FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

STATE OF ALASKA
2026 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

BILL NO. SB207

Analysis

This bill establishes an expedited process allowing property owners or their agents to request that a peace officer immediately remove an unlawful occupant from residential real property without first filing a traditional eviction action, provided specific statutory conditions are met. It also modifies criminal statutes related to trespass, forgery, and deceptive business practices involving residential property, and shortens timelines and clarifies procedures in forcible entry and detainer cases under the Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure.

For the officers at the Department of Public Safety, the bill creates a new, statutorily defined duty to receive sworn requests from property owners, verify ownership or agency authority, serve immediate notices to vacate, and, if requested, remain on scene to keep the peace during lock changes and removal of personal property. This represents a shift from a primarily court-driven eviction process to a law-enforcement-assisted removal process for unlawful occupants, potentially increasing call volume, verification responsibilities, and time-on-scene commitments for Alaska State Troopers.

The Department of Public Safety does not currently have an estimate of potential receipt amounts associated with these provisions. If receipts are collected under the bill as drafted, the department would need to establish processes to invoice property owners, collect and deposit payments, track and reconcile receipts in the state financial system, and comply with applicable accounting and reporting requirements. The department is also evaluating whether implementation of these provisions would require additional training for officers to ensure consistent application and alignment with existing legal guidance. If it is determined that additional training is necessary, a revised fiscal note may be submitted to reflect those costs.
