8 cooperation among federal agencies, state fish and wildlife agencies, local governments, and

17 misused their authority under the Act; and

1           WHEREAS an inadequate scientific basis exists for many decisions made by federal

21                   (5) timely and mandatory de-listing once recovery plan population objectives
22 have been met;

23                   (6) clarification of the definition of "species" to limit the listing of "distinct 24 population segments" to evolutionarily significant units and major segments of a species'
25 range;

26                   (7) establishment of taxonomic standards for listing subspecies under the Act;

27                   (8) scientific peer review procedures for listing and "de-listing" of species
28 under the Act;

29                   (9) establishment of species conservation and recovery standards that take into 30 consideration the ability of a species to recover, the costs of implementation, and the public 31 interest; and
