

Component: Child Protection

Contribution to Department's Mission

The Child Protection section provides advice and representation to the Department of Health and Social Services (DHSS), Office of Children's Services (OCS), to assist that agency in the performance of its functions.

Core Services

- Child Protection attorneys provide legal assistance to the Department of Health and Social Services, Office of Children's Services (OCS), on issues arising from the state's child protection system. Attorneys advise social workers at OCS prior to initiation of legal action to remove children from abusive or neglectful homes and, if necessary, litigate whether children should be in the legal custody of the state.
- Child Protection attorneys help OCS (1) implement plans to safely return children home or (2) take legal action to terminate parental rights, allowing for placement of children in adoptive or other permanent homes.

Major Component Accomplishments in 2012

- The section manages very substantial Child In Need of Aid (CINA) caseloads while working to improve the child protection system and fostering state-tribal relations as it relates to child protection issues. The section primarily litigates cases at the trial court level, while assisting the Opinions, Appeals, and Ethics (OAE) Section in appeals stemming from CINA cases.
- On July 1, 2011, 29 child protection appeals (or related appeals consolidated with child protection appeals) were pending in the Alaska Supreme Court. Between July 1, 2011 and June 30, 2012, 14 new appeals were filed requesting Supreme Court review of trial court rulings in child protection matters. Three petitions for review were filed during the fiscal year; however, the Alaska Supreme Court converted two into appeals (which are counted among the 14 above) the remaining one petition for review was denied. Of the 43 pending or newly filed appeals, 35 were filed by parents, three were filed by grandparents, one was filed by great-grandparents, two were filed by the child's Indian tribe, one was filed by the children's guardian ad litem, and one (a cross appeal) was filed by the Office of Children's Services. The petition for review was filed by a parent.
- During FY2012, the Alaska Supreme Court decided or resolved 33 appeals and one petition for review: 13 appeals resulted in published opinions, 17 resulted in unpublished decisions, and three were settled or dismissed. The petition for review was resolved through an order. By unpublished opinion, the Supreme Court remanded two consolidated appeals to the superior court. In those remanded cases, the Supreme Court stated that it would have affirmed the trial court's termination of the mother's parental rights, but it remanded the mother's and grandmother's appeals for a determination as to whether the grandmother was the child's Indian custodian. Except for the two remanded cases, all appeals were resolved in the state's favor.
- As of July 1, 2012, 12 appeals remained pending in the Supreme Court, all of which were filed during fiscal year 2012.
- The section continues to improve forms and institute new practices to comply with amendments to the children's code caused by the Adoption and Safe Families Act, including creating standard forms, orders and deadlines in the Pro Law, case management system. This helps to ensure efficiency in getting necessary court orders to OCS.
- The section continued to work with the Child Support Services Division in the Department of Revenue working toward the goal of early establishment of paternity in child protection cases and consistently obtaining child support orders from parents whose children are in state custody.

- The section provided regular training sessions at the social worker academy on the child protection legal system.
- The section worked with OCS to establish procedures to ensure timely compliance with requirements of Title IV-E of the Social Security Act. The section continued to participate in the Family CARE (Community Assisted Recovery Efforts) Court that began in August of 2002. The project encompasses the coordinated efforts of the Department of Law, Department of Administration, Office of Public Advocacy (OPA), Public Defender Agency and the Alaska Court System. The program uses principles from the drug court model to directly engage and assist parents of children who have been the subject of CINA petitions.
- The section continued to participate in Family Preservation Court (FPC). FPC is a therapeutic court for CINA cases in which substance abuse is the primary issue. The court was created in the fall of 2009 as a way of providing immediate, front-loaded services to families with minimal child protection history, with a goal of treatment completion and dismissal within six months. The FPC "team" consists of one judge, one court-employed project coordinator, one Assistant Attorney General, one Guardian ad litem, one Assistant Public Defender, two conflict attorneys, and several treatment providers. Consideration is being given whether to continue to expand the program and help more families resolve their problems quickly without the need for continued foster care.
- As part of the implementation of Pro Law, the section and OCS engaged in a data sharing system designed to improve the receipt of necessary orders by OCS and eliminate some of the administrative costs of data keeping and tracking.
- The section actively participated in the Children's Justice Act Task Force, the Court Improvement Project, the CINA Rules Committee, a statewide Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) Committee, and several other groups and committees formed for the purpose of improving the child protection system.

Key Component Challenges

- The section implemented the Civil Division's ProLaw document and case management system. The Juneau, Anchorage and Fairbanks offices had ProLaw by spring, 2012. Areas such as Nome, Kenai and Bethel offices posed more particular IT challenges and implementation in those areas was accomplished by fall 2012.
- ProLaw case management has made a significant change in the way the section operates. There are numerous data points and deadlines being tracked on each case. Among data points being tracked are the timeliness of the filing of petitions to terminate parental rights or to put a guardianship in place for children who cannot return home. This data will help OCS secure the maximum possible amount of Title IV-E reimbursement dollars for children in state foster care. The system is complex and training has been ongoing. Initial reports indicate some issues with data integrity and consistency. The section will be focusing on improving and then maintaining the integrity of data being input into the system. This will require continued training for incoming personnel as well as refresher training for existing employees.

Significant Changes in Results to be Delivered in FY2014

The section will continue to manage very substantial Child In Need of Aid (CINA) caseloads while working to improve the child protection system and fostering state-tribal relations as it relates to child protection issues.

The Department of Law will establish a full-time Child Protection Paralegal I/I position (03#012) in Fairbanks. Insufficient paralegal support in the Fairbanks Child in Need of Aid section is a serious issue. One paralegal supports three full-time attorneys with heavy caseloads and trial schedules. A large amount of trial preparation is necessary. In the course of daily activity, the current paralegal works to gather all relevant documents from various sources, redacts all discovery necessary for trials, pulls together trial exhibits, creates witness lists, makes contact with proposed witnesses and troubleshoots a variety of trial preparation issues. This is done while also fielding phone calls from workers, witnesses, police officers and other parties asking for updates on any number of matters. It is frequently too much work for one person. As a result, paralegals in other geographic areas of the state have had to leave their own casework to provide back up for Fairbanks. This increases costs and time as documents and discovery have to be shipped to other cities in order to provide assistance. Even with assistance, quite often cases do not proceed as quickly as they should and this has at times resulted in continuances of important trials such as termination of parental rights trials that would allow children in the system to find permanent homes. The addition of another paralegal will alleviate these issues which in turn, will allow the office to provide better service to the client agency, and importantly, the children and families of Alaska.
