

Classroom Teacher ECHO Series

Join Dr. Anne Zink and Commissioner Johnson with Alaska's Department of Education and Early Development (DEED), in partnership with the Department of Health and Social Services (DHSS), will host a series of information sessions specifically for Alaska's current classroom teachers. The recurring sessions will focus on health considerations, answering questions from the field, and establishing a safe school environment during the COVID-19 pandemic.

When: Every Wednesday from 1:05pm – 2:00pm (begins 07/22)

Who: Current Classroom Teachers

Note: Due to the limited capacity of attendees (1000), we ask that only current classroom teachers attend. Sessions will be recorded and made available for viewing.

HUB Supporting Team: Dr. Joe McLaughlin; Dr. Elizabeth Ohlsen; Deputy Commissioner Karen Melin; Director Tamara Van Wyhe; Rebekah Morisse; Barbara Pennington; Pat Sidmore

How does it work? Project ECHO creates a virtual learning network with real-time access to a team of multidisciplinary experts. Each session features Q&A with medical experts. Topics will include health considerations in opening of school during the COVID-19 pandemic and provide guidance, resources, and summarize relevant journal articles. Please submit questions for the speakers in advance.
