FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

STATE OF ALASKA
2018 LEGISLATIVE SESSIONAnalysis

This bill amends AS 12.62.160 dealing with release and use of criminal justice information by adding a new subsection that would allow a person convicted of possession of less than one ounce of marijuana under AS 11.71.060 to request their criminal record information related to that offense not be released, provided the person was 21 years of age or older at the time of the offense and was not convicted of any other charges in that case.

The Department of Public Safety (DPS) Criminal Justice Information Systems (CJIS) Program unit is responsible to operate and maintain the Alaska Public Safety Information Network (APSIN) - the state's central repository of criminal history record information - and to collect, store, and release criminal justice information as provided under AS 12.62.

There are 1,939 records in APSIN for stand-alone convictions applicable under this bill. Should the bill pass, DPS staff would research and redact the applicable records upon request. DPS does not anticipate this to result in a significant increase in workload for CJIS Program staff. However, to ensure that redacted records are not inadvertently released, APSIN would need an additional element of programming to block the identified criminal history records. This would require 200 hours of programmer time at $140 per hour, resulting in a one-time cost of $28,000.
