

H B

93

John:

Basically, what HB 93 does is not allow departments to hire additional employees unless the department follows proper procedure. Proper procedure is to: submit in the department's budget the total amount of employees, and how much the employee force will cost. Currently, what is happening is that certain departments are adding n additional employees if they have extra money in thier budget, instead of returning thier unused portion of thier budget back into the general fund.

Question: How about making this bill even more tough, by requiring departments to fire all employees associated with a certain program when that program is finished Example: all the revenue workers who worked with the inome tax program. When it was repealed, the workers still stayed.
