Try a Taste of Alaska Grown with "Chef at the Market"

(PALMER, AK) –Chef Clayton Jones of Haute Quarter Grill will be at the South Anchorage Farmers Market in Anchorage this weekend to present exciting new ways to prepare fresh Alaska Grown products. This will be the last Chef at the Market event of the season.

A recent update from the U.S. Department of Agriculture indicates that Alaska led the nation in the growth of farmers markets this year. The Division of Agriculture is promoting and supporting the growth of these markets in various ways, including the "Chef at the Market" events. The Division provided funding for a number of Alaska chefs to promote Alaska Grown products at these special events; five chefs have conducted events at 16 markets throughout the season.

Jones will be at the South Anchorage Farmers Market from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. this Saturday September 10, 2011.
