SB 1 provides that before a prisoner serving a term of two years or more is eligible for release on mandatory parole or for a good time deduction, he or she must have obtained a high school diploma, a GED, or the equivalent or be incapable of obtaining a diploma or its equivalent. Because these provisions will increase the amount of time some prisoners will spend incarcerated, they may result in more cases going to trial. However, the extent of this increase, if any, is too speculative to estimate. If SB 1 should result in a significant increase in the number of criminal cases that proceed to trial the court system may return to the legislature for additional funding.
