I think the teachers can speak to the "duty/responsibility" of 18 year olds without causing more work for teachers in "field trips" , the DMV in extra boxes to complete..holding up people behind them, IT costs to add those fields, run those post reports, add to the postman's workload, the cost of stamping , enveloping and the cost of the resources to get the envelope to the the postman. So in this bill, teachers , students, their parents permission slips, the extra time outside the classroom which is not necessary to provide civics class and all the extra work from the state to the federal government is wasteful and unnecessary. Teachers would need to retain permission slips to prove parents acceptance of the focus on their childs involmnet should murphys law (which is always a potential), and could result in legal issues for the school (state). Besides so far there is only anecdotal assumptions that the vast number of students will actually produce 18 year old Alaskan voters 2 years later. Many of which will. 1. Leave to go to other states /countries for school. 2. Or follow their parents out of state before turning 18. Have opportunity to apply already with. 1. The PFD 2. Door to door politicians and community organizations of a political nature. The amount of time (money) it takes the Election board to review and the years later to remove such unresponsive letters adds to the burden and Endangers children under 18 from potential harm should that pre-voter list be hacked. Adding potential law enforcement, and lawsuits to the state. Please consider all this for almost or complete nothing. The state needs not add this cost (especially at this time)when the teachers can teach civic without mucking up the voter roles at a considerable hard cost to the state and potential unknown legal fees and ongoing updates, muckitty muck.
