should agree with him in every detail on his policy. That makes up a good working team. The attorney general also should work with the governor, he is the governor's legal counsel and the legislature's legal counsel and also counsel for all the department heads, but he has one other duty that does not quite conform to the usual idea of a department head's duty under administration and that is, he is called upon to interpret the law at times. That is a semi-judiciary function, I would call it, although it's not final. It is a temporary decision and may be taken into the courts. In interpreting the law, he should be impartial. Many times, of course, the governor might ask him to interpret the law to be sure that he is on the right ground when he proposes something. In case we had a governor who wanted to bulldoze something through anyhow, if it were a little bit questionable, the attorney general might feel that he was obligated to the governor if he were appointed and his opinion might be biased a little bit. I wouldn't say that he would flout the law, but he could be biased a little bit to either one side or the other.

And even if he were entirely honest and tried to render an impartial decision, I'm afraid his conscience would hurt him a little bit because he was obligated to the governor and went against the governor's wishes, so to remove him from that embarrassing position, I think that he should be elected. Now I grant you in electing any man we cannot be sure that we will get a good man, and on the other hand, by appointment we cannot insure that we will get a good man, but I believe that if we are going to elect another official because the people want it, then it should be the attorney general.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Any further discussion? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, if my recollection is right, in the past 14 years that I have definite recollection of, there have been only two attorney generals and the reason is that they just can't get attorneys to run for that job. I'd want to know that there are attorneys that will step up and lend themselves to be elected to that job before we pass on this. I have no argument with the mover of this amendment, Mr. Barr, except that is information that I would like to have. Maybe we have some lawyers here that could enlighten me on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I think I could answer that. All the lawyers that favor the amendment will probably stand up, and those who don't will sit down. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, at a meeting that I had, I think there were 12 people there on an hour and a half's notice, that was the one thing they were unanimous on. They wanted the attorney general elected by the people. They seem to think it was the one independent arm that they would have, and for that reason they were unanimous that the attorney general should be elected, and therefore I think I will support Mr. Barr's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I voted against the governor and secretary of state as co-runners on the belief that we had merely one elective office in the executive arm and that would suffice, because my other voting had been predicated, and other proposals had been predicated, on that belief we were going to have a strong executive. This is merely the introduction to other offices. I notice we have a Delegate Proposal No. 45 submitted by Mr. Barr, and we have a Delegate Proposal No. 44 also, providing for the election of a commissioner of labor. If we yield ground in one respect, we might as well elect our commissioner of welfare, our commissioner of education, and having provided those, I feel that we should go right down the list and completely dissipate the theory upon which the voting has taken place. It was with reluctance that I even voted in favor of the secretary of state as a co-runner for the governor. I am violently opposed to the election of the attorney general. I don't think the election of him accomplishes any purpose. The blunt fact is that there is a general misconception as to the function of the attorney general. The attorney general is a lawyer and his opinion is the equivalent of any other lawyer's. It can be attacked. Any recommendation he makes, if acted upon, can always be attacked in the courts by private citizens. His opinion is worth the paper it is written upon. It's impressive upon the state and the officials are bound by it until some irate taxpayer attacks it and the actions taken under the authority of it, and the courts can promptly overrule it. There is a misconception about the function of the attorney general, his functions are not quasi-judicial. He is another attorney giving an opinion, and if you could assure yourselves that he would have the wisdom of a deus, those lawyers don't exist in Alaska as it has been evidenced by the variety of opinions expressed here before this body. I do oppose it, I think if we are going to have an attorney general, the power should be vested in the governor to appoint him, and that is without any screening by any judicial council or anything of the sort. If you're going to elect him, elect him, but by and large if you're creating a strong executive, then give him the power to appoint his own attorney general. The discrepancy has been pointed out in New York under the series, Governors and Administration of New York, which is put out under the American Commonwealth Series, it's pointed out that because of the fact that the attorney general is an elective office under the constitution, that is, the governor, in substance, has to rely on a legislative act passed in 1900 authorizing him to have private counsel. You're putting a diverse and possibly a discordant element into the executive branch. It isn't necessary. The courts can protect the government from the opinions of an attorney general appointed by the governor, and that attorney general does, in a sense, bear the same relationship to the governor as any attorney bears to his private client. It is an attorney-client relationship and the relationship has to be based on faith and personal selection. I would strongly recommend that there be no other elective offices in the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, may I be allowed to close?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no other person who wishes to be heard. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. McLaughlin a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Is it your idea that the attorney general, as such, he is or should act as the counsel for the legislature, as well as for the executive?

McLAUGHLIN: He should, in substance, act as counsel for the legislature. In many respects, you also have the unusual circumstance where the attorney general is of one party and the legislature is predominantly of another party.

STEWART: He may have to give decisions in one case that might favor the executive and in another case might favor the legislature?

McLAUGHLIN: That's right.

STEWART: I think that is an unwholesome situation, and should be corrected by having the attorney general purely and simply the adviser for the executive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, this has developed to the point where I want to say a few words. I wasn't going to, but when I was attorney general, that office was legislative counsel for the legislature, advised the members of the legislature, advised the various administrative departments under the governor, and advised the governor, and wrote legal opinions interpreting the law. Since that time the legislature has created a Legislative Council, that Legislative Council has a political scientist in charge, Jack McKay. It could very well have a lawyer and is authorized to engage any legal services that may be required. The legislature has full power to hire all the legal assistance it needs during the sessions so that I believe that Mr. Stewart's thought is well taken, that the attorney general will be the attorney for the executive arm of the government and that if we have the governor appoint an attorney general, he is not going to be the adviser to the legislature nor the drafter of legislative bills. Now, he may draft proposed legislation for the administrative departments. If the department of health wants a bill, the governor will tell the attorney general to get out a good bill or the commissioner of health, or as the case may be. They'll fall back on the attorney general for some bill drafting for the governmental departments, but the legislature from now on and under this setup, is not going to have the attorney general doing its bill drafting. It's going to have its own legal counsel. The present Attorney General, because of the press of business, gave up being legislative counsel for the legislature three years ago and told them they were too busy and were just looking after the executive department, and that they were to figure out how to get their own bills drafted. Two years ago that situation got so acute that the Legislative Council was created and it serves a very useful need, but I think that Mr. McLaughlin actually emphasized the wrong answer when he said that the attorney general would be the counsel for the legislature as well as for the executive arm, because under the present development with Legislative Council, he will be the attorney for the executive branch and the legislature can take care of itself. I might also say that I wrestled with this, I started out advocating that the attorney general be elected, but I wrestled with it, I told Mr. Barr that I felt the way he did four or five days ago. Because of my doubts though, I have talked to many people, they have said if you are going to let the governor's administration be held responsible for the conduct of that administration, you have got to at least give the governor an attorney of his own choice. Under this setup he might get an attorney of the opposite political faith. He might get one of his own party who is either inadequate or who is hostile to him, or who doesn't see eye-to-eye with him. In either case, the governor could say at the end of his term, if things haven't gone well, "We had a good program but that attorney general you foisted upon me wrecked our program." There again, you have got passing the buck as to who was to blame because things didn't go well. Now then, if we want to be sure that the strong executive who is going to have the responsibility of carrying out a successful administration is going to get the blame if he doesn't have a successful administration, let us not give him any outs. Let's not take him off the hook by giving him an attorney general that he can put the blame on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I don't intend being an applicant for the position of attorney general either by appointment or election, but I don't quite see Delegate Marston's point that there are no attorneys in the Territory who are willing to run to be elected attorney general. I can't see how there would be any attorneys who would be willing to accept the appointment. I support Mr. Barr's position in this matter. I, too, am in favor of a strong executive, but I don't think that the mere fact that because under the appointive system of governorships that the governor virtually has no powers, that we should let that carry us too far away. I think that it is a good thing for the people, to have their own elected attorney general who can check the legislation which the governor proposes to introduce and have introduced, and for that reason I am going to vote for this amendment.

BARR: Mr. President, may I close now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Barr.

BARR: I was also going to answer Colonel Marston much as Mr. Robertson did. If lawyers aren't available, they aren't available period. Mr. Rivers was talking about an entirely different thing. He mentioned our present Legislative Council. There is not a lawyer in charge. They do draft bills for the legislature. They have taken over a duty which the attorney general formerly did, that is as it should be. There is a lot of detailed work there, but it isn't legal work. If the legislature wants to ask a legal opinion, they will not go to our political science experts, they will go to the attorney general. Now he also stated that if an attorney general of the opposite political party were elected, the governor could pass the buck and say, "Well, you people see what you saddled me with here. I couldn't do anything. He wouldn't let me." Well, if there was an attorney general of the opposite political party there, he would make the governor toe the line pretty well as far as the law was concerned. All the governor could say to the people is, "You see that attorney general, he made me conform with the law." That's all this is designed to do. It isn't supposed to restrict his actions otherwise, just to conform with the law. Now, as Mr. McLaughlin said, because he was the legal counsel for the governor period, that this would not accomplish any particular purpose. It will accomplish several purposes. It is up to you people to decide how important they are. It might provide a little brake on the governor if he wants to go too far. If he wants to over-step the law just a little bit, but the principal purpose it has, the principal objective it will achieve is that it will allow the people to have more hand in the government and that is what we want.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I request a roll call on this vote and will raise my hand to indicate that request. Under these rules, 10 people have to --

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, that rule failed of passage.

HELLENTHAL: Oh, I see.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 12 - Barr, Collins, H. Fischer, Laws, McNealy, Metcalf, Nolan, Robertson, Smith, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh.

Nays: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Sundborg, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 3 - Coghill, VanderLeest, Wien.)

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 40 nays, and 3 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I had another amendment which I had intended introducing providing for the election of a commissioner of labor. I would just like to state that the reason for that was that without destroying the powers of a strong executive, I thought the people would like to have a number of officials elected someplace between the number of two and four, but I can see that this body does not believe that that should be done.

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Isn't Mr. Barr speaking to a matter of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask to speak on a matter of personal privilege, Mr. Barr?

BARR: Yes, I will, if the tape is left on.

HURLEY: I'll move that Mr. Barr be allowed to speak on a matter of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the rules will be suspended and Mr. Barr may have the floor on personal privilege.

BARR: I want to explain that since it is very clearly the intention of this body to have two elected officials, there is no point in me introducing this other amendment and holding up proceedings. I never intend to hold up proceedings at all. I realize the shortness of time here, so I will not introduce that amendment at this time, although in my own heart, I believe that we should have an attorney general and commissioner of labor elected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I believe this would be an appropriate place to bring up the matter which has been bothering our Committee on Style and Drafting, if I may have the floor on that matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, if there is no objection, you may have the floor.

SUNDBORG: I would like to know if we are creating anywhere in this constitution the office of the attorney general? And I ask it because in our article on direct legislation there is a provision that petitions for referendum and recall and the like, shall be filed with the attorney general who shall certify it to its sufficiency as to form, etc. Since we have not created that office, and I don't believe we should do it by indirection by assigning duties to the man whose office has not been created, I would like to be recognized at the end of this statement under the item of personal privilege, to make a motion and the motion would be that the rules be suspended and the Committee on Style and Drafting be instructed to make a substantive amendment in the article on direct legislation to provide that wherever the words "attorney general" appear, that they be changed to "secretary of state". I wonder if all of you recognize what the problem is. I think we have now agreed that in the executive department we are going to have one other officer at least besides the governor. He will be called the secretary of state. I wonder if all of you recognize what the problem is. I think we have now agreed that in the executive department we are going to have one other officer at least besides the governor. He will be called the secretary of state. It occurred to us in Style and Drafting that it would be entirely proper that the secretary of state should be the officer of the state with whom petitions under the initiative and under the referendum should be filed, that if he required legal services in order to satisfy himself that they were sufficient as to form, etc., he could get them from whatever officer of the state might be provided by legislation or otherwise for that purpose, but I think we are probably being inconsistent and maybe we are making a mistake if we set up duties for an official called the "attorney general" and don't set up the office itself in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, believing as Mr. Sundborg does --

V. RIVERS: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Sundborg was talking under personal privilege.

BARR: Excuse me.

SUNDBORG: I will now, Mr. President, I am at the end of my statement under personal privilege, am I recognized to make a motion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are, if there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

V. RIVERS: I object. I wish to make a statement first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Under personal privilege, there was a minority group in the Committee who felt that the attorney general should be mentioned in the executive article and that rather than have any individual who had obligations to repay to the governor or had favors to receive from the governor by reason of political support, that he should have a certain amount of screening, he should not be limited to one individual. Now I have an amendment available as we get to the end of Section 14 which would cover that, if the body so decides to adopt it, or if the desire to wipe out the screening principle, it still would cover the appointive attorney general and the method by which he might or might not be removed from office. The present executive article is identical in the matter of not mentioning the attorney general, it is identical with the State of Hawaii Constitution in that they also did not set up an attorney general specifically, they allowed the departments to be established as we have done here, but in order to carry out the consistency in connection with the fact that we have mentioned certain duties of the attorney general, we have got prepared, or Mr. Harris and I have prepared here an amendment for discussion covering that point.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, in view of Mr. Rivers' statement, I will withhold making my motion until the body decides whether it does wish to constitute the office of attorney general.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 14? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment to Section 14.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 23 and line 24, page 6, strike 'quasi' and 'judicial'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, what is your pleasure?

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I move its adoption. Also, strike the "and".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, it may be added to the amendment.

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

AWES: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes seconds the motion. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 14, line 23, page 6, strike 'and quasi' and line 24, strike 'judicial'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: The reason I introduced this amendment is for the reason that there has been a dangerous tendency in the last 20 years to establish all kinds of boards that act almost in the capacity of a court. They have the power to fine, revoke licenses, and take all kinds of action. I think that it is setting a dangerous policy in the constitution to mention "quasi-judicial" boards with no limitations on it at all. I am opposed to quasi-judicial bodies and looking at this section with the rest of the sections, it seems to me you find yourself in the position of where you would have a fisheries board, for example, and then have at the same time have a board going along with it which would be regulating fisheries, imposing fines and taking care of the violations under the regulations of the fishing boards. I think the language should be stricken.

V. FISCHER: May I ask Mr. Buckalew a question, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer, you may ask your question.

V. FISCHER: What does "quasi-judicial" mean? I know what "judicial" means, but what does the "quasi" mean?

BUCKALEW: I don't know exactly what it does mean, and I doubt if any lawyer in the body knows exactly what it means. It is a board that has fact-finding power and at the same time, it has the power to support its findings with some sort of punitive action so it's sort of a court, except it doesn't have the same kind of jurisdiction, but it is a combination -- I can't explain it. Mr. Hellenthal, can you?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: It is precisely what Mr. Buckalew says it is. It is a board that has very limited functions, ordinarily assumed by specialized courts and within definite limitations so that there can be no abuses. The Interstate Commerce Commission is a very fine example of a quasi-judicial board. A utility commission is another excellent example, where they can prescribe fines for violation of utility regulations, but within a limited sphere. They can't execute you, they can't send you to the penitentiary. They can prescribe fines within a sphere set by the legislature, so there is no danger of anybody running away with anything, but the advantage of specialization is secure and that is why the quasi-judicial boards are created, so that expert men, in their fields, can interpret the laws of the legislature subject to checks imposed by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to follow up with Mr. Hellenthal. He said a utilities board would be quasi-judicial. What is the difference then between "regulatory" and "quasi-judicial"? To me a utilities board would be regulatory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Perhaps I can explain it in the terms best known to Alaskans. Very roughly, the Fish and Wildlife Service and the CAB, the Fish and Wildlife Service can set down regulations. Normally if there is an infraction of those regulations, they pick up the offender and deliver him to a judicial body, that is to the United States Commissioner, or to the United States District Court. They have no power of absolute confiscation on their own, no power to deprive of money or rights. In the case of the CAB, the Fish and Wildlife, in substance then, sets down regulations, but in the case of the CAB, they go further than that. In substance, they determine as between carrier and carrier, who is privileged and who can be deprived of it. I think if you strike, it would be erroneous and possibly fateful if we strike that word "quasi-judicial" because as Mr. Hellenthal has mentioned, in the national sphere you have the RCC, FCC, things that are important and material to us. You might even destroy the possibility of ever creating an alcoholic beverage control board under the state, and dependent on your viewpoint that is good or bad, but I would recommend that it be kept in there, if at any time it becomes an intrusion upon the judicial power, I am sure that all of those nonpartisan judges of the superior and supreme court will rise up and destroy it under the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, I have a question of Mr. McLaughlin, if I could ask it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: State your question.

GRAY: Mr. McLaughlin, I want to put this question to you. Do you have any recourse from the judgment of a quasi-judicial board by the courts, or is their action final?

McLAUGHLIN: No, their action is never final, particularly under our judiciary article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I just wanted to state that I seconded the motion when it was made because I thought it was a matter that should be brought on the floor and open for discussion, but I don't want my second to be taken as approval of the striking of the word.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, in connection with this, two of the delegates who are on the Committee have checked the meaning of the word "quasi-Judicial". According to the interpretation of Webster's, which was checked and brought up by Delegate Nordale, the interpretation is given in reference to "quasi" when used as a prefix means, "that which resembles". "Quasi-judicial, designating an act or proceeding of or before an administrative tribunal or official of the general nature of a judicial act or proceeding but not within the judicial power as defined under the Constitution." Now that is a broad interpretation of the term as we use it here, and it is the interpretation of Webster. However, Delegate Londborg has also looked the matter up in Black's Law Dictionary and it is practically the same. Do you have that here, Mr. Londborg?

LONDBORG: No, I don't.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: May I ask Mr. McLaughlin a question, or anyone else who would care to answer it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hurley, if there is no objection.

HURLEY: If the amendment carries, and the wording is struck, it would read: "Regulatory bodies and temporary agencies..." In your opinion, if that were the case, would "regulatory bodies" imply that the legislature could, in setting up such regulatory bodies, give them quasi-judicial powers.

McLAUGHLIN: I think it could, but in view of Mr. Buckalew's attempt to strike it out, at any time when the courts go back to read the constitution, they see that Mr. Buckalew presented an amendment striking the word "quasi-judicial" on the grounds that they were getting too big and intruding on government, and they might interpret it as abolishing the right, that is abolishing the right of the legislature to create quasi-judicial bodies.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I would support Mr. Buckalew's amendment, not on the ground that the agencies are too big or not desirable, but because the thing is adequately covered in the other word used.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: Mr. President, I would like to put a question before the body here. Under the language of this sentence, would it be possible to set up a board which was both regulatory and at the same time a quasi-judicial body? That is what I would object to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: Mr. President, I want to speak in favor of the amendment, just on the point that Mr. Emberg raised, and as to the interpretation of the words "quasi-judicial body", I think you'll find in the law, and I believe when I mention it that the greater share of the attorneys here will agree with me, we speak of "quasi-contracts" which are, in effect, contracts implied by law and the greater share of your court's interpretations which go further than the dictionaries here, would be to the effect that the word "quasi" here, in effect, means that it is an implied judicial body. I won't enlarge on it anymore than that, but I fear this one thing, that the nomination of regulatory and quasi-judicial bodies raise a condition such as, I'll only mention one, such as the Game Commission which can set up their own rules and regulations, send out their own men to enforce them, and I am very much in favor of game conservation and the game commission, but the abuses that we have known of that right, here in the Territory and specifically in the Fourth Division where it was necessary while I was district attorney, to take issue with the Game Commission because they did set up their own laws, they felt that it wasn't necessary to abide by the laws of search and seizure. They went out and broke the locks of cabins and caches, went in and searched for furs that they thought might be there, that were improperly caught, or caught too great a number. I'm not going off on that subject because it would take a half-hour to cover all of the violations that did happen and were possible under that, and in which I believe have to a great extent been simmered down, and some of the matters were resolved against the Game Commission at that time. Now there are others that are even greater offenders than the Game Commission and I speak of them, and I back the Game Commission 100 per cent in their purpose, but the point is that if you have the words "regulatory and quasi-judicial bodies" combined here, I fear very much that it is going to open it up where you are going to establish boards that not only set up the laws, but they enforce them, and when you do you are combining legislative, executive and judicial all in one branch and it is a dangerous situation, and I feel that I am starting to get a little steamed up on this. I ought to close on a bit of humor here. I believe that I should be against the amendment on the theory that the legislature might be able to set up some implied courts in opposition to Mr. McLaughlin's judicial system.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratovich.

PERATROVICH: I wish to support Mr. McNealy's views on that. I, too, question the language there, but before I start, I would like to direct a question to Mr. McLaughlin, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Peratovich.

PERATROVICH: I just want to know, under this setup, the language used here, is it possible to limit powers of such a body? Is there a way that you can regulate the powers of such a body?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: I'll put it this way, this does not direct the legislature to create these bodies and it is my personal opinion that you could not attempt to define in the constitution the limitations of the powers on the regulatory or the quasi-judicial bodies. It would be an impossibility, because the vagueness of the term would require great definition and precision. Do I think that quasi-judicial bodies are necessary? I definitely do. I think if you specifically prohibit them in your constitution, you are hamstringing yourself. The legislature won't be able to create the boards that are necessary. You will have to rely on the discretion of the legislature that they will appoint the appropriate body, and the only difference then is that they will be our collection of thieves rather than those of the national government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I would like to relate some experiences in support of what Mr. McNealy has related to you. I can't help but feel there is a possibility of abuse of power in such a setup. In the experience I have had is in the case of game wardens and the fisheries, like Mr. McNealy relates. We have known of cases in our division where our fishermen with some fish aboard, say with perhaps 300 or 400 fish aboard caught just before darkness and go inside of the line and anchor. There would happen to be a good harbor there, and perhaps during the night the fisheries commission warden would come in there and this man is pinched and if you can't defend yourself, if you can't talk and try to reason with a warden, then you're picked up and taken into the commissioner's court. I don't say they're convicted in all cases, but it does require time to prove that you are innocent. On the other hand, if a trapper is out on his line, on his boat, anchored in the bay, he is perhaps out on his trap line. When he comes back, he finds his hatch covers all off, his food lockers all open and everything else, and that is another case of where a game warden comes along on a plane and takes the liberty of going aboard to see if they had any illegal meat, fur or something of that nature. I feel that under a setup of this type, we don't have a way of regulating their duties. I don't think we can remedy what has transpired under our former government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale had been attempting to get the floor. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask a question of Mr. Peratrovich?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

HELLENTHAL: Don't you, Mr. Peratrovich, and Mr. McNealy, both feel though that those poor regulations were due to Congressional action, and that an Alaska state legislature would never permit such a situation?

PERATROVICH: I agree with you, but I want to make it clear here, that I for one don't understand the terms that you lawyers use here, but I can see very dimly that there may be a possibility of correcting the errors that we have made under our Territorial setup. If we could remedy that under the state setup, then that is what I am for, and that is the reason I want to make it clear here. I am satisfied with your explanation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anyone want the floor that hasn't had the floor? Mr. Ralph Rivers. Haven't you had the floor?

R. RIVERS: Not on this subject. I have refrained up to this point, but bearing on this is the proposition that we are talking about whether regulatory and quasi-judicial bodies shall be placed in principal departments or whether they shall be placed out of principal departments. If we knock out the word "quasi-judicial", the legislature could still create quasi-judicial departments but would simply be making principal departments out of them instead of keeping them out of the principal departments. I was going to make the same point that Mr. Hellenenthal made, that we can't get to first base protesting some of the abusive enforcement methods of an agency that is created back in Washington, that we would have to go back to Congress to get remedial measures, but after we have our own legislature here, which will have the power to create these bodies, even if we do strike the word "quasi-judicial" from this particular article, we have a legislature near at hand meeting every two years where the citizens can go down and complain about how this state agency is taking this highhanded method or the other, so if we need to leave this in the hands of the legislature, let's trust the legislature to put in the suitable restrictions and go to the legislature with our complaints every two years when the time comes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: The Convention expressed the desire to adjourn about 3:45 so they could catch the bus at 4:05, and I think that clock has stopped. Mr. Marston and I both have 3:50.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Whether or not we can get to this amendment by then, we'll see. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Armstrong, Barr, Buckalew, Coghill, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, Hurley, Johnson, Lee, McNealy, Nolan, Peratrovich, Riley, Robertson, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 36 - Awes, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Cross, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh.

Absent: 2 - VanderLeest, Wien.)

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher wishes to change his vote to "yes".

CHIEF CLERK: He was "yes".

KILCHER: I mean to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher wishes to change his vote to "no".

KILCHER: I also will give --

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is all you can say at this time, Mr. Kilcher.

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 36 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I give notice to reconsider my vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher serves notice of reconsideration of his vote on this particular amendment. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, subject to committee and other announcements and other notices of motions to reconsider, I move that we adjourn until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

2211

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now, are there committee announcements prior to putting the motion? In case anyone is in doubt, the notice of reconsideration can be given even after the motion to adjourn has been put. Are there announcements of committees? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, the Local Government Committee will meet at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Apartment 19 in the Alaskan Inn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Local Government Committee will meet tomorrow afternoon at Apartment 19 in the Alaskan Inn. Are there other committee announcements for tomorrow? If not, the Convention will stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. tomorrow.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 16, 1956

FIFTY-FIFTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning the Reverend Purviance of the Methodist Church. Reverend Purviance will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND PURVIANCE: Our Father and our God, we praise Thy Name that Thou has seen fit to spare us to be together once again. We come now in humility, asking for Thy wisdom, Thy guiding hand upon us, particularly now during these final days of this session that we may be prayerful and careful and that Thou may guide every thought and every motive. For we ask these things in the Master's Name. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Harris and Mr. McLaughlin are both here but they are temporarily occupied with other matters.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please show they are here. Mr. Buckalew is present.

CHIEF CLERK: All members present.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? If not, we will hold the report in abeyance until later in the day. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside the Convention? The Chief Clerk will please read the communications.

(The Chief Clerk read a telegram from Senator Marcus F. Jensen of Douglas requesting the separation of the resources of game and fish as worded in the proposal made by the Territorial Sportsmen, Inc.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication will be referred to the Committee on Resources. Are there other communications? If not, are there reports of standing committees? Are there reports of select committees?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to announce a meeting of the Committee on Style and Drafting for the morning recess at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg announces a meeting of the Committee on Style and Drafting immediately upon the morning recess at 10:30. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I notice that just entering the chamber is a man whom we have summoned from Louisiana, Kimbrough Owen, who is going to assist the Style and Drafting Committee throughout the balance of the Convention. I would like to ask unanimous consent that he be introduced to the body at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Owen, we would be appreciative if you could come forward and present a few remarks to the delegates. We are happy to have you here. (Applause)

MR. OWEN: Mr. President and delegates, since brevity seems to be one of the characteristics of this Convention, I would just like to say I am very happy to be here, and I am very profoundly impressed with the draft I have seen and I hope I can be of service. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Owen. (Applause) Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I have a report by the Style and Drafting Committee. The Local Government Committee worked all yesterday on their proposal and we hope to have the services of Mr. Owen for at least a short time, as he is experienced in local government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mr. Rosswog, and we are sure you can obtain the services of Mr. Owen. Are there any motions or resolutions to come before us at this time? Is there any unfinished business? Under unfinished business we have before us -- Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I should like to take the time of the Convention for a few minutes to discuss a matter which I think is pretty important to us in the over-all view of the job we have to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: There has been no publicity on the Constitutional Convention on a national basis that we have heard of as yet, and there have been letters written to members of the Convention from friends in the states stating that they are interested in Alaska and the Constitutional Convention but unless they had heard from them they would not know that the Alaska Constitutional Convention was in existence. We have in this room representatives from 19 states and six foreign countries. I should like to suggest, Mr. President, that before too long the President of this Convention request or arrange for a committee to possibly meet with the Statehood Committee for the purpose of working out a publicity and public relations campaign. I can see where a photograph taken right at work here and a story with it should go to every hometown paper or every place of origin. Now we have five from Minnesota. It might be pretty important to the passage of the Alaska statehood bill, if and when it is presented to Congress, that we have the support of the two senators and the congressmen from Minnesota.

I can readily see where if one of our lady delegates who comes from Minnesota, if her picture appeared in the hometown paper, and there was quite a write-up, and the fact that she is the National Democratic Committeewoman from Alaska, it could create quite a bit of interest in her hometown. I also believe all of these should also be represented in their professional publications. I can see where photographs should go to the American Bar Association and to their publications, to the American Mining Journal. Mr. Harris is in the hotel business, there are a half-dozen hotel publications which would be very pleased to have a picture of Mr. Harris, all of which is in the nature of national publicity, to get the story out that Alaska is doing something about the constitution. Something should also be done about a poster contest in the schools on "Ratification of the Constitution" or "Understand the Constitution". Then if and when the people of Alaska decide to ratify the constitution a definite method should be worked out for the delivery of the constitution to the President and to the Congress. We have an end product to sell and there is just as much salesmanship involved in selling statehood or selling our constitution as there is in a pair of shoes or real estate or any other product. Therefore, Mr. President, I feel it is quite incumbent upon us to be aware of this fact and to decide whether or not we are going to do something about it or whether the Statehood Committee is going to do something about it, and I would like very much, Mr. President, to suggest this matter be taken under consideration by you. I should imagine that our Administration Committee would probably be a logical committee, or certain members, and I know there are several people in our Convention who are acquainted with publicity and such matters and I would strongly urge that definite action be taken on this in the very near future. I understand the Statehood Committee is going to hold a meeting next Sunday. Well, perhaps we can find out whether or not the Statehood Committee is going to do anything about it, but it certainly should be done with our cooperation and our assistance, or at least we should be a party to it. I don't know whether it is the function of the Statehood Committee, but something should be done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Correction on meeting next Sunday. It is a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Statehood Committee, and not the Statehood Committee as a whole. I was under the impression that the Rules Committee had outlined this particular thing as one of the manifest and many duties of the Secretary of the Convention. If I am wrong I stand corrected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no further discussion we will take the matter under consideration. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 10/a. Was there a pending amendment? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I want to speak on a matter of privilege on a matter that is far removed from Convention business.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, if there is no objection.

(Mrs. Hermann spoke on a matter of privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Thank you, Mrs. Hermann. Did we have two reconsiderations of amendments that had been adopted, pending or was there one? The Chair only brings it up at this time inasmuch as it might be best if we consider any reconsiderations on this proposal as quickly as we can. That is, it would be up to the maker of the motion actually, but were there two reconsiderations or one?

CHIEF CLERK: One, I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the Chair remembers it, Mr. Kilcher I think reconsidered on the last proposed amendment, but I had the feeling there had been another notice given during the day. If not, we will continue. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have an amendment by the Committee?

V. RIVERS: By a minority group of the Committee, myself and Mr. Harris.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, you may present your proposed amendment. The Chief Clerk may present the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "After Section 14, page 7 of Committee Proposal No. 10/a, insert a new section as follows: 'Section 15.

The Attorney General shall be appointed by the Governor from two or more qualified persons nominated in the same manner as judges by the judicial council. He shall have been admitted to practice law in the State and shall have the other qualifications prescribed herein for heads of principal departments and shall be subject to approval by the Legislature in a similar manner.

The Attorney General may be removed by the Governor with the consent and approval of both houses of the Legislature meeting jointly.' Renumber successive sections to conform to the above insertion."

V. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers moves the adoption of the amendment. Are there copies available for the delegates? Is there a second to Mr. Rivers' motion?

HARRIS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris seconds the motion. The matter is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, this matter of the office of attorney general came up for a good deal of discussion in connection with the strong executive and in connection with the matter of having some screening for the man who would be the attorney general. Some of the Committee felt that it would interfere with the strength of the executive. Others of the Committee felt they wanted to see the attorney general elective and not removable by the governor. It seemed that the only thing that was of main concern to a great many of us was that while we recognize the value of the strong executive, we are not naive enough to think that the governor who is elected will not have certain obligations, commitments, endorsements to meet when he goes into office. We realize that on all the other department heads there may have to be on his part some compromise with his desires under this plan as we have it. We did, however, want to try to eliminate any matter of the return favors or endorsements or obligations to the man who he appointed as attorney general. We are trying to remove that particular office by a screening process we have set up here, so the man who went in there, his appointment would be based on merit and not on any other consideration. As you will note, we have recommended that the attorney general be screened by the Legislative Council in regard to his qualifications, that two or more be screened in accordance with the requirements to fill the job satisfactorily both on the basis of qualifications and on the basis of the governor's desires. The only intent in this is that the attorney general shall be one who is appointed not from the point of view of any obligations from the governor to him, and also the other intent is that the attorney general cannot be removed by the governor without also the approval of the legislature meeting jointly as they approved the appointment of the attorney general at the time he was actually put into office. He would be removed in the same manner, and by that manner only. There has been a good deal said here about diluting the power of the strong executive. I am of the opinion that perhaps a governor going into office where he had to make a large number of appointments, where he had been supported in his campaigns by many individuals who might be men of high degree of competence or average competence, I would be of an opinion that a governor in that position would probably welcome the possibility of the chance of appointing one office in such a manner that he would not have to repay any obligations or indebtedness or favors in that particular appointment. I for one feel the attorney general's office should have removed from it the need for making any concession to competence or qualifications because of political support on the part of the applicant to the governor in seeking election. That is my opinion and I feel there is sound justification for that opinion. I realize there are many divergent opinions here on that subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, from the beginning I would like to state that I don't like this proposal. The first objection I see is that we are shoving off on the judicial council a function that is not one of their duties. The judicial council was created by Mr. McLaughlin's department. He set up a judiciary. Now we are going to let Mr. McLaughlin's department select an attorney general. Not only does the attorney general have to be approved by the judicial council, the attorney general then has to be approved by the legislature. If the governor wants to remove him he has to get the consent of the legislature. Now, I don't think this matter would even have come up if we had not discovered that the initiative and referendum article referred to the attorney general. The reason I bring that up is that I think Mr. Sundborg had an excellent suggestion that we just insert the words "secretary of state". That is probably one of his functions. That is the only reason I think this business came up. We decided yesterday that we were not going to elect the attorney general. The argument put up by the Committee was they wanted to have a strong executive and today they are going to water it down a little. I think we ought to be consistent and vote this amendment down.

V. RIVERS: I rise to a point of order. I stated this matter had been discussed some time ago in Committee. It did not arise yesterday. This amendment was prepared during the time of that discussion. I also object to referring to any department of this constitution as being the department of some one individual. I don't believe it is either Mr. McLaughlin's or mine or anybody else's; it is the constitution of all the people of Alaska.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I was going to correct Mr. Buckalew, but since Mr. Rivers has already done so, I will only state that I would favor this amendment. We talked about this quite a bit in Committee, and it is a check on the governor. It makes a bit of difference when the attorney general's word becomes law. It actually is law, unless it is disputed in court and found to be not exactly as it is supposed to be, then it is used as law. Therefore, we feel the attorney general should be a qualified man and in order to insure that his qualifications are up to par we needed some type of screening process. Now, we did not screen the man because we wanted to connect him with the judicial department as Mr. Buckalew suggests. The only reason for using the judicial council we feel is that the judicial council is qualified to screen the attorney general. Therefore, that was the reason for bringing up this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I agree with Mr. Victor Rivers that the judicial council is not the idea that it was limited to one person; it was the product of the Judiciary Committee's combined thought. I am personally opposed to such a method of selection. Within my knowledge there is only one equivalent method of selection of the attorney general, and that is probably in New Hampshire where the attorney general is selected by the justices of the supreme court. I believe that Mr. Buckalew is right in that he says that the attorney general is not otherwise mentioned in the constitution except in the initiative and referendum, and if you can recall, the only reason he was mentioned in the article on the initiative and referendum was originally they had a proposal as it came out of committee, my recollection is, that the 10 qualified voters could submit a proposition to the attorney general, and secure his opinion as to its legality. That is why the attorney general was mentioned. We chopped the portion requiring an opinion of legality from the attorney general, we chopped the portion, if I recall, requiring review of his opinion, and in substance what we did is we made it a function as it stands now, the true function of the secretary of state. The attorney general is in there by happenstance and no other reason. Yesterday we determined that the attorney general should not be elected and implicitly what we determined was it should be within the discretion of the governor subject possibly to confirmation that the governor alone in his discretion would select the attorney general and would be responsible for him. The attorney general, apparently, under the concept that we have implicitly accepted, is an attorney largely for the executive department. In any event, he is a political appointee, he is an executive appointee. I don't believe that we should be putting him through a means test and running him in substance through the judicial council. Under such circumstances, the governor may well say when the attorney general proves unsatisfactory to the electorate at large, the governor should have the direct responsibility, he should not be able to evade it by saying, "It was not my selection." I am opposed to it. The judicial council was designed in the constitution deliberately for one reason. That was for the selection of the justices of the superior and supreme courts, when in substance we are now utilizing them to provide a rather cathartic attorney general. I think that this is a mere compromise, it is not a majority opinion of the Committee on the executive and certainly it has not been considered by the Judiciary Committee. I cannot speak for them, but I feel sure that the majority would feel the same way. Our choice is not a compromise. He is either elected or he is appointed. If he is appointive and if he is going to be one of the consorts of the governor and one of his confidants, he should be selected directly by the governor and the governor should be responsible. If we accept this, then in premise we should accept a screening of every other public official appointed by the governor in his cabinet. I believe the attorney general, if he has to be mentioned, and I don't think it necessary, I don't think he should be embodied in the constitution. The attorney general should be like the attorney general of the United States, appointed by the executive and the executive is responsible for him. This is, frankly, I think on its face, a compromise measure and I believe the attorney general is without our sphere, and in substance should not even be mentioned in the constitution, let alone nominated by the judicial council.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: May I ask a question of Mr. McLaughlin? Would we gather from your statements that the judicial council is limited only in its purpose to the selection or the recommendation of judges?

MCLAUGHLIN: That is not so, Mr. Rivers, because we have a specific provision in there saying that they shall perform such other duties as are provided by law. I am sure it was the intent of the Convention that their functions would be limited to the judicial. In fact, I think by error you did remark that the attorney general was selected by the Legislative Council when you supported this matter, but I would oppose it just as I would oppose the judicial council selecting the sites of the court houses. I think they are participating now in the executive functions of government and I believe the judicial council should be limited as it has been historically to judicial affairs and not to executive affairs.

V. RIVERS: Do you agree with the judicial council in the matter of screening this man as to qualifications, would be doing the same thing as if he were screening a judge? Isn't it for qualifications and to remove the judge from direct political election or appointment that we put up the judicial council? Isn't the process of screening identical in the two cases?

MCLAUGHLIN: Yes, the process of screening is identical except for this one thing. A judge is supposed to be dispassionate. He is not supposed to be acceptable to the people who appear before him. In the case of the attorney general the attorney general will have a client-attorney relationship to the governor and frankly I believe the governor should have wider choice and discretion. It is like selecting the presidential physician by vote of a selection board. The relationship is something that is intimate, and there is an intimacy of relationship that does not exist between the judiciary and the general public. We are selecting an attorney for the governor and saying, that's it, without regard to personality or anything of the sort.

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask another question, and that is, do you think the attorney general should also be removable at will by the governor at any time after he has been appointed and confirmed?

MCLAUGHLIN: I think that is so, yes.

V. RIVERS: Do you think the attorney general represents the people of the Territory in the matter of his interpretations of law, or does he represent the administration? I realize the interests at most times are coincidental and the same, but at times when there is any divergence would you also say he represents the people?

MCLAUGHLIN: Frankly, I think the attorney general represents the executive department of the government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I cannot follow the reasoning either of Mr. McLaughlin or Mr. Buckalew. I think the screening set up in this proposed amendment to Article 10/a is I think a happy choice. It may be a compromise, but I think it is a very fine compromise, in between the two propositions that have been advanced in choosing the attorney general. I believe the judicial council is the proper body to, what you call, screen the attorney general. The duties if given to the judicial council will be the same as they are in regard to the justices of the supreme court and the judges of the superior court. It is to select a competent lawyer to fill the office of attorney general just as they are duty bound to select the best men they can for judicial office. The office of attorney general is a very important office. There has been numerous times in the history of the Territory of Alaska when we have had an extremely weak attorney general and the Territory has suffered by it. If we have a capable attorney general I think we will be a great deal better off if the attorney general is vigorous and follows out the instructions of the governor in fulfilling his office. I feel the attorney general is only, his duties should primarily be the attorney for the executive branch of the state government. In the past there has been times that the attorney general has had to be the legal officer for the executive, Legislative Council, and the counsel for all departments of the Territory. That was extremely a difficult position. I know Mr. Rivers had it for a number of years and he can explain, perhaps better than I can, the difficulties of filling of positions such as that, but I believe primarily the attorney general is the attorney for the governor and the department heads, the departments established by this constitution and who would be under the direct supervision of the governor. I feel that some provision maybe should be made here or the legislature should make one for the employment of a legislative counsel during the sessions of the legislature, and so the attorney general would not have to take a part in that particular matter. I feel that the adoption of this amendment with the governor being given the right to remove the attorney general without the consent of the legislature would be a happy choice.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, it seems to me from the arguments we have heard that probably we are going at this backwards. The arguments have been as to how we should select an attorney general. Now it is my thought on the basis of the bill that we have here that probably what we want to decide is whether we want a constitutional attorney general or not. It seems to me on the executive department, as we have outlined it here so far, that we probably don't want a constitutional attorney general at all; that that matter should be left to the legislature as to whether we do or don't and to what his powers are when the legislature decides to set up an attorney general, and accordingly it seems to me pointless to discuss as to how the attorney general is to be selected. If it is wise in the view of the legislature when they set up an attorney general that he should be screened by the judicial council, these arguments could be made at that time, but at the minute we have not mentioned an attorney general, and it seems to me that the executive department is going to be a whole lot more what the Committee had in mind if we don't set up an attorney general as such in this article. Now I realize that if we don't set up an attorney general we are going to have to do something to the initiative, but that is a different problem and no problem from my standpoint.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: It has been said that perhaps we could omit mentioning an attorney general in this article and that the secretary of state could take over the function of the attorney general with regard to the initiative and referendum. In the initiative and referendum article we said that the initiative should consist of a petition with a proposed bill that the sponsors wished to have made into law and that the attorney general would scrutinize it as to sufficiency for form and the attorney general would condense the matter for appropriate petition heading so that the people that sign it would have an adequate draft as to what they are signing. Afterwards the attorney general shall prepare the ballot title, assuming that enough signatures were obtained and that this bill were to go before the voters. It is a little difficult I think for the secretary of state to engage in all of those legalities, and I think as far as the initiative and referendum is concerned, we ought to have that in the hands of the attorney general just as the initiative and referendum article suggests. However, I see difficulties with this proposed amendment. The judges are banned from politics. They are picked on an absolutely nonpartisan basis. The attorney general presumably should be a member of the same party as the governor. The attorney general, if he is a member of the same party, as attorney general, would take the normal part in politics, but if he is picked on a nonpartisan basis as the judges are, then we have to ban him from engaging in politics and he also could turn out to be somebody of the opposite party. So I believe we are getting crossed up if we try to put the attorney general through legislative council. I think we are getting -- the judicial council I mean -- I think we are getting the judicial council into some little difficulties, etc., and from the political standpoint we want to keep them out of it. They can't hold any position or be active on the political scene. So if this particular amendment does not pan out, I am going to propose one as follows: The department heads appointed by the governor shall include an attorney general. Then we can leave the initiative and referendum functions right where they are.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, as it has been mentioned, this is a minority report from the Committee, and I think it is only right you hear from some of the rest of the Committee regarding this. We in our Committee felt that it would be the wishes of the majority of the Convention to have a strong executive. By that we did not mean a dictator, one who would get into power and be the absolute power in the state, but one who through appointive powers would be able to select his co-workers down through the various offices so that when the state's functions would be successful we could say that we had a good governor, and when they would not be successful we would know who to blame and could vote accordingly at the next election. Mention has been made not only here on the floor but also the same argument in the Committee that the governor would have certain obligations and would be expected to lean toward that obligation in the appointing of an attorney general, but I can't help but feel that that same trend of thought would run right down through the other departments, and I believe that there are other departments under the governor that are of equal importance and if the governor is going to bow to party obligations or other obligations in selecting of the attorney general, he will do the same thing all the way through his other department heads, and we won't have a man in there that we can be fully proud of, and I think we are going to want to elect a governor who will be able to stand on his own two feet and appoint the men that he feels should be in the office. I think if he is that type of man he will not only be respected by one party but by all of the people of the state. As far as the removal is concerned, if we worry that the governor may remove the man at will, if that is not best, we can always insert that he be removed with the consent of the legislature, that is another matter, but as far as the appointing is concerned, I think that is vital right now. As far as screening is concerned, I can see that it might have been good in the past to have the nominations for attorney general screened some way before they even face election by the people. Be that as it may, I think if we elect a governor it is his duty to screen and select a good attorney general. That is part of his job. We are electing him to do that very thing, and if he fails to select a good attorney general then he is that much more a failure as a governor, and he will stand that test in the coming election. If we feel that the attorney general must be screened so that we have the best possible attorney general, I think it is also necessary that the head of the department of education, head of the department of welfare, health and labor, and all the other department heads be screened by somebody so that this governor gets the right men in his cabinet, so to speak. I certainly feel that he should be able to screen and select a good attorney general as well as select the other department heads. But I think there is one thing that is even more important and we discussed that in the Committee, and that is the matter of compatibility. We have felt in the past that we have not had attorney generals who have been entirely in sympathy with the governor and it has been due to the way the two have gotten to their office. We elect the one and the other is appointed out of Washington, and we have seen certain cases where they have not worked out in harmony. Now, if the attorney general is to represent the people alone, then of course he should be elected, but as he is to work under the executive department we want a man who is compatible with the governor and with his type of program that he wants to put over in the state, one that understands the governor, one that will work with the governor and ask the judicial council as set up, not to honor party politics but to work in a nonpartisan capacity. Yet I feel they will not be able to do that as far as the attorney general is concerned, and I don't believe there is any more reason to feel that a judicial council nominee would be any more compatible than one elected by the people of the state; if they are going to ask the governor, "Will this man work with you or will that man work with you, do you want this one or that one?" You might as well say, "Let the governor pick the man in the first place." If they are going to have the liberty to put up a man that will not work with a governor, then we spoil our whole plan for an effective administration. I believe, as Mr. Ralph Rivers mentioned, if we want the attorney general's office mentioned at all in the constitution, it would be very simple on Section 16, line 14, after "department" to insert the words "including the attorney general's office." That would make it very clear that the governor would have the appointive powers and that the attorney general's office would be one that he would have direct control over. That gives you, I believe, some of the Committee thinking regarding the attorney general being appointed by the governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I would like to ask Mr. Rivers a question, if I may. Mr. Ralph Rivers, are the services of the attorney general available to the secretary of state in case he needs them?

R. RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I would like to ask Delegate Rivers a question through the Chair, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Buckalew, if there is no objection.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Rivers, I notice that the proposal, that the caption is by Delegate Rivers. My question was whether this was a committee proposal or your separate individual proposal?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers has already answered that question, Mr. Buckalew. He said that it was actually a proposal of his and of Mr. Harris. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: In closing this discussion, I will make it brief. I just want to say, in my opinion it is no compromise opinion. If it had been a compromise we would not have this discussion on the floor. It has been pointed to as a compromise. Those of us who submitted this proposal honestly and actually think the attorney general should be screened. Now I wanted to clear up a point that Mr. McLaughlin made. He pointed out that certain appointive methods were used in the State of New Hampshire. They are. The attorney general is appointed by the governor and a council of five. In the State of Tennessee the attorney general is appointed for a period of eight years by the justices of the supreme court. In four states, as I am able to count, the attorney general is appointed by the governor by and with the consent of the legislature. In three states the attorney general is appointed by the governor and in the balance he is elected by the people. So if you add that up you will find about 38 states in which he is elected; in these two states I have mentioned, Tennessee and New Hampshire, he is appointed under a similar plan, and in the balance of the states he is appointed by the governor with or without the approval of the legislature, as the case may be. It is my thought, and I have observed this rather closely from some contact with the legislature, that while the attorney general is in essence not a judge, he does interpret the law which governs people until somebody challenges his interpretation, and then his decisions oftentimes and most of the time do have the force of law until they are upset or turned over or otherwise disturbed by having somebody appeal to the courts. It does not seem to me to be a bit out of line that the attorney general should be properly screened as to competence, and in the selection of the attorney general the governor should be relieved of the obligation to repay any favors or to make any particular discrimination in favor of any individual. It has been stated here that we tie the hands of the strong executive. Read this amendment over again. It does not say who the governor shall appoint. It says, "Two or more shall be screened by the judicial council and submitted to the governor for his appointment." He is not limited to the one man or two men or three men. If he can't make his choice he might even have four men, but he does have any obligation removed in making that appointment to any individual. It would be entirely free of a political aspect insofar as it affected the attorney general's competence. There is nothing in here that is counter to common practice, I refer to the State of New Hampshire, the State of Tennessee, and others, but it costs you money if you go to court to upset an attorney general or any other similar official's opinion. That opinion as I have seen it many times, that opinion has the force of law and interpretation of any laws the legislature may have passed. While you might not view him as a judge, in essence he is a judge of what that law says until it's determined otherwise by the courts. In essence he is a judge of what certain things do that apply to the people. For that reason I think that he should be screened as to competence. I see nothing in that which weakens the strong executive. The governor might say of the first two appointees named, "I am unable to make a choice; submit me another name." There is nothing that stops him from doing that in the proceedings of the council. It seems to me that some determination which would relieve this office of having to be filled by any repayment of political favor or obligation should be set up, and that is why we have introduced this amendment. It is no compromise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers had stated he was closing. No one objected. Unless there is someone who has not spoken -- Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I wanted to ask Mr. Rivers a question. Mr. Rivers, when you say the council in New Hampshire, you mean that five elected executive council who are elected by the people together with the governor?

V. RIVERS: I stated the council of five. The council of five is elected for two-year terms along with the governor and they determine with the governor the appointment of the attorney general.

MCLAUGHLIN: But that is not a judicial council at all, is it?

V. RIVERS: I don't know what their duties are. They are a council of five, but whether they are constituted as ours is, I do not know.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers and Mr. Harris be adopted by the Convention?"

HARRIS: I request a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris asks that we have a roll call. The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the question.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 18 - Barr, Collins, Cross, H. Fischer, Harris, Hinckel, Kilcher, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Reader, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Taylor, VanderLeest.

Nays: 36 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Poulsen, Riley, R. Rivers, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - McNealy.)

CHIEF CLERK: 18 yeas, 36 nays and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 14? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, you may offer your amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

R. RIVERS: May we have about a two-minute recess? I would like to consult with Mr. Londborg.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment as proposed by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: It hasn't been introduced yet, I was going to withdraw it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it has not been introduced.

R. RIVERS: I won't even do that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 13 or 14 or 15? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have a question about Section 14. May I be permitted to address it to Mr. Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Sundborg, if there is no objection.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Rivers, I am a little bit bothered about these executive orders of the governor which may change the assignment of functions among the departments, and I am wondering just what force they would have in law, for example, where they contravene some law that might have been passed by the legislature saying that the function of a certain department shall be thus and so and then the governor issues an executive order which says here that it will become effective at the close of the next regular legislature. What happens to the law on the books? Is it of no avail?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am pleased to answer that question because it is one that we discussed at some length in the Committee, and in regard to organizational efficiency of the executive department, the governor would be able to recommend this change in his executive order. It would not become effective until after the legislature had reviewed it and could then take an action upon it. It is the same clause that goes along with, of course, the idea of the strong executive. It is also the same clause that is used in a similar manner for the reorganization powers of the President of the United States. It does give him the power to alter existing organizational structures that have been set up by law, but only after the legislature has failed to say "No, we won't let you do that."

SUNDBORG: Don't you feel we have to specifically give those orders the force of law in the constitution or otherwise before they could contravene an act of the legislature?

V. RIVERS: We discussed that and thought this wording would cover it by and with the advice and also discussion with more than one consultant on the matter. Occasionally there is a body within the organizational administrative setup of government where they have the power of making rules that have the force of law, and it was thought this wording covered it. Of course, none of the rules that are upset or changed, or become law are actually accepted until the legislature fails to take a positive repealing or negative action.

SUNDBORG: Would the governor have the authority, and I assume he would, to veto an act of the legislature which would undo one of these executive orders of his? If not, should we not say so?

V. RIVERS: This is a resolution, not an act. They would do it by resolution if they did not approve, and he has no veto power over a resolution. That is a joint action of the house or the two houses independent of any governor's approval in connection with resolutions as I understand it.

SUNDBORG: Does any state have a provision such as this?

V. RIVERS: I believe there are some of the newer state constitutions, but I can't name them for you. It was generally discussed, and it was implied, and it was my understanding that there were some, and also they do have the same thing in the reorganization powers of the national government.

SUNDBORG: I don't oppose it necessarily, but I just wondered whether we have enough language to make it workable, and you are convinced we do?

V. RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I was going to try to answer Mr. Sundborg from my own standpoint. It appears to me, Mr. President, as one delegate, that if we adopt the provision which is in the proposal, then that if the legislature should make some laws which would take away the power which we here give the governor, that the laws would be unconstitutional and that we are not running into the problem Mr. Sundborg mentions because there should not be such laws.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: First a question of Mr. Victor Rivers. Mr. Rivers, don't you feel that perhaps the last sentence of the section weakens the theory of the strong executive?

V. RIVERS: In respect to the fact that the legislature would have to approve his recommendations, is that as you visualize it and is that what you are talking about?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. Recommendation in the executive field would require some sort of concurrence of the legislature.

V. RIVERS: It would require it in the case of any major change. He has the authority within his structure, no doubt, to make the minor changes necessary, but where he is going to, as it says in here, "assignment of functions and units thereof", you are going to have to have some consent of the legislature, as the Committee viewed it, and I believe I speak for the Committee unanimously on that point.

HELLENTHAL: I believe that answers my question. My point similar to Mr. Davis's, generally the executive branch of the government is supreme when acting in the executive sphere. In that sphere it cannot properly be interfered with by either the judiciary or the legislative branch. That is our true doctrine of separation of powers, and the courts have so held, but here I think we are diluting that. We are permitting an overlapping of the legislative into the executive sphere. The normal check on a thing like this would be the court, and here we have a constitutional check in language which I agree with Mr. Sundborg is not at all clear. Perhaps an illustration of this is where the President acting properly in the executive sphere is told by Congress to do something, and the President ignores the congressional order. For instance, oftentimes the President has refused to answer a subpoena from a legislative investigating council, the theory being that the President, as executive, cannot be interfered with. But here we are enshrining a vague sort of interference.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I just perhaps could amplify the Committee's thinking a bit on this. We were thinking primarily of laws setting up boards and sort of sloppy administration, as we have at the present time. Now then, when the governor sees there are too many departments set up functioning by themselves or functioning under boards and there isn't any coordination, he has the right to suggest a reorganization and a different assignment of functions. Where his executive order might be contrary to the law which originally set up this department or board, that part of his executive order would have to be disapproved by a legislature. That is the way it works, just like the President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, just another word along that line, and I think Mrs. Nordale brought it out quite clear, now the other way would be if the governor wanted some reorganization he would have to go to the legislature and have a bill introduced by somebody or on his own request and that bill would be acted upon to make this necessary change. For instance, deleting a certain board or ceasing its functions and putting it under the single department head or something of that nature, whatever major change he would want he would have to depend upon the legislature to pass that bill and get it into operation. Doing it this way, he sets forth an executive order but it does not become effective until it slips through the next session of the legislature without being voted out by the legislature. I suppose you could call it reverse legislation. The governor makes a new law and if the legislature does not want it done away with, well, then they can let it go through, but I think it runs in line with the strong executive we have where he can set forth his changes and the legislature by being silent on it, in that way they approve of the order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In the absence of any amendment before us, are there amendments?

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 14, line 23, strike the sentence beginning with the word 'Regulatory'."

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. The amendment that was carried over by virtue of a reconsideration only related to the quasi-judicial wording, is that right?

BUCKALEW: This is completely different.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew. Your point of order, Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Point of order. While the reconsideration is still before us, I don't believe this is in order; it would deprive the man of reconsidering.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question would be whether or not this proposed amendment is all-inclusive. The Convention will stand at recess for two minutes if there is no objection.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, with the consent of my second I would ask unanimous permission to withdraw my proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew asks unanimous consent to withdraw his proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I move at this time the consideration of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves the reconsideration of his vote on the amendment by Mr. Buckalew of the Saturday evening at this time. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the words 'and quasi-judicial' be deleted from Section 14 of the Committee Proposal

No. 10/a?" Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: May I ask a question?

EGAN: You may ask your question, Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Is the purpose back of your amendment, Mr. Buckalew, to put a quasi-judicial body under a principal department?

BUCKALEW: Will you repeat the question, Mrs. Nordale?

NORDALE: Is your purpose in removing the word "quasi-judicial", is your purpose to provide that those quasi-judicial bodies shall be allocated within a principal department?

BUCKALEW: My purpose was, if we are going to have to have quasi-judicial bodies, to have them independent of the executive arm.

NORDALE: That is, of course, what our sentence does. It says they need not be allocated within a principal department.

BUCKALEW: By inference it makes it possible to have them in the executive arm. They need not be but they can be.

NORDALE: Is it possible that it might be appropriate to have them in some instances in a principal department?

BUCKALEW: In my humble opinion, I don't think that would be --

NORDALE: The legislature would have to set them up in the first place, anyway, and put them somewhere, is that right? Under this they don't need to be in a department.

BUCKALEW: As I read the language they don't need to be but they can be. My point was if we are going to have these boards, which I think are inherently evil, they should be as separate from the other arms of the government as possible.

NORDALE: That is precisely why we put the sentence in because up ahead a little way it says, "All executive and administrative offices, departments shall be allocated by law within not more than twenty principal departments, insofar as possible..." So we made an exception that these need not be allocated within a principal department.

BUCKALEW: You will agree with me, Delegate Nordale, that the language makes it possible for them to be included within executive office? You'll agree with that?

NORDALE: Certainly, provided it is the sensible thing to do.

BUCKALEW: That was my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew, deleting the words 'and quasi-judicial' from Section 14 of Committee Proposal No. 10/a be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask the Chairman, Victor Rivers, why is the word "administrative" omitted from that particular sentence? You refer to "administrative" in line 1 of Section 14, why don't you have the word "administrative" in there?

V. RIVERS: Which sentence is that, Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: In line 23, "regulator and quasi-judicial bodies", why shouldn't you have the words, "regulatory, administrative, and quasi-judicial bodies" in there?

V. RIVERS: Well, as I understand it, it is our understanding that administrative bodies as a group should be under principal departments and this would make it possible to exempt them. Certain classes of administrative bodies, such as regulatory, quasi-judicial, and temporary need not be for the purposes of efficient administration, all of the major administrative bodies would fall under a principal department. That was the Committee intent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other proposed amendments to Section 14, 15, 16? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I have an amendment on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Riley to Section 16.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, page 7, line 21, strike the last sentence." Is that right?

RILEY: Yes. Mr. President, I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

GRAY: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Gray. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, to a degree we have considered this problem with respect to the article submitted by the Committee on the Judicial Branch, and it is my memory that on that occasion quite a bit of discussion occurred, and it was the feeling of the body that we should not deprive ourselves of the services of able people who might not happen to reside for a stated period in Alaska. In short, we should be able to use the services of those from other jurisdictions in the event and on the chance that efficient talent was not available in Alaska. Now, I think the proposition has even greater force as concerns the various administrative offices that will be provided for, for the State of Alaska. I can recall in my own observation over a period of eight or ten years that at least five occasions when language of this sort, or its absence, has been either disadvantageous or advantageous to the Territory. I think of five major departments, important departments, of the Territorial government before the question arose -- in two instances there was such a prohibition and the hands of the administrative board charged with the conduct of that particular agency were tied. In three instances that I recall, there was no such provision and the appointing authority in that instance was able to go elsewhere to find able, competent people where they had felt there were not qualified applicants from Alaska. I think if we were to have a strong executive who is to be charged with the responsibility for conducting a strong administration, he should properly be able to look over the entire field to find the proper people for administration of particular departments, especially in technical fields where not necessarily will he find in Alaska the people for such responsibilities. Now, I am familiar with the arguments that have been advanced in this respect in the two or three times it has been under discussion before, but I feel that once we have an elective governor the situation will take care of itself. Whomever we have elected as governor of Alaska will be keenly aware of the political implications of going beyond Alaska to fill key roles. Today the situation may not be the same as it would then under an elective governorship, but in any event an elective governor would first scan the field in Alaska, would first try to find qualified personnel here, but if he is to conduct a proper, a good administration, I do not feel that he should be deprived of the services of people from other jurisdictions if unable to find equally capable people here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Riley? Do you object to the provision that heads of departments of the State of Alaska should be citizens of the United States?

RILEY: No, I would not.

SUNDBORG: Were you present when the Convention amended line 23 to provide instead of "citizens of this state" that they shall be "citizens of the United States"?

RILEY: I must not have been.

SUNDBORG: That amendment has been made, and I wonder if you would agree to putting a period after the word "states" in line 23 and striking the balance of the sentence?

RILEY: I agree with that and in submitting my amendment I was not aware of that change. I would ask unanimous consent that that change be made.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before the Chair puts the question -- Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Could we have the Clerk read us Section 16 as it now appears. I think there was another committee amendment that was passed by unanimous consent, but I want to be sure that my version is the same as everyone else's.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that sentence?

CHIEF CLERK: I don't have any record of the amendment Mr. Sundborg is talking about.

V. RIVERS: We put a period after "governor" in line 18 and struck "during his term of office" and struck down to "state".

CHIEF CLERK: I don't recall what Mr. Sundborg is talking about.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg was speaking of another section.

V. RIVERS: Line 23, we adopted by unanimous consent request, the words "citizen of the United States and". I have it marked on my copy.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I believe what Mr. Sundborg is referring to is on line 5, page 1, we struck "of the state" there, and I do have an amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk to strike. "shall be citizens of the state".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley, during the recess did you determine just how the section actually reads at this time?

RILEY: I think the general agreement among those I've talked to, Mr. President, is that the amendment mentioned by Mr. Sundborg was adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: I don't have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no record --

RILEY: In that case, Mr. President, I should like to ask unanimous consent that in lieu of the amendment I have put in, that the word "United" be inserted on line 23 just before the word "state" and ask that an "s" be added to the word "state" and a period be placed thereafter, and the balance of that line and the next two succeeding lines be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent that your original amendment be withdrawn?

RILEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Riley's unanimous consent request to withdraw? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

RILEY: I would also change the word "this" to "the" preceding "United States".

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have heard Mr. Riley's unanimous consent request for the adoption of his proposed amendment which would make this sentence read, "The heads of all principal departments appointed under the provisions of this section shall be citizens of the United States."

V. RIVERS: He did not ask unanimous consent for the striking of the words and the rest of it, did he?

RILEY: No, I did not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that it be changed to read "the United States". Is there objection to that proposed amendment?

ROBERTSON: Deletion of the last clause?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Not in this particular request, no, Mr. Robertson. Is there objection to changing it to read "the United States"? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Getting back to my earlier motion which was submitted perhaps under a misapprehension on the part of many of us here as to whether the "United States" had been adopted or not, I move that the last word on line 23 and the next two lines be deleted.

DOOGAN: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves that a period be inserted after the word "states" and the last word of that sentence and the following two lines be deleted from Section 16.

RILEY: All I shall say at this time, Mr. President, is that it gives effect to my earlier thought and the argument on the original amendment is equally applicable here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You moved the adoption of that amendment?

RILEY: I have and Mr. Doogan seconded the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion and the Chief Clerk will please read that last sentence as it would appear if Mr. Riley's proposed amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "The heads of all principal departments appointed under the provisions of this section shall be citizens of the United States."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Was it your intent that they should not even be qualified electors of the state?

RILEY: My intent was they need not be, that the executive could request, recruit his help from whatever points he might feel he was able to find the best qualified.

V. RIVERS: Speaking against this motion, the wording the way it came out of the Executive Committee was the thinking of the majority of the Committee. It was not unanimous but I do want to say this, that here again comes this consideration as to whether or not the people in the policy-making positions of government shall be acquainted with Alaska. We have had a rash of appointments lately. I can name some of them -- the Finance Director, the Insurance Director -- I am not sure of the other one, but one other was the Fire Marshal, the Juvenile Board head, all appointed from the states. Now those would not be in any instance, except perhaps Finance, the head of a principal department. But I just want to point out there is a general trend and swing in that direction. I know of four, possibly five applicants that were submitted for the head of the fire marshal setup in the Territory. The board ended up by selecting a fire marshal who was an ex-detective from the police force in Seattle who stayed three months. I happen to know for a certainty there are qualified men in the fire practice who are residing in the Territory of Alaska and who were applicants for that position. However, under this clause which is being stricken, that particular section would not have applied. This would, however, establish a general policy. I want you to note, of course, that the Territory of Hawaii, in adopting their constitution, had the same feeling and did include a residence clause. It seems to me basic that people in principal heads of departments, should know something about Alaska as well as being qualified in special fields, and there is nothing in here that would stop such departments from having the services as an assistant or any other manner of properly and qualified specialists. However, where they have a broad policy-making decision and authority in the state government of Alaska, I, for one, want to see them be competent and acquainted with Alaska's problems as well as having the qualifications to handle the particular job in which they are being appointed. It seems to me the offices we are talking about are largely of a general administrative nature. Any special services you may require under principal departments could and properly should be provided by specialists in the technical field in which you are dealing. I, for one, would not support that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I wish to support Mr. Rivers' viewpoint on this. I oppose the amendment. In addition to the example cited by Mr. Rivers, we have an example in Seward which is a matter of public record where the new commissioner appointed -- the former one was brought in from Utah -- he was new and stayed only slightly less than a year and one-half. I oppose the amendment, it will lead to nothing but trouble and confusion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I should like to speak in favor of the amendment for this reason: we here in Alaska have been too prone to insist upon having our cake and eat it, too. If we carry this thinking to its logical conclusion we would not go to a doctor for medical attention unless he had been in the Territory for 50 years. Sure, I came to Alaska in 1906; therefore, I am thoroughly qualified for some executive office. If we want to join the United States and be equal partners with all of our citizens, then we certainly cannot build a wall around ourselves. I am heartily in favor of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I am in favor of the amendment, and I believe that the arguments posed by Mr. Rivers and by Mr. Metcalf are not in point, as they are citing as the horrible example that which has occurred in the last two or three years under the present governor. I doubt whether any governor would have the temerity to even suggest that the head of his department should be brought in from the outside because the people and the party to which he belonged would frown upon it, and he would be practically committing political suicide by doing so, but under the appointive governor system, we have no say as to who they bring in and where they get them, but we have to take them and like them if they are of a likeable nature. If not, we just have to take them, so I don't believe you will have these abuses of appointing outside people to a great extent under the state government; and then again, there is a possibility that in certain lines we might be able to get an outstanding man who might be a citizen of the United States but not a resident of the Territory of Alaska. We might be able to get a man like Dr. Benson, a fine person. I don't know how many of you people know Dr. Benson, but he is a man who has worldwide recognition as you might say, an agricultural engineer, an agronomist, and in his field he was ranked as one of the best in the world, one of the outstanding men, and he did a wonderful job here for the Extension Service, the Agricultural School here. If we could get a man like that we certainly would not want our hands tied so that we couldn't possibly get him and have him in Alaska. We know among a lot of the displaced persons in Europe there were brilliant men, men in their field who are highly recognized. In fact, we had one of the displaced persons from Europe, one of the men who fled for reasons of persecution, I think single-handedly he added more to the ending of the war than any person in the world, and I allude to Albert Einstein. He was a man who was forced out, and we have other men of similar stature, maybe not as well recognized as him but in among the ranks we may find other people, and we know we would, and I do not think we should shut the door on getting the best possible men; but I would certainly be in favor of that if we could get qualified persons in Alaska, they should be picked.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg has been attempting to get the floor.

LONDBORG: Just a word or two further from some of our Committee thinking, I don't think any of us felt that there aren't men elsewhere in the world that would perhaps be better qualified from a technical standpoint. As far as a new doctor coming up here and saying that we would not go to that doctor, I think that is just a little far-fetched thinking. In fact, we might even send for a specialist to come and perform a certain operation be he an Alaskan or not. We have an entirely different situation here where you are going to have a man, and you are going to tie him up in Alaska for a period of, say four years, and I think one thing we should keep in mind that will make for a successful working of a department is to have people in that department who like Alaska, and I think we have seen many people come up to Alaska, they like Alaska, my, they are just all enthused about it, but then after a few months the newness wears off and then they sit there. They have a job and they can't perform it to the best of their ability. They don't like Alaska as much as they thought they did. Alaska is a lot different in many, many ways, climate and otherwise, and I don't think it is a bad policy to have a person go through a three-year waiting period, if you want to call it that, or at least prove they are really Alaskans. At least take a resident, one that has been here a year, a qualified elector and pick from that group. As far as the principal department heads, if they can find a man who is tops in his field, they can hire that man to come up and work and do the job under them. If they're not willing to come and work under a principal department head, then they probably should be over the governor, also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I was born in Alaska, and I have vigorously fought any movements that might be called "Alaska for Alaskans" movements. I wholeheartedly support this amendment. It does not belong in the constitution. I have faith in the executive; I have faith in the legislative; I am sure they will pick qualified men. It might be that those qualified men would be men of residence elsewhere and recent arrivals or they might even be sought out elsewhere. I am not the least bit worried about the thing, but I would be worried if such a restrictive provision were included in the constitution, and I therefore vigorously support this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, the average Alaskan suffers from an inferiority complex. When I attended my first session of the legislature, there was a reporter there, Jim Hutcheson, who represented the Associated Press, and I asked him what he thought of our legislature, the senate in particular. I said, "How does it compare to other state senates?" And his answer surprised me. He had observed several other state legislatures in action, reporting them, including Washington, Oregon, and Massachusetts, and I believe one or two others, and he told me that our senate conducted themselves in a more dignified manner and was more industrious than any other state senate he had ever observed. Now, Mr. Hilscher asked why we should be confined to consulting only Alaskan doctors if there were better doctors outside. There have been many people who have gone outside to consult specialists who have been told they should never have left. We have as good an eye specialist in Alaska as there is anywhere in the United States. We have as good a bone specialist as any in the United States, and probably others, but Alaskans don't seem to know that. I am not foreclosing Alaska to outsiders. I believe the more population we have, the better. The more technical skill and knowledge we can import, the better, but this amendment refers only to department heads, and speaking of Dr. Benson, the agronomist, certainly we should import people like him but he is not a department head. Now a department head, his job is chiefly administrative. He should have some knowledge of his subject, of course, but if his assistant has the technical knowledge or other people under him, he is well equipped to do his job. My only interest in providing a restriction of residence for a department head is to see that that department head is fully qualified for his job and is the best man available. I don't believe that despite his past technical knowledge any department head can perform his job fully and ably unless he has a knowledge of Alaska. In some departments of course he has to have more knowledge than others. In the average department he should have a thorough knowledge of our transportation system, of our climatic conditions, things of that sort, which are far different than any other place in the United States. He can import all the technical knowledge he wants, put them under him as assistants. I will always support provisions such as in this committee report to insure we have the best man available for the job.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I was born and raised in the Territory. I have been outside for a couple of very, very short periods, and I don't think I have an inferiority complex. If I do, I don't admit it. I have tried to fight qualifying language like this proposed section proposes. I maintain that any executive who has been put in the job of governor, first by a major political party and then elected by the people, if he can stand the gaff of going outside to get somebody he thinks he needs, let him do it. I think that we in Alaska, as has been said, sometimes try to build too much of a wall around ourselves. We are trying to adopt a constitution. We put qualifying language in like this, we complain to the Congress of the United States that they won't recognize us as citizens of the United States, and then we turn around and say in our constitution, after they do recognize us, that we are not going to recognize them until they live with us for a while.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I was one of the minority on the Committee along with Mrs. Nordale that was not in favor of the adoption of this particular language, and I would like to say I subscribe to the statements that have been made in favor of the amendment, and I have no fear it will be abused.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White has been attempting to get the floor.

WHITE: Mr. President, I was not going to speak on this because I think my feelings are well known and my arguments can be made much more effectively by delegates such as Mr. Hellenthal and Mr. Doogan who have lived here all their life. It really strikes me as funny to hear this kind of debate on this floor because whether we have lived here all our lives or whether we are relative newcomers -- I have only been here nine years -- we are all proud of two things. One thing we're proud of is that Alaskans come from every state in the union, opportunities are equal for all people who come here; we are proud of that fact. Secondly, we are proud of the fact that Alaskans say to a person, "We don't care where you came from, what your religious beliefs are, your economic position might be. We are interested in what kind of a person you are, if you can measure up you are welcome." For us to throw up barriers when we are thinking of forming what will be the biggest state in the union, strikes me as quite a paradox, particularly where we are considering positions that will have to be filled by men who will have to measure up. They are answerable in this case to the governor and through him to the people. If they don't measure up, they will not be able to continue in the position. If they do we should have them here and make them welcome.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I was just thinking that in many of the professions, law and medicine and all, we have a reciprocity agreement with some of the states. It would seem too bad that if someone in New Jersey, or Missouri, or somewhere, would like to come here and practice law and might be qualified to be a head of a department and although he has reciprocity he cannot until after a two-year period. I am in favor of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith has been trying to get the floor.

SMITH: Mr. President, I feel there are a few things that have not been said that should be said. Now as I see it, the entire theory of the strong executive can only be justified on the basis of efficiency and it appears to me neither reasonable nor logical to set up an executive branch on that basis and then deny the governor the right to select the best men available, wherever they may be. Now, when I first read this sentence, the first thought that came to my mind was the time not too long ago when the Alaska Department of Fisheries was established. I recall very well the problem which confronted the Fisheries Board. The Board had many applications from people in Alaska and I recall a great many of those applications and the qualifications that were set out. I can say without fear of contradiction there was not a man in Alaska at that time who was capable both from an administrative and the technical standpoint to set up and administer that department, and I shudder to think what would have happened had this sentence been in effect at that time. I am one of those who believe that in order to qualify for the position as the head of an administrative department, a man should have both administrative and technical ability. I believe that the interests of the people of Alaska in the efficiency of the administration of their affairs would outweigh by far their interests in guaranteeing employment to a very few residents.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: We have provided in our legislative article a three-year residence clause for either the senate or the house. We provided in our executive article a seven-year residence for the governor. I feel that in the light of this and the fact that there are many men available in specialized departments, particularly those connected with the various great universities across the nation, that an executive should not be limited in reaching out and picking up the best available man for his department head that he can find anywhere, irrespective as to where that may be. I furthermore feel that there are substantive checks upon the executive's authority, changes that he might wish to make in his department heads, changes he might wish to make originally in the appointment of those department heads in our clauses relative to the legislative and executive departments, and I feel that the executive should be given this power of reaching out and picking up his appointive department heads wherever he might find them subject to the approval, of course, of the legislative group which will be Alaskans. Therefore, I am heartily in favor of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I have heard many times people refer to that "blankety carpetbagger comes to Alaska", and I have heard about the great sourdoughs, a very great people and at one time not long ago you could not talk unless you had been here longer than this sourdough and I think they are a great people, but I think that a sourdough is a state of mind. If you have come to the country and you adopted it and were for it, God bless you, you are a sourdough. That everyone wants to be, and you can be it. A lot of people I know that come here and feel "I don't belong; I am an outcast." That attitude has been spread around here coming from the days when you were a closed fishing and hunting empire, but the day has passed and we hope to join the citizenry of the whole United States. We are a part of the whole, and I think we would show us to be very small and measly if we tried to give favors to one section of the North American continent. We are all one people, and I hope that we go on and vote for this amendment and make us a part of the world.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Wien.

WIEN: Mr. President, there has been so much said for this amendment that I hardly feel that I need say more, except to say one thing that was brought out in the Fairbanks hearings, and that was that we have a wonderful University of Alaska but it is at the present time quite limited in its coverage in special fields, and I for one can foresee that with our scientific inventions and the new things that are coming, that we will have a department of government that we do not at the present time foresee which will need specialized heads, and being that the boards and commissions are appointed by the governor I feel that these boards with Alaskan experience should be able to go to the states to pick the executive and this was brought out in the Fairbanks hearings by a man whom I believe is connected with the University of Alaska as well as one of the department heads, and I also find in the Convention so often in comparing the evils of going to the states for appointments, and many other ways that we are thinking of the Territorial form of government rather than the over-all picture of the new state government, and it is something that I have to fight constantly in making decisions, and I think that each one of the delegates must fight that in making comparisons of the past. I am definitely for the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I just wanted to say that I am one of the minority on the Committee, and I am heartily in favor of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am leading the opposition on this amendment evidently, I just wanted to say these are principal departments, department heads. They do not apply to executive officers appointed by boards, they do not apply to the University, they do not apply to anything except those officers in charge of principal departments that make the policy of our government. I think you have seen when you open the way for certain individuals to come into government, pretty soon they have all the cronies from their state with them. I have seen in one department of justice here where a substantial number of all the appointees made have come from one state and of one religion. I have seen one of our big school systems here where the superintendent from one state draws practically 40 per cent of his new appointments from two states and also of one religion in the last three years. I say when you appoint the men here who do not have the Alaska background and the Alaska knowledge to know the country and making policy in major principal offices, you would be establishing a government of Alaska for Alaskans by Pennsylvanians, by Utahans, by Idahoans, or something else. This is policy-making. There are no specialists under this clause that cannot be hired and believe me, when you bring a man in from some outfit in another place and give him high powers of government, it is not going to be very long before he is surrounded by his own particular group, constituting his own hierarchy from the area from which he came. That has been evident all the way through. So in these high offices of principal department heads of making policy. I for one in this Committee and on this floor, strongly feel they should know something of Alaska, and I think three years requirement to know something of Alaska is an absolute minimum. I think it is one of the basic requirements of the job. This broad general gesture about these men coming in here in their specialized fields, there is nothing in this article that prohibits them bringing in any specialist they may need. It does prohibit them from putting a specialist or any other man in a principal department for making policy who would then be in the policymaking body of our government. It seems to me that it is a right that we owe the people to have people in these high cabinet offices who do know the Territory as well as knowing their business, and if they are such good men and they really want to be a part of Alaska they wouldn't hesitate to spend three years here in filling out their knowledge and knowing something about the country, and I do want to point out again that when you put a man in a high policy-making office, it is not very long before the underlings, which we require no residency clause here, may also constitute the major part of that particular office because that has been the experience of us in Alaska in the past. I have seen it in city government; I have seen it in school government; I have seen it in departments of justice government; and I have seen it in other parts of the Territorial government where some man is put in a position of power and he is soon surrounded by his own people from his own state or his own general area.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: As a sourdough and, I think, observing the cautions Mrs. Hermann has on her desk, I want to support the amendment. I don't think this has any place in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: In exercising the right to close, I will forego further comment, Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Riley be adopted by the Convention?"

WHITE: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 38 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 16 - Barr, Coghill, Collins, Cross, H. Fischer, Harris, Johnson, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, Metcalf, Nolan, Peratovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson.

Absent: 1 - McNealy.)

CHIEF CLERK: 38 yeas, 16 nays and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 16? If not, are there amendments to Section 17? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 16 but with the amendment now adopted I wish to withdraw that one. I do have an amendment for Section 17.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Coghill for Section 17.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 8, lines 8 and 9, delete 'but the appointment shall be subject to the approval of the governor'.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I move that the proposed amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill moves for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

KILCHER: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, in proposing this amendment, what it has done, in turn it has made the principal department boards that are appointed by the governor free of hand to appoint their executive officer and to keep in trust the thinking of the people as to the violation of political inference in particular service boards. I mainly am interested in the board of education and so, therefore, will refer my remarks to them. The Hawaii Constitution provides that a lay board of education be established and the board be given the sole power to appoint its chief state school officer and in turn that would be what we would call in Alaska our commissioner of education. I note that in 18 states the board is provided by the constitution and 21 states by statute and in all of these instances, or most of them, why the executive head or the head of the board, the administrative head, is appointed by this responsible lay board which is in turn answerable to the governor. I feel that this is a move to take any sort of partisan politics out of a service board or a service department such as the commissioner of education or the commissioner of health or welfare. I think that it would apply to all three of them. I might add that one of our great men in education provided that in a speech that he made that governors and state legislatures without exception are bound by state constitutions, by court decisions and their tradition to establish and maintain public schools free from political entanglements and the domination of any special interests or selfish interest groups, and I believe that by deleting this particular part of the last sentence that we would thereafter have no rash move on our strong executive power to remove a good man from office or to turn one down because of party or political affiliations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Walsh.

WALSH: Mr. Chairman, we were discussing this matter Saturday to some extent with some of the members at this desk. and at that time I was prepared to bring in a similar amendment to what Mr. Coghill has brought in now to strike after the word "law" on page 8, because I thought it would affect the University of Alaska, and if it would affect the University of Alaska I certainly would be in favor of this amendment because the University of Alaska has a Board of Regents appointed by the governor and confirmed by both houses of the legislature and they in turn select the administrative officer which is the President of the University. I don't believe that a man so selected by that board should be subject to the approval of the governor, so I checked up with a couple of the attorneys here and we find that the University of Alaska would not be subject to, the appointive officer of the board of regents would not be subject to the approval of the governor because the University of Alaska is a corporation and its Board of Regents is the Board of Directors so to speak, and I will ask Mr. Riley, whom I consulted Saturday and again today, to bear me out on this point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Walsh, I have not given the matter any independent study, but I have no reason to question anything Mr. Walsh has said. I think that others have provided the right source material on which his remarks are based.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Walsh.

WALSH: If the University of Alaska and the Board of Regents of the University of Alaska and their appointment of the administrative officers, if the appointment should be subjected to the approval of the governor, I am going to vote for this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I think it is clear in everyone's mind that the University of Alaska is not a principal department of government. We are dealing in this article only with setting up the departments of the executive branch of government, and it seems to me only consistent that the heads of those departments be approved by the governor. It is not very likely he would disapprove them since he has appointed the boards; naturally, the board should be in sympathy with his general viewpoint. Furthermore, there might be times -- the board of education is not going to be the only board -- I don't think there is anything dangerous about it at all. I think it is only consistent with a coordinated government, and never forget, the governor is responsible. I don't think any enlightened person in this day and age wants to see education in politics.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: I raised a question on this Saturday also. It says "...at the head of a principal department or of a regulatory or quasi-judicial body..." Therefore, I feel that all boards or commissions eventually would be classed within those three limitations and that the governor would have to approve the appointment of the executive officer, and I agree with Mr. Walsh and others that eventually politics can possibly enter into some board or commission where it has no point of being and I support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would just like to say that I do not consider education or anything else a "holy cow". It is a function of this state. It is part of the general administrative organization, and I do not believe that it deserves any kind of special treatment. I think that the commissioner of education should possibly be appointed by a special board of education, a nonpartisan board. At the same time, however, that commissioner will have to work with the governor. He will have to work with other department heads. For instance, the commissioner of education, I do not believe it would be right to leave the way open for the appointment of a commissioner of education who will just be separate from the general executive branch of the state and from that standpoint I am very much opposed to the amendment, and I stand by the article as it is written.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask a question of Mr. Victor Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Rivers, would you have any objection if specific language excluding the University of Alaska were included in the section?

V. RIVERS: Mr. Hellenthal, I will stand by the committee report in this matter. It is one of the things we discussed at length. We feel we have solved it adequately and properly, and I would not care to see a specific inclusion, or exclusion made. I speak for myself and I think for the whole Committee on that.

HELLENTHAL: For example, would you object to saying, "Provisions of this section shall not be construed to apply to the board of regents of the University of Alaska."?

V. RIVERS: I would object. I understand that there is going to be brought in in connection with the actual indication of the University of Alaska as a state university, and if there were to be some particular mention, I think it should be made there.

HELLENTHAL: Would you object to it being made anywhere?

V. RIVERS: Not in its proper place I wouldn't, but in this article I would.

HELLENTHAL: Then you will agree with me that somewhere in the constitution it would be proper?

V. RIVERS: I don't say I see a need for it. I said I would not object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: At Mr. Walsh's request and to clarify any impressions I may have left a moment ago, I don't see the need for Mr. Hellenthal's suggested language. I would not oppose it but I feel the University is clearly without the contemplation of this language as it has been presented by the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: To clarify Mr. Walsh, we looked it up in the code book, Alaska Code Book No. 2, and it does provide that the University of Alaska is an Alaska corporation and it is run by the regents and they are appointed by the governor, and has no reference to the executive head of the government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, I would just like to point out that I think we all agree that we would like to see the board of education appointment effective, and I'm not worried about it even with this language that we have, but we should keep in mind that at present there are some 20 boards in the Alaska administration which would also come under this same language if we strike it, and it would certainly hamstring the governor's administration not to be able to approve the heads of a lot of those other departments, so in voting on this you must keep in mind that it is not just the department of education, at present, and if these laws carry over, it's going to be a lot of other boards until we can straighten up our present laws.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, could we have a one-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: If there are no other delegates that wish to speak on this, I wish to exercise the privilege of having the closing debate.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any delegate who hasn't been heard that wishes to speak on this? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to say a few words, Mr. President. If we should adopt this amendment we would be inviting and opening the way to principal departments of our state running wild without any reference to the policies of the governor; he couldn't say a thing to a man who might be the head of the department of fisheries, for instance, if they were a board of fisheries, as I assume they would be. He couldn't say anything to the head of the department of game about how his department's activities should fit in with those of the rest of the state government. I believe we would soon get back to government as bad and as irresponsible as we have now under the Territory of Alaska if we would adopt this amendment, and I hope we will not adopt it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: The one thing that strikes a little fear into my heart in this matter of making such a broad, inclusive destruction of this particular section here by this amendment, is the fact that so many people mention politics getting into this and politics getting into that. The connotation of politics is the science of government, and we must remember if we strike this out, Mr. Sundborg's argument is perfectly valid -- we cannot fix responsibility, and if we are to have the executive that we hope the new state will have, we must be able to fix responsibility or we might as well redraft this whole executive department and do just as we are doing now. To strike this out strikes the very heart out of this section. We are a group of citizenry here who are, by and large, tired of rule by board. It may have been necessary in a protection in past years in order to eliminate too much influence from an absentee governor, or one appointed by absentees, in dominating our Territorial affairs. We have created boards for the purpose of getting away from Washington, D. C., and controlling our own affairs, but when we can elect our own governor, he sets up his upper cabinet and operates the government in conjunction with the legislative branch, we need have no fear that politics are going to get into this in the fashion in which most of the connotation of politics has been hurled here, and I am absolutely opposed, predicated on experience and analysis of this thing, that we strike this particular thing. If Mr. Coghill wants to set aside the Territorial Board of Education, if that is the way it is going to be governed, education by a board, then of course, let him do it by one specific amendment, or let the legislature take care of it. I don't believe that the legislature is going to invoke the principle of political "ward heeler-ism", or whatever you want to call it, on our board of education or in education. It's been shown in the past that they don't want it that way and I don't believe that this is the way to get at the problem that Mr. Coghill fears.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard who has not been heard? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Maybe I will have to speak on special privilege since I have spoken once.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking for the special privilege of the floor?

BOSWELL: Well, I just --

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Boswell has the special privilege of the floor.

BOSWELL: Well, I just wanted to say, I can't speak for the Committee but I know that some language is being drafted to take the University out of this and satisfy Mr. Walsh in that manner, and if the Committee doesn't wish to introduce it, I will be glad to do it as an individual.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I would like to say just a word. I sympathize with Mr. Coghill, as far as the board of education is concerned. However, I can see where this would leave the door open for every board head or every principal officer to be appointed if they are run by a board without any O.K. at all by the governor. I am wondering if it would not be better to put in the words, "appoint the principal executive officer when and as authorized by law". Then it would leave it entirely up to the legislature, if they want to set up a department of education completely independent, that is up to the legislature, and they are the people. They will be the people in the future, they will be the voice of the people. If they want to close the door down and make the others subject to the approval of the governor, that is fine, but at least we will have some out for the voice of the people to be heard in the future. I certainly feel that we must make certain allowances, otherwise we are going to tie the whole thing up and probably have some of our departments that shouldn't be politically operated, they still will be subject to politics.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, if no one wishes the floor you may make the closing argument if you so desire.

COGHILL: Mr. President, it looks like I stand alone on this issue. In closing, I would like to point out to the delegates that in Section No. 16 we have set up, "The head of each principal department shall be a single executive, unless otherwise provided by law. Such single executive shall be nominated and appointed by the governor...." On Section 17 we have put a board at the head of these principal departments, and it is the head of that board that is responsible to the governor for the coordination of his executive branch with reference to that particular department. We are using, in reference to the board of education, we set up a board of education; we provide for a head of that board; they in turn hire an executive head. This executive head carries out the intent of that board and there is no reason why the governor should approve them because actually according to the way this section is written, he will not be sitting on the board, on the governor's cabinet or his executive committee or whatever it might be. The board is the one that is responsible to the governor, and in turn the board will meet and elect a president or chairman of the board, and he is the one that is responsible to the governor and not the executive. The executive has got to have one head that he will be responsible to. Is he going to carry out the wishes of this nonpartisan lay board or is he going to carry out the wishes of the governor? He will be in turn carrying out the wishes of the governor that are directed to him through the board and keeping in line their complete program, in consistency. That is why I have introduced the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Point of information. I would like to address a question to Mr. Coghill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection you may address your question.

BARR: Mr. Coghill, I agree with what you have said, but this board sits for only a short period. When they are not in session then who is running our department of education here in the Territory?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Barr, with reference to the board of education which I am familiar with, the executive officer, our commissioner of education is running the department by the program set forth in the board's meeting that they have annually.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to ask a question please of Mr. Coghill.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Taylor, you may ask your question.

TAYLOR: Mr. Coghill, do you think it would be necessary under the state that we would have to have a board of education, that it would be just as advisable to have a commissioner of education answerable to the governor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: No, I don't. I believe we should have a board of education. I believe we should have a board of education appointed from different parts of the Territory to sit in an advisory capacity.

TAYLOR: Is that answer based upon the fact we have had a board in the past?

COGHILL: No, that is answered on the basis that we have, out of the 48 states, a large majority run by boards.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Coghill be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor will signify by saying "aye" --

COGHILL: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 4 - Coghill, Cooper, Kilcher, Londborg.

Nays: 50 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - McNealy.)

CHIEF CLERK: 4 yeas, 50 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 17?

R. RIVERS: May we have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Do we have a proposed amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk?

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Robertson has one but I don't have it.

R. RIVERS: I offer mine now, Mr. President.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Robertson had already been recognized.

ROBERTSON: I think Mr. Rivers had the floor before I did.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Mr. Robertson. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 17, page 8, line 9, at the end of the section, add the words 'except that such appointments by the Board of Education or the Regents of the University of Alaska need not be so approved by the governor.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Rivers?

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of that amendment.

WALSH: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I am going to vote against the amendment because it is absolutely useless, uncalled for and would have no effect whatsoever as the University is not a part of the Territorial government whatsoever; it is an independent agency.

R. RIVERS: May I open the argument, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, both Mr. Walsh and Mr. Coghill have a real point here, notwithstanding the fact that Delegate Fischer does not think that education is a "sacred cow". The very power of the legislature which creates a corporation known as the University of Alaska with the power to own land, to sue and be sued, has the power to dissolve that corporation. Mr. Walsh wants to be absolutely certain that whatever the governing board of the University is in the future, if that corporation is dissolved and a new administrative setup brought into effect, that the regents or governing board of that University may choose the President of the University without the sanction of the governor. The governor would no doubt have the power of making the appointments of the regents or whatever you might want to call them subject to the approval or confirmation by the legislature, as would be the case in all those appointments. The department of education will have a board no doubt, and I think the same arguments that apply to the University of Alaska apply to the board of education. I agree with Mr. Sundborg and others that when you are dealing with the run-of-the-mill administrative departments that involve administrative policies and political considerations, as stated in the platforms of the various political parties, that you have got something that bears squarely on the controversial issues of politics. Education, I think, should be governed by a nonpartisan group of men with nothing but the long-range benefits of the particular educational institutions involved. We've been through it before. I feel that if the governor has to put his sanction upon the executive officer of the University or the administration of our schools that you are injecting a political element into that situation, and this is not useless or senseless as Delegate Taylor imports. I think he spoke a little hastily when he said that, and I am always opposed to calling the proposals of other people either silly or senseless, or insane.

TAYLOR: I rise to a point of order. I don't believe I used any of those words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

R. RIVERS: If I misquoted Mr. Taylor I apologize. I think the apology probably should come from the other direction. Mr. President, this is a serious consideration, and it seems I voted against Mr. Coghill's amendment because I agreed with those who thought that generally speaking on these administrative boards that the governor should have a say-so, but I think there is a very positive distinction between the rest of those boards and the board of education and the regents of the University of Alaska, and I consulted with Mr. Coghill and Mr. Walsh before I submitted this amendment. The wording may not be perfect but the thought is absolutely clear, and if this body agrees with me as far as the importance of this language is concerned, then we will certainly leave it to Style and Drafting to improve the language. Now I might say that where I have said the "board of education", you might say the "governing body of the department of education", whatever the name may be called by the legislature later. I'm not trying to freeze a board of education. Style and Drafting can use a broader term if it sees fit, but the principle I'm pointing out is absolutely clear in my mind and I hope the delegates will consider it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to direct a question to Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer, you may address your question.

V. FISCHER: Do you think it is better that the department of education be administered by a board or that it be administered by a single-head executive?

R. RIVERS: I strongly favor the selection of a nonpartisan board from various parts of the Territory, as Mr. Coghill has stated.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, then I submit that this exception would open the way and probably encourage the establishment of the department of education as a direct staff department of the executive with the appointment of the commissioner of education directly by the governor. If we have any kind of a governor who wants uniformity in his administration he would certainly request that the legislature not provide for a commissioner of education who is completely exempt from his jurisdiction.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, I wanted to make a point regarding the University of Alaska, referring back to this language that we're now drafting. Mr. Rivers has said that the legislature could change the University from a corporate body and this among other things will set it up as a corporate body that cannot be dissolved by the legislature and that would be one thing in its favor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, as Committee Chairman, I think we have the point covered in the committee article, and in present time, 1935 as I recall, the present board was set up, and in this present setup the approval of the commissioner of education lies with the legislature, but in any session in which I sat, in which a commissioner of education was actually approved, the appointment of the commissioner of education came down through the governor to the legislature. It also says in the same article that the commissioner of education may be removed for certain causes by a majority vote of the board of education, and also, there again by approval of the both houses of the legislature. Now, I think that the present system has worked very satisfactorily. As the article is at the present moment, rather than clearing through the legislature, the board would then clear their appointment through the governor. It would give some cohesion and some coordination to that department of government in connection with the over-all operation of government; therefore, I must oppose the amendment. Our present system is working satisfactorily. The only change, and would have no more political implication in this manner that we set up than it has now, the only change would be the matter of approval. The law could provide no doubt for means of removal, the law providing for the appointment of such a chief executive, and there again I assume it would be similar to what it is now, recommendation and approval of the majority of the board and by and with the approval and consent of the legislature, I assume.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I move to amend the amendment by striking the words, "the board of education or" therefrom.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I object.

RILEY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves, it was seconded by Mr. Riley. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK "Strike the words 'the board of education or' so that it would read: 'except that such appointments by the regents of the University of Alaska need not be so approved by the governor.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, it seems to me unnecessary to mention the Board of Regents of the University. I think there should be an article in our constitution somewhere setting up the University of Alaska, possibly in similar language to that of the University of Hawaii. "It is hereby established as a state university and constituted a body corporate..." and then it goes on, and that would take care of the University and make it very clear that it can never be dissolved and that it is not part of the executive branch of the government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: The Chairman of the Ordinance and Transition Committee is not here but I believe that is one of the provisions in the ordinances, the establishment of the Territory University as the State University and that would probably be a logical place to put that in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: That may be all very well. Such a proposal would doubtless be proper, and I would support it if there were a separate inclusion. I would support it unless I felt we were getting over into the legislative field, but I certainly agree with the principle, but I think we should right now give an expression of how we feel on this matter by including the exception applicable to the University of Alaska. Later, if the proposal comes, then this could be deleted perhaps, and the other one left. That is a matter of Style and Drafting but now this is a question of principle. I support this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: This whole section applies only to three classes of agencies. It applies to principal departments of the state, to regulatory bodies and quasi-judicial bodies. It is inconceivable to me that no matter what the legislature did it could ever put the University of Alaska under one of those three headings, and I am very much afraid here that if we read in here an exception saying that it shall not apply to the University of Alaska, that it would apply or that it could be construed to apply to any other state corporation because we had not excepted that from the language.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else that wishes to be heard before Mr. Rivers closes? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think that whole question of the last 20 minutes was 10 minutes too long, but I don't understand Mr. McCutcheon's argument even in the former amendment which has bearing on this one, that this question is so vital as to the governor's authority and powers. The governor appoints the board. In nine cases out of 10, if he appoints the board, he will know, he can make his wishes be known whom he wants in there as head of the board, and the governor has the power to appoint the board, not the legislature, so one way or the other, it doesn't make much difference, and as pointed out here the University can be dealt with in a separate article, so let's vote this amendment down and leave this as it is and then vote, if necessary, for a special treatment of the University.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment, as amended, be adopted by the Convention?"

HILSCHER: Could we have it read please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment, as amended.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 9 -- add 'except that such appointments by the Board of Regents of the University of Alaska need not be so approved by the governor.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment as amended will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment as amended has failed of adoption. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to announce a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee for 12:15 o'clock, a luncheon meeting. Subject to other committee announcements I would now like to move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 1:30 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration will have a meeting at 1 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: The Committee on Resources will meet at 12:50 in one of the committee rooms upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Engrossment and Enrollment immediately upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no other announcements and if there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk will please read any communications that are on her desk.

CHIEF CLERK: All of it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You might summarize it.

(The Chief Clerk read a telegram from A. W. Boddy, President of the Alaska Sportsmen Council of Juneau urging that certain language be inserted in the resources article.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication is referred to the Committee on Resources.

(The Chief Clerk read a letter from the Alaska Native Brotherhood signed by Mr. Herbert Bradley, Grand Vice President, endorsing the Alaska Sportsmen Council's recommendation regarding the resources article.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: That communication will also be referred to the Committee on Resources. It has attached to it a lengthy explanation of their stand on that same issue.

(The Chief Clerk read a letter from Delegate E. L. Bartlett enclosing a copy of a letter from Congressman Walter Rogers of Texas, acknowledging receipt of the copy of the telegram sent by the Constitutional Convention to President Eisenhower.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communication may be filed. Are there other communications?

CHIEF CLERK: I have none.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If not, does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. White.

WHITE: No report, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will hold the report in abeyance. Are there amendments to Section 18 of Committee Proposal No. 10/a? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I have an amendment to Section 17.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 17, line 4, after the word 'be' insert the words 'citizens of the United States and'."

ROBERTSON: I move for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson for the adoption of the amendment. After the word "be" on line 4 insert the words "citizens of the United States and".

CHIEF CLERK: Between "be" and "nominated".

ROBERTSON: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson asks unanimous consent that his amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 17? If not, are there amendments to Section 18?

HERMANN: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, you may submit your amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mrs. Hermann.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 18, on page 8, line 16, after the word 'unless' insert the words 'the appointee is confirmed by the legislature or'."

HERMANN: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "On page 8, line 16, after the word 'unless' insert the words 'the appointee is confirmed by the legislature or'."

HERMANN: Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment is to make it possible for the legislature to confirm the person who has been given an interim appointment. As it stands, they would not have that opportunity.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves and asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It's just a matter of form. In line 13 where you find "the consent of the senate or of", it was the opinion of the Committee that in adopting that general article the other day we covered that, but this should have a little special wording. We would strike the words "of the senate or of" and insert the words "of either house of the legislature or the legislature in joint meeting", because some acts are apt to call for approval by either house or the legislature in joint meeting and in that way he could still make his interim appointments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you offer the amendment?

V. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent. In line 13, strike the words "of the Senate or of" and insert in lieu thereof the words "of either house of the legislature or". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection?

JOHNSON: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

V. RIVERS: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers moves, Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. White.

WHITE: May we hear how it would now read?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that portion as to how it would read if the amendment were adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 13 'with the advice and consent of either house of the legislature or the legislature in joint meeting'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no discussion -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I would like to discuss it a little bit. Mr. Rivers, what would the occasion be in which one or the other houses of the legislature would confirm an appointment? Do we have anything in the constitution?

V. RIVERS: We do not have anything in the constitution, but we are trying to provide for the governor to fill vacancies. It is entirely possible that there will be legislation introduced that says that this appointee shall be confirmed by the senate or by the house or by the legislature in joint session, so this particular wording, we wanted to cover those three contingencies, in the event they were included in any law he could still fill the vacancy. It was not thought to be controversial, it merely clarifies.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Before going ahead, I would like to ask Mr. Rivers if the words "in joint meeting", line 14, is equivalent to "joint session" as we have used it in other places.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could you answer that, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I did not get the question, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: The word "meeting", Mr. Rivers, in line 14, it now would read "the legislature in joint meeting". I am wondering if that is equivalent to the words "in joint session" as we have used it the other places in this same article?

V. RIVERS: Yes, it is. It might be something for Style and Drafting, and they would probably adopt uniformity in that wording, but the intent was "in joint session". Some state constitutions use the terms "by joint vote", and there are other methods and other wording which covers it. Delegate Riley had a suggestion which I might mention here. Do you want to mention that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I am operating on the premise that if we adopt this section I would like to have it clear and complete. I am not out of sympathy with this particular provision, although even though this is adopted I may later move for its striking if others don't, but I think that while we are considering it, there is one omission and that is that it occurs to me that this section is wide open to misinterpretation. It reads "either house of the legislature or the legislature in joint session", I assume, but there is no provision for a legislative provision in the individual case. I think "as prescribed by law" might somewhere there improve it.

V. RIVERS: I have no objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: At the end of the sentence, Mr. Victor Rivers?

V. RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: After the word "meeting" strike the period and add the words "as prescribed by law"?

V. RIVERS: Yes, I would ask unanimous consent to withdraw my first amendment and include that as a part of it. Would that be all right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your amendment is pending at this time. If there is no objection, the words "as prescribed by law" will be made an addition to the proposed amendment. Is there objection? If there is no objection it is so ordered and those words have become a part of the proposed amendment. The question is -- Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: May we have the thing read now as it would sound throughout? We got into trouble once before on a deal like this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that sentence as it would read now if the amendment would be adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "The governor may fill any vacancy occurring in any office during a recess of the legislature, appointment to which is made by the governor with the advice and consent of either house of the legislature or the legislature in joint meeting as prescribed by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, are you satisfied with that particular -- if there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair would like to announce that a group photo of the entire Convention will be taken on Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. All 55 delegates are requested to be present. It will be taken inside on the staircase. With relation to this amendment, Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: We discussed this during the short recess and we feel that while the wording is rather bulky there now and it needs some revision in Style and Drafting, the intent is clear. There were some suggestions made but we felt that without further time taken on this, this would cover it and the matter could be somewhat condensed in Style and Drafting, but the intent here is clear as to our thoughts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Victor Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I am preparing an amendment that I think will possibly meet the objections of a lot of them, if I can have just a minute, and I'll offer that as an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: I would like to ask a question of this. If this amendment goes in, we have an appointment which is made by the governor with the advice and consent of either house of the legislature or the legislature in joint session or meeting. Now, we could have the legislature in session and you could read that that the governor could go to the senate and get it confirmed and not worry about the house or he could go to the house and not worry about the senate or he could go to the joint session, and I don't think that is the intent either.

SUNDBORG: It says, "as prescribed by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Even it seems fouled up to me -- this language -- it must be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess then for a minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, in order to expedite the business of the Convention, I will withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for the adoption of this proposed amendment? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will now ask to withdraw the proposed amendment because there is going to be one there that will cover it in a manner acceptable, I am sure, to all of us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers asks unanimous consent to withdraw the proposed amendment. If there is no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I have an amendment on the desk which has been there since before the recess. I would like it read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment offered by Mr. Fischer.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 18."

V. FISCHER: I so move.

HERMANN: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves, Mrs. Hermann seconds the motion that Section 18 be stricken, be deleted from the proposal.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, all I would like to say is that we presently have a law to this effect on our statute books. It was enacted by the last session of the legislature. I do not see why we must enact things like this which we have in our regular enactments of the legislature, why we must include them in the constitution. I think the discussion here has shown the difficulties and problems that may arise out of bringing in this kind of detailed procedure. I think that the subject can be very adequately covered by legislation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I favor leaving it in. Any act of the legislature can be removed by the succeeding legislature. We are setting up a strong executive and we are requiring that most appointments be confirmed in some manner or other. In the constitution it is by joint session. There may be many laws setting up other positions which will require only confirmation by only one house or the other. But nonetheless, I think that the people have a right to expect the governor will submit his appointments to the legislature for confirmation when that is part of the constitution. This is not without precedent may I say. The New Jersey Constitution which is reputed to be very short and concise and contains almost the identical language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I will say a few words along the same line, that this is one of the essential powers of the executive that we felt should be included in the constitution and we feel, as Delegate Nordale has stated, that while an act could be passed it might be changed and altered materially through the years, and that the governor with a different composition of the legislature from time to time might be faced with difficult problems of making interim appointments. It seems to us in the Committee, essential that we provide the power for making interim appointments when the legislature was not in session and also provide that the governor could not make interim appointments, jump the time the legislature was in session and then make another interim appointment of the same man. This does take care of that situation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, we are, apparently, all of the opinion that we should have a strong executive and we have therefore given to the governor the power of appointment not only of the boards but of all of his officers of principal departments and minor departments. I think the mere statement that this is the law that we have at the present time is sufficient to describe it as a statutory measure and as a statutory measure it does not belong in the constitution. Any attempt to put into the constitution, a law, an actual statute that is already in effect, can only be construed to mean that we are substituting statutory law for fundamental law, which is what the constitution should contain. That is why I seconded the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment, deleting Section 18 from Committee Proposal No. 10/a, be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to offer an amendment to Section 18.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been deleted, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I will withdraw.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 1 of Committee Proposal No. 10/a? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, do I understand that that last amendment deleted the entire section? Then the governor has no authority to make interim appointments at all, is that correct?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unless it is covered by statutory law, Mrs. Nordale.

The action of the Convention deleted Section 18, that is correct.

NORDALE: I just wanted to be clear on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: With respect to Section 17, lines 4 and 5, how do they read according to our Chief Clerk? Did we, in other words, amend that by providing with the advice and consent of the legislature in joint session?

CHIEF CLERK: That motion the other day that was adopted changes that automatically.

SUNDBORG: Is it the understanding of the Chairman of the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee that that will be done in each place where there is a mention of advice and consent of one of the houses?

SWEENEY: I have been making my corrections in ink when they have been adopted, and the one we were talking about this morning and also a couple of items in Section 18, where we added in the legislature meeting in joint session"; we talked about those and I put them down just as question marks, and so my understanding is there has been no change made in 17 except this addition of "citizens of the United States and" in line 4. Now the journal can show different.

CHIEF CLERK: No, it does not.

SUNDBORG: We adopted a motion by Mr. Victor Rivers saying that it is our intention to have that language changed, but I believe we have to do it specifically, don't we, Mr. Rivers?

V. RIVERS: In this proposal it was the intention that where we mentioned "confirmation" and "advice and consent of the senate" that the words be changed to "legislature in joint session", in this Proposal No. 10/a.

SUNDBORG: Is that sufficient to carry the language right into the proposal in the view of the Chairman of the Engrossment and Enrollment Committee? Would you write that in, in view of the action that we took on Mr. Rivers' motion?

SWEENEY: Not unless the body adopted it. It was my understanding that it was not adopted by the body.

CHIEF CLERK: Do you want me to read the motion that was adopted on Saturday?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Please.

CHIEF CLERK: "Mr. Hellenthal moved that wherein Committee Proposal No. 10/a: 'Confirmation of a gubernatorial appointment is required of either or both houses of the legislature or both houses jointly, then in those cases it shall be the policy of this body that such confirmation be made by both houses of the legislature in joint assembly.' Mr. Taylor seconded and on voice vote the motion was adopted." Does that change it?

SWEENEY: Yes, that would change it, and the Chief Clerk would so indicate on her copy of the proposal that the Engrossment Committee gets.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, may I speak on personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley, you may.

(Mr. Hurley spoke under the question of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair has been thinking about that since Mrs. Nordale asked the question. There is a statutory provision at the present time that covers that and the transitional measures, I mean, if that is the wish of the body in striking Section 18, the transitional measures will probably call for the adoption of all Territorial laws, laws on the statutes to become the law of the state. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I am a little worried about Section 18. I doubt seriously if the governor would have authority to make a recess appointment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, isn't it true there is a statutory provision that gives the governor of Alaska a right to make interim appointments now and that if the laws are carried over into the new state government by the transitional measure, he will still have that authority?

BUCKALEW: The only thing that worries me is, suppose we don't carry over that particular statute? Suppose we don't adopt that statute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seems to me we would be in trouble more ways than one. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Before we put this section into the executive, I might answer Mr. Buckalew's question. I went through the hearings on the executive that we have in the State of New Jersey constitutional books upstairs, and the arguments were presented there as to what the powers of the government would be in the recess appointments in filling vacancies and I intend to go up there as soon as we have another recess and try to pick out that language because there are two or three cogent points that I believe the body should know, and after making a brief talk on them I am probably going to ask that we rescind our action on that motion because I believe it will convince you that there are reasons why this section should be in to give him the power of filling a vacancy in recess appointments.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I wonder if Mr. Taylor had an amendment which I think would certainly cure any problem that might arise. I wonder if Mr. Taylor would now offer his amendment to Section 18.

TAYLOR: I would offer it but it would take a motion to rescind the former action before this could be, because 18 was wiped out, and so we only now are bound by the provisions of the code which will be carried over into the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have an amendment to offer to Section 18 which will not require any rescinding and which I think will take care of the problem.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You are offering a new Section 18, is that right Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Yes sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 18. The Governor may fill any vacancy occurring in any office during a recess of the Legislature, as may be prescribed by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg, what is your pleasure?

SUNDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment.

BUCKALEW: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the adendment, seconded by Mr. Buckalew. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: That amendment does nothing more than give him an implied power that is already here. It doesn't take care of an appointment he may make. Suppose the governor makes an appointment of "Joe Doaks" to be a secretary of some department, or head of some department, the legislature does not confirm him. The governor submits no new name; the legislature goes out of session; the governor then turns around and reappoints "Joe Doaks" interim head until the next session of the legislature meets. By our wording we have taken care of that. By this wording it takes care of nothing that is not already an implied power. The legislature already has the power to provide by law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: My amendment would give the legislature the power to take care of that by whatever language or provision it desires. It does give the governor the right to make an interim appointment and then it says that the rules governing such interim appointments shall be laid down by the legislature.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there amendments to Section 1, Committee Proposal No. 10/a? Or Section 2? Mr. Doogan.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I had one to clarify a matter that was brought up I would like to offer an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, the Chair had recognized Mr. Doogan and he has an amendment on the desk, if you could just hold that a minute. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as offered by Mr. Doogan to Section 2.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, lines 4 and 5, strike the words 'and shall have been for at least seven years'. Line 6, put a period after the word 'State' and strike the balance of the sentence."

DOOGAN: I move its adoption.

DAVIS: I wish you would read it as it will appear.

SWEENEY: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: We struck the same language that Mr. Doogan plans to strike in the first half of his amendment now. The only difference being is the change from 20 to seven years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did we have any amendment, Mrs. Sweeney, that deleted the whole statement relative to years?

DOOGAN: Yes, we did.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Didn't we have an amendment that sought to do that previously?

SWEENEY: It did strike it, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did it strike it entirely?

SWEENEY: It struck "and shall have been for at least twenty years" and then it was changed and reinserted with "seven years".

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is a serious question in the mind of the Chair but that your point of order is well taken, that to strike "seven years" now, after we had acted on striking this entirely -- the Convention will be at recess for a few minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair will rule that inasmuch as we have deleted this entire wording once relative to any number of years, that amendments could be offered to make it 19 years or one year or two or three years, whatever you would like, but in order to accomplish what Mr. Doogan is attempting to do would take a motion to rescind the previous action in which we had inserted this language again. Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: I don't quite know how to handle this. I will start off by serving notice I will move to rescind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan, it will take 28 votes to carry a rescinding action at this time, also 28 votes to carry a rescinding action tomorrow.

DOOGAN: All right, I will then move that the action we took in inserting "and shall have been for at least seven years" be rescinded.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves that the action on that particular amendment be rescinded. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind its action taken in inserting those words in the section?" Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: If I may state my reasons for asking that this be rescinded, I have heard only two arguments for having this qualifying language in there. One of the arguments was that they did not want a national figure coming to Alaska sweeping the Territory and getting in as governor. My feeling on the matter is that if a national figure such as Warren or Stevenson, somebody of that caliber came up here and could sweep the Territory and get to be the governor of Alaska, first by being put up by one of the major parties and second, by being elected by the people, he is well entitled to the job and we should be thankful to get him. The other argument that I have heard is that at one time they were going to move a bunch of displaced people into the Territory of Alaska and they felt those people should have to reside here something longer than what it would require for them to be citizens before they could get to be governor of Alaska. I maintain that if one of those displaced people could come here, serve their five years to get their citizenship, be put up by one of the major parties for governor, be elected by the people, he is certainly entitled to the job. I feel that qualifying language like this is not a discrimination against a person that wants to be governor. I feel it is a discrimination against the people who we are representing. We have voted in another article to give the people suffrage. We have lowered the voting age to 19 years of age. If we are going to give the people suffrage let's give them full suffrage. Let's let them by their vote pick the person who they want for the governor of Alaska without any qualifications attached to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, that really would be something if we could elect anybody without any qualifications whatsoever. As it is right now he does not even have to be a qualified elector. He could come up here and run for governor. I would like to call your attention to the legislative article which we let go through second reading with the understanding that the representatives and the senators should have resided in Alaska at least three years immediately prior to filing for office, and I don't think we should have anything less than that for the highest office of the land.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: In reference to what Mr. Londborg has just said, as I understand it, the motion we have before us now would not touch the seven-year residence requirement, would it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is true, it would not touch it.

SUNDBORG: It is just a motion to rescind our action of several days ago when we inserted "and shall have been for at least seven years" which refers to a citizen of the United States and not to the resident. He would still have to be a resident for at least seven years even if we rescind.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. Chairman, if I may clear this up, if this motion to rescind carries, I propose to offer another amendment to put a period after "state and delete the balance of the sentence and the end of the section.

SUNDBORG: But that is not embraced in this motion?

DOOGAN: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney had been attempting to get the floor.

SWEENEY: I do not believe that Mr. Doogan withdrew his original motion which had both sections in it so probably that is where the confusion has come in. As I understand it, we are just talking about this first portion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, it was not necessary for the motion to be withdrawn because the motion was never seconded, but the second part of it is not in the motion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: As I listen to these arguments, I recall one rather serious situation we had some years ago in which one of the Secretaries of the Interior, and if I recall right, it was Secretary Ickes, had proposed and recommended that Alaska be made a penal colony, as they used to do in the old days in England. They sent a lot of their convicts over to Australia, and the motion got some consideration back in Washington, and it looked at that time as if we might have to take some action on it, so the local bodies in various parts of Alaska did take action on it, and sent in considerable protests and the individual, and as I recall, I'm pretty sure it was Ickes, finally dropped the proposal, but these things I think are basic, and I notice that practically all constitutions have some residence requirement in the state, even though they are in a general area which has similar economic and geographic characteristics. We are in an entirely different situation up here. It seems to me it has been the temper of the majority of the body to open the gates wide open in the name of liberality, but there are considerable values attached to the customs, the traditions, and the precedent of having had, or seeking at least to insure, that we would have a bona fide resident run for office who understood something of the problem.

SUNDBORG: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I believe that has nothing to do with the motion that is before us. The motion has to do with having been a citizen of the United States for seven years.

PRESIDENT EGAN: In the Chair's opinion Mr. Sundborg's point of order seems to be well taken because the seven-year residence in Alaska will still be required even if this motion carries.

V. RIVERS: Well, I might just say then that the New Jersey

Constitution has used the word "seven"; the Hawaii Constitution has used the term "twenty years of United States citizenship" and a great many of the other state constitutions require United States citizenship as a precedent to be allowed to even file for governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I understand that if this motion carries it shall be entirely stricken from here "and shall be at least seven years a citizen of the United States"?

NORDALE: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment as offered and then read the section as it would appear if the amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 2, lines 4 and 5, strike the words 'and shall have been for at least seven years'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Read the section as it will appear if this amendment carries.

CHIEF CLERK: "The governor shall be not less than thirty years of age, a citizen of the United States, and a resident of this state seven years next preceding his election."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Doogan be adopted by this Convention?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: How do we vote on this, to get a rescinding action?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, it is a motion to rescind. Shall we rescind the action taken on the amendment that inserted "seven years a citizen of the United States"? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, voting "no" means that you want to leave "seven years" in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Voting "no" means that you want to leave "seven years" in there, that is correct. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Just briefly, we have got to make a distinction here. There is nothing wrong as I see it, that is my opinion, with requiring a residence requirement for an elective office like your governor, your senators, your representatives, but appointed officials are in an entirely different category, so I distinguish between those elected and those appointed, and I see nothing wrong in a residence requirement for an elected official.

SUNDBORG: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I think Mr. Hellenthal was not speaking on this at all. This has nothing to do with a residence requirement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There seems to be so much confusion that the Chair is going to declare a three-minute recess so the people can get what this proposed amendment does clear in their mind.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind its action taken in adopting the previous amendment to Section 2?"

METCALF: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 14 - Buckalew, Doogan, V. Fischer, Hurley, Kilcher, Laws, McLaughlin, McNealy, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, Smith, Sundborg, Mr. President.

Nays: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien.

Absent: 4 - Hilscher, Stewart, VanderLeest, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 14 yeas, 37 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the rescinding motion has failed to pass. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment with reference to Section 2.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 7, page 1, after the word election, strike the period and insert a comma and the following words 'and be a qualified elector'."

2275

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

ROBERTSON: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask unanimous consent, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: I ask unanimous consent.

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson asks unanimous consent, objection is heard. The motion is open for discussion. The question is, "shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 2? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I have an amendment, Mr. Speaker, it is very short. I move that the words "this state" in line 6 of Section 2 be changed to "Alaska". That is for the purpose of clarification. The other day there was some question as to whether or not they would have to be a resident seven years of the state. This would be "of Alaska" which would include both the state and Territory. I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor asks unanimous consent.

BUCKALEW: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

RILEY: Matter of inquiry, Mr. President. Was "of this state" removed?

CHIEF CLERK: No, not on line 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is the recollection of the Chair that those words are still in there.

CHIEF CLERK: "And of the state" at the end of line 5, those words were stricken.

RILEY: And they now appear on 6.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I might say I had this prepared but we got off of Section 2, and so I was holding it until we came back over it again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 2? If not, are there amendments to Section 3? Section 4? Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: In Section 3 we use the words "of this state" again. Perhaps we should make the same change and be consistent all the way through.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I wonder, Mr. President, if you would indulge me for a moment. I am sure Style and Drafting will take care of matters like that without action on the Convention floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 4? Section 5? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, point of information. I have a note here that I remember of a conflicting interest clause that was mentioned that it might appear at some other place here. I think Mr. Rivers had given me an answer in that respect. Should there be a place in this article or some other place in the constitution?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers do you care to answer that?

V. RIVERS: I have discussed a number of times a conflict of interest clause, but we had no intention of bringing it into this article. It is possible that some other group will bring it in. Whether they do or not it would be to their judgment as to whether they should bring it in under their particular sections. I don't know if there are any bringing it in. I did mention it in debate.

KILCHER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 5? Section 6? Section 7? Section 8? Section 9? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, yesterday at a meeting of the Style and Drafting Committee we were working on the article on the judiciary; there is a provision in that saying that the compensation of judges and justices shall not be reduced during their terms of office unless by general law applying to all officers of the state. The point was made that if we provide here in Section 9 that the compensation of the governor and secretary of state shall not be diminished even by a general law, which is the way it reads now, that that provision in the judiciary article would be nonoperative because such a general law would not apply to all officers of the state. I would like to know what the Convention wants to do. Do you want to except only these two officers from the provision that there may be a general reduction for all officers of the state, in which case we had better change it in the judiciary article because it could not apply to all officers of the state if it is by the constitution not applicable to the governor or to the secretary of state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair recalls that matter was discussed. Mr. Rivers, was it you that explained that?

V. RIVERS: I was looking up another item. Would you explain the question again?

SUNDBORG: I'm afraid I couldn't do it again. There is a conflict between the language in Section 9 here which does not provide for the diminishing of the salary of the governor and secretary of state during their terms of office in any event, and the article on the judiciary which provides that the compensation of judges may not be reduced during their terms of office except by general reduction applying to all officers of the state. If you don't make it apply, you cannot make it apply to the governor and secretary of state, it can't apply to all officers of the state and therefore can't apply to judges, but we do have it written into the judiciary article.

V. RIVERS: Well, as I explained that the other day, it was the intent of the Committee that when a man ran for office his salary would not be diminished until his term was over. But as I see the clause, an act could be adopted which would reduce the salaries of everybody but would not become effective until the time of this secretary and governor's term had ended. There may be a conflict there, but it does not seem to me so. These offices are elective offices, the others are appointive offices.

SUNDBORG: The judges are elective.

MCLAUGHLIN: May I inquire through the Chair of Mr. Sundborg, is it your intent to ask for the unanimous consent of the body that the Judiciary Committee change the intent of that provision currently in the judiciary article so we can say "all salaried officers except the governor". Isn't that your intent?

SUNDBORG: That was my inquiry to ask if we may not do that.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I don't see any reason why we are excepting these two people right here. I think they ought to go right along with the rest of them and let the language cover everybody. I offer that amendment right now and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: How is it worded, Mr. Marston?

MARSTON: To strike "they are not exempt".

PRESIDENT EGAN: A period after the word "law", is that what you wish?

MARSTON: That is right and delete the rest of the sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston moves to insert a period after the word "law" and the balance of the section be deleted from the section. Do you so move, Mr. Marston?

MARSTON: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion? It will delete the words "and shall not be diminished during their term of office". It would cover it because then the judiciary article would cover it. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Well, again we discussed this at some length in Committee.

KILCHER: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

KILCHER: Do we have anything before us?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was the motion seconded?

KNIGHT: I will second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was seconded by Mr. Knight. Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Again, we discussed this at some length in Committee. I really shouldn't restate that because I guess it means very little, but the thought here was that with an opposition group in both houses they could diminish the salary of the governor and his secretary of state at will and the thought was here it should not be diminished during his term of office. I don't speak for the whole Committee but I would certainly have no objection to including the words "unless there is a general salary reduction of all state officials". It would not appear to me to be able to work an injustice in that matter, but if we adopt this amendment, I think a great injustice could be worked. I don't think it would be worked very often, but it could be worked unless we make some provision to cover diminishing, and I would not favor the amendment.

HELLENTHAL: Could we have a recess for one minute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, with the consent of my second, I wish to withdraw my amendment and add this one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston asks unanimous consent for the withdrawal of his proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered.

MARSTON: "Section 9, line 20, delete the period, insert a comma and add 'unless general law applying to all salaried officers of the state.'" I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The motion is open for discussion. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: I am opposed to the amendment. I think if a man runs for office and is elected, he runs with the understanding that he is going to receive a certain amount of money. In the case of a governor he moves his family to the capital city and expects to stay there for four years at a certain salary that he knew existed before he ran, and I certainly don't think that his salary should be diminished during the four years. If the legislature passes a law reducing that salary at the close of the current term of office of the governor, that is something else again, and I think that is quite all right; then he can make his choice at the end of his term whether he wants to run for office again at a lower salary, but while he is in office I don't think it should be reduced.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: In 1932, right after Roosevelt took office, during a great financial emergency, the federal government graded all salaries down 10 per cent from the President on down. I was a new district attorney at that time and came under that 10 per cent cut for about a year and one-half until the emergency eased off and they restored the full salary. In our judiciary article we discussed that and had that very thought in mind. A man who gives up a law practice to become a judge rather counts on having that salary intact, and our article on the judiciary says that it shall not be reduced during the term of office unless by a reduction applicable to all officers. In case of emergency the governor may want to be in with everyone else on that kind of a financial crisis for a reduction of salary, so let's leave it open to have it happen right during his term of office and put him on the same basis as the judiciary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Marston be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 9? Section 10? Section 11? The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to Section 11.

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Hellenthal proposes the following amendment: "Section 11, strike lines 25 and 26, page 5, and strike lines 1, 2, and 3 on page 6, and substitute 'The governor, as provided by law, shall nominate, appoint and commission all officers of the armed forces.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: The present language dignifies flag officers and general officers in the state militia, I believe, out of proportion to the need. The matter is primarily legislative, especially on the state level and especially in a state where the federal government beyond any doubt would take full command of the military in case of trouble, and I just hate to think of some governor appointing Alaskan colonels or admirals in the Alaskan navy. I don't think it is necessary.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I inquire as to the exact wording of the suggested amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike lines 25 and 26, page 5, and strike lines 1, 2, and 3 on page 6, and substitute "The governor, as provided by law, shall nominate, appoint and commission all officers of the armed forces.'"

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I think that I shall support this amendment because it takes away the necessity of the governor, apparently it does anyway, submitting these nominations for confirmation by a joint session of the legislature, and I am certainly in favor of that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I note that the way the amendment reads, it seems a little incomplete. It reads "officers of the armed forces". I think it should have at least "of the state" in it.

HELLENTHAL: Yes, "of Alaska".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the words "of Alaska" will be made an addition to the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Is there objection to adding those two words? If not, it is ordered and the words have been added to the proposed amendment. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Is it on the floor for the discussion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes.

V. RIVERS: All you are doing by the amendment, as I see it, is taking out the confirmation of the adjutant general, perhaps one or two other officers from the legislature. The governor here appoints the adjutant general under this amendment and he does not have to have the approval of the legislature for that appointment. That is a relatively important office in our Territory or what would be our state government. I oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I believe that Mr. Rivers overlooked one other thing. The amendment allows the governor to appoint and commission all officers. Now that would be the final authority. You just can't do that under the laws of the United States. These higher ranking officers, the appointment has to be sent in to Washington and approved there before they can be commissioned. That is why this committee report was worded this way. The higher ranking officers had to go to Washington for approval but the governor can appoint colonels and lower without that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Now that everybody has got it fouled up, forgive me, I retract that whole statement. Mr. Chairman, I know something of the matter of which Mr. Barr speaks and the others. There are two types of services in the National Guard. You have the Alaska National Guard and you have the National Guard of the United States. It becomes too complex to discuss the matter. I would recommend the adjutant general of the state normally would be a brigadier general; properly he should be, and any flag officer is the equivalent of a brigadier general. General officers traditionally are provided in the state constitution for appointment by the governor and ratification by the senate. We are running counter, we are literally running counter to the experience of most states in deliberately doing that. That is, I don't think the adjutant general should be any different from the head of a department, as he would be in the state, and I think that he should be ratified, and I believe that Mr. Hellenthal's objection largely is to an expression such as "flag officers". If that is an objection, it can be cleared up by generic words in Style and Drafting. I oppose the amendment as being contrary to what we have done here in the past as to other officers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" All in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 10 or Section 11? If not, are there amendments to Section 12? Section 13? Section 14? Section 15? Section 16? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Victor Rivers, you say the head of each principal department, does that include the attorney general?

V. RIVERS: By specific mention of the will of this body the attorney general is not included in this section.

METCALF: Does he have to be confirmed by the senate at all, or the legislature?

V. RIVERS: Insofar as he would fall under the head of one of the principal departments, I assume he would.

METCALF: You assume he would be one of the heads of the principal departments?

V. RIVERS: It is merely an assumption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: The attorney general question worries me very much, and I would like to submit a small amendment. It is three words, that is all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you submit it please, Mr. Metcalf.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 16, page 7, line 14, immediately following the word 'Department', insert the phrase 'including the attorney general'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf, what is your pleasure?

METCALF: I move that it be adopted and ask unanimous consent.

BUCKALEW: Objection.

DOOGAN: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Your point of order, Mr. Doogan.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

DOOGAN: My point of order is that we have already considered this matter once, and I take exception to the remarks by the Chairman of the Legislative Committee in that this body by their action implied that the attorney general would not be one of those principal departments. I take exception for this reason: that is, as it was so aptly pointed out by Mr. Davis, the thing they did not want to do was to set up the attorney general's office in the constitution but it could be set up as one of the principal departments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: As to the point of order raised by Mr. Doogan, we did consider spelling out that there be an attorney general once before in this section, did we not? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I was about to offer an amendment so I got talked out of it, so it is the first time it has come up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If this is the first time, the point of order would not be well taken at this time. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I was going to raise the same point of order as Mr. Doogan, but I think I am going to go even further because there was a specific amendment offered to provide for the establishment of an elected attorney general.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This does not say though, Mr. Taylor, that he would have to be an elected attorney general.

TAYLOR: Mr. Barr's motion to adopt an amendment to that effect would be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: But Mr. Metcalf's amendment does not include anything of that nature, so the amendment would be in order at this time, Mr. Taylor. Is there discussion of the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Metcalf? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I feel that mention of the attorney general's office should be made because we have mentioned it in the proposal under direct legislation, and in initiative and referendum, I think we mentioned it once or twice there. I am confused as to whether the senate is to ratify the nomination once every two years or once every four years. I am in a state of confusion and I would like to have this spelled out a little more as far as this important office is concerned. That's my feeling on the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: May I speak on this matter now. I don't believe that it is necessary to put an attorney general in there. If you do that you might as well put all the branches you are going to have, all the principal branches of the executive department in because it naturally falls into the category of one of the principal branches of the legislature, and I think we considered that the other day. It was felt that it was a legal department of the executive branch and should not be necessarily named because the governor would have the right under our present article to appoint the attorney general who sets up the legal department of the executive department, and I can't see whether if you add that attorney general on there including the attorney general, you had better put it including the highway department and all other things. I think we should leave it the way it is, and the other things will naturally follow and fall into the proper category.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Metcalf be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 16? If not are there amendments to Section 17? Amendments to Section 18? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 18 and substitute the following:

'Section 18. The Governor may make ad interim appointments to fill vacancies occurring during a recess of the legislature in offices requiring confirmation of either or both houses of the legislature. The duration of such appointments shall be prescribed by law.'

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

R. RIVERS: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the proposed amendment, Mr. Rivers seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, a little while ago I submitted another amendment which I thought accomplished what this says, but I was advised by some of the technical staff it did not actually accomplish what I had intended, in that it left the possibility present that the legislature could by law actually prohibit the governor from even making a recess appointment under the existing language. This new section says that the governor may make a recess appointment but that the duration of the appointment shall be determined by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" Would the Chief Clerk please slowly read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 18, strike Section 18, and substitute the following: 'Section 18. The Governor may make ad interim appointments to fill vacancies occurring during a recess of the legislature in offices requiring confirmation of either or both houses of the legislature. The duration of such appointments shall be prescribed by law.'".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Why the use of the last "ad interim", is that consistent with procedure as advocated by Style and Drafting?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Was the question addressed to me, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

SUNDBORG: I don't think Style and Drafting really adopted any standard in this matter and this is the phrase that was suggested to me by two of the technical experts and which I asked Mr. Rivers, the former attorney general what he thought of it, and he said he thought it was just right so I submitted it in that form.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

KILCHER: May the Chief Clerk please read it once again?

JOHNSON: Point of order. The roll call has already been commenced.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct.

KILCHER: May I abstain?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Continue with the roll call.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

- Yeas: 35 - Armstrong, Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Lee, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.
- Nays: 13 - Barr, Boswell, Collins, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Taylor.
- Absent: 6 - V. Fischer, Riley, Stewart, VanderLeest, White, Hilscher.
- Abstaining: 1 - Kilcher.)

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg asked that his vote be changed to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 35 yeas, 13 nays, 6 absent, and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 18? Are there any other amendments to Committee Proposal No. 10/a? If not, the proposal is ordered referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. We now have before us Committee Proposal No. 9.

CHIEF CLERK: No, it is 12. That is next on the calendar.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is 12 next on the calendar? The Chair stands corrected then. Mr. Rivers, was it your desire that those proposals come next?

V. RIVERS: We will hold to whatever the calendar prescribes. I understood that 11 and 12 would come up next.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may proceed with the reading -- Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: I move that the rules be suspended and that the Committee on Style and Drafting be instructed to insert "secretary of state" at points in the article on initiative and referendum where the words "attorney general" appears.

GRAY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and Mr. Gray seconds the motion that the word "secretary of state" be inserted in lieu of the words "attorney general" wherever they may appear in the article on initiative and referendum. Is there objection to that request?

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to back up the motion because I objected earlier in the day that we should have the attorney general draw the ballot heads and check the sufficiency of that proposed initiative bill, etc., but after I decided not to do anything about inserting "attorney general" in this section, it becomes necessary in the interest of consistency to say that those matters will be referred to the secretary of state who in turn can obtain the advice of the attorney general.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed motion as offered by Mr. Sundborg be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the motion will signify by saying "aye".

SWEENEY: It is a suspension of the rules and I don't know how you could do it on a voice vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll on the adoption of the motion.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 46 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Sundborg, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 4 - Cooper, Robertson, Sweeney, Taylor.

Absent: 5 - Hilscher, Riley, Stewart, VanderLeest, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 46 yeas, 4 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and it is so ordered. The Chief Clerk may proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 12.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No, it should be 11.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You said that No. 12 was the next one on the calendar. The Chair does not have a copy of the calendar.

CHIEF CLERK: On the calendar it was 12, I am sure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Whatever the calendar says. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Might I ask a question. On the previous vote prior to this last roll call, I was just sitting here listening to the results announced. I was quite sure it was 35 ayes, 18 nays, and 1 abstaining, and there were 6 at the time that were absent.

CHIEF CLERK: 35 ayes, 13 nays, 6 absent, and 1 abstaining.

COOPER: Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may then proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 12. Don't you think Committee Proposal No. 12 should be considered possibly after we get to transitional measures? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I think, speaking for the entire Committee, we would be perfectly willing to be governed by the Rules Committee selection for placing on the calendar in these matters. If there is a better order I think we will all agree to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: All right, you may read it then.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 12 in its entirety at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers, do you care to proceed with an explanation of the proposal?

V. RIVERS: I will try and explain as we go along the Committee's intent and purpose. The first clause, as you can see, would require that the state establish a civil service or merit system for its employees. It comes to my mind in reading it, and we had some brief discussion on it as to its interpretation applying to high appointive and elective officers under the state, I believe that that should either be specifically exempted if we do not agree that it is the intent that the word "employment" covers those people who are not elected or appointed to high offices. The question of the value and the use of the word "employment" there and where it would terminate has to be considered. The Section 2 is membership in employees retirement systems. In some of the retirement systems, there was fear by some bodies that the legislature having the power to do so might abolish such a retirement system and they might then lose the benefits or the values of the monies they had paid into such a system, although it was a contractual relation, and they might lose the benefit retirements thereunder. I mentioned specifically in that category the present retirement fund for teachers and educational groups. The other section is an antisubversive section which is required, as we understand it, one of the required clauses of this constitution, and that is Section 3. Section 4 is of a similar nature and prescribes a standard clause for the oath of office to be taken by officials of the state government. Section 5 was included because we felt it was necessary to insure that we could have relationships with other states and possibly along our boundaries, with foreign countries such as Canada, within the limits prescribed by the national law. It so happens that some of the constitutions which do not state "respective legislative bodies may appropriate such sums", the court in some cases has held to a narrow interpretation that the legislature under their state constitution could not appropriate funds for uses outside of the state in the manner in which we have allowed them to do under this section. That is the reason for including this section in the constitution. There are court interpretations that would work against the use of any state monies for such cooperation unless we had such a clause in the constitution. I think that covers briefly the Committee thinking on it. We did not discuss the scope of the word "employment" too broadly in Committee in the Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions to be asked of Mr. Rivers, the Committee Chairman? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Rivers in Section 5, sir, on your last line, "In all intergovernmental relations involving the state, the Governor shall act as the agent of the state." He can delegate his power to one of his department heads, is that not true?

V. RIVERS: That is our understanding. I might say, under the Enabling Act, there are going to be rather broad transfers to the state of certain properties, equipment, and other things that are now in the hands of various departmental agencies functioning in Alaska. I refer specifically to equipment of Fish and Wildlife Service and some of the various highway agencies and others. They would have to be acknowledged and received by somebody for the state. This clause is intended to cover the governor in as the agent of the state in such matters.

JOHNSON: May I ask Mr. Rivers a question, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. Rivers, with respect to Section 4 which covers the oath of office, I notice that there is a slight variance, I think, between the wording here and the customary wording. You say, "I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States..." Is not the term "and laws" -- for instance, "I would defend the Constitution and laws of the United States ..." Is that not inserted?

V. RIVERS: This was lifted, as you can readily see, from the standard form, and I'm not sure. This one did not include it. I presume it does include it in some. I think I would like to ask some of the other Committee members on that. Mrs. Nordale, do you recall the adaptation of this section? Is it from the Enabling Act?

NORDALE: My recollection is we took it right out of this bill. I think it is the same as the Hawaii Constitution. I will see if I can find it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions to be asked of the Committee? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, in Section 2, this would cover the eventuality that if one of these retirement funds ran out of money payments could be deferred? I mean a deferment of payment would not constitute an impairment of the obligation?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: We discussed that point and we thought that under this clause, as I recall the general thinking of the Committee, that "shall not be diminished or impaired" would mean that we realize if the state went defunct, as I explained to some of the individuals who discussed it with me, if the state did go bankrupt in the sense that we visualize the state going bankrupt, they could not meet the obligation, but as long as there was monies in the funds they could and would. Of course, it has never been the history of any state that has occurred, and I don't foresee that it will occur here, but the question of the use of the word "impaired" that Mr. Fischer has raised may be a good one. It may be they could defer, under the word "impair", certain payments. They could not be diminished in the over-all payment, but they could be deferred if the fund went down. This section, I believe, will stand considerable discussion by all interested parties because it is an effort to try and protect those people who for many years pay into a fund and are entitled to receive the benefits under that contract, but still we can see the possibility that there might be a reduction of state revenues or the revenues of that fund to the point where they might have to reduce payments for a time. It was, as I interpret the thought of the Committee and recall it, it was the thought that, if there were any obligations like that reduced temporarily, they would later be paid. I think the employee's retirement system, we felt in Committee the use of that terminology did not bring in under this section any of the National unemployment tenefits or employment security benefits that are paid by the national act. I hope I have answered the question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there further questions to be directed to the Committee? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Was this matter of cooperation with foreign nations copied from any other state?

V. RIVERS: No, it was not. Most states of course, except along the northern and southern boundaries of the United States, have no problem where there must be some cooperation. It is highly limited under the National Constitution. It was foreseen and discussed in Committee that there are many places, doubtless, in negotiations between the Canadian government and our government, where we might desire to have one of our state officials intervene for the state and he might be required to travel to Washington D. C. or Ottawa or some place to speak for the people of Alaska within the limits of the National Constitution, and for that reason it was included, Mr. Hellenthal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Did you have specifically in mind, Mr. Rivers, the Yukon or the International Fish Commission, is that what these apply to?

V. RIVERS: We thought there were a number of places in which the state might desire to intervene, watersheds of the various rivers was one. Another one was in regard to the shore line, as you all realize now there is considerable discussion as to what amounts of entry through the various bays and harbors should be granted to the Canadian dominions, and if so what returns in the use of watershed power would be allowed to the Territory or the future State of Alaska. It seemed to Committee it was desirable to allow our legislature to appropriate monies for such intervention as the National Constitution would allow in behalf of the people of Alaska.

HELLENTHAL: What would that consist of, Mr. Rivers? Was any inquiry made to determine what intervention would be permitted by the National Constitution?

V. RIVERS: It was merely discussed. The extent and scope of that would be limited by the Constitution, but I cannot tell you what the scope would be.

HELLENTHAL: Didn't the Committee have in mind more that you would like, perhaps, the possibility of sending an observer?

V. RIVERS: Both that and intervention, somebody to speak for the will and wishes of the people of Alaska. Maybe some of the other members of the Committee would like to amplify on that, or answer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, the Committee realized that the state would not have the power to sign any treaties or anything of that sort. That is up to our State Department, but before we reached that point we thought the state should be able to negotiate or sort of come to a meeting of minds on any particular matter that would be of interest to the State of Alaska. For instance, we share power sources, that is waterways with Canada, and fishing grounds. One thing that comes to my mind, especially, is in the matter of civil defense in the case of a mass evacuation, our governor would have to act quickly and he could negotiate with British Columbia and the Yukon Territory on the matter of housing, or such things as our civilians going out over the highway or by air. He should have the power to negotiate that way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Did -- you have read the commentary on Section 5. Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

NORDALE: I believe it was this same type of thing with which the states cooperate, educational matters and things that are pertinent to the welfare of both adjacent provinces. I am sure we had no idea that the state would ever have the authority to step in on a matter that was strictly the province of the federal government.

HELLENTHAL: I would not dream of that either.

NORDALE: No, I wouldn't either, really, but we also did provide that money could be appropriated to finance any program of cooperation on the part of our officials.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May I ask a question of Mr. Victor Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: In Section 1, does the Committee intend to offer an amendment so it won't be applicable to the two elected positions of governor and secretary of state, and also these people from outside who seem to be so concerned about receiving appointments as heads of the principal departments?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: At the time we drafted this section we did not know just how many would be elective and how many would be appointive, but after we have gone through this, and in our next regular recess which is coming up shortly, I am going to ask the Committee for a brief meeting to cover the limitations we want to impose under that term "employment". I announce that meeting immediately after we recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: First of all, I would like to announce a meeting of Style and Drafting at the rear of the gallery during the forthcoming recess. I would also like to suggest that under our new rule this is probably the recess at which any delegate who has a proposed amendment should discuss and clear it with the Executive Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are any questions or proposed amendments, please discuss them with the Committee during this recess. Therefore, the recess will last until 3:50. The Convention stands at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there further questions to be directed to the Committee? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to inquire of Mr. Victor Fischer whether or not his Committee gave any consideration to the report of the Resolutions and Recommendations Committee which reported that Proposal 10, which was apparently the origin of your Section 5, was not constitutional matter and shouldn't be included in the constitution. We had that advice from a consultant, Henry Sheldon [Dr. Sheldon Elliott] and Mr. Sady also more or less told us.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease for a moment or two. The Convention will come to order.

V. RIVERS: Well, Mr. President, are we still in the discussion state now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: In discussing this in the recent recess, after further discussion on Section 1, it was decided, with the advice of the consultants, that the present terminology covered the power of the legislature to place such limits upon the scope of the civil service system as they so decided because the section says, "The legislature shall provide for a merit system..." That is a similar wording but not the same. The implication is similar to that of Hawaii and also of New Jersey. But we thought, after discussion there was an amendment submitted to us that might put in the words "except the principal officers of the state government as prescribed by law". The merit system is being prescribed by the legislature, and the term "employment" would be the term of employment up to the level they decided they should reach and also they, by their act, could not defeat or alter any of the intent of the appointive or elective officers as set up under this constitution. I asked them if the executive heads of departments as appointed by various boards could also be considered under that, and they so advised that the word "employment" could be limited to whatever top level of officers that were not treated by the constitution, and could be limited to stop at whatever top level of employees they wanted it to stop at. So the Committee has decided to stay with Section 1 as it is now shown on your draft. The other point had to do with Section 5 and it covers Proposal No. 10 by Delegate Fischer in which the other committee decided it was not constitutional matter. That is the item that Mr. Robertson just called to my attention. We went into it somewhat further after that proposal by Mr. Fischer was referred to us, and we found that there had been limitations imposed on interpretations by courts that limited the power of the legislature to appropriate monies for such actions, so we felt it desirable to include it so the legislature might appropriate funds as necessary for cooperation with other states and the national government. That point was discussed further, and Delegate Hellenthal felt that and to the extent consistent with the laws and the Constitution of the United States and of foreign nations was a matter that might give rise to some question in the minds of some of the Congressmen in reviewing this section. The Committee felt that perhaps they would like to have a little discussion of that item on the floor inasmuch as Delegate Davis also brought up a point. The Committee is willing and agreeable if after such discussion you want to put a period after "interest" and strike the balance of the line. We are in agreement that if it is the consensus of this body that we do so, we will go along with that. The thought there in Committee was that we would not want to put into the constitution anything that would alarm or possibly antagonize any of the members of Congress who are going to be considering this section, and as Mr. Hellenthal pointed out, it might alarm them to see that we are going to be allowed to participate even to the extent of the laws of the Constitution of the United States with any other nation other than that of the United States or its subdivisions. There was another point brought up and that was that Delegate Johnson wanted the words "Constitution of the United States and laws of the United States" inserted in the oath. Delegate Nordale quoted the oath as you take it and the word "laws" does not appear in there. We felt that the word "Constitution" covered all the matter that would be implied by laws of both the state and the national government when you adopt and subscribe to the Constitution, it being the power from which all lawmaking springs. I don't recall the exact words of the oath of allegiance to the flag which we take, but it does not include the word "law", so the question of the insertion of "laws" after "Constitution", we felt the word "Constitution" covered all the laws that had sprung from it and that the words "laws" would not be necessary in the oath. I think that covers the things we discussed in that brief committee meeting, except for this one thing. It has been pointed out here and discussed earlier in the other section on the executive that we were going to introduce a section having to do with the University of Alaska. There has been such a section prepared and it was our thought that at the end of this section, after consideration of Section 5, we would then add Section 6 and present it to the body for consideration, and by that time we will have mimeographed copies for everyone. Oh, they have already arrived.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there further questions to be directed to Mr. Rivers relative to this proposal? If not, Mr. Rivers, is your Committee ready to have the proposal before the body in second reading and open for amendment after your Committee amendments have been considered?

V. RIVERS: There was just one thing, Mr. President, that gave me rise for a little consideration and pause and that was that during the time we were sitting, some of the members of Style and Drafting sent over word there were about three other miscellaneous provisions that they would possibly want to include under "miscellaneous". I see the Chairman of the Rules is not yet here. The suggestion was made that this section be held up until the very last of the basic articles or proposals of the constitution have been adopted and then try to group in there any inconsistencies or other miscellaneous sections, so I am not going to recommend for myself or the Committee on that point, but leave it exactly up to the rules and the body as to whether or not they want to do that. It seems there are going to be a few things come up and they should probably all be included under one miscellaneous group, and this is the miscellaneous group we are acting on now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, even in the absence of the Chairman of the Rules Committee, don't you think it would be quite easy to get an expression from the delegates at the present time? I think it is a reasonable request.

V. RIVERS: I think it should be considered now before we go ahead on this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair might put the question to the body as to whether or not it is the wish of the body to hold Committee Proposal No. 12 in abeyance until such time as all the substantive proposals have been considered by the Convention. All those in favor of holding Committee Proposal No. 12 in abeyance until that time will please raise their hand. It seems to be almost a unanimous feeling that your suggestion would be followed, Mr. Rivers. That being the feeling of the body --

V. RIVERS: If that is the feeling of the body, I would now suggest that we now consider that one-paragraph item known as Committee Proposal No. 11 which deals with the interim election of the governor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, as the Chair recalls, that was referred to the Committee on Ordinances after it was brought in. Is that a correct recollection?

CHIEF CLERK: That is right.

V. RIVERS: That was re-referred? Then I withdraw that last request.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: A point of information. Will Article 12 be referred back to the Committee for the inclusion of all these other miscellaneous matters before we again take up Article 12?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, and in order that the Committee might gather these matters together for inclusion in Committee Proposal No. 12, if there is no objection, the proposal will be ordered referred back to the Executive Committee until such time as they deem proper to bring the proposal back to the floor. Hearing no objection it is so ordered and we will now proceed with Committee Proposal No. 9, the proposal on finance and taxation. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: I have a request to make before we have Proposal No. 9 read. Inasmuch as four members of this Finance Committee are grouped in this immediate vicinity, the Committee has decided and has made arrangements with the others who are involved, that we would like to all group at this table here and I would like to ask permission of the Chairman and unanimous consent that a short recess be allowed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will recess for that purpose, Mr. Nerland.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Would the Chief Clerk please read Committee Proposal No. 9 for the second time.

(The Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 9 in its entirety.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, the Committee did not ask for a previous withdrawal of this proposal in order to make several very minor changes. There is a mimeographed sheet now on the desks of all the delegates and I will ask that the Clerk be allowed to read these proposed amendments and that they be accepted unanimously and incorporated as part of the committee proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed Committee amendments to Committee Proposal No. 9.

CHIEF CLERK: "1. Page 2, Section 5: strike Section 5 and renumber subsequent sections.

2. Page 2, Section 8, line 25: after the word 'all', insert the word 'public'.

3. Page 3, Section 9, line 15: strike the word 'national' and insert in lieu thereof the word 'natural'.

4. Page 3, Section 10, line 21: strike 'within one year' and insert in lieu thereof 'prior to the end of the next fiscal year'.

5. Page 4, Section 13, line 24: strike the last sentence and insert in lieu thereof, 'All appropriations outstanding at the end of a period of time specified by law shall be void.'"

NERLAND: I move and ask unanimous consent that the amendments just read be adopted and accepted as part of the Committee Proposal on finance and taxation.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I don't appear to have a copy of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who does not have a copy of the proposed amendments? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I think we ought to go through these one section at a time and everyone be able to write it in at that particular point. Otherwise, we get all mixed up. I want to see what these are, and I have one suggestion to make on the last proposal here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair wonders, Mr. Nerland, in line with these proposed amendments, it might be well to say, take a five- or ten-minute recess and have the members who have questions relative to the proposed amendments that you offer as committee amendments at this time, discussed by you and your Committee, meeting in the back of the room.

NERLAND: That would be agreeable, Mr. President, or these are very minor changes and very easily explained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before you move their adoption, Mr. Nerland, perhaps you might explain each one of the amendments.

NERLAND: In Section 5 we have moved for the striking of that entire section; that is included in the later portion of a section from the legislative proposal that is being incorporated in its entirety by Ordinances. The wording is identical to our proposal so we request that that section be stricken. The other sections will be later renumbered but for the time being I will refer to them as they stand in our present proposal. In Section 9, page 3, line 15, the word "national" was a misprint. It was the intent of the Committee that that should be "natural". I passed up Section 8. The Committee felt that in inserting the word "public" after "all", making it "all public revenues" would eliminate the question regarding such things as donations or bequests by private individuals that might have specific purposes attached to them. Page 3, Section 10, at the time this section was considered by the Committee it was not the intention of the Committee that the borrowings should be paid back within that same year. It was inadvertently worded that way, but the Committee felt that the need for borrowing in any particular year might not be corrected before the end of that year, but it should be paid back within the next fiscal year. Consequently, we have requested the change to read "prior to the end of the next fiscal year". On page 4, Section 13, line 24, instead of, "All appropriated funds unexpended at the end of a period of time specified by law shall be returned to a state treasury" -- there were several matters involved there. One particular question was that the funds hadn't actually ever left the state treasury, and it was felt that this wording as stated in the proposed amendment, "All appropriations outstanding at the end of a period of time specified by law shall be void", better expressed the ideas and the opinions of the Committee. I ask for unanimous consent that these be adopted.

R. RIVERS: May I ask Mr. Nerland a question? It is on that last one, Mr. Nerland.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Rivers.

WHITE: Point of order. Mr. Chairman, hasn't this decision been followed with other committee proposals, that by asking unanimous consent, in effect, the rules are suspended and committee deletions or additions are considered as part of the report. They are still subject to amendment or deletion later on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The suggestion made by Mr. Ralph Rivers previously was that Mr. Nerland explain the proposed amendment and then possibly go on with his explanation of the article and then when we come to the amendment process the Committee Chairman would at that time attempt to ask that the proposed amendment be adopted to that particular section. It depends on what the Chairman, under our new rule, what the Chairman thinks would be best.

NERLAND: We certainly are willing that any of these suggestions are open to amendment when we come to the particular section.

R. RIVERS: I thought by asking you one question I might obviate an objection to your unanimous consent request.

NERLAND: I certainly have no objection.

R. RIVERS: Your last proposed amendment here contains the words "appropriations outstanding", and I was going to ask if your Committee would have any objection to saying "all appropriations uncommitted" because quite often warrants are outstanding that have not come back and actually the money deducted from the treasury yet, or from the Territory's bank account, and the word "outstanding", appropriations are outstanding until the money has been disbursed, but they are oftentimes committed, you see. So I was wondering if you would object to saying "all appropriations uncommitted at the end of a period of time specified shall be voided".

NERLAND: I believe that one of the purposes of this wording was to follow a procedure which I understand has been done by the legislature in the past, is to occasionally pass legislation to the effect that all previous appropriations outstanding are voided.

R. RIVERS: They revert. They no longer can be drawn against. I have picked up a better word -- "unobligated" -- rather than "uncommitted". That word "unobligated" is not in conflict with your thought, Mr. Nerland, and certainly they want to say that where money hangs over, unobligated, over a certain period of time, the appropriation shall come to an end where it may no longer be obligated after that.

V. FISCHER: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I assume that this language as proposed by Mr. Nerland has been approved by the Committee and as Mr. White pointed out, in line with previous practice it might be best to permit them to include it and then amend it when we come to this particular section.

HELLENTHAL: Same point of order, Mr. President. This is hardly the time to urge amendments under the rules.

R. RIVERS: By the time we come to this section, we have lost track of this particular point, and I ask a simple question as to whether they would be willing to use the word "unobligated". I have not had an answer to the question, but I will back away, make no objection, but I will bring this up when we get to Section 13.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, under the privilege of asking questions, which I understand is in order now, I have a question to ask along the same line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, the Chair allowed Mr. Ralph Rivers to ask a question relative to these amendments that Mr. Nerland had asked be adopted at this time, but the ordinary procedure would be for Mr. Nerland to explain the article and then at the end of his explanation ask then the questions.

V. RIVERS: My question extended to the amendment which they are adopting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If it extends to the proposed amendment that Mr. Nerland is asking unanimous consent on, you'll be in order, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: There again to avoid an objection I wanted to ask you if that wording you are adopting now, that if your Committee considered the fact that for a number of years there has been submitted to the legislature the idea of such a thing as continuing appropriations. For instance, we have had a program at different times presented in regard to continuing appropriations for so much a year to a fund for building purposes for the University of Alaska. When it reached a certain amount it could then be expended for a capital improvement which it was intended to construct. I wonder if this wording would eliminate the possibility of the legislature ever setting up a continuing public works improvement programs where they had a continuing appropriation.

AWES: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Miss Awes.

AWES: I think we're back on the same thing we were a couple of minutes ago.

V. RIVERS: Can't we ask questions?

AWES: I thought we were supposed to get the explanation of the Chairman first.

HELLENTHAL: If the Committee wanted to substitute "South Africa" for "United States" everywhere where it appeared in this report, that is their business. We take care of it by amendment after explanation, and I think it is definitely out of order at this time to question it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland is asking unanimous consent that these particular amendments become a part of the original Committee Proposal No. 9. Is there objection?

V. RIVERS: I will have to object unless I find out that this is not yet on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is not yet on the floor and open for amendment.

V. RIVERS: O.K.

NERLAND: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland so moves that these committee amendments be offered as part of the original committee report relative to Committee Proposal No. 9.

JOHNSON: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. Johnson. The question is, "Shall the amendments become a part of the original Committee Proposal No. 9?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendments as a part of the original report will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the amendments are adopted as a part of the original report. Mr. Nerland, do you care to proceed with an explanation of the proposal?

NERLAND: Section 1 of this proposal has been altered slightly from the usual wording of a number of state constitutions and also the model state constitution in that which, as some of you perhaps might have noticed, generally reads, "The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away." The Committee felt that definitely the power of taxation should never be surrendered so we inserted a semicolon, but we did feel that there would possibly be occasion and good justification in the future for such things as allowing an industry-wide exemption to encourage new industry to come in and that is the reason for the particular wording there. That is later provided for under Section 4. Section 2 is the wording that is required in House Bill 2535, and I believe no further comment should be necessary on that. Section 3, the committee felt that it would be very desirable for the legislature to establish the standards for the state and the political subdivisions to assess the property for taxation rather than to have various systems and methods used, but there is no intent here to establish the rate or the amount. Section 4, the thought was to exempt the state in its political subdivisions from taxations under such provisions and such exceptions as the legislature may direct. There are certain conditions under which these properties might be subject to taxation, and the more or less standard phrase of all or any portion probably used exclusively for nonprofit, charitable, cemetery, or educational purposes as defined by law is exempt from taxation and this is the provision that allows for some exemption or inducement to industries or similar things. Section 5 has been stricken as explained. There are certain interests in leaseholds, contracts and other interests in United States lands that are subject to taxation, and Section 6 provides for such instances. Section 7 is to take care of the fact that no public monies, public property, or public credit should be used except for a public purpose. Section 8, "all public revenues shall be deposited in the state treasury without allocation for special purposes, except where state participation in federal programs will thereby be denied." There are some federal participation programs which do require specific things that might conflict with a total prohibition on this subject. You will notice also that we have provided that any funds, which are allocated at the time this constitution is approved, do not come under this provision; as most of you probably know, these particular provisions now are for the tobacco fund for schools and also highway and, I believe, some airports are earmarked. Section 9 is one regarding the contracting of bonded indebtedness, and it was the opinion of the Committee that this should be allowed by law on capital improvements only and should in each case be approved by a majority of the qualified voters of the state in the respective political subdivision to which the question refers, eliminating the exceptions -- in case of repelling invasion, repressing insurrection or defending the state in war, any natural catastrophe, or redeeming any outstanding indebtedness at the time the constitution becomes effective. Our thinking on this particular case was the result of a good deal of consideration. There was some thought of leaving it entirely to the legislature, perhaps with a two-thirds or three-quarters vote, but it was finally decided by the Committee that a referendum be called for and that in each case where the state or political subdivision desire to bond themselves, that the approval by the qualified voters be obtained. I would like to diverge just a minute, along that line; Delegate Ralph Rivers, early in the Convention, gave me some correspondence he had had with a firm of bond attorneys in New York, Wood, King, and Dawson, who had done some work on bond issues for the City of Fairbanks, and, I believe, for other cities in the Territory, and they very kindly offered to make any comments and offer any assistance or suggestions that they were able to from their past experience and all would be done without any charge. As a result, the Committee sent our completed proposal to them before the recess and we have had a reply from them which reads as follows, in part: "We received a copy of the report of the Committee on Finance and Taxation presenting the article on finance and taxation, and at the outset we wish to compliment your committee on the general form of this article. We were particularly pleased to note that debt to be incurred must be approved by the voters of the state of the political subdivision with certain exceptions specified in Section 11. This is a provision which will react favorably in the future when the state or its political subdivisions are attempting to dispose of its obligations." They go on, however, and say, "However, there is one provision, which while not contained in all state constitutions, is contained in many of them, and we feel that the inclusion of this provision would also react favorably to the benefit of the state and its subdivisions in the eyes of the financial institutions called upon to loan money. This is a debt limit provision. Normally the debt limitation is specified as a particular percentage of the assessed valuation of taxable property. Indebtedness incurred for tax anticipation purposes and debt for public utilities where the only security is the revenue that the public utility would normally be exempted from such a debt limit. In some constitutions, also the limitation of general indebtedness is a certain percentage and an added percentage is permitted for revenue producing projects." The Committee did not include that in our proposal, although at various times we had under consideration specific amounts to include. Our final conclusion was that any particular amount or any specific amount that we might include as a maximum would perhaps be either inadequate, too high or too low, and would not offer any protection either way. We had no basis to include a percentage of the state assessed valuation in view of the fact that we have had no exact figures on total property valuation in the state, and in view of the fact that many states which do not have debt limitations in their constitutions are not high in their bonded indebtedness and the lack of a limit has not given unrestricted rein to creating bonded indebtedness. The Committee decided to omit any mention of a bonded indebtedness or debt limit in this proposal. I believe that that was all the explanation I had in regard to that section. Section 10, the Committee felt that there would possibly arise occasions when tax revenues might not come up to expectation during a particular year and it might be necessary for the state to borrow money which would likely be in the form of notes from banks as has been done in the past, to carry through that particular fiscal year. However, it was the consensus of the Committee that such borrowing should definitely be paid back during the following fiscal year. The next section refers only to the allowance of contracting of revenue debt without the restrictions of the previous section on general obligations. Section 12 --

R. RIVERS: Point of information. Are you using the new section numbers?

NERLAND: I am using the old section numbers inasmuch as they are numbered that way. Section 12 deals with the preparation of a budget by the governor for submission to the legislature and this was done with the contemplation that the governor would take office approximately on the first part of December and the legislature would convene approximately 30 days later, the first part of January, giving the new governor an opportunity to prepare a budget from the material that was made available to him. Incidentally, there is no intention in this section that the legislature would be restricted in increasing the figures in the budget or the appropriations. Section 13 provided, "No money shall be withdrawn from the treasury except in accordance with appropriations made by law, nor shall any obligation for the payment of money be incurred except as authorized by law." The change and addition of the sentence was previously explained. Section 14 provides for the legislature to appoint an auditor and I believe that this wording and this section is similar to a law that is now in effect. The Committee considered the possibility of leaving it out and leaving it to the present law or such laws as might be passed along those lines but we felt it was something that should be in the constitution as a policy that should be permanent. Section 15 is again in accordance with House Bill 2535 and is a requirement according to that. I believe that covers it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, are you going through section by section? Is that the idea?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your questions beginning with each section.

JOHNSON: I have a question with reference to Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 1, first? Are there questions with relation to Section 2? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I have a question, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask Mr. Nerland why it is in Section 2, they say "lands or other property belonging to citizens of the United States shall never be taxed higher than the lands of residents of the state". That seems to me a little bit inconsistent. You might be a citizen of the United States at the time or you might be a resident of the other states and still not be a citizen of the United States. Would there be any differential in the tax levy upon the land?

NERLAND: I assume not, Mr. Taylor. I believe that wording was taken exactly from the enabling act.

TAYLOR: I believe, Mr. Speaker, possibly an amendment should be prepared to make those two descriptive words consistent. I believe that would be wrong.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, I believe Mr. Nerland will attempt to answer that.

NERLAND: As you know, these various points here that the enabling act states, "The Convention shall provide in said constitution..." and then starts numbering, and this is contained in No. 6 on page 31 and page 32 of the enabling act, and we just lifted it word for word from that act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions or amendments to be proposed?

NERLAND: It is also that exact wording in the Hawaiian Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 2, not amendments? Mr. Victor Rivers, did you have a question?

V. RIVERS: No, I have no questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 2? Mr. Ralph Rivers?

R. RIVERS: Mr. President. Mr. Nerland, would it not be more clear in Section 2 if we said, "The lands and other property in Alaska belonging to nonresidents"? You have to stop and read it twice because you stop and wonder why we are taxing property of people outside the state, but it means the property in Alaska owned by people who live outside the state.

NERLAND: I am sure our Committee would certainly have no objections if it met with the provisions of this or any future enabling act. Could that be left to Style and Drafting more properly?

R. RIVERS: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Section 3? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have a question in reference to Section 3. I believe that our present enabling act in setting up the power of the legislature to levy taxes uses the word "uniform" with respect to assessment and collection and levy. Now, was it the thinking of the Committee that the legislature should still be required in setting up standards for assessment of all properties that those standards should be uniform?

NERLAND: I will ask Mr. White, who was our assessment expert.

WHITE: I hate to answer it as an expert, Mr. President, but the thought of the Committee, Mr. Johnson, here was to stay very carefully away from any uniformity Provisions because that leads you into a lot of other difficulties that we wanted to avoid. The intent of this section is merely to suggest to the legislature that they should set up standards for assessment. In other words, a handbook providing a method of assessment that would be used by all assessing authorities within the state. Now, if that should lead to uniformity, fine, but we carefully avoided any mention of uniformity here because that gets into other things that we didn't intend to mention.

JOHNSON: Is it my understanding then that the Committee and your feeling is that the word "uniform" is unnecessary, shouldn't be there at all?

WHITE: That is correct.

JOHNSON: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Was it the intent of the Committee to recommend that valuations be the same throughout the Territory?

WHITE: No, you mean that taxes should be imposed on the full valuation or per cent thereof, the answer to your question is "no". This again merely provides that the same standards, the same method of assessment will be used by all taxing agencies.

HELLENTHAL: Are you aware of the fact that, for example, Anchorage levies and assesses its taxes for the future calendar year in the preceding fall, whereas Seward levies and assesses annually for the prior calendar year?

WHITE: Yes.

HELLENTHAL: Wouldn't this establishment of standards prohibit that practice?

WHITE: Not at all.

HELLENTHAL: What would it do?

WHITE: It merely provides that both assessing agencies, Anchorage and Seward, would proceed with their assessment according to the same methods. It makes no difference whether they are assessing for the year ahead or the year behind. It doesn't say they should use the same percentage of the assessed valuation that they would eventually arrive at. It merely says they should both proceed toward arriving at their assessed valuation via the same method.

HELLENTHAL: What method?

WHITE: The method that would be established by a central agency of the state.

HELLENTHAL: Pertaining to what?

WHITE: The word "method" is not in here. I think you are getting me into trouble that this section doesn't suggest. This section does not use the word "method". If it did, it might then say, "Anchorage and Seward would have to assess on the same yearly basis."

HELLENTHAL: Now, in Anchorage you self-assess personal property; in Seward you do not. Would you want both towns to self-assess or would you want both towns to leave that up to the assessor?

WHITE: No. If this section is followed, the method of assessing personal property as well as real property would have to be the same in both towns.

HELLENTHAL: How do you define this method? Where does it start and where does it stop?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to try to answer that question. I believe that in using the word "uniform" would not apply to assessments, but I believe that Mr. Helleenthal is driving at the worst use of the uniform type of appraisal for real property valuation. You are thinking in terms of the actual valuation and appraisal rather than assessment of the same, isn't that it?

HELLENTHAL: No.

V. RIVERS: Many states provide for uniform methods of appraisal.

HELLENTHAL: Is that what you mean? Uniform methods of appraisal?

WHITE: That is correct.

HELLENTHAL: Why don't we just say that then?

WHITE: What does that say that this doesn't?

HELLENTHAL: "The legislature shall establish the standards for assessment of all property assessed locally or by the state."

WHITE: Well, just offhand I see no objection to the word "appraisal" except that we are talking about assessment and why not say so?

HELLENTHAL: Perhaps I am getting beyond the scope of questioning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I don't think you are. I am right now liquidated of property in the State of Michigan, because I am away from there and they are assessing that property with excessive taxation. They raised the prices to 300 per cent over what it was when I lived there and the property adjoining. I have had the law audit, and no relief, so I sold the property and am now liquidating all the property there, because of that very issue and it is very important. I hope there is some way you can stop the board from unduly assessing property to get a higher tax on it. It is very small thinking and it should be prohibited if it can be done. I just liquidated property in the State of Michigan because of that very evil you are trying to avoid there. I hope you can do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question.

V. FISCHER: I assume the intention of Section 3 is that the legislature shall provide for the establishment of standards for assessment rather than the legislature itself doing it. Possibly that is something the legislature might prefer to delegate to a special commission or to an executive department, the actual preparation of the standards, is that your intent? Should the legislature put it in bill form?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Well, I think the intent is that the legislature "shall provide for". However, I think that is covered by the current wording without the words "provide for". Certainly, I don't think any of the Committee would have any objections to the addition of the words "provide for" if the group felt it was necessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: May I add a little bit to that? Now I am not an expert on assessment, but I know what the feeling of the Committee was, I think. The feeling was that the legislature should provide for a method of assessment or appraisal if you wish, and it was generally agreed that assessment and appraisal were rather technical questions. Everyone could not do it and do it properly. If the state provided for it they could have experts work out a system and that system could become the law and perhaps have manuals printed up which would be available to small communities instead of hiring their own experts, which perhaps would be beyond their means, they could go by the manual. When we say the legislature should provide for it, we mean provide for a commission or one expert to set this system up and then enact it into law probably.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I was just going to elaborate a little bit on the meaning of this, what is meant by "assessment". My interpretation is that it is a system of arriving at the value of the property. Now we know that when they mention "the legislature shall establish standards for assessment of all property assessed", then the legislature will pass an act which will provide a uniform system of which they are going to arrive at the value of property. Now, the assessment necessarily carries with it the fact that there will be a compilation of a tax roll of all the property within the taxing district. That is completed and then there is an appraisal made of the property, appraises its value and then from that the taxing authority will assess so much taxes against it, because they know how much money they have to raise, so they put the millage rate which they are going to assess against that property, so I think the word "assessment" means all of those things. It is a system by which you compile a tax roll, the appraisal and the millage assessment on the valuation of that property.

HELLENTHAL: There is one more question, Mr. White. Why was the principle of uniformity of taxation thought improper or to be avoided?

WHITE: There is nothing wrong with the theory of uniformity of taxation, but taxpayers have recourse to the courts in the event of nonuniformity of taxation. You are amply protected under the Federal Constitution, and you have recourse to the courts. The trouble with inserting a uniformity clause in the constitution is that you then have to set up -- what is the word I am trying to think of -- classification or provision in order to differentiate between different taxing authorities or different types of property to be taxed. For instance, in the local government setup, if you have two different levels of local government taxing the same property at different rates, you have to provide for that. The thought of the Committee was that the uniformity clause didn't add any protection that the people do not already have. Once you insert it you then have to go on and make these other provisions to make the whole matter clear.

HELLENTHAL: A typical uniformity clause says "All taxes levied upon the same classes of property or persons shall be uniform." What is wrong with that?

NERLAND: Mr. Hellenthal, will you repeat your question again, please?

HELLENTHAL: "All taxes levied upon the same classes of persons or property shall be uniform." What is wrong with that type of a clause, a typical uniformity clause?

WHITE: I think it is hard without seeing it in front of me to figure out the right words at all. If I understood you correctly, you would run into the trouble I was just talking about. You are taxing the same people on the same property on two different levels of local government at different rates.

HELLENTHAL: No. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Victor Rivers?

V. RIVERS: I would like to pursue that a little further without adding to the words of the Committee. It seems to me that standards for assessment and the word "assessment" there and "standards" do not seem to hitch together. One city might have a property evaluation that they assess at eight mills or ten mills. Another city might assess that at 20 mills. The word "assessment", as I see it, would have to be amplified. The valuation, the appraisal by which you arrive at the property might be uniform if you are dealing with real property, but the standards of assessment could never in any way be equal in any given community unless it just happened to be a happenstance. The use of the word "assessment" seems to confuse some of us, including myself, and perhaps some of the other delegates.

WHITE: That was not the interpretation that the Committee gave to the word "assessment"; however, we could stand corrected. The only thing I wish to make clear is that it was definitely not our intent to set mill rates.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, as I understand the term, "assessment" means the valuation of the property, and when you are talking about mill rates you are talking about levy of a tax, which are two completely different things, as I see this thing. They are saying here that in valuing property, in other words, assessing it, they want uniform standards, or they want certain standards set.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland, would you answer Mr. Davis's question?

NERLAND: Mr. McLaughlin has discovered a section out of a law dictionary here which states, "Assessment, as used in juxtaposition with taxation in a state constitution, includes all the steps necessary to be taken in the legitimate exercise of the power to tax."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: All the steps necessary? Then thhat would include the filing of the return; it would include the listing of the property, it would include the claiming of the exemptions; it would include every process in the subject matter, but Mr. White says it was their intention merely to provide for the appraisal of property which is only one facet, as I see it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I am quite sure that the generic definition of "assessment" is, as Mr. Nerland says, that is, it applies to the procedure of taxation. I think he was citing, I believe a Utah case in Black's Law Dictionary, and the general meaning of "assessment" in a state constitution or otherwise, otherwise unexplained does indeed include the substance and procedure from beginning to end of the taxing process.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I submit, Mr. President, that you do not assess property in the sense that they are talking about here. When you assess it you are valuing it. When you assess taxes, yes, you are correct.

BARR: May I read from this manual put out by the PAS on uniformity?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may. Mr. Barr.

BARR: "Uniformity provisions have generally not achieved their purposes." Then it goes on to say, "It is generally true because of poor assessment methods..." etc. Then it says, "Uniformity provisions have occasionally had the unfortunate consequence of blocking or delaying the use of accepted techniques in the application of other forms of taxation. The difficulty has arisen primarily with respect to the constitutionality of graduated income tax rates. Laws providing for rate graduation and exemptions have run afoul of the uniformity provisions of some state constitutions. Where this has occurred it became necessary either to amend the constitution or tax incomes at a single flat rate." We were trying to avoid confusion later, that is why we eliminated it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I would like to ask, to pursue this uniform business a little bit. The matter of uniformity in arriving at an assessment has always appealed to me as being a desirable thing. Uniformity of levying taxes, or uniformity of millage levies, or uniformity of the amount of assessment, I think probably is not a good thing because of certain tax incentives, but are you attempting, as I think you are in Section 3, to allow the legislature to provide, for example, that Seward and Anchorage both assess their personal property by the same methods? In other words, they both either use self-assessments or they both use assessment by individuals. And in the matter of real property taxes they both use a given basis of arriving at values. Is that the intent of the thing? And if it is so, is the word "uniform" in connection with that bad?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: That is certainly the intent of the section, Mr. Hurley, and the only answer I can give you quickly is that any time you try and stick "uniform" in this paragraph, you run into trouble. This paragraph looks pretty simple, only two and one-half lines, but it has been the subject of more going-over probably than any other paragraph in this article, and it has been through the hands of every consultant we have had here and we played with a lot of different words, and the Committee feels unanimously, I am sure, that these words accomplish the purpose that we intend.

HELLENTHAL: Are those words used in any other state constitution?

WHITE: Not that I know of.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, may I ask a question of Mr. White?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. White, I notice in your commentary on Section 3, you say that, "The legislature is authorized to set up, notwithstanding home rule or any system for the selection of assessors, uniform standards of assessment." I don't understand why you leave the word "uniform" out of the part on standards when you say in your commentary that is what you are doing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I can only repeat my previous answer, Mr. Robertson, the commentary has not been subject to the same fine-tooth going-over as the actual section and that it was our experience that every time we tried to put "uniform" into this section we ran into trouble, and we came to the conclusion the word was not necessary to establish clearly the meaning of the section, so we left it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to ask a question. Was it your intention that all communities assess on the same basis of valuation, that is on full valuation of 50 per cent valuation or 40 per cent valuation or something like that -- was that your intent?

WHITE: That was not our intent. It was the feeling of one or more of the Committee members -- I forget now how many -- that that also might be advisable. The majority of the Committee decided it was not, and we found that one previous section, as we had it worded, did suggest that possibility, so we deleted it and rewrote it, and as it stands now, it is the feeling of the Committee and of the consultants to which we submitted this, it does not say that you have to use the same percentage of assessed valuation in arriving at the final tax.

HELLENTHAL: What consultants have passed on this?

WHITE: It has been through the hands of Dr. [Shelden] Elliott, Dr. [Vincent] Ostrom, Dr. [Weldon] Cooper, Dr. [Dayton] McKean, and Mr. [Jack] McKay.

HELLENTHAL: None present now?

WHITE: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White, you stated also, didn't you, that the Committee made up its own mind as to the final wording of the section?

WHITE: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: I might put myself on the spot and try to explain this word "standard", but I will try to. As I see it, and the way it was discussed in the Committee, the word "standard" to carry that out may take a good many years before they will really be in top shape, and it will take a special committee over a number of years to study it, to come up with a standard of assessment. The word "uniformity" could be included maybe, or will, for the next two or three or four years, possibly it will be in there and use the same form of taxation, but again the word "standard", it will take a number of years to put it in effect; maybe have a printed booklet that will go out to everybody, there will be no exceptions. Each locality in the Territory, how they'll be assessed, that is pretty hard for me to explain in the right way, but that is what may take 10, 15 years before they'll be ready, the same way we use this word "uniformity" now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: At the risk of being repetitious, I would just like to say a few words about my understanding of what the Committee was trying to do here. We discussed the problem in Committee and the fact that knowing how to assess property is not only a highly skilled but a most technical field, and there is perhaps no one in Alaska who would be considered a specialist compared to some of the people in the states. I believe that a few years ago that Anchorage hired such an expert, I believe, to come in from the states and assess all the property, and that he worked at it a very considerable time and did a very good job, but then he left without giving the city of Anchorage the key to how he did it, so when new property was built there was no way of knowing what tests and standards were used. It was felt that perhaps in Alaska there is a need to have such experts not only to do the work but give us the standards by which to go by in the future. The city of Anchorage and perhaps three or four of the other larger towns are the only ones that could afford to do this, and we thought that by putting a provision in the constitution that the legislature could set up a program by which such experts were consulted, if they are available in Alaska, all right; if you have to bring them up from the states, the state could afford to do it, whereas the town of Seward, or Nome, or Igiak certainly could not do it. Once the state had hired these experts, have them set up the standards, whether you do it by square foot of concrete or by some other method, then when that program is all worked out, it could be put up in booklet form, or some other method, and sent to all the smaller towns and they would hire their own assessors, but they would have something by which to go, and in each place would not be put to the individual expense.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have a good reason here for not using the word "uniformity". I am quoting from the Hawaiian manual. It says, "In Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Washington, court decisions have prohibited graduated income taxes or classification of property, holding that such measures violated the uniformity clause."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, first, it relates to income taxes, and we are discussing property. Second, the normal clause says "within the same class", which permits classification of property. Now in Illinois they may not have had that language, "within the same class", so I hardly think it is an apt quotation when we are discussing this Section 3.

BARR: When I came to the word "property", I emphasized it so you would understand that.

HELLENTHAL: I caught that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I was going to raise a point of order. The other night when we adopted new rules, the first rule read, "After a standing committee chairman has explained an article and questions have been answered, a recess shall be called..." Before being adopted that was amended by crossing out the words "and questions have been answered". It seems to me --

PRESIDENT EGAN: With relation to your point of order, now the feeling of the Chair was that the reason those five words were deleted was that someone on the floor raised the question that you will never have all these things answered and that it was ambiguous -- not that questions were not in order but they felt that wording was in the minds of some of us, all the questions would never be fully answered. That was the feeling of the Chair when they were deleted.

AWES: I made the motion. It was not my understanding. I felt that these things could be better brought up in a recess that was called.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you ask that we stand at recess now?

AWES: It seems to me most of what has been said is either argument or questions about proposed amendments, and it seems to me it could be brought up better before the Committee in recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are you asking that we stand at recess until 7:00 p.m. Miss Awes?

AWES: I would so move so the Committee could meet and talk to some people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 7:00 p.m. Mr. Sundborg in order that the Committee may meet.

SUNDBORG: I announce a meeting of the Committee on Style and Drafting immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: A meeting of the Committee on Ordinances immediately following the recess.

V. FISCHER: Point of information. Where will the Finance Committee meet?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Where will the Finance Committee meet, Mr. Nerland?

NERLAND: Upstairs in the large committee room, immediately.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Finance Committee will meet immediately upstairs in the large committee room.

NERLAND: I might announce, Mr. President, in meeting now, we will have to adjourn our meeting in time for the members to have their dinner before 7:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, does that imply all the questions are asked now or will there be another question period after this recess where certain things are brought up? In other words, are we going to have another question period afterwards?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair felt that those five words were stricken because it said "and questions have been answered". Well, they always are not answered, and the thought that it was just because of the wording itself that it was deleted, but the Chair did not feel that questions before we go into actual second reading for amendment purposes meant that they would be out of order.

AWES: I am not arguing with the court's interpretation of that. It just seemed to me that the type of questions and statements being made that it could be handled much more efficiently in Committee meeting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 7:00 p.m. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Nerland, what is your wish at this time, to continue any questioning, or would you rather go into second reading and start the amending process?

NERLAND: Well, Mr. President, we held hearings during the dinner recess, and while we would have no objections to answering any questions at this time, there were a number of suggestions brought to us, and we have a few committee amendments to propose as we go through them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you rather take up the committee amendments as we go through section by section, and as we come to them?

NERLAND: We would like to have the opportunity of presenting the committee amendments as each section is considered -- that is, first before any other amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection then, we'll start with the amending process in second reading and start with Section 1. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, before we do that, I would like to ask one question of the Chairman, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson, you may ask a question of the Chairman.

JOHNSON: Mr. Nerland, with reference to Section 8 -- I believe it's Section 8 now -- it's the one on the matter of bonded indebtedness -- I think you mentioned the fact that you had an opinion from Wood, King and Dawson. I was wondering if anywhere in that opinion they had considered the point of marketability of bonds where there was no debt limit expressed in the constitution, or if that point had come up at all. I know the firm of Wood, King and Dawson; I have been in their office; they are a very fine firm, and I'm sure that I understood you to say in reading from their memorandum that there was some question in their mind as to whether or not a debt limit ought to be expressed.

NERLAND: Well, yes. They did express it in this letter, Mr. Johnson, as I read before, "However, there is one provision, which, while not contained in all state constitutions, is contained in many of them, and we feel that the inclusion of this provision would also react favorably to the benefit of the state and subdivisions, and in the eyes of the financial institutions called upon to loan money." However, the Committee in considering this felt that it would not be advisable in our case here to set either a dollar limit or a percentage limit.

JOHNSON: Well, in other words you don't believe that the failure to set a limit of any kind in our constitution would necessarily reduce the marketability of bonds of our future state?

NERLAND: Well, no, we didn't, and our findings were that in other states that had no debt limit, they apparently did not suffer from that lack of action.

JOHNSON: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Chairman of the Finance Committee one question before we go on to the amending process. Mr. Nerland, is it in Section 7 when you referred to the deposit of funds -- is that the section?

NERLAND: Is that the new or the old numbers, Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: That is the new numbers. What I'm referring to, sir, is, are the funds that are now being allocated, like the tobacco tax and one thing or another, you provided for those special funds? Is it the Committee's intention that that include the possible public lands that will be granted for school reserve purposes, such as our Sections 16 and 36 of our Territorial statutes or other states have? Do you recognize that as also a special fund?

NERLAND: Mr. Coghill, in this section by section review, when we come to Section 8, unless it is already prepared, the Committee is going to ask for a postponement of consideration of that. We have a number of changes that we shall recommend in that, and if you wouldn't mind, we'd prefer to postpone further questioning on that until that time.

COGHILL: There would be no amendment then, it would be just the thought of the Committee, because there is no assurance that our enabling act is going to provide that the grant of land given to the state -- the new state -- is going to be for school purposes, or just be turned over to the state to have it as state land; but it was a thought that I wanted to clarify in case there was a certain portion set aside for school funds, that it would be recognized as a fund existing when we become a state from Territorial status.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I don't know if I can add anything that the Chairman said, Mr. Coghill, but of course, the Congress could write a hundred thousand provisions in future enabling acts that we couldn't take into account in writing this constitution. The present enabling act and all recent enabling acts contained no earmarked school sections, so that this Committee has not provided for funds that would be thus earmarked. We felt it was safe to assume that the provisions in recent enabling acts are going to be followed in broad outline in that respect. The sale of land from the public domain, five per cent of the land from the public domain, after statehood would be given to state for school purposes, but that would be in compliance with the federal law.

COGHILL: That would be through the general fund, would it not?

WHITE: That's right.

COGHILL: It would be a permanent school fund under the provisions you're talking about? Do you understand what I'm driving at?

WHITE: That would be a further provision, and that could be covered by the language contained in Section 8, "except where participation of federal program will thereby be denied." In other words, the proceeds of the sale of land from the public domain, part of it being given to the state, we would not be entitled to that money under the terms of the enabling act unless it was used for school purposes. Now I don't know if that's a permanent trust fund or not, but the point is that we couldn't get it unless we did use it for school expense, and this section provides for that.

COGHILL: Yes, I understand that. The thing that I was driving at, Mr. White, was the fact that if Sections 16 and 36 were set aside, as in each township, as an endowment towards our permanent school fund, then this section would take care of it, wouldn't it?

WHITE: It probably would, but moreover I think there is hardly any chance that that would be the case, I think this blanket grant of a hundred million acres will be the case when we get statehood.

COGHILL: I understand about the blanket grant, but if it was, this would take care of the provision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask a few questions of Mr. White.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I have two thoughts in mind I'd like to have cleared on the record. One is in Section 9, when you talk of "capital improvements specified therein" in laws made by the legislature. Would you consider money used to improve farms in the Territory, a capital improvement to fall under this section?

WHITE: Just what did you have in mind, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: Farm loans -- farm improvement loans on such things or farm subsidies.

WHITE: That wasn't discussed in Committee.

KILCHER: And capital improvements, you think that might fall under capital improvements, the farming industry just like any other?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, I think that is already taken care of under existing funds. Your present Agricultural Loan Act provides for the loans, but as far as that being classified as a capital improvement, that wasn't discussed in Committee at all.

KILCHER: But I mean, being conversant with the matter in general, do you think that it could be classified under capital improvement in general -- these farm loan funds, etc.?

NOLAN: I doubt it very much.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, capital improvements, Mr. Kilcher, refer to capital improvements of the state or the political subdivisions, like a highway situation or waterworks. The money that the state lends to farmers is not a state capital improvement at all; that's a loan program to help the farmers to improve their lands, but that's not the subject we are talking about; we are talking about capital improvements of the state, or political subdivision.

KILCHER: Thank you. Then in Section 1, a similar question, in the second line, the power "shall never be suspended or contracted." Could you consider that the power of taxation -- could you consider that taxes could be suspended, taxes applying to farms as a part of an integral industry?

NERLAND: I would suspect that if all farms in the Territory were so included, that perhaps they could be.

KILCHER: Yes, that's what I had in mind. Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, in line with that, in our property tax, which is now repealed, there was a clause in there exempting homesteads from taxation until one year after the owner gains clear title from the federal government. That was the case of taxes exempt for short periods.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We will now proceed to Section 1. Are there amendments to Section 1? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: The Committee has no amendments for Section 1.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does any delegate have an amendment for Section 1? If not, are there amendments for Section 2? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, to avoid arising on each amendment, unless I do arise I hope you will assume the Committee has no amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: All right, Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: The Committee has no amendment to Section 2.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does any delegate have an amendment for Section 2? Are there amendments for Section 3? Does the Committee have an amendment to offer?

NERLAND: The Committee has an amendment for Section 3.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We'll consider committee amendments first in all cases. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: I move and ask unanimous consent that in Section 3, line 10, the word "assessment" be struck and the word "appraisal" be substituted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Nerland?

NERLAND: I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit your amendment.

JOHNSON: I haven't written it out. May I have a minute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson, you may offer your proposed amendment. The Chief Clerk will please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 3, line 9: strike the word 'the' at the end of the line and insert in lieu thereof the word 'uniform'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, what is your pleasure?

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I simply would like to state that I personally can see no reason why the "uniform" should not be put in there, but I certainly bow to the superior study of the Committee in deciding that it should not be put in there, so I shall vote against the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I couldn't understand him, the last he said.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I said I was against the amendment.

JOHNSON: Well, I certainly am not intending to or I have no intention of attempting to quarrel with the Committee. I have made a cursory examination of three or four constitutions since the recess and find that in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, which constitution has been adopted by the Congress of the United States, the phraseology of this rule is stated thus: "The rules of taxation in Puerto Rico shall be uniform." In other words, everything regarding taxation shall be uniform. In the State of Illinois they also have a uniformity clause, and I lived in that state for a number of years, and I can recall that in one instance the legislature passed a sales tax which was limited to certain types of businesses and for that reason, the Supreme Court of Illinois held that the tax was invalid, and subsequently the legislature corrected the mistake and made it applicable to all types of businesses, and that tax was then declared valid; and I believe it is still on the books there. In Oregon, the phraseology used in the constitution is that, "The legislative assembly shall and the people through the initiative may provide by law, uniform rules of assessment and taxation." And they go on to say that, "All taxes shall be levied and collected under general laws operating uniformly throughout the state." And the purpose, of course, of the uniform provisions is simply to guarantee that any law respecting taxation shall be uniform in application to all classes of property, to all types of property, and to all classes of citizens. So while it is true that the Federal Constitution contains the Fourteenth Amendment that does have a due process clause, and while our constitution, up to now, also contains a due process clause, it seems to me that this simply follows along with those two items and is just a little additional safeguard to the uniformity of application of all tax laws that may be passed by the legislature. I don't think that we are borrowing any trouble; I don't concede that this is going to be a stumbling block at all; I think that we are just adding a safeguard that ought to be here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I want to ask Mr. Johnson a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Miss Awes.

AWES: I wonder if I misunderstood you. As I understand you want the word "uniform" to go before "appraisal"?

HURLEY: No.

JOHNSON: No, "standards". Strike the word "the" and insert the word "uniform" so that it is "uniform standards".

AWES: For appraisal?

JOHNSON: Well, appraisal of all property assessed.

AWES: As you use that word, does that intend to go only to the appraisal? Your argument sounded as if you intended it to go to everything, rates and everything else. What did you think was the effect of that?

JOHNSON: Well, I thought this was part of the general taxing clause and the clause that gave the legislature the power to assess and levy taxes. I may be mistaken as to the import of the entire section, but certainly if a legislature has the right to assess or appraise property for tax purposes, it ought to have the right to levy and collect the taxes, too. But the appraisal is the most important part of the matter as I see it - - either the appraisal or assessment, and the standards under which the machinery is set up.

AWES: Well, do you think that section goes beyond the appraisal?

JOHNSON: Well, it may not; I don't know, but I still felt that even with the appraisal that there should be no question as to the uniformity.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I asked Mr. Johnson a question, will that preclude me from speaking a little later on if I should want to?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will hold that you still have a right to ask a question Miss Awes. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, before they changed the word "assessment" to "appraisal", I think I would have opposed the amendment, because the Committee made it clear that if you couple the word "uniform" with the word "assessment" you're getting into trouble; but to say that "They shall establish uniform standards for appraisal of all property assessed", I don't think gets us into any particular trouble. It should be uniformly appraised.

PRESIDENT EGAN: (To the Clerk) When did they change the word to "appraisal"?

CHIEF CLERK: That was the Committee's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Johnson a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, if there is no objection, Mr. White.

WHITE: I initially had the same feeling just expressed by Mr. Ralph Rivers, except that during your explanation of it I changed my mind and I decided that you intended going way beyond that. Now the question I wish to ask was, in your mind, does the insertion of this word "uniform" in place of "the", for example, make impossible the graduated tax on fish traps?

JOHNSON: No, not if it's applied to all traps alike, it wouldn't. Actually, I think we are getting into a discussion here that we shouldn't. I don't know whether a tax on a fish trap is a tax or a license, actually. If you want to start splitting hairs about it --

WHITE: Well, pursuing the question a little further, in your mind, does this use of the word "uniform" here turn this into what we would normally consider a uniformity clause?

JOHNSON: Well, it does as to the matter of appraisals, yes, and the standards for which the legislature must set up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further debate on this amendment? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to know if the Committee's intention is to have a standard set up that is not uniform; that is, do they want some kind of an unusual standard set up that would permit assessment -- appraisal, as it reads now, that would be something other than uniform?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Committee answer that question? Miss Awes.

AWES: I'm a member of that Committee, I won't say I'm representing the Committee, but I think that this section I'm sure there is no doubt -- this section goes only to appraisal; and I think the word "standards" for "appraisal" -- I think the word "standard" really implies uniformity. You don't have standards in this sense unless you're putting uniform guides out, so, therefore, I don't think the word does any harm; I don't think it particularly adds anything either.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: On the Missouri section on taxation, they use the word "uniform".

PRESIDENT EGAN: How is it used, Mr. Metcalf? Would you read the section, Mr. Metcalf?

METCALF: "Taxes may be levied and collected for public purposes only, and shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I have one, sir.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 9, page 1, Section 3: strike 'establish', and substitute 'provide for the establishment of'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer, what is --

V. FISCHER: Strike the "the" also. Mr. President, I move adoption and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves adoption of his proposed amendment. Is there a second?

MCCUTCHEON: I object.

R. RIVERS: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers seconds the motion. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, there is a possible question here of whether "establish" covers delegation of the authority to establish; and these words would cover that. I checked that with the Chairman of the Committee, and he's agreeable to the change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Fischer, what type of a delegation do you have in mind?

V. FISCHER: To a state agency, for instance, to a special commission, to set up standards. It is a delegation to the executive branch.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Fischer a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may, Mr. White.

WHITE: May we assume that under the auspices of Style and Drafting throughout the constitution wherever it says "establish", as this does, if the meaning is not clear, then everything will be changed to something like "provide for the establishment of"?

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I don't think that that could be done very readily. I think that there is a big difference between the legislature establishing something and providing for the establishment. Otherwise, I wouldn't have suggested the change at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, the only thing I can see here is that where it states "the legislature shall establish", to me there appears to be no difficulty. The legislature shall establish the law; they shall pass the law which shall delegate the authority, and there is no prohibition here about it that I can see. They can delegate our natural resources department if they're going to have the lands, or delegate to any other organization or arm of the government, the authority to proceed with this. They are delegating their authority by the law, they are establishing that authority as is directed here. I can't see where there should be any quibbling about it.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 3? Section 4? The Convention will come to order. Are there amendments to Section 4? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I ask the Committee a question in reference to this section?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson, you may.

JOHNSON: Mr. Nerland, in this exemption clause, suppose that a nonprofit organization owns some income-producing property that it wasn't using for its own purposes but was renting out and getting income from, would that property be subject to taxation or would it be exempt?

NERLAND: It would be subject to taxation.

JOHNSON: Under this provision?

NERLAND: Yes.

JOHNSON: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, why was the word "cemetery" put in there?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Can the Committee answer that? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, yes I can. I looked over quite a few of these constitutions, and I might say it was put in there through tradition more than anything else; however, I will point out, it says nonprofit cemeteries. Of course, there are some cemeteries out in the large cities that do make a profit. Most of the constitutions provide a list of exemptions from taxation, and some of them have quite a long list. We have picked out those that were commonly exempted; these are practically in every constitution. I suppose that is through public demand or opinion that they are included.

HELLENTHAL: We've gotten along in Alaska for 50 years, cemetery property has never been exempt, and I know of no crying demand for exemption of cemetery property, do you, Mr. Barr?

BARR: (No comment)

NERLAND: I'd say it's a "dead" issue. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is nothing before us. Mr. Hellenthal, do you offer an amendment?

HELLENTHAL: I'm trying to make up my mind. Now, the veteran's exemption was omitted. Now we had that for a long time. What was the reason for omitting the exemption for the veterans?

BARR: I don't believe there was any special reason for omitting that. If I'm correct, we decided to omit most of the exemptions, and there was lots of others that were --

HELLENTHAL: No. That was the only one that has been singled out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair holds that this is not an arguing portion of the amending process. Are there other amendments to Section 4?

HELLENTHAL: I move to strike the word "cemetery".

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves that the word "cemetery" be stricken from line 1 of page 2, and Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, throughout the United States there has been the greatest promotion in cemeteries in recent years that we have ever had. There were no failures -- ever -- in the cemeteries, they've been a success. (laughter) I think that they should be stricken. I'm going along with the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, to make it perfectly clear, the only reason that I made the amendment is that Alaska law -- and I have it here -- for many years has exempted property used exclusively for religious -- we have covered that -- educational, and charitable purposes, and then the veterans, and that's all. We have omitted the veterans and thrown in the cemeteries. I think the cemeteries should go.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Harris.

HARRIS: I don't know, but I kind of like to think that when I die, I'm free from taxation. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White, you may.

WHITE: Mr. Hellenthal, is it your further intention to get rid of cemeteries and put in veterans? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

HELLENTHAL: No. I'm a veteran, and I've never known why the veterans' organizations, any more than any other organizations, like the Elks, Moose, or any other lodge, should be exempt. I can't understand that exemption, but I can't understand this cemetery exemption either.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: I think I can speak for the Committee. I started out in the same way in Committee, wondering why cemeteries should be in there, and it was pointed out to me that in constitution after constitution these are the four standard exemptions, and if you go beyond them, you can list them for page after page, so the Committee, I think, decided to stick with what appears to be standard in most of the constitutions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, I gave some thought to that, and as the discussion went on that -- if I recall right -- there are a number of cemeteries around, outside of the incorporated city limits that are actually established by groups of people for the benefit of the community, and under the striking of this, and I refer to the Birch Hill cemetery in Fairbanks and the Palmer Cemetery outside of Palmer, and a number of others like them. If you strike this, I presume that you will make them subject to taxation, if and when the local government unit or the state ever imposed a tax, unless they were covered under the word "charitable", and I'm pretty sure most of them are not charitable, they are just self-sustaining, nonprofit groups.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I think in this we are scoffing because the problem doesn't exist at the moment in Alaska. We are scoffing at a problem that may very well become critical in the Territory of Alaska. That is, if you go into any of the larger cities of the state, you can well comprehend why many of these cemeteries could not be run at a profit, and most of them are nonprofit because it is the only method of avoiding taxes, and yet providing, in a sense, a permanent resting place for these people; and to scoff at it and say that it has to be under religious or charitable auspices is unjust, because in many instances it is a definite public service. The fact is that in Alaska we haven't been confronted with the problem, but if we lightly pass it off as a joke, we may regret it in the future, because in substance we may well waive one of the exemptions that apparently has been critical and important in every other state of the union. The mere fact that our people have, in substance, in most instances in the past gone outside to die is possibly because there aren't any cemeteries, is no occasion for suggesting now that we do away with the exemption because it isn't an immediate problem. I think that is near-sightedness on the part of many of these people who so violently oppose it. If it is so minute that it isn't a problem why not leave it in there and then if it does become a problem at least we have covered it in this constitution. Certainly, there was some justification for being included in so many constitutions so uniformly. You can treat it pettily and you can scoff at it, but it may become a matter of moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone who hasn't spoken yet? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I haven't spoken since the amendment was moved. After hearing Mr. Hellenthal's amendment, I'm certain now that the old saying is right: "There's nothing certain except death and taxes," and probably taxes after death. Mr. McLaughlin certainly stated the case exactly. Our cemeteries here are a little different than those outside, because we can go out here and stake out a piece of ground in the tundra anywhere and dig a hole, and it's a cemetery; but down in the states most churches have a cemetery in connection with them; they own the ground, and if it happened to be inside of a city, that ground would certainly have a high tax rate, and they do not make any money off of that. There may be a charge at first, but they also allow the cemetery to be used by indigent persons who can't pay anything. Mr. Marston mentioned these promotional deals where they make a lot of money, and certainly I agree with him, they should be taxed. But what we provide for that in here -- this is only for nonprofit cemeteries, meaning usually religious cemeteries.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. McLaughlin a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hellenthal, you may.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. McLaughlin, this is no light matter with me at all, although it lends itself to some form of humor, I suppose. Can you think of one example of a cemetery, such as you spoke of in your remarks, which is not covered by the nonprofit religious or the nonprofit charitable exemptions?

MCLAUGHLIN: I can speak specifically for the city of New York. In the city of New York it's becoming something of a burden because of the fact that there are so many people who do not believe that they should be cremated. Many people are not of any specified religion and may not qualify to be interred into special religious cemeteries, and when you have a great mass of population, you have to establish a cemetery. The cities -- I speak specifically of Anchorage, the one of which I know -- cannot go on for years providing a private cemetery. In substance, some day they will insist that some private organization -- nonprofit and not necessarily religious -- take over and exercise the duties that the city is now performing. I might point out that in the city of Anchorage in their cemetery that they do have areas set aside for Moslems; I know specifically they have a section set aside for the Masons. Would that qualify as a religious organization? It would qualify as a nonprofit, and those are things that are going to rise and face us. We are not faced with the problem today but with the growth of population, it's going to come. We are in substance, all of us, nothing more or less than rural communities, and the rural communities can beat it in their small religious cemeteries but the time will come when we will have to set aside large plats and those places can't support themselves if they are not exempt, even though they be nonprofit, if they are not exempt from taxes, they cannot maintain themselves with the prices they charge. That's an experience that's true in the United States --

HELLENTHAL: Point of order, Mr. President. I asked a question and wanted to know what kind of a cemetery do you have in mind that isn't covered by the nonprofit charitable language. Name me one.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was the other question, wasn't it?

HELLENTHAL: Well, in this I'd like to be heard on it. You can't name it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I don't believe because he can't answer the question, and he can't give a definite example, that that is proof that it shouldn't be written in here. It may make all the difference in the world between a ragged, dismal-looking place on the outskirts of a city and a place with perpetual care that is an edification to us, and as we go by someone cares for that place. I don't see why we can't afford to leave it in here. If there is any doubt, then it should be left in here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hellenenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may, Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Hellenenthal, if you subject any kind of a cemetery to taxation, isn't it possible that 50 years from now that the taxes may become delinquent on that cemetery and the sheriff comes around and sells it at a tax sale. What are we going to do with the remains there? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

HELLENTHAL: If I can close at the same time as I answer your question -- I know of no cemetery in Alaska, or anywhere else, nonprofit, that wouldn't be justified from exemption from taxation under the charitable clause that we have. And I think that we are opening the door here to a possible abuse. Now take Juneau; I'm quite familiar with the Juneau cemetery. They have an Elks' plot, they are free from taxation because the Elks is a charitable organization; they have an Odd Fellows' plot, I believe, and the same principle applies there; they have the Serbian lodge there, a charitable institution, and it's also tax exempt; they have the Moose plot, it's tax exempt; the Legion plot -- all charitable organizations. The Masonic plot -- everywhere are charitable organizations. And I know of no case anywhere, even New York, where the cemetery plot wouldn't be exempt because of the charitable nature of its sponsoring organization; however, if you open the door to a nonprofit cemetery association, I know of a few of those that are organized primarily so that the leader of it can draw a very handsome salary in this nonprofit organization, and he's entitled to it under the law, and he more or less maintains himself perpetually through the tax exemption because it is the tax exemption that pays his salary. Now there have been abuses of that and we all know that these exemptions should be curtailed to the minimum; and, unless there is a very, very good reason for creating a new one, I see no reason why we should do it here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 4? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I don't have an amendment; I have a question, and that's in regard to the last sentence of this section where you say "other exemptions of like or different kinds". Isn't that, in effect, saying that exemptions of any kind may be granted?

NERLAND: Yes, that was the purpose of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to the new Section 5? It was formerly 6. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, the Committee would like to state for the record to amplify a little bit in an answer we gave to Mr. Johnson's question earlier, and that is as to the exemptions extended to property used by the nonprofit, religious, charitable, cemetery, and educational purposes, and that is that this is carefully drawn to provide that even any part of property owned by such organization or used for such purposes which is used for profit could be taxed. For example, the case of an office building owned by an educational institution, part of which is being occupied by the institution itself for its own purposes, and part of which is rented out at a profit. It's the intention here that the part which is rented at a profit could be taxed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 5? Section 6? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, the committee has an amendment on Section 5: after line 19, after "United States" insert a comma and add "the state and its political subdivisions".

PRESIDENT EGAN: You offer that as an amendment, Mr. Nerland?

NERLAND: I offer this as an amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, line 19: after the word 'States' insert a comma and add 'the state and its political subdivisions'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of Mr. Nerland for the adoption of the amendment? If there is no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to the new Section 5? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I just happened to notice. The heading of that paragraph should be changed. It is now entitled "Taxation of Interests in U. S. Property". I would move that we strike the "U. S." and substitute "government".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves that we strike the "United States" and insert in lieu thereof the word "government". Do you ask unanimous consent?

BARR: I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr asks unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

V. RIVERS: I wonder if Mr. Barr would consent to make the word "public property". I think that would be more inclusive.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr, do you have any objection to the request as made by Victor Rivers?

BARR: I don't think I do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for about 60 seconds.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley, what is your point of order?

HURLEY: I didn't think the paragraph headings were subject to amendment, and the Style and Drafting Committee has been freely changing them around, and I hope that situation will continue.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels your point of order is well taken. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I believe they are subject to amendment, but I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment and to refer it to the Style and Drafting Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, it is so ordered, and the proposed amendment has been withdrawn. Are there amendments to the new Section 6? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, once again I don't have an amendment, and I ask the question merely to get the Committee thinking into the record. Was it the intent of the Committee here to prohibit the sale of public property for other than public purposes? I see that you have here: "No tax shall be levied or appropriation of public money made or public property transferred, except for a public purpose." And, of course, in the resources article we make it possible to transfer property from the state public domain to private individuals. I simply wanted to either get this before Style and Drafting or get the Committee thinking on the record.

NERLAND: Mr. Smith, the Committee took into consideration Section 9 of resources, and it was the feeling of the Committee that the transfer of public property, when money was being received for it, would constitute a public purpose. It was not the intent of this Committee to interfere with the operation of your Section 9 in resources.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I'd like to ask a question. Mr. Nerland, the same answer would apply to surplus property which the state is putting up for sale, would it not?

NERLAND: I would say it would, Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 6? Are there amendments to the new Section 7? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, the Committee would request that further consideration of Section 7 be temporarily postponed until we have our proposed changes ready for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will adhere to the Committee's request and proceed to other sections. Are there amendments to the new Section 8? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment to Section 8.

CHIEF CLERK: You mean Section 8 instead of Section 9?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's right. It's Section 8 now.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, line 7 and 8, strike 'or any political subdivision thereof'. On line 11, strike 'or of the respective political subdivisions'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: I move the adoption of this amendment.

ROSSWOG: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer moves the adoption of the proposed amendment, and Mr. Rosswog seconds the motion. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, the provision here regarding the debts of political subdivisions is in direct contravention of the concepts that have been developed by the Local Government Committee over the last number of weeks. The way the Local Government Committee has approached the whole field of political subdivisions is that in our article in the constitution we create the general framework of the local government system of the state and set up its general form of operation. Insofar as fiscal affairs are concerned, it has been our consideration all along that the state, through the legislature, has the supreme power over local government units in the matters of taxation, bonding, and similar fiscal matters. Now we have gone further and visualized that relationship, not just as one where the state imposes a duty upon its local subdivisions, but as a cooperative venture where the state takes an interest instead of just saying, "Thou shall not do this", and putting on various limits where the state actually works towards the development of better local government finances. I could go on at length on that subject, but what I would like to point out is that we are dealing here in the finance article covering the fiscal establishment of this state -- emphasis on the state -- things that we don't put in here are left to the legislature. In other words, what we want to put in here are the things we want to insure they get done. I mean, we are the only group that can tell the legislature of the State of Alaska what it can and cannot do. But in relation to the local government units that will be created under this constitution, the legislature will still be in that same position in which we find ourselves. The legislature can tell the local government units that you must put up any proposed bond issues for referendum; they can set up a limit on the total amount of bonding authority of local government, and establish similar restrictions. I don't feel that it is necessary or proper to put in these provisions here. I would further like to point out that we presently have laws on the books that provide that before a municipality can bond itself, before a school district can bond itself, before public utility districts could bond themselves, it has to submit the proposition to the voters. Now I would further like to point out that in drafting those laws the legislature has had a chance to provide additional provisions that are not included here. This is not directed towards the local governments; this is directed towards the state government. The political subdivisions throughout just seems to be thrown in here. We have a phrase, for instance, in line 8, "unless the debt shall be authorized by law for capital improvements". Does the legislature pass a law authorizing the city of Fairbanks to bond itself to build a bridge or something? That is the kind of question. In line 15, "meeting natural catastrophes", a local government unit couldn't meet natural catastrophes; the exemption applies only to the state. It would seem to be much better to leave this matter up to the state and let the legislature make the necessary restrictions which, by the way, are much more stringent now. Here it is provided in line 10, "approved by a majority of the qualified voters". At the present time in most general obligation bond issues a 65 per cent majority is required in our municipalities. The legislature further restricted it to authorize only property owners to vote on these propositions. In other words, instead of putting on a restriction, we are loosening things up, we are removing the flexibility that can be provided by giving this power to the legislature and let the legislature meet the needs as they may occur instead of freezing it in this inflexible document.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I read this article quite differently than Mr. Fischer has outlined it, and if I may ask him a question. I'd like to -- supposing we leave out these six words "or in behalf of the state" and read it this way, "that no debt shall be contracted by any political subdivision, unless the debt shall be authorized by law for capital improvements specified therein and be approved by a majority of the qualified voters of the respective political subdivisions." I think that's quite logical.

V. FISCHER: My point, Mr. McNees, is that it may be logical, but this is what the legislature has done in the past; it has done it, I might say on a different basis with much more study, and the specifications, for instance, that we have for bonding are much higher now. You're opening up to the local government units a much easier floating of bonds than we have at the present time. Mr. President, I might still answer Mr. McNees now. I'm not against requiring a referendum before a local government unit can issue bonds; I'm only saying that that is a determination that the legislature has to make.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, the Committee was fully aware of the present regulations regarding this, but they were also very determined that this should apply also to the political subdivisions. Granted that there are certain restrictions in effect now by law, but also it is conceivable that future legislatures might remove those restrictions entirely; and the Committee felt that having the state or the political subdivision or the governing body thereof, authorize the debt by law, and then have it referred to the voters on a referendum, would be a necessary safeguard against excessive bonding.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I think this line where they go into the detail of "approved by a majority of the qualified voters" is ill-advised and I can't hardly believe that the property owners of the state will go for it. It would be decidedly to their detriment, particularly in the area that I'm familiar with, we have a very large percentage of people --

AWES: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Miss Awes.

AWES: I think he's going on a different matter. I don't think he's talking about the amendment that is before us at the present time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, page 3, line 7 and 8, strike the words 'or any political subdivision thereof'. On line 11, strike the words 'or of the respective political subdivisions'."

HINCKEL: Well, I'd like Miss Awes to explain to me what she thinks I am talking about.

AWES: I'm sorry.

HINCKEL: By following the logic of the man that spoke ahead of me, why, he is requesting that we strike certain provisions here so that among some of the advantages of striking those provisions would be the thing that I'm talking about, and that is the state would then be able to set up something other than this very provision in here which says that 'the majority of the qualified voters in any political subdivision, for instance, the city of Kodiak could authorize the voting of bonds, or, the city going into debt, and leaving about 15 per cent of us to pay the bill. That's what I'm objecting to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I'm a member of the Finance Committee, but I would just like to state that I am going to support Mr. Fischer's amendment. When this question came up in the Committee, I did not favor putting those words in. I'll admit I was a minority of one, but I don't approve of putting them in for the reasons Mr. Fischer gave. I think that the state has the full authority to regulate the local government's right to go into debt, and the method in which it can do it. There might be one of a dozen different ways that the state legislature would want to put restrictions on the local government; this just specifies one particular limitation that the state constitution would put on them. The state legislature might want to put this one, only in a more restrictive form even, or other; and I just don't think it serves any particular purpose, and by putting this one restriction in, it might be implying that we didn't want the legislature to put other restrictions on. So I favor Mr. Fischer's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I would like to say that I believe this whole Section 8 is really a legislative matter, and particularly where it affects the political subdivisions, and so I would like to support this amendment. I know in our consideration of local government we felt that we should give the local government a certain amount of self-government, of course, subject to limitations by law and under the state government. The idea of setting up in the constitution this limit would certainly stop reasonable borrowing by the cities. I know that even at the present time, with the limitations that are on borrowing by the smaller towns or medium sized towns, why, it's often hard to borrow a small amount that they need. I hate to think what would happen to our national economy, or to our federal government, if a limitation such as this was in effect there. I think there should be reasonable limits and it should be set by the legislature. The letter that was read, of course, from a house that is interested in selling bonds, is naturally from their angle -- the less debts you would have, or if you were unable to make debts except through bonding, why, it would be to their advantage, but I don't think that enters into the question here. I think it would be very hard on the local government units and I think these limitations should be set up by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I'd like to make a statement, but first may I address Mr. Ralph Rivers to get a legal opinion?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Barr, you may get your free legal opinion. (Laughter)

BARR: Voting on improvements within a city where only the property owners are allowed to vote, what is that, a city ordinance or a state law?

R. RIVERS: That's prescribed in our present laws of Alaska, purely a legislative matter.

BARR: The point I'm trying to bring up is this, we are dealing with two things here -- the state and -- we'll take the cities, to make it simpler. Now we can't say that only property owners should vote in a state election, because we have no tax rolls on property owners. And in here, when there is an election for public improvement within a city it says it should "be approved by a majority of the qualified voters of the state or of the political subdivision voting". In other words, it seems to me that in that case if a city requires you to be a property owner to vote, and the state law also says that that is permissible, then you're not a qualified voter of that city in that case unless you own property.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I have once already spoken, but may I call to Mr. Barr's attention that the qualified voter is one thing, but that doesn't mean he can vote on a bond issue; it's a different qualification. It is set up differently in the Territorial laws.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: It says here "by a majority of the qualified voters of the state", which is one thing. We all know what that is, "or of the respective political subdivision". If they specify that in addition, it must mean that they must be qualified under the ordinances provided for by that political subdivision and also in respect to what the state allows. If the political subdivision requires you to be a property owner, then you're a qualified voter -- if you're a property owner.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, we recently conducted a bond issue in the little town of Nenana, and in going through it we found out -- in answer to your question, Mr. Barr -- that there is a Territorial statute that limits our bonding capacity of a small community, and also that the only people that are eligible to vote on a bonding issue are property owners.

BARR: That proves my point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHALL: Mr. President, -- Mr. Barr, what is the intention of the Committee to prescribe minimum qualifications here?

BARR: You mean qualifications for voting?

HELLENTHAL: For voting on a matter of involving the authorization of debt. Maybe if I put it this way, did the Committee want to leave it open so that Kodiak, for example, could superimpose additional qualifications to those set out in the constitution?

BARR: I believe so, that's why the two are divided. It says, "the qualified voters of the state or of the respective political subdivision".

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have a question which I think bears very closely on this. I wonder if the Committee gave attention and thought to the matter of revenue bonding for the purposes of capital improvements to existing structures where they earn their way out. Now in cases like that at the present time, I believe, on revenue bonding, I'm not sure, but it seems to me that they do not require a vote, is that correct? But on a general obligation bonds a vote is required of the people whose property will be generally obligated to retire that debt. I wonder how this would work as to revenue bonding? Could somebody answer that for me?

AWES: Mr. President, I think Section 11 lists certain exemptions that Section 8 doesn't apply to, and I think that is specifically taken care of in that section, that is, in the new Section 10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I'd like to support Mr. Fischer's amendment here, and along the same lines that Mr. Hinckel spoke about, our population within the Territory is not too stable, and I think if there is any question here that it be left open, where, by a simple majority of the voters within a city, that they could obligate and put that city in debt for capital improvements; then the boom dies out there, and a majority of the people move to another town and leave the property owners stuck with the debt. I believe the present Territorial law is much better in this regard as to cities and political subdivisions than it would be if it had to be drawn under this particular article of the proposed act.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I believe that the confusion that has been expressed as to the meaning of "qualified voters" as applied to two different levels of government would be dispelled altogether with the adoption of Mr. Fischer's amendment, which is just one additional reason, as I see it, for supporting that amendment.

WHITE: Mr. President. In answer to some of the arguments that have been presented, first of all, Mr. Fischer said that on line 15 that it was silly to think of a city in terms of borrowing money to defend the state in war, or in meeting natural catastrophes. I call his attention to line 12 where the foregoing words are provided that "the state may by law..." So from line 12 on down we are only speaking of the state. Now it's very true that this authority is possessed by the legislature, but I think the majority of the Committee felt that subjecting such bond issues to referendum on the local level constituted the basic framework that we would like to see in the constitution on this matter. Now the Local Government Committee, in Section 5, says, "The governing body of the borough shall be the assembly." If you want to get even more basic than that, you can say, "The borough shall have a governing body." It is a question of how far you want to go on leaving things to the legislature, and I think the majority of the Committee felt that this basic restriction of submitting bonding issues to the people, as we do now, should be retained with the full understanding that the legislature can always impose additional restrictions. Mr. Fischer said that he is not opposed to submitting bond issues to referendum and we have here provided them. When you get into additional limitations, the Committee did think this should be left because then you are into the matter of dollar limitations or percentage limitations which can logically vary from year to year or generation to generation. So we pointedly left that kind of restriction out, but of course the legislature can always impose additional restrictions, and I think the fact that the legislature has provided with something in the past, that there is a statute now on the books, and therefore we needn't include it in the constitution, has been settled to our satisfaction several times here before. Merely because the law is now on the books is not sufficient reason for not including a similar provision in the constitution. Mr. Rosswog says that this provision would make it very hard on the cities; Mr. Fischer says it would make it too easy for the cities. I think we are kind of following it along the average there. Mr. Fischer pointed out to us in committee meeting that the word "law" on line 8, and the words "qualified voters" on line 10 might lead to difficulties. I think the Committee is inclined to think not, but should this amendment be voted down, it certainly isn't beyond us to change or improve those words if they do lead to difficulties. I think I'm expressing the intent of the Committee when I say that it was not our intent to settle who should vote on bond issues in local government units. Now if that language is not clear here, it's certainly subject to amendment, so that Mr. McNealy's point that this would leave the settling of local bond issues by referendum to a simple majority is not necessarily so. We don't feel that the language does so, as it stands, and if it does it certainly is subject to amendment.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I withdraw my question.

LEE: Mr. President, I'm not too interested in the majority vote or the two-thirds vote; I'm primarily interested in a basic principle involved here. We are writing a constitution here that is supposed to give us more freedom of self-government. Now in the past, under Territorial status, we have had more self-government than this will provide. I think that we should go the other way and try to give all the home rule we can to the cities and to the other local governments.

DAVIS: Mr. President, for what it's worth, I hope that Mr. Fischer's amendment will be defeated. It is true that if we strike these words here that the legislature will still have the right to say how far cities can go or what they have to do to bond, but it seems to me that we are writing basic things here as to what can be done and what can't be done by the legislature as well as by the units of local government, and it seems to me absolutely basic that the units of local government, as well as the state, should be governed by some basic rules before they can bond. My only objection to the language, as written here, is that it doesn't go far enough. I would make it still more restrictive before either the state or the political subdivisions could bond.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President. I'll be very brief. I think the amendment has merit, and I think it's unwise to forever tie the growth of all the various political subdivisions that will be created by this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? Mr. Fischer is about ready to close the argument if no one else wishes to be heard. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: In closing, I would only like to say that we have tried, in drawing the local government article, to provide for a system that will be flexible, that will be able to meet growing needs of Alaska. I think that that can be best achieved through a cooperative attitude between this state and the local government units, and the best way of achieving that will be by leaving this matter to the legislature which can meet the needs as they arise and impose the kind of restrictions that can best meet the needs of the local government units at our various stages of growth.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Fischer be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I'll ask for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 17 - Awes, Buckalew, Cross, Emberg, V. Fischer, Harris, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Lee, McNealy, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Mr. President.

Nays: 33 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, H. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, V. Rivers, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 5 - Robertson, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 17 yeas, 33 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to Section 8? Mr. Hurley, do you have an amendment?

HURLEY: Mr. President, I would like, first, to ask a question of the Chairman, if I may, so I may not have to offer an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley, you may.

HURLEY: Mr. Nerland, on line 8, the last word is "law". It says, "unless the debt shall be authorized by law for capital improvements..." Is it the intention of the Committee that the word "law" also would mean local ordinance or resolution of the particular political subdivision that was involved in the capital improvement?

NERLAND: That's correct, Mr. Hurley, and we would assume that if that wording is not satisfactory to Style and Drafting, that they will change it accordingly, but it's our intention that it be by law or ordinance or whatever other authority that the state or political subdivision might enact.

HURLEY: And it's not the purpose that the state should by law specify a capital improvement in a particular locality?

NERLAND: No, that wasn't our intention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, page 3, line 10, after the word 'voters' add the following: 'whose names appear on the current tax rolls'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

MCNEALY: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy seconds the motion. The amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I would like to ask a question. What current tax rolls do we have of the state with the taxpayers' names? We do not have any property tax roll. I'd like to ask how this would put us in connection with a vote on a state bond issue?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: It's conceivable, Mr. President, that one of the first acts of the first legislature would be to pass a property tax, since undoubtedly we are going to need more money, and the basic form of taxation, as we have heard for many years, is a property tax; and I can conceive of the first legislature producing that tax law immediately, and we thus would have a tax roll all over the state. I don't think that's an argument against the amendment, because it is very conceivable that immediately we would have a property tax law which would put us all on the current tax roll of the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, I believe that the amendment by Mr. Johnson is too restrictive. It sets out a tax roll. I prefer to see something, such as "subject to other qualifications by law", that would include the tax roll or whatever we have coming up against it in the future. I believe your qualifications is too limited, you've just got it down to one item. At this time I'd like to ask the Chairman of the group: when you say "a majority", do you mean "at least a majority of the voters", or does that mean a maximum figure to the Committee?

NERLAND: Mr. Gray, I think perhaps that might be construed in several ways, but in answer to your whole statement, and the question to Mr. Johnson and myself, I believe there is an amendment being prepared right now that would be more satisfactory, both as far as the "majority" and also as far as the "qualified voters" are concerned. In the interest of saving time, I think that even perhaps Mr. Johnson would be willing to withdraw his motion after he hears the context of that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could you read that, Mr. Nerland?

NERLAND: Mr. Davis is preparing that, I think. Do you have it ready, Mr. Davis?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, for information purposes, would you care to read the proposed amendment in light of the suggestion as made by the Chairman of the Committee?

DAVIS: I had a proposed amendment, and I wasn't listening to Mr. Nerland. I'm sorry.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We'd like to have the proposed amendment read, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: On line 10, insert "not less than" before the word "majority". Line 12, after the word "question" delete the comma and insert a period. Add another sentence as follows: "additional requirements may be provided by law." Start a new sentence with the word "provided" and continue as in the proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson before us at this time. The question is -- Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I'd like to ask a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mrs. Nordale, you may.

NORDALE: In case of debt contracted by the state, aren't people who pay their income tax entitled to vote just as much as people who pay real estate property taxes -- since their money goes -- I don't know, I'm just asking?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I think I can answer that. When a city defaults on its indebtedness or any local government --

NORDALE: I'm not talking about local government, I just mean state debts.

HELLENTHAL: Well, on the state level, I can't answer.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: The full faith and credit of the state is explained on every bond issue, and that is a debt service that applies to all taxpayers -- income taxpayers, fish trap payers, and all licensed payers, and I don't think that we want to compel a registration of all property within the state, providing the legislature does not see fit to have a state property tax act just in order to have a tax roll so people can be qualified to vote as property owners in statewide elections. I think everybody should vote in a statewide election.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, the Chair might ask, if there is no objection, what is it actually your intention, to have this provision apply only to local governments, or subdivisions of the state government, or to the whole state?

JOHNSON: Well, I had intended it for general coverage, but largely based on the fact that right now in school districts and cities, bond elections are submitted, or referendums are submitted, only to those people whose names appear on the current tax roll, and that is done because they are the property owners who pay the taxes. Now if this amendment that I have in isn't the way to solve the problem, then I will withdraw it, but I don't think that Mr. Davis's amendment answers my objection, which is the same as Mr. Hinckel's that I think, unless we spell out some sort of provisions under which bond elections are to be held and do it in the constitution, there is too much chance for injustices and inequalities to creep in.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask that your amendment be withdrawn, or would you just --

JOHNSON: I ask that it be withdrawn.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered, and the amendment has been withdrawn. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I'm concerned about this statement here, "unless the debt be authorized by law". Mr. Nerland said that he thought that meant that a political subdivision could go ahead and bond itself just on the strength of its own ordinance, the idea being that its ordinance would be the law. But generally a political subdivision has only such powers as are delegated to it by the legislature. And "authorized by law" to me means that the legislature has authorized a particular city to indebt itself for a specified purpose. It seems to me that there are so many factors here that need studying and that inasmuch as Section 7 has been withheld for further study to be submitted later, I'd like to see Section 8 be held back by the Committee, and perhaps with a little consultation, Section 8 could be clarified too, along with Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher has been attempting to get on the floor.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I got an amendment for the old Section 9 on the table.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Amendment to Section 8? These sections have already become Sections 8, 9, 10, etc. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to Section 8.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, line 10, after the word 'majority', insert 'set by law' and strike 'voters' and substitute 'votes cast'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that his proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk read the amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: At this time the amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, I'd like this to be under consideration of the Finance Committee and several ideas, and we're all trying to work around the same idea. I would like to follow Mr. Ralph Rivers' suggestion and defer action until --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you ask that?

GRAY: Well, we already have an amendment on the floor, and if the Committee wishes to withdraw, I wish they would have the chance for that consideration and, if Mr. Kilcher could withdraw his amendment, I think under that consideration he could take his amendment up with the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, if the Committee should decide to withdraw this Section 8 for further consideration, I would like to have this amendment deferred to the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the request? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I object only for the moment to give notice of reconsideration on Mr. Fischer's amendment to Section 9, which is now Section 8.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, you voted --

V. RIVERS: I voted on the prevailing side.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers serves notice of reconsideration of his vote on the amendment of Mr. Fischer.

V. RIVERS: I now withdraw my objection to its being withdrawn for further committee study.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection then to having Section 8 withdrawn for further committee consideration? Hearing no objection then, the section is deferred until a later time. Are there amendments to Section 9? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, the Committee has an amendment which reads as follows: After the words "The State" add "and its political subdivisions thereof".

R. RIVERS: Without the "thereof", if you use the word "and", Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: That's correct. "...and its political subdivisions."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Nerland?

NERLAND: I move and request unanimous consent that that be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be adopted. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 9: after the word 'State' on line 18, insert 'and its political subdivisions'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? If not, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 9? Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I don't have an amendment, but I'm wondering -- it states here that the debts must be paid prior to the end of the next fiscal year. What happens to loans which the state makes and one which we now have which has four years to run. I mean, do we have any time up to four years to pay it, if it's a debt that we can't pay in one year?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney, perhaps the Chairman of the Finance Committee

NERLAND: I'm not sure that I understand just what debt you're referring to?

SWEENEY: At the present time we have a three-million dollar loan on the ESC and we have four years on that, and here we are, in Section 9, asking that it be paid up in one year.

NERLAND: Well, would you think that Section 15 might cover that -- Section 14, the last section.

SWEENEY: Well, Mr. Riley just whispered over here that this is money borrowed to meet appropriations, so I guess my example wouldn't fit in here, probably.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions, or are there other amendments to be offered to Section 9? Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Nerland, in Section 9, the first sentence, "The State and its political subdivisions may by law..." Do you have any objection to striking "by law" merely as being somewhat confusing?

NERLAND: No, I don't.

MCLAUGHLIN: I ask unanimous consent that that expression "by law" in line 18, Section 9, be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The two words "by law"?

MCLAUGHLIN: "...by law".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. McLaughlin?

MCLAUGHLIN: Rather than raise the issue, I withdraw and will take it up in Style and Drafting. I just wanted to get it cleaned up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I'm not going to offer an amendment, but just for the record, I'd like to have in there that I do not like to see any legislature, or any city council, or any governing body of any political subdivision borrow beyond the anticipated revenues of their term of office.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any further amendments to Section 9? Are there any amendments to Section 10?

BUCKALEW: I have an amendment to Section 9, but Mr. Fischer's amendment didn't take so I will have to redraw it, so could I reserve the right to present it tomorrow?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have it on your desk, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: It's on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It's never been presented yet.

BUCKALEW: Well, that's fine. I'll just wait for tomorrow.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 10? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, in Section 10 I have a Committee amendment. On page 4, on line 4, after the semicolon following "corporation" strike the rest of the section on lines 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, and substitute "or to special assessments". I move the adoption of the amendment and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland moves the adoption and asks unanimous consent. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, line 4, after the semicolon following 'corporation' strike the rest of the section on lines 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, and substitute 'or to special assessments'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Nerland's unanimous consent request? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 10? If not, are there amendments to Section 11? Are there amendments to Section 12? Section 13? Are there amendments to Section 13? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask the Chairman of the Committee if a certified public accountant is an independent of the executive under your proposal here? Is he in the position of what you might call a controller general? Might he be considered as a position of controller general, or just auditor?

NERLAND: I would say just auditor, it's not a permanent position, Mr. Gray. I could possibly be corrected on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, this conforms with the law that was passed at the last session, and this auditor works for the legislature; he audits the books of all the departments and is answerable to the governor and the legislature only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have a question in regard to Section 12. I noticed that here the governor and the board of the budget prepare the appropriations bill and submit the bill to the legislature along with another bill for any appropriations above that regular appropriation bill. I wondered where that practice was drawn from. May I ask the committee that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's Section 11. Mr. Nerland, could you answer that? Mr. Barr.

BARR: It was taken from several other constitutions. It says, that "The governor shall also submit a general appropriation bill to authorize all proposed expenditures." It doesn't say there that that will be the final appropriation bill. That is within the authority of the legislature, but it could be a suggested appropriation bill. He sets forth his ideas in that bill as to how much should be appropriated for each department. However, the finance committee and the ways and means committee could take his bill and work it over and submit that to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Sections 11, 12, or 13, or other amendments? Mr. Doogan.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, I'd like to move that the words on line 7, Section 13, "governor and the" be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Doogan?

DOOGAN: I move for the adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan moves for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the proposed motion?

KNIGHT: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And Mr. Knight seconds the motion.

DOOGAN: Mr. President, my purpose in doing that -- as I understand, this post auditor that the legislature employs here in the last few years is that he audits the books of the Territory, and as such, he is auditing the executive branch of the government for the legislature, and if that is the case, then I don't believe that he should be responsible to the governor at all; he should only be responsible to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, he is actually responsible to the legislature because the committee is your speaker of the house, chairman of the ways and means committee, chairman of the senate finance committee, and the president of the senate. The reason to report to the governor is just for information purposes for the governor, that's all. The committee itself is prescribed, the duties as prescribed by the legislature of this committee has complete control. It's just merely a matter of information that the report is given to the governor so that he knows what is going on in all the departments of the Territory, all the fiscal proceedings of the Territory have been reported to the governor, that's all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, is it the intention of the Committee, or has there been any thought given to the fact that the postauditor shall follow down the accounts of the new state, even to municipal level, and other levels wherever there is any state money expended in matching funds or any other fashion; that the postauditor is directly answerable to the legislature, and he shall go right on down to the financial disposition of those funds.

NOLAN: That is the procedure. Any place where the state has expended or appropriated any money, will come under his audit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, this also says, "It is the duty of the auditor to conduct such postaudits as may be prescribed by law." That means that the legislature could have him audit just the principal departments on a particular year, and maybe have separate audits on matching funds through the controls which they exercise over those matching funds, so the extent of it would depend upon the legislature. I think I rather favor Delegate Doogan's amendment because I see they give priority to the word "governor". They say, "He shall report to the governor and the legislature..." That conveys the wrong emphasis. We either got to reverse those or else carry out Mr. Doogan's amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I would have no objection to reversing it, but there can be no misunderstanding when the legislature appoints this man and says that he shall report to the legislature; he can't be under the control of the governor in that case; but it's important that he report to the governor, because the legislature is not sitting perhaps at the time he completes his report, and if we are going to have a strong executive, this executive must have all this financial information at his fingertips; therefore, it is important that he report to the governor on this audit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Doogan be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it, and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there any amendments to Section 13? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I got left behind on Section 12. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, if you have an amendment to Section 12, you may submit it. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, Section 12, line 25" -- it has already been stricken, Mr. Rivers. Something was substituted by the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair has been informed that we have with us in the gallery the Fairbanks Chapter of the American Association of University Women. We are happy to have you with us this evening. (Applause) Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask unanimous consent to revert to the introduction of committee proposals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith, we will revert to the introduction of committee proposals at this time.

SMITH: I would like to offer for the action by the Convention, Committee Proposal, No. 8/a introduced by the Committee on Resources, and I would like to ask that each delegate, that if they have the opportunity sometime this evening or tomorrow morning, to read the committee commentary, so that when we go into the article they will be as familiar as possible with it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk read Committee Proposal No. 8/a for the first time.

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 8/a, introduced by Committee on Resources, STATE LANDS AND NATURAL RESOURCES."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal has been referred to the Rules Committee for assignment for the calendar. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Has that been distributed?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has just been distributed.

SMITH: It has been distributed and anyone who does not have a copy of it can get it from the Sergeant at Arms.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Any delegate that needs a copy of Committee Proposal No. 8/a, inform the Sergeant at Arms. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have an amendment to offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, Section 12, line 25: insert the word 'unobligated' before the word 'appropriated'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Ralph Rivers?

R. RIVERS: I offer the amendment for adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

NORDALE: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale seconds the motion. Is there discussion on the proposed amendment? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I pointed out before that there is a slight difference between appropriations outstanding and those that are unobligated, because sometimes contracts have been made before the warrants have gone through the treasury, so if we say "unobligated appropriations outstanding" then we have clarified the matter beyond a doubt.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I can see the purpose in this; it is a good purpose, but it seems to me that there might be some abuse. If I were a department head and I had a million dollars to spend within a certain period, if it weren't obligated within a certain time, I would see that it was obligated before that time. Of course, I might spend a little more money than necessary for fear I wouldn't get a bigger appropriation the next time. I think this takes more thought than we have given it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, could I address a question to Mr. Barr?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. McNealy, you may.

MCNEALY: Then your thought, Mr. Barr, would be to strike the entire last sentence?

BARR: No, that is not correct.

MCNEALY: Well then, would you explain why putting in the word "unobligated", or by leaving out the word "unobligated", would that make the department head any more loath to release the appropriation without attempting to obligate it or get it outstanding?

BARR: If he spends 50 per cent of his appropriation, the appropriation would end at a certain period. Now I'll admit that he might do the same, he might try to get all these funds obligated within a certain time. But this is just, well, I might say, telling him what to do; pointing out how it should be done.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Barr, isn't this normally a legislative matter?

BARR: Yes, it is, but this makes it permanent. Some states at periodic intervals put in actual law saying that all funds left over from an appropriation should be returned to the treasury; and, I believe we have one. I'm not sure whether it passed or not, but I remember this was argued in the legislature, and it was pointed out that there was a balance from some of these appropriations that have been in special funds for years.

HELLENTHAL: The sentence says, "All appropriations outstanding at the end of a period of time specified by law," that is, the legislature, shall be void. Well, the legislature has to get on this process to specify the period of time. So as long as they have to get into it, why don't they go a little bit further and say, "Unless it is still outstanding at the end of this period, you've got to give it back."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: For once I have to agree with Ralph Rivers on this situation of adding a word in here, which does clarify the situation. Perhaps Mr. Barr doesn't understand the principle under which our fiscal operation of the Territory now functions. In other words, each quarter the department heads must come up to the preauditor, and he has to substantiate his quarterly demand for his withdrawal on the appropriation. Consequently, if there were monies additional left over that hadn't actually been budgeted out on the basis of his reporting and his demand for a budget on the legislature, some of those funds were not expended, it seems to me that it would be highly unlikely that he could go to the preauditor in the last quarter and substantiate the obligation of these funds that hadn't already been obligated. Consequently, I think that this is a good amendment here. I don't see how the situation could possibly arise which Mr. Barr says will arise under our new fiscal arrangement for the Territory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no".

MCNEES: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

DOOGAN: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order?

DOOGAN: You already stated the verdict.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair hadn't actually stated the verdict. The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

MCNEES: I'll withdraw the request for a roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there any other request for a roll call, other than the one made by Mr. McNees? If not, the "ayes" have it, and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 12? Are there amendments to Section 13? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that the words "governor" and "legislature" be interposed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You're moving, Mr. Kilcher, that those four words be deleted and in lieu thereof the words "legislature and the governor" be inserted?

KILCHER: Yes, sir, reversed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read --

NERLAND: The committee has no objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move for its adoption, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 7, Section 13, the words 'governor' and 'legislature' be reversed so that it will then read: 'and to report to the legislature and the governor'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? If not, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 13? If not, are there amendments to Section 14?

MCNEALY: Point of inquiry, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Section 14 here is -- I assume that there is no harm done to be in this section, however, it is generally carried either under the schedule or in the miscellaneous provisions in the constitution. Now that may be a matter for Style and Drafting, and if it is -- however, we in the Ordinance Committee will also have a similar provision to bring up before the miscellaneous provisions and we would like to have that also considered at that time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland, do you have anything to say to that?

NERLAND: Well, I'm sure I can speak for the Committee in saying that we would have no objection as to where it might appear; it's part of the last enabling act that it must appear.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It could be a matter for Style and Drafting. Are there other amendments? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I have a comment on that point. The only thing that came up in the Committee about keeping this particular paragraph there was brought out by one of the consultants who said that there might be debts owed to the Territory for a long period of time before they were cleaned up, and in that light, there might be some reason for keeping this particular section under the finance section rather than in the ordinance or transitory section of the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Because of the fact that we have two sections held in abeyance and also a notice of reconsideration on an amendment, the Chair would entertain a motion for adjournment at this time. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that the Convention stand adjourned until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any committee announcements to be made at this time? If not and if there are no objections, the Convention will stand adjourned until 9:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 17, 1956

FIFTY-SIXTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us this morning Reverend Orland Cary of the First Baptist Church. Reverend Cary will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND CARY: Our Father, we are grateful for this day and the opportunities that it presents to us. We are grateful that it has pleased Thee to give us a little part in the daily work that affects the people not only of this present time but in the generations that are to come. We pray, Lord, that as we plan our work that we may plan it wisely, that we may have the wisdom of God to direct us. We pray especially that Thy blessing shall be upon the men and women that are at work today in this Convention, shaping and forming the policies that shall be important in determining the lives of our children and those that shall come after us. These things we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll.)

CHIEF CLERK: Three absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present. The Convention will proceed with its regular order of business. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time?

DOOGAN: No report until after lunch.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The report will be held in abeyance. Are there reports of standing committees? Of select committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? Are there any communications from outside the Convention? If not, we are now down to our unfinished business which is -- Mr. Hilscher?

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I would like to ask the privilege of the floor for a moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hilscher.

(Mr. Hilscher spoke under personal privilege at this time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: We now have before us Committee Proposal No. 9. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, after conferring with the Chairman of the Rules Committee, it appears that the work on two sections, which has been held for further consideration, this proposal as well as some other committee work could well be accomplished at this time, so I will move and ask unanimous consent that we set a recess until 10:10.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Would it be possible to proceed with the reading of the next report and its explanation during this interval so that we can keep pushing forward?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The only thing, Mr. Hellenthal, there will be quite a number of delegates off the floor, not only from the Finance Committee, but also from the other committees. The two sections that are referred to, the Chair understands that the Committee has a rewrite, and perhaps this one recess might put all the committees into shape where we won't have to have many long recesses in the future, but it wouldn't be very well to have the full explanation where 8 or 10 of the various committee members are off the floor and then have to go through it again, probably when they came back on the floor. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, as an alternate, might it not be possible to read and explain the next section which is coming up? Just defer any action at all, at the minute, on the present Proposal No. 9, and then on the noon recess, let them work on their No. 9. Possibly we wouldn't lose any time at all of the Convention that way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Your Committee on Administration has several things that can be taken up and it would be a pleasure to have that time for us to get caught up on our administration report.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Is the motion to recess debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it isn't debatable but under the circumstances, it coming at this time that is unusual, the Chair felt that each delegate should know why the recess was being asked. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request that the Convention stand at recess for one hour? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, if there is a recess, the Committee on Style and Drafting will meet at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is a recess the Committee on Style and Drafting will meet at the rear of the gallery. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, the Committee on Resources will have a meeting in one of the committee rooms upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: How long is this recess going to be?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It will be called for one hour.

ROSSWOG: The Local Government Committee will meet at 10:00 a.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: All the available members of the Ordinance Committee will meet immediately upon recess, upstairs.

NERLAND: Mr. President, the Finance Committee will meet in the committee room upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, your Committee on Administration will meet immediately upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection then, the Convention will stand at recess until 10:10 a.m. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Doogan, do you have a report of the special Committee to read the journal?

DOOGAN: On the 49th day, January 10, the only correction I have is on page 11, fourth paragraph from the bottom, second line after "Section 6", insert "presented the previous day". I move and ask unanimous consent that the journal be approved as corrected.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you read the proposed correction once more, Mr. Doogan?

(Mr. Doogan read the correction again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Doogan asks unanimous consent that the journal of the 49th day be approved with the correction as suggested by the committee. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the journal for the 49th day is ordered approved as corrected by the Committee to read the journal. We have before us Committee Proposal No. 9, in second reading. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, the Committee has a proposal which has been mimeographed and is on the Clerk's desk that I would like to present at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed Committee amendment to Committee Proposal No. 9.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 2, strike lines 25 and 26 and insert in lieu thereof the following: 'Section 7. The proceeds of any state tax or license or part thereof shall not be allocated to any special purpose,'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Nerland?

NERLAND: I move for the adoption of this amendment and ask unanimous consent.

MCNEALY: I object for informational purposes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard, for informational purposes.

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You so moved, did you not?

NERLAND: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, the objection I made was only for purpose of inquiry about the use of the word "license". Would that, in effect, prevent the allocation of license money for, say for example, the game commission only?

WHITE: Mr. McNealy, you have to read further. The first two lines on the next page goes on to say, "...except where state participation in federal programs will thereby be denied." Now in the case of the Dingell-Johnson or Pittman-Robinson federal bills which allocate to the various states funds for the uses set forth in those bills, provided the state earmarks in turn certain licensed revenues, would come under the meaning of that qualification. Does that answer your question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: This probably is looking ahead too far, but in the event that the federal program were discontinued, then this licensed money could no longer be allocated for these special purposes?

WHITE: That is correct.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I'll withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, this being a new amendment, I would like the privilege of asking a question on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: There has been some talk, in fact I think presently in the Territory it is done, that a portion of the proceeds received from a given tax is refunded or kept by the person who collects the tax for the purpose of defraying the cost of administration and collecting the tax. There has been some consideration given to doing the same thing with the net income tax. It looks to me as if this would prohibit the utilization of any of the proceeds of the tax for defraying part of the cost of collecting that tax if the legislature so chose to make provisions therefor. Was that considered?

WHITTE: I'm not sure if I understand your question, but if I do, it seems clear to me that the cost of collecting any tax is deducted before you arrive at the proceeds of the tax. The proceeds would then be more or less a net after the cost.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to ask a question if I may, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Smith, you may ask your question.

SMITH: Was it the Committee intention that this wording should be read in conjunction with the last sentence of this section, also?

WHITE: The last sentence of the section remains in the section by a majority vote of the Committee.

SMITH: And the same answer would be made here as was made to Mr. McNealy's question? I simply want this for clarification in the record.

WHITE: Now, this is a little different. The last sentence provides for the continuation at the will of the legislature.

"Any allocation for special purpose" or, in other words, earmarking that now exists. That is not dependent on any federal programs.

SMITH: But the legislature still would be able to make provisions where any allocation that now exists, that allocation could be continued. Is that correct?

WHITE: Under this sentence any present allocation could be continued or discontinued at the will of the legislature.

SMITH: That answers my question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I was going to ask Mr. White if this conflicts with some of the proposals that have been brought before the delegates in regard to a special commission on wildlife, where it is their proposal that funds be set aside solely for the operation of that department.

WHITE: This does conflict with the -- I don't have that proposal in front of me -- suggestions made in that proposal, in that this limits earmarking of such licenses in the case where it is necessary to participate in federal programs, where as I understand their suggestion, they want all licenses, fees, and other revenues deriving from the fish and game field, to be earmarked whether or not it is necessary to participate in federal programs. So this is at variance with that proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President. Mr. White are you answering questions on this one?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Davis, you may ask Mr. White a question.

DAVIS: I read the memorandum that was distributed yesterday and one of the suggestions was that this be broadened to allow setting aside special funds for sinking funds for paying bonds and that sort of thing. Now I wonder if you have taken care of that with the language you have used here. Supposing the state should bond. It appears to me on the language that you have used, you have prevented setting up a sinking fund to pay the bonds. Am I wrong on that?

WHITE: Mr. President. In answer to your question, Mr. Davis, this suggested committee change came about because under the old language where it said, "All revenues shall be deposited without allocation..." we ran into a situation where we had listed seven exceptions that we were afraid we were going to have to make. By going to the tax itself and saying that the tax shall not be earmarked, we eliminated all seven of those exceptions. Now in this case the sinking funds for bonds, all this prohibits is the earmarking of any special tax to that sinking fund. You could still set up a sinking fund from the general fund or the state treasury.

DAVIS: That answers my question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I would like to ask you a question, too, Mr. White. I notice under the language of this section, the federal funds that are available for the benefit of game and sports fish are provided for under the qualification that federal programs are available. Now as commercial fishermen, they have, to my knowledge, no federal funds set up so that it will not be possible to allocate the commercial fishing licenses to a program of research or help for the commercial fisheries. I don't think I will make too much of an issue of this. It's going to throw the only hope for finances for the rehabilitation and for the necessary research for the commercial fisheries in the hope that we can get some money out of the general fund. Now I want that clear in the record, that this is in a way discriminatory against the commercial fisheries and they are in trouble as everyone knows.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. Emberg, the Committee's idea here is to prevent earmarking for anybody except in the case outlined where state participation in federal programs would thereby be denied. That is something over which we have no control and we would further compromise as set forth in the second paragraph, "The existing earmarked funds will be allowed to remain at the will of the legislature." I think I can speak for the majority of the Committee in saying that you can go on making exceptions to this for deserving groups ad infinitum. But the Committee feels that if you accept the principle of not earmarking, it puts everyone in the same position and that the legislature will then be in the position being able to decide each case on its merits. If you go the other route and allow for earmarking or start drawing up all the exceptions that everybody would want to have drawn up, you are then back to the situation that most states now find themselves in, where an ever-increasing percentage of their revenues are earmarked for special purposes and an ever-decreasing amount is available to the general fund. To arrive at the position Texas is in, for example, where 90 per cent of all their funds are earmarked and the legislature has only 10 per cent left to work with, and the further disadvantage is the fact that as these earmarked funds get set up and get embedded in your economy, boards to administer them get set up and the legislature loses control that it should have over the workings of the state government. So the Committee would suggest that the Convention accept the idea of preventing earmarking or reject it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, may I add to that a little?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Barr.

BARR: On this list I have, there are nine presently earmarked funds. Most of them bring in very small amounts, but the commercial fishing license is now earmarked. Perhaps Mr. Nolan could tell more about that but as I remember, it was 60 per cent that goes toward sick and disabled fishermen's fund. Is that right, Mr. Nolan?

NOLAN: That is just the fisherman's license that he pays individually.

BARR: Yes, the commercial fishermen's licenses.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, I appeared before the Committee on this and heard the discussions pro and con. Now we have had a very brief discussion on the merits of earmarking as against the merits of earmarking and I stated that I did not have any particular objection to the matter of earmarking taxes. The question of earmarking licenses has raised a considerable question in my mind. I do know this, from when I served in the legislature, that general funds which have to be appropriated for certain special purposes every session, often suffer in interest of the general operating expenses of the government. I do know that unless you have had a fair share of earmarked funds for special certain purposes, particularly public works and construction works and improvements, that you often times do not get them. Now the example of Texas has been cited here as one having a lot of earmarked funds. I might also say that they probably have some difficulty in the matter of what is left for their general appropriations. I might also say that in driving through Texas they have probably the highest degree of physical development in the matter of public buildings -- school houses, roads, airfields -- than any other state in the union. So there are advantages as against disadvantages. Now I got the impression that some members of the Committee were very strongly against earmarking and, in the general sense, I also have been that way. However, including of licenses here in the constitution as an exclusion from the earmarking it, seems to me to be just a little bit too broad. Getting back to matters of personal interest, at the present time I sit on a board which is the Engineers' and Architects' Board which the licenses for that particular service, part of them go into the board fund and part of them go into the general fund. I can readily see where other groups such as the fish and wildlife group in the matter of game and fish licenses and similar professional groups and others who pay a certain fee for just their own supervision and for their own particular purpose, might be somewhat seriously pampered by this clause "or licenses", but my thought was that we would hear from some member of the Committee who had strong convictions on this point and a fairly broad argument and discussion as to for or against the merits of earmarking both the taxes and licenses.

I am still not entirely convinced in my own mind that we should include licenses there from what we have heard. I do want to say that in the Territory in the past in order to avoid some difficulties in regard to a tax clause in the Organic Act, that we have called certain taxes by the name "license" just for the purpose of getting around or rather not having to comply with the terminology of the Organic Act. I can see here that perhaps in establishing the fish and wildlife service they might issue to each person, instead of a license, a certificate of convenience; charge them for that service and cover that into a fund. It might then avoid the term "license". In the same breath I would still like to hear from some of the strong proponents of this on the Committee as to their research in the matter of why their convictions are so strong and what the experience has been in more states than just the State of Texas. I would like the pro and con to everything and the experience of Texas shows that while they have a problem in one respect they have benefited in another and I think the members of the Committee that are convinced on this must have some strong arguments and I would like to hear them before making up my mind.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. King.

KING: In the event, as I understand it, in the repeal of the Pittman-Robinson Act and the Dingell-Johnson bill, which would provide these funds for the purpose as stated by Mr. Emberg for research not only in commercial fishing but for fish and game and covers the whole field, in case that was repealed this would then say that that license fee that we pay for our hunting and fishing licenses could not be earmarked for the use as intended now under the present law.

WHITE: That is correct. In the event the federal laws were repealed and it came under the meaning of this sentence, then the companion earmarked funds in the State of Alaska would no longer be earmarked.

KING: I wanted to be clear on that point.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. White a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

GRAY: There is nothing in this article to preclude the legislature from appropriating to the particular body that amount of money that they have collected through the licenses. In their appropriation they could use these figures to appropriate that amount of money to the respective bodies.

WHITE: That is absolutely right, Mr. Gray. You appropriate the exact amount that has been earmarked in previous years, year after year after year, it is just an automatic appropriation.

GRAY: That is the way I see it. It doesn't earmark it but the talking point that these organizations have for the use of this money that is rightfully theirs, why, they haven't been precluded, they just have to sell their viewpoint to the legislature and if they need the money, why they probably could get it if they could talk them into it.

WHITE: They have to sell their viewpoint along with everybody else. If I may while I am on my feet, Mr. Rivers, I am sure other Committee members could probably answer your question better than I, but I think in your discussion you pointed out one of the reasons why the Committee feels that licenses should be included in this section, because when you say that in the past, revenues have been defined as licenses to avoid the word "tax", you see what could happen if you deleted the word "license" from this section. Instead of imposing a tax you would impose a license which would then not come under the earmarking restrictions, so that that would be an out, a way around earmarking just as it has been a way around a uniformity clause, or anything else in the past. And, also, I would like to ask you in the case of the board upon which you sit, if it isn't the case where the funds that you retain that do not go into the general fund, aren't in the nature of expenses which you would be able to retain anyhow?

V. RIVERS: That is correct, and all money that is above expenses do go back into the general fund if there is any left over. I would like to ask Mr. White a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

V. RIVERS: Do you think by issuing a hunting certificate or a fishing permit, or something like that, that would then have gotten out from under the term "license"? I'm thinking in terms of, again, the idea that the funds derived from some special purpose might be brought out from under the term "license".

WHITE: I wouldn't want to qualify as a legal expert on the definition of words, possibly the term means something "license" does not.

V. RIVERS: What is your thinking then -- that permits and things of that nature for service charges would be under the term "license"?

WHITE: I'll defer to Miss Awes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I think if this constitution limitation is adopted and then instead of passing taxes or licenses, the legislature started passing fishing permits and that sort of thing, I think the odds are all in favor of the court saying these are all licenses in fact, and bringing them within the restrictions of this section. I would at this time, if I may, like to make a few comments to Mr. Rivers' remarks of a minute ago. I am not one of those strong proponents who can just set forth a case one way or the other. I agree with Mr. Rivers that there are arguments on both sides. However, I think I might give a few indications of the Committee thinking at the time we adopted this proposal. The latest figures that we had before us, about 27 per cent of the funds of Alaska were earmarked and with the figure 27 per cent, I think Alaska was right among the lowest ranking with the states in the matter of earmarking. Then the states earmarked progressively more. Texas is the extreme example with 90 per cent. I think the majority of the states earmarked from around 50 per cent up to 75 per cent of their funds. I believe that it is Colorado or one of the Western states that ranks next to Texas with about 80 or 85 per cent earmarked. In theory I think that earmarking is bad; from an accounting standpoint it is bad. It is inefficient, undoubtedly, because it deprives the legislature of that adaptability that you get when you take a certain amount of money with no strings attached and allocate it without limitations. I think inefficiency is one of the big arguments against earmarking. I think the other one is that eventually you do get so many funds earmarked that the legislature just does not have the money to work with for current operating expenses. The chief arguments that were brought before us in the matter of allowing earmarking were, I think two: the one that Mr. Rivers brought out that certain things like capital improvements are more apt to be taken care of if you allow earmarking; and the other argument that is often given is that it is easier to pass along for a new tax if you allow earmarking. An automobile driver is more willing to pay an extra gasoline tax if he thinks he is going to have better roads as a result. The fisherman is more apt to pay a larger license tax without complaining if he thinks he is going to have improved harbors or retirement fund for his group. I think those are the main arguments for earmarking. The Committee felt, though, after seeing the extent to which earmarking is growing in the states and the impossibility of doing away with earmarking once you get it, that the advantage is weighed in favor of limiting earmarking and that is the reason that we adopted the provision that we did.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I am a little bit troubled by that statement that Mr. Gray made and which Mr. White said was correct, that there was nothing to prevent the legislature from appropriating the amount that did come in from a specific purpose to that specific purpose. It seems to me that that is certainly poor compliance with the budgeting section of this same finance article and just because $50,000 or $60,000 comes in from some specific fund into some specific tax or license, let us say, I cannot think that it would be very sound practice for the legislature, without any reference whatever to the budget and the needs of that particular department, say we are going to turn that entire amount over to that particular department. It seems to me that it would completely nullify the benefits of a budgeting report, and as I understand the Finance Department which was recently created by our Territorial legislature and which I assume we will have a similar department under statehood, does go to considerable trouble to prepare a budget covering every function of government and if the legislature was in no sense bound by that and can just sit down and turned an entire fund to a particular activity, it seems to me that it is in conflict with your own provision covering the budget in this very proposal that you have produced.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: Mr. President, I just want to say very briefly here that I was in the minority when this question was being discussed in the Committee and I foresaw that it was going to be very controversial when it hit the floor, and my anticipation was correct. I do know that the earmarking of funds can be, perhaps, overdone as some of the experts have told us, and on our staff papers we read of such conditions. However, I think there are some benefits derived from such a program. In the Committee I used the argument of building of school houses which you get the funds from a cigarette tax. I can tell you of at least three that are now under construction from that setup which is a very good thing. Also, on the gas tax, and I understand in your area up here in some small communities it has been made possible to build little airstrips which is very good as I can see now for this particular section of Alaska. Down in our area, we require floats, and in some cases little strips of roads. So there are two advantages there. Now I do not say that we should go overboard and earmark all the revenue that we take in for the Territory but I think we are going to have to realize there is some good derived from such a program. Now I want to stick to the record on the fisheries benefit also. For years an attempt was made in the legislature in the Territory to bring, down documented boats under the Marine Act which entitles them to hospitalization. It was impossible to do that for the simple reason that they were undocumented and there were several attempts made to create some beneficial program for them, particularly the trollers could be taken care of like the men that work on the larger boats, and I think finally the compromise was the earmarking of this so-called fisheries tax. Now there is legal friction there also, but we have been told in the past that the fisheries tax is not exactly a tax, it is a license fee. In fact, that argument has been presented in defense of the fish trap revenue, etc. For that reason I was satisfied with the language here. I figure that the compromise, that the allocations that are now in existence would be retained and this amendment here takes in the license and it seems to me that it should satisfy our trollers, etc., inasmuch as there is a question about interpretation of the meaning on whether it is tax or license fee. But I do think this amendment is all right and it will take care of the three major existing earmarked benefits as I see it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I want to go along with Delegate Rivers here and I am glad to know that there is a minority report on this Committee. Now I live out in Spenard and we pay lots of taxes, gas tax, and they are happy dollars going in there because we are going to get roads out there, we hope. We have happy dollars in that treasury because it is earmarked for roads and happy dollars are the best kind of dollars and there will be more dollars in there. I am going to go along on a kind of ballot deal. I would like to see half of our funds earmarked, not more than half and I hope that our taxes go to build roads. Am I correct on that or not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, point of order. Mr. Marston, as the committee proposal stands, even if you adopt the amendment that is before us now, the funds that are currently earmarked would remain in existence. The tobacco tax for school construction, the motor fuel tax of which you are speaking, would remain in existence. This committee proposal, as it stands, even with the amendment before us, does not seek to wipe out those earmarked funds.

MARSTON: That is what I wanted to make sure. I am very happy about that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, in reference to the remarks of Delegate Hermann on the legislature appropriating a like amount for that particular department, it is true there is nothing to prevent the legislature from appropriating a like amount, there is nothing to prevent the legislature from wiping out the whole budget, there is nothing to prevent them from wiping out the whole Finance Department, and going back to an auditor and a treasurer as we had before, but they always consider the budget before making any appropriations. When the final appropriation bill comes out it is a compromise between the requests of all the different departments. I am sure they would never appropriate a large amount for a certain department if it were more needed in some other department. They always take that into account, and in regard to the remark made by Delegate Marston, I have always fought for roads and airports especially, and also for schools and I agree with him, we just could not get a hold of too much money for those purposes, but I have also noticed that Delegate Marston has also fought for the Native people in Alaska and we don't have money to go around for everything and one of the great needs of the Native people is tuberculosis control, and aid to the blind, and new schools, as well as roads, etc. The health program demands an immense amount of money so, therefore, the legislature should have a fair-size sum in the general fund subject to appropriation for those purposes. I am afraid if we had 50 per cent of our funds earmarked, we would have practically nothing left for our health program and things of that sort.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I wish to offer an amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy, you may offer your proposed amendment to the amendment. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to the amendment. But before the Chief Clerk proceeds, the Chair would like to ask that if it is necessary for the delegates to communicate with each other while we are in session, it would be appreciated by many of the other delegates if you would not speak aloud at the time you communicate to each other while we are in session. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike the words 'or licenses' in the first line of the amendment."

MCNEALY: I move the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy moves the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment.

JOHNSON: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson seconds the motion. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: This matter has been pretty well discussed and I don't think this will take up much time of the body here. The only purpose for offering this is that we have the word here, which I have checked on, also, that about 27 per cent of the funds are now earmarked in the Territory and I believe that the license fees are not a big part of the income of the Territory as compared with the collection of the state taxes, and I am speaking on this only from one point, thinking of the Game Commission and the fishing industry, the sports end of it as well as the commercial, and thinking that if the next Congress or any Congress in the future would withdraw this federal program, then it means that the funds from licenses will be no longer earmarked and I would like to go along with the thinking that we have heard from members, at least at the public hearing that was held here in Fairbanks, from the Tanana Valley Sportsmen Association where I think they spoke, in one respect, for all the sportsmen that none of us who like to hunt and fish would object to paying $25 or even $50 a year for a license if we knew those funds were earmarked for a special purpose, and I am afraid to trust -- in one point, the legislature may appropriate the amount of funds that would be required; on the other hand, the legislature might not acquire the amount of funds and in view of the fact that my opinion that the majority of licenses are already earmarked, could not affect this amendment too much; and the other is that licenses are a small amount of the total income of the state. As I say, there may be others, but speaking from my point of view, the sport fishing and hunting and the commercial fishing, I believe this should be struck out and the proposed amendment to the amendment should be adopted so that in the future we are not going to have difficulty in supporting these particular branches.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. White?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Johnson, you may ask your question.

JOHNSON: I believe that you stated, Mr. White, that the present funds which were earmarked would remain in that category even though this committee amendment should pass. Is that correct?

WHITE: At the will of the legislature.

JOHNSON: Well now, that was the point I was getting at. The language used on page 3, lines 2 and 3 of this section says that, "This provision shall not prohibit the continuance of any allocation..." Is that a prohibition against the legislature from doing away with those earmarked funds?

WHITE: No, Mr. Johnson, we worded that so as to mean that the legislature could eliminate earmarking if they so desired but in the absence of any such action those earmarked funds would remain in existence.

JOHNSON: Then as a matter of fact there is no protection for the present earmarked funds? It is the will of the legislature?

WHITE: As a matter of fact, there is none. That is my understanding.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to know if the present business license fees and liquor license fees and things like that are presently refunded to cities, communities, what their status would be under this arrangement?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. Hinckel, they are earmarked at the present time and, therefore, that would continue. While I'm on my feet, I would like to mention the amount of license fees at the present time. In the 1954-55 fiscal year, the total tax coming in was $15,700,000; the amount of license fees including business licenses was approximately $2,100,000. Two million out of $15,000,000, I would say is a fair-sized amount. The greatest portion of that is earmarked right now, but there might be further licenses later on and that is what we would like to prevent earmarking on.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, after listening to all of this, I wonder, or I might ask the Committee this, has the discussion been such in Committee, that an earmarked fund, after reaching a certain percentage of surplus, anything over that percentage of surplus could then be reverted to the treasury so that an earmarked fund could never run away with itself such as the public school fund in Texas. I could go just a little bit further, a percentage, say possibly 50 per cent of the annual operating budget of that particular earmarked fund is used for, anything over 50 per cent surplus could be reverted to the treasury.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. Cooper, in our present law there is a limit set on the amount that shall be used for administrative purposes. There is no limit in the law, or in this provision, that limits the amount to be used for construction. I understand in some states their building funds just get fat, bigger than the general fund sometimes, but that would never be the case in Alaska. You have been around and you know how many roads we need. Five years ago it was quoted to me that it takes $20,000 to build one mile of dirt road, not surface, and we have millions of square miles here. We have so many schools that are needed at the present time. Some villages are without any buildings and more than one-half of the buildings they have in the outlying districts are falling down right now and need replacing. I don't think that within the next 50 or 60 years we will ever get too much money for roads or school construction.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: I would, if I may, like to make a little further comment on Mr. Johnson's question. He asked if, under this section, the legislature would still have the authority to abolish existing earmarked funds if they wished to do so, and that question was correctly answered. However, the reason for this section is that earmarking is one of those things that grows and grows and never dies and the earmarked funds that we have now have no constitutional protection but I think they are almost killed off as a practical matter. I would like to make a few more comments on the amendment that is now before us. I think the question is much more fundamental, much more basic than just the question of whether we will strike "or licenses". The question goes right to the heart of the matter. Do we want earmarking or do we not? Once you strike "licenses" and then you make this exception and that exception, and what it really amounts to is an admission that you really don't want to do away with earmarking. When this matter was discussed in Committee, I said that as long as we could limit earmarking I was for it, but as soon as there were exceptions being made, then I thought that we should show we wanted to continue earmarking and that a motion should be made to just strike the section and leave matters as they are now, and I still believe that is so. As soon as exceptions are made to this section, then I think the section should be stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have a question on this amendment. You have the two categories of earmarking that may continue. I will address this question to Mr. White. One is, those presently in existence and the other is, where prohibiting earmarking will deprive us of participating in a federal program which requires earmarking. Does the sports fishing and hunting license earmarking that exists now, would that be regarded as one of the things that is presently allocated and which would carry over, even if the federal government drops its matching requirements?

WHITE: Mr. Rivers, it is my understanding that those revenues are not now earmarked because we do not participate in the federal programs concerned. That is, by the way, one of the good arguments for statehood because if my understand is correct, it would entitle us to something in the nature of $600,000 annually under those two acts, but those revenues on licenses are not now earmarked.

R. RIVERS: The federal government at the present time does require earmarking from the states, but they might carry out a program in the future whereby they will make an offer to match funds with the states but without requiring earmarking. In a case like that the legislature would have to do the matching without the earmarking. Is that right?

WHITE: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan has been attempting to get the floor.

NOLAN: For those that are worried about the legislature not taking care of the sports fishermen and the game license, when the legislature first decided to go into the planting of trout streams, sports fishing, etc., they appropriated a sum, I think it was $50,000 and I think the Territory only took in about $20,000. We have gradually increased that amount every year to more than what we were taking in and this biennium we will just about reach what the legislature has appropriated. The legislature has always been very generous on any of these items that come before it and I doubt if at any time, from my experience in it, that any of these items would be decreased and as far as Mrs. Hermann's objection, I think it would be a very very unusual exception rather than the rule, but the procedure is there in case the federal earmarking was dropped, the legislature would still have the right to appropriate, which was a very good provision, I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I am not at all satisfied that a clear distinction has been made here this morning between "tax" and "license" and I am not going to do it on an ad lib basis. I have no doubt that Mr. Barr's figures probably come from the Tax Commissioner's office or some equally reliable source but I am not sure that even that segregation would satisfy a legal distinction between a "tax" and a "license". Because of that I am opposed to the amendment to the amendment and only because I feel that it is extremely remote that the federal government will ever change fundamentally the provisions which we now know as the Dingell-Johnson and Pittman-Robinson measures.

I think that unless we are absolutely clear in our minds as to the distinction between a "license" and a "tax" that we may well endanger these two programs which the sportsmen across the nation enjoy by adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I wanted to speak on the same matter in the matter of extinction but in an opposite direction. In the past the Organic Act has said that we would, in order to pass certain types of taxes, have to call them "licenses" but there has been no close supervision of the terminology. It is my opinion that if we eliminate the word "license" that under the strong executive, with the Territorial governor and the Territorial attorney general, that they would make every effort to confine what was truly a tax to the tax category and what was a license to the license category even though they had to go into the courts to do so, and it is also my opinion that under that particular terminology of tax without the use of the word "license" that some of the existing acts such as the business license tax which is both license and tax would come in under the terminology "tax" and not "license" and I think the figures that Mr. Barr quoted would be materially altered downward in regard to what were actually licenses. For that reason I support the amendment, that the matter of the interpretation of the word "tax" could not be evaded by the mere mention of a license as it has been in the past, because the people of the state and the administration charged with the responsibility would be sure to make the distinction clear either by interpretations of the attorney general or by court decision.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I know of no provision of the Organic Act that permitted, encouraged, or made desirable the practice of calling black, white. An imposition is either a license or a tax. The courts decide which it is. No legislature anywhere can call a tax, a license, and avoid constitutional provisions relating to taxes, and by the same token, no legislature anywhere can call a license, a tax, and avoid the constitutional provisions regulating licenses. I cannot follow this argument, apparently from history. It is true certain people do try to call black, white, but they don't get away with it very long.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I am opposed to Delegate McNealy's proposed amendment. I think the word "license" will be read here by context to mean "revenue raising license". You have got the word "license" in our terminology in Alaska, in our taxation by Congressional Act of 1899 when it first levied taxes on certain occupations doing business in Alaska, and throughout that ever since we have levied our revenue raising measures when based upon occupations, called them licenses but they are taxes and I think the only thing in this that makes any doubt about it is that the Committee didn't put "revenue raising" before the word "license" but I believe the courts would construe this "license" to mean "revenue raising license" and it should be kept in the amendment as proposed by the Committee.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as proposed by Mr. McNealy be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Roll call, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 10 - Emberg, H. Fischer, Johnson, King, Laws, McNealy, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith.

Nays: 44 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 1 - Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 10 yeas, 44 nays, and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The "nays" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption. We have before us the original amendment. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I wonder if we could have a short recess before we come to the vote on this matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for three minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have the committee amendment before us at this time. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?" The Secretary will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 2, strike lines 25 and 26 and insert in lieu thereof the following: 'Section 7. The proceeds of any state tax or license or part thereof shall not be allocated to any special purpose, '."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is. "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 47 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Doogan, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 7 - Cooper, Davis, Emberg, King, Laws, McNealy, Sweeney.

Absent: 1 - Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 47 yeas, 7 nays and 1 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson has an amendment to Section 7. The Chief Clerk may please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, lines 2 and 3, strike the words 'prohibit the continuance of' and insert the words 'apply to'.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves the adoption of the amendment, Mr. Taylor seconds the motion. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read that sentence as it would appear if the proposed amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "This provision shall not apply to any allocation for special purposes existing upon the date of ratification of this constitution by the people of Alaska."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I would like to speak briefly in favor of that amendment. I have in mind that the legislature might reorganize the road program and repeal existing laws and re-enact a new program. If you retain the present language which says "shall not prohibit the continuance of" and if a legislature in reorganizing something happened to repeal the existing law and then tried to re-enact it, why then you have an argument as to whether you had to stick with that old law forever or whether they could re-enact something like that, and so I think Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment clears that up.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I am very much in favor of this amendment to that particular section, and I happen to be the author of the original tobacco tax and when I see the good that was done in regard to the school system, which is in a very rundown condition, and it is continuing to be of such use to them, I felt it should be a protection, this is a protection given to this for the roads and given to the schools. I think it should be retained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Of course I am against the amendment because I think it just freezes it completely and I think that in the future there might be a need for a change, and therefore as I say, I am against the amendment. My recollection of this tobacco tax, I thought Steve McCutcheon was the author of that. (Laughter)

TAYLOR: I was the author of it in 1945. Mr. McCutcheon raised the tax.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: May I ask Mr. Johnson a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question.

WHITE: Could this change, if adopted, be interpreted to mean that the present allocations for special purposes would be retained?

JOHNSON: Yes.

WHITE: It could not be discontinued?

JOHNSON: That is correct.

WHITE: Your intent in offering this amendment then, is slightly different than Mr. Rivers' reason for supporting it?

JOHNSON: Well, it includes Mr. Rivers' reasons, but it is a little broader.

WHITE: I would like to have you explain if you would, how the words "apply to" in place of "not prohibit" accomplishes what Mr. Rivers wants.

JOHNSON: Well, perhaps, Mr. Rivers can explain that better than I can.

WHITE: I should have addressed that part of my question to him.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers, would you care to answer that?

R. RIVERS: "Shall not prohibit the continuance of" means that you could stick to an existing law as long as you could manage to do so. If you wanted to repeal the existing legislation and rewrite a new program, then you are getting into the subject of re-enactment. Then somebody would say, "That's not a 'continuance of', you have already killed that one." You are not continuing any more and under the prohibition you may not re-enact it.

WHITE: I was wondering, Mr. Rivers, then if you should get the word "continuance" to accomplish your purpose, rather than inserting the words "apply to".

R. RIVERS: No. It is a continuance factor that I am talking about, but if you say "shall not prohibit continuance", when you strike out the word "continuance" then you say "shall not prohibit" as to programs already in existence, then you have arrived at the same thing by the same words. I don't concur with Mr. Johnson that this would freeze present earmarking. I think if you don't put any particular prohibition in the constitution, the whole subject is in the hands of the legislature. They wouldn't be prohibited under Mr. Johnson's amendment from repealing some of our existing earmarkings, but they would not be prohibited from later reinstating them as I understand it, Mr. Johnson.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the sentence as it would appear, once more, if this amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "This provision shall not apply to any allocation for special purposes existing upon the date of ratification of this constitution by the people of Alaska."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Where did we lose the words "continuance of"?

CHIEF CLERK: "Prohibit the continuance of" are the words that he wanted stricken.

JOHNSON: My amendment eliminated those words. "Prohibits the continuance of", those words are stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair just wanted to be certain that that was the intent.

JOHNSON: You then insert in lieu thereof "apply to".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: May I ask Mr. Johnson a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

NORDALE: Mr. Johnson, would your amendment mean that, say 50 years from now, if the legislature was saddled with some earmarked fund, they could do nothing about it?

JOHNSON: Without an amendment to the constitution, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. Johnson, is it your intent that a motor fuel tax could never be reduced? Is that the intent of the amendment? I don't quite follow that.

JOHNSON: No, I don't believe that is the intent of the amendment at all. It simply means that the motor fuel tax money cannot be used for any other purpose than what it is now used for, to build the road that Colonel Marston was talking about, small boat harbors, and small airfields. The amount of the tax has nothing to do with earmarking.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, as far as I am concerned it appears to me that the legislature set up these earmarkings in the first place. They are very desirable now and I am particularly interested in the tobacco tax which has done a lot of good, but I can't say that 5, 10, or 20 years or any number of years hereafter that the earmarking may be desirable. For that reason I don't like to freeze them as they now are. I think the words ought to stay something as they are now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, it seems to me that the changing of this to "apply to" would be an invitation in the next few legislatures before statehood to jump in and earmark just as many funds as they could so that they would remain frozen. It seems to me that that would be a bad feature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: How would royalties, for instance, on the production of oil be regarded under this provision? Would they be considered taxes or licenses?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chairman of the Committee have the answer for that question or anyone on the Committee? Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: Mr. President, I would imagine they would just go right into the general fund.

STEWART: I was thinking if they were earmarked until the end of this, that we can see the very, very large revenues deriving from oil lands. If they were earmarking them, for instance for schools even, it might be that the revenue from those lands would amount to millions and millions a year, far beyond even our requirements for schools.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan.

NOLAN: They wouldn't be earmarked because they are not under any existing law now, the earmarking of them, so this section would not apply to it. It would go into the general fund.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I want to say that in my opinion, the words "apply to" would be better than the present wording because I think if the provisions of this section did not apply to allocations already in existence when the constitution was adopted, then the legislature could raise, lower, eliminate, replace any of the ones that they might have, at the time they might see the need. I believe the words "apply to" wouldn't give a great deal more flexibility to the operation of existing ones than the raising, lowering, eliminating or replacing of them, than would the present wording. Therefore, I favor the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I challenge the legal conclusion that this would freeze existing earmarking. I have tried to make it clear --

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I think Mr. Ralph Rivers has spoken once on this already.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order is well taken. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I am not especially satisfied that this language does allow range within which to work as has been suggested and if it will interest anyone, I would suggest a five-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us Mr. Johnson's proposed amendment to Section 7. The Convention will come to order. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, before I can vote on this, I would like to hear a little more of the decision on this. I don't know exactly how to vote. If these words "apply to" mean that everything is frozen then I am not in favor of it. And I understood the recess was a matter of getting a little more clarification and I would like to hear that before we vote on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Before any name has answered to the roll call, he is in order if anyone can answer or wishes to answer. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: I asked the maker of the amendment and he said this would guarantee the road in Spenard and that is what I want to see built. I'd like to see that road built. We have raised the money, we have paid for it, it isn't built yet and we want that money to build that road. If it will do that I am going to vote that amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I am opposed to the amendment. Alaska has a potential of such magnitude that its future cannot be reasonably predicted by anyone. I should hate very much to see something go into the constitution that froze all of these appropriations that are now earmarked to the same purpose in perpetuity because I very strongly feel that some of them are not going to be necessary as earmarked funds for too long a period of time and I think the amendment should be defeated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, I think I can speak for at least the majority of the Committee, perhaps the whole Committee, but we would oppose this amendment because it was the intention of the Committee that the present allocated earmarked funds be allowed until such a time as they might be removed from the books but it was not our intention that they be removed and then put back in again at some later date, so we would oppose that and any other change of wording that would allow that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I hadn't intended to get into this act but I am afraid I shall have to say a little something about it. I am not opposed to earmarked funds, particularly when it involves a matter of schools and matter of roads. I served on the Board of Road Commissioners for quite some time until my sudden demise in the last legislature. However, during that period of service I found out the value of having an earmarked fund for the purpose of building roads, small airports, airfields, and small boat harbors. We have seen many instances in the past when before this earmarked fund was established, back in 1945 or 1946, I know before that many times the legislature would appropriate large sums of money for roads and then in the process of adopting other measures that required specific appropriation, they would make the raid on the road fund because that seemed to be the best way of doing it and I can never imagine when Alaska will get so big that it will not need roads. Mrs. Hermann seems to think that at some time when roads will be of no consequence, but that to me is inconceivable.

HERMANN: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. Johnson is not sticking to the amendment at all in this regard. He is talking about keeping a fund for roads and that isn't what it says at all, and I didn't say anything about roads.

JOHNSON: Well, it is an earmarked fund, so let me put it that way. But I do believe that in this manner there can be no question but if this amendment is adopted that the legislature will not be permitted to tamper with the funds that are now set up for specific purposes and that is my intent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 13 - Emberg, H. Fischer, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Laws, McNealy, Marston, Peratrovich, V. Rivers, Smith, Taylor, Mr. President.

Nays: 40 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 2 - Hilscher, Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 13 yeas, 40 nays, and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit your amendment, Mr. Kilcher. To Section 7?

KILCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, line 5, change period to comma and add: 'but discontinuance shall be approved by a two-thirds majority in both houses.'" "

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the proposed amendment be adopted. Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment once more.

(The Chief Clerk read the amendment by Mr. Kilcher again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to Mr. Kilcher's motion?

HELLENTHAL: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Helleenthal seconds the motion. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President I think the amendment will, in this controversial question, show a middle road in the matter. I am fully aware of the importance of some earmarked funds and I would hate to see them largely discontinued without very good consideration in future legislatures of the state. Being from a country that is in great need of capital improvement and having firsthand seen the benefits of earmarked funds in regards to schools and roads, I would like to see these earmarked funds continued as long as possible, and I would like to see it take more than a simple majority in the future legislature to discontinue these earmarked funds and I think the amendment here would at least for these specific earmarked funds would show a reasonable possibility of compromise that might suit the majority.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I am opposed to the amendment. The earmarking that we have now was adopted by simple majority of the legislature and I don't think we should set up an extraordinary majority like this for any changes in existing funds.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, may I close the debate and answer Mr. Fischer's question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

KILCHER: These earmarked funds when they were set up by a simple majority, it was not then foreseen that a prohibition might arise in the future, in the constitution for further earmarked funds. This trend is new and I think it is, in general, an exception which should be made for those existing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 16 - Coghill, Emberg, H. Fischer, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Marston, Peratrovich, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Taylor, Mr. President.

Nays: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Stewart, Sweeney, VanderLeest, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 2 - Hilscher, Sundborg.)

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 37 nays and 2 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have an amendment to offer, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may offer your amendment. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, line 3, delete the words 'the continuance of'."

R. RIVERS: I move the adoption of the amendment.

COGHILL: I will second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment, seconded by Mr. Coghill. Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I am trying to not get at cross purposes with the Committee, but to clear up what I think is a basic point and I think to improve the situation for the future operations of the legislature. Now when this says, the language being at present. This provision shall not prohibit the continuance of any allocation for special purposes existing upon the date of the ratification of this constitution." That sounds as though you are freezing the exact rate that is now allowed, or the exact rate that is now specified, and it also raises the question of giving some flexibility on that rate. Now, if this amendment of mine passes, it would read: "This provision shall not prohibit any allocation for special purposes existing upon the date of ratification of this constitution." If it shall not prohibit such allocations, then the legislature could not go above the existing allocations but it could plausibly drop below the existing allocations. It could knock off on an allocation for 10 years and come back with the same allocation. It could repeal an existing earmarking law and rewrite it and re-enact the same allocation or a lesser rate of the same allocation. I know it is a little hard to carry through an idea which is on the technical side but I sincerely feel that this is not undermining the Committee's thinking and we will give more flexibility to the future legislature and is a distinct improvement on this freezing everything to a continuance of present allocations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I support this amendment, too, on the same grounds that Mr. Rivers has just spoken on and I believe that under this provision that we have, in our 31 school districts in Alaska at the present time, each one of them are bound by a resolution to the Alaska Public Works or the Department of the Interior on finance of school projects, buildings, and whatnot, and upon the completion of those projects they may want to do away or suspend down the now present five cents a package on tobacco tax. I believe that this gives the legislature a lot more flexibility in allowing for growth or the decline of the problem that we are facing today and if we do get another influx into the Territory in different areas, it could again be re-enacted back to this phase.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. President, to me I read this the same as the previous amendment. I see no difference between this provision, 'shall not apply to any allocation' than the provision "shall not prohibit any allocation". To me it has the same identical meaning that we have already acted upon. Point of order. I believe that we have acted on this unless the mover could show us the difference.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, to say that the prohibition of this particular section "shall not apply to existing allocations" means that they could double those allocations or the rate involved. Mine would say that I retain this thought of prohibition. This provision, "shall not prohibit any allocation for special purposes existing at the time this constitution is ratified" but no future legislature could go above, under this present language, existing allocation rates, but if you say that the section does not apply then the legislature could double.

RILEY: Mr. President, subject to committee announcements, I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 1:30.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements at this time? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, the Committee on Resources will meet at 1:00 in one of the committee rooms upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Committee on Resources at 1:00 upstairs. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: The Local Government at 12:40 upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Local Government at 12:40 upstairs. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, the special committee consisting of some members from Style and Drafting, some members from Judiciary, some members from the Committee on Direct Legislation will meet in the gallery at 1:00.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The special committee to meet in the gallery at 1:00. Are there other committee announcements? If not, Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the Convention stand at recess until 1:30 p.m. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Finance Committee will meet at 1:00 upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Finance Committee at 1:00 upstairs. If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I ask unanimous consent that we revert to the matter of communications.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley, we will revert to the matter of communications at this time. You may present your communication.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I have a communication here from Mr. Ben Hitchcock of Caribou Creek pertaining to certain items in the constitution which I ask to file with the Secretary for perusal by the committee chairmen as they see fit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley, the communication will be placed in the Chief Clerk's files. The Chief Clerk may please read the communications.

(The Chief Clerk read an invitation from the YMCA Board of Directors inviting the delegates to attend the open house of the new Young Men's Christian Association on January 22, between 1 and 5 p.m. Also, a telegram from William L. Paul, Grand President of the Alaska Native Brotherhood, endorsing the proposal that fisheries, game, and fur be controlled by separate commissions, was read.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The communications will be filed. Are there other communications or anything else to come before the Convention before we proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 9? The Chair notes that the Finance Committee is not with us yet. Would the Sergeant at Arms inform them that the Convention is in session? You may be at ease for a moment or so. The Convention will come to order. We have before us the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers, as the Chair recalls the situation when we recessed. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, line 3, delete the words 'the continuance of'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair notes that Mr. Rivers is not here at this time. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: He will not be back for about a half-hour.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you think it would be proper to proceed with the amendment? What is the wish of the body?

V. RIVERS: I wouldn't presume to speak for him. I suppose we could go on to other matters.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We could hold this amendment in abeyance until Mr. Rivers arrives. Are there other proposed amendments to Section 7? Does the Committee have an amendment for Section 8? Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: There is a proposed amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed committee amendment to Section 8.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, page 3, line 10, before the word 'a' insert the words 'not less than'. Line 12, after the word 'question' delete the comma and insert a period. Add a new sentence which will read as follows: 'Additional requirements and qualifications may be provided by law.' Start a new sentence with the word 'Provided' and continue as in the proposal."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland, what is your pleasure with relation to this amendment?

NERLAND: Mr. President, during the noon recess we had this mimeographed and it is now being distributed and I think there is a slight difference in wording. May we substitute the mimeographed version, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the mimeographed version.

CHIEF CLERK: "Amend Section 8 as follows: 'Section 8. No debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of the state, or any political subdivision thereof, unless the debt shall be authorized by law for capital improvements specified therein and be approved by not less than a majority of the qualified voters of the state or of the respective political subdivision voting on the question. Additional requirements and qualifications may be provided by law. The state may by law contract debt for the purpose of repelling invasion, suppressing insurrection, defending the state in war, meeting natural catastrophes, or redeeming outstanding indebtedness of the state at the time this constitution becomes effective.'"

NERLAND: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent that this amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland moves and asks unanimous consent that this amendment be adopted. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Point of order, Mr, President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: As I recall it, before we adjourned yesterday, someone had given notice of reconsideration on a matter that pertains to Section 8. Will that notice of reconsideration interfere with this proposed amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, your point of order might be well taken in that it relates to this particular section. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: This amendment does not in any way affect the subject matter of the reconsideration. It is identical in wording to what the reconsideration is on, even though there has been some words added, it is not altered as I see it. I am waiting to see whether we amend this section or not as to whether I amend it -- not in accordance with this but, perhaps, in such a way that I would not care to submit the reconsideration.

JOHNSON: I had no objection, you understand.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: May I have the floor for a moment, Mr. President, on the point of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, if there is no objection, Mr. Riley, you may have the floor.

(Mr. Riley spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: How do you mean, it should be considered in conjunction with the one before us, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: My whole thinking there, Mr. President, is that they go to the same matter and I should like to feel that the members had read each before acting on either. If the other mimeographed proposed amendment to Section 8 is before them, I think it would be well if each member acquainted himself with the provisions of each of the pending amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection was heard. Mr. Nerland had asked unanimous consent. Did you object, Mr. Johnson?

JOHNSON: I don't object. I simply had that point I wanted brought out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, on a point of order, we're considering an amendment to this section now. I believe I have a copy of Mr. Riley's so-called amendment. It is not an amendment at all, it is not only a new section, but it wipes out the purpose of the original section. The purpose of the original section was to not allow any indebtedness except by referendum to the people and this eliminates that, if I have the right one here in my hand, so therefore I don't think it is an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The only thing we have before us is Mr. Nerland's unanimous consent request. Is there objection to Mr. Nerland's unanimous consent request?

HURLEY: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley objects. Is there a second to the motion?

METCALF: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland so moves, seconded by Mr. Metcalf that the proposed amendment by the Committee be adopted by the Convention. The amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, it was felt that there was some opposition to the original wording wherein it was specified that a majority of the voters would be required, and, also, no qualification was actually put on the people that should vote. The Committee felt that this underlined wording would place the majority as a minimum and allow the legislature to supply additional requirements both as far as the percentage of the majority required and the additional qualifications of the voters or other regulations regarding the voting on the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: May I ask a question, Mr. Chairman?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

COGHILL: Mr. Nerland, does the additional requirements and qualifications that may be provided by law include in that the objection that was raised yesterday to property holders voting on a bonding issue in a local subdivision?

NERLAND: I believe that it was the intention of the Committee that the legislature would have that authority under this wording.

COGHILL: That takes care of my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Chairman, I can't read this as meaning anything but what it says. It says, "The majority of the qualified electors in any political subdivision..." Now maybe I can't read. Maybe there is written into this something that says the legislature may prescribe requirements, but it says "additional requirements". This is a minimum requirement. If you vote for this amendment, you did what Mr. Davis said yesterday, it merely strengthens the effect of the first section as he said he desired to do rather than meeting the objections of those of us who felt that the legislature should have power in setting up requirements for referendums in the local political subdivisions. So, as I see this, if you adopt this in the constitution, you forever foreclose any vote by only property holders on a general obligation bond issue. Now the present method of voting on revenue bond issues is that all the people vote, but on the matter of general obligation bonds, it has been limited to property owners. So, if you adopt this you are forever eliminating the property owner, only, as having a vote in regard to general obligation bonds. I, for one, strongly object and prefer to see the matter of what type of referendum may be allowed. I am perfectly willing to accept that there be a referendum in the political subdivisions but allow the legislature to establish the rules by which those referendums may be conducted rather than write it in to the constitution that a majority of the qualified voters shall have to act on every bond issue. Now you are taking the power of voting on obligations against the property tax rolls out of the hands of the property owners. You are putting it into the general electorate of the community and I believe that in some cases it should be there, but I believe in other cases it should be in the hands of the people who are the property owners. So, I don't see how under this amendment there has met any of the objections under which I asked reconsideration, and in which others objected to, I don't see where any of those objections have been met. If anything, the substance matter here has been to strengthen the thing which we desire to not be done, that the legislature could not establish regulations for elections on bond issues in local political subdivisions.

COGHILL: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Rivers a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Coghill, if there is no objection.

COGHILL: Sir, has it been your interpretation that the line that says that "not less than a majority of the qualified voters of the state or of the respective political subdivisions voting on the question" means in here that the legislature in making additional requirements can't provide that a majority of the qualified voters are property owners of that subdivision?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: It is my opinion that the qualified voters have nothing to do about whether or not they are property holders.

It just says "qualified voters" and as I understand the interpretation, that is a person that has been one year in the Territory and 30 days in their precinct.

COGHILL: So the "respective political subdivision" does not qualify him as a resident or property holder of that?

V. RIVERS: That is exactly right and I am sure that the courts will hold it that way.

COGHILL: Well, then I am opposed to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I had something to do with helping to write this amendment and if it says what Mr. Rivers says that it means, certainly I didn't do a good job, because what I intended in writing a somewhat similar amendment which I gave the Committee, was that the legislature could establish qualifications of voters in these elections -- something more than just being a qualified voter and that something more could very well be only property owners and certainly that is what I hoped it would be. I am still consistent with the position I took yesterday. I don't believe that bond issues should be passed, at least in local districts, with anybody except property owners voting on them and it would be my idea that the legislature probably would make that provision. The language is drawn to the best of my ability to allow them to do that if they thought it was wise.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel has been trying to get the floor. Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: I would like to ask a question of the Committee. I submitted to them a suggestion and if they had adopted my suggestion this would now read, "be approved by not less than a majority of the voters of the state or respective political subdivision qualified to vote on the question". I thought that would cover it and I just wondered if they had some good reason for feeling that that was not an acceptable suggestion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President. Mr. Hinckel, in considering the two amendments, Mr. Hinckel, we thought that Mr. Davis's and yours both did the same thing except that when we got Mr. Davis's, it had the words "not less than" in it and yours at the time we got it, did not. I am sure the Committee is trying to arrive at the same goal that both you and Mr. Davis are trying to arrive at because that was what we had intended originally. The only reason we adopted Mr. Davis's amendment was because we thought it accomplished that purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Davis, we use these words "qualified voters in a general election". I wonder if the term "qualifying voters" wouldn't clear up the general election "qualified voters".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Gray, I think it might be, I believe that Mr. Hinckel has a better answer to that particular problem than using the word "qualifying". The only thing is that, as I see it, Mr. Hinckel's language goes one step further than mine. It would require the legislature, by implication at least, to set up some procedure which would require, or which would set what the "qualified voter" was. Now the language I have used does not. I would hope that the legislature would do so but I have left it strictly up to the legislature as to what they wanted to do in that line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, there were some of the others of us that worked on an amendment and I rather thought that it would be taken care of when Mr. Davis met with the Committee and our suggestion was to strike "qualified voters" and insert "voters qualified to vote on the particular issue as the law may provide". Then if it is a state level they could specify that the qualified voters would be the electors. If it is a local issue the qualified voters or those qualified to vote on that issue may be the property holders. The law could put a blanket rule one way or the other and I think you would have the whole thing taken care of on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think the Committee has done an excellent job on this question and if Mr. Hinckel's or Mr. Londborg's suggestion is followed to its logical conclusion a very necessary bond issue could be defeated by merely staying at home. To make it concrete, this is the important language: "a majority of the qualified voters voting on the question". Now if you adopt Mr. Hinckel's suggestion, as I understand it, if there were, say, 9,000 qualified voters in Juneau, it would take 4,500 affirmative votes to pass any bond election.

HINCKEL: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: He referred to the amendment that I mentioned here and the words on lines 11 and 12 "voting on the question" were not deleted so it would still be the ones voting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You have a different amendment to it, Mr.

Hellenthal? Don't you have Mr. Riley's proposed amendment?

HELLENTHAL: No, I think I am speaking on Mr. Hinckel's suggestion. Now that is unduly harsh.

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Are we debating a suggestion or are we debating an amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are debating the particular amendment, Mr. Kilcher.

HELLENTHAL: I merely illustrate this to show why the choice of the words "a majority of the qualified voters voting on the question" -- in other words, I think the Committee's choice is most wise.

NERLAND: May we have a two-minute recess to see if we can resolve this?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is it the desire of the body to have a recess? If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, after considering various phases and various suggestions that have been offered here, the Committee definitely feels that this present amendment does cover all objections that have been raised and since the wording will allow the legislature to place additional requirements on the percentage of the majority that is to be required and additional qualifications of the voters, such as being on the property tax roll, etc., the Committee is in favor of allowing the present amendment to stand.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE. Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all those opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 30 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cross, Davis, Gray, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher,

Knight, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Robertson.

Nays: 19 - Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hermann, Hurley, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, Nordale, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Sweeney, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Harris, Hilscher, R. Rivers, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 30 yeas, 19 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And so the "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 8? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I am sorry I have to ask a question of Mr. Nerland. There is something very unclear in my mind about this.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Kilcher, you may ask your question.

KILCHER: At the end of the first sentence -- "voting on the question" -- now is that the subdivision voting on the question or is that the qualified voters voting on the question?

NERLAND: It is the intention of the Committee that that be the voters voting on the question whether it be the state or the political subdivision on the particular question that might be involved.

KILCHER: So "voting on the question" does not pertain to the last part of the sentence that starts "or of the respective political subdivision"? It pertains to "state", too?

NERLAND: That is correct.

KILCHER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have an amendment to the committee amendment that was just adopted. It is to Section 8.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may submit your amendment, Mr. Cooper. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, lines 4 and 5, delete 'not less than'; line 6, delete 'qualified voters of the State or of the respective political subdivision voting' and insert in lieu thereof on line 5, the following: 'votes cast by voters qualified to vote'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the section now as it would read if the proposed amendment is adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8. No debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of the State, or any political subdivision thereof, unless the debt shall be authorized by law for capital improvements specified therein and be approved by a majority of the votes cast by voters qualified to vote on the question."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper, what is your pleasure with relation to this?

COOPER: I move the adoption of this amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

HINCKEL: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, this would, I believe, satisfy the argument of Mr. Hellenthal in that it would be the majority of the votes cast by the qualified voters, or the voters qualified to vote on the question, and in addition, would not delete the additional requirements and qualifications that may be provided by law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I am fully satisfied by the amendment that was just adopted. It says a "majority of the qualified voters voting on the question". That, to my mind, is identical to saying "majority of the votes cast at the election".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: May I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Rivers, if there is no objection.

V. RIVERS: Don't you think the words "qualified voters" have a legal implication beyond what you are trying to read into them or think the legislature could read into them?

HELLENTHAL: None whatsoever, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: "Qualified voters" has a meaning and intent and interpretation that makes this wide open for every voter that will fulfill our legal requirements?

HELLENTHAL: No. Mr. Rivers, I am quite impressed with your argument as to local elections, that the property requirements should be required, and I wonder if you might consider offering an amendment along that line?

V. RIVERS: I don't mind if we could clarify the situation. I want it to be clearly understood that our intent as I understand this body was as we just voted, I want it understood that it was the intent that the legislature could establish qualifications and modify the meaning of "qualified voters".

HELLENTHAL: "Qualified voters" is very clearly defined in the constitution and I think this committee proposal we have just adopted is excellent and unambiguous.

V. RIVERS: May I have the privilege of the floor for a moment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Rivers, if there is no objection.

(Mr. Victor Rivers spoke under the personal privilege of the floor.)

HERMANN: I had a little bit of trouble with that phraseology, too, because it seems to me that there might be a great many more qualified voters in a district or in an election precinct than actually voted and how are you going to discover what a majority of them is? I think there should be something in there that a majority of them who voted on the issue rather than just the flat term "qualified voters".

HELLENTHAL: May we have a recess for a minute?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the amendment proposed by Mr. Cooper. Is there further discussion on the proposed amendment? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I know there is a lot of room for different interpretations and although the amendment as offered may be a little confusing in itself, to me it is less confusing than the term "qualified voters". I am sorry that I can't share with Mr. Helleenthal the certainty that "qualified voters" means what the Committee says that it does mean, so I think that discretion is the better part of valor and I shall vote in favor of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Cooper be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adoption of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 30 - Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Lee, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Reader, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 19 - Awes, Collins, Davis, Gray, Hellenthal, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Riley, Robertson, Smith, Taylor.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Harris, Hilscher, R. Rivers, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 30 yeas, 19 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 8? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, could we have the amendment read slowly?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The section as it reads now. Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: Yes, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you please read the section as it reads now with the adoption of that amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8. No debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of the State, or any political subdivision thereof, unless the debt shall be authorized by law for capital improvements specified therein and be approved by a majority of the votes cast by voters qualified to vote on the question." The rest is the same.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to Section 8? Did we have a proposed amendment by Mr. Riley? What was to be your disposition of that, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: It is my memory, Mr. President, that this was the first time around on this particular section. It was postponed last evening and I would like to defer immediate consideration of the amendment on the Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to Section 9? We have been through all of these sections once, so we should start with Section 1, probably for the second time around. Are there amendments to Section 1? Section 2? Section 3? Section 4? Section 5? Section 6? Section 7? Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I have an amendment to offer for Section 7 but I don't know whether it is proper to put it in at this time, since Mr. Rivers hasn't come back and has a prior amendment to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. [Ralph] Rivers' amendment, was it on Section 7 or Section 8?

CHIEF CLERK: Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You might read your amendment.

EMBERG: It was simply to strike Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: This amendment proposes to strike Section 7, Mr. Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I think probably the amendment is in order. You might desire to act on the other one first. When Ralph [Rivers] left, he told me he would be back at 2:00 o'clock, so he has now run past that time so I could not ask the indulgence of the body any longer.

WHITE: Mr. President, I don't know if I could add anything to that or not but I rode into town with Mr. Ralph Rivers at the lunch hour. He told me that he had mentioned to one or more other delegates that if they thought his amendment was worth pursuing, to go ahead and do so; otherwise, to let it go.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was thinking of the reconsideration notice that had been served by Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I was waiting to see whether we adopted some clarifying words in there and inasmuch as we did, I am not going to ask for reconsideration on that question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: With relation to Section 7, Mr. Emberg, we have the amendment hanging fire here that Mr. Ralph Rivers had offered and in some way we would have to act on that amendment before we could accept yours. Is Mr. Ralph Rivers in the building at this time?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: He is coming now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, we are now bringing before the body once more your proposed amendment as it was before we recessed.

R. RIVERS: I presented an argument in favor of it before I left. I think it would improve matters to change that wording but I don't seem to be getting any great enthusiastic support so I will submit it; if anybody wants to support me they are welcome to do so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, line 3, delete the words 'the continuance of'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Barr.

BARR: This amendment, I don't see that it adds anything to this at all. We are speaking in this paragraph of an allocation, not of any law or of any rate of taxation, just saying that money received from a certain source should be allocated. It says, "This provision shall not prohibit the continuance of this allocation." That is what we mean. It has nothing to do with any law, or wiping out our present law, or enacting a new one. If it did that, if they put in a new law, it would still have to be allocated. I don't see why we should discontinue those words at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I am awfully sorry that I am so dense here but I don't read it that way. I happen to read the following line, too, and it says that it existed "the date of ratification of this constitution". Now, I can see and I certainly hope that I'm not way off base in taking up time here, but I have to speak for myself, that it is quite possible that the Territorial legislature may, after the ratification of this constitution, eliminate one of these allocated funds and thereafter prior to the going into effect of this constitution, restore that allocated fund, either in the same amount or less, and it occurs to me that if they do that, why perhaps we should keep it. If it doesn't say that why then obviously I am wrong but I think that this refers to that, if at the next primary election this constitution is ratified the allocated funds that existed as of that date will not be affected. That is very true but if the legislature thereafter should cut those out and then at that time there would be no longer a possibility of having allocated funds whereas if they should put the same one back again it still would not follow through. I don't know if that is going going to happen or not but I can see the possibility. Now I hope I haven't taken up the wrong time here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If the Chair might ask a question, is there any manner in which this constitution can bind the legislature until the enabling act is passed by Congress and we become a state? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I can't answer that definitely, I can only tell you the advice the Committee got. That is, the constitution can be retroactive in this respect, as set forth in this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, Mr. Hurley might like an illustration of what I'm getting at. The business license tax right now allocates 40 per cent of the amount of money which stems from businesses within incorporated cities to the cities. No, they allocate 60 per cent to the cities and they retain 40 per cent for the Territory of Alaska. If you keep these words "continuance of" in there, if the legislature decides to drop that 60 per cent allocation to the cities down to 50 per cent and then later tried to go back up to 60 per cent, you would have a partial abandonment of that particular 10 per cent and then you have a barrier in the constitution that prevents them from going up to 60 per cent again. In other words, you are putting in a barricade and taking away a little flexibility from the legislature. That does not exactly bear on your question though, does it, Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: My mind is perfectly clear, you don't have to worry about that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

R. RIVERS: It is pretty hard to get through a fine distinction.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Use the gas tax.

R. RIVERS: Well, the gas tax is a percentage allocation five per cent. We may continue five per cent but the legislature might some day want to go up to six per cent, but they couldn't because that would be additional freezing of what would be allowed here. If they want to drop down to three and then go back to five, once they drop it down to three per cent, they have a partial abandonment and then they couldn't go back again up to five. That is this continuance business. All you can do is continue. Anything you let go of you can never come back up on again. I've said if they want to do something and then re-enact up to the ceiling which they've got now, give them the power to drop below and re-enact again but I can't seem to get any aid on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe I've joined the ranks of those that are not so bright today. I get a different meaning out of this thing than Mr. Rivers, that he makes his amendment on. I kind of feel the same as Mr. Hurley does. I was trying to analyze this and I've got this that the subject matter of this amendment is the allocation for a special purpose and the article says, "This provision shall not prohibit allocation for special purposes existing upon the date of the ratification of this constitution." I think it means that any law on the books, that is earmarked funds for special purposes, that is law at the time that this constitution is ratified, may be continued. I cannot read any raise or decrease in the revenue from those revenue measures which bring in those funds as to whether an increase or decrease would invalidate it. I believe that what I get of Mr. Rivers' amendment, at this time it allows the allocation of those funds from a particular purpose for a special purpose to remain in effect. That is what I see of it, and I don't get the rest of it.

R. RIVERS: May I make a correction? When I was illustrating the gas tax about the going up to six, no that would be wrong, because absolutely allowing allocations as exist at the time this constitution is ratified would fix the ceiling, I am sure, as to how high they could go. I'll call this the closing, if you wish, Mr. McCutcheon. But certainly they could go through. Now, when Mr. Taylor read my proposed amendment, he said "allocations allowed at the time this goes into effect" and he may have inadvertently omitted "continuance of". All I'm objecting to is this "continuance of". I'm in accord with their idea of not letting any more allocations come along, but when you say "continuance of" allocations I immediately think of the rate of allocations as well as the subject matter. Now if they are only going to allow allocations on particular subjects that are now covered by allocations then I have no quarrel with them whatsoever but I am sure that's not the intent of the Committee. The Committee intends to allow such rates of allocations as will exist when this constitution is ratified but no one may go beyond those rates in the future and if they ever drop down, this continuance business does not allow them to re-enact.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, if as Mr. Rivers deduces, the terminology of this sentence means that the rates are frozen. The principle behind this sentence is not that the rates are frozen, it is the principle of allocating earmarked funds. It is not a matter of percentage wise, it is a theory of earmarked funds and I can't see his argument in this by striking out "continuance". He proposes that this is going to cure the proposition of a freeze. He thinks it is a freeze. It is not a freeze in any respect of the word as far as I can see; it is a matter of a theory of earmarked funds and doesn't have anything to do with dollar and cents or percentages.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Committee what their intent was on that. I would like to hear what they say.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you wish to answer that, Mr. White?

WHITE: I think I can answer for all the Committee on that, Mr. Rivers. It is not the intent of the Committee that this be interpreted to mean a freeze in any way, shape, or form. The Committee feels that the objections raised by Mr. Rivers are covered by the existing language. The reason the Committee resists the deletion of the words "continuance of" is that it would then mean that the legislature could discontinue a presently earmarked fund next year and then 50 years from now bring it back into being. We do not intend that that be the case.

V. RIVERS: If you are not freezing an amount, could they raise an existing allocation under this? On the gasoline tax could they raise that to six per cent according to your thinking on this?

WHITE: Certainly they could.

V. RIVERS: If they lowered it down to three could they then reenact two more after that?

WHITE: The Committee intends that this not have any reference to rates at all. The Committee intends that this apply to the allocation of particular taxes to a particular purpose and no more than that.

V. RIVERS: I just wanted this in the record. Now if they wipe it out altogether, discontinue it, it's gone forever, is that right?

WHITE: That is right.

V. RIVERS: But if you discontinue half of it, you can raise it back up?

WHITE: That would mean that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Ralph Rivers be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 7? Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Emberg.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 7."

EMBERG: I move the adoption of the amendment.

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg moves the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Emberg.

EMBERG: I think Section 7 is a compromise dedicated on the principle that there will be no earmarking of funds; then it goes ahead and provides for them, and this also raises in my mind the question, the real issue here is whether or not we wish to provide in this constitution a constitutional rule against the earmarking of funds. I say from my own point that a lot has been brought in on this subject for both sides from the previous debate on this subject so I won't go into that too much but I say I prefer to leave it to the legislature and if they feel that is the best, the most efficient way to use the funds of the Territory, that the continuity of programs in scientific research, capital improvements, roads, schools, in the opinion of the legislature that they should earmark funds, then I am for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. President, I think I'm against earmarking of a lot of funds but I do think this should be left to the legislature. I think when you put provisions in the constitution like this it means that they will just try to find ways around them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I don't see anything in Section 7 that has anything to do with earmarking funds. Maybe I have the wrong section.

R. RIVERS: It's a new number.

HERMANN: What's it about? What is the subject?

PRESIDENT EGAN: "All revenues shall be deposited in the state treasury without allocation for special purposes..."

HERMANN: I have that marked 8.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, I think it would be a great mistake to eliminate this section from the bill because it is a very difficult thing to un-earmark earmarked funds once they're set that way because your lobby groups are very powerful and I think you ought to think twice before you throw it out.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: All I have to say is that I am not particularly in favor of earmarking all the funds but I would like to transpose the word "never" for the word "shall not" and I don't think that restrictive a clause should be put in our constitution. Eventually, at some time during the life of this constitution, there will be the need or the requirement of earmarking some fund which will be derived either by a special tax or a state tax or a license. Therefore, I support the amendment.

DAVIS: I wonder if he would tell us what line he is working on there?

COOPER: Section 7, the last line as amended by the Committee. It now reads: "The proceeds of any state tax or license or part thereof shall not be allocated to any special purposes." In thinking of this, merely thinking of it as being "shall never be allocated to any special fund". I say "never be" extends too far from the scope of this Convention sitting here.

DAVIS: May I ask what Mr. Cooper wants to put in place of that?

COOPER: I don't want to put anything in there. I merely use that as support for Mr. Emberg's argument that there is or can possibly at a future date, be a need or a cause for earmarking some fund for some state tax or license.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Just to clarify it for the delegates, in striking this Section 7, as proposed by Mr. Emberg, it would therefore leave no restrictions whatsoever on the legislature nor would it provide that any existing funds that we have now earmarked and that we have to safeguard would have any constitutional backing. It would just leave it strictly to the legislature as it is right now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: In Colorado, approximately 90 per cent of the tax collections are earmarked. In Texas, 85 per cent, Kansas has over 140 dedicated funds which embrace over 80 per cent of the state's revenue. Now the thought was suggested here that we should leave it up to the legislature. Over a period of years we have several different legislatures made up of different people and the feelings of these people towards earmarked revenues vary from year to year. We might have a legislature that sometime would earmark approximately 90 per cent of our tax revenue, and once it's earmarked it is frozen. We have heard here how the sportsmen want all the licenses earmarked and they are not unique in that respect by any means. The commercial fishermen's license is earmarked, goes to the sick and disabled fishermen's fund and if you want a fight on your hands just try to get that un-earmarked. In the last session of the legislature it was proposed that all the fuel tax should go into the general fund and we were flooded with wires of protest from all over the Territory, especially by organizations, truckers, etc., who use gas. Our other largest earmarked fund is a tobacco tax to be used for schools and I believe it should and that is one thing that the people of this Territory want is that tobacco tax for the schools because they realize the great need for schools and all you have to do is earmark another fund and it will never be un-earmarked. If we leave this up to the legislature, to succeeding legislatures over a period of years, we will end up like poor old Texas and Colorado. We won't have anything in the general fund for appropriations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: If we should happen to strike Section 7 it will be a very, very great mistake. Like Mr. Emberg said over here a little while ago, this was a compromise in your Committee. That is true, there was a couple of us who were for striking all earmarked funds but we compromised on account of the various ones who were interested in schools and roads, etc. I, personally, am in a peculiar position. I happen to believe in the fish and wildlife very much and would like to see somehow that it was earmarked but being against earmarking on other things that are coming up I would have to vote against it. There is also another thing to come into this if you strike it there will be more and more earmarking. It can become a political issue. People will go out and tell certain parties they'll do this for you if you vote for me, I'll see to it that this is earmarked for a swimming pool, or some such thing. That is about the best way I can explain it but I certainly hope that everybody here will consider this very, very carefully, because this is an important item.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: One more observation. The people in this assembly shouldn't overlook this fact, that the earmarking of funds is the fashion in which higher taxes are foisted upon segments of industry or the public. The people in these various classifications of industry or public feeling that this money is coming to them, are willing to submit to higher taxes, and it is not a matter of good fiscal arrangements to be taxing segments or classifications of our society or industry for special purposes at higher rates than should be charged or properly assessed against that classification or that group of industry. Consequently, I am opposed to the striking of this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I also am opposed to scratching Section 7. I think the real evil inherent in earmarking is that it so often leaves the general fund short of funds on which to operate. I can recall one occasion in our Territorial history, during the war when the road fund had been built up to quite a considerable amount and it was impossible to build roads. There was no material available and no help available and that sum pyramided up to a very considerable amount while at the same time the Territory was borrowing money in order to meet its monthly current obligations. Now, I know we can't legally borrow money but the fact of the matter is that we did, and I am not opposed to funds for roads as was suggested here this morning and I think the funds that are already earmarked are probably properly earmarked but I would hate to see the door left open to earmarked additional funds with the probable effect of reducing the general fund to the point where the services to the citizens of the Territory and the expense of operating the Territory had to be seriously curtailed. I oppose striking Section 7.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Emberg be adopted by the Convention?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Roll call, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 8 - Cooper, Emberg, H. Fischer, Kilcher, King, Rosswog, Sweeney, Taylor.

Nays: 41 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Smith, Stewart, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Doogan, Harris, Hilscher, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 8 yeas, 41 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 7? The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7. Add to Section 7, after changing period to a comma, 'but discontinuance shall not preclude reinstatement'."

2410

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, what is your pleasure on that?

MCLAUGHLIN: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. President, I think we have already decided that issue before.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment again.

(The Chief Clerk read Mr. Kilcher's amendment again.)

KILCHER: I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the amendment be adopted. Now on Mr. McLaughlin's point of order, is it a point of order? If there is no objection the Rules Committee may decide the question. The Chair does not know what Mr. McLaughlin means.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: I'll remove my point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin removes his point of order. Is there a second to Mr. Kilcher's motion?

V. RIVERS: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers seconds the motion. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think the problem is simple. In making a compromise between allowing any or no earmarked funds at all, this would make compromise strongly in favor of earmarked funds, that those funds that are earmarked that we used to receive earmarked and that are earmarked now and that will be earmarked in the early stages of the state, if they, for some reason or another should be discontinued temporarily, discontinuation should be considered temporary; that, in other words, it would permit this category of earmarked funds to be earmarked at will by the legislature; that temporary discontinuation should not remove that category from earmarked funds forever; that the practice could be taken up again after a year or two, that may be after learning, for instance, that discontinuation has brought harm in one quarter or another. The next legislature might have learned by the experience and be permitted to reinstitute the practice that has been going on for 10 or 20 years. That is the intent of the amendment, and I think it should be given due consideration.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would like to take the occasion of this amendment to make a statement on Section 7 and in so doing, I will close the amendment. I cannot leave this section in good conscience without agreeing with Mr. Emberg when he says that this is a compromise. Actually, I don't see how you can be against earmarking in principle and allow for the continuation of existing earmarked funds. Now I am a minority of the committee in this respect. I do not intend to submit a minority report and I do not intend to submit an amendment to strike this sentence. However, if anyone should, I would certainly support it. I am afraid it is a matter of political expediency that we are keeping this sentence in here. I certainly would not say that because the sentence is in we should strike the whole section because I think this is probably as far as we can go. I think it very probable that if such an amendment were offered -- an amendment to strike the last sentence -- we would here and now have a very good illustration of how difficult it is to get rid of earmarked funds. Mr. Kilcher's amendment is far from making it easier to retain these earmarked funds, and I would like to put myself on record as thinking that we should eliminate the ones we have now.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I support Mr. Kilcher's amendment as stated and for the reasons he stated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: I would like to add a little to what Mr. White said. He was only in the minority in wanting to abolish all earmarked funds. The Committee was unanimous in being against the principle of earmarking funds. Some of us, including myself, fought to retain the earmarked funds we now have but we were unanimous in agreeing that the principle was bad. Now, the question here on this amendment is, whether or not you want to retain a certain percentage of our tax revenue as earmarked funds. This amendment would do that from now on. Under the present wording, it would retain it until such time as the legislature wished to repeal some of our present earmarking laws. If you are against the entire principle of earmarking, of course, you would want to retain this language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, if earmarking is good now, which the Committee grants us, I think that it should be good in the future. I am not for a lot of earmarking but I don't think we in the Territory of Alaska earmark too many funds. We still haven't got that road built in Spenard and we paid for it several times and I am not sure we're going to get it next year and I am going to go along with Mr. Kilcher's amendment, so that we can have earmarked funds in the future if it is a good thing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? Mr. Kilcher are you closing?

KILCHER: The words "political compromise" has been brought up and I certainly would be one that would oppose any such compromise. I have done so in the past, but I think we should compromise in the principle. We could compromise in the principle so far as our spheres have shown that there have been advantages so far in earmarking certain funds. About others I don't know the problem, but we should preserve that part of the principle that believes in earmarked funds. We should preserve that in the future and at least give it a good try. If, after abolition of some earmarked funds, the legislature should find out it was a good thing to abolish it, I trust the legislature if they want to reinstitute it, but if the legislature should find out it was a bad thing to abolish it, it should have the power and be given the chance to reinstitute it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Kilcher be adopted by the Convention?"

KILCHER: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 20 - Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Londborg, Marston, Metcalf, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Taylor, Mr. President.

Nays: 29 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hurley, Knight, Laws, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Robertson, Walsh, White, Wien.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Doogan, Harris, Hilscher, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 20 yeas, 29 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. Buckalew.

2413

BUCKALEW: I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew, you may offer your amendment. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 7, page 3, line 2, delete the last sentence."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Buckalew?

BUCKALEW: I move its adoption, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Seconded by Mr. White. The question is open for discussion. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I had drawn this proposed amendment yesterday. I am not going to argue it extensively. I just want to point out to the delegates that the Committee has admitted that it is bad practice to earmark funds; they have admitted that the sensible sound way to run a state is to abolish this practice which leads to evils as far as the fiscal management of the state is concerned. I ask you to let the new State of Alaska and the Territory start off with a clean slate and no earmarked funds at all. I ask you further to forget about the political implications in voting to do away with existing earmarking of funds. It is a good practice but I think we have a duty to the new State of Alaska to vote on what we think is fundamentally sound and I ask all of you to support the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I would like to ask Mr. Buckalew a question, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Under your proposed amendment, Mr. Buckalew, you have struck the provision that allows the continuance of these particular earmarked funds. What would you propose that the new state would do with the 31 school districts in Alaska that have mortgaged themselves to the Alaska Public Works on the intent of the revenue brought in by the Alaska tobacco tax distribution?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Very simple. They would just appropriate the money that comes into the 31 school districts.

COGHILL: Wouldn't that be a special appropriation and discrimination, a special appropriation to different schools?

BUCKALEW: I wouldn't think so. They would have to take care of the old obligations and the only way they can do it is to appropriate the money and pay off the obligations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I would like to express my view on this thing. I think we could see a fine example of what happens when we don't give a thorough consideration of our actions. Now as far as I am concerned, I participated in the deliberations of the Committee. As you all know, from your own experience within your own committee, you have to compromise and one of my compromises was this provision that we had here. I, too, felt that after I heard the arguments in the Committee, that perhaps it was dangerous to give free rein to the new state in earmarking funds. However, I realize, as I stated here today, that there was some good being accomplished by those earmarked funds that we have on the books today and I feel that I cannot support this on that condition. I don't see how the rest of my committeemen can go along with this amendment for the simple reason our proposal here is the outcome of a compromise. We went both sides of the question and we felt that perhaps it is a good thing to retain the provisions that we now have on the books but not permit any further earmarking of funds. I am, therefore, against this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, like Mr. Peratrovich, I can see nothing wrong in a committee compromise nor can I see anything wrong in a compromise by the Convention. I believe it was Benjamin Franklin who said that a constitution is a bundle of compromises, and that is the way it should be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I would have to speak against this amendment, particularly in regard to the gasoline tax. Any time that a tax of that percentage of the cost of an article is put against anything, why the people who are using the article and are, therefore, paying the tax, should be allowed to benefit from the tax and it is only through the earmarking of the gasoline tax for roads and boat harbors and airfields, etc., that the people do get their money back. I just couldn't support this amendment at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: I believe it was the opinion of the majority of the Committee that these present earmarked funds were of such importance in their specific nature and considered so important by so many people in the Territory that in spite of a feeling by the Committee that earmarked funds in general should be frowned upon, it was felt that those now on the statute books should be left in effect as long as the legislature saw fit to leave them there. We anticipated that perhaps sometime in the future that there may not be the need that there is now and the legislature could remove them. I want to register my disapproval of this proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I see in this amendment one purpose which I don't approve of and that is if the amendment passed, it is simply a veto to Colonel Marston's road. Therefore, I am against it. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I already addressed myself on this section on the previous amendment so I will be brief. I think most of the delegates that have been speaking have tried to maintain that the present earmarked funds are good because their end product is good. I think there is no quarrel with that statement. The end product of any earmarked fund is good but if the end product is good and desirable it is perfectly reasonable to assume that future legislatures will see it the same way and will appropriate sufficient funds to carry out the programs that are now being carried out through earmarked taxes. I can only say that I agree with Mr. Buckalew that if this Convention decides -- as it apparently has decided -- that earmarked funds are bad, then all earmarked funds are bad and we should have the courage of our convictions and wipe them out here and now. I think it is a matter of expediency -- I shouldn't have said "political" previously -- but a matter of expediency, that of leaving them in and I have enough confidence in the voters of the future State of Alaska to feel that they would not defeat any constitution merely because some pet project, some pet earmarked funds are wiped out herein.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill, you asked a question?

COGHILL: Mr. President, the first time I arose I asked a question and this time I rise to speak against the proposed amendment from the standpoint of not only the road tax but our Alaska tobacco tax which I think has been accepted by all of the people of Alaska as a fair and equal tax to its end product. I believe that the answer that was given by Mr. Buckalew to my question for appropriation destroys the fact of local initiative to provide further to the end that they can get a good educational system set up in a local school district. I believe that the authors of the tobacco tax law had in mind of stimulating local interest, public interest, along with providing a token towards building up the school system. Therefore, I oppose this amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Buckalew be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 7? If not, are there amendments to Section 8? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I have an amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, after the word 'question' on line 12, strike period and insert a comma, delete 'Additional' and 'may' and insert 'to' in sentence inserted by Committee amendment."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Coghill?

COGHILL: I move and ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment, Mr. President. I have the mimeographed sheet here that was adopted, and that was the one that I was amending. It would read, "The votes cast by voters qualified to vote on the question, requirement and qualifications to be provided by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read that portion of the section as it would read if the proposed amendment was adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "No debt shall be contracted by or on behalf of the state or any political subdivision thereof unless the debt shall be authorized by law for capital improvements specified therein and be approved by a majority of the votes cast by voters qualified to vote on the question, requirements and qualifications to be provided by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Coghill's unanimous consent request?

BUCKALEW: I'll object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, there was quite a lot of lengthy discussion on this subject and I thought by my amendment, it would just clarify the requirements and qualifications to be provided by law. Otherwise it would just state that the votes cast by voters qualified to vote on the question and there is still no reference to what the qualifications are and then there was an additional sentence that said, "Additional requirements and qualifications may be provided by law." I was just trying to clarify the intent of the Convention as to the amendment that was made by Mr. Cooper.

HELLENTHAL: Would you read your amendment again?

COGHILL: It says, "votes cast by voters qualified to vote on the question, requirements and qualifications to be provided by law". Take out the "additional" requirements and just provide that "requirements and qualifications are to be provided by law". In other words, leave it up to the legislature.

HERMANN: May I ask Mr. Coghill a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. Coghill, do you mean to leave it entirely to the legislature or to the initiative and referendum, also? That is also going to pass law, you know.

COGHILL: "To be provided by law" and then an initiative law, a referendum law is a law.

HERMANN: The second time you said "by the legislature". I wanted to make sure --

COGHILL: "Provided by law".

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Coghill be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 23 - Boswell, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Marston, Metcalf, Peratrovich, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney.

Nays: 26 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, Collins, Davis, V. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Doogan, Harris, Hilscher, Sundborg, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 23 yeas, 26 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 8? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, for the last time today I shall presume on the Convention's time by asking for a recess of five minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I would like to make an amendment to Section 8. It is very simple. It is only two words and I'll make it orally, if I may. It is in the amendment offered by the Committee which has been adopted. At the end of the line reading "additional requirements and qualifications" insert the two words, "of voters" and I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: After the word "qualifications" Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: That is right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson so moves.

TAYLOR: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? If there is no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Gray.

GRAY: May I address a question to Mr. Robertson?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, you may.

GRAY: In your opinion when you have additional requirements and qualifications of voters, do you mean to include in that the percentage of voters?

ROBERTSON: No. I agree, apparently, with the others. I heard Mr. Davis and others discussing it. I think this specifically limits to a majority, the legislature can't increase it to a

2419

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 8. May I present it orally?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

COOPER: Insert the words "not less than" before the words "a majority". I removed them in my original amendment but it was also tied in with some insertions; therefore, I now move that the phrase "not less than" be inserted before "a majority".

HELLENTHAL: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was your original amendment, was it adopted, Mr. Cooper?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, it was.

HELLENTHAL: I ask unanimous consent that the motion be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is actually a suspension of the rules, but under a unanimous consent request it can be done. Is there any objection to the unanimous consent request? If not, then the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Does the Chief Clerk have it in the proper place?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I'm still not clear on this and I would like to ask any one of the Committee or whoever would care to answer it for me, that on that "votes cast by voters qualified to vote on the question" -- where and how and in what manner are we providing for those qualifications? Are they property owners, are they just legal voters of the state or of the town? You are a legal voter of a community if you have lived there for 30 days. Is that what it means or does it mean you have to be a property owner to vote on it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, that does not mean that you have to be a property owner. It means that you must be a citizen of the United States, a resident of Alaska for over one year. Let me go at it again -- an actual and bona fide resident of Alaska for over one year, 19 years of age or over, a resident 30 days in the voting precinct in which you vote, not disqualified from voting by virtue of being unable to read or write, not disqualified from voting by any other provision of the law. Those are the qualifications of voters.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: You mean in a state election?

HELLENTHAL: In a state election, state and local elections, and I refer to the article on elections and suffrage which starts out, "The qualifications for voters in all state and local elections shall be as follows..." and then they list them. Now property qualification is not such a qualification nor should it be because when you vote for your legislators and everything, property has nothing to do with it but under the provisions of this language where it says, "additional requirements and qualifications of voters may be provided by law", the legislature may properly, if it sees fit, impose a property qualification as an additional qualification but we are leaving it up to the legislature in the case of bond elections on the state or local level.

COGHILL: That answers my question. What I wanted to know was -- that was the purpose of my amendment -- I wanted to know whether with the "additional" requirements set in there, would it allow the legislature to provide for residency or property holding section in a locality where a bond issue is being circulated.

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

COGHILL: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 3:40.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other amendments to be offered to Section 8? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I have one to offer to Section 8, but I would like the benefit of full attendance if possible.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I move for a five-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for one minute. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, at the risk of trying the patience of everyone in the room, I have submitted an amendment which, in substance, was submitted this morning under the names of half a dozen or more delegates. I haven't had an opportunity to check with each of them since, so unfortunately it bears my name alone. The amendment, which was passed out a few minutes ago, breaks the subject matter into two sections, one confined solely to state indebtedness and the other to political subdivisions. Strike all of Section 8 as we now have it and substitute these two sections for Section 8. Now I don't profess to be a short-term expert in any sense in the field of finance. However, certain shortcomings of language were called to my attention yesterday and again today, and I believe that many of those who joined with me earlier had the same feeling that improvement was possible. There are two features which should receive special attention in considering this amendment. As a matter of fact, I haven't asked for its adoption and I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 8 and substitute the following two sections and renumber the remaining sections:

'Section 8. No debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of the State unless the debt shall be authorized either by a two-thirds vote in each house of the legislature, or by a majority vote in each house with ratification by a majority of the qualified voters of the state voting on the question, provided that the State may by law contract debt for the purpose of repelling invasion, suppressing insurrection, defending the State in war, meeting natural catastrophes, or redeeming outstanding indebtedness of the State at the time this constitution becomes effective.'

'Section 9. No debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of any political subdivision of the State, except for capital improvements and then only upon approval of at least a majority of those voting on the question and qualified to vote as prescribed by law.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move the adoption of the amendment, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I do, Mr. President.

BUCKALEW: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew seconds the motion. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Now this provision which starts on line 2 of the proposed amendment, stating "either by two-thirds vote in each house of the legislature or by a majority vote in each house with ratification..." is of course new matter, new concept in this discussion. While I personally won't press that issue too vigorously, I would like to point out that other states have adopted it and apparently with full success as to the marketing of their obligations. From the Hawaiian Manual I read: "Massachusetts and South Dakota set up barriers to borrowing by requiring a two-thirds vote in each house upon all debt-creating legislation, while in Delaware three-fourths of the legislators must approve bond measures. Among the constitutions which explicitly provide for a state debt, only the Maryland constitution sets no debt limit or super-majority vote, qualifying legislative carte blanche only by the requirement that when a debt is incurred, provision be made concurrently for taxes to pay interest and principal." In this respect I submit only that this thought is not new, that it has been applied successfully elsewhere. Among other thoughts I have had on the subject and which have been confirmed by others is the statement on our Section 8 as it now stands that, "No debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of the state or any political subdivisions thereof unless the debt shall be authorized by law." That question arose last evening. There was doubt in the minds of some of the delegates whether "by law" meant that it was necessary that the legislature authorize the contracting of debt by lesser political subdivisions. I think that it was reasonably well resolved here on the floor last night. Understanding was reached that this would allow ordinance but it does not so state, it is not clear and I think that question is obviated in the amendment now before us. To pursue my reference to Section 8 as it now stands, the language "a majority of the votes cast by voters qualified to vote" has created doubt also as to the necessity of the voters of the state having to authorize capital improvements in Anchorage or Fairbanks or in Juneau. If such doubts are valid I would say that those two are cleared up in this proposed amendment now under discussion. I do think that handling the matter in two separate sections to differentiate between the two levels of government is a far cleaner approach and much more readily understood.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I speak in opposition to the amendment. As to the first section, I think there should be a debate on the subject of whether or not two-thirds vote in each house of the legislature or an alternative proposition, that is, ratification by the majority of the qualified voters. I think there should properly be a debate on that, but when we get into Section 2, or now called Section 9 of this amendment, it is not Style and Drafting as is suggested. There are basic omissions in Section 9 that I have before me over what we have just adopted. I have listed three and I have only had a few minutes to look at it. There is a complete omission of an authorization by law to precede the submission of the question to the qualified voters. Now it was explained that that was not meant that state law, the operation of state law precede the submission on the local level but I see absolutely no justification for omitting any reference to "unless the debt shall be authorized by law" from the language.

There is also a complete omission of the requirement that was voted by this body that the legislature could prescribe additional qualifications for voters. Now this is not at all clear in Delegate Riley's amendment and "qualified to vote as prescribed by law". Now that could mean the normal qualifications of voters for governor, senators, members of the house of representatives, and it could very easily be so construed when what is meant by this body is that additional qualifications including a property qualification can be included if the legislature so desires. Under this Riley amendment I don't think it is clear at all that the legislature could prescribe a property qualification if they wanted to and we are going to substitute uncertainty and ambiguity for the clarity of the amendments that were adopted a few moments ago. And the third thing and I think the most important thing that is omitted in the new Section 9 is this -- you will recall the original one, the one that is now adopted requires that a "majority of the qualified voters of the respective political subdivisions approve the bond issue". Under the Riley amendment those others are completely omitted. This brings me back to some remarks that Delegate Fischer made late last night. He said that he didn't like the provisions of the committee report because it would interfere with the borough plan. Now I think the interference with the borough plan is completely removed because the words "of the respective political subdivisions" have been removed. This amendment that we now have before us would permit the voters of say, an overlapping district a portion of them only could bond the whole district. I think it is dangerous. It substitutes not only uncertainty and ambiguity but it substitutes a possibility where a portion of a political subdivision could bind the adjoining areas to an indebtedness. I don't think it is sound, I think it is definitely unclear as to especially this second portion that deals with local government. Now when we get up on the state level, I don't operate on the state level too often and that is another problem as to when the new state shall be able to incur indebtedness. That is a new problem there which should be debated but to throw in with the "baby's bath" an entirely new version of local government indebtedness with three omissions, all of which are going to promote trouble, is too much for me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I note another omission; it seems to me, from Section 9 by Delegate Riley's amendment, we have just adopted, put back in the words "not less than a majority" and he has a bare majority. Another thing I don't see is what is the use of having the clause commencing with "provided" in the fifth line in Section 8, at all. The reason I take it that the Committee put the first one in their amendment, was because the debt must be authorized by capital improvements specified therein so they made an exception by saying that the state "may by law contract debt for the purpose of repelling invasion..." etc. Now, there is no such condition preceding in Section 8 so

I don't see any sense at all in having the language "provided" because the first four and one-half lines give them authority to create any debt if they create it according to this proviso and that could be a debt to repel invasion or put down war or anything else, so I can't see the necessity of having that "provided" clause in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I am going to only confine my remarks to Section 8. I want all the delegates to seriously consider Section 8. I think it does two things. It provides two different ways by which the state can incur indebtedness for capital improvements; one, by a vote of two-thirds of each house; the other method is by a majority of each house and then referring it to the people. Now the only reason that you have any limitations or restrictions on the legislature is to prevent the legislature from impairing the credit of the state. You don't want to get a runaway legislature and deplete the treasury or obligate the people for something that they can't pay for. Now it seems to me that if you are going to leave it up to a two-thirds vote of each house, that we are protecting the state more adequately than we are with the present Section 8 as we know it because you are going to have to get 14 members of the senate to go for this capital improvement. You've got another point. If you pass some sort of act to provide for capital improvements and you don't get the two-thirds majority in either the senate or the house, then you refer it to the people. I think the people are going to give that particular matter more consideration because they are going to know that one of the houses of the legislature turned it down. There is another consideration. I think it is going to save the State of Alaska a lot of money because initially you are going to have all kinds of items to vote on. There is going to be a lot of capital improvements that the new state is going to have to take care of and the people are going to be voting on all kinds of items. People from Naknek are going to be voting on some kind of improvement in Juneau and vice versa, and people are not going to know too much about it, but the legislature is going to be adequately and well-informed on any issue that comes up in this sort of nature and I think that two-thirds of each house will more adequately protect the credit of the state and I think this Section 8 should be supported and should be adopted; and another consideration, I think it is going to save the state a lot of money by providing that the legislature can adopt it on a two-thirds vote and I think that if you send all of these things out to the people, they're not going to understand it as well as the legislature and I think that as far as the bond buyers are concerned, my guess is that they will be more satisfied with Section 8 as Mr. Riley has drawn it than with the way that we now have it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I can see some advantages in having the two sections where you specify the local political subdivisions separately. However, I can also see some of the questions raised by Mr. Hellenthal and I have an amendment that I believe will clarify that and in this amendment we merely insert between the word "vote" and "as" on the last line, "on the particular issue", and that would mean then the ones "qualified to vote on that particular issue."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, last line, insert after 'vote' the words 'on the particular issue'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg, what is your pleasure?

LONDBORG: I move the adoption of the amendment to the amendment and also would like to ask unanimous consent that in addition to that, instead of the words "at least" put "not less than" and that will conform with the original proposal by the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then your proposed amendment to the amendment would include that, also, is that correct?

LONDBORG: That is right, Mr. President, if there is no objection and it would then read "...then only on approval of not less than a majority of those voting on the question and qualified to vote on the particular issue as prescribed by law." Now, that would give the legislature or whoever makes the law the right to specify what percentage of majority, if it is 50 per cent or 65 per cent or whatever they may wish, it may vary in the future, it would give the law the chance to specify whether they be property holders or not, it would also give them the right to specify who shall vote on the particular issue if it be those living in that particular subdivision, they are entitled to vote, or whoever it might be, leaving it entirely up to the law to specify but I think that should take care of nearly all of the objections that have been raised to this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment or did you so move?

LONDBORG: I so move that it be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg so moves. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. White.

WHITE: By a little stretch of the imagination I would like to speak on the amendment to the amendment. It is probably a good amendment but I would like to suggest that we deal with the basic differences between this proposal, this proposed Section 8 and Section 9, and the existing Section 8. First of all, vote it up or vote it down. If by chance it is voted up, then get in to amending it because if we take this tack, we could be here all night.

LONDBORG: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: I believe that a person has a right to improve an amendment so that if it carries you are voting on the whole thing. Should this amendment as submitted by Mr. Riley carry and these not. I certainly would not want to have voted for the original amendment. I believe the issue should be on the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order is well taken. The argument should be on the proposed amendment to the amendment. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I raise a point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

HELLENTHAL: This Section 9 permits debts for capital improvements with no restriction. It says, "No debt except for capital improvements..." So capital improvements is no restriction.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, that would not be a point of order. The question now is on the proposed amendment to the amendment. Is there further discussion on the amendment to the amendment?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Could we have it read please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed section as it would read if the proposed amendment to the amendment were adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 9. No debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of any political subdivision of the state, except for capital improvements, and then only upon approval of not less than a majority of those voting on the question and qualified to vote on the particular issue as prescribed by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Are we voting on the amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are voting on the amendment to the amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Londborg?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Kilcher, you may address your question.

KILCHER: Mr. Londborg, "as prescribed by law", is that pertaining to the particular question or to the qualification of the voters?

LONDBORG: As I would take it, it would specify those who are qualified to vote. That is the way I intend the amendment to be. "The majority of those voting on the question and qualified to vote on that particular question." One law would tell us then who could vote on that one and then whatever majority is up to vote, that is fine.

KILCHER: I wanted to get this intent on the record, it is not plain from the language.

LONDBORG: My purpose of the amendment is merely to clear up what I think is an objection to the amendment and then beyond that you can argue the main issue. It is just to clear up what I believe is an objection.

KILCHER: In that case I am for the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 36 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, King, Lee, Londborg, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Nordale, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 14 - Collins, Hellenthal, Johnson, Knight, Laws, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Robertson, White.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Doogan, Gray, Hilscher, VanderLeest.)

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote from

"yes" to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson changes his vote from "yes" to "no".

MCNEES: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote from "no" to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees changes his vote from "no" to "yes". The Convention will come to order while the Chief Clerk tallies the ballot.

CHIEF CLERK: 36 yeas, 14 nays, and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has been adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, referring to Section 9, line 2, I now ask unanimous consent that the comma after the word "state" be omitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the comma after the word "state" be omitted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered. Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, in line with Mr. Robertson's suggestion of before, I would like to move that in line 2 of Section 8, after the word "authorized" the following three words be inserted: "for capital improvements". I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Could we hear the amendment again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 8, line 2, after 'authorized', the following three words, 'for capital improvements' be inserted."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you still ask unanimous consent, Mr. Fischer?

V. FISCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment? If there is no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Was your very strong objection to this amendment based upon the fact that it did separate the two problems -- state debt from local debt?

HELLENTHAL: No. I think as a matter of style, that state debt should be separated from local debt but I object to the three omissions that were made in the separated portion dealing with local debt.

NORDALE: That could be corrected by amendment, couldn't it?

HELLENTHAL: Then we are right back to where we started.

NORDALE: Except that isn't it clearer to have them separated?

HELLENTHAL: As a matter of style, yes. But I think that we are amending the action we have already taken by three glaring omissions made in this Section 9.

NORDALE: Could those be remedied by amending?

HELLENTHAL: Sure.

NORDALE: Do you think it is better to handle them in a separate package?

HELLENTHAL: I think Section 9 should be stricken in this amendment. We have already acted on the matter, we have adopted a very sensible rule with regard to debt on the local level and I see no reason to go through the agony all over again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

V. FISCHER: Could we have a recess, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Riley to Committee Proposal No. 9. Is there further discussion? Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard before Mr. Riley closes?

RILEY: I didn't have closing in mind as much as amendments to the amendment, after consultation with Mr. Hellenthal and others. First it be that there be added to Section 9 the sentence, "Additional requirements and qualifications of voters may be provided by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: You offer that as an amendment to the amendment?

RILEY: I do. It is the language adopted earlier, adopted with respect to the present Section 8. "Additional requirements and qualifications of voters may be provided by law.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Point of inquiry, Mr. President. Would you say amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Amendment to the amendment.

RILEY: A second point, Mr. President, would be the insertion after the word "question" on the last line of Section 9, "within the respective political subdivision". I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended. Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "In new Section 9 insert the following after the word 'question': 'within the respective political subdivision'.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent has been asked. Is there objection to the proposed amendment to the amendment? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: That is singular, is it not?

RILEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment? If there is no objection the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I wonder why we are going to all this trouble with all these minor amendments to the amendment. We are using up a lot of time and every time we amend this amendment it gets closer to our original Committee report. If we like the original one why not accept it? There is a difference in that Mr. Riley's amendment here separates the matter dealing with the state and the matter dealing with the local subdivisions, but the Committee on Style and Drafting has authority to rearrange matters such as that. I don't see why we're bothering with this at all. It seems that we liked the original report. Why didn't we stick to it?

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Riley has one more amendment, I think.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I was deferring to the Chairman of the Style and Drafting for a statement of his authority on that. I doubt that it extends that far. The third proposed amendment to the amendment is the use of the language "unless authorized by law" to be inserted on the second line following the word "state". Now, subject to Mr. Hellenthal's views on this, I am in doubt as to that being the proper spot for its placement, lest we get in trouble with "except for capital improvements".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I have a question. Does this pertain to Section 9 now?

RILEY: Yes, Section 9.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Where was that offered?

RILEY: It was offered following the word "state" on line 2, but I would like to direct a question to Mr. Hellenthal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Well, I think the original said, "No debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of the state..." then come some commas and then you read, "unless the debt shall be authorized by law". I think we have it in precisely the same place as it was in the one that has been adopted.

RILEY: How about using it as a preface to that sentence?

HELLENTHAL: I have no objection to that.

RILEY: I would prefer that lest we get in trouble on the language covering capital improvements, and so suggest that the first sentence, or that Section 9 starts "unless authorized by law" and I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended. Is there objection? If there is no objection the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to the proposed amendment as amended? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I don't have any amendment but I do feel that the major difference between the amendment as offered and the Committee section has not been brought out. The amendment allows a legislature by two-thirds vote to create a debt and personally I don't like that. I think the people should be allowed to vote on whether or not the state shall become indebted and the statement that the legislature is usually more informed on subjects of this kind than the people, I don't believe to be true. I don't think we would have to go very far back in the history of the Territory to bring out some very strong examples of actions by a legislature that would bear me out, and for that reason and that reason alone, I oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Riley a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I am wondering if having put the "unless authorized by law" in the place you have put it, if you haven't now made it say that, "No debt shall be contracted except as provided by law except for capital improvements." Isn't that how it will read now?

RILEY: That is what is disturbing me and that is what prompted my query of Mr. Hellenthal a moment ago. I confess that I think your point is well taken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I think we can all agree on one thing, that my initial reference to trying the patience was perhaps correct. We have, again I believe, come forward with a little improvement and I would read Section 9 as now proposed -- an amendment to the amendment. "Section 9. Unless authorized by law for capital improvements no debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of any political subdivision of the state and then only upon approval of not less than a majority of those voting on the question within the respective political subdivision and qualified to vote on the particular issue as prescribed by law. I won't read the last sentence.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent for that rearrangement.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted. Would the Chief Clerk please read Section 9 as it would appear.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 9. Unless authorized by law for capital improvements no debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of any political subdivision of the state and then only upon approval of not less than a majority of those voting on the question within the respective political subdivision and qualified to vote on the particular issue as prescribed by law. Additional requirements and qualifications of voters may be provided by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: May we have it read again, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please slowly read the proposed Section 9 as it would read if the amendment to the amendment was adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: May I ask Mr. Riley a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

CHIEF CLERK: What you do in this amendment is take out "except" and put "for capital improvements" after "unless authorized by law"?

RILEY: That is right, yes.

(The Chief Clerk again read the amendment to the proposed amendment.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent has been asked for the adoption of the proposed amendment to the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I have an amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to the amendment as amended.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 2 of the amended Section 8, strike 'either by a two-thirds vote in each house of the legislature or'."

WHITE: I move the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White moves the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

MCNEES: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees seconds the motion. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, this gets us back to the point, I think. The major difference between the committee proposal as amended here all afternoon on the floor and this amendment to the amendment to the proposal is this matter of allowing debt to be incurred by a two-thirds vote in the legislature. In opening the argument for the adoption of this amendment, Mr. Riley said that it had the added feature of clearing up doubts, that apparently still remained in his mind anyway, as did the original committee proposal which really is a side issue. Those doubts can always be cleared up by amending the committee proposal as it now stands. The basic issue here is whether or not you want the incurrence of debt to be approved by the voters of the State of Alaska, or whether you do not, and I offer this amendment to get us back on the subject. It is the opinion of the majority of the Committee that such debt should be approved by the voters of the state as a minimum requirement. I think I am safe in saying the basic reason lying behind that is because incurring debt is different from most any other type of legislation in that it not only goes directly to the pocketbook of the people concerned, but all the people of the State, but also to the pocketbook of future generations and that is why, in my mind anyway, so many states, so many local political subdivisions, always require debt to be approved by the people. Now, Mr. Buckalew said that the only reason for putting restrictions on the legislature in this matter is that, the legislature might impair the credit of the state. That is true but I submit that a bond proposal to the people via referendum is the greatest way that you can take as a minimum requirement to insure that the credit of the state will not be impaired. How you can logically argue that you can take any better step to preserve the credit of the state than referendum I do not know. It has been said that not too many people voting on a referendum know what they are voting about. I think rather that when they are voting on money which they will have to repay, in which their children will have to repay, they know in their own minds very clearly whether they want to vote for that debt or not, whether or not they know an awful lot about the project that is anticipated should the debt be incurred. I think the basic question here is whether or not you want the people of the state to pass on an incurrence of debt or whether you want to leave it to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, I would like to speak in favor of the amendment to the amendment. Allowing two methods by which a state or political subdivision may provide for bonded indebtedness cannot help but cause favoritism by the bond investment houses for one method or the other, and I think there is no doubt but that this would result eventually in the bonds of the state being classed into two different categories and there is not much question, in my mind, which issue would take the lowest interest rate. There is no doubt, I think, but what a bond house would look upon those that were passed by a majority vote in each house with ratification by a majority of the qualified voters. They would certainly prefer that over bonds that had been just approved by two-thirds of the vote in each house of the legislature. Any of the delegates here who had experience -- and it would probably be on the city level -- of bond issues, will know the very critical attitude that bond houses take towards all bond issues and this is particularly true in Alaska. We are paying a penalty up here in interest rates. Many of our bond issues are, in many cases, safer than bond issues in the states that enjoy a very much more favorable interest rate and putting these two methods implies that we are trying to seek out the most expedient way at the time that the bond issue was required and I feel very certain that it would eventually result in two classifications on general obligations of the State of Alaska and I ask that this amendment to the amendment be voted for.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER. Mr. President, I disagree with Mr. Nerland that we're setting up two separate classifications of bonds which would be worse than what is being set up in the committee proposal. The committee proposal in Section 10 authorizes the floating of bonds by public corporation when the only security from such indebtedness is the revenue of the enterprise or public corporation. The Committee, in putting that in, has specifically told us in the commentary that they're condoning a practice which is used in every state as a means of getting around this kind of bonding restriction as we currently have in Section 8. In other words, we put the provision in Section 8, it is a cumbersome provision. We are telling the state that that of course is of too much bother. Therefore, go ahead and create a separate corporation; if you want to build highways, set up a toll road, set up a separate corporation. If you want to put up public buildings, set up a separate corporation and many states have done that, float bonds and then the state purchases those buildings from that corporation. What happens in those cases? In those cases the credit of the state is not pledged, the interest rates are much higher. In other words, if we follow that procedure we are leaving ourselves open to much higher rates than anything that would be created in authorizing the enactment of bond legislation by two-thirds vote because when we do it by two-thirds vote the credit of the state is pledged. I would also like to point out that in the past anyone who has followed a bond market knows full well that it is not the procedure for the enactment of bond legislation that will govern the interest rates, it is simply the ability to repay and the faith that the bond buyers have in the governmental entity. We have the picture perfectly right here in Alaska. What has been the interest rates in Alaskan cities? Over recent years it has been running 4 3/4 per cent to 5 per cent. Only within the last year or so the city of Fairbanks had to sell $3,000,000 worth of bonds and I think at an interest rate at 4 3/4 per cent. That is phenomenal. The average interest rates in the states run around 2 1/4 per cent, 2 per cent, 1 3/4 per cent. At the same time the city of Anchorage only last summer sold bonds at an interest rate of 3.67 per cent. That wasn't done because the law under which those bonds were sold are any different than those at Fairbanks. It was done because they could show the bond buyers that they have a secure investment. That is the only thing that will bring these bond rates down. What we are trying to do here in the adoption of the two-thirds vote in each legislature for capital improvements is to provide means whereby we won't force the state into circumvention of the intent that we have. It won't force the state into a means of selling bonds to establishments and separate corporations which will, in the end, force a much higher interest rate on the taxpayers of Alaska and thus will cost us more in the long run than anything that would be contained in this. I think just in terms of our pocketbooks we should vote down the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I wish only to state, even though the debate seems interminable, I think it is clearly within the memory of everyone that in introducing this subject initially this afternoon I called specific attention to this particular feature. It is at variance with Section 8 as we now have it. To reply just briefly to the suggestion of Mr. Smith, someone today may have suggested that the legislature might be better informed than the people but certainly I didn't venture that opinion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, just in closing, briefly, in answer to Mr. Fischer I think he has brought a side issue in here by mentioning Section 10. If Mr. Fischer can draft language that would eliminate the necessity for Section 10, I'm sure the Committee would go for it. The reason Section 10 is in there is because it has been found that no matter what you do, as far as the Committee can find, that way can be found to get around debt limitations, and, therefore, if in order to avoid suits in court you might just as well make the authority clear. I would suggest to you, if you don't like Section 10, to work on drafting some language that could eliminate it effectively. In any event, should your two-thirds rule in the legislature apply, you could still find it out via Section 10 if you couldn't muster two-thirds vote, so that it seems to me that all this reference to Section 10 is a little superfluous. Actually, if bonding the state via a special authority should result in higher interest rates, that is merely an added inducement to go back to the referendum where such issues ought to be. And secondly, if the legislature wants to take this end way around of getting at it and going to special authorities they are subject to check by the people, the people will know what's being done and they will react accordingly if they are not in favor of it. I think the basic issue here is, and was and remains, do we want the people to vote on inebting themselves and their children and their children's children or do we not?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Please read the proposed amendment again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike 'either by a two-thirds vote in each house of the legislature or'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. White be adopted by the Convention?"

POULSEN: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 29 - Boswell, Coghill, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, Gray, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, McLaughlin, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, White, Wien.

Nays: 19 - Awes, Barr, Buckalew, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McNealy, Marston, Nordale, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, Mr. President.

Absent: 7 - Armstrong, Doogan, H. Fischer, Hilscher, Londborg, McNees, VanderLeest.)

HERMANN: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann changes her vote to "no". The Convention will come to order while the Chief Clerk tallies the ballot.

CHIEF CLERK: 29 yeas, 19 nays, and 7 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to the proposed amendment, or is there further discussion? Mr. Metcalf, you may offer your amendment to the amendment. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 4, delete 'a majority of the qualified voters of the state voting on the question' and insert in lieu thereof the following: 'not less than the majority of the votes cast by the voters qualified by law to vote on the question'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I move for its adoption and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf moves for the adoption of the proposed amendment and asks unanimous consent. Would the Chief Clerk please read that sentence as it would read if the proposed amendment was adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "No debt shall be contracted by or in behalf of the state unless the debt shall be authorized for capital improvements by a majority vote in each house with ratification by not less than the majority of the votes cast by the voters qualified by law to vote on the question."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent has been asked for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection?

V. FISCHER: I object.

METCALF: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Mr. Metcalf so moves. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: I feel that this part of the constitution is going to be acceptable to the people next April, especially those folks who are property holders. I think there should be some additional qualifications put on that phrase "qualified voters" on line 4. I like it to concur in the old Section 8. It isn't written in king's English but leave it up to the legislature and I'm willing to trust the legislature and I definitely don't like this phrase in here of the question of voting indebtedness being left up merely to qualified voters. I think there are many of us who came years ago, some of us came just last year who had faith in the country to invest our money in businesses, homes, actual buildings, and this phrase "qualified voters" could mean a class of people who are transients, who may live on our military bases, have been here for a year, and according to Mr. Riley's amendment will be qualified to vote on incurring indebtedness. I am strictly opposed to it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Metcalf a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mrs. Nordale, you may ask your question.

NORDALE: Mr. Metcalf, what kind of restrictions are usually placed on the qualifications for voting on a state debt?

METCALF: I couldn't answer that, Mrs. Nordale. I do know that down in our part of the country, I believe the city of Seward, Mr. Hellenthal may be able to correct me, I think it is 65 per cent of the property owners that vote on general bonds and I think everyone can vote on revenue bonds.

NORDALE: That is within a city?

METCALF: That's within a city. I kind of like that way.

NORDALE: Would you say then that only people who own property in the state, even though they pay income tax, school tax, tobacco tax, and all the other taxes should be allowed to vote on state debt?

METCALF: I think there should be some property qualifications as a part of the checks and balance system, I think there should be some qualification or indication that they are going to be here and live with us for awhile.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: This is the same as Mr. Cooper's amendment that was voted upon favorably by the delegates a few minutes ago, is it not?

METCALF: Almost the same, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I think you put in just two extra words, "by law" but they don't change the effect of Mr. Cooper's amendment. This is identical then?

METCALF: Almost.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to point out that the language in the proposed Section 8 that is supposed to be deleted by Mr. Metcalf's amendment is exactly that we had in the original committee proposal before Mr. Cooper's and all the other amendments. Those other amendments were required because in one section we were dealing with local government and with the state bonding indebtedness. I think that where we have separated them, this is perfectly clear language as it should be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Metcalf be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed will signify by saying "no". The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

MCNEES: May I be excused from voting based on the fact that I was out of the room when the question was called?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may be excused.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 8 - Coghill, Kilcher, McNealy, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Robertson, Wien.

Nays: 41 - Awes, Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, Marston, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Doogan, H. Fischer, Hilscher, VanderLeest.

Abstaining: 1 - McNees.)

CHIEF CLERK: 8 yeas, 41 nays, 5 absent and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption.

MCCUTCHEON: Question on the main issue.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" Mr. Barr.

BARR: I am going to vote against this amendment although

I agree with everything stated within the amendment. My vote is a protest on what we have been doing. We have spent the afternoon on getting back to the original committee proposal by amending an amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Roll call.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as amended be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 28 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Emberg, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Lee, Londborg, Nordale, Peratrovich, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh, White, Mr. President.

Nays: 22 - Barr, Cooper, Davis, Gray, Hellenthal, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Poulsen, Reader, Robertson, Taylor, Wien.

Absent: 5 - Armstrong, Doogan, H. Fischer, Hilscher, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 28 yeas, 22 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment as amended is ordered adopted. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Before anybody gets the notion to make a motion to recess I want to bring up a matter on which I spoke Saturday, I think, about the desirability of breaking the weekly night sessions by not meeting at night either on Wednesday or Thursday. I realize we can't make a motion to that effect but several people are anxious to make or break engagements they have already made for whatever day we do decide to break the night sessions on. I don't know if we are going to decide it or not but I think it would be a good idea if we could have a show of hands on how many would be willing to break this weeklong night session streak by not holding a night session either on Wednesday or Thursday and we could decide which later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, before we ask what the feeling of the delegates would be on that, the Chair would feel that perhaps Thursday night would be better because by the end of tomorrow night we might be pretty well along with some other proposal. It just seems to the Chair it might be better on Thursday night.

HERMANN: My only question was, whether we would be breaking again on Saturday night and if we do, Thursday would only give us one night in between while Wednesday would give us two.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Mr. President, as a matter of principle of everybody being tired, etc., about this night session, I say stay in night session. We have got a lot of work to do and we don't have time to fiddle around. We spend a couple hours fiddling around here and we have adopted a whole section which was virtually identical to another section that we spent all day hassling with and I think if we have to fiddle around with this type of thing we had better stay in night session until we get our job done that the people sent us here to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the feeling of the delegates with relation to the subject? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I think we should have one night off in the middle of each week to avoid getting "cabin fever" and we would make better progress.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I support Mr. Rivers' view. I think that the delay today was not only a matter of two hours but practically the whole day was caused by lethargy and inability to think, which I think is caused by overwork.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would ask that you ask for a show of hands on the nights of first, Wednesday and then, the night of Thursday as to which is preferred by a majority of the Convention.

MCNEES: First we should ask for a show of hands on whether we want a break or not.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Then the first question would be, by a show of hands please indicate as to how many of you wish to have a break either Wednesday or Thursday night? It seems that almost a majority of those present would desire a break, or more than a majority, some 30 arms it looks like to the Chair. How many would prefer Wednesday night in preference to Thursday night? It looks like 18 or 19 prefer a Wednesday. How many would prefer Thursday?

COGHILL: Mr. President, could we have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We don't know where we are on this matter right now. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, could we have another show of hands on whether we prefer Wednesday or Thursday?

PRESIDENT EGAN: All those who prefer Thursday night please raise your hand? All those who prefer Wednesday night please raise your hand? Thursday night has it and it will be the policy that the Convention will adjourn every Thursday evening at the close of the day that day. Are there other amendments to Section 8 of the proposal? Are there amendments to Section 9?

DAVIS: Is that the new Section 9?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, the new 9. Pardon me, Mr. Davis, these will have to be renumbered again. Are there amendments to Section 10, then? Section 11? Section 12? Section 13? Section 14? Are there other amendments to be proposed for Committee Proposal No. 9? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask just one question of the Finance Committee, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question.

V. FISCHER: Under the provisions that I assume will be in the transitional article, the laws of the Territory will continue under the state unless in conflict with the constitution. Now, at present we have a bonding act for municipalities, school districts, and public utility districts. That act will be in conflict with the constitution and I wonder if the Committee might consider the drafting of a transitional measure to continue bond acts until such time as they may be revised by the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: I would certainly be agreeable to that, Mr. Fischer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Chairman, I believe I voted on the prevailing side on the question of the two-thirds vote of the house. Is that not right, Mrs. Alexander?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

METCALF: I serve notice of a reconsideration.

2444

HARRIS: I move that we take up the matter of Mr. Metcalf's reconsideration at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Harris moves that we take up the matter of Mr. Metcalf's reconsideration at this time. Is there a second to the motion?

NOLAN: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nolan seconds the motion. The question is, "Shall the Convention consider the reconsideration of Mr. Metcalf at this time?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 39 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Collins, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hinckel, Johnson, Kilcher, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, R. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Walsh, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 10 - Barr, Coghill, Hermann, Hurley, Laws, Londborg, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Sweeney.

Absent: 6 - Armstrong, Doogan, H. Fischer, Hilscher, Riley, VanderLeest.)

DAVIS: I'll change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis changes his vote to "yes".

BUCKALEW: I'll change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew changes his vote to "yes".

V. FISCHER: I'll change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer changes his vote to "yes".

COOPER: I'll change my vote to "yes".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper changes his vote to "yes". The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk is tallying the ballot.

CHIEF CLERK: 39 yeas, 10 nays and 6 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the reconsideration of Mr. Metcalf's vote on the amendment that is referred to is before us at this time. Mr. Metcalf.

2445

METCALF: Briefly, Mr. Chairman, I'm a little ignorant on the customs so I will have to ask.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The amendment is before us once more, Mr. Metcalf, and open for discussion.

METCALF: At this time the question comes up on whether or not the constitution must be approved by a two-thirds vote in each house. I shall vote "yes" for it. I feel that in the matter of adjusting the checks and balances in our government that this will add another check, especially in voting indebtedness on the state. My philosophy that the voters who will vote indebtedness on the state ought to have a little property qualifications. Maybe I'm right and maybe I'm wrong, but anyway this is the way I'm going to vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Point of information. It is a little difficult for us to know without better identifying the amendment that he is talking about.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment. It refers to the amendment by the whole -- was it the amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. White?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes, the amendment to Mr. Riley's amendment, striking "either by a two-thirds vote in each house of the legislature or".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of information. A "no" vote will uphold the section as it is, the two-thirds requirement?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct.

KILCHER: I think that Mr. Metcalf was mistaken when he stated that he would change to a "yes" vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The amendment offered by Mr. White would strike the words "either by a two-thirds vote in each house of the legislature or" and it carried, the "yes" votes prevailed and so it carried and it was stricken. Now Mr. Metcalf has asked to reconsider. Anyone who favors having that "either by a two-thirds vote in each house" in there would, on this motion, vote "no".

MCLAUGHLIN: That is right.

NORDALE: May I ask a question, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: This whole amendment has been adopted with that stricken. Supposing it should come back in. Will we have to vote on the whole thing again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale, it would mean then that the amendment has been adopted. If Mr. White's amendment would be adopted now, it would mean that that is out of the original amendment, the section as it appears in Section 8 because the reconsideration, while we voted on the whole thing, the reconsideration of Mr. Metcalf on that particular amendment just brings that part of it before us for a vote.

NORDALE: My question is this though: the thing has been adopted; his amendment carried didn't it; that was stricken?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes.

NORDALE: Then the section was adopted. Then supposing on a second vote, supposing it is not stricken, then it goes back in, but it doesn't affect the final vote on the adoption of the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would not.

NORDALE: I would like to know for sure before I vote.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be the ruling of the Chair. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, I voted "no" on adopting the Riley amendment but I am sure there are people who voted "yes" for that amendment who would not have voted "yes" if the language "either by a two-thirds vote in each house of the legislature" had remained in. I am sure there are people who voted for that who would not have voted for it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, I think the question that Mrs. Nordale has raised is a valid one. Now have we done something here that a reconsideration cannot reach? Only by rescinding the entire action could we accomplish what Mr. Metcalf is attempting to do and the Chair was wrong in allowing a motion of reconsideration on that amendment after we had actually adopted the section. The Chair was not really thinking, the Chair will admit that. Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I move that our action in regard to the reconsideration be expunged from the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann moves that the action with relation to the motion of Mr. Metcalf's move for reconsideration be expunged from the record.

HELLENTHAL: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I know of no rule that permits expunging anything from our record, no matter how desirable or undesirable, and when I speak of rules, I mean the rules of this body which said that a complete record should be made of all plenary sessions and I think it is out of order and not only out of order, I think it is an undesirable practice.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, under that rule you might have a good point of order. If there is no objection the Convention will stand at recess for one or two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chair has already stated that the Chair was in error and apologizes to Mr. Metcalf for not catching it sooner, in allowing the reconsideration at that time. It would have to have been done by rescinding; but as to a motion to expunge, a majority vote of the members can do it. If our rules are such that the body wishes to expunge something they could do it by a two-thirds majority vote of the Convention but there has been no second to any motion to expunge. The motion that Mr. Metcalf could use if he so chooses to pursue this matter would be asking that we rescind our action in actually adopting Section 8. It would take 28 votes to rescind the action on that particular action. Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. President, I so ask that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf, you move that the Convention rescind its action in adopting the proposed amendment to Section 8 as offered by Mr. Riley. Is there a second to the motion?

SUNDBORG: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg seconds the motion.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Is the motion to rescind debatable?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The motion to rescind is debatable.

SUNDBORG: I would like to ask Mr. Metcalf a question. Is it your purpose in offering this motion that you want to get at the language in Section 8 and change it, if we do rescind our action?

METCALF: Mr. Sundborg, I liked the original Section 8 this afternoon much better. In fact I think it would be easier to get ratification next April. If you want my honest opinion about it I liked the Section 8. There isn't too much language and there isn't too little. It leaves it pretty much up to the legislature and I like Section 8 as it reads in the original proposal.

SUNDBORG: Thank you.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the Convention rescind the action it took when it adopted the amendment as offered by Mr. Riley?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 14 - Barr, Cooper, Hellenthal, Johnson, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, McCutcheon, McNealy, McNees, Metcalf, Robertson, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 37 - Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Collins, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hinckel, Hurley, King, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, Marston, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, White.

Absent: 4 - Armstrong, H. Fischer, Hilscher, VanderLeest.)

CHIEF CLERK: 14 yeas, 37 nays, and 4 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed motion has failed of passage. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move that we stand at recess until 7:00 o'clock this evening.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements to be made at this time?

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move that Committee Proposal No. 9 be referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment.

HELLENTHAL: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It isn't necessary, but Mr. Sundborg moves, seconded by Mr. Hellenthal that the Committee Proposal No. 9 be referred to the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment.

V. FISCHER: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

V. FISCHER: You called for additional amendments for this particular article. There were no additional amendments, the Chair can refer that without a motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, if the body wishes.

SUNDBORG: But it had not been referred, had it, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has not been referred.

SUNDBORG: And it could not have been referred at this session if we had adjourned at that point?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If we had actually adjourned but we hadn't. If there is no objection the proposal, Committee Proposal No. 9 is referred to Engrossment and Enrollment.

SUNDBORG: I'll withdraw my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there committee announcements? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Local Government, immediately upon recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Committee on Style and Drafting will meet at 6:30 at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Nerland.

NERLAND: Mr. President, the Committee on Finance will not meet again.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Finance is not going to meet. If there are no other committee announcements the Convention stands at recess until 7:30 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. The Chief Clerk may proceed with the second reading of Committee Proposal No. 8/a.

(Committee Proposal No. 8/a was read for the second time.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chairman of the Committee wish to explain the article at this time? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, first I would like to apologize for the Chairman and the Secretary, and other members of the Committee for being a few minutes late; and I would like to assure you that it was not through reluctance to face the ordeal. I would like to call your attention first to the letter of transmittal accompanying the article, which refers to various delegate proposals, and I think that the letter is self-explanatory. I would like to emphasize two paragraphs, the one at the bottom of the first page of the letter, beginning at the bottom of the first page, which refers to a resolution or some other form of proposition to the Territorial legislature asking that a comprehensive study of necessary legislation in the resources field to implement this article be undertaken at the earliest possible time. The second is the delegate proposal which dealt with the fish trap question. Again, in conferring with the proposer of that proposal, I think that it will be satisfactory to refer that to the Committee on Resolutions, or to handle it as a resolution or as an ordinance. That, of course, can be taken up later. The first thing that I would like to say in regards to this article is the fact that in no state constitution will you find an article as comprehensive as this proposed article. For this reason I am sure that I can say, on behalf of the Committee, that we ask that each of you give this proposed article the closest possible scrutiny. We know that this article is not perfect. We have had a tremendous amount of help. We've had help from officials in both the Territorial and the federal government within the Territory. We have submitted it as widely as possible, and insofar as substantive changes are concerned, I don't think that we have had any recommendation, with one possible exception, which has not been met. Now, I, as Chairman of this Committee, I am sure, am in a more favorable position than has been any other committee chairman. This Committee has had as its Secretary a very able attorney in Mr. Riley; it has three competent and experienced mining men in Mr. Stewart and Mr. Boswell and Mr. Reader. Mr. King has had wide experience in the game, fish, and wildlife field; Mr. Emberg and myself have been commercial fishermen for a good many years; and Mr. White and Mrs. Wien have represented the public viewpoint. My reason for making this statement is that I intend to take full advantage of their capabilities. In explaining this article, due to the fact that so many of the questions which will be asked are of a technical nature, I am going to ask Mr. Riley, the Secretary of the Committee, to take over the explanation of the article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, in the last day or so, since the revised article was distributed, the Committee has heard from very few of the members as to proposed amendments. We will have a sheet of amendments coming out shortly, and as Mr. Nerland did yesterday, I would like to say that the Committee concurred in all of these. Some of them are merely typographical errors -- others go beyond that. We would like to have them accepted as a portion of the article as submitted by the Committee. We'd like to have these changes incorporated in the article at this point. I'll ask unanimous consent. I won't ask for immediate action on that until the members have had a chance to have a look at them. I believe it is the Chairman's thought that we start with the statement of purpose and go right through the article. A few of the articles haven't anything in the nature of a preamble because we are operating somewhat on uncharted seas here. We thought it desirable to include in the outset a statement of purpose, and we feel that shows the Committee's basic thinking; the doctrine of putting all of our resources, both to maximum use while, at the same time, safeguarding the public interest in the avoidance of waste. The second paragraph, which is Section 1, simply repeats the enabling bills and boundary coverage. That's the identical language contained in House Measure 2535. Section 2 indicates the state's proprietary interest, which shall provide for utilization, conservation and development of all of the resources. Now, it was proposed to the Committee by, I believe, Delegate Hurley, yesterday, that our recital of various acts in this language in accordance with provisions and applicable acts of Congress, including the act admitting Alaska to the union, might be redundant, and I'll go along with that. It probably is, but I think it calls attention at once to the Congress that our proposal is subject to the very act which to the Congress is of prime importance as concerns Alaska statehood. I think that it might have some merit, even though redundant, for that reason. Section 3 states that replenishable resources shall be administered on the sustained yield principle. I won't go into that in detail here, beyond saying that, in our reference to sustained yield, we have in mind no narrow definition of "sustained yield," as is used, for example, in forestry, but the broad premise that insofar as possible a principle of sustained yield shall be used with respect to administration of those resources which are susceptible of sustained yield, and where it is desirable. For example, predators would not be maintained on a sustained yield basis. Section 4 merely states the general reservation of fish, wildlife, and the waters. Section 5 is the controversial section which Mr. Smith referred to when he stated that with few exceptions the Committee has gone along with recommendations which have come to it from outside the Committee proper. The members will all recall that we have been advised of the wishes of many in the Territorial Sportsmen Association and the local chapters of that organization. It was the consensus, not unanimous, of the Committee, that the language set forth in Section 5 go into the committee proposal. I'm sure that when we come to that, later, further comment will be made. Section 6 might be a little obscure. Its purpose is to authorize the state to provide those aids and facilities which might assure the fuller utilization of resources, such aids as roads, for example, to undeveloped areas; the provision of soil studies in agricultural areas should the Territory in its administrative structure have such talent at hand to go out in the field and assist settlers in testing their ground for particular agricultural capacity; forest management, advice from any forestry agencies which might be sought from the owners of wood lots or timber stands, and various related aids. In other words, they aren't prevented. We don't know what the legislature will provide, but it is enabled, in this language, to enter such areas should that be its wish. Section 7 is a general declaration that all laws and regulations shall have uniform application as concerns the use and disposition of natural resources. This language, it has been held by some, is awkward, but it happens to be, almost verbatim, the language of an opinion in a Washington State Supreme Court case of 15 or 20 years ago, which has been cited and approved many times since. We feel that it has over-all application to the resource field. Section 8 reflects some delegate proposals whereby particular areas or sites or objects may be set aside apart from the disposable public domain for their historic, recreational, or cultural interest to the people. Section 9 goes on to define the state public domain as lands, interests, including submerged tidal lands, possessed or acquired. The thought behind "possessed or acquired" is to include both the prospective acquisitions and those held on attainment of statehood. That section also gives general authority to the legislature for the selection and administration of land in the state public domain. And, with respect to selection, of course, we face the immediate great problem before the state in the selection of some hundred million acres of land, which will be an enormous task and awareness of which has been a very real part of the problem in writing the resource article. Section 10 gives general leasing authority and states some qualifications. And Section 11 has the same coverage as to sales or grants. Section 12, by contrast with many state constitutions, gives very brief mention of the fact that the legislature shall establish appropriate safeguards of the public interest in measures it takes for the disposition of natural resources. Section 13 recognizes the reservation stated in the last several enabling bills, recognizes the thinking of Congress in those enabling bills. It assumes that the Congressional thinking will probably continue, but it leaves the door open in the event that Congressional thinking should change. Insofar as possible, we have sought to establish arrangements whereby prospectors and miners might be on familiar ground in dealing with the state in making their mineral entries, and in holding their ground and operating it. We've adopted, insofar as possible, the same language, limited to the extent we felt necessary to observe the reservation imposed by the Congress, or which we feel probably will be imposed by the Congress. At the same time we have, I feel, left ample escape provision in the event of a change in conventional thinking. In speaking of setting up a system of mining disposition or mineral disposition parallel to the federal, with which we're all familiar, I refer both to the metallic and nonmetallic minerals, and to the staking of the metallic minerals and the leasing of the others. Section 14 is concerned solely with water rights. The Committee has felt that the appropriation doctrine was the proper one for Alaska. We're familiar with it up to now; it has been the one adopted in most, if not all, of the Western states. Section 15 provides access to navigable or public waters of the state to all citizens of the United States or residents of Alaska. Section 16 is the provision whereby there shall be no exclusive right or special privilege of fisheries. Sections 17 and 18, I should say, are related, and have to do with eminent domain. In the one instance, Section 18 provides access to resources for their extraction, removal; Section 17, eminent domain as concerns use of waters or interests in lands, or improvements affecting either. The beneficial use concept is pointed up in Section 17. In the Committee thinking it is contemplated that legislatively or by legislative delegation a schedule of beneficial use will be established whereby there will be superior beneficial uses and inferior beneficial uses on down the scale. Section 19 is simply a statement of residual powers, a statement that the powers specifically set forth herein are not positive limitations. While I'm on my feet, Mr. President, I see that the correction sheet has been handed out. I'd like to run down those just for a moment. Page 1, line 8, is simply a matter of typing transposition in the word, "Alaska"; page 3, line 21, strike comma after "use" and insert "and"; the following line, a period after "conditions", striking the balance of the line; page 3, the last word substitute a colon for a semicolon; page 4, line 16, at the end of the line add the words, "force during". Now, as to line 18, we had considered a suggestion of another delegate, presumably, I believe, based on 1955 legislation, but we have stricken that from our correction sheet, and I shall try to speak during the first recess to the delegate who proposed it, because we're not offering it as a committee correction. On line 21, after the word "permits", the Committee asked that the words "and transferable" be inserted just prior to "licenses". On the same page, line 18, the first word will be changed from "to" to "in". We discovered the other evening that "sulphur" is spelled s-u-l-f-u-r, the preferred spelling in the latest dictionary, and we're changing that spelling on line 8 of page 5. And, on line 5 of the same page, the second word will be changed from "and" to "or".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, on line 3, "uses" for "use".

RILEY: Was that on our correction sheet, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: No.

RILEY: You suggest that? I wouldn't object to that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will you accept that as part of your amendments Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Yes, I will, Mr. President. On the other hand, I will ask that the Committee corrections as suggested be adopted as a part of the proposal submitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asked unanimous consent that the Committee changes, as read, be adopted as a part of the original Committee Proposal No. 8/a. Is there objection?

TAYLOR: I object.

EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second?

STEWART: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart seconds the motion. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I was intrigued by the Committee's spelling of sulfur, s-u-l-f-u-r. S-u-l-p-h-u-r is the preferred spelling, and sulfur is used by some American chemists for sulphur and its derivatives.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I believe the matter of the spelling of a word is a matter for the Style and Drafting Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It could well be a matter for the Style and Drafting. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: May I reply to Mr. Taylor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may reply to Mr. Taylor.

STEWART: I have a new dictionary, a Webster-Merriam that was just given to me the other day and it gives "sulfur" first. It is the same text as this one but a much later edition.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, did you have anything else, then, that was to come before the Convention, with relation to the suggestion made by Mr. Kilcher? Do you ask that that be held until after the recess?

RILEY: Yes, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would like to ask at this time, is it the wish of the Committee now that you have a recess at this time, as the rules might seem to call for, or should we go on and have a question period? Mr. Sundborg.

2455

SUNDBORG: May I ask whether Mr. Taylor withdraws his objection?

TAYLOR: Yes. I withdraw my objection.

SUNDBORG: Then we have now adopted the Committee's changes?

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, not as yet. The Chair hasn't --

R. RIVERS: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent has been asked. Has the objection been removed?

TAYLOR: I withdraw it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection the amendments as proposed by the Committee are ordered adopted as part of Committee Proposal No. 8/a. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask if anyone has amendments they would like to present to the Committee. If they have, then I would think it would be advisable to ask for a recess, and to discuss the amendments with anyone who has amendments prepared.

PRESIDENT EGAN: At this point are there any amendments that the delegates wish to submit to the committee? Is there any delegate who at this time has a proposed amendment he would like to speak to the Committee about? If not, Mr. Smith, evidently there are no actual amendments.

SMITH: Mr. President, then I would suggest that we proceed with the questions.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers, did you say you had a question?

R. RIVERS: Yes, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Smith, I refer to Section 6 on page 2 and ask --

MCLAUGHLIN: Excuse me, Mr. Rivers, but, would it not be more advisable to proceed section by section by section to ask the questions, so that we have some system, tonight?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would be, if that is the wish of the Committee, we will proceed in that manner. Does anyone have a question with relation to Section 1? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, not a question in relation to Section 1, I just want to inquire if all these references to different committees that are included on the message to the President have been made to the proper committees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I'm not sure that I understood. It's only through this letter, Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Then, Mr. President, I have a point of information. By just what method are they referred to other committees when they come in on reports like this? I'm a little bit concerned that something may be left out that properly belongs in the Convention. It is awfully hard to detect it if it never occurs. But, I would just like to know what procedure has been set up for reference to other committees when reports like this come in suggesting that they be referred to other committees.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, up to now, unless the committee had come back with a specific request for referring it to another committee, why, we have just taken for granted that each delegate, having had a copy of these statements of proposed referrals, has perused them and taken them under the proper committee's consideration. Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: In the Executive Committee, Mr. Chairman, we elected to report them back to the Secretary with our recommendations for proper filing or for recommendation to other committees, and so did.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. The Chair recalls that.

SMITH: Mr. President, I have a recollection in which I might be wrong, that it was decided that reference could be made where necessary, by committee chairmen to the various committees. I don't recall in any of these references to delegate proposals, other than one where reference to other committees was necessary, but I certainly will check, and if there has been an omission, I will correct that omission.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions with relation to Section 1? If not, are there questions relative to Section 2? Are there any questions on Section 3? Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I asked the question before, but before we took a recess, and I'm a little bit concerned on this sustained yield program as far as fisheries are concerned. Did the Committee go into detail on it as to how that would apply?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, yes, the Committee discussed that very thoroughly, and as Mr. Riley pointed out, this term "sustained yield principle" was not intended to apply in the strict sense in which it does apply in the management of forestry land. The Committee realized full well that it would be impossible to determine the exact sustained yield in the fisheries; but the Committee felt that there was a definite indication that would be of value that, insofar as possible, the fisheries should be maintained on the sustained yield principle.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: Mr. Chairman, then it is the opinion of your Committee, sustained yield basic program will be left, as far as fisheries are concerned, to the state legislature? Am I correct in that?

RILEY: I would say yes, Mr. Peratrovich, and probably by the legislature delegated to the fisheries agency. In the course of our work on this article, we felt obliged to assemble a glossary insofar as possible; and, I might read what we have agreed on amongst ourselves as the meaning of the term employed in the article. "As to forests, timber volumes, rate of growth, and acreage of timber type can be determined with some degree of accuracy. For fish, for wildlife, and for some other replenishable resources, such as huckleberries, as an example, it is difficult or even impossible to measure accurately the factors by which a calculated sustained yield will be determined. Yet, the term 'sustained yield principle' is used in connection with the management of such resources. When so used in this article, it denotes conscious application insofar as practicable, of principles of management intended to sustain the yield of the resource being managed."

PERATROVICH: Well, that answers my question. I just wanted to know how much consideration goes into that section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there questions relating to Section 4? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: If I may go back for a moment, the statement of purpose on page 1, line 6, where the Committee uses the phrase, "all peoples". Ordinarily, that, I think, would be meant to mean all the various races and nations of peoples of the earth. Is that what you mean?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Recognizing that preambles are sometimes couched in flowery language, we had in mind that all comers to Alaska were welcome. Does that answer your question, Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: I guess it does. You really do mean all peoples? You don't mean all citizens or all residents?

RILEY: Citizenship is not necessary now to participate in some of our resources.

SUNDBORG: What would you think of Style and Drafting dropping the word "peoples" entirely, and just extend to all the opportunity..."

RILEY: I don't think that would make it any more vague than it is now. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: That somewhat contradicts, though, an equally basic statement contained in Section 15.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I agree, Mr. Hellenthal, it does. We had in mind in that recitation of resident Alaskans, or citizens of the United States. The fact there had been hostile aggressors here coming by sea in the past, if it's possible to reconcile those two --

HELLENTHAL: "Persons" might be the way to do it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is an easy matter that Style and Drafting could handle. Are there any questions relating to Section 4? Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: Section 4, for example, if you have a farm, and have a lake on the farm, and you should stock that lake with fish, would the public be allowed to go in there and fish?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: It would be my impression that if you stock your own lake for the purpose of providing yourself and your neighbors or friends, or even the public, at a price -- the privilege of fishing in an extensive fish culture area, that those fish are not in a natural state. You have built up the fish population of that area with the particular purpose of marketing them. As a matter of fact, if clear ownership is established, and this is easier to illustrate if you have a pond, we'll say, the boundaries of which have been in some measure determined by you, if you have constructed and built a pond, certainly those fish are not in a natural state, and there is an exclusive right of fishery for you and your invitees. The problem is where it is a natural lake.

POULSEN: For example, if I have a homestead, and it is 160 acres; 80 acres of that is a lake. Would that be private, as long as it is within the boundary lines of the homestead?

RILEY: I would say, perhaps not.

POULSEN: That is the way I interpret your commentary.

RILEY: That has been a real obstacle all the way. I've done, more or less research on this and I'm not satisfied yet that any general and sweeping answers are possible.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

RILEY: I would like to pursue this just a moment, if I may, as soon as I find my reference here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, you are still attempting to find the answer to Mr. Poulsen's question?

RILEY: Yes, he referred to a homestead and we have some coverage to the effect that the United States will not convey lakes as he describes. Rather than hold up the Convention, perhaps Mr. Poulsen and I can get together afterwards on that point, if that's agreeable.

POULSEN: Yes, that's agreeable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's contained in Section 4 of the general reservations, Mr. Riley. It says the ownership of water is generally recognized as vesting in the state. Private rights can be acquired only to the use of the water. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Riley, I understand from your answer to Mr. Poulsen that Section 4, in the situation that he gave, would authorize a trespass by the public. That isn't what you meant, is it?

RILEY: We have a reservation procedure established and accepted whereby access shall be available.

POULSEN: The reason I'm so interested, Mr. Riley, is that I have such a farm.

BUCKALEW: I do too.

RILEY: I missed that, Mr. Poulsen. I'm sorry.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no objection, the Convention will be recessed for one or two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Returning to Mr. Poulsen's question, the only parallel I can give immediately, this is taken from Surveying of Boundaries -- a very recent volume -- with voluminous footnotes of cases. "The Interior Department cannot grant title to private parties of land covered by a navigable lake and such patent to that extent would be void." The Interior Department has administratively set up, I believe, 40 acres as the minimum area of a lake, which it would meander. The use of waters can be granted, but the ownership cannot be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I think, for the record, we should make an additional statement. As I understood Mr. Poulsen's question, he said that, suppose he had a natural lake in the middle of his homestead, could anybody enter his homestead to fish. Your answer was, "Yes". My question was, does Section 4 then authorize a trespass on somebody that holds a fee title?

RILEY: No, I didn't intend to say that trespass would be authorized.

BUCKALEW: That's what I added.

RILEY: On page 4, top of the page, it reads, "All sales or grants of State land or interests therein shall contain such reservations to the State of all mineral or water resources as are required by the Congress, or the State, and shall provide for access thereto, and to all other resources reserved to the people; except..." and here we get into the legislative field, "that the reservation of access shall not impair the owners' beneficial use, prevent the control of trespass, nor preclude compensation for damage." Now, how those will all be assured is conjectural at this point. But I'm confident that the state agency charged with transfer of these lands from the state to the private individual will have to write in such reservation in all of its deeds, and will have to establish by means similar to those that the federal government has adopted in issuing patents; that at certain places, if need ever arises where the owner's use will not be impaired, rights-of-way may be had across. It is relatively complex, I grant you, to make a generalization as to how that access will be accomplished without impairment of use.

BUCKALEW: May I ask a question on Section 11 while I've got the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We're going down, section by section, Mr. Buckalew. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I have a question along the same line that I think might clarify it. Did the Committee intend, in the case of a pond surrounded by private property in single ownership, to prevent the owner from exercising exclusive control over that pond?

RILEY: I will say, in reply, Mr. Hellenthal, that that very question is one which has been constantly before the Committee, and positive solution has not been had. I think it accurate to say that the Committee unanimously endorses the view which your question suggests, that we felt that a pond, which I assume would be relatively small -- maybe the size of this room -- should be under the exclusive control of the owner of the surrounding land. But, I think that the state, were such language adopted in the constitution, would have to set up by administrative regulation standards such as the federal government has employed in the past whereby minimum area would be established. The federal government refers to -- HELLENTHAL: That's very well, but where in this provision have you provided that language which would permit the state to so do?

RILEY: I cannot guarantee that it is provided, beyond calling attention to the paragraph at the top of page 4, which says --

HELLENTHAL: Well, just a minute. Do you think that does it?

RILEY: I'm not confident that it does. No.

HELLENTHAL: Don't you feel that when you say in Section 4 that "waters, occurring in their natural state", that would be a pond -- "are reserved to the people for common use." You've achieved the opposite result from what the Committee intended?

RILEY: I don't know that you can find it possible to convey water. The use of waters can be conveyed.

HELLENTHAL: I think it would be impossible to convey water under Section 4 -- yes. A pond anyway.

RILEY: It is my belief, from my scant familiarity to date with the question, that this is no particular departure from existing situations.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. Riley, in comparing Section 4 with your commentary on Section 4 I note that you classed fishing in private ponds or commercial fur raising -- you compare them to registered trap lines if authorized by law. It seems like the thought of having registered trap lines authorized by law would be in conflict with the term "common use". It seems like it's kind of dangerous to have in a commentary.

RILEY: Well, as I'm sure we all recall, the proposal for registration of trap lines has been made time and again in the past. Should registered trap lines ever be authorized in the state, I think it would be a parallel situation to the exclusive right of fishery you would have in an artificial pond which you stocked and made available to all invitees at 50 cents a fish.

LEE: I see. You wouldn't intend that it would be a public domain -- that registered trap line?

RILEY: I don't know where else it would be. I have never advocated it, but it has been advocated in the past, and this language is proposed by a committee member, just against the chance that such registration of trap lines should ever be authorized. "If" is the key word there, I would say.

LEE: Yes. Well, it seems -- I've done some trapping, and from the country that I'm familiar with, if anybody had an exclusive trap line in that area, why it would be a very exclusive right of your natural resources.

RILEY: Exactly. You are acquainted with the arguments pro and con, that have accompanied every proposal of a registered trap line, I'm sure.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Riley, it is my understanding that by your Section 4 you did not intend to deprive anyone of property rights, presently existing property rights, such as Mr. Poulsen would have in his lake in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment -- this would affect only public property, which is subject to appropriation or already vested in the State of Alaska, is that not right?

RILEY: I hope that is right, Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: But it is your intent that the Committee will appreciate that it can't deprive people of their presently existing property rights?

RILEY: Yes.

MCLAUGHLIN: That's clear, and the only reason why you say in "their natural states," I presume, that is ferae naturae of the common law?

RILEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 4? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: As long as the subject is up, I don't believe it is possible under your constitution to have registered trap lines. Is that a definite statement from your Committee, that it is impossible to have registered trap lines under your proposal?

RILEY: Well, under the general reservations of fish, game and wildlife, and so on, I would say that it would be arguable. It might be remote, if there were any possibility of registered trap lines. I might add that that suggestion was brought into the commentary last Sunday as an afterthought which seemed to parallel the artificial fish pond.

GRAY: I believe, like Mr. Lee here, that it would be absolutely impossible in certain sections of the country, only in isolated areas, because it would be in direct conflict with Section 7, which gives equally to all persons in a similar situation, equal use and disposal. As soon as you put in a registered trap line, what that does is keep other people out of that area. So as long as the reference came up to it, I would say Section 7, and if there wasn't anybody in that area you wouldn't need registered trap lines, but if you put registered trap lines in there, it's going to be in direct conflict with Section 7. I'd like that understood at this moment.

RILEY: It does. It should be understood that, to my knowledge, no member of the Committee advocates registered trap lines, not only the matter of the conflict you suggest, but I think we all agree that in certain areas it would mean civil war.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I'm going to ask Mr. Riley a question. Is it not a fact that many of the advocates of registered trap lines do it for the purpose of preventing a breach of the peace?

RILEY: That may have been the experience in Canada. I understand --

TAYLOR: They have registered trap lines there. And, to illustrate, a man might go down -- puts up his headquarters; and then, maybe 10 miles away, he puts up another camp, and 10 miles, he goes back and forth. Well, if a man does not have that registered, sometimes he has to fight for the occupancy of his own cabin. That's happened right up here. I've known several matters that have been brought to my attention in my office for help because somebody would take over the cabins, because there was no way of registering. The cabin was on public domain, they'd just get there first and take it. I don't believe there'd be any doubt but what they could register trap lines.

RILEY: Well, actually, the matter of whether they should or should not is not in the contemplation of this article.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President. Mr. Riley, in order to make Section 4 less broad so that the state could limit the people in their common use of wildlife, fish, and waters, could we not add to the section, after the word "use", such language as "under limitations prescribed by law" without hurting the intent of the Committee?

RILEY: My offhand response would be that that wouldn't do any particular violence to the section.

R. RIVERS: Very well.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 4? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I'd like to ask Mr. Riley one more question. Mr. Riley, isn't that a fact that your Committee discussed this matter, and set them out in the way they did so that the legislature would implement the policies you've established in this article?

RILEY: Oh yes, we conceive that there will be considerable legislation essential to give this any meaning or application.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. Riley, could you conceive that the question of these small size lakes or ponds, which are very frequent in my part of the country, that if such a small lake or pond were included in a homestead and constituted part of the acreage of the homestead, that this particular body of water -- which a lot of homesteaders, by the way, are draining for purposes of farming -- that this particular lake included in the acreage -- accounted for in the acreage -- in other words, reducing the man's acreage for the purposes, couldn't that be considered private domain?

RILEY: Well, I think, in fact, Mr. Kilcher, that there is very little enforcement of the statement that the United States cannot grant titles to the underlying land, because the lake is there, and no one -- unless the lake is drained -- thinks in terms of the land below. As you look over any map put out by the Public Survey Office, it is my memory that a 40-acre piece of ground which may have an 18-acre lake on it is shown in land area, 22. Am I correct?

KILCHER: No, not to my knowledge, I think it's the other way around.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: In small bodies of water the lines of the surveys do not meander around small bodies, and oftentimes the small body can be included in the 40 acres, and still the acreage is actually shown. The larger bodies do meander, and the water is deducted, but the question is here, the statement that Ralph Rivers brought up, I think would be good, that certain limitations as to sizes should be imposed in regard to what would be a minimum size in connection with water and other uses of this nature.

KILCHER: Also, the term "navigable water", Mr. Riley, I think navigation means to go from one place to the other, and if the lake is navigable, it could, maybe, float a battleship if it is no more than 200 yards long. But you wouldn't go from one place to other on your place. So the term "navigable" should probably be circumscribed too.

RILEY: If we start on "navigable" we won't adjourn on February 7, I assure you. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Riley, one thing that did bother me -- I think it probably was a slip -- you don't contend that lack of enforcement amends the constitution?

RILEY: No, no. As a matter of practice, I simply suggested that any fine hair distinctions made as to what is conveyed are probably observed mostly in a breach.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Section 4? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Riley, maybe I misunderstood you, but you gave an example where a man created an artificial lake and sold coupons to fish for 50 cents, and you said that those people would be invitees. Did you mean licensees? I don't know whether it's important or not, it might be when you're discussing it with the rest of the section.

RILEY: We've seen in recent years where intensive cultivation of fish is had in an artificial pond, we'll say, simply a commercial operation to attract those interested in easy fishing. It was suggested that such a situation was either planned or existed in this immediate area, and the illustration was used only to show an instance of an exclusive right of fisheries. The artificial pond, the deliberate culture of the fish for particular commercial purpose took it out of the general language of the article.

BUCKALEW: I just had a different understanding of the word "invitee" than you had.

RILEY: Well, I think you're right, yes.

BUCKALEW: I just wondered if you were using that interpretation when you considered Section 4, as to what an "invitee" was as compared to a "licensee".

RILEY: I'll settle for the "licensee".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Section 4? If not, are there questions relative to Section 5? Section 6? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Riley, Section 6 speaks of utilization of lands, and development and utilization of fisheries, wildlife, and waters. Does the expression "utilization of lands" include forests? Did you leave out mention of forests on purpose?

RILEY: I would say that the term "land" in this usage would mean lands and the products of land.

R. RIVERS: I asked that for the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. Riley, would you include under reclamation the drainage of swamps?

RILEY: Yes.

KILCHER: Drainage of shallow lakes?

RILEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. Riley, wouldn't Section 6, in turn, just give the opposite answer to what you gave for Section 4, on trap lines?

RILEY: Well, frankly, I wish trap lines had never come into this discussion.

COGHILL: The reason why I brought the subject up is because the area I'm representing in this Convention, a big part of them are in that business, and I do know that, as you say, by bringing it up you will have more or less extended the civil war but I have known cases where the unregistered trap line has almost become civil war in that area. By your Section 6 you say the development of fisheries, wildlife, and waters -- on line 19 -- that would more or less take care of it where the state in turn could make some sort of a registration.

RILEY: Well, I don't know whether that would be development of wildlife, it would go to the utilization, perhaps, or the extraction.

COGHILL: Usually, a person in any one given area has been going back there and trapping for many years, conducts a program of conservation of their own. Otherwise, their trap lines would be assumed diminished and that would probably be well brought under that.

RILEY: I'm rather confident that the matter of trap lines was not in the contemplation of any member of the Committee or any consultant when these two sections were drafted. It was an afterthought which hit the commentary.

COGHILL: I see it's in the commentary. So, it must have been brought up at some time.

RILEY: It was. Sunday last.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions with relation to Section 6? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. Riley, would you think that, under facilities, improvements, and services, there may be financial assistance or financial participation of the state?

RILEY: Conceivably there would be. Certainly, if you were to have an agronomist to come out to your homestead and take some soil capability tests for you, there would be indirect financial assistance. Roads would be a direct financial assistance to open up your area.

KILCHER: I'm more specifically thinking of reclamation and clearing of land, putting it in to agricultural use.

RILEY: I would say that this section would not prevent continuance of existing programs of that nature.

KILCHER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions on Section 6? If not, are there questions with relation to Section 7? Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, isn't Section 7 pretty much a basic concept of law that need not be included in the constitution? It will be there whether you state it or not.

RILEY: Well, I should say that may be safe to rely on. That's simply based on the Fourteenth Amendment. The members of the Committee liked the language particularly for its application in the resource field, and the origin of that language from the resource field.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 8? Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may I direct a question to Mr. Riley on Section 8?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may.

JOHNSON: Mr. Riley, in setting up Section 8, was it the intent of the Committee to cover such things as archaeological deposits which might be discovered, and might, for scientific purposes, want to be set aside for use by scientists for that purpose alone? Do you know whether or not, under the language of this section, that that could be done?

RILEY: When you say for use of scientists alone, Mr. Johnson, you mean that the particular items would be removed from their natural setting and transported elsewhere?

JOHNSON: No, what I had in mind was, for instance, Doctor Skarland goes around quite frequently throughout the Territory and explores for fossil deposits, and sometimes they find them, and frequently they might be equipped, it's conceivable that they could be found in large quantity, and it might be advisable under circumstances of that kind for the purpose of scientific study, to enable the person discovering to have it set aside under the auspices of the state and used until the study was complete, so as not to prevent any destruction or loss of the deposits.

RILEY: Well, that is a thought which I don't believe had occurred to any of the Committee before -- your thought of restricting traffic through the area might endanger the object.

JOHNSON: I noticed you used the term "scientific interest may be acquired" and I wondered if it were the intent of the Committee to cover the thought I mentioned by that language.

RILEY: With reference to the people's "use, enjoyment and welfare" which gives me my only hesitation there to say yes. Conceivably, if the scientists concerned could advance some reason why it would be in the interest of the people, generally, to follow that course, I would say it would fall in this section. It's a thought that hadn't occurred, as far as I know, to the Committee.

JOHNSON: Doctor Skarland spoke to me about it one time, and he mentioned that a number of states, and countries for that matter, have provisions of that sort for protecting archaeological deposits, and he thought it advisable that we have some such protection in our constitution and I just wondered if this would do it.

RILEY: I think it might be desirable to frame language to accomplish that purpose within this section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: When you do, I might suggest that you read the National Archaeological Act, a federal act which treats this same subject and does not permit anyone to interfere with such objects.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I happened to be about three years ago trying to get an old village turned over to the village of Unalakleet, and I ran into the antiquities law. And that antiquities law said you shall not do anything about it, but we can dig up the bones and the relics and take them away, but you can't have them. And, I said, "You're not digging them up, or anybody else. We're keeping them." So they agreed we'd leave them there. One village, the village of Unalakleet -- the antiquities law.

HELLENTHAL: It applies in every state.

RILEY: Well, I shall appreciate, and I know the Committee will, any assistance in this respect towards redrafting this particular section to arrive at that result.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other questions with relation to Section 8? Are there questions on Section 9? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: I would like to ask Mr. Riley exactly what the Committee means in line 7 by "lands and interests therein"? Does the interests therein refer to forests, minerals and other resources, as used by the Committee?

RILEY: This is a question Mr. Fischer and I have discussed a little bit today, and I think that he has an excellent point that so often we're thinking of a document, a leasehold or a deed or a patent or a partial interest in a mining claim. I feel that the Committee intent was to cover the resources therein, the mineral below the surface, forests above, and so on. And some improvement of language or clarification may be necessary at that point. As a matter of fact, "interests therein" has been used throughout the article. In some instances it might have a meaning in one sense, and in some the other, and I'm very much pleased that we have the talent we have in Style and Drafting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions on this section? If not, are there questions with relation to Section 10? With relation to Section 11? Section 12? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. Riley, on Section 12, I take it it's the meaning and intention of the Committee that before the state can lease or sell any land or interest they'll be publicly advertised so the highest bidder may have the chance to get it, and not be handled the way it is now?

RILEY: That's the underlying thought. Some state constitutions spell all this administrative procedure out in detail. "The sale shall be at 10:00 a.m. on the courthouse steps after 30 days advertising..." and that sort of thing and we felt that to be a legislative concern, and we need only suggest it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I'm a little perturbed about the narrow definition that you seem to suggest would be implied to the word "interests". Do you mean to interpret it narrowly?

RILEY: I suggest, Mr. Hellenthal, that I thought that there were two possible interpretations.

HELLENTHAL: Which did the Committee intend?

RILEY: The Committee had in mind largely the surface of the land and everything it contained.

HELLENTHAL: Then, you intended the broad interpretation?

RILEY: I do.

HELLENTHAL: Well, then I certainly wouldn't leave it to Style and Drafting to superimpose their interpretation.

RILEY: As a matter of fact, I would like to quiet any fears on that score. I think Mr. Fischer and I are going to go through this and check each reference to "interests therein" and see if, perhaps, other language might be desirable.

HELLENTHAL: And be sure to bring it to the floor when you do.

RILEY: Oh, yes, before third reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I tried to keep up reading, and I had a question for Section 11.

HELLENTHAL: Before --

KILCHER: I'd like to ask a question if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher has the floor. You may ask your question Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: There is again, on line 5, the question of "access thereto", and line 9 the word "damage" is mentioned. Would you consider it to be a case of damage when a man has built his private roads, and there is a question of public use to use them? I happen to be in such a position, personally. I am the owner of a private road that is not travelled, and the road is, of course, in rainy weather, abused by people who are not conversant with that type road. Would you consider this "damage"?

RILEY: Well, conceivably you've been damaged. I don't know the full circumstances, and I wouldn't undertake to say yes or no, but what we're trying to do here is to indicate to the legislature that provisions shall be made for the compensation of damage, where it's established. I hesitate to rock the boat further by getting into this subject. It has been so well expressed for the record by Mr. McLaughlin, and I would like to abide with that for the Committee.

KILCHER: Offhand, would you say that the establishing of toll bridges or toll roads would be excluded -- private ones -- would be excluded or included in this section?

RILEY: No, toll roads was never mentioned.

KILCHER: I mean, I'm asking you, offhand.

RILEY: Well, offhand, I'd have to think about it. I don't quite see the application.

KILCHER: Well, thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, just on behalf of the Committee, I suggest that the personal problems -- we have 14 attorneys in the Convention -- and they will all handle the matter.

KILCHER: Mr. Chairman, I hope the Convention understands that I am mentioning a personal problem because that's the one I am most conversant with, but they serve a general application, of course.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any questions with relation to Sections 11 or 12? If not, are there questions on Section 13? Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have a few questions. Mr. Riley, on page 5, starting on line 10. You have a paragraph there dealing with "leases and prospecting permits giving exclusive right of exploration..." Now, in the first part of this proposal you say that all these resources shall be open to the general public, everyone treated alike, and also on prospecting and staking out mineral claims you say first come, first served. Now, why do you propose giving exclusive rights for exploration in this paragraph?

RILEY: Mr. Barr, in our mineral coverage in this article we have sought to be guided by the existing federal practice, in order to divulge to the people a system as familiar as possible to them. You will note in that paragraph that the substances, the minerals concerned are those which today are all disposable under lease from the federal government. This is simply an extension, or an adoption by the state of the existing federal practice.

BARR: Well. I can understand the word "leases" but "prospecting permits" sort of stops me. It sounds like no one can enter on any land for the purpose of prospecting, I mean, the original discovery, in other words.

TAYLOR: May I explain that?

RILEY: I refer you to Mr. Boswell.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: In the matter of prospecting permits, it probably applies to coal most forcibly. Under the federal Mineral Leasing Act you can get a permit to prospect for coal. Now, that permit is not nearly as expensive to get, nor as hard to maintain, as a lease is, and after a definite period of time, you can then either abandon your permit or you can take it ahead and get a lease. And that is why we have included this exclusive permit in connection with the coal, and these other leasing act minerals. Now, down at the bottom of the last line it says, "for the use of geophysical, geochemical and similar methods of prospecting for all minerals." Now, that is a rather new conception, and those are new methods. In order to use such a method, it is necessary to work over quite a large area of ground; and it is the intent of the Committee to interpret this narrowly so far as this last type of permit is concerned. In other words, we don't feel that many of these permits should be given, and they should be given to reliable parties, so that we don't have our land cluttered up with a lot of permits. You can have a situation where someone would ask for one of these permits and then, perhaps, through no fault of his own, not do anything about it and, of course, that would tie that land up for the time of the permit. So, as I say, we feel that this particular thing is a good thing, but it should be applied in a rather narrow way.

BARR: Well, the way I read it, then, if I want to take a scintillator out here in an airplane and prospect, I have to get a permit.

BOSWELL: No, I wouldn't say that type of prospecting would be included, there would be no permit necessary.

BARR: Of course, there are two types of prospecting. One, you have no knowledge of any minerals in the area, and the other, you know there is some, but you have to dig a hole to find out how much. In other words, one involves labor and the other involves walking around quite a bit. You're speaking mainly of exploration by development when you're speaking of prospecting this way?

BOSWELL: Yes, that's right. Now you're talking of using a scintillator, that would be for a type of mineral that you would locate. It wouldn't be a type that you would get a lease on. We're talking, in this case, about these leasing act minerals, not the metallic minerals that you normally locate under the federal laws.

BARR: Well, I still don't understand some of it, but I'll get together with some of the Committee during recess and go over it a little more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes. The Convention is at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Are there other questions with relation to Section 13? Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have a question. In line 5, page 5, the word "or" that was inserted by the Committee. I want to know just exactly why the word "or" was inserted in lieu of "and", and, if possible, shouldn't it be "and/or"?

BOSWELL: I think Styling and Drafting will rule that out. The thought there was that we might have a situation where the extraction would be on one claim and the processing on an adjacent claim. And it seems like it would be a little broader to say "or" instead of "and". That's about the only answer I can give on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Well, I had in mind, for instance, cinnabar, which is a rather costly extracting process. Now, eventually, according to this, the mineral claimant could extract on one claim, and the basic processing of said mineral could only be on another claim, is that right?

BOSWELL: I beg your pardon?

COOPER: The extraction or the excavation could be on one claim, but the processing could only be on another claim?

BOSWELL: No, that's not the intent. The extraction and basic process, they could be on one claim, but, if we have "or" in there, then if you had an adjacent claim where you were not doing any extracting, you could still have basic processing on that claim, or you could use it for tailings or any other of these things that are necessary in the mining operation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have a question. Mr. Riley, why is it considered desirable, in Section 13 on page 4, lines 16 and 17, to refer to the federal mining laws enforced during the year 1955? It occurs to me that that might seem to be a rather strange date to enshrine in our constitution which may not go into effect for several years hence. It's already 1956.

RILEY: That has occurred to the Committee. We feel that we know what a federal mining law was in 1955. A cut-off date must be established by one means or another. Conceivably, between the time this constitution is adopted by the Convention and the time it goes in force, many changes might occur in the federal mining laws which we do not anticipate. I might say it's perhaps remote, because there have been notably few changes in the last 80 years, but in any event, the Committee felt that some certainty should be established as to what federal mining legislation we were speaking of. What was its condition, what were its terms at a given moment?

SUNDBORG: Doesn't the term "those minerals subject to location under the federal mining laws..." etc., isn't it exclusive of the "coal, oil, gas, oil shale, sodium, phosphate, potash, sulfur, pumice, and other minerals" mentioned in a later part of this section?

RILEY: Yes, generally speaking.

SUNDBORG: And you wouldn't mind -- in that regard, you say. "and other minerals as may be prescribed by law"?

RILEY: That's another question, if I'm not interrupting.

SUNDBORG: Go ahead.

RILEY: It was brought to our attention not long ago that, assume this had been adopted 15 years ago, assume that uranium, for example, took the important place it has since, and that no Atomic Energy Commission had been provided. Uranium would not have been in our contemplation. Possibly, various complications would have arisen. It may be those elements and those minerals which have no foreseeable commercial value today which may become very important in the future. And that's the occasion for the "such other minerals" language, on wherever it appears. It's touched on in the other group of minerals on page 5, lines 8 and 9, and line 18, page 4.

SUNDBORG: You wouldn't consider it safe to say, instead of 1955, as of the date of ratification?

RILEY: "Ratification", I think, would be safe because that, we hope, is just a period of a few months in the future.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I have a question I'd like to address to Mr. Boswell, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask your question, Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: There was no intent on the part of the Committee, was there, to make necessary the use of a permit? Something like a hunting and fishing license in the prospecting for minerals on the public domain, only insofar as they would want an exclusive right to prospect, is that correct?

BOSWELL: Absolutely correct.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: I would like to address a question to Mr. Boswell.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: It occurs to me that when the federal government makes a grant of some 100,000 acres in excess of land, that it will embrace a good number of mining and mineral claims that are presently being worked or being held. I wonder had the Committee given any study to whether or not it would be the intention of the federal government, in transferring these lands to the state, to reserve under the present miners or those working mineral claims, to reserve them their rights under the federal mining laws?

BOSWELL: The present enabling act is very specific about any ownership of land in the federal government will remain with the person who has it, even to a claim that is staked. Even if that claim has been staked, presumably it can be carried right on through the patent if it is staked before that land is taken over by the state, it can be carried through to patent under the federal government.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions on Section 13? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Then I understand, Mr. Boswell, we don't have to cover that situation in the transitional measures.

BOSWELL: I don't believe so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: This is 2535, following the matter of selection of land, "Provided that nothing herein contained shall affect the continued validity of any such lease, permit, license or contract, or any rights arising thereunder."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I have another question. I don't know which one of the Committee members would answer this. On a geochemical prospecting permit giving exclusive right of exploration, would that include an entire watershed or would it be more or less localized?

BOSWELL: Well, it probably would include quite a considerable area. That's one of the features of geochemical prospecting. They start at the lower part of a stream and work up, and when they find some indication in their geochemical work, they might go up a certain tributary. These permits, as I said, would be for limited periods; and I would also call attention to the language in line 11 -- these leases and prospecting permits may be authorized. It doesn't say that they "shall" be, or anything like that, it's just leaving the door open for the legislature to permit it if we should ever want it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions on Section 13? If not, are there questions with relation to Section 14? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, on line 21, Section 14 -- whoever wants to answer it -- it says that, "Priority of appropriation shall give prior right." Now, my understanding is that you're adopting, in a general way, the doctrine of beneficial use. Now, with a statement such as "priority of appropriation shall give prior right", would you still feel that that right would be subject to beneficial use of the waters?

RILEY: I would say the next sentence does carry that concept and that has been clearly in the minds of the Committee.

HURLEY: Mr. Riley, I did read the next sentence, and my interpretation of the next one had reference to the relative beneficial uses that might be determined, and not to the particular beneficial use of the water that had been established by the prior claim. "The priority of appropriation shall give prior right" language is again an effort to stay with familiar concepts in Alaska, just as we mentioned with respect to mining locations. As is well known, the notion of "first in time, first in right," has long been followed up here, but I think, too, that it's generally established that some beneficial use, if you will, must continue.

HURLEY: I'll call your attention, Mr. Riley, to page 8 of your commentary, the third line of which you say, "the preservation of a prior appropriation right to water requires continued beneficial use," which answers my question as far as your intent is concerned, but I wonder if the section itself is perfectly clear to that extent.

RILEY: Well, there is a long line of cases to the effect that the evidence of a valid appropriation of water is first, an attempt to apply it to a beneficial use, existing or contemplated, and an actual diversion and application of it to that particular use within a reasonable period of time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President. Mr. Riley, don't you think that the separate reference to fish and wildlife at the conclusion of Section 14 might be construed to take fish and wildlife out of the operation of the preferential system with regard to beneficial uses?

RILEY: Well, I hadn't thought of it in that way, Mr. Hellenthal, but since you raised the question, I assure you we will think of it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I'd like to ask Mr. Riley a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. Riley, isn't it a fact that Section 14 is, more or less, a reiteration of the body of law that grew up through the utilization and appropriation of water in the Western states over -- in fact -- the last 100 years?

RILEY: Yes, I agree.

TAYLOR: And that the last sentence as to fish and wildlife, that you cannot contaminate the waters such as to kill off the fish or ducks or any other wild animal?

RILEY: Right. That was our thinking. We'd set up a general reservation earlier and felt obliged to call attention to it.

TAYLOR: When you use the words "a long line of cases", that is the cases of the Western states?

RILEY: The Western states, yes.

TAYLOR: Innumerable cases in which they define the rights of appropriation of water and the beneficial use of it, and the continued use.

2478

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions on Section 14? If not, are there questions on Section 15? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I'd like to ask here, Mr. Riley, in Section 15 why do you employ the use of navigable waters when they're expressly under federal jurisdiction?

RILEY: Well, I'm not sure that I can field that one, Mr. Gray.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

MCLAUGHLIN: If you don't mind my volunteering -- what might be navigable under state law might not be navigable under the Federal Constitution. And what might be nonnavigable would still be public waters of the state. There isn't a distinction between navigability of state waters and navigability of waters under the Federal Constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there any other questions relating to Section 15? Section 16? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Riley, in your opinion, does Section 16 prohibit the operation of fish traps without any further legislation by the state?

RILEY: I would say no.

SUNDBORG: Would it permit the abolition of fish traps by statute?

RILEY: I don't think that question necessarily arises in connection with this section. Perhaps you have read the last paragraph in our letter of transmittal.

SUNDBORG: I have.

RILEY: The White Act specifically forbids the exclusive right of fisheries, and yet has never been the means for abolition of fish traps. That, perhaps, is a very superficial answer.

SUNDBORG: Is there anything in the constitution, as we have considered it here in second reading, which in your opinion would prohibit the abolition of fish traps?

RILEY: No, I think not once the constitution is in force.

SUNDBORG: You believe that the state does have the authority to abolish it?

RILEY: I do, or it will have.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Poulsen.

POULSEN: On this exclusive rights and special privilege, would Bristol Bay where they have set netters, Cook Inlet set netters, on the Yukon where the Natives have special rights to catch salmon, and so forth, could they be stopped under this?

RILEY: I would like to refer that to Mr. Emberg, our specialist on that.

EMBERG: Mr. President, I don't know how much of a specialist I am, but I should say that we have had in effect since 1924 in Alaska a Federal act called the White Act, which says there shall be no several right or special privilege of fishery. That language has not operated to prohibit set nets with resident qualifications being operated in the Bristol Bay fisheries any more than it has operated to prohibit fish traps in other places, so I don't see how you can restrict it here.

POULSEN: Oh, I'm for it. Don't get me wrong.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relative to Section 16? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Emberg, we have a proposed ordinance which we've drawn, which simply states that there shall be no traps for the commercial taking of salmon. That ought to do it, wouldn't you think, Mr. Emberg?

EMBERG: Yes, if you would have said there will be no fixed gear operating, you would cover set nets, too, but you didn't; you specifically mention traps.

HELLENTHAL: Don't you think that this fixed set net should be excluded from the operations?

EMBERG: Well, certainly, I don't want them abolished by this constitution. I think they are a legal form of gear, and they are mostly fished by residents of Alaska, and I don't think it would be to the interest of the state or its people to provide for the abolishment of all forms of fixed gear.

HILSCHER: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Riley a question? In this discussion just the last few minutes, I believe I understood you to say that you felt that the state had the authority to supervise or to abolish fish traps under this constitution.

RILEY: Yes, it will by statehood itself.

HILSCHER: Did you mean to indicate, then, that a specific ordinance would not be necessary in ordinances and transitions?

RILEY: When statehood is achieved, the state itself may act, with or without an ordinance, meanwhile.

HILSCHER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Emberg a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Do you think, Mr. Emberg, if the words "no exclusive rights or special privilege" is interpreted right, that this section might make it mandatory that the state should abolish fish traps?

EMBERG: I think that inasmuch as they operate in the line of being an exclusive right or a special privilege that this common sense application, whether their legal definition doesn't cover that same sense, that this is a good indication that that type of fishing would be frowned upon under the constitution.

KILCHER: That it might be considered unconstitutional? Fish traps might be considered unconstitutional if this is going to be the constitutional language?

EMBERG: Not so far as I know under the doctrines of fishery rights, as I understand them that have been decided in the state supreme courts or in the federal courts. I wouldn't rely on this section to abolish fish traps. It would take a specific act of Congress, or of the state legislature, or a constitutional provision, or an ordinance. I want to say, too, for the record, that in regard to the questions about the authority of the state to abolish fish traps, it would also have the authority to abolish any presently legal form of gear, so this is not discriminatory.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. Riley, suppose that the present Secretary of the Interior, Douglas McKay, or whatever his name is, provides by an Act of Congress, that fish traps shall be abolished over a ten-year period, say, starting six months from now, do you think that would deprive the State of Alaska of their inherent power to abolish the traps?

RILEY: I confess that thought has occurred to me as to whether any such motivation might have prompted it. I feel, without having done any research on the subject, that when the state comes into being and sovereign rights may be exercised, that any administrative directive as to fish traps lasting five years or ten years, will have to give away to the decision of the state made known in its sovereign capacity. I don't profess to have looked into the subject at all, but I rather doubt that our sovereignty could be limited by that device or its full exercise. And certainly I think it is a subject which we might concern ourselves with.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratovich.

PERATROVICH: I want to ask Mr. Riley one question, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question, Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: Then it's the feeling of the Committee that perhaps it is best not to single out any type of gear in respect to the fisheries? There was a suggestion made, could it not be spelled out in the form of an ordinance, and I think Mr. Emberg spoke of that -- your explanation was against that, if I understood it correctly. Is it the feeling of the Committee that it's best to leave this particular subject out of the constitution, or ordinances?

RILEY: I reply in this manner -- the Committee feels that it's desirable that this Convention express itself on the subject of the abolition of fish traps as has every deliberative body in Alaska since 1913, every legislature, I should say. We do not feel that it should appropriately be a provision frozen into the constitution as such. We feel that that expression may be made effectively by ordinance, and it can be made by resolution, but that the Constitutional Convention should go on record in that respect. For one thing, if it were to be placed in the constitution, to be there forever, I think it would detract from the dignity of the document in appearing to be a matter of permanent record of economic sanctions.

PERATROVICH: I was satisfied with the explanation that you gave in your answer to someone here, that you felt, under our constitution that there be a possibility of our legislature taking that action. That's the reason I mentioned this question.

RILEY: When Doctor Gabrielson appeared in public hearings here, I think he echoed the feelings of many when he said he felt he knew what the number one act would be in the first state legislature, barring earlier action to abolish fish traps by this group.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions in relation to the section? Mr. Sundborg?

SUNDBORG: Mr. Riley, if we can go back to the hypothetical case proposed here by Mr. Buckalew a moment ago, about the possible adoption by Congress of an act which would abolish fish traps over a period of years, can you see any possibility that Section 2 on page 1, where it states that the state shall provide for the conservation and so on, of resources "in accordance with provisions of applicable acts of Congress", might tie our hands, or tend to do so, if we should wish to abolish fish traps within the period which would be provided in that federal legislation?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: There, too, Mr. Sundborg, that's a question which hadn't earlier occurred to us. I'm glad to see it out in the open. I think that we would do well to consider that language in terms of your question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: May I go back to the question that I asked Mr. Riley, and I thought I got one answer, but it turns out now that I have the opposite answer?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: It is my understanding, Mr. Riley, that when Alaska becomes a state, it has the sovereign right to decide what to do with fish traps.

RILEY: That has always been my understanding, Mr. Hilscher, until a moment ago when Mr. Sundborg raised what may be a substantial reason to re-examine both Section 2 and all present proposals of the federal government.

HILSCHER: Discounting --

RILEY: Apart from that, I would say that the answer to your question is yes, unqualifiedly.

HILSCHER: Well, thank you. Then, if the answer is yes, then why should we have a specific ordinance brought into the constitution which says fish traps shall be abolished by the State of Alaska?

RILEY: I'm saying simply as a policy matter, for myself alone, although I think it is shared by the Committee, that I believe this Convention should go on record with an expression of some sort on the subject of fish traps, because that is of such vital concern to all of Alaska.

HILSCHER: I would be inclined to think that we are just asking for trouble by so doing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: I can answer Mr. Hilscher's question. If we provided it by ordinance, fish traps would be illegal the day Alaska was admitted to the union, and we wouldn't have to wait for the legislature to act. We could knock them out perhaps six months earlier. That would be the advantage of having an ordinance.

RILEY: We are in agreement, the Committee, on that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNeas.

MCNEES: Coming back to an answer here on this Section 2 on page 1, the acts of the Department of Interior are not necessarily an act of Congress.

RILEY: That isn't what Mr. Sundborg had in mind if I understood his question. He was assuming that there would be a Congressional measure adopted to abolish fish traps over a period of years.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Riley, has not the present Secretary of Interior and have not previous secretaries and the heads of the Fish and Wildlife Service, all said that they have no authority to abolish fish traps without an act of Congress?

RILEY: Yes, I believe that most of them have said that. I have heard it asserted otherwise.

SUNDBORG: But not by them?

RILEY: Not by them.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 16? If not, are there questions relating to Section 17? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. Riley, Section 18 says that eminent domain proceedings may be undertaken for obtaining private ways of necessity to permit essential access for extraction or utilization of resources. Section 17 says that no person shall be involuntarily divested of his right to use of waters, his interests in lands, or improvements, other than by operation of law. I wondered why you didn't mention eminent domain in Section 17 as well as in Section 18.

RILEY: Well, we felt that "operation of law" would be the institution of condemnation proceedings. We might suggest that eminent domain will be covered elsewhere in the constitution. In Section 18 we give particular stress to eminent domain as concerns the utilization of resources, the getting to resources. This language has appeared in a number of the Western state constitutions. I believe this is almost verbatim from Wyoming.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. Riley, it is true that eminent domain has already been covered by Section 17 of the bill of rights, which has been adopted in second reading by this group, and that reads, "Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation." Now, you'll recall, when the federal government took the city of Anchorage's rights in the Eklutna dam, that was public property, and I can't find any provision anywhere in the constitution or the proposals which provides for compensation for the taking of public property.

Can you refer me to any such provision?

RILEY: No, I think not.

HELLENTHAL: Would you object, then, to adding the following language following Section 18: "and just compensation for such taking, as well as the taking or damage of inferior property rights, shall be made." Now, that language would cover the taking of an inferior private or an inferior public property right in the process of this balancing of the beneficial interests and in the hierarchy of beneficial interests that you set up in this article. Would that language be --

RILEY: I see no objection to it, Mr. Hellenenthal. I'd like to get the full expression, though, if I may.

HELLENTHAL: That answers my question. I can give it to you later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 17 or 18? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I might say, with regard to Section 18, I believe that matter is partially taken care of in the present statute, in that the state reserves a strip of land along the section lines which will be used for roads for access, the egress and ingress to property. Then if there was no such a way, why, a person who has property, then the only way for access to it is over somebody else's land, they always have the right of eminent domain to secure a roadway across somebody else's land. The general law takes care of that to a great extent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to Section 19? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, regarding Section 19, there too, there will be other coverage in the constitution which may well eliminate need for this, but the Committee felt obliged to throw in a statement on residual powers just to call attention to it for an appropriate place in the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there are no other questions at this time, Mr. Smith, is it your pleasure that we hold up the amendment process until you have had time to have a committee meeting, and that each of the delegates who might have proposed amendments or questions that might lead to amendments meet with your Committee?

SMITH: I would so suggest, Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair was wondering, Mr. Smith, just as a suggestion, if it might be that you would ask for a meeting in the morning at our ordinary adjournment time, if that meeting might last for an hour or so, that the actual convening time or adjournment time of the Convention this evening might be set a little later, in order to allow your Committee to meet, and all delegates who might have questions know that the meeting would be set for that time, and be here and present to express their views? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: It would occur to me that if we have an idea of how many might have amendments, it would give us an idea of how long we would need in the morning to meet with them. Could we have a show of hands of those that have amendments or questions that they would like to be heard upon before the Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seems that there are quite a number all right.

BOSWELL: About an hour, I would say. I would move that we stand adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, and that we will meet with all those interested in discussing this article at 9 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell moves that the Convention stand adjourned until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow, with the understanding that the Resources Committee will meet at 9:00 a.m., and that all interested delegates be present at that time to be heard, and offer suggestions or amendments, such as they might have.

SMITH: Mr. President, I wanted to announce a meeting of the Resources Committee at 9:00 a.m. tomorrow morning in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Resources Committee will meet in the gallery at 9:00 a.m. in the morning. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee will meet at 9:00 o'clock in one of the committee rooms on the third floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Style and Drafting Committee will meet in one of the committee rooms on the third floor at 9:00 a.m. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: The Engrossing and Enrollment Committee at 9:00 a.m. tomorrow, also.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Engrossing and Enrollment Committee will meet at 9:00 a.m., also. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I should like to remind the membership that we have arranged for the one and only group photo of everybody tomorrow morning at 10:30, and would the gentlemen please have their hair combed and look nice?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Group photo will be taken at 10:30 a.m. Is that right, Mr. Hilscher?

HILSCHER: That's right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now are there other committee announcements or any other announcements to be made at this time? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. Rosswog was to announce a committee meeting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does anyone know what time the Local Government Committee plans to meet in the morning? Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: We have a meeting scheduled for tonight, and I assume that we will decide at that time. Tonight's meeting will be in town at Apartment No. 19, at the Alaskan Inn, as soon as the Committee can get there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Local Government Committee will meet this evening at Apartment 19 at the Alaskan Inn. Are there other announcements? If not, unanimous consent is asked that the Convention stand adjourned until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

ALASKA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

January 18, 1956

FIFTY-SEVENTH DAY

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have with us today the Reverend John O. Jeffcoet of the Native Baptist Church in Fairbanks. Reverend Jeffcoet will give our daily invocation.

REVEREND JEFFCOET: Our gracious Father, we pause now to recognize Thee as the sovereign Ruler of our universe and as the great Advocate of man's freedom and as one who has manifested Himself down through the years in a very lovely way in behalf of man. "And behold what manner of love Thou hast bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God." Our Father, we want to thank Thee for this present day and for every expression of Thy love and Thy beauty, and we pray, our Father, Thy blessings upon this Constitutional Assembly. We pray Thee that they may have strength of body and mind for the labors and duties that are before them this day. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll at this time.)

CHIEF CLERK: All present.

PRESIDENT EGAN: A quorum is present and the Convention will proceed with the regular order of business. The Chair will declare a recess at this time. The group photograph will be taken and the Convention will convene immediately following the photographing of the delegates. The Convention will be at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Does the special Committee to read the journal have a report to make at this time? Mr. Knight.

KNIGHT: Mr. President, the Committee on the journal of the 50th day has the following corrections to report: page 10, fourth paragraph from the top of the page, strike the letter "s" from "Mrs."; page 13, sixth paragraph from the top of the page, delete "proposed" and insert "proper"; page 15, after the last roll call vote, eighth line from the bottom of the page, change "ans" to "and". With those corrections, Mr. President, I move that the report be adopted and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight moves and asks unanimous consent that the journal of the 50th day be adopted by the Convention with the proposed corrections. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the journal has been adopted. Are there any petitions, memorials or communications from outside the Convention? The Chief Clerk will please read the communications.

(The Chief Clerk read the following communications: a telegram from the Tlinget tribe No. 4, Ketchikan, urging provision for separate wildlife and commercial fishing commission; a telegram from Ketchikan Rod and Gun Club, recommending the proposal of the Alaska Sportsmen Council for the wildlife conservation section of the constitution of Alaska be used verbatim; telegram from J. F. Krause, President, Southeastern Seine Boat Owners Association, opposing fish and game setup in constitution and recommending that game department should be set up by the legislature on same setup as our fisheries department is set up.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other communications? Are there reports from standing committees? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, the Style and Drafting Committee wishes to report to the Convention three items which concern other committees and the Convention as a whole. First, we would like to suggest that the Rules Committee develop a procedure for scheduling the consideration on the floor of the reports from the Style and Drafting Committee which will include the revised language of proposals which have been referred to us. Specifically, we would like to suggest that the Rules Committee prepare a calendar for consideration of the reports from our Committee on the floor. The second item is a suggestion from the Style and Drafting Committee that the Rules Committee prepare an amendment to the rules which would separate articles which have come upon the floor and have been considered jointly with other articles in single proposals, as in the example of the article on preamble and bill of rights was considered along with the article on health, education and welfare; and I believe that was done in at least one other case. We believe it would speed up the work of the Convention and cut down on a lot of work in the boiler room if we could consider the articles separately rather than have to consider the proposals which might contain several articles at the same time. The third item is a report that we have referred directly to the Committee on the Judiciary and to the Committee on Initiative, Referendum and Revision, an apparent inconsistency in several of the articles where in some cases we speak of things being done "by the legislature" and others as being done "by law"; and we have asked those committees to resolve the inconsistencies and make some recommendations to our Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the pleasure of the Convention? The Rules Committee will take the suggestions under consideration. Are there other committee reports? Reports of standing committees? Or reports of select committees? Are there any motions or resolutions? If not, we have before us Committee Proposal No. 8/a in second reading. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, during the morning recess the Committee on Resources discussed with various delegates proposed amendments, and the Committee has adopted several committee amendments, and Mr. Riley, being the shorthand expert, will present those amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: The Chief Clerk will read the proposed amendments.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 4, place a period after the word 'interest' and strike the rest of the paragraph."

RILEY: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for the adoption. It was the feeling of the Committee after discussing the matter with others that the statement of purpose was left largely intact and some economy effected in words by that change.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, is it your understanding now that we are in the amendment process, or are you asking that that become a part of the original Proposal 8/a?

RILEY: Actually, I thought we were in the amendment process.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed committee amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

LONDBORG: May we have it read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, line 4, place a period after the word 'interest' and strike the rest of the paragraph."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? If there is no objection the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, is it the wish of the body that all of these come in chronologically from the Committee before we start the amendment process from the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair would feel that would probably be the best manner to handle that. The Chief Clerk may read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 7, strike the comma after the word 'waters' and insert 'as defined by the Legislature,'."

HERMANN: What was that?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 2, line 7, strike the comma after the word 'waters' and insert 'as defined by the Legislature,'."

RILEY: I would call attention to the comma following "legislature".

CHIEF CLERK: "Legislature comma".

DAVIS: To keep from running into the same problem, is there any objection to saying "as prescribed by law" at this point to keep from running into that same trouble?

RILEY: Subject to the views of Style and Drafting, I think the Committee will go along if "law" is preferable.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, "as defined by law" would include the initiative and that is the reason I understand that they used the word "legislature" there so that wouldn't be for Style and Drafting.

HELLENTHAL: That is correct. At the meeting it was decided to use "legislature" deliberately rather than "law".

RILEY: Mr. Hellenthal is right on that point. I thought Mr. Davis had raised this question in behalf of Style and Drafting, which Committee has been confronted by the problems constantly.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure then, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: The Committee adopted "legislature" for the reasons assigned by Mr. Rivers and Mr. Hellenthal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I think maybe there is not a full understanding of this particular problem. While I will grant that a person has a perfect right to believe that this particular definition should not be prescribed by the initiative, still I call your attention to the fact that if, throughout this constitution, we are confronted with "by the legislature" and "by law", we will be in conflict with our initiative provision unless we prescribe in our initiative provision that all these things cannot be done by the legislature. That is what concerns me. I think, practically speaking, it would be absurd for an initiative provision to define "waters" to begin with. Now I will grant the possibility that it could happen, but it being so unusual to have such a thing, it will be a much better constitution if we use "by law" recognizing that it could possibly be referred to initiative.

RILEY: The Committee, as Mr. Hellenthal pointed out and those who were present this morning, used the word deliberately just against that remote possibility. Now, sooner or later I am sure that the matter will probably be threshed out here at the instance of Style and Drafting, but in any event, we submit it as "defined by the legislature".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

TAYLOR: I will object, because I would like to ask a question. Mr. Riley, does the amendment "as defined by the legislature" refer back to fish and wildlife, too?

RILEY: No, it does not. "Wildlife, and waters as defined by the legislature,".

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the proposed committee amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other committee amendments? Are there other committee amendments. Mr. Riley?

COGHILL: Mr. President, could I ask a question on this proposed amendment to Mr. Riley -- on the one we just finished?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask a question if there is no objection.

COGHILL: On that, Mr. Riley, it would be the feeling of the Committee that the legislature could not regulate any of their wildlife to the point of say, domesticating moose or providing for such development of any source of wildlife that is held in their own natural state?

RILEY: No, that was not in the Committee's contemplation at all. We wished simply to meet the objection raised last evening by Mr. Poulsen, as you will recall. He and others, including the Committee, have been quite concerned about the problem as stated by him as concerns small bodies of water on privately owned property.

COGHILL: I understand that, Mr. Riley. Is there some other place in your article that would cover such a movement, say, to domesticate moose or to take a block of land and raise fox or something like that in his natural habitat?

RILEY: Are you speaking of refuge?

COGHILL: I am speaking, more or less, of a commercial refuge.

RILEY: Conducted by the state?

COGHILL: Conducted by a private person. I am afraid it would be against the constitution.

RILEY: It has not been discussed, as I recall, within Committee, precisely the situation you described.

COGHILL: I was thinking, more or less, along the lines that there has been in past years a movement to try and domesticate moose or to bring them under domestic control some way or other.

RILEY: Sort of like the reindeer program?

COGHILL: On that same order, but they would have to be ranged in their natural state, and would this clause then prohibit such a movement?

RILEY: The language here has a lot of history behind it. I see that I overlooked one -- no, I didn't either. The language in this section harks back to the old tradition whereby wildlife in its natural state was in the presumed ownership of the sovereign until reduced to possession. Frankly, I see problems arising in the situation which you suggest, and I don't know that this would prevent that if one could domesticate moose. They aren't in a natural state once domesticated.

COGHILL: I see your point, now.

RILEY: I would be pleased to discuss it with you in recess but I am somewhat nonplused at the moment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, may I ask the Committee -- it now says: "and waters as defined by the legislature" -- would that be a local or special act in most cases or in all cases?

RILEY: I would say one of general application is what we had in mind.

COOPER: Is there the chance it could be a local act? If so --

RILEY: It would generally be in conflict with the --

COOPER: With the legislative?

RILEY: Yes, you're right.

COOPER: And what I wanted to bring out was the fact that if as "defined by the legislature", to answer Mr. Poulsen's question last night, that is primarily the reason why this is in here?

RILEY: Yes. It is not his problem alone, mind you, but the problem of everywhere.

COOPER: Yes, but the legislative article says, "No local act will take effect until approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting thereon in the district to be affected." It would really be in conflict.

RILEY: No. The thought behind this language is for general application alone, the issuance of such definition either directly by the legislature or through its delegation by the administrative agencies.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I don't like to pursue any further, but in Section 4, I don't understand "waters, fish, wildlife, and waters" -- when over on Section 14, you practically repeat the same thing. You say, "All waters reserved to the people for common use shall be subject to appropriations." For just a cursory glance I do not see any reason why "waters" is mentioned in Section 4 at all.

RILEY: That is a statement of general reservation. In Section 14 we have some general coverage of waters. The general reservation touches on the other resources as well. Section 14 is confined to a statement on waters. As a matter of fact, we have another amendment coming up on Section 14.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other committee amendments on the Chief Clerk's desk?

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 11 -- "

R. RIVERS: What is the ruling on Section 4?

RILEY: It was asked unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It was ordered adopted, Mr. Rivers.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 11, page 4, line 3, strike 'mineral or water', and strike on lines 5 and 6, 'and to all other resources reserved to the people', and retain the semicolon."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment once more.

(The Chief Clerk read the amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent and will state we have stricken "mineral or water" on the one line and "all other resources" on lines 5 and 6 and used all-inclusive language for resources, generally, so it reads without a recital of various resources, "reservations to the state of all resources as are required by the Congress or the state," simply a cleanup of language.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, do you ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment?

RILEY: I did, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection? Hearing no objection to the unanimous consent request the proposed committee amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I believe there is one more.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 11, page 4, line 7, strike 'beneficial'."

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for its adoption. It leaves the word "use" intact. The provision now reads: "except the reservation of access shall not impair the owners' use"; we felt that was broader and certainly included the types of use.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the proposed committee amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I will ask consent of the body to put the next two or three amendments in orally. I have not been able to keep ahead here on the preparation of these. On the same page, page 4, lines 16 and 17, strike the words "during the year 1955" and in lieu of that, insert "upon the date of ratification of this Constitution by the people of Alaska".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks that on page 4, lines 16 and 17, strike the words "during the year 1955" and insert the words "upon the date of ratification of this Constitution by the people of Alaska".

RILEY: "During the year 1955" -- that was put in last night.

DAVIS: May we have it again, please?

RILEY: Strike "during the year 1955" -- that was inserted last evening. We insert "upon the date of ratification of this Constitution by the people of Alaska".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, the Chair wonders in that particular wording, and the wording has appeared in other articles --

RILEY: It appears in the finance article, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is a proper wording rather than "the time after the enabling act"?

RILEY: It is our wish to effect an early cutoff date. I ask unanimous consent for its adoption, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed committee amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, on page 5, line 10, after consultation with other delegates this morning, the Committee moves that the word "prospecting" be removed, feeling that it is covered in the following line by the word "exploration". I ask unanimous consent that the word "prospecting" be deleted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the proposed committee amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I so move.

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley so moves, seconded by Mr. Knight. The question is -- Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would just like to say a word or two. I believe in the exploration for coal, oil, and gas under the federal act, and

I assume that we will have an act very similar to the federal act, that the person applying for a prospecting permit should have a priority and an exclusive right to prospect a certain defined area. At the present time it is an area of 2,560 acres. Now, if prospecting for these particular minerals -- oil and gas -- that is a very expensive proposition, and if a man goes to prospecting them, maybe he will spend $100,000 in prospecting or in a couple or three years, which he has to prospect it, and it could maybe be done by various methods -- geophysical or geochemical methods -- but they are all very expensive. So that is why the government gives the exclusive permit to a particular area in blocks of 2,560 acres, and I think it should define that the prospector has the exclusive right of exploration for a specific period and area. I think it should be left in.

RILEY: May I address a question to Mr. Taylor? Mr. Taylor, is it your belief that the word "exploration" need not necessarily include prospecting?

TAYLOR: Well, they are synonymous in the federal meaning, the "exploration" and the "prospecting" are the same.

RILEY: The use of the word "exploration" on line 11 would that, in your judgment, avoid the need for the word "prospecting" on 10?

TAYLOR: No, because if you leave the exclusive right it might be that the person administering the land laws and the mineral laws for the Territory of Alaska could give three or four different parties the right to prospect this particular block of land that they are asking for.

RILEY: If we leave the word "exclusive" --

TAYLOR: Leave the word "exclusive" in there.

RILEY: Yes. I don't follow you there. We are not taking it out. We don't propose to take it out. The word "prospecting" is the only word we are deleting under our amendment.

TAYLOR: First, you get from the Bureau of Land Management a prospecting permit; that is, what is, just a permit for prospecting an area of land. It might be three, four, or five people go in and they each apply for 2,560 acres and then they have a large block. They can go in and group their prospecting to possibly 25,000 acres, and I think the "exclusive" should be in there and the "leases" and "prospecting" because the leasing follows your "prospecting".

RILEY: In this instance the Committee had in mind that exclusive permit for exploration would be issued. It probably would be referred to, loosely, as a prospecting permit.

TAYLOR: That is what it would be.

RILEY: But it was brought to our attention that the word was considered superfluous by others of the delegates, and for that reason we submit the amendment.

TAYLOR: I have had considerable experience in regard to coal permits, and oil prospecting permits, and leases, and I believe that section should go in just the way it is written, that paragraph of that section.

RILEY: I believe there is a motion on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is a motion on the floor, Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: May I ask Mr. Riley a question? Mr. Riley, is it your intent to follow the general procedure as is now in the federal leasing and permit system?

RILEY: It is.

HILSCHER: Then it is immaterial whether the word is in or out because that is so clearly covered by the wording of the permits that are issued.

RILEY: As a matter of fact, the state would have a ready-made procedure set up for it, should it accept assignment of any federal leases in existence at that time, which would appear to be the wise course.

HILSCHER: Whether it's in or out, then, is immaterial.

HELLENTHAL: I rise to a point of order. I think that under the modification of the rule we have adopted that amendments to committee reports are not subject to debate. I know some hesitate to debate them fully at this time when they will be considered twice more at another time under our rules, and I feel that debate on the committee report is out of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: No, it is not, Mr. Hellenthal. The Chair will have to hold that your point of order is not well taken in this instance. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: The Committee was given that opportunity this morning and waived it and considered it to be in second reading.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, Mr. Taylor has stated that the terms "exploration" and "prospecting" are synonymous. If that is true, it isn't needed twice there. The harm the word "prospect" would do is this: prospecting covers all types of prospecting, including the oldtimer who goes out with a pack on his back with pick and shovel. We are dealing with oil and coal here, but a lot of people are going to read this constitution, and these individual prospectors, when they glance at this, they will see that the state is allowed to give out exclusive rights for prospecting and they won't like that. Of course, if they read further and saw it was the right of exploration for coal and oil that would be different. But since they are synonymous and we don't need that word "exploration" and it might give rise to a little anticonstitution feeling, I think we should strike it.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed committee amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed committee amendment will signify by saying "aye" opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: On line 25, Mr. President, page 5, the Committee proposes that a period be placed after the word "legislature" and the balance of the paragraph stricken. This general reservation of fish and wildlife has been stated elsewhere and I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed committee amendment. Is there objection?

AWES: May we have it read.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 25, page 5, insert a period after the word 'legislature' and strike the balance of the section."

RILEY: Mr. President, there may be other committee amendments to succeeding sections, but this is as far as we went this morning before being called back to session. I am not certain, Mr. Hellenenthal, but I may be overlooking one of your suggestions that the Committee may have adopted, but this was just at the end of our deliberations and we are not certain that it was.

HELLENTHAL: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the proposed committee amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to the preamble of the article of Proposal No. 8/a? If not, are there proposed amendments to Section 1? Are there proposed amendments to Section 2? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may I be permitted to ask a question, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Riley, has your Committee considered the point which I raised last night about this language, "in accordance with provisions of applicable action of Congress" in connection with possible legislation on fish traps?

RILEY: We have considered it this morning, conversationally, with a number of delegates present. Without having conducted any study on the point, since you raised the question last evening, the Committee does not feel that a danger exists here. I should say that probably within the next day or two, if that view is not confirmed, I feel sure we could put it back in second reading should it have progressed beyond that.

SUNDBORG: Is the Committee pursuing the matter to be absolutely certain?

RILEY: Yes. The title of 2535, for example, and every other enabling bill that has been proposed, points up the congressional view that each state admitted is admitted on equal footing, but I should say the Committee's final reply should be held in abeyance on that.

DAVIS: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Riley a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. Riley, in Section 2, line 14, or actually lines 12, 13 and 14, it says, "The State of Alaska shall provide for the utilization, conservation and development of all of the natural resources, including lands and waters belonging to the State." It appears to me that as that is written it is broad enough to cover all natural resources, no matter whether they are privately owned, publicly owned, or what they may be. I am wondering if you did not intend to put a comma after the word "waters" at the end of line 14, so that it would then become clear that we are only talking about natural resources belonging to the state.

RILEY: That would be my conception of it, Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: There wasn't any intention that the state is going to develop natural resources on either federal land or privately owned land, is that right?

RILEY: No. The sections covered in the commentary states all resources over which the state has a proprietary interest, and I think that point is well taken.

2500

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, did he ask unanimous consent?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mrs. Nordale had just made a suggestion that I think is even better, if it is all right with the Committee. Take the words "belonging to the state" and place them after "resources", so it would read: "All the natural resources belonging to the state including lands and water."

RILEY: I think the Committee would be receptive to that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis, are you so moving the disposal of that wording?

DAVIS: I would, and ask unanimous consent for that transposition of words.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Chief Clerk have that transposition?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Unanimous consent is asked for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection it is so ordered and the amendment has been adopted. Are there other amendments proposed to Section 2? To Section 3? To Section 4? Are there amendments to Section 5? Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I don't want to make an amendment, but I would like to ask the Committee -- I notice in this place, it is the only place that a natural resource is put under a commission and I would like to find out just why it was necessary. I know there is a controversy in that matter, and I would just like to have it explained.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. King to answer that question first.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. King.

KING: Mr. President, of course we all know this has been a very controversial matter, and the feeling of the persons, organizations, and the wildlife agencies as to -- they expressed a desire to spell these things out in the constitution. It wasn't in detail, setting up various departments, of course, but it wasn't the feeling of the Committee that such should be done here, that it should be confined to basic constitutional provisions. Now, the thing, of course, we know, being part of the controversy, is a difference of opinion between the sportsmen organizations and the Fish and Wildlife Service as to separation of the departments into commercial fisheries department and into fish and game departments, which would include sport fish. We thought here that this would be a compromise. Now, on my way through Juneau, and letters we have from Mr. Anderson of the Territorial Fisheries Department, the Director, I spoke to him on my way back here and he had no objection, whatsoever, to the commission form. Now, as we know, one of the most successful operations while we have been under federal control in the Territory of Alaska, has been the Alaska Game Commission. That is a commission that was established and has lived without criticism. The organizations throughout the states, the three states -- the Pacific Coast states which are more closely related to us than any other people, have established forms of commissions to do this work that we are talking about here; and we thought here that this would only provide guiding lines to the Territorial legislature, giving them permission to establish a commission or commissions that would govern this type of resource.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: Mr. President, I would like to address a question to Mr. Smith.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Fischer.

V. FISCHER: With the provision here for the establishment of a commission or commissions, would it preclude the creation of an over-all department of resources including not only fisheries, wildlife, but also lands and whatever other resource subdepartments there might be?

SMITH: In my opinion, Mr. Fischer, it would not. I think under the present Territorial law we have such a resources board and under the present Territorial setup we also have the commission-type management for our fisheries department. I do not believe it would preclude the establishment of such an over-all resources board.

V. FISCHER: I am not speaking in terms of a resources board. I am speaking of a department within the executive branch.

SMITH: I would say that the answer would still be "no".

V. FISCHER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: I have an amendment on the Chief Clerk's desk in relation to Section 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Johnson.

CHIEF CLERK: "Section 5, lines 12 and 13, strike the words 'to a commission, or'."

JOHNSON: I move the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is open for discussion. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: We have had a great many communications in the last few days regarding this matter, and it seems to me that if the words "to a commission, or" were taken out of the section that it would more nearly be in compliance with the wishes of the people that have been communicating with us. I don't think that it detracts in any way from the section, and if we just direct the legislature to set up a separate commission for each branch of the fisheries, then I think we are complying with the wishes of the largest group of the public.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: I will have to speak very definitely against this amendment to the motion. I know that there are two thoughts on this matter and the men that are making their living on the fisheries are very definitely opposed to two separate commissions, and I think if the matter is left up to the legislature and where it is handled in the proper manner, it would be fine, but I know if this motion should carry we would be doing harm to a lot of our citizens who are depending for their livelihood upon fisheries.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, probably, I should say I am speaking for myself and not for the Committee. This question has been discussed widely both before the Convention and since that time. From my viewpoint the insertion of Section 5 in its entirety was a concession to the pressure brought by the sports fishing organizations or the game fishermen's organizations. Actually, my thought was that all this section did, as it originally read, was to say that game fish, wildlife, and commercial fish should be delegated to a commission or to commissions leaving it up to the legislature as to whether that should be one all-inclusive commission or two separate commissions. Frankly, I would have preferred to see no mention made of the subject in the constitution. I think the constitution throughout, I think the Convention as a whole has throughout the consideration of all of the articles stayed away from setting up commissions or departments in other things in the constitution, and my preference here would have been to follow that procedure in this instance. However, you are all aware of all of the flood of telegrams, communications, etc., that have come in. Just today I received three telegrams from commercial fishing groups in support of leaving this entirely to the legislature. I had not intended to ask that those be read, in the hopes that we might not get into this argument. I would like to say further that before the Convention began, I took this question up with all of the fishermen, the commercial fishermen and the sport fishermen whom I could contact in the Ketchikan area, and I expressed to them my thoughts that the whole matter should be left to the legislature, and they were in agreement. I also submitted this question to the Alaska Fisheries Board which held a meeting just before this Convention began, and I also expressed to them the thought that this should be left to the legislature and they were in perfect agreement. The fact that we have not had more communications from the commercial fishermen, and those who advocate leaving this to the legislature, I am sure is due to the fact that it had been discussed and agreed that this matter should be left to the legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: May I ask a question of Mr. Smith? Did you not also receive communications from Mr. Anderson, the head of the Territorial Fisheries Board urging that it be left to the legislature?

SMITH: That is absolutely correct, Mr. Stewart. The Committee and I received communications from the Alaska Fisheries Board and from the Alaska Department of Fisheries, recommending that this matter be left entirely to the legislature.

STEWART: May I make an amendment verbally?

PRESIDENT EGAN: An amendment to the amendment?

STEWART: I move we strike Section 5.

WHITE: I second the motion.

R. RIVERS: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I move and ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment which I had offered to Section 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson moves and asks unanimous consent for the withdrawal of his proposed amendment to Section 5. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Mr. Stewart.

STEWART: Mr. President, after having discussed this matter a little bit with others, I, also, at this time withdraw this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Stewart asks unanimous consent that his proposed amendment be withdrawn. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I have an amendment to offer.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor.

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 5."

TAYLOR: I move the adoption of the amendment.

WHITE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor moves the adoption of the amendment, seconded by Mr. White. The proposed amendment is open for discussion. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would like to speak on that, Mr. President. Now, under the executive article the power was given to establish up to 20 departments of the state and I cannot see where there is any doubt but what there will be a committee, a commission, or a department of resources under which would be commissions to administer the fisheries, the commercial fisheries, and a commission to administer the game fish and game. That would be one of the most important departments of the new state and they would have the inherent power and the all-power that would be given to them by the state to do just what it intended to do under this; but we are trying to confine this subject of such importance to a commission, that I think it should be stricken and let the resources department do everything it is supposed to be in here. I have no doubt but what, due to the great difference in commercial fishing, and the game fishing and game, that a separate bureau or a commission could be set up under the department of resources to handle those particular matters. And I think by leaving this in here we are going to do the state a disservice, the fact that that will preclude a department of fisheries or a resources department that would be setting up the way they want to handle it, because they would be then confined by this constitution to having a commission or commissions to handle it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, thousands of people in this Territory feel strongly about this. I would say maybe as many as 10,000 and a good many of them have taken the trouble to send us letters and wires urging that we have a provision of this kind in the constitution. If we leave the language exactly as it is in Section 5, I believe we have met the desires of everyone of those people who have wired to us. If we strike it, we are inviting criticism and trouble, and trouble on the ratification of the constitution from those people who do feel very strongly, and I feel with good reason, that with our heritage of fish and wildlife up here, we should be very careful; we should be more careful than any state that has ever entered the union before this, to see that they are administered and regulated by commissions which would not be subject to the political control of the state as it may go from administration to administration. I feel very strongly that we should leave it as it is. Now, all of the things that Mr. Taylor says should probably be done or would be done by a legislature, can still be done if we leave it alone. We can have an over-all department of resources which would have under it a commission for the administration of the fisheries and a commission for administration of the wildlife or a single commission for the administration of both. I don't think it ties the hands of the state or does a disservice to the people of the state in any way, and I think if we strike that, we are really going to be in hot water. Now, I don't like to yield to pressures just because the pressures have been built up, but I feel these people do have a good case, and we ought to leave Section 5 alone.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Lee.

LEE: Mr. President, in the time we have been here we have all taken cognizance of any opinions that the various lawyers had to take because we have felt that we could trust their opinion because that is their business. This is getting back to my business. I am going to vote against the amendment, and I hope that you will do the same.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, as a member of the Committee, I would like to explain why I seconded the motion and why I support it.

Mr. Sundborg has stated, correctly, that we have had large numbers of communications representing very large numbers of people on this subject, but the section, as it stands does not, Mr. Sundborg, solve their problems or satisfy them except insofar as one of their requests was that management of the fisheries and wildlife be delegated to a commission. If we are to follow the next step of their request, it would be that it be relegated to separate commissions, as Mr. Johnson suggested in the amendment that he withdrew. If we are to follow it to its complete conclusion, we would include a page, or two pages here, setting out an entire plan, something similar to the Missouri Plan, so this has been boiled down to a compromise which really doesn't satisfy any of the parties to this controversy except those that suggest that these matters be delegated to a commission, or separate commissions. Both points of view are represented there in any event, and I feel that to make an exception in this one case, to state that it will be a "commission" is not constitutional matter and that it would be more properly treated as a resolution from our Committee or the Convention to the first state legislature.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. King.

KING: Mr. President, I will have to take exception to Mr. White's remarks that this does not satisfy anybody. I think that is certainly contrary to the common belief. Dr. Gabrielson spoke to the Convention here and told them what type of thing that was best for this; Dr. Bartley appeared before our Committee; they all expressed, these different people. As I spoke before, I talked to the Director of Fisheries on my way through this time. I sat with him and talked to him. He was not opposed to a commission form that they are talking about here; I talked to him, I have letters from him; he was not opposed to this. I don't think you are talking about pressure here when you are talking about telegrams and letters. You are talking about the will, the wishes of people; I can't say that those are pressure groups. Those are people just like the rest of us. I belong to three or four sportsmen organizations. I don't think I am putting any pressure on anybody; I think it is the will of the people, the will of 2,000 people alone in the Alaska Sportsmen Association, and this is just one of them. I think this is a very good thing; I think this is just a guide; this has been very successful all throughout the Western states, this type here, and it is a guiding line to the Territorial legislature to make a successful operation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: Mr. President, I want to speak on this amendment because under the executive the same problem arose. We discussed there, not only one board or commission or department but the interests of a great number, so under the executive department we have provided that there shall be departments with single heads as principal departments; there may be multiheaded departments; there may be regulatory boards as established by the legislature. Now, I think we would be doing a grave injustice to the commercial fisheries and wildlife groups, both of them, if we failed to allow them the freedom that we allow other departments of government. If we let this stay in we are forever tying them under this constitution to a commission form of government. They could have this form under the present executive. They could have a multiheaded department under the present executive; they could have a singleheaded department, either separately or jointly as the importance of their function in the state government desired or required. Now if we tie them forever to a commission form of government, that is it; but if we leave it as it is under the executive, they may have their choice for the present or may change as they desire in the future. They may adopt any and all of these forms they recommended or any of the other forms of government that we have provided for in the executive. I for one would favor striking of the word "commission" but with the full understanding that they have now the power to have this type of administration if they so desire, and this way you would limit it to the one thing, and the one thing only, for all time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I feel called upon to speak against this amendment here. The sports fishing and game and commercial fishing are among the greatest resources of the Territory, and if they are properly conserved they are going to continue to be a great resource, and I believe it is a resource that is great enough to be dignified by leaving this section in the constitution and leaving it in, in its present form. It was a compromise on the Committee; I feel it should be a compromise upon this floor. Now, we have already, under the article on finance and taxation, have arranged so that if the federal government ever stops paying funds into the fish and wildlife, it will be an earmarked fund, and it will no longer apply. We have taken that whack at the sports fishing and game commission in the Territory of Alaska, and I disagree heartily with Mr. Victor Rivers. It is true that in the executive branch of the government, the proposal that has gone through second reading here, that they have set up the very machinery whereby a commission of this kind could go into effect. That was the thought I had when they established the 20 principal departments and said there may be other regulatory or quasi-judicial departments there, that they meant by that something along this line, a commission form that could be set up. This is the only time I am going to speak, Mr. President. I will have to ask the delegates to bear with me just another minute here; but as to Mr. Anderson, who is presently head of the Department of Fisheries there, I want to point out to the Convention, I don't go strongly on what Mr. Anderson says or what the head of any present department of the Territorial government says. I have served on the ways and means committee and have seen these various heads of departments, and among the leaders of which was Mr. Anderson, who are desirous of only one thing, that of perpetuating themselves in office, and naturally it is a desire, if we transfer suddenly over to a state, that Mr. Anderson would like to become the head of all the departments covering everything here. Well and good, if there is one commission set up by the legislature, I have no particular objection to Mr. Anderson being the head of that department, but if it is his desire there to interject, or attempt to interject, as a department head, things into this Convention that are going to harm the sports fishing and the game commission of this Territory, then I am opposed to Mr. Anderson. It is simply a purely and a wholly selfish view as it is with the heads of practically every one of these departments; and if you serve on one of these committees, the finance in the senate and ways and means in the house, and see the attitudes that the heads of these departments take to perpetuate, and the attempts to perpetuate themselves in office, then you can very readily see through any stand Mr. Anderson might take upon these things. Now as I say, this matter here was a compromise in the Committee. I hope it can be a compromise in the Convention with the sportsmen here. I have been presented with material, as all the delegates have, and requested to make amendments, and could go on making amendments ad infinitum here, but I have felt that if this can be held in, it still leaves it up as the legislature shall prescribe, and if they want to set up one commission, well and good, or if they feel it is necessary to set up two commissions under it, or under a principal department head, or however they care to do this, at least we are recognizing this one great segment of our population, or if you will, two great segments of the population and also the future, because of the thousands of people who will move to the Territory with the thought in mind of hunting and fishing either on the sportsman level or the commercial fishing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I have not --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, the Chair does not wish to interrupt, but the Chair would like to state, with your pleasure, that the photographer is set up in the gallery for a picture during the noon recess. He has been ready for quite some time. It will only take about five minutes and upon the recess, if every delegate would remain here and go into the gallery, and it might be well if we have that done at this time, because we are holding him here. If it is the wish of the Convention, we will hold this amendment over until following the noon recess. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, subject to committee announcements, I move that we recess until 1:30 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves that we recess until 1:30 p.m. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to announce a meeting of the Resources Committee at 1:00 o'clock in the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Resource Committee at 1:00 o'clock in the gallery. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. McNealy.

McNEALY: A meeting of the Ordinances Committee at 1:00 o'clock in the committee room upstairs.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There will be a meeting of the Ordinance Committee at 1:00 o'clock in the committee room upstairs. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, Style and Drafting Committee will meet immediately upon recess at the rear of the gallery.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Local Government Committee will meet at 1:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other announcements? If there are no other announcements and if there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess until 1:30.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McNees.

McNEES: Mr. President and delegates, we have in the gallery Miss Sally Carrighar who has written numerous articles for the Saturday Evening Post and who has made her home here in Alaska for some time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Carrighar, we are happy to have you with us and hope you enjoy the proceedings this afternoon. (Applause) We have before us the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Warren Taylor to Committee Proposal No. 8/a. The proposed amendment is the deletion of Section 5 from the proposal. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I raise the point of order of asking whether Mr. Taylor discussed this amendment and cleared it with the Committee as required by our rules?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor, did you discuss the proposed amendment with the Committee?

TAYLOR: Yes, I did and they said to bring it up on the floor of the Convention. They said they did not want to make any changes in the Committee, and if there were any amendments, they were to be brought up on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion on the proposed amendment? Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: I would like to ask a question. I would like to know if this word "commission" as it appears in the text refers to a board or a department such as the Department of Fisheries that Mr. Anderson at present heads.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Could anyone answer that question of Mrs. Hermann's? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President and Mrs. Hermann, I have in mind that all of the proponents of a commission or commissions have been thinking in terms of the commission that we know as the Alaska Game Commission, the commission which is charged with the administration of the Department of Fisheries. Is that responsive to your question?

HERMANN: Well, I just am not sure whether it would restrict, whether the language you have in there would restrict the governor to the appointment of a board rather than a department of wildlife, such as the department of fisheries is.

RILEY: All of whom I have discussed it with have suggested that they had in mind a board or commission charged with running a department or a section of a department confined solely to the fish or game field, as the case might be, with two commissions. I have heard during the noon recess questions with respect to the same section and I think in the same nature as yours. I believe it fair to say that most of those have been concerned with two words: "and administration". I am not in a position to speak for the Committee in this respect, but in adopting this language the Committee has had in mind a commission that would issue, promulgate regulations in these two areas and would be charged with overseeing the executive agency which had the responsibility for management in this field.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Was it the Committee's feeling that the legislature would not have that power unless it was included in this proposal?

RILEY: I don't know that that question arose. I see it is a valid question and some doubt is left by this language. I have no recollection that the Committee discussed depriving the legislature of the regulatory function.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, there is no doubt in my mind, whatsoever, in the absence of this section that the legislature would have that power.

HERMANN: In the absence of this section? Then, Mr. President, I would like to state my position in regard to the amendment to strike. I am very much opposed to boards and commissions on general principles, and I do not believe that they should be made a part of a constitution. I think that the legislature, if it has that authority to create a board temporarily and dissolve it at its later pleasure, should not be tied down by a permanent provision of the constitution requiring them to administer fish and wildlife by the commission or board form of regulation; and if the legislature does not have that authority or if there is any doubt in the minds of any of the delegates that the legislature has that authority, we could easily amend the section by saying that the regulations, etc., should be prescribed by the legislature. Personally, I am of the opinion that it does have the authority, and I would certainly hate to see a permanent part of the constitution advocating the control and regulation of any of our natural resources or any of our departments of government by the commission or board form of government. I shall have to vote for the amendment, though I am not averse to having two commissions if the legislature wishes to prescribe them, and I am not averse to putting in provisions that will carry out the wishes of the Sportsmen's Association; I think we have the authority already.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I have the same feeling toward this section as Delegate Hermann has and I feel that the language is covered very well under Section 17 of our proposal 10/a which provides that the legislature may put principal commissions at the head of departments, and I feel that if we are going to make an exception of not putting in any language as to any one board in the judicial item, I don't see why we should have the fish and wildlife commission provided for in the constitution. I think the legislature should have full and a free hand to do as they want because they will do what the people wish them to do.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to speak in the negative? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I would like to ask a question and also make a statement. I personally wish that this had not been brought up, but I think a great many people do want a statement in the constitution as to how the fish and wildlife will be administered in the state. I would like to ask Mr. Riley, or any member of the Committee, that if there had been no communications to us on this matter, would the Committee still have thought it wisest to have a commission administer the fish and wildlife matters in the state rather than a single department head?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. Barr, would you repeat the last part of your question?

BARR: If none of us had received any communications regarding this matter from anyone outside the Convention, would your Committee have still thought that the fish and wildlife resources should be administered by a commission rather than a single department head?

SMITH: I can only answer that this way, Mr. Barr, and probably again should speak for myself in regard to my views as to what the Committee would have done. It is clear in my mind that had it not been for all of the communications there would have been no mention of any commission or commissions in this article.

BARR: You never heard any member of the Committee mention that they would be against a single man being the head?

SMITH: I don't believe that the question would have come up at all and that is subject to the expression of individual opinions by any member of the Committee.

BARR: Like Mrs. Hermann, I am against a great many boards and commissions. We are afflicted with a great number of them at the present time and I think the trend is going to be the other way. I believe that the legislature from now on, and especially after statehood, will eliminate most of them. I can see where there may be a very few that are necessary. I see Mr. Coghill does not believe that this is necessary but a lot of people believe that the education of the Territory should be administered by a board. I do, too. It seems to me this might be one of them, and if that is true, to prevent the legislature abolishing our present commission, it would be necessary to put it in the constitution, if we feel that that is the way we want our wildlife affairs administered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I believe that if this section were left in it could be improved to take care of Mrs. Hermann's objection to it and some of the other objections. I think the point, the important thing here is whether a commission is the better form of regulating these sort of things, and I don't mean a commission right up at the top but rather we would have a head of a department and have an advisory commission or commissions at some lower point to advise that particular head of department, and I think if we could work out a section here that would accomplish that purpose we would satisfy the sportsmen and the commercial fishermen and still not get something in our constitution that is going to tie our hands for the future. The one reason, in speaking for myself, that I felt it was better not to have separate commissions, was that as I understand it, at the last legislature the sportsmen wanted the single commission right down to practically the end of the legislature; then they changed their minds and wanted separate commissions and I feel that if they did not know well enough at that time what they wanted, perhaps they don't know well enough now and we should not tie their hands to something in the constitution, and that is why we have two single commissions or two separate commissions, and I believe if we would retain this section and then correct it to accomplish what we would like to do, that we would be better off.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to be heard. I am concerned about this language "regulations shall be delegated". That sounds almost as though you are commanding the legislature to delegate legislative power to a commission. There are various levels of regulations. Regulations can be by law, where basic factors are covered and with the administrative regulations, delegated to administrative boards or bodies. But unless, as Mr. Boswell suggests, this thing can be reprocessed, I will have to vote in favor of the present amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I am going to speak in favor of leaving the section as it is. The principal reason is that regardless of whether you strike it or not, you are going to end up with basically the same thing. It has been proven in the administration of wildlife resources and fisheries, a commission form of administration has been the most successful in the wildlife resources. Whether they are tied together or separated is a matter of time. In some states they are tied together and in other states they are separated. In some states as the times changed they are combined and as times change they are separated again. That has been provided for. Regardless of what is done by this body, the Section 5, I am pretty positive Section 5 will be the standard they will do by. Now, if you leave out Section 5 you create a danger of implying to those people who are interested that you are taking away something from them, primarily because we have set up a very very strong executive department. As long as you set up this strong executive department, I believe the delegates should allay the fears of these people, not only in the sports fishing but in the "bread and butter" fishing too. I think there is no question or doubt about the method of administration of the wildlife resources. I think we should allay the fears of the people who are interested, as you have heard. I think the fisheries will always be with us, as the wildlife will be. There is no state where the impact of fish and wildlife is so great on the people as it is in Alaska, and I believe it can and does deserve special attention. If you strike this section, I don't see how you can keep away from leaving to these people that have been so concerned, that you are actually denying, you are taking away something from them they are used to; they have been used to the Alaska Game Commission. They have set up their own board of fisheries that appears to be the desire of our fishing people. That is what we had. At the present feeling of the people, we want to continue that way, and if you do turn it over to the legislature they will continue, but you do not help but imply that you are going to take away something from the people if you strike this section. I wish the section would remain as is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, I feel impelled to support the motion to strike this particular section. I predicate my decision on the fact that first off, as Mr. Gray has already so aptly pointed out, we do have a strong executive. Secondly, in the event the executive, who is elected by the people of Alaska and who will certainly be particularly sensitive to the will of the people and a good many of those sportsmen are voters, he will be very concerned about this particular department, and I am sure that he will take that into consideration when he is establishing, under his various departments and or in his cabinet, this particular thing that we are concerned with here. Secondly, if the governor does not provide properly for it, it is within the realm of the legislature to establish such method and fashion in which we can operate satisfactorily this particular type of fish and wildlife resource. Thirdly, and what no one has mentioned yet, is we have initiative. The people can initiate and certainly a group of sportsmen who are so pressure-minded as to have flooded this Convention hall, with various types, both pro and con of communications, they will not be bashful about initiating a type of legislation that is necessary to prosecute the very desires that they seek to do. The last reason I oppose this section is I dislike seeing a board enshrined in our constitution. There is no reason why we have to make this particular exception. As Mr. Fischer said the other day, it is no "holy cow" to me. I don't see why we have to bow down and enshrine this particular type of a commission or board in our constitution. There are ample remedies, not only at the polls, but by their own initiative, so I am supporting the motion to strike.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I have to agree with Mr. Gray and vote against this amendment. I think the fish and wildlife is an important enough resource of ours it should be mentioned in the constitution. I do believe that it could be corrected by an amendment later.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Nordale.

NORDALE: It seems to me that this section is very bad as it is written. It removes the whole regulation and administration of the commercial fisheries from the executive branch of the government, because it says "regulation and administration shall be delegated to a commission", and I don't believe that we want any department set up separate and apart from the other main branches of the government. Our executive article says that regulatory bodies need not be put into a principal department, and right here it gives complete force and effect to that. They would never put it under the executive branch, they would not have to. I don't like the way it is written.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I rise for a question to the Committee. Don't you think that in being so insistent upon the commission being enshrined in the constitution that most people advocating it thought it also would carry along with it a certain number of earmarked funds? Don't you think that was the main intent rather than just the body itself?

SMITH: I would like to ask Mr. King if he would like to answer that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. King.

KING: I don't believe so, Mr. Rivers. As you know, I am a minority of one on this Committee, but I don't believe that the Committee felt that at all.

2516

V. RIVERS: I did not mean the Committee. I meant the request to the Committee, had envisioned this request having this unalienable source of revenue?

KING: I don't think so.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I wonder if the Committee would consider the rewording of Section 5 as something in this order -- that the management of the commercial fisheries --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong, at this time we have an amendment by Mr. Taylor before us; whether or not the Committee, if it has anything to do with that particular question at this time, as the Chair sees it, although others have mentioned it.

ARMSTRONG: It seems to me, Mr. President, if we could arrive at a wording that would retain the section some would vote then against the amendment.

R. RIVERS: May we have a two-minute recess?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for two minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, I would like to answer a question posed by Mr. Victor Rivers if I may in which he was inquiring about earmarked funds and commissions. The Alaska Sportsmen's Council in a letter dated October 24, 1955, advocated the inclusion in our constitution of certain sections of the Missouri State Constitution, Sections 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45 and 46, as a complete program. It says in part, "The fees, monies or funds arising from the operations and transactions of the commission shall be expended and used by the commission for certain purposes and for no other purpose." So it was certainly, originally an integral part of the plan. We have now come down to retaining only the idea of a commission or commissions and I think no one can say with certainty that all people who favored the whole plan would favor the retention of the commission without the other parts of the plan.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? The question is -- Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I would just like the opportunity of closing.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard before Mr. Taylor closes? Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: I shall offer an amendment to retain part of this wording and I think correct some of the abuse that some people seem to feel is inherent in this which would make it possible to have commissions if the legislature so ordered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is, after we vote on this amendment. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I rise to a point of information on Delegate Armstrong. It is already provided for in your executive article and you don't have to have it in here at all.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor has the floor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, possibly the membership of this Convention might believe that I am against the sportsmen of Alaska, but I am not. I am just as much interested and desirous of conservation and the regulation of fish and game as I think any person in this house. But the fact that I am interested in these matters is for the reason that I am offering this amendment to strike this section because I believe it would be a disservice to the fishermen and the hunters of the Territory by leaving it in. I think it would be a disservice to the other people of Alaska who are not particularly interested in hunting or fishing. Now, if this section in its present form became a part of the constitution, we would be reversing a stand which we have taken here and which many members of the legislature have taken for a number of years in regard to commissions, and instead of eliminating or abolishing some of these commissions, we are saddling by this constitution, the state with not only one commission but maybe two to handle one subject; fish and game. It looks to me like we are trying to backtrack in this thing. Now, if we adopt this in the Convention, and the legislature did then take action upon this particular section and they did establish two commissions, one for game and one for fish or one for commercial fishermen and one for game fish and game, there is no way we can abolish either one of those commissions unless we amend the constitution of the state, which is not an easy thing to do. So, I think that the Convention should think twice before they pass this section in its present form because if we read this and give each and every word its common and accepted meaning, the construction of this section is that the executive departments and the legislature surrendered to some unknown commissioners on a game commission their power and prerogatives which we have given to them in all other matters in this constitution except the game fish and game; because we once set up the commission in the matter that is provided for in here, we have delegated to them all the power to deal with those particular matters, and who are they answerable to? Nobody, they are the commission; they are the regulators and the administrators. They might have to answer to the legislature -- nothing in here that says they would. So, then we have one independent commission or possibly two, which no matter to what extent they go, we cannot get rid of them unless we have a constitutional amendment and do we want to go so far as that that we are going to surrender our rights and our prerogatives? When I say "our", I mean the legislature's and executive department's prerogative, to this commission. Now there are quite a number of us here who have been in the legislature, have been in there one or two or more times, and we know when the legislature is in session down there the corridors of the capitol building are cluttered with commissions that are appearing there to report and have meetings and spending the taxpayers' money. So, why should we make an exception in this particular instance of something we are trying to get away from, the establishment of more boards, more commissions? Now, also, I have listened to Mr. McNealy; he is all for this commission. I have listened to Mr. Sundborg; he was all for this commission; also, Mr. Gray. Mrs. Hermann, perhaps, expressed her opinion as to this commission matter in much better language than I can, and I am going to adopt Mrs. Hermann's speech as my sentiments in that particular matter. We know recently the political winds have started to blow --

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, point of order. I think, perhaps, these remarks might be interpreted as being personally addressed. I am sure Mr. Taylor does not mean them as such.

TAYLOR: If they are, I apologize.

HELLENTHAL: Don't they involve the five-minute rule?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do we have any five-minute rule? But the Chair would ask that all delegates would preclude any political feeling on the floor. Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I'm not going into the political field; I was just saying to these members here that possibly have been kissed by the political breeze that has been blowing at this Convention, that this Committee would not have thought about this unless it had been for the clamor put up by this particular segment of our population. Perhaps this political breeze, as I say, that has kissed the cheek of prospective legislators might be the reason that this is in the resources section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair feels that references such as that are reflections upon the delegates and that they are not in order. You may proceed with your arguments on the proposed amendment.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, we had here some experts that we paid quite a lot of heed to. We had experts in the judiciary field and we had experts on the resources field. Now on January 16, 1956, a Mr. Ostrom, who was supposed to be an expert upon resources, wrote a letter, January 16, just a few days ago; and among other things he said in this letter, he said, "I am still much concerned about the serious consequences of constitutional reference to the delegation of regulation and management of fish and wildlife to a commission or commissions." Now there are the words from the man we spent thousands of dollars to bring up here and help the Resources Committee. We have also a communication dated earlier. This was a week ago, and this was from Mr. Anderson, Director of Alaska Department of Fisheries. Those who know Mr. Anderson know of his conscientiousness to duty and desire to aid the fisheries of Alaska; and among other things he says, "The creation of boards and/or commissions for supervision of the various natural resources should be a legislative prerogative." He doesn't want it in the constitution. Now, if my amendment is carried and this Section 5 is voted down, I don't believe it would take the Committee over five minutes to sit down and write a section to take its place which will express the intent of this Convention and will not delegate all the powers of the executive, the chief executive, and the legislature, to a commission; and I hope that my amendment carries.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, may we have a roll call?

CHIEF CLERK: "Strike Section 5."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Taylor be adopted by the Convention?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 34 - Awes, Buckalew, Coghill, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, V. Fischer, Harris, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Londborg, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Poulsen, R. Rivers, V. Rivers, Robertson, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Taylor, VanderLeest, White, Wien, Mr. President.

Nays: 21 - Armstrong, Barr, Boswell, Collins, Cooper, Cross, H. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, McNealy, Nolan, Peratrovich, Reader, Riley, Sundborg, Sweeney, Walsh.)

2520

CHIEF CLERK: 34 yeas, 21 nays and none absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "yeas" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I would like to move a new Section 5 of Proposal 8/a which would read as follows --

R. RIVERS: Point of order. It appears to be long enough to be handed to the Clerk.

ARMSTRONG: I believe the Clerk has it in the form of deletions and additions.

R. RIVERS: Those don't apply now because the section is -- PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will be at recess for a couple of minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Point of order, Mr. President, and information at the same time. If we move to strike a section without substitution, just to plain strike, wouldn't that then express the will of the majority to consider the matter dead?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It is not the opinion of the Chair that moving to strike a section makes it, by that action, dead as you might say. It is dead at this moment. If someone offered an amendment to change the intent or the meaning of the original section, it would be in order so long as it was not the same thing. It is not correct, no, that when you strike a section it is dead forevermore. Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: Mr. President, I will try to see whether it is dead or not by trying again. My parliamentary procedure seems to get off the track, but I have left an amendment with the Clerk by way of Burke Riley's shorthand. So we will ask the Clerk if she would read it, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

HELLENTHAL: Slowly.

CHIEF CLERK: I will. "Section 5. Regulation of the commercial fisheries and of the wildlife, including game fish, may be delegated to a principal department of the state or to a commission or to separate commissions under such terms as the legislature may prescribe."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Armstrong?

ARMSTRONG: I would move for the adoption, sir.

STEWART: I ask unanimous consent.

McNEALY: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNealy seconded the motion. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I wish to disavow authorship. That is all I have to say on the matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Point of order. I simply want to know if, in accordance with our rules, this has been previously presented to the Committee or whether the Committee Chairman has waived that requirement.

SMITH: Mr. President, the amendment was presented to the Committee. The Committee took no action.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would like to say just one word on this. I think if you read this carefully you will see that it simply says that laws may be passed by the legislature for the regulation of the commercial fisheries; they may delegate those powers to principal departments or commissions. The same situation would exist exactly without this language in the constitution. Therefore, I am opposed to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Gray.

GRAY: Mr. Chairman, I will have to vote against this amendment for the principal reason that before we were voting on merely the implication of the language in the constitution; they are going to eventually end up, they are going to end up the same way with the same thing, and all we are voting on is the implication that you are trying to take away things, and the way things are; and this amendment, as presented, is the same as striking out, in my own personal opinion, the implication is there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, the original report said that the legislature should delegate their authorities to a commission. It eliminated the single department head. Now Delegate Armstrong's amendment allows them to do as they wish but they already have the authority to do as they wish; we are just telling the legislature they are empowered to enact a law considering these matters, and they already have the power to enact a law, so the amendment is unnecessary.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Section 16, the executive article, says, "The head of each principal department shall be a single executive, unless otherwise provided by law." And another article says the legislature can provide boards and commissions, so I think they have the power already.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Armstrong be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of the adopting of the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments? Are there amendments? The Chief Clerk will renumber the sections following the original Section 5. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, may I have the privilege of asking a question about Section 3?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Robertson, you may ask a question, relating to Section 3.

ROBERTSON: I would like to ask either Mr. Smith or Mr. Riley if they think the word "replenishable" is the apt word to use or has enough scope? As I recall at our hearing in Juneau a doubt was raised as to that particular word. I don't know as I recall particularly, but I think it was raised by Mr. Greeley, the Regional Director of Forests. The forests are not replenishable, but they are renewable. I was just wondering if any thought was given to that word being the correct word.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Chairman, I believe Mr. Robertson and I have discussed this very briefly before and probably during those hearings. The Committee has considered the use of both "renewable" and "replenishable" and from a number of sources I had thought up until now, including Mr. Greeley, we decided to adopt "replenishable". Now, after discussing it during our hearings, Mr. Robertson, I did endeavor to find a legal definition of the two words and it was my conclusion that a fuller definition had been given to "replenishable" than had been given "renewable". I recall that two or three people who have appeared before the Committee have expressed a preference for "replenishable", people who have served in the resource management fields, including the consultant whom we relied on to a large extent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to the new Section 5? To the new Section 6? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, I just wanted, for the record, to speak in connection with Section 6, that this section is not intended as authorization for the state's entering business in competition with private industry. That appears in our commentary, but I thought it should be in the record.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The new Section 5 or new Section 6, are there amendments? Are there amendments to new Section 7? To the new Section 8? Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Committee if they have considered rephrasing the words "interests therein". During the question period we were a little bit dubious about that expression.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: We have -- I should say I have, with other delegates, given it some attention and I thought possibly there would be an amendment from the floor. I am not sure that is going to be the case, but we have not come up with other language yet and perhaps during the next recess further attention may be given that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other questions relating to the new Section 8? Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, Mr. Riley, calling your attention to the language in the last sentence, "The legislature shall make provision for the selection and administration of lands in the state and public domain." I don't know just what you mean there by that word "selection". I am wondering if you intended that to apply to selection of lands for the state public domain from the federal public domain under any enabling act that may be passed.

RILEY: That was our thinking, yes, selection of the lands to be granted by the United States through the enabling legislation.

DAVIS: I can see where your language covers administration of the land, but it seems to me you haven't accomplished your purpose on the selection.

RILEY: I think your point is well taken from the time standpoint, and perhaps that, too, should be subject to further Committee consideration at the next recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed amendments to the new Section 9? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, now it says here that the state may lease any part of the public domain subject to reasonable concurrent uses. Why don't you use the same reasoning in that section dealing with mining? Why can't you give a coal lease and still allow somebody to drill an oil well on it or prospect for gold?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I am badly mistaken if we don't do that.

BARR: The word is "exclusive" use in your mining section.

RILEY: I see your point, Mr. Barr. That distinction, touching on the minerals now subject to lease under the federal government, may be qualified elsewhere in the section. I will have to check the text on that.

BARR: The last part of Section 5.

RILEY: Throughout we have held to the concept of concurrent use wherever practicable -- that is concurrent use if it should under the circumstances be possible is what we have sought to achieve and here again, rather than offering an off-the-cuff solution, I will try to consider that during the first recess.

BARR: I would just like to have you appear consistent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I get the feeling we do appear consistent in that the terms of lease could provide for concurrent use.

BARR: But you are using the word "exclusive" right in the section.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. Barr, it seems to me in the section you refer to it says "leases giving exclusive right of exploration". The parent clause on leases, Section 9, provides that leases can be given subject to reasonable concurrent uses. There is no reason why they could not be of another use, concurrent to right of exploration.

BARR: It is interesting, Mr. White, but that answer does not quite satisfy me.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to the new Section 10? Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May I ask Mr. Riley a question? I notice in this section, Mr. Riley, in line 17, you use the word "interest" and you have used that also in Section 8 and in subsequent sections. Would not the word "estates" be a better legal terminology to be used instead of "interests"?

RILEY: We were thinking also of stating resources. We get to the physical resource itself.

HELLENTHAL: If we are discussing this matter --

PRESIDENT EGAN: We are not discussing it, if you have questions or amendments, Mr. Hellenthal. Are there amendments to Section 10? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, Delegates, this is the reason I came to this Convention. I waited two months to get here and I hope you will keep your minds and hearts open for a few minutes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, do you have an amendment to offer?

MARSTON: It is being passed out. I have it in there.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Perhaps if the Chief Clerk read the amendment first -- would the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Insert the following as Section 12 and renumber the succeeding sections in sequence: 'The Legislature shall provide for translating the traditional rights of Alaskans of Indian, Aleut or Eskimo ancestry to the use of land, fishing, hunting and trapping areas into approximately equivalent homestead or other property rights. Provision shall also be made for just compensation for the impairment or extinction of such rights resulting from grants of land or timber or mining rights in the State public domain. Nothing in this section shall be construed to be in lieu of or prejudicial to any aboriginal rights or claims now pending or later to be filed.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, we might go on and finish with Sections 10 and 11 and then come to your section. Are there amendments to the new Section 10? Or the new Section 11? Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: May I ask a question of Mr. Smith? As I brought out before the Committee, on line 4, page 4, "and shall provide for access thereto;" I would like to have it clear, if I own a section of land adjacent to the highway and the state leases a piece of land beyond my land, just what process will the state use, according to this phrase here "and shall provide for access thereto"? Is that just a legal right-of-way, or is it an actual road, or do they go through the process of eminent domain? Can you explain just how that will work?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Being a technical question, I will refer to Mr. Riley.

RILEY: This is the same question we discussed in Committee earlier this afternoon and the same illustration, and at that time, I believe we were all of one mind that the paragraph concerns reservations that will be withheld by the state in conveying state lands. However, under other provisions, Mr. Metcalf, access could be had by condemnation across your ground which might so lie as to cut off the state grounds beyond.

METCALF: Now, who would compensate me for this right-of-way? Would the state do that?

RILEY: Whoever condemned.

METCALF: The private individual would pay the cost and the state would not be put to that expense?

RILEY: If the state condemned it would be the state, or otherwise it would be the private party. That is not actually covered by this language. This section doesn't touch your problem as I see it.

METCALF: I am interested from an expense standpoint whether the state is going to pay for condemnation or whether the private party that leased the land.

RILEY: Whoever wants to get across your ground and sees fit to condemn a right-of-way would have to go through the usual condemnation proceedings.

METCALF: They would have to pay for that and the state would not have to pay the expense, is that right?

RILEY: Not unless the state were the condemning party.

METCALF: I am just wondering where it says "shall provide"; the state could be the condemning party.

RILEY: This has to do with the sale of parcels of real estate owned by the state, the state sale on some of its own ground, and in selling its own land this authorizes the state to reserve or to retain access across the land so sold.

METCALF: That would not apply to leases then, would it?

RILEY: Access would be possible, too, in the event of lease. The United States today in issuing patents, reserves some comparable rights of way.

METCALF: It is all right with me if the lessee should pay the cost of the condemnation, but if the state is going to have to pay it, I am opposed to it.

RILEY: The lessee would hardly do it because he would be leasing the property in the first place and he would be able to use it at random; unless it is the lessee behind your property you are speaking of, and in that case he would be the one to condemn, I suspect.

METCALF: He would be the one who would have to pay then?

RILEY: The cost would be on him.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, five years ago our legislature passed a law reserving a strip along each section line for highways, I believe it was 120 feet wide which would take 64 feet off of each section. In other words, if Mr. Metcalf acquired this land from the state within the last five years he does not own a section of land, he owns a section less a strip surrounding it, 64 feet wide and this preserves that same intent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to new Section 10 or the new Section 11? If not, Mr. Marston, do you move the adoption of your proposed amendment?

MARSTON: I move the adoption of this proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston moves the adoption of this amendment. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, I am wondering if this has been cleared through the Committee?

MARSTON: I went to the Committee on two occasions and they are in sympathy with what this amendment calls for, but they took refuge behind HR 2535, and the evidence from the legal stand will be presented here showing that that does not necessarily hold.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there a second to Mr. Marston's motion?

LONDBORG: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg seconds the motion. Mr. Marston, you have the floor.

MARSTON: Delegate Peratrovich has talked about this, and the delegate I talked to during lunch time says this has come up at every Indian or Native convention he has attended. It comes up because it is never settled and every morning here we pray to the God above to guide us and direct us and I wish that His ambassador, Jesus, were here this afternoon and would show you the way to vote on this question. Here is a letter addressed through me to this Convention from an Eskimo living up on the Bering Sea, and there are many more letters here, but this is a typical letter addressed to the Alaska Constitutional Convention at the University of Alaska so it is addressed to you through me. In the second paragraph: "I have something to bring up myself in connection with our land problems, mostly of our fishing camps and our homes. Around here in Unalakleet, and also around outlying villages, we have fishing camps, from way back without anything to show in papers, claims or clear titles -- only fish racks, tent frames and cache stands to show, and there are particular places for fishing and camping, whether they are in the beach or on the rivers, they are in the main places we are to catch our winter needs each year. By what I have gone through I can say this much -- it is pretty hard winter when some outfit gets into his camp and uses it for nothing -- I have not fished at my camp site for three seasons because some outfit is working in it. I would suggest strongly we need to have our fishing camps rights, and settle it. Settle it to have any outfit or any organization as a group to pay for using any camp site instead of doing anything as they please with any camp site. This part of Alaska is still hard living. It is not developed yet, no roads built yet to go any place where we want to or to go near our trap lines. We still use dogs to go places in winter. We need to have our seasonal living livelihood to get by each year until something is done in this part of the country. Also, our homes here in Unalakleet, and in other villages, too, we don't own lots for our homes. We don't have any clear title for our homes. We have been under reservation too long. Most of us young people begin to realize that. Reservations are just getting us behind in many ways of living as an average American citizen. We begin to realize that we have been put aside as Natives too long. We young people would like to see our children grow up as any average American living citizen, living with equal rights as white men. We are just as good a human as anybody from black to white. Here's wishing you lots of luck, your friend, George Lockwood, Unalakleet, Alaska." This is the plea that has been coming across the desk of the white man ever since he came to this country. It has not been heeded, it has been pushed aside just like now it is pushed aside because of HR 2535. I wish that this delegation would make this document live by putting heart and soul and justice and taking care of the needs of a thing present in our midst. This man is appealing to you for his little livelihood; for what he already owns, these titles were good. All this bill asks for is that you give clear title to the home ground where he lives and to his camp site. Those titles were good in the Native land when the Natives lived there, but the oncoming civilization which is crossing over an older civilization has made inoperative those titles that were once good and I maintain it is up to us to make good those titles. These people, now in our preamble -- we speak of the pioneers of Alaska. Well, they are great. You see a man with boots on, a packsack, a pick and shovel, and a pan. We speak much in our Convention here about founding fathers -- great men they were, but greater men and many more of them lived long before the founding father or before the prospectors hit Alaska, and there are 30,000 of those people living here now in Alaska, and we have passed them by, as George Lockwood says, too long. These great people have done great things for us. We would not be here now if these people hadn't come here and had taken up this land and showed us the way. What do the Indians, the Natives give us? They gave us corn which has fed millions of people and is feeding millions now and making tens of thousands wealthy by growing corn, one of civilization's greatest blessings, I think. It gave us wheat; the Indians gave us corn. Our new civilization is running over the old civilization. It is a great civilization coming here. After the war a new group are coming -- not to get rich and get out -- but they are coming to raise families and make their homes in Alaska. They want to do right by the people that are here, but this Convention can do something about it, can correct an evil. Many people, Eskimos, Indians, and Aleuts have born, lived, and died waiting for the blessing of the great "white father" to settle on them under the aboriginal rights and they have not been treated right. They have missed their blessing, and the time has come when the great "white father" to settle down on these people what he has promised them. "A pal's last need is a thing to heed; a promise made is a debt unpaid." George Lockwood is my pal and your pal, and he is pleading to you now; and there are many George Lockwoods over the Arctic and in many places asking you to come and help them out. It is not their fault -- they don't want anything different than anybody else. They want to be just like you and me -- equal. We have destroyed their title by our new civilization. The government has promised them great blessings. Generations have come and lived and died and the blessing has not settled upon us. We can make this document live if we will just make clear the title and here is all I want you to do under this amendment. Mr. Londborg, will you show them this location here of George Lockwood? I can show it to you. Here is all this does. (Mr. Marston took the map up to front of room.) This is all that amendment asks for. George Lockwood lives at Unalakleet, right here. He lives right there (pointing to map) on a little piece of ground and he wants a title to it. He has a fishing camp up here. He would like to have title to that five acres. There is where the military is now occupying camp for three years, and pushed him aside. The cats have destroyed his blueberries, the beach where his kiddies played they can't play there anymore, and for three years he has been dispossessed of that position by the military who are building a radar station up here. If he had title to that ground, as you and I would have, he would have no complaints, so in the name of decency and honor and common ordinary right, I ask this Convention to adopt this amendment and let George have his ground saved for him and a little camp site where he makes his living by fishing and hunting. That is all this amendment does. We can make this Constitution with heart and soul and justice in it if we just do that little thing and not forever pass by these people that are pleading to us. We have problems here; let's recognize them. I believe this Convention has the honor and the justice and the will and the free-wheeling among them to do this job which the United States government has been unable to do. Aboriginal rights have nothing to do with it. It merely clears title for his home site and for him camp site and that is all that does. I present it the best I can. I have a very humble way of presenting it, but I hope you realize the moment and the greatness of this little request by George Lockwood. There are many more letters here if you want to read them, but this letter tells you the story. I have told you the story and it is up to you. Let your conscience be your guide.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: I would like to point out a parallel, if I may, between the situation as Colonel Marston has described it, and our own situation as residents of the Territory of Alaska. I was born and raised on a Blackfoot Indian reservation. I grew up among the Yakimas and the Nez Perces. I came to Alaska as quite a young man and I feel I have been living on a reservation ever since, and I resent it. I resent it so much that for at least 15 years I have held hard to the fact that some day we would be sitting in a Constitutional Convention such as we are today, expressing ourselves as a free people and a desire for freedom of action. I do feel, furthermore, that these Native people of Alaska who have made such a great contribution to our own civilization as it exists here in the Territory, are entitled to a voice within our constitution. I would like to have a serious discussion, serious consideration given to this proposal. I am neither supporting it now nor am I denying it, but I am saying in this constitution we must make provision for these people who have made such a great contribution to our own civilization.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to just say a word or two regarding this. I have not had a chance to read over this particular proposal before now, although I think I understand the intent of it. When a white person wants to come to Alaska he is usually pretty sure of getting a job or some security of some kind. There are some that just hit the trail and see what they can make out of it, but usually there is a sense of security that all of us want if we are going to settle and live in a place. Now, most of us are secure; we have our homes; we fight to get title for our lands; I don't think you would put up a building of any size using, maybe, the greater share of your earnings on a little plot of ground in a city unless you had some title to it, and somehow or other, we have worked it out so that the white people can get title to lands in the cities and out around other places, the Homestead Act for those who care to do that, and yet for some reason or other the government has just overlooked the basic need of the Native people. Now, this is not giving them, as I understand it, any large tract of land; it is not giving them anything that's new; it is just giving them security to what they are claiming right now, and as Mr. Marston said, have claimed down through the generations. Last night it was brought out very clearly the problem in connection with trap lines; some kind of a right to a trap line. Well, the Native has always had a right to his particular trap lines; I have seen it in operation where a family will have a trap line and they have had it for two or three generations, and it will be passed on to their children, and if someone marries into the family, then they have their share in that particular trap line. But a white man can come along, maybe under some government work or something of that nature, and just disrupt the whole economy of that particular family; no apology is made. It is just part of the white man's civilization, and it rolls on and on. This reference to Mr. Lockwood is just one single incident that has happened many many times. I am personally acquainted with that; Mr. Lockwood had this particular little site; he had a place built for summer home where he and his family would spend time fishing each summer and then in the winter time they would be back in the village so their older children could go to school. The children play with our children a lot; we are very well acquainted with this family; yet now his whole fishing site has been disrupted. The construction company has moved in; they have disrupted the home site that they have and, of course, if Mr. Lockwood could go on the white man's standard and get a job for a construction company, maybe he would be satisfied, but inasmuch as the unions have the right to say who can work, he can't do that. I think it would bear some very serious consideration here in the Convention as far as this proposal is concerned.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, this amendment was not cleared with the Committee; however, I think that the Committee would all agree to waive that presentation to the Committee in order that we might not delay Mr. Marston's presentation. I am sure that the Committee is in full sympathy with the problem presented, but I am just as sure that there is nothing we can write into this constitution which would correct the problem or fully solve the problem presented by Mr. Marston. Now, the Committee did discuss this question with Mr. Marston on Sunday. The Committee's thinking was gone into very thoroughly at that time, and I would like to ask Mr. Riley if he would care to express the Committee sentiments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will be at ease for a moment.

(Mr. Egan requested Second Vice President, Ralph Rivers, to take the Chair at this time.)

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, as Mr. Smith has said, Delegate Marston did appear before the Committee on two occasions, I believe, and the Committee in transmitting its article to the Convention called attention to Delegate Marston's similar delegate proposal introduced at the outset of the Convention. Our transmittal carried this language: "Proposal 26 was considered to be beyond the province of the Committee and without the scope of the Constitution. However, the Committee recommends that the Convention adopt a suitable resolution addressed to appropriate federal agencies now in position to remedy the situation which Proposal No. 26 seems to reach." It has been suggested to me, during the recess a moment ago, that the Committee on Miscellaneous Provisions might also appropriately consider this matter, but I think there are good and sufficient reasons why the Convention, as such, cannot cover this matter in the constitution. Now, we have heard frequent mention this afternoon of fairness and decency and obligation and morality and that sort of thing, but I think there is a greater morality involved here, as far as the constitution itself is concerned, and that is that we should not offer any gifts that we are not in position to deliver and may not ever be in position to deliver, at least as far as this specific piece of ground is concerned, or any other specific piece of ground. The enabling bill, every bill that has been proposed in recent years has required the new state to commit itself to certain disclaimers, and language from the Committee hearings on Senate 50, last year, 1954, I believe, states: "In order to make certain that the protection afforded the Natives of Alaska by the required disclaimer clause is applicable to all lands actually in their possession as defined, and is not confined only to land which such Natives have a legal interest. The committee amendment specifically extends the protection of the disclaimer not only to lands actually owned by Natives but to lands which for periods of at least three years prior to the enactment of this act have been in the possession and actually in the use or occupations of Natives." I do not agree with Colonel Marston that we have made no recognition of this large segment of our population, this very important segment. I think we have made precisely the same recognition of them as we have for all of the people in our bill of rights and every other section of the constitution which concerns the rights of citizens generally. I do feel that existing machinery in the federal government, if accelerated, would ultimately get to this problem. I know that it has not to now on a satisfactory basis. In recent years the Bureau of Indian Affairs has sent hearings examiners, I believe their title is, to Alaska in an effort to accomplish a sort of a tribal probate, or a probate in the Native tradition, to establish ownerships and lines of succession to the use of particular properties. It has been a grievously slow process, and it is one of several means whereby the federal government, if it were to speed up the process, could ultimately get to this very problem. That was our purpose in suggesting appropriate resolutions from the Convention to certain of the federal agencies involved. I think that if the Convention were to refer the matter to the Committee on Miscellaneous Provisions that perhaps further strength could be given it there.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I should like to be heard in favor of the adoption of this amendment. We have listened to ambiguous language, which reminds me of a Southern senator discussing a civil rights bill in the North, or a Northern senator discussing an antilynching bill in the South. It looks like we are walking on eggs when we discussed this subject in the Committee. This is not a complicated subject. This is the kind of a subject that school boys and the average man understands and understands thoroughly. It is a matter of common decency, Christian decency if you were, and there is no complicated legal problems about it; there is none of this double talk or nonsense necessary. This is a very simple fundamental and elementary problem, and a very, very pressing problem in Alaska. Now, first, do not confuse this problem with the problem of aboriginal rights. Aboriginal rights deal with the group right of tribes and groups of people to enter into areas and pursue certain occupations and the like. This refers to the individual right of a human being to pursue a small trap line, a fishing wheel, to go to a blueberry patch, to occupy the land around his house, and to follow his traditional pursuits. So, let's first put the thing in its proper perspective. Let's analyze what Congress did about it. Congress did not say that the Alaska constitution should not treat this subject. Congress could have said that very simply and easily but Congress did not say that. Congress did not trust you and me. Congress did not trust Alaskans. They were so afraid that we would not take care of our own people that they said, "This is one subject that we want to hold the whiphand on just in case you do not act like Christians, in case you don't act justly and don't act fairly to your own people." Any language in this house bill, and I have it before me, merely is more of an urging and an invitation to us to be decent and what it says, in effect, is that if you are not decent, we will be decent. Now, for many years in Alaska I have watched the old battle of "let's try to hook Uncle Sam into doing something that we normally should take care of ourselves", and I can see where it would be nice if Uncle Sam would dish out the money and I don't think it would be an enormous sum of money to take care of these individual rights, but I think it would be a black mark on our conscience if we did not face this problem and solve it in our constitution. Now, this amendment deals first with the individual rights of our own people; it applies to the state lands that will become the patrimony of the new State of Alaska. It is not retroactive; this is what we will have to do under normal condemnation procedures if Uncle Sam doesn't do it. Now, follow that again. To compensate these people, our people for these rights, as provided in this amendment, is merely a duty that we will have if Uncle Sam doesn't have, and this duty exists in the absence of this language even. Let's face it. Now, I want to make it concrete. We all agree to this grand principle that has been enunciated in this article before us, of the balancing of rights and where a superior right comes along that the lesser rights must give in, with compensation. In other words, if the legislature decides that Alaska needs a great dam on a fishing river, under this article, this beautiful article that we have before us, we enunciate the principle that in the public interest the dam will be given priority; the fishing rights will be compensated for. That is fine; that is nice; that appeals to the chambers of commerce; that is big stuff; that is high-level thinking. Let's bring the same thinking down to the low level, to the average man, the poor man that doesn't have the articulate chambers of commerce to support him. A small mine, if you were, goes into an area where there is a river; they need to use that land to further their placer mining. In the middle of the land they desire is a blueberry patch that has been used by an individual Native, and I don't laugh at that because that is the way those people eat, and that is the way they were brought up; that is the way they live and there is nothing funny about it. Those people, they must yield; they must give to the miner because in the hierarchy of value the mine is more important to the people as a whole than that poor individual. He is compensated for his blueberry patch; if it is a trap line he is compensated for his trap line, and that is the way it goes. Now, that is basic; that is just decency, and I think that the language in the house bills that was referred to as having been in each one is not necessary because we Alaskans are going to take care of our people, and we should take care of our people. Now, people undoubtedly will jump up here and say how much this is going to cost us -- we are writing a blank check. Well, you have got to take some risks with statehood and this is the kind of a risk that I want to see taken.

LONDBORG: May I ask Delegate Riley a question or two?

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: If there is no objection, yes.

LONDBORG: Mr. Riley, you mentioned something about the fact that saying we are going to give something that we don't have a right to give. As I take it, you mean that we would say here we're going to settle the issue where they live and then the national government would not give us that particular land to give to them. Is that right?

RILEY: I was simply cautioning against our offering something that we might not be in a position to give. I say there is no certainty the state will ever collect George Lockwood's five acres in order to give it to him.

LONDBORG: Or that the national government may hold it back and not give it to us?

RILEY: Either would be possible. I don't know what status it is in today; whether it is subject to any federal reservations or otherwise withdrawn which would deprive the state of any opportunity of selecting it. We should not build up hopes today for something we may or may not be in position to act upon at some indefinite time in the future.

LONDBORG: In other words, if the government, for some other reason, holds it back, it ceases to be our responsibility, but if we should acquire it, then it would seem the inclusion of this amendment would show us what we are intending to do with it.

RILEY: If we could be sure we would acquire that particular property and perhaps 10,000 other small properties at random, checkerboarded throughout Alaska, I would say that we had firmer ground to stand on in making such an offer.

LONDBORG: Would there be any objection of asking for such, that you can see at all? After all, we should have our villages included in Alaska.

RILEY: Certainly, as I envision it, the state will ask for the most attractive land it possibly can find, including land adjacent or near to established communities because to the degree that it is near established communities, there is some likelihood that it will be of value.

LONDBORG: I will go along with that. Then if we would ask for land like that and the federal government would not give it to us, then the responsibility is theirs; we have at least discharged our duty, but if we get it then this could be our intent if we adopt this?

RILEY: Do you wish to suggest an amendment to this?

LONDBORG: No, if it is just understood, that it is public domain, when it becomes Alaska, if this --

RILEY: If this becomes public domain we are agreeable to its being given in five-acre parcels to the occupants. I think that would make the picture clearer for those in the position of George Lockwood.

LONDBORG: Certainly I can see that, and I realize they have been promised too many things that they have never gotten. I think we should be clear on the issue; however, if that should be the point, I think we could discuss probably at the next recess such things that would make the issue a lot clearer. I just wanted to bring that up if that was the objection that we may not get the land; either we don't ask for it or the federal government does not give it to us.

RILEY: That was one of the hazards that I suggested.

LONDBORG: If I may indulge for a moment --

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Londborg has spoken.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Right. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, this is something that is very hard to talk to after the eloquent and emotional appeals that have been made by the two previous speakers. As a matter of fact, so far as I am concerned and I believe I speak for all 55 of us, we consider the Eskimo and the Indian a citizen just the same as all the rest of us. We don't consider that he is any better than we are, and we don't consider that he is any worse. He is a man just like we are; and he is entitled to all the rights and privileges and all the duties of citizenship, just as we are; and he is covered by the bill of rights that we are adopting here, just as we are. Now I will start out with the proposition that the Eskimo and the Indian ought to have title to his house, and ought to have title to his fish camp, just as you and I are entitled to our property. I will go further and I will say that these restrictive deeds we have been passing out to them are a shame and a disgrace. I would like to see them have their property. But as Mr. Riley pointed out awhile ago, this is not ours to give. And if we tried to adopt something like Colonel Marston has requested us to adopt here -- in the first place, we couldn't possibly fulfill it; in the second place, we have for some reason or another attempted to make people think that possibly we can do what we can't do. Now, the Eskimos and Indians being citizens should be entitled, and I think are entitled, under existing law to have their towns platted out and to get their property just as it has been done before. Now, I am not certain, we talked, of course, about Unalakleet awhile ago, but it is one town in one part of Alaska, and of course we have other towns in all parts of Alaska that will have the same problem. I started to say I don't know whether Unalakleet is or is not presently a reservation. I was informed that it is, and I don't know whether it is or not. If it is, of course, then there is nothing we can do about that particular town except to try to get the reservation removed if that is what those people want. I don't know whether it is or not because these reservations, at least the recent reservations, were established by the will of the people involved. Maybe they have changed their mind or maybe for that matter it is not a reservation, but the trouble with this whole thing is that even if we had the right to do what Colonel Marston has asked, the proposed section here doesn't even come close to accomplishing it. Let's read it. "The Legislature shall provide for translating the traditional rights of Alaskans of Indian, Aleut, or Eskimo ancestry to the use of land, fishing, hunting, and trapping areas," and I want you to note that word "areas" -- "into approximately equivalent homestead or other property rights." There isn't any question at all if you take that the way it is written, that there won't be any public domain of the State of Alaska because certainly some Indian, some Eskimo, some Aleut had an interest either in trapping, hunting, or fishing rights in every foot of Alaska at one time or another. And I don't think that is what Colonel Marston intends to do, I am sure it isn't. What he wants to do is to give these folks their five acres of ground for a headquarter site for their home, and I would like to see them have it, but as of today that land all belongs to the federal government. I think we ought to do everything that we can do as individuals or as a group to see they get their rights as citizens to that property. When and if Alaska becomes a state and gets this public domain we have been talking about, if in that public domain there appears some of these homesteads, some of these homesites, some of these villages, I would be all in favor at that time, if they have not previously gotten title, in seeing that they get title to their property if we can do it, because as I said to begin with, they are citizens just as you and I, not because they are Indians, Eskimos, or Aleut, but because they have the right to own their property just as we do. But in my opinion this proposed section will not do what it is designed to do. It would certainly upset the entire possibility of Alaska having any public domain and would be setting up one group of our citizens as against the rest of our citizens. I hope that the proposed amendment will be voted down.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: Mr. President, I am in favor of the amendment. I believe there should be some amendments to it, however, to make it workable, I am going to speak now in favor of the amendment. In regard to the leaving of the matter up to the Congress, and there we come into the matter of restrictive deeds, I have had correspondence here from parties who are opposed in some of the villages, and I speak for this particular area now, the central part of Alaska, if you will, and that they fear that -- they have the letters where titles were issued to the Natives by the federal government and leaves that land within the town or towns to be incorporated as nontaxable. Now, the reason I mention that fact is if this matter is taken care of by the federal government first, then we have nothing to say on it if they give them the deeds prior, but if they do not, I think provision should be made, and made in this constitution, for the state to give them deeds to their property or take care of it out of the public domain. I grant the fact that that land Congress grants to the state -- it is silly to talk about giving them land that is not granted to the state -- but land that is granted to the state, the state will have the right to give. I think of the numerous villages up and down the Yukon and the Kuskokwim rivers where I imagine the conditions are the same as Unalakleet -- I am not acquainted over there, but where the people have lived for years and years and years in these villages; they have established their homes there and they have no more title to them than the man in the moon. It is not going to do any good, ladies and gentlemen, to refer this matter to the Committee on Miscellaneous Provisions because it may as well be argued out on the floor at this time rather than taking up the time to argue it out later under miscellaneous provisions. I think that some definite provision here should be provided for these Americans who were here long before most of us were in this country. As in closing, as to writing a resolution, I hope the delegation is not affected or anyone by what I might state in writing a resolution on this subject; if there is going to be a resolution written to the Congress or anybody else, then let's write the resolution with disappearing ink on a roll of toilet tissue.

V. RIVERS: I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 3:50 p.m. It is now 3:34 p.m.

SECOND VICE PRESIDENT: If there is no objection, the Convention stands at recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Is there further discussion on the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Marston? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: I would like to ask a question of Mr. Hellenenthal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There's no objection, Mr. Boswell, you may ask a question.

BOSWELL: Mr. Hellenenthal, would title pass from the state to these Indians or Eskimos or Aleuts under this amendment?

HELLENTHAL: No, not at all.

BOSWELL: No title will pass?

HELLENTHAL: No title would pass. Their rights only would be recognized.

BOSWELL: Well, how would they be recognized? Mr. Marston spoke about a five-acre plot here and 160-acre plot there.

HELLENTHAL: I think that the word "areas" is misplaced in Mr. Marston's amendment. It should be "land areas, fishing rights, hunting rights, and trapping rights" to make it clearly understood. In other words, that would protect the occupant in his lands, just as the federal government now does, where they go in and survey. The occupant would be protected in the occupancy of his lands, and he would get a title to it, and the rights, which, of course, are lesser and very inferior interests of fishing, hunting and trapping, would be recognized. Envision a situation where a Native person has a -- I mentioned this to Senator Nolan -- envision your own house and lot in the new state patrimony. Say, you get in there and you get a piece of land, and you build a house and lot on it in this new area that will be given to the new State of Alaska: a Native walks through your yard in pursuing of his trapping rights. Now, by recognizing his trapping right, you're not giving him your house and lot, you're merely letting him go through your lands in the pursuit of his trap lines. It isn't giving him any lands -- just recognizing the right.

BOSWELL: Well now, just a moment ago you said it would give title just like the federal government now does.

HELLENTHAL: To lands, the right of the owner and title would, I believe, ultimately be recognized, yes.

BOSWELL: Well, that's the point I wanted to bring out. Now, we have all of Southeastern Alaska as a national forest, and all of the Prince William Sound, including Kodiak Island. Now, that land will never be state public domain.

HELLENTHAL: We're not concerned with that land at all. We're merely dealing here with the state patrimony, and not trying to tell the federal government what to do. This is what we will do as a state when we're given these lands by the federal government.

BOSWELL: But, the point that the Committee was thinking about was that we had no moral right to put in our constitution something that would make the people in Southeastern Alaska think they had a right that may never be realized.

HELLENTHAL: Well, I'm not so sure they can't realize it.

BOSWELL: They could never get title.

HELLENTHAL: Now, what kind of title are you talking about?

BOSWELL: Title to this five-acre plot of ground.

HELLENTHAL: You say now, if a Native in Southeastern Alaska has lived for years --

BARR: Point of order, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Barr.

BARR: Is the Chair being addressed in this debate?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Boswell has the floor.

BOSWELL: I'm sorry it has gone to this length. I'll relinquish my right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Peratrovich.

PERATROVICH: I feel compelled to speak on this question. If I don't, I'll be a mighty poor Indian. I tried to avoid it as long as I could, but I think it has come to a point in where, perhaps, a little light on the question, if I can contribute to it, will be of some help. Now, from the proposed amendment and also listening to the discussion, I get the feeling that you cannot compare the Southeastern Alaska in this respect -- that is, the Tlingits or the Indians you might call them, and the Eskimos together, for the simple reason, I think we had a little advantage, or more so, perhaps, than the Eskimos and Aleuts had, because we've had the white contact long before they had the privilege of doing so. For that reason, I think we saw our needs, and in a period of time it was necessary for us to organize into a body as you folks do in your various organizations, like your Red Men and Elks, etc. Now, through this organization we have attempted to have what we feel is our aboriginal rights. And that has nothing to do, as I see it now, with the proposed amendment here. We have advanced to a point where this question of aboriginal rights will be aired in a court of claims in Washington, D. C., on March 2. Now, those of you that have been closely connected with this question, particularly from Southeastern Alaska, are familiar with the difficult discussions and conflicting ideas, perhaps, we've had in regards to this. I personally have agreed with the majority of these people of that particular section that this question has hindered the progress of the Territory of Alaska, and I do feel that way. It seems to me, and I speak for, perhaps, the entire Indian population from this section, that the sooner this question is decided one way or the other, the better it will be for the Territory of Alaska. And, with that thought in mind, I have rendered services to the best of my ability to push this particular question so that it may be settled, and I'm happy to hear -- I just had correspondence here a week ago that this question will be aired in a court of claims on March 2, this year. Now, I appreciate the fact that I've had advantages and consideration as a citizen of this Territory -- perhaps more so than a good many of my friends from my own race -- and I appreciate that. But, however, I cannot help but look back and see sometimes -- I don't like to use this term "injustice" -- being put in practice here and there in regards to some of our people. Now, it's well for perhaps some of you to say, "Well, an Indian can go out here and get land if he wants to under the homestead law, etc." Now, that's been tried by some individuals. Unfortunately, it's not the younger generation. It's the older people that are looking far ahead -- looking for security, just like you are doing, and they wish to take advantage of these laws. But, unfortunately, I don't know where the bottleneck is, but it has never worked successfully in this respect. Now, for that reason I maintain that unless you give this man from up North here some consideration, I think you're going to have the same problem here, perhaps, 20 or 30 years from now. Now, I don't want to ask any special privilege for myself or any of the members of my tribe, you might say. We have Haida and Tsimshian down there, too, and I don't think they'll ask for any special privilege. They're contented with the fact that their position is going to be aired in a court of claims, and they'll abide by the decision of the court. But, however, it appears to me that you have a situation up here in this division that needs attention. I don't know how you're going to approach it, but at least you have something before you here for your consideration. If this amendment is a solution to remedy that particular situation, then I think you should give it fair consideration. Again, I say I'm not asking for anything for my part of the division because I'm satisfied with what has transpired, but I'm compelled to support this amendment because I'd do that for any one of you, I don't care if you were Indian or what race you belonged to. If you were in the same situation, I'd vote for this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I can well appreciate the intense personal feeling that Colonel Marston and Mr. Peratrovich feel on this matter. But, it's a sense of duty that compels me to say that this is not the solution that Mr. Peratrovich seeks. I think it's well known to everyone here that in the United States, traditionally and particularly in our Western states, we have been plagued for years by claims -- Indian claims -- and by claims similar -- most of you have heard of them -- of the Spanish land grants, and particularly in California, Sutter's claims against the state. Here we're creating, in substance, whether you realize it or not, a completely new set of property rights. These are property rights; don't be deceived by it. It says the legislature shall provide for translating the traditional rights to the use of land. That automatically creates a property right in the constitution. What is the danger of it? The danger of it is simply this: let us assume that we acquire with statehood this great public domain that's been promised to us. Can it be disposed of? No, it cannot. Why? Because every piece of that land is subject to a property right, and that property right makes everything else subordinate. The use of the land is subject to the proof that it was one of the traditional rights of Alaskans of Indian, Aleut, or Eskimo ancestry. What is a traditional right? I must presume that it's a right that may not now be exercised, but may have been one of the rights of the Eskimos, the Aleuts, or the Indians. In substance, what you're doing, we're not only subject to the question of aboriginal rights, not only are we subject to the question of rights which existed at the time of the Treaty of Cession from Russia, but we're creating now, a completely new set of rights, indeterminate in their application, and in substance no part of the public domain would ever be insured by a title company without the reservation, "except subject to the traditional rights of Alaskans of Indian, Aleut, or Eskimo ancestry, of the land, fishing, hunting, and trapping areas". All of those things you would get a defeasible title, and, in the event of development, it would plague the Territory for years. If the amendment is voted down, I am prepared to submit one which I feel recognizes the rights and, in substance, can preserve the things that Mr. Peratrovich wants, and with the indulgence of the Chair, I'll read it. "The legislature may provide for translating the traditional use of Alaskans of Indian, Aleut, or Eskimo ancestry, of land, fishing, hunting, and trapping areas, into property rights, or for just compensation for the impairment or extinction of such use. Nothing in this section shall be construed to be in lieu of or prejudicial to any aboriginal rights or claims otherwise provided or reserved by the Congress." In substance, we don't make them rights that subject every title in the Territory to being overthrown, and yet, we give the Territory of Alaska the right to convert them, either into homesteads or to make reasonable compensation for their loss to the Aleuts, the Indians, or the Eskimos. I cannot conscientiously, even though I am quite sympathetic, support this amendment of Mr. Marston's.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I've been through the aboriginal claims controversy when I was an attorney down in Juneau, and this amendment is couched in such broad terms as to suggest group rights and tribal rights, and it brings in the whole subject of aboriginal rights, otherwise known as aboriginal claims. Mr. Hellenthal said that he was concerned with individual rights. Colonel Marston had said that he's concerned with individual rights in small tracts, and I think something can be done along that line. I support Mr. McLaughlin's contention and the contention of those who spoke against this -- that this is not the vehicle to accomplish the purpose which Mr. Peratrovich and these others have tried to achieve. So I will vote against this amendment. I have, also, run a redraft on the subject of small tracts, which I have given to Mr. Marston as an alternative.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes.

AWES: May I ask Mr. Hellenthal a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may ask Mr. Hellenthal a question, Miss Awes.

AWES: When you and Mr. Riley talked before, I believe both of you referred to certain language in HR 2535. I wonder if you'd read that to us?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. It's in the second section of this proposed house bill or the house bill on page 30. It says, "That said State and its people do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to any lands or other property not granted or confirmed to the State or its political subdivisions by or under authority of this Act, the right or title to which is held by the United States or is subject to disposition by the United States, and to any lands or other property (including fishing rights), the right or title to which may be held by any Indians, Eskimos, or Aleuts (hereinafter called Natives) or is held by the United States in trust for said Natives." And then it goes on a little further about Natives, "That all such lands or other property, belonging to the United States or which may belong to said Natives, shall be and remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the United States until disposed of under its authority, except to such extent as the Congress has prescribed or may hereinafter prescribe, and except when held by individual Natives in fee without restrictions on alienation: Provided, that nothing..." I suppose I should read it all, but I assure you that the next proviso is merely general language that I don't think will help answer your question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I would like to speak in favor of this amendment to insert Section 12, as such. I feel that I can't speak on it in a legal sense because of the fact that I'm not an attorney, and, therefore, do not possess the ramifications of a legal mind. However, I think that if the delegates will sincerely consider this as a moral aspect, and to let their conscience be their guide, that we do have a problem particularly in the Fourth Division, and possibly the Second Division, as to the rights of lands of the people that have lived there for generations, and have stayed in one particular valley or one particular section. I might, for example, cite the community of Minto, which is about a 100 miles from here, or about 30 miles from Nenana. There the village consists of 200 or 300 Natives. They were all born and raised in that area. One family has a particular direction that their trap line is in. They have no legal right, according to the white man's code, to having their cabins on a particular piece of ground, or they have no legal right to trap to a certain divide or to a certain river. It is solely a moral right, and they have agreed upon it among their people. One of them goes up another river, and in turn they have split up the country in their own way of providing so that there will not be an overlapping of trapping grounds. However, we have had intervention in there in the past years, of white people that wish to go in and trap; they'll go in with an airplane and set right down and violate maybe five or six of those trap lines. That's putting the Native people completely "behind the eightball" when it comes to preserving any rights or conservation measures that they have adhered to without the consistent entanglements of the Alaska Wildlife Service. They have their own provisions for conserving the beaver dams; they take only a certain amount from each beaver dam, and then move on to another. I believe that the delegates here will be completely hiding an issue if they don't face it and vote on their own convictions as to giving the Native people, who were here long before us, at least their legal right to holding the lands that they are on.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

HELLENTHAL: It may not be a point of order, but this is it. I want to ask unanimous consent that this matter be deferred until after the dinner recess, so that Mr. McLaughlin, myself, Colonel Marston, and others who are interested, can sit down and calmly see if we can work out an amendment that will please everyone, and I only make that request to save the time of the Convention.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You're asking unanimous consent that action on this amendment be deferred until after the dinner recess.

HELLENTHAL: If I'm in order, I'll ask unanimous consent.

COOPER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

TAYLOR: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you so move, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal so moves, seconded by Mr. Taylor.

COOPER: Mr. President, I only object in that Mr. Hellenthal referred to a few delegates that are interested in this matter. I say we're all interested in it, and I'd like to have that clarified.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to deferring -- then, you withdraw your objection, Mr. Cooper, now?

COOPER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to deferring this question until after the dinner recess? If not, it is so ordered, and the amendment will come before us at 7:00 p.m. Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I'd like to rise to a point of inquiry. Mr. Marston, will you call a meeting of this for the delegates that are interested in this subject, and at the time and place prescribed by you?

MARSTON: Mr. Chairman, if I may say, the meeting will be immediately after this recess starts, right in this room right here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would seem that the Resources Committee might wish to have this come before it in a meeting and Mr. Marston and all delegates. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I cannot speak for the Committee, due to the fact that the question hadn't been discussed by the Committee. I had felt that the Resources Committee would hold a meeting during the recess, and this question, as well as any others, could be presented to the Committee at such time. I'm at a loss as just to what course to pursue. I do intend to announce a meeting of Resources.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, it would seem, in the opinion of the Chair, that that would consolidate the meetings, and you wouldn't have one meeting going off in one direction and one in the other, and perhaps when Mr. Smith announces his committee meeting at the time of the recess, it would be understood that all delegates can come at that time, and this matter will be discussed and proposed amendments will be accepted. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I'd just like to make a suggestion. There are quite a few people interested in this that haven't even spoken. Myself, for one, and I know John Cross is interested in it, a lot of us who have had contact with the Natives in the Territory. And that would make a pretty big committee combining with the Resources Committee. It seems to me like this little group should surround Colonel Marston and Mr. Hellenthal first and figure out what they want, and then take it to the Committee. I think it would be done quicker that way.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seems to me as if it isn't going to be any little group, because it looks to the Chair like every person in the room is vitally interested in this. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I would just like to suggest that I don't think the interest of the Convention runs so much in the drafting of the constitution as a thorough discussion after it is drafted. And I am in accord with the suggestion that this group draw the amendment, then present it to the Resources Committee, and then it come on the floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If that is your wish, Mr. Smith, then that is the way we will proceed. Are there amendments to the new Section 11 or the new Section 12? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, we have another committee amendment or two, but --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments suggested for the new Section 13? Does the Chief Clerk have an amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: I think it's to Section 12, now that we've changed the numbers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment to the new Section 12?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, line 15, insert period after the word 'law', and insert the following: 'Like permits and leases may also be authorized by law'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, what is your pleasure?

RILEY: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I ask that the proposed amendment be reread.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment once more?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, line 15, strike the semicolon and insert a period, and insert, 'Like permits and leases may also be authorized by law'." Does the rest of the sentence stay in?

RILEY: Yes, it's new matter.

CHIEF CLERK: It's not a period after law, then.

RILEY: The word "and" should be stricken in the new sentence, and there is a period after the word "law".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Also, strike the word "and" after the semicolon?

RILEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection?

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor. There is an objection, Mr. Riley. Do you so move?

RILEY: I move its adoption.

KNIGHT: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment, it is seconded by Mr. Knight. Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Lest there is any confusion, the only period we will put in is after the third word on line 15. The next sentence commences with the word "like". The fourth word, "and" on that line has been stricken, or I propose it being stricken.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk read that new sentence as it will appear?

CHIEF CLERK: "Like permits and leases may also be authorized by law for the use of geophysical, geochemical and similar methods of prospecting for all minerals.

RILEY: As has been noted, Mr. President, we're dealing with two categories -- the metallic and the nonmetallic fields. The last sentence, the one we're now considering, we've reverted back to both types, and for that reason we seem to set it apart a little further by this language -- the import is unchanged.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Mr. President, I believe that in the preceding paragraph -- not in the section, but in the paragraph -- this says that "The legislature shall provide for the issuance, type, and terms of leases for coal, oil, gas, oil shale, sodium, phosphate, potash, sulfur, pumice, and other minerals as may be prescribed by law." Now, in the following -- in this paragraph we're on now -- we've got "leases and prospecting permits giving exclusive right of exploration". You don't give a lease for the purpose of exploration, you give a lease for the purpose of production. The prospecting permit comes before. So, in the preceding paragraph you've provided for a lease for these things, for the production, and then in the next section you go and give a lease and permit for prospecting. So, I believe that the word

-- I figured out an amendment to strike the word "leases and" in that paragraph, so that it would be, "Prospecting permits giving exclusive right of exploration..." I think that should be the subject matter of that paragraph instead of leases, because that is provided for in the previous paragraph.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Wasn't the word, "prospecting" deleted?

CHIEF CLERK: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Previously, Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Out of this particular paragraph?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes, the paragraph that you are referring to, yes.

TAYLOR: Now then, we've got two different paragraphs that treats the leases, then; we have nothing that treats prospecting permits, if you struck "prospecting -- leasing and prospecting permits -- if you struck prospecting", so you've got leases giving exclusive right of exploration. Under the law, it's the prospecting permit that gives you the right of exploration, and it's the lease that gives you the right for production. I think that those matters should be straightened out by the Committee, and then, also, if you allow this amendment that has been offered -- it says "on like permits and leases" -- well, you've given something that is not necessary. You should have a like permit; prospecting permit should be given, not a lease, because under the federal act you can't get a lease for prospecting -- you get a permit for prospecting. They're not consistent with each other, because you've got a lease provided for before, and now, if you adopt this, you have no prospecting permit.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Taylor, is that the nature of your question? I have spoken once. Have you addressed that question to me?

TAYLOR: No. I was just arguing on it. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, may I address a question to Mr. Riley.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is no objection, Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. Riley, could you give us some light on the question which Mr. Taylor has just raised? (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Well, this morning we deleted the word "prospecting" after some discussion concerning the word "exoloration". I believe it was the consensus of the group that "exploration" did include "prospecting". In any event, "prospecting" was stricken, which would leave the sentence commencing on line 10 in this form: "Leases and permits giving exclusive rights of exploration..." Now, initially, in earlier drafts the sentence read, "Prospecting permits and leases". It was brought to our attention that the current practice with respect to oil leases -- the one which is now in vogue, and apparently there is general satisfaction with it, enables the operator -- the lessee -- to start right off with the lease. The oil companies now drilling in Alaska start initially with a lease and not with a permit. And when that was called to our attention, we reversed the order of permits and leases, in order to give stress to leases, recognizing that leases were granted by the federal government to the concerns which are now up here drilling, and were granted, in the first instance, without permits. Just to repeat myself, we feel that the language proposed in the amendment before us calls attention to the fact that we propose that exclusive right of exploration for limited periods in areas shall also be possible under the relatively costly methods of prospecting touched on in the last lines -- 16 and 17; and that's the full import of our amendment. We have two categories of mineral. Those are covered in separate paragraphs on these two pages. But, here in one instance, we group them and say that all types of minerals may be subject to these exclusive rights of exploration under leases and permits, recognizing a unique situation as concerns the method of prospecting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, the question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by the Committee be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the amendment, signify by saying, "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: May I ask Mr. Riley a question?

PRESIDENT EGAN: You may, Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I still don't understand why, in line 8 on this page -- in fact, beginning on line 6, "The Legislature shall provide for...coal, oil, gas...", etc.; you don't say, "and other nonmetallic metals," but, down in line 14, after reciting the same sort of minerals, you say, "nonmetallic". Why isn't nonmetallic in the first instance? Why do you have it in one instance and not in the other?

RILEY: I think you've pointed out a flaw, subject to correction by any of the Committee members; I recall in inserting "non-metallic" in line 14, and I believe on line 8, you will find, Mr. Robertson, earlier in the section -- the first page, line 18 -- we stated "other metallic minerals". And I simply failed to pick that one up on line 8, and will submit that, too, as a Committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You submit that now, Mr. Riley? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, before that's submitted, I would like to know -- since the mineral rights are reserved to the state, if a man stakes out a placer mine for gold, what kind of permit is he going to have for production? Wouldn't that be a lease on gold? In that case you wouldn't want to put that amendment in there, you'd want to include all minerals.

RILEY: Well, minerals such as you speak of, which are subject to discovery and location, are covered in the first portions of Section 13, where we have endeavored to retain all of the federal nomenclature as we know it now in the federal mining law.

BARR: Then he could get a patent on his claim, then?

RILEY: He could if Congress will allow.

BARR: I see. Well, I didn't know, I thought perhaps the state would want to give him a lease in a case like that. I have no objection then.

RILEY: In effect, it would probably amount to a lease, or to a very limited patent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, do you have a question?

JOHNSON: I have a question, if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection.

JOHNSON: Mr. Riley, this may be a foolish question, but it was asked me last night, and I didn't know, and I thought possibly someone on your Committee could tell -- the word "sodium" is used there. And the question that was asked me is whether or not sodium is a metallic substance or a nonmetallic substance. If it were metallic, then, of course, it wouldn't fit in your wording of the amendment.

RILEY: I refer you to Mr. Boswell on this, but it's in this particular grouping where it appeared in recent federal legislation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: It's handled by the federal government, along with other minerals named there, because, I suppose, of the way it occurs. It occurs, nearly always, in the form of a mineral -- combination of sodium and something else. Sodium chloride, for instance, is common salt.

JOHNSON: Yes, I understand that, but if you insert the word "nonmetallic", wouldn't that sort of be a little contradictory to the --

ROBERTSON: I think that's one reason why "minerals" is there as it is.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, are you holding up that particular amendment, then?

RILEY: It appears that we are, Mr. President, this is one that slipped past us until Mr. Johnson's reminder.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That'll be taken up in your committee meeting, then?

RILEY: Yes, the only one we have pending at the moment is that on line 15 of page 5.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That was adopted, Mr. Riley. We have no amendment before us at this moment. Are there other amendments to the new Section 12? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Before, I have an amendment, I'd like to ask a question of Mr. Riley, which might --

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: On line 10, page 5, you speak of the leases and permits giving the right of exploration for specific periods and areas. Could you conceive of giving permits for specific exploration? What I mean is this: these permits and leases -- would they cover a specific area and a specific time for all of the minerals, or would the party in question that is searching, either with normal or geochemical or geophysical means, would they have to state for what group or single mineral they are exploring?

RILEY: I don't believe it has been in the Committee's contemplation that they would be limited -- that the prospector or one operating under permit -- limited in time and in area would be entitled to be on the lookout for the entire range.

KILCHER: Should not, in other words, an exploration permit also be specific as to what he's looking for?

RILEY: The Committee hasn't reached that conclusion, no.

KILCHER: Well, another question. Could you foresee, if a permit were specific for a certain group for three or four of these items, would you say then, that the permit would be exclusive for this group, but that concurrently, in the same area, another outfit may be working with different technique -- maybe one outfit is working with just physical means and another geochemical means or normal prospecting methods, could it also get an exclusive permit for a different period of the time, concurrent for a specifically different group of minerals? Is that possible under this paragraph? Or is it the intent or not?

RILEY: As Mr. White pointed out earlier, in response to a question asked by Mr. Barr, the language reads: "Permits giving exclusive right of exploration"; to that extent concurrent use is qualified. But, on your specific question, I would feel that the further qualification, "as prescribed by law" would cover the matter. The Committee hadn't concerned itself with that precise point, but as I read this, the legislature would be enabled to.

KILCHER: Well, to make the question perfectly clear, could you conceive, under this paragraph, that two outfits could simultaneously work in the same area with exclusive permits, but looking for different objects?

RILEY: I could, if this language remains unchanged and the legislature, acting in reliance on this language authorized that which you propose.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I offer a very small amendment that I think would take care of the question and raise it above doubt. To insert on line 11, page 5, between the second and third word, between the words "of" and "exploration", insert the word "specific".

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure?

KILCHER: I move that the amendment be adopted.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, a point of order, has this amendment been cleared with the Committee?

KILCHER: This amendment, Mr. Sundborg, came to my attention right now. Is that in order, Mr. President?

SUNDBORG: It is not in order, Mr. President, unless the Committee Chairman waives the provision in our rules that it must be cleared with the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is the feeling of the Chairman of the Committee? Should it be considered at this time?

SMITH: Apparently it is not the wish of the Committee to hold up matters to discuss this question. Therefore, the Committee waives presentation to the Committee.

BARR: Mr. President, I move for a three-minute recess, so they can get together on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Did you move the adoption of the amendment, is that correct?

KILCHER: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was there a second?

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: And Mr. Knight seconded it. If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for three minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I still think that the amendment has a merit and will clarify the issue. There are other amendments that are in preparation, I understand, that are going to have their own solution of the same problem. But, at least the problem is recognized as such, and I think this is a solution, together with the intent stated by Mr. Riley on the record. It would leave no doubt. As it is, I think there is quite a bit of doubt about this matter. I don't think it's clear as stated.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment. Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: I rise to a point of information on this. This is Mr. Kilcher's amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes.

HILSCHER: Mr. Kilcher, if leases and permits are given for the exclusive right of a specific exploration for a specific period and for specific areas, how are you going to safeguard against a promotion deal being put over which might be purely and simply a "scalawag" deal? Now, what I'm thinking of is this: suppose that you gave exclusive rights for specific explorations for uranium or some other mineral or element for a large area -- say half of Kodiak Island or all of Kodiak Island. Can't you see the danger that is going to result in a bunch of sharpshooters going out to raise a large sum of money, which may or may not go into exploration? But they do have the legal right to that area for specific exploration and for a specific period of time. Aren't we leaving ourselves wide open to some of the old type of promotions which were handled here in Alaska dating back to 1898?

KILCHER: If you please, Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. Hilscher, how much better a promotional deal can the same outfit have if they can go and say they have exclusive rights to look for everything, not just for uranium. I think that answer should be sufficient in that matter. The danger of abuse of exclusive right is greater when it's not specified. My insertion of the word "specific" will also affect that last sentence that has just been added by Mr. Riley's amendment, the last sentence of the paragraph, where the geophysical, geochemical, and other methods are used for all minerals -- gold, etc. If an exclusive permit to look for an allied group of minerals or nonminerals -- I mean, metallic or nonmetallic minerals -- is issued, an allied group, let's say platinum, gold, and silver, I see no reason why it shouldn't be made plain that another company or person with different methods shouldn't be allowed to look for a different group of minerals in the same area and simultaneously, the same season, same summer. I think this would make it plain. The legislature would still have a lot of discretion, they can permit an exclusive lease for five, six or ten minerals; but the company must have a rough idea what they're looking for and what they possibly are looking for, and specify the means of looking for it. They cannot go, in my opinion, they shouldn't go and say, "I'm looking for everything that's in the book and that's not in the book I possibly could find by any possible method, and I want nobody in there for the rest of the summer. That's asking too much. In the case of the geochemical method I happen to know personally that this is not a very expensive method at all. Geophysical, yes; geochemical, no. And there is no reason why an exclusive right in every respect should be given, except for purposes stated. That is what I think I can achieve by inserting the word specific.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, it seems to me, if I understand the objective of Mr. Kilcher's motion, that the word "specific" should modify the word "exploration" in the 12th line, instead of the 11th line. I should think that's where the "specific" should be.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment, as offered by Mr. Kilcher, be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying, "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed of adoption. Are there other amendments to the new Section 12? Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Mr. President, I haven't an amendment, but I'd like to inquire of the Committee what their thought was in regards to this. Mr. Hilscher mentioned Kodiak Island. I had already, in conversation, mentioned to him, that wouldn't this permit, for instance, the whole of Kodiak Island being granted for the use of geophysical or geochemical prospecting for a period of time? Or, could it be the whole of the Kuskokwim or the whole Yukon valley, or how are you going to limit this area? Do you just say "and in a specific area"; that could be any area that would be bounded by a geographic description.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would someone on the Committee care to answer that question? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: As I mentioned last night in discussion, and I will repeat it, that we would expect this particular section regarding permits to be very narrowly applied; and, of course, an oil company now under the federal laws can get a 100,000 or maybe 200,000 acres under a lease for prospecting purposes. And leaving it up to the legislature to discuss, we would expect that they would not give many of these permits, that they would be for very limited times, and it is primarily for the unknown areas of Alaska. And it is similar to the crown grants that Canada uses in an effort to open up mineral lands, where they give a company or an individual who is capable of doing a job this exclusive permit until such time as they find the mineral. And then after a mineral is found in that area, it's open to all comers. They merely have a preference for the short period of the permit, and that is the purpose behind this particular paragraph.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, I might add to that that there again we were up against the question of whether or not it was proper to set specific limitations in regard to leases, permits, etc., and conditions change as regards to those things, and we felt strongly, due to that fact, that the legislature should be allowed to set the limitations in every way, so that they could meet those changing conditions. Now, we run up against this question of limitations a good many times, and we have felt that it would be a dangerous procedure to set up those limitations in the constitution, where they could only be changed by amendment to the constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hinckel.

HINCKEL: Don't you think that there should be something that would make the size of the areas uniform? That is, we'll not permit one company to come along and get the whole of the Kuskokwim valley, for instance, and somebody else come along that didn't have quite the political power or something that was necessary, and be limited to a very restricted area. It looks to me like there's just too much chance for finagling around, and favoritism being shown.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I think to a considerable extent, Mr. Hinckel, the state will fall heir to the same limitations as now imposed by the federal government under both the recent Alaska Coal Leasing Act or the current Alaska Coal Leasing Act, and the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920. The current enabling bill provides that, at the state's option the state may take over existing leases, and the terms, of course, remain unchanged. I think those existing terms will set the pattern for future legislation by the state.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there amendments to the new Section 12? Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, to get outside capital coming here we've got to be liberal. These great lands have laid here for millions of years, and nobody has done anything with it, and the time has come to open it up, to make coming here attractive you've got to give a broad piece of ground and be liberal. I know that Havenstrike started an oil well 18 years ago and Ickes (Secretary of Interior) forfeited his lease on him, he had him shut down after spending $1,000,000, just a faraway decision. After 18 years, they finally liberalize the law and let you have enough land to warrant you to come in and spend money. I know that Phillips Petroleum spent on the first well over $1,000,000. The geologist that lives next door to me, and he tells me that story, and it just costs money, and before they'll spend that big money, they've got to have big

--

KILCHER: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Is there anything on the floor?

PRESIDENT EGAN: There's nothing on the floor.

MARSTON: It was on the floor. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: If there's nothing on the floor, may I ask a question? It's not referring to this particular article. It's referring to the amended report of the rules that this Convention accepted the other day.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Cooper asking a question with relation to the amended rules that we adopted the other day? If there is none, Mr. Cooper, you may ask the question.

COOPER: In the latter part of Section 1 it says, "In the second section-by-section review of the proposal, amendments may be submitted directly from the floor without previous consultation with the committee. What I wanted to ask you, are we now in the second section-by-section review, or are we in the first section-by-section review?"

PRESIDENT EGAN: We're in the first section-by-section review insofar as the amendatory process is concerned. That is the recollection of the Chair. Are there other amendments to the new Section 12? To the new Section 13? Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, the Committee has an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed committee amendment?

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 18, page 5, after the word 'All' insert the words 'surface and subsurface'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure?

RILEY: Mr. President, I move adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves adoption of the proposed Committee amendment. Is there objection? If there's no objection, the proposed amendment -- Miss Awes.

AWES: I'd just like to ask a question. I was wondering what kind of waters there are besides surface and subsurface? In other words, what's the purpose of the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, could you answer the question?

RILEY: I won't undertake to answer that directly, but just today the Committee received word which prompts this proposed amendment. We had had that in an earlier draft -- surface and subsurface -- and had deleted it, thinking it to be superfluous. Today we're advised by one who had met with us over a period of time, that the reference to all surface and subsurface waters should be retained at the beginning of this section. There was such a long controversy about the right of the freehold owner of subsurface waters that this reference should be included to avoid ambiguity, even if somewhat redundant.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to Mr. Riley's unanimous consent request that the proposed amendment be adopted? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: I have another proposed amendment here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There's a committee amendment, Mr. Riley, that we have not considered as yet. The Chief Clerk will read it.

CHIEF CLERK: In Section 12 --

RILEY: Did we act on the period after "legislature"? Oh, I see.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 4, line 17, strike 'now' and substitute 'thereafter'."

RILEY: Oh yes, I beg your pardon. I overlooked that. Line 17, page 4. I move for unanimous consent of adoption of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves unanimous consent for adoption of the proposed amendment, with the word "thereafter" in the place of the word "now". Is there objection to the adoption of the proposed committee amendment? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there amendments to the new Section 13? If not, are there amendments to Section 14? Are there amendments to Section 15? To Section 16? To Section 17?

CHIEF CLERK: I have a proposed committee amendment for Section 17.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed committee amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 17, page 6, change the period to a comma, and add 'and just compensation for such taking as well as for the taking of, or damage to, inferior property rights shall be made.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: Mr. President, I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves the adoption of the proposed amendment.

ROBERTSON: May we have it read again, please.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read it again.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley so moves. Do you ask unanimous consent, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: I do, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I object, just for the moment, Mr. President. Would we not say "subordinate property rights" instead of "inferior"?

RILEY: Either would do, I would think. This is one proposed by a delegate and the Committee accepted it.

R. RIVERS: That could be referred to Style and Drafting. I will support that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to unanimous consent request for the adoption of the amendment? If there is no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments to Section 17? Section 18? Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: Seventeen, Mr. President. I have a question regarding that particular section. It says the person should not be divested of his right to use of waters, except for a superior beneficial or public use. I was thinking about matters which have not been brought up by the Committee, and I brought it up today: the federal law provides that all hot springs or springs with proven medicinal value are reserved to the federal government, so people can have the beneficial use of those springs -- those waters that do have a distinct medicinal value. And I thought, possibly, in 17, or in the section which is now 13, we could include some provisional clause along that line.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Do you have an amendment, Mr. Taylor?

TAYLOR: I have no amendment right now. I just brought it up, that we might prepare an amendment after the dinner recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 16, if I may have the privilege of backing up a bit. The new Section 16.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment to the new Section 16.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 13, page 6, delete the period after the word 'law' and add 'with just compensation'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment. I might state that I talked to Mr. Riley and a couple of others on the Committee; I don't know whether I referred it to the Committee as a whole, but I talked to members of the Committee about it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second?

TAYLOR: Would you read it again?

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

(The Chief Clerk read the amendment again.)

TAYLOR: I'd like to raise a point of inquiry. Do you think it would not be better if that were done only by operation of law "and with just compensation".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

TAYLOR: Do you want a conjunction in there?

R. RIVERS: I don't care whether the "and" is in there or not. That would be for Style and Drafting. I'm not sure if "operation of law with just compensation". I think it's adequate with the "and". Mr. President and delegates, the reason I bring this up is that the very next section says "Proceedings in eminent domain may be undertaken for private ways of necessity to permit essential access for extraction or utilization of resources."

So, where they're going to take access rights-of-way in, anyway, they're going to use eminent domain, and eminent domain is always with just compensation. The section that I'm proposing to amend immediately above that, though, speaks of "No person shall be involuntarily divested of his right to use of waters, his interests in lands, or improvements affecting either, except for a superior beneficial or public use and then only by operation of law." And it's most pointed that you haven't made any reference to eminent domain. Now, Mr. Riley told me that he thought "operation of law" embodied the thought of eminent domain, and would probably be the type of proceedings used and that would carry just compensation. But, just to be sure, and for clarity's sake, I ask that, following the word "law" we say "with just compensation".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I was going to suggest, Mr. President, to insert "with just compensation" on line 12, after the word "only" then, "only with just compensation and by operation of law". Do you have any feeling on that, Mr. Rivers?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers.

R. RIVERS: I have no objection. I like it. Mr. Riley, will you carry that through?

RILEY: On line 12, after the word "only", that is next to the last word in the line, insert "with just compensation and".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Well now, just a minute. We have Mr. Ralph Rivers' amendment.

RILEY: That is Mr. Ralph Rivers' amendment.

R. RIVERS: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment and have Mr. Riley substitute in its stead.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Ralph Rivers asks unanimous consent for the withdrawal of his proposed original amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, and Mr. Riley offers the Committee amendment.

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the Committee amendment that after the word "only" on page 6, line 12, insert "with just compensation and". Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Mr. Gray.

GRAY: I object. I don't understand it. I don't understand compensation for the right of the use of waters, of state waters. Repeat it.

RILEY: Well, assume, Mr. Gray, that you have appropriated water for a specific purpose, and thereafter, another sought to use the same waters for a use or purpose considered to be of a superior or higher public purpose; although your appropriation would be better in time, he could institute condemnation proceedings and prevail over you by virtue of his higher public purpose to be served by that water, perhaps a public or municipal water supply.

GRAY: I withdraw my objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection -- Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: Mr. President, I'd like to have the privilege of asking the Committee, in regard to Section 15 --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Robertson, we haven't yet acted upon this particular amendment.

ROBERTSON: I beg your pardon.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request by Mr. Riley for the adoption of the proposed amendment? Hearing none, it is ordered adopted. Mr. Robertson.

ROBERTSON: I was wondering whether or not the Committee had given any thought to providing that there be no exclusive right of hunting on a public domain. You provide for no exclusive right or special privilege of fishery, which I agree, but, it seems to me that in this country where we have so many hunters, there ought to be a prohibition against the exclusive right of hunting on public domain.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Has the problem arisen, Mr. Robertson?

ROBERTSON: I can see how it might with the military.

RILEY: I think the point is well taken, but the answer is that the Committee hasn't considered it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments to the new Section 17 or the new Section 18? If not, then it would be advisable, probably, that we have the recess at this time. There are also many questions going to become before the Resources Committee in relation to this other question Mr. Marston has in hand. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I should like to hand up an amendment to Section 2, line 2, page 2, which was discussed with the Committee, and which has been held until we could go through all of the sections, and to which the Committee has no disapproval.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Now, this will still be considered the first time around, is there objection to considering the proposed amendment at this time? Does the Committee have any objection to considering this before you have your recess? Hearing no objection, will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment to Section 2.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 2, page 2, delete the period, insert a comma and add the following: 'subject to the principle that certain uses of resources shall be subordinate to superior and higher beneficial public uses as determined by the Legislature.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: I move and ask adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal moves and asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there a second?

KNIGHT: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The Chief Clerk will please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: Is this to be a new sentence, or is the period to be deleted?

HELLENTHAL: Comma following the word "people".

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I guess this is in the form of a question to Mr. Hellenthal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I notice you use the word "subject to superior and beneficial public uses". It appears to me that they're setting up a system of beneficial private use in here. Is it the intention to limit the further setting up of priorities of beneficial uses later on?

HELLENTHAL: Frankly, I agree with you, but I took the word "public" from the commentary in Section 3, where the Committee used the words "beneficial public use". I think "beneficial use" would be preferable. Now, maybe if I give a reason for this amendment briefly; when you go over the whole article, I think an omission becomes clear. It is the clear intention of the Committee that the principle of recognizing this hierarchy of beneficial uses shall apply to all resources, every one. It applies to the replenishable resources and to the nonreplenishable resources. And that is made very, very clear. But when you check the whole article, you'll find that there's only two mentions of the principle. The first mention is made under mineral rights in Section 12; and in Section 12 you're dealing with only one type of resource; namely, mineral rights. Or rather, I stand corrected. Section 13, dealing with water rights, is the first mention of the principle, and it says there "...subject to preferences of beneficial uses, concurrent or otherwise, as prescribed by the Legislature..." Now there the principle is applied, but only to water. Then you go on to Section 16, that's the second and the last statement of the principle; and that, likewise, deals with waters alone. Now, it's clear that it was meant to apply to all resources; and Section 2 deals with all resources, so I merely feel that it's necessary, very necessary, that the principle be stated in the section which deals with all resources, and not merely confined to the sections dealing with the water resource only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Hellenthal whether he did or didn't take out the word "public"?

HELLENTHAL: I put it up to the Committee in the language of the amendment, and if Mr. Riley would indicate that he had no objection to the use of the word "public", I certainly would not have.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, this is not directly on the point, but we did discuss this the last thing, I believe, before coming back into session this afternoon, and the Committee had rather tentatively thought to reconsider the language -- I believe I'm right in saying this -- in Section 15, or to read it again. I shouldn't refer you to Section 15 here; I'm speaking of an earlier draft, but to read Mr. Hellenthal's proposed language against language it had earlier adopted but which does not appear in this edition of the article, and I think perhaps it might simplify matters if we were to defer consideration of this, with Mr. Hellenthal's agreement, until this evening. Meanwhile, that would give us an opportunity to discuss it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would you object, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: No, I'd be very happy to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, we will defer action on this proposed amendment until after we have acted on Mr. Marston's proposed amendment this evening. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, subject to committee and other announcements, I move and ask unanimous consent that we recess until 7:00 p.m.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, the Committee on Resources will meet in the gallery at 6:15.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Resources will meet in the gallery at 6:15. Are there other committee announcements? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet upstairs at 6:15 in the committee room.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Style and Drafting will meet in the committee room upstairs at 6:15. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: The committee on this amendment that is before the house, on Native properties, will meet right here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Right now, is that right?

MARSTON: Right now.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That committee will meet immediately upon the recess. Mr. McNealy.

MCNEALY: The Committee on Ordinances, Mr. President, will meet immediately upon recess, to set the time for the meeting.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Ordinances will also meet right here upon recess, to decide on a time and place for meeting. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: The Committee on Local Government will meet immediately on recess, on the upper floor.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee on Local Government will meet immediately upon recess, on the third floor. Are there other committee announcements? If not, the Convention stands at recess until 7:00 p.m.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. We have before us at this time the proposed Marston amendment. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: Mr. President, I wish to withdraw the amendment I put in, and put in a new amendment. The Secretary has it on her desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston asks unanimous consent that the original amendment that he proposed this afternoon be withdrawn at this time. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Would the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment that is now before us.

CHIEF CLERK: "New Section 12: 'Deeds to lots and small tracts occupied or used by Indians, Aleuts or Eskimos within the State public domain may confirm title to the appropriate persons in recognition of their individual use as prior occupants under terms and conditions prescribed by law.'"

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Marston?

MARSTON: I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston moves that the proposed amendment be adopted. Do we have a second to the motion?

McNEES: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McNees seconds the motion. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, this matter was taken up by the Committee on Resources, and the Committee decided to take no action on the proposal.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: How does the amendment read? Does it say "may be given", or "may confirm"?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment.

MARSTON: May that be "may be given"? I've changed it since I gave it to you and take out the written part, take out the "confirm title". Put it back just as it was originally printed.

PRESIDENT EGAN: You want it to read "may be given"?

MARSTON: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the amendment once more.

CHIEF CLERK: "Deeds to lots and small tracts occupied or used by Indians, Aleuts or Eskimos within the State public domain may be given to the appropriate persons in recognition of their individual use as prior occupants under terms and conditions prescribed by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there discussion of the proposed amendment? If not -- Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: This is the way I presented it to you with the map. If the original amendment didn't cover that, or covered too much, this is the way I intended to put it in there. I want to take care of George Lockwood. He's asked us; he's been three years in trouble; and this takes care of him. It is not asking too much, and if this Convention, made up as it is of a lot of free thinking, free people, I believe they will do something here that no group of men have been able to do in the United States for 85 years. Individually, they've all agreed that something should be done about the George Lockwoods over the country. Collectively, they have refused to do anything. I believe that this organization, individually and collectively, will do something about George Lockwood and people like him; and that's all this amendment does is grant a little piece of land where he lives and the cabin site where he fishes, to him, according to law.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no further discussion Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Mr. President, I'm going to have to say just one word anyway. I can't see as this amendment says a thing that the article here doesn't say the same. And I think it may be discriminatory against the men that I know that have tracts of land that have occupied at a site for sometime that don't come under these classifications. I'm sorry, but I'm going to have to vote against the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, there's a vast difference between this amendment and the one previously offered. The one previously offered mentioned rights which might have open the whole question of aboriginal rights. It also mentioned claims to trapping areas -- areas with practically no boundaries. You might give away half of the state domain if you gave those trapping areas away. And, also, it did not specify as to what lands would be given. It implied that the state would be giving lands that they did not own -- federal lands. This amendment has clarified the whole thing. It says that the land given will be a part of the state public domain. We have a right to give it. It says nothing about rights of any kind; it does not transfer any rights, just land; and it does not give away any area. It only gives away homesteads and cabin sites -- small tracts of land, in other words -- and they are given to the Native people because of their prior use and occupancy. Now, there's a good precedent for that. In this case they do not have to file with the land office and go through the regular procedure; it's very difficult for the Native people to do that; they can't read the laws and understand as we can. They don't know about our legal procedure, or a better word is "red tape", where a white man can do that. But they have even a better claim to these cabin sites than some of the white people have. We're giving them this land, but before the federal government got it, these Natives owned it. We're just giving it back to them. The precedent for this is that now, when the land office opens up a certain area to filing for homesites, if a man has had a cabin on that land, he has a prior right for filing. He has to file like other people, but he has the prior claim. Also, when a government agency, like the Interstate Commerce Commission, or, more recently, the Civil Aeronautics Bureau, takes over some industry and says who can operate and who can't. They always have a "grandfather" clause in the act which says that a man who has been operating for years automatically gets the right to continue to operate. He doesn't have to file a claim or anything of that sort. He just gets the right. Well, if these Natives have been on this land for a long time -- and some of them have been on there for hundreds of years -- they should be allowed to continue the occupancy of that land when we start dealing it out. Now, Congress evidently is very much concerned with the rights of the Natives. They have withdrawn certain lands and are holding them in trust. This amendment has nothing to do with those lands, but I am bringing this up to show you what the intention of Congress is. They're looking out for the rights of the Natives. When they look at our constitution and see that we are looking out for the rights of these Natives, too, insofar as possible, then they will believe we are politically responsible, and they'll give more earnest consideration to this constitution and to statehood than they would otherwise.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would just like to say a few words concerning this new amendment. I'd like to say that I do believe that it is going to fit the request of the people. I'd like to read, just in part, a copy of a letter of January 12 of this year, by the Village Council at Unalakleet. "The Council of Unalakleet has met and discussed the possibility of staking off small acreages of approximately five acres for the private camp sites along the natural waterways in this area to be used during the hunting and fishing seasons. At the present time nearly every family in the village has an established camp site which has been established for at least a generation or two without having official title to the land. It is the feeling of the people that they would like to continue using these camp sites in the future, without having to be concerned about someone coming in and claiming their site." I think that is their concern, just the same as it would be and is your concern and mine about our own home -- where our homes are built and where we do our work and make our livelihood. As far as the constitution, this doesn't stop the legislature from doing the same thing to other people -- the white people and other races that may come into Alaska, but it's just assuring that we're going on record that we mean some business to clear up the situation that should long since have been cleared up. Now, I can see Mr. Hurley's point that it may seem discriminatory, but let's remember that the white people that are here, or at least the majority, are here voluntarily. We've come up to Alaska, we're free to go back to where we came from, etc. Some, of course, were raised here, and Alaska is their home; but we have security along that line, also. In this case, it is the white people gradually moving in upon the Natives, and it's just a matter of assuring them some type of security for the little land that they have their houses on -- that they have their business, if you want to call a fish camp a business, etc. I don't look at this as just a measure for the Native people, it's something that I believe belongs in the resource article just as much as giving a lease to miners. Let's say that's discriminatory, that's just providing something for those people who like to mine. There might be another type of a license that shall be prescribed, and that's discriminatory just for those who want to partake in that particular thing. This is an economic measure. It's to provide an economic security for the people that are pursuing that particular type of livelihood. And when that particular economic situation involves nearly all of the Natives, and probably the Natives take in 90 or 95 per cent of it, I don't think we are discriminating in putting it here in our constitution. I feel that it has a part, it's not giving all of Alaska away. If the federal government doesn't give this land to us as public domain, then the Natives aren't going to point to the state government of Alaska. They're going to have to point their finger back to the United States and keep asking them, but at least our own hands will be clear on the issue. It's just about what we'd all like to have for ourselves; a little assurance that when we build our homes, where we establish our business, that we're going to be able to stay there as long as we want to, unless we sell or transfer or something of that kind. It's giving a little sense of security.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, are we on the second time around?

PRESIDENT EGAN: We're still on the first time around, Mr. Sundborg, for amendment purposes.

SUNDBORG: I wonder if I could have the unanimous consent to propose an amendment to the amendment?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no objection.

SUNDBORG: It has not been cleared with the Committee, because I had not seen the proposed amendment. It's not a committee amendment, but our rules say that on the first time around, an amendment should be cleared with the committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, in order to get on with the business, the Committee would waive any presentation to the Committee.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Sundborg, you may offer your amendment to the amendment.

SUNDBORG: I offer an amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment to the amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "In the Marston amendment, line 1 and 2, strike the words 'Indian, Aleuts or Eskimos' and insert 'Alaskans'."

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

HERMANN: I second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Sundborg moves the adoption of the amendment to the amendment, seconded by Mrs. Hermann. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, what the Marston amendment would say, if my amendment to it is adopted, is: "Deeds to lots and small tracts occupied or used by Alaskans within the State public domain may be given to the appropriate persons in recognition of their individual use as prior occupants under terms and conditions prescribed by law." I'd like to refer to the letter which Mr. George Lockwood of Unalakleet wrote to Colonel Marston. The very last paragraph of it says: "We begin to realize that we have been put aside as Natives too long. We young people would like to see our children grow up as any average American citizen and live with equal rights as white men." If we adopt the Marston amendment as it is proposed, we are setting them aside as a class forever and we are conferring upon them some property right here, or a deed, by virtue of the fact, not that they have lived upon this land or any other fact, but that they are Indians, Aleuts, and Eskimos. And I contend that that is wrong and that we should not have it in our constitution. I'm against it on the very same grounds as I would be against it if it said that tracts occupied by Seventh-Day Adventists within the state public domain, or if it said tracts occupied by Chinamen. I don't believe that's right in our constitution. We should have a constitution here which applies to all men equally, and that's why I offer my amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment as offered by Mr. Sundborg, be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment is ordered adopted. Is there other discussion relative to the proposed amendment? Mr. Victor Rivers.

V. RIVERS: I have a question of somebody that was in on part of the authorship of this. I wonder about whether the words "title may be given to" -- just what does that mean? Title may pass or be a gift, or what?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: It means what it says. These people own this land for a generation or more, and we white people have destroyed their title. It won't stand up in our courts; therefore, this amendment proposes to give them that ground, free of any claim, to make good the title that we destroyed for them. It means what it says, Mr. Rivers.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: This amendment was drawn by Mr. Ralph Rivers, was it not?

MARSTON: That's right.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion on the proposed amendment as amended? Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: In the first line, after "small tracts", I'd like to insert "and homesteads". I move its adoption.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Committee waive the --

SMITH: The Committee will waive presentation.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew moves adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I think that if we're going to start giving the lands away, we ought to be consistent about it. If a man has a claim, and has occupied a tract as large as a homestead, I think that we ought to be consistent. And if he has an interest in it, we ought to protect him, and give him a title to it if it is out of the state public domain. I see no reason to confine this section only to lots and small tracts, because you'll probably find a great class of people that have claims on homesteads, and I imagine that a homestead claim would be more beneficial to the state than a lot or a small tract, because a man could, perhaps, make a living off the homestead. I think that right ought to be protected along with the other two rights.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Through the Chair, I'd like to ask Mr. Buckalew a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no objection, Mr. McCutcheon, you may ask the question.

McCUTCHEON: Does the term "homestead" carry with it the connotation of a specific size?

BUCKALEW: I don't think so. No.

McCUTCHEON: In other words, could it be a 1,000 acres, or 640 acres, 2,500 acres?

BUCKALEW: I don't think it could be 2,500 acres. I don't think a man could use 2,500 acres. On the other hand, it probably could be 2,500 acres.

McCUTCHEON: In the event he was raising cattle or something?

BUCKALEW: Yes, I think so.

McCUTCHEON: That could be termed as a homestead then.

BUCKALEW: It's a very broad definition. I want to get everybody included in it.

HELLENTHAL: May I ask Mr. Buckalew a question, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal, you may ask your question.

HELLENTHAL: As a lawyer, can you define the word "homestead"?

BUCKALEW: As any lawyer, I could get ahold of a book that's got the definition in it. Black's Law Dictionary, or some place, but I don't have a definition right now.

HELLENTHAL: You don't know, I assume?

BUCKALEW: I don't know the legal definition. Do you know, Mr. Hellenthal?

HELLENTHAL: Yes. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McLaughlin.

McLAUGHLIN: Mr. Chairman, I refer to Mr. Buckalew's amendment. Apparently, we have attained the point now where we've substituted, for "Indians, Aleuts or Eskimos", "Alaskans", and if we add "homesteads", I don't think we need worry any more about the public domain or the remainder of the resources article, because, frankly and coldly, by the amendment "Alaskans", it is my presumption that they want it without clouding title. It might have been the desire of the Convention to secure, in substance, the Natives of Alaska, these small tracts. By amending it to "Alaskans", and particularly by amending it to "homesteads", you've killed it. Because, in substance, what you're providing is that you merely split up the public domain, and by direct gift, pass it out to those present here at the time we obtain statehood.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I haven't spoken on the Sundborg amendment because I didn't believe that it possibly --

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have Mr. Buckalew's proposed amendment to the amendment.

KILCHER: I'll get to that.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

KILCHER: The Buckalew amendment, Mr. President, in my opinion, has as its main purpose to show up the uselessness of the article, if we follow the road that Mr. Sundborg started, to its logical conclusion. I herewith move that we rescind the action taken a minute ago on Sundborg's amendment, and give the matter serious consideration.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the Convention rescind the action taken in voting upon McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. We'll have to dispose of the matter at hand before we rescind our action on the previous matter.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon, the Chair feels you have a point. The Chair is not quite clear whether a motion to rescind can be made at any time or not. The Convention will be at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. McCutcheon, your point of order is well taken. The motion to rescind is a main motion without any privilege, and, therefore, can be introduced only when there is nothing else before the assembly. Mr. Buckalew.

BUCKALEW: Mr. President, I would ask unanimous consent, with the consent of my second, to withdraw, my "homestead" amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Buckalew asks unanimous consent that his amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: I repeat my former motion, that we rescind action on the Sundborg amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the Convention rescind its action taken on the Sundborg amendment.

EMBERG: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Emberg seconded the motion.

JOHNSON: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order, Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Isn't the main motion still before us, subject to amendment, so that the motion to rescind would still be out of order, wouldn't it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The main motion, as referred to by Mr. Kilcher, is the motion that we adopted in adopting Mr. Sundborg's amendment to the amendment.

JOHNSON: But, we still have before us, as I understand it, the question of adoption of the Marston amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson, that's another question there that's quite complicated. The Convention will stand at recess for one minute.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Johnson, your point of order was well taken. The only means by which a person could get to this particular amendment to the amendment, because of the fact that the main amendment is now pending, is by notice of reconsideration of the amendment to the amendment. But you can't reach it by a rescinding action at this time, because we do have something else before us, and that is the main proposed amendment. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, in order to permit sufficient time to give the question due consideration, and not to lose more time on the floor, I move that we postpone this particular main question until tomorrow morning, first order of business.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that we postpone this particular amendment until tomorrow morning, as the first order of business. You're not serving notice of reconsideration, are you, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: Not if this motion carries.

HERMANN: A voice vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Yes. If there's no objection, the matter will be held over until the first order of business tomorrow morning. Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: I'll object, I want to take care of this thing tonight and get through with it.

TAYLOR: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard. Do you so move, Mr. Kilcher?

KILCHER: I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves that the matter be held over until tomorrow morning. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The motion is open for discussion. Miss Awes.

AWES: I just wanted to ask a question. Is there anything to be accomplished by this? We're still in the same position with this amendment attached to the amendment, aren't we?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct, Miss Awes. Of course, it's always possible to delete and reinstitute. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Do we have a motion before us now?

PRESIDENT EGAN: At the present time we had another proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Hellenthal before us at the time we recessed. It was to be the next order of business after we had Mr. Marston's amendment before us. Mr. Hellenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the proposed amendment that was on the desk just before the recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hellenthal asks unanimous consent to withdraw the proposed amendment that he had before us before we recessed. Now we have several matters from the first time around, with the Rules Committee. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have a motion. I move --

PRESIDENT EGAN: There is a motion on the floor, Mr. Barr, to hold matter of the Marston amendment over until the first order of business tomorrow morning. Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: Point of order. Mr. Barr may have a motion which would take precedence over this one.

BARR: No, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is it? To this motion, Mr. Barr?

BARR: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall this particular amendment as offered by Mr. Marston, be held over as the first order of business tomorrow morning?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 12 - Armstrong, Awes, Emberg, H. Fischer, Kilcher, Laws, Londborg, Nolan, Nordale, Rosswog, Sweeney, Walsh.

Nays: 38 - Barr, Boswell, Buckalew, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Johnson, King, Knight, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Metcalf, Nerland, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Taylor, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Collins, R. Rivers, Robertson, VanderLeest, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 12 yeas, 38 nays, and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed motion has failed of adoption. Mr. Barr.

BARR: I have an amendment. I move that, after the word "Alaskans" the following words be added: "of Indian, Aleut or Eskimo descent". I move for the adoption of the proposed amendment.

MARSTON: Second the motion.

HERMANN: Point of order. That restores it to exactly the status it was in before it was amended.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order is well taken. It would have had to have been "Alaskans". Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, was it ruled that this doesn't change the meaning at all?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is right, Mr. Barr.

BARR: There are lots of people in Alaska that are not Natives that are of Native descent. That's added a new group of people to it. I don't think it does change the meaning, I think it does, I mean.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I concur with Mr. Barr that the amendment brings in new material.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It brings in new material, but it means exactly the same things in the opinion of the Chair. The Chair will rule that the amendments are in order, but the particular amendment is not in order because it means the same identical meaning.

COGHILL: Mr. President, I appeal the ruling of the Chair.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the ruling of the Chair be sustained?"

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 37 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Cross, Davis, Doogan, Emberg, H. Fischer, Gray, Hellenthal, Hermann, Hilscher, Hinckel, Johnson, King, Lee, McCutcheon, McLaughlin, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien.

Nays: 12 - Barr, Coghill, Cooper, V. Fischer, Harris, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Laws, Londborg, McNealy, Marston.

Absent: 5 - Collins, R. Rivers, Robertson, VanderLeest, White.

Abstaining: 1 - Mr. President.)

CHIEF CLERK: 37 yeas, 12 nays, 5 absent and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the ruling of the Chair has been sustained. Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I have been recognized as submitting an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: "Line 1, in the Marston amendment, before 'Alaskans' insert 'native-born'."

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: I second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It has been moved and seconded that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection?

HERMANN: I object.

HELLENTHAL: No objection. I would just like to be heard in connection with the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It's open for discussion. Mr. Helleenthal.

HELLENTHAL: I notice that Mr. Sundborg offered this amendment, and I believe he did it in a sincere and earnest effort to preserve the principle incorporated in Colonel Marston's resolution for which we are urging adoption. I personally feel that there was nothing poor or ill-chosen in the context of this proposal in the use of the words "Indians, Aleuts, or Eskimos", and I think that, upon reflection, that it can be shown that that phrase that was used by Mr. Lockwood in his letter was intended to convey an entirely different meaning. But, assume that it did show some discrimination. I believe that the language now proposed in the light of the debates, and in the light of the intention of this body, will be clearly understood by everybody. I think that the man on the moon reading the Alaska constitution would know that we had in mind the Indians, the Aleuts, and the Eskimos", but out of deference to them, and to them only, we used the language "native-born Alaskans". Not only deference, but respect. This whole proposal is based upon respect for those people. Now, no harm can result from this use of language. It does not defeat the principle at all. Everybody in the world knows what we mean. Everybody in this room knows what we mean. I urge strongly that you pay no heed to any loose language to the effect that this destroys the meaning of the whole thing, it's worthless now, you can't do it now, forget about it. It was a nice try, but everybody'll understand now we tried, but we failed. For technical reasons --

McCUTCHEON: Point of order, Mr. President. I'd like to know the point that Mr. Helleenthal is actually making. He seems to be digressing here to a point where he's not concerned with the addition in here of "native-born". If he's endeavoring to explain "native-born" in its reference to this particular proposal here, then I'll be glad to hear him. Otherwise, I'll raise a point of order that he's not speaking on the subject.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chair will hold that it is up to the delegate to determine whether he's speaking to the amendment. If he's speaking to the amendment, he is in order.

HELLENTHAL: I hope that I'm speaking to this amendment. And I urge strongly that this language, which cannot be abused -- this does not open the door to any abuses -- and this will, in a respectful way, permit aid to the native-born Alaskans to our Indians, to our Aleuts, and to our Eskimos. I urge that you pass this. Scrutinize all further amendments, see where they come from. Now, this is the language that the Congress of the United States used -- or the former language was the language that the United States Congress used in speaking of our Indians, our Aleuts, and our Eskimos. I can see nothing wrong with it, but this new language accomplishes the same purpose, the intent is clear, it will be clear to everybody.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I certainly fail to see the force of the argument that the words "native-born Alaskans" mean just one class of people. I believe, and I think I have the right to believe, that this language will refer to my daughter, who was born in Alaska, just as much as it refers to anyone else. And as long as that meaning is intended -- and could only be intended by the use of the words, then I believe that the section becomes discriminatory and has no place in our constitution. I'm opposed to the amendment to the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, it occurs to me that this might very well be class legislation. I question very much if this Convention, or the legislature, or any other lawmaking body, can discriminate between one class of citizens and another. I also have some native-born children. I think you, Mr. President, are a native-born Alaskan. Mr. Coghill is a native-born Alaskan, Mr. Doogan, and Mrs. Wien, and several others, way down yonder now. And I don't think that we have a right to say that we will do more for one group of Alaskans than we will for another, unless we have qualified it by a need, or some particular thing that sets them apart from another, and that's exactly what I am against doing. I think this is distinctly -- by inserting the words "native-born" before Alaskans -- I think Mr. Sundborg has achieved a piece of class legislation, if he gets it through. And I'm opposed to it for that reason, and that reason only.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hilscher.

HILSCHER: May we have it read as it now appears? If so, I would like to comment on it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the new section as it would read with the proposed amendment in it. Is that right, Mr. Hilscher?

HILSCHER: Yes.

CHIEF CLERK: "Deeds to lots and small tracts occupied or used by native-born Alaskans within the state public domain may be given to the appropriate persons in recognition of their individual use as prior occupants, under terms and conditions prescribed by law."

HILSCHER: Mr. President, I will have to speak against the amendment, because we have gone far afield from what we originally intended; and if we can somehow maneuver ourselves back into a position where we can be kindly and be fair to the people whom Colonel Marston wishes to assist, then I think we will have accomplished our purpose.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

MCCUTCHEON: I feel I'm compelled to speak against the addition of the words "native-born". I've been through the area of Alaska quite some. I, too, was born in Alaska. I've been up and down the big rivers, I've been in the hinterlands, by airplane, by dog team, by various other means; and I have come across a great many places where there are white men -- elderly white men -- sometimes married to Native women, who have cabin sites; there is considerable and substantial construction around their cabin sites. They are in a position that they can't afford to have their property surveyed because of the cost of the airplane hired to get the surveyors out there so that they can file on them in a standard ordinary fashion, that the people close to settlements can. In adding "native-born" it excludes these people who may have been on these properties for 45, maybe 50 years; and, consequently, we're setting up, as Mrs. Hermann says, a class legislation. In this particular amendment, while I oppose the whole thing in principle, including the amendment to the amendment, I still feel that if we must adopt some such thing of this nature, where we do give some prior right to people who have trap sites or fish sites, or whatever other kind of a site it may be, and have used them over the decades, and have not obtained any sort of a title to them, that they should be protected, whether they are white or Indian or Aleut or anything else. Their rights should be protected just as well as some specific class, and I think by setting this particular thing out here as "native-born" that we're actually legislating against a certain class of people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment to the amendment be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment to the amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment to the amendment has failed of adoption. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: May we have a one-minute recess, please?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no objection, the Convention will have a one-minute recess.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I have an amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment.

CHIEF CLERK: This is from Mr. Kilcher. "Insert 'continuously' after 'tracts' and insert 'or their ancestors before the year 1900' after 'Alaskans'." (Laughter)

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order.

KILCHER: Mr. President, may I read the amendment after --

PRESIDENT EGAN: Who is the author?

CHIEF CLERK: Mr. Kilcher.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher, you may read the proposed amendment.

KILCHER: "Deeds to lots and small tracts continuously occupied for use by Alaskans or their ancestors before the year 1900 within the state public domain may be given to the appropriate persons in recognition of their individual use as prior occupants, under the terms and conditions prescribed by law." I move the adoption to this amendment to the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher moves the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there a second to the amendment?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: May we have it read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Would the Chief Clerk please read it as she has it on her desk.

CHIEF CLERK: "Deeds to lots and small tracts continuously occupied for use by Alaskans or their ancestors before the year 1900 within the state public domain may be given to the appropriate persons in recognition of their individual use as prior occupants, under terms and conditions prescribed by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Was there a second to Mr. Kilcher's motion?

BARR: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr seconds the motion. Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I think that if we adopt this amendment, we will fulfill Colonel Marston's original intent, and we will do it in a way that is not discriminating against any class or group of people, other than setting a historic date as we have done in the bill of rights, if I'm not mistaken, by having the year 1924 mentioned in a certain relation. If this amendment should pass, all Alaskans who have used, continuously, a certain tract of land for some purpose mentioned in here, or if their ancestors have used it before the year 1900, they will be in the same class, be they Aleuts, Eskimos, Indians, of Alaskan or non-Alaskan origin; be they Russians, Swedes or other people.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. McCutcheon.

McCUTCHEON: Mr. President, again I must rise to oppose an amendment. For this very amendment seeks to differentiate very substantially among the various Native peoples and other peoples of Alaska who live out of the periphery of civilization, you might say. Because, on the great rivers of the Yukon and the Kuskokwim, and others, the Eskimos, Indians, or Aleuts have not used fish wheel sites continuously since 1900, because the fish wheel sites are constantly being moved down and up the river. So are fish camp sites. Things that you are seeking to protect you are now dealing out by this very amendment. Consequently, I can see that the amendment is even making this particular section here even worse, by putting this continuous usage clause in it.

KILCHER: Mr. President, I concede the point, and I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be withdrawn. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Miss Awes.

AWES: Would it be proper to make a motion to suspend the rules, so that we can consider the motion to rescind our previous action, at this time? If it's proper, I so move.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes, the motion to suspend the rules is in order at any time. If the rules are suspended, of course, you can do most anything on a suspension of the rules that you wish to accomplish. Do you make such a motion?

AWES: I so move.

BUCKALEW: I second.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes moves that the rules be suspended, and Mr. Buckalew seconds the motion; and that the Convention rescind its action taken in voting on the amendment to the amendment that was offered by Mr. Sundborg and carried. The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Now, this will take 37 votes, is that not true? I won't put the question until you all understand. If you vote to suspend the rules and rescind the action, then we are back where we started when Mr. Marston offered his amendment this evening, except that we did include -- was there any other amendment to that amendment adopted?

UNIDENTIFIED DELEGATE: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If you vote to suspend the rules and rescind the action, we will be back to our original starting point of this evening.

METCALF: Mr. President, you mean a "yes" vote will put us back where we started from, and a "no" vote will leave us just where we are, right?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That is correct. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and the action rescinded on the amendment of Mr. Sundborg which we adopted earlier this evening?"

MARSTON: Mr. President, can we talk it over?

PRESIDENT EGAN: A motion to suspend the rules is not debatable.

MARSTON: The reason I want to do it is because I think your voice vote was wrong.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It seemed to the Chair it was an overwhelming majority, but that is in the past.

McCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended and -- "

V. RIVERS: Just, "Shall the rules be suspended now?", isn't it?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Miss Awes indicated that she wanted to rescind the action at the same time.

AWES: No, I didn't mean -- I didn't object to doing that, but I didn't mean to include that in my motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Of course, Mr. Victor Rivers, if you suspended the rules, it would be out of order to include the rescinding action, inasmuch as it would take more to suspend the rules than it would to carry the rescinding action. Is there an objection to including rescinding action in this motion? A "yes" vote would bring us, then, back to the starting point. A "no" vote would keep us just where we are. Mr. Marston.

MARSTON: May we have a roll call?

PRESIDENT EGAN: This will have to be a roll call, Mr. Marston.

TAYLOR: That does require a two-thirds vote?

PRESIDENT EGAN: That's right, it will require 37 votes.

H. FISCHER: Would it require that amount of votes to rescind the action?

PRESIDENT EGAN: It would take 28 votes to rescind the action, but we could never get to that point unless we suspend the rules.

SWEENEY: Are we voting on both of them now? Two subjects -- to suspend the rules, and at the same time to rescind the action?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The reason why we should include this rescinding action at this time is that to rescind the action while this amendment is before us would also take a two-thirds majority, because it is not in line with the rules. So, it should be considered at the same time as the suspension of the rules. The question is, "Shall the rules be suspended for the purpose stated?" The Chief Clerk will call the roll.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 26 - Armstrong, Awes, Barr, Coghill, Cooper, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, V. Fischer, Harris, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Hurley, Kilcher, Knight, Lee, Londborg, McLaughlin, McNealy, McNees, Marston, Peratrovich, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart.

Nays: 24 - Boswell, Buckalew, Davis, Doogan, Gray, Hermann, Johnson, King, Laws, McCutcheon, Metcalf, Nerland, Nolan, Nordale, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Sundborg, Sweeney, Taylor, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 5 - Collins, R. Rivers, Robertson, VanderLeest, White.)

CHIEF CLERK: 26 yeas, 24 nays and 5 absent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the proposed motion has failed adoption. Mr. Johnson.

JOHNSON: Mr. President, I apologize for attempting to vote for Mr. Hinckel. I'm sorry.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there other amendments? Mr. Coghill.

COGHILL: I move and ask unanimous consent for a five-minute recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess for five minutes.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Rosswog.

ROSSWOG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to move and ask unanimous consent that we refer to the introduction of committee proposals.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Rosswog moves and asks unanimous consent that the Convention revert to the introduction of committee proposals at this time, if there is no objection.

ROSSWOG: Your Local Government Committee would like to submit Proposal No. 6/a as a substitute for its Proposal No. 6, at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read Committee Proposal No. 6/a for the first time?

CHIEF CLERK: "Committee Proposal No. 6/a, introduced by the Committee on Local Government, entitled 'Local Government'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The proposal is referred to the Rules Committee for assignment to the calendar. Mrs. Sweeney.

SWEENEY: Mr. President, your Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment to whom was referred Committee Proposal No. 10/a has compared the same with the original and finds it correctly engrossed. The enrolled copies are ready and will be placed on the delegates' desks in a few minutes. I move the adoption of the report and ask unanimous consent.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Sweeney moves the adoption of the report by the Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment and asks unanimous consent. The report is referred to the Committee on Style and Drafting. Are there other committee reports or proposals?

McCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: We have before us the amendment to Committee Proposal No. 8/a. Is there further discussion? Mr. Sundborg.

SUNDBORG: Mr. President, I'd like to speak on this. It was my amendment substituting the word "Alaskans" for "Indians, Aleuts, and Eskimos" which has been said by many here, during frequent recesses, to have killed this proposal. My thought is that it was dead before that amendment was offered. I certainly wouldn't have voted for it if it had come on the floor in the shape it was in, because I'm not going to vote for anything here that sets apart and aside a class of people on account of race. As I said, I wouldn't have been for it if it had said we give it to Presbyterians, or that we give it to Republicans. We should, in all of our constitution, and I hope that our legislature will observe the same thing throughout our history as a state -- legislate for all of the people, and legislate for them on an equal basis. Now, I contend that the amendment as it is before us is completely workable. Look what it says, and I contend that it gets at the very problem and takes care of the very people that Colonel Marston had in mind when he introduced it; and it does it without setting apart any class on account of their race. It says, "Deeds to lots and small tracts occupied or used by Alaskans within the State public domain may be given to the appropriate persons in recognition of their individual use as prior occupants, under terms and conditions prescribed by law." Now, future legislatures can set up the procedures under which this will be done. And they can do it, I am certain, to take care of the people for whom and on whose behalf this amendment by Mr. Marston was offered. It was not with the purpose of killing the amendment that I offered my amendment to the amendment. I would have voted for it before if it had not been amended by saying "Alaskans" instead of a certain class, based upon their race. But I'm going to vote for it now, and I urge that all do so. It was in good faith that I offered my amendment, and it is in good faith now that I urge the adoption of Colonel Marston's amendment as amended.

MARSTON: Mr. President, may we have it read again?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk may read the proposed amendment as it appears.

CHIEF CLERK: "Deeds to lots and small tracts occupied or used by Alaskans within the State public domain may be given to the appropriate persons in recognition of their individual use as prior occupants, under terms and conditions prescribed by law."

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is -- Mr. Hellenenthal.

HELLENTHAL: Mr. President, I support Mr. Sundborg's remarks wholeheartedly, and urge the adoption of this amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Fischer.

FISCHER: Mr. President, I'd like to ask Mr. Sundborg a question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there's no objection, Mr. Fischer.

FISCHER: And that is, does the last clause "under terms and conditions prescribed by law" refer to deeds, or can it also refer to occupancy and use? In other words, can the legislature prescribe the conditions of occupancy?

SUNDBORG: Of course, you realize -- and I think everyone here realizes -- I'm not an expert in this field, but as I read it, under terms and conditions prescribed by law the legislature could set up the terms of the deeds. That is, they could say how many acres might be included within them; they could set up the conditions of occupancy; for instance, it had said that the person to whom the grant is made must have, or his ancestors must have occupied the piece of ground since some date in the past. And I believe that if the legislature desired to do so -- although I would not want to have them do so -- they could say that they should be granted only to Indians, Aleuts, or Eskimos. Those would be among terms and conditions which might be prescribed by law, but they wouldn't be written into our constitution.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Metcalf.

METCALF: Mr. President, may I ask Mr. Sundborg a question? When does a person become an Alaskan? Say, one year, like Mr. Marston would have, or just when does he become an Alaskan?

SUNDBORG: Well, I believe, for the purpose of construing the constitution, a person would become an Alaskan when he became, probably, a qualified elector.

METCALF: A year?

SUNDBORG: Yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, you may have the last say, but Mr. Lee has been trying to get the floor. You have a right to close the discussion. Mr. Davis.

DAVIS: I have one or two questions I'd like to raise, Mr. President. I am disturbed by the language as it now stands. Mr. Sundborg may be right, but I'm afraid that he may not; that the legislature can prescribe something more than the conditions of giving deeds. Now, as the language now stands, we have left the thing open for giving of deeds to anybody who occupies the property, and we haven't set forth any date before which they must have occupied the property. It seems to me that, since this is obviously, if it's anything at all, an enabling act to the legislature to do something, and we ought to put a cutoff date in there as to when that occupancy must have begun. Another thing in line 2, it says "may be given". Now, I doubt seriously that the legislature has any right to give away the public domain or any part of it. But I think what people are trying to do here is to transfer property in which somebody has a prior right. It seems to me the language could be turned around some way to provide that deeds should be given in recognition of those prior rights, rather than saying that we're giving away the property. As the thing now stands, I'm going to have to vote against it. I think that I could very well vote for it if it were changed, somewhat.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there anyone else who wishes to be heard? Mr. McNees.

MCNEES: Mr. President, I'm afraid this opens up the subject to a much broader point of view than so many of us realize. Wouldn't this give a prior claim, say, to a man who for many years -- or the company who for many years has put his boat out on the banks of a river on a certain spot? Would it not also take into consideration the man and his family, perhaps, who have year after year after year gone out and pitched their tent on the bank of a river in a certain spot, irrespective as to who he was? There are so many ramifications to this in its present amended form that were not intended by the original amendment submitted by Mr. Marston, that I find myself now in a position where I cannot vote for the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Marston, if you wish to close the argument --

MARSTON: If this amendment by Mr. Sundborg will give George Lockwood relief in his piece of property that he's entitled to, I'll vote for it happily, and rather have it go this way. I was hoping this body would take the pleasure and the honor and the great privilege of making a decision in favor of those people. If it has to go through the legislature, I'll take it that way. But I wanted you to get it through here, and I'll vote for it.

BUCKALEW: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment be adopted by the Convention." The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. White.

WHITE: I'd like to abstain from voting, because I've been absent during discussion of the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. White asks to abstain from voting. Mr. White, it is the same amendment -- or it is an amendment that was offered by Mr. Marston at the time we convened this evening. Were you here before?

WHITE: Mr. President, I haven't studied the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Chief Clerk will call the roll. Mr. White will abstain from voting.

(The Chief Clerk called the roll with the following result:

Yeas: 16 - Barr, Coghill, Cross, Emberg, H. Fischer, Hellenthal, Hilscher, Hinckel, Kilcher, Knight, McLaughlin, McNealy, Marston, Nolan, Sundborg, Taylor.

Nays: 34 - Armstrong, Awes, Boswell, Buckalew, Cooper, Davis, Doogan, V. Fischer, Gray, Harris, Hermann, Hurley, Johnson, King, Laws, Lee, Londborg, McCutcheon, McNees, Metcalf, Nerland, Nordale, Peratrovich, Poulsen, Reader, Riley, V. Rivers, Rosswog, Smith, Stewart, Sweeney, Walsh, Wien, Mr. President.

Absent: 4 - Collins, R. Rivers, Robertson, VanderLeest.

Abstaining: 1 - White.)

LONDBORG: Mr. President, I would like to change my vote to "no".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg changes his vote to "no".

CHIEF CLERK: 16 yeas, 34 nays, 4 absent and 1 abstaining.

PRESIDENT EGAN: So the "nays" have it and the amendment has failed of adoption. Mr. White.

WHITE: Mr. President, may I rise to a point of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. White, you may have the floor on the question of personal privilege. (Mr. White then spoke under the personal privilege of the floor.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Armstrong.

ARMSTRONG: May I speak on a point of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Armstrong, you may speak on a point of personal privilege.

(Mr. Armstrong then spoke on a point of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann.

HERMANN: Mr. President, I would like to speak on a matter of privilege if I may.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mrs. Hermann, you may have the floor.

(Mrs. Hermann spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Londborg.

LONDBORG: Mr. President, may I speak on a point of personal privilege?

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, Mr. Londborg.

(Mr. Londborg then spoke on a matter of personal privilege.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, the Rules Committee had at least two sections upon which they indicated they would have amendments to offer. Is that correct, Mr. Riley?

RILEY: The Resources Committee?

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Resources Committee, yes.

RILEY: They're on the Chief Clerk's desk.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Will the Chief Clerk please read the first amendment as it would be offered by the Resources Committee.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 1, Section 2, strike the marginal title and substitute 'General Authority'."

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent for its adoption, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the proposed amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Will the Chief Clerk read the next amendment, please.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, Section 12, Line 4, insert 'either' before 'the'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the Committee amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: That would be at the end of the line. Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be adopted. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. Are there other amendments from the Resources Committee?

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, line 14, strike 'nonmetallic'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 3, Section 8, line 13, strike lines 13 and 14, and insert in lieu thereof: 'selection of lands granted to the State by the United States and for the administration of the State public domain.'"

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Would the Chief Clerk please read the amendment once more.

(The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment again.)

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for adoption of the amendment? If not, the proposed amendment is ordered adopted.

CHIEF CLERK: "Page 5, Section 13, line 20, after the word 'use' insert a comma, and add 'except mineral and medicinal waters'."

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley asks unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment. Is there objection?

COOPER: I object.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard by Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Just for a point of clarification -- "except mineral waters" -- what is that?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. Cooper, this goes to the question raised by Mr. Taylor earlier today. He drew attention to the fact that the federal government reserves the disposition of hot springs. And some of us have talked with some of the federal land office people since that time, in an effort to arrive at language as nearly like the federal reservation as possible, and this is what we have offered.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Cooper.

COOPER: Mr. President, I'll have to ask further. The term "mineral waters" -- anyone living in this area certainly is well aware of the fact that there is plenty of mineral in this water; and, therefore, there could be a question at a future date.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley, do you have an explanation? Do you so move, Mr. Riley, for the adoption of the amendment?

RILEY: I have, yes.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley moves. Is there a second to the motion?

KNIGHT: I'll second it.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. The question is open for discussion. The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment, as offered by the Committee on Resources, be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The "ayes" have it and the proposed amendment is ordered adopted. Are there other amendments?

CHIEF CLERK: No more committee amendments.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If not, then we will start with the second time around on the amending process.

KILCHER: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Kilcher.

KILCHLER: Will this be the second reading?

PRESIDENT EGAN: Does the Committee desire a recess at this time, for the purpose of hearing any proposed amendments? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to ask if there are amendments to be offered?

2595

PRESIDENT EGAN: Are there proposed amendments?

KILCHER: I had intended to ask a question of Mr. Riley on Section 14.

PRESIDENT EGAN: There are amendments. The Chair notes that at least one party has an amendment. Are there other amendments? Mr. Smith.

SMITH: I would like to ask for a recess.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If there is no objection, the Convention will stand at recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

RECESS

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Convention will come to order. Mr. Smith.

SMITH: Mr. President, the Committee has no amendments to offer at this time.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The Committee has no amendments to offer at this time. Are there amendments to be proposed to the preamble of the proposal? Are there amendments to Section 1? Section 2? Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, I have an amendment to Section 2, page 1, lines 15 and 16. On line 15, strike the last word, "provision". On line 16 strike the words "of applicable acts of Congress, including". I move that the amendment be adopted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Barr moves the adoption of the amendment.

BOSWELL: Objection.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Objection is heard.

KNIGHT: I'll second the motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Knight seconds the motion. Mr. Barr.

BARR: Mr. President, the stricken material says that we will utilize and develop our natural resources in accordance with provisions of applicable acts of Congress. Now, that means we're giving up our sovereign rights as a state. When we become a state, and thereafter, we will utilize and develop our lands according to the way Congress tells us to do it. Now, this has nothing to do with the enabling act. On the next line it says we'll do it according to the act admitting Alaska to the Union. I'll read this the way it would appear with my amendment.
"The

State of Alaska shall provide for the utilization, conservation, and development of all the natural resources belonging to the State in accordance with the Act admitting Alaska to the Union." That is still in there, but it's a known fact that once a territory becomes a state, they have full control of their lands, and can do as they see fit. I believe we've been a ward of the federal government too long to put any language like this in here.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Riley.

RILEY: Mr. President, I wouldn't argue with Mr. Barr if he were to suggest striking the other reference to an act of Congress; if, instead, he were to suggest that it read "in accordance with provisions of applicable Acts of Congress, this constitution..." etc. Certainly, once we have statehood, once we're in the sovereign capacity that Mr. Barr refers to, there will be fewer acts of Congress which are applicable up here, but there may still be some. I'm not positive, but I think there is ground to believe that our University grant may still be circumscribed by the provisions which were imposed when the 1929 act was passed. It's possible, there may be others, and that's the reason that this language was included. I should say that the Committee would not object strenuously to the deletion of the other mention of "Act of Congress".

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Taylor.

TAYLOR: I believe that the language should be retained as it is. The reading of it says "including land and waters belonging to the State". Well, that is fine, except that in the event that the state wanted to develop some power along one of these rivers, they would have to develop it in conformity with the federal acts, the federal regulations promulgated by the Federal Water Power Commission; and any development, or any work on the stream that is a major tributary of a navigable river has to be approved by the Federal Water Power Commission. So, I think we would necessarily have to leave the wording in this place that it is in. I think there are other like circumstances, Mr. President, in which things would have to be in conformity with other federal acts.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? Mr. Boswell.

BOSWELL: Mr. President, our purpose in putting this language where it was right here in front of the resources article was to call the attention to any congressman or senator that, if there was any place in this article where we have digressed from the proposed enabling act, that if they still held that same language in the future enabling acts, that we were going to abide by them. I think they have a very important place here, and I would hate very much to see them come out.

McCUTCHEON: Question.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Is there further discussion? If not, Mr. Barr, you may close the argument.

BARR: I understand that Mr. Boswell is talking about the enabling act, and my amendment had nothing to do with that. That's still retained; and Mr. Riley said that Congress may provide certain restrictions or regulations which we would have to comply with in order to participate in some federal program. That's true, we're doing that right now; they supply matching funds. They supply matching funds for an airport program, and we have legislation that enables us to participate, and says that we will comply with their regulations. But we didn't have to do that if we didn't want to. Under this language we will always have to.

PRESIDENT EGAN: The question is, "Shall the proposed amendment as offered by Mr. Barr be adopted by the Convention?" All those in favor of adopting the proposed amendment will signify by saying "aye", all opposed, by saying "no". The "noes" have it and the proposed amendment has failed adoption. Are there other amendments to Section 2? Mr. Hurley.

HURLEY: Amendments have to be written, don't they?

CHIEF CLERK: No.

PRESIDENT EGAN: If it is just a brief amendment, you can see what the Committee says.

HURLEY: It's a matter of striking. I discussed this with the Committee, and they didn't agree with me. (Laughter)

SMITH: Mr. President, I couldn't hear what Mr. Hurley said.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley said he had discussed this proposed amendment with the Committee, and the Committee did not agree with him. Mr. Hurley, you may read your proposed amendment.

HURLEY: On line 15, page 1, after the word "State" strike the comma, strike the balance of lines 15, 16, 17, and line 1 on page 2, through and including the comma after the word "State".

PRESIDENT EGAN: How would the section read then?

HURLEY: "The State of Alaska shall provide for the utilization, conservation and development of all of the natural resources, including land and waters belonging to the State for the maximum benefit of its people."

PRESIDENT EGAN: What is your pleasure, Mr. Hurley?

HURLEY: I move the adoption of the amendment.

MARSTON: I second that motion.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Mr. Hurley moves that the amendment be adopted, and Mr. Marston seconds the motion.

BOSWELL: Point of order.

PRESIDENT EGAN: Your point of order.

BOSWELL: That's the same motion we just voted down, that Mr. Barr submitted.

PRESIDENT EGAN: It includes a lot more, though, Mr. Boswell. The Chair will agree that it includes that amendment, but it includes much more it would seem. Mr. Hurley.
