Correspondence School Reporting

Introduction

The language of Ch. 47, SLA 24 (HB202) requires each correspondence study program to submit a report to the Department of Education and Early Development (DEED) that includes (1) the number of students enrolled in the program; (2) the demographic information of the students enrolled in the program; (3) an accounting of student allotment funds that have been disbursed; (4) Alaska System for Academic Progress (AK STAR) and the Alaska Science assessment participation rates and proficiency scores of the students enrolled in the program; and (5) a review of curricula that have been provided by the program or purchased using allotment funds. HB202 further requires that DEED include the information in its annual report to the legislature. The provision will be repealed July 1, 2025.

Demographic and Assessment Reporting Process

Each fall, school districts report student population and teacher/staff employment data to DEED, including enrollment and demographic details for their schools and districts. In the spring, DEED collects assessment data on student performance on statewide summative assessments for English language arts, mathematics, and science, along with achievement level information for districts and schools.

Allotment Reporting Process

To ensure complete and audited data, the department is reporting on FY2024 student enrollment and allotment funds. To avoid duplicative reporting asked of districts DEED utilized prior FY2024 data collections for student enrollment, demographics, and assessments. The department developed a template for reporting on student allotments and expenditures. Based on feedback from districts with the largest correspondence programs on reasonable methods to meet the curricula review requirement, the template was updated to include a request for board policies and district procedures related to curricula review.

Allotment Reporting Process Data Notes and Observations:

The report reflects data collected from school districts on their correspondence programs. The allotment and expenditure data are sourced from district submissions.

Allotments:

- Districts often prorate annual allotments based on factors such as full-time equivalency (FTE) or the date of enrollment. This approach allows for equitable allocation across the school year.
- Additional benefits, such as internet reimbursements or activity fees, paid from general funds are not included in this report. These expenditures may be added in the future if deemed directly tied to student benefit.

Expenditures:

- Expenditures are reported by required object codes outlined in the department's Uniform Chart of Accounts. This includes instruction-related costs charged to allotments but excludes general operations.
- Some districts have expenditures exceeding the eligible allotment for the year, reflecting the use of prior-year unspent funds carried forward into the current fiscal year.

In Alaska, correspondence schools are divided into two categories:

1. Statewide programs: Enroll students from across the state
2. District programs: Serve students within district boundaries

Both provide families with alternative education options and follow the individual district policies.

Correspondence programs offer:

- Structured approved curriculum
- Support for parents and students
- Access to assessments, screening tools, and intervention support
- Financial assistance for education-related services and district-approved materials

The chart below lists the statewide and districtwide correspondence programs.

DEED calculates assessment participation rates by comparing the number of students enrolled, based on fall enrollment data, to the number of students in a district who completed a required assessment. This includes the Alaska System for Academic Readiness (AK STAR) that assesses English language arts and mathematics, as well as the Alaska Science Assessment.

Pribilof School District

The correspondence program does not follow the traditional model for correspondence programs. The program has a total of 6 to 8 enrolled students. No allotments are provided.

The district provides online curriculum and staff supervision, while the city provides the building space for students to meet. No individual family allotments are used for curriculum selections.

As a result, there are no board policies or district procedures relating to the review and approval of correspondence curricula.
