Juneau-Douglas Little Theater's participation in Spectrum '81, an International Theater Showcase in Villach, Austria.

Background

Once every two years the Alaska State Community Theater Association holds a statewide drama festival in Haines, Alaska. In April of 1979 the Juneau-Douglas Little Theater was represented at the festival by it's production of "The Sea Horse". The play won the state competition and represented Alaska at the Americal Community Theater Association (ACTA) Region IX Festival of American Community Theaters (FACT) in Richland, Washington. Region IX consists of Alaska, Oregon, and Washington, however Oregon did not participate in the Region IX festival. "The Sea Horse" won this festival and represented Region IX at the National FACT held in Memphis, Tennessee in July. There were twelve groups which participated in the National FACT and "The Sea Horse" won third place.

In July of 1980, I attended a board meeting of the Americal Community Theater Association in Pasedena, California. While there I was contacted by Professor Mort Clark who is the United States representative to the International Amature Theater Association (IATA) and was informed that "The Sea Horse" was eligible to be nominated as the United States entry at an international festival. Then in October of 1980 I received a letter from Professor Clark stating that he had nominated "The Sea Horse" to represent the United States at Spectrum '81 in Villach, Austria and that I would be receiving a letter from Dr. Susanne Eder confirming that we had been invited. In January, I received a letter from Dr. Hilde Weinberger in Vienna, whom Professor Clark had contacted, asking if we would be interested in performing at the Internationale Jugendtheatretage in Vienna the week following the festival in Villach. Again, we would be the only group representing the United States.

About the Festivals

Spectrum '81 is an international theater showcase held in Villach, Austria every two years. Participation in the festival is 80% professional and by invitation only. After talking with Herr Alfred Meschnigg, festival chairman, I learned that "The Sea Horse" is the only nonprofessional group coming to the festival. There will be fifteen countries represented and the types of theater represented range from plays to mime to pantomime and to dance. There will be approximately twenty productions presented in six days. "The Sea Horse" has been invited to do two performances during the week. The dates of the festival are June 21st to 27th and the festival will be paying room and board for the group during the week of the festival.

The Internationale Jugenthertratage is a festival for young people held in Vienna every two years. The dates of the festival are June 21st to July 4th, however groups are only required to be at the festival for four days during that period. Participants not only perform their shows but are also exposed to various workshops during their stay at the festival. Eight countries, including the United States, participate.

About Our Preparations to Attend the Festival

A committee has been established to raise funds locally and it is anticipated that they will raise between $4,000 and $5,000, which will not be enough to take the production to Austria. Airfares alone will be $11,000. We have "shopped" around for the least expensive transportation and methodology in getting sets, properties, and people to Villach. We have already had one fund raising event in conjunction with the Juneau Arts Council. We have contacted Alaska Airlines regarding cost of transporting the set to Villach versus sending two people to Villach to construct the set there. We are also working with the Austrian Office of Tourism in Los Angeles for transportation and housing while in Austria. Private companies are also being contacted regarding grant possibilities.
