FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

STATE OF ALASKA
2026 LEGISLATIVE SESSIONAnalysis

House Bill 232 expands the ability of minors age 16 and older to consent to certain behavioral and mental health services without requiring parental or guardian approval under specific circumstances. The bill allows unaccompanied homeless minors and those living independently to access healthcare services with appropriate documentation. It also permits minors to seek outpatient behavioral and mental health treatment for up to five sessions without parental consent, with provisions for continued treatment if obtaining parental consent would be detrimental to the minor's well-being. Additionally, the bill clarifies that parents are not financially responsible for services obtained under these provisions and updates existing laws to reflect these changes, ensuring greater access to critical healthcare while balancing parental rights and minor protections.

Funding mechanisms for behavioral and mental health services for minors would need to be established in practice. Providers could offer services through various means, including school-based programs, state and federal grants, nonprofit and community health centers, or billing Medicaid and private insurance. However, considerations regarding parental notifications must align with the bill's language to ensure the minor's confidentiality is protected.

The Division of Behavioral Health does not anticipate a significant operational impact. Therefore, a zero dollar fiscal note is submitted.
