FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

STATE OF ALASKA
2023 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Analysis

The Committee Substitute for Senate Bill 53 revises the process that takes place after a criminal defendant has been found, following an evaluation by a medical professional and a court hearing, incompetent to stand trial. Section 4 would increase the number of those defendants whose time period for commitment may be extended by the court in an effort to restore them back to competency. If criminal defendants who have been found incompetent are not restored to competency, and the criminal charges are then dismissed, Section 5 requires the prosecutor to file a petition seeking involuntary commitment of the defendant in the civil mental commitment process, under Title 47.

Section 6 of the bill sets out the new procedure in AS 47.30.706 for the Department of Law's petition and the court's order to have the defendant (now the "respondent" in the civil action) detained for evaluation by a mental health professional to determine whether the person meets the standards for a mental commitment.

These new procedures will result in more civil petitions for an involuntary hospitalization to be filed and handled by the courts and will therefore impact operations, but are not expected to have a fiscal impact on the court system.

Sections 9-11 of the SB 53 add an additional type of mental commitment, for a five-year term, that can be used for those persons who continue to meet the standards for an involuntary mental commitment and who have a history of crimes against persons and a finding of incompetency. In addition, new subsection (c) in Section 11 would require court hearings to determine whether a person who is being held under a five-year or a 180-day commitment should continue to be held after a medical professional believes that they no longer meet the criteria for commitment. These sections will result in more trials and hearings, but the number is not expected to be so substantial as to require additional resources.

The court system therefore submits this zero fiscal note.
