Re: House Bill 82

Dear Representative Malone:

The following information is supplied in response to your inquiry of January 31, 1975, concerning matters related to House Bill 82.

The principal portion of the obligation, which was previously cited as being approximately $490,600, has been lowered to $482,000. This overstatement was caused by a double counting of a correction of data previously submitted by an agency.

1. Estimate of interest due as of February 1, 1975

The array of variables involved complicates calculation of the interest due. In effect, the problem involves about 465 small loans different sizes which run for a variety of time spans. The discussion that follows is based upon preliminary information received from the agencies which employ(ed) the personnel affected by the credit decision. Two techniques were used to estimate the amount of interest due:

A. Approximately twenty percent of the individual cases were sampled to determine the duration of their eligibility for the retroactively effective pay increases. The length of eligibility characteristics of the twenty percent sample were extrapolated to the whole group of eligibles and incorporated into a calculation of the interest due them as shown in tables 1 and 2.

Table 1: Estimate of Interest Due Through October, 1974

Length of Retroactive Eligibility	Estimated % of Total Cases	Pro-rated Principal Amount	Monthly Interest Factor*	Number of Months	Estimated Interest
24-26 months	38%	$183,160	.0066	26	$31,430
18-23 months	28%	134,960	.0066	19	16,923
1-17 months	34%	163,880	.0066	7	7,571
TOTALS	100%	$482,000			$55,924

*8% annual interest divided by 12 months = .066% per month.

Table 2: Estimate of Interest Due for Nov., Dec. 1974 & Jan. 1975

Principal	x	Monthly Interest	x	Months	=	Estimated Interest
$482,000	x	.066	x	3	=	$9,543

Using this technique the total estimated interest due is the sum of the amounts shown in Tables 1 and 2 which is $65,467.

B. The second method used to estimate the amount of interest due was based upon the assumption that the accrual of the principal was a linear function. The total known principal obligation was divided by the number of months (26) during which the obligation was accrued. The interest outstanding on the total principal accumulated by the end of each of those twenty six months and those elapsing since September 1974, was calculated. The sum of the calculated increments of interest is $60,250. This is about $5,217 less than the interest calculated via method (A) above. This is to be expected because the accumulation of the obligation was not in fact linear, there being a large number of persons whose eligibility started at the outset of the time span involved and continued to the end of that span. The higher number is probably the more valid of the two as it considers the non-linear nature of the accumulation.

2. Number of people to receive payments under the APEA vs. State of Alaska decision.

The number of currently identified recipients is 465. This number is subject to minor increases due to the possible discovery of additional eligible individuals.

3. Number of recipients who still work for the State.

The currently identified recipients fall in the following categories:

Current employees	394
Retired	47
Terminated	20
Deceased	4
TOTAL	465

4. Number of recipients by employing agency.

Agency	Recipients
Office of the Governor	1
Department of Administration	9
Department of Law	3
Department of Revenue	15
Department of Education	5

February 5, 1975

Department of Health and Social Services	82
Department of Labor	26

I hope the above information will adequately answer the questions posed by your January 31, 1975, memorandum. Please contact me if you require additional information.

Ron Lind, Deputy Director

SUBJECT: House Bill 82

The Superior Court for the State of Alaska ordered on November 24, 1974 that the State of Alaska change the way in which it had been considering longevity increases under AS 39.27.022(b) and make retroactive payments, including interest, to the people affected.

State agencies have researched their records and accumulated $490,600 in payments due employees and former employees. This supplemental will provide funding for these payments and details of the amounts due are available from the Division of Finance, Department of Administration.
