Appendix A: Comments

Gerry Philipsen, former Secretary of the Faculty, University of Washington:

“David saved shared governance in his year as chair of the Faculty Senate. Unfortunately, selfless, behind-the-scenes work of the first quality gets little attention and thus little credit. But, in my opinion, what he accomplished made an enormous positive contribution to the life of this university.”

Lorna Rhodes, Professor, Dept of Anthropology, University of Washington:

“David has demonstrated that he is able to facilitate change at every level from the legislature to interactions with individual inmates. He has a clear vision, a long-standing commitment to correctional issues, is hard-working, productive and effective, and an extremely generous colleague.”

Hans Toch, Distinguished Professor, School of Criminal Justice, State University of New York at Albany.

“David Lovell has a fertile and inquiring mind, a thoughtful, sophisticated perspective and a consuming desire to improve the world. He is a technically proficient researcher, a clinically sophisticated social worker, and a professional who can negotiate real-world settings with awesome and consummate skill.”

Beth Anderson, Health Services Manager, Washington Dept of Corrections.

“DOC is a setting where university researchers are likely to be regarded as ‘ivory tower intellectuals’ who do not understand or appreciate the realities of how correctional agencies function. Dr. Lovell by contrast has achieved a great deal of credibility, and without his work we would not have been able to make informed decisions on staffing requirements.”

Kenneth Adams, Professor, School of Public & Environmental Affairs, Indiana University /Purdue University

“David Lovell’s works demonstrate a sophisticated, interdisciplinary character, appealing to forensic psychiatrists and prison wardens alike; his facility with research methods and statistics, combined with his first-hand knowledge of correctional issues, results in scholarship that is scientifically sound, policy-relevant, and interesting.”

Paul Peterson, Director, Washington Institute of Mental Illness Research and Training

“It is a rare skill to carry out ‘real world’ research which is interactive with and has a direct influence on policy development. Dr. Lovell has this skill and we are fortunate that he has developed an exceptional and important line of research in our state.”

David Allen, Professor, Psychosocial & Community Health, University of Washington.

“David’s research constitutes the single most extensive data-based research program addressing mentally ill prisoners. Already it is being utilized by Human Rights Watch and Amnesty International. Methodologically, David’s work has blended technical sophistication with the practical and political limitations of prisons.”

Bobbie Berkowitz, Professor and Chair, Psychosocial & Community Health, University of Washington.

“Dr. Lovell is valued for his contributions to the interdisciplinary nature of the Department of Psychosocial and Community Health. His impact on correctional policy and his articulate and sophisticated writing are held in high regard.”

Colin Holmes, School of Nursing Sciences, James Cook University, Queensland, Australia.

“Dr. Lovell’s area of work is of great importance; that his research activities are being conducted so successfully is testimony not only to his commitment but also to his skills as a negotiator and a persuasive advocate for the interests and well being of mentally ill psychologically disturbed offenders.”
