Eighty-first Day

Pursuant to adjournment the House was called to order by Speaker Edgmon at 10:47 a.m.

Roll call showed 39 members present. Representative Kawasaki was absent and his presence was noted later.

The invocation was offered by the Chaplain, Lieutenant Lance Walters of The Salvation Army. Representative Wilson moved and asked unanimous consent that the invocation be spread on the journal. There being no objection, it was so ordered.

Heavenly Father,

I appreciate that we are able to enter into your presence and invite you into our midst here in this House today. Your presence is a sacred place, a place where we can go for help, counsel, and wisdom to help us through life's many challenges as well as life's joys. This House is also a sacred place where the people of Alaska can go and ask for help from their representatives in life's challenges as well as joys.

Father, help these representatives receive your counsel and your wisdom as they respond to the voice of the people. Help them to do their work with passion, no matter how mundane the process goes. Help them to be wise with their time, order their steps and their schedules. Thank you for their service.

Father, I also pray for their families, that your presence would fill their homes and that they would experience your goodness. Protect their children, their husbands, and their wives.

Thank you, Father, for hearing my prayer, in Jesus' name.
Amen.

The Pledge of Allegiance was led by Representative Tarr.

The Governor's transmittal letter dated April 6 follows:

"Dear Speaker Edgmon:

Under the authority of Article III, Section 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill relating to personnel and procurement procedures, including national criminal history record checks, for State employees and contractors accessing certain federal tax information.

The bill would establish procedures to safeguard the confidentiality of certain federal tax information in the manner required by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) security and safeguarding requirements in 26 U.S.C. 6103(p)(4)(C) and Publication 1075 (published by the Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service and updated September 30, 2016). The IRS requirements apply to State and local agencies that obtain certain federal tax information directly from the IRS, an IRS authorized secondary source such as the Social Security Administration, the Federal Office of Child Support Enforcement, the Bureau of Fiscal Service, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, or another entity acting on behalf of the IRS pursuant to an agreement under 26 U.S.C. 6103(p)(2)(B). The recently updated IRS security guidelines in Publication 1075 require:

- All State employees and contractors with access to certain federal tax information must undergo fingerprinting and a national criminal history record check conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI).
- Agencies must develop a written policy that requires employees and contractors with access to certain federal tax information to complete a background investigation. The policy must include criteria to define qualifications to access federal tax information.
- The background investigation for each employee or contractor must be done every ten years.
- The background investigation also must include a check of local law enforcement agency records for the past five years and validation of the employee's eligibility to legally work in the United States.

Legislation is necessary to require fingerprinting and an FBI national criminal history record check. Under Public Law 92-544, the FBI can conduct a national criminal history record check for a noncriminal justice purpose if required by a federal law or if a state has enacted a statute requiring this record check.

Some State agencies already receive information directly from the IRS, or an IRS-authorized source, and this continued access is vital. The Department of Revenue, Child Support Services Division (CSSD), uses federal tax information to collect child support payments from noncustodial parents. In FY16, CSSD collected over $8.6 million in past due child support through the federal tax refund offset program. CSSD paid these garnished funds to the custodial parent or to the State for reimbursement of Temporary Aid to Needy Families benefits provided to the custodial parent. Continued access to federal tax information is critical to CSSD's efforts to collect child support for Alaskan families.

The Department of Revenue uses federal tax information to ensure compliance for corporate income tax, motor fuel tax, and mining tax. It provides an auditing tool that can confirm that the correct amount of tax is paid to the State. The loss of federal tax information could impede audits and possibly allow businesses to escape paying the full amount of taxes due.

The Department of Labor and Workforce Development (DOLWD) Unemployment Insurance program is required by federal law to use the treasury offset program to recover certain unemployment compensation or risk loss of federal funding – over $22 million. AS 23.20.486 authorizes DOLWD to participate in the federal offset program, which includes confidential tax information subject to the safeguard requirements. DOLWD is currently working on programming and testing and expects to begin participation in the program in the spring of 2017. The Alaska unemployment compensation program estimates it will collect an estimated $300,000 to $400,000 annually through the offset program.

To ensure continued access to federal tax information, the bill creates a new chapter in AS 39 for establishing State personnel procedures for State employees who access certain federal tax information. The bill also creates a new section in AS 30.36, establishing similar procedures for State contractors who access certain federal tax information. Those procedures include fingerprinting and an FBI national criminal history record check. Last, the bill amends AS 12.62.400 by adding a new subsection authorizing the Department of Public Safety to submit the fingerprints to the FBI and obtain a national criminal history record check.

I urge your prompt and favorable action on this measure.

Sincerely,

Bill Walker
Governor"

Article 4. Health Care Price Information.

Sec. 18.23.400. Disclosure of health care price information.

(a) Upon written request by a patient or prospective patient, a health care provider shall provide the patient or prospective patient with an estimate of reasonably anticipated charges for treating the patient's or prospective patient's specific condition. The health care provider shall provide the estimate in writing or by electronic means before providing nonemergency health care services and not later than 10 business days after receiving the request. The health care provider is not required to disclose the charges for the total anticipated course of treatment for the patient or prospective patient, but if the estimate does not include charges for the total anticipated course of treatment, the estimate must include a statement explaining that the estimate only includes costs for a portion of the total anticipated course of treatment. If the charge for a health care service varies significantly in response to conditions that the health care provider cannot reasonably assess before providing the service, the estimate may include a reasonable range of charges for the service.

(b) Upon written request by a patient or prospective patient, a health care facility shall provide the patient or prospective patient with an estimate of reasonably anticipated charges for treating the patient's or prospective patient's specific condition. The health care facility shall provide the estimate in writing or by electronic means before providing nonemergency health care services and not later than 10 business days after receiving the request. The health care facility is not required to disclose the charges for the total anticipated course of treatment for the patient or prospective patient, but if the estimate does not include charges for the total anticipated course of treatment, the estimate must include a statement explaining that the estimate only includes costs for a portion of the total anticipated course of treatment. (B) the amount the health care provider or health care facility anticipates charging the patient or prospective patient who requests the estimate, taking into account any insurance policy held by the patient or prospective patient and any status of the patient or prospective patient that may affect the charge; in this paragraph, "status" includes a person's status as an Alaska Native, American Indian, or veteran or indigent status;

(5) the identity, or suspected identity, of any other person, entity, health care provider, or health care facility that may charge the patient or prospective patient in connection with any health care service, procedure, product, or supply included in the estimate; the estimate must also state whether the amount of any charges described under this paragraph are included in the estimate or would be charged in addition to the total amount of the estimate;

(6) a notification that the patient or prospective patient may contact the patient's or prospective patient's insurer for additional information regarding cost-sharing responsibilities; and

(7) a notice disclosing the health care provider's or health care facility's in-network or out-of-network status that is substantially similar to one of the following forms:
