FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

STATE OF ALASKA
2019 LEGISLATIVE SESSIONAnalysis

This bill eliminates the pre-trial services program which was designed to provide recommendations based on risk assessment. This bill also reinstates the wide-spread use of third-party custodians. These changes will likely increase incarceration, increase litigation, and increase overall case processing costs.

This bill increases limits on an incarcerated individual's ability to participate, in person, in their own court hearings, which will increase the necessity for travel to correctional institutions for defense attorneys and staff, and will result in increased litigation.

The bill increases incarceration by eliminating the use of electronic monitoring prior to conviction.

The Office of Public Advocacy anticipates an increase in workload and increased litigation and travel costs. The agency cannot accurately predict the extent of the fiscal impact of this legislation. Therefore, the agency submits an indeterminate fiscal note.
