RE: House Bill 106 Questions

While my staff Mary spoke on HB 106 with staff members of Senate Judiciary members a few questions come up.

In relation to other state's allocations to similar organization as it stands now every other state in US, with the exception of Idaho, provides funding to support legal aid organizations. Additionally, 33 other states use court fees and/or fines to fund legal aid. There is a broad range of state contributions for legal aid which varies by the size of population of the state. For instance, a big state like Texas contributed $9 million in a straight appropriation plus another $18-19 million from filing fees and/or fines last year; whereas states with smaller populations give less. Wyoming (similar to Alaska in terms of population and rurality) appropriated $1.3 Million last year from court filing fees.

In relation to state funding in the past ten years alongside caseload. Please see figures below:
