6 * Section 1. FINDINGS. The legislature finds that

7 (1) homelessness is gradually being recognized as a significant and widespread problem
8 in both urban and rural parts of the United States, including Alaska;

9 (2) the diverse causes and characteristics of homelessness are endemic to various 10 combinations of overlapping factors including unemployment, underemployment, deinstitutionalization, 11 mental illness, the lack of affordable housing, domestic violence, parentless children, and other less 12 visible personal crises;

13 (3) the diversity of factors contributing to homelessness require combinations of programs
14 and measures to relieve the causes and characteristics, including temporary shelters, social services, 15 physical and mental health programs, long-term affordable housing, community development, and 16 institutionalization;

17 (4) in order for the state to increase its effectiveness in the battle against homelessness,
18 we must first understand the scope and nature of the problem and examine the responses to the problem
19 that are currently being utilized by the federal government, our state government, and by the "third 20 sector," private and nonprofit groups and organizations; and

21 (5) numerous states and the federal government have established councils or task forces

1 on the homeless as an effective way to collect and exchange information and resources, reduce 2 duplication of effort, identify ways in which the homeless may be better served and the homeless 3 problem better addressed, and to develop a coordinated response to combat homelessness and to most 4 effectively use limited resources;

5 (6) the needs of the homeless would be better served by the development of a field 6 network to share professional and technical expertise among federal agencies, state agencies, local 7 governments, and private and nonprofit organizations serving the homeless.
