ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

If passed, this legislation would make first time felony sex offenders ineligible for bail following conviction unless the judge determined that the length of sentence would prove to be shorter than the time an offender would serve pending sentencing or appeal.

The Department's concern regarding people serving more time than they would be sentenced to is somewhat ameliorated by the amendments, however, there is concern that some offenders might win an appeal and have served part or all of their sentence unnecessarily. It would be difficult to estimate how many of those offenders there might be and how much excess time we would be talking about. Therefore, the Department of Corrections is submitting an indeterminate fiscal note.
