FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

STATE OF ALASKA
2019 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

This legislation adjusts the exclusiveness of liability provision in workers' compensation cases where an employee's death is caused by the employers' willful disregard for life, limb, health, or bodily safety of an employee; increases workers' compensation insurance benefits for permanent partial impairment and death benefits; and adds a new benefit category for the parent(s) of a deceased worker with no dependents at the time of the injury that causes the employee's death. This legislation also requires an employer to notify the personal representative of a deceased employee about time limits for filing a workers' compensation claim, grief counselor information, and increases the time period for indemnity payments to children of a deceased worker for an additional five years.

The National Council on Compensation Insurance has estimated the impact of HB30 on the workers' compensation insurance system to be a minimum increase of $6 million on written premiums and $3 million on self-insured costs. Revenue to the Workers' Safety and Compensation Administration Account (WSCAA) comes from fees on premiums written and self-insured costs. Consequently, the division estimates an annual increase of $237.0 in revenue to WSCAA beginning in January of 2020 ($150.0 in written premium tax service fees under AS 23.05.067(a)(2) and $87.0 in fee assessments on self-insured employers under AS 23.05.067(a)(1)(B)). This results in an increase of only $118.5 in FY2020 because of the mid-year implementation date.

The division is able to absorb the operating costs resulting from this legislation. This legislation requires the division to develop a form for the employer to provide notice following a workplace fatality of the statute of limitations for obtaining workers' compensation benefits and a list of legal and grief counselors. There is currently not a definition for "grief counselors" under the Alaska Workers' Compensation Act, so regulations will be necessary.
