ANALYSIS: (Attach a separate page if necessary)

This bill adds a chapter to AS 45 that imposes disclosure requirements on businesses that collect and store personal information if there is a security breach of the businesses' information system. In the event of a security breach, notice of the breach must be made to consumers by either written or electronic means, with some exceptions if the notice will cost more than $250,000, or the number of affected consumers exceeds 500,000. Consumers can bring a court action for violations of this law to recover damages and injunctive relief.

The bill also adds a section that allows consumers to place a security freeze on his or her credit report. When a security freeze is in place, a credit reporting agency may not release information from the consumer's credit report to third parties unless requested by the consumer. There are several exemptions for access required to correct technical information, and for some agencies like the child support enforcement agency, Department of Health and Social Services, and Department of Revenue. Court action can be brought by consumers to enforce this law. Remedies include injunctive relief, damages (including lost wages and pain and suffering), and punitive damages up to $5000.

BILL NO. CSHB 226(L&C)

Violations of the provisions of this bill are not automatically violations of Alaska's Consumer Protection Act. Consumers will likely be left to their own enforcement efforts for violations of this Act except in the most egregious cases where the State may bring an action. I do not believe there will be any significant fiscal impact to the Department of Law from this bill.
