Memorandum

TO: Representative Kurt Olson
FROM: Patricia Young, Manager
RE: Local Taxes on Fuel in River and Coastal Communities in Alaska
LRS Report 09.300

You asked for information on the taxation by non-governmental organizations of fuel distributed to coastal and river communities in Alaska. You were particularly interested in taxes on fuel and transportation of fuel levied by village councils or other tribal entities.

Briefly, under Article X, Section 2, of the state constitution, all local government powers are vested in boroughs and cities and the state may delegate taxing powers to organized boroughs and cities only. Thus, in order to levy taxes, a tribal entity would need to incorporate as a city or borough.<sup>1</sup>

Attached you will find two tables showing sales and special tax information for communities around Alaska:

- Table 1 lists municipalities, sales tax, special taxes, and revenues from each.
- Table 2 lists coastal and river communities with sales or special taxes.

We also attach the following two recent documents on the cost of fuel in Alaska:

- "Study of the Components of Delivered Fuel Costs in Alaska, January 2009 Update," Institute of Social and Economic Research, University of Alaska; and
- "Current Community Conditions: Fuel Prices across Alaska," February 2009 Update, Division of Community and Regional Affairs, Alaska Department of Commerce, Community, and Economic Development.

I hope this is helpful. Please let us know if you have questions or need additional information.
