5 AAC 02.010. METHODS, MEANS, AND GENERAL RESTRICTIONS. (a) Unless otherwise provided in this title, the following are legal types of gear for subsistence fishing:

(1) gear specified in 5 AAC 39.105;

(2) jigging gear which consists of a line or lines with lures or baited hooks which are operated during periods of ice cover from holes cut in the ice and which are drawn through the water by hand;

(3) a spear which is a shaft with a sharp point or fork-like implement attached to one end, used to thrust through the water to impale or retrieve fish and which is operated by hand;

(4) a lead which is a length of net employed for guiding fish into a seine or a length of net or fencing employed for guiding fish into a fishwheel, fyke net or dip net.

(b) It is unlawful to buy or sell subsistence-taken shellfish, their parts, or their eggs, unless otherwise specified in this chapter.

(c) The use of explosives and chemicals is prohibited, except that chemical baits or lures may be used to attract shellfish.

(d) Subsistence fishing by the use of a line attached to a rod or pole is prohibited except when fishing through the ice in the Bering Sea area.

(e) Each subsistence fisherman shall plainly and legibly inscribe his first initial, last name and address on a keg or buoy attached to unattended subsistence fishing gear. Subsistence fishing gear may not display a permanent vessel license (ADF&G) number.

(f) A side wall of all subsistence shellfish pots must contain an opening with a perimeter equal to or exceeding one-half of the tunnel eye opening perimeter. The opening must be laced, sewn or secured together by untreated cotton twine or other natural fiber no larger than 120 thread. Dungeness crab and shrimp pots may have the pot lid tiedown straps secured to the pot at one end by untreated cotton twine no larger than 120 thread, as a substitute for the above requirement.

crab for subsistence purposes during the period starting 14 days before an opening until 14 days after the closure of an open king crab fishing season in the area or areas for which the vessel is registered;

(4) no commercially licensed or registered tanner crab fishing vessel may be used to take tanner crab for subsistence purposes during the period starting 14 days before an opening until 14 days after the closure of an open tanner crab fishing season in the area or areas for which the vessel is registered;

(5) no commercially licensed and registered shrimp trawl fishing vessel may be used to take shrimp for subsistence purposes in any district that is open for commercial shrimp trawl fishing for 14 days before, during and 14 days after any open commercial shrimp trawl fishing season for that district. 5 AAC 02.030. UNLAWFUL POSSESSION OF SUBSISTENCE SHELLFISH. (a) No person may possess, transport or place into the possession of another person, raw or unprocessed subsistence-taken shellfish or their parts that the person has taken contrary to state law or regulation.

(b) No person may possess or transport raw or unprocessed subsistence-taken shellfish or their parts if the items have been received from a person who took, possessed or transported the items contrary to state law or regulation and if the person receiving the items knows, has reason to know or should have reason to know that the items were taken, possessed or transported contrary to state law or regulation.

Authority: AS 16.05.251(a)(4),(10) and (b)

5 AAC 02.040. POLICY ON CLOSURES DUE TO ILLEGAL FISHING. (a) Some fisheries have had a documented history of illegal commercial fishing dating back to 1968. Enforcement efforts by the Department of Public Safety have been largely ineffective in controlling this recurring problem on a long-term basis. The board recognizes the difficulty of enforcement in some areas of the state and although the current regulations are sufficient to protect fish stocks, they may be ineffective due to special enforcement problems.

(b) In the interest of the conservation of valuable renewable fish resources, the Board of Fisheries directs the commissioner, or his authorized designee, to take the following actions given the specified circumstances. If illegal fishing activities develop to the point that regulations pertaining to protection of fish stocks become ineffective, the commissioner shall consider closing the affected fishery by emergency order for a period of up to one week. When the fishery reopens and illegal fishing continues to be a problem, the appropriate fishery may be closed for an additional period of time. Continued violations may result in additional closures of the fishery.

5 AAC 40.005. GENERAL. (a) The harvest of salmon inhabiting the water of the state, regardless of whether the salmon are naturally or artificially propagated, may be conducted only pursuant to regulations adopted by the Board of Fisheries.

(b) The harvest of salmon returning to a private nonprofit salmon hatchery will be governed by regulations adopted by the Board of Fisheries. The board will, in its discretion, develop harvesting regulations after review of the harvest plans or other materials, information and testimony (if any) presented by the regional associations, hatchery operators, the Department of Commerce and Economic Development, fishermen, processors, and other interested parties.

(c) Where hatchery returns enter a terminal location and can be harvested without significantly affecting wild stocks, a special harvest area will be designated and described by regulation adopted by the board. The board will, in its discretion, adopt additional regulations

SUBSISTENCE USES

5 AAC 99.010. JOINT BOARDS OF FISHERIES AND GAME SUBSISTENCE PROCEDURES. (a) In applying a subsistence priority, the Board of Fisheries and the Board of Game will provide for conservation and development of Alaska's fish and game resources according to the following procedures:

(1) each board will assess the biological status of fish or game resources and determine whether a surplus may be harvested during a regulatory year consistent with the conservation and development of the resources on the sustained yield principle and compatible with the public interest;

(2) each board will identify subsistence uses of fish or game resources, recognizing that subsistence uses are customary and traditional uses by rural Alaska residents for food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, transportation, making of handicrafts, customary trade, barter and sharing.

(b) Customary and traditional subsistence uses by rural Alaska residents will be identified by use of the following criteria:

(1) a long-term, consistent pattern of use, excluding interruption by circumstances beyond the user's control such as regulatory prohibitions;

(2) a use pattern recurring in specific seasons of each year;

(3) a use pattern consisting of methods and means of harvest which are characterized by efficiency and economy of effort and cost, and conditioned by local circumstances;

(4) the consistent harvest and use of fish or game which is near, or reasonably accessible from, the user's residence;

(5) the means of handling, preparing, preserving, and storing fish or game which has been traditionally used by past generations, but not excluding recent technological advances where appropriate;

(6) a use pattern which includes the handing down of knowledge of fishing or hunting skills, values and lore from generation to generation;

(7) a use pattern in which the hunting or fishing effort or the products of that effort are distributed or shared among others within a definable community of persons, including customary trade, barter, sharing, and gift-giving; customary trade may include limited exchanges for cash, but does not include significant commercial enterprises; a community may include specific villages or towns, with a historical preponderance of subsistence users, and encompasses individuals, families, or groups who in fact meet the criteria described in this subsection; and

(8) a use pattern which includes reliance for subsistence purposes upon a wide diversity of the fish and game resources of an area, and which provides substantial economic, cultural, social, and nutritional elements of the subsistence user's life.

(c) After identifying subsistence uses based upon the criteria set out in (b) of this section, each board will determine the approximate amount of fish or game necessary to provide fully for reasonable opportunities to engage in these customary and traditional uses.

(d) Each board will adopt regulations that provide an opportunity for the subsistence taking of fish or game resources in amounts sufficient to provide for the customary and traditional uses identified in (b) of this section, and consistent with sound conservation and management practices. In no instance may the subsistence taking jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of a specific fish stock or game population on a sustained-yield basis.

(e) Each board will, in its discretion, adopt regulations that provide an opportunity for non-subsistence uses of the resource, to the extent that the non-subsistence uses do not jeopardize or interfere with the conservation and development of fish or game resources on a sustained-yield basis, or with the opportunity for taking these resources for customary and traditional subsistence uses as provided in (d) of this section.

(f) When circumstances such as increased numbers of users, weather, predation, or loss of habitat may jeopardize the sustained yield of a fish stock or game population, each board will exercise all practical options for restricting non-subsistence harvest before subsistence uses are restricted. If all available restrictions for non-subsistence uses have been implemented and further restrictions are needed, each board will reduce the take for subsistence uses in a series of graduated steps, by giving maximum protection to subsistence users who

(1) live closest to the resource;

(2) have the fewest available alternative resources; and

(3) have the greatest customary and direct dependence upon the resource.

(g) In no event, however, will a board allow uses which will jeopardize or interfere with the conservation and management of fish stocks or game populations on a sustained-yield basis. (Eff. 5/30/82, Reg. 82)

JUNE MEETING PROGRAM

The June program will feature RAINBOW TROUT. Look for two local experts to share their knowledge and experience on where to find and take these fine fish in Cook Inlet waters. An excellent film is scheduled and our great raffle is on, as usual. In addition, the winner of the $1000 Bristol Bay fishing trip will be drawn. See you at the International Airport Inn, 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, June 11. BRING A FRIEND -- he will thank you!

RECORD KING TAKEN IN KENAI RIVER

This writer happened to be in Soldotna when the 97# - 4oz record king was brought in for weighing. A king salmon nearly 5 feet long is truly impressive. Being weighed at the same time was an 83 pounder. Since second run (July) Kenai king salmon average about 5 to 6 pounds heavier than the Kenai River early (June) run fish, could this be an omen of BIG things to come?

FISHING FORECAST

King Salmon: June is truly king salmon month. With the exception of the late run in the Kenai River and the latter part of the Naknek River run, all southcentral king salmon runs occur in June.

The biggest run enters the Susitna River, where fisheries occur in a host of tributary streams. The largest number of fish are taken at Alexander Creek, Deshka River and Lake Creek. These are all fly-in or boat-in fisheries. Adjacent to the Parks Highway there are weekend only fisheries at Willow, Caswell and Montana Creeks for 4 weekends, commencing the second Saturday in June. Last year all streams on the westside between the forelands and the Susitna River were opened to king fishing and good catches were made in the Chuitna (Chuit) and Theodore Rivers. The big problem this year is high, dirty water from the big snow pack and the late breakup. Be sure to verify water conditions before booking a flight into the Susitna fly-in areas.

On the Kenai, Memorial day opening on the lower streams (Anchor, Deep and Ninilchik Rivers) was very slow. These streams should improve dramatically during the next 2 weeks if flows do not stay excessively high. The best king salmon fishing on the peninsula to date has been the troll fishery off Deep Creek, where good numbers have been taken. This fishery should remain good until late June. Early catches in the Kenai River have been spotty, and it is still too soon to determine the size of the early run.

The Naknek River offers good king fishing in June. This is a large, crystal-clear river immediately adjacent to King Salmon and it can be fished from shore near King Salmon Creek.

In the upper Copper River area, the Gulkana River June king fishery is expected to be poor due to high, dirty water.

Rainbow Trout: The Kenai River opens June 15. Remember - no bait is allowed in waters upstream of Skilak Lake.

In upper Cook Inlet, high stream flows are expected to interfere with trout fishing in the Susitna tributaries. Lakes in the Matanuska Valley should produce good catches of trout for those anglers fishing late evenings or early mornings, when light levels are low. Call Fish and Game, 349-4687, for the names of the hottest lakes.

Halibut: Catches are good throughout lower Cook Inlet, with an unusually large number of big halibut being landed.

DEADLINE-$1000 BRISTOL BAY DRAWING

The deadline to participate in the drawing for the $1000 fishing trip to Chris Goll's Rainbow River Lodge is June 8. Any member joining, renewing, or extending his membership by that date will be in the drawing. The drawing will be held at the June 11 membership meeting.

NEW ASA MEMBERSHIP BENEFIT

A new benefit is available to members of the ASA. Paid-up members may join the FedAlaska Credit Union by presenting their membership card showing current status. FedAlaska has joined our organization as a business member, showing their support for the goals we are working for.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

If you have moved, or are about to move, be sure to notify the ASA, either by mail or phone, at 344-5235. The newsletter is mailed 3rd class and is not always forwarded. In addition, it is not necessarily returned if undelivered. Therefore, we have no way of knowing that we have lost contact with you.

BILLING-CURRENT AND EXPIRED MEMBERS

To give you a full year's membership for your dues, we have changed from a calendar to an individual membership year, and are now billing members as their membership comes due. Statements will be mailed the month prior to the expiration date shown on your mailing label, and are due by the 15th of the expiration month. Because your dues support the cost of membership meetings, the newsletter and Fish and Game Magazine, we are unable to continue supplying these to members whose dues have lapsed. If your membership is not renewed, you will receive your last newsletter the month of your expiration, and the Fish and Game magazine subscription will expire.

Current Members: For example, those memberships expiring in June were mailed statements in May, which are due by June 15. Renewals received by this date insure you will continue to receive your newsletter and Fish and Game Magazine without interruption. Without renewal, this will be your last newsletter.

Expiring Members: Recently, a letter and final renewal notice was mailed to those whose memberships expired January 1-May 31, 1985. If dues payment is not received in June, this will be your final newsletter and your Fish and Game Magazine subscription will expire. We appreciate your past membership and sincerely hope you will continue your support for better sport fishing through the efforts of the ASA.

KENAI RIVER ADVISORY BOARD

The Kenai River Advisory Board is continuing its work in implementing a long range management plan for the river. The board has established a series of subcommittees to study specific issues. These meetings are open to the public, and they will result in recommendations to the board. The Advisory Board may have a profound impact on the future activities on the river. Of particular importance just now is the work of the Social and Recreation subcommittee, which is currently taking public testimony on topics such as: boat and motor sizes, speed limits, methods and means of fishing and any other "people vs people" issues of concern. The public testimony will continue through May 31. Beginning June 1 through August 15, they will assemble data and take expert testimony. Beginning August 16, they will put proposals out to the public for input through public hearings. For further information, call Dave Stevens, 265-4526.

LEGISLATIVE UPDATE

The ASA worked on a series of bills this past session. Most of these bills are still in the legislative process. Since the 1985 Legislature has just adjourned the 1st session, all bills remain active through the 1986 2nd session. We will lobby local legislators between sessions and then work for passage next session. Bills of major interest to anglers include:

- HB29 Funding for boat launch and associated facilities at Lower Little Susitna River. In House Finance Committee.
- HB36 Funding for facilities at the confluence of Willow Creek and Susitna River. In House Finance Committee.
- HB43 Funding for access acquisition at several northern Cook Inlet streams, such as Little Willow Creek and Montana Creek. In House Finance Committee.
- HB86 Creates the Willow Creek Recreation Area. In House Resources Committee.
- HB93 Establishing a system of recreational rivers. (A top priority) In House Resources Committee.
- HB142 Creates the Kroto-Desnka Public Use Area. In House Resources Committee.
- HB280 Creates the Fritz Creek Critical Habitat Area. On the Governor's Desk.
- HB324 Creates the Jim-Swan Lakes Recreation Area. In House Resources Committee.

Mitch

Our top legislative priority was subsistence legislation. The legislature adjourned without action by the senate. Senator Mitch Abood is being "blamed" for inaction when, in fact, he offered Governor Sheffield support for the Governor's bill (HB288), if he would put ir a sunset clause, as advocated by ASA. A sunset clause would have assured public hearings and adequate study time prior to reconsideration during the 2nd session. The governor would not accept this compromise. We insisted on the sunset clause because, next year being an election year, it was unlikely any subsequent legislative action would be taken to bring about a long term solution once any interim bill was passed. Meanwhile, flagrant hunting violations are taking place and subsistence permit applications for early kings on eastside set net beaches are coming in to ADF&G. Public Safety and ADF&G will enforce all sport and commercial regulations. Current guesses are that existing gear, such as gill nets and fish wheels, will continue to be the only legal gear for subsistence users. Don't hook and line fish in excess of the sport limit or seasons and espect subsistence to protect you from prosecution -- unless you can afford the court costs.

FEATURING BUSINESS MEMBERS

THE FISH SPECIALIST is one of Alaska's longest established fish taxidermists. Ken Guffey, the fish specialist, has been in the business for nearly 20 years in Anchorage, forming his own business at 3421 W.31st, in 1980. He provides both mounts and fiberglass replicas. Ken is responsible for the painting, using the actual fish, tne anglers photo, color notes and knowledge of where the fish was caught. Carole, Ken's wife, specializes in putting together the fiberglass casts. Dan Buesseler, master fisn mounter, handles all the skin mounts. For more information on field care of fish to be mounted, stop by or call 248-2688. Ken was active in the formation of the ASA and has continued his support as a business member.

The RAINBOW RIVER LODGE, operated by Chris Goll, is one of Bristol Bay's premier lodges. Guests are treated to outstanding fishing for all species present in Bristol Bay. However, Chris specializes in rainbow trout and king and sockeye salmon. This writer has fished with Chris at his lodge and I can tell you the food and hospitality are great. Anglers live "high-on-the-hog" at Rainbow River Lodge. As a long time supporter of the ASA, Chris recently donated a $1000 fishing trip to our organization to encourage memberships.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE MAY 29, 1985

GAME BOARD SCHEDULES EMERGENCY MEETING

JUNEAU--The Alaska Board of Game will convene in Juneau for an emergency session beginning June 10, 1985, to adopt emergency regulations providing for subsistence hunting. Without such regulations, Chief Prosecutor Daniel Hickey has concluded that his staff would be unable to prosecute some hunting violations successfully.

In a May 22, 1985, memorandum, the chief prosecutor advised the department that emergency regulations are needed in order to ensure enforceability of all game regulations, some of which cannot be enforced currently. The Department of Law further explained that the board must take these actions because of recent decisions in Madison v. Department of Fish and Game, _____ P.2d ____, Op. No. 2911 (Alaska February 22, 1985) and State v. Eluska, ____ P.2d ____, Op. No. 210 (Alaska App. April 12, 1985). Because the Legislature has not yet enacted corrective legislation, the Department of Law has noted that the board must now provide subsistence hunting regulations for every game population which has been hunted by Alaska residents for food.

-MORE-

The combined effect of both cases will eventually require the board to change current harvest management extensively. Perhaps the most significant problem the board must address at this meeting will be permit and registration hunts. Although the current random drawing and first-come/first-served type distribution methods for harvest opportunity are no longer legally acceptable, the board will have a great deal of difficulty finding an appropriate feasible alternative. Any alternative must be consistent with the three criteria contained in the current statute and discussed by the Supreme Court in Madison: 1) customary and direct dependence upon the resource as the mainstay of one's livelihood; 2) local residency; and 3) availability of alternative resources.

The meeting will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Conference Room at the ADF&G headquarters office at 1255 West 8th Street, Juneau. The meeting is open to the public, but, due to the emergency nature of the meeting, public testimony will not be taken. The emergency regulations will be effective for 120 days, and if they are later considered for submission as permanent regulatory changes, public comment will be solicited.

Alaska Department of Fish & Game NEWS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE MAY 23, 1985

EMERGENCY SUBSISTENCE SALMON REGULATION TO BE ISSUED

JUNEAU--In response to a memorandum from the Department of Law, the Department of Fish and Game has begun issuing emergency regulations to provide subsistence fishing permits for locations not open under current regulations.

Chief Prosecutor Dan Hickey has advised the ADF&G that emergency regulations are necessary because of recent judicial decisions in Madison v. ADF&G and State v. Eluska and because the Legislature has not yet enacted corrective legislation. Without such regulations, the Chief Prosecutor has concluded that his staff would be unable to prosecute successfully some subsistence fishing violations.

The emergency regulations, which will incorporate the requirements specified by the Department of Law, will ensure full enforceability of all fishing regulations in Cook Inlet and throughout the state.

Under these emergency regulations, permits will be issued to Alaska residents for subsistence salmon net fishing in Cook Inlet, if that fishing had previously been authorized by state subsistence regulations and the department's records indicate that such fishing actually occurred. The permits will indicate locations and times when subsistence fishing will be allowed, gear specifications, and bag limits.

Rod and reel fishing is defined in Alaska statutes as sport fishing and thus no subsistence permits will be issued for fishing with rod and reel gear.

No Cook Inlet subsistence salmon permits will be issued for fishing during May, since no state regulations have ever allowed subsistence fishing during that month.

Violators of sport, commercial, personal use, or subsistence regulations will be cited by ADF&G personnel and by officers of the Fish and Wildlife Protection Division, Department of Public Safety.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE MAY 22, 1985

ADF&G Issues Subsistence Regulations

JUNEAU--Since the Legislature has not yet enacted adequate personal use and subsistence fishing and hunting legislation, the Alaska Department of Fish and Game, under instructions from the Board of Fisheries, has issued emergency fishing regulations for the 1985 season. During the March meeting of the Board of Fisheries, the board instructed ADF&G Commissioner Don Collinsworth to use his limited emergency authority to make the necessary changes in the regulations if the Legislature did not enact personal use and subsistence legislation to correct deficiencies with the current law as identified by the Alaska Supreme Court in its Madison v. ADF&G decision.

Under the emergency regulations, the Naknek, Iliamna drainage, Port Graham, English Bay, and Angoon subsistence fisheries will be open to all Alaska residents.

Cook Inlet personal use coho salmon fisheries will be subsistence fisheries in 1985. In Cook Inlet, the Eastside Beach personal use coho fishery, largely composed of fish bound for the Kenai River, will become a subsistence fishery. The 1984 harvest level of 2,500 to 3,500 fish will be increased to 13,000, and the fishery will open on August 17 instead of mid-September. The harvest levels for all other personal use and subsistence fisheries will remain as published in current regulations.

The Copper River dip net and fishwheel fisheries will be subsistence fisheries open to all Alaskans. Alaskans may apply for either a dip net permit or a fishwheel permit, but not both.

As emergency regulatory changes, these regulations are for the 1985 subsistence season only. Subsistence permits are available at regional offices and at field stations in local areas. For additional information contact your local Fish and Game offices.

I. POLICY STATEMENT

GUIDES AND COMMERCIAL OPERATORS PARK USE PERMIT POLICY

Pursuant to 11 AAC 12.300, 11 AAC 18.025 and 11 AAC 18.030, all guides and outfitters operating in the Kenai River Special Management Area (hereinafter referred to as KRSMA) shall hold a park use permit issued by the Alaska Division of Parks and Outdoor Recreation. This permit system is intended to meet park management objectives of protecting and enhancing recreational and natural values, and compensating the State of Alaska for the commercial use of its land and resources.

General categories of guides include, but are not limited to, non-motorized backcountry guiding services, water/float guiding, sportfish guiding, sport-hunting guides, and air/water taxis. All guides and outfitters operating in the KRSMA in 1985 are required to obtain a valid permit. In 1985, a fee will be charged the applicants that is a fair and reasonable return of revenue in light of the impact of the proposed activity on the park. The number of permits issued in the KRSMA will be unlimited at this time.

Guiding and outfitting on state park lands or waters is a commercial activity, as defined in 11 AAC 12.300, and as such is subject to the provisions of state regulations dealing with commercial activities in state park units (11 AAC 18.030) and state purchasing law AS 37.05.220 - .240 and regulations 2 AAC 15.010 - .120. The KRSMA guide and outfitter park use permit has been established in accordance with 11 AAC 12.300 and 11 AAC 18.030.

PURPOSE OF PARK USE PERMIT

1. To provide a management tool to ensure that guides, outfitters, and other commercial activities operate safely, provide a quality service to the public, protect park resources and reimburse the state for a portion of the cost associated with management of such activities.

2. To provide information to park managers and others on guide and commercial activities in the Alaska State Park System.

3. To provide for effective communications between guides and other commercial operators and the Division of Parks and Outdoor Recreation staff on the management of guiding and commercial activities and other park management policies.

4. To comply with state law and regulations.

II. PERMIT ISSUANCE PROCEDURE

PERMIT AVAILABILITY

Application Period

Permit applications will be made available to the public year-round, with applications being accepted, processed and issued annually. Guides, outfitters and other commercial activities operating in the KRSMA during 1985 are required to possess a valid park use permit.

Permit applications will be made available to the public at the Kenai Area Office of the DPOR at Morgan's Landing State Recreation Area in Sterling (phone number 262-5581).

Completed application packets must be submitted to the Kenai Area Office along with originals or certified copies of all required documents. The applicant must appear in person at the Kenai Area Office to pick up the permit, permit stickers, and logbook.

PERMIT PROCESSING

Delegation of Authority to Issue Permits

Permits in the KRSMA shall be authorized by the superintendent of the Kenai Area. The authority to issue permits may be delegated in writing to subordinates.

Fee Structure

For the 1985 season, resident permit fees will be $150, while permit fees for non-resident commercial operators will be $450. The Division anticipates that the permit fee will be changed in 1986 based upon the recommendations of the Alaska Land Use Council and the Kenai River Special Management Area Advisory Board, and with the approval of the Commissioner of the Department of Natural Resources.

Revenue Handling Procedure

The guidelines described in Appendix III, Revenue Accounting (source: Alaska Administrative Manual) and referred to hereafter by specific section numbers, detail the procedure for handling fees collected from guides and outfitters permit applications.

The fee required for processing and issuing the permit application must accompany the application. Applications can be submitted in person or by mail. Section no. 7890 details mail collection of permit application fees.

Fee payment can take the form of cash, check, or money order. Receipts should be issued for cash received, following section no. 7886. Checks and money orders are restrictively endorsed at the time of initial receipt, following section no. 7888. The collection of fees shall be entered in a daily record, following the guidelines in section no. 7892.

Case files containing copies of individual applications, permits and other information shall be maintained at DPOR regional or area offices. This will include a record of numbers and types of permits issued for budgetary and management purposes.

PERMIT REVIEW

Terms and Enforcement

Guides, outfitters, and other commercial activity park use permits are to be issued for a calendar year period. Commercial operators shall have a valid park use permit in their possession prior to operation. Persons operating without a valid park use permit in the KRSMA will be cited under the authority of 11 AAC 12.300. Conviction for violation of 11 AAC 12.300 may be grounds for denial of a park use permit application. Further reasons for the suspension or revocation of a KRSMA guide park use permit are listed below:

A. Grounds for automatic suspension or revocation:
   1) Loss or expiration of U.S. Coast Guard "6 - Pack" license.
   2) Loss of required level of liability insurance coverage.
   3) Loss of Alaska sport fishing license by court conviction.
   4) Failure to pay commercial use permit fees.
   5) Conviction of gross public safety violation relating to boating activity (i.e., DWI boat operation, reckless endangerment).
   6) Failure to accurately maintain and submit required logbook records.
   7) Guiding in a powerboat with a "drift only" permit.

B. Grounds for possible suspenstion or revocation:
   1) Repeated or willful non-compliance with park use permit stipulations.
   2) Conviction of two Alaska State Park violations within a one year period, or three convictions within a five year period.

C. Grounds for immediate temporary suspension of the guide park use permit by the Kenai Area Superintendent for up to five guiding days:
   1) Gross violation within the KRSMA of laws protecting public peace and dignity.
   2) Citation of any fishing regulation violation (i.e., over-limit, failure to log, wanton waste).

3) Allowing clients to take over-limit, or to continue fishing from the guide boat after retaining a king salmon.
4) Fishing or allowing clients to fish from a registered guide vessel in a closed area, or during a closed season, or during non-guide hours, or on non-guide days, or retaining protected species, or using illegal gear or methods.
5) Use of a motor in a "drift only" area except in an emergency.
6) Allowing a non-permitted guide to operate a registered guide vessel for guiding activities without a permitted guide aboard except in an emergency.

Permit Compliance Evaluation

During the term of the permit, the area superintendent or their designee shall review the permitte's operation to verify compliance with the provisions of the permit. Non-compliance with the stipulations of a permit, or violation of appropriate state regulations, may be grounds for revocation of a permit, or non-renewal of a permit in the following year. Appendix II contains a "Permit Compliance Checklist" for use by the officer reviewing the operating history of a guide or outfitter.

Appeal Process

A permit applicant or holder whose application or permit is denied, suspended or revoked by the area superintendent may make an appeal of that decision to the director's office, or to the commissioner of the Department of Natural Resources in a case concerning the director. Members of the public who disagree with an action taken by the division concerning an issued permit may undertaken the same appeals process. Appeals will be considered only if made in writing and postmarked or received by the division within 30 days after the date the decision being appealed was issued.

8. SUSPENSION OR REVOCATION

The permittee has read and agreed to the terms of this permit and understands that the breach of any terms is cause for revocation. Further, it is expressly understood and agreed that this permit may be revoked with cause at the discretion of the authorizing officer without compensation to the permittee or liability to the authorizing agency. The permittee shall indemnify, save harmless, and defend the State, its officers, agents, and employees from liability of any nature or kind, including costs and expenses, for or on account of any and all legal actions or claims of any character whatsoever resulting from injuries or damages sustained by any person or persons or property as a result of any error, omission or negligent act of the permittee relating to its performance of this permit. All legal actions or claims including defense cost resulting from injuries or damages sustained by any person(s) or property arising from the permittee's performance of this permit which will result in joint liability of the State and permittee shall be apportioned on a comparative fault basis. Any such joint liability on the part of the State must be due to the active negligence on the part of the State.

15. QUALITY OF SERVICE

The permittee shall observe such requirements respecting quality and standards of service as dictated by laws or regulations or as is necessary to protect the public health, safety and welfare.

16. RESOURCE PROTECTION

Cash

7882 - ACCOUNTABILITY (7-80)

One of the most important responsibilities of each of us is to safeguard assets of the State. Cash is a particularly difficult asset to safeguard because it is relatively easily concealed and readily negotiable. This asset is safeguarded through the use of whatever records and controls are necessary under the circumstances.

Cash collections may be in the form of checks, money orders, bank drafts, lock box receipts, electronic fund transfers, letter of credit deposits, coin and currency. As most cash collections are for revenues, the minimal statewide procedures to establish accountability and safeguards until they are deposited in the Treasury and applied correctly are spelled-out in this part of the manual.

In its broadest application, accountability for cash collections involves three agencies; the agency that receives the money, the Department of Revenue and the Department of Administration. By law each agency is required to account and pay over all money it collects to the Department of Revenue for deposit in the State Treasury. The Department of Revenue is required to submit an accounting of all cash it receives to the Department of Administration. The Department of Administration is required to maintain accounts showing at all times, by funds and other classifications, actual balances of cash, revenues and collections and to adopt a system that prescribes the use and accounting of current receipt documents.

7884 - CONTROL (7-80

A system of control must be designed around each individual office where cash is collected. In designing this system, the following rules will be observed in order to detect errors and to discourage fraud.

1. Separate the duties of receiving cash, disbursing cash, and reconciling bank statements - Section 7900.

2. Safeguard undeposited collections in a safe, vault, locked filing cabinet or other secure device - Section 7896.

3. Prepare and issue numbered receipts for collections of coin and currency - Section 7886.

4. Endorse checks restrictively on receipt - Section 7888.

5. Maintain a daily record of collections - Section 7892.

6. Deposit collections daily and intact - Section 7904.

7. Remit collections to the Treasury not less often than once a week - Section 7922.

The above minimum requirements will be followed by all State agencies unless written permission to deviate therefrom is obtained from the Department of Administration. However, agencies will not add staff, facilities or services solely to satisfy these requirements without written permission from the Department of Administration. Additional controls will be followed by all State agencies insofar as it is practicable to do so. The question of practicability, considering the materiality of the risk involved, is to be asked and answered by the agency involved.

7886 - ISSUANCE OF RECEIPTS (7-80)

A prenumbered receipt is prepared at least in triplicate and the original is given to a person making a remittance in the form of coin or currency. However, a receipt is not required if the person making a remittance is given a prenumbered document of fixed value such as a license or a permit.

Cash receipts may be prepared and issued for remittances made by checks, money orders and other negotiable instruments if a receipt is requested by the person making the remittance or if a receipt is needed as a posting media in the accounting system or to enhance other controls over the receiving function.

Typically, collections of coin and currency are received over-the-counter. In such cases a receipt is prepared and issued to the remitter on the spot. Whenever coin and currency are received in the mail a receipt is prepared immediately and mailed that day to the person making the remittance.

To enhance the effectiveness of this internal control feature the finance officer of each department will see to it that a record is maintained of the receipts that are available for use in each office of his agency. The finance officer may require that duplicate copies of issued receipts be sent to the central office periodically and he may require the inventory of unused receipts, following somewhat the same guidelines that are currently used for the control of field warrants. In many situations the agency finance officer may find it advantageous to buy all cash receipt forms and to issue them on an as-needed basis to field offices.

Checks, money orders and other negotiable instruments are restrictively endorsed at the time of initial receipt. Restrictive endorsements should be placed on checks as they are received over-the-counter or as soon as mail is opened if they are received in the mail. In no event however, may checks be held without restrictive endorsements later than the end of the working day during which they are received.

The form of the restrictive endorsement depends on the nature of the deposit. The following type of restrictive endorsement is placed on all negotiable instruments deposited in the State Treasury system regardless of whether a deposit is made to a bank or directly with the State Treasurer in Juneau. If an agency has any question with regard to the form of a specific restrictive endorsement it should consult with the Treasury Division of the Department of Revenue. The State Treasurer is the only state officer authorized to prescribe a form of endorsement on negotiable instruments received by state agencies.

Each agency is responsible for ordering necessary rubber stamps to restrictively endorse negotiable instruments on receipt.

7890 - MAIL COLLECTIONS (7-80)

In most agencies cash collections are received in the mail. The person who opens mail is responsible for restrictively endorsing any checks received and preparing receipts for any coin or currency. When this is done appropriate notations are made on letters, applications, tax returns and other correspondence included with the collections; the collections - negotiable instruments as well as any coin and currency - are given to the person who is responsible for preparing the daily record of collections together with copies of cash receipts prepared by the mail opener.

In those operations where a large volume of coin and currency is received in the mail, it is advisable to assign more than one person to the mail opening and receipt preparation process. The people should work together with one acting as an observer of the other.

7892 - DAILY RECORD OF COLLECTIONS (7-80)

Collections received by an agency are entered in a daily record of collections. The daily record of collections is a listing of amounts received with sufficient detail to enable an agency to identify each item. As a general rule the daily record of collections should include the following information:

1. Date of collection.

2. Name of the payer.

3. Amount received.

4. Type of collection - cash, check, money order, etc.

5. Account to which collection is to be credited or purpose of receipt.

6. Receipt number, if any.

In addition there should be room for information on the amount deposited in the bank and possibly both the departmental transmittal and Treasurer's TR numbers.

A suggested format for the daily record of collections is shown in Exhibit 7892. Other formats or information systems may be utilized in lieu of the suggested format, provided that the substitute format or system permits the recording of all necessary data.

Agencies may summarize on the daily record of collections amounts received from remitters for whom receipts are written. Summary information should include the beginning and ending receipt numbers, the amount represented by the receipts and the account to which the collections should be credited or the purpose of the amount received. The total amount shown on the daily record of collections should agree, both in total and in composition, with the amount deposited in the bank as shown on the retained copy of the bank deposit slip. In some situations, departmental finance officers may require that the original or a copy of the daily record of collections be submitted to them for review and for reconciliation with amounts transmitted to the State Treasurer.

7894 - LOCK BOX AND LETTER OF CREDIT (7-80)

Under the lock box system a bank regularly picks up remittances from a designated post office box and immediately deposits them to the credit of the State. The bank then advises Treasury of the amount and the source of the deposit and Treasury prepares a TR. The primary advantage of the lock box system is that it eliminates time in the mail and thus makes cash available from two to five days earlier than it normally would be.

At the present time the State maintains one lock box in Washington. It is used to receive funds disbursed by federal warrants written in the District of Columbia. Perhaps the largest of these sums is PL 874 money for the Department of Education.

Exhibit 7892

A letter of credit is an authorization to draw funds from the federal treasury within a stated amount and time in payment of specified contract or grant costs incurred by the State. Under the letter of credit system the agency requesting a draw prepares a TR in the usual way accompanied by a federal payment voucher on letter of credit. Treasury submits the payment voucher to the federal reserve through a local bank and in this way federal funds are made available within twenty-four hours. Under the letter of credit system whatever additional accounting the federal granting agency may require is provided after the funds have been drawn.

Of the two systems, letter of credit is much faster and should be utilized wherever possible. Even under letter of credit, however, a TR and a payment voucher must be prepared before cash can be received. It does little good to have a rapid collection system unless it is utilized to the maximum extent practicable under the circumstances.

7896 - SAFEKEEPING FACILITIES (7-80)

Undeposited collections are stored in a locked box appropriately secured. Appropriately secured is taken to mean in a locked file cabinet or similar device. In addition to appropriately securing undeposited collections during non-working hours, care must be taken to provide security over coin and currency during working hours. For example, cash boxes or drawers should be locked when the assigned custodian is away from these facilities. Keys to safekeeping facilities are to be secured at all times.

7898 - ACCESS TO SAFEKEEPING FACILITIES (7-80)

Each agency maintains a record of the names of persons having knowledge of the combination of the safe or vault or possession of keys or devices in which cash is stored.

Generally speaking, it is necessary for at least two persons within an agency to be able to access devices in which cash is stored. As the number of persons having knowledge of combinations or access to keys increases, the effectiveness of internal control decreases. Locks and combinations should be changed when an excessive number of employees have knowledge of them or when an employee having such knowledge leaves state service or transfers to another agency.

7900 - SEPARATION OF DUTIES (7-80)

In handling cash no one person may perform more than one of the following types of duties;

1. Receiving and depositing collections.
2. Authorizing disbursements or preparing checks.
3. Reconciling bank accounts.

Generally agencies are not involved in the actual disbursement process in field offices. Also, as a general rule bank accounts need not be reconciled in field offices; they may be sent direct to the agency finance officer for reconciliation by his staff. As a consequence, therefore, it should be possible for most agencies to achieve a stronger measure of control than the minimum requirements set forth above.

Whenever sufficient staff is available to achieve a separation of duties in the processing of cash collections, one of the assignment plans illustrated in Exhibit 7900 should be utilized. Duties assigned to one individual in any one of the plans may be assigned other individuals not otherwise involved in processing cash collections.

Whenever it is an agency's responsibility to reconcile bank statements, regardless of whether the bank statements are reconciled at headquarters or at a field office, the bank statements and paid checks will be delivered unopened to the person charged with this responsibility and will be safeguarded by him until the reconciliation is completed. An adequate record of the bank reconciliation will be prepared and after review and approval by the employee's supervisor will be kept on file or sent to the agency finance officer if this is one of his requirements.

7902 - TRANSFER RECEIPTS (7-80)

Whenever collections are transferred from one employee to another a transfer receipt is prepared. Transfer receipts need not be pre-numbered and they may be in whatever form is considered appropriate under the circumstances. When prepared, however, at least three copies shall be used. Three copies permit the following distribution:

1. File.
2. Transferee.
3. Transferor.

Whenever amounts collected are handled by more than one employee, effective control requires that accountability be established as the custody of money changes. If the monies transferred are secured in a locked facility, such as a locked box, and the person to whom the device is given does not have access thereto (an example of this would be deposits in a locked bank pouch being taken to the bank), it is not necessary to prepare a transfer receipt.

7904 - FREQUENCY OF DEPOSIT (7-80)

Collections are banked daily in a depository account prescribed by the State Treasurer. Moreover, if possible, collections should be banked on the day they are received. Only in unusual cases may collections be held over for deposit on the following day. If practicable, agencies should use night depository facilities provided by most banks. Night depository facilities permit an agency to deposit collections after normal banking hours.

Deposit slips are normally prepared in three copies to permit the following distribution:

1. Bank.

2. Agency office.

3. Agency finance office or State Treasurer.

It should also be noted that collections may be deposited more than once a day if conditions warrant.

7906 - DEPOSITING INTACT (7-80)

All collections are deposited intact.

Depositing intact means that the total amount collected is the amount that is deposited. Moreover, the composition of amounts collected may not be altered. Disbursements from collections prior to deposit are not permitted. Standard operating procedures in an agency are used to determine that collections are deposited intact. For example, persons preparing collection reports or deposit slips are required to determine that receipts are being used sequentially and that all are accounted for.

7922 - FREQUENCY (7-80)

Cash collections are sent to the Treasury when they exceed $1,000. However, an office may never keep collections more than a week even if the amount involved is only a few dollars.

As a consequence, some offices transmit collections daily, some several times a week and others weekly. Moreover, within a department some offices may be required to transmit more often than others. The frequency requirement pertains to each office where cash is collected rather than to a department as a whole.

Both the transmittal of receipts (TR) and transfer of bank deposits (TD) are used to accomplish the actual remittance of cash to the Treasury. Procedures pertaining to the use of TD's are discussed in Section 7928. Procedures to remit cash with TR's are outlined in this section. TR's are used by all agencies in Juneau and by agencies outside Juneau that bank their collections in local bank accounts.

Agencies in the Juneau area prepare a transmittal of receipts form and hand carry receipts in the form of coin, currency, checks and other negotiable instruments with the TR to the Treasury Division. If an agency transmittal includes coin or currency, staff of the Treasury Division count the coin and currency and initial the agency goldenrod copy of the TR as a transfer receipt. Thereafter, the control and routing of the transmittal of receipts follows the procedure outlined in Exhibit 7926.

Agencies outside the Juneau area deposit their collections in a bank account selected by the Treasury Division of the Department of Revenue. It is important to note that only the Treasury Division may authorize the maintainence of a bank account. As collections are received agencies deposit them in the designated account. When $1,000 has been deposited, but not less often than once a week, the agency prepares a TR and sends it to the Treasury. Accompanying each TR is a copy of each deposit slip validated by the bank when each deposit was made or a check prepared by the agency payable to the Department of Revenue for the amount being transmitted. Treasury advises each agency of the specific procedures to be followed. In some uses the signature field on the check may be left blank. When received in Treasury the amount of the TR is compared with the total of attached deposit tags or the check. If the totals agree an officer of the Treasury signs the check, if the check was not signed by agency personnel. The distribution of the TR then follows the procedures outlined in Exhibit 7926.

Exhibit 7926.3 is a properly completed Transmittal of Receipts. If this form had been prepared by an agency in Juneau it would be accompanied by the actual cash making up the remittance. If submitted by an agency outside Juneau it would be accompanied by deposit slips or a check for the total amount shown on the TR.

7928 - DIRECT WIRE TRANSFER (7-80)

Another common method of remitting money to Treasury is by direct wire transfer of bank deposits. Under this system agencies deposit money in bank accounts selected by the Treasury Division of the Department of Revenue. Each day, the bank advises Treasury of the total amount deposited and transfers it to a concentration account within the treasury system. As soon as Treasury is advised of the transfer it prepares a transfer of bank deposits - the equivalent of a TR - for the amount of the transfer and sends the AV portion of the TD to the agency. All such transfers are recorded in department 73. Department 73 posts to a suspense account in the general fund.

As soon as an agency receives its copies of the transfer of bank deposits forms it completes the adjustment voucher portion of the set - yellow and blue copies - and sends the yellow copy to the Division of Finance for recording. This adjustment voucher debits the suspense account and credits designated agency revenue accounts.

A project account is established for each TD number as it enters the system. Exhibit 7928 is a page from the project ledger. If a balance is shown on the inception-to-date total line it means that the amount has not been cleared from the suspense account. If the balance on the inception-to-date total line is zero it means that the TD has been cleared from the suspense ledger. In the example shown there are balances in project codes 001576, 001586 and 001590.

See Section 6186 for additional information on revenue collections transmitted by direct wire transfer.

7930 - CASH IN TRANSIT (7-80)

As of June 30 the Division of Finance asks each agency to submit a report of cash in transit. Cash in transit consists of the following:

1. Cash on hand or in agency bank accounts for which a transmittal of receipts document has not yet been prepared.

2. Cash collections covered by a transmittal of receipts document prepared as of June 30 but not deposited by the State Treasurer until after June 30.

Entry Definitions

The AV (distribution of bank deposits, fields 16-26) is prepared by the agency. Information in fields 1-13 on the TD appears as carbon entries on the AV.

16. Date agency prepares the AV.

17. A 24 character description for each line of coding. This information is keypunched and is part of the transaction as recorded in the journal.

18. If the transaction code is 475, the reference is the AR number. If the transaction code is 405, this field is left blank.

19. The transaction code is typically a 405. If the transaction is in realization of a receivable, the code used is 475. If the transaction is an abatement, the code used is (362).

20. Complete collocation code for each line of coding. Collocation code must be authorized for revenues.

21. A three digit receipt code. Do not use object code -- unless the transaction code is a (362).

22. Project coding if used.

23. An amount for each line of coding. If for prior year put flag in front of money amount to record restricted receipts or abatements.

24. Dates when collections were received.

25. Must be signed by an officer of the agency authorized to sign receipt documents.

26. The document total of plus and minus amounts should be zero.

27. Date processed through general accounting is entered by Finance.

28. AV numbers are assigned and entered by Finance.

Using reports of cash in transit submitted by the agencies, the Division of Finance debits an asset account called "Cash in Transit" and credits designated agency revenue accounts. The Division of Finance records its entry by a worksheet technique as of the end of each fiscal year and reverses the amount recorded for the prior fiscal year.

7932 - DISHONERED CHECKS (7-80)

There are times when checks are returned by the bank because of insufficient funds. If an NSF check is returned to the State Treasury a transaction to record the NSF check is prepared by Treasury.

If an NSF check is returned to an agency, it decreases the amount of the next TR that is prepared to remit cash to the Treasury. If the agency has been instructed to send copies of deposit slips with the TR, it should also send a copy of the bank debit memo to permit Treasury to reconcile amounts collected with amounts shown on the TR.

7934 - FOLLOW-UP RESPONSIBILITY (7-80)

Regardless of whether an NSF check is returned to the Treasury or returned to an agency, it is the responsibility of the agency to establish the amount of the check as a receivable and to take action to collect it from the maker. In addition, it is the responsibility of the agency to trace the NSF check to its original TR in order to determine that a proper adjustment is made. Agencies are responsible for making a concerted effort to collect amounts represented by dishonored checks. Accounts receivable resulting from dishonored checks may not be cancelled without approval of the Department of Administration. An NSF check may not be returned to its maker until it is made good.

Petty Cash and Change Funds

7942 - PETTY CASH FUNDS (7-80)

Except in unusual circumstances each petty cash fund is in the sole custody of a single employee. The number of such funds is kept to a minimum, if possible not more than one fund in each city where an agency has an office. In addition, the size of each fund is kept small, if possible not more than a few dollars to pay postage due and to meet similar modest needs. Typically, obligations other than these can be satisfied by the use of field warrants.

Once established, each petty cash fund is maintained on an imprest basis. See Section 6280. This means that the amount of the fund remains constant and that the custodian is reimbursed by a general warrant for amounts paid out. Reimbursement is obtained by preparing a voucher supported by satisfactory evidence of such disbursements and submitting it through normal channels to the Division of Finance. See Section 6295.

Reimbursement need be made only as frequently as a fund requires replenishing. With the advent of field warrants, many petty cash funds are nothing more than small cash purchase funds of less than $50. For a fund this small, monthly reimbursement may be adequate. For a larger fund it may be necessary to reimburse twice a month or even weekly.

Each petty cash fund is counted and balanced periodically by the custodian. This should be done whenever the fund is reimbursed but it must be done not less often than once a month. Also at irregular intervals someone other than the custodian makes a surprise count of the fund to determine that it is intact and that evidences of disbursement made but not yet reimbursed are proper. In addition, a scheduled count and reconciliation of resources is required as of the end of each fiscal year and whenever there is a change in custodians.

A petty cash fund may not be used to cash checks for the convenience of employees or other persons.

7944 - CHANGE FUNDS (7-80)

Change funds are established and controlled in the same manner as are petty cash funds, but are strictly revolving funds and require no replenishment.

The number of change funds needed by an agency depends on the number of locations where collections in the form of coin and currency are regularly received over-the-counter. If an agency collects coin and currency over-the-counter on an infrequent basis - once or twice a day - a change fund should not be needed.

Hunting Regulations Delay Announced

JUNEAU--The Alaska Department of Fish and Game has announced that the hunting and trapping regulations books normally issued by July 1 each year will not be available until late in the summer.

The recent Madison and Eluska court decisions have forced an unanticipated session of the Alaska Board of Game to consider emergency regulations designed to bring the state into compliance. The board will begin its emergency session on June 10 in the Conference Room of the Fish and Game Building, 1255 W. 8th St., in Juneau.

Although the meeting is open to the public, no public testimony or comments will be taken. Once the board has drafted emergency regulations, they will be circulated for public review and written comment.

Senator Mitch Abood

Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Abood.

On March 20, 1985 at our regular Board meeting the Rural Alaska Community Action Program (RurAL CAP) passed Resolution 85-06, "In Support of Legislation to Maintain Orderly Harvest of Fish and Game Resources" (copy attached). RurAL CAP urges immediate action to respond to the Madison Supreme Court decision.

HB 288 has been carefully considered in the House: the teleconference hearings, the floor debates, the intensive media coverage, and the bill's ultimate approval May 4 have provided extensive opportunity for public involvement. The time has come for action on HB 288 in the Senate, before adjournment of this session.

The Madison Supreme Court ruling struck down the Board of Fisheries' definition of subsistence, specifically the part that said in order for a person to qualify as a subsistence user, he/she would have to live in a rural area. The court said that this definition did not give the kind of protection to subsistence users that was meant to be given by the State of Alaska's 1978 subsistence priority law.

The Eluska decision basically says that, since no regulations currently exist for subsistence use of game, a subsistence hunter cannot be prosecuted for taking moose or caribou, etc., if the meat is used for subsistence.

The combination of these two decisions makes it impossible for the Department of Fish and Game, and the Boards of Fish and Game to manage the allocation of fish and game resources. The Madison ruling has taken away their authority to regulate the taking of fish and game. Presently, the only thing they can do is to apply emergency regulations, but ONLY if the "sustained yield" of any resource is threatened. The likelihood of the "sustained yield" of, for example, salmon fisheries that used to be taken mostly by commercial fishermen being threatened is very remote. Therefore, the Madison ruling that says the Board of Fish cannot differentiate between rural and urban to decide who is a subsistence user and who is not, means that just about anyone in Alaska qualifies for subsistence uses of fish and game. This creates a critical situation: the commercial fishermen who rely on fishing for their livelihood will have to wait until the Department of Fish and Game or the Board of Fish says all subsistence users have been satisfied before they will be allowed to take commercial fish. The sports fishermen will have to wait, too. Meanwhile, who is to say WHEN the Board or Department can say, truthfully and with documentation to back themselves up, that ALL subsistence uses have been satisfied?

The Eluska decision further muddies the water: it says, since the Madison ruling makes almost everybody subsistence users, and since there are no regulations for subsistence hunting (because of Madison there cannot be any) then almost anyone can take almost anything in the name of subsistence.

We believe that individual senators are, in fact, concerned about acting on the subsistence issue this session, and for good reason: lack of action this session aimed at correcting the imbalance created by the Madison court decision will result in serious harm to commercial and sports users of especially fisheries resources this spring and summer. Those who have subsisted in rural Alaska will continue to do so and suffer little or no impact as a result of inaction or delay by the Senate in 1985. This inequity is not in the interest of the people of Alaska. No public official could countenance a return to the divisiveness of 1982 when the subsistence repeal effort split the people of this State. By timely, responsible action this session you have the opportunity to defuse a potentially explosive situation.

Our constituency consists of both rural and urban residents; subsistence, commercial and sports users of fish resources; Democrats and Republicans. Their concern over this latest evidence of conflict over resource uses has been expressed to the Directors, and the result was unanimous adoption by the Board of Resolution 85-06. We recognize that the Senate's constituency is likewise diverse, and hope that you as a concerned Senator will respond to the statewide expression we heard during the House teleconferences of the desire on the part of Alaskan residents that something be done about this issue this year.

Thank you for your attention and consideration.

Sincerely,

Robert A. Lohr

Resolution #85 - 06

ENTITLED: In Support of Legislation to Maintain Orderly Harvest of Fish and Game Resources.

WHEREAS, the orderly harvest of fish and game resources is essential to the general welfare of rural Alaskans who depend on these resources for a large part of their livelihood; and

WHEREAS, the Alaska Supreme Court, in Madison, et al. vs. the Alaska Department of Fish and Game, struck down state regulations designed to determine eligibility for subsistence as being inconsistent with state law and legislative intent; and

WHEREAS, the decision would have the effect of allowing massive increases in the number of subsistence permits which may be issued; and

WHEREAS, this ruling also has the effect of preventing orderly harvest of subsistence fish and game resources because it diminishes the authority delegated to the Alaska State Board of Fisheries to establish criteria for the eligibility of users; and

WHEREAS, the ruling broadens the eligibility for subsistence permits to include all residents of the state, because it focuses on the place where customary and traditional uses have occurred, rather than the people who conduct them; and

WHEREAS, relaxing the eligibility requirements may necessitate emergency closure of commercial and sport harvests due to the influx of "court-created" subsistence users; and

WHEREAS, the court recognized that the legislature intended to protect subsistence rights in the 1978 statute; and

WHEREAS, the court, by broadening subsistence access so dramatically, jeopardizes the preference for those who depend most directly on the resource: rural residents of Alaska; and

WHEREAS, Governor Sheffield has introduced legislation that would restore order to the harvest of fish and game by more strictly defining the personal use and subsistence use of fish and game; and

WHEREAS, the subsistence use definitions must include the use of the words "rural" and "residents" in order to protect limited resources from virtually unlimited access by urban residents who have never depended upon fish and game resources for maintaining their way of life;

now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED: that the Board of Directors of the Rural Alaska Community Action Program, Inc., endorses Senate Bill No. 231, "An Act Relating to the Taking of Fish and Game for Subsistence and Personal Use," and be it further

RESOLVED: that the Alaska State Legislature is urged to act immediately on this legislation, in order to maintain harmonious relations among Alaska fish and game user groups.

Sec. — 16.05.255(b) is amended to read:

Subsistence

(b) The Board of Game shall adopt regulations in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) permitting a reasonable opportunity for the taking of game for subsistence uses unless the board determines, in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act that adoption of the regulations will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of game resources on a sustained-yield basis. Whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of game to assure the maintenance of game resources on a sustained-yield basis, or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of such resources, subsistence use shall be the priority use. If further restriction is necessary, the board shall establish restrictions and limitations on and priorities for these consumptive uses on the basis of the following criteria:

(1) customary and direct dependence upon the resource as the mainstay of one's livelihood;
(2) local residency; and
(3) availability of alternative resources.

^Pressure Builds On Subsistence as Sturgulewski Breaks With Leadership
^By DEAN FOSDICK=
^Associated Press Writer=
JUNEAU (AP) _ Sen. Arliss Sturgulewski has broken with the GOP-dominated Senate leadership by pushing for passage this session of legislation giving all Alaskans subsistence rights to fish and wildlife if they limit their actions to rural areas.

The Anchorage Republican, who announced for governor April 25, wants the subsistence issue taken from the Senate State Affairs Committee, where it has been bottled up for the past two months, and given to Resources, which she chairs.

Sturgulewski has written a draft bill which she said Monday ''has the best shot'' at resolving problems stemming from conflicting user groups.

She outlined her concerns and her proposed legislation in a letter Sunday to Senate President Don Bennett, R-Fairbanks. That, however, stirred up a tempest among some caucus members _ particularly Mitch Abood, who chairs the Senate State Affairs Committee.

''If everyone conducted themselves in a fashion which would break bills out of committee, then we'd have chaos,'' said Abood, R-Anchorage. ''I don't mess with other people's bills and I don't want them messing with mine.''

Abood told a reporter he will give the subsistence issue its first Senate hearing Thursday and he may move a bill out of his committee sometime this weekend.

That, however, still would require action by at least two other Senate committees, floor debate and compromise with the House before shipping the issue to the governor.

With lawmakers required to adjourn by midnight Monday, that scenario appears doubtful. Adding some political weight to that conclusion is Bennett's unwavering resolve to delay action on subsistence until next year.

''The pressure is building, but I still don't think it will move,'' Bennett said Monday afternoon.

The issue wound up with the legislature after the Alaska Supreme Court on Feb. 22 struck down earlier regulations crafted by the state Board of Fisheries. That decision means virtually all Alaskans can qualify for subsistence rights.

Gov. Bill Sheffield introduced a bill about mid-session that would allocate the same subsistence rules by statute that had been mandated by the fish and game boards.

But Bennett has argued that lawmakers don't have enough time to deal with the controversial and complicated issue in just two months, and that it needs extensive public hearings before becoming law.

He wants the issue studied over the interim, with action taken next session.

The House, meanwhile, shipped a bill to the Senate on Saturday slightly changed from Sheffield's original measure.

A House amendment would require the Department of Fish and Game by Jan. 1, 1986, to identify trouble spots in personal use, sport or commercial fisheries around the state that may have been caused by the bill's passage. It also would commit lawmakers to deal with those problems next session.

But Sturgulewski indicated she's looking for a permanent solution — not a measure requiring a legislative band-aid in 1986.

In a letter Sunday to Bennett, Sturgulewski expressed ''grave concerns about the consequences of inaction.''

''We are all aware of the ramifications of no legislation,'' she wrote. ''Among these may be: the closing of some of our major sport and commercial fisheries, federal intrusion into the management of our fish and wildlife resources, unprosecuted violations of fish and game laws and potential damage to our resources,'' Sturgulewski said.

''I realize there are many in our state who discount these dangers, but the combined risks are grave enough to be of serious concern,'' she said.

Unlike Sheffield's bill, which would return to rural Alaskans the first right to use fish and wildlife for subsistence, Sturgulewski would open subsistence to all Alaska residents.

But there would be some major strings attached. Subsistence hunting or fishing would be confined to rural areas, the game or fish would have to be consumed in the same rural area where it was taken and it would have to be harvested in traditional ways.

That, Sturgulewski said, would avoid problems with the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution.

But Bennett accused Sturgulewski is using the issue for political gain.

''She's obviously a gubernatorial candidate and has statewide interests,'' he said. ''She doesn't want to lose any votes about anything. The bill will get just consideration in his (Abood's) committee.''

Bennett said he was expecting Sturgulewski to go it alone on still more issues before the session is wrapped up, and he hinted she may face sanctions from her peers in the 16-member Senate majority caucus.

''This is just the first,'' he said. ''Eventually, my colleagues will have to make a decision.''

Honorable Senator Abood,

The madison decision could be a diaster for Commercial fishing in the State of Alaska, especially Cordova. Please support SB #231 OR any other legislation that would allow the Fish and Game Board to do their job.

I am a young family man who makes a living as a fisherman, on the Copper River Delta. The Copper River management plan was put in effect after massive public testimony and years of work. Please allow it to resolve our local issue as intended.

Thank you.

Dear Senator Abood:

Scott is eight years old and dearly loves to fish. The picture below is at the end of a day in which Scott caught and released twenty salmon.

Please let him fish this summer. He does not know of court decisions or politics, he just knows that he loves to fish and that he loves Alaska. I fear that I could not find the words to explain the reasons if he is not allowed to fish his favorite waterways this year.

On Scott's behalf I urge you to at least pass an interim measure to get us all through this year and allow time for fair and comprehensive legislation to be developed for 1986.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Senate Committee on Resources

M E M O R A N D U M

May 5, 1985

TO: Senator Don Bennett,
President of the Senate

FROM: Senator Arliss Sturgulewski,
Chairman, Resources Committee

As you are aware, on Saturday the House, by a one vote margin, passed an amended version of CS for HB 288 (Judiciary), the governor's subsistence bill. Unfortunately, the governor has chosen to present a bill that he must realize has no chance of passage by the full legislature. While warning of the dire consequences if a subsistence bill is not passed, he has steadfastly opposed any amendments which might increase the possibility of developing an acceptable bill.

We are all aware of the possible ramifications of no legislation. Among these may be: the closing of some our major sport and commercial fisheries, federal intrusion into the management of our fish and wildlife resources, unprosecuted violations of fish and game laws, and potential damage to our resources. I realize that there are many in our state who discount these dangers, but the combined risks are grave enough to be of serious concern.

SB 231, the Senate version of the governor's subsistence bill, is still in State Affairs, its committee of first referral. Because of this, the Resources Committee has not held any public hearings on this issue. However, as chairman of the Senate Resources Committee, I have been actively working on the subsistence problem since the Supreme Court decided the Madison case.

I realize the available time for public hearings will be limited if a bill reaches my committee, and that it is vital the interests of groups on all sides of this issue be considered in trying to find a solution. Because of this, I have attempted to include representatives of as many of those interests as possible in discussions of this problem.

This office has worked with other Senators and Representatives; with officials from the departments of Fish and Game and Law; with representatives of the Outdoor Council and other outdoor groups; with representatives of the Alaska Federation of Natives and other Native organizations; with the United Fishermen of Alaska and other commercial fishing interests with professional big game guides; and with any one else who has called or come into my office with concern about this issue.

The result of this work has been an evolutionary series of draft bills and letters of intent. The latest of these drafts and its letter of intent are attached to this memo. By no means do I intend to imply that everyone with whom we have worked is in agreement with this draft or that this effort is a perfect solution. If that were so, we would not be faced with a problem. The draft, however, is an honest attempt to craft a subsistence bill that will pass the legislature, will comply with ANILCA, and will balance the competing interests for our resources.

I wanted to be sure that you had this information before making referrals on HB 288. If the house subsistence bill comes to the Resources committee this session, I anticipate acting swiftly to pass out a committee substitute similar to the attached draft. I stand ready to meet with you and explain the draft bill and my grave concerns about the consequences of inaction.

cc: members,
Senate Resources Committee
Senator Mitch Abood,
Chairman State Affairs Committee

DRAFT LETTER OF INTENT 5/4/85

SENATE CS for HB 288

It is the intent of the legislature in enacting this legislation, to comply with the spirit and intent of The Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, P.L. 96-487 while avoiding possible violations of the equal protection guarantees of Article 1, Section 1 and Article VIII, Section 15 of the Alaska Constitution.

This legislation maintains subsistence use as a priority use of Alaska's wild, renewable resources in accordance with ANILCA, and establishes a system of preferences of beneficial uses of these resources. All uses are subject at all times to limitations based on the sustained yield principle and to reasonable regulations as to seasons, catch or bag limits, and methods and means without requiring that uses of lower priority be eliminated first.

If the harvestable surplus of a fish stock or game population is not large enough to provide a reasonable opportunity for all subsistence uses, individual local residents who have a direct and customary dependence upon fish or game populations as a mainstay of their livelihood and who lack available alternative resources have the highest priority of use.

Subsistence uses in rural Alaska by Alaska residents who, in a cost effective manner, use, including consume, their take in the same rural area it was taken, have the next highest priority of use. It is intended that the boards shall have the authority to determine cost effectiveness, considering methods and means of harvest characterized by efficiency and economy of effort and cost, and conditioned by local circumstances.

The boards must establish a mandatory allocation that ensures all Alaskans a reasonable opportunity for sport or personal use fishing or hunting, unless such regulations would jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of a fish stock or game population or with the continuance of subsistence. In making allocation decisions, the Boards of Fish and Game shall continue to strive to ensure the health and prosperity of commercial, sport, personal use and subsistence uses, while guaranteeing Alaskans a reasonable opportunity to take and use fish stocks and game populations for the full range of beneficial uses.

SENATE CS FOR CS FOR HOUSE BILL NO. 288

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to the taking of fish and game for subsistence and personal use; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. FINDINGS. The legislature finds that

(1) nonresidents visiting Alaska take fish stocks and game populations primarily for commercial, trophy, and recreational purposes; Alaska residents, who take fish stocks and game populations for noncommercial purposes, use the stocks and populations primarily for food for personal or family consumption;

(2) the taking of fish stocks and game populations by residents for personal or family consumption is important to the health, safety, and general well-being of all Alaska residents;

(3) the customary and traditional use of local fish stocks and game populations in rural areas of the state is a significant characteristic of the economy of many Alaskan communities and areas because it is cost effective and important to the health, safety, and general well-being of Alaskans;

(4) the taking of fish stocks and game populations for commercial, recreational, and other uses by both residents and nonresidents is important to the economy of the state and particularly to the economies of communities dependent upon commercial fishing; and

(5) commercial fishermen often use a portion of their catch for personal use.

* Sec. 2. AS 16.05.251(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Board of Fisheries may adopt regulations it considers advisable in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.-62) for

(1) setting apart fish reserve areas, refuges and sanctuaries in the waters of the state over which it has jurisdiction, subject to the approval of the legislature;

(2) establishing open and closed seasons and areas for the taking of fish;

(3) setting quotas, bag limits, harvest levels, and sex and size limitations on the taking of fish;

(4) establishing the means and methods employed in the pursuit, capture and transport of fish;

(5) establishing marking and identification requirements for means used in pursuit, capture and transport of fish;

(6) classifying as commercial fish, sport fish, personal use fish, subsistence fish, or predators or other categories essential for regulatory purposes;

(7) watershed and habitat improvement, and management, conservation, protection, use, disposal, propagation and stocking of fish;

(8) investigating and determining the extent and effect of disease, predation, and competition among fish in the state, exercising control measures considered necessary to the resources of the state;

(9) prohibiting and regulating the live capture, possession, transport, or release of native or exotic fish or their eggs;

(10) establishing seasons, areas, quotas and methods of harvest for aquatic plants;

(11) establishing the times and dates during which the issuance of fishing licenses, permits and registrations and the transfer of permits and registrations between registration areas is allowed; however, this paragraph does not apply to permits issued or transferred under AS 16.43;

(12) regulating selected stocks in nonrural areas for catch-and-release sport fishing and regulating selected stocks in rural areas for catch-and-release sport fishing and subsistence;

(13) regulating commercial, sport, personal use, and subsistence fishing.

* Sec. 3. AS 16.05.251(b) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(b) The Board of Fisheries shall establish a mandatory allocation that ensures all residents a reasonable opportunity for sport or personal use fishing, and shall adopt regulations authorizing these types of takings in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62), unless the regulations will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of a fish stock on a sustained-yield basis or with the continuance of subsistence. Takings authorized under this subsection are subject to reasonable regulation of seasons, catch limits, and methods and means.

* Sec. 4. AS 16.05.251 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(d) The Board of Fisheries shall adopt regulations in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) permitting the taking of fish stocks for subsistence uses unless the board determines that adoption of the regulations will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of a fish stock on a sustained-yield basis. Whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of a fish stock to assure the maintenance of the stock on a sustained-yield basis, or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of the stock, subsistence shall be the priority use. Takings authorized under this subsection are subject to reasonable regulation of seasons, bag limits, and methods and means.

(e) If the harvestable surplus of a fish stock is not large enough to provide a reasonable opportunity for the taking of fish from the stock for subsistence uses, the board shall adopt regulations that establish restrictions and limitations on the taking of fish from the stock for subsistence uses on the basis of the following criteria: (1) customary and direct dependence upon the fish stock as the mainstay of one's livelihood; (2) local residency; and (3) availability of alternative resources. Subsistence fishing authorized under this subsection is subject to reasonable regulation of seasons, bag limits, and methods and means.

* Sec. 5. AS 16.05.255(a) is amended to read:

(a) The Board of Game may adopt regulations it considers advisable in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) for

(1) setting apart game reserve areas, refuges and sanctuaries in the water or on the land of the state over which it has jurisdiction, subject to the approval of the legislature;

(2) establishing open and closed seasons and areas for the taking of game;

(3) establishing the means and methods employed in the pursuit, capture and transport of game;

(4) setting quotas, bag limits, harvest levels, and sex, age, and size limitations on the taking of game;

(5) classifying game as game birds, song birds, big game animals, fur bearing animals, predators or other categories;

(6) methods, means, and harvest levels necessary to control

predation and competition among game in the state;

(7) watershed and habitat improvement, and management, conservation, protection, use, disposal, propagation and stocking of game;

(8) prohibiting the live capture, possession, transport, or release of native or exotic game or their eggs;

(9) establishing the times and dates during which the issuance of game licenses, permits and registrations and the transfer of permits and registrations between registration areas and game management units or subunits is allowed;

(10) regulating sport and subsistence hunts.

* Sec. 6. AS 16.05.255(b) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(b) The Board of Game shall establish a mandatory allocation that ensures all residents a reasonable opportunity for the taking of game for personal or family consumption, and shall adopt regulations authorizing the taking in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62), unless the regulations will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of a game population on a sustained-yield basis or with the continuance of subsistence. Takings authorized under this subsection are subject to reasonable regulation of seasons, bag limits, and methods and means.

* Sec. 7. AS 16.05.255 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(d) The Board of Game shall adopt regulations in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) permitting the taking of game populations for subsistence uses unless the board determines that adoption of the regulations will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of a game population on a sustained-yield basis. Whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of a game population to assure the maintenance of the population on a sustained-yield basis, or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of the population, subsistence shall be the priority use. Takings authorized under this subsection are subject to reasonable regulation of seasons, bag limits, and methods and means.

(e) If the harvestable surplus of a game population is not large enough to provide a reasonable opportunity for the taking of game from the population for subsistence uses, the board shall adopt regulations that establish restrictions and limitations on the taking of game from the population for subsistence uses on the basis of the following criteria: (1) customary and direct dependence upon the population as the mainstay of one's livelihood; (2) local residency; and (3) availability of alternative resources. Subsistence hunting authorized under this subsection is subject to reasonable regulation of seasons, bag limits, and methods and means.

* Sec. 8. AS 16.05.940(21) is amended to read:

(21) "sport fishing" means the taking of or attempting to take for personal use or for personal or family consumption, and not for sale or barter, any fresh water, marine, or anadromous fish by hook and line held in the hand, or by hook and line with the line attached to a pole or rod that [WHICH] is held in the hand or closely attended, or by other means defined by the Board of Fisheries;

* Sec. 9. AS 16.05.940(23) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(23) "subsistence uses" means the customary, traditional and cost-effective taking and use by Alaska residents in rural areas of wild, renewable resources for direct personal or family consumption as food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, or transportation, for the making and selling of handicraft articles out of nonedible by-products of fish and wildlife resources taken for personal or family consumption, and for the noncommercial customary trade, barter, or sharing for personal or family consumption. Wild and renewable resources taken for subsistence uses must be used in the same area in which they are taken. In this paragraph,

(A) "family" means persons related by blood, marriage, or adoption, and persons living in the household on a permanent basis;

(B) "rural area" means a historic hunting or fishing area associated with a community or area in which the taking of fish stocks and game populations for personal and family consumption is a significant characteristic of the economy of the community or area;

* Sec. 10. AS 16.05.940 is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(28) "personal use fishing" means the taking, or attempting to take by Alaska residents for personal or family consumption and not for sale or barter, finfish, shellfish, or other fishery resources with gill net, dip net, seine, pot, fish wheel, long line, or other similar means defined by the Board of Fisheries.

* Sec. 11. This Act takes effect immediately in accordance with AS 01.-10.070(c).

EMMONAK CORPORATION AND CITY OF EMMONAK
JOINT RESOLUTION IN SUPPORT OF HOUSE BILL 288

TO ALL MEMBERS OF THE ALASKA LEGISLATURE:

THIS RESOLUTION expresses the most urgent request by the people of Emmonak that House Bill 288 be passed immediately.

Six hundred forty-one people live in Emmonak. Many, but not all, are shareholders of Emmonak Corporation. The primary resource from which our people derive income and subsistence is the lower Yukon fishery. This fishery provides ninety percent (90%) of the cash income for the people of Emmonak. Nearly all other non-governmental enterprises are also dependent upon cash income from this fishery.

The lower Yukon fishery has historically been managed so as to provide adequate fish for subsistence users without conflict with commercial fishermen. This sustained yield management can continue to provide for this balance and for a viable community economy in Emmonak.

Recent developments in the law, particularly as expressed in Madison v. Alaska Department of Fish and Game, Opinion No. 2911 of the Alaska Supreme Court, threaten the destruction of the only viable cash economy in the lower Yukon area. At the present time these developments, unless altered by passage of House Bill 288, may end commercial fishing on the lower Yukon for the 1985 season and possibly thereafter. The impact of this development on our people, both commercial fishermen, subsistence users, and other non-governmental enterprises, will be catastrophic. A substantial portion, if not all of our population, will find it necessary to seek governmental assistance for the barest of essentials absent the cash incomes derived by the community from commercial fishing operations.

Even those of us who depend on subsistence fishing will be injured due to the destruction of the cash economy of the lower Yukon.

We unanimously have resolved to urge you to pass House Bill 288 as soon as possible. Preparations for the 1985 season have already begun. These preparations require start-up financing which may become unavailable if the current uncertainties following Madison are not resolved immediately.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED to the Legislature of the State of Alaska this ____ day of May, 1985.

"I do not want the identity of the Eskimo, Indians, and Aleuts to be lost, and I feel this will happen if we do not pass the subsistence legislation.

As a former older legislator I beg the Senate to pass the bill.

I am dying (cancer) but I want this for my children and my grandchildren. Our life is subsistence and today there is no other alternative to being able to hunt & fish in order to eat. In 10 - 40 years maybe we will be modernized but right now there is no economy, few jobs, its tough to make ends meet, so we need to hunt & fish.

When we met together in Juneau in 1959 to organize the State we were not Republicans or Democrats - we were just a group of people who were there to set up rules. Things were tough then, but we tried for the whole state.

Again, I plead and pray that the Senate will pass the bill on subsistence.

I thank each one of you very much."

TO: All Alaska State Senators

The original people of Alaska suffer the most devious and treacherous of warfare and are not a violent people, we are alert for attacks of violence because we are sovereign; we have hunting and fishing rights; as duly documented into our language and history; and as mandated in United States laws. We are telling you through deed and word we are not selfish people; we share; we can live here together; we must keep the land of Alaska pure to keep our common spirituality; to honor our laws which govern this land intact; it has kept it so for more years than you care to hear; you have ignored our testimony everywhere; we are telling the truth.

You have no jurisdiction here because in 1867, the United States assumed suzrin and fiduciary responsibility over us when it bought the right to trade with us in the treaty of cession. In scrupulous good faith and candor, the United States by their undertaking has the duty to act primarily for another's benefit; our benefit; the original inhabitants of Alaska.

We don't want the repercussions that violence, alcohol, stealing, lying, and killing bring. We are here because we are in practice of the only way to live in Alaska. Our culture is to eat the animals we catch; the fish; to have the most efficient use of our resources; to have the right of quiet enjoyment of our beautiful, peaceful Alaska. Not fearing that any day another one of us is dead, another child is lost, another one of us hasn't the facility to think because of real fear, or loss of capacity to think. We too, have all the rights outlined in the U.S. Bill of Rights. We urge the "State of Alaska" to change its direction to promote the well being of the world.

Alaska is the "old frontier", and the law of the land shall prevail. Blatent, violent, abusive acts are not condoned by Alaska Real people. We urge that House Bill 288 pass by a much higher margin in the Senate; thus showing your adherance to U.S. Laws and to the Law of the Land in Alaska Villages.

Sincerely,

Dear Legislator:

As professional fisheries and wildlife biologists, we are deeply concerned about the wise management and conservation of Alaska's fish and wildlife resources. Sections of the current Alaska statutes governing those resources seem to deny the use of a management approach that we believe is essential in order to manage those resources safely. In this letter, we identify the statutory sections in question and request legislative action to correct them.

The sections of the statutes of primary concern are those (Sec. 16.05.251 and 16.05.255) which require that a particular consumptive use, subsistence, must remain unrestricted unless the Board of Fisheries or the Board of Game determines that such use, continued without restriction, would jeopardize the sustaining of such use (i.e. would not allow sustained yield). That approach -- unrestricted use unless damage is proven -- is opposite to the accepted and established resource management strategy of the fisheries and wildlife professions.

The consistently reliable approach in connection with consumptive uses of fish and wildlife is a conservative one. In effect, one should manage from an initial position of complete closure, removing restrictions in a safe manner as understanding of the resources increases so that we can be assured that the desired consumptive uses can be accommodated. Current understanding of most wild populations, and of their consumptive harvests, allows us safely to set limited seasons and bag limits. However, even though Alaska has one of the best fisheries and wildlife staffs in the country, the existing specific population data usually are not sufficient to prove, before we can impose restrictions, that unrestricted use is jeopardizing sustained yield. Given the budget constraints presently inhibiting gathering additional information, that situation likely will persist. Hence we should take a conservative approach to managing consumptive uses if we are to guarantee that users, subsistence and others, will have long-term access to fish and wildlife resources.

Another undesirable consequence of the unrestricted approach is that harvests often will occur at times of the year when they have greater detrimental impacts on the fish and wildlife populations than do controlled harvests occurring at specific times. Obvious examples of the need for control over timing of harvests in order to protect resource productive potential exist in the instances of king salmon smolt leaving fresh water, of ptarmigan on the nesting grounds, of cow moose when they have calves, and of sow bears when they have cubs. Many other examples also could be cited. The point is, greater total yields often could be provided if restrictions on seasons, methods and means, etc., could be put in place based on our understanding of population dynamics. The current statutory language regarding controls on subsistence use does not permit such restrictions, even those that conceivably could increase total allowable harvest. We believe such management latitude is necessary, particularly in this day and age when subsistence use does not have the same dire dependence associated with it that was true several decades ago. In addition, subsistence harvesting with steadily increasing use of modern equipment often places the resource in essentially the same risk situation that non-subsistence uses do.

We hope that you will see the need for regaining a conservative, flexible management approach in order to provide long-term protection to resources whose continuation is critical to subsistence lifestyles as well as to all other uses. Wise and responsible management of our fish and wildlife populations requires that we change the current statutory language regarding management of subsistence uses. We request your help in that regard.

Thank you for your concern for Alaska's fish and wildlife.

Court Strikes Down Fisheries Regulation

Madison v. Alaska Department of Fish and Game

Supreme Court Opinion No. 2911, File Nos. 6824/7181/7410

Contact: David A. Lampen
Clerk of the Appellate Courts
Anchorage (907) 264-0607

[The following was prepared by the office of the Clerk of the Appellate Courts and is not an official statement of the Alaska Supreme Court.]

The Alaska Supreme Court Friday struck down a Board of Fisheries regulation designed to identify eligibility for subsistence fishing in the Cook Inlet region.

Under the regulation, certain residents of the Kenai coastline and an area near Homer were forbidden to fish for subsistence purposes. The regulation had been declared valid by Superior Court Judges Victor D. Carlson and Paul B. Jones.

The supreme court, in an opinion by Justice Daniel A. Moore, Jr., held that the board erred in denying subsistence permits to certain residents who had fished with set nets for personal and family use for many years.

The supreme court found that the board's regulation on subsistence uses was inconsistent with Alaska law because the regulation was too restrictive.

The opinion stated: "Under a statute designed to protect subsistence uses, the board has devised a regulation to disenfranchise many subsistence users whose interests the statute was designed to protect."

This case arises as a consolidated appeal of two cases. It concerns the validity of a Board of Fisheries' (hereafter board) regulation designed to identify eligibility for subsistence fishing in the Cook Inlet region.

Appellants (hereafter Madison and Gjosund) are two groups of Alaskan residents who live along the Kenai coastline and near Homer. statutory grant of authority. We hold the regulation invalid since it is inconsistent with AS 16.05.251(b), AS 16.05.940(22) and AS 16.05.940(23) and contrary to the legislature's intent in enacting the 1978 subsistence law.

I. SUMMARY OF FACTS

Records indicate that subsistence fishing in Cook Inlet was minimal through the mid-1970s.[1] However, a core group of residents of each Cook Inlet community has traditionally fished for Cook Inlet salmon for subsistence. Participation in the subsistence salmon fishery is most visible in the smaller, more isolated villages, where the subsistence group represents a larger percentage of the population.

In 1977 the board established a comprehensive management policy for Cook Inlet, 5 AAC 21.363, which essentially allocated specific salmon stocks to sports fishermen and commercial fishermen on the basis of seasonal fish movements. See Kenai Peninsula Fisherman's Cooperative

1. From 1971 to 1977, the average number of subsistence permits issued annually for the Upper Cook Inlet was 87 and the average catch was 405 salmon. Commercial harvest averaged about two million fish per year. However, this statistical data does not necessarily reveal the total subsistence use since many people did not obtain permits and some commercially caught salmon were used for subsistence.

Ass'n v. State, 628 P.2d 897 (Alaska 1981). Although the policy did not specifically refer to subsistence uses of salmon in Cook Inlet, it had a substantial impact on subsistence fishing. Commercial fishermen, accustomed to taking subsistence salmon from their commercial catch, instead obtained subsistence salmon fishing permits in order to fish for their personal and family use after the commercial season was over.

Before 1978, subsistence fishing was defined in AS 16.05.940(17) as fishing for "personal use and not for sale or barter."[2] In 1978, the Alaska State Legislature enacted ch. 151 SLA 1978 (hereafter the 1978 subsistence law). Subsistence fishing was redefined as fishing for "subsistence uses."[3] Subsistence uses were defined as "customary and substantial increase in the demand for subsistence permits and a corresponding increase in total catch.[7] The board responded to the permit increase by restricting subsistence fishing; it limited areas open to subsistence fishing, length of fishing periods and maximum length of gill nets. Several lawsuits were filed, all of which resulted in decisions unfavorable to the board.

In December 1980, the board held hearings to respond to the 1978 subsistence law and received a considerable amount of testimony on subsistence uses in Cook Inlet. The meeting resulted in the establishment of characteristics for identification of "customary and traditional uses" of Cook Inlet salmon.[8] In addition, the characteristics . . . and apply [them] to communities, subcommunities, groups and individuals who wish to continue to participate in an established customary and traditional fishing effort in Cook Inlet."

At its March 1981 meeting, the board received written testimony from the public about subsistence uses of Cook Inlet salmon stock. Subsequently, it decided to apply all of the ten criteria to determine "customary and traditional uses" eligible for the subsistence priority. When the board applied the ten criteria, it determined that no group or community in the Cook Inlet region other than Tyonek, English Bay and Port Graham satisfied all ten of the criteria.* The board limited the 1981 subsistence catch to these three communities. As a result, the board eliminated from the protection of the state's subsistence statute the majority of Cook Inlet fishermen who formerly fished under subsistence regulations.

Madison and Gjosund challenged the validity of the board's subsistence criteria (now 5 AAC 01.597) on several grounds. They claimed that: (1) the criteria were inconsistent with the statutory language and legislative intent of the 1978 subsistence law; (2) the board failed to comply with the Administrative Procedure Act in adopting the criteria; and (3) their equal protection and due process rights were violated by the board's action.[9] Both courts issued preliminary injunctions compelling the board to authorize personal use fishing for Madison and Gjosund similar to that allowed in the previous year. The board moved for summary judgment on the plaintiffs' first claim. Both trial courts granted summary judgment to the board, after finding the subsistence criteria consistent with the legislative intent "to provide for and protect personal use . . . by persons who reside in rural communities. . . . "

On appeal, Madison and Gjosund seek reversal of the two trial court decisions. They claim that the board did not act within the legislative authority granted by AS 16.05.251(b) and AS 16.05.940(22) and (23) when it adopted the ten characteristics ultimately codified as 5 AAC 01.597.[10]

II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

We first consider the appropriate standard of review for this case. The legislature enacted AS 16.05.251(b), which requires the board to adopt regulations permitting the taking of fish for "subsistence uses." The legislature then defined subsistence uses as "customary and traditional" uses in AS 16.05.940(23), but it never defined

10. Madison and Gjosund also contend that the board exceeded its statutory authority under AS 16.05.251(a) when it established a personal use fishery to accommodate people excluded from the subsistence fishery by 5 AAC 01.597. Because we hold 5 AAC 01.597 invalid, we need not address the issue of the board's authority to establish a personal use fishery.

FROM LAW ANCH CIVIL 02/22/95 08:55 P. 9

"customary and traditional." The board developed the ten criteria (now codified as 5 AAC 01.597) to identify customary and traditional uses qualifying for a subsistence priority under AS 16.05.251(b). Therefore, the board interpreted the 1978 subsistence law and devised its regulatory criteria accordingly.

In Kelly v. Zamarello, 486 P.2d 906, 917 (Alaska 1971), we stated that the "reasonable basis approach should be used for the most part in cases concerning administrative expertise as to either complex subject matter or fundamental policy formulations." However, the issues in this case concern statutory interpretation of the words "customary and traditional" and the question whether the board has acted within the scope of its statutory authority. Such issues "fall into the realm of special competency of the courts." Alaska Public Utility Commission v. Municipality of Anchorage, 555 P.2d 262, 266 (Alaska 1976). See also State, Commercial Fisheries Entry Commission v. Templeton, 598 P.2d 77, 80 (Alaska 1979).

In this instance, we are dealing with a question of statutory interpretation and will apply the substitution of judgment standard.

> The substitution of judgment standard is applied when the questions of law presented do not involve agency expertise, and, thus, a court need not take the deferential stance embodied in the rational basis test. . . . The standard is appropriate where the > knowledge and experience of the agency is of little guidance to the court or where the case concerns "statutory interpretation or other analysis of legal relationships about which courts have specialized knowledge and experience."

Earth Resources Co. v. State, Department of Revenue, 665 P.2d 960, 965 (Alaska 1983), quoting Kelly v. Zamarello, 486 P.2d at 916 (emphasis added). Application of this standard allows the reviewing court to substitute its judgment about a statute's meaning for the board's interpretation, even if the board's interpretation had a reasonable basis in law. In this case, both trial courts erred by applying the rational basis standard to the board's statutory interpretation.

III. LEGISLATIVE HISTORY OF THE 1978 SUBSISTENCE LAW

Before 1978, subsistence fishing was defined as fishing for "personal use and not for sale or barter." Formerly AS 16.05.940(17). The 1978 subsistence law redefined subsistence fishing as fishing for "subsistence uses." AS 16.05.940(22). "Subsistence uses" were defined as "the customary and traditional uses in Alaska of wild, renewable resources for direct personal or family consumption . . . and for the customary trade, barter or sharing . . . . " AS 16.05.940(23). The board argues that the legislature intended to narrow the scope of subsistence fishing to mean fishing by individuals residing in those rural communities that have historically depended on subsistence hunting and fishing. Under this interpretation, the board asserts that its criteria are consistent with the legislature's intent.

The board's argument reveals a fundamental misconception about the structure of the 1978 subsistence law. There are potentially two tiers of subsistence users under AS 16.05.251(b). The first tier includes all subsistence users. Under the statute, all subsistence uses have priority over sport and commercial uses "whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of fish to assure the maintenance of fish stocks on a sustained-yield basis, or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of such resources. . . ." AS 16.05.251(b). If the statutory priority given all subsistence users over commercial and sport users still results in too few fish for all subsistence uses, then the board is authorized to establish a second tier of preferred subsistence users based on the legislative criteria expressed in AS 16.05.251(b), namely, customary and direct dependence on the resource, local residency, and availability of alternative resources.

Criteria like the ten criteria of 5 AAC 01.597(a) could be used to distinguish first-tier general subsistence users from second-tier preferred subsistence users, since most of the criteria relate to either "customary and direct dependence" or "local residency," two of the three criteria set out in AS 16.05.251(b). However, before there is any occasion to restrict subsistence fishing to second-tier preferred subsistence users as distinct from all subsistence users, the board must make two findings. It must find: (1) that it is necessary to restrict the taking of fish for sustained-yield purposes; and (2) that eliminating sport and commercial uses will not assure the maintenance of fish stocks on a sustained-yield basis and, thus, establishing a priority among subsistence users is also necessary. The board erred because it applied the ten criteria without making these findings.

The board argues that the words "customary and traditional" in AS 16.05.940(23) authorize it to define first-tier subsistence users by their area of residence. We reject this argument for several reasons. First, the argument ignores the two-tier structure of AS 16.05.251(b) that defines only the second-tier subsistence users in terms of residency. If the legislature had intended to define the class of first-tier general subsistence users by area of residence, it would not have expressed that factor with respect to only the second tier of preferred subsistence users. Moreover, the phrase "customary and traditional" modifies the word "uses" in AS 16.05.940(23). It does not refer to users. The 1978 subsistence law refers to "customary users" at only one point, when it defines the preferred subsistence users of the second tier with the three statutory criteria in AS 16.05.251(b).

The House Special Committee on Subsistence drafted a letter of intent for House Bill 960[11] that supports our interpretation. With respect to AS 16.05.251(b) (which was § 6 of House Bill 960),[12] the letter of intent made clear the priority to be given subsistence uses in general over sport and commercial uses and explained the two-tier system among subsistence users.

> Sections six and seven: These two sections, which are virtually identical for the Boards of Fisheries and the Board of Game, are intended to statutorily set out the priority given to subsistence use of fish and game resources. . . . Further, these sections set forth a priority of users if restrictions are needed because of the unavailability of resources. The priority list is an attempt to insure that those with the most dependence upon the fish and game resources are the last to be restricted.
> If there is a need to restrict the taking of fish or game in order to avoid damaging the fish stocks or game populations, or in order to assure that subsistence users may continue to take fish or game, it is the intent of the Committee that sports or commercial use be restricted before > subsistence use. If these restrictions are inadequate, restricting of subsistence use as well is authorized based upon the dependence on the resource, the local residence of the subsistence users, and the availability of alternate resources.

(Emphasis added).

Only in connection with AS 16.05.251(b) does the letter of intent discuss applying residence criteria to subsistence users, and it does so only with respect to second-tier subsistence users. With respect to the definition of subsistence uses in § 17 of House Bill 960 (now AS 16.05.940(23)), the letter of intent does not suggest that the phrase "customary and traditional" was meant to describe users as well as uses. The letter of intent states:

> Section seventeen: Subsection (26) defines what uses can be made of subsistence caught fish and game. It allows it to be used for direct personal or family consumption, for barter as defined in subsection (27) and for sharing the subsistence caught fish and game with other persons. This subsistence caught fish and game which is shared can then only be used for personal or family consumption. This subsection also broadens the definition of family to include the extended family situation.

The letter of intent clearly expressed the legislative resolve to establish a priority for subsistence use of fish and game. The 1978 subsistence law also increased the number of uses qualifying as subsistence fishing by including trade and barter.

The board based its restrictive regulation, 5 AAC 01.597, on the words "customary and traditional." The legislature did not define these words in the 1978 subsistence law. In such a case, reference to legislative history may provide an insight into the legislature's intent and a statute's meaning. North Slope Borough v. Sohio Petroleum Corp., 585 P.2d 534, 540 (Alaska 1978). In the House floor debate on House Bill 960, Representative Cotton introduced an amendment to delete the words "customary and traditional" from the statute. The floor manager of the bill, Representative Anderson, opposed the amendment in the following speech:

> The two words are used in this context to put some guidelines around the uses of Alaska's freedom of resources. What we were afraid of, it was brought to our attention by people who were concerned that this would leave the field of the definition wide open. That newcomers just coming to the State of Alaska would automatically be able to establish not only residency in 30 days, but be able to go out and state that they have a customary and traditional use of Alaska's fish and game resources. The use of customary and traditional also is in recognition of a historical use of fish and game for food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, transportation, etc. This is not only in conformance with the aboriginal uses, but also those that have come in, those people who have come in later. . . . [T]he nonnative people in the State of Alaska have established customary and traditional uses of Alaska's fish and game resources for subsistence purposes. And in order to give the Board of Fish and Game more clarification in the area, we have come up with the (inaudible) of customary and traditional rather than leaving that section > wide open. The design is not to be restrictive but to provide guidelines and that is basically what I feel and many . . . members felt it was necessary in . . . adding or retaining those two words "customary and traditional."

(Emphasis added).

We consider statements made by a bill's sponsor in the course of legislative deliberations to be relevant evidence when a court is trying to determine legislative intent. Alaska Public Employees Association v. State, 525 P.2d 12, 16 (Alaska 1974). Anderson argued for the retention of "customary and traditional" for use as a guideline. His major concern focused on the potential pressure put on resources by newcomers. In his view, the words "customary and traditional" recognized and protected a historical subsistence use by both native and non-native Alaskans. The words were not intended to restrict subsistence use.

Another part of the House debate serves to clarify the statute's meaning. Representative Parr expressed concern that the board might use AS 16.05.251(b) to eliminate Fairbanks residents from subsistence use. Some Fairbanks residents often traveled to the Chitina Dip Net Fishery near the Copper River for their fishing. Representative Anderson responded to these concerns:

> If we get into a condition where the fish stock gets down to the point where there is no way that you can allow any take, the first people that you are going to cut off are the commercial and then the sports, first, and > then the last people that you are going to cut off are the subsistence people who have the greatest reliance on the resource. . . . [I]f it were defined that dip net fishing were for subsistence uses and not for sale or any other purpose, that would be allowed and I would think that people from Fairbanks would fall under these categories. I don't know where else they would go to . . . where people from Fairbanks make it a custom to go down to the Chitina area and if it was determined that that resource was down to the point where only subsistence would be allowed, those people would be taken care of under this section. I don't see that it is eliminating.

(Emphasis added).

In the House debate, Anderson attempted to assure Parr that residents of urban Fairbanks could be considered priority subsistence users. Contrary to the board's interpretation of the subsistence statutes, there is no indication that legislators understood the 1978 subsistence law to restrict subsistence use to either a rural or a community context. In fact, the House debate indicates that the 1978 subsistence law was necessary to protect subsistence uses as a priority use of Alaska's fish and game resources. This intent is clearly expressed by the preamble to the subsistence law:

> [I]t is in the public interest to clearly establish subsistence use as a priority use of Alaska's fish and game resources and to recognize the needs, customs and traditions of Alaskan residents. The legislature further finds that beneficial use of those resources by all state residents should be carefully monitored and regulated with as much input as possible from the affected users, so that the viability of fish and game resources is not threatened and so that resources are conserved in a manner consistent with the sustained yield principle.

(Emphasis added).

* The legislative history indicates that the legislature intended to protect subsistence use, not limit it. The words "customary and traditional" serve as a guideline to recognize historical subsistence use by individuals, both native and non-native Alaskans. In addition, subsistence use is not strictly limited to rural communities. For these reasons, the board's interpretation of "customary and traditional" as a restrictive term conflicts squarely with the legislative intent.[13]

13. The board notes that the words "customary and traditional" in the 1978 subsistence law were taken from § 703 of HR 39, 95th Congress, 2nd Session (1978), which Congress passed in modified form in 1980 as the Alaska National Interests Land Conservation Act (ANILCA), Public Law No. 96-487, 16 U.S.C. § 3113. Therefore, the board argues that the words in the Alaska act should have the same meaning as the words in the federal act and limit subsistence uses to residents of rural Alaska. We reject this argument for several reasons. First, § 703 of HR 39 in its 1978 form did not contain the "rural Alaska residents" limitation now found in 16 U.S.C. § 3113. Second, the Alaska House floor debate reveals that Representative Anderson, the bill's floor manager, understood the 1978 subsistence law to allow the urban residents of Fairbanks to qualify as general subsistence users. Finally, in the preamble to the 1978 subsistence law, the Alaska Legislature expressed its intent to "recognize the needs, customs and traditions of Alaskan residents." While the legislature declared that beneficial use of fish and game resources "by

IV. THE BOARD'S ADOPTION AND APPLICATION OF 5 AAC 01.597

We now turn to the board's interpretation of the 1978 subsistence law. In December 1980, the board met to examine the uses of salmon in Cook Inlet and to determine which uses would qualify for the subsistence use priority. Tom Lonner, the director of the subsistence section of the Alaska Department of Fish and Game, presented the department's recommendations on the subsistence statute. He suggested that the board begin its analysis of customary and traditional uses with an assessment of user profiles and use patterns on a case by case basis. Lonner noted that such information was most lacking in the major Cook Inlet subsistence fishery because of the rapid growth of subsistence uses in recent years, and that obtaining such information would be expensive.

The board did not follow Lonner's suggested approach.[14] After the board heard extensive testimony on subsistence use, its "chairman appointed a committee,[15] all state residents" should be carefully monitored and regulated, it did not express an intention to limit subsistence uses to rural Alaska residents.

14. A board member, Nick Szabo, stated that the board's limited budget prevented implementation of a case by case approach.

15. The board stipulated in 1982 that it violated consisting of board members and staff, to identify subsistence uses of salmon in Cook Inlet. The committee drafted ten criteria to identify subsistence uses and presented them to the board.

Lonner worked with the committee to develop the ten criteria and explained them to the board. He stated: "These tenets here are . . . based on . . . the evidence about four relatively self-contained communities. . . . If, however, you have individual applicants, . . . this might not suffice as a test." Therefore, the board was fully aware of the limitations of the proposed criteria.

At its March 1981 meeting, the board received further testimony on uses of Cook Inlet salmon from the area advisory committees and several individual witnesses. After deliberation, the board decided to apply all of the ten criteria "to determine which uses are customary and traditional and therefore are eligible for the subsistence priority." Only the "fisheries associated with Tyonek, English Bay and Port Graham met all ten criteria.

In its findings of fact, the board applied the ten criteria to individuals such as Madison and Gjosund. In particular, the individuals failed to meet the second criterion: "A use pattern established by an identified community, subcommunity or group having preponderant concentrations of persons showing past use."[16] The board found:

> Although some users have shown the existence of a community of interest (e.g., the Kenaitze Tribe and the Kachemak Bay Subsistence Group), these persons either are too widely dispersed or are too heterogeneous to be considered an identifiable community, subcommunity or group. On the evidence presented, the Board cannot conclude either that activities are conducted in common or that sharing or other group interchange occurs in relation to the resource.

In other words, an individual subsistence user (such as Madison or Gjosund) would not qualify for a subsistence use priority from the board unless he were part of an identifiable subsistence community or group.[17] Under the

17. In contrast, the Commercial Fisheries Entry Commission issues commercial fishing permits on an individual basis. See AS 16.43.250. We do not, however, read the words "customary and traditional" as a grant of authority to the Department of Fish and Game and the Board of Fisheries to impose a "grandfather" rights system with respect to subsistence users. Imposing an equitable system of grandfather rights is an extremely complicated task, as Alaska's experience with such a system in the commercial salmon and herring fisheries has demonstrated. See AS 16.43.010-990 and the numerous, and ever increasing, judicial decisions interpreting this act noted in the annotations. Such a system would also be extremely controversial. It is preposterous to suppose that the legislature intended to create such a system merely by using board's regulation, many individual users who have historically depended on subsistence fishing are eliminated from subsistence use at the outset.

* The board's regulation, 5 AAC 01.597, is inconsistent with the legislative intent to provide guidelines for the protection of subsistence fishing. The regulation exceeds the authority delegated to the board because it operates too restrictively in its initial differentiation between subsistence and non-subsistence uses. Under a statute designed to protect subsistence uses, the board has devised a regulation to disenfranchise many subsistence users whose interests the statute was designed to protect.

COOK INLET MANAGEMENT AREA SUBSISTENCE

FISHERY REPORT 1972

A. General Information

1. Description of Area: The Cook Inlet area includes all waters of Alaska in Cook Inlet and Resurrection Bay north of Cape Douglas and west of Cape Fairfield, including the Barren Islands. (Figure 1)

2. Species Utilized: All five species of pacific salmon are utilized in the Cook Inlet area. Since 1962 cohos have made up 66 percent of the subsistence catch, reds 20 percent, pinks 8%, chums 5%, and kings 0.2 percent. (Table 1) King crab, tanner crab, dungeness crab, shrimp, smelt, herring, bottom fish, and clams are also utilized for subsistence purposes. However, few records are available on degree of utilization. In actuality it is hard to define what constitutes "sport fishing" and what constitutes "subsistence fishing" for the above listed species.

3. Economic Conditions: No figures are available on the average income of those applying for subsistence permits in the Cook Inlet area. It is the personal opinion of the area management biologist that less than five or ten percent of the subsistence fishing in the area is carried out by persons in such financial positions that they actually have a legitimate need of the resource harvested in order to subsist. The type of subsistence fishing found in the Cook Inlet area could more appropriately be classified as recreational or supplemental fishing. Many people regard it as a form of sport fishing in which they not only derive recreational benefits but at the same time supplement their food stocks. Some people in the Cook Inlet area, natives and whites alike, because of either need or personal preference, are trying to maintain a "live-off-the land" life style. To these few, "subsistence" fishing may fall into a need category and may play an important part in their means of existing.

B. History of Fishery

1. Methods of Fishing: A variety of subsistence fishing methods are used in the Cook Inlet area, as it is a multi-species utilization area.

a. Salmon: Set nets, seines and drift nets are currently used with set nets accounting for about 95 percent of the effort. Since statehood, all subsistence salmon fishing has been in conformance with commercial regulations and, therefore, areas open and methods used have been identical to those in commercial fishing. Prior to statehood, much of the subsistence fishing took place in salmon spawning streams with gear ranging from hook and line to gill nets. Snagging was one of the more popular methods.

b. Shellfish: King crab, tanner crab, dungeness crab and shrimp are taken with various forms of pots. Most fishing takes place at or near the small boat harbors of Homer and Seward. Clams for subsistence are taken by use of a clam shovel. The methods currently used for taking shellfish species for subsistence purposes do not differ appreciably from those used prior to statehood.

c. Smelt: Both bill nets and dip nets have been used in the Cook Inlet area for taking smelt, however, in 1972 dip nets became illegal gear for taking smelt in the waters of the Kenai Peninsula. A limited amount of hood and line snagging for smelt also exists.

d. Freshwater species: The gear most commonly utilized for freshwater species is small mesh gill nets and seines. In the past, fish-wheels and dip nets have also been used in freshwater.

2. Catches and Fishing Effort

a. Salmon: Salmon fishing is the only subsistence fishing for which reliable catch and effort data exists and this data covers from 1962 to 1971 only. During these years, a total of 2,957 subsistence permits were issued and all but 316 were returned. The total reported salmon catch from 1962 to 1971 is as follows: 101 kings, 8,793 reds, 28,574 cohos, 2,365 chums, 3,672 pinks, for a total of 43,505 salmon. The number of permits issued and the total catch by species appears in Table 1 and is depicted in graphic form in Figure 2.

b. Smelt: Catch data on smelt is only available for the past two seasons. In 1971, there were 1,387 smelt reported taken and in 1972, the reported catch was 8,542. Most effort has taken place along the western shoreline of the Kenai Peninsula and around Turnagin Arm.

The number of permits issued by year since 1969 appear below:

Year	Salt Water	Kenai River	Total
1969	150	194	344
1970	157	393	550
1971	92	*	92
1972	160	*	160

*Smelt permits not required for Kenai River.

c. Shellfish: No permits are required for taking shellfish and, therefore, no records are available on effort or catch. Most effort occurs in Kachemak and Resurrection Bays.

d. Freshwater species: Relatively few permits have been requested for taking freshwater species and most of these have been for Lake Louise and Tyone Lakes. Whitefish comprise about 90 percent of the catch.

3. Management Regulations: The following is a history of subsistence regulations in Cook Inlet from 1943 to 1972.

1942 through 1950

No mention made in Cook Inlet section of commercial fisheries regulations.

1951

First mention in commercial regulations. Required notification of intention to take salmon for personal use, with statement of type of gear to be used, area, time, number of fish to be taken and intended disposition of fish taken.

Fish, Ship, and Campbell and Cottonwood Creeks closed to subsistence fishing.

No intent to take notification required. More streams closed, including all tributaries to Knik Arm, Willow Creek (tributary to Susitna), Campbell Creek, and all streams and lakes of Kenai Peninsula that are tributary to Cook Inlet: Provided this shall not apply to fishing with rod, hook and line for personal use.

Above regulations same, plus added stipulation that no personal use fishing allowed within 300 feet of weirs and ladders. Snagging was prohibited for the first time.

Also, personal use fishing prohibited within 500 yards of all other streams or lakes except with hand rod, hook and line. Bay limit two (2) per day per person.

And subject to laws regulating commercial fishing 48 hours before and continuing 40 hours after each fishing period. Except for fall season and/or place greater than 25 miles from waters open to commercial fishing. . .

* And in Knik Arm where 15 fathom set nets, 100 yards apart, shall be operated prior to August 6, only during hours open to commercial fishing in the Northern district.

Same as 1953 with additional sections that. . . Commercial gear may be used for personal fishing during any fall season. . .

Fishing allowed in Turnagain Arm east of a line between Hope and Indian, and. . .

Fishing allowed more than 5 miles upstream from tidewater on all streams and lakes of Cook Inlet drainage South and West of the Susitna River or South of town of Homer.

General regulations and. .

Coo Inlet regulations same as 1954.

Same as 1955 with added restrictions. . .

Closed Kenai & Russian Rivers within 300 yards of their confluence (this to 'Sportsmen').

Rod and line. . . limited take to two (2) salmon over 16 inches, per person per day.

General regulations same as 1956.

Cook Inlet about same except for limit on take by rod and line fishermen (' . .not to exceed 10 inches'. . per person per day by hook and line, and not more than two (2) may exceed 16 inches').

General same as 1957 plus. .

A series of regulations devised to try to curb snagging. . including limiting size hooks and making it illegal to use weights with multiple hooks.

Cook Inlet same as 1957.

General same as 1958.

Cook Inlet--added restrictions that. . .personal use fishing be allowed in the main stem of the Susitna River above the town of Alexander. . with nets less than 30 feet and more than 100 yards from any other set net and from tributary streams-- and identified with name and address of owner.

And personal use fishing must be done in conformance with commercial regulations (This closed Knik Arm and Turnagain Arm).

Many Kenai Peninsula streams closed above markers placed from 3 to 5 miles up from mouth (Anchor, Deep Creek, Stariski and many others).

Added closure of Cooper Creek, Little Willow Creek and Montana Creek. . And. . allowed 30 yards of set nets for use in Knik Arm after August 9, also Fish Creek closed July 21 (snaggers harrassing red run).

General same as 1959.

Cook Inlet--personal use fishing to be allowed on Northwest shore Knik Arm. . with nets 90 feet or less and more than 500 yards from terminus of any salmon stream. . and conform to commercial open periods in Northern district. . and identified with name and address of owner.

General same as 1960.

Cook Inlet added open fishing season on clams, crabs, and bottomfish. . all in conformance with commercial regulations.

Salmon for subsistence was broken into districts. . . apparently this did away with fishing in main stem of Susitna River above Alexander (see subsistence regulations for Northern district 1961).

General regulations added restrictions--personal use fishing must be done by permit only, issued by commissioner. . . limited subsistence catch to individual regional regulations.

General regulations--new regulation--fish other than salmon may be taken at any time in any area of state by any method except by use of explosives or chemicals, except as hereinafter provided or as provided in the Sport Fishing Regulations of the Department.

Cook Inlet--same as 1962.

General same as 1963.

Cook Inlet--new regulation--must have permit for salmon and all catches by species, location and date of catch must be reported. Freshwater species except for trout, grayling, and char may be taken for subsistence purposes via permit and these permits be issued by commissioner or his representative when deemed warranted.

Also not more than 50 salmon be taken per permit and subsistence fishing is prohibited in any area closed to commercial fishing except for parts of Knik Arm.

And all districts with exception of Outer district, must have name and address of owner on fishing gear. The Outer district regulations were amended to conform with commercial regulations.

Another Cook Inlet regulation was amended--sports fishing licenses required for clams and/or bottom fish and crab pot floats will contain the name of owner. No sex or size limitations on crab.

1965 through 1969

Outside of minor amendments and a few changes in regulations in the different fishing districts, personal use fishing regulations are about the same for that period from 1965 to 1969.

1969

Cook Inlet--new regulations--

Restrictions:

(a) Subsistence fishermen taking herring and smelt in the Kenai River must be physically present at all times said net is being fished.

(b) A sports fishing license is required when bottom fish are taken with fishing rod and line.

(c) A sports fishing license is required for the digging of razor clams.

Size Limits: There are no size or sex limitations on crab.

Cook Inlet--new regulations--

Salmon - The subsistence fishery on the Northwest of Knik Arm was deleted.

Smelt - In the Kenai River the length of gill nets may not exceed 20 feet in length.

Smelt may be taken in that portion of the Kenai River from its mouth upstream to the Soldotna bridge from April 1 through May 31.

Cook Inlet--new regulations--Smelt - Dip nets may not be used for taking smelt in the waters of the Kenai Peninsula.

C. Problem Areas

1. Northwest Shore Knik Arm: This area is no longer a problem as it was closed to subsistence fishing in 1971. The number of permits issued for this area had increased during the mid-60's to a level of 290 during the last two years of the fishery. (1969 and 1970) The reported catch during this period averaged 3,300 salmon (Table 2). The main justification for closing this area was the declining red salmon escapements into Fish Creek which reached a low of 6,233 in 1969.

2. Mud Bay: The problem here appears to be over-utilization of available fishing space rather than over-utilization of the resource. Commercial fishing, sports fishing, and subsistence fishing all take place in this rather confined area of Kachemak Bay along the Northeast side of the Homer Spit. Peak utilization occurs in mid to late August when approximately 10 seine fishermen, 50 subsistence fishermen and several hundred sports fishermen fish this area. The main species being sought are silver salmon and the subsistence catch has averaged about 1,000 since 1967. The commercial catch in the Southern district has averaged 2,800 silvers since 1967 and an estimated 50 percent of these have been taken from Mud Bay proper. Sports harvest figures are not available, however, the average catch sine 1967 would probably not exceed 500 fish. Commercial and subsistence harvest figures indicate no decline in abundance of silver stocks in Mud Bay. A tagging study in 1970 indicated the silver stocks of Mud Bay were mostly local stocks bound for upper Kachemak Bay and escapement indices in this area have been consistent in recent years.

Although there is no biological justification for closing Mud Bay, the time has perhaps come for closing a portion of Mud Bay to commercial and subsistence fishing because of user-group conflicts.

For the last several years proposals have been submitted to the Board of Fish and Game asking for either complete or partial closures of Mud Bay. The commercial fish staff has always opposed these closures on the basis that no biological justification exists.

Because of the increasing sports fish utilization there will be a public proposal submitted to the Board of Fish and Game at the November meeting by a Homer commercial fisherman which will ask for a partial closure of the Mud Bay area. The commercial staff intends to support this proposal.

3. Shellfish: Another potential problem is the crab and shrimp pot fisheries which have developed tremendously in the last few years. A considerable volume of gear is being fished in the immediate vicinity of the Homer small boat harbor and again, rather than over-utilization of the resource, the main problem is over-utilization of area. Gear is so concentrated in this one area that navigation has been hindered. A regulation may be necessary in the near future to close a section of the bay in the immediate vicinity of the small boat harbor entrance.

D. Recommendations:

It is the personal opinion of the area biologist that a need exists for subsistence fishing in Cook Inlet and that it should be continued perhaps with some modifications. The 5 or 10 percent of the people who actually have a legitimate need to subsistence fish should not be denied this right just because the fishery has become recreationally oriented.

Perhaps a fee could be placed on a subsistence permit or license. This might tend to eliminate some of those who are participating more for recreation than need and yet keep the regulation constitutional. For those who could show need, through an application for a waiver on the license fee, a special free permit would be granted. A maximum income level would be established similar to that used in the Food Stamp Program and those falling below the established level would be eligible for the free permit. These measures would probably reduce subsistence fishing by 75 percent in the Cook Inlet area and subsistence fishing would again conform with the true meaning of subsistence.

ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES FINDINGS
SUBSISTENCE REGULATIONS FOR THE 1985 FISHING SEASON

The Alaska Board of Fisheries, meeting in Anchorage, Alaska on March 26, 1985, finds that the Alaska Supreme Court decision in Madison v. Alaska Department of Fish and Game will require a revision of certain subsistence, personal use, sport, and commercial fishing regulations. However, the board finds insufficient time exists before the smelt, herring, bottomfish, shellfish and salmon seasons to allow for an orderly, comprehensive review of all regulations which may be impacted, considering the need to provide an adequate opportunity for public comment and review. Therefore, to ensure an orderly process allowing the opportunity for all members of the public to participate, and implement the count's decision in Madison as possible in the interim, the board finds:

(1) The board will, by emergency regulation, authorize the subsistence take of smelt, herring, shellfish and bottomfish as they were allowed under the 1978 subsistence regulations.

(2) The board will, by emergency regulation, authorize access by all Alaska residents to existing Tyonek, Port Graham, and English Bay subsistence salmon fisheries in Cook Inlet. Existing bag and possession limits, time, gear and area regulations and overall guideline harvest will not be adjusted for the 1985 season. The board finds that such regulations promote an orderly harvest which will reasonably satisfy anticipated subsistence uses. Modification of these regulations at this time is not in the best public interest of the public given the inadequate opportunity for public comment at this time, and uncertainty about 1985 participation levels.

(3) During 1985, the board will continue the following presently authorized personal use salmon fisheries in Cook Inlet as personal use fisheries:

the spring Kasilof gill net fishery, the Kasilof and Kenai River sockeye dipnet fishery, the China Poot hatchery sockeye fishery, and the shellfish, herring, and smelt fisheries.

The board cannot reasonably modify or eliminate these fisheries without an opportunity for public comment, which is not possible under the present time frame.

(4) The fall coho set gill net personal use fishery will however, by emergency regulation, be identified as a subsistence fishery, as required by Madison, and will be managed under the regulations used during the 1981 season, except that current reporting requirements will apply.

(5) The Kachemak Bay salmon set gill net fishery will, by emergency regulation, be identified as a subsistence fishery, as required by Madison, and will be managed under the regulations developed for the court ordered fishery. Alaska residents will be able to participate in both of these fisheries.

(6) The board will, by emergency regulation, allow access by all Alaska residents to the following existing subsistence fisheries:

Copper River (salmon)
Iliamna/Lake Clark (salmon)
Naknek River (salmon), and Angoon (salmon).

The bag and possession, time, area, gear, and overall harvest guidelines of each of these fisheries shall remain as described in existing regulations. The board finds that such regulations are necessary to conduct an orderly fishery and to provide a reasonable opportunity for subsistence needs. Modification of these regulations at this time in not in the best interest of the public given the inadequate opportunity for public comment at this time.

(7) As to the Copper River subsistence and personal use salmon fisheries, which will combined into a subsistence fishery by emergency regulation, the board will retain existing regulations as to bag and possession limits, time, area, gear, and overall harvest guidelines, except that rather than separate regulations based on domicile, the regulations developed for those domiciled in the Copper Basin and other specified communities will be applied to the fishwheel fishery and those developed for those not so domiciled will be applied to the dip net fishery. The board finds these regulations to be necessary to conduct an orderly fishery and to provide a reasonable opportunity for subsistence needs. Further, the overall harvest guidelines, bag limits, and areas represent historical harvest. The dip net portion of this guideline represents a total harvest which was not taken during the 1984 season. The harvest lid is necessary to manage the downriver commercial salmon drift gill net fishery to ensure escapement for reproductive needs and the upriver subsistence fishery. The bag and possession limits, while different for dipnetters and fishwheel fishermen were developed by the board after extensive public testimony and information demonstrating that the differing bag limits reflected historical use by each group.

The board hereby calls for proposals from the public on all subsistence and personal use regulations to be considered at the fall/winter 1985 finfish meeting. The board will consider all proposals to establish, eliminate or modify any or all subsistence or personal use regulations · any any changes in commercial or sport fishery regulations required by such regulations.

85-13-JB DRAFT

WHEREAS, the Alaska Board of Fisheries and Alaska Board of Game have been delegated responsibility and authority by the Alaska Legislature to regulate the taking of fish stocks and game populations for the maximum benefit of all of the people of Alaska; and

WHEREAS, prior to the decision of the Alaska Supreme Court in Madison v. Alaska Department of Fish and Game the boards developed procedures which provided adequate regulatory flexibility, both to protect opportunities for subsistence hunting and fishing in rural communities and areas, and to provide hunting and fishing opportunities for recreational, commercial, and other uses; and

WHEREAS, it is unclear to what extent the boards may restrict subsistence harvest after the Madison ruling and as a result, substantial and significantly disruptive reallocations of opportunities to harvest fish stocks and game populations may be necessary. For example:

1. The commercial gill net fishery which is an important component of the Prince William Sound economy may need to be significantly restricted in 1985 or, eventually, even closed. Prior to the Madison decision the Board of Fisheries had adequate regulatory flexibility to accommodate both the historic commercial fishery and other users.

2. Sport fishing for king and other species of salmon on the Kenai and Naknek rivers and in the Susitna drainage may need to be significantly restricted in 1985 or, eventually, even closed. Prior to the Madison decision the Board of Fisheries had adequate regulatory flexibility to prevent that result.

3. Non-subsistence hunting, including commercial guiding activities may be significantly restricted and, in many cases, eliminated. Prior to the Madison decision the Board of Game had adequate regulatory flexibility to accommodate these users reasonably.

WHEREAS, prior to the Madison decision the State of Alaska was in compliance with Title VIII of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act (ANILCA). As a result of the Madison decision the federal government may now take control over game populations on public lands and fish stocks on public lands and within navigable waters; and

WHEREAS, if the State of Alaska is no longer in compliance with ANILCA, the state will lose the ongoing million dollar per year federal appropriation for the state's public participation system which is essential to the success of the state's regulatory and management activities; and

WHEREAS, the Alaska Board of Fisheries and Board of Game strongly believe that the potential restrictions, closures, reallocations and loss of funding described above are not in the best interest of the fish and wildlife resources and the people of Alaska;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, that the Alaska Board of Fisheries and Board of Game meeting in joint session respectfully, but strongly urge the Alaska Legislature to enact legislation during the current legislative session which returns to the boards the regulatory authority and flexibility which they exercised before the Madison decision; and THEREFORE BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the Alaska Board of Fisheries and Alaska Board of Game have reviewed SB 231 and HB 288, the legislation introduced by the Governor to accomplish this purpose, and urge that this legislation be enacted into law as expeditiously as possible.

CIVIL ACTION NO. 3AN-80-3073

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction in the above-entitled action having come on for hearing on the 22d day of May 1980, all parties having been heard and plaintiffs' motion having been granted, the Court hereby enters the following findings of fact and conclusions of law.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. The village of Tyonek is an Athabascan Indian village of approximately 300 people and 80 households located on the west side of Cook Inlet. Tyonek has been inhabited for generations by the Tanaina group of Athabascans who succeeded the Eskimo population which originally settled in the area in prehistoric times. Today, the village still retains its ethnic identity and has the same characteristics of a rural Alaska Native community as those of Native villages in other areas of the state.

2. The Susitna River king salmon stock enters upper Cook Inlet and is the only stock of king salmon to pass by the village of Tyonek. The Susitna River stock enters Cook Inlet the beginning of May, and begins to pass by the village of Tyonek in mid-May.

Norman A. Cohen
Attorney at Law

4) Attachment #5

The Susitna River stock run peaks at the village at the end of May or the beginning of June and is usually completely past the village by the latter part of June.

3. The mid-May to mid-June king salmon fishery is a customary and traditional subsistence use by residents of the village of Tyonek of the Susitna River king salmon stock in that this fishery has been in existence for generations, that the harvest of the king salmon at this time is an essential component of the cultural life of the village, that the art of cutting king salmon has been handed down through generations, that the early king salmon is the first fresh food of the spring, that king salmon are oiler than other species of salmon and therefore better suited for drying and preserving for winter use, that unlike other species of salmon king salmon are not susceptible to damage while drying from insects and seabirds, and that drying is usually completed prior to the start of summer rains.

4. The residents of the village of Tyonek fish for king salmon with set nets from the beach in front of their fish camps immediately south of the village.

5. Since 1964, the residents of the village of Tyonek have been prevented from participating in their customary and tradition mid-May to mid-June king salmon subsistence fishery by regulations adopted by defendants and their predecessors. These regulations were initially adopted due to poor escapement of the Susitna River king salmon stock.

6. In 1977, the defendant Alaska BOARD OF FISHERIES adopted a Comprehensive Management Policy for The Upper Cook Inlet Salmon Stocks which stated that stocks which move in Cook Inlet to spawning areas prior to June 30th would be managed exclusively for recreational uses. No mention was made in the management policy for management of such stocks for subsistence uses.

NORMAN A. COHEN
ATTORNEY AT LAW

7. In 1978, the Alaska State Legislature enacted ch 151 SLA 1978 (A.S. 16.05.251(b)) which requires that whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of the Susitna River king salmon stock to assure the maintenance of such stock on a sustained-yield basis or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of such king salmon stock, subsistence use of such stock shall be the priority use over sport and commercial uses.

8. A.S. 16.05.251(b) requires defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES to adopt subsistence fishing regulations for Susitna River king salmon stocks, which implement the priority for subsistence uses referred to in paragraph 7, unless it determines that adoption of such regulations will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of Susitna River king salmon stocks on a sustained-yield basis.

9. Prior to the March 1980 meeting of defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES, said defendant, on behalf of plaintiff NATIVE VILLAGE OF TYONEK, published proposed regulations pursuant to the Administrative Procedures Act to open a subsistence king salmon fishery for the residents of the village of Tyonek, between May 15 and June 15.

10. On March 26, 1980, defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES held a public hearing and received testimony on the proposed regulations from the Alaska Department of Fish and Game, residents of the village of Tyonek and other members of the public.

11. Testimony presented at the public hearing indicated that the residents of the village of Tyonek customarily and traditionally harvested king salmon for subsistence uses between May 15 and June 15.

12. Though evidence was presented that restrictions on taking by all user groups of the Susitna River king salmon stock were necessary, no evidence was presented at the hearing by the Alaska Department of Fish and Game that adoption of the proposed regulations would jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of the Susitna River king salmon stock on a sustained-yield basis and the defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES made no finding to that effect.

13. The defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES rejected the plaintiffs' proposals but adopted proposals authorizing the harvest of 13,100 Susitna River king salmon by sports fishermen.

14. As a result of the failure of the defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES to adopt proposed regulations opening a king salmon season for the residents of the village of Tyonek, the plaintiffs are threatened with irreparable harm in that plaintiffs customary and traditional use of the Susitna River king salmon stock will be denied to them. Consequently, residents of the village of Tyonek will lose access to a valuable subsistence resource and the customary and traditional way of life of the village will be disrupted.

15. No other species of salmon available to the residents of the village of Tyonek can replace the Susitna River king salmon stock as a subsistence resource or substitute for the role of the Susitna River king salmon stock in the customary and traditional way of life of the village.

16. Defendants will be adequately protected if the resident of the village of Tyonek are permitted to harvest 3,000 king salmon from the Susitna River king salmon stock between May 23 and June 15, 1980.

17. Plaintiffs have raised serious and substantial questions. The failure of defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES to adopt the proposals submitted on behalf of plaintiff NATIVE VILLAGE OF TYONEK and the adoption of proposals authorizing the harvest of 13,100 Susitna River king salmon by sports fishermen is a violation of A.S. 16.05.251(b) in that whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of Susitna River king salmon to assure the maintenance of that fish stock on a sustained-yield basis, or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of such resource, subsistence use shall be the priority use.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. Unless the preliminary relief requested by plaintiffs is granted plaintiffs will suffer irreparable harm in that plaintiffs customary and traditional use of the Susitna River king salmon stock will be denied to them. Consequently, residents of the village of Tyonek will lose access to a valuable subsistence resource and the customary and traditional way of life of the village will be disrupted.

2. Defendants and the resource will be adequately protected if the residents of the village are permitted to harvest 3,000 king salmon from the Susitna River king salmon stock between May 23 and June 15, 1980.

3. Plaintiffs have raised serious and substantial questions in that:

a. Whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of a fish stock to assure the maintenance of fish stocks on a sustained-yield basis, or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of such resources, subsistence use shall be the priority use of such stock.

b. The residents of the village of Tyonek have a customary and traditional use of the Susitna River king salmon stock between May 15 and June 15.

c. Adoption by defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES of regulations which allow for the sport fishing of Susitna River king salmon without first adopting regulations which provide for the customary and traditional use of such stock by the residents of the village of Tyonek is a violation of the subsistence priority set forth in A.S. 16.05.251(b).

4. No bond is required of the plaintiffs prior to the issuance of the preliminary injunction.

ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES, et al., et al #2

AGREEMENT OF SETTLEMENT

WHEREAS, a civil action has been brought by the Native village of Tyonek and several residents of the village of Tyonek, in which plaintiffs allege inter alia that the decision of the Alaska Board of Fisheries rejecting proposed regulations for king salmon fishing for subsistence uses in the upper Cook Inlet between May 15 and June 15 by residents of the village of Tyonek was a violation of A.S. 16.05.251(b) and request declaratory and injunctive relief; and

WHEREAS, on May 22, 1980, this Court granted plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction and on May 23, 1980, entered findings of fact and conclusions of law restraining defendants from enforcing regulations which prohibit residents of the village of Tyonek from subsistence fishing for king salmon in the vicinity of ~~Cook Inlet~~ Tyonek between May 23, and June 15, 1980, and requiring defendants to adopt emergency order regulations to authorize the residents of the village of Tyonek to harvest king salmon ~~in the upper Cook Inlet~~ in the vicinity of Tyonek for subsistence uses between May 23, 1980 and June 15, 1980, with a limit of 50 king salmon per household not to exceed a total of 3,000 king salmon and regulated to minimize the impact on any one stream.

WHEREAS, the parties in order to avoid the uncertainty of further litigation, wish to resolve this matter by means of settlement;

NOW, THEREFORE, the parties, through their attorneys and subject to the approval and order of this Court, hereby agree as follows:

STATEMENT OF FACTS

1. Plaintiff NATIVE VILLAGE OF TYONEK is a nonprofit corporation organized under the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934, 25 U.S.C. 461 et seq., to provide for the general health, safety, and well-being of the Athabascan Indian residents of the village of Tyonek, a substantial number of whom customarily and traditionally harvested king salmon in the vicinity of Tyonek during May and June for subsistence uses prior to the closure of the Tyonek king salmon subsistence fishery by Alaska Board of Fish and Game in 1964, and would harvest king salmon in the vicinity of Tyonek for subsistence uses in 1980 but for the fact that defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES did not adopt proposed regulations for subsistence king salmon fishing in the vicinity of Tyonek by residents of the village of Tyonek between May 15 and June 15.

2. Plaintiffs NELLIE CHICKALUSION, FEDORA CONSTANTINE, PETER CONSTANTINE, and SAVA STEPHAN are Athabascan Indian residents of the village of Tyonek who customarily and traditionally fished at Tyonek for king salmon for subsistence uses in May and June prior to the closure of the Tyonek king salmon subsistence fishery by the Alaska Board of Fish and Game in 1964, and who (with the exception of plaintiff PETER CONSTANTINE) would harvest king salmon in the vicinity of Tyonek in May and June for subsistence uses in 1980 if defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES had adopted proposed regulations for subsistence king salmon fishing in the vicinity of Tyonek by residents of the village of Tyonek. Health problems would prevent plaintiff PETER CONSTANTINE from harvesting king salmon in the vicinity of Tyonek for subsistence uses in 1980, but residents of the village of Tyonek would share their king salmon subsistence harvest with plaintiff PETER CONSTANTINE as is the customary and traditional practice of the residents of the village of Tyonek with respect to the distribution of subsistence resources to the elders of the village.

3. Defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES is established by A.S. 16.05.221 for the purposes of the conservation and development of the fishery resources of the state. The board is required by A.S. 16.05.251(b) to adopt regulations permitting the taking of king salmon in the vicinity of Tyonek for subsistence uses.

4. Defendant RONALD O. SKOOG is the Commissioner of the Alaska Department of Fish and Game and is required by A.S. 16.05 .020 to manage the fish resources of the state in the interest of the economy and general well-being of the state. These fish resources include king salmon in the vicinity of Tyonek. Defendant RONALD O. SKOOG is the ex officio secretary of defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES and has authority pursuant to A.S. 16.05 .060 to open and close seasons and periods on fish.

5. Defendant WILLIAM R. NIX is the Commissioner and principal executive officer of the Alaska Department of Public Safety. Pursuant to A.S. 44.41.020 the Alaska Department of Public Safety is charged with responsibility for the administrative functions relative to the protection of life and property including enforcement of fishing regulations adopted by defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES.

6. Tyonek, a community on the west side of Cook Inlet, is an Athabascan Indian village of approximately 350 people, over 95% of whom are Athabascan Indians. Tyonek has been inhabited for generations by the Tanaina group of Athabascans who succeeded the Eskimo population which originally settled the area in prehistoric times. The present residents of the village are the descendants of the Tanaina group. Today, the village still retains its ethnic Athabascan identity, is a rural Alaska Native village and has not abandoned its customary and traditional use of king salmon.

7. For the purposes of this Agreement of Settlement, "fish" means the Susitna River king salmon which enter Cook Inlet waters the beginning of May and begin to pass by the village of Tyonek in mid-May and spawn primarily in streams located in the Susitna River drainage.

8. Susitna River king salmon peak at the village at the end of May or in early June and are usually completely past the village by the end of June.

9. The mid-May to mid-June king salmon fishery is a customary and traditional subsistence use by residents domiciled in the village of Tyonek of the Susitna River king salmon in that this fishery has been in existence for generations, that the harvest of the king salmon at this time is a customary and traditional component of the cultural life of the village, that the art of cutting large king salmon has been handed down through generations, that the early king salmon are the first significant subsistence fresh salmon of the spring, that Susitna River king salmon are oilier than other species of salmon found in Cook Inlet in the vicinity of Tyonek and therefore better suited for drying and preserving for winter use and less susceptible to damage while drying from insects and seabirds, and that drying takes approximately three weeks and is usually completed by the end of June.

10. The residents of the village of Tyonek harvest king salmon with set nets from the beach in front of their fish camps immediately south of the village.

11. Since 1964, the residents of the village of Tyonek have been prevented from participating in their customary and traditional mid-May to mid-June king salmon subsistence fishery by regulations adopted by defendants and their predecessors. These regulations were initially adopted due to poor escapement of the Susitna River king salmon.

12. Prior to the December 1979 and March 1980 meetings of defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES, said defendant, on request of plaintiff NATIVE VILLAGE OF TYONEK, published summaries of regulations proposed by said plaintiffs pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act to open a subsistence king salmon fishery for the residents of the village of Tyonek, between May 15 and June 15.

13. On March 26, 1980, defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES held a public hearing and received testimony on the proposed regulations from the Alaska Department of Fish and Game, residents of the village of Tyonek and other members of the public. Public testimony was also received at the December 19, 1979 meeting of defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES.

14. Testimony presented at the public hearings indicated that the residents of the village of Tyonek customarily and traditionally harvested king salmon for subsistence uses between May 15 and June 15 prior to the closure in 1964.

15. Though evidence was presented to defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES that restrictions on taking by all user groups of Susitna River king salmon in Cook Inlet were necessary, no evidence was presented stating that adoption of the proposed subsistence regulations would jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of Susitna River king salmon on a sustained-yield basis and the defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES made no finding at the March meeting to that effect.

16. The defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES rejected the plaintiffs' proposals for subsistence fishing in Cook Inlet but adopted proposals which resulted in authorizing the sport harvest of up to 13,100 Susitna River king salmon pursuant to 5 AAC 60 .030(a).

17. A failure of the defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES to adopt regulations opening a king salmon season for the residents of the village of Tyonek, between May 15 and June 15 of each year, threaten plaintiffs with irreparable harm in that plaintiffs' customary and traditional use of Susitna River king salmon from May 15 to June 15 will be unnecessarily denied to them. Access to a significant customary and traditional subsistence resource in accordance with A.S. 16.05.251(b) will be lost and the customary and traditional cultural life of the village will be disrupted.

18. No other species of salmon available to the residents of the village of Tyonek can fully replace Susitna River king salmon harvested between May 15 and June 15 as a subsistence resource or substitute for the role of Susitna River king salmon in the customary and traditional cultural life of the village.

CONSENT DECREE

1. Under A.S. 16.05.940(6) and (26), subsistence uses of fish are the customary and traditional uses in Alaska of such fish for direct personal or family consumption as food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, or transportation, for the making and selling of handicraft articles out of non-edible by-products of such fish evidence was presented stating that adoption of the proposed subsistence regulations would jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of Susitna River king salmon on a sustained-yield basis and the defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES made no finding at the March meeting to that effect.

16. The defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES rejected the plaintiffs' proposals for subsistence fishing in Cook Inlet but adopted proposals which resulted in authorizing the sport harvest of up to 13,100 Susitna River king salmon pursuant to 5 AAC 60 .030(a).

17. A failure of the defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES to adopt regulations opening a king salmon season for the residents of the village of Tyonek, between May 15 and June 15 of each year, threaten plaintiffs with irreparable harm in that plaintiffs' customary and traditional use of Susitna River king salmon from May 15 to June 15 will be unnecessarily denied to them. Access to a significant customary and traditional subsistence resource in accordance with A.S. 16.05.251(b) will be lost and the customary and traditional cultural life of the village will be disrupted.

18. No other species of salmon available to the residents of the village of Tyonek can fully replace Susitna River king salmon harvested between May 15 and June 15 as a subsistence resource or substitute for the role of Susitna River king salmon in the customary and traditional cultural life of the village.

CONSENT DECREE

1. Under A.S. 16.05.940(3) and (27), subsistence uses of fish are the customary and traditional uses by Alaska residents of such fish for direct personal or family consumption as food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, or transportation, for the making and selling of handicraft articles out of non-edible by-products of such fish taken for personal or family consumption, and for the customary trade, barter or sharing for personal or family consumption.

2. The residents of the village of Tyonek have a customary and traditional subsistence use of Susitna River king salmon between May 15 and June 15 for all of the reasons set forth in paragraph 9 of the Statement of Agreed Facts. The role of the harvest of Susitna River king salmon in the cultural life of Tyonek and the handing down of information about the harvest, preparation, and use of such fish from generation to generation are significant factors in determining whether use of such fish for personal or family consumption is a "customary and traditional" subsistence use of such fish.

3. Defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES is required to adopt regulations which authorize the subsistence fishing of Susitna River king salmon by residents of the village of Tyonek in the upper Cook Inlet in the vicinity of the village of Tyonek between May 15 and June 15 each year, unless such defendant determines, in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, that any subsistence fishing for Susitna River king salmon by the residents of the village of Tyonek will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of such fish on a sustained-yield basis.

4. The parties agree and the Court approves, for the purposes of achieving an agreement to this litigation, that whenever defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES makes a finding that any subsistence fishing for Susitna River king salmon by residents of the village of Tyonek will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of such fish on a sustained-yield basis, such finding shall be made on the record and shall detail the biological information which forms the basis of such finding. The finding (including the biological information) shall be reduced to writing.

5. Regulations setting bag limits, gear types, and open fishing periods for the subsistence fishing of Susitna River king salmon by residents of the village of Tyonek shall cause the least adverse impact upon such residents, and shall be consistent, insofar as practicable, with sound fishery conservation practices, such as minimizing the impact on the return of such fish to any one stream.

6. Whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of Susitna River king salmon to assure the maintenance of such fish on a sustained-yield basis, or to assure the continuation of subsistence uses of such fish, customary and traditional subsistence use by the residents of the village of Tyonek shall be the priority use under A.S. 16.05.251(b). The defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES shall not adopt regulations which allow for the commercial (between May 15 and June 15) and sport fishing of Susitna River king salmon, without first adopting regulations which provide for this subsistence priority over such commercial and sport use unless the Board has made a finding, as required by A.S. 16.05.251(b), that any subsistence fishing for Susitna River king salmon by the residents of the village of Tyonek will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of such fish on a sustained-yield basis.

7. Defendants ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES, RONALD O. SKOOG, and WILLIAM R. NIX and their successors in office are hereby permanently restrained from enforcing regulations which prohibit residents of the village of Tyonek from subsistence fishing for Susitna River king salmon in the upper Cook Inlet in the vicinity of the village of Tyonek between May 15 and June 15 of each year without defendant ALASKA BOARD OF FISHERIES first finding, in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, that such subsistence fishing will jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of such fish on a sustained-yield basis.

8. Counts I, II and IV of plaintiffs' complaint are dismissed with prejudice.

9. This Court shall retain jurisdiction over this civil action until July 1, 1981.

MEMORANDUM

State of Alaska

DATE: March 15, 1985

FILE NO:

TELEPHONE NO: 465-4100

FROM: Don W. Collinsworth

SUBJECT: Management Issues Arising From the Madison Decision

Under Madison, the Fisheries Board may have difficulty in predicting harvest levels for the Copper River fishwheel and dip net fishery, due to uncertainty about how many people will participate and how many fish they will take. Additional management problems are posed by the timing of the sockeye run and the heavy dip net harvest, which occurs on the early part of the run. These considerations seem to require more conservative management of the Prince William Sound commercial fishery.

In summary, we see a number of complex management issues arising from the Madison decision. Regulation specialists for Commercial Fisheries and Game Divisions are presently identifying the specific regulatory options which the Boards could address for the upcoming season.

SUBJECT: Management Issues Arising From the Madison Decision

INITIAL ASSESSMENT

As you requested, my staff has completed an initial assessment of the Madison decision's implications for fish and wildlife management. This memorandum uses the Cook Inlet, Naknek River, and Copper River fisheries as examples, but Madison also affects existing Board of Fisheries regulations for Angoon and Lake Iliamna-Lake Clark and existing Game Board regulations for permit hunts.

Although the Game Board has not applied the eight criteria in the same way the Board of Fisheries has, Department of Law has said that the Game Board may be unable to continue providing permit hunts restricted to particular communities unless guided hunting and hunting by non-residents have already been eliminated. Further the legal analysis concludes that Madison may require the Game Board to discontinue non-state-resident and guided hunting for all permit hunts.

Department of Law and the management divisions are continuing to analyze Madison impacts and more information will be developed. However, this memorandum is intended to alert you to some of the anticipated area impacts.

COOK INLET/KENAI RIVER/SUSITNA RIVER SALMON

Testimony and data presented to the Board of Fisheries indicate that within the last 20-30 years, almost every part of Cook Inlet, including Knik Arm and Turnagain Arm, has been open to subsistence set-net fishing for salmon (Braund, 1980). The open season for fishing varied from location to location, as well as through time, but included the period May through September. Until 1978, 50 fathoms of net could be used in many areas. Species harvested in these set-net fisheries included primarily kings, sockeye, and coho.

As Anchorage and the Kenai Peninsula grew, subsistence salmon seasons were gradually restricted until only small areas remained open for very short periods with limited gear. Since 1980, subsistence fisheries have been authorized in very limited areas for residents of Tyonek, English Bay, and Port Graham only.

The impacts of the Madison decision on existing Cook Inlet fisheries depend on how many people decide to participate, and where and when they fish, which makes it difficult for us to precisely assess immediate or long term effects. At a minimum, however, we would expect to see an increase in the gill net harvest of west side and Susitna River king salmon, since any Alaskan will be able to participate in the Tyonek district subsistence king fishery. This fishery begins in May, and has limits of 70 kings per household. Presently, this fishery is restricted to persons domiciled in Tyonek, and on average, 2,000 kings have been harvested annually.

It is impossible to predict how much new effort would occur, but any significant increase in this fishery will require compensating reductions in the expanding sport fishery of the Susitna drainage. This, of course, would mean reductions in seasons, bag limits, or even closures of certain areas to fishing if the subsistence harvest grows substantially.

In addition, the Kenai Peninsula subsistence net fisheries which existed in the late 1970s, and which have been closed since 1980, may have to be reopened to all Alaskans. This would include set net fisheries on king, sockeye, and coho stocks which enter all of the Kenai Peninsula drainages. King and coho stocks, which are already the focus of major allocation conflicts between sport and commercial users, will now have to be shared with another user group, which will have a priority. Additional harvest restrictions on sport and commercial fisheries in Cook Inlet may have to be imposed either before the fishing season or in-season as we determine whether escapements are being achieved.

Because of recent regulatory constraints, past harvests are a poor indicator of the potential demand for subsistence fishing in Cook Inlet. Further, recorded harvests probably underestimate the actual historical subsistence harvest due to inadequate catch reporting systems. If accessible beach areas are opened to net fishing, we would expect a substantial interest, similar to that in the Copper River dip net fishery. One indicator of this demand is the fact that participation in the Cook Inlet subsistence fishery increased from less than 100 people to more than 1,300 between 1977 and 1980, before the Board adopted the regulations restricting subsistence use. An additional indicator of demand are the requests the Fisheries Board has received from people wanting to fish with nets in Knik Arm and other parts of Cook Inlet.

In an extreme scenario, the Board could be required by a court to authorize subsistence fishing wherever it has occurred in Cook Inlet, Turnagain Arm, and Knik Arm, throughout the summer, by any Alaskan. The Madison decision clearly states that sport and commercial uses must be eliminated before subsistence uses can be restricted. Therefore, it seems unlikely that the Board or department could impose subsistence harvest limits or quotas to ensure that commercial and sport uses could continue.

In summary, we see major demands being imposed upon the department for in-season monitoring and management of all harvests to ensure adequate escapements in Cook Inlet. We also see the potential for confusion and controversy over Cook Inlet salmon management escalating and making it more complex.

NAKNEK RIVER SALMON

The Naknek River is currently open to subsistence fishing only by residents of the Naknek and Kvichak river drainages. This regulation was adopted in 1981 because of concern about growth in the Naknek subsistence salmon fishery by other Alaskans. From 1976 to 1980, participation and king harvests in the Naknek subsistence fishery doubled as more people learned about the fishery and came to the Naknek-King Salmon area to take part in it.

The Board, local residents, and sport fishermen all became concerned that this growing harvest was beginning to affect the allocation of the Naknek River's limited king salmon stocks. By restricting the fishery to local residents, the Board of Fisheries was able to allow continued development of the Naknek sport fishery on kings, which has become increasingly significant to guides and transportation services. By creating a personal use sockeye fishery on the Naknek, the Board was able to accommodate non-local fishing demand and shift it to more abundant species.

The Madison decision appears to open the Naknek net subsistence fishery again to all residents of the state. If significant effort occurs, it seems quite likely that restrictions will have to be imposed on the sport fishery in order to ensure king salmon escapement.

COPPER RIVER/PRINCE WILLIAM SOUND SALMON

Historically, Copper River sockeye have been harvested by commercial fishermen in Prince William Sound, residents of the Copper Basin and other interior communities, as well as Fairbanks and Anchorage residents. With population growth and increased publicity, the Chitina dip net fishery grew dramatically; harvests more than tripled from 1980 to 1983. Additionally, many urban dip net fishermen preferred to fish the early portion of the Copper River run, which posed potentially severe management problems for early run sockeye. About 50 percent of the Copper River run passes through the commercial fishery district in the first two to three weeks of the season, which means any management decisions to restrict the fishery must be made on very short notice.

As subsistence harvests increased in the 1970s, the board began restricting fishwheel and dip net harvests in the Copper River. In 1984, the board examined subsistence dip net and fishwheel fisheries in the Copper River. It authorized subsistence fishing for Copper Basin residents. Harvest by the subsistence fishery was predicted to be approximately 20,000 salmon and individual bag limits could go as high as 500. The board then established a personal use fishery for people who did not reside in the communities identified as having subsistence uses. The personal use fishery had bag limits of 15 salmon for individuals and 30 for households. The total catch was limited to 60,000 sockeye plus twenty-five percent of any excess escapement. The in-river sport fishery was predicted to harvest approximately 5,000 sockeye and the Prince William Sound commercial drift gill net fishery was managed to provide for these known harvest and escapement levels.

Under Madison, the Fisheries Board may have difficulty in predicting harvest levels for the Copper River fishwheel and dip net fishery, due to uncertainty about how many people will participate and how many fish they will take. Additional management problems are posed by the timing of the sockeye run and the heavy dip net harvest, which occurs on the early part of the run. These considerations seem to require more conservative management of the Prince William Sound commercial fishery.

In summary, we see a number of complex management issues arising from the Madison decision. Regulation specialists for Commercial Fisheries and Game Divisions are presently identifying the specific regulatory options which the Boards could address for the upcoming season.

Alaska Department of Fish & Game NEWS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE MARCH 21, 1985

Boards of Fisheries and Game to Discuss Madison

JUNEAU--The Board of Fisheries will take public testimony on March 25, 1985 during its spring meeting in Anchorage regarding impacts of the recent Madison decision. On February 22 the Alaska Supreme Court handed down its decision on Madison vs. ADF&G, reversing lower court decisions on the board's interpretation and application of Alaska's 1978 subsistence law. Although the court case was brought by Cook Inlet fishermen, the decision affects the Board of Fisheries and Board of Games interpretation of the 1978 subsistence law in all of the state's subsistence regulations.

The boards had interpreted the 1978 law as a mandate to protect customary and traditional uses of fish by rural Alaskans. This interpretation was consistent with the standards set out in Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act.

The Alaska Supreme Court held that the board's interpretation was incorrect, and said that under the current statute the board must allow all Alaskans to participate in subsistence fisheries, unless fish stocks have declined to the point that commercial and sport fisheries have been eliminated. Unless the statute is amended many of the board's regulations will need revision.

At a minimum, the court's ruling apparently means that the board must recommend a regulatory plan for the 1985 fishing season. It is unclear whether the board will be asked to reauthorize every subsistence net fishery which existed, but board records indicate that this could include set net fisheries on king, sockeye and coho on the the east and west sides of Cook Inlet. The board may also have to examine subsistence salmon fishing regulations for the Copper River, Naknek--Kvichak, Lake Iliamna--Lake Clark, Angoon, and other areas.

Department of Law reviewed the Madison decision for the Board of Fisheries and the Board of Game during their joint meeting March 18, 1985, at the Captain Cook Hotel in Anchorage. This gave the boards an opportunity to discuss the regulatory impacts of the Madison decision. After public testimony on March 25, 1985 at the Captain Cook Hotel, the Board of Fisheries will discuss plans for this summer's fisheries. The Board of Game may hold similar discussions on April 2, 1985 (also at the Captain Cook Hotel in Anchorage).

Dear Mitch,

The Alaska Sportfishing Association wishes to identify our priorities for this legislative session and comment on the apparent current action that is taking place.

1. HB 288 (SB231) Subsistence. The Administration proposed these bills and we have submitted a substitute bill with a "sunset clause". It is there for your consideration since we do not feel that, even though valiant attempts have been made by the House Resources Committee to gain public input, a fully informed public can be achieved in the limited time remaining for this session. It is probably the most important and complex issue of this decade. There still remain in Alaska cases where dependency on subsistence is crucial to life. There are thousands that would love to have the priority offered by subsistence, thousands more jealous of those with that priority, and thousands that don't have the foggiest idea of what is going on. We feel that a joint committee from the House and Senate of legislators honestly and sincerely interested in arriving at a fair, legal, and just solution to the subsistence issue needs to be formed and start getting public input as soon as possible.

2. HB 93. Establishing a system of recreational rivers. This bill has now been diluted so badly that it represents a mockery of the original bill. The purpose was to protect the environment around several excellent rivers in the Mat-Su area. It is now call "a system of special use rivers" wherein we would designate those rivers that we will allow placer mining to destroy. Will we do the same for a cyanide manufacturer if they wish to establish a plant in Alaska? The result is the same...no fish. Clear creek (Chunilna) has been deleted from the list, Chelatna Lake has been deleted at the head waters of Lake Creek (a stream we are trying to save from an abandoned mine that has started pouring muddy run-off into the head waters of a famous fishing stream and a spawning ground for thousands of salmon. Sedimentation into the stream bed of any river eventually cakes the bed and salmon and native trout can no longer spawn there. Multiple uses have been added to these areas that do not protect the habitat. Allowing gravel extraction for public use will still accelerate muddy run-off that clogs up stream beds. Salmon don't differentiate between public use run-off and private use run-off. Lumbering too close to the streams has destroyed hundreds of rivers in the lower 48 and will here if allowed to occur. Grazing of cattle in close proximity to streams also increases errosion and run-off. Protection is what we are asking for and that no longer exists in the bill.

3. HB's 29,36,& 43. Access to Susitna drainage streams. Little if any action to date. Money is the problem we are told. There is $1.969 million available to the State in D-J funds that are from federal exise taxes on the sale of sportfishing equipment. That money is not to be used to replace State money in already existing programs for fisheries but is to go to new uses for improvement of recreational fisheries. Currently $760,000 is being diverted illegally from this fund to replace FRED division funds that were formerly funded by the State. Though cleverly designed, this use will not stand federal scrutiny and will result in the loss of the funds. Rather than face that scene wouldn't it be far more beneficial to the State to use those funds for their intended purpose and when the bill comes up in Congress in 1988 for renewal we can say they are going for a good cause and demonstrate to them by enumerating projects such as the above three bills. FRED division enhancement projects are extremely expensive to keep up year after year, but year after year they keep coming in for more money. Some programs on barren streams appear well thought out but others only justify the job position and salary. Why not put the money for that salary into the deleted fishery biologist position in Homer? Of all places on the peninsula it would seem that that fishery warrants close observation and study.

A quick look at the last two points and it is obvious that we are supporting long term preservation of a very important renewable resource for the people of Alaska, the sportfishing and tourist industry, and the commercial fishing industry. It is very difficult to sit on the sidelines and watch such crucial bills be used as trade-offs for some other piece of legislation. We intend to take it to the public and the courts if necessary to assure that future generations do not have to put up with the blunders that have been made already in the lower 48. The learning curve is already there.

Please assist in anyway you can to get these bills on track.

Sincerely,

Bob Hunter

Dear Senator Abood:

The fishermen in Area E (Prince William Sound, Copper amd Bering Rivers) have, since 1974, contributed $2.5 million and their own voluntary time to the development of Prince William Sound Aquaculture Corporation (PWSAC) and the implementation of salmon enhancement programs by this Regional Aquaculture Association.

This form of "self help" resource development by the harvesting fishermen, which was created by the Alaska State Legislature in 1975 has set a responsible standard for enhancement that is without parallel in the rest of the United States. We project that our total enhancement program will generate annual revenues to the commercial fishery alone of $20 million within ten years. Moreover, the Esther Hatchery will produce coho and chinook salmon fry to be stocked in nearby lakes, which we project will return 7500 coho and 6000 chinook salmon adults to the developing sport fishery near Whittier. Salmon from this hatchery will also be available to a future subsistence fishery.

PWSAC has actively supported the enhancement of sockeye and chinook salmon on the Copper River in cooperative research programs with the Alaska Department of Fish & Game since 1981. Funds expended to date represent $1.6 million. These research studies have focused upon the development of an expanded hatchery program in the Upper Copper River in fiscal year 1987. We, along with other groups, feel that more fish production will increase the share of fish for all users of the resource, commercial, sport and subistence included.

The recent Alaska Supreme Court ruling on the subsistence issue, the Madison decision, has the potential to undercut the established gillnet fishery before we have an opportunity to implement our Regional Comprehensive Enhancement Plan. Our fishermen, processors, Cordova businesses and community in general could suffer a devastating economic loss in the near and long term if this decision stands.

While the 1978 subsistence law provides for an appropriate priority use of resources by residents of Alaska who have traditionally relied on fish and game, it does not give the boards enough guidance to protect other traditional users, that is sports and commercial fishermen.

We urgently need your help and support in order to see that Senate Bill #231 is enacted in this legislative session.

Thank you for your support.

Dear Sir:

In regard to Senate Bill #231, I am concerned with the issue of who is to use and manage the fish and game resources, specifically, in my area of Cordova and the salmon of the Copper River fishery. I was born and raised on Cordova, have fished for 21 of my 33 years, and depend entirely on these resources for my livlihood. I would like to see the management of our resources handled, so that I, and the many other residents of Cordova who depend solely on the Copper River, will be ensured of my continued use of this resource.

Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter.

Dear Senator Abood:

I am writing to urge you to schedule SB #231 for public hearing in the State Affairs committee. It is crucial to Cordova and its fishing fleet that we have a full gillnet season in the Copper River area in 1985. The town of Cordova and its fishermen will be in dire financial need without the income derived by this 1985 fishing season.

It is imperative that the Board of Fisheries and Fish and Game are able to manage the resources for the good of all user groups in the State of Alaska. In the case of the Copper River, 50% of the salmon are Copper River stocks and the rest are Delta stock. This creates a management problem causing possible over-escapement and confusion in controlling small salmon runs ie; in the Delta and Copper River.

Alaska Dept. of Fish and Game, PWSAC, and Regional Advisory Boards combined efforts to design and implement a management plan for the Copper River. This accomplishment was a result of tremendous research and allowed for a balance to provide access to the resource for all user groups. The Copper River Management Plan has successfully been implemented by experts in fishery management. It is critical to the resource that this legislation receives your endorsement and immediate action.

Dear Senator Abcod:

We are writing to urge you to support Senate bill #231 or similar legislation that would give the Alaska Board of Fish and Game back the power to regulate and manage our fish and game resources! If this isn't accomplished before the commercial fishing is due to open in May of this year the affect it will have on the residents and town of Cordova will be DISASTROUS! I have lived in Alaska for 38 years and my husband has been here 17 years. My father, two brothers, and my husband are commercial fishermen. Our whole livelihood depends on fishing! We have three boys all of whom fish with their Dad and hope to continue in the family tradition! We have two boat loans through the state which without a fishing season we will be unable to meet our payments! We feel that if management is not turned back to Fish & Game and our commercial Gillnet fishing is closed the town of Cordova will become a ghost town and people will no longer be able to live here. Please we urge you to support this bill and push for quick passage. Thank you.

Dear Senator Mitch Abood,

We are writing to you concerning Bill #231. In the interest of our local community, fishermen, and business PLEASE see that this bill gets to the public hearing right away. The gill net season for the Copper River opens May 15, 1985. We are, as you know are a fishing community and our business serves the fishing fleet both with mechanics and parts. The gill netters are our main income and if they do not fish it will cut off our business and many in Cordova! We employ between seven to nine people each season. These people too will be affected and probably laid off if we do not have a gill net season. Already with the lack of the crab fishery our community suffers during the winter. This winter has been long and hard financially.

Please--Please help us stay on the map by helping us with our gill net fishery. Move Bill #231.

Gentlemen:

Our sportfishing groups are deeply concerned about the potential chaos, damage to the resource, public safety and user group impacts in the event there is no legislation passed for protecting the fisheries in 1985. The potential exists for a resource calamity.

The attached suggested "band-aid" bill as a substitute for Senate Bill #231 endeavors to accomplish three basic purposes:

1. Returns the authority to manage fish and game to the status quo that existed prior to the Madison decision of February 21, 1985.

2. Provides a "sunset" clause for this legislation of March 31, 1986. We feel that the legislative and the executive branch will not have the time to deal with this very complicated subject as there is less than 40 days remaining in this session. We hope and encourage the legislature to hold state wide hearings during the balance of this year and develop a permanent long term solution to this very sensitive issue. The section-by-section analysis attached, illustrates some of the questions that we feel will need to be answered in the long term legislation to be enacted next year.

3. Our bill refers to criteria that establish rural subsistence uses as has been done historically in the past by ADF&G regulations numbers 5 AAC 99.010, 5 AAC 01.597. These criteria are attached as an exhibit for your reference.

Section 3 is proposed to allow the Commissioner of Fish and Game to reinstate as an emerency provision the regulations that were allowed in 1984. We have suggested this section to assure that statutory time limitations do not preculde implementation of such a law. We are available for public dicussion. We respectfully request your consideration.

SENATE BILL NO.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to the taking of fish and game for subsistence; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. FINDINGS. The legislature finds that

(1) the continuation of the opportunity for non-wasteful subsistence uses by many rural Alaskans is important and in many cases essential to their physical, traditional, cultural, and social existence, and that in certain instances no practical alternative resources or means are available to replace food, supplies and other items gathered from fish and wildlife which supply rural residents dependent on subsistence uses;

(2) in order to protect subsistence users most dependent on subsistence, and in order to protect sport and commercial uses of fish and wildlife, and in order to maintain healthy fish and wildlife populations available to subsistence, sport and commercial users, it is necessary for the Board of Fisheries and the Board of Game to have authority, only for the 1985 fishing and hunting seasons and until March 31, 1986, to regulate subsistence fishing and hunting in the manner in which they were regulated in 1984.

(3) conservation of fish and wildlife during the 1985 season and thereafter will be furthered if the legislature is unhurried in its consideration of complicated social, political, and biological questions related to subsistence; by March 31, 1986 the legislature should be able to consider, after statewide hearings, more complicated subsistence issues that cannot be adequately considered in the remaining days of the first session of the fourteenth legislature.

* Sec. 2. AS 16.05 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 16.05.258. SUBSISTENCE CRITERIA. Until March 31, 1986, and in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (A.S. 44.62), the Board of Fisheries and the Board of Game may adopt regulations in order to identify customary and traditional subsistence uses by rural Alaskans by using the criteria set forth in the regulations in effect in 1984 and found at 5 AAC 99.010 and 5 AAC 01.597, and those criteria are hereby established for the 1985 fishing and hunting seasons.

* Sec. 3. For the 1985 fishing and hunting seasons, the Commissioner of Fish and Game shall use his authority, in AS 16.05.060, to issue emergency regulations in order to provide for subsistence as it occurred in 1984; provided however, that in this instance a biological emergency need not exist as is otherwise required by AS 16.05.060.

* Sec. 4. This Act shall take effect immediately in accordance AS 01.10.070(c).

Section by Section Analysis
Draft Substitute for S.B. 231
Proposed by Kenai River Sportfishing Association and the Alaska Sportfishing Association
April 3, 1985

INTRODUCTION

The recent decision of the Alaska Supreme Court, in Madison v. Alaska Board of Fisheries, has already resulted in opening several subsistence fisheries to all Alaskans, and there is a widespread opinion that subsistence everywhere in the state, for both fish and game, is now open to all Alaskans. Because of the Madison decision, the Board of Fisheries has opened to all Alaskans the subsistence fisheries on the Kenai Peninsula, in the Iliamna and Lake Clark areas, on the Naknek River, on the Copper River, and at Angoon. Those subsistence fisheries will be opened to all Alaskans unless the legislature acts quickly to maintain the status quo until there is a better opportunity for public input.

The impact of the Madison decision, and the need for legislative remedies probably cannot be adequately assessed in the remaining days of the current legislative session. Therefore, the substitute bill proposed by the Kenai River Sportfishing Association and the Alaska Sportfishing Association is designed as a temporary "band-aid", in order to maintain subsistence, sport and commercial uses generally as they occurred in 1984. This "band-aid" approach will protect the resources and protect subsistence users most dependent on those resources, until the legislature and the public have had an opportunity to consider more long-term solutions necessary to protect subsistence and yet provide for sport and commercial uses. The substitute allows a year for the legislature to hold statewide hearings and to act.

SECTION BY SECTION ANALYSIS

Section 1 --

Section 1 of the draft substitute contains the following findings which justify this temporary solution of maintianing the status quo for one year:

(1) that rural subsistence by those individuals who are dependent on the resources is important to protect;

(2) that in order to protect subsistence, sport and commercial uses, and in order to protect the health of the fish and wildlife resources that are so important to all Alaskans, it is necessary to regulate those uses in generally the same manner as occurred in 1984.

(3) that the remaining days of this legislative session probably are insufficient to allow reasonable consideration of long-term solutions to subsistence issues. This last finding is particularly important because it recognizes that complicated issues related to subsistence deserve thorough, unhurried examination. Among those questions, which the legislature and the public may wish to consider, are:

(a) whether the subsistence priority should be defined in terms of being available to rural Alaskans only;

(b) whether the legislature should give guidance to the Board of Fisheries and the Board of Game in order to assist them in defining the use of the word "rural";

(c) whether better legislative language exists -- rather than the restriction of subsistence to an undefined rural population -- in order to more adequately protect subsistence users dependent on the resources, while thereby providing more oppportunity for sport and commercial users; such a solution will reduce conflict between sport, commercial and subsistence users;

(d) whether the legislature should give additional guidance to the Board of Fisheries and the Board of Game in order to assist them in defining "customary and traditional subsistence uses", as they are protected but not defined in state and federal statutes related to Alaska subsistence;

(e) whether in some circumstances it may be appropriate to prohibit subsistence use of certain fragile species or stocks of wildlife.

(f) whether the legislature should give guidance to the boards to establish criteria for focusing subsistence on more abundant stocks of fish and wildlife.

These are the some of questions that need to be answered after thorough public and legislative consideration, which can only occur if more time is available. Sport, commercial, Native, rural and urban interests will all need to participate. We also urge the Department of Fish and Game to take an active role in suggesting long-term solutions to the state's subsistence issues.

Section 2 --

This section ratifies, for the 1985 fishing and hunting seasons and only until March 31, 1986, the previous criteria, in existing regulations at 5 AAC 99.010 and 5 AAC 01.597, that have been used by the boards until now and prior to the Madison decision for determining customary and traditional subsistence use. This section takes the situation back to the status quo and will protect rural subsistence as it was managed in 1984.

Section 3 --

This section directs the Commissioner of Fish and Game to use his emergency regulatory authority to protect rural subsistence, and sport and commercial uses, as they were managed in 1984. This is temporary authority for the 1985 season only.

Section 4 --

This section provides that the legilation takes effect immediately.

SUBSISTENCE CRITERIA USED PRIOR TO THE RECENT SUPREME COURT DECISION

JOINT BOARD'S SUBSISTENCE POLICY

CHAPTER 99.
SUBSISTENCE USES.

5 AAC 99.010. JOINT BOARDS OF FISHERIES AND GAME SUBSISTENCE PROCEDURES. (a) In applying a subsistence priority, the Board of Fisheries and the Board of Game will provide for conservation and development of Alaska's fish and game resources according to the following procedures:

(1) each board will assess the biological status of fish or game resources and determine whether a surplus may be harvested during a regulatory year consistent with the conservation and development of the resources on the sustained yield principal and compatible with the public interest;

(2) each board will identify subsistence uses of fish and game resources, recognizing that subsistence uses are customary and traditional uses by rural Alaska residents for food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, transportation, making of handicrafts, customary trade, barter and sharing.

(b) Customary and traditional subsistence uses by rural Alaska residents will be identified by use of the following criteria:

(1) a long-term, consistent pattern of use, excluding interruption by circumstances beyond the user's control such as regulatory prohibitions;

(2) a use pattern recurring in specific seasons of each year;

(3) a use pattern consisting of methods and means of harvest which are characterized by efficiency and economy of effort and cost, and conditioned by local circumstances;

(4) the consistent harvest and use of fish or game which is near, or reasonably accessible from, the user's residence;

(5) the means of handling, preparing, preserving, and storing fish or game which has been traditionally used by past generations, but not excluding recent technological advances where appropriate;

(6) a use pattern which includes the handing down of knowledge of fishing or hunting skills, values and lore from generation to generation;

(7) a use pattern in which the hunting or fishing effort or the products of that effort are distributed or shared among others within a definable community of persons, including customary trade, barter, sharing and gift-giving; customary trade may include limited exchanges for cash, but does not include significant commercial enterprises; a community may include specific villages or towns, with a historical preponderance of subsistence users, and encompasses individuals, families, or groups who in fact meet the criteria described in this subsection; and

(8) a use pattern which includes reliance for subsistence purposes upon a wide diversity of the fish and game resources of an area, and in which that pattern of subsistence uses provides substantial economic, cultural, social, and nutritional elements of the subsistence user's life.

(c) After identifying subsistence uses based upon the criteria set out in (b) of this section, each board will determine the approximate amount of fish or game necessary to provide fully for reasonable opportunities to engage in these customary and traditional uses.

(d) Each board will adopt regulations that provide an opportunity for the subsistence taking of fish or game resources in amounts sufficient to provide for the customary and traditional uses identified in (b) of this section, and consistent with sound conservation and management practices. In no instance may the subsistence taking jeopardize or interfere with the maintenance of a specific fish stock or game population on a sustained yield basis.

(e) Each board will, in its discretion, adopt regulations that provide an opportunity for non-subsistence uses of the resource, to the extent that the non-subsistence uses do not jeopardize or interfere with the conservation and development of fish or game resources on a sustained yield basis, or with the opportunity for taking these resources for customary and traditional subsistence uses as provided in (d) of this section.

(f) When circumstances such as increased numbers of users, weather, predation, or loss of habitat may jeopardize the sustained yield of a fish stock or game population, each board will exercise all practical options for restricting non-subsistence harvest before subsistence uses are restricted. If all available restrictions for non-subsistence uses have been implemented and further restrictions are needed, each board will reduce the take for subsistence uses in a series of graduated steps, by giving maximum protection to subsistence users who

(1) live closest to the resource;

(2) have fewest available alternative resources; and

(3) have the greatest customary and direct dependence upon the resource.

(g) In no event, however, will a board allow uses which will jeopardize or interfere with the conservation and management of fish stocks on game populations on a sustained yield basis.

5 AAC 01.597. CHARACTERISTICS OF SUBSISTENCE FISHERIES. (a) The Board of Fisheries finds that certain customary and traditional practices and procedures associated with the utilization of fish in the Cook Inlet Area can be used to identify subsistence uses. Based on testimony to the board, the following characteristics are those that should be evaluated in the identification of subsistence fisheries:

(1) a long-term, stable, reliable pattern of use and dependency, excluding interruption generated by outside circumstances, e.g., regulatory action or fluctuations in resource abundance;

(2) a use pattern established by an identified community, subcommunity or group having preponderant concentrations of persons showing past use;

(3) a use pattern associated with specific stocks and seasons;

(4) a use based on the most efficient and productive gear and economical use of time, energy and money;

(5) a use pattern occurring in reasonable geographic proximity to the primary residence of the community, group or individual;

(6) a use pattern occurring in locations with easiest and most direct access to the resources;

(7) a use pattern which includes a history of traditional modes of handling, preparing and storing the product without precluding recent technological advances;

(8) a use pattern which includes the intergenerational transmission of activities and skills;

(9) a use pattern in which the effort and products are distributed on a community and family basis including trade, bartering, sharing and gift-giving; and

(10) a use pattern which includes reliance on subsistence taking of a range of wild resources in proximity to the community or primary residency.

(b) The board will identify established geographic communities which may be participating in a subsistence system. The board will then apply all of the characteristics in (a) of this section to the communities and subcommunities, groups and individuals within the communities to determine which uses are customary and traditional and therefore, which communities are eligible for the subsistence priority.

COMMENTS ON SENATE BILL NO. 252

Prepared by
The Division of Elections
April 1, 1985

The Division of Elections is sensitive to the issues that have prompted the introduction of Senate Bill 252, "An Act relating to registration to vote and applications for a ballot". The following comments are offered to share with the sponsors and with the committee, the Division's thoughts regarding first, the degree to which the proposed provisions address the existing problems, and second, other positive and negative impacts on the election process, which could be anticipated upon passage of this bill.

Our discussion will be divided to address the two separate provisions suggested by this bill:

1. Absentee applications included on all registration forms, and

2. Preparation of a special ballot to be used by military and overseas voters.

Each discussion will include brief comments on the provisions themselves, and the specific problems they address, as well as alternative suggestions for the sponsors' and the committee's consideration.

ABSENTEE APPLICATIONS INCLUDED ON ALL REGISTRATIONS FORMS

Background:

It is our understanding that correspondence received by various members of the legislature from the the Federal Voting Assistance Program, Office of the Secretary of Defense, prompted the introduction of this bill. That correspondence, which has also been received by the Lt. Governor, and the division, expresses concern that restrictive mail turnaround time prevents overseas individuals from being able to apply for and cast ballots in time to be counted for a specific election. They also expressed concern that Alaska's policies and statutes require 3 and 4 separate communiques before a military individual can be processed for receiving an absentee ballot. Their perception is that in Alaska a military person wanting to vote absentee by mail must write to request registration forms, await receipt of the form, complete it and submit it to the division, then send in a request for an absentee ballot, await the ballots, and finally mail the voted ballots in for counting. If these requirements were indeed the case, it is easy to see that many military voters would be disenfranchised merely by the lengthy and confusing process of getting their ballots. It should be pointed out that there is some misunderstanding by the Department of Defense as to the actual requirements mandated by Alaskan statutes.

Federal Post Card Application:

The Department of Defense has developed a Federal Post Card which is designed to serve as both a registration form and an absentee ballot request. For the most part the form is adequate, however, it has one deficiency which causes difficulty for the individual seeking to use the form for Alaskan registration. Alaska statutes require that for registration purposes and in applying for an absentee ballot, the individual must provide a physical Alaskan residence address. Post office boxes and star route numbers are not sufficient. This specific requirement is not expressed to individuals using the federal post card. Therefore many individuals applying on this card give their post office box or other insufficient address which requires us to ask for more complete information. It is this specific circumstance which accounts for almost all of the additional correspondence we have had to impose on absentee voters using the federal post card.

It is our impression that SB 252 attempts to deal with this problem.

Solution provided by SB 252:

(Lines 9 - 17, pg 1) The new subsection to AS 15.07.070 suggested in this bill under (g) suggests that all registration forms prepared and used by the state should include an application for an absentee ballot. This solution would thereby eliminate the necessity of so much back and forth correspondence between the voter who needs to vote absentee, and the division, and, therefore, simplify absentee processing.

The division is concerned that the benefits derived from this proposal are overshadowed by the potential problems which could result from its implementation.

Major Concerns:

1. The provision suggested in section (g) attempts to solve the problems of a specific target group by offering a global solution, potentially expanding the difficulties to the entire registered population. 88% of the state's registered voters will have no need for, nor any intent to vote absentee. Of the 12% who vote absentee, 6.3% vote absentee in person and need not apply by mail at all. Of the 5.7% of the voters that vote by mail, an even smaller percentage vote from overseas. That means that in order to accommodate this small percentage of voters who need to vote from overseas, we are providing an application on the voter registration form for approximately 97% of the voting population.

2. By allowing an individual to apply for an absentee ballot at the time an individual registers to vote, or updates his or her registration, as is provided for in this bill, we can anticipate a dramatic increase in the potential number of individuals who will be receiving absentee by mail ballots. Because the bill allows people to do this at any time during the calendar year, there could be many months between the time they apply, and the actual election. As we have come to realize through experience, many people's plans change in the ensuing months, and they frequently forget to contact the division to notify us of their changes. We could therefore anticipate that many ballots sent out to these people would be returned as undeliverable, as people have moved between the time they registered and applied for an absentee ballot and the time of the election.

3. It is also important to point out that the registration form is a permanent record, which for some individuals may need no updating, resubmission or revision for many years. Therefore it would be up to the division to cycle through every registration filed within a given year on which there was a request for an absentee ballot, to pull the absentee request from the person's permanent record for subsequent years.

4. The administrative burden on the division in monitoring the accuracy of the absentee by mail voter list would be almost impossible to deal with. Unreported name changes during the extended timeframe would result in votes not being counted. It would be difficult to monitor the accuracy of permanent and temporary address changes as well. Finally, it would be impossible unless notified by the voter, to determine when the need for the absentee ballots requested at the time of registration, ceased to exist between one election and the next in the applicable year.

5. We could also find that because the option is presented at the time they register, many people who would normally vote at the polls, would apply for absentee by mail ballots even though they have no need for them. Aside from the increased fiscal impact on the state, we feel there could be an increased potential for voter fraud because people would receive a ballot by mail, yet still be in town to vote at the polls. These instances would be caught with the compilation of voter history, this function cannot be completed until after certification of election results, jeopardizing the integrity of election returns, if the instances of fraud became frequent. Prosecution of these cases would result in greater fiscal impact on the state.

Alternative solutions:

The division would like to offer a number of suggestions as alternatives to the provisions of section (g) which would address the specific problems of overseas voters without involving the voter population at large in a potentially disadvantageous procedure. The first options take advantage of the federal provisions which already exist, while the last one suggests an innovation to internal state application forms.

Federal Post Card:

1. First, the division has incorporated into its new direct on line data entry system which will be in effect for the next major election, the ability to accept the federal post card as a voter registration form as well as an application for an absentee ballot.

2. The division intends to provide detailed information to be published in the Voter Assistance Manual issued by the Department of Defense and utilized worldwide, on the state requirements which must be included on the application form. This should greatly improve the frequency with which we are provided full physical addresses by military and overseas applicants.

State Forms:

1. The division recommends that the application for absentee ballot not be included in the registration form for the reasons stated earlier. Rather, we recommend that we target our revisions to the forms related to the specific group of voters who need to vote absentee by mail.

   Specifically, we recommend revising our application for an absentee by mail ballot to include enough required data to also serve as a document from which to register the individual. By doing so, if a voter applies for an absentee ballot for a specific election, and we determine that the applicant is not already registered, we can process the registration then and there, before sending his or her ballots. We have therefore accomplished both while avoiding the delay by having to send the applicant a separate registration form. We would then notify these voters that while we found them to be formerly unregistered, their names will appear on the state's registration rolls. The only thing that would them prevent their votes from being counted would be registration after the 30 day cut off before the election, or untimely receipt of their ballots.

SPECIALLY PREPARED BALLOTS FOR OVERSEAS VOTERS

The second part of the bill relates to the preparation of special ballots to be used specifically by voters voting from outside the united states. We assume that the intent of these provisions is to allow for earlier availability of ballots for voters who are overseas, by providing for a ballot which can be prepared prior to the finalization of the regular official ballot which may not be available until a later date.

Solutions provided in SB 252:

(Lines 25 - 29, pg 1, and Lines 1 - 3, pg 2) The provisions of this section, AS 15.20.082 (b), provide that the director shall prepare a special ballot based on his or her best educated guess as to the names and issues that will indeed be on the final ballot that will go before the voters on election day. It is further provided that ballots under this section may not be distributed earlier than 60 days before the date of the election.

Major Concerns:

1. It may be possible for the director to develop such a ballot for a primary election, based on actual candidacy filings and actual petitions that have been successfully certified in the course of the months prior to the election. Of major concern, however, is the preparation of such a ballot for the general election.

   Alaska's primary is just over 60 days from the general election. As a rule it takes nearly 5 weeks after election day to certify an election, with the first two weeks available to accept absentee by mail ballots, and three additional weeks to complete the process once these delayed ballots have been counted.

   We could anticipate that the increase in advance time for the availability of these ballots would be minimally improved, because our primary is so very tightly scheduled with the general.

2. With the very close races which occur with increasing frequency, the director's best educated guess could indeed be totally incorrect. This would mean that in come cases, a candidate defeated in the primary could end up on the ballot for overseas voters while the victorious candidate's name would not appear. The division expects that most candidates would agree that this would not be a satisfactory situation.

3. Another major concern, is that a judgement call of this nature on the part of the director, would jeopardize the division's totally impartial status as strictly an administering agency. Suddenly, the director would be called upon to make judgements affecting each candidate's access to the ballot. The division is opposed to this concept.

4. Because of the subjective and possibly inaccurate preparation of the special ballot called for by this statute, the division is also concerned about its vulnerability to litigation which could continually occur as candidates, parties and voters surmise that certain judgments exercised by the director in developing the special ballot, may have impacted the outcome of the election.

RECEIVED
MAR 15 1985

Dear Mr. Chairman:

This office administers the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975. The Acts concern the absentee voting rights of all military and merchant marine members and dependents and all U.S. citizens overseas.

Approximately 8,000 Alaskans serve in the Armed Forces. Another 6,000 dependents accompany these members, and another 5,700 citizens who are not affiliated with the federal government and work or live overseas are eligible to vote in Alaska.

These citizens encounter certain inherent difficulties in attempting to exercise their right to vote, difficulties which Congress and some state legislatures have sought to lessen by passing, respectively, the federal acts above and various complementary state statutes. Alaska law, for instance, allowing for ballots to be counted up to 15 days after election day is very helpful in preventing the disenfranchisement of military and overseas voters.

We write now to recommend a change to Alaska election law which would further facilitate absentee voting for this group of Alaska voters. The Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) was designed to be used as both a registration form and ballot request in each of the 50 states. The information elicited from the voter satisfies the various requirements in all states for both registration purposes and requesting of ballots. Consequently, most states accept the single FPCA as a substitute for the state registration form and simultaneously as a request for a ballot. Nine states accept the single FPCA as a request for both a state registration form and a ballot. Only two states, Alaska and West Virgina, require the voter to submit an FPCA for registration purposes, and then a second FPCA to request a ballot.

Thus, Alaskans serving in the military or residing overseas must make four mailings to exercise their right to vote, if unregistered: one to request registration forms, another to submit the forms, a third to request ballots, and a fourth to submit the ballot. This process is cumbersome for the remote voter, far away from his home, and results in the disenfranchisement of many of them. We request that Alaska law be amended to allow the FPCA to be used in place of the state registration form and also that it would be considered simultaneously as a request for ballots.

We also recommend Alaska provide for voting by military and other persons overseas who due to military contingencies or special circumstances, such as submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, or missionaries, will be out of communication for an extended period and cannot receive and return the normal absentee ballots within the regular mailing time. These voters could request a blank ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. California, Connecticut, Georgia, Maine and Washington have adopted such a ballot. (Samples enclosed)

On behalf of military and overseas voters, we would appreciate your support for these initiatives. We will be sending a similar letter to all the other members of the House and Senate State Affairs Committees. John Metz of my staff (202) 694-4928 is available to discuss your comments/suggestions concerning these proposals.

Please let me know if I may be of further assistance.

State of Washington 48th Legislature . 1984 Regular Session by Committee on Constitution, Elections & Ethics (originally sponsored by Representatives Zellinsky, Schmidt and Wilson, by Secretary of State request)

Read first time February 1, 1984.

AN ACT Relating to special absentee ballots; and adding a new section to chapter 29.39 RCW.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF WASHINGTON:

NEW SECTION. Sec. 1. There is added to chapter 29.39 RCW a new section to read as follows:

(1) As provided in this section, county auditors shall provide special absentee ballots to be used for state primary or state general elections. A special absentee ballot shall only be provided to a voter who completes an application stating that:

(a) The voter believes that she or he will be residing or stationed or working outside the continental United States; and

(b) The voter believes that she or he will be unable to vote and return a regular absentee ballot by normal mail delivery within the period provided for regular absentee ballots.

The application for a special absentee ballot may not be filed earlier than ninety days prior to the applicable state primary or general election. The special absentee ballot shall list the offices and measures, if known, scheduled to appear on the state primary or general election ballot. The voter may use the special absentee ballot to write in the name of any eligible candidate for each office and vote on any measure.

(2) With any special absentee ballot issued under this section, the county auditor shall include a listing of any candidates who have filed before the time of the application for offices that will appear on the ballot at that primary or election and a list of any issues that have been referred to the ballot before the time of the application.

(3) Write-in votes on special absentee ballots shall be counted in the same manner provided by law for the counting of other write-in votes. The county auditor shall process and canvass the special absentee ballots provided under this section in the same manner as other absentee ballots under chapters 29.36, 29.39, and 29.62 RCW.

(4) A voter who requests a special absentee ballot under this section may also make application for an absentee ballot under RCW 29.36.010 or a service absentee ballot under RCW 29.39.100. If the regular absentee or service absentee ballot is properly voted and returned, the special absentee ballot shall be deemed void and the county auditor shall reject it in whole when special absentee ballots are canvassed.

RECEIVED
MAR 11 1985

Dear Mitch,

I submit the following comments to House Bill 252 concerning state retirement benefits.

Section 2. concerning credit for military service. I support this amendment and have done so since double benefits for military service were first permitted.

Section 6. concerning a retroactive increase in retirement benefits for current employees. (Amendments do not benefit retirees unless expressly stated in the amendment. AS 39.35.547)

I disagree with current employees receiving a retroactive increase in benefits for years of service that the retirees were also employees. The retirees have made the same retirement contributions for those past years as the current employees have. The cost of the increased benefits to current employees will come from either the existing PERS resources or from additional state funding. If the state has funds available for retoractive benefits, then those funds should be used to benefit both retirees and employees. In no case should the PERS reserves be used to fund retroactive benefits that are not granted equally to both retirees and employees.

Funding benefits for employees and not retirees impacts the state resources that are available to retirees, because the employee's benefits consume all of the available money leaving nothing to correct the retirees' problems that are caused by inflation and other factors. An example is the recent adjustment made by the Department of Administration whereby the medical benefits deductible was changed from $50 to $100. There are 3000 retirees, so the maximum savings to be made is approximately $150,000. Yet the state is willing to spend money to fund retroactive benefits for current employees.

Benefits for current employees are frequently the subject of APEA negotiations with the state and there may have been trade-offs for the medical deduction increase, but the retirees got no trade-off. The retirees got only the increased expense. The retirees have no representation nor are we in the position to negotiate. Our only representation at the "bargaining table" is by our elected legislators.

The fair solutions are either to grant the retroactive service credit to retirees or to eliminate the retroactive service credit for employees and, instead, apply the benefit formula only to service after the effective date of the Act. Either program should be easy to administer in this day of computers.

Section 10. concerning the post-retirement pension adjustment (PRPA). The present PRPA is a maximum of 4% when approved by the Department of Administration and when the financial condition of the retirement fund permits.

According to the Division of Retirement and Benefits, retirees would continue to benefit from any "ad hoc" PRPA's which might be granted under the old law if that were more to their advantage. However, the financial condition of the retirement fund could be impaired by retroactive benefits granted to current employees so that the PRPA cannot be granted to the current retirees.

The PRPA amendments proposed by HB 252 are skewed to future retirees who are already 65 or older when the consumer price index (CPI) increase is at least 5 1/3%. Those future retirees under 65 will be worse off unless the CPI increase is 8% or more and retirees between 55 and 60 will be worse off regardless of how high the CPI goes. The Division of Retirement and Benefits says that this is intended because the younger retirees have more options available with which to make up their losses to inflation. However, under the proposed law, if an employee retires at 55 and the annual CPI increase is 6%, that retiree will be 19% behind the cost of living at age 60; 30% behind at 65; and 40% behind at 75. During those 20 years, that retiree will have had to supplement his retirement benefits with an additional $1180 for each $100 of retirement benefits at age 55 in order to maintain the original standard of living.

Under the present PRPA, that same retiree will be 9% behind at 60; 17% behind at 65; and 32% behind at 75 and will have had to supplement the benefit with $799 during the 20 years. And, the present law does permit some catch-up for years when the CPI increase is less than 4%.

As admirable as the proposed PRPA for the older retirees might appear, the only way an employee can maintain a semblance of parity with the cost-of-living is to never retire! Current employees benefit from cost-of-living increases in their salaries which are then the basis for calculating their retirement benefits. But the minute the employee retires, he begins to fall behind the power curve of inflation. But if the present PRPA or the proposed PRPA are beneficial, then perhaps similar cost-of-living adjustments should be applied to current employees.

In any case, I believe that all retirees should receive the same PRPA. We all contributed to PERS with the expectation of receiving benefits based on the same formula.

No one anticipated the high rate of inflation that has occurred since 1968. Based on previous experience, the state established the 4% PRPA which was thought to be adequate to maintain parity for retirees. The state presently manages to keep up with the CPI in its employees' salaries, so it seems that it should be able to keep up with the CPI in its retirees' benefits and not expect the retirees to adjust to a 75%, 50% or 25% shortfall.

But, if the state can't afford to fund a PRPA that maintains parity with the CPI for retirees, or it can't afford to retroactively increase benefits to retirees, or it can't afford a $50 deductible health insurance for retirees, then it can't afford to retroactively increase the retirement benefits of employees.

Tom

From: Senator Paul Fischer PF

Subject: Sponsor Substitute for Senate Bill 262

This legislation will mark the observance of amateur radio week in Alaska annually. It will coincide with the nationwide "Field Day" activities that the American Radio Relay League sponsors annually on the fourth Saturday in June. It recognizes the important role that amateur radio has and will continue to play in Alaska.

The primary reason for the introduction of this legislation is to recognize the important role that amateur radio operators, better known as "Hams", have played in Alaska. Amateur radio operators have provided in many cases the only link between Alaska and the world during natural disasters. A noteable example of their service to the citizens of Alaska was during the disastrous 1964 Alaska Earthquake; during this catastrophe amateur radio operators provided the first report that Kodiak had survived the earthquake. They also provided for a time the only communications between Alaska and the lower forty-eight states.

During local emergencies such as fires and automotive accidents amateur radio operators will often relay information that is vital to public safety. In emergencies, amateur radio operators often relay the status of victems and messages to their next of kin. On holidays amateurs send free messages for servicemen to their loved ones.

For these reasons, it is important and appropriate that amateur radio operators be recognized annually.

Dear Senator Eliason:

Your staff has requested a brief outline of the steps that would be necessary to establish and fill teacher positions at the Mt. Edgecumbe Boarding School. The following list indicates the step sequence, the responsible agency or agencies and likely timeframes.

Issue New Position Authorization	OMB	2-4 days
Prepare Position Description Questionnaires	DOE	4 days
Draft Class Specifications	DOE or Div. of Per.	2 days
Finalize Class Specifications	DOE and Div. of Per.	2 days
Establish Salary Range	Div. of Per.	4 days
Prepare Recruitment Announcement	Div. of Per.	3-10 days
Public Announcement Period	Div. of Per.	30 days
Examine Applications	Div. of Per. or DOE	14 days
Issue Eligible Lists	Div. of Per.	1 day
Selection Process	DOE	20-30 days
Report for Work	DOE	14 days

The timeframes are generally in work days, so the total represents approximately 17 weeks. The timeframes also make certain assumptions. It assumes that work will proceed before OMB issues the New Positions Authorizations which will coincide with the effective date of the budget. It also assumes that the Department of Education will be able to fund overtime for the Division of Personnel to process applications on an expedited basis. Otherwise, the "first-come first-served" review of application will add nearly two months to the process.

We understand that advertisements have been placed by the Department of Education for these positions. The Placement Office of the University of Alaska, Fairbanks is holding applications from about 300 Alaskans who have already indicated an interest in teaching at Mt. Edgecumbe. This should be more than a sufficient pool to fill the positions, with the possible exception of fairly unique subjects that reflect the Pacific Rim orientation of the planned curriculum.

In summary, action to carry out the above schedule must be initiated within approximately two weeks in order to have teachers on board when school opens in the fall. A decision on placing the position in the exempt service would be needed within this period if wasted efforts are to be avoided.

If I may provide any additional information, please feel free to call on me.

Dear Senator Abood:

During the hearing on SB 266 held on April 18, 1985, several questions were raised concerning the Bill. Without going into excessive detail, I will attempt to address each of these questions.

We are requesting that teachers at Mt. Edgecumbe School be classified as exempt employees. The reason for placing them in the exempt service is that we wish to treat Mt. Edgecumbe teachers in the same manner as the teachers in Centralized Correspondence Study School and the Seward Vocational Technical Center. There is no hidden agenda behind placing them in the exempt service. In that status, we will be able to treat these teachers, and bargain collectively with them if they elect to do so, just as we do our other two teacher bargaining units.

Our other teacher bargaining units have negotiated agreements which provide for employment security very similar to tenure, which is provided for teachers employed by school districts under the provisions of Title 14. As state employees, however, our teachers bargain under the provisions of AS 23.40, not AS 14.20, which applies to certificated employees of school districts. If it is the wish of your committee, we can certainly investigate the ramifications of placing all of our teachers under the collective bargaining and other provisions of Title 14, as has been suggested. However, to do so would be a major shift in state policy, a change that should receive the scrutiny of the legislature in a much broader context than simply dealing with the future employees of the Mt. Edgecumbe School. If the committee is interested in pursuing the matter, I would suggest that we do so during the interim and prepare recommendations for consideration by the next session of the legislature.

Concern was also expressed that including the teachers in the exempt service would somehow circumvent the principal of local and Alaska hire. Let me assure you that we are aggressively recruiting staff from all over Alaska. The nature of the program at Mt. Edgecumbe requires that we make every effort to obtain experienced Alaskan teachers. The University of Alaska, Fairbanks is assisting us in this effort.

A concern was raised that the proposed salary schedule for the Mt. Edgecumbe teachers would place the Sitka School District teachers at an economic disadvantage; the differences between the two salary schedules for next year are slight: the Edgecumbe schedule is $968 higher at the beginning step, but $4,200 less at the top step.

The last issue dealt with the actual language of the proposed amendment to AS 39.25.110(7). That amendment would add "or other schools" to the existing description of the teachers employed by the Department who are in the exempt service. That wording was purposely chosen because of the potential which exists for other instructional programs to be assumed by the Department which are presently operated by other agencies. To the extent the proposed amendment is confusing, however, I would suggest replacing it with "or Mt. Edgecumbe School".

If this bill does not pass, and if the teachers at Mt Edgecumbe are placed in the classified service, then it is my understanding that the classification process will take a minimum of three months. That will mean that many of the teachers interested in applying for positions at Mt. Edgecumbe will be forced to accept other employment because of the unavailability of information concerning salary and job classification at the very time school districts are making employment decisions. I respectfully request your assistance in getting SB 266 enacted into law so that the critical and necessary tasks of recruiting top rate teachers at Mt. Edgecumbe can proceed without delay. It would be tragic if the operation of Mt. Edgecumbe were to fall victim to issues which have nothing to do with its mission.

The timeframes are generally in work days, so the total represents approximately 17 weeks. The timeframes also make certain assumptions. It assumes that work will proceed before OMB issues the New Positions Authorizations which will coincide with the effective date of the budget. It also assumes that the Department of Education will be able to fund overtime for the Division of Personnel to process applications on an expedited basis. Otherwise, the "first-come first-served" review of application will add nearly two months to the process.

We understand that advertisements have been placed by the Department of Education for these positions. The Placement Office of the University of Alaska, Fairbanks is holding applications from about 300 Alaskans who have already indicated an interest in teaching at Mt. Edgecumbe. This should be more than a sufficient pool to fill the positions, with the possible exception of fairly unique subjects that reflect the Pacific Rim orientation of the planned curriculum.

In summary, action to carry out the above schedule must be initiated within approximately two weeks in order to have teachers on board when school opens in the fall. A decision on placing the position in the exempt service would be needed within this period if wasted efforts are to be avoided.

If I may provide any additional information, please feel free to call on me.

Sincerely,

Michael P. McMullen

MEMORANDUM

TO: Senator Mitch Abood, Chairman
Senate State Affairs Committee

FROM: Senator Dick Eliason
Sponsor of SB 266

DATE: April 15, 1985

RE: SB 266 Back-up

Your staff has requested a short analysis of SB 266, a definition of "other schools" as used in the bill, and the criteria for student selection at Mt. Edgecumbe High School.

SB 266 ANALYSIS

Senate Bill 266 places teachers employed by the Department of Education to teach at Mt. Edgecumbe High School in exempt service. The purpose of this bill is to allow teachers for Mt. Edgecumbe High School to be hired in an expeditious manner. Without this piece of legislation they will have to go through the regular state classified system, which is a long, laborious process. The school is planned to open this September and so time is a crucial element. This bill will enable Mt. Edgecumbe teachers to be hired in the same way correspondence study, and skill center teachers are now hired.

DEFINITION OF "OTHER SCHOOLS"

Currently the Department of Education operates a correspondence study program and The Seward Skill Center. The only "other school" operated by the Department will be Mt. Edgecumbe. Teachers with correspondence study and at the Skill Center are under exempt status pursuant to AS 39.25.110 (7). Therefore, the definition of "other school" is Mt. Edgecumbe High School. However, if in the future another Department operated school comes into being, teachers will be covered by this act.

CRITERIA FOR STUDENT SELECTION

The Student Selection Priorities as passed by the State Board of Education 1/28/85 are attached.

Student Selection Priorities
Mt. Edgecumbe School
11/26/84

1. Alaska students who are from a village where there is no high School or Alaska students who are attending B.I.A. Schools in the "Lower 48".

2. Alaska students whose family residence is in a village where the high school enrollment is 25 or less.

3. Alaska students whose family residence is in a village where the high school enrollment is from 26 to 50 students.

4. All others.

Students in categories # 2, 3 and 4, will be selected with the cooperation of the local school district, parents and guardians, and Mt. Edgecumbe staff. Placement at Mt. Edgecumbe will be handled similiarly to student placement in special education programs. Social referrals for students who for one reason or another cannot adequately function within their present home environment will be admitted on a case-by-case basis. We are attempting to identify the best educational program for the student with due consideration for social and family conditions.

Students from schools such as the Pribilof's where high school terminates at grade ten will be placed in the #1 category.

Students currently in the State boarding home programs or in correspondence programs will be admitted on a case-by-case basis.

Admittance to Mt. Edgecumbe can only occur at the beginning of each semester.

MT. EDGECUMBE SCHOOL

MISSION STATEMENT

The opening of Mt. Edgecumbe School will provide new and important educational opportunities for Alaskan students, particularly rural Native youth.

Mt. Edgecumbe School will place high expectations upon students, administrators and staff.

Mt. Edgecumbe School is based upon a conviction that students have a great and often unrealized potential.

Mt. Edgecumbe School students will be required to pursue rigorous academic programs that will encourage students to work at their highest levels.

Mt. Edgecumbe School administrators, teachers, and staff members will be required to keep current on educational advances and to initiate innovative, challenging and stimulating classroom programs and activities.

As a boarding school, the Mt. Edgecumbe School will offer students a wide range of support activities to assure the success of all students.

Mt. Edgecumbe School will emphasize a strong curriculum in English, social studies, mathematics, science, fine arts, computers, vocational education, career exploration, second languages, and physical education.

Mt. Edgecumbe School will also place special emphasis on a study of topics specific to Alaska. These topics will include the Alaska environment, history, natural resources and Native Land Claims issues, and the history, culture, and languages of the Pacific Rim.

Mt. Edgecumbe School teachers will develop the capacity to analyze issues in order to anticipate the future social and economic needs of Alaska, such as Alaska's economic position among the Pacific Rim nations, and to integrate an educational approach to these issues into the curriculum.

To facilitate personal growth and decision making skills, each student will be assisted, guided, and challenged to make choices about future academic or technical schooling, rural or urban residence, and alternative methods of making a living. Students will be respected for their cultural backgrounds, and students and teachers will be encouraged and expected to offer insights to increase the effectiveness of the school.

Extraordinary opportunities for leadership, public service, and entrepreneurship will be integrated into the program, both during and after school hours.

Vocational education will be stressed through entrepreneurship. Different cottage industries will be run by students which will incorporate processing of raw products, wholesaling, retailing, purchasing of equipment, billing, etc.

Mt. Edgecumbe School will provide variety in teachers, subjects, and extra curricular activities.

Mt. Edgecumbe School will prepare students for college, for the academic demands of a college curriculum, and the social demands of being away from home and managing time effectively.

Mt. Edgecumbe School will prepare students to make the transition to adulthood helping them to determine what they want to do and developing the skills and the self-confidence to accomplish their goals.

Some students of Mt. Edgecumbe will be selected who presently are having a difficult time with their home environment. Mt. Edgecumbe staff will do every thing possible to help these students become productive citizens.

MT. EDGECUMBE HIGH SCHOOL

HISTORY: Mt. Edgecumbe High School was opened in February 1947 when students were transferred by the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) from Wrangell Institute and Eklutna Vocational School in Seward. Both boarding schools were closed to make way for the opening of Mt. Edgecumbe. The BIA ceased all operations at Mt. Edgecumbe in September of 1983. During the 36-year BIA operations, nearly 10,000 students attended the school. Over 3,900 earned diplomas. The Class of 1983 was the last to graduate under the BIA. Many community, corporate and state leaders are Mt. Edgecumbe graduates.

FACTS ABOUT THE SCHOOL: The school colors are cardinal and gold. The athletic nick-name is 'Braves.' Taheta is the name of the school yearbook and the school newspaper is Channel Light.

The first year enrollment will be 175 students with 40 total staff. The projected future enrollment is 300 maximum. The school, including dormitories, will be housed in 12 structures. All structures will be renovated and will meet state safety codes. Each dormitory room will accomodate four occupants although present plans provide for a maximum of three to a room. Students will take three meals daily in the modern school cafeteria.

EXTRACURRICULAR ACTIVITIES: Ample opportunity will be provided for student involvement in extracurricular activities such as choir, band, piano, drama, debate, radio, student publications in yearbook and newspaper, photography, student council, clubs and dormitory and class organizations. As a member of the Southeast Alaska High School Activities Association, Mt. Edgecumbe teams will compete in cross country, boys and girls; girls volleyball; basketball, boys and girls; boys wrestling; cheerleading, boys and girls; and track, boys and girls. Many of the sporting activities will take place in the spacious fieldhouse, one of the finest athletic plants in the state.

SERVICES: The Public Health—Indian Health Service hospital is adjacent to the campus and will be available for student needs. Other services, such as dental and optical, will be available at the hospital.

The modern school store, Ships Service, will be open during regularly set hours. Ships Service will be the hub for recreation and relaxation and will stock school supplies, personal articles, etc. Snacks, ice cream and sodas will be available.

Laundry equipment and machines will be available for student use at regularly scheduled times. There will be no charge for the use of the laundry equipment.

Sitka is a modern community with all the services of a large urban center. Excellent restaurants, pizzeria and short order eating places are available as well as modern clothing and grocery stores, dry-cleaning establishments, libraries, radio and television, banks, Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward stores.

Churches of almost every denomination are located in Sitka.

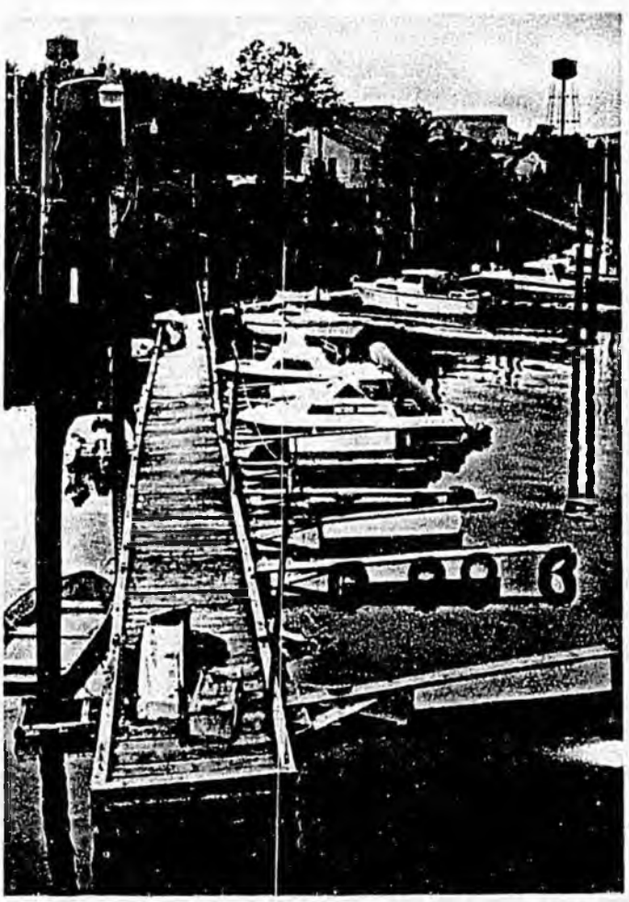
COMMUNITY INFORMATION: Mt. Edgecumbe School is located on Japonski Island, one-quarter of a mile from Sitka. The two communities are connected by a bridge. The modern Sitka airport is located on Japonski Island, a three minute drive from Mt. Edgecumbe School. Japonski, Alice and Charcoal Islands comprised Army and Navy bases during World War II. Sitka's population is 8,000. Sitka is within easy walking distance from the school.

CLIMATE: Climate is mild the year round. Sitka gets 85 inches of rain per year. Winter temperatures average 35 degrees above zero with little snow.

STUDENT SELECTION: Local school districts, parents or guardians, and Mt. Edgecumbe staff will all cooperate to select the initial students to attend Mt. Edgecumbe. The following preferences will prevail for admission:

1. Alaska students who are from a village where there is no high school or who are attending BIA schools in the Lower 48.
2. Alaska students whose family residence is in a village where the high school enrollment is from 1 to 25 students.
3. Alaska students whose family residence is in a village where the high school enrollment is from 26 to 50 students.
4. All others.

Students currently enrolled in state correspondence study programs and in the state's boarding school program will be handled on a case by case basis. Social referrals for students who for one reason or another cannot adequately function within their present home envirnoment will also be handled on a case by case basis.



CURRICULUM: Mt. Edgecumbe High School will consist of grades 9 through 12. A basic core curriculum will be offered with a strong emphasis on the basics. The curriculum will be competency based and students must pass minimum competency tests before going on the next level.

English, mathematics, social studies, science, P.E., home economics, shop and trades, drivers education, economics, computer science, art and foreign languages will all be taught.

Leadership and academic excellence will be stressed throughout the curriclum.

Mt. Edgecumbe High School will incorporate Pacific Rim activities into its curriculum. With Alaska doing over $1 billion in trade across the Pacific Ocean we feel that the language, culture, history and economics of the Pacific Rim countries should be stressed. Our science classes will also be geared toward ocean activities. Our location on the Pacific Ocean will provide outstanding aquaculture and other marine related activities.

COOPERATIVE EFFORTS: The community of Sitka offers an ideal environment for cooperative education. Islands Community College, Sheldon Jackson College, the Sitka School District, and Mt. Edgecumbe High School all provide educational programs. The possibilities of sharing staff and facilities are great. The University of Alaska-Juneau is also in close proximity. Educational opportunities for students from all these educational institutions can be greatly enhanced by cooperative efforts.

APPLICATION PROCESS: Students who want to attend Mt. Edgecumbe School should:

1) Send a letter to:
Mt. Edgecumbe High School
Box 2628
Sitka, AK 99835
Phone (907) 966-2201

The letter should give your name, address, phone number (if you have one) and the school you are currently attending. You should also state the reasons why you would like to attend Mt. Edgecumbe.

2) Mt. Edgecumbe authorities will then send you an application form for enrollment to the school. The form must be signed by your parents or guardian and your school principal or administrator.

3) Return the completed application to Mt. Edgecumbe School and you will be notified whether you have been accepted or not. Remember that Mt. Edgecumbe will probably receive many more requests to attend school here than we have openings for. It is important that you complete everything as soon as you can.

Dear Mitch:

The Alaska Credit Union League represents all of Alaska's credit unions and their 360,000 members. Our organization is concerned with the implications of SB 275 introduced April 9th. This bill, entitled "An Act relating to release of motor vehicle records" would have a severe impact on the credit unions and other financial institutions in Alaska.

We understand the intent of the legislation is to reduce the State's liability for access to Department of Motor Vehicles records by individuals who may not have reasonable use for this information. However, the language of the bill at the present time restricts access for use by a wide variety of institutions who do have legitimate need for this information. Particularly, credit unions use this information as an aid in locating individuals who are delinquent in paying their legal obligations, among other purposes.

We believe an additional subsection should be added to Section 2 (d) which states:

(4) a business or institution identified as having a legitimate purpose for locating the owner of the vehicle named in the record.

Thank you for your consideration of our request for amendment of this legislation. If we may provide additional information, or be of assistance, please give me a call.

Sincerely,

Nancy

JUSTIFICATION

This position is required to deal with the additional activity resulting from passage of this bill.

Due to the FY 83 elimination of a research position in the Anchorage office, microfiche was made available at the office for individuals to research and find their own information. With passage of this bill, anyone requesting vehicle information will have to be screened to verify eligibility. If the requestor is eligible, they will be provided with the necessary data.

This position will do the screening to determine eligibility, and perform the record search when necessary.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

POSITION PAPER

Senate Bill 275

Senate Bill 275 "An Act relating to release of motor vehicle records."

While the bill appears workable there are additional needs to be addressed.

A contract currently exists with R.L. Polk Company, a national firm, to provide them with a complete motor vehicle record and monthly updates on magnetic tape. These records are used by them for research and vehicle safety matters, i.e. recalls of particular vehicles by manufacturers for defect corrections. Additionally, wrecker services dealing with vehicles whose owners are unknown through impounds obtain copies of microfiche which have the state's motor vehicle records. Another need not addressed is private enterprise acting as government agents through contracts to provide service to the state. These three are legitimate needs that need to be accomodated in legislation.

The bill would preclude certain persons now utilizing information from having access. These persons or organizations include private investigation agencies; collection agencies; private individuals wanting to identify trespassing vehicles on their property; automobile insurance industry; attorney services; and, surprisingly, private individuals who purchase cars and do not transfer appropriate paperwork, at some later time lose their paperwork and don't even know who they bought the car from.

In the absence of the now existing opportunity for individual research with DMV records, one motor vehicle representative position would be necessary to screen and accomodate requests for information.

FROM: Senator Jan Faiks

SUBJECT: Background on SB 275, an Act relating to the release of motor vehicle records.

In March of this year, an Anchorage man was indicted for attempted murder after firing eight shots at a stranger he thought was harassing him. Among his possessions, the Troopers found a list of the names and addresses of 600 Anchorage residents whom he thought were bothering him and a map with X's marked on their homes. The assailant had received this information from the Division of Motor Vehicles by merely providing a license plate number and paying a $2.00 fee for each number.

Currently, any person can contact the Division with a license plate number and, after paying the $2.00 fee, will be given the name and address of the registered owner of the vehicle.

There is no justifiable reason why this information should be available to the general public. Not only can it lead to an invasion of privacy of the vehicle owners, it could possibly result in liability for the State.

Senate Bill 275 will restrict access to this personal information. It will authorize the Division to release records only to the vehicle owner, license holder, or driver, to a person who has the owner's authority, to a legitimate lienholder on the vehicle, or to a government agency.

Senator Vic Fischer brought this situation to my attention after one of his constituents notified him of the enclosed newspaper account. Together we ask that you act favorably on this bill before a comparable incident leads to a more serious ending.

Daily News reporters

A Hillside man indicted Wednesday for attempted murder kept a list of approximately 600 Anchorage residents he believed were harassing him.

The alphabetized list was accompanied by a map with X's marking homes of those people, some of whom apparently never knew the accused assailant.

Carl R. Snyder, 39, was arrested by Alaska State Troopers on March 12 after allegedly firing at least eight shots at Kenneth Myers outside the victim's home. Myers was one of the people on the list.

Snyder was indicted Wednesday on a charge of attempted murder. He is presently being held at Cook Inlet Pre-trial Facility in lieu of $500,000 bond.

Snyder, interviewed at the jail Thursday evening, said the list of names he'd gathered were not intended as a "hit list," but were of people he believed were sent by his ex-wife to harass him and his two sons shortly after the couple were divorced early last year. Snyder refused to identify his former wife.

The slight, soft-spoken Snyder said he was "stressed-out" the night of the shooting. In addition to a difficult divorce, he had lost his job and been forced to drop out of college, he said.

"The situation got away from me," he said. "Thank goodness nobody got hurt.

Snyder said the fact that he failed to hit Myers even though he was firing from about 25 feet away leads him to believe that subconsciously he intended to miss.

"Nobody could have bungled it that badly," he said.

Snyder said Myers was acquainted with his ex-wife and harassed Snyder "on her behalf." Snyder said that he had followed Myers several times prior to the night of the shooting and said Myers had also followed him on occasion.

Even though the two live in the same Hillside neighborhood, Myers insists he never knew either Snyder or the man's ex-wife. He also denied following Myers.

According to trooper reports, the assailant waited for Myers that Tuesday afternoon outside the victim's office at Surveyors Exchange on DeArmoun Road and followed Myers home.

Myers pulled into his driveway followed by the assailant. Both men got out of their vehicles and the assailant immediately began firing at Myers with a handgun.

"He caught me totally by surprise," Myers said. "I never even knew this guy."

Myers escaped by dashing behind a snowbank and running to the back of his house while the assailant stopped to reload. After firing a few more shots at the house and windows, the suspect tried to back his car out of the driveway but got stuck in a ditch.

Snyder was trying to dig his station wagon free when troopers arrived and arrested him, they said.

Later that evening, authorities armed with a search warrant seized the lists, the map and other books about weapons and the CIA, according to Snyder's oldest son, Chris.

Troopers and prosecutors have declined to comment on the case.

The 15-year-old said he had helped his father compile the list. They began early last year, a few months after his stepmother had moved out, the youth said. Strangers in cars, sometimes with cameras and binoculars, roved the secluded street in front of their home.

"We started taking down license numbers because we wanted to check these people out," the young Snyder said Thursday evening. "People were driving around the house, sometimes 12 or 15 times, and we just wanted to know who they were."

Armed with scribbled license plate numbers, Snyder or his son would go to the Department of Motor Vehicles office on Dowling Road and, for a $2 fee, obtain the names and addresses of the registered owners of the cars.

"It got to where I was going there so much I got to know a couple of the women there," the youth said. "Sometimes, we'd compare them to names in the phone book. The list started getting bigger and bigger — kinda out of proportions."

Another man on the list was Larry Wilmarth, owner of the survey equipment supply company Myers works for.

"I'd like to know myself why I was on that list," Wilmarth said. "I don't think I've ever met the guy. There's another Wilmarth on the list, too, a distant relative of mine. But he's been dead 11 years now."

The name gathering ceased last summer, and so did the harassment, the youth said. But every so often, Snyder would spot news reports of drug arrests and find that names of those arrested on drug charges matched the names he and his son had gathered.

"We figured maybe we were on to something with these drug people," the younger Snyder said. "We had figured that my stepmom was involved with some of these people, and maybe they were worried that we knew something."

Myers and Wilmarth deny any involvement in drugs.

In fact, Myers added, a trooper checking out the names on Snyder's list jokingly said "I was one of the more boring people he'd ever investigated."

FROM: Patricia Dilgard, Staff Attorney

RE: Driver License Information; Public Access (R-34-391)

We have written to the driver licensing authorities of the fifty states and asked them what their policy is regarding disclosure of licensees' addresses. The overwhelming majority provided this information with no or few restrictions.

Public Record

In many states such information is deemed to be a public record by statute. The Attorney General of South Carolina in an opinion sets forth his reasons for concluding that such information falls within the definition of public record. These reasons are:

1. The North Carolina statute, based on federal law, exempts from public record "information of a personal nature where public disclosure would constitute an unreasonable invasion of personal privacy."

2. Federal courts have construed the above phrase to mean information which consists of intimate details of a highly personalized nature. One's name and address are not considered intimate details as they are easily obtainable through alternative sources.

3. Other federal courts have used a balancing test in determining whether such information should be disclosed, balancing the individual's interest in having the information remain confidential versus the public's interest in having the information available.

According to the South Carolina Attorney General, the public's interest in disclosure, including using the information for military, VISTA and educational recruiting, overrides the person's interest to remain anonymous or avoid solicitation.

Arguably, the above interests are not interests of the public at all, but represent interests of private or government agencies who use such information for their private gain. It does not seem that providing listings of names and addresses furthers the purpose of the public records law, which is to keep citizens informed of governmental activities.

We believe it would have been legally defensible to have concluded to the contrary that addresses of licensees are not items the disclosure of which serves any legitimate public interest. Along this line of approach, the Director of the Motor Vehicle Division in Puerto Rico, interpreting the federal Privacy Act, concluded that such information is in fact restricted.

Right to Privacy

There does not appear to be any common law right of privacy that would protect the anonymity of one's address.

Thus on a public street or public place there is no legal right to be alone. Nor is it an invasion of privacy to follow a person to his home and watch him there. Prosser, William, Handbook of the Law of Torts, p. 808, 809 (1971).

As one legal authority has stated:

> /A/ll of us must, to some reasonable extent lead lives exposed to the public gaze. Anyone who is not a hermit must expect the more or less casual observation of his neighbors and the passing public as to what he is and does and some reporting of his daily activities. Ibid, p. 811.

Although the disclosure of one's address does not necessarily violate a legal right such as to give rise to a cause of action for invasion of privacy, a more pertinent question is what state interest is served when the state discloses this information. It would appear that the state would have an interest in providing such information when it furthers the purposes of the motor vehicle registration or licensing law. Examples of this might be the disclosure of the identity and address of a car owner to persons who have suffered injury or loss because of a violation of the motor vehicle laws, or to car dealers to confirm ownership of title.

The real administrative problem is how to screen persons who have a legitimate need for such information from those whose motives may be only pecuniary or even criminal or malicious.

Some states require a person requesting driver license information to provide identification and a statement of a legitimate need for the information (Georgia, South Dakota).

In other states an administrative official informally screens such requests and determines, on a case by case basis, if the need is legitimate (Nebraska).

One state sends a copy of such request to the licensee (North Dakota). In this manner at least a licensee can learn of inquiries made about him.

The concern with privacy rights as they relate to record keeping in today's society of computerized information storage and exchange and in consideration of the vast number of sources collecting and maintaining information on each of us individually has not been adequately dealt with by most state legislatures.

Enclosed is a summary of the laws or policies, as closely as we can determine, of various states in regard to disclosure of drivers' addresses. We should point out that many states, in responding to our inquiries, did not differentiate between state driver licensing laws and state automobile registration laws.

Additionally I would like to mention that the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws has just recently adopted a Uniform State Information Practices Code. Under this proposal state agencies are mandated to make certain information available to the public such as agency rules, decisions, public records and records an individual seeks about himself. Other information, including records which refer to any individual, is described as being within categories which do not require agency disclosure, but anticipate the exercise of administrative discretion in consideration of general interests which include the privacy rights of individuals about whom the government possesses personal information. In such a situation the person to whom the record relates would receive notice and have an opportunity to object to a disclosure. Additionally the act anticipates that state statutes may specifically identify certain information as exempt from disclosure. Since this proposal is a significant statement of all governmental information practices we believed that it might well be beyond the scope of your interest in this regard. If you do wish to be provided with a copy of this proposal merely inform us to such effect.

If we can be of further assistance please contact this office.

RE: Access to Motor Vehicle Records

The Division of Motor Vehicles in the ensuing states provided, via telephone April 25-26, 1985, the following information regarding the policies and procedures administered to inquiries concerning motor vehicle registration records.

California

The state of California has an official form that is filled out by the inquirer. For a $4.00 fee the inquirer may obtain the motor vehicle registration information on file on the individual about whom the inquiry is made. A portion of the form is mailed to that individual so that he/she is aware of the inquiry. Of these seven states, California is the only state with this procedure.

Account codes are assigned to specific agency's, i.e., law enforcement, so that they may obtain information via a verbal request. Addresses of law enforcement officers remain confidential. The policies regarding access to driver's license information differ. The driver's license number and/or birthdate must be preserted to obtain driver's license record information. There is a $1.00 to $2.00 fee for this.

These procedures are mandated by California Vehicle Code 18.08.

Oklahoma

Title 47, § 22.24 of the Oklahoma statutes, copy attached, mandates the procedures to be administered by the Division of Motor Vehicles concerning motor vehicle registration inquiries. In short, the information is confidential except to government agencies, law enforcement officers and the tax commission.

South Dakota

Motor vehicle registration information is provided to law enforcement officers, financial institutions, etc., upon verbal request. Written requests must be furnished from private inquirers. Legitimate requests only are honored. Questionable inquiries are referred to the office supervisor. If the inquiry is denied then the inquirer may contact his/her local authority. The fee for motor vehicle registration record information varies from $1.00 to $5.00 depending on the depth of the record requested, i.e., previous owner or case history.

Virginia

Requests for registration information must be provided in writing. This includes requests from financial institutions, insurance companies, and attorneys.

If a request is received from a private individual then he/she must certify that his/her request is valid. An abandoned vehicle on one's private land would constitute a valid reason for a vehicle registration information inquiry. After the request is received it is screened, and if approved, upon receipt of a $3.00 fee, the information may be provided to the inquirer.

The state of Virginia uses the Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act and the State Freedom of Information Act as guidelines.

Washington

RCW 46.12.380, copy attached, mandates the procedures to be administered by the Division of Motor Vehicles concerning motor vehicle registration inquiries. Agencies such as insurance companies maintain account codes. They have authorization to obtain lists of vehicle record information whereas the general public does not. The fee for one to ten records is $2.00 each; $0.20 for each ensuing record.

A request by a private individual may be honored if the request is legitimate. Files of requests are maintained and are public record; however, the state of Washington does not have a centralized filing system for these records so it may be an arduous task if one wanted to know if an inquiry had been made regarding his/her record.

The state of Washington uses the Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act and the State Freedom of Information Act as guidelines.

West Virginia

The policies and procedures used by the Division of Motor Vehicles in the state of West Virginia are set by Administrative Code. The Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act and the State Freedom of Information Act are used as guidelines.

All requests must be provided in writing. The one exception is that of law enforcement officials who have hands-on access to vehicle records. Individual requests are at the discretion of the Commissioner. The fee for vehicle registration information is $3.00. Files of the request are maintained for one year.

Wyoming

Requests for vehicle registration information are honored providing the request is in writing and it is legitimate. The request is generally at the discretion of the Motor Vehicle employee recipient. The fee for such information is $1.00. Files of the requests are maintained for one year and then sent to archives.

If you have any questions, or if I may be of further assistance, please contact me.

* Sec. 3. AS 28 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

CHAPTER 37. DRIVER LICENSE COMPACT.

ARTICLE 1. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Sec. 28.37.010. COMPACT ENACTED. The Driver License Compact is enacted into law and entered into with all other jurisdictions legally joining in it in the form substantially contained in AS 28.37.110 - 28.37.190.

Sec. 28.37.020. LICENSING AUTHORITY. In this chapter the term "licensing authority" with reference to this state means the division of motor vehicles in the Department of Public Safety. The department shall furnish to the appropriate authority of another party state the information or documents reasonably necessary to facilitate the administration of AS 28.37.130 - 28.37.150.

Sec. 28.37.030. EXPENSES OF ADMINISTRATOR. The compact administrator provided for in AS 28.37.170 is not entitled to additional compensation on account of service as the administrator, but is entitled to expenses incurred in connection with the duties and responsibilities as the administrator, in the same manner as for expenses incurred in connection with other duties or responsibilities of the office or employment.

Sec. 28.37.040. EXECUTIVE HEAD. In this chapter, with reference to this state, the term "executive head" means the governor.

ARTICLE 2. COMPACT TERMS.

Sec. 28.37.110. FINDINGS AND POLICY STATEMENT. (a) The party states find that

(1) the safety of their streets and highways is materially affected by the degree of compliance with state laws and local ordinances relating to the operation of motor vehicles;

(2) violation of a law or ordinance is evidence that the violator engages in conduct that is likely to endanger the safety of persons and property;

(3) the continuance in force of a license to drive is predicated upon compliance with laws and ordinances relating to the operation of motor vehicles, in whichever jurisdiction the vehicle is operated.

(b) It is the policy of the party states to

(1) promote compliance with the laws, ordinances, and administrative regulations relating to the operation of motor vehicles by their drivers in each of the jurisdictions where those drivers operate motor vehicles;

(2) make the reciprocal recognition of licenses to drive and eligibility for them more just and equitable by considering the overall compliance with motor vehicle laws, ordinances, and administrative regulations as a condition precedent to the continuance or issuance of a license by reason of which the licensee is authorized or permitted to operate a motor vehicle in the party states.

Sec. 28.37.120. COMPACT DEFINITIONS. In this chapter

(1) "conviction" means a conviction of an offense related to the use or operation of a motor vehicle that is prohibited by state law, municipal ordinance, or administrative regulation, or a forfeiture of bail, bond or other security deposited to secure appearance by a person charged with having committed an offense described in this paragraph, and that is required to be reported to the licensing authority under AS 28.37.130;

(2) "home state" means the state that has issued and has the power to suspend or revoke the use of the license or permit to operate a motor vehicle;

(3) "state" means a state, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

Sec. 28.37.130. REPORTS OF CONVICTIONS. The licensing authority of a party state shall report each conviction of a person from another party state occurring within its jurisdiction to the licensing authority of the home state of the licensee. The report shall clearly identify the person convicted; describe the violation specifying the section of the statute, code, or ordinance violated; identify the court in which action was taken; indicate whether a plea of guilty or not guilty was entered, or the conviction was a result of the forfeiture of bail, bond or other security; and shall include any special findings made in connection with the conviction.

Sec. 28.37.140. EFFECT OF CONVICTION IN PARTY STATE. (a) The licensing authority in the home state, for the purposes of suspending, revoking, or limiting the license to operate a motor vehicle, shall give the same effect to the conduct reported under AS 28.37.130 as it would if the conduct had occurred in the home state, in the case of a conviction for

(1) manslaughter or negligent homicide resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle;

(2) driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor or a narcotic drug, or under the influence of any other drug to a degree that renders the driver incapable of safely driving a motor vehicle;

(3) any felony in the commission of which a motor vehicle is used;

(4) failure to stop and render aid in the event of a motor vehicle accident resulting in the death or personal injury of another.

(b) As to another conviction, reported under AS 28.37.130, the licensing authority in the home state shall give the effect to the conduct that is provided by the laws of the home state.

(c) If the laws of a party state do not provide for offenses or violations denominated or described in precisely the words employed in (a) of this section, the party state shall construe the denominations and descriptions appearing in (a) of this section as being applicable to and identifying the offenses or violations of a substantially similar nature, and the laws of the party state shall contain the provisions necessary to ensure that full force and effect is given to this section.

Sec. 28.37.150. GROUNDS REQUIRING REFUSAL TO ISSUE LICENSE. Upon application for a license to drive, the licensing authority in a party state shall ascertain whether the applicant has ever held, or is the holder of a license to drive issued by another party state. The licensing authority in the state where application is made may not issue a license to drive to the applicant if

(1) the applicant has held a license, but the license has been suspended by reason, in whole or in part, of a violation, and the suspension period has not terminated;

(2) the applicant has held a license, but the license has been revoked by reason, in whole or in part, of a violation, and the revocation has not terminated; except that after the expiration of one year from the date the license was revoked, the person may make application for a new license if permitted by law; the licensing authority may refuse to issue a license to an applicant if, after investigation, the licensing authority determines that it will not be safe to grant to the person the privilege of driving a motor vehicle on the public highways;

(3) the applicant is the holder of a license to drive issued by another party state and currently in force, unless the applicant surrenders the license.

Sec. 28.37.160. APPLICATION OF OTHER STATE LAWS. Except as expressly required by provisions of this chapter, nothing in this chapter shall be construed to affect the right of a party state to apply any of its other laws relating to licenses to drive to any person or circumstance, nor to invalidate or prevent any driver license agreement or other cooperative arrangement between a party state and a nonparty state.

Sec. 28.37.170. ADMINISTRATOR OF COMPACT. (a) The head of the licensing authority of each party state shall be the administrator of the compact for that state. The administrators of all party states, acting jointly, shall have the power to formulate all necessary and proper procedures for the exchange of information under this compact.

(b) The administrator of each party state shall furnish to the administrator of each other party state the information or documents reasonably necessary to facilitate the administration of the compact.

Sec. 28.37.180. COMPACT AS LAW; WITHDRAWAL PROCEDURE. (a) The compact shall become effective as to any state in which the compact becomes effective as the law of that state.

(b) A party state may withdraw from the compact by enacting a statute repealing the compact as the law of the state, but a withdrawal may not take effect until six months after the executive head of the withdrawing state has given notice of the withdrawal to the executive heads of all other party states. Withdrawal does not affect the validity or applicability by the licensing authorities of states remaining party to the compact of any report of conviction occurring before the withdrawal.

Sec. 28.37.190. CONSTRUCTION AND VALIDITY; SEVERABILITY. The compact shall be liberally construed so as to effectuate its purposes. The provisions of the compact are severable and if any phrase, clause, sentence, or provision of the compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any party state or of the United States or the applicability of it to a government, agency, person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the compact and the applicability of it to any government, agency, person or circumstance shall not be affected by it. If the compact is held contrary to the constitution of any party state, the compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining states and in full force and effect as to the state affected as to all severable matters.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

POSITION PAPER - SB 278

Support

April 17, 1985

SB 278, An Act relating to the driver license compact.

The Department supports this piece of legislation with the condition the fiscal note is approved to enable us to handle the increase in workload. This type legislation is also supported by the AAMVA (American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators).

Basically, what this bill does is bring Alaska in line with the majority of the other states in regard to the exchange and use of driving record information.

Alaska has not, for sometime, used out-of-state traffic convictions in an attempt to identify drivers who have the greatest likelihood of being in an accident so that action can be taken that will hopefully cause these individuals to drive more safely. Out-of-state violations also have not been used to remove from the road, by cancellation of the driver's license, those who are ineligible or prove unable to improve their driving enough to assure a reasonable level of safety for others. This bill takes a large step in the direction of correcting those deficiencies with our present method of operation. Our present deficiencies are due partly to conflicts in the statutes, which this bill will correct, and partly due to available work force.

The Department recommends two amendments: First, amend AS 28.15.221(a) by adding the following to the end of the sentence: "and AS 28.37.130". This amendment removes any conflict between AS 28.15.221(a) and the proposed AS 28.37.140(b). It would allow an out-of-state conviction of a person licensed in Alaska to be used the same as a conviction in Alaska in identifying habitually reckless or negligent drivers and habitual or frequent violators of traffic law. Second, amend AS 28.15.271 by increasing the fees to enable the State to recover any costs incurred by becoming a member of the Driver's License Compact. On a cost per year basis, only one state (Wyoming) charges less for a driver's license than Alaska.

ASSUMPTIONS:

Effective date of July 1, 1985.
Five percent inflation factor used for FY87 and subsequent years.

In the position paper, it was recommended driver's license fees (AS 28.15.271) be increased to pay for the cost of the program. If fees were doubled, revenues would increase approximately $550,000. On a cost per year basis, the Alaska driver's license costs less now than in 1961 because when the duration of a license increased from three to five years in 1978, there was no increase in fees. On a cost per year basis, only Wyoming charges less than Alaska for a driver's license.

SB 278 - Driver License Compact

Currently it is possible for a negligent driver to lose his/her driver's license in another state, move to Alaska and get an Alaska driver's license. This bill would stop that practice by allowing Alaska to exchange information on traffic convictions and license suspensions with other states.

There are 29 states currently in the compact program.

SUBJECT: Operations Manual - Driver License Compact

Enclosed for your information and review is a DRAFT copy of the Operations Manual that is being developed for use by those states that are members of the Driver License Compact. Even if your jurisdiction is not yet a member of the compact, your review and input would be of considerable assistance in the development of this manual.

This Operations Manual is intended to be "recommended guidelines," rather than hard and fast procedures. It is not necessarily limited to compact provisions so that it could be used, in total or in part, by all jurisdictions - not just compact members. Hopefully, requests for driver records and the forwarding of conviction records to the resident state can be accomplished whether or not a state is a member of the compact.

After review, if you have any comments or suggestions, please forward them to my attention at the following address: Motor Vehicle Division; 303 N. Roberts; Helena, Montana 59620.

I would also like to extend a personal invitation for you to attend the next meeting of the Driver License Compact Commission. It will be held in conjunction with the Driver License Committee Meeting at the AAMVA International Conference in Des Moines, Iowa on Tuesday, October 2, 1984 at 9:00 a.m.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Unsafe drivers have always been a major threat to traffic safety, and every state in the United States has developed some procedure for limiting or withdrawing the driving privilege of those with a history of negligent driving. Without a system of communication among the states, however, it has become possible for negligent drivers to accrue numerous violations in other jurisdictions without their home state's knowledge, or to hold multiple driver licenses. Because of this, the states found it necessary to develop a system whereby a driver's complete record--including convictions in other states--is known to the home state licensing agency, and follows the driver from state to state.

The Driver License Compact was authorized by Congress and formed in 1961 to give states a means for cooperative action to control problem drivers. The DLC is an interstate compact designed to advance highway traffic safety through the use of consistent reporting procedures and the exchange of information on driver records. There are currently twenty-nine states in the DLC, and several other states comply with its major provisions.

In 1958, the Congress of the United States enacted a law reaffirming the principle that the states should bear primary responsibility for traffic safety. The law suggested the use of interstate compacts as a means of achieving cooperation and uniformity, and granted--in advance--Congressional consent to interstate compacts designed to promote safety on the highways.

The DLC contains four major provisions, which member-states are committed to uphold. These are:

1. the "one driver license" concept, which requires the surrender of an out-of-state driver license when application for a new license is made;

2. the "one driver record" concept, which maintains the necessity of one complete driving record (which moves with a driver from state to state) to determine driving eligibility in both the home state and other jurisdictions;

3. the "exchange of information" or reports of certain traffic convictions and license suspensions or revocations of out-of-state drivers with the home state licensing agency, as well as other appropriate information; and

4. the insurance of "uniform and predictable treatment" of drivers by treating offenses committed in another state by a home-state driver in the same manner as an in-state violation would be treated.

The DLC uses several procedures for meeting these four provisions. State-members make use of the National Driver Register (NDR), an information system administered by the U.S. Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA). States voluntarily contribute information on driver license revocations and suspensions to the NDR, which is currently being converted to an automated, on-line mode.

Other procedures include reporting convictions for major moving violations to a driver's home state, and requiring the surrender of another state's driver license before issuance of a new license.

The DLC continues to be a viable mechanism for promoting traffic safety by providing an effective means of determining a driver's nationwide driving record. In 1983, a Driver License Compact Commission was formed to address issues related to the DLC, and to encourage participation among non-member states.

HISTORY OF THE DRIVER LICENSE COMPACT

An interstate compact is a formal and contractual agreement between two or more states and may include the United States government as a party. It originated in the colonial period, and is authorized by the Constitution. Interstate compacts usually require the consent of Congress, and Congress always has the authority to forbid a compact by specific enactment. The Supreme Court of the United States enforces interstate compacts, and recognizes them as taking preeminence over any other ordinary and/or conflicting state statute. Interstate compacts are enacted into state law in each participating jurisdiction, usually with identical wording.

Highway safety compacts are agreements entered into by states for the expressed purpose of resolving mutual problems in interstate highway traffic. It is generally recognized that interstate motor carrier travel presents a number of complex problems for the states that need close cooperation and can often be successfully addressed by interstate agreements.

In 1958, Congress adopted the Beamer Resolution (Public Law 85-684), which granted congressional approval in advance to interstate compacts to further highway traffic safety.

The first major response to the Beamer Resolution came in 1960, when resolutions urging the formation of the agreement were passed by the Western Interstate Committee on Highway Policy Problems and the Western Governors' Conference. The Council of State Governments then began drafting what would become the Driver License Compact, in close cooperation with state motor vehicle administrators, the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP), and the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators (AAMVA). Assistance and comments on subsequent drafts were provided by legislators from a variety of states and from the Interstate Compact Committee of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

The Driver License Compact became a reality in 1961, when Nevada became the first state to adopt it. Mississippi approved entry into the DLC in 1962 and put the Compact into effect. Ten additional states joined in 1963, and the number grew to twenty by 1966.

In March 1965, the Board of Directors of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators approved a recommendation that AAMVA serve as the Secretariat for states participating in the Compact. The Compact states ratified this action.

A Driver License Compact Commission (DLCC), made up of motor vehicle administrators from Compact states, was established in 1983 to administer the DLC and develop a long-term plan to increase membership and service. AAMVA also serves as Secretariat of this organization.

V.

IMPLEMENTING THE DRIVER LICENSE COMPACT

Procedures applicable to modern and professional licensing standards have been developed and included in this operations manual. These procedures extend beyond the provisions of the Driver License Compact. The Executive Board of the DLC Commission strongly urges all states to consider immplementation of these procedures to insure standardization and compatibility in driver licensing operations throughout the United States.

The DLC sets up uniform interstate procedures that are designed to prevent multiple licensing by drivers attempting to circumvent the law. The Compact provides the means for states to overcome jurisdictional limitations through cooperation and the exchange of information. The Compact cannot accomplish its purpose unless each member state uniformly adheres to its provisions.

It is extremely important that individual member states develop internal procedures that insure compliance with the four major provisions of the DLC. Procedural steps that provide for uniformity of operation and compliance by departmental employees have been established, and are recommended for all Compact participants.

The following information addresses each of the four major provisions of the Compact by providing the rationale--an explanation--of the provision and a description of recommended procedures for meeting its requirements.

A. One Driver License Concept

1. Rationale: The goal of this first objective is to prevent individual drivers from obtaining multiple driver licenses. Some negligent drivers use multiple licenses to retain driving privileges despite repeated violations warranting suspension or revocation.

Under the Compact, an individual is allowed only one valid driver license, to be issued and controlled by the state in which the driver resides. Any driving done in other states is to be done by reciprocity based on the status of the home state license. Under the Compact, such a driver is not eligible to receive a license from another state until his existing license is surrendered.

2. Recommended Procedures: Each state application for a driver license should contain a question(s) concerning any driver licenses held by the applicant within the last four years, issued by any other state(s), and should indicate that a record check will be made through the National Driver Register.

Applicants older than the minimum legal driving age who state that they have not been previously licensed should be questioned as to prior state residency. Most states have laws prohibiting false statements on driver license applications. Persons of driving age denying that they have ever previously been issued a driver license should be asked to sign a non-driving affidavit. Such an affidavit should clearly state to the applicant the penalty for providing false information.

Suggested procedures for processing original driver applications include:

- o applicant completes driver license application
- o license examiner administers appropriate test(s)
- o applicant successfully completes required test(s)
- o applicant surrenders driver license from another state before license is issued (if applicant was previously licensed)
- o applicant pays required fee
- o license/permit is produced and given to applicant
- o license examiner forwards application and surrendered license to licensing agency headquarters.

B. One Driver Record Concept

1. Rationale: The second major goal of the DLC is to insure that an individual's complete driving record, including convictions in all states in which he has driven, is used to determine driving eligibility in all states. Ideally, this complete driving record would follow the driver from state to state. Under the Compact, a driver's complete record is on file in his home state, and is made available to other states upon a change in residency and/or licensing.

2. Recommended Procedures: The application for an original driver license in any state should be used as the basis for establishment of the driving record.

In addition to the basic information such as name, date of birth, address, physical description, test results and license restrictions, the driver record should include information relating to any previous out-of-state driver license held. This should include driver record information regarding any convictions, accidents, driver improvement actions, and any suspensions or revocations.

Suggested procedures for establishment of the driver record are:

- o applications for original driver licenses are reviewed for surrendered out-of-state licenses and non-driving affidavits
- o surrendered out-of-state licenses and non-driving affidavits are forwarded to issuing/resident state with a request for driver records and supporting documents
- o upon return of requested information, the data is reviewed to determine if withdrawal of the issued license is necessary
- o driver information received from out-of-state is incorporated into the driver record in the home state.

C. Exchange of Information

1. Rationale: The "one license" and "one record" concepts constitute the heart of the Driver License Compact. Implementation of these concepts is an important step toward establishing uniformity of driver control. However, this goal can be met only through the dedicated and determined compliance with the DLC provision calling for the exchange of information among the states. The quality, uniformity and completeness of information contained in the driver record depends on the extent to which the states comply with this provision. Without it, the other provisions are virtually useless.

2. Recommended Procedures: The information contained within the National Driver Register (NDR) should be checked to verify the issuance of all original licenses. In addition, the NDR should be notified of all license withdrawals (suspensions or revocations) and license restorations (reinstatements). Suggested procedures include:

- o tapes/requests prepared and forwarded daily to the NDR on original licenses issued, license withdrawals and license restorations
- o NDR processes state tapes/requests against their files
- o NDR provides state with Form HS 1054 in the following instances:

  (1) license issued is a possible match with a license issued or withdrawal by another state

  (2) withdrawal is a possible match with a license issued or withdrawn by another state
- o returned Forms HS 1054 are reviewed and driver records and supporting documents are requested on all suspensions or revocations.

All convictions or withdrawals for traffic offenses by non-residents require that notification be sent to the residence or licensing state.

The state which issued the license is provided with a copy of the abstract of conviction and/or the order of withdrawal. The license is also sent to the issuing state if it was surrendered and forwarded to the department.

When requests for driver record information are received from another state, the recommended procedures are:

- o produce transcript of record
- o review transcript for accuracy; it is not necessary to forward transcripts with no record of conviction, accident, or administrative action
- o forward transcript to the requesting state

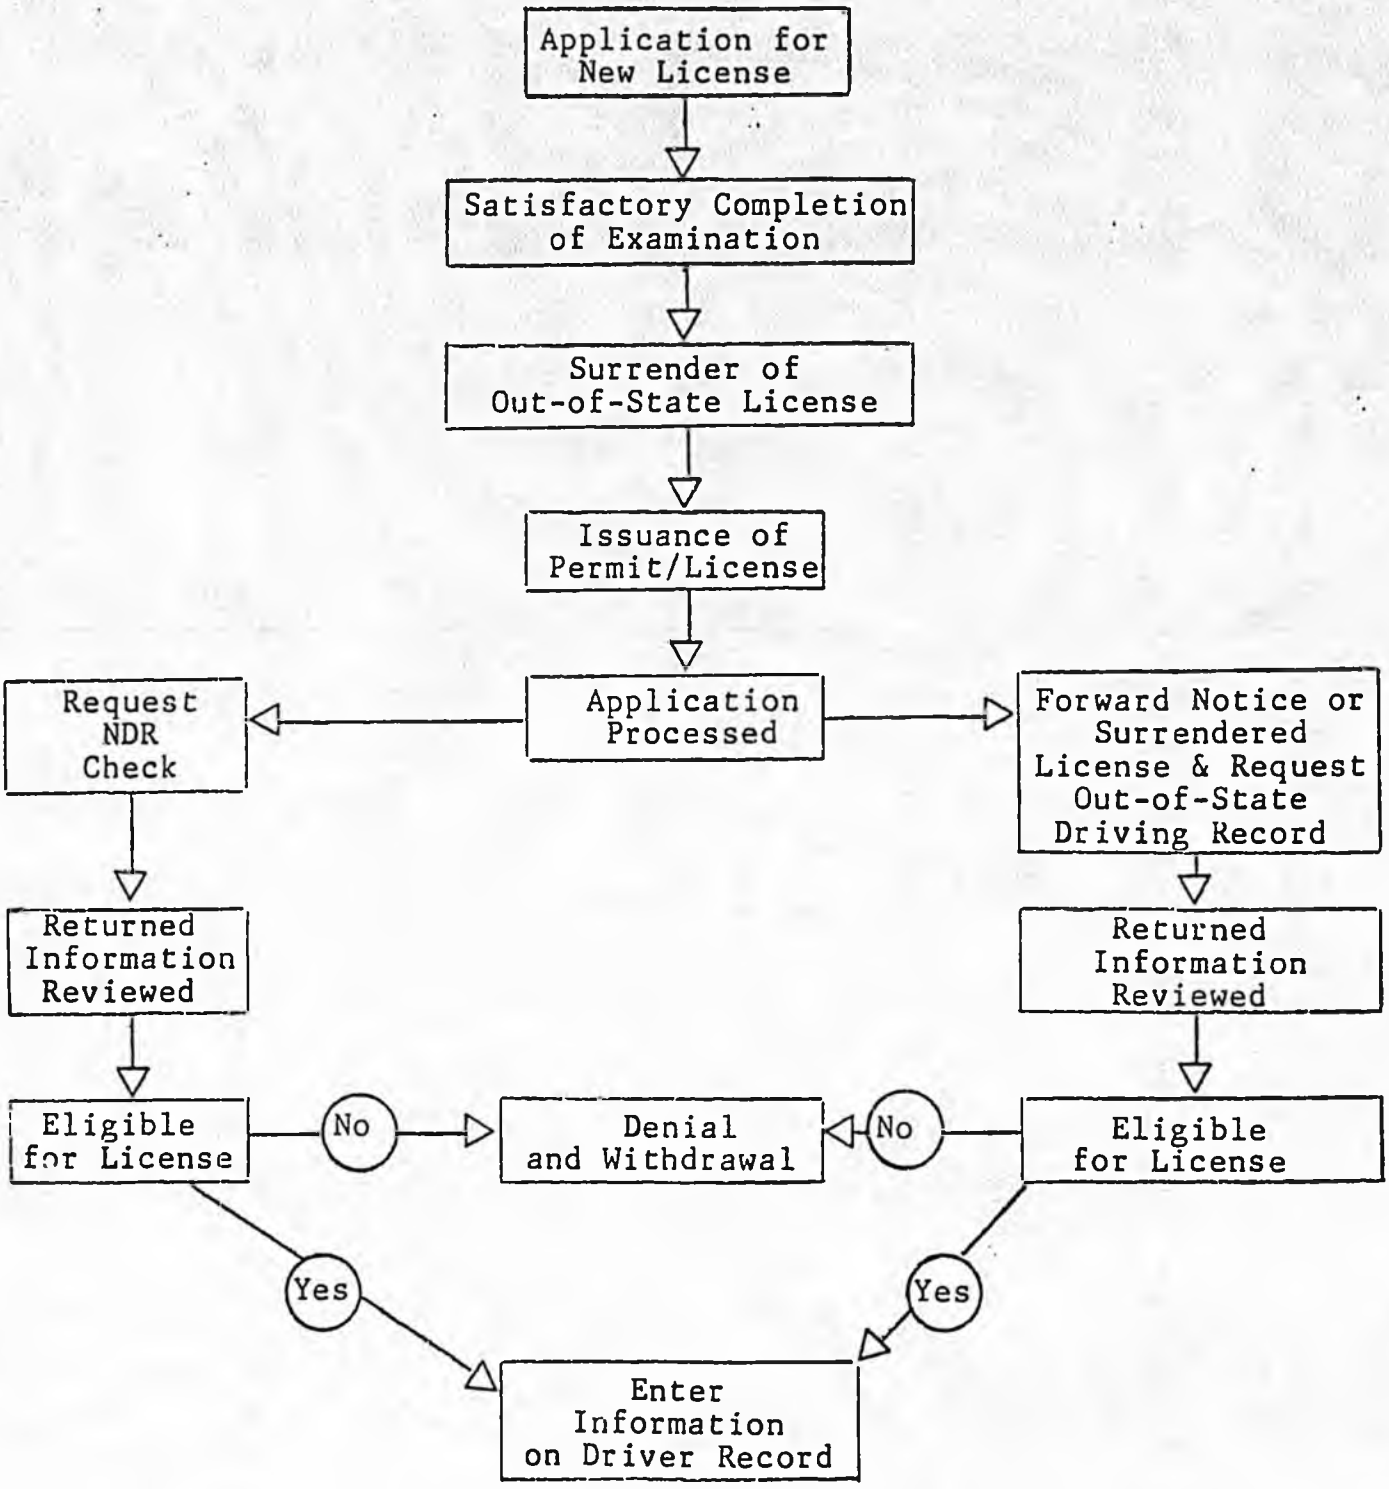
D. Uniform and Predictable Treatment

1. Rationale: The DLC seeks to insure uniform and predictable treatment of drivers convicted of serious traffic offenses wherever the offense and conviction occur. It is important to note that action taken pursuant to the Compact occurs in the home state, and is based upon the home state law. The laws and policies of the state where the offense(s) occurred are not considered. The state where an offense occurred can take unilateral action against the out-of-state driver's privilege to drive there, but action against the home state privileges remain the responsibility of the home state.

2. Recommended Procedures: Conviction for an offense committed in another state by a resident driver should be handled as if the violation occurred in the home state. Each conviction should be reviewed and the offense interpreted in relation to the home state's statutes. Based upon this type of review and interpretation, the suggested procedures are:

- o conviction data is entered to the subject's home state driving record
- o required administrative action is taken, such as license withdrawal for mandatory convictions, or the assignment of demerit points against the driver license (demerit points must be assessed in the same manner as if the conviction occured in the home state)

E. Flow Chart--Processing of Applications



VI.

CONCLUSION

The Driver License Compact is an immensely valuable tool in traffic safety efforts. Drivers who are convicted of serious traffic law violations when away from home should not escape corrective action by the state in which they are licensed. Nor should they be able to hold licenses in more than one jurisdiction and be able to "spread out" violations among them to escape the consequences of dangerous driving practices.

States traditionally have had the responsibility for licensing and controlling motor vehicle drivers, yet are limited in dealing with drivers who accumulate a record of serious moving traffic convictions in other jurisdictions. The DLC gives the party states an opportunity to enhance their ability to deal with resident drivers who have been convicted of traffic violations in other party states.

Each state stands to gain through participation in the DLC--they not only have a method to gather information on their own licensed drivers' activities in other states, but they can also be reasonably assured that violators of traffic laws cannot move to their state, apply for a driver license, and create a "clean slate." The DLC makes it difficult for drivers with bad records to maintain multiple records in order to avoid prosecution, conviction or license suspension. And everyone who uses America's roads is a little safer because of it.

APPENDIX A

Model Enabling Legislation

The purpose of the enabling act is to fit the Compact into the existing pattern of law in the party state. Except for the text of the Compact, which should be identical in all states, the language of the enabling act may be varied by each enacting state to fit its own law and policy. Some provision should be made for all matters covered in the model act; other provisions may be added if they are needed. Material enclosed in brackets should be replaced by specific language which will accomplish the purpose.

Suggested Legislation
[Title should conform to state requirements]

Section 1. The Driver License Compact is hereby enacted into law and entered into with all other jurisdictions legally joining therein in the form substantially as follows:

DRIVER LICENSE COMPACT

(At this point insert the exact text of the Driver License Compact as set forth in Appendix B. The text of the Compact should be enacted in identical language by all ratifying states.)

Section 2. As used in the Compact, the term "licensing authority" with reference to this state, shall mean the [name of appropriate state agency]. Said [agency] shall furnish to the appropriate authorities of any other party state any information or documents reasonably necessary to facilitate the administration of Articles III, IV, and V of the Compact. [If provisions of existing law restrict the furnishing of any such materials, sufficient amendment to them should be made to permit compliance with the letter and spirit of the Compact.]

Section 3. The Compact administrator provided for in Article VII of the Compact shall not be entitled to any additional compensation on account of his service as such administrator, but shall be entitled to expenses incurred in connection with his duties and responsibilities as such administrator, in the same manner as for expenses incurred in connection with any other duties or responsibilities of his office or employment.

Section 4. As used in the Compact, with reference to this state, the term "executive head" shall mean the governor.

Section 5. Any court or any other agency of this state, or a subdivision thereof, which has jurisdiction to take any action suspending, revoking or otherwise limiting a license to drive, shall report any such action and the adjudication upon which it is based to the [state driver license authority] within [five] days on forms [furnished by] [approved by] the [state driver license authority].

Section 6. [Use this section to identify specifically those provisions of statute to which the four items enumerated in Article IV (a) are equivalent and which will be given effect within the purpose of Article IV (a) and (c). Also use this section to add additional offenses or violations, if any, to be given effect under Article IV (b).]

Section 7. [This section may be used if it is necessary to amend other statutes to avoid possible conflicts with subdivision (3) of Article V.]*

Section 8. [Insert effective date.]

* Subdivision (3) of Article V applies the "one license principle" to the issuance of new licenses to applicants from other party states. It provides that a person who holds a valid license in one party state must turn it in before he may be issued a license by another party state. Problems may arise unless suitable changes are made in other statutes which might conflict with this subdivision. For example, a person may reside in Party State A and be gainfully employed in Party State B. Under the Compact, he may not hold licenses from both states at the same time. In this situation, a problem would arise if the other statutes of the two party states required both residents and gainfully employed persons to be licensed.

APPENDIX B

The Driver License Compact

ARTICLE I

Findings and Declaration Of Policy

(a) The party states find that:

(1) The safety of their streets and highways is materially affected by the degree of compliance with state and local ordinances relating to the operation of motor vehicles.

(2) Violation of such a law or ordinance is evidence that the violator engages in conduct which is likely to endanger the safety of persons and property.

(3) The continuance in force of a license to drive is predicated upon compliance with laws and ordinances relating to the operation of motor vehicles, in whichever jurisdiction the vehicle is operated.

(b) It is the policy of each of the party states to:

(1) Promote compliance with the laws, ordinances, and administrative rules and regulations relating to the operation of motor vehicles by their operators in each of the jurisdictions where such operators drive motor vehicles.

(2) Make the reciprocal recognition of licenses to drive and eligibility therefor more just and equitable by considering the overall compliance with motor vehicle laws, ordinances and administrative rules and regulations as a condition precedent to the continuance or issuance of any license by reason of which the licensee is authorized or permitted to operate a motor vehicle in any of the party states.

ARTICLE II

Definitions

As used in this Compact:

(a) "State" means a state, territory or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

(b) "Home state" means the state which has issued and has the power to suspend or revoke the use of the license or permit to operate a motor vehicle.

(c) "Conviction" means a conviction of any offense related to the use or operation of a motor vehicle which is prohibited by state law, municipal ordinance or administrative rule or regulation, or a forfeiture of bail, bond or other security deposited to secure appearance by a person charged with having committed any such offense, and which conviction or forfeiture is required to be reported to the licensing authority.

ARTICLE III

Reports of Convictions

The licensing authority of a party state shall report each conviction of a person from another party state occurring within its jurisdiction to the licensing authority of the home state of the licensee. Such report shall clearly identify the person convicted; describe the violation specifying the section of the statute, code or ordinance violated; identify the court in which action was taken; indicate whether a plea of guilty or not guilty was entered, or the conviction was a result of the forfeiture of bail, bond or other security; and shall include any special findings made in connection therewith.

ARTICLE IV

Effect of Conviction

(a) The licensing authority in the home state, for the purposes of suspension, revocation or limitation of the license to operate a motor vehicle, shall give the same effect to the conduct reported, pursuant to Article III of this Compact, as it would if such conduct had occurred in the home state, in the case of convictions for:

(1) Manslaughter or negligent homicide resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle;

(2) Driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor or narcotic drug, or under the influence of any other drug to a degree which renders the driver incapable of safely driving a motor vehicle;

(3) Any felony in the commission of which a motor vehicle is used;

(4) Failure to stop and render aid in the event of a motor vehicle accident resulting in the death or personal injury of another.

(b) As to other convictions, reported persuant to Article III, the licensing authority in the home state shall give such effect to the conduct as provided by the laws of the home state.

(c) If the laws of a party state do not provide for offenses or violations denominated or described in precisely the words employed in subdivision (a) of this Article, such party state shall construe the denominations and descriptions appearing in the subdivision (a) hereof as being applicable to and identifying those offenses or violations of a substantially similar nature and the laws of such party state shall contain such provisions as may be necessary to ensure that full force and effect is given to this Article.

ARTICLE V

Applications for New Licenses

Upon application for a license to drive, the licensing authority in a party state shall ascertain whether the applicant has ever held, or is the holder of a license to drive issued by any other party state. The licensing authority in the state where application is made shall not issue a license to drive to the applicant if:

(1) The applicant has held such a license, but the same has been suspended by reason, in whole or in part, of a violation and if such suspension period has not terminated.

(2) The applicant has held such a license, but the same has been revoked by reason, in whole or in part, of a violation and if such revocation has not terminated, except that after the expiration of one year from the date the license was revoked, such person may make application for a new license if permitted by law. The licensing authority may refuse to issue a license to any such applicant if, after investigation, the licensing authority determines that it will not be safe to grant to such person the privilege of driving a motor vehicle on the public highways.

(3) The applicant is the holder of a license to drive issued by another party state and currently in force unless the applicant surrenders such license.

ARTICLE VI

Applicability of Other Laws

Except as expressly required by provisions of this Compact, nothing contained herein shall be construed to affect the right of any party state to apply any of its other laws relating to licenses to drive to any person or circumstance, nor to invalidate or prevent any driver license agreement or other cooperative arrangement between a party state and a non-party state.

ARTICLE VII

Compact Administrator and Interchange of Information

(a) The head of the licensing authority of each party state shall be the administrator of this Compact for his state. The administrators, acting jointly, shall have the power to formulate all necessary and proper procedures for the exchange of information under this Compact.

(b) The administrator of each party state shall furnish to the administrator of each other party state any information or documents reasonably necessary to facilitate the administration of this Compact.

ARTICLE VIII

Entry Into Force and Withdrawal

(a) This Compact shall enter into force and become effective as to any state when it has enacted the same into law.

(b) Any party state may withdraw from this Compact by enacting a statute repealing the same, but no such withdrawal shall take effect until six months after the executive head of the withdrawing state has given notice of the withdrawal to the executive heads of all other party states. No withdrawal shall affect the validity or applicability by the licensing authorities of states remaining party to the Compact of any report of conviction occurring prior to the withdrawal.

ARTICLE IX

Construction and Severability

This Compact shall be liberally construed so as to effectuate the purposes thereof. The provisions of this Compact shall be severable and if any phrase, clause, sentence or provision of this Compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any party state or of the United States or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this compact and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If this Compact shall be held contrary to the constitution of any state party thereto, the Compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining states and in full force and effect as to the state affected as to all severable matters.

POSITION PAPER - SB 302

SUPPORT

January 9, 1986

SB 302 - "An act relating to the powers of the violent crimes compensation board and placing the executive director in the partially exempt service."

At this time the Administrator of the Violent Crimes Compensation Board is a classified employee in the supervisory category of the state personnel system. The intent of this legislation is to make the administrator an executive director in a partially exempt position with the members of the Violent Crimes Compensation Board able to appoint or dismiss the director.

The members of the Violent Crimes Compensation Board are the persons who are knowledgable about the duties of the executive director and who are aware whether the director is carrying out the instructions of the Board. They need to have the authority to appoint a person they feel will perform the duties and carry out the functions of the Board and if this person is not competent at the duties, the Board should have the authority to dismiss and appoint another person.

This position is critical to the efficient functioning of the Board. The Board is composed of persons in private practice who do not have the time to oversee the day to day duties of the staff. It is up to the executive director to carry out the necessary functions and wishes of the Board and to do so with a minimum involvement by the Board. The Board is ultimately responsible if the director is remiss in his or her duty and the Board must be able to replace a director in a reasonable amount of time if they note failure to carry out the functions of the Board. The Board should be able to interview and appoint a person it feels is the most qualified for the job and only the Board knows what experience and knowledge the director should have.

At the present time, if the Board becomes aware of problems in the functioning of the staff, and is unable to resolve these problems and felt it necessary to replace the director, it would require a great deal of time to replace the employee who is protected by the personnel system and union.

There are no problems at the present time, according to the Board, but it needs the authority to act in a responsible and expeditious manner, if the need arises.

The Violent Crimes Compensation Board is placed in the Department of Public Safety for administrative purposes. The title change from Administrator to Executive Director and the corresponding range difference puts this position in line with the other executive directors who serve boards and commissions, such as the executive director of the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, and the executive director of the Parole Board.

GEOLOGIC-HAZARDS MITIGATION IN ALASKA

A Review of Federal, State, and Local Policies

By
R.A. Combellick[1]

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Earthquakes and volcanic eruptions occur frequently in Alaska. Because the climate is dynamic, topographic variation is extreme, and thousands of miles of coastline are exposed to the open ocean, Alaska will continue to to be affected by these and other natural phenomena such as landslides, snow avalanches, floods, tsunamis, and many localized or chronic events that may be as costly over the long term as major events. Because development is rapidly expanding into areas where geologic hazards once had little effect, the same events may now cause major property damage.

Technology is available to identify natural hazards, determine their probable severity, and reduce their potential effects on people and property. On the basis of this review of national and state policies, 10 issues were identified in which possible improvements could substantially benefit public safety from natural hazards in Alaska:

1. Policy guidance and coordination of state and local hazard-mitigation programs.
2. Availability of basic technical information on hazards for land-use planning and construction.
3. Continuation of many federally funded hazards studies in Alaska that are being terminated or substantially reduced.
4. Incentives and guidelines to consider geologic hazards in local plans and ordinances.
5. Hazard mitigation in siting, design, and construction of critical facilities.
6. Hazard mitigation in siting, design, and construction of many state-funded public facilities.
7. The relationship between hazard mitigation and eligibility for disaster-relief funds.
8. Capability of state agencies to provide adequate technical services, assistance, and project reviews on geologic hazards for other agencies and local governments.
9. Standards of experience and education for geologists who prepare reports required by state or local laws for siting or designing facilities.
10. State capability to issue formal state notices of serious geologic hazards and coordinate the response by state and local agencies.

A comprehensive review of existing programs in California, Colorado, and the federal government suggests that some common attributes are responsible for the success and public acceptance of many hazard-mitigation programs. These attributes include central policy guidance and coordination; availability of current technical information; incentives and guidelines to consider geologic hazards in local ordinances; immunization of local governments from hazards-related liability under certain circumstances; availability of guidelines and state assistance to recognize and mitigate hazards at the local level; centralized review of design and construction plans for critical and public facilities; appropriate standards for design and construction of facilities that are subject to review for hazard safety; adequate training and experience for reviewers; incentives for hazard mitigation as part of disaster-relief programs; and the ability of programs to be self-supporting through special revenue programs.

The 10 policy issues listed above were discussed by participants at a workshop entitled "Evaluation of regional and urban earthquake hazards and risk in Alaska." The workshop was organized by the U.S. Geological Survey and took place September 5-7, 1985, in Anchorage. Participants included seismologists, geologists, engineers, planners, emergency coordinators, policymakers, and educators that represented levels of government, the private sector, and academia. The participants unanimously adopted nine recommendations for improvements in state policy:

1. Establishment of an Alaska Natural Hazards Safety Commission to provide policy guidance for the Governor and Legislature and to help coordinate agency programs in natural hazards.
2. Development of state policies for hazard mitigation in Alaska that establish long-term commitments and goals.
3. Establishment of a hazard-monitoring program that ensures availability of basic data needed to evaluate hazards.
4. Amendments to the municipal code and other

[1] Alaska Division of Geological and Geophysical Surveys, 794 University Ave. (Basement), Fairbanks, Alaska 99709 statutes to promote local-government action in hazard mitigation.

5. State regulation of construction and major alterations of critical facilities to ensure that they are reasonably protected from natural disasters.
6. Establishment of hazard-mitigation requirements for certain capital-construction projects financed by the State.
7. Establishment of incentives or requirements for local governments to implement hazard-mitigation measures as a condition for receiving disaster-relief funds.
8. Improvement in capabilities of state agencies to participate in reviews and to assist other agencies and local governments in problems that relate to hazard mitigation and disaster preparedness.
9. Establishment of a state hazard-notification system to supplement that of the U.S. Geological Survey and help coordinate responses by state and local agencies.

INTRODUCTION

Many processes that are responsible for Alaska's scenic beauty and abundant resources are also responsible for the wide variety of physical conditions and natural hazards that challenge the human presence. Earthquakes and volcanoes are as active in Alaska as anywhere else in the world, the climate is severe, topographic variation is extreme, and thousands of miles of coastline are exposed to the open ocean. Thus, Alaska is subject to major earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, landslides, snow avalanches, floods, tsunamis, and many local or chronic hazards, such as permafrost, that can be costly for property owners over a long period of time. Effective mitigation efforts have greatly reduced these costs in other states.

Although the number of major natural events in the recent past is high, few events have significantly affected the general public because of Alaska's relatively sparse population and vast, thinly inhabited areas. Major events will continue to occur intermittently as in the recent geologic past, and with increasing development, the probability will increase that people, businesses, property, and critical facilities will be affected.

Experience in other states demonstrates that local ordinances are among the most effective means of mitigating natural hazards. State governments generally provide guidelines, technical information, and the requirement or incentives for local adoption of risk-reduction measures. All municipalities in Alaska have zoning authority that can incorporate hazard-mitigation measures. Flood-plain-management ordinances have been adopted in at least 20 cities and boroughs. Other hazards have been only generally addressed. A few local governments have recently begun to independently act on specific issues of local concern. Most major municipalities have adopted the Uniform Building Code published in 1982 by the International Conference of Building Officials (ICBO). Although this code provides detailed requirements for earthquake-resistant design and construction, it does not provide comprehensive construction and siting requirements for other hazards.

The purposes of this report are fourfold: 1) review geologic-hazard issues in Alaska from an historical perspective; 2) discuss various approaches to hazard mitigation; 3) evaluate hazard-mitigation programs in other states (their strengths, weaknesses, and applicability in Alaska); and 4) review existing state, federal, and local programs dealing with hazards in Alaska. This report also includes a summary of policy recommendations developed in September 1985 during an interagency workshop on earthquake hazards in Alaska. Because major programs of disaster preparedness and response already exist and operate under the Division of Emergency Services and local agencies, these activities are not discussed in detail. This report focuses primarily on activities that reduce the likelihood of injury or damage from natural hazards. Greater emphasis on knowledge of the hazards, public awareness, and effective mitigation measures will reduce vulnerability to hazards and consequently reduce dependence on post-disaster response and relief.

NATURAL DISASTERS IN ALASKA

From 1964 to 1981, there were seven presidential declarations of disaster in Alaska, an average of one every 2.5 yr. These natural disasters included one major earthquake, three floods, one heavy rain and landslide, one severe freeze, and a major fire during a severe freeze. Although a total of about $76 million in federal aid was provided, it was far short of the total estimated damages. For example, of the $350 million estimated damages that resulted from the 1964 Great Alaska Earthquake in 1964, about $56 million in federal aid was provided. Except for restoration work performed directly by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the remaining burden fell on state and local governments, private businesses, and individuals. Following the Chena River flood in Fairbanks in August 1967 (fig. 1), which resulted in damages that totalled about $84 million (Pewe, 1982), the federal government provided $7.3 million in direct financial aid (Federal Emergency Management Agency, 1982).

In addition to disaster declarations by the President, for which federal relief funds are available, the Governor of Alaska is authorized to make disaster declarations for which state relief funds are provided, generally through the Alaska Division of Emergency Services (ADES). State funds may supplement federal-relief funds for presidentially declared disasters, but more often are used to provide relief after events that are not declared disasters at the federal level. From January 1978 to February 1982, no disasters were declared in Alaska by

Learn from lesson of 1964 earthquake

If experience is the best teacher, it's difficult to understand why Anchorage has not learned more from the catastrophic 1964 earthquake. The Good Friday quake destroyed a multitude of homes and businesses before its destructive powers were spent. Yet seismic experts believe Anchorage has left important work undone to prepare for another major earthquake — and they are certain another large quake will come.

Alaska is the most active earthquake area in the United States. Quakes are routine here. But in the past 36 years Anchorage buildings have been constructed on sites known to be earthquake risks, such as unstable landslide areas or clay soil that could liquify during a quake. Furthermore, while Anchorage has adopted a Comprehensive Development Plan and numerous zoning ordinances, pressure has grown — not diminished — to build on unstable areas along the shoreline.

During the past few months, the municipality has initiated an earthquake safety study to analyze hazard data, and asked for a Geotechnical Advisory Commission review of projects in high risk zones. Both measures are commendable. But information gathering must be backed by political will — and the voices of an informed public demanding protection from earthquake hazards. The Planning and Zoning Commission recently ruled that proposed construction in earthquake-scarred Turnagain Heights must conform to stringent geotechnic safety measures before it will be approved; that decision is now being appealed to the Anchorage Assembly, where political pressures will be brought to bear.

Seismic experts already recognize that the vagaries of politics can be more of an impediment to earthquake safety than inadequate information. The assembly, though, should support the Planning and Zoning Commission's ruling — not just in Turnagain Heights, but in any area where the burden of safety hasn't been met. Turnagain's dramatic history only demonstrates a threat that can be found in varying degrees around the Anchorage bowl.

evaluation of current disaster mitiga- practices in Alaska, part of a study ed by the National Science Foundation repared by faculty of the University of a, shows that in terms of the number of e, the amount of property, and the l economic facilities exposed to risk, a is more vulnerable today than it was ecades ago.

major earthquake were to occur today, ate would be no better prepared than on 27, 1964. In fact, as a result of increased ation and development in upper Cook many scientists, planners and adminis- s believe that another earthquake would even greater impact on commerce and e than in 1964. Destruction of transporta- ystems and commerce in Anchorage, the s major city and distribution center, affect the entire state economy.

asures which were recommended to re- the damage from earthquake and tsun- after the March 27, 1964 earthquake have een instituted and lands designated as risk" after the earthquake have, in instances, been developed for industrial, ercial and residential use.

hough the overall technical expertise to safe development in earthquake prone s has been refined since 1964, many of the technicians and policy-makers interviewed in several communities in Southcentral Alaska are pessimistic about the prospect of improved risk mitigation efforts. They often cite fragmentation of responsibility, lack of support from the general public and interest groups, inadequate commitment of financial and human resources, exaggerated social and public policy commitment to private property and personal rights, uncertainty about the level of risk and potential of social and economic loss, and an overall weakness in the planning and implementation process at the local, state and federal levels.

Many recommendations related to seismic risk have been offered over the last 21 years. They cover all disciplines from geology and engineering to planning and political science. The recommendations in the recently completed report — called "Seismic Hazard Mitigation: Planning and Policy Implementation — An Alaska Case" — are new only in the sense that they are made within the context of a comprehensive planning and administrative process. This model provides federal, state and local goverments a framework within which the public and private sectors can include risk mitigation as part of a comprehensive planning development process.

The model implies that effective risk mitigation planning must take place before di- ter strikes. It proposes that risk mitigation studies become an integral part of the data base evaluated as part of the comprehensive planning process, ensuring that mitigation is integrated into future urban and regional development plans and projects.

If a planning process is to be successful, it must include: 1) development of comprehensive goals and objectives based on the understanding of the physical, social and economic makeup of the regional/urban system; and 2) development of a master plan for implementation through team building.

Any plan including seismic risk mitigation must reflect shared responsibility among all levels of goverment and must be based on a strong pulbic commitment to public safety. So far the public has not shown concern for seismic risk. This is reflected in the lack of citizen participation at public hearings related to redevelopment of "high risk" areas. Even the experts whose recommendations we should implement have not testified at public hearings in the past. The public has neglected this issue — complacent and sure that an earthquake will not happen again, at least not in our lifetime.

The Great Alaska Earthquake of March 27, 1964, tells us that an earthquake can affect everyone, not just the people who live in specific districts. Utilities, transportation, ports, airports and human services are affected when disasters occur. The economy of the entire state is impacted — and everyone suffers.

Now is the time to chart a course of action to guide future seismic planning efforts. Public and legislative commitments should be directed to 1) research of seismic risk causes and effects; 2) effective emergency preparedness and public education; and 3) application of risk mitigation technology to urban regional growth and development.

RE: SENATE BILL NUMBER SD 310 (1985)
ACT ESTABLISHING A COMMITTEE ON NATURAL HAZARDS

Dear Senator:

On behalf of the Alaska Section of the American Institute of Professional Geologists (AIPG) I would like to express our organization's support for the above referenced Senate bill. A professional organization which represents over 100 registered geologists in Alaska, AIPG believes the formation of a commission on natural hazards is a positive first step in providing state and local governments with valuable information regarding planning and development in potentially hazardous areas across the state. If this bill is successfully passed, the Alaska section of AIPG urges the selection of professional geologists to the commission to provide input in areas such as earthquakes, landsliding, avalanches, geohydrology, subsidence, volcanic eruptions, etc...

While the population of Alaska is small in comparison to the vast size of the State, the major population centers are situated in areas which have in the past experienced devastating disasters precipitated by natural hazards. The formation of a natural hazard commission will be an important step in addressing state-wide natural hazards with the goal of reducing future loss of property and life.

Respectfully submitted,

Enclosed is the draft Committee Substitute for CSSB 310. After conferring with your staff, I have the following comments.

1. Appointment of the Director of Geological and Geophysical Services to the Commission.

It is not customary to appoint division directors to membership on commissions in the statutes. If the governor were to exercise the power granted under Article III, Section 23 of the state Constitution and reorganize the department, the division might cease to exist. The question of who was to represent the department on the commission would then be unclear. If your committee wishes, we can specify that the representative to the commission from the Department of Natural Resources is the director of geological and geophysical services.

2. Appointment of representatives from departments.

It is more usual to appoint the commissioner of the department to serve on a commission or board and then to permit the commissioner to delegate membership should that be desirable. This is a matter of choice for the committee.

3. Changes to commission membership.

In making the changes to the membership of the commission, the substitution of the representative from the Department of Community and Regional Affairs for a representative from local government does not reduce the number of public members. The representative from local government was not treated as a public member in SB 310. The addition of the representative from the Department of Public Facilities and Transportation does reduce the number of public members from six to five.

4. Initial terms for public members.

I have redrafted section 4 of the bill to limit its application to public members and to specifically refer to members who serve the statutory term of three years as well as those who serve a term of different length. Since the departmental representatives are not named as the commissioners, it might be appropriate to stagger their terms as well.

If I may be of further assistance, please advise.

Dear Senator Abood:

I am writing with regard to SB 310, establishing the Alaska Natural Hazards Commission, which is in the State Affairs Committee for hearing today.

The Department recognizes the great importance of understanding and preparing against natural hazards in Alaska. Our history is replete with examples of natural disasters with loss of life and property in many areas of the state. Fortunately there appears to be growing awareness of the threat of natural hazards in many of our communities and to some degree we are able to plan appropriately against future losses.

The commendable intent of SB 310 is to increase understanding and preparedness for natural hazards. However, the creation of a new commission is recommended at a time when the Legislature and the Governor have been attempting to reduce the number of State boards.

Whether or not the Legislature decides to establish the new commission, our department will continue to attempt to provide natural hazards information and coordination for the public, as our budget will allow.

The Department has no changes to recommend in the body of the bill. A fiscal note is attached.

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act establishing the Alaska Natural Hazards Safety Commission."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. FINDINGS. The legislature finds that

(1) there is a pressing need to provide a consistent policy framework and a means for continuing coordination of hazard-related programs and public safety practices at all governmental levels and in the private sector; this need is not being addressed by any continuing state government organization;

(2) through concerted efforts coordinated by a Natural Hazards Safety Commission, the state can make long-term progress toward mitigating the effects of natural hazards on persons and property, thereby reducing the costs of responding to and recovering from natural hazards.

* Sec. 2. AS 44.37 is amended by adding new sections to read:

ARTICLE 2. ALASKA NATURAL HAZARDS SAFETY COMMISSION.

Sec. 44.37.200. COMMISSION ESTABLISHED. The Alaska Natural Hazards Safety Commission is established in the Department of Natural Resources.

Sec. 44.37.210. MEMBERSHIP. (a) The commission is composed of 11 members appointed by the governor for terms of three years. A member holds office until a successor is appointed and confirmed. A vacancy is filled for the unexpired term. The governor shall appoint to the commission a representative from the University of Alaska, a representative from the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, a representative from the Department of Natural Resources, a representative from the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs, a representative from the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities, a representative from an appropriate federal agency and shall appoint the remaining five members from members of the public who are knowledgeable in the fields of geology, seismology, hydrology, geotechnical engineering, structural engineering, emergency services, or planning. (b) The commission shall elect annually from its members a chairman and vice-chairman. A majority of the commission may vote to replace an officer of the commission.

(c) Six members constitute a quorum.

(d) Commission members receive no compensation but are entitled to travel and per diem authorized for boards and commissions under AS 39.20.180.

Sec. 44.37.220. POWERS AND DUTIES. (a) The commission shall

(1) recommend goals and priorities for hazard mitigation to the public and private sectors;

(2) annually recommend policies to the governor and the legislature, including needed research, mapping, and monitoring programs;

(3) offer advice on coordinating disaster preparedness and hazard-mitigation activities of government at all levels, review the practices for recovery and reconstruction after a natural disaster, and recommend improvements to mitigate losses from similar future events;

(4) gather, analyze, and disseminate information of general interest on hazard mitigation;

(5) establish and maintain necessary working relationships with other public and private agencies;

(6) review predictions and warnings issued by the federal government, research institutions, and other organizations and persons and suggest appropriate responses at the state and local level; and

(7) review proposed hazard notifications and supporting information from state agencies, evaluate possible socioeconomic consequences, recommend that the governor issue formal hazard notifications when appropriate, and advise state and local agencies of appropriate responses.

(b) The commission may

(1) advise the governor and the legislature on disaster preparedness and hazard mitigation and on budgets for those activities, and recommend legislation or policies to improve disaster preparedness or hazard mitigation;

(2) conduct public hearings;

(3) appoint committees from its membership and appoint external advisory committees of ex-officio members; and

(4) accept grants, contributions, and appropriations from public agencies, private foundations, and individuals.

Sec. 44.37.230. DEFINITIONS. In AS 44.37.200 - 44.37.230

(1) "commission" means the Alaska Natural Hazards Safety Commission;

(2) "disaster preparedness" means establishing plans and programs for responding to and distributing funds to alleviate losses from a disaster as defined in AS 26.23.230;

(3) "hazard mitigation" or "mitigation" mean activities that prevent or alleviate the harmful effects of natural hazards to persons and property, including identification and evaluation of the hazards, assessment of the risks, and implementation of measures to reduce potential losses before a damaging event occurs.

* Sec. 3. AS 44.66.010(a) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(13) Alaska Natural Hazards Safety Commission (AS 44.37.200) -- June 30, 1990.

* Sec. 4. Notwithstanding AS 44.37.210 enacted by sec. 2 of this Act, two of the initial public members of the Alaska Natural Hazards Safety Commission shall serve terms of two years, two initial public members of the commission shall serve terms of three years and one initial public member shall serve a term of four years.

RE: Senate Bill 310, Natural Hazards Safety Commission

Senate Bill 310 creates a commission to provide policy advice to the governor regarding hazard-related programs and public safety practices and is designed to fill a gap in public safety services in Alaska.

As the bill is currently drafted, the 11 members of the commission are appointed by the Governor, and include a representative from the University of Alaska, a representative from local government, a representative from the Department of Military Affairs, and a representative from an appropriate federal agency. The remaining six members are public members knowledgeable in the fields of geology, seismology, hydrology, geotechnical engineering, structural engineering, emergency services, or planning.

Earthquake Hazard Mitigation, Planning and Policy Implementation, the Alaska Case, completed in 1984 by the University of Alaska, Anchorage and Urban Regional Research, is a major report designed to look at progress made since the 1964 Earthquake regarding natural hazard risk mitigation. Among the recommendations included in the study are:

1. Develop and institute programs of public education, information, and disclosure to obtain a social commitment to seismic risk mitigation.

2. Renewed commitment at all levels of government to evaluate risk and its effects by supporting the continued development of socioeconomic and physical-biological data bases.

3. Government should support the integration of risk into the comprehensive planning process.

4. Develop guidelines for defining high seismic risk areas as standard for state and local earthquake zoning and for land use decision processes.

5. Establish local, state, and federal institutions to provide for an administrative mandate, intra- and inter-governmental relations, and focus public and governmental attention on seismic risk.

Powers and duties of the commission include:

1. Recommend goals and priorities for hazard mitigation to the public and private sectors.

2. recommend policies to the governor and legislature, including needed research, mapping, and monitoring programs.

3. offer advice on coordinating disaster preparedness and hazard-mitigation activities of government at all levels, review practices for recovery and reconstruction after a natural disaster, and recommend improvements to mitigate losses from similar future events.

4. gather, analyze and disseminate information of general interest on hazard mitigation.

5. establish and maintain necessary working relationships with other public and private agencies.

6. review predictions and warnings issued by the federal government, research institutions, and other organizations and persons and suggest appropriate responses at the state and local level.

7. review proposed hazard notifications and supporting information from state agencies, evaluate possible socioeconomic consequences, recommend that the governor issue formal hazard notifications when appropriate, and advise state and local agencies of appropriate responses.

We have received suggestions from the Administration which would include a representative from the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities and a representative from the Department of Community and Regional Affairs. This would change the number of public members rrom six to four.

It has been suggested that the quorum requirement of eight members be changed to six members for a quorum.

Also suggested is that the list of fields in which public members are knowledgeable be expanded to include business.

Dear Senator Sturgulewski:

I have reviewed Senate Bill 310 and agree with the intent. In an article by R.A. Combellick of the Alaska Department of Natural Resources, reference is made to a recent workshop organized by the U.S. Geological Survey in Anchorage September 5-7, 1985. Recommendations from the workshop were unanimously adopted and are as follows:

1. Establishment of an Alaska Natural Hazards Safety Commission to provide policy guidance for the Governor and Legislature and to help coordinate agency programs in natural hazards.

2. Development of state policies for hazard mitigation in Alaska that establish long-term commitments and goals.

3. Establishment of a hazard-monitoring program that ensures availability of basic data needed to evaluate hazards.

4. Amendments to the municipal code and other statutes to promote local-government action in hazard mitigation.

5. State regulation of construction and major alterations of critical facilities to ensure that they are reasonably protected from natural disasters.

6. Establishment of hazard-mitigation requirements for certain capital-construction projects financed by the State.

7. Establishment of incentives or requirements for local governments to implement hazard-mitigation measures as a condition for receiving disaster-relief funds.

8. Improvement in capabilities of state agencies to participate in reviews and to assist other agencies and local governments in problems that relate to hazard mitigation and disaster preparedness.

9. Establishment of a state hazard-notification system to supplement that of the U.S. Geological Survey and help coordinate responses by state and local agencies.

A copy of the article is enclosed for your information. (First two pages only as article is incomplete.)

The establishment of a Commission is good. My concern is though with the numbers. I don't believe that a Commission this size will be any more effective than a Commission of five (5).

GEOLOGIC-HAZARDS MITIGATION IN ALASKA

A Review of Federal, State, and Local Policies

By
R.A. Combellick[1]

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Earthquakes and volcanic eruptions occur frequently in Alaska. Because the climate is dynamic, topographic variation is extreme, and thousands of miles of coastline are exposed to the open ocean, Alaska will continue to to be affected by these and other natural phenomena such as landslides, snow avalanches, floods, tsunamis, and many localized or chronic events that may be as costly over the long term as major events. Because development is rapidly expanding into areas where geologic hazards once had little effect, the same events may now cause major property damage.

Technology is available to identify natural hazards, determine their probable severity, and reduce their potential effects on people and property. On the basis of this review of national and state policies, 10 issues were identified in which possible improvements could substantially benefit public safety from natural hazards in Alaska:

1. Policy guidance and coordination of state and local hazard-mitigation programs.
2. Availability of basic technical information on hazards for land-use planning and construction.
3. Continuation of many federally funded hazards studies in Alaska that are being terminated or substantially reduced.
4. Incentives and guidelines to consider geologic hazards in local plans and ordinances.
5. Hazard mitigation in siting, design, and construction of critical facilities.
6. Hazard mitigation in siting, design, and construction of many state-funded public facilities.
7. The relationship between hazard mitigation and eligibility for disaster-relief funds.
8. Capability of state agencies to provide adequate technical services, assistance, and project reviews on geologic hazards for other agencies and local governments.
9. Standards of experience and education for geologists who prepare reports required by state or local laws for siting or designing facilities.
10. State capability to issue formal state notices of serious geologic hazards and coordinate the response by state and local agencies.

A comprehensive review of existing programs in California, Colorado, and the federal government suggests that some common attributes are responsible for the success and public acceptance of many hazard-mitigation programs. These attributes include central policy guidance and coordination; availability of current technical information; incentives and guidelines to consider geologic hazards in local ordinances; immunization of local governments from hazards-related liability under certain circumstances; availability of guidelines and state assistance to recognize and mitigate hazards at the local level; centralized review of design and construction plans for critical and public facilities; appropriate standards for design and construction of facilities that are subject to review for hazard safety; adequate training and experience for reviewers; incentives for hazard mitigation as part of disaster-relief programs; and the ability of programs to be self-supporting through special revenue programs.

The 10 policy issues listed above were discussed by participants at a workshop entitled 'Evaluation of regional and urban earthquake hazards and risk in Alaska.' The workshop was organized by the U.S. Geological Survey and took place September 5-7, 1985 in Anchorage. Participants included seismologists, geologists, engineers, planners, emergency coordinators, policymakers, and educators that represented levels of government, the private sector, and academia. The participants unanimously adopted nine recommendations for improvements in state policy:

1. Establishment of an Alaska Natural Hazards Safety Commission to provide policy guidance for the Governor and Legislature and to help coordinate agency programs in natural hazards.
2. Development of state policies for hazard mitigation in Alaska that establish long-term commitments and goals.
3. Establishment of a hazard-monitoring program that ensures availability of basic data needed to evaluate hazards.
4. Amendments to the municipal code and other statutes to promote local-government action in hazard mitigation.

5. State regulation of construction and major alterations of critical facilities to ensure that they are reasonably protected from natural disasters.
6. Establishment of hazard-mitigation requirements for certain capital-construction projects financed by the State.
7. Establishment of incentives or requirements for local governments to implement hazard-mitigation measures as a condition for receiving disaster-relief funds.
8. Improvement in capabilities of state agencies to participate in reviews and to assist other agencies and local governments in problems that relate to hazard mitigation and disaster preparedness.
9. Establishment of a state hazard-notification system to supplement that of the U.S. Geological Survey and help coordinate responses by state and local agencies.

INTRODUCTION

Many processes that are responsible for Alaska's scenic beauty and abundant resources are also responsible for the wide variety of physical conditions and natural hazards that challenge the human presence. Earthquakes and volcanoes are as active in Alaska as anywhere else in the world, the climate is severe, topographic variation is extreme, and thousands of miles of coastline are exposed to the open ocean. Thus, Alaska is subject to major earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, landslides, snow avalanches, floods, tsunamis, and many local or chronic hazards, such as permafrost, that can be costly for property owners over a long period of time. Effective mitigation efforts have greatly reduced these costs in other states.

Although the number of major natural events in the recent past is high, few events have significantly affected the general public because of Alaska's relatively sparse population and vast, thinly inhabited areas. Major events will continue to occur intermittently as in the recent geologic past, and with increasing development, the probability will increase that people, businesses, property, and critical facilities will be affected.

Experience in other states demonstrates that local ordinances are among the most effective means of mitigating natural hazards. State governments generally provide guidelines, technical information, and the requirement or incentives for local adoption of risk-reduction measures. All municipalities in Alaska have zoning authority that can incorporate hazard-mitigation measures. Flood-plain-management ordinances have been adopted in at least 20 cities and boroughs. Other hazards have been only generally addressed. A few local governments have recently begun to independently act on specific issues of local concern. Most major municipalities have adopted the Uniform Building Code published in 1982 by the International Conference of Building Officials (ICBO). Although this code provides detailed requirements for earthquake-resistant design and construction, it does not provide comprehensive construction and siting requirements for other hazards.

The purposes of this report are fourfold: 1) review geologic-hazard issues in Alaska from an historical perspective; 2) discuss various approaches to hazard mitigation; 3) evaluate hazard-mitigation programs in other states (their strengths, weaknesses, and applicability in Alaska); and 4) review existing state, federal, and local programs dealing with hazards in Alaska. This report also includes a summary of policy recommendations developed in September 1985 during an interagency workshop on earthquake hazards in Alaska. Because major programs of disaster preparedness and response already exist and operate under the Division of Emergency Services and local agencies, these activities are not discussed in detail. This report focuses primarily on activities that reduce the likelihood of injury or damage from natural hazards. Greater emphasis on knowledge of the hazards, public awareness, and effective mitigation measures will reduce vulnerability to hazards and consequently reduce dependence on post-disaster response and relief.

NATURAL DISASTERS IN ALASKA

From 1964 to 1981, there were seven presidential declarations of disaster in Alaska, an average of one every 2.5 yr. These natural disasters included one major earthquake, three floods, one heavy rain and landslide, one severe freeze, and a major fire during a severe freeze. Although a total of about $76 million in federal aid was provided, it was far short of the total estimated damages. For example, of the $350 million estimated damages that resulted from the 1964 Great Alaska Earthquake in 1964, about $56 million in federal aid was provided. Except for restoration work performed directly by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the remaining burden fell on state and local governments, private businesses, and individuals. Following the Chena River flood in Fairbanks in August 1967 (fig. 1), which resulted in damages that totalled about $84 million (Pewe, 1982), the federal government provided $7.3 million in direct financial aid (Federal Emergency Management Agency, 1982).

In addition to disaster declarations by the President, for which federal relief funds are available, the Governor of Alaska is authorized to make disaster declarations for which state relief funds are provided, generally through the Alaska Division of Emergency Services (ADES). State funds may supplement federal-relief funds for presidentially declared disasters, but more often are used to provide relief after events that are not declared disasters at the federal level. From January 1978 to February 1982, no disasters were declared in Alaska by

RE: SB 310

SPONSORS: Senators Sturgulewski, Fischer, and Zharoff

Effects of Bill: This bill would establish a Natural Hazards Safety Commission composed of eleven members to address hazards mitigation and disaster preparedness issues.

Comments: The Department of Community and Regional Affairs supports the bill as a rational way to address the vital need to coordinate the activities of hazard-related programs and public safety practices at all governmental levels and in the private sector.

Flooding is one of the major natural hazards that regularly occurs in Alaska. Major rivers almost on an annual basis produce floods which cause significant property damage and threaten the health and safety of Alaskan residents. The Department of Community and Regional Affairs is the coordinating office of the National Flood Insurance Program. The potential flood hazard mitigation and post-disaster floodplain management duties of the proposed Commission would benefit greatly our Department's floodplain management community assistance program.

Because of the Department's interest and active involvement in the area of natural hazard mitigation and management, the Department believes SB 310 should be amended to provide for a representative from the Department of Community and Regional Affairs. Even though the existing bill provides for a local government representative, the addition of a DCRA representative would enhance the link between local governments and the hazard mitigation functions of the Natural Hazards Safety Commission.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - SECOND SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to suspension and revocation of a minor's license to drive and the definition of driver's license; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 28.15 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 28.15.163. ADMINISTRATIVE SUSPENSION OF A MINOR'S LICENSE. (a) In addition to any other authority in this chapter to cancel, suspend or revoke a driver's license, the department shall suspend a minor's license to drive upon receipt of a record of conviction or adjudication of a violation of an offense listed in AS 28.15.185(a). The department shall impose the suspension as follows:

(1) for a first conviction or adjudication, the suspension shall be for one year or until the person reaches 17 years of age, whichever is longer.

(2) for a second or subsequent conviction or adjudication, the suspension shall be for one year or until the person reaches 18 years of age, whichever is longer.

(b) If the department receives notice from a court that it has restored a minor's license to drive under AS 28.15.185(b), the department shall immediately reinstate a driver's license that has been suspended under this section.

* Sec. 2. AS 28.15 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 28.15.185. COURT REVOCATION OF A MINOR'S LICENSE TO DRIVE. (a) A person who is at least 13 years of age, but not older than 17 years of age who is convicted, or adjudicated by a juvenile court, of having committed one of the following offenses shall have the person's driver's license revoked:

(1) misconduct involving a controlled substance (AS 11.71);

(2) possession or consumption of alcohol (AS 04.16.050).

(b) Upon conviction or adjudication of an offense listed in (a) of this section the court may, upon petition of the person, review the revocation and may restore the driver's license, except a court may not restore the driver's license for a period of

(1) 90 days for the first conviction or adjudication;

(2) one year for second or subsequent convictions or adjudications.

* Sec. 3. AS 28.40.100(a)(5) is amended to read:

(5) "driver's license" or "license" when used in relation to driver licensing, means a license, permit or privilege to obtain a driver's license, whether or not a person holds a valid license issued in this or another jurisdiction, to drive a motor vehicle under the laws of this state;

* Sec. 4. AS 47.10.080(g) is amended to read:

(g) Except for purposes of driver's licensing under AS 28.15.-163, an [NO] adjudication under this chapter upon the status of a child may not operate to impose any of the civil disabilities ordinarily imposed by conviction upon a criminal charge, nor may a minor afterward be considered a criminal by the adjudication, nor may the adjudication be afterward deemed a conviction, nor may a minor be charged with or convicted of a crime in a court, except as provided in this chapter. The commitment and placement of a child and evidence given in the court are not admissible as evidence against the minor in a subsequent case or proceedings in any other court, nor does the commitment and placement or evidence operate to disqualify a minor in a future civil service examination or appointment in the state.

* Sec. 5. AS 47.10.090(a) is amended to read:

(a) The court shall make and keep records of all cases brought before it. The court's official records may be inspected only with the court's permission and only by persons having a legitimate interest in them. All information and social records pertaining to a minor and prepared by an employee of the court or by a federal, state or city agency in the discharge of the employee's or agency's official duty, are privileged and may not be disclosed directly or indirectly to anyone without the court's permission. However, a state or city law-enforcement agency shall disclose information regarding a case which is needed by the person or agency charged with making a preliminary investigation for the information of the court. The court shall forward a record of adjudication of a violation of an offense listed in AS 28.15.185(a) to the Department of Public Safety. Within 30 days of the date of a minor's 18th birthday or, if the court retains jurisdiction of a minor past the minor's 18th birthday, within 30 days of the date on which the court relinquishes jurisdiction over the minor, the court shall order sealed all the court's official records, information and social records pertaining to that minor, as well as records of all criminal proceedings against the minor and punishments assessed against the minor except for traffic offenses. A person may not use these sealed records for any purpose except that the court may order their use for good cause shown or may order their use by an officer of the court in making a presentencing report for the court.

Senate Bill 323

This bill is modeled after the State of Oregon law titled "Youth Substance Abuse and Driving Accident Prevention". A young person (between the ages of 13-17)is denied driving privileges for alcohol or controlled substance violations. Suspension for the first conviction or adjudication is one year or until the person reaches 17. Suspension for the second conviction or adjudication is one year or until the person reaches 18.

Section 1

Adds new language- after an adjudicative hearing (all minors do not go to court for violations) for specific violations, a minor's drivers license, permit, or privilege to obtain a license, will be suspended.

Section 2

Adds new language- the court can revoke a minor's drivers license, permit, or privilege to obtain a license for specific violations.

Section 3

Adds new language to the definition of driver's license or license. (Fixes a loophole in the definition a license, because of the successful lawsuit of Roberts vs the State of Alaska, the state could not suspend the right to drive if there is no license to suspend)

Section 4

Adds new language for consistency within the statute.

Section 5

Adds new language- that the Court can forward the names of juveniles who are adjudicated for certain violations to the Department of Public Safety

Section 6

Dear Senator Ray:

What can we do to help stop our youth from drinking and driving?

The state of Oregon has found the answer! In 1984 they adopted a law called "Youth Substance Abuse and Driving Accident Prevention". Since the law was adopted in September of 1984 the Division of Motor Vehicles of Oregon has denied driving privileges to more than 1,292 youths. (See attachments)

As supervisor of the local alcohol/drug abuse clinic I know there is an extremely high correlation between youths receiving minor consuming charges and a year or two later showing up at the clinic with a DWI. I feel this type of legislation has a twofold beneficial effect: it will initially make our roads safer and secondly it will help to impact the severity of drinking and driving on our youth.

Please give this legislation your careful attention!

If I can be of any assistance please call on me!

CHAPTER.....

AN ACT

Relating to driving privileges; creating new provisions; and amending ORS 482.470.

Be It Enacted by the People of the State of Oregon:

SECTION 1. (1) Whenever a person who is 17 years of age or younger, but not younger than 13 years of age, is convicted of any offense described in this subsection or determined by a juvenile court to have committed one of the described offenses, the court in which the person is convicted shall prepare and send to the Motor Vehicles Division, within 24 hours of the conviction or determination, an order of denial of driving privileges for the person so convicted. This section applies to any crime, violation, infraction or other offense involving the possession, use or abuse of alcohol or controlled substances.

(2) If a court has issued an order of denial of driving privileges under this section, the court, upon petition of the person, may review the order and may withdraw the order at any time the court deems appropriate except as provided in the following:

(a) A court may not withdraw an order for a period of 90 days following the issuance of the order if it is the first such order issued with respect to the person.

(b) A court may not withdraw an order for a period of one year following the issuance of the order if it is the second or subsequent such order issued with respect to the person.

SECTION 2. Section 3 of this Act is added to and made a part of ORS chapter 482.

SECTION 3. (1) In addition to any other authority to suspend driving privileges under this chapter, the division shall suspend all driving privileges of any person upon receipt of an order of denial of driving privileges under section 1 of this 1983 Act: The suspension shall be imposed without hearing. The driving privileges of the person shall be suspended as provided in the following:

(a) Upon receipt of the first order denying driving privileges, the division shall impose a suspension for one year, or until the person so suspended reaches 17 years of age, whichever is longer.

(b) Upon receipt of a second or subsequent order denying driving privileges, the division shall suspend for one year or until the person reaches 18 years of age, whichever is longer.

(2) If the division receives notice from a court that it has withdrawn an order issued under section 1 of this 1983 Act, the division shall immediately reinstate any driving privileges that have been suspended under this section because of the issuance of the order.

SECTION 4. ORS 482.470 is amended to read:

482.470. (1) The division shall not suspend a license for a period of more than one year except:

(a) As provided in ORS 482.430 (3) and (4) and section 3 of this 1983 Act;

(b) As provided in ORS 482.440 in the case of offenses which, if committed by a driver under ORS 482.440, would result in mandatory suspension or revocation for more than one year;

(c) When the suspension results from failure to obtain medical clearance when requested to do so under ORS 482.260 (1)(d)(B);

(d) When the driver fails to complete reexamination as required under ORS 482.260 (4); or

(e) When the driver fails to complete a requirement of ORS 482.850.

(2) When the operator's or chauffeur's license of any person has been suspended, the division shall not issue an operator's or chauffeur's license to the person prior to the expiration of the suspension period, except as otherwise provided in this chapter.

(3) When any license is suspended or revoked it shall be surrendered to and retained by the division. Upon the conviction of any operator or chauffeur for any offense which by this chapter is cause for mandatory suspension or revocation, the court in which the conviction was had shall issue an order of suspension or revocation, take up the operator's or chauffeur's license and immediately forward the license and a copy of the order to the division. When necessary to give full effect to this section, the court shall issue a temporary operator's permit, on a form provided by the division, to the convicted person which shall be valid until midnight of the day of the conviction. At the end of the period of suspension upon a license so surrendered, it shall be returned to the licensee upon request being made to the division by the licensee. However, the division may require the licensee to furnish evidence to the effect that the licensee is qualified to continue as an operator or chauffeur under this chapter, before returning the license.

SECTION 5. Section 6 of this Act is added to and made a part of ORS chapter 482.

SECTION 6. Notwithstanding any suspension of driving privileges under section 3 of this 1983 Act, the division may issue a special temporary permit described under ORS 482.160 (2) to a person whose driving privileges are suspended under section 3 of this 1983 Act if the person qualifies for the special temporary permit. For purposes of this section an emergency situation that leaves the applicant with no alternative means to travel to and from school is an emergency for purposes of ORS 482.160 (2) in addition to other emergency situations.

SECTION 7. If House Bill 2965 becomes law, section 6 of this Act is repealed and section 8 of this Act is enacted in lieu thereof.

SECTION 8. Notwithstanding any suspension of driving privileges under section 3 of this 1983 Act or ORS 165.805 or 471.430, the division may issue a special temporary permit described under ORS 482.160 (2) to a person whose driving privileges are suspended under section 3 of this 1983 Act or under ORS 165.805 or 471.430 if the person qualifies for the special temporary permit. For purposes of this section an emergency situation that leaves the applicant with no alternative means to travel to and from school is an emergency for purposes of ORS 482.160 (2) in addition to other emergency situations.

600 denied privileges

More than 600 Oregon youths between the ages of 13 and 17 were denied driving privileges during the first six months in 1985, according to Motor Vehicles Division.

Denials are based on court convictions involving alcohol or drug possession, use or abuse. Courts then order DMV to deny licenses.

Most of the 627 denials ordered during the first six months of this year were for alcohol offenses. Minors in possession of alcohol or drugs accounted for 577, or 92 percent of the total. Twenty-seven denials were for having an open container or drinking alcohol in a motor vehicle, and eight were for driving under the influence.

Fifteen denials were ordered for miscellaneous alcohol and drug offenses, such as theft, delivery or manufacturing of a controlled substance.

Males accounted for 74 percent of the 627 total.

Denials of driving privileges for first offenders is one year or until the person becomes 17, whichever is longer. Repeat offenders are suspended for a year or until the person becomes 18, whichever is longer.

DMV statistics show 62 second denials and four third denials (all males) during the first six months of 1985.

Licenses revoked

Myrtle Point, Oregon 10/31/84

Seventy-one young people were denied driving privileges by court order during September. Denials were based on violations of alcohol or drug laws by young people between the ages of 13 and 17.

Most of the young people (48) who were denied driving privileges last month were males. The most frequent reason for denial was "minor in possession of alcohol" which, alone, accounted for 76 percent (54) of the court ordered denials.

The Motor Vehicles Division's administrator, David P. Moomaw, said that the September figure brings the number of denials so far this year to 692. The law took effect late in 1983.

Other grounds for denial last month were minor in possession of drugs, 11; having an open container of an alcoholic beverage in a motor vehicle, 4; and intoxicated minor (not related to driving), 2.

Three denials were for 13-years olds. Five were 14 years old; 10 were 15 years old; 21 were 16 years old and 32 were 17 years old.

Under the law, denial means no license can be issued or a license already issued must be taken away for one year or until the person becomes 17, whichever is longer. Repeat offenders, however, are suspended or denied a license for one year or until the person becomes 18, whichever is longer.

...ness which they supply convey a certain impression of unreliability, and it is proper to demand that some evidence of their credibility and reliability be shown. One practical way of making such a showing is to point to accurate information which they have supplied in the past.

Erickson, 507 P.2d at 517 (footnote omitted).

[4] Somewhat surprisingly, courts faced with anonymous informants in contexts similar to this one have been willing to characterize the informant as a citizen informant. See, e.g., Campbell v. State Department of Licensing, 31 Wash.App. 523, 644 P.2d 1219, 1220 n. 1 (1982). Upon closer examination, however, the reason becomes clear. Informants from the criminal milieu are distrusted because they often give evidence against the defendant: (1) for pay; (2) for immunity from punishment; or (3) for personal advantage or vindication. See Evans v. State, 550 P.2d 830, 843 & n. 35 (Alaska 1976). Since the informant here is anonymous and his tip conveyed by phone through a police dispatcher, it is unlikely that he gave information in expectation of any one of these rewards. While the possibility of an anonymous informant's hostility to the defendant motivating a false claim is always present, it is of less significance in the context of a R.E.D.D.I. report than other considerations. A primary reason for distrusting anonymous informants is the fear that there will in fact be no informant and that the officer will utilize a fictional informant to account for information which in fact was illegally obtained or to justify a search or seizure based on an unsupported hunch that ultimately proved accurate. The court must always be sensitive to the risk that an alleged informant is fictitious. Where the circumstances reduce the risk that the police have fabricated an informant in order to base a search or seizure on illegally obtained evidence or to justify a successful hunch, courts are more likely to classify an anonymous informant as a "citizen informant." See, e.g., Commonwealth v. An-

...as follows:

[P]olice at the Boston Greyhound Bus terminal were summoned by a dispatcher and handed a note saying that there was a black man wearing a blue hat and carrying a brown paper bag who had a gun and narcotics on the bus from New York to Boston. The dispatcher explained that the note had been given him by a bus driver, who in turn received it from a man in a toll booth who said it had been thrown into the booth by someone on a New York to Boston bus, and who passed the other bus and arrived at the terminal ahead of it. The bus from which the note had been thrown then arrived, and the first passenger to exit was a black man with a blue hat carrying a brown paper bag, who walked briskly when he saw the police on the scene. In upholding the stop which was then made, the court properly emphasized (i) that the police could not be faulted for not having more details, and (ii) that there was no risk of fabrication.

LaFave then quotes from the case:

> In this case we are of the opinion that there exists indicia of reliability to sustain the police officer's actions. First, the inference could be drawn from the note that the informant was on the same bus as the defendant and very probably based his information on personal observations. The brevity and the lack of detail of the note are explainable by a need to act quickly in getting the message to the toll booth operator for the authorities. It is not unimportant that the message was in writing and was passed on by some disinterested citizen, thus eliminating the possibility of a police fabrication which is a principal concern in assessing the propriety of a threshold inquiry launched by an anonymous tip.

3 W. LaFave, supra, § 9.3, at 102-03, quoting Anderson, 318 N.E.2d at 838. The facts here are substantially similar to those in Anderson. The informant reported

...erence is that he observed Effenbeck ...onally and reached the conclusion that ...nbeck was intoxicated based on that ...ervation. The brevity and lack of detail ...the description are explainable by the ...rmant's need to act quickly to get the ...sage to the police so that they could ...ntercept Effenbeck before he injured ...someone. Finally, the circumstances virtually eliminate the possibility of police fabrication.

A further comment by Professor LaFave is apt:

> Finally, it must be acknowledged that stoppings for investigation are not all of one kind and that in some instances the need for immediate action may be so great that substantial doubts about the reliability of the informant or his information cannot be permitted to stand in the way of prompt police action. But the fact that this is so in certain extraordinary situations is not to suggest that the same sacrifice of reliability must be made across the board in stopping-for-investigation cases.

3 W. LaFave, supra, § 9.3, at 103. LaFave goes on to distinguish cases such as this one where police action is necessary to intercept and prevent injurious conduct and cases where an investigatory stop is made to seize drugs or gambling paraphernalia. Id. at 103-04. In Alaska, our supreme court has essentially limited investigatory stops to the first situation. See Ebona v. State, 577 P.2d 698, 700 (Alaska 1978); Coleman v. State, 553 P.2d 40, 43 (Alaska 1976). Given the information the officer got, corroborated in part by his observing Effenbeck leaving a bar parking lot, we are satisfied that the exigencies of this situation warranted the investigatory stop.

The judgment of the district court is AFFIRMED.

OPINION

700 P.2d 815

[illegible] of driving while his license was suspended (DWLS), in violation of AS 28.15.291.[1] He later filed a motion for post-conviction relief, seeking to set aside his conviction based on this court's decision in Francis v. Anchorage, 641 P.2d 226 (Alaska App.1982). District Court Judge Natalie K. Finn denied the motion. Roberts has appealed, claiming that the District Court erred in failing to vacate his DWLS conviction. We reverse.

Roberts has apparently never had an Alaska driver's license. It is uncontested that his California driver's license expired sometime during or prior to 1981. In 1982 and 1983 the State of Alaska purported to suspend Roberts' driver's license or privilege to drive based on (1) a conviction for driving while intoxicated, (2) an accumulation of points, and (3) failure to provide proof of financial responsibility.

Subsequently, on June 8, 1983, Roberts was arrested for DWLS. After being convicted of that offense, Roberts moved to have the conviction vacated. He argued that, since he did not have a valid driver's license in any jurisdiction when the state purported to suspend his privilege to drive in 1982–1983, he had no license or driving privilege to suspend. Accordingly, Roberts the District Court of his post-conviction motion, Roberts appeals, reasserting the argument he raised below.[2]

In Francis v. Anchorage, 641 P.2d 225 (Alaska App.1982), we considered a claim which was similar to the one raised by Roberts. Francis involved a fifteen-year old driver who was convicted of DWLS under section 9.12.010(B) of the Anchorage Municipal Code.[3] Prior to Francis' DWLS arrest, the state had suspended his driving privilege for failure to furnish proof of financial responsibility following an accident. Francis argued that he could not properly be convicted of DWLS because, at the time the state purported to suspend his driving privilege, he had no license or privilege to suspend. In reversing Francis' conviction, we expressly ruled that a driver's license or privilege to drive cannot properly be suspended unless the driver was in fact licensed or otherwise actually privileged to drive a motor vehicle within the state. Specifically, we held:

> In the context of the municipal ordinances and the state's driver's licensing scheme, we conclude that "privilege to drive" must mean some kind of legal authorization to drive. The privilege in this sense follows issuance of a driver's

1. At the time of Roberts' offense, AS 28.15.291 provided in relevant part:

> Driving while license cancelled, suspended, or revoked, or in violation of limitation.
> (a) No person may drive a motor vehicle on a highway or vehicular way or area in this state at a time when his driver's license, or privilege to drive in this state if he is licensed in another jurisdiction, has been cancelled, suspended or revoked, or when he is driving in violation of the limitation placed upon his license, even when he is driving under a license issued in another jurisdiction....

2. We have previously held, as a matter of policy, that an attack to the validity of an administrative license suspension could not properly be raised for the first time collaterally, in a prosecution for DWLS. See McClain v. State, 641 P.2d 1265 (Alaska App.1982). Our decision in McClain, however, involved a non-jurisdictional challenge—one that did not implicate the authority of the suspending agency. We note that cases from other jurisdictions have drawn distinctions between collateral challenges involving jurisdictional and non-jurisdictional arguments against the validity of a driver's license suspension. See, e.g., State v. Putman, 137 Vt. 410, 407 A.2d 161 (1979). Ultimately, we need not decide whether a collateral attack raising jurisdictional questions should generally be adjudicated on its merits in cases such as the present one. Roberts' claim is clearly jurisdictional in nature. Judge Finn ruled on the merits of Roberts' argument below, and the state has not contended, either below or on appeal, that a collateral attack should not be considered in this case. Under these circumstances, we have deemed it appropriate to decide Roberts' claim despite its collateral nature.

3. At the time of Francis' offense, AMC 9.12.010(B) provided:

> No person may violate a condition or privilege of such license, nor may any person drive a vehicle while such license is suspended, revoked, refused or cancelled....

quirement. We reject the interpretation suggested by the city that privilege to drive means nothing more than privilege to apply for a driver's license. While we recognize that at age fourteen, Francis had the opportunity under state law to apply for two categories of licenses, such an opportunity gave him no privilege to drive a vehicle on the public streets; that privilege is earned only by successfully completing the application process, including passing a written test, driving test, and eye test.

641 P.2d at 227 (citations omitted).

The only arguably significant distinction we perceive between the present case and Francis is that Roberts was convicted of DWLS under state law, while Francis was convicted under the Anchorage Municipal Code. Although the state relies on this distinction in urging us not to apply our decision in Francis to the present case, we decline to do so. As we noted in our opinion, the DWLS ordinance in Francis was analogous to the Alaska Statutes. Francis, 641 P.2d at 227. Moreover, while Francis was convicted under the municipal DWLS ordinance, it was the state, not the municipality, that had previously purported to suspend Francis' license. The validity of the state suspension was thus the legal issue on which Francis' claim ultimately turned. Since Francis' driving privileges had been suspended under state law rather than city ordinance, our holding in that case was necessarily based on an interpretation of both state and municipal law.

The state nevertheless requests that we consider overruling Francis. It advances two arguments in support of this request. Initially, the state relies on former AS 28.35.230(b) (renumbered AS 28.40.050), which states:

> (b) A person convicted of a misdemeanor for a violation of a provision of this title for which another penalty is not specifically provided is punishable by a fine of not more than $500, or by imprisonment for not more than ninety days, or may be suspended or revoked. [emphasis added].

The state points out that the penalties specified in this statute are applicable to the offense of DWLS, since no penalties are otherwise expressly provided for that offense. See AS 28.15.011(b). The state's argument is that, since a license suspension is expressly authorized under former AS 28.35.230(b), and since that provision applies to persons convicted of DWLS, then it must follow that it is possible to suspend the license, or "privilege to drive," of an unlicensed driver.

The state's argument might seem plausible if former AS 28.35.230(b) were a penalty provision dealing specifically with the offense of DWLS. Yet it is not. Instead, former AS 28.35.230(b) is a generic penalty provision, broadly applicable to violations of all Title 28 provisions for which the specific penalties are given. Consequently, inclusion of license suspension as a possible penalty in AS 28.35.230(b) gives little realistic insight to whether the legislature actually intended unlicensed drivers to be subject to license suspensions.

The state's second statutory argument is based on AS 28.15.011(a), which provides:

> (a) No person shall be denied the privilege to drive a motor vehicle upon a highway in this state, except as prescribed by law.

The state argues that the effect of this statute is to confer on all citizens of Alaska a "privilege to drive," which can be restricted only by law. Under this interpretation, all persons—presumably including infants and children—are privileged drivers, and, hence, their driving privileges can be suspended before they are licensed.

The state's interpretation of AS 28.15.011(a) was implicitly rejected by our holding in Francis. In our view, the provisions of AS 28.15.011(a) constitute a broad statement of the legislature's intent, in enacting the motor vehicle code, to adopt a statutory scheme that deals with the licensing of Alaska drivers in a comprehensive and uni form manner. We do not read this subsection as a legislative commitment to the philosophical concept of an innate privilege to drive.[4]

In short, we discern no basis for holding that this case is not wholly governed by our decision in Francis, nor are we convinced of any sound reason for overruling that precedent.

We are not insensitive to the fact that the current statutory scheme governing suspension of driver's licenses and the offense of DWLS, as interpreted by this court in Francis, may in certain instances lead to undesirable results. We emphasize, however, that Francis comports with Alaska's current statutory language and reflects the result reached in other jurisdictions that have addressed similar issues under similar statutory language. See Francis, 641 P.2d at 228.

At this stage we believe that the solution for any problems stemming from the current statutory language should properly be resolved through legislative action rather than by the process of judicial interpretation.[5]

The conviction is REVERSED.

COATS, J., not participating.

4. In any event the state's reading of AS 28.15.011(b) ultimately fails to advance its argument. Assuming that the statute originally vested Roberts with a broad "privilege to drive," it is manifest that, under the provisions of the motor vehicle code, the privilege was extinguished by Roberts' failure to renew his California driver's license or to apply for an Alaska license. Thus, even under the state's theory it would be possible to conclude, that prior to the state's action to suspend driving privilege, his "privilege to drive" had in effect been denied "as prescribed by law." AS 28.15.011(a).

5. The New York legislature has apparently recently dealt with this issue and remedied prior legislation by expressly providing for suspension of "the privilege to obtain a license." Moreover, for the purposes of the offense of DWLS, New York Statutes expressly define an expired driver's license to fall within the definition of "license." See People v. Rivera, 95 Misc.2d 933, 408 N.Y.S.2d 723 (N.Y.Crim.Ct. 1978); People v. Goodenough, 89 Misc.2d 455, 391 N.Y.S.2d 940 (N.Y. Justice's Ct.1977).

PAK-MOR MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Defendant/Appellant.

No. 17412-PR.

Supreme Court of Arizona,
En Banc.

Jan. 17, 1985.

Garbage collector brought product liability action against manufacturer of garbage compactor for injuries he sustained while riding on exterior of compactor. The Superior Court, Pima County, No. 179374, Robert B. Buchanan, J., entered verdict in favor of plaintiff, and defendant appealed. The Court of Appeals, 700 P.2d 830, affirmed, and defendant petitioned for review. The Supreme Court, Feldman, J., held that: (1) in product liability cases involving a claim of defective design, trial court has discretion to admit evidence of safety history concerning both existence and nonexistence of prior accidents, provided that the proponent establishes the necessary predicate for the evidence, but (2) testimony of manufacturer's president that manufacturer had had no reports of any injuries similar to that sustained by plaintiff was inadmissible.

Opinion vacated in part and approved in part.

1. Products Liability ⇐81

In products liability actions, although trial court has discretion to admit evidence of prior accidents, rule relating to inadmissibility of evidence of absence of prior accidents is a per se rule.

In product liability actions based on defective design, relevant issues may include whether defendant should have foreseen the potential danger from use of the product as designed, whether a defect existed, and whether a particular danger was unreasonable, including the likelihood of its causing serious injury. 17A A.R.S. In product liability cases involving a claim of defective design, whether based on negligence, strict liability, or both, trial court has discretion to admit evidence of safety history concerning both existence and nonexistence of prior accidents, provided that the proponent establishes the necessary predicate for the evidence. 17A A.R.S. Rules of Evid., Rule 403.

5. Products Liability ⇐81

In product liability cases involving a claim of defective design, evidence of safety history is admissible on issues pertaining to whether design caused the product to be defective, whether the defect was unreasonably dangerous, whether it was a cause of the accident, or, in negligence cases, whether defendant should have foreseen that the design of the product was not reasonably safe for its contemplated uses. 17A A.R.S. POSITION PAPER

SENATE BILL 323

"An Act relating to suspension and revocation of a minor's license to drive and the definition of driver license; and providing for an effective date."

Discussion

Senate Bill 323 will attempt to reduce drinking and drug use by minors, persons under age eighteen, by placing time restrictions on the minor's privilege to obtain or retain a driver's license, if the minor is convicted of misconduct involving a controlled substance or possession or consumption of alcohol. The suspension period for a first offense is one year or until a person reaches the age of 17, whichever is longer, and the suspension period for a second offense is one year or until a person reaches the age of 18, whichever is longer.

This bill is patterned after an Oregon law that was enacted in July, 1983. In 1985, 1510 Oregon youth were denied driving privileges under the provision of this law. Of this number, 94% or 1414 denials were for the offense of possession of alcohol or drugs; 46 denials were for open container violations, 14 for driving under the influence, and 36 were for miscellaneous offenses. Of the 1510 convictions, 1352 were first offenses. 1985 was the second year of experience with this law. It has been reported in the Oregon press that judges in metropolitan areas have been ignoring this law because of heavy case loads or a belief that the penalty is too harsh for the offense.

Drinking and drug use among youth is a serious problem in Alaska. In the six year period of 1979-1984, 42 youth 0-18 years of age have died as a result of alcohol related motor vehicle accidents. According to the 1983 Crime in Alaska report, 1146 minors were arrested for liquor law violations; 336 for drug offenses; 234 for vandalism; and 97 for driving under the influence. Drinking and drug use account for a high number of school suspensions and family discord.

Position

The Department of Health and Social Services is supportive of the approach taken in SB 323 towards the prevention of drinking and drug use by Alaska youth. The privilege to obtain or retain a driver's license is held in high regard by this age group and it is hoped that this strategy will be an effective deterent indiscrimination use of chemicals. The Department recognizes that the majority of youth drinking and drug use is experimental in nature, nevertheless the strong influence of "peer preasure" upon this age group often results in unplanned use during social interactives. This legislation may serve as a constant reminder that the privilege driving must be earned through responsible behavior. There are statistical indications that a number of Alaska youth have serious problems with chemicals. In 1985, 882 youth 17 years of age and younger had diagnosed problems severe enough to warrant treatment for alcoholism and drug abuse in State funded programs. The Department would like the committee to consider one possible addition to the bill, a provision that convicted youth be required to undergo a screening process to determine the need for education or treatment. A process similar to the present Alcohol Safety Action Program (ASAP) and state treatment system could be used for this purpose. This process would impact the high risk youth with a more intensive response while providing relevent education to an offender.

The Department will be pleased to provide additional information on drinking and drug use among youth upon request.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

POSITION PAPER - SB 323

Neutral

January 20, 1986

SB 323. An Act relating to suspension and revocation of a minor's license to drive and the definition of driver's license.

It appears the bill was drafted by using Oregon law as a model, and not taking into account the difference in how the Courts and DMV operate in the two states. In Alaska the Court is generally empowered with the authority to revoke a driver's license at the time of sentencing for a criminal offense (ie: DWI, Hit & Run, etc.). It is recommended Section 1 of the bill be deleted, and the data be incorporated in Section 2. The bill would then specify the court imposes the revocation, whether it be 90 days, one year, or until a specific age. This would be more in line with current Alaska law, and would eliminate the need for DMV to offer an administrative hearing before the administrative suspension is imposed.

Lines 10 and 11 of Section 5 indicate information concerning the license action could not be disclosed. This would prevent enforcement of the action, thus making it meaningless. In order to allow DMV to enter the license action on the defendant's record line 23 of Section 5 should be amended to reflect ".... except for traffic offenses or license action taken under AS 28.15.163 or AS 28.15.185.".

As a point of information, current law (AS 28.20.240) will require the individual to file and maintain proof of financial responsibility for the future (SR-22 insurance) for three years. If the SR-22 is not filed the license action will continue for that additional three year period.

With the effective date being September 1, 1986, documents will not start being received from the Court until around October 1, 1986. Therefore, personal services for FY87 reflect a nine month period with the employee being hired October 1, 1986. Other items are budgeted accordingly with the first full year being FY88.

FY88 and subsequent years reflect a 5% inflation factor.

REVENUE:

Taxing Problems Spark State Reforms

By Steven D. Gold

Ironically, the odds for improving tax policy could increase if state fiscal conditions worsen.

A guiding principle in many legislative arenas is, "if it ain't broke, don't fix it." Applied to tax policy, however, this dictum can cause serious problems because often a provision is considered "broke" only when important constituents decide it is. Although benign neglect is not necessarily the best policy, it often seems to reign in tax deliberations.

But this attitude may be changing. During the past decade, extreme strain was placed on state tax systems by a set of problems that either are continuing or could resurface in the near future: the tax revolt, the severest recession since the Great Depression, federal aid cutbacks and interstate tax competition.

On top of these carry-over concerns, a new one has emerged during the past two years—federal tax reform, which could have profound impacts on the climate in which states must raise money.

State tax systems are much stronger today than they were 30 years ago. In the 1950s, '60s and '70s, states took major steps to improve the fairness and productivity of their tax systems by adopting many new income and sales taxes. These actions were responses to fiscal crises caused in part by the passage of the baby boomers through public education systems.

But since the early 1970s, many of the important changes in tax structures have occurred through inertia. Inflation, rising income and shifting production and consumption patterns have had perhaps more to do with the level and distribution of taxes than deliberate new policies.

Five crucial facts about state tax systems stand out.

They bring in a great deal of revenue. During the current fiscal year, state tax collections should top $225 billion, more than 10 times as much as in 1962 and 3½ times as much as in 1972.

Their growth can be likened to a roller coaster. Tax revenue rose faster than personal income for a quarter century, from the end of World War II to the early 1970s, as states assumed new responsibilities in the federal system. The growth of revenue plunged when the tax revolt hit in the late 1970s and then recovered in 1983 as three-fourths of the states raised tax rates. Since then tax cuts have predominated.

Every state tax system is different. Alaska and New Hampshire manage to get along without either a general sales or a personal income tax. Eleven other states have only one or the other. The remaining 37 states levy both but each in its own way. In total, 26 states rely on the sales tax more than the income tax, and 22 get more from the tax on incomes. Tax levels also differ a great deal. The ratio of state tax revenue to personal income is more than twice as high in 30 states as it is in New Hampshire.

Local taxes are also major parts of state tax systems. States dictate which taxes cities, counties and school districts may use and also influence the level of local taxes by giving financial aid or by paying for local functions Local tax revenue this fiscal year will be close to $140 billion. The role of localities in raising revenues differs greatly from one state to another, with local taxes representing only 16 percent of total state and local revenue in Alaska but 50 percent or more in Colorado, New Hampshire and New York.

The shape of state and local tax systems has changed considerably in the past 15 years. The property tax has been sharply de-emphasized, declining from 4.9 percent of personal income in 1972 to 3.4 percent in 1984. One of the main reasons for this trend was increased reliance on personal income taxes, which jumped from 1.2 percent of personal income to 2.1 percent between 1970 and 1985. States used much of their new income tax money to boost aid for local schools and assume other financial burdens from localities, such as welfare programs.

Despite the diversity in taxes, some important developments are occurring that are common to most states—interstate tax competition, erosion of tax bases, increasing instability and reduced responsiveness to economic growth.

State and local governments seem to be competing with each other more avidly than in the past to make themselves attractive to industrial investment. This intensified competition has arisen from many sources, including the especially high unemployment of the early 1980s, the decline of heavy industry in the Rust Belt and agriculture in the Farm Belt, and the increased exposure to international competition everywhere.

Interstate tax competition has resulted in a proliferation of exemptions for business and downward pressure on personal income tax rates. For example, at least a dozen states have exempted inventories from the property tax since 1980. Most of the states with the highest income taxes have been cutting them recently. As Lowell Norland, majority leader of the Iowa House of Representatives, says, "Because of our overriding economic development crusade, we're afraid to be out of step in taxation with other states."

Erosion of tax bases undermines the productivity of tax systems just as soil erosion reduces the yields from farmland. One source of tax base erosion is new exemptions granted by states, particularly from the sales, property and income taxes. Economic trends may also erode the tax base. Two examples: A portion of pension income is often exempt from income tax; as the population ages, pension income tends to grow faster than wages. Most services are usually exempt from the sales tax; as the service economy develops, exempt sales tend to grow more rapidly than taxable sales. Result: an eroded tax base. John Mikesell, a sales-tax expert at the University of Indiana, estimates that each penny of sales tax levied in 1984 yielded only 85 percent as much as it did in 1960, per dollar of personal income.

Ben Rose, assistant House minority leader in Ohio, helped put together a proposal for substantially broadening Erosion of tax bases—from such factors as exemptions granted by states from sales, property and income taxes as well as from larger economic trends—undermines the productivity of tax systems just as soil erosion reduces the yields from farmland.

the sales-tax base several years ago. Ohio eventually did extend the sales tax to repairs and data processing services. He warns that trying to tax services is "a tough political thicket," and that interstate tax competition limits the extent to which services can be taxed.

Erosion of the sales-tax base has led to exemption of food and utility outlays in about two-thirds of the sales-tax states and prescription drugs in virtually all states. The result of exempting these and other "necessities" has been to increase the instability of state tax revenue. Formerly when the economy went into a recession, the sales tax continued to produce revenue from such "necessities" while sales of discretionary products plummeted. Now this firm base is no longer taxable in most states.

State tax revenue does not respond as strongly to economic growth as it did in the 1970s because, among other reasons, 10 states adopted income tax indexation, marginal tax rates for high income taxpayers were reduced and exempt income grew relatively rapidly. The U.S. Treasury Department estimates that each 10 percent increase in personal income now produces only 14 percent growth in personal income tax revenue as opposed to 16 percent before 1978.

Because of these problems, as well as the severe fiscal problems experienced in the early 1980s, nearly half of the states have recently conducted major studies of their tax systems. Despite high hopes for these studies, they have not yet resulted in significant reform in most states.

Why has the implementation of tax reform been so poor?

First of all, reforming state tax systems is not as easy as it used to be. In the 1950s and 1960s the solution to a state's fiscal problems was usually obvious—adopt an income or a sales tax, whichever the particular state was missing. Most states followed that prescription, and now the answers are not so simple.

Secondly, tax reform produces losers as well as winners. Tax commissions often recommend broadening the base of the income and sales taxes and lowering tax rates. These steps tend to even out the tax burden and "provide a level playing field" for business and individuals. But the beneficiaries of tax exemptions that would be eliminated frequently put up a stiff fight in defense of their tax breaks, while the winners from reducing exemptions and lowering rates tend to be silent for two reasons: They may not realize that they are winners, and there are many small winners and a small number of big losers. The political calculus makes it tough to broaden tax bases. Nowhere is this more evident than in extending the sales tax to services. Many legislators and governors contemplated such a policy in the 1980s, but when the dust settled, little had been done to change the status quo. "Politically, you don't want to create any losers, but it's next to impossible to have reform without some losers," says Bill Schreiber, chair of Minnesota's House Tax Committee.

Finally, it takes time to develop a consensus for a major tax change. States don't tinker with the fundamentals of their tax systems very often, so it is not surprising that it could take four or five years to build a coalition for a big tax change. Many of the new income and sales taxes of the 1950s, '60s and early '70s were adopted only after such a prolonged period of discussion, education and controversy.

Recent experience demonstrates that reform is not impossible. Last year two states did enact important reforms: Wisconsin simplified its income tax and West Virginia overhauled its business taxes. The chairman of the West Virginia House Finance Committee, George E. Farley, reports that it took three years of research and persuasion, a lot of patience and an "exorbitant number of meetings" to push reform through. Even with all that effort, the proposal appeared to be a "long shot" before it was enacted.

The biggest battle in the state tax wars now is not about restructuring taxes, but rather about the role of the personal income tax. Because of tax rollbacks and reductions effective in 1984, income tax revenue rose only an estimated 7.5 percent in fiscal year 1985 compared with an estimated 10.5 percent rise in sales tax revenue. On top of that, 14 states lowered their income taxes during 1985 legislative sessions. Many of these reductions were rollbacks of increases in 1982 or 1983, but four were in states where tax rates had not been increased in the 1980s and three were reductions in rates to below the pre-1982 levels. By contrast, Connecticut was the only state to lower its sales tax, by exempting clothing priced at $75 or less.

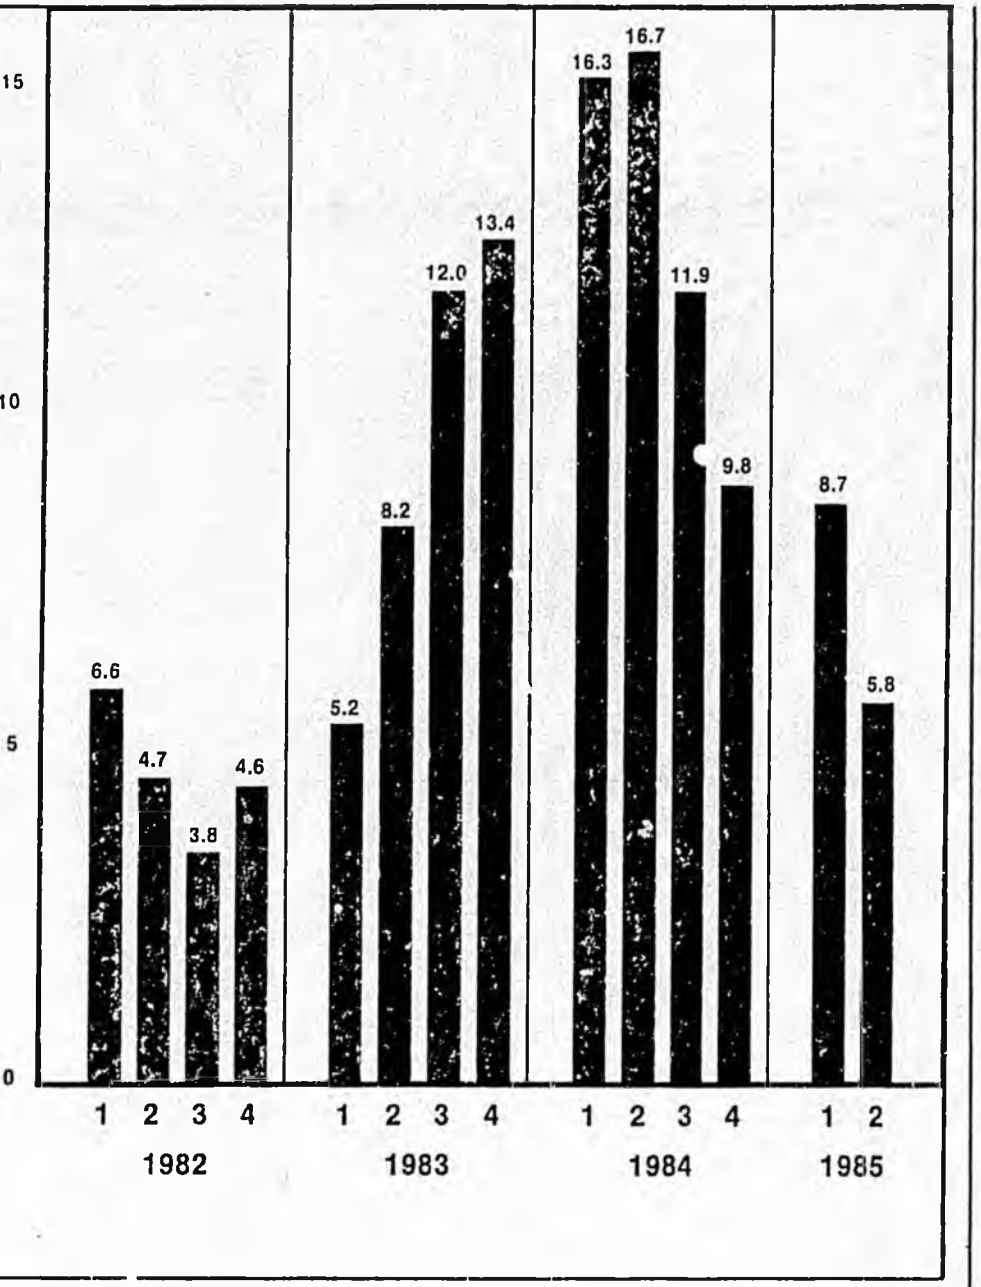
The income tax cuts of 1985 were concentrated in the states with the highest income taxes. Seven of the eight states with the top effective rates reduced their income taxes last year. These actions were at least partly in response to the growing belief that high income taxes deter business investment. While there is some empirical support for this belief, many economists and state officials question the strength of the adverse impact of income taxes on the economy. Special attention is often focused on the highest marginal income tax rate in the state. Wisconsin trimmed its highest rate from 10 percent to 7.9 percent; Delaware's went from 10.7 percent to 9.7 percent; Minnesota's fell from 16 to 14 percent (equivalent to 7 percent for high-bracket taxpayers because federal taxes are deductible) and New York's dipped from 10 percent to 9 percent on earned income over three years.

The flight from income taxes is worrisome to some legislators because the personal income tax is the only major state revenue source that is progressive. Reducing the income tax implies shifting the tax burden away from the well-to-do. Another progressive tax, on inheritances, has also been repealed or reduced recently in a large number of states. New York and Massachusetts targeted special relief to low-income families as part of their income tax cuts, but most states did not do so.

Are there any grounds for optimism that states will begin to take tax reform more seriously

Instability of State Tax Revenue

The chart demonstrates the instability of state tax revenue over the past few years by showing the percentage increase in each three-month period from the beginning of 1982 to the middle of 1985, compared to the corresponding period a year earlier. The growth rate of total state tax revenue fell in early 1982 because of the recession, bottomed out in the third quarter of 1982 and then rose steadily until it peaked at 16.7 percent in the second quarter of 1985. These ups and downs reflect two factors—the speedups and slowdowns of the economy and the imposition and later the lifting of a tax rate increase.



—abandoning the path of eroding tax bases and allowing tax systems to develop by inertia? Ironically, the odds for improving tax policy could increase if state fiscal conditions worsen. Adverse factors can still place stress on state tax systems.

The tax revolt, for instance, is not dead but dormant and contributed to the decision to lower income taxes last year. The economy is sure to experience another recession at some point, and it could be a serious one because of the fragility of the domestic and international financial systems. In addition, federal-aid cutbacks could become more severe than they have been since 1982.

Another source of stress is the intense interstate tax competition, which shows no signs of abating. Federal tax reform also could create new dilemmas for states by curtailing, or eliminating, the deduction for state and local taxes or simply by reducing tax rates. If federal tax rates are lowered significantly, the importance of interstate tax rate differentials would grow, spurring even greater competition among states, particularly to lower the income tax.

In such an environment, interest in tax policy might well increase because the importance of finding revenue to fund popular programs shows no signs of lessening. As Joe Clarke, the chair of the Kentucky House Appropriations and Revenue Committee, observes, "There is a growing recognition on the part of legislators that taxes have been enacted or modified in a manner that has no rhyme or reason. Like Topsy, the changes have just grown. These decisions have been based on politics rather than on any coherent policy."

The chairman of Ohio's House Ways and Means Committee, Dean Conley, adds, "When there are budgetary problems, the interest in tax policy is much greater."

With all the potential fiscal problems on the horizon, taxes may have their day in the spotlight before long.

Hey, wait — more study is needed

The phrase "more study needed" is guaranteed to produce a yawn from most people. But Sen. Frank Ferguson is on target with his bill calling for a comprehensive study of state tax policy. Legislators should embrace the proposal to take a hard look at where and how the state raises its money.

The Kotzebue Democrat wants to spend $500,000 to analyze how well existing state taxes, tax credits licenses and user fees serve Alaska. He also wants to know if there is uniformity of taxation among taxpayers. And what about the relationship, and there must be one, between taxes and the state's economic health? Assumptions and prejudices about the important issues abound, but where are the facts?

Declining oil revenues is a hot topic in Juneau this year. And there's plenty of talk about higher oil taxes, altered tax methods, and even a return to the income tax. A comprehensive study, developed by the Office of Management and Budget and supplemented by private consultants, seems essential for formulating a tax policy that provides the state with broad, stable, and measureable revenue sources. After all, if Alaskans don't know how their taxes affect the economy today, how can they determine a realistic tax policy for tomorrow?

Actually, tax review is so fundamental it's hardly a novel government innovation. During the past three years, six states have instituted tax policy studies.

The Alaska State Senate typically moves at a glacial pace. Sometimes the senators get brickbats thrown their way because studies are viewed as expensive but effective delaying tactics. But this is one occasion when senators should join together in support of Sen. Ferguson's proposal and

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to election campaign financing; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 15 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

CHAPTER 14. ELECTION CAMPAIGN FINANCING.

ARTICLE 1. ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION.

Sec. 15.14.010. APPLICABILITY. (a) This chapter applies in each election for governor, lieutenant governor, a member of the state legislature, a delegate to a constitutional convention, and a judge seeking electoral retention.

(b) This chapter applies to each election for mayor, assembly, or school board in a municipality with a population of more than 1,000 according to the latest United States census figures or estimates of population certified by the Department of Community and Regional Affairs under with AS 29.60.020. A municipality may exempt its elections from the requirements of this chapter if a majority of the voters voting on the question at a regular election as defined by AS 29.71.800 or a special municipality-wide election called for that purpose vote to exempt its elections from the requirements of this chapter. The question of exemption from the requirements of this chapter may be submitted to the voters by initiative or by the city council or borough assembly by ordinance.

(c) This chapter does not prohibit a municipality from additional regulation of campaign contributions and expenditures by ordinance.

(d) Except as otherwise provided, this chapter applies to a contribution, an expenditure or a communication made by a candidate, a political interest group, a municipality, or a person for the purpose of influencing the outcome of a ballot proposition or question as well as that made to influence the nomination or election of a candidate.

(e) This chapter does not apply to contributions or expenditures made for the sole purpose of acquiring signatures on a state or municipal initiative or referendum petition.

Sec. 15.14.020. ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION. (a) The Alaska Public Offices Commission is established in the Department of Administration.

(b) The commission consists of five members.

(c) The governor shall appoint two members from each of the two political parties whose candidates for governor received the highest and second highest number of votes in the most recent preceding general election at which a governor was elected. The governor shall appoint each member from a party from a list of two or more names submitted to the governor by the central committee or other governing body of the party.

(d) The four members who were appointed by the governor from nominations submitted by political parties shall, by a majority vote, appoint the fifth member.

(e) The governor shall fill a vacancy or appoint a successor to a member appointed under (c) of this section within 30 days after receiving the nominations from the central committee or other governing body of the party. An appointment may be made in anticipation of an impending vacancy, and the appointment takes effect on the actual vacancy.

(f) When the term of the member appointed under (d) of this section expires or the position becomes vacant, a majority of the four members appointed under (c) of this section shall appoint a successor within 30 days after the position becomes vacant. An appointment may be made in anticipation of an impending vacancy, and the appointment takes effect on the actual vacancy.

(g) The term of office for each member of the commission is five years and until a successor is appointed and qualifies. If a vacancy occurs before the expiration of a member's term, the member appointed to fill the vacancy serves for the remainder of the unexpired term. A commission member may not serve more than one term, but a person appointed to fill an unexpired term may be appointed to a successive full five-year term.

(h) A member of the commission, during tenure, may not

(1) hold or campaign for elective office;

(2) be an officer of a political party, political committee, or political interest group;

(3) publicly support or oppose or make a contribution in support of or in opposition to a candidate or proposition or question that appears on a state, municipal or other ballot in the state;

(4) participate in an election campaign or participate in or contribute to a political party; or

(5) lobby, employ, or assist a lobbyist.

(i) Members of the commission are entitled to receive compensation of $100 a day while attending commission meetings and are entitled to travel expenses and per diem authorized by law for state employees.

(j) The members of the commission shall elect a chairman. A majority of the commission constitutes a quorum. The AFFIRMATIVE vote of at least three members is required to take official action. A vacancy does not impair the power of the remaining members to exercise the powers of the commission.

(k) The commission may employ an executive director and other employees it considers necessary. The executive director and an employee of the commission may not, during tenure, serve as a member of the commission.

(l) The commission shall establish a central office and shall establish or designate a commission office in each election district of the state for the filing and public inspection of the reports, registrations, or statements required to be filed with the commission. Only one commission office may be established or designated in a municipality that contains more than one election district. A district office designated under this section may be a municipal or other public office.

(m) The forms and material required for compliance with this chapter shall be made available in each commission office to candidates, persons, and political interest groups required to file reports under this chapter.

(n) The commission shall promptly forward a copy of each report filed by a statewide candidate to each district office and it shall promptly forward a copy of each report filed by a legislative candidate to the district office in the election district where the candidate is seeking office.

(o) The commission shall ensure that copies of each report filed by a candidate for municipal office are made available for public inspection in the municipality in which the candidate is seeking office.

Sec. 15.14.030. DUTIES OF THE COMMISSION. The commission shall

(1) develop and provide forms for the reports, registrations, and statements required under this chapter, AS 24.45, and AS 39.50;

(2) prepare and publish a manual setting out uniform methods of bookkeeping and reporting for use by persons required to make reports, registrations, and statements under this chapter and otherwise assist candidates, political interest groups, and persons in complying with this chapter;

(3) receive and hold open for public inspection reports, registrations, and statements required to be filed under this chapter and, upon request, furnish copies to an interested person at cost;

(4) compile and maintain a current list of each report, registration, and statement filed with the commission;

(5) prepare a summary of each report, registration, or statement filed under this chapter and make a copy of the summary available to an interested person at cost;

(6) notify, by registered or certified mail, each person whom the commission or its staff has probable cause to believe is delinquent in filing a report, registration, or statement required under this chapter;

(7) compile within 60 days after each election a list of the names of all persons, candidates, and political interest groups who have failed to timely file a report, registration, or statement required under this chapter and make the list available to the public;

(8) examine, investigate, and compare reports, registrations, statements, and actions required by this chapter, AS 24.45, and AS 39.50 and report to the attorney general the names of each person or political interest group that the commission has probable cause to believe has committed a crime under this chapter, AS 24.45, or AS 39.-50;

(9) prepare and publish an annual report to the legislature concerning the activities of the commission, the effectiveness of this chapter, its enforcement by the attorney general's office, and recommendations and proposals for change;

(10) adopt regulations necessary to implement and clarify the provisions of this chapter, AS 24.45, and AS 39.50, subject to the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62).

ARTICLE 2. REGISTRATION AND REPORTS.

Sec. 15.14.040. REGISTRATION BY CANDIDATES. (a) An individual shall register with the commission on a form prescribed by the commission within 10 days after the individual either

(1) accepts contributions of $1,000 or more in the aggregate from persons or from political interest groups for the purpose of seeking elective office; or

(2) files for an elective office.

(b) The registration under (a) of this section must designate the year of the election for which the campaign will be conducted, and designate whether the election is for a state or a municipal office. If a candidate has filed for office at the time of registration, the registration must designate the office. An individual who registers under this section before having filed for an elective office shall, within 10 days after filing for the office, file a supplemental registration with the commission designating the office.

(c) An individual required to register under this section shall include with the registration information required under AS 15.14.170.

Sec. 15.14.050. REGISTRATION BY POLITICAL INTEREST GROUPS. (a) A political interest group shall register with the commission on a form prescribed by the commission within 10 days after the political interest group either

(1) accepts contributions of $1,000 in the aggregate; or

(2) makes

(A) a contribution to an individual who has registered with the commission under AS 15.14.040; or

(B) an expenditure in support of or in opposition to the election of an individual to an office covered by this chapter, or on behalf of or in opposition to a ballot proposition or question.

(b) A political interest group formed solely for the purpose of sponsoring an initiative, a referendum or a recall shall register with the commission within 30 days after it files a petition with the lieutenant governor or with a municipal clerk.

(c) The registration of a political interest group is valid from the date of registration until the following January 16.

(d) A political interest group may not use or file with the commission a name that is the same as or materially similar to the name of a political interest group whose registration is then on file with the commission.

(e) If a political interest group intends to support or oppose only one candidate or to contribute to or expend more than 50 percent of its funds on behalf of or in opposition to one candidate, the name of the candidate must be part of the name of the political interest group. On receipt of the registration, the commission shall promptly notify the candidate of the political interest group's organization and its intent.

(f) A political interest group that makes expenditures or receives contributions with the authorization or consent, express or implied, or under the control, direct or indirect, of a candidate is controlled by the candidate. A political interest group whose major purpose is to further the nomination, election, or candidacy of only one candidate or that intends to expend more than 50 percent of its money on one candidate, is controlled by the candidate and its actions done with the knowledge and consent of the candidate unless the candidate, within 10 days from the date the candidate learns of the existence of the group, files with the commission, on a form provided by the commission, an affidavit that the group is operating without the control of the candidate.

(d) For the purposes of this section, an offense or violation involving the failure to file a report, statement, or registration is considered to have been committed on the day after the report, statement or registration was due.

Sec. 15.14.290. INVESTIGATIONS. (a) The commission may investigate alleged misconduct and alleged violations of AS 15.14.230, 15.14.240, 15.14.250, AS 24.50 and AS 39.50, on its own motion or upon receiving a signed and sworn complaint from any person.

(b) If an investigation is commenced by a signed and sworn complaint by a person other than a member of the commission or its employees, the commission shall, within five days after receiving the complaint, mail a copy of the complaint to each person named in the complaint. If the commission terminates an investigation without filing an accusation or without referring the matter to the attorney general or special prosecutor, the commission shall, within five days after terminating the investigation, inform the complainant and each person named in the complaint only of the fact that the commission has terminated the investigation and will not be taking further action concerning the complaint.

(c) If the commission, following its investigation, has probable cause to believe a felony or misdemeanor has been committed, the commission shall promptly refer the matter and any evidence the commission has compiled concerning the matter to the attorney general or to a special prosecutor if a special prosecutor has been appointed. After a matter has been referred to the attorney general or a special prosecutor, the commission may not take further action concerning the matter.

(d) If, after an investigation, the commission determines that there is probable cause to believe that a person has committed a violation and if the commission has not referred the matter to the attorney general or special prosecutor for criminal prosecution, the commission may commence violation proceedings by filing and serving an accusation on the person alleged to have committed the violation. The commission shall serve an accusation in the manner provided by court rules for serving a complaint in a civil action.

Sec. 15.14.300. ACCUSATIONS. (a) The accusation must be a written statement of the charges setting out in ordinary and concise language the acts or omissions with which the respondent is charged, so that the respondent is able to prepare a defense. The accusation must also specify the statute or regulation that the respondent is alleged to have violated, and the maximum penalty provided for the violation. The accusation may not consist merely of charges phrased in the language of the statute and regulation.

(b) The commission shall include in or with the accusation a statement in substantially the following form:

"To the Respondent: Unless you deliver or mail a written request for a hearing signed by you or on your behalf to the commission within 15 days after this accusation was personally served on you or mailed to you, the commission may proceed upon the accusation without a hearing. You may request a hearing by delivering or mailing the enclosed form entitled 'Notice of Defense,' or by delivering or mailing a notice of defense under AS 15.14.310 to the commission at its central office address (insert central office address)."

(c) The commission shall include with the accusation served upon the respondent a post card or other form entitled, "Notice of Defense" that, when signed by or on behalf of the respondent and returned to the commission constitutes a notice of defense under AS 15.14.310.

Sec. 15.14.310. NOTICE OF DEFENSE. (a) Within 15 days after service upon the respondent of the accusation, the respondent may file with the commission a notice of defense. In the notice the respondent may

(1) deny the accusation in whole or in part and request a hearing;

(2) object to the accusation on the ground that it does not state acts or omissions upon which the commission may proceed;

(3) object to the form of the accusation on the ground that it is so indefinite or uncertain that the respondent cannot identify the transaction or prepare a defense;

(4) present new matter by way of defense;

(5) admit or plead no contest to the accusation in whole or in part, and present material in mitigation of penalty.

(b) Within the time specified in (a) of this section, the respondent may file one or more notices of defense upon any or all of the grounds set out in (a) of this section but all of the notices must be filed within the period unless the commission in its discretion authorizes the filing of a later notice.

(c) The respondent is entitled to a hearing on the merits if the respondent files a notice of defense. The notice of defense is considered a specific denial of all parts of the accusation not expressly admitted. Failure to file a notice of defense within the time specified in (a) of this section constitutes a waiver of the respondent's right to a hearing, but the commission in its discretion may nevertheless grant a hearing. Unless objection is taken as provided in (a)(3) of this section, all objections to the form of the accusation are waived.

(d) The notice of defense must be in writing, signed by or on behalf of the respondent, and must state the respondent's address. The notice of defense need not be verified or follow a particular form.

Sec. 15.14.320. HEARINGS. (a) If a respondent requests a hearing on a contested accusation or, in the absence of a request, the commission in its discretion decides to hold a hearing, the commission shall mail or deliver a notice of hearing to the respondent at least 10 days before the hearing. The hearing may not be held before the expiration of the time within which the respondent is entitled to file a notice of defense. The notice to respondent must be consistent with the form for notice of hearing under AS 44.62.420.

(b) The commission shall conduct its hearings under AS 44.62.-440 - 44.62.500, except that

(1) the commission may, but is not required to, appoint a hearing officer under AS 44.62.350; and

(2) if a hearing officer is not appointed, the chairman of the commission, or the commission member designated by the chairman, shall preside at the hearing, and the attorney general shall assign an assistant attorney general to the commission to advise it on matters of law during the hearing.

(c) A hearing under this section shall be open to the public except that a respondent may request and the hearing officer or the presiding commission member may order that the hearing be closed if one or more of the requirements for holding an executive session under AS 44.62.310(c) is met.

Sec. 15.14.330. IMPOSITION OF PENALTY. (a) The commission may impose the penalty provided by law for the violation only if the accused person, having been advised of the rights to a hearing, admits or pleads no contest to the allegations contained in the accusation, or if the commission

(1) holds a hearing at which the person accused is afforded the right to appear, with or without counsel, the right to present witnesses or other evidence and the right to cross examine witnesses; and

(2) following the hearing, determines by clear and convincing evidence that the person has committed the violation of which the person was accused.

(b) The executive director and an employee of the commission may make a recommendation to the commission for the imposition of a particular penalty in a matter, provided that the respondent is first given notice of the recommendation and is afforded an opportunity to respond to the staff's recommendation in person or in writing.

(c) The executive director and an employee of the commission may not formally or informally make a recommendation to the commission as to a particular penalty in a pending matter or make a commitment to the respondent to make a particular recommendation to the commission in the future until after the respondent has admitted or pleaded no contest to the accusation or until after a hearing and a final determination by the commission that the respondent has committed the acts charged in the accusation.

(d) In imposing a penalty, the commission shall consider

(1) the seriousness of the violation in terms of the extent to which the violation has impeded public disclosure of information required to be filed with the commission as to the amount and source of contributions that are large enough to be of significant interest to voters; and

(2) the extent to which the respondent's conduct, including prior violations of this chapter, AS 24.50, AS 39.50, or of former AS 15.13 shows a continuing disregard for the law.

Sec. 15.14.340. SUMMARY DISPOSITION OF VIOLATIONS. (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of AS 15.14.300 - 15.14.330, the commission may establish by regulation the violations under AS 15.14.250 that are amenable to summary disposition without formal accusation or hearing and may establish a schedule of fines, not to exceed $500, for each violation.

(b) If an investigation by the commission discloses that a person has committed a violation included in the schedule of fines established under (a) of this section, the commission may, in lieu of serving an accusation on the person, mail a notice of fine to the person indicating the circumstances of the violation and the amount of the fine established in the schedule for the violation. The person to whom the notice is directed may pay the fine within 15 days after receiving the notice or may file a notice of defense under AS 15.14.-310.

(c) If the person does not pay the fine under (b) of this section, the notice of fine constitutes an accusation under AS 15.14.300 and the commission shall proceed against the person under AS 15.14.-300 - 15.14.330 and, upon determining that the person committed the violation, may impose a penalty for the violation not to exceed the maximum provided for the violation under AS 15.14.250.

Sec. 15.14.350. CONFIDENTIALITY. (a) An investigation by the commission under AS 15.14.290 is confidential unless and until the investigation results in the filing of an accusation under AS 15.-14.300.

(b) A member or a former member of the commission and an employee or a former employee of the commission may not divulge the fact of or any particular concerning a pending, past, or contemplated investigation by the commission unless and until the filing of an accusation by the commission.

(c) Knowing violation of the provisions of (b) of this section is a class A misdemeanor.

Sec. 15.14.360. JUDICIAL REVIEW. Judicial review of a final order of the commission may be had by filing a notice of appeal under applicable rules of court governing appeals from administrative agencies.

Sec. 15.14.370. POWERS OF THE COMMISSION. (a) In connection with an investigation or hearing under AS 15.14.290 - 15.14.330, the commission may compel the attendance of witnesses and production of papers, books, records, accounts, documents, and testimony, and may have the depositions of witnesses taken in a manner prescribed by court rule or law for the taking of depositions in civil actions when consistent with the powers and duties assigned to the commission by law.

(b) The commission may examine the papers, books, records, accounts and documents of a person subject to this chapter to determine the correctness of a report filed with the commission or in conjunction with an investigation or inspection conducted under (a) of this section.

(c) Subpoenas may be issued and shall be served in the manner prescribed by AS 44.62.430 and court rule. The failure, refusal, or neglect to obey a subpoena is punishable as contempt in the manner prescribed by law or court rule. The superior court may compel obedience to the commission's subpoena in the same manner as prescribed for obedience to a subpoena issued by the court.

Sec. 15.14.380. LEGAL COUNSEL. (a) The attorney general is legal counsel for the commission. The attorney general shall advise the commission in legal matters arising out of the discharge of its duties and represent the commission in actions to which it is a party. If, in the opinion of the commission, the public interest warrants, the commission may request the attorney general to appoint a special prosecutor to prosecute alleged misconduct under AS 15.14.230 or 15.14.240.

(b) When the public interest warrants, and if the attorney general concurs, the commission may employ temporary legal counsel from time to time in matters in which the commission is involved.

Notice is hereby given that the Alaska Public Offices Commission, under authority vested in AS 15.13.030(10), proposes to adopt, amend and repeal regulations in Title 50 of the Alaska Administrative Code, dealing with Campaign Disclosure, complaints, Preliminary Investigations, and Hearings to interpret AS 15.13, AS 24.45 and AS 39.50 as follows:

2 AAC 50.313. CONTRIBUTIONS is proposed to consolidate the definition of reportable contributions. It would include treatment of loans, non-monetary contributions, donation of in-kind services, media broadcasting, extensions of credit for an unreasonable time, and expenditures made in cooperation with a campaign. It would exclude from reporting volunteer services, internal business or organizational communications, non-monetary contributions of small value, and contributions for an election recount. It also provides treatment for a married person's contribution from joint funds.

2 AAC 50.325. RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS FOR NON-MONETARY CONTRIBUTIONS is repealed.

2 AAC 50.330. REPORTING CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES FOR TRANSPORTATION is repealed.

2 AAC 50.350. CONTRIBUTION OF PROFESSIONAL SERVICES is repealed.

2 AAC 50.319. DESIGNATED CAMPAIGN DEPOSITORY is proposed for candidates or groups contemplating raising or spending more than $5,000.00 in a calendar year. They shall deposit all contributions and make all expenditures from a designated campaign depository. Campaigns shall designate on a report the bank or banks in which funds are held or which credit cards for travel expenses are issued. The proposal sets forth an accounting and reporting procedure for contributions that cannot be determined to be legal.

2 AAC 50.360. MUNICIPALITIES is amended in section (a) by providing that municipalities engaged in political activity using budgeted funds shall report in the same fashion as individuals. Section (d) is added to provide that municipalities shall report as groups when they receive contributions for political activity.

2 AAC 50.356. GROUP is proposed to define a political group required to file periodic Campaign Disclosure Statements and to provide exceptions for those entities or organizations permitted to report their political activity as individuals.

2 AAC 50.385. REPORTING BY ORGANIZATIONS and BUSINESS OR TRADE ASSOCIATIONS is repealed.

2 AAC 50.395. REPORTING BY A BUSINESS ENTITY OR LABOR ORGANIZATION is repealed.

2 AAC 50.357. 2 AAC 50.380. EARLY CAMPAIGNING is amended by adopting a new subsection (b) and deleting inconsistent portions of subsection (a). It proposes to provide that a state candidate may begin making expenditures upon filing a letter of intent with the Alaska Public Offices Commission certifying the individual and his or her campaign will comply with AS 15.13.

2 AAC 50.390. CIVIL PENALTY ASSESSMENTS FOR THE LATE FILING OF A CAMPAIGN DISCLOSURE REPORT is amended by changing subsections (d)(1)(A), (d)(1)(B), (d)(1)(C), and (d)(1)(D) to raise civil penalty assessments to the amount permitted by law. Further, the proposal deletes the Commission's case-by-case review of reports over 30 days delinquent in the aforementioned sections.

2 AAC 50.401. POST ELECTION FUNDRAISING BY CANDIDATES AND CONTROLLED GROUPS is proposed to permit limited post-election fundraising to discharge an indebtedness from a prior campaign, including such items as reported personal contributions before the election, disclosed debts to others, and the costs of winding up the campaign.

Notice is also given that any person interested may present oral or written comments relevant to the proposed action at a hearing to be held in the Quadrant Room at the Captain Cook Hotel, 5th Avenue and K Street, Anchorage, Alaska, at 1:30 p.m. on August 22, 1985. RE: February 12, 1986 State Affairs Committee meeting on SB 356 Campaign Finance

DT: February 11, 1986

I will not be able to attend Wednesday's committee meeting on SB 356. Therefore, I'm using this means of bringing to your attention a problem I see in the bill.

Sec. 15.14.170 (e) (page 19, lines 8-24) doesn't seem to carry out committee intent. As I remember the discussion, we wanted to exclude the courier type activity from requiring registration as a deputy treasurer.

The way the draft reads, "A person does not receive ... a contribution .. if ... the person solicits a contribution ..." Aside from this not making logical sense, I don't think that solicitors should be excluded from registration requirements. If making them deputy treasurer seems too onerous, maybe a category of "solicitor" could be created (and all attorneys would be automatically included).

AFL-CIO POSITION PAPER ON SB 356, CAMPAIGN FINANCING

SB 356 proposes a complete revision of the present campaign disclosure law, therefore one needs to look at the goals of the campaign disclosure law.

The two major goals for the State Campaign Financing Practices Act, as pointed out in the report to the Senate Finance Affairs Committee by the Gross & Burke report, was to limit individuals' contributions to candidates in order to limit the amount of influence that any one contributor could have over a particular candidate. The second goal was to provide public disclosure of the source of funds for campaigns.

Major changes have been proposed, many that would not be in keeping with the above goals.

SECTION 15.14.050 REGISTRATION BY POLITICAL GROUPS

This section now refers to political action committees as political interest groups (PIGS).

Political groups I represent take strong exception to the acronym "PIGS". I believe PACs or PAGs are preferable and much more appropriate terms.

SECTION 15.14.060 (1) REPORTS BY CANDIDATES OF CONTRIBUTIONS AND LOANS

This section changes the disclosure of contributors to $250.00 or more. Current law requires disclosure of contributors in excess of $100.00.

This proposal does not enhance the goal of more public disclosure but inhibits it instead. The record would not reflect contributors who have given between $100 and $250.

Recommendation is to keep the current law, allowing for disclosure of contributors in excess of $100.

GCU

SECTION 15.14.070 REPORTS BY CANDIDATES OF EXPENDITURES

This section decreases the expenditure reports to one annual report following the election.

An expenditure disclosure is not only important to the public but to those who contribute money to the candidate. One should be allowed to see where the contributions are being spent while the campaign is in progress and not after the campaign. Chances are, if the public knew for example, that Joe Smith is spending money on "outside" firms for media, consulting, etc., less contributions would be forthcoming. Most contributors would like to know where, what and on whom the candidate's money is being spent and public disclosure laws should provide for this.

The AFL-CIO is opposed to eliminating the expense reports during the campaign to one following the election.

Recommendation is to keep the current law.

SECTION 15.14.100 REPORTS OF EXPENDITURES BY PERSONS OR GROUPS INDEPENDENT OF THE CANDIDATE

Independent expenditure definition in this section is very confusing as to what exactly is an independent expenditure versus an expenditure.

Recommendation is to rework this area.

SECTION 15.14.120 CONTRIBUTIONS BY A PERSON

This section increases the contribution limit from $1,000 to $2,000 to a candidate.

A $2,000 contribution is a substantial amount in most campaigns for one person to give to a candidate, and whether or not that amount could have great influence over a particular candidate, it certainly would have the appearance of undue influence.

As representing many unions which have PAC's (Political Action Committees) comprised of volunteer member contributions, it would seem fairer by far to raise the contribution limit for PAC's, yet we stand opposed to any increase in contribution limits.

Recommendation is to keep the current law.

SECTION 15.14.130 CONTRIBUTIONS BY POLITICAL INTEREST GROUPS

(b) This section limits to $1,000 the allowable contribution to a political group that another political group can

The AFL-CIO finds it unreasonable to place such an unfair limit on groups when in fact, political groups are comprised of many individuals. If one looks back in the records, I'm sure this area has not been abused by political groups.

Recommendation is to keep the current law.

(b) This section also limits to $25,000 per year the allowable contributions by a political group.

Again the argument is that an unfair limit is being imposed on groups. Groups are made up of many individuals and, as long as one candidate cannot receive more than $1,000, there is already a built-in threshold as to what a political group can give.

Recommendation is to delete this section.

(d) This section essentially eliminates a PAC from forming sub-PAC's, if the groups share a majority of the same officers.

The present law allows for subgroups of a statewide group to form as long as they are autonomous units and have completely separate accounting systems.

Recommendation is that this section should remain as the present law reads.

SECTION 15.14.170 (e) CAMPAIGN OFFICERS

This section exempts a person from registering as a deputy campaign treasurer if the person's only activity is soliciting and transferring contribution checks from contributors to candidates.

This section is a very confusing and contradictory area. If one solicits and accepts a contribution only to transfer or deliver it to a candidate or campaign officer of a candidate or political group, one doesn't need to register. Yet 15.14.170 states that only a campaign treasurer is responsible for receiving and disbursing all contributions and expenditures. Does this also mean that a candidate might appoint him/herself as the person responsible, yet hire someone who never has to register who actually disburses the funds?

This section needs clarification.

SECTION 15.14.190 TERMINATION OF CAMPAIGN ACTIVITY AND CLOSING OF CAMPAIGN ACCOUNTS

This section requires candidates to close their campaign books as of the date a candidate is sworn in.

This will be found to be insufficient time to raise money for a debt to a campaign.

SECTION 15.14.200 SURPLUS FUNDS

This section eliminates the use of surplus funds for one's own personal use. The section further describes permissable uses of surplus campaign funds.

This is a most appropriate new section and a long time coming.

SECTION 15.14.210 SOLICITATION OF CONTRIBUTION

This is a new section that restricts soliciting contributions from state and municipal officers and employees from other public officials or employees while either the person soliciting or the person being solicited is on the premises of a state or municipal office.

Various union members work for the state or municipalities. As I interpret this section, it would prevent meeting with union employees on the premises for the purpose of soliciting contributions. In order to contact our members for various reasons, scheduled meetings are allowed on the premises and this would inhibit discussions of volunteer PAC payroll deductions.

Recommendation is to keep the present law.

ARTICLE 5 UNLAWFUL CONDUCT, CRIMINAL AND CIVIL PENALTIES; INVESTIGATIONS; PROCEDURES; HEARINGS.

The various sections under this article would cause a higher burden of proof and of criminal intent for violators of APOC regulations. These regulations have gone from one extreme to the other. One who inadvertently is late or who makes a mistake on their APOC report will not only feel like a criminal but will be prosecuted as a criminal. The average lay person who wishes to run for office will have to hire a professional lawyer or accountant just to have the regulations interpreted. One surely will have second thoughts in running for a public office when regulations and violations become too complex. We don't think that this should be the purpose of this campaign reform bill.

Recommendation is that this section needs to be totally reworked.

SECTION 15.14.290 INVESTIGATIONS

This section does not allow the commission to take further action following an investigation.

As it is very important for political violations to be handled in a most expedient manner, referring all cases to the Attorney General's office will not encourage the above.

We cannot support this section.

MEMORANDUM State of Alaska

TO: Theda Pittman
Executive Director
Alaska Public Offices Commission
Department of Administration

DATE: January 30, 1986

FILE NO: 366-209-86

TELEPHONE NO: 465-3600

ROM: Harold M. Brown
Attorney General

SUBJECT: SB 356

By: Richard D. Monkman
Assistant Attorney General

You have requested that this office review SB 356, "An Act relating to election campaign financing." This bill is presently before the Senate State Affairs Committee. It is our understanding that a substitute for this bill may be prepared by the House State Affairs Committee, using SB 356 as a starting point.

There are several serious problems, and many minor areas of concern, with SB 356 in its present form. The bill is cleverly worded, with very complex interactions between different sections. As a result, many significant changes to present law are not readily apparent to the casual reader. We are still reviewing the bill and comparing it with present law. The following is, however, the most important of the issues we have identified from the Department of Law's perspective.

Enforcement and Penalties. SB 356 increases the penalties for violation of the disclosure laws. It also significantly decreases the probability that enforcement action will actually take place.

First, all violations which involve "knowing" or "intentional" violation of the disclosure laws are misdemeanors or felonies under SB 356. [AS 15.14.230; AS 15.14.240]. Once the Commission determines that "probable cause to believe a felony or misdemeanor had been committed" it must "promptly refer the matter ... to the attorney general." [AS 15.14.290(c)]. The Commission "may not take further action concerning the matter." [Id.].

As the Commission is well aware, the district attorney offices are swamped with criminal cases involving injury to persons and property. Disclosure cases are highly charged politically and involve relatively small amounts of money. Presently, disclosure cases are very low on any district attorney's list of priorities. There is no reason to believe will require an additional full-time DA, a paralegal, and additional clerical help. 3/

More important from the public perspective will be the delay involved. A public figure charged with a crime will vigorously defend the case, using every means at hand to delay, postpone or defeat the charges. There will be charges of political motives behind every prosecution -- instead of defending against the staff of a bi-partisan, independent Commission, the candidates will be prosecuted by a District attorney responsible to the attorney general, who is appointed by the governor. Cries of connivance and persecution will obscure the issues; the intricacies of the criminal trial process will delay resolution of cases significantly.

In sum, SB 356 drastically limits the Commission's jurisdiction to investigate and administratively prosecute violations of the Campaign Disclosure Act. The administrative process of adjudicating complaints of campaign disclosure violations is swift and relatively inexpensive, and fully protects the rights of those involved to due process of law. In place of this process, SB 356 requires that all intentional violations of the disclosure laws be prosecuted by the Department of Law. This will result in fewer actions to enforce the law, greater delay in those cases filed, and an increasing politicization of the entire process. The end result is to significantly decrease the probability that violations of the disclosure law will be punished.

Effect of amendments. — The 1982 amendment added paragraphs (7) and (8) to subsection (a).

Opinions of attorney general. — There are few cases and little text discussion of the requirements of notice and the sufficiency of notice in proceedings for adoption of rules and regulations. 1959 Op. Att'y Gen., No. 26.

Where a lengthy regulation on one subject is to be proposed the best policy would be to briefly summarize the content and purpose of the regulation. 1959 Op. Att'y Gen., No. 26.

If only a very short regulation is proposed then ordinarily it would be most practicable to set forth the regulation in full. 1959 Op. Att'y Gen., No. 26.

Where a great many regulations are to be promulgated which are of a varied nature, such as fish and game regulations, or oil leasing regulations, then the only practical thing to do would be to give a general listing of the subjects to be covered, a reference to any other existing body of regulations which are being adopted, amended or superseded which might be informative to the particular public or industry concerned (such as a reference to existing regulations of a state agency or department or to existing federal regulations) and a brief listing of any significant changes which are proposed if an existing body of regulations is to be effected. In such case it would be well to indicate that copies of the proposed regulations can be obtained from the agency in order to indicate the agency has done everything reasonably possible to give the public affected by its regulations an opportunity to familiarize itself with the regulations and to prepare itself to submit its views at the hearing. This should constitute substantial compliance with the Administrative Procedure Act and would serve the purpose of the act. 1959 Op. Att'y Gen., No. 26.

And when a summary of a large number of proposed regulations is to be used it would be safe for the departments and agencies of the state government to follow the Ohio and federal practice and to give notice of the areas in which regulations may or may not be promulgated by listing the subject matter to which the proposed rules would relate. 1959 Op. Att'y Gen., No. 26.

Public notice referring only to regulation numbers and subject headings. — See 1959 Op. Att'y Gen., No. 26.

SUBJECT: Regulations

By: Richard D. Monkman
Assistant Attorney General

Attached are the edited version of your regulations. There has been drastic pruning, especially of the definitions within definitions. Hopefully, the corrections will be self-explanatory and will not outrage your staff.

The regulations need to be retyped and a new adoption order written signed. Although the changes are drastic in terms of deletions, additions to the text are minor. Thus, Peter Froehlich and I concur that the regulations will not need to be re-noticed. If the regulations are back here by November 25, there should be no problem filing them in time for a January 1, 1986 effective date.

Aside from the editing, two points. The present definition of "contribution" 2 AAC 50.405(4), was not repealed by the regulations as adopted and sent down. Looking over the notice, it appears that 50.405(4) was intended to be repealed -- which explains why a new section 50.313 was adopted. However, the place for a definition of statutory terms is in the definition section of your regulations. Thus, I reorganized what was left of 50.313 after editing as several subsections of 50.405. Secondly, the proposed regulations repeal 50.355, "loans," and spread the "loans" sections out in several different places. This, according to Art, is a mistake. We recommend that the Commission not repeal 50.355. The present language seems to me to accomplish everything the reorganized language does, and it is better to have it in one spot.

Unfortunately, I will be out of state (on business this time) during the Commission meeting of November 19 - 20, and will be unable to go over the changes in detail with the Commission. Hopefully Pat Kennedy will be available to answer any questions the Commission might have.

In the event the agreement does not stipulate the portion of the loan for which each endorser or guarantor is liable, the loan shall be considered a loan by each endorser or guarantor in the same proportion to the unpaid balance that each endorser or guarantor bears to the total number of endorsers or guarantors.

2 AAC 50.405(4) is amended by adding new sub sections to read:

(A) The provision of any goods or services without charge or at a charge which is less than the usual and normal charge for such goods and services is a contribution. If goods or services are provided at less than the usual or normal charge, the amount of the non-monetary contribution is the difference between the usual and normal charge for the goods or services at the time of the contribution and the amount charged.

(B) For purposes of 2 AAC 50.313(a)(4)(A), the "usual and normal charge" for goods means the price of those goods in the market which they ordinarily would have been purchased at the time of the contribution; and "usual and normal charge" for any services, other than those provided by unpaid volunteers, means the hourly or piecework charge for the services at a commercially reasonable rate prevailing at the time the services were rendered.

(B) ~~(A)~~ The entire amount paid to attend or participate in a fund-raiser or other political event, and the entire amount paid as the purchase price for a fundraising item sold by a group or candidate is a contribution.

(C) ~~(B)~~ The payment by any person of compensation for the personal services of another person to a group or candidate for any purpose, except for legal and accounting services necessary to complete reports, is a contribution. No ~~compensation is considered paid to any employee under any of~~ the following circumstances: contribution results in

(A) If an employee is paid on an hourly or salaried basis and is expected to work a particular number of hours per period, no contribution results if the employee engages in political activity during what would otherwise be a regular work period, provided that the taken or released time is made up or completed by the employee within a reasonable period of time.

(i) ~~(B) No contribution results~~ where an employee engages in political activity during ~~what would otherwise be~~ normal working hours if the employee is paid on a commission or piecework basis, or is paid only for work actually performed and the employee's time is considered his or her own to use as he or she sees fit.

(ii) ~~(C) No contribution results for~~ where time used by the employee to engage in political activity ~~if the time used~~ is bona fide, although compensable, vacation or other earned leave time.

(D) ~~(C)~~ The extension of credit by any person to a candidate or political group for a length of time beyond normal business ~~or trade~~ practice is a contribution, unless the creditor has made a commercially reasonable attempt to collect the debt, or pursued its remedies in a manner similar in intensity to that employed by the creditor in pursuit of a non-political debtor, including lawsuits if filed in similar circumstances.

(A) A debt owed by a political group or candidate which is forgiven or settled for less than the amount owed is a contribution unless the negotiated settlement receives the prior approval of the Commission, which will be granted when it is convinced the following conditions are met:

(i) At the time the debt was incurred, both the creditor and the candidate or political group expected full repayment within a reasonable period of time;

(ii) The campaign has made a good faith effort to repay all outstanding debts;

(iii) The creditor has taken steps it normally takes against debtors in the same financial condition as the campaign;

(iv) The proposed settlement agreement between the creditor and the campaign is similar to previous settlements made by the creditor and other debtors;

(v) The campaign has treated equally all creditors since it became aware of the difficulty in repaying all debts;

(vi) The proposed settlement agreement is similar to others proposed by the campaign.

(E) ~~(8)~~ An expenditure made by any person in cooperation, consultation, or in concert with, or at the request or suggestion of a candidate, his or her campaign, its agents, or campaign consultants is a contribution to the candidate, ~~and~~ the financing by any person of the issuance, republication, or distribution of any broadcast or any written, graphic, or other form of campaign material provided by the candidate, his or her campaign committee, campaign agents, or campaign consultants is a contribution to ~~a~~ the candidate.

(A) For purposes of 2 AAC 50.314(8), "cooperation, consultation, or in concert with, or at the request of" means any arrangement, coordination, course of communication or direction by or with the candidate or his or her campaign agents prior to the publication, distribution, display or broadcast of any communication. Any expenditure is presumed to be so made when it is:

(i) Based on information about the candidate's plans, projects, or needs provided to the expending person by the candidate or his or her campaign agents with a view to having an expenditure made;

(ii) Made by or through any person who is, or has been, authorized to raise or expend funds for the candidate, who is, or has been, an agent of a candidate's campaign, or has received any form of compensation or reimbursement from the candidate, members of his campaign committee, campaign agents or campaign consultants.

(iii) Made by any person or group based on data from a candidate's former pollster or campaign consultant or any other person who has received, or is receiving, compensation or reimbursement from the campaign.

(iv) Made by a political group for soliciting contributions to be paid or delivered directly to a candidate or his or her campaign agents.

(8) For purposes of 2 AAC 50.313(8), "campaign agents" includes all officers, campaign managers, treasurers, deputy treasurers, campaign consultants, and persons who reasonably appear to have authority to make expenditures and solicit contributions for a candidate's campaign.

(b) The term "contribution" does not include the following payments, services or other things of value:

(1) Funds received and payments made solely for the purpose of determining whether an individual should become a candidate. The individual shall keep records of all such funds received and payments made. If the individual subsequently becomes a candidate, the funds received and payments made are contributions and expenditures subject to the limitations, prohibitions, and requirements of the law, and shall be reported on the first Campaign Disclosure Statement filed by the candidate, regardless of when the funds were received or the payments made.

(2) Any costs incurred in covering or carrying a news story, commentary or editorial by any broadcasting station, newspaper, or periodical of regular publication unless the facility is owned by or controlled by any political party, political group, or candidate, in which case the cost of the news story is a contribution unless the news story represents a bona fide news account communicated in a publication of general circulation or on a licensed broadcasting facility. Further, it is part of a general pattern of campaign-related news accounts which gives reasonably equal coverage to all opposing candidates in the circulation or listening area.

(3) Any non-monetary contribution or in-kind donation of a single item with a usual and normal charge of $50.00 or less.

(4) The value of services provided without compensation by any individual other than one who volunteers services for which one would ordinarily be paid, or a payment made by any individual for his or her own travel expenses if such payments are voluntary and without any understanding that they will be directly or indirectly repaid.

(5) No contribution is made by a business, corporation, trade association, labor organization, or other organization not organized primarily to influence elections when it makes payments to communicate directly with its members or employees or their families on any subject; provided the communication is of the same format and nature used by the organization when it has communicated in the past on nonpolitical subjects, does not request members or their families to provide goods and services to a campaign other than to exercise the right to vote, and does not solicit individual contributions to a clearly identified candidate or group chosen by the organization.

(iii) A gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value made with respect to a recount of a state or municipal election is not a contribution.

(F) A contribution made by a married individual shall not be attributed to that individual's spouse, unless otherwise specified in writing by the spouse at the time the contribution is made. (Eff. / / , Register)

(b) ~~(2)~~ A candidate may use a portion of assets jointly owned as personal funds. The portion of the jointly owned assets that shall be considered as personal funds shall be that portion which is the candidate's share under the instruments of conveyance or ownership. With respect to spouses, if no specific share is indicated by an instrument of conveyance or ownership, the value of one-half of the property used shall be considered the personal funds of the candidate. In the case of property jointly owned by a non-spouse where there is no instrument of conveyance or ownership, the percent of the asset belonging to the candidate shall be the pro rata share of the purchase price paid by the candidate, or, if no purchase was made, the amount determined by dividing the value by the number of owners.

(c) ~~(3)~~ A candidate's personal donation of goods remaining from a prior campaign are not a contribution.

A loan is made in the ordinary course of business if it: bears the usual and customary interest rate for the category of the loan involved; is evidenced by a written instrument; and is subject to a due date or amortization schedule. ~~Loans under this section are reported as a candidate's personal contribution.~~

Sec. 15.14.260. LIMITATIONS ON ACTIONS. (a) A proceeding alleging a violation of AS 15.14.220 must be commenced within four years from the date of the alleged violation.

(b) A prosecution alleging a violation of AS 15.14.230 must be commenced within two years from the date of the alleged offense.

(c) For the purposes of this section, a violation involving the failure to file a report, statement, or registration is considered to have been committed on the day after the report, statement or registration was due.

Sec. 15.14.270. INVESTIGATIONS. (a) The commission may investigate a violation of AS 15.14.220, 15.14.230, AS 24.50 and AS 39.50 on its own motion or upon receiving a signed and sworn complaint from any person.

(b) If an investigation is commenced by a signed and sworn complaint by a person other than a member of the commission or its employees, the commission shall, within five days after receiving the complaint, mail a copy of the complaint to each person named in the complaint.

(c) If, after an investigation, the commission determines that there is probable cause to believe that a person has committed a violation, the commission may commence violation proceedings by filing and serving an accusation on the person alleged to have committed the violation. The commission shall serve an accusation in the manner provided by court rules for serving a complaint in a civil action.

(d) If the commission terminates an investigation without filing an accusation, the commission shall, within five days after terminating the investigation, inform the complainant and each person named in the complaint only of the fact that the commission has terminated the investigation and will not be taking further action concerning the complaint.

Sec. 15.14.280. ACCUSATIONS. (a) The accusation must be a written statement of the charges setting out in ordinary and concise language the acts or omissions with which the respondent is charged, so that the respondent is able to prepare a defense. The accusation must also specify the statute or regulation that the respondent is alleged to have violated, and the maximum penalty provided for the violation. The accusation may not consist merely of charges phrased in the language of the statute and regulation.

(b) The commission shall include in or with the accusation a statement in substantially the following form:

"To the Respondent: Unless you deliver or mail a written request for a hearing signed by you or on your behalf to the commission within 15 days after this accusation was personally served on you or mailed to you, the commission may proceed upon the accusation without further notice to you. You may request a hearing by delivering or mailing the enclosed form entitled 'Notice of Defense,' or by delivering or mailing a notice of defense under AS 15.14.290 to the commission at its central office address (insert central office address)."

(c) The commission shall include with the accusation served upon the respondent a post card or other form entitled, "Notice of Defense" that, when signed by or on behalf of the respondent and returned to the commission constitutes a notice of defense under AS 15.14.290.

Sec. 15.14.290. NOTICE OF DEFENSE. (a) Within 15 days after service upon the respondent of the accusation, the respondent may file with the commission a notice of defense. In the notice the respondent may

(1) deny the accusation in whole or in part and request a hearing;

(2) object to the accusation on the ground that it does not state acts or omissions upon which the commission may proceed;

(3) object to the form of the accusation on the ground that it is so indefinite or uncertain that the respondent cannot identify the transaction or prepare a defense;

(4) present new matter by way of defense;

(5) admit or plead no contest to the accusation in whole or in part, and present material in mitigation of penalty.

(b) Within the time specified in (a) of this section, the respondent may file one or more notices of defense upon any or all of the grounds set out in (a) of this section but all of the notices must be filed within the period unless the commission in its discretion authorizes the filing of a later notice.

(c) The respondent is entitled to a hearing on the merits if the respondent files a notice of defense. The notice of defense is considered a specific denial of all parts of the accusation not expressly admitted. Failure to file a notice of defense within the time specified in (a) of this section constitutes a waiver of the respondent's right to a hearing, but the commission in its discretion may nevertheless grant a hearing. Unless objection is taken as provided in (a)(3) of this section, all objections to the form of the accusation are waived.

(d) The notice of defense must be in writing, signed by or on behalf of the respondent, and must state the respondent's address. The notice of defense need not be verified or follow a particular form.

Sec. 15.14.300. HEARINGS. (a) If a respondent requests a hearing on a contested accusation or, in the absence of a request, the commission in its discretion decides to hold a hearing, the commission shall mail or deliver a notice of hearing to the respondent at least 10 days before the hearing. The hearing may not be held before the expiration of the time within which the respondent is entitled to file a notice of defense. The notice to respondent must be consistent with the form for notice of hearing under AS 44.62.420.

(b) The commission shall conduct its hearings under AS 44.62.-440 - 44.62.500, except that

(1) the commission may, but is not required to, appoint a hearing officer under AS 44.62.350; and

(2) if a hearing officer is not appointed, the chairman of the commission, or the commission member designated by the chairman, shall preside at the hearing, and the attorney general shall assign an assistant attorney general to the commission to advise it on matters of law during the hearing.

(c) A hearing under this section shall be open to the public except that a respondent may request and the hearing officer or the presiding commission member may order that the hearing be closed if one or more of the requirements for holding an executive session under AS 44.62.310(c) is met.

Sec. 15.14.310. IMPOSITION OF PENALTY. (a) The commission may impose the penalty provided by law for the violation only if the accused person, having been advised of the right to a hearing, admits or pleads no contest to the allegations contained in the accusation, or if the commission

(1) holds a hearing at which the person accused is afforded the right to appear, with or without counsel, the right to present witnesses or other evidence and the right to cross examine witnesses; and

(2) following the hearing, determines by clear and convincing evidence that the person has committed the violation of which the person was accused.

(b) The executive director of the commission may not formally or informally make a recommendation to the commission as to a particular penalty in a pending matter or make a commitment to the respondent to make a particular recommendation to the commission in the future until after the respondent has admitted or pleaded no contest to the accusation or until after a hearing and a final determination by the commission that the respondent has committed the acts charged in the accusation.

(c) Before the executive director of the commission may make a recommendation to the commission for the imposition of a particular penalty in a matter, the respondent must first be given notice of the recommendation and afforded an opportunity to respond to the recommendation in person or in writing.

(d) In imposing a penalty, the commission shall consider

(1) the seriousness of the violation in terms of the extent to which the violation has impeded public disclosure of information required to be filed with the commission as to the amount and source of contributions that are large enough to be of significant interest to voters; and

(2) the extent to which the respondent's conduct, including prior violations of this chapter, AS 24.50, AS 39.50, or of former AS 15.13 shows a continuing disregard for the law.

Sec. 15.14.320. SUMMARY DISPOSITION OF VIOLATIONS. (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of AS 15.14.280 - 15.14.310, the commission may establish by regulation the violations under AS 15.14.230 that are amenable to summary disposition without formal accusation or hearing and may establish a schedule of fines, not to exceed $500, for each violation.

(b) If an investigation by the commission discloses that a person has committed a violation included in the schedule of fines established under (a) of this section, the commission may, in lieu of serving an accusation on the person, mail a notice of fine to the person indicating the circumstances of the violation and the amount of the fine established in the schedule for the violation. The person to whom the notice is directed may pay the fine within 15 days after receiving the notice or may file a notice of defense under AS 15.14.-290.

(c) If the person does not pay the fine under (b) of this section, the notice of fine constitutes an accusation under AS 15.14.280 and the commission shall proceed against the person under AS 15.14.-280 - 15.14.310 and, upon determining that the person committed the violation, may impose a penalty for the violation not to exceed the maximum provided for the violation under AS 15.14.230.

Sec. 15.14.330. CONFIDENTIALITY. (a) An investigation by the commission under AS 15.14.270 is confidential unless and until the investigation results in the filing of an accusation under AS 15.-14.280.

(b) A member or a former member of the commission and an employee or a former employee of the commission may not divulge the fact of or any particular concerning a pending, past, or contemplated investigation by the commission unless and until the filing of an accusation by the commission.

(c) Knowing violation of the provisions of (b) of this section is a class A misdemeanor.

Sec. 15.14.340. JUDICIAL REVIEW. Judicial review of a final order of the commission may be had by filing a notice of appeal under applicable rules of court governing appeals from administrative agencies.

Sec. 15.14.350. POWERS OF THE COMMISSION. (a) In connection with an investigation or hearing under AS 15.14.270 - 15.14.310, AS 24.45, or AS 39.50, the commission may compel the attendance of witnesses and production of papers, books, records, accounts, documents, and testimony, and may have the depositions of witnesses taken in a manner prescribed by court rule or law for the taking of depositions in civil actions when consistent with the powers and duties assigned to the commission by law.

(b) The commission may examine the papers, books, records, accounts and documents of a person subject to this chapter to determine the correctness of a report filed with the commission or in conjunction with an investigation or inspection conducted under (a) of this section.

(c) Subpoenas may be issued and shall be served in the manner prescribed by AS 44.62.430 and court rule. The failure, refusal, or neglect to obey a subpoena is punishable as contempt in the manner prescribed by law or court rule. The superior court may compel obedience to the commission's subpoena in the same manner as prescribed for obedience to a subpoena issued by the court.

Sec. 15.14.360. LEGAL COUNSEL. (a) The attorney general is legal counsel for the commission. The attorney general shall advise the commission in legal matters arising out of the discharge of its duties and represent the commission in actions to which it is a party.

(b) When the public interest warrants, and if the attorney general concurs, the commission may employ temporary legal counsel from time to time in matters in which the commission is involved.

Alaska Public Offices Commission

Dear Commissioners,

As Jay Kerttula's campaign manager and treasurer, I am answering your letter as his representative. I can understand your concern with campaigns incurring but not discharging campaign debts for media. I can also understand the staff wanting to close the accounts and being done with them, however, there are several problems I would like to present to you concerning this regulation.

2AAC 50.313

1. The law dictates that a campaign cannot have fundraisers while in Juneau during Legislative Session. Senator Kerttula has been in Juneau most of this year. There are only four months left in the year and in that time, the Kerttula for Senate campaign must pay $20,000 which will require four to six fundraisers. This is next to impossible. This regulation, 2AAC50.313, is descriminatory against incumbants. It is absolutely unfeasible to require payment whithin a short period of time.

2. If debts are made contributions, does that mean anything over $1,000 is disregarded, or can you bring criminal/civil charges against the candidate and the person who donates for taking too much as a contribution?

3. What is an "unreasonable" amount of time to pay bills? What is a reasonable period of time?

4. The Kerttula for Governor campaign still owes debts to the candidate from the 1978 Gubernatorial campaign. Will campaign debts from pre-1984 also come under the new regulation? Will the candidate simply have to pay debts outstanding themselves?

5. Is it legal to retroactively pass a resolution concerning debts already incurred and apply it retroactively? I feel it would be unfair to apply this regulation retroactively. If candidates knew that APOC was going to limit the amount of time they had to repay debts, they would have planned accordingly. If the Commission now steps in midstream and tries to change planning which took place months ago, many people will be caught without available funds. If a candidate has enough collateral, then she/he can go to a bank and take out a personal loan. If she/he doesn't, then she/he will be placed in a difficult situation and one which may even cause her/him criminal liability if a bill over $1000 becomes a contribution.

2AAC 50.316

6. It is unfeasible for the Kerttula campaign to discharge the remaining accrued campaign debts as you are prescribing. What can be done about them if it is impossible to pay them immediately as requested?

7. I feel you are placing an extreme hardship on candidates who are not wealthy. People with money can pay the bills, but those of us without a substantial private income will find it extremely difficult to do so. It could also be impossible to borrow this much from a lending institution without sufficient collatoral.

8. This regulation will make it impossible for a person without private funds to run for office. While wealthy persons will find it easy to comply.

1984 was a difficult campaign year for all candidates. Not buying proper media could have meant defeat for many. I feel that good candidates may lose campaigns as a result of the regulation you are asking for since they will have to restrict their spending. Your requested regulation will simply have the effect of limiting spending in a campaign.

This rule will benefit the wealthy and hurt the poor candidates.

A criminal law should not be applied retroactively.

The fact that bills over $1,000.00 are not due until the future does not overcome the fact that the law would be retroactive. Since candidates relied on the old regulations in planning and unless the time allowed to pay back bills is truly reasonable then candidates could find themselves criminally liable under the new regulations when their actions were legitimate under the old regulations.

The new regulations should only be applicable to future campaigns when all candidates can plan ahead and so no one will be caught by a personal inability to get a bank loan, thus subjecting themselves to possible criminal liability.

For the above stated reasons, I protest the passage of the "contribution" regulation, 2.AAC.50.(a)(7).

I would like the opportunity for Senator Kerttula or myself to be allowed to speak before the Commission when they meet on this subject.

Would you please notify me if this cannot be done, or if there are any changes in the meeting dates, times or places? Thank you.

Sincerely,

Joyce Kertula

SUBJECT: SB 356 (Election financing)

By: Richard D. Monkman
Assistant Attorney General

The attached list identifies some technical problems we have identified with SB 356. Most of these are minor and can be easily changed. Assuming the Committee has no objection, perhaps you could pass this list on to the legislative drafters when the next draft of the bill is drawn up.

As far as substance goes, we have identified nine areas of Department of Law concern which I will be prepared to address tomorrow morning. These are:

1. Enforcement;
2. Expenditure reports;
3. Solicitation of contributions from public officers;
4. Investigations;
5. Hearings;
6. Statutes of limitations/fine schedules;
7. Deputy campaign treasurers;
8. Candidate responsibility;
9. Definition of contribution.

These nine areas have been discussed in detail with Ms. Burke, and she has recommended that we take them up directly with the Committee.

Please give me a call if you have any questions or comments.

3	15.14.020(c)	Changes number of nominees to 2 from 4
3	15.14.020(j)	Poorly worded re: number of votes required to take action. "The affirmative vote of at least three members..." would be better.
5	15.14.030(8)	Delete clause "and report to the AG," lines 26 - 29.
6	15.14.040(a)	Does not cover situation where a cantidate spends $1,000 of own money to begin campaign ("makes expenditures of $1,000 or more..." would be better approach)
7	15.14.050	"Political Interest Group" is particularly unappealling acronym. "Political action committee" tracks federal practice and common use.
7-8	15.14.050(e) and (f)	These sections are poorly drafted, esp. (f). Could lead to confusion in interpretation.
8	15.14.060	No disclosure of line of business, occupation, or principal interest of PIGs and corporate contributors. Burke says unintentional and will be fixed.
13	15.14.090(a)	Should be "A person who makes contributions with an aggregate amount of $250 or more..." to track present law.
15	15.14.110	If this is intended to be sworn under penalty of perjury, should so state in the text of "affidavit."
16	15.14.130(d)	"[s]haring a majority of officers" is very vague and probably unenforcable. "Sharing two or more common officers" or "with two or more officers in common" would be better.
17	15.14.160	Language in sections (a) and (b) does not match. (b) should read "a contribution made in violation of section (a) ...shall be returned." Section (c) contains left-over "acceptance/reciept" language from early drafts and should be deleted.
29	15.14.260	Delete "or by a court..."
30	15.14.280	Should change statutes of limitation to reflect de-criminalization. 2 years for 2cd degree and 4 years for 1st degree best.
31	15.14.290(b) (c), and (d)	Delete (b) lines 13 - 19; all of (c); and referral clause in (d) after de-criminalization
32-34	15.14.300-.340	Conflict with the Administrative Procedures Act, 44.62. Burke says will be fixed.
35	15.14.330(a)	No provision for default. If person does not appear, Comm'n can't fine. Conflicts with 15.14.300(b).
36	15.14.330(b)	Change in court established burden of proof may require 2/3ds vote of Legislature to stand up.

37	15.14.370	Takes away present powers to subpeona documents etc. during investigation of lobbying and conflict of interest cases. Burke says unintentional and will be fixed.
38	15.14.380	Delete lines 4 - 7.
39	15.14.900(2)(B)(i)	Allows professionals $3,000 contribution ($2,000 cash and $1,000 in-kind). Left over from original "no-limit" draft, should be deleted.
40	15.14.900(6)	Does not include PIGs. Enforcement section only refer to "persons," if Comm'n is to enforce limit etc. against PIGs, must include them in this definition.

(b) The 24 Hour Report required by AS 15.13. 110(b) must be filed with the commission's central office either by a collect telegram or by actual physical delivery within the prescribed time. 24 hour Reports may not be mailed.

(c) All forms will be available at the commission's central and branch offices, at district offices during state election years, and at the participating municipalities. (Eff. 5/14/80, Register 74)

Authority: AS 15.13.020(j) and (k); AS 15.13.030(10)
AS 15.13.110(a) and (b)

2 AAC 50.313. DEFINITION OF "CONTRIBUTION." (a) In 2 AAC 50.310 — 2 AAC 50.405, except as otherwise provided in this section, "contribution" includes a payment, gift, subscription, loan, advance, transfer, deposit of money, services, or anything of value made by a person or group for the purpose of influencing an election for state or municipal office or influencing the passage or defeat of a ballot proposition or question; and includes a personal contribution as described in 2 AAC 50.316.

(b) In this section and in 2 AAC 50.321, "loan" includes a guarantee, endorsement, and any other form of security. The following apply to loans:

(1) A loan that exceeds the contribution limitations of AS 15.13.070 is unlawful, whether or not it is repaid.

(2) A loan is a contribution at the time it is made.

(3) Except for a personal contribution loan as described in 2 AAC 50.316(d), a loan is a contribution by each endorser or guarantor. Each endorser or guarantor is considered to have contributed that portion of the total amount for which he or she agreed to be liable in a written agreement. If the agreement does not state the portion of the loan for which each endorser or guarantor is liable, the loan is considered a loan by each endorser or guarantor in the same proportion that each endorser or guarantor bears to the total number of endorsers or guarantors.

(c) In this section, "money" includes currency of the United States or of any foreign nation, checks, money orders, or any negotiable instruments payable on demand.

(d) In this section, "anything of value" includes facilities, equipment, polling information, supplies, advertising services, membership lists, mailing lists, any item of real or personal property, and personal services of any kind, the cost or consideration for which is paid by a person other than the candidate or group for whom the services are rendered.

(e) The provision of goods or services without charge, or at a charge which is less than the usual and normal charge for the goods and services in the market, is a contribution. If goods or services are provided at less than the usual or normal charge in the market, the amount of the nonmonetary contribution is the difference between the usual and normal charge for the goods or services at the time of the contribution and the amount charged.

(f) The entire amount paid to attend or participate in a fundraiser or other political event, and the entire amount paid as the purchase price for a fundraising item sold by a group or candidate, is a contribution.

(g) The payment by a person of compensation for the personal services of another person to a group or candidate for any purpose, except for legal and accounting services necessary to complete reports, is a contribution. No contribution results in the following circumstances:

(1) when an employee paid on an hourly or salaried basis engages in political activity during what would otherwise be a regular work period, if the time spent is made up by the employee within a reasonable period of time;

(2) when an employee paid on a commission or piecework basis, or an employee paid only for work actually performed whose time is considered the employee's own, engages in political activity during normal working hours;

(3) if time used by the employee during normal working hours to engage in political activity is bona fide vacation or other earned leave time.

(h) The extension of credit by a person to a candidate or political group for a length of time beyond normal business practice is a contribution, unless the creditor has made a commercially reasonable attempt to collect the debt, or pursued its remedies in a manner similar in intensity to that employed by the creditor in pursuit of a non-political debtor, including lawsuits if filed in similar circumstances.

(i) A debt owed by a political group or candidate, which is forgiven or settled for less than the amount owed is a contribution. The commission will, in its discretion, consider the following factors before directing staff to commence a preliminary investigation:

(1) whether, at the time the debt was incurred, both the creditor and the candidate or political group expected full repayment within a reasonable period of time;

(2) whether the campaign has made a good faith effort to repay all outstanding debts;

(3) whether the creditor has taken steps it normally takes against debtors in the same financial condition as the campaign;

(4) whether the proposed settlement agreement between the creditor and the campaign is similar to previous settlements made by the creditor and other debtors;

(5) whether the campaign has treated equally all creditors since it became aware of the difficulty in repaying all debts;

(6) whether the proposed settlement agreement is similar to others proposed by the campaign.

(j) An expenditure made by a person in cooperation, consultation, or in concert with, or at the request or suggestion of a candidate, the candidate's campaign committee, campaign agents, or campaign consultants is a contribution to the candidate. The financing by a person of the issuance, republication, or distribution of a broadcast or of a written, graphic, or other form of campaign material provided by the candidate, the candidate's campaign committee, campaign agents, or campaign consultants is a contribution to the candidate. This includes an expenditure:

(1) based on information about the candidate's plans, projects, or needs provided by the candidate or the candidate's campaign agents;

(2) made by or through a person who is, or has been, authorized to raise or expend money for the candidate, who is, or has been, an agent of a candidate's campaign, or who has received any form of compensation or reimbursement from the candidate, members of the candidate's campaign committee, campaign agents, or campaign consultants;

(3) made by any person or group based on data from a candidate's pollster or campaign consultant or any other person who has received, or is receiving, compensation or reimbursement from the campaign;

(4) made by a political group for soliciting contributions to be paid or delivered directly to a candidate or the candidate's campaign agents.

(k) In (j) of this section, "campaign agents" includes all officers, campaign managers, treasurers, deputy treasurers, campaign consultants, and persons who reasonably appear to have authority to make expenditures and solicit contributions for a candidate's campaign.

(l) In 2 AAC 50.310 — 2 AAC 50.405, "contribution" does not include the following payments, services, or other things of value:

(1) costs incurred in covering or carrying a news story by a broadcasting station, newspaper, or periodical of regular publication, unless the facility is owned by or controlled by a political party, political group, or candidate; in that case, the cost of the news story is a contribution, unless the news story is a bona fide news account that is part of a general pattern of campaign-related news accounts which gives reasonably equal coverage to all opposing candidates in the circulation or listening area.

(2) a non-monetary contribution or in-kind donation of a single item with a usual and normal cost of $50.00 or less.

(3) a payment made by any individual for his or her own travel expenses, if such payments are voluntary and are made without any understanding that they will be directly or indirectly repaid.

(4) a payment is made by a business, corporation, trade association, labor organization, or other organization not organized primarily to influence elections to communicate directly with its members or employees, or their families, on any subject, if the communication is of the same format and nature used by the organization when it has communicated in the past on nonpolitical subjects, does not request members or their families to do anything other than exercise the right to vote, and does not solicit individual contributions to a clearly identified candidate or group chosen by the organization.

(5) a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value made with respect to a recount of a state or municipal election.

(m) A contribution made by a married individual is not attributed to that individual's spouse, unless otherwise specified in writing by the spouse at the time the contribution is made. (Eff. 1/4/86, Register 97)

(1) every combination of two or more persons who are elected, appointed, or otherwise chosen, or who cooperate for the purpose of raising, soliciting, collecting, or disbursing money or anything of value, or for directing or controlling those activities to secure or defeat the election to public office of an individual or candidate or to secure or defeat a ballot proposition;

(b) A corporation, partnership, sole proprietorship, trade association, fraternal or charitable organization, incorporated or unincorporated association, firm, or business trust may report its contributions and expenditures as required by AS 15.13.040(d) and (e) as an individual* if

(2) the organization does not conduct a fundraising drive or assessment among its members or employees for the purpose of influencing an election;

(3) the organization does not exercise direction, control, or discretion over the choice of the recipient candidate or group, and the organization does not exercise direction, control, or discretion over the expenditure of money or other things of value collected, pooled, solicited, or otherwise paid by others for the purpose of influencing an election. 2 AAC 50.315. CONTRIBUTION LIMITATION EXEMPTION. (a) Groups that nominated a candidate for governor who received at least three percent of the total vote cast at the 1982 general election for governor are considered to be exempt from the contribution limitation set out in AS 15.13.070(a).

(b) Until the effective date of a statutory definition of "political party" that replaces AS 15.60.010(20) as it exists on the effective date of this section (and was held invalid in Vogler v. Miller, 660 P.2d 1192 (Alaska 1983)), a group, other than a group described in (a) of this section, desiring an exemption from the contribution limitation set out in AS 15.13.070(a) must submit to the commission an application for exemption. In accordance with (c) of this section, the commission will review the application and, in its discretion and on a case-by-case basis, grant the exemption.

(c) Among the criteria which will be considered in deciding whether to grant an exemption are:

(1) an organized membership, composed of registered voters, which represents a political program;

[redacted]

(2) prior history as a political group under AS 15.13.050 including the receipt of substantial contributions and the disbursement of substantial expenditures made for the purpose of influencing the election of legislative candidates in more than one district; and

(3) the percentage of votes received by a statewide candidate nominated in the name of the group in the preceding general election.

(f) Groups satisfying the criteria of (a) of this section and groups granted exemptions under (b) of this section are subject to the requirement that political parties report contributions and expenditures as provided by AS 15.13. (Eff. 6/29/84; Register 90; am 1/4/86, Register 97)

2 AAC 50.316. PERSONAL CONTRIBUTIONS BY A CANDIDATE. (a) A candidate may make unlimited personal contributions from assets which, under Alaska law, the candidate had legal right of access to or control over and to which the candidate had legal and rightful title at the time he or she became a candidate. These assets include salary and other earned income from bona fide employment; dividends; proceeds from the sale of investments; bequests to the candidate; income from trusts established before candidacy; income from trusts established by bequest after candidacy; and gifts of a personal nature which had been customarily received before candidacy.

(b) A candidate may use a portion of jointly owned assets as a personal contribution. The portion of the jointly owned assets that may be used is the candidate's share under the instruments of conveyance or ownership. With respect to spouses, if no specific share is indicated by an instrument of conveyance or ownership, the value of one-half of the property used is considered the personal funds of the candidate. In the case of property jointly owned by a non-spouse, if there is no instrument of conveyance or ownership, the portion of the asset belonging to the candidate is the pro rata share of the purchase price paid by the candidate, or, if no purchase was made, the amount determined by dividing the present value by the number of owners.

(c) A candidate's donation of goods remaining from a prior campaign is a personal contribution.

(d) A loan of money by a regulated banking institution to a candidate is a personal contribution if the loan is made in accordance with applicable banking laws and regulations; bears the usual and customary interest rate for the category of the loan involved; is evidenced by a written instrument; and is subject to a due date or amortization schedule. Loans under this section are reported as a candidate's personal contribution.

(e) The absolute sale of all legal and equitable interest of a candidate's real or personal property is not a contribution from the purchasers if the proceeds are received by a candidate in a legitimate arm's length transaction documented in writing. Sale proceeds used by a candidate in a campaign must be reported as personal contributions. (Eff. 1/4/86, Register 97)

(a) Each candidate and political group intending to raise or spend more than $5,000 in a calendar year shall designate on a registration statement or on the first campaign disclosure statement filed with the commission, one or more regulated banking institutions as its campaign depository or depositories. Each account title must indicate that it is a campaign account.

(b) All monetary contributions to, and expenditures by, a candidate or political group must be deposited to or made from a designated campaign depository.

(c) A candidate or political group required by (a) of this section, to designate a campaign depository may obtain and use credit cards in making travel-related campaign expenditures for transportation, lodging, meals, and other expenses in connection with traveling for campaign purposes. The credit card account name must indicate that it is a campaign account.

(d) Contributions that appear to be illegal must, within ten days after receipt, be returned to the contributor.

(e) A campaign treasurer shall make his or her best efforts to determine the legality of a contribution. If a contribution cannot be determined to be legal, a refund must be made within a reasonable time, and the treasurer shall note the refund by amending the current report or noting the change on the next required report. Alternatively, the contribution may be deposited into the campaign depository and reported. If it is deposited, the treasurer shall make and retain a written record noting the basis for the appearance of illegality. A statement noting that the legality of the contribution is in question must be included in the next required report. (Eff 1/4/86, Register 97)

(b) A candidate or his treasurer, and the treasurer of a group, may issue a receipt, and shall record the receipt of every contribution received, unless otherwise exempted by this chapter, regardless of the dollar amount or value of the contribution. While the identity of a person who has contributed no more than $100 to a campaign is not required to be individually reported by the treasurer on a campaign disclosure report, the name of such a contributor, along with the amount and type of his contribution, must be recorded by the treasurer and maintained by the treasurer, for comparative purposes, in case that person makes additional contributions which total over $100.

(c) The identity of a person who has contributed over $100 in the aggregate per year to a candidate's or group's campaign must be reported in accordance with 2 AAC 50.321.

(d) Each bookkeeping record required under this section shall be maintained by the candidate or the treasurer of a group and may not be destroyed for a period of four years from the date of the contribution. The records shall be available for inspection by the commission upon request of the commission. (Eff. 5/14/80, Register 74)

2 AAC 50.324. SHARED CAMPAIGN REPORTING. Except for expenditures by the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor of the same political party who have been nominated to run in the general election, the following provisions apply to all candidates and groups, other than a political party, subject to the provisions of AS 15.13 and this chapter:

(1) The use, by one candidate, of the money, goods or services raised or generated by his campaign, to influence the election of another candidate, is considered a contribution and cannot exceed the $1000 limitation set by AS 15.13.070(a); nothing in AS 15.13 or this chapter, however, limits an individual's right to make any expenditure whatsoever to influence the election of a candidate, so long as that expenditure is not made at the suggestion of that candidate, directly or indirectly paid for by that candidate, or otherwise controlled by that candidate.

(2) An expenditure made by one group, other than a political party, on behalf of another group which is controlled by a candidate is considered a contribution and may not exceed the $1000 limitation set by AS 15.13.070(a).

(3) A candidate may not join his campaign committee with that of one or more candidates in order that they may file a single report of their joint campaign, nor may a group join with one or more groups in order that they may file a single report of their joint efforts.

(4) Candidates or groups prohibited from forming a joint campaign under (3) of this section may share in campaign efforts, under (5) of this section, so long as they keep separate campaign accounts and file separate statements of their contributions and expenditures under AS 15.13 and 2 AAC 50.

(5) Two or more candidates, or two or more groups, may share in campaign efforts so long as the cost of, and receipts from, shared efforts are allocated equally to each participating candidate or group's campaign.

(6) So long as the costs of, and receipts from, shared efforts are allocated equally to each participant of a shared campaign, neither the costs or receipts are considered as a contribution from one participant to any of the other participants.

(7) Each candidate or group filing reports pursuant to AS 15.13 and 2 AAC 50 must complete an APOC Form 15-8A, the "Shared Campaign Activities" form, which represents his or its proportionate share of the receipts and expenditures of a shared campaign effort.

(8) A proportionate share of the amount of an expenditure benefiting one or more candidates, or one or more groups, of a shared campaign effort, but paid for in full by one of the candidates, or by one of the groups, will be considered a contribution by

(A) the paying candidate to the other candidates; or

(B) the paying group to the other groups.

(9) Media communications regarding a shared campaign activity are considered properly identified so long as the identification includes the words "paid for by" and the name of each candidate or group sharing in the cost of the communications. The address and treasurer of each participating candidate or group need not be listed. However, if a communication is paid for in its entirety by only one of the participants then, in accordance with 2 AAC 50.369, full and proper identification is required. 2 AAC 50.326. RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS AND EXEMPTIONS WHEN REPORTING A FUND-RAISER. (a) A candidate or his treasurer, and the treasurer of a group, shall report all the contribution and expenditure activity related to a campaign fund-raiser in a format designated by the commission, and in accordance with this section. Fund-raisers sponsored in conjunction with several candidates or groups are viewed as shared fund-raising activities and, while subject to the provisions of this section, must be reported separately on APOC Form 15-8SA and in accordance with 2 AAC 50.324.

[redacted]

(b) When reporting a fund-raiser, a candidate or his treasurer, and the treasurer of a group, shall state the total number of contributing participants, the date and place where the event was held, if applicable, a description of the type of fund-raising activity, and the total costs of, and receipts from, the event.

(c) For the purposes of this section, "fund-raiser" includes, but is not limited to, a garage sale; a raffle or drawing; an auction; a spaghetti feed or pot-luck dinner; the sale of campaign material, such as posters, buttons, stickers, clothing, key chains and ashtrays; or a sponsored concert.

(d) The requirement in AS 15.13.040 and 2 AAC 50.320 that a candidate or his treasurer, or the treasurer of a group, must record the name of every person making a contribution, regardless of the amount of that contribution, does not apply to events which meet the following criteria:

(1) fund-raisers, similar in nature to spaghetti feeds, bingo games, dances, or concerts, where

(A) there are 25 or more paying participants; and

(B) except as described in (f) of this section, the cash amount received from any one person does not exceed $50;

(2) fund-raisers, such as a raffle, lottery or a drawing, where

(A) 25 or more tickets are sold; and

(B) except as described in (f) of this section, the price of a ticket or the amount received from any one person purchasing chances does not exceed $50;

(3) fund-raisers, the income from which is based on the sale of campaign material, where, except as described in (g)

(A) the price of an item being sold does not exceed $10; or

(B) the amount received from any one person purchasing items does not exceed $50;

(4) fund-raisers, such as garage sales and auctions, where, except as described in (g)

(A) the fair market value of an item donated for sale or auction does not exceed $50; or

(B) the amount received from any one person purchasing items at the garage sale or auction does not exceed $50.

(e) When reporting receipts from a fund-raiser which meets the recording exemption set out in (d) of this section, the candidate or his treasurer, or the treasurer of a group, need only report the total amount of contributions received from or generated by the fundraiser, along with the total number of paying participants, tickets sold, or items purchased, as applicable.

(f) If a person contributes in excess of the exempted amounts stated in (d)(1)(B) or (d)(2)(B) of this section, then the name of that person, and the amount and type of that contribution, must be recorded as set out in 2 AAC 50.320.

(g) If the cost of or value of an item exceeds the exempted amount, or if a person contributes or pays in excess of the exempted amounts stated in (d)(3) or (4), then the name of that contributor or buyer must be recorded as set out in 2 AAC 50.320.

(h) A contribution made by a person to attend or otherwise participate in a "fund-raiser," as defined in (c) of this section, whether or not exempted from full recording under this section, may not be received by or on behalf of a candidate in violation of AS 15.13.070(a). In the absence of any contribution or expenditure activity whatsoever during a reporting period, each candidate or group not already exempt from reporting under (b) or (c) of this section shall submit by the appropriate due date the "Short Form" on Schedule A of the Campaign Disclosure Statement certifying that no contributions have been received or expenditures made.

(b) A candidate who does not intend to receive or accept contributions, or make expenditures during his campaign for municipal or state public office, including any personal campaign contributions or expenditures, may file APOC Form 15-0, the "Campaign Reporting Exemption Form." A candidate who files the exemption form is not required to submit any other reports to the commission concerning his campaign. (D) except as provided in (c) of this section, make contributions to, contribute previously produced material to, or expend funds on behalf of, any person who has declared that he or she is seeking office or who has filed a declaration of candidacy or nominating petition or become a candidate by any other means.

If the person or team subject to the draft formally declares for public office, then the amount contributed to the draft group must be added to any contributions made the same year to the drafted candidate's or team's own campaign committee, in order to determine whether a contributor has made the maximum allowable contribution as outlined in AS 15.13.070(a). Att. Rebecca Dye O'Hara

Dear Ms. O'Hera,

This letter is to reply to your inquiry regarding my outstanding campaign debts.

I have paid a portion of the debt that was outstanding on January 1, of this year. That payoff and any subsequent will be reflected in my yearend report to be filed this coming January.

Let me point out that these debts are in fact debts which I must pay off. I am paying them off as fast as I can. For you to say they are subject to the $1000.00 limit would be to say they are a contribution and to assume that I do not have a responsiblity to pay them, this is something you have no basis to assume.

While I can understand the staff's concern, and apprecate the potential for abuse of long outstanding campaign debts, to assume that because some abuses take place everyone must be punished is unfair. Also I question your authority to change the regulations to make them retroactive to the the 1984 campaign.

Finally, after reading your proposed changes to the regulations, I feel that the inclusion of loans as a contribution is unfair to the first time campainer and would shift even more advantage to the incumbant canidates. There are few newcomers to the political contests that can launch a campaign without obtaining loans or credits.

[18A], 8/21/85

It is one thing to require the reporting of loans and obligations and quite another to limit the amount. The effect of the first is make the public aware of where the canidates money is comming from and the second is to limit the amount an individual can donate to his own campaign. This would be a very dangerous step and quite possibly unconstitutional.

Sincerely,

Paxton Oborn

85-4-CD: McGowan v. De[illegible] Conservation [2]

Staff believes this is not a matter of influencing an election, and recommends dismissal of the complaint.

Ms. OPLAND asked if staff checked to see if the ad was permissable. Mr. JOHANSEN said that he had the tape, but hadn't seen the ad itself. Federal law provides that the Dept. of Environmental Conservation has a duty to undertake public information on this subject or risk loss of federal funds to the state.

Ms. OPLAND voiced her approval of dismissing the complaint.

Mr. JOHANSEN stated that this was a pretty clear-cut case, as there is an Attorney General's opinion that says the Campaign Disclosure Law does not cover state agencies.

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
MINUTES
August 22-23, 1985

A regular meeting of the Alaska Public Offices Commission was called to order at 9:00 a.m., Thursday, August 22, 1985 by Chairman Jean Rogers. The meeting was held in the Quadrant Room of the Hotel Captain Cook in Anchorage.

Commissioners:	Chairman Jean Rogers; Vice-Chairman Arlayne Knox; Mildred Opland; Daniel O'Tierney.
Staff:	Theda Pittman, Executive Director; Chris Johansen, Associate Coordinator, Campaign Disclosure; Jane Barcott, Associate Coordinator, Conflict of Interest; Teresa Garrison, Recording Secretary.
Others:	Elizabeth Page Kennedy, Assistant Attorney General; Bob Manners, Secretary, NEA-PACE; Joyce Kerttula; Rep. Katie Hurley; Jean von Dohrmann; Maureen Kennedy; Dale Fox; Rep. Terry Martin; Patty Macklin; Catherine Zalewski; Janet Moyer; Steve DeLisio, Individuals for Randolph.
Available via telephone:	Allen Vezey, Chairman, Rep. Dist. 18; Jeanette James, Treasurer; and Gary Wood, Rep. Dist. 18.

85-2-CD: Staff v. Clossey, McConkey, Norris [11]

Mr. JOHANSEN explained to the Commission that no action has been taken on this matter since the June meeting, as it took some time to get a Hearing Officer assigned. There will be a pre-hearing conference in the near future, after which the staff will have more information for the Commission.

85-4-CD: McGowan v. Dept. of Environmental Conservation [2]

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that a complaint was filed by Mr. McGowan alleging that the Dept. of Environmental Conservation was engaged in influencing the outcome of an election by way of placing a television ad. Staff believes this is not a matter of influencing an election, and recommends dismissal of the complaint.

Ms. OPLAND asked if staff checked to see if the ad was permissable. Mr. JOHANSEN said that he had the tape, but hadn't seen the ad itself. Federal law provides that the Dept. of Environmental Conservation has a duty to undertake public information on this subject or risk loss of federal funds to the state.

Ms. OPLAND voiced her approval of dismissing the complaint.

Mr. JOHANSEN stated that this was a pretty clear-cut case, as there is an Attorney General's opinion that says the Campaign Disclosure Law does not cover state agencies.

Ms. Knox MOVED, to dismiss the McGowan complaint.
SECONDED by Ms. Opland,

Mr. O'TIERNEY stated that apparently this was an educational-type TV advertisement. Mr. JOHANSEN said that the Dept. of Environmental Conservation has a duty to promote general welfare, and that is what protects them.

Mr. O'TIERNEY stated that the Commission has concluded that this act was not intended to influence the outcome of an election. Ms. ROGERS and Mr. JOHANSEN said yes.

Motion passed unanimously.

Fink 1984 Mayoral Campaign [27]

Mr. JOHANSEN said that staff sent a letter to Mr. Fink asking him to obtain signatures of those who contributed on joint checking accounts but did not actually sign the checks. Mr. Fink will provide the information and staff will present it at the November meeting. There is also an excessive contribution from the Holland family which staff has asked Mr. Fink to return. This was a non-monetary contribution of leased space.

Mr. O'TIERNEY asked if Mr. Fink's response may be that this situation is similar to the Quadrant contribution issue, and to protest requiring that a candidate carry the burden if it is an excessive contribution.

Mr. JOHANSEN stated that it was a non-monetary contribution and a different issue. Staff will present more information on this matter at the November meeting.

84-12-CD: Zency v. Tischer [13]

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that Mr. Zency alleged Mae Tischer didn't use a disclaimer on a newsletter. Staff concluded that the newsletter was to promote the election of the candidate and should have a disclaimer. Staff believes the mailer was worth approximately $1,400 and believes a letter of admonition should be sent to Ms. Tischer.

Ms. KNOX said she was disturbed by the comment on page 2 of the August 6 letter where Ms. Tischer maintains this was not reportable. Mr. JOHANSEN said that perhaps Ms. Tischer had overlooked the question or didn't understand it.

Ms. KNOX stated that Ms. Tischer is asking for contributions to her campaign, and it sounds like this is from a campaign fund. Mr. JOHANSEN said that there is nothing which says a candidate has to distinguish different accounts. Staff believes Ms. Tischer's reports were in substantial non-compliance for failing to report the newsletter expense.

Mr. O'TIERNEY asked if she was to be admonished because the action was reportable. Mr. JOHANSEN said that contributions were to be mailed to the campaign, which suggested Ms. Tischer used the money from this mailer as a campaign fund.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to send a letter of admonition to Ms. Tischer. SECONDED by Mr. O'Tierney, Ms. KNOX stated the Commission should include in the letter of admonition a request that Ms. Tischer amend her reports.

Motion passed unanimously.

84-18-CD: Schade v. Marrou [verbal]

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that the Conflict of Interest complaint against Rep. Marrou is still continuing, and that staff has made an effort to go ahead with this complaint also, making it clear there are two separate issues involved. Staff will continue this matter at the next meeting.

85-1-CD: Schade v. Davis [verbal]

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that Mr. Davis did not use a disclaimer and that this issue is being delayed because it is tied in with the Marrou matter. Staff is continuing the investigation.

85-3-CD: Stout v. McAlpine [verbal]

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that Mr. Stout filed a complaint aginst Lt. Governor McAlpine because he received $30,000 from Lewis Dischner in 1982. Mr. McAlpine stated that Mr. Dischner was a client and the money was a fee for services. Mr. Stout believes this is an excessive contribution. Since this issue involves a legal fee, staff referred the matter to the Alaska Bar Association. Staff believes it could not be a campaign contribution if it was not an excessive fee. The Bar Association will determine if it was an excessive fee. Staff has just received correspondence from the Bar Association dismissing the complaint and would like the Commission to set the matter over for further investigation, pending review of the Bar letter. If there is no merit to the complaint, staff would like the authority to dismiss the matter, or the Commission could take it up again at the November meeting.

Ms. ROGERS suggested it be taken care of via teleconference.

Ms. OPLAND asked if the $30,000 appears on Mr. McAlpine's 1982 Conflict of Interest Statement. Mr. JOHANSEN couldn't say for sure.

Ms. OPLAND said that it would be substantiated as income if it was reported on the Conflict of Interest Statement. If the Commission gives staff the authority to dismiss the matter, staff should consult with Pat Kennedy.

Ms. ROGERS said that she prefers the Commission consider the matter themselves. All Commissioners agreed to deny staff's request for authority to dismiss the matter.

Advisory Opinions

Barbara Lacher, State Recall Group, 8/7/85 [3A]

Ms. PITTMAN explained that an inquiry regarding this matter was received in July of 1985. Ms. PITTMAN and Ms. Kennedy had discussed this matter, and felt that a group campaigning for recall and the individual defending himself from recall should be in the same situation in regards to the campaign contribution limit of $1,000. Staff responded only to the group inquiry as there is no recallee at this time.

Ms. OPLAND stated that she was bothered about people calling and asking for Advisory Opinions, and that there should be a written request, so a record can be kept of all questions and responses. Ms. PITTMAN noted that the draft regulations state the inquiry should be in written form.

Mr. O'TIERNEY noted that page 2, cites the $1,000 limit as applicable to candidates competing for office. Does that mean, if there is only one candidate in a race, he is not subject to the limitation?

Ms. PITTMAN said she didn't presume that.

Mr. O'TIERNEY stated that he thought the Advisory Opinion was well done. Ms. ROGERS said she hoped the people will follow staff's advice.

Ann Parrish, Defense Fund - Draft [3C]

Ms. PITTMAN stated that staff tried to call Ms. Parrish back to request her inquiry be in written form. The concepts in the draft letter have been discussed by the Commission before. Subsequent to the phone call, the press reported that Governor Sheffield did not intend to seek help with his defense funds. There is no difference if it is an office or personal expense - whoever gives more than $100 needs to be disclosed on the official's Conflict of Interest Statement.

Sen. Paul Fischer, Outside Employment, 7/25/85 [3B]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that Senator Fischer wrote to staff on July 5, 1985, regarding Legislators working for a company that gave campaign contributions. Staff stated there is no prohibited acts section under the Campaign Disclosure Law, but there are Prohibited Acts under the Conflict of Interest Law. Senator Fischer has not made an additional inquiry.

Mr. O'TIERNEY inquired as to the prohibited acts in the Conflict of Interest Law. Ms. BARCOTT explained that a public official is prohibited against using his or her office for financial gain; soliciting money for advice given during the official's public employment; and representing a client before a state agency for a fee. There does not seem to be such a problem in this instance.

Individuals for Randolph [16]

Personal appearance by Mr. Steve DeLisio

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that this group was being assessed $80/day until names and addresses are provided for contributors of more than $100. Staff believed there to be approximately 501 places where either names and/or addresses were missing from the group's reports. Staff made an error in the math calculations on the May 1985 correspondence in regard to the maximum civil penalty assessment. It should be $6,080. Staff received material that the group sent to contributors asking for their employers, and also received the groups completed reports in September. Staff has not heard why the information was missing from the original reports, but the Commission can hear the mitigation and set forth any amount of civil penalty they feel applicable, or direct staff to send a letter of admonishment to the group. This is the first major group that staff has had to request such a tremendous amount of information from, and the group has made a substantial effort to provide the information. Staff believes mitigation should be brought forth, or the maximum civil penalty be assessed.

Mr. O'TIERNEY asked what the civil penalty is accruing for. Mr. JOHANSEN said that it is for failing to submit the information initially on their reports. The civil penalty is from the date staff gave the group notice of their incomplete reports, and the assessment ended on the last date that staff received the information.

Mr. DELISIO stated that the group has not alleged fraud, but harassment. The Commission has had many issues which have been more severe than this, where no civil penalties were levied. By contrast, the Libertarians are hit every time they turn around. Staff has acknowledged that there has been no hiding of the contributions, and no fraud on the group's part, but just a failure to provide all of the information. The group submitted the requested information in two and one half months, with great effort. All the information has been provided, and there was no attempt to trick the public or hide information. By assessing a maximum civil penalty, it makes it appear the group made a wilfull attempt to evade the law or to trick the public and the Commission. Mr. DELISIO said that many names had addresses and occupations when the reports were submitted and he doesn't know why all the information was not available. Some people felt the information required was an invasion of privacy. The group is outraged by staff's suggestion of the maximum civil penalty, which suggests to the group that Libertarians get zapped by the Commission and these instances are insignificant compared to other instances. It is not appropriate for a state or federal agency to pick on a select group of people, and staff should help and inform the groups instead of coming down like a ton of bricks. This group does not feel they've done anything wrong.

Mr. JOHANSEN stated that the group has made a substantial effort to provide the information, but when substantial non-compliance is found, staff has no choice but to assess a maximum civil penalty until the mitigation is presented. Addresses or occupations were lacking for 501 people.

Ms. KNOX stated that Mr. Delisio said there were names that had all of the information required, and she would like to know the percentage of those that did not provide all the information.

Mr. DELISIO said he didn't know the percentage, but of the $500,000 contributed, the majority of the contributions ranged from $1 to $5.

Mr. JOHANSEN said that the percentage was probably less than 50% where people omitted both addresses and occupations.

Mr. DELISIO stated that names were disclosed, but there was a technical failure on the group's part to disclose occupations and addresses, although the omissions were not of malicious intent, rather a failure to gather the information.

Ms. OPLAND stated that the group must have had the addresses, or they wouldn't have been able to send the contributors a letter asking for the information needed.

Mr. DELISIO said that he agrees that not all of the information was unavailable.

Mr. O'TIERNEY stated for the record, that on page 25, last paragraph, there is a mention of fraud. He would like this statement clarified.

Mr. DELISIO said that statement was to point out that if the Commission drives out this group for this small violation, then the Commission is encouraging fraud when they don't fine others for more substantial violations.

Ms. ROGERS said that each person who comes before the Commission with their mitigation feels they've been "selected."

Mr. O'TIERNEY said he doesn't see how the Commission is an instrument of fraud when it is the statutes that set forth the requirements.

Mr. DELISIO inquired as to the fine for the Democratic Party not reporting names, addresses or occupations. Ms. PITTMAN said staff has no knowledge of missing information from their reports. The issue was of birthday fund-raisers, and the information was provided.

Mr. O'TIERNEY said there is no question that the information was omitted on the reports from Individuals for Randolph and there was a great effort to comply with staff's request.

Mr. DELISIO stated the group complied as soon as possible, as there was quite a lot of information to gather and supply, which took time.

Mr. O'TIERNEY informed him that the civil penalty wouldn't have accrued if the information would have been supplied at the beginning, and the group now believes that the Commission should not assess the maximum fine.

Mr. DELISIO replied that the fine should be minimal or none, and inquired as to the appropriate way to deal with oversights. Mr. O'TIERNEY stated that the Commission is not responsible for the resistant attitude of the Libertarian Party if they don't want to provide the information required..

Mr. DELISIO said that hopefully, it will help to understand that there was no deliberate attempt to avoid the issue.

Ms. ROGERS said that the Commission hopes he understands that it is not selective and that the Commission tries to be fair and is obliged to follow through on complaints and investigations.

Ms. OPLAND said that the group made a substantial effort to provide the information requested, and although she was not in favor of dismissing the issue, she does think the civil penalty is excessive.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to assess 50% of the civil penalty ($3,040)
SECONDED by Mr. O'Tierney,

Ms. KNOX stated she would like to remind Mr. Delisio that candidates are responsible for the information required on the forms. The Commission does not want to discourage volunteers, but people should be better informed of the requirements.

Motion passed unanimously.

NEA-ALASKA PACE [17B]

Personal appearance by Mr. Bob Manners

Mr. MANNERS stated that the concerns in this issue are timeliness in filing reports in 1981 and 1982. He said that for over 1 year, all reports were timely and accurate, and the group requests a waiver or reduction of the civil penalty, or perhaps a letter of admonishment. Mr. MANNERS does not contest the untimely filings in 1981 and 1982, and when the group was notified they responded promptly. The group employed an auditor to review the reports and also sent staff people to the APOC office to get information. All information for reports is now computerized. This group has a membership organization of 6,000 members and dues are not used in political contributions to candidates. The group raises the money for contributions through direct solicitations, fundraisers, and a payroll deduction dues check off system. The recordkeeping and reporting is substantial and the group has improved their techniques to report timely. The Commission staff has been tremendously helpful, but Mr. MANNERS requested a reduction or waiver of the fine.

Mr. JOHANSEN said that although staff agrees with Mr. Manners' mitigation, and the group has made a good effort to comply, staff's recommendation is for a $4,225 civil penalty assessment.

Mr. O'TIERNEY stated that it is now August of 1985, and the missing information was discovered in 1981. Why did it take 3 years to find the extent of the group's problems?

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that staff had sent audits to the group which were never answered or followed up. Staff has been using a more extensive audit process since 1984.

Mr. O'Tierney MOVED, to accept staff's recommendation of reducing the SECONDED by Ms. Knox, civil penalty to 50% ($4,225).

Ms. KNOX stated that there should also be a letter of admonishment for the reporting problems of 1981 through 1983. She also said she would like to commend them for their improvement.

Motion passed unanimously.

The Commission recessed for lunch and reconvened at 1:00, at which time they approved a motion by Daniel O'Tierney, seconded by Arlayne Knox to go into Executive Session to discuss Litigation reports.

No motion was offered following the Executive Session and the Commission opened its public hearing on proposed regulations.

Campaign Disclosure Regulations [18], [18A], [18B], [19], [19A]

Ms. PITTMAN explained that approximately 1,000 copies of the draft regulations were mailed out to officials and the public, and notices of the hearing were published in the newspapers. Written public comments are included in [18A] and [18B].

Personal appearance by Ms. Joyce Kerttula

Ms. KERTTULA stated that she was present because she functions as a Campaign Manager and Treasurer for Jalmar Kerttula. She asked, in regard to the proposal making a contribution of a debt if it is not paid off within a certain period of time, what would happen if the debt could not be paid? A candidate would have to finance his own campaign, which would probably be no problem for a candidate with private income. But others may not be able to fund their own campaigns, which may cause less people to become candidates.

Mr. JOHANSEN said there is an existing policy decision that if a debt is not paid within 30 days, it becomes a contribution. The new regulations require that if accrued expenditures remain unpaid beyond a normal amount of time, they will then become a contribution. The procedures provide candidates the option of coming before the Commission. Mr. JOHANSEN stated that for debts which occurred before the date the regulations pass, a candidate should be given perhaps a year to pay off the debt, or the Commission could address this issue when such a situation arises.

Ms. PITTMAN said she had received a call from Sen. Abood regarding the timing of the regulations package in light of the Senate State Affairs contract with Gross and Burke to re-draft the Campaign Disclosure Law. Senator Abood informed Ms. Pittman that in September or October of 1985 the draft should be ready, he would like the Commission's cooperation in reviewing it, and believed the regulations hearing today may be a disadvantage to this process. Ms. PITTMAN said she explained to Senator Abood that the Commission needs to make regulation changes in between elections, and the regulations address the existing statute. Ms. PITTMAN informed him that she would convey his concern to the Commission. Ms. KENNEDY said she had received a call from Mr. Gross and his concerns were the same as Sen. Abood's. He felt there was a difference of opinion regarding the regulations and that this was an unfortunate time to hold a hearing on them. He expressed concerns about 2 AAC 50.401 which Ms. Kennedy found to be justified and she indicated she would discuss those concerns when that item came up. Ms. KENNEDY had asked Mr. Gross if he would like to testify, and he said no.

Mr. O'TIERNEY asked why Sen. Abood and Mr. Gross thought there was a problem with the timing of the regulations hearing. Ms. PITTMAN explained that it was frustrating to know others are working on a proposal with similar subjects when their draft is not ready yet. Mr. O'TIERNEY asked whether the Gross draft would speak to the changes the Commission has made. Ms. KENNEDY said maybe, maybe not. There was general discussion that the Commission had to proceed with its regulations, as there is no guarantee that the statutory changes would be passed by the Legislature. Ms. ROGERS stated that it would have been helpful to have Sen. Abood, Mr. Gross or Ms. Burke present at the Comission's hearing.

Personal appearance by Katie Hurley

Rep. HURLEY stated that she is Chairman of the House State Affairs Committee and she would like to see the Commission proceed with work on the regulations, as it takes a long time for regulations to go into effect. She still has debts because she borrowed money to pay off her campaign debts, so it is possible to have debts many years after the campaign. With these regulations, maybe a candidate wouldn't incur such debts.

Ms. ROGERS asked her if she thought the proposal on ending campaigns would pose a hardship. Rep. HURLEY said it is somewhat discriminatory against people who don't have assets, but if there is a limited amount of time to pay off the debts, a candidate may not go so far into debt.

Ms. KNOX said that after the regulations pass, any debts then are subject to be paid off as required. Ms. KENNEDY agreed.

No other members of the public wished to speak at this time and the Commission suggested taking up each regulation in turn.

Ms. PITTMAN noted that packets [18] and [19] were the drafts prepared by staff, based on the Commission's suggestions at its last meeting. Packet [18A] incuded the appropriate repealers, written comments by Joyce Kerttula and Paxton Oborn, as well as staff re-drafts for 2 AAC 50.313(a)(4), 2 AAC 50.313(a)(8)(A)(iii) and 2 AAC 50.313(b)(4). She noted that the definition of contribution should be numbered 2 AAC 50.313 rather than .314. Packet [19A] included a staff re-draft to 2 AAC 50.460(d) and counsel's rationale for that change.

Mr. JOHANSEN gave an individual summary of each section of the regulations so the Commission could address their concerns for each:

2 AAC 50.313, CONTRIBUTION [18], pages 1-8; [18A], pages 8-9.

There was a comment from the audience that if candidates and contributors are required to report, consultants should also be required to report their activities. Ms. KENNEDY said the point is that candidates are responsible for their campaign people - if campaign people make an arrangement for an independent expenditure, they should be aware that such an expenditure is a non-monetary contribution.

This section was discussed and the Commission agreed to adopt 2 AAC 50.313, Contributions, as amended by [18A], pages 8-9.

Ms. Knox MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.313 as amended by [18A], pages
SECONDED by Ms. Opland, 8-9.

Motion passed unanimously.

Chairman ROGERS noted that she wished to pause to allow additional public comment on the regulations.

Personal appearance by Jean von Dohrmann

Ms. VON DOHRMANN stated that she was in favor of the revisions to 2 AAC 50.380, Early Campaigning, because potential candidates are presently too limited in what they can do in deciding whether to run. Prospective candidates are too vulnerable to potential violations especially when traveling to an area where a candidate is not well known. Ms. VON DOHRMANN said she thought the "letter of intent" section is good.

Ms. VON DOHRMANN said that there is beginning to be a problem for volunteer treasurers, especially in large campaigns. She believes there will be a need for professional treasurers soon or legal help, and she hopes the regulations will simplify matters.

Personal appearance by Maureen Kennedy, Director of AKPIRG

Ms. M. KENNEDY said she would like to compliment staff on the regulation changes and additions regarding loans and advisory opinions. In general, a good job was done. Ms. M. KENNEDY asked if the disclaimer size is still a minimum of 3 1/2" x 5". Ms. OPLAND said yes. She expressed a concern about the possibility of association officers making contributions without authority of the members. Mr. JOHANSEN replied that the section she referred to dealt with reporting of associates' contributions.

There being no further public comments, the Commission continued with packet [18].

2 AAC 50.401, POST-ELECTION FUNDRAISING BY CANDIDATES AND CONTROLLED GROUPS [18], pages 9-10.

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that the Commission needs to determine when one campaign ends and another begins because of the provisions in AS 15.13.100. Ms. KENNEDY said she has no real problems with subsections (a) and (b) but the statute, by establishing the year-end report deadline implies that a campaign may not close for 2-3 years. She also stated that the Commission had no authority to require that money be given to the General Fund, or that the ending date of a campaign be December 31 of a particular year. Ms. PITTMAN requested more time for staff to address Ms. Kennedy's concern in light of the fact that this objection has just been brought up. Ms. OPLAND suggested deleting some of the repetitious language near the end of subsection (b).

The Commission returned to discussion of 2 AAC 50.380, EARLY CAMPAIGNING, [18], page 11.

Ms. KNOX observed that Ms. von Dohrmann's comments suggested the proposal would simplify things for potential candidates and that was the Commission's intent.

Ms. Knox MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.380, Early Campaigning.
SECONDED by Ms. Opland,

Motion passed unanimously.

2 AAC 50.319, DESIGNATED CAMPAIGN DEPOSITORY [18], pages 12-13.

Mr. Johansen summarized the draft.

Mr. Dale FOX, a member of the audience, inquired as to what was considered a banking institution - how about E. F. Hutton? There was general discussion on this, and it was agreed that a banking institution included a savings and loan institution, and E. F. Hutton would be considered an acceptable depository under the regulation.

The Commission discussed this section and agreed to amend it as follows: Eliminate all of (d) except "...and shall indicate it is a campaign account," which should be added at the end of (c). Ms. OPLAND suggested the changes as she felt it was too restrictive to require that the depository and campaign credit cards be from the same institution.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.319 with the amended language.
SECONDED by Mr. O'Tierney,

2 AAC 50.905, ADVISORY OPINIONS [18], Pages 14-15

Ms. OPLAND expressed concern that the regulation does not require the request to be in writing. Mr. JOHANSEN urged that staff be allowed some discretion to respond to oral requests in situations where the time element required such.

After discussion, the Commission directed the following changes: Under (g): third line, "by" should be changed to "of"; Under (g)(1): second line, "such" should be changed to "an"; "and" should be deleted, and add: "...approving the activity; or..." after the word rendered.

Ms. Knox MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.905 with the amended language.
SECONDED by Ms. Opland,

At this time the Commission recessed until 9:00 a.m. Friday, August 23, 1985.

Minutes, June 24-25, 1985 [1]

The Commission discussed the June meeting minutes and agreed to amend them as follows:

Page 1: "Chairperson" should be changed to "Chairman"; Page 4: third paragraph - "Mr. McKay" should be in capital letters.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to accept the June minutes as amended.
SECONDED by Ms. Knox,

Motion passed unanimously.

Also on the June minutes, the Commission took a final vote on the amended motion dealing with [17C], Substantial Non-compliance: Senator V. Fischer.

Ms. Knox MOVED, SECONDED by Ms. Opland, to accept the motion as amended at the June meeting.

Motion passed unanimously.

The Commission resumed its regulations hearing.

Campaign Disclosure Regulations & Staff Re-draft/Written Testimony [18], [18A]

Personal appearance by Rep. Terry Martin

Rep. MARTIN stated that he had one major concern with the regulations, this being the number of years that people sometimes run for office. There needs to be an end date for campaigns. He believes that 90 days after an election should be enough time to get things in order. A candidate could pay the bills in advance, so there would be no debts accrued. There are numerous loopholes, e.g., Campaign '84, which should be looked into, for filtering money and targeting 5 candidates. He believes the group got away with it because they are affiliated with the Democratic Party. There is a way of filtering money so no one knows who really gave the money to a candidate, and that's the information people are really after.

Ms. PITTMAN explained that there was a point in time where the Commission asked the Parties to inform them as to how they are organized. The purpose of the request was to determine how the Commisison could know that an entity was an official party subdivision. The result of this was a situation where the Commission decided they could not tell the Parties how to organize or whether an entity qualified as a Party subdivision, but would rely on notice from the Parties.

Mr. JOHANSEN said that there is a problem with party subdivisions and the policy has been for non-geographical subdivisions to submit a letter from the Party confirming official subdivision status. There are loopholes for abuse, but maybe these can be tightened up.

Rep. MARTIN suggested use of the voting structure at Party conventions as a guideline to whether a group is truly party affiliated.

2 AAC 50.356, GROUP [18], Pages 16-17

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that staff had no changes to suggest in the initial draft. He noted that the new language continues the provision that an on-going organization may report like an individual. He said staff hoped the new regulation would make it easier for organizations to understand whether they were required to register and report as a group.

Mr. O'TIERNEY asked about the use of the words "...final decision of the recipient candidate or group." After discussion, the Commission requested that the word "decision" be changed to "selection." Ms. OPLAND suggested adding the phrase "and the organization must file as a group." Staff requested additional time to double check the effect of such a change on the grammatical structure of the language.

2 AAC 50.316, PERSONAL CONTRIBUTIONS BY A CANDIDATE, [18], Pages 18-19

Ms. KNOX asked how personal contributions by a candidate differ from a personal loan to the campaign? She understands a loan to be made in anticipation of repayment.

Mr. JOHANSEN said that in the past, the Commission has said that personal contributions create a debt. Some people believe that a campaign is a separate entity that can owe money to the candidate.

Ms. PITTMAN said she believed that when the Commission established this philosophy, it was on the basis that if recovery of personal funds wasn't prohibited, it was allowed. The policy was reflected in the manual as the fact that one could put money into a campaign and recover it whenever able to do so. The Commission can change the interpretation of what is allowed. The Commission used to believe that personal contributions and personal loans were not distinguishable.

Mr. JOHANSEN asked how much money the Commission should let a candidate recover.

Ms. PITTMAN said there was an absence of any specific item in the Statute saying a candidate could not take money as personal income. Ms. KNOX asked if this regulation should deal with how much money a candidate can get back. Mr. JOHANSEN said then there is a problem with post-election fund-raisers. Ms. OPLAND said the public should know if a candidate is contributing to, or loaning money to, a campaign.

Ms. KENNEDY said that contribution is defined in the Statute to include loans. Ms. KNOX stated that many post-election fund-raisers are held to recoup the candidate's money. Ms. PITTMAN said that in regard to the candidate hoping to recoup the money, maybe the candidate should be asked if he or she was planning to recoup the money. If a candidate gives a definite answer, the Commission could deal with his or her adherence to that answer.

Ms. ROGERS suggested holding this item until after the scheduled phone call with Republican District 18.

Campaign Disclosure Affidavits [20]

Available by phone - Allen Vezey, Gary Wood & Jeanette James

Republican District 18 - Allen Vezey, Trsr.

This group requested reconsideration of the civil penalty assessed them for the following:

$ 1,090 CPA, 30 Day Pre-primary, 109 days late;
$ 4,350 CPA, 7 Day Pre-primary, 87 days late;
$ 700 CPA, 10 Day Post-primary, 70 days late;
$ 380 CPA, 30 Day Pre-general, 38 days late;
$ 50 CPA, 7 Day Pre-general, 17 days late.
$ 6,570 CPA total

At the June meeting the Commission accepted staff's recommendation for reduction of the assessment to 10%. This group did not know their affidavit was to be reviewed at that meeting, and wanted a chance to respond and be heard.

The representatives of the group presented their mitigation. The Commission agreed to uphold the staff recommendation of 10% of $6,570 ($657), which is to be paid within 30 days and noted that if this is a hardship on the group, they should contact staff and request an extension of time to pay the fine.

2 AAC 50.316, PERSONAL CONTRIBUTIONS BY A CANDIDATE - continued

Personal appearance by Patti Macklin

Ms. MACKLIN stated she had a question in subsection (c) regarding jointly owned assets. She owns a duplex with her mother - is that an asset? She also had some concern regarding assets owned with a spouse. Mr. JOHANSEN said that assets owned jointly with any other person can be used by the candidate.

Ms. MACKLIN inquired as to why she could contribute an unlimited amount of money to her own campaign, but only $1,000 to another. Ms. KENNEDY informed her that was set in the statute.

Ms. ROGERS suggested striking out (c). Mr. JOHANSEN said that by including "his or her spouse" typifies the usual situation. Without this language, a person can assert that it is acceptable to convey the property to a candidate just before an election, so the candidate can then convert his share of the assets into his or her campaign.

Mr. O'TIERNEY said that there could be an unlimited number of jointly owned assets, which are legitimate. To resolve this dilemma, "including but not limited to spouse" could be entered.

The Commission discussed this section and agreed to amend it as follows: change (C) to (2); strike out "with his or her spouse"; add "In the case of property jointly owned with a spouse, if no specific share...."; add a new sentence to read, "In the case of property jointly owned by a non-spouse where there is no instrument of conveyance or ownership, the percent of the asset belonging to the candidate shall be the pro rata share of the purchase price paid by the candidate, or, if no purchase was made, the amount determined by dividing the value by the number of owners."; change (2) to (3); (3) to (4); (4) to (5); and on the second line of (5), correct the typo of "nto" to "not."

Ms. Opland MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.316 as amended.
SECONDED by Ms. Knox,

Motion passed unanimously.

2 AAC 50.357, CONTRIBUTIONS IN THE NAME OF ANOTHER, [18], Pages 20-21

Mr. JOHANSEN said the purpose of the regulation was to provide specificity about the conduct considered to be a prohibited contribution in the name of another. Such specificity is especially important for provisions that are subject to criminal prosecution. He noted that (a)(2) represents a change in interpretation with respect to whether the contribution limitation applies to the combined value of contributions by a corporation and its subsidiary or by a parent organization and its local units. He expressed the view that this language represents uniform treatment for corporations, unions, and other entities and would not be greeted with objection on that basis.

Personal appearance by Catherine Zalewski

Ms. ZALEWSKI said that a 17 year old child who has political knowledge, should be allowed to make a contribution. The voting age has been discussed as determining the age at which a person could be considered old enough to decide for themselves if they want to make a contribution. Ms. MACKLIN said she thought the voting age was a good idea. Ms. ROGERS stated that she felt anyone under the age of 18 should not be allowed to make a contribution, as that is the age when they are considered to be adults. In her view, it would be logical to go by the voting age.

Ms. MACKLIN stated that people under the age of 18 could show their support in ways other than contributing money. Ms. KNOX stated that it should be the voting age, as the contribution process deals with an election. Ms. ROGERS said she believes it to be clear and fair to require a person to be 18 years old in order to contribute.

Ms. ZALEWSKI asked if it was the really young children that the Commission wants to cover in this. A 16 or 17 year old may be politically oriented and may want to help by contributing money to a campaign. Ms. PITTMAN said there is a problem with parents giving children money to make a contribution. Ms. ZALEWSKI said it could be worded "a child using money received from a parent specifically for political purposes."

Ms. OPLAND noted that subsection (e) sould be "(c)."

Ms. Knox MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.357.
SECONDED by Ms. Opland,

After further discussion on the provision related to contributions by minors, Ms. ROGERS called for the vote which failed 2-2. Mr. O'Tierney and Ms. Opland voted nay; Ms. Knox and Ms. Rogers voted yea.

Ms. OPLAND suggested that the language could be more specific concerning a child using money received from a parent specifically for contributing. Mr. O'TIERNEY suggested that the need to signal potential problems with children's contributions could be served by including a reference in (a)(2).

The Commission agreed to take this subject up again after lunch.

85-1-LOB: Moyer v. Caverly Center, Salvation Army, Chugiak Center [31]

Personal appearance by Janet Moyer

Ms. MOYER said she began lobbying in 1982, and when she began to see the amount of money spent, was shocked. She feels state agencies have blocked her from finding out information and is curious why three agencies didn't have registered lobbyists, yet received several million dollars. She requested the APOC to check into this, but did not get a response. She feels that she is harmed by these groups and wanted help from the APOC. She understands that Ms. Miles needed more information, so she provided her with a sworn statement. People need to be aware of the laws, and it is only fair that other organizations adhere to the rules and laws. There is a need for consistency in applying the laws and standards.

Ms. PITTMAN explained that staff response to the complaint has been slow. The problem is that although Ms. Moyer's letter was given to Brooke Miles in January, Ms. Pittman received it in March, as Brooke was under the impression that she was to hold onto it for awhile, so there was a problem of misunderstanding. Of the three statutes, the APOC has the least people to work on AS 24.45. When Ms. Pittman received the letter, she discussed it with staff and Ms. Kennedy, and believed it to be insufficient. At this point, staff is prepared to proceed with the complaint.

Ms. MOYER said that it looks like proving this case is left up to her. It should be up to the Commission. Ms. PITTMAN said she would encourage Ms. Moyer to document events that support her allegations to allow staff to do its work more efficiently. Ms. MOYER said she would try to get more documentation, but believes the Commission is able to get information to which she does not have access Ms. ROGERS said that the staff and Commission will do their best.

The Commission recessed for lunch and reconvened at approximately 1:30.

2 AAC 50.357, CONTRIBUTIONS IN THE NAME OF ANOTHER - continued

Ms. MACKLIN asked how the Commission would know that a parent's purpose in giving a child money was to contribute. Ms. ROGERS noted that the Commission frequently had to deal with issues of that nature.

Language changes were discussed to allow a child to make a contribution with the child's own money.

The Commission agreed to accept this subsection worded as: "(c) If a minor makes a contribution, the source of which is money or a thing of value given to the child by a parent for that purpose, the parent has made a contribution in the name of another."

Ms. Opland MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.357 as amended.
SECONDED by Mr. O'Tierney,

Motion passed unanimously.

2 AAC 50.401, POST-ELECTION FUNDRAISING BY CANDIDATES AND CONTROLLED GROUPS - continued [18C]

Ms. PITTMAN explained that staff had redrafted this section, which is presented in [18C]. The focus of the draft is to establish a time line for Commission review of whether outstanding debts are considered to be debts or contributions. Ms. KENNEDY indicated that the re-draft removed the approach which she had found objectionable in the previous version. The Commission discussed the redraft, and agreed to accept it with one addition: on page 2, seventh line, add "...a candidate's personal contributions or loans made from his or her...."

Ms. Knox MOVED, to adopt the [18C] re-draft of 2 AAC 50.401.
SECONDED by Ms. Opland,

2 AAC 50.910, AVAILABILITY OF REPORTS FILED WITH THE COMMISSION [18], Page 22

Mr. JOHANSEN noted that this was a technical amendment suggested by the Department of Law to make this regulation compatible with the fact that 2 AAC 50.351(d) allows some reports to be kept confidential. Subsection 351(d) was promulgated in response to the Court's suggestion in the Messerli Case.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.910.
SECONDED by Mr. O'Tierney,

Motion passed unanimously.

2 AAC 50.360, MUNICIPALITIES [18], Page 23

Ms. PITTMAN explained that the effect of the proposed changes is to reverse the Commission's instructions to municipalities about the way to report. The new language allows them to report as individuals rather than groups so long as they are using budget funds, not accepting donations to fund their activity.

Staff has not found any examples of municipalities using solicited funds and feels that group reports create more paper but do not disclose meaningful information.

Mr. O'Tierney MOVED, to adopt the amendments to 2 AAC 50.360(a) and SECONDED by Ms. Opland, the new subsection (d).

Motion passed unanimously.

2 AAC 50.369, PROPER IDENTIFICATION OF POLITICAL COMMUNICATIONS [18], Page 24

Ms. PITTMAN explained that campaigns have frequently overlooked the fact that fund raiser invitations are considered by the Commission to be subject to the identification requirements. This new subsection is intended to help campaigns understand the "paid for by" requirements.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.369(e).
SECONDED by Ms. Knox,

Motion passed unanimously.

2 AAC 50.370, OBJECTS TOO SMALL TO CONTAIN THE PROPER IDENTIFICATION [18], Page 25

Ms. PITTMAN explained that the Commission established a policy some time ago that objects which are no bigger than minimum mailing size need not be identified. This language adds that decision to the regulation.

Ms. OPLAND suggested that the language should read "...other objects which are smaller than '3 1/2 x 5'..." to accurately convey the fact that an item large enough to be accepted by the Post Office must be identified. The Commission agreed.

Ms. Knox MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.320 as amended.
SECONDED by Mr. O'Tierney,

2 AAC 50.390(d)(1), CIVIL PENALTY ASSESSMENTS FOR LATE FILING OF A CAMPAIGN DISCLOSURE REPORT [18], Page 11.

Ms. OPLAND asked whether the new proposal would eliminate the Commission's ability to mitigate a fine. Ms. PITTMAN said that would not be the case. The new language provides for intial assessments to be made at the statutory maximums; there would no longer be any regulatory limit confining the Commission to fining only $1 or $5 for particular reports. Initial assessments will be higher but the Commission will still be able to reduce fines that are appealed.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.390(d)(1) as presented.
SECONDED by Ms. Knox,

2 AAC 50.315(d), CONTRIBUTION LIMITATION EXEMPTION [18], Page 27

Ms. Opland MOVED, to adopt the new subsection (d) of 2 AAC 50.315.
SECONDED by Ms. Knox,

The Commission discussed these sections and agreed to accept them as presented.

Ms. PITTMAN noted that the adoption of the items in packet [18] meant that some of the existing regulations need to be repealed:

2 AAC 50.325: Recordkeeping Requirements for non-monetary contributions;
2 AAC 50.330: Reporting Campaign Expenditures for Transportation;
2 AAC 50.350: Contribution of Professional Services;
2 AAC 50.355: Loans;
2 AAC 50.405(4): "Contribution";
2 AAC 50.385: Reporting by Organizations & Business or Trade Associations;
2 AAC 50.395: Reporting by a Business Entity or Labor Organization.

Ms. Knox MOVED, to repeal the existing regulations listed on SECONDED by Mr. O'Tierney, page 2 of [18A].

Motion passed unanimously.

2 AAC 50.460(d), PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION, [19A], Page 1

Ms. KENNEDY explained that the intent of this proposal was to make it clearer that one of the options available as the result of a preliminary investigation was the assessment of civil penalties, subject to appeal by affidavit.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to accept the amendment to 2 AAC 505.460(d) in SECONDED by Ms. Knox, [19A].

Motion passed unanimously.

Complaint/Inves./Hearing Req. Amendments [19], Page 1; pages 3-8

Ms. PITTMAN explained that the amendment on Page 1 was a minor one suggested by the Ombudsman. It requires staff to notify the subject of a rejected complaint that the complaint has been rejected.

Ms. Knox MOVED, to adopt the amendment to 2 AAC 50.450(d).
SECONDED by Ms. Opland,

Ms. PITTMAN explained that pages 3-8 are proposed amendments to the hearing regulation. The draft reflects a change in advice concerning whether APOC hearings are subject to the requirements of the Administrative Procedures Act that a hearing officer be used. The current position of the Dept. of Law is that when the APOC holds a hearing, it must be in accordance with the APA.

Ms. Knox noted that in line 1 of 2 AAC 40.470(g), the word "there" should be changed to "those."

Ms. Knox MOVED, to adopt 2 AAC 50.470 as amended.
SECONDED by Ms. Opland,

Motion passed unanimously.

Conflict of Interest Statutory Recommendations [5]

Ms. BARCOTT stated that staff would like to suggest the Commission propose three statutory recommendations for the Conflict of Interest Law and proposed Ethics Legislation:

1) Revision of the definition of "Public Official"

Staff would like the definition of "public official" to be revised to incorporate changes in job titles in the executive branch and include key administrative personnel with the Court System and the University of Alaska.

2) Revision of the definition of "Municipal Officer"

Staff would like the definition of "municipal officer" to read "....city or borough manager or administrator...."

Staff would further propose that a new definition be added which would read (10) "candidates for elective municipal office" includes only candidates for those offices defined in AS 39.50.200(a)(6).

3) Ethics Legislation

While the scope and shape of a proposed ethics bill for the executive branch is not known, staff would like the Commission to endorse the concept that the ethics bill be tied to the existing Conflict of Interest Law. Staff believes it appropriate that positions covered by the ethics bill be required to file Conflict of Interest Statements.

Municipal Reporting Statistics [6A]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that 11 municipal officials had not yet filed their 1985 Conflict of Interest Statements and that continued failure to do so may subject them to criminal charges. AS 39.50.060.

Concerning the officials from Anvik, there seems to be confusion over who has filed their Statements and the date they were filed. Staff has requested that the City Clerk submit a sworn statement listing the name of each public official who has filed, the date the Statement was filed, and copies of the Statements.

Attorney General - Civil Referrals [4]
Failure of State Public Officials to Pay COI Civil Penalties

Ms. BARCOTT explained that the following four people have been referred to the Attorney General's Office for civil collection of outstanding civil penalty assessments for late filing of their 1985 Conflict of Interest Statements: Edward Janzen, Darryl Pederson, Morgan Solomon, and Marco Pignalberi.

Municipal Officials Who Failed to File 1985 Conflict of Interest Statements [7]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that staff is requesting that the Office of the Attorney General pursue formal collection efforts on the civil penalties which are accruing at $10/day for those officials who have not filed a 1985 COI Statement. Additionally, staff is giving notice to the local city attorney that the APOC recommends the official(s) be removed from office for failure to comply with AS 39.50.

Ms. ROGERS stated that she feels staff is pursuing the right course of action.

84-4-COI: Bradley Exemption Request [Verbal]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that a Hearing Officer has been appointed, but she does not know if a hearing date nas been set. The hearing will take place in Juneau.

Next Meeting Dates [23]

The Commission agreed that the next regular meeting will be held on November 19-20, 1985 in Anchorage. The tenative date for a February meeting was set for February 27-28, 1985 in Anchorage.

FY 87 Budget Request [22]

Ms. PITTMAN explained the budget request that has been submitted to date.

85-3-COI: Staudenmaier 1985 Municipal Candidate COI [8]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that staff requests a hearing to decide if Mr. Staudenmaier's name should be withheld from the ballot for failure to properly file a Conflict of Interest Statement. If the Commission grants this request, there is immediate need for a hearing officer, as the hearing regulation requires 30 days notice to the individual.

Mr. O'TIERNEY asked if Mr. Staudenmaier had ever filed the client names required on his COI Statement as a 1984 state candidate. Ms. BARCOTT said that he has not filed them with the APOC, nor the Attorney General's Office.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to accept staff's recommendation for a hearing
SECONDED by Ms. Knox, on this matter.

Motion passed unanimously.

Ms. BARCOTT said that staff would try to schedule the hearing as soon as possible within the timeline for notice set by the regulation; it appeared that it might be possible to hold it around September 23, 1985.

84-7-COI: Sheldt v. Wilson (Thorne Bay)
85-2-COI: Barnes v. Thorne Bay City Council [Verbal]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that staff has requested a response date of August 28 from officials in Thorne Bay. This is a serious complaint which involves many people and serious allegations.

85-1-COI: Miller v. Rutledge, et. al. (Cold Bay) [Verbal]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that there has been no progress on this complaint, and staff will take this matter up at the next Commission meeting.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to adjourn the meeting.
SECONDED by Ms. Knox,

Motion passed unanimously.

The meeting adjourned at 4:20 p.m. on August 23, 1985.

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION
MINUTES
June 24-25, 1985

A regular meeting of the Alaska Public Offices Commission was called to order at 9:05 a.m., Monday, June 24, 1985 by Chairman Jean Rogers. The meeting was held in the Easter Island Room of the Captain Cook Hotel in Anchorage.

Commissioners:	Chairman Jean Rogers; Vice-Chair Arlayne Klein; Mildred Opland; Burke Riley.
Staff:	Theda Pittman, Executive Director; Chris Johansen, Associate Coordinator, Campaign Disclosure; Jane Barcott, Associate Coordinator, Conflict of Interest; Brooke Miles, Juneau Branch Administrator; and Teresa Garrison, Recording Secretary.
Others:	Elizabeth Page Kennedy, Assistant Attorney General; Senator Vic Fischer; William Moffatt; John McKay, counsel for William McConkey; John Wood, counsel for Sarah Clossey Norris and Joe Norris; Tom Staudenmaier.
Available via telephone:	Rep. Andre Marrou; Robert Reed Shelley, counsel for Rep. Marrou.

Ms. PITTMAN explained that Commissioner O'Tierney was in Seattle, and that he had given her a telephone number where he could be reached.

Ms. Opland MOVED, SECONDED by Ms. Klein,	for the Commission to go into Executive Session to discuss Litigation Reports. AS 44.62. 310(c)(3).

Motion passed unanimously, at which time the Commission went into Executive Session, and reconvened at 9:25 a.m. No motions were made following the Executive Session.

Draft Complaint/Inves./Hearing Reg. Amendments [9]

Ms. PITTMAN explained that the existing hearing regulation, 2 AAC 50.470, was written by Ms. Kennedy to account for a perceived difference between APOC decisions and the kinds of decisions addressed by Administrative Procedure Act hearing procedures. A recent memorandum by Assistant Attorney General Dick Monkman suggests that APOC hearings are subject to the Administrative Procedure Act. The draft revisions to 2 AAC 50.470 would make that regulation consistent with the Administrative Procedure Act. This is appropriate in light of recent decisions by the Commission to hold Administrative Procedure Act-type hearings either at the request of respondents or because such appears prudent due to probable litigation. The draft does not explicitly address the criteria for determining when an Administrative Procedure Act hearing would be held. Nor does it respond to the statutory language regarding civil penalties which provides that they can be appealed via affidavit.

Ms. Kennedy and Mr. Monkman are in disagreement over whether civil penalties are subject to hearing procedures. Staff suggests Ms. Kennedy be asked to draft language for the Commission which might clarify the review process for civil penalties.

Ms. KENNEDY said that a formal hearing process for civil penalty affidavits would be a slow mechanism for respondents. Ms. OPLAND agreed and indicated a concern that the Commission would never get anything done if hearings were conducted on all civil penalties.

Ms. PITTMAN said that under Mr. Monkman's suggestion, he recommended that only a Hearing Officer be present to listen to a staff presentation and the affiant. She believes there is a disadvantage to a person not being able to appear before the Commission. The appeal process would be more difficult and impersonal than it is at present.

Ms. KENNEDY said that the Commission may want to think over the hearing process as it relates to civil penalties. Ms. OPLAND asked if anyone could request a hearing. Ms. KENNEDY said not necessarily.

Ms. KLEIN asked if there was a problem in using the word "hearing" and if another term was available for the civil penalty items. Ms. KENNEDY said that "appearance" may be used as opposed to "hearing," which could be used for formal proceedings. Ms. ROGERS stated that she would like to be as informal as possible.

Ms. PITTMAN noted that if the Commission approved these revisions for public notice, a regulations hearing could be held in August. Ms. ROGERS asked if that was agreeable to the Commission.

Mr. Riley MOVED, SECONDED by Ms. Opland, to approve the draft revisions of 2 AAC 50.450, .460, and .470 for hearing at the August meeting.

Motion passed unanimously.

85-2-CD: Staff v. Clossey, McConkey, Norris [3]

Mr. JOHANSEN said that staff requests an issuance of Notice of Hearing, with the hearing separate from the regular Commission meeting. At the meeting, the Commission should address the matter of whether one or all of the persons should be referred for criminal prosecution or if civil penalties should be assessed. The Commission should institute criminal proceedings when there is evidence of criminal conduct. Ms. Clossey was informed of the need to file disclosure reports when she inquired about distributing flyers, but she filed late. Staff also attempts to show that a campaign cannot be conducted independently of a candidate when it is prepared by his or her campaign consultants, and staff believes that this is a serious enough matter for criminal referral.

Personal appearances by Mr. John Wood, counsel for Sarah Clossey and Joe Norris; and John McKay, counsel for William McConkey.

Mr. WOOD stated that his clients don't want to prolong the matter in front of a political body, and that he differs with staff on the level of evidence necessary to commence with criminal proceedings. They request no hearing, but request that the matter be sent to the Attorney General for determination of criminal prosecution. Regarding depositions of Ms. Clossey and Mr. Norris, he would like to add that the depositions are unsigned, and his clients cannot be forced to sign them now. He has advised his clients to take the 5th Amendment.

Ms. ROGERS explained that the Attorney General would not take the case without a hearing from the Commission first. Mr. WOOD stated that the present hearing was enough to satisfy his clients. Ms. ROGERS said that may not satisfy the Attorney General.

Mr. WOOD stated that the evidence would not satisfy the Attorney General. Mr. Wood had asked if the matter was instituted by a complaint and the staff has said no. Mr. Wood said that he had looked at the Abood and Flood files. He believed the Commission was aware of the fliers in November of 1983 and also of the Flood lawsuit against Ms. Clossey, which has been settled. According to Mr. Wood, it appears the true complaintant is Joe Flood. If the Commission thinks a hearing is necessary, the respondents should have the right to depose Joe Flood, Charles Dunnagan, and Chris Johansen. Mr. Wood then submitted to the Commission, a letter from Mr. William McConkey to Sarah Clossey showing the expenditures for the flier.

Mr. WOOD said that there is confusion over the May 13, 1985 meeting between his clients and Chris Johansen, at which time his clients were granted an extension to May 31, 1985 to respond to staff. At that time, their attorney failed to show. Ms. Clossey filed a disclosure report and did not try to hide any information. Mr. WOOD asked how broadly the Commission defines group - if a husband drives his wife to place an ad, is this a group? If they go to a political consultant, is this a group? Mr. McConkey was involved with Senator Abood's campaign, but was also involved in 17 other campaigns. Mr. WOOD asked the Commission to dismiss the matter, file a civil penalty assessment so they can appeal, or refer the matter to the Attorney General.

Ms. ROGERS asked if there were any questions. In the absence of any questions, Ms. ROGERS asked John McKay, counsel for Mr. McConkey, to proceed.

Mr. McKAY stated that Mr. McConkey has been a professional campaign consultant for 10 years and has never had a complaint against him. He stressed that there are three people involved in this matter and all three are lumped together. He has consulted with Mr. McConkey who said that there had been no continuing relationship between McConkey and the other two. He sees no reason to proceed further against Mr. McConkey. Proceeding with a hearing could take a year or longer, which would damage Mr. McConkey's business and his reputation. The statutes provide regulations for professional campaign consultants and until now, Mr. McConkey never considered it group activity when he consulted with his clients. He wants fair notice of what is considered group behavior.

Mr. McKAY noted that staff's case appears to be based on a single fact, that Senator Abood had the same information about Flood as Ms. Clossey. Further, staff contends that as a matter of law Mr. McConkey's actions could not have been independent of Senator Abood. But staff offers no case law to support its contention.

Mr. McKAY asserted the only relevant evidence is that it is clear Mr. McConkey wasn't consulted as a campaign manager for Senator Abood. Ms. Clossey had a Constitutional right to make expenditures against Joe Flood. Why can contributions be limited but not expenditures? The courts have said that expenditures are a right of "free speech." Contributions are limited to limit corruption of candidates. There is no danger of this between Abood and Clossey as there is no evidence that ties them together.

Ms. ROGERS asked if there were any questions.

Ms. OPLAND said that Mr. McKay spoke to a lot of issues but not all of them. In a two-candidate race, an expenditure against one candidate is considered a contribution to the other candidate. Mr. McKAY stated that if this is a contribution issue, it would exceed the limit, but it was an expenditure. The regulations require Ms. Clossey to report her expenditures and she did file a report. She did have the right to make an independent expenditure. It may be a contribution depending on the case (if Ms. Clossey wanted to support Senator Abood). If she just wanted to oppose Joe Flood, she had the right to make an independent expenditure.

Ms. ROGERS said that the Commission needs to decide if there is any evidence to conduct a hearing against any of these three people. Mr. JOHANSEN stated there is evidence of a failure to report, and this supports cause for a hearing. Staff has depositions that raise questions of the need for these people to file reports, and staff is suspicious of the actions taken by Sarah Clossey on the flier. Ms. Clossey and Mr. Norris will not disclose from whom they received the money to pay for the flier. Staff believes there is evidence of criminal conduct. Although the depositions of Ms. Clossey and Mr. Norris are not signed, they are sworn documents.

Ms. OPLAND said that a hearing should be held, and if the evidence is not substantial, the matter could be dismissed.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to give Notice of Hearing, as requested by SECONDED by Ms. Klein, staff.

Motion passed unanimously.

Ms. KENNEDY asked whether there were any issues in the staff paper that the Commission did not want to raise in the hearing. Commissioners replied negatively.

Mr. WOOD requested authority to take depositions. Ms. KENNEDY stated that was up to the Hearing Officer. Mr. WOOD said that staff does not want to give him all of the evidence, but he wants any and all evidence. Mr. JOHANSEN said that was to be decided by the Hearing Officer, but that staff doesn't see any problem with that. What causes staff's reluctance at this time, is protection of witnesses. There is no problem with the documents, but the witness names will be given only if the Hearing Officer specifies.

Mr. McKAY said that he hoped to get all the information and doesn't understand the need for a hearing. He has heard no evidence that Mr. McConkey did anything wrong, and a Hearing Officer cannot decide a matter of law. The hearing portion on where the money came from may decide if Mr. McConkey is implicated, but at this time there is no basis for proceedings against Mr. McConkey. Mr. McKAY asked that the Commission consider all three people as separate individuals and wait to see if Mr. McConkey needs to go through the hearing process.

Ms. OPLAND said that the Commission has the option to divide it into two separate hearings. Mr. McKAY said that would be appropriate. Ms. KENNEDY said that all three should be at one hearing.

Mr. RILEY asked if the matter is divisable at the option of the Hearing Officer. Ms. KENNEDY said yes. Ms. OPLAND suggested the hearing be handled in two segments, with the matter of Ms. Clossey and Mr. Norris being taken up first. Mr. McKAY asked if the Hearing Officer has the power to wait on the McConkey matter. Ms. KENNEDY stated that the Hearing Officer has the authority to separate people for hearings.

Ms. ROGERS said that the Commission would like to proceed with Notice of Hearing.

Substantial Non-compliance: Senator V. Fischer [17C]

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that there has been an initial finding by staff that three reports of Senator Vic Fischer's 1982 Senatorial campaign are in substantial noncompliance with the requirements to file properly completed Campaign Disclosure Statements. Omissions of $3,653 from the 1982 30 Day Preprimary report and $3,426 from a 10 Day Post-general report occurred. Staff recommends the Commission find both are substantially incomplete. The 1982 Year-end omitted in the aggregate the amount of $800 in contributions but did not omit a maximum contribution. Staff did not feel fines were appropriate for omission of a single $500 contribution and $300 in contributions of $100 or less, especially when the total campaign activity is over $60,000. At most, staff sees the Year-end report situation as appropriate for a strongly worded letter of Admonishment rather than the assessment of a civil penalty.

Staff recommends reduction of the civil penalties to 50%, as the candidate provided staff with all requested information. The problem was with the treasurer not completing the reports and lack of coordination between the treasurer and the candidate.

Ms. OPLAND asked if $26,550 was the total civil penalty assessment for the three reports. Mr. JOHANSEN said that there was no fine recommended for the 1982 Year-end report. A civil penalty assessment of $8,000 for a report that omits $800 is excessive.

Ms. OPLAND asked, in regard to the 1982 10 Day Post-general report omitting the raffle, if the Commission had changed the policy on raffles. Ms. PITTMAN explained that the Attorney General's memo on this subject was dated December, 1982, which was after the date of Senator Fischer's raffle.

Senator FISCHER stated that he felt the staff recommendation was totally unreasonable. There is no question that the omissions were unintentional and resulted from a problem in the bookkeeping and the treasurer's interpretation of the regulations. The problem was brought to the Senator's attention on March 18, 1985, in a letter from staff, and was the first notice he had received. The letter asked for information and the information was supplied within 10 days. That was almost 2 1/2 years after the problem was discovered.

Senator FISCHER said that he believed the assessment should start from the time he was informed of the problem. All the letters from staff were very "light," and said that staff and the campaign treasurer were working on the problem. Staff should have said the problem was more serious. The raffle omissions were an honest mistake. The problem was due to a misinterpretation of the regulations regarding raffles. The contributions were reported to the Department of Revenue, and Sen. FISCHER believes the reduction of civil penalties from $10/day to $5/day is not generous. If the report had been the first to be audited, the civil penalty assessment may have been minimal. It wasn't taken care of because the Alaska Public Offices Commission is understaffed and could not take care of the matter immediately. Sen. FISCHER said that he feared being penalized for supporting the Commission. The Commission may feel it necessary to lean over backwards to fine him to show that they are not partial.

Ms. KLEIN said that the questions began in 1982 and asked if the problem hadn't been resolved because there was no communication between the treasurer and Sen. Fischer. Sen. FISCHER replied that his treasurer told him there were questions by staff and that he was giving them the requested information. Staff had not said anything about there being a violation or a civil penalty assessment.

Mr. JOHANSEN said that a stern audit request including the possibility of a civil penalty assessment was sent in the 1983 Year-end audit report. The audit said that there was a negative cash-on-hand and the questions had continued through the reporting period. On the 1982 Year-end report there had been a question about the negative cash-on-hand. On these reports, the questions were still not answered. A stern letter (dated March 15, 1984) was sent to the campaign asking them to explain this.

Ms. KLEIN asked if this letter was addressed to the treasurer, and if it stated the possibility of a civil penalty assessment. Mr. JOHANSEN said yes.

Sen. FISCHER said that he received a copy of that along with a memo from the Executive Director which said staff was working on it. He spoke with his treasurer regarding the audit and was informed that the treasurer was following up on it. At that time, he assumed all was in order.

Ms. KLEIN said that this has taken too long to resolve, and there is also a problem in Sen. Fischer's interpretation of the civil penalty assessment. Statutes set the time the assessments are to start accruing, not the Commission. The solution is to have sufficient staff to get things done quicker.

Ms. ROGERS asked if there was further discussion. Ms. OPLAND said that a misunderstanding of the requirement to report the raffle is part of the problem.

Ms. Opland MOVED,
SECONDED by Ms. Klein, to reduce the civil penalty assessments as follows: 50% on the 30 Day Pre-primary report; 10% on the 10 Day Post-general report; and 10% on the Year-end report, for a total of $5,550, if paid within 30 days of notice.

Ms. KLEIN asked if there was any correspondence from staff prior to the March 18, 1985 letter that mentioned the possibility of civil penalties. Mr. JOHANSEN said that it was mentioned in the March 15, 1984 audit.

Ms. KLEIN said she thought the civil penalty assessment should begin from the time of the first notice, since there was no mention of the civil penalty assessment prior to that.

Sen. FISCHER stated that there was carelessness on the campaign's part, but that assessing a fine back to 2 1/2 years ago is unreasonable. With a timely warning it could have been corrected, and the assessment should not start from 1982.

Ms. KLEIN said that 377 days had passed from the March 15, 1984 notice until March 27, 1985 when staff received the requested information. The maximum civil penalty assessment for this would be $3,770 for each report.

Ms. Opland MOVED,
SECONDED by Ms. Klein,

to amend the motion for the civil penalty assessment to begin March 15, 1984 and to conclude on March 27, 1985. The assessments would be mitigated as follows:

30 Day Pre-primary report - 50% ($1,885);
10 Day Post-general report - 10% ($377); and
Year-end report - 10% ($377).

Mr. RILEY stated that while there may be the rationale of one report being a greater offense than the others, he would like the assessment of the 30 Day Pre-primary report to be 20% instead of 50%.

Ms. OPLAND said that in this case, the contribution amounts are substantial and it is careless to let these slip by when they should have been reported.

There was a roll call vote on the motion:

Commissioner Riley - Nay
Commissioner Klein - Yea
Commissioner Opland - Yea
Commissioner Rogers - Nay

Ms. ROGERS suggested the assessment of the 30 Day Pre-primary report be 10%.

Mr. Riley MOVED, to amend the motion for assessment of 20% on SECONDED by Ms. Klein, the 30 Day Pre-primary report.

There was a roll call vote:

Commissioner Riley - Yea
Commissioner Klein - Yea
Commissioner Opland - Nay
Commissioner Rogers - Nay

Ms. Opland MOVED, to amend the motion for assessment of 30% on SECONDED by Ms. Klein, the 30 Day Pre-primary report.

There was a roll call vote:

Commissioner Riley - Nay
Commissioner Klein - Yea
Commissioner Opland - Yea
Commissioner Rogers - Yea

Motion to amend passed 3-1.

(NOTE: A final vote for the amended motion was not taken. Staff will ask the Commission to address this action at its August meeting.)

Mr. JOHANSEN asked if this was for 30% of $3,770 for a total of $1,885. Ms. ROGERS said yes.

Ms. KLEIN asked if this was to be paid within 30 days. Ms. ROGERS said yes, and asked Senator Fischer if this was a hardship for him. Sen. FISCHER said yes, and he would like to have 4 months to pay the fine.

Ms. ROGERS asked if there were any objections to this. Mr. JOHANSEN said staff had no objections.

Campaign Disclosure Affidavits [23]

Personal appearance by William Moffatt

William Moffatt - 1984 District 12 House Candidate

Appeal: $400 CPA, 10 Day Post-general report, 40 days late.

Ms. O'HARA said that staff's recommendation is to deny the affidavit and uphold the fine. Mr. Moffatt has a history of late reporting and unpaid fines. Furthermore, Mr. Moffatt has provided staff with insufficient reasons for the extreme lateness of this report. In addition, he has been delinquent in the appeal procedure set forth by the Commission. The late report in question did contain campaign financial activity that should have been available for public review at the appointed time. Staff sees no basis for the mitigation of this assessment.

Mr. MOFFATT stated that his appearance does not indicate recognition of the Commission's constitutionality, and that he has a complaint filed with the Ombudsman. He wanted to note that he shares the opinion of Cliff Groh that the Commission is improper.

Mr. MOFFATT said that he was unaware of being delinquent in his appeal, as he made his appeal in a timely manner to the Commission instead of to staff. He stated that his letters to the Commission were timely postmarked, and now staff says he was late so as to pillory him in the press. Staff is in error. He stated that as to his history of late filings, his extreme sin is that he was once 7 days late. He believes his position with regard to the Commission is irritating to staff and that staff is selective in who they "go after." Mr. MOFFATT said his report was not extremely late. It was due after the election. Since he was a minor candidate, there was no public thirst for knowledge of a minor campaign. The fines should be consistent and not depend on whether a person is friendly with the Commission.

Ms. ROGERS asked if this was his reason for requesting mitigation. Mr. MOFFATT stated that the report was 40 days late and he was assessed $1/day for the first 30 days. He believes it is distasteful that there is no set policy for civil penalty assessments.

Ms. ROGERS asked him to stick to his own assessment and mitigation.

Mr. MOFFATT stated that he wants the Commission to be consistent and not base the assessments on friendliness to the Commission. Ms. ROGERS informed him that the Commission does not base the civil penalty assessments on friendliness.

Mr. MOFFATT asked on what the assessments and their mitigation is based. Ms. ROGERS said that most commonly they are based on lateness due to illness.

Mr. MOFFATT said that he was being facetious in his affidavit but could give all kinds of reasons for his late reporting. Mr. MOFFATT said that despite the feelings of the Commission, he has a right to believe what he wants.

He believes $400 is excessive for what the Commission does for others. He said he did not avoid making the report, and that he didn't feel well at the time. He asked for the assessment to be reduced, and for the Commission to be consistent in reducing fines.

Ms. ROGERS said that the Commission will accept his statement that the civil penalty is excessive and that he would like a reduction in his fine.

Mr. Riley MOVED, to accept staff's recommendation of a civil penalty assessment of $400.
SECONDED by Ms. Klein,

Ms. KLEIN stated that the statutes, not the Commission, set the fines for reports. When the Commission considers the fine, they consider the history of the person. Here there is a history of noncompliance. It shows that Mr. Moffatt does not comply with the Laws. Also, the Commission does not appreciate verbal abuse.

Ms. OPLAND said that if a person has a history of filing reports on time, the civil penalty may be reduced. If a person is consistently late, the Commission feels the repetition of error is the fault of the filer.

Motion passed unanimously.

Ms. ROGERS said that the Commission isn't "out to get" anyone, and is not responsible for "pillorying" in the press. The Commission does its best as a citizen Commission to uphold the laws of the state.

Mr. MOFFATT asked how long he has to pay the fine and would like four months. Ms. ROGERS asked if there were any objections to allowing 4 months for payment. There were no objections.

84-8-CD: McConkey v. Flood [verbal]

Mr. JOHANSEN said that Mr. McConkey and Senator Abood filed a complaint alleging that there had been a violation of the Campaign Disclosure Law. Staff recommended and the Commission upheld that a request be made to recipient candidates of Quadrant contributions to repay excessive amounts. Mr. Knowles repaid the contributions. Don Smith contacted staff and said the money he received wasn't a contribution. It was to defeat a municipal air quality proposition and so wasn't a political contribution.

Mr. JOHANSEN said that Tom Fink informed staff he was not going to repay the money. Staff has not heard from Jalmar Kerttula. Rather than complete this item piecemeal, staff would like to take the matter up at the next Commission meeting in order to be able to contact all candidates and get their responses.

Ms. ROGERS agreed with staff's recommendation.

Mr. JOHANSEN said that the complaint alleged that Joe Flood received excessive contributions from Alaskan Star. Mr. Flood will make a repayment to Quadrant, but his attorney has stated that he can't make the repayment to Alaskan Star. On the Alaskan Star matter, contributions were on separate checks (from Alaskan Star) for separate sales agents.

Ms. PITTMAN said she didn't think this matter was ready for Commission review until staff requests that Mr. Flood make the Alaskan Star repayment also.

Ms. ROGERS directed staff to ask Mr. Flood to repay Alaskan Star.

84-6-COI: R. Schade v. Andre Marrou [2]

Telephone call to Andre Marrou and Robert Reed Shelley

Ms. BARCOTT explained that in December of 1984, staff received a complaint filed against Rep. Marrou by Ms. Roxie Schade alleging the following violations: that on his 1984 Conflict of Interest Statement, Rep. Marrou failed to disclose the sources of commission income received from Bay Realty during 1983; that on his 1982 Conflict of Interest Statement he failed to disclose the source of commission income received in 1981 from the Land Market; that on his 1984 Conflict of Interest Statement he failed to disclose clients of Eagle Realty from whom more than $100 was received in 1983; that he failed to disclose a contract with the City of Homer; that he intentionally withheld disclosure of the contract between the City of Homer and Eagle Realty because he reimbursed himself $2,500 more than owners of adjoining property of similar size were paid.

Ms. BARCOTT explained that staff considers the most serious aspect of the complaint to be the failure to properly designate major sources of income and identify client names. The failure to properly report, by category and client name, income from Bay Realty and Eagle Real Estate, despite an audit specifically explaining the sources of income definition and requesting information on these firms, is a major flaw in the accuracy of the report itself. The failure in June, 1984, and thereafter, to amend the Statement and furnish the required information is seen by staff as the basis of a hearing into the omissions representing a refusal, knowing failure, or knowingly providing false or misleading information on the report. Staff puts a lesser emphasis on the failure to report clients of the Land Market on the 1982 Statement. This report was unaudited. However, once notice was given in December, 1984, on these clients, the failure to comply is also seen by staff as a refusal to file.

As a result of completing a preliminary investigation, staff finds reason to believe that sources of income were not properly reported on the 1984 and 1982 Conflict of Interest Statements and that the failure to properly complete a Statement is subject to a civil penalty assessment of $10/day. Staff also finds there is reason to believe the omissions on the 1984 Conflict of Interest Statement were knowingly and recklessly committed.

On March 20, 1985, Mr. Shelley filed, in Superior Court, a Complaint for Declaratory Judgment and Injunctive Relief. No judgment has been had to date.

Ms. BARCOTT said that staff recommends Notice of Hearing, and if the Commission accepts staff's recommendation, the Notice of Hearing be deferred until the court case is completed. A civil penalty can be assessed when the client list is submitted, which can then be appealed.

Mr. SHELLEY said that he agrees with deferring the hearing until after the court case has been decided. In regard to the client list being acknowledged, Rep. Marrou has not acknowledged this. Since the lawsuit is still going on, he won't acknowledge the list at this time. Staff keeps pointing to the June 1984 audit. Rep. Marrou believed that he didn't have to submit a client list.

Rep. MARROU said that he had nothing further to add.

Mr. SHELLEY said that in regard to the civil penalty assessment, if Rep. Marrou had acknowledged the client list, the assessment would be halted at that point. Mr. SHELLEY requested that the civil penalties be stopped at the time the information was received from the subpoenas issued by staff.

Ms. BARCOTT stated that this information may or may not be complete and that the civil penalty assessment should accrue until the court decides if the information is required.

Mr. SHELLEY said fine, and had nothing further to add.

Ms. Klein MOVED,	to accept staff's recommendation for notice
SECONDED by Ms. Opland,	and opportunity for a hearing, and that the hearing be delayed until the litigation can be decided.

Motion passed unanimously.

84-18-CD: L. Schade v. A. Marrou [verbal]

Mr. JOHANSEN said that Rep. Marrou has been informed of the complaint and asked to respond. The Conflict of Interest complaint was filed at the same time as the Campaign Disclosure complaint. Since both were quite lengthy, staff believed it appropriate to proceed on them one at a time.

Ms. OPLAND asked if staff was requesting more time to continue with the investigation. Mr. JOHANSEN said yes. Ms. OPLAND asked if Rep. Marrou understood that the staff had been holding off on this complaint. Mr. JOHANSEN said no, but that staff will inform him of such. Ms. OPLAND stated that it makes sense to do the complaints separately.

The Commission agreed with staff's recommendation for continuance.

84-12-CD: Zency v. Tischer [verbal]

Mr. JOHANSEN stated that this complaint arose out of a primary campaign in regards to "paid for by" disclaimers. Staff is continuing investigation.

Campaign Disclosure Advisory Opinions [15]

Kerttula - Mat-Su Mayoral Poll, 1/16/85

Mr. JOHANSEN explained that this arose out of a possible oral complaint by Barbara Lacher saying that Jalmar Kerttula conducted a poll regarding the Mat-Su Mayoral Race. Mr. Kerttula informed staff that the poll was done, and that access was provided to all mayoral candidates who wished to look at it. The Kerttula campaign says that they informed Barbara Lacher that she could look at the poll, but that she didn't. Staff doesn't believe there is a contribution in this situation, because access was provided. Staff believes it is not necessary to continue with a preliminary investigation as there was no contribution to the opposing candidate.

Ms. KLEIN asked staff if, when a letter from Joyce Kerttula stated that Ms. Lacher was informed she could look at the poll, staff contacted Ms. Lacher. Mr. JOHANSEN said yes, and that Ms. Lacher had no response.

Ms. ROGERS asked if Ms. Lacher had been informed that staff believes it is not necessary to pursue the matter. Mr. JOHANSEN said that he will confirm it in writing to her.

Brady - '86 Group, 3/1/85

Mr. JOHANSEN said there was an adivsory opinion issued to Mr. Brady of Bayly, Martin and Fay setting forth the reporting consequences for a draft/controlled group. Staff does not see any major issues in the opinion letter. It was given to the Commission as a review of the regulations in this complex area.

Sea-land Services, Inc., 4/25/85

Mr. JOHANSEN said that Sea-land, Inc. recently requested an opinion on the limitations and reporting consequences for attendance of Governor Sheffield, Mayor Knowles and Commissioner Knapp at a dock dedication ceremony in Seattle, Washington. Staff has opined that the event is reportable under the Conflict of Interest Law (by the public officials), the Lobbying Act, and under the Campaign Disclosure Law if certain conditions are fulfilled.

Draft Campaign Disclosure Regulations: [8]

Mr. JOHANSEN reviewed the regulation package and briefed the Commission on proposed changes drafted by staff.

The Commission recessed until 9:00 AM Thursday at which time it reconvened for a regulations hearing on amendments to the Conflict of Interest Regulations.

Conflict of Interest Regulations - Hearing & Adoption [5]

Ms. BARCOTT noted that notice had been given for oral hearings from 9-11 AM. No member of the public was present to testify. One letter had been received. Ms. BARCOTT reviewed the regulation package and briefed the Commission on minor changes to the draft package.

The Commission reviewed the written testimony received from the Mat-Su Borough. There was a question regarding reportable clients. Ms. BARCOTT said that Mr. Sharp's comments are inaccurate because the statute stipulates who are "reportable clients."

Ms. ROGERS stated that Mr. Sharp may have misinterpreted the intent of the regulations and requested that staff inform him that he has misread the intent. Staff indicated it wished to review his comments further before recommending final adoption of the regulations.

Ms. BARCOTT suggested the public hearing be left open to see if anyone wishing to testify comes in. The Commission agreed.

Ms. Klein MOVED, SECONDED by Ms. Opland, to accept the appeal in part (for Primary reports-10%; for General reports-20%); and reduce the fine to $1,214 if payment is received within 4 months.

Draft Campaign Disclosure Regulations - continued [8]

Mr. Johansen and Ms. Pittman finished staff's review of the proposed Campaign Disclosure regulation amendments. The Commission recommended the following amendments to staff's draft be made prior to notice being issued:

2 AAC 50.314(a)(6)(c), Contribution - clarify that the phrase "bonafide" applies to the use of time;
2 AAC 50.314(a)(8)(A) - use parallel grammatical structure;
2 AAC 50.314(b)(1) - add reference to AS 15.13.100;
2 AAC 50.380(b), Early Campaigning - substitute "designate" for "include" in the last sentence;
2 AAC 50.370 - Substitute reference to electronic media for television or cable in the last sentence;
2 AAC 50.315(d) - delete "all" before expenditures and delete the phrase "as provided by..."

Minutes, April 1985 Meeting [1]

The Commission reviewed the draft minutes and requested the following changes:

At the bottom of page 1, last paragraph, the word "jive" should be "jibe"; on page 2, third paragraph, there should be an "es" added to "business"; on page 4, fourth paragraph, the word "from" should be changed to "by"; on page 16, second paragraph, this should be one sentence instead of two; and on page 20, for the District 5 Republicans, the amount assessed should be "225.00" instead of "$275.00"

Ms. Klein MOVED, to accepted the minutes of the April meeting
SECONDED by Ms. Opland, as corrected.

Motion passed unanimously.

Minutes, Special Meeting, May 1985 [1A]

The Commission reviewed the draft minutes of the May meeting and requested that at the bottom of the page, the word "count" should be changed to "call."

Ms. Opland MOVED, to accept minutes as corrected.
SECONDED by Ms. Klein,

Motion passed unanimously.

Campaign Disclosure Statutory Recommendations [24]

Ms. PITTMAN summarized the 1985 statutory recommendations on Campaign Disclsoure and stated that the Governor may ask for 1986 APOC recommendations prior to the Gross & Burke draft. Ms. PITTMAN said that, although the problem areas are serious and need attention, she could not in good conscience recommend a 1986 effective date for major changes. Perhaps the changes could be made after the 1986 elections.

Campaign Disclosure Reporting Schedule [25]

The Commission unanimously accepted the 1985 due date of September 5 for the 30 Day Pre-municipal report.

Next Meeting Dates: August 22-23 & November [28]

The Commission confirmed August 22 - 23, 1985, as the next regularly scheduled meeting of the Commission and set November 14-15, 1985 as the tentative dates for the following meeting.

Budget Request [26]

Ms. PITTMAN stated that she will be requesting a 1986 upgrade, and will include the cost of moving the office to another location. The current lease is up in October. Typically, in late August, the vendor will be requesting bid waiver, etc. She stated that she is somewhat unsure of the actual budget allotment and whether pay raises will be funded or come out of an approved budget. The budget request should come in August.

Moffatt Complaint/Ombudsman's Report [27]

Ms. PITTMAN explained that on July 30, 1984, Bill Moffatt filed a complaint with the Anchorage Office of the Ombudsman. The allegations being:

1. contrary to law, the Commission improperly elects its officers and appoints its members in closed session and without notice to the public;
2. contrary to law, the Commission fails to hold open meetings to decide on the appeals of civil penalties;
3. contrary to law, the Commission fails to hold open meetings to decide on the removal of candidates from the ballot;
4. the Commission acted unfairly by failing to notify the complainant of the meeting to decide on his appeal of a civil penalty and of the meeting to decide on the removal of candidates from the ballot;
5. the Commission acts unfairly by failing to notify candidates that a complaint has been filed against them or that the Commission plans to investigate candidates on its own motion.

On February 4, 1985, Ms. Pittman received a letter from the Ombudsman stating that he had decided to conclude the investigation and close the case file in this matter. The letter stated that in acting to advise the Lieutenant Governor or other state officers concerned with the administration of an election, the Commission must convene and meet as a prerequisite to recommending removal of candidates from the ballot. It is staff's understanding that the bylaws' reference to decisions made by telephone now conforms to state law because of a teleconferencing bill which passed and the Commission is authorized to conduct its business by teleconference or telephone conference call meetings.

According to the Ombudsman, the Commission should give notice of the time and date on which civil penalty appeals will be decided and also specify that the person filing the appeal may address the Commission at the meeting. Staff has already adopted that practice.

The Ombudsman also noted the staff of the APOC should clarify the point at which a staff initiated investigation begins; be consistent with applicable regulation; provide for notice to a respondent prior to the initiation of any investigation; and provide to each respondent a copy of the staff's complaint, documentation, and a copy of the hearing process and investigations procedures.

Ms. PITTMAN said that there is a question as to when an audit becomes an investigation. Sometimes second and third audit notices are given. Staff does not know how serious the problem is until a response is received. She noted that the Ombudsman investigator had been able to offer no assistance in addressing the question.

Brochure/Press Release/Misc. [29]

The APOC Brochure draft was passed around for the Commission's review, and Ms. Pittman presented a draft press release regarding affidavits. Ms. PITTMAN said that in the matter of business cards for the Commissioners, she will contact them regarding telephone numbers to be used.

Ms. Klein MOVED, SECONDED by Ms. Opland, to go into Executive Session to discuss audit criteria - AS 44.62.310(c)(2)

Motion passed unanimously.

The Commission reconvened at 2:17 p.m. No motions were made following the Executive Session.

Conflict of Interest Regulations - Hearing & Adoption [5]

Ms. BARCOTT noted that no members of the public had appeared to give oral testimony. The only written comments received were from the Mat-Su Borough Attorney. Staff had discussed the letter with Ms. Kennedy as well as some concerns about the filing procedures for candidates.

As recommended by counsel and staff, the Commission agreed to the following amendments in the proposed language:

1) 2 AAC 50.010 - 1st sentence to read, "Retail businesses are characterized by high volume sales of fixed maximum price goods or services available to the general public."

2) 2 AAC 50.010 - 3rd sentence to read, "However, customers who represent ongoing business through an established line of credit not payable in a single billing cycle; a contract to purchase multiple goods or services; or, a discount not available to the general public on volume sales are required to be disclosed."

3) 2 AAC 50.105 - Delete the sentence which reads, "Such statement will be considered timely filed upon receipt by the commission."

4) 2 AAC 50.105(g) - First sentence to read, "An incumbent municipal official who becomes a candidate for state elective office must file a state conflict-of-interest statement with the commission or in accordance with 2 AAC 50.105(h)."

Ms. BARCOTT noted that staff will ask the Division of Elections to establish a policy of providing candidates with proof that Elections accepted the Statement.

Ms. KLEIN asked if there was some way to highlight that the signature on the Statement must be an original. Ms. BARCOTT said that it could not be taken care of in the regulations format. Ms. PITTMAN stated that if staff has an opportunity to proof read the Running Booklet, it might be done that way.

Ms. Opland MOVED, SECONDED by Ms. Klein, to close the public hearing and adopt the Conflict of Interest regulations package (A.G. File 399-102-85) with amendments recommended by staff.

Motion passed unanimously.

84-4-COI: Bradley Exemption Request [verbal]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that this matter is continuing.

84-11-CD: Staff v. Citizens For A Better Legislature [verbal]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that this group was assessed a civil penalty of $240.00 for failing to file a properly completed 1984 30 Day Pre-general report. The fine was paid June 24, 1985.

COI Advisory Opinion: Muni of Anchorage, 5/30/85 [4]

Ms. BARCOTT explained that staff received an inquiry regarding the application of the Conflict of Interest Law to hearing officers for the Planning and Zoning Commission of Anchorage. Staff's position is that they are not subject to the Law. While there may be a compelling argument in favor of their filing disclosure Statements, given the broad delegation of authority they have, staff's negative response is based largely on the opinion of the Attorney General (84-70). Since the Law has criminal provisions, it must be strictly construed. Only those offices expressly stated in the Law are subject to it. While the hearing officers have many powers of the Commission, they serve at the Commission's pleasure. They appear to be adjunct to, rather than a replacement, for the Commission. Finally, their decisions are subject to appeal to the Commission as a whole.

Conflict of Interest Statutory Recommendations [6]

Ms. BARCOTT stated that staff has been preparing a proposal for two statutory amendments to the Conflict of Interest Law. The first recommendation would be to revise the definition of public official to include some of the positions at the University of Alaska, staff at the Alaska Court System, and provide for changes in executive branch job titles.

The other proposal is one which specifically exempts candidates for municipal service area boards from the Law. These people are currently required to file because they are a candidate for an elective municipal office. However, once elected to office, they are not required to file annual Statements since they are not, by statutory definition, municipal officials.

In regard to the existing proposal on exempting cities under 1,000 from the Law, the past year has seen a growth in the number of inquiries on municipal complaints, which may be reason to retain existing language. On the other hand, this part of the Law is impossible to administer - there is no "quality control" on the reports filed; haphazard distribution of information to officials by the clerks; resistance to filing Statements by officials who live in rural towns where such information is common knowledge; and unclear authority to take any action for failure to file, other than civil penalties or referral on charges of criminal "willfulness."

Ms. KLEIN stated that she likes the procedures staff used this year in trying to get the municipal officials to file their Statements, and would like to continue these efforts at least one more year.

Guidelines for Municipal Officers on Conflicts of Interest [6A]

Ms. BARCOTT presented a handout on "What is a Conflict of Interest?" There were suggestions from Ms. Pittman and Ms. Kennedy that have given cause for staff to do further work on this guideline. Ms. BARCOTT said that she would pursue the questions of prohibited acts.

Conflict of Interest Update [7]

Ms. BARCOTT explained the staff procedure for contacting all cities subject to the Conflict of Interest Law, and the results of such.

Ms. ROGERS asked if there was any remaining business.

Ms. Opland MOVED, to adjourn the meeting.
SECONDED by Ms. Klein,

Motion passed unanimously, at which time the meeting adjourned.

MEMORANDUM State of Alaska

TO: APOC Members

DATE: October 17, 1985

TELEPHONE NO: 276-4176

FROM: Theda S. Pittman
Executive Director
Chris Johansen
Associate Coordinator

SUBJECT: Campaign Disclosure
Revisions - 9/19/85 Draft of AS 15.14.

The September 19 Work Draft by Gross & Burke as well as a Sectional Analysis of the same date were sent to you immediately following the Senate State Affairs Committee meeting. The following remarks represent staff's follow-up on technical/administrative provisions and includes notations concerning changes the Committee recommended. By copy of this memo, Ms. Kennedy and Mr. Monkman are requested to provide any observations they deem appropriate. Major policy issues such as abolition of the $1,000 limitation are not discussed in this paper. The Committee has scheduled a public hearing on the next draft October 29. Within the next few days, we will poll you by telephone to see whether it is your desire to offer a Commission position on the policy questions at the October 29th hearing. A courtesy copy of this memo is being provided to Mr. Gross and Ms. Burke in the event that some of the technical information may be helpful.

Before proceeding with a sectional discussion, we note that Mr. Gross has described the two major purposes of this effort as to provide adequate disclosure and permit unlimited contributions (rather than through a proliferation of groups) to candidates. Campaign Disclosure touches upon the fundamental rights of expression and association. As you may recall from the COGEL meeting in Seattle, Charles Steele, General Counsel of the FEC, stressed the value of a clearly-worded "Findings and Purpose" section, especially in statutes touching upon the free exercise of fundamental rights. With respect to the two purposes articulated, it is questionable whether the draft provides better disclosure. A substantial portion of that question may be the result of confusion in the sections on independent expenditure reports which will be discussed later. It is clear that the proposal, in an apparent effort to alleviate some of the present burden on candidates and groups, provides less disclosure prior to an election. It is also unclear whether allowing corporations, organizations and individuals to make unlimited contributions to candidates will have much effect on the growth of groups. With the exception of the political parties, many groups are created to give a particular interest a unique identity in the candidates' perception, e.g., the insurance industry. That purpose may continue to be a viable reason to give money to a group even if one can give an unlimited amount to a candidate directly.

ARTICLE I

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION

AS 15.14.010 - Applicability

(a) - The Committee agreed that language such as "every election for state office" should be included to reflect the possible creation of new elective offices on the state level (i.e., Attorney General). In addition, the language about municipal elections is to be made more specific to delete applicability to service area candidates. Although the present regulatory exemption for those making no expenditures [2 AAC 50.332(b)] works quite well, the universal tendency of service area candidates to spend almost nothing suggests that a statutory exemption would not deprive the public of information.

(b) - If the Committee is in agreement with Ms. Kennedy that contributions or expenditures made solely for petition costs to establish a ballot issue are not reportable, it would be helpful to include such a statement in this subsection. An additional question which might be clarified here is whether activity by the State or the University is reportable. See Attorney General's Opinion J-66-365-78, dated January 5, 1978, copy enclosed.

AS 15.14.020 - Alaska Public Offices Commission

(d) - The specific "February 1" to determine beginning and end of a Commissioner's term has been deleted. Its presence is useful in preserving the specific 5-year terms despite occasional slippage in prompt appointments, i.e., a late appointment does not change the effective date of the term.

(e)(3) - The Committee deleted the provision allowing Commissioners to donate to Presidential campaigns.

(f) - The Committee reduced the honorarium from $200 a day to $100 a day, a figure which is still an improvement over the present $50 a day. Mr. Gross cites Billy Berrier of Legislative Affairs as his source that the average commission honorarium is $200 a day.

- The Committee suggested changing the quorum requirement from three to four so that two votes would not be sufficient to decide a matter. Your bylaws already require three votes to carry a measure. Since the present quorum requirement is three, you can hold a meeting with three Commissioners, but they must be in unanimity to take action. The effect of changing the quorum requirement in the statute would be to prohibit any meeting unless four of you could attend. This would prohibit you from appointing a three member subcommittee to hear a particular matter. During bad weather, travel problems might disrupt a whole meeting if more than one of you could not attend. If the Committee could be so persuaded, it would be wise to leave the quorum at three for that rare occasion when only three of you could attend.

(i) & (j) - These subsections which deal with regional or district offices, where reports may be filed, and where forms and copies are available have been redrafted to come somewhat closer to practicality and actual procedure. The language still causes considerable confusion among those who aren't familiar with our actual procedures. At the request of the Committee, we have tried to suggest some further changes:

(i) - All state reports shall be filed directly with one of the Commission's offices. In major population areas where the Commission has no office, regional offices shall be established to maintain copies of reports filed by statewide candidates and by Legislative candidates in that region. Regional offices will also supply forms and pertinent materials supplied by the Commission to candidates, groups, and persons required to file reports under this chapter.

(j) - In municipalities subject to this chapter where the Commission has no office, the Commission will supply the municipal clerk with forms and pertinent materials for candidates, groups, and persons required to file reports of activity in the elections of that municipality. In municipalities where the Commission has no office, municipal reports shall be filed with the municipal clerk who shall insure that copies are made available for public inspection and that the originals are forwarded to the Commission promptly.

AS 15.14.030 - Duties of the Commission

The body of section .030 incorporates present law except for a minor modification in the language which provides that, within 60 days of an election, a list of all persons and political groups who have failed to comply with the law be made available to the public instead of sent to the Attorney General. The language needs additional modification to reflect what can actually be done. The literal meaning of the existing language would require staff to list and allege, within 60 days of an election, each and every possible campaign disclosure violation against candidates, groups, individuals, corporations, etc. More realistically, a list can be compiled of candidates and registered groups which have failed to file reports or have filed delinquent reports.

Although times and circumstances can always change, the Attorney General's report is more of an internal document for our purposes than of any use by the Attorney General. We have prepared this report for a number of years and consider it to be a public document. It is unclear whether the Attorney General has ever found it to be useful. However, the document could be of use to the public and that may be sufficient justification for retaining some form of the provision.

ARTICLE 2

REGISTRATION AND REPORTS

AS 15.14.040 - Registration by Candidates

(a) - This provision, coupled with the new definition of candidate, requires an individual who has not filed a declaration to register with the Commission and abide by the requirements of the law. Two suggestions come to mind: use the word "individual" rather than "person" since only individuals can become candidates and insert "in the aggregate" after "more than $1,000".

(b) - The draft is somewhat more restrictive than the Commission's proposed regulation in that those who have not filed must indicate whether they are seeking legislative, statewide or municipal office. For administrative purposes, the designation of state or municipal may be sufficient. Potential opponents may be more interested in the difference between "legislative" and "statewide" and we wonder whether it wouldn't be better to avoid fruitless hassles over whether someone hedged when they indicated the level of state race for which they might file.

(c) - A new subsection should be added specifying that the registration shall include required information about campaign officers as provided in AS 15.14.170.

AS 15.14.050 - Registration by Political Groups

(a) & (b) - These subsections are much like the present law in requiring a group to register prior to making a contribution to a candidate. The draft adds the making of an independent expenditure as a trigger for registration, but not ballot proposition expenditures which the Commisison has added by regulation. 2 AAC 50.342.

Noticeably lacking in both AS 15.13 and AS 15.14 is detail about the required contents of a registration statement or any requirement to re-register annually. Content requirements might be handled by a cross-reference to AS 15.14.170. Annual registration would assure accurate information about officers and assist in determining the applicability of Political Contribution Credits in a given year to a given group. Failure to re-register should invoke civil penalties because effective reporting enforcement is dependent upon accurate registration information.

Public awareness of groups could also be enhanced by requiring groups to specify "type" (e.g., official party subdivision, corporate PAC, labor PAC, etc.) or affiliation, and to include as part of the registered name the name of any sponsoring organization. At present staff uses the following categories for its annual summary of group activity: Ad Hoc, controlled, corporate, municipal entity, political party, special interest, trade association, and Union. FPPC bulletin, October 1, 1985, enclosed.

(b) - Continues the present reference only to state initiative groups, without mention of their municipal counterparts. See also the question raised under applicability.

(c) - Contains provisions related to the VECO litigation. The Committee suggested a re-drafting effort. The FEC addresses this type of provision in 2 CFR 110.6.

A question not clear in subsection (c) is what actions a "conduit" can take in the normal course of business in passing on an earmarked contribution without running afoul of the general prohibitions against making a fictitious contribution or one in the name of another. AS 15.14.160; 15.13.070(d). It seems natural and logical that one element (but not the only element) of these crimes is an act of nondisclosure to the recipient candidate or group. See Abood v. Flood, Staff Memorandum, dated August 16, 1985, not considered by the Commission as of yet. (enclosed). Payroll deduction checks are usually issued by the "conduit," but the recipient candidates or political groups often follow the check masthead rule and do not record or report the contribution as received from the original member or employee. This custom raises the appearance the original source was intentionally, knowingly, or inadvertantly undisclosed. It not only causes confusion on the Campaign Disclosure Statements, but confusion with the Political Contribution Credit as well. A requirement that conduits report in writing to the recipients that the check is a payroll withholding or other earmarked contribution, file some special report with the Commission, or provide recipients with a copy of the payroll authorization form might be in order.

AS 15 14.060 - Reports by Candidates of Contributions and Loans Received

This section begins the unusual split reporting system for candidates. Candidates make pre-election disclosure of "contributions" and post-election disclosure of "expenditures." In our review of other states, we have not seen a bifurcated reporting system (although we will continue to look) and we look forward to discussion which may emerge at the October 29 hearing.

The requirement to identify "occupations and employers" was omitted in the draft and a restoration requested by the Committee. Federal law [11 CFR 104.8(a)] and all of the states with these type of laws require this information. Contributor names without identifying information simply don't represent significant disclosure.

Subsection .060(a) requires reporting of contributions received by a candidate. "Received" contributions are reportable when they are "accepted." Subsection (b) provides that acceptance occurs when the contributions are used for campaign purposes or retained at the end of the reporting period.

We see no substantial problems with adopting a special acceptance rule for candidates for the 30 Day, 7 Day, and Final Reports; however, substantial non-disclosure could occur if the "acceptance rule" is applied during the 24 Hour Reporting period. We can speculate a candidate could receive a contribution at the beginning of the 24 Hour reporting period, hold on to it until the end, and then report it on election day when it is too late for anyone to have meaningful access to the information. Under present law, acceptance comes when the candidate, treasurer, or deputy treasurer has possession of the contribution, and we think the Commission's rule is in conformity with a large number of states and the FEC. See 2 CFR 102.8. It may be possible to use a special "possession rule" for the 24 Hour contributions and preserve the policy of section (b) for other contributions.

The allowance of 30 days after a report is due to return non-accepted contributions and the lengthy reporting period covered by 30 Day reports will effectively mean that funds can be held for months before a decision to accept is required. With contributors required to report within 10 days of making a contribution, it appears probable that confusion will arise in some cases over whether a contribution was not reported or not accepted. See U.S. v. Hankins, 607 F.2d 611 (3rd Cir. 1979) for some problems.

There has been substantial litigation in California concerning candidates who allegedly manipulate an acceptance rule to avoid meaningful and timely disclosure to the public. Our worse fear with this new "acceptance rule" is that it will provide an avenue for abuse that we have largely avoided to date. The "possession rule" has its own simplicity and it may be preferable. See 2 AAC 50.333. If the intent is to establish criteria dictating the circumstances under which a contribution can be returned without any reporting, the timespan between receipt and return should be short.

Paragraph .060(a)(2) puts in different words the present Commission regulations that loans and loan guarantees are reportable. See 2 AAC 50.355. Proposed 2 AAC 50.313(a)(2). It adds a provision that campaign loans not reported in a timely fashion cannot be repaid from campaign funds. Although not clear from the statute, it appears the Commission could expand upon its present regulations and provide for complete disclosure of all personal contributions by a candidate from his or her personal funds and assets for the benefit of a campaign. Under present statute and regulations, a candidate can report personal contributions as a lump sum with no further documentation on the terms, guarantors, or security for the loan. If it is the intent of the provision that the APOC and public will demand to know more about these otherwise lump sum contributions, the statute should make some further reference for clarification purposes to what is reportable under paragraph (a)(2).

Paragraph .060(a)(3) provides for lump sum reporting of contributions of $250 or less but does not require reporting the number of contributors. The increased amount is in conformity with previous Commission proposals to alleviate the burdens of itemization for the "small" contributors. However, the staff is not quite certain the present Commission still has the same views with regard to raising the disclosure threshold from $100 to $250. The number of small contributors is a useful audit tool which should be included.

Subsection .060(c) requires 30 Day, 7 Day and December 31 (or Final) contribution reports. Location of filing should be clarified consistent with AS 15.14.020(i). The December 31 due date means that activity occuring on December 29-31 is not required to be included. A January 16 deadline would allow treasurers a breather over the holidays and account for the fact that January 15 is a federal holiday with no postal service.

AS 15.14.070 - Reports by Candidates of Expenditures Made

(a) - Suggested due date would be January 16, see comment above. Expenditure reports should also include the address of the recipient of the expenditure. (December 31 due date also appears in sections .080 and .090.)

AS 15.14.080, .090, & .100 - Political Group Reporting

A Political Group reporting under AS 15.14 must review all three sections for the due dates of different kinds of activity. Some expenditure activity appears not to be required to be reported at all. In addition, the reports required of individuals and entities not meeting the definition of group are also specified in section 100. The result is both confusing and subject to serious abuse by groups which might wish to take advantage of the lack of clarity.

As nearly as we can track a group's reporting requirements, the schedule would look like this:

Section	Information Required	Due Date(s)
.080	Incoming Contributions & Loans ("... all information required under .060(a) for candidates." Because the reference is about candidate requirements, it reads as though a group should report loans to candidates).	30 Day, 7 Day, December 31, 24 Hour
.090	Independent Expenditures of any size on behalf of a candidate	30 Day, 7 Day, December 31, 24 Hour
.100	Expenditures of more than $250 which are monetary or non-monetary contributions to candidates or other political groups or which are not independent expenditures.	within 10 days.
N/A	Expenditures of $250 or less which are monetary or non-monetary contributions to candidates or groups or which are not independent expenditures.	Not required.

It is our impression that a group treasurer is intended to comply with the due dates set out in three separate sections: .080, .090, and .100. Presumably AS 15.14.080 and .090 intend that a group which has both incoming contributions and outgoing independent expenditures will show both on one report due 30 days before an election but the draft does not say that. Adding a "within 10 days" reporting requirement (AS 15.14.100) for large contributions made by the group will make a treasurer's task very confusing. It will also generate hundreds of separate reports to be collated by staff if a complete picture of a group's activity is to be available to the public. The picture will be incomplete in any event because group expenditures of $250 or less are not required to be reported at all.

There's good reason to require groups to report both their income and expenses at the same time. Income tells you who is giving to the group, i.e., its actual sources of income. Expenditures tell you which candidates are receiving the group's money as well as benefiting from any independent expenditures made by the group. The fact that group expenditures are a combination of administrative expenses, contributions to candidates, and independent expenditures argues in favor of pre-election disclosure of expenditures. It would also be helpful to clarify in the statute that the group is required to identify on its expenditure report those items that are contributions or independent expenditures as well as the beneficiary of the contribution or expenditure.

Instructions for group reports should not be intermingled with instructions for organizations which are not required to report the source of their funds. The intermingling is likely to confuse both groups and "non-groups." It also offers the potential for unnecessary litigation resulting from a group that uses the confusion to claim it is not required to report its income.

Our recommendation is that the "within 10 days" reporting deadline be reserved for individuals and organizations (not required to register as political groups) which:

1) make contributions exceeding $250; or
2) make independent expenditures of any amount.

As explained above, a change to the registration language would assure that the Commission knows which groups exist and should report.

Paragraph (a)(1) incorporates the candidates' instructions in AS 15.14.060(a) pertaining to reportable information. For clarity, the group instructions should be expressly set out in the statute. There are practices that make a political group different from a candidate and the candidate language could be misconstrued by a group treasurer. Groups do not solicit funds or receive loans for a clearly identified candidate in most circumstances. Their fund-raising seems to be intended to influence the outcome of an election which, in most instances, concerns the political future of various candidates. Sometimes their activities are devoted to ballot propositions, initiatives and other purposes. Further, at the time their fundraising occurs the group usually has no identified candidate which to support because it has not chosen one to endorse. Both the staff and the Commission may be hard-pressed to show that a reportable contribution must be made for or on behalf of a candidate, much less an identified one.

As to the definition of "independent expenditures" we note this comes from 2 CFR 109. As a practical matter, we suggest that the statutory provisions drawn upon in the Commission proposed regulation 2 AAC 50.313(8). As additional clarification, it may be helpful to describe those campaign agents and actors which the Commission will construe as prima facie evidence of cooperation and consultation with a candidate's campaign.

In AS 15.14.060(b)(2) there is a reference to a candidate's "authorized committee." This was apparently picked off the above FEC regulation. If it has any independent significance, it may be helpful to describe what an "authorized committee" is. Our fear here is that it is being used in the same sense as the FEC, and we have some speculations whether all the duties under 2 CFR 102 are to apply with equal force to this provision for an "authorized committee."

AS 15.14.100(a)(3) requires reporting of certain "expenditures...on behalf of a candidate which are not independent expenditures..." The Commission has always thought (and we think it is true of the majority of workers in other states and scholars in the field) that payments made "on behalf of" an identified candidate are either contributions or independent expenditures, and that the transactions are mutually exclusive. AS 15.14.100(a)(3) appears to be a restated version of the transactions contained in (1) or (2) which describe monetary and non-monetary contributions. If so, its deletion should be considered.

There is no special acceptance rule in the draft for contributions received by a local group. The Commission would have to decide whether to retain its present "possession" regulation for groups or make a revision based on the candidate's "acceptance" rule in the draft.

There is a particular problem with the fundraising activities of groups under the laws concerning games of skill and chance. The Commission has gone on record through legislative recommendations seeking to ban the use of funds raised through games of skill and chance by political groups and candidates. No organization using bingo, raffles, or monte carlo to raise funds can comply with the requirement to identify the source of each dollar it raises. By their very nature, games of chance and skill operate in a manner which defies an effort to name the spender. Such events are fertile territory for candidates and groups to accept funds which are otherwise banned, such as anonymous contributions and contributions in the name of another. A further issue which the Commission may be forced to litigate is the contention that game players are playing to win, not to influence elections. Such a contention argues that a raffle ticket purchase is not a contribution because it isn't intended to influence an election.

It seems doubtful that the draft intended to leave gaps in the requirements that groups report all their income and all their expenditures. It is less clear whether there is any utility in the suggestion that groups can be categorized into "independent expenditure" groups and "contributions to candidates" groups. Most groups in Alaska have mixed purposes. Many groups change their plans in mid-stream. Any provision that allows a group to maneuver around the disclosure of its income after the funds have been obtained will create intolerable enforcement problems. Manipulating the disclosure of income would allow groups to avoid the $1,000 limitation on incoming contributions which is proposed.

ARTICLE 2

CONTRIBUTION AND EXPENDITURES - LIMITATIONS AND PROHIBITIONS

AS 15.14.120 - Contributions by Persons

This section allows unlimited contributions by a person to a political party, a candidate, or a group formed solely for the purpose of sponsoring an initiative. It establishes for the first time, a $1,000 a year limit on the amount a person may give to a group. Discussion of the potential technical problems in the definition of "person" are contained on page ___. What if a group formed to sponsor an initiative decides to undertake independent expenditures on behalf of candidates? Such a group would be potentially much better financed to do than ordinary groups which have a $1,000 limit on their incoming funds. Initiative campaigns are notoriously one-sided when it comes to financing. Some thought should be given to whether an unlimited income provision would tend to foster or ameliorate that situation. Such a concern may ultimately be overridden by constitutional questions. Limitations on contributions to candidates have been upheld on the grounds of public interest in avoiding corruption or its appearance. Limits on contributions to groups may be harder to justify.

With respect to the policy of unlimited contributions directly to candidates, the Commission has not taken a position. In the most recent discussion, some members favored a retention of the $1,000 limit, and others continued to support an increase to $2,000. The question of lifting the limit entirely for individuals, corporations, and entities other than PACs was not posed at that time.

AS 15.14.130 - Contributions By Political Groups

This section retains the $1,000 per year limit on group contributions to a candidate and adds the same limit on group contributions to a group. It retains the political party exemption. It would be helpful if the law specified whether the exemption extends to political party organizations on the national level or in other states. Currently the statute does not do so. Only in the last two State elections have national party contributions begun to assume significance.

AS 15.14.140 - Limitations on Cash Contributions

This incorporates present law and could be clarified by inserting "single" between "a" and "cash" on line 25 so that it reads [redacted].

AS 15.14.150 - Expenditures

Subsection .150(a) states the ability of political parties and candidates to make unlimited expenditures subject only to the requirements of .180 that the purpose be limited to influencing elections, repaying loans, and that surpluses be disposed of as allowed by .200. This may mislead the reader into thinking that candidates can contribute more than $1,000 per year to political groups in contravention of AS 15.14.120(b). The language raises the question of whether political parties are really intended to be able to fund PACs which are not official party subdivisions.

Subsection .150(b) states that independent expenditures, as defined by AS 15.14.090(b), on behalf of or in opposition to a candidate or ballot measure are unlimited. The definition of independent expenditures in .090(b) discusses activity only in relationship to a candidate and does not cover the concept of independence relative to ballot propositions. In discussing a situation involving expenditure activity supporting or opposing a ballot proposition, the real question would be whether the activity was independent of some group which is also trying to influence the outcome of the same measure. Suppose a group was the sponsor of an initiative and continued to be active supporting the proposition created by the initiative. Or suppose a group is simply supporting or opposing a ballot proposition. An individual whose expenditures to influence the passage or defeat of a measure were arranged, coordinated, or directed by a particular group would be making a contribution to the group rather than an independent expenditure.

(c) - This subsection appears intended to establish that political group expenditures on behalf of or in opposition to a single candidate or a single political group, are either independent expenditures or are contributions limited to $1,000 per year. The either/or concept is accurate and well worth stating but the draft uses a negative sentence construction and would be more effective in the positive voice.

AS 15.14.160 - [redacted]

The language used here comes directly from AS 15.13.070(d). Recent staff research into case law indicates the language may support escheat only in the case of anonymous contributions. (See Abood v. Flood, staff memorandum dated August 16, 1985, not yet considered by the Commission.) The Commission needs clearly defined authority to require the return or escheat of any prohibited contribution.

ARTICLE 4

CAMPAIGN MISCONDUCT AND ADMINISTRATION

AS 15.14.170 - Campaign Officers

This section is similar to existing law on campaign chairmen, treasurers and deputy treasurers. In subsection (a), the language allowing the appointment of deputy campaign treasurers "at any time" may lead to confusion between the appointing process and the registration process. "As necessary to comply with AS 15.14.170(e)" or [redacted] might be preferable to "at any time."

Subsection (b) should indicate a requirement to list on the registration statement the name, address and telephone number of any deputy treasurers. Public disclosure of individuals authorized to solicit and accept contributions is important information about the extent of a campaign's organization and financial activity.

In subsection (e), [redacted] line 17, the phrase "of the political group" should be deleted lest it cause confusion over the issue of whether a candidate's campaign committee is a "group." It would be particularly unfortunate in light of the different limits on contributions to candidates and to groups.

Similarly, in [redacted] subsection (f), the word "candidate's" should be deleted lest a group's chair be deemed responsible for a candidate's campaign officers.

AS 15.14.180 - Use of Campaign Funds

There appear to be no technical problems with this subsection.

AS 15.14.190 - Termination of Campaign Activity and Closing of Campaign Accounts

This is similar to provisions in other states requiring close-out reports by candidates. We would like to suggest that close-out reports also be applied to political groups, perhaps as the appropriate mechanism for terminating the registration required in AS 15.14.050. This suggestion is brought forward mainly for the purposes of insuring that contributions to defunct political groups do not become entitled to a PCC and to help assure that an accurate listing of active groups be maintained.

Our strong felt suspicions have been there are a few political groups that have been registered for a long time and ocassionally report no activity, but are raising substantial sums for ostensibly political activities that are in fact not election-influencing. The contributions are usually obtained on some promise the group will lobby for some position or take a side on a ballot proposition. Once the registration statement is filed, the Department of Revenue will pay over PCCs even if there is no quantifiable political activity. A special provision for terminating group registration and reporting may save the State of Alaska some funds or, at least, reduce the number of groups from whom staff must unnecessarily seek reports.

AS 15.14.200 - Surplus Campaign Funds

We see no major technical points in this provision. Some additional thought may be warranted on the language in (a)(5) directing the return of funds to contributors on a pro rata basis. Given that most campaigns have many small contributions, a mandatory pro rata distribution to every contributor is probably not practical.

AS 15.14.210 - Solicitation of Contributions

Consideration should be given to applying the principle of escheat to contributions solicited or accepted in violation of this section. See discussion of AS 15.14.160.

AS 15.14.220 - Identification of Communication

We see no technical problems with subsections (a), (b), and (c). The reference to AS 15.56.010(a)(2) raises two questions. First, is it the intent of this draft to suggest that the APOC would take some enforcement action on a provision which is outside its jurisdiction, as defined in AS 15.14.030, or is it intended to relieve the Commission of the burden of sanctions for improper identification? Second, is the lack of reference to AS 15.56.010(a)(1) an oversight?

If the Commission is intended to take an active role against newspapers or printers for identification failures, we are pessimistic of a productive result in light of substantial litigation on this issue. See 4 ALR 4th 724 and the case of Printing Industries v. Hill 382 F. Supp. 801 (S.D. Tex. 1974) with particular attention given to its writ history in State v. North Dakota Education Association, 262 NW2d 731 (N.D. 1978). Of course, a single opinion from a three judge federal court in Texas does not make Alaska law; however, the concerns expressed therein may indeed be real in any enforcement action initiated by the APOC against a newspaper.

ARTICLE 5

UNLAWFUL CONDUCT; CRIMINAL AND CIVIL PENALTIES; INVESTIGATIONS; PROCEDURES; HEARINGS.

AS 15.14.230, .240 and .250 - Felonies, Misdemeanors, and Civil Penalties

An important aspect of the draft which needs review is the mens rea or mental element specified in all three sections.

In general, both felonies and misdemeanors require actions or omissions to be "knowingly and intentionally." If the intent is to use the standard mental elements in AS 11.81 (which is not specified in the draft), it may be simpler to mention a single felonious intent appropriate for the conduct. Under AS 11.81.610 an intentional act is done knowingly but a knowing violation does not include an intentional one. In effect, the knowing violation appears to be surplus usage and it may assist all concerned if consistency were maintained with the culpability standards in the criminal code. Further, if the mens rea selected is intended to have any meaning other than its uses in the criminal code, it would be helpful to have such laid out in AS 15.14.

In section AS 15.14.230(a)(5), three mental elements are provided for accepting excessive contributions, "knowingly and intentionally and willfully." "Willfully" has been subject to much litigation in the Alaska courts and it appears to have different meanings for different types of crimes. It may be appropriate to excise "willfully." See "Consciousness of Wrongdoing, Mens Rea in Alaska," Alaska Law Review; (1984).

With respect to the use of the "knowingly and intentionally" language in the misdemeanor section, "intentionally" seems to be quite a hefty mens rea for a misdemeanor. "Knowingly" should be considered instead.

AS 15.14.250 inserts "negligently and inadvertantly" as mental elements for acts subject to a fine by the Commission. These mental elements are undefined in the criminal code and we assume the Commission will adopt its own standards through litigation. Further, we also assume the mental elements for a civil penalty are something more than a strict liability criminal offense and it is not necessary to provide an express legislative directive that these violations could become strict liability crimes through interpretation. AS 11.81.610.

The Commission has developed a wide ranging and detailed jurisprudence concerning the appropriateness of any assessment of civil penalties. Like the Alaska courts, the effort is aimed at deterring the offender, deterring others in like situations and, frankly, making it unprofitable for a candidate or political group to violate the law. Therefore the fine schedules in the proposals may be too low. We support a cap on any fines levied by the Commission, but request that fines be capped at the $10,000 range rather than at the $5,000 and $2,000 range.

AS 15.14.250(c) offers an example of why the fines may be too low. This subsection specifies a maximum fine of $2,000 for failure to report expenditures in a year-end or final report. Since this is the only due date for expenditure reporting by candidates, $2,000 seems too small to effectively sanction the failure to report expenditures, especially in races where expenditures range from $50,000 upwards.

Typographical Problems:

Page 29, line 15 - There is no AS 15.14.060(b)(3); it seems likely the intended reference was .060(c)(3) for year-end or final reports.

Page 30, line 21 - AS 15.14.220(b) deals with proper identification; the correct reference would be .210(b) which concerns solicitation.

Page 32, lines 15-18 - Civil penalties (at differing levels) are provided for AS 15.14.250(a)(9) in both .250(d) and .250(e).

Finally the use of the word "person" to describe the violator may pose a problem if the definition of "person" continues to indicate that "person does not include a political group."

AS 15.14.260 - Payment of Fines

Specifies that fines may not be paid from campaign funds. In the case of political groups, this may be an impossible Catch-22. If the chair of a group pays the group's fine, the payment would appear to be a non-monetary contribution and hence, from "campaign funds."

AS 15.14.270 - Removal from Office

We have no technical concerns with this provision.

AS 15.14.280 - Limitations on Actions

AS 15.13 presently has a 4 year statute of limitations. The AS 15.14 draft sets out four years as the time limit for commencing felony prosecutions, two years for misdemeanors, and 18 months for civil penalties. The reduction to two years for misdemeanors may raise a policy issue for Commission concern, especially in light of the fact that some terms of office are three or four years.

I think the 18 month limitation for violations (Civil Penalties) that causes the most consternation on the staff level. The provision is vague and unduly burdensome, and may result in substantial violations of the law going unprosecuted. The language in AS 15.14.280(c) should specifically provide that proceedings be instituted before the Commission within a certain time rather than by the Commission. If desired, a separate time frame could be set for judicial proceedings for collection of a civil penalty after a final decision by the Commission. This would avoid any apparent ambiguity in the statute that judicial proceedings need to be commenced within the 18 month window.

Many of the violations by candidates would not surface until the filing of a Final Report. These are due 30 days after the swearing in of a successful statewide or legislative candidate. AS 15.14.060(c)(3). Assuming the candidate is promptly audited (a large assumption considering the size of these reports and their February due date), and promptly responds, staff knowledge of a violation may not occur until 12-18 months after the violation. If such violations are time barred, our only alternative might be to proceed with misdemeanor or felony investigation with the hopes that the same violation reveals sufficient evidence the act was committed intentionally or knowingly.

An example may illustrate some of the practicalities of trying to enforce civil penalties under the 18 month constraint.

Candidate Joe Jones accepts an excessive contribution from a known political group in the total amount of $1,250 in checks with denominations of $250 or less. This contribution is accepted in the beginning of his campaign which could be months before the election. He does not report the contribution. The staff receives a timely expenditure Final Report that shows candidate Jones spent more money than he reported as being received. His reports are audited and the question asked whether he forgot to report a contribution. Candidate Jones takes about 30-45 days researching his records (some candidates hire a bookkeeper or auditor to straighten out their records), and responds he received an excessive contribution from a political group. By this time, a year has passed and the realities of the audit process have reached a point where we have to make the decision whether to proceed by accusation. Although we would like to find out more about this excessive contribution (Did the candidate know he received a contribution from a political group? Did the candidate negligently or inadvertantly accept an excessive contribution and negligently or inadvertantly fail to report it?), the staff must rush to judgment on this matter and guess whether there is sufficient clear and convincing evidence to conclude that the candidate negligently or inadvertantly failed to timely report an excessive contribution.

Because of the press of time, the only option would be to file an accusation to get inside the 18 month window. Because there are no standards for finding of negligence or inadvertance, a strict liability theory for accusations would initially prevail with the concurrent result that some candidates would suffer the consequences of an unnecessary adjudication.

It would be preferable that the statute of limitations for violations be at least compatible with the misdemeanor section. A short period of limitations will cause candidates to avoid responding to audit requests in the hopes any claims become time barred. It will also put an undue strain on staff to commence accusations when we are not clearly convinced that an act was committed negligently or inadvertantly.

At present the staff proceeds on any accusation against a candidate only when we believe there is sufficient evidence to convince the Comission or subsequent Court or jury that a prohibited act has occurred beyond a reasonable doubt. Speculative claims or allegations without full and complete investigation cause undue embarrassment to the subject of the investigation and unnecessarily waste the public's resources.

Page 35, line 11 - should read AS 15.14.230.

AS 15.14.290 - .330 - Investigations, Accusations, Notice of Defense, Hearings, Imposition of Penalty

Page 36, line 4 and Page 42, line 11 - AS 24.50 should be AS 24.45.

Staff considers two major items to be of concern in the draft:

1) the effort to set out a mini-version of the Administrative Procedures Act requirements within AS 15.14 may create unnecessary and time consuming points of contention; and

2) the simple, direct appeal of civil penalties to the Commission now found in AS 15.13.125, AS 39.50.135, and AS 24.45.141 has been replaced by the cumbersome notice of defense language and procedures that will be both burdensome and intimidating to the majority of candidates and groups which simply filed late reports. The public, the respondents, and the Commission would be better served by continuation of the affidavit appeal for simple delinquency and a direct statement of the requirement to abide by the Administrative Procedures Act in circumstances requiring a hearing.

The staff has no objection to Mr. Gross's desire to extend his personal ban on plea bargaining to this arena. See AS 15.14.330(d). It should be noted, however, that one or two persons are insufficient resources to police all the possible campaign violations throughout the state of Alaska. Unlike the District Attorney's Office with its abundant resources and personnel, it is sometimes difficult moving the multitude of campaign disclosure violations through administrative litigation if plea bargaining is not used to alleviate the crunch. However, we recognize there are basic judgment calls which the staff should not be making when it engages in activities designed to secure a written Consent Agreement and it may, indeed, be proper to reserve all these consent discussion determinations for the Commission. In fact, there have been few instances of plea bargaining; most have concerned appropriate charges ("charge bargaining").

In AS 15.14.330(a)(2) there is a requirement that violations be shown by clear and convincing evidence. Most administrative adjudications are by a preponderance of the evidence. Clear and convincing evidence may be an undue burden to impose upon a small staff.

AS 15.14.340 - Confidentiality

A question regarding the proposed confidentiality of investigations [AS 15.14.030(8)] arises from the standard audit function. Most audits are performed to check the mathematics of reports, and otherwise assist campaigns in complying with the law. If one had to specify whether an audit is assistance [AS 15.14.030(2)] or an investigation [AS 15.14.030(8)], most audits are a means of rendering assistance to campaigns. Of course, audits are investigatory in one sense because matters of potential volation are usually first explored in an audit. If any and all audit reports are synonymous with investigations, it may be necessary to include by express language that audits are also confidential. See AS 09.25. 110, Public Records Act. If audits are something different than investigations, clear statutory standards should be provided to determine when to close a file because it has entered the investigation arena.

A second question related to the proposed confidentiality of investigations concerns the effectiveness of a gag order on staff only. Those who have chaffed at press reports that their actions were under APOC review apparently assume that staff initiates press contact on such subjects. That is incorrect. The complainants are the ones seeking press coverage and they frequently do so before, or simultaneously with, sending a complaint to the Commission. The proposed "no comment" situation by staff will only leave complainants free to publicize their distorted views of what happened and whether or how the law might apply.

The wording of the draft would appear to require the "no comment" situation to continue ad infinitum in a case where the decision was made to file no accusation.

Staff does not support the confidentiality proposal because it would not cure the perceived problem but rather increase the pressure to formulate an accusation. If the language remains, it should at least specify that complainants, respondents, and pers - contacted in the course of an investigation be subject to the same restrictions on confidentiality. See Bar Rule 22(b). Unlike the majority of Revenue investigations that concern documents and receipts, our investigations are directed towards conduct, state of mind, and actions by persons that may or may not be memorialized in a document. Gagging complainants, respondents, and persons contacted during the course of an investigation might discourage frivolous or spiteful complaints on election eve. Of course, it will also create another category of potential violations to monitor.

AS 15.14.350 - .370 - Judicial Review, Powers, Legal Counsel

Staff comments on these sections are primitive and subject to addition at a later date.

Section .360, Powers of the Commission, omits what appears to be broader boilerplate now appearing in AS 15.13.040(a). Potentially related is a concern raised by counsel in the past that AS 15.13.120(d) implies the Commission can issue orders but the plain statement "can issue orders" never appears.

Perhaps the sections on powers and legal counsel would be more appropriately included in Article I. Somehow the concept that there is a necessary relationship between "duties" and "powers" seems fitting.

Section .370 provides that a request for a special prosecutor be made to the Attorney General rather than the Cheif Justice of the Supreme Court. In the Worthington case, the court indicated that it could not appoint a prosecutor as such a case might ultimately be appealed to the Court. While one can hypothesize a case involving the Attorney General or some member of the Administration where friction might arise over the request, there seems little alternative but to hope:

1) it won't happen; and
2) if it does, a denial by the Attorney General would create a public furor that would give cause for reconsideration or judicial relief.

The new language also limits a request for a special prosecutor to cases involving Campaign Disclosure misdemeanors or civil penalties (AS 15.14.240 and .250). No such limitation is appropriate because of the wide range of appointed and elected officials subject to AS 39.50 and because AS 24.45 is also within the Commission's purview.

A second change in the section on legal counsel specifies that the Commission must have the concurrence of the Attorney General to hire temporary legal counsel. This seems an unnecessary provision that will only give the appearance of a desire to unduly frustrate the Commission's efforts.

ARTICLE 6

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

AS 15.14.380 - Definitions

An area staff considers critical on a technical level is the language used in definitions. These words are extremely important, and define the subject matter jurisdiction of the Alaska Public Offices Commission. The scope and content of AS 15.14, with its panoply of registration, reporting, criminal sanctions and administrative proceedings depends in the final analysis on the type of activity with which the Legislature wishes the Commission and staff to be concerned. Tight, concise, clear, and appropriate definitions gives the public notice constitutionally required and insures governmental restrictions do not lean too heavily upon fundamental freedoms. It may be an engrained bias of all adminstrators to be given a clear law which to administer, but we at the staff level (and most likely the public as well) need clear marching orders from the Legislature as to what is, and is not, reportable as well as what is, and is not, prohibited. Felony, misdemeanor and civl penalty violations need to be clear and convincing to the Commission and to a court as well.

AS 15.14.380(1) - "Candidate"

The definition of "candidate" conforms to the registration requirement of AS 15.14.040, and is substantially consistent with the Commission's recommendation that candidates register and report when they begin acting like candidates.

AS 15.14.380(2) and (3) - "Contribution" and "Expenditure"

The definitions of "contribution" and "expenditure" are transfers from AS 15.13 and correct one problem we have had under AS 15.13.100. See Al Adams, staff memorandum dated June 13, 1984, copy enclosed.

However, we do wish to caution that with the delayed reporting schedule for expenditures, the distinction between a contribution and an expenditure will become doubly important for reporting and enforcement. Candidates will first have to make their own judgments whether a pre-election transaction is a "contribution" or an "expenditure" and we suggest some care be used to insure that the definitions are mutually exclusive and crystal clear.

The distinction between "contributions" and "expenditures" may also be serious for groups if the group expenditure reporting questions are not addressed. For example, under the proposed schedule, when would a group report a non-monetary contribution it received if that contribution were used as an independent expenditure?

A final question about contributions which exists under the present statute and which is not addressed by the draft, is a specification that any income raised by a candidate or group via fund-raising is a contribution. See 2 AAC 50.405(4).

AS 15.14.380(4) and (5) - "Individual" and "Municipality"

These are the same as AS 15.13. For clarity, the population threshhold might be added to the municipality definition.

AS 15.14.380(6) - "Person" and AS 15.14.380(7) - "Political Group"

The definitions of "person" and "political group" are critical.

In the "political group" definition, "a person or combination of persons... which accepts contributions" becomes a political group. The "joint action" phrase is eliminated.

In the Commission's most recent effort, proposed regulation 2 AAC 50.356, a group is:

> ...every two or more persons who are elected, appointed or otherwise chosen or who cooperate for the purpose of raising, soliciting, collecting, or disbursing money or anything of value, or directing or controlling the raising, solicitation, or disbursement of money or anything of value for securing or defeating the election to public office of an individual or candidate or securing or defeating a ballot proposition...

Our concern over the "political group" definition deals with the parameters of acceptance. If acceptance has the same meaning as the special acceptance rule for candidates (AS 15.14.060(b) - a contribution is accepted when used by the candidate or retained until the end of the reporting period), a combination of persons can raise funds to their hearts' content and not report the war chest until reports are due immediately before the election, as long as it can avoid making an "expenditure" (and, indeed, a nonreportable one at that). However, the staff believes acceptance by a group has some meaning different than the special rule for candidates.

As you know, acceptance can mean a lot of things to different people. It can range from an exclusive physical possession coupled with an intent to retain the item permanently, to the power to exercise dominion and control ("discretion?") over who receives the contribution. The "dominion and control" test seems to be the appropriate one because it meshes so cleanly with AS 15.14.050(c), the "VECO rule." However, additional clarification may be appropriate so that the Commission has a clear understanding as to the Legislature's intent.

The most serious of technical concerns are with the definition of "person." It provides:

> "Persons" means an individual, partnership, committee, association, corporation, labor organization or other organization or persons for business or other purposes. Persons does not include a political group. (Emphasis added).

At first blush, this definition of "person" appears to be inconsistent with the definition of "political group." In the latter it is provided that a "political group" is "any person" who does certain described acts, i.e., accepts contributions. However, .380(6) provides a "person does not include a political group." If the exclusive language in .380(6) is given any substantive effect, a corporation, committee, association, or labor organization may do any and all acts that would commonly be understood to be group activity and still avoid registration and reporting because of the express exemption that comittees, associations, corporations, and labor organizations are not political groups.

We also have some common sense hesitations with including "committees", "associations" or "organizations of persons for...any other purposes" in the definition of "person." It would be appropriate to either define these entities or excise the reference altogether. Our review of the reports of political groups over the years leads us to believe that many (and, in fact, most of the groups) could qualify as a "committee," "organization" or "association" and thereby avoid registration and reporting as a political group.

The exclusion of "political group" as "persons" has a serious effect on how AS 15.14 is to be enforced. Violations and criminal sanctions can only be brought against "persons." "Persons" do not include "political groups." Since there are few if any sections in present law or the proposals imposing civil or criminal liability on any of the major actors in a "political group," the persons which compose the "political group" must be held responsible for each and every violation of the Campaign Disclosure Law. The "political group" will not be named as respondent, not responsible for paying a fine from its available assets, or complying with those portions of AS 15.14 requiring "persons" to do any act.

Our suggestion is that "persons" from AS 15.13 be retained without the surplus exclusionary language.

Since the "controlled" language in the group definition is primarily directed at the $1,000 limitation on contributions to candidates, some brainstorming should be done on the validity of its continuation here. In any event the discrepancy between "more than 50%" here and "50% or more" in section .050 should be eliminated. The controlled group concept may have continued value to keep candidates from creating several subcommittees, each of which gets $1,000 from the same political group. But it is likely the re-drafting and its placement in the statute could be more to the point.

SUBJECT: Contribution of state monies to Friends of Higher Education. Your File No. 77-5.

At the commission's request, you have asked whether a state agency, here the University of Alaska, may contribute to a private group to influence the outcome of an election. We had previously been asked, in regard to the same subject, whether the University of Alaska (or other state agencies) could expend state money to influence bond propositions.

The law on campaign contributions and expenditures applies to political parties, persons, individuals, candidates and groups. With respect to your question, which focuses on groups, "groups" are defined as being comprised of "persons or individuals". AS 15.13.130(3) The latter is described as a "natural person". AS 15.13.130(5). And a "person" is defined as, in addition to the terms set out in AS 01.10.060(7), including a labor union. AS 15.13.130(7). The definition of "person" in Title 1 includes corporations, partnerships, firms, associations, and the like but it does not include the state or its agencies. Thus, it appears that the law has no application to contributions made by a state agency.

Moreover, we are not at all certain that the so-called "Friends of Higher Education," constitutes a group within the meaning of the law. Given the university's complete control of the organization, its own official's serving as the organization's treasurer, and its funding of the organization's activities, the Friends of Public Higher Education appears to be an agent of the university. As indicated above, a combination of persons as a part of the state government is not covered by the law. Thus, there is a substantial question that the law even applies to this organization. Assuming that it does, it plainly does not apply to contributions from a state agency, because the latter is not covered by the act.

We concur with the staff's recommendation that no action be taken on this one. If asked to do so, the university and its "Friends" will undoubtedly make full reports. If the commission believes that the university or other state agencies should be covered by the act or that they should be prohibited from spending state funds for campaign purposes, it is peculiarly within its authority, and indeed, among its duties, to make recommendations for a change in the law. BULLETIN

FAIR POLITICAL PRACTICES COMMISSION

October 1, 1985
Vol. 11, No. 10

428 J Street, Suite 800, Sacramento, CA 95814 (916) 322-5901

REFORM LEGISLATION ENACTED

Major reform legislation sponsored by the Fair Political Practices Commission has been signed into law by Governor Deukmejian.

Assembly Bill 688, authored by Assemblyman Patrick Johnston, will significantly strengthen the campaign disclosure provisions of the Political Reform Act.

The bill, commonly referred to as the "PAC ID" bill, requires the clear identification of organizations (e.g., associations, businesses, unions) that sponsor political action committees.

When AB 688 (Chapter 498, Statutes of 1985) becomes effective on January 1, 1986, the name of every political action committee which has a sponsor will be required to include the name of its sponsor on all campaign disclosure statements and political mailings sent by the committee.

Commission Chairman Dan Stanford commented, "One of the most important purposes of the Political Reform Act is to inform the public about the sources of campaign contributions. However, attaining this goal has been seriously impeded by the fact that many political action committees use names that are totally non-descriptive, confusing and misleading. In the past, the sources of large contributions often have been identified as nothing more than acronymns and 'good government' PACs. This legislation effectively resolves a serious problem."

Assembly Bill 688 addresses this problem by requiring the name of a "sponsored committee" (e.g., PAC) to include the name of its sponsor. The specific provisions of the new amendment to the Political Reform Act are:

- A "sponsored committee" is a committee sponsored by one or more "persons" (i.e., entities). Committees controlled or sponsored by an individual (e.g., a candidate's controlled committee) are excluded. Associations, businesses and unions will account for most "sponsors."

- An association, business, union or other entity sponsors a committee if any of the following occurs:

  (1) It provides all or nearly all of the contributions received by the committee;

  (2) It collects contributions for the committee by payroll deductions or dues from its members;

  (3) It provides all or nearly all of the administrative services for the committee; or

  (4) It sets policies for soliciting contributions or making expenditures of committee funds.

- The name of a sponsored committee must include the name of the sponsor. If the committee has more than one sponsor, and the sponsors are members of an industry or other identifiable group, the committee name must include a term identifying the common industry or identifiable group associated with the sponsors.

- A sponsored committee must identify its full name on its statement of organization when the committee registers with the Secretary of State. Only one name may be provided on the statement of organization (which can be amended), and this name must be used whenever identification of the committee is required by law.

- With respect to ballot measure committees, a statement that the committee is "a committee for (or against) Proposition __" must be included in any reference to the committee required by law.

SUBJECT: McConkey v. Flood/Quadrant Contribution Fund, Alaska Star

As you may recall (prior staff memorandums without exhibits are attached as items A_1 to A_{15} this matter has been reduced to the filing of Campaign Disclosure Statements or reports by two previously unregistered groups (i.e., Quadrant Contribution Fund, Alaska Star), payment of money to the state treasury, and requests by the staff that the recipient candidates repay prohibited contributions.

As discussed at the June meeting, candidates Knowles, Fink, Flood and Smith were requested to make repayments to Quadrant. Pages B_1 to B_{10}. Mayor Knowles responded in writing raising the point he had no notice of the Quadrant investigation. He repaid Quadrant $1,350.00. Page C_1 - C_3. Assemblyman Smith responds in writing stating the money received from the Quadrant employees was related to a nonelection municipal issue (vehicle inspection). Pages C_4 - C_6. Assemblyman Smith has not repaid the Quadrant Contribution Fund or the employees. Mr. Flood has received a written request for repayment of the Quadant Contribution Fund excess contributions but none for the Alaska Star contributions. In a phone conversation from New Hampshire, Mr. Flood said he had tight finances but would be making repayment of the Quadrant funds shortly. Nothing further has been heard from Mr. Flood.

Mr. Fink refuses to make the repayment and explains in writing he was unaware of the Quadrant investigation or of the fact Quadrant employees received reimbursements from the Quadrant Contribution Fund for their individual contributions. Pages C_7 - C_8. He states:

> We reported the contributions as we received them from individuals shown on the checks or check stubs. You should not place a burden on each candidate to cross examine each contributor to determine if the funds are proper so long as there is no apparent discrepancy or there is no actual knowledge of a discrepancy. We certainly were not aware of any discrepancy. (My emphasis).

> I hope you will weigh in your effort to enforce the law, the deleterious effect you will have on the election process. You are ferreting out items after the fact that put a candidate and a candidate's workers, particularly treasurers, at risk. At best you are being arm-chair quarterbacks the day after the game and fining any player who called a play that you the spectator, felt was in error. And there are as many different questions of plays as there are arm-chair quarterbacks.

IS THERE STATUTORY OR REGULATORY AUTHORITY TO DEMAND REPAYMENT OF EXCESS OR ILLEGAL CONTRIBUTIONS?

There is no statute or regulation clearly stating a candidate receiving illegal, excessive or prohibited contributions is compelled to make some sort of repayment or forfeiture to the contributor. AS 15.13.070(d) does provide a limited repayment duty. It provides, in part, as follows:

> A contribution made by a person wishing to remain anonymous, and received by a candidate, campaign treasurer or deputy campaign treasurer, may not be used or expended, but shall be returned to the donor, if his identity is known, and if no donor is found, the contribution escheats to the state, if not donated by the candidate to the charity of his choice.

Knowingly accepting a contribution in violation of any subsection of AS 15.13.070 is a criminal offense. AS 15.13.12(a)(6).

Of particular interest here is that repayment, escheat, or donation to a charity is not dependent upon the knowledge of the candidate at the time the contribution is received. By an express interpretation of the statute, the candidate must repay upon receipt of a contribution from a person "wishing to remain anonymous." Repayment can be demanded regardless of whether knowledge is brought home to the candidate that a contributor wishes to remain anonymous, and the candidate is strictly liable for escheat, repayment or donation whenever a contribution can be reasonably classified as "anonymous." Knowingly receiving an anonymous contribution or one made by a person wishing to remain anonymous is, in addition to escheat, repayment and/or donation, a criminal offense punishable as a misdemeanor if proven beyond a reasonable doubt. AS 15.13.120(a)(6).

The staff has no reason to doubt that Quadrant Employee contributions received by the candidates came by check that appeared properly issued. The Quadrant employee contributions were reported by the candidates as being received from an identified person who the candidates erroneously believed was the source. Likewise, the checks from the Quadrant Contribution Fund were incorrectly reported as being received from the subsidary Quadrant companies instead of the Quadrant Contribution Fund, and, indeed, met the legal requirement that a contribution be identified as being received from a person.

The problem with all of the Quadrant contributions is not that they omitted a name altogether, but that the name for which the contribution was ostensibly made was a wrong one, with the result these employee and group contributions may have been in fictitious names or in the name of another.

A candidate's knowing acceptance of a fictitious contribution or one in the name of another maybe, under some circumstances, a criminal offense. AS 15.13.120(a)(6). However, AS 15.13.070(d) does not expressly provide these contributions are escheated to the state, required to be donated to a charity, or compelled to be repaid to a contributor. If the lack of any interim administrative remedies other than criminal prosecution indicates a legislative intent not to rely upon escheat, repayment or donation, it may be reasonably concluded the Commission could not compel the repayment of contributions in the name of another, fictitious contributions, or excessive contributions, unless it is prepared to begin a criminal investigation with concurrent notice and hearing in each individual case.

Further, the Commission should hesitate in construing a forfeiture requirement if it would lead to an unreasonable result. The alternative remedial methods for anonymous contributions are ill-suited for fictitious contributions or those in the name of another. Both sanctions seem directed at deterring persons from propping up a "straw man" with which to funnel money to campaigns in order to avoid disclosure or the contribution limitation. Although the "straw man" can be implicated in a criminal violation, it is the person who holds the purse strings and controls the flow of contributions through the "straw man" that may have knowingly committed all acts necessary to complete a criminal offense. It seems incongruous to staff for this Commission to permit a candidate to make a choice for disposition of an illegal contribution by making repayment to the very person that is primarily responsible for the commission of a criminal act in the first instance. As Mr. Fink states, a repayment order[1] under this set of circumstances places the candidates in the position of being guarantors that no "straw man" contributions are received, a burden that has no requirement the candidate have knowledge or reason to know that a "straw man" is involved in the transaction, or that the underlying facts could have, after exhaustive investigation, disclosed some form of an illegal contribution, at least to the extent that would trigger immediate election of escheat, repayment or donation. Staff believes that if the Campaign Disclosure Law requires such a result it would have expressly said so, and that the exclusive administrative remedy under the present statute and regulations[2] is a criminal proceeding for a knowing receipt of a fictitious contribution or one in the name of another.

[1]Staff is of the opinion this Commission has absolute authority and discretion to make a repayment request at any time for any type of prohibited contribution in order to purge the campaign marketplace of any contributions reasonably construed as illegal. Candidates should be given the option to comply. If they choose not to comply with a reasonable Commission request, the Commission and its staff should be concerned, as here, whether it has clear authority or regulatory power to demand repayment, together with whether there is credible evidence to believe a criminal act has been committed.

[2]Under proposed 2 AAC 50.356 and 2 AAC 50.357, the "straw person" and the source would be, in addition, a group required to file Campaign Disclosure Statements.

Some persuasive force to staff's view is presented in the case of People v. de Grazia, 434 NE2d 543 (Ill. App.Ct 1982). There an Attorney General brought a civil action to compel escheat to the state of certain contributions ($48,300.00) reported by a gubernatorial campaign as being made by a Mr. de Grazia (the "straw man") but actually made by another. In Count II the Attorney General sought imposition of a constructive trust and an accounting in favor of the state for the candidate's wrongful use, conversion, or appropriation of "anonymous" contributions. Id. at 544. Section 9-25 of the Illinois Election Code shares many of the prohibitions of AS 15.13.070(d) and provides:

> No person shall make an anonymous contribution or a contribution in the name of another person, and no person shall knowingly accept an anonymous contribution made by one person in the name of another person. Anonymous contributions shall escheat to the state of Illinois. Id. at 545.

According to Illinois law, escheat is penal in nature and calls for a narrow construction. Anonymous contributions, like Alaska law, are undefined but, according to the Illinois court, occur where "the contributor is unknown, unnamed, or the source of origin (donorship) cannot be identified."[1]

Anonymous contributions are not synonymous with those in the name of another because > ...the statute plainly refers to two separate types of prohibited contributions, providing different sanctions for each type of contribution. Id.

> Applying a strict construtions to section 9-25, we hold that it does not provide a statutory remedy to the Board of Elections for contributions made by one person in the name of another. Id. at 546.

Since the Attorney General could identify in the complaint that de Garzia (the "straw man") donated $48,300 to the gubernatorial candidate but not in fact the person who supplied the funds, there was no anonymous contribution as a matter of law, and, alternatively, the state could not compel escheat for a contribution in the name of another. Therefore, the Court affirmed the lower court's order dismissing the Attorney General's complaint for failure to state a claim for which relief could be granted.

[1]Donorship appears to be used by the Court in the gift sense requiring delivery of the money with an intent by the donor the donnee retain the funds permanently.

If repayment authority is narrowly limited to anonymous contributions,[1] the only administrative remedy may be criminal proceedings pursuant to AS 15.13.120(a)(6). To proceed in this fashion, the staff has always taken the position there must be some credible evidence by which to form a preliminary opinion or belief that a criminal violation has occurred. Paul Fischer, February, 1985 (Consent Agreement); Staff v. Clossey, Norris and McConkey, June, 1985 (pending criminal and civil penalty matter).

There are two types of potential violations by the recipient candidates in the Quadrant situation. The first concerns contributions in the name of another. AS 15.13.070(d). The second concerns acceptance of excessive group contributions. AS 15.13.070(a); AS 15.13.120(a)(6).

As explained in the foregoing, Quadrant employees made contributions to all the candidates and subsequently received reimbursement from the Quadrant Contribution Fund. If all or some of the recipient candidates (excluding Assemblyman Smith see attached correspondence at C_9) were aware of or had knowledge of the subsequent reimbursements, there may be some evidence to form a factual or legal justification for proceeding with a preliminary investigation. 2 AAC 50.460. However, based on the fact all employees of Quadrant first paid to the candidates by personal check, there does not appear to be any documentary evidence that could have alerted a candidate or treasurer of the appearance of a questionable donation, and all responding candidates steadfastly deny any awareness or knowledge of a collusion between the Quadrant Contribution Fund and the Quadrant employees, the staff feels hard pressed to find any knowledge by the candidates that contributions were received in the name of another. However, a somewhat clean documentary trail and conclusionary denials by the candidates should not preclude further scrutiny by way of a preliminary investigation if there is other credible evidence to form a belief the candidate's denials are not plausible.

It is on this basis staff recommends the matter be concluded. The candidate's written responses are candid, truthful, and appear to have been made in good faith. As pointed out in Mr. Fink's written response, the error which has been already disposed of by this Commission occurred in the Quadrant offices when funds were pooled and employees were reimbursed for contributions already made.[2]

[1]The Illinois decision is solely based on an Illinois statute and has, at most, some persuasive force. It is by no means controlling, nor should this Commission feel bound by it. However, the general authority for the proposition that escheat is penal in nature and calls for a narrow construction of the statute is widely accepted, and you may come to that view after discussions with your attorney. 27 Am. Jur. 2d Sec. 879 Escheat at notes 15-16 (1966). If this reasoning is accepted, the staff can find no facts or rationale by which to conclude the Quadrant contributions are anonymous contributions and, likewise in the name of another.

[2]Proposed 2 AAC 50.357 clearly prohibits this type of conduct and provides civil as well as criminal penalties for doing so.

The second matter concerns the receipt by the candidates of single checks directly from the Quadrant Contribution fund in excess of $1,000.00. As explained in prior staff memoranda, the Fund checks had attached an invoice that apparently intended to allocate portions of the check proceeds between several of the Quadrant affiliated companies. If the invoice intended to make such an allocation (an intent that appears to have been brought home to the candidates who reported the contributions as allocated by the invoice), the recipient candidates could be charged with knowledge they would be committing a criminal act if there was reasonable basis to conclude these contributions in excess of $1,000.00 were from a single group.

It can be safely assumed that each of the recipient candidates had constructive notice of 2 AAC 50.395 at the time the contributions from the Fund were received. 2 AAC 50.395(q) in characteristically ellipitical language defines a group as two or more person who engage in special fundraising and uniform assessments amongst its members. Political groups are also "contingency funds" wherein more of the money during a period is spent on political contributions than any other purpose. 2 AAC 50.395 (a).[1]

This Commission has studied its group regulations with intensity over the past few months and proposed that 2 AAC 50.395 be repealled in its entirety. The reasons for repealer have been explained in prior staff memoranda and discussed with the Commission. Largely because the basis for any criminal prosecution against candidates would depend on the clarity of the notice given in present 2 AAC 50.395, and, indeed, the proposed regulations could be construed as an implicit admission they are unclear, the staff finds a criminal preliminary investigation would be insupportable under the present status of the regulations for the same reason changes were proposed by staff in the first instance.

The staff also finds as a factual matter that it is reasonable to conclude, as Mr. Fink points out, that they had no notice of the internal machinations of the Quadrant Contribution Fund prior to receipt of the Fund checks. It appears the candidates mistakenly assumed the invoice was a proper allocation of the check proceeds and reported the contributions accordingly. Although ample arguments exist to show that receipt of any check in excess of $1,000 in this instance amounted to ordinary and, indeed, gross, negligence under the Campaign Disclosure Law, the staff cannot find any basis for concluding the recipient candidates had knowledge they were committing a criminal act at the time the check proceeds were received.[2]

[1]2 AAC 50.395(a) has all the evils referred to in note 1 of the next page. A recipient candidate would have no reason to know he was dealing with an unregistered group under (a) until all the contingency fund money has been spent and the political funds were "more than any other single purpose."

[2]There has been some speculation at the staff level that if no evidence exists for showing the acceptance of the contributions were knowing at the time they were received, the knowledge element was indeed brought home to the candidates when they were informed of the results of the staff preliminary investigations. (Con't. on next page)

SHOULD THE COMMISSION ADMONISH RECIPIENT CANDIDATES WHO CONTINUE TO RETAIN (or have already spent) CONTRIBUTIONS THEY SUBSEQUENTLY LEARN ARE ILLEGAL?

As stated in the foregoing, this Commission should not hesitate to admonish candidates who fail to avoid through ordinary or gross negligence an appearence of wrongdoing under the Campaign Disclosure Law. This policy should apply regardless of whether it is before or after the fact. AS 15.13.070 is rather clear that a candidate cannot, directly or indirectly, accept fictitious or contributions in the name of another. This prohibition has been in Alaska statutes since 1974, and all candidates engaged in reportable activity should at least adopt procedures to prevent such a prohibited act from occurring.

The Alaska Public Offices Commission has the duty to investigate violations of the Campaign Disclosure Law. AS 15.13.030(8). It also has the duty to assist candidates so that they do not advertantly or knowingly violate the law. AS 15.13.030(2). Letters of Admonition are one form of rendering assistance to candidates. They express Commission condemnation of a campaign practice that the Commission considers serious and substantial, and, further, that the conduct is unreasonable.

The standard of care for candidates in accepting contributions has been stated in the current version of the candidate's manual. It provides:

Although you may wish to consult your own attorney on this matter (AS 15.13.122), we can find two problems with this approach.

The first is that AS 15.13.120(a)(6) provides criminal sactions for a knowing acceptance of a prohibited contribution, not a knowing retention of a contribution once the candidate becomes aware the contribution is prohibited. Alaska courts generally apply a strict construction to criminal statutes, and if the Legislature intended to subject candidates to criminal sanctions for a knowing retention of a prohibited contribution it should have expressly said so.

The second problem concerns the months between the act and the time when a candidate becomes aware the contribution is prohibited. Although your attorney may advise otherwise (AS 15.13.122), the staff sometimes strays into principles of hornbook criminal law. One of those has it that no crime is committed unless there is a concurrence of knowledge and acceptance at a single point in time. 21 Am.Jur.2d Criminal Law sec. 129 (1981); AS 11.81.600. An act is not criminal unless accompanied by a conciousness of wrongdong, and persons are not subject to criminal sanctions for guilty thoughts alone. Id.; AS 11.81.610. Knowledge obtained through the results of a staff preliminary investigation may be an independent subsequent event that cannot make an innocent act into a criminal one. SUMMARY OF PROCEDURES FOR RECEIPTS

To review the accounting procedure, here is how the card system works, and what should be done at each step.

1. Collect the receipts both from the mail and from the direct sources.
2. Determine that all receipts are legally acceptable. Receipts should be divided into three groups:
   a) Receipts and contributions that are clearly legally unacceptable. These receipts should be returned to the contributor immediately.
   b) Receipts that are questionable as to whether or not they are legally acceptable. These receipts may be deposited, but a log should be maintained to determine the work you have performed, or documentation received, to ensure their legallity. Call the Commission staff for assistance.
   c) Receipts that are legally acceptable may be deposited. (original emphasis)

It has been the staff's general position that candidates are the first line of defense against prohibited campaign practices. The candidate should initially take some affirmative efforts to determine the legality of all contributions. In most cases, a single personal check from an individual within the aggregate limitation which appears in all other respects to be normal on its face is all that is required. However, checks in excess of the contribution limit are highly suspect and should call for more intensive investigation with subsequent reporting to the APOC of the efforts made to determine the legality of the contributions.

The staff believes there is no evidence for a showing of a lack of reasonable care by the candidates with respect to acceptance of personal checks from the Quadrant employees. They appeared normal on their face as individual contributions under the present regulatory system.[1]

[1]This is not to say blind acceptance of a series of over $100 checks at a fund-raising event attended by persons who have known close occupational connections to the Quadrant companies is reasonable future conduct. Proposed 2 AAC 50.357 provides that a person cannot loan or advance money for contributions by agents or employees, and a candidate has an affirmative duty to make some inquiry or acquire documentation showing no prohibited contributions are being accepted by the campaign. Candidates should raise their own concerns and adopt procedures to detect questionable contributions and return those that cannot be determined to be legal.

Frankly, the APOC spends as well as collects a substantial amount processing and disposing of the well thoughtout citizen's complaints that are, in large part, directly drawn from the candidate's Campaign Disclosure Statements. Indeed, a citizen saw the tip of the iceberg in this instance and sought a staff preliminary investigation which indirectly alleged that certain candidates failed, at a minimum, to do their jobs and screen contributions so that reasonable compliance is had with AS 15.13.070. If all the candidates did their jobs in this instance, there would be no cause to complain and this, as well as all other prior matters in this proceeding, would have largely been unnecessary.

The Quadrant Contribution Fund Campaign Disclosure Statement show single checks from the Fund were received by two candidates who have yet to return any excess. They are:

	Fink		Flood
5/31/84	$2,000	7/27/84	$3,000
9/19/84	3,200
10/01/84	1,000
Total	$6,200		$3,000
Total Excess	$5,200		$2,000

The staff position in prior matters has been that AS 15.13.070(a) clearly sets forth a $1,000 contribution limit in Alaska, and that a candidate should exercise special care in the handling and reporting of maximum contributions. It would be clear to the staff that if these contributions were not reported at all, civil penalties for substantial noncompliance with the law would be a proper administrative remedy. 2 AAC 50.390(i).

Unlike the employee contributions, the Fund checks exceeded the contribution limit in the aggregate and individually, and do not appear regular on their face. From the written responses, the staff can safely conclude the recipient candidates raised no questions at all regarding the legality or the source of such large campaign contributions and incorrectly assumed through inaction that the Fund checks were proper. Eventhough the group regulatory framework in existence at the time the events took place was not a sterling example of clarity, the staff feels the lack of inquiry and disclosure to the APOC staff at the time they were accepted was unreasonable under the circumstances.

Therefore, the staff recommends this matter be concluded by the issuance of a Letter of Admonition to recipient candidates who have failed to return excessive contributions from the Quadrant Contribution Fund.

ALASKA STAR

The Abood complaint also alleged that candidate Flood received an excessive contribution from an unregistered group, to wit: Alaska Star. The amount of the contributions received and reported by Mr. Flood totalled $2,600.00. The alleged excessive contribution was $1,600.00. The Flood campaign has not, as of yet, been sent written demand to return the excess to Alaska Star. As you will also recall, the Alaska Star matter was resolved by a Consent Agreement, and Alaska Star paid an amount to the state general fund.

The Flood campaign was the lone recipient of the Alaska Star largesse, and none of the individual checks exceeded $1,000.00.

Like the Quadrant matter, the first issue to be addressed is whether there is some evidence upon which to form a belief to conclude Mr. Flood knowingly received an excessive contribution. AS 15.13.070(a); AS 15.13.120(a)(6).

The written responses by Mr. Flood's attorney and investigation of Alaska Star reveals that fundraising tickets were sold to agents of Alaska Star on September 17, 1985. Each of the independent real estate agents with the firm had an account with Alaska Star through which they received their share of commissions on real estate sales. Alaska Star's attorney points out (and we have no reason to doubt), ~~it is a common practice in the real estate industry for a broker or other person who may be in control of the commission account, to advance funds to agents as a loan to be repaid from future commissions.~~ All or most of the political contributions to Mr. Flood by the agents were made on Alaska Star checks from the commission accounts, some of which were earned because the condition for payment to the agents (completion of the real estate sales) had been fulfilled. However, others (more than two) had not received nor were they entitled to commissions because the underlying property sale has not been completed, with the result the advance on future commissions was a loan.

After notice of the complaint, Mr. Flood responded through his attorney he believed at the time that each of the agent's contributions came from their "individual business accounts" that were, presumably, completely vested at the time they were made. He asserts that as far as he was concerned, and after inquiry, each of the agent contributions was individual. Corroboration the campaign was concerned about the Alaska Star contributions came in the form of an attachment filed with Mr. Flood's 30 Day Pre-general Campaign Disclosure Statement which, incidentially, came before the complaint was filed in this instance. Further, an appearance was had in the APOC offices by Ms. Myrna Flood at the time the report was filed (October 11, 1984) explaining that each of the independent agents had purchased fund raising tickets from their individual accounts.

The staff believes it can show from the facts that the candidate received a contribution in the aggregate that exceeded the $1,000 contribution. It is clear that checks were issued, funds were drawn, and then deposited and reported by the candidate. The candidate exercised the minimal dominion and control over the funds to sufficiently conclude that the campaign received or accepted the campaign contributions. However, the crux of the matter is not whether they were in fact received, but whether the candidate knew at the time they were received that he accepted an excessive contribution from a political group that was, in this case, unregistered.

There are three general types of mental states defined in Title 11 of the Alaska Criminal Code which may be applicable to the Campaign Disclosure Law and the various criminal offenses contained in AS 15.13.120. They range in severity from the most to the least culpable. For our purposes, the "Knowingly" element of AS 15.13.120(a)(6) should be synonymous with the definition of "knowingly" in the criminal code,* which provides:

*The criminal definitions of culpable mental states are expressly limited to crimes contained in Title 11, AS 11.81.900(a), and are not applied by express language to crimes not contained in the criminal code. However, such an interpretation could easily be made when attempts are made to define "Knowingly" in AS 15.13.120(a)(6). The Campaign Disclosure Law does not define "Knowingly," and there is no provision in AS 15.13 that "knowingly" is anything less than what is contained in the criminal code.

> a person acts "knowingly" with respect to conduct or to a circumstance described by a provision of law defining an offense when the person is aware that the conduct is of that nature or that circumstance exists...(or)...aware of a substantial probability of its existence, unless the person actually believe it does not exist..AS 11.81.900(a)(2). (My emphasis)

An actual awareness by the defendant that conduct is wrong is also applied to crimes that provide a "reckless" culpable mental state. A "reckless" criminal act occurs

> ...when the person is aware of and consciously disregards a substantial and unjustifiable risk that the result will occurr or that the circumstance exists; the risk must be of such a nature and degree that disregard of it constitutes a gross deviation from the standard of conduct that a reasonable person would observe in the situations... AS 11.81.900(a)(3). (My emphasis)

"Criminal negligence" is the least culpable conduct and the easiest for the prosecution to prove. Supra, Stern, at 44. It occurs when a > ...person fails to perceive a substantial and unjustifiable risk that the result will occur or that the circumstance exists; the result must be of such a nature and degree that the failure to perceived it constitutes a gross deviation from the standard of accrue that a reasonable person would observe in the situation. AS 11.81.900(a)(4). (My emphasis)

The difference between "reckless" and "criminal negligence" has been explained in Andrew v. State, 653 P.2d 1063, 1066 (Alaska Ct. App. 1982). Quoting from the Alaska Senate Journal Supp. No. 47 at 142 (June 12, 1978), the Appeals Court stated:

> The test for recklessness is a subjective one-the defendant must actually be aware of the risk. On the other hand, if criminal negligence is the applicable culpable mental state, the defendent will be criminally liable if he "fails to perceive a substantial and unjustifiable risk that the circumstance exists." The test for criminal negligence is an objective one-the defendent's culpability stems from his failure to perceive the risk. Id. (My emphasis)

As a higher standard of culpability, "knowingly," like its lower case counterpart "recklessly," requires the defendant to be subjectively aware the conduct is wrong, and it is a complete defense to a "knowing" violation if the defendant actually believes the conduct is permissable. AS 11.81.610(c). It is more than "reckless" or "criminally negligent" conduct, and, indeed, far exceeds the requirement in civil cases that liability be founded upon ordinary negligence (e.g., both require a gross deviation from the standard of conduct that a reasonable person would observe in the situation.)

As shown in the foregoing, a "knowing" acceptance of an excessive contribution is a relatively serious culpable mental state. It requires the candidate to have subjective knowledge of all constituent elements of the offense. This case, at a minimum, requires the candidate to be aware of the campaign's receipt of a payment in excess of $1,000 which has as its purpose the intent to influence the outcome of an election. This element is relatively simple because the definitions of "candidate," "contribution" and the limit are clearly set forth in the statute, and staff assumes there could be no real dispute Mr. Flood was subjectively aware of these elements at the time the money was accepted by the campaign.

A notice of hearing must also allege the status of the contributor as a political group, and that the candidate was subjectively aware of the group's status at the time. This in turn requires the candidate to know that joint action existed when a broker loans funds to an agent for political contributions. Even if there is sufficient proof Mr. Flood was aware of the nature and consequences of the lender-borrower relation between the broker and agent, it is not clear under present regulations that a candidate would know that acceptance of a contribution in excess of $1,000 in the aggregate from such persons or groups is prohibited, at least by a specific APOC regulation that can withstand a narrow scrutiny in a criminal proceeding.* Therefore, the staff recommends no further criminal action.

The last matter for the Commission to consider is whether a Letter of Admonishment should issue to Mr. Flood for accepting this series of checks from Alaska Star.

In the Quadrant matter, the staff recommended admonishment against a candidate who failed to investigate or make any inquiry whatsoever of a single check in excess of $1,000. It is the staff view maximum contributions are the most important under the act, and a candidate has the affirmative obligation to comply with the minimal bookkeeping functions or obtain written assurances that irregular contributions are proper.

In the Flood/Alaska Star matter, the candidate received a series of checks from a single source, ostensibly from separate vested commission accounts, none of which exceed the $1,000 limit.

In this situation, the staff would recommend Admonishment if the contributions were questionable on their face and the candidiate failed to make inquiry and receive written assurances from the contributor or the APOC staff that the contributions were proper. Eventhough there may be some evidence to support a conclusion the contributions are questionable on their face, the staff finds the candidate complied to a minimum with the duty to investigate, inquire, and inform the APOC staff. In short, Mr. Flood did everything the candidate's manual told him to do and the staff finds no basis for admonishment in this situation.

*Proposed 2 AAC 50.356 and 2 AAC 50.357 hopefully provide the specificity necessary for a criminal prosecution.

MEMORANDUM State of Alaska

TO: Commission Members

DATE: June 13, 1984

TELEPHONE NO:

FROM: Theda S. Pittman
Chris Johansen

SUBJECT: Expenditures Before Filing

On Tuesday, November 1, 1983, the Al Adams for State House campaign held a fundraiser at the home of Rita Gittens of Gittens Construction, Inc. The costs for the event were $2,567.43. The event grossed approximately $28,000.00 in contributions. Representative Adams filed his Declaration of Candidacy on November 1, 1983. The invitations for the event were paid for by Ice Block on October 18, 1983 in the amount of $53.00.

The campaign reported a paid expenditure on October 31, 1983 for travel costs in the amount of $391.00 and payment to Adams Management Service of Kotzebue in the amount of $217.25 for sausage. Gittens Construction, Inc. was paid on November 21, 1983 the amount of $1,819.18 for goods and services previously paid by the firm in connection with the November 1, 1983 fundraiser.

Beginning on October 28th and continuing until November 11, 1983, Rita Gittens, Carol Gallant and Gittens Construction, Inc. paid for or presumably incurred costs for fundraiser goods and services. Rita Gittens, Carol Gallant and Gittens Construction, Inc. each contributed $1,000.00 at the November 1, 1983 fundraiser. The Gittens group (Carol Gallant, Rita Gittens, and Gittens Construction) were reimbursed by the Adams campaign on November 21, 1983.

The above facts may disclose a number of violations of the Campaign Disclosure Law. Several potential violation were described in a letter to Representative Adams dated May 7, 1984. Pages 1-4. Represenative Adams' well thought out reply is dated May 28, 1984. Pages 5-11.

Based on the Adams' Year-end Report, voluntary disclosures to date, and Representative Adams' correspondence, staff finds that none of the potential violations of the Campaign Disclosure Law justify criminal referral to the Office of the Attorney General. However, staff finds that the Representative has made mistakes of law and not properly reported his 1983 campaign activities.

Excessive Non-monetary Contributions

The Campaign Disclosure Law defines a "contribution" to include

"... payment by a person other than a candidate or political party, or compensation of the personal services of another person which are rendered to the candidate or political party;" AS 15.13.130(2).

This statutory reference has been further interpeted by the Commission to provide that a business in which the candidate is involved (corporation or partnership) is a "person other than the candidate" and limited to paying campaign debts to the extent of $1,000.00 for each calendar year. Assumed Debts Policy Decision 15.13 - 84.2. Likewise, even the temporary assumption of a campaign debt by someone other than the candidate is counted as a contribution and subject to the $1,000.00 limit.

It is the position of staff that a non-monetary contribution is made when a person other than the candidate pays for and delivers the goods for the campaign's use, regardless of whether the candidate has made a promise to reimburse. AS 15.13.130(2). Staff considers the words "payment" to define when a contribution is made, with the last act necessary to complete the transaction being delivery of the goods for the candidate's use and benefit.

Representative Adams' position is that Gittens Construction, Rita Gittens, and Carol Gallant (hereinafter referred to as "Gittens group") paid for the fundraiser goods as a matter of convenience, and that he stood at all times ready to reimburse them for their costs. He argues that the payment by the Gittens group gave rise to an accrued expenditure for which payment was made within 30 days.

Staff notes the Commission considered a similar position at its August 26, 1981 meeting, wherein the Commission noted the practice of Gittens advancing unlimited campaign costs was irregular. However, the records of the Commission do not show whether the Commission considered the matter a contribution or an expenditure. It is the recent discussions of accrued expenditures, assumed debts, and loans which have clarified this type of situation

Based on the express terms of the contribution definition contained in the Campaign Disclosure Law, it is the position of the staff that a contribution in the amount of $1,819.18 was made at the time the Gittens group paid for the goods and delivered them to the Adams' campaign. Representative Adams' repayment for the costs originally borne by the Gittens groups is not a discharge of an accrued expenditure but a refund of a campaign contribution which, in this case, exceeded the $1,000.00 limit.

Although the mere fact the Gittens group is not in the retail business is not a controlling factor, staff notes Representative Adams' has consistently stated that the informal arrangement arises between "friends" who advance costs as a matter of convenience so that fundraisers can be run in urban centers. Staff can appreciate Representative Adams' logistical problem, especially in light of the financial realities of a rural campaign. However, staff interprets AS 15.13.130(2) broadly to include campaign receipts from whatever source derived and including goods donated to the campaign. Staff cannot, under these circumstances, interpet the Campaign Disclosure Law to allow friends and supporters to circumvent the $1,000.00 limit by donating non-monetary support to the candidate.

Staff considers the prompt repayment of the Gittens' group in this instance not to indicate an intent to circumvent the law, especially when the candidate voluntarily disclosed all details of the transaction. Further, Representative Adams seems to have formulated a sufficient legal argument, although erroneous, that negates an intent to violate the law. However, staff recommends the Commission remind the Gittens group of the requirement to file a "Statement of Contributions" within ten days for any further non-monetary contributions to the Adams campaign.

Pre-Filing Expenditures

AS 15.13.100 prohibits a prospective candidate from making expenditures prior to filing a Declaration of Candidacy unless they are made for personal travel, opinion polls or surveys. It further prohibits others acting on behalf of the candidate from paying or incurring pre-filing expenditures for the benefit of the prospective candidate. Representative Adams' 1983 Year-end Report shows he directly made two paid expenditures on October 31, 1983:

Alaska Airlines - payment for campaign worker air travel, $291.00

Adams Management Service - sausage for fundraiser, $217.25.

Both of the foregoing expenditures occurred prior to filing the Declaration of Candidacy and are impermissable under AS 15.13.100.

Gittens Construction, Inc. also made or incurred expenditures in the amount of $1,819.18 for the benefit of the Adams' fundraiser prior to November 1, 1983.

Representative Adams contends that he agreed to reimburse the Gittens' group prior to filing his Declaration of Candidacy and that no payment was actually made by the campaign until November 21, 1983.

Staff considers it somewhat conclusive that Mr. Adams agreed with the Gittens group prior to filing his Declaration of Candidacy that the Gittens group would pay for and incur expenditures for his campaign's benefit.

It is staff's position that the Gittens' group was Representative Adams agents and acting in all respects as if the Gittens' group were extensions of the future campaign of Representative Adams. AS 15.13.100 prohibits agents of the campaign as well as the candidate himself from incurring or making payment of unauthorized pre-filing expenditures.

Registered Treasurers

AS 15.13.060(a) prohibits persons from making campaign expenditures on a regular basis unless they have registered with the Commission. A general unstated purpose of AS 15.13.060(a) is to insure that those registered with the Commission have some understanding of the recording and reporting obligations under the Campaign Disclosure Law.

The staff is of the position that persons acting on behalf of the candidate or campaign are subject to the same pre-registration requirements as those directly involved in managing the candidate's campaign. Therefore, the staff is of the position that Representative Adams and the Gittens' group failed to register with the Commission prior to paying or incurring pre-filing expenditures.

Proper Identification of Fund-raiser Invitation

The fundraiser invitations were identified properly by Ice Block as evidenced by the copy provided by Representative Adams.

Unreported Monetary Contribution

Representative Adams indicated he received the Cominco-Alaska contribution after the first of the year and, hence, it was not reportable on his 1983 Year-end Report. Such delayed delivery is not uncommon, although staff believes that such contributions should be forwarded directly to the contributor rather than being delivered through an intermediary.

Conclusion

Staff finds that the payments for goods by the Gittens' group was an excessive non-monetary contribution until repayment was made by the Adams campaign. The advance payments were clearly intended to benefit the Adams campaign and are included within the contributions definition. Staff further finds that the Gittens group made excessive contributions to the campaign and that Representative Adams refunded the excessive portions. Further, staff finds that Representative Adams made pre-filing expenditures directly and through those acting on his behalf. Lastly, the Gittens group made and incurred pre-filing expenditures for the Adams campaign and should have been registered as treasurers or deputy treasurers.

Staff recommends the Commission not find probable cause to believe a violation of the Campaign Disclosure Law has occurred, but that the Commission direct staff to admonish Representative Adams against committing further violations.

The Honorable Mitch Abood
Chairman, Senate State Affairs
Alaska State Senate
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Abood and members of the Committee:

At its April 29-30 meeting, the members of the Alaska Public Offices Commission reviewed the April 23, 1985 issue paper written by the law firm of Gross & Burke provided by your office. Following is a summary of their reactions to the questions posed in the papers. I have referenced the questions by subject and individual number.

I apologize for the general lack of background information in the following summary. The Commission wanted to provide the Committee with a written response prior to tomorrow's meeting. Hence, I found it necessary to focus on their decisions without extensive background material.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO CANDIDATES & EXPENDITURES BY CANDIDATES

1. As a group, the Commission presently has mixed feelings about increasing the contribution limitation to $2,000. For the past three years the Commission recommended the increase without success. As individuals, the Commission members have mixed reactions. Some members still feel the increase is appropriate; others would just as soon see the proposal dropped.

2. The Commission continues to support strongly its recommendation that the threshold for disclosure of a contributor's identify be increased from "more than $100" to "more than $250."

3. The Commission disclosure of campaign expenditures continues to be a valid request for information from candidates and political groups. Both the public and campaign contributors have a legitimate interest in the use to which campaign funds are put. The purpose of a campaign expenditure is to "influence the outcome of an election." Donors have the right to information which will allow them to determine whether their funds are being used for the purpose intended.

From a practical standpoint, the reporting activity associated with expenditure schedules is probably the easiest requirement with which campaign treasurers have to cope. Absent the reporting requirement, any well managed campaign would, of necessity, maintain this information. The accurate recording of accrued expenditures and their payment is necessary to avoid unreported contribution activity.

4. It should be noted that it was about five years ago that the Commission discontinued an active effort to request the Supplier of Services reports specified in AS 15.13.040(f) and .110(d). Once the Commission stopped requesting the reports, suppliers stopped filing them. There are no records of a single public protest regarding the the absence of such reports.

It is true that the purpose of the requirement was to give the Commission a tool to monitor whether candidates complied with the spending limits. The U.S. Supreme Court decision striking down those limits obviated the need for the cross-check, except perhaps in individual instances where under-reporting was alleged. The Commission was never staffed at a level which would allow the cross-checks to occur. Since the statutory due date is 30 days after the election, the reports were of little practical use except to create an interesting statistical table.

Information about candidate time buys from radio and television stations is available by federal law in the public files of the broadcast stations. The Commission seldom encounters an investigatory situation which requires information from a supplier; when it does, subpoena power would be used if necessary to obtain the information.

If the requirement were repealed, the Commission may specify in its bookkeeping requirements that a campaign obtain and maintain an itemized listing of services and sub-suppliers when it made a payment to a supplier which included goods and services from other suppliers.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO PACS AND PARTIES AND EXPENDITURES BY PACS AND PARTIES

1. The Commission is aware of isolated instances where individuals have given significant contributions to PACS. The absence of any computerized recordkeeping has prevented any thorough analysis of these statistics by the Commission. However, the Commission shares the general dismay of campaigns and of the public at the ever-increasing costs of running for office. The Commission would support proposals which have a realistic hope of curbing those costs.

2. See number 1 above. The Commission is generally supportive of the need for a strong party system in American democracy. Many years ago when the proposal to exempt parties from the contribution limitation was first advanced, the Commission supported it in the belief that such an exemption would encourage strong political parties in Alaska. So long as parties do not abuse their exemption from the limitation by funneling money dedicated to particular candidates, the Commission will likely continue to support party exemption from the limitation.

3. See number 1 above.

4. The Commission believes circumvention of the contribution limit through "earmarking" is prohibited under the current provisions of AS 15.13. For example, if individual contributor X gives political party Y $500 with the agreement that the funds will go to candidate Z, then a violation of the §.070(d) ban on contributions in the name of another has occurred even though no excessive contribution has been made. If employee X tells employer Y to withold $2,000 from his or her pay and give it to candidate Z, then employee X has made a contribution exceeding the $1,000 limit -- assuming the employee specified a candidate by name and the employer exerted no direction or control over the selection.

5. The issue of "independent" expenditures will always be a difficult one and may never be subject to 100% successful enforcement. The Commission has long understood, based on Buckly v. Valeo, the concept that independent expenditures can not be limited. It has a regulation, 2 AAC 50.351, which works well for explaining the concept of "independence" to a layperson. However, public knowledge that independent expenditures are unlimited has not been widespread and the Commission has had no major case which challenged a Commission ruling on independence.

Statutory criteria for independent expenditures are desirable, but at present the Commission has no specific drafting suggestions. One area would could be explored concerns the individuals who make the expenditures and whether they have any relationship to a candidate's campaign committee. U.S. House and Senate committees have both held extensive hearings on the subject of independent expenditures and may be worth further research.

USE OF CAMPAIGN FUNDS, SURPLUS FUNDS, DEBT REPAYMENT.

1. The Commission recognizes that it would be difficult to define or monitor what expenditures were "legitimate campaign expenditures." Campaigns are creative endeavors and they frequently devise unusual methods of promoting their candidates or their causes. One candidate may need a haircut before a TV appearance; another may field an athletic team. In practice, there have been few examples of direct expenditures out of a campaign which were irrelevant to the campaign process. Sometimes successful candidates who leave their surplus in a campaign account between elections will spend funds periodically for office-related expenses. This causes potential problems with the ban against expenditures before filing, but does not appear to be a particularly offensive use of campaign funds.

2. The Commission feels strongly that it would be appropriate to ban candidates from taking surplus campaign funds as personal income exceeding their own personal contributions. This should be of particular concern from a public policy standpoint since public funds are the source of the Political Contribution Credits. The Commission feels that charitable contributions, holding funds for a future election, or making contributions to a political party should be considered legitimate means of disbursing a surplus. The State would also be an appropriate recipient.

3. The Commission believes it would be appropriate to require that campaigns terminate within a year of the election. The process should require the payment of all outstanding vendor debts and personal contributions. If that is financially impossible, Commission review would be required to determine how much can legally be converted to contributions through forgiveness and to assure that no inappropriate write-offs of debts occur. Candidates should be required to declare, at the time they make their own contributions, whether they intend repayment to themselves for personal contributions. No fund-raising to repay personal contributions should be allowed after the deadline.

The suggestion of one year is a compromise between various suggestions which have been made including prohibiting all fund-raising after the election or requiring termination in 60 days, 90 days, or by the end of the year of the election. The Commission is concerned that post-election fund-raising frustrates the purpose of disclosure before the election, but it feels that allowing no personal contribution recovery is disadvantagous to newcomers attempting to run.

CRIMINAL PENALTIES

The Commission suggests that revision of the criminal section of AS 15.13 could benefit from an anaylsis and comparison with the criminal code which was revised after the Campaign Disclosure Law was enacted. Whether the mental element required should be knowingly, recklessly, grossly neglectful, or willful is a Legislative concern but would be helpful to determine where campaign disclosure violations fit in the overall scheme of Alaska's criminal law.

The Commission would caution against an attempt to establish a complex system of categorizing various potential violations. Within broad public policy guidelines, effective enforcement should allow the Commission's referral process the power to make appropriate differentiations based on specific cases. One of the major reasons a citizen commission is appropriate for the administration of the Campaign Disclosure Law is the fact that those who are subject to the Law have a wide range of experience and acitivity level. A citizen commission is a cost effective way to provide a review process prior to referral to the Attorney General One of the most important functions a citizen commission can perform for the public is to screen out cases which would be an inappropriate use of the public's criminal justice facilities.

Two points of information about the current situation should be noted. Prior to 1980, the Commission operated under the belief that intent was not supposed to be part of its considerations when deciding whether a criminal violation had occurred. In 1980, when the Commission referred Bill Parker to the Attorney General's Office for failure to report contributions, the case was returned to them, with verbal instructions to investigate willfulness prior to making such referrals. The Commission continues to adhere to this advice in criminal referral matters.

The 1980 enactment of a one year statute of limitations in AS 15.56.130 should not be regarded as superceding the four year limit in AS 15.13.120(e). In point of fact, the Election Code had a one year statute in 1974 when the Legislature enacted AS 15.13 with its own separate four year limit. A truncated statute of limitations simply conveys the message that a violation which can be successfully concealed is no longer a violation. Since the terms of Governor, Lt. Governor, and State Senators are four years in duration, the four year statute of limitations is necessary and logical.

CIVIL PENALTIES AND PROCEDURES

1. At present, the statute establishes the maximum civil penalty for a reporting problem based on the per day rate. The other factors listed in the issue paper are items which the Commission takes into consideration in the process of mitigating an appeal. A rigid classification system by statute would be less capable of responding appropriately to the changing circumstances of the various violations.

2. From the Commission's perspective daily fines are working reasonably well and probably do not need statutory amendment unless there is a desire to increase the per day rate. Historically, the Commission took a lenient stance when the Law was new and not well publicized. In the fall of 1983 the Commission adopted a policy which provided for a less lenient approach. The success of that attitude was noticeable almost immediately for those who report under the Lobbying Law. Those who had to pay full fines quickly spread the word among others and late reports are now virtually unheard of among lobbyists or their employers. Unfortunately, political groups and candidates are numerous and not in contact with each other; they have not made the same amount of progress in timely reporting in the 18 months since the Commission adopted its sterner policy.

The Commission is presently working on a revised regulation for civil penalty assessments for Campaign Disclosure. Although the outlines are not complete, it appears there will be no more $1 per day fines and that the full statutory amount of $50 per day will apply to 7 Day Pre-election reports and 24 Hour Reports. The Commission has yet to discuss a staff proposal that would allow lower rates only for municipal campaigns in communities of 5,000 or less.

3. There is already a maximum limit on the total amount of daily fines set by the statute in that there is a per day maximum and a statute of limitations. The Commission would oppose a proposal to allow daily fines to accrue only from the date the Commission notifies someone. That would be an arbitrary because it would depend on the staff's limited resources.

4. The Commission would welcome civil penalties for violations such as the "paid for by," for excessive contributions, and for contributions in the name of another. An awareness of such provisions in other states suggests that $10,000 per violation would be appropriate.

5. In reality, neither the staff nor the Commission assesses the present civil penalty. It is set by the statute. The notice of assessment registration and reporting requirements; and banning the use of raffles to fund activity reportable under AS 15.13.

The Commission is hopeful that the Committee will find the forgoing remarks useful and looks forward to further efforts in improving the disclosure laws.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Mitch Abood, Chair
Senate State Affairs
1024 W. 6th Avenue
Anchorage, Alaska 99501

Dear Senator Abood & Members of the Committee:

The Commission is highly supportive of your efforts to undertake a comprehensive revision of AS 15.13, Alaska's Campaign Disclosure Law. This statute has had no substantive amendments in almost ten years despite the creative changes which campaigns have undergone and despite the enforcement difficulties experienced by the Commission.

The draft before you is a good beginning because it is a comprehensive effort to address most of the major problem areas. The members of the Alaska Public Offices Commission have discussed the draft and we wish to encourage you to continue your work.

We consider the most positive aspects of the draft to be in the sections which clarify the registration requirements of candidates, specify the use of campaign funds, the termination of accounts, the disposal of surplus funds, and the solicitation of contributions. We also think the sections on campaign financing misconduct are promising but need more work as do the definitions, the time limitations and the restrictions on Commission requests for a special prosecutor. In addition, there are two major areas of concern to the Commission not adequately addressed by the draft: registration and termination by groups; and the use of Games of Chance and Skill for campaign fund-raising.

It seems likely that most of the public feedback you receive will address the broad policy issues of contribution limits, allowable duration of campaigns, and candidate recovery of personal funds. The Commission is interested in those same public policy issues but we must additionally address your proposals with an eye toward their enforceability. The purposes of even the best draft can be defeated by administrative procedures that overburden a small staff and confuse the citizen who is trying to comply.

Based on comments that we have received individually, we believe that some aspects of the draft before you will elicit controversial testimony. As Commissioners we can emphathize with the difficulty you face in resolving strongly felt advice from diverse sources. We encourage you to persevere in both policy and procedural changes because this law is long overdue for constructive amendments. Although the Commission cannot recommend adoption of the draft in its present form, we hope to see a subsequent draft that we can endorse without reservation. To that end, our staff has been directed to offer your drafters all possible assistance.

With respect to the major changes proposed, the Commission offers the following observations:

1. Elimination of the $1,000 contribution limit for individuals or persons giving directly to candidates. At present there is no member of the Commission who can support this proposal as written. It is unlikely to do anything to cap the rising costs of campaigns. While it would make life easier for our staff, for campaigns, and for those selected contributors who are breaking the present law, we do not believe it would eradicate anonymous contributions, fictitious contributions or those made in the name of another. There will always be some contributors who do not wish the extent of their donations to be identified.

While it is true that 27 states do not limit the amount of campaign contributions to candidates, there are only 15 of those 27 which allow both individuals and entities to give. In the remaining 12 states, certain types of contributors, such as corporations, banks, unions, insurance companies, and other regulated industries, are prohibited entirely. If the draft is intended to promote disclosure of the real sources of campaign funds and to discourage the increased cost of campaigns, then we feel it must look to solutions other than allowing individuals and non-corporeal persons to give unlimited amounts.

Although the amounts may vary, there are 23 states which limit the amount of a contribution apparently in support of the policy that candidates should obtain their financial support from a wide base of contributors each making donations within an appropriate limit. In recent years the Commission has supported an increase in the existing $1,000 limit to $2,000. Several of us continue to feel that such would be desirable simply because of the effects of inflation on the value of an individual contribution, but we cannot support abolishing any limit whatsoever on contributions by such a broad range of contributors.

The continuation of a limit on the amount PACs can give to candidates and the new limit on the amount PACs can receive are useful provisions and should be retained in succeeding drafts.

2. Requiring candidates to terminate their campaigns. In our opinion, this proposal would do much to help curb increased costs. The inclusion of restrictions on surplus disposal should also be helpful. Our records over the years demonstrate that a losing candidate finds it very difficult to pay off a large deficit. Although people may be more willing to contribute to winners after the election, even winners find that post-election fund-raising is no fun. From our perspective, the best aspect of these new proposals for ending campaigns is that they clearly establish that the individual candidate is responsible for his or her campaign debts. If the candidate unwisely runs up a large deficit, this law will leave the candidate personally responsible - which to our mind is the only appropriate outcome.

3. Reporting Due Dates for Contributions and Expenditures. The proposal to raise the threshold for disclosure of contributor names from more than $100 to $250 has been supported by the Commission in the past. Our reason was almost exclusively based on a willingness to ease the treasurer's burden and because we believe the purpose of disclosure is to give the voters access to significant information about campaigns. (We do not believe contributor schedules are required for the purpose of assisting every grass roots lobbying organization that wants to build a mailing list.) Frankly, recent events have caused some of us to reconsider whether the increased threshold is appropriate.

In addition, those of us who would like to continue supporting the "$250 or more" proposal find it difficult to do so in the situation at hand, wherein no expenditure information is filed until after the election. In our judgment the current proposal goes far beyond what is necessary or practical in the way of easing the reporting burdens. It offers a reporting schedule more likely to confuse people than assist them. There are many experienced, conscientious campaign treasurers in the state. We think that when you talk to them about content and timing of reports you'll find confirmation that what appears to be simple on the surface may create some real problems in practice.

In closing, we would like to reiterate that the Commission encourages you to continue work on this legislation. We support proposals that will ease reporting burdens while preserving adequate disclosure. We also support concepts that will slow down the growth rate of campaign costs. And, finally, we ask for your help in obtaining administrative procedures that will help us enforce the Law effectively.

Thank you for this opportunity to comment and for the commitment you have made to improving this Law. We look forward to hearing the public testimony you receive and to assisting in your work on the final draft.

Sincerely,

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION

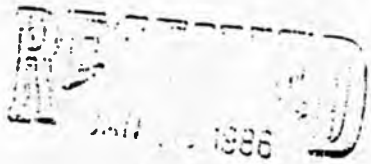
Administrative Regulations

AS 15.13 - Campaign Disclosure,

Complaints and Hearings, General Provisions

January 4, 1986



Document #4

In 1985, the Alaska Public Offices Commission added or amended seventeen administrative regulations, deleting seven. The new regulation on CONTRIBUTIONS, 2 AAC 50.313, replaces information previously found under NON-MONETARY CONTRIBUTIONS, TRANSPORTATION EXPENDITURES, PROFESSIONAL SERVICES, and LOANS. Language about GROUPS, 2 AAC 50.314, replaces REPORTING BY BUSINESS AND TRADE ASSOCIATIONS and REPORTING BY A BUSINESS ENTITY OR LABOR ORGANIZATION.

New concepts were introduced in three specific instances. DESIGNATED CAMPAIGN DEPOSITORY, 2 AAC 50.319, requires campaigns to label, identify, report, and limit activity to specific bank accounts, if their transactions exceed $5000. POST ELECTION CAMPAIGN FUNDRAISING, 2 AAC 50.410, establishes a requirement for commission review of post-election fundraising if campaign debts are not paid off in the calendar year after an election. ADVISORY OPINIONS, 2 AAC 50.905, establishes a procedure for opinion requests of proposed activity.

Several policy changes were made of varying impact. MUNICIPALITIES, 2 AAC 50.360, now permits municipal entities to report their ballot issue and bond information efforts on the same forms used by individuals. PERSONAL CONTRIBUTIONS BY A CANDIDATE, 2 AAC 50.316, in addition to clarifying the use of personal assets, funds from property sales, jointly owned goods by a candidate, now requires that candidates report their own non-monetary contributions, such as goods from a prior campaign. EARLY CAMPAIGNING, 2 AAC 50.380, now permits state candidates to begin campaigning once they have filed a "letter of intent" with the Commission (formerly, they had to first register with the Division of Elections). CONTRIBUTIONS IN THE NAME OF ANOTHER, 2 AAC 50.357, prohibits parent organizations from directing contributions through their subsidiaries, sub-chapters or local units; prohibits parents from contributing in the name of their children; and prohibits employers from contributing in the name of their employees. Prior to 1986 corporate parent-subsidiary contributions had been permitted if the relationship was disclosed when the contributions were reported.

Of special interest to campaigns which have had difficulty meeting filing deadlines is CIVIL PENALTY ASSESSMENTS 2 AAC 50.390: the minimum initial CPA has been raised to $10 per day for all reports, except the 7 Day Pre-election and the 24 Hour reports, where the minimum has been raised to $50 per day.

The remainer of the regulation changes were either limited in their impact or clarifications or formalization of prior policies. Please note the changes below: PROPER IDENTIFICATION, 2 AAC 50.369 - formalizes prior policy that envelopes do not have to be identified as "paid for by". OBJECTS TOO SMALL TO BE IDENTIFIED, 2 AAC 50.370, - formalizes that objects smaller than 3 x 1/2" x 3" need not be identified, and that all media advertising must be identified. AVAILABILITY OF REPORTS FILED WITH THE COMMISSION 2 AAC 50.910 - formalizes policy that reports filed with the Commission may be obtained at cost (usually 10¢ per page). COMPLAINTS, PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION, and HEARINGS, 2 AAC 50.450, .460 and .470 deal with procedures to be followed in the event that a complaint is filed, a preliminary investigation is made, and a hearing results.

2 AAC 50.310. FILING. (a) All reports that are required to be filed under the provisions of AS 15.13 and this chapter must be received by the commission on or before the due date. Except for the 24 Hour Report, "received" means either

(1) hand-carried to the commission's central office or its branch office in the state capital; or

(2) postmarked. The date shown by the postmark is presumed to be the date it was deposited in the United States mail.

(b) The 24 Hour Report required by AS 15.13. 110(b) must be filed with the commission's central office either by a collect telegram or by actual physical delivery within the prescribed time. 24 hour Reports may not be mailed.

(c) All forms will be available at the commission's central and branch offices, at district offices during state election years, and at the participating municipalities. (Eff. 5/14/80, Register 74)

Authority: AS 15.13.020(j) and (k); AS 15.13.030(10)
AS 15.13.110(a) and (b)

2 AAC 50.313. DEFINITION OF "CONTRIBUTION." (a) In 2 AAC 50.310 — 2 AAC 50.405, except as otherwise provided in this section, "contribution" includes a payment, gift, subscription, loan, advance, transfer, deposit of money, services, or anything of value made by a person or group for the purpose of influencing an election for state or municipal office or influencing the passage or defeat of a ballot proposition or question; and includes a personal contribution as described in 2 AAC 50.316.

(b) In this section and in 2 AAC 50.321, "loan" includes a guarantee, endorsement, and any other form of security. The following apply to loans:

(1) A loan that exceeds the contribution limitations of AS 15.13.070 is unlawful, whether or not it is repaid.

(2) A loan is a contribution at the time it is made.

(3) Except for a personal contribution loan as described in 2 AAC 50.316(d), a loan is a contribution by each endorser or guarantor. Each endorser or guarantor is considered to have contributed that portion of the total amount for which he or she agreed to be liable in a written agreement. If the agreemnt does not state the portion of the loan for which each endorser or guarantor is liable, the loan is considered a loan by each endorser or guarantor in the same proportion that each endorser or guarantor bears to the total number of endorsers or guarantors.

(c) In this section, "money" includes currency of the United States or of any foreign nation, checks, money orders, or any negotiable instruments payable on demand.

(d) In this section, "anything of value" includes facilities, equipment, polling information, supplies, advertising services, membership lists, mailing lists, any item of real or personal property, and personal services of any kind, the cost or consideration for which is paid by a person other than the candidate or group for whom the services are rendered.

(e) The provision of goods or services without charge, or at a charge which is less than the usual and normal charge for the goods and services in the market, is a contribution. If goods or services are provided at less than the usual or normal charge in the market, the amount of the nonmonetary contribution is the difference between the usual and normal charge for the goods or services at the time of the contribution and the amount charged.

(f) The entire amount paid to attend or participate in a fundraiser or other political event, and the entire amount paid as the purchase price for a fundraising item sold by a group or candidate, is a contribution.

(g) The payment by a person of compensation for the personal services of another person to a group or candidate for any purpose, except for legal and accounting services necessary to complete reports, is a contribution. No contribution results in the following circumstances:

(1) when an employee paid on an hourly or salaried basis engages in political activity during what would otherwise be a regular work period, if the time spent is made up by the employee within a reasonable period of time;

(2) when an employee paid on a commission or piecework basis, or an employee paid only for work actually performed whose time is considered the employee's own, engages in political activity during normal working hours;

(3) if time used by the employee during normal working hours to engage in political activity is bona fide vacation or other earned leave time.

(h) The extension of credit by a person to a candidate or political group for a length of time beyond normal business practice is a contribution, unless the creditor has made a commercially reasonable attempt to collect the debt, or pursued its remedies in a manner similar in intensity to that employed by the creditor in pursuit of a non-political debtor, including lawsuits if filed in similar circumstances.

(i) A debt owed by a political group or candidate, which is forgiven or settled for less than the amount owed is a contribution. The commission will, in its discretion, consider the following factors before directing staff to commence a preliminary investigation:

(1) whether, at the time the debt was incurred, both the creditor and the candidate or political group expected full repayment within a reasonable period of time;

(2) whether the campaign has made a good faith effort to repay all outstanding debts;

(3) whether the creditor has taken steps it normally takes against debtors in the same financial condition as the campaign;

(4) whether the proposed settlement agreement between the creditor and the campaign is similar to previous settlements made by the creditor and other debtors;

(5) whether the campaign has treated equally all creditors since it became aware of the difficulty in repaying all debts;

(6) whether the proposed settlement agreement is similar to others proposed by the campaign.

(j) An expenditure made by a person in cooperation, consultation, or in concert with, or at the request or suggestion of a candidate, the candidate's campaign committee, campaign agents, or campaign consultants is a contribution to the candidate. The financing by a person of the issuance, republication, or distribution of a broadcast or of a written, graphic, or other form of campaign material provided by the candidate, the candidate's campaign committee, campaign agents, or campaign consultants is a contribution to the candidate. This includes an expenditure:

(1) based on information about the candidate's plans, projects, or needs provided by the candidate or the candidate's campaign agents;

(2) made by or through a person who is, or has been, authorized to raise or expend money for the candidate, who is, or has been, an agent of a candidate's campaign, or who has received any form of compensation or reimbursement from the candidate, members of the candidate's campaign committee, campaign agents, or campaign consultants;

(3) made by any person or group based on data from a candidate's pollster or campaign consultant or any other person who has received, or is receiving, compensation or reimbursement from the campaign;

(4) made by a political group for soliciting contributions to be paid or delivered directly to a candidate or the candidate's campaign agents.

(k) In (j) of this section, "campaign agents" includes all officers, campaign managers, treasurers, deputy treasurers, campaign consultants, and persons who reasonably appear to have authority to make expenditures and solicit contributions for a candidate's campaign.

(l) In 2 AAC 50.310 — 2 AAC 50.405, "contribution" does not include the following payments, services, or other things of value:

(1) costs incurred in covering or carrying a news story by a broadcasting station, newspaper, or periodical of regular publication, unless the facility is owned by or controlled by a political party, political group, or candidate; in that case, the cost of the news story is a contribution, unless the news story is a bona fide news account that is part of a general pattern of campaign-related news accounts which gives reasonably equal coverage to all opposing candidates in the circulation or listening area.

(2) a non-monetary contribution or in-kind donation of a single item with a usual and normal cost of $50.00 or less.

(3) a payment made by any individual for his or her own travel expenses, if such payments are voluntary and are made without any understanding that they will be directly or indirectly repaid.

(4) a payment is made by a business, corporation, trade association, labor organization, or other organization not organized primarily to influence elections to communicate directly with its members or employees, or their families, on any subject, if the communication is of the same format and nature used by the organization when it has communicated in the past on nonpolitical subjects, does not request members or their families to do anything other than exercise the right to vote, and does not solicit individual contributions to a clearly identified candidate or group chosen by the organization.

(5) a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value made with respect to a recount of a state or municipal election.

(m) A contribution made by a married individual is not attributed to that individual's spouse, unless otherwise specified in writing by the spouse at the time the contribution is made. (Eff. 1/4/86, Register 97)

2 AAC 50.316. PERSONAL CONTRIBUTIONS BY A CANDIDATE. (2) a non-monetary contribution or in-kind donation of a single item with a usual and normal cost of $50.00 or less.

(3) a payment made by any individual for his or her own travel expenses, if such payments are voluntary and are made without any understanding that they will be directly or indirectly repaid.

(4) a payment is made by a business, corporation, trade association, labor organization, or other organization not organized primarily to influence elections to communicate directly with its members or employees, or their families, on any subject, if the communication is of the same format and nature used by the organization when it has communicated in the past on nonpolitical subjects, does not request members or their families to do anything other than exercise the right to vote, and does not solicit individual contributions to a clearly identified candidate or group chosen by the organization.

(5) a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value made with respect to a recount of a state or municipal election.

(1) The use, by one candidate, of the money, goods or services raised or generated by his campaign, to influence the election of another candidate, is considered a contribution and cannot exceed the $1000 limitation set by AS 15.13.070(a); nothing in AS 15.13 or this chapter, however, limits an individual's right to make any expenditure whatsoever to influence the election of a candidate, so long as that expenditure is not made at the suggestion of that candidate, directly or indirectly paid for by that candidate, or otherwise controlled by that candidate.

(2) An expenditure made by one group, other than a political party, on behalf of another group which is controlled by a candidate is considered a contribution and may not exceed the $1000 limitation set by AS 15.13.070(a).

(3) A candidate may not join his campaign committee with that of one or more candidates in order that they may file a single report of their joint campaign, nor may a group join with one or more groups in order that they may file a single report of their joint efforts.

(4) Candidates or groups prohibited from forming a joint campaign under (3) of this section may share in campaign efforts, under (5) of this section, so long as they keep separate campaign accounts and file separate statements of their contributions and expenditures under AS 15.13 and 2 AAC 50.

(5) Two or more candidates, or two or more groups, may share in campaign efforts so long as the cost of, and receipts from, shared efforts are allocated equally to each participating candidate or group's campaign.

(6) So long as the costs of, and receipts from, shared efforts are allocated equally to each participant of a shared campaign, neither the costs or receipts are considered as a contribution from one participant to any of the other participants.

(7) Each candidate or group filing reports pursuant to AS 15.13 and 2 AAC 50 must complete an APOC Form 15-3A, the "Shared Campaign Activities" form, which represents his or its proportionate share of the receipts and expenditures of a shared campaign effort.

(8) A proportionate share of the amount of an expenditure benefiting one or more candidates, or one or more groups, of a shared campaign effort, but paid for in full by one of the candidates, or by one of the groups, will be considered a contribution by

(B) the paying group to the other groups.

(9) Media communications regarding a shared campaign activity are considered properly identified so long as the identification includes the words "paid for by" and the name of each candidate or group sharing in the cost of the communications. (B) except as described in (f) of this section, the cash amount received from any one person does not exceed $50;

(2) fund-raisers, such as a raffle, lottery or a drawing, where

(A) 25 or more tickets are sold; and

(B) except as described in (f) of this section, the price of a ticket or the amount received from any one person purchasing chances does not exceed $50;

(3) fund-raisers, the income from which is based on the sale of campaign material, where, except as described in (g)

(A) the price of an item being sold does not exceed $10; or

(B) the amount received from any one person purchasing items does not exceed $50;

(4) fund-raisers, such as garage sales and auctions, where, except as described in (g)

(A) the fair market value of an item donated for sale or auction does not exceed $50; or

(B) the amount received from any one person purchasing items at the garage sale or auction does not exceed $50.

(e) When reporting receipts from a fund-raiser which meets the recording exemption set out in (d) of this section, the candidate or his treasurer, or the treasurer of a group, need only report the total amount of contributions received from or generated by the fundraiser, along with the total number of paying participants, tickets sold, or items purchased, as applicable.

(f) If a person contributes in excess of the exempted amounts stated in (d)(1)(B) or (d)(2)(B) of this section, then the name of that person, and the amount and type of that contribution, must be recorded as set out in 2 AAC 50.320.

(b) A draft group

(1) may make expenditures in order to raise, through contributions to the group, the money necessary to

(A) defray its own administrative costs; and

(B) attempt to draft persons to become candidates, including the expenditure of money to

(i) extoll the qualities of persons the group is attempting to draft; and

(ii) inform the general public both of the group's position on issues, as well as the qualities of leadership it seeks in potential candidates; and

(2) may not

(A) engage in any political activity other than an activity described in (b)(1) and (c) of this section;

(B) accept contributions in excess of $1000 from any person or group;

(C) except for personal travel expenses, opinion surveys, or polls, make any expenditure that might benefit a person who the group has successfully drafted for office and who has made it known that he or she will be seeking election to public office; however, the group may continue in its attempts to draft other persons for elective office; and

(D) except as provided in (c) of this section, make contributions to, contribute previously produced material to, or expend funds or behalf of, any person who has declared that he or she is seeking office or who has filed a declaration of candidacy or nominating petition or become a candidate by any other means.

(c) A draft group that expends more than 50 percent of its funds in an effort to draft one individual or, in the case of gubernatorial and lieutenant gubernatorial candidates, a team of individuals, to campaign for public office is, for the purposes of AS 15.13.130(3) and this chapter, considered a controlled group. If the person or team subject to the draft formally declares for public office, then the amount contributed to the draft group must be added to any contributions made the same year to the drafted candidate's or team's own campaign committee, in order to determine whether a contributor has made the maximum allowable contribution as outlined in AS 15.13.070(a). As a controlled group, the draft group may contribute the maximum allowed by law to the candidate or team of candidates. (Eff. 7/22/78, Register 67; am 5/14/80, Register 74; am 6/29/84, Register 90)

2 AAC 50.369. PROPER IDENTIFICATION OF POLITICAL COMMUNICATIONS. (a) Except as provided in (d) of this section, "proper identification" of a communication intended to influence the election of a candidate or the outcome of a ballot issue means that the communication is clearly identified with the words "paid for by," followed by the name and full address of the candidate, group, or individual actually paying for the advertising. The name of the campaign chairman must also be identified. If the candidate and the chairman are the same person, the name need not be repeated.

(b) Standard English abbreviations may be used in the written identification.

(c) "Clearly identified," as used in AS 15.13.090, means that

(1) in all printed communications, the proper identification must be visible, separate from the text of the advertisement itself, and large enough to be read by a person with average vision without the aid of corrective lenses;

(2) in all audio-visual communications, the proper identification must either

(A) be visual, and of sufficient size and duration to be read in full by the viewer; or

(B) be spoken, and played at the same audio level as the text of the communication itself; or

(C) be both visual and spoken, in accordance with (A) and (B) of this paragraph;

(3) in all audio communications, the proper identification must be spoken at the same audio level as the text of the communication itself.

(d) If the commission determines, under 2 AAC 50.351(d), that an expenditure report will not be made public, the political communication intended to influence the outcome of a ballot proposition or question is properly identified if, in place of the "paid for by" phrase, the communication includes, in the manner required by (c) of this section, the commission waiver identification number assigned by the Commission to that communication.

(e) In this section and in AS 15.13.090, "communications" include all material related to campaign fund-raisers, campaign letterhead, thank you notes, and press releases but does not include envelopes paid for by the campaign which are used solely to convey the campaign's properly identified communications. Objects considered too small for full identification include pencils, pens, buttons, and other objects that are smaller than 3 1/2" x 5" in size. (b) A communication by an incumbent municipal elected officer who is also a declared candidate for elective office, with his constituency via a newsletter or other printed matter, or a paid radio or television spot, does not constitute a reportable campaign expense unless it specifically and expressly advocates the election or defeat of a candidate (including himself), or the passage or defeat of a ballot issue.

(b) The report continues to be delinquent and subject to a civil penalty until received.

(c) Commission staff will send notice to each candidate or group of his or its delinquency under AS 15.13.110(a) within five working days after the due date of the report.

(d) Upon receipt of a delinquent campaign disclosure report of contributions received by a candidate or a group, commission staff will

(1) calculate the initial civil penalty, for each day of delinquency, as follows:

(A) $10 a day for each 30 day report or 10 day report;

(B) $10 a day for each year-end report received after January 16;

(C) $50 a day for each 7 day report; and

(D) $50 a day up to a maximum of $300 for each 24 hour report;

(B) an affidavit appeal form.

(e) A candidate or group subject to a civil penalty assessment may

(1) submit, within 30 days after receipt of the assessment notice described in (d)(2) of this section, an affidavit stating reasons for the late filing to show why a civil penalty should not be assessed; an affidavit

(A) is a statement in writing made under oath and upon penalty of perjury; and

(B) must be sworn to before a notary public, municipal clerk, court clerk, postmaster, or any other person authorized to administer oaths or, if none of the preceeding alternatives is available, may be signed by the official without benefit of the oath so long as the official states, in writing, that the affidavit is signed under penalty of perjury; or

(2) pay, within 30 days after receipt of the assessment notice described in (d)(2) of this section, the civil penalty assessed.

(f) If a candidate or group subject to a civil penalty assessment for the late filing of a campaign disclosure report refuses, or fails, within the time required, to submit an affidavit or make payment, then commission staff will refer the matter to the attorney general for appropriate action. The commission will not hear an appeal if an affidavit is not filed within the time required.

(g) An affidavit timely filed with the commission will be considered at the next regular meeting of the commission. If a candidate or group's appeal is

(1) denied by the commission, commission staff will notify the candidate or group of its decision within 15 days, and require that the civil penalty originally assessed be paid within 30 days after the date of the letter containing notification of the commission's decision; or

(2) accepted by the commission, commission staff will notify the candidate or group of its decision within 15 days, informing him or it that the civil penalty assessment has been waived and that the matter is considered closed; or

(3) accepted, in part, by the commission, commission staff will notify the candidate or group of its decision within 15 days, and require that the reduced civil penalty assessment be paid within 30 days after the date of the letter containing notification of the commission's decision.

(h) A candidate or group may appeal the commission's decision to deny or partially accept reasons for lateness to the superior court within 30 days after his receipt of the notice under Rule 45 of the Appellate Rules of the Alaska Court System. If no appeal is made within 30 days and no payment is made, the matter will be referred to the attorney general for appropriate action.

(i) If, upon review of a report required by AS 15.13.110(a), (b), or (e), the commission's staff finds substantial or continuous noncompliance with AS 15.13 or any provision of this chapter, or with requests by staff for information required to be reported under this chapter, the matter must be brought to the commission for review. The commission will, in its discretion, reduce or waive any initial civil penalty, uphold any initial civil penalty, increase the amount of any initial civil penalty to an amount not exceeding the maximum amount established in AS 15.13.125, or instruct its staff to begin preliminary investigation into the matter. (f) A party has the right to present evidence and be represented by an attorney. Entities may be represented by an official within the entity, an authorized agent, counsel, or a combination of these.

(g) The rules of evidence are the same as in AS 44.62.460. In addition

(1) documentary evidence may be presented in the form of copies if the original is not readily available; upon request, the parties will be given the opportunity to compare the copy to the original;

(2) in the discretion of the hearing officer, nonparties may present a sworn statement; if such a statement is presented, all parties will be given an opportunity to challenge, cross-examine, or rebut;

(3) depositions or affidavits may be presented if a witness in unable to testify at a hearing.

(h) Repealed 1/4/86.

(k) At the discretion of the hearing officer, all or part of the hearing may be conducted by telephone, audio or video teleconferencing, or other electronic means, provided the parties have an opportunity to participate in the hearing while it is taking place.

(l) The hearing will be recorded by tape recording or stenographic notes at the commission's expense. The recording will be maintained with the public file of the proceedings. The commission will not prepare a transcript unless such a requirement is imposed by law. If a transcript is prepared by the commission, the respondent may have access to it for the purpose of duplication.

(m) A hearing will be open to the public except when the respondent requests a closed hearing and the hearing officer finds that it should be closed under AS 44.62.310. If the hearing is open but is conducted by telephone, audio or video teleconferencing, or other electronic means, the public notice will designate at least one public access place.

(n) Repealed 1/4/86.

(o) Repealed 1/4/86.

(p) Repealed 1/4/86.

(q) If the commission decides to forward a case to the attorney general's office for prosecution, the staff shall prepare and send to the attorney general's office a record comprised of

(1) a copy of the commission's hearing decision, including its findings of fact and conclusions of law;

(2) a verbatim transcript of the proceedings before the commission; and

(3) copies of all documentary evidence, memoranda, exhibits, correspondence, and other tangible evidence contained in the public file of the proceeding.

(r) The commission will, in its discretion, reconsider its decision in accordance with AS 44.62.540. A request for reconsideration must be filed within 10 days after the vote under (o) of this section has been taken, and must state specific grounds upon which reconsideration is requested. A decision will be reconsidered only if

(1) there was a substantial procedural error in the original proceeding;

(2) the commission acted without jurisdiction in the original proceeding;

(3) the original vote was based on fraud, misrepresentation, material mistake of fact or law; or

(4) new evidence has come to light.

(s) Contempt before the commission will be handled under AS 44.62.590.

(t) A commission member is disqualified from participation in a hearing if the member has a substantial financial relationship with the complainant or with the alleged violator. A commission member is disqualified from participation in a hearing if the member feels, and states on the public record, that he or she is unable to consider the complaint in an unbiased manner and reach a fair and impartial decision.

(u) A commission member has a conflict of interest if the member, a person in the member's immediate family, the member's employer, business, or business associate has a financial relationship with the complainant or the alleged violator or with an immediate family member, business, or business associate of the complainant or alleged violator. The commission member shall state publicly the nature of the conflict and a majority of the remaining members present may authorize the member to participate. Other relationships with the principals of the hearing, which may cause an appearance of impropriety or conflict, must be publicly disclosed by a member, and the member's participation is subject to approval by the majority of the remaining members present. In conflict cases, approval to participate will depend upon whether

(1) the financial relationship or interest is relatively insignificant; and

(2) the interest held by the member or the member's family, business, or business associate is similar to that possessed by a large class of persons; or

(3) the nonfinancial relationship is such that a reasonable person would believe the member capable of fair and impartial judgment. (Eff. 6/29/84, Register 90; am 1/4/86, Register 97)

2 AAC 50.905. ADVISORY OPINIONS. (a) A person or group may request an advisory opinion concerning AS 15.13, AS 39.50, AS 24.45, or this chapter.

(b) Each advisory opinion request must describe a specific transaction or activity that the requesting person or group is presently engaged in, or intends to undertake in the future. Advisory opinion requests must include a complete description of all relevant facts. Requests posing a hypothetical situation, or regarding the activities of third parties, will not be considered by the commission staff.

(c) The commission staff shall review all requests for advisory opinions submitted under this section. If the staff determines a request is incomplete or does not qualify for consideration under (a) and (b) of this section, it shall notify the requesting person or group and specify the deficiencies in the request.

(d) Advisory opinion requests and advisory opinions are public records.

(e) The commission staff shall issue a proposed advisory opinion approving or disapproving of the activity, and may make other recommendations to the commission.

(f) The commission will review the proposed advisory opinion and will, in its discretion, review written or oral comments by any person, or any other relevant evidence. The commission will approve, disapprove, or modify the proposed advisory opinion. The commission will approve an advisory opinion by the affirmative vote of at least four members, or else the advisory opinion will be considered disapproved.

(g) An advisory opinion rendered by the Commission may be relied upon to the extent that commission staff may not commence a preliminary investigation under 2 AAC 50.390(i), 2 AAC 50.460, or 2 AAC 50.507(i) of

(1) any person involved in the specific transaction or activity with respect to which an advisory opinion approving of the activity was rendered.

(2) any person involved in any specific transaction or activity which is indistinguishable in all its material aspects from the transaction or activity with respect to which an advisory opinion was rendered.

(h) The commission will, in its discretion, reconsider an advisory opinion at any time upon the motion of a commissioner who voted with the majority that originally approved the opinion, and if the commission adopts the motion to reconsider by the affirmative vote of at least four members. Adoption of a motion to reconsider vacates the advisory opinion to which it relates. Actions taken in good faith reliance by the requesting party before they receive written notice of reconsideration may not be the subject of a preliminary investigation under 2 AAC 50.390(i), 2 AAC 50.460, or 2 AAC 50.507(i). Senator Mitch Abood
CHAIRMAN

Senate Committee on State Affairs

MEMORANDUM

TO: Members of the Committee on State Affairs

FROM: Senator Mitch Abood, Chairman

DATE: February 3, 1986

SUBJECT: APOC Regulations

This committee and its counsel, Mr. Gross & Ms. Burke, have been working on a comprehensive revision of the campaign financing laws since February of 1985. I might also add, that the APOC, Ms. Pittman and the Department of Law had been with us every step of the way.

In August 1985, we discovered that the APOC intended to make highly questionable deletions and changes to their regulations. Mr. Gross and I asked the APOC to postpone their new regs so that we would not be working at cross purposes with one another. The APOC refused our request.

On November 20, 1985, the Public Offices Commission held a meeting in Anchorage. I obtained a copy of the Commission's agenda, and the information packet put together by the Commission staff. Among the materials was a memorandum to Ms. Pittman from Mr. Monkman, from the Department of Law attached to a copy of the edited APOC regulations. "Edited" is probably the wrong word to use to describe these regs -- "ripped apart" is perhaps closer to truth.

The regulations were pitifully drafted; confusing and illogical. Most of the regulations had no statutory reason to exist. They were written by Mr. Johanson, an employee of the APOC, as a tool for selective enforcement involving two investigations which were ongoing at the time. One of these has since been terminated by a hearing officer.

On November 25th, I wrote the APOC on behalf of the committee, notifying them of the committee's intent to exercise its authority by law as their standing committee. The law is clear -- it tells an agency to cease and desist in revising and repealing regulations until the standing committee has reviewed them to determine whether the regulations properly implemented legislative intent.

The APOC never responded to our letter. They simply ignored it.

On January 14th, I received a copy of the new APOC regulations from the Office of the Lt. Governor. They had become effective on January 4th.

It is ironic that a commission which preaches full public disclosure pushes through their regulations without legislative oversight. It is ironic that this commission which selectively subjects certain individuals to 'trial by press' rather than an examination of the facts, will not hesistate to give a litany of excuses for why they fail to obey their own laws.

The employees of the commission find the time to write and distribute press releases on such substantive issues as turning over the name of an individual to the Attorney General for prosecution for failure to pay a $3.00 fine. However, they refuse to provide the Legislature with an annual report of their own activities as required by statute, and routinely neglect to notify complainants and respondents of commission hearings involving them, as required by their own regulations.

The Alaska Public Offices Commission was created to provide public disclosure and to assist candidates and private citizens in participating in the election process. They were not intended to become a political parole board.

In the campaign disclosure law, a candidate is held responsible for the actions of his or her campaign. The Public Offices Commission should be held equally responsible for the actions of its employees.

SUBJECT: SB 356

By: Richard D. Monkman
Assistant Attorney General

You have requested that this office review SB 356, "An Act relating to election campaign financing." This bill is presently before the Senate State Affairs Committee. It is our understanding that a substitute for this bill may be prepared by the House State Affairs Committee, using SB 356 as a starting point.

There are several serious problems, and many minor areas of concern, with SB 356 in its present form. The bill is cleverly worded, with very complex interactions between different sections. As a result, many significant changes to present law are not readily apparent to the casual reader. We are still reviewing the bill and comparing it with present law. The following is, however, the most important of the issues we have identified from the Department of Law's perspective.

Enforcement and Penalties. SB 356 increases the penalties for violation of the disclosure laws. It also significantly decreases the probability that enforcement action will actually take place.

First, all violations which involve "knowing" or "intentional" violation of the disclosure laws are misdemeanors or felonies under SB 356. [AS 15.14.230; AS 15.14.240]. Once the Commission determines that "probable cause to believe a felony or misdemeanor had been committed" it must "promptly refer the matter ... to the attorney general." [AS 15.14.290(c)]. The Commission "may not take further action concerning the matter." [Id.].

As the Commission is well aware, the district attorney offices are swamped with criminal cases involving injury to persons and property. Disclosure cases are highly charged politically and involve relatively small amounts of money. Presently, disclosure cases are very low on any district attorney's list of priorities. There is no reason to believe will require an additional full-time DA, a paralegal, and additional clerical help. 3/

More important from the public perspective will be the delay involved. A public figure charged with a crime will vigorously defend the case, using every means at hand to delay, postpone or defeat the charges. There will be charges of political motives behind every prosecution -- instead of defending against the staff of a bi-partisan, independent Commission, the candidates will be prosecuted by a District attorney responsible to the attorney general, who is appointed by the governor. Cries of connivance and persecution will obscure the issues; the intricacies of the criminal trial process will delay resolution of cases significantly.

In sum, SB 356 drastically limits the Commission's jurisdiction to investigate and administratively prosecute violations of the Campaign Disclosure Act. The administrative process of adjudicating complaints of campaign disclosure violations is swift and relatively inexpensive, and fully protects the rights of those involved to due process of law. In place of this process, SB 356 requires that all intentional violations of the disclosure laws be prosecuted by the Department of Law. This will result in fewer actions to enforce the law, greater delay in those cases filed, and an increasing politicization of the entire process. The end result is to significantly decrease the probability that violations of the disclosure law will be punished.

MEMORANDUM February 3, 1986

SUBJECT: APOC regulations
(Work Order 14-1709)

TO: Senator Mitch Abood, Chair
Senate State Affairs Committee

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook TBC
Director
Division of Legal Services

You have supplied me with material related to the adoption, repeal, and amendment of certain regulations of the Alaska Public Offices Commission effective January 4, 1986. It is my understanding that Senator Abood notified APOC on November 25, 1985 that the State Affairs Committee intended to review the proposed regulations. It is also my understanding that APOC did not respond to this letter or supply the committee with copies of the proposed regulations as they went through their various drafts. You have asked whether adoption of these regulations under these circumstances violates the law.

APOC is established in the Department of Administration under AS 15.13.020. Under Uniform Rule 20 of the Alaska State Legislature the State Affairs Committee has jurisdiction over the programs and activities of the Department of Administration. APOC is required to comply with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) for purposes of adopting regulations. (AS 15.13.030(10)) Under AS 44.62.190(a)(7) at least 30 days before adoption, amendment, or repeal of a regulation, notice of the proposed action is to be > furnished to the standing committee of each house of the legislature having legislative jurisdiction over the subject matter treated by the regulation under the Uniform Rules of the Alaska State Legislature, together with a copy of the proposed regulation, amendment or order or repeal for the committee's use in conducting the review authorized by AS 24.05.182. . .

Under the facts as I understand them to be notice required under AS 44.62.190(a)(7) was not furnished to the Senate State Affairs Committee. Arguably, notice of the proposed action should have been provided to Senator Abood under AS 44.62.190(a)(2) and (a)(6) as well. It is my conclusion that APOC did not comply with the notice requirements of AS 44.62.190 when it adopted amended, and repealed certain regulations effective January 4, 1986.

It should be noted that failure to comply with AS 44.62.190(a) does not invalidate the regulatory actions taken by an agency. Subsection (c) specifically provides

> The failure to mail notice to a person as provided in this section does not invalidate an action taken by an agency under AS 44.62.180 - 44.62.290.

The Honorable Mitch Abood
Senate State Affairs

Dear Senator Abood:

On Friday afternoon, Tammy conveyed to me your request for an itemized list of sections in SB 356 with which the Commission is concerned. In my telephone poll of Commission members last week, the questions raised by Mr. Monkman were a major concern. The Commissioners felt it was impractical to adopt provisions for felony and misdemeanor prosecutions without in turn providing resources for their enforcement.

Since SB 356 was the first time a contribution limitation was included in the Committee's proposals, I specifically asked the Commissioners their feelings about "$2,000" and naming of contributors of "$250 or more." There is no longer the support for these changes which existed prior to the 1982 and 1984 elections. Even members who would not personally object, believe that the rising costs of campaigns and increased public concern make passage of an increased limit inadvisable.

The proposal to change the threshold for naming contributors from "more than $100" to "$250 or less" has some support among the Commission members as deserving of more discussion. Others think it should be discarded. My sense is that a Commission position on that issue would depend on the other provisions in a bill under consideration.

Additionally, Commission members individually indicated they were opposed to the provisions which undermine the disclosure of those soliciting and collecting money, which require only pre-election expenditure reporting, and which require 24 Hour Reports only at the $500 level.

While I expect the Commssion's detailed review of SB 356 will add to the foregoing, most items have been raised earlier, either with the Committee at its October meeting or with Mr. Gross and Ms. Burke.

Sincerely,

ALASKA PUBLIC OFFICES COMMISSION

SUBJECT: Political tax credit payments to minors

You have requested our opinion on whether the Department of Revenue may deny claims for individual political contribution credits made by parents "on behalf" of minors as young as six months old. The answer is yes.

The individual tax credit may be claimed only for contributions to campaigns for elective office in Alaska (state or federal), for contributions to groups seeking to influence the outcome of a ballot proposition in Alaska, and for contributions to groups organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections in Alaska. AS 43.20.013. Any contribution in these three categories would necessarily fall under the Campaign Disclosure Act, AS 15.13.010.

The disclosure statutes prohibit contributions made anonymously or in the name of another person. AS 15.13.-120(a)(4). Violation is a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment for up to a year and a fine of up to $5,000. Id. Additionally, a campaign or group which accepted contributions made on behalf of another person is subject to civil fines. AS 15.13.125. The Alaska Public Offices Commission has, by regulation, provided:

> If a minor makes a contribution of money or anything of value given to the minor by a parent for that purpose, the parent has made a contribution in the name of another.

2 AAC 50.357(d).

A contribution made by a parent "on behalf" of a minor is presumptively in violation of the Campaign Disclosure Act, and would be an illegal contribution. The Department of Revenue may not grant claims for tax credits based on illegal contributions, and thus these claims should be denied. */

* NOTE - effective date of new regulations WAS 1-4-86

The Audit Division's practice of responding to questions about contribution by minors by stating that (1) the minor must use "their own money," and (2) the minor must make the decision to contribute, uses the appropriate analysis. In determining whether contributions are made with the minor's "own money," the department might look to indicia such as the name on the checking account, the name on the receipt for the contribution, or whether the contribution was made with PFD money claimed by the parent.

The question of whether the minor made the decision to contribute, rather than the parent, is likely to be more difficult. You have asked whether the department "[m]ay deny claims made by persons under the age of eighteen" as a blanket rule. While administratively this would be the easiest course of action, AS 43.23.013 states that "a resident individual is entitled to a tax credit" for contributions and does not provide an age limitation. Reading this statute in harmony with the Campaign Disclosure Act leads us to conclude that the department could certainly require claims made by unemancipated minors to be supported by affidavit or other documentation sufficient to prove that the decision to contribute was the minor's, and not the parent's. A blanket ban would probably go too far.

*/ In this regard, we note that parents of unemancipated minors must sign the minor's Permanent Fund Dividend application, and "may claim" the dividend "on behalf" of the minor. AS 43.23.005(c); AS 43.23(d). A contribution using the minor's PFD money and made at the discretion of the parent would violate the Campaign Disclosure Act.

BACKGROUND/LEGISLATIVE INTENT

This is the culmination of contractual work performed by Gross & Burke under a contract let by Senate State Affairs last spring. The stated purpose was a comprehensive revision of AS 15.13, the Campaign Disclosure Law. The contractor recommended repeal of any limit on contributions to a candidate from persons. That proposal was finally rejected officially by the Committee only recently.

ANALYSIS OF BILL/PROGRAM EFFECTS

See attached position paper.

Any proposal for such extensive changes represents substantial work for the Commission in familiarizing itself with the changes, interpreting the new requirements, amending regulations as necessary, and preparing information/instructional materials for those who must comply. The numerous problem areas in the bill would undermine the Commission's efforts at effective enforcement.

POSITION PAPER
SB 356

This legislation is a complete revision of the Campaign Disclosure Law, replacing AS 15.13 with a new chapter, AS 15.14. Major features include:

- increase to $2,000 the allowable contribution to a candidate;
- limit to $1,000 the allowable contribution to a political group other than a political party;
- limit to $25,000 per year the allowable contributions by a political group other than a political party;
- specify that expenditure reporting by candidates is not due until after the election;
- raise threshold for disclosing contributor names from "more than $100" to "$250 or more;"
- require identifying information only for contributors who are individuals;
- establish felony level violations;
- require termination of candidate campaigns; and
- specify allowable uses of a campaign surplus.

These changes would affect approximately 200 state candidates, 350 municipal candidates in 24 municipalities, over 250 political groups, and their major contributors. The quantity and quality of campaign disclosure information available to the public would also be affected.

The most positive aspects of the legislation are those which: clarify the registration requirements of canidates and groups; limit the activity of Political Action Committees; and those which specify the use of campaign funds, the termination of accounts, and the disposal of surplus funds.

Unfortunately, there are numerous provisions of the legislation which are flawed. Examples of problem areas include a higher burden of proof and of criminal intent than those used elsewhere in Alaska law, contradictory provisions concerning the solicitation and receipt of contributions, and restrictive time limitations on investigations. The Department does not support SB 356 because of the numerous provisions which would hamper effective enforcement.

BILL SHEFFIELD
GOVERNOR

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

January 29, 1986

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Alaska State Legislature
P. O. Box V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill relating to eligibility for service in the militia of the state. The bill amends AS 26.05.010(a) to remove from the statutes an age ceiling for eligibility in the Alaska State Militia. AS 26.05.010(a) currently states that "able-bodied citizens" between 17 and 59 years of age, with certain other qualifications, comprise the militia of the state.

The Alaska National Guard, the Alaska Naval Militia, and the Alaska State Militia (sometimes referred to as the Alaska State Guard) are all components of the organized "militia of the state." It is felt that many Alaskans beyond age 59 are capable of participation in the Alaska State Militia component of the militia. Rather than setting a special statutory age limit for that component, it is more appropriate to remove the 59-year age limit from the statute, and authorize the adjutant general to adopt regulations setting the appropriate maximum age for eligibility for the Alaska State Militia. The statutory age limits for the other components of the militia remain, although in slightly different form.

Section 2 of the bill merely amends AS 26.23.230(7) to assure consistency among the provisions, in two different AS chapters, pertaining to the unorganized militia.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

The current requirements of liability insurance for motor carriers have made it very difficult and costly for many commercial vehicle owners to obtain insurance coverage. Insurance agents have reported the current limits do not conform to industry standard costs. Most insurance companies offer what is called Combined Single Limit coverage which combines both bodily injury and property damage under a single limit. Many agents cannot offer the existing required coverage of $700,000.

A Combined Single Limit of $500,00 coverage would probably be the minimum requirement sought by the Department through regulation.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - SECOND SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to the ethical conduct of governmental activities; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 39 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

CHAPTER 52. ALASKA EXECUTIVE BRANCH ETHICS ACT.

ARTICLE 1. DECLARATIONS.

Sec. 39.52.010. DECLARATION OF POLICY. (a) It is declared (1) that high moral and ethical standards among public officers in the executive branch are essential to the conduct of free government; and (2) that the legislature believes that a code of ethics for the guidance of public officers will discourage those officers from acting upon personal or financial interests in the performance of their public responsibilities, will improve standards of public service, and will promote and strengthen the faith and confidence of the people of this state in their public officers. It is further declared that holding public office or employment is a public trust and that as one safeguard of that trust, the people require public officers to adhere to a code of ethics.

(b) The legislature recognizes that it may be necessary for public officers who may have potentially conflicting public responsibilities to serve on state boards and commissions. The legislature declares that it is the policy of the state that the holding of two or more such offices does not constitute the holding of incompatible offices, unless expressly prohibited by the Alaska Constitution, this chapter, or another statute.

S

ARTICLE 2. CODE OF ETHICS.

Sec. 39.52.110. SCOPE OF CODE. (a) The legislature reaffirms that each public officer holds office as a public trust, and any effort to benefit a personal or financial interest through official action is a violation of that trust. This chapter, however, does not prevent an officer from accepting other employment or following a pursuit that does not interfere with the full and faithful discharge of the officer's public duties and responsibilities. The legislature further recognizes that

(1) in a representative democracy, the representatives are drawn from society and, therefore, cannot and should not be without personal and financial interests in the decisions and policies of government;

(2) people who serve as public officers retain their rights to interests of a personal or financial nature; and

(3) standards of ethical conduct for members of the executive branch need to distinguish between those minor and inconsequential conflicts that are unavoidable in a free society, and those conflicts of interests that are substantial and material.

(b) Unethical conduct is prohibited, but there is no substantial impropriety if, as to a specific matter, a public officer's

(1) personal or financial interest in the matter is insignificant, or of a type that is possessed generally by the public or a large class of persons to which the public officer belongs, or

(2) action or influence would have insignificant or conjectural effect on the matter.

(c) The attorney general, designated supervisors, hearing officers, and the personnel board must be guided by this section when issuing opinions and reaching decisions.

Sec. 39.52.120. MISUSE OF OFFICIAL POSITION. (a) A public officer may not use, or attempt to use, an official position for personal gain, and may not intentionally secure or grant unwarranted benefits or treatment for any person.

(b) A public officer may not

(1) seek other employment or contracts through the use or attempted use of official position;

(2) accept, receive, or solicit compensation for the performance of official duties or responsibilities from a person other than the state;

(3) use state time, property, equipment, or other facilities to benefit personal or financial interests; or

(4) take or withhold official action in order to affect a matter in which the public officer has a personal or financial interest;

(5) engage in a close economic association with a subordinate;

(6) directly solicit a subordinate for the purpose of selling products or services; or

(7) attempt to benefit a personal or financial interest through coercion of a subordinate.

Sec. 39.52.130. IMPROPER GIFTS OR BENEFITS. (a) A public officer may not solicit, accept, or receive, directly or indirectly, a gift or benefit, whether in the form of money, service, loan, travel, entertainment, hospitality, employment, promise, or in any other form, under circumstances in which it could reasonably be inferred that the gift or benefit is intended to influence the performance of official duties, actions, or judgment. Nothing in this subsection precludes the acceptance of travel or hospitality given to a public officer to aid or assist in the performance of official duties if the officer's designated supervisor determines that acceptance does not interfere with the full and faithful discharge of the officer's public duties and responsibilities.

(b) Notice of the receipt by a public officer of a gift or benefit with a value in excess of $50, including the name of the giver and a description of the gift or benefit and its approximate value, must be provided to the designated supervisor within 30 days after the date of its receipt if the public officer may take or withhold official action that benefits the giver.

(c) In accordance with AS 39.52.240, a designated supervisor may request guidance from the attorney general concerning whether acceptance of a particular gift or benefit is prohibited.

(d) The restrictions relating to gifts or benefits imposed by this section do not apply to a campaign contribution to a candidate for elective office if the contribution complies with laws and regulations governing elections and campaign disclosure.

Sec. 39.52.140. IMPROPER USE OR DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION. (a) A current or former public officer may not disclose or use information gained in the course of, or by reason of, the officer's official duties that could in any way result in the receipt of any benefit for the officer or an immediate family member, if the information has not also been communicated to the public.

(b) A current or former public officer may not disclose or use, without appropriate authorization, information acquired in the course of official duties that is confidential by law.

Sec. 39.52.150. IMPROPER INFLUENCE IN STATE GRANTS, CONTRACTS,

LEASES, OR LOANS. (a) A public officer, or an immediate family member, may not attempt to acquire, receive, apply for, be a party to, or have a personal or financial interest in a state grant, contract, lease, or loan if the public officer may take or withhold official action that affects the award, execution, or administration of the state grant, contract, lease, or loan.

(b) The prohibition in (a) of this section does not apply to a state grant, contract, or lease competitively solicited unless the officer

(1) is employed by the administrative unit awarding the grant, contract, or lease or is employed by the administrative unit for which the grant, contract, or lease is let; or

(2) takes official action with respect to the award, execution, or administration of the grant, contract, or lease.

(c) The prohibition in (a) of this section does not apply to a state loan if

(1) the public officer does not take or withhold official action that affects the award, execution, or administration of the loan held by the officer, or an immediate family member;

(2) the loan is generally available to members of the public; and

(3) the loan is subject to fixed eligibility standards.

(d) A public officer shall report in writing to the designated supervisor a personal or financial interest held by the officer, or an immediate family member, in a state grant, contract, lease, or loan that is awarded, executed, or administered by the agency the officer serves.

Sec. 39.52.160. IMPROPER REPRESENTATION. (a) A public officer may not represent, advise, or assist a per on in any matter pending before the administrative unit that the officer serves, if the representation, advice, or assistance is

(1) for compensation, unless the representation, advice, assistance, and compensation are required by statute, regulation, or court rule, or is otherwise customary; or

(2) without compensation, but rendered to benefit a personal or financial interest of the public officer.

(b) This section does not prohibit activities related to collective bargaining.

(c) This section does not preclude a non-salaried member of a board or commission from representing, advising, or assisting in any matter in which the member has a personal or financial interest regulated by the board or commission on which the member serves, except that the member must act in accordance with AS 39.52.220.

Sec. 39.52.170. OUTSIDE EMPLOYMENT RESTRICTED. (a) A public employee may not render services to benefit a personal or financial interest or engage in or accept employment outside the agency which the employee serves, if the outside employment or service is incompatible or in conflict with the proper discharge of official duties.

(b) A public employee rendering services for compensation or engaging in employment outside the employee's agency, shall quarterly report the outside employment activities to the employee's designated supervisor.

Sec. 39.52.180. RESTRICTIONS ON EMPLOYMENT AFTER LEAVING STATE SERVICE. (a) A public officer who leaves state service may not, for two years after leaving state service, represent, advise, or assist a person for compensation regarding a matter that was under consideration by the administrative unit served by that public officer, and in which the officer participated personally and substantially through the exercise of official action. For the purposes of this subsection, "matter" includes a case, proceeding, application, contract, or determination, but does not include the proposal or consideration of legislative bills, resolutions and constitutional amendments, or other legislative measures; or the proposal, consideration, or adoption of administrative regulations.

(b) Nothing in this section prohibits an agency from contracting with a former public officer to act on a matter on behalf of the state.

(c) The head of an agency may waive application of (a) of this section after determining that representation by a former public officer is not adverse to the public interest. The waiver must be in writing and a copy of the waiver must be provided to the attorney general for approval or disapproval.

Sec. 39.52.190. AIDING A VIOLATION PROHIBITED. It is a violation of this chapter for a public officer to knowingly aid another public officer in a violation of this chapter.

ARTICLE 3. DISCLOSURE AND ACTION TO PREVENT VIOLATION OF CODE.

Sec. 39.52.210. DECLARATION OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS BY PUBLIC EMPLOYEES. (a) A public employee who is involved in a matter that may result in a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 shall

(1) refrain from taking any official action relating to the matter until a determination is made under this section; and

(2) immediately disclose the matter in writing to the designated supervisor.

(b) A public employee's designated supervisor shall make a written determination whether an employee's involvement violates AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190. If the supervisor determines that a violation could exist or will occur, the supervisor shall,

(1) reassign duties to cure the employee's potential violation, if feasible; or

(2) direct the divestiture or removal by the employee of the personal or financial interests that give rise to the potential violation.

(c) In accordance with AS 39.52.240, a designated supervisor may request guidance from the attorney general concerning whether a public employee is involved in a matter that may result in a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190.

Sec. 39.52.220. DECLARATION OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS BY MEMBERS OF BOARDS OR COMMISSIONS. (a) A member of a board or commission who is involved in a matter that may result in a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 shall disclose the matter on the public record and in writing to the designated supervisor. The supervisor shall determine whether the member's involvement violates AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190. If a member of the board or commission objects to the ruling of the supervisor, or if the supervisor discloses an involvement requiring a determination, the members present at a meeting, excluding the involved member, shall vote on the matter. If the supervisor or a majority of the members voting determine that a violation will exist if the member continues to participate, the member shall refrain from voting, deliberating, or participating in the matter.

(b) In accordance with AS 39.52.240, the designated supervisor or the board or commission may request guidance from the attorney general concerning whether a member of a board or commission is involved in a matter that may result in a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190.

Sec. 39.52.230. REPORTING OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS. A person may report to a public officer's designated supervisor, under oath and in writing, a potential violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 by the public officer. The supervisor shall provide a copy of the report to the officer who is the subject of the report, and shall review the report to determine whether a violation may exist. The supervisor shall act in accordance with AS 39.52.210 or 39.52.220 if the supervisor determines that the matter may result in a violation of AS 39.52.-110 -- 39.52.190.

Sec. 39.52.240. ADVISORY OPINIONS. (a) Upon the written request of a designated supervisor or a board or commission, the attorney general may issue opinions interpreting this chapter. The requester must supply any additional information requested by the attorney general in order to issue the opinion. Within 60 days after receiving a complete request, the attorney general shall issue an advisory opinion on the question.

(b) The attorney general may offer oral advice if delay would cause substantial inconvenience or detriment to the requesting party.

(c) The designated supervisor or a board or commission shall make a written determination based on the advice of the attorney general. If the advice of the attorney general provides more than one way for a public officer to avoid or correct a problem found under AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190, the designated supervisor or the board or commission shall determine the alternative that is most appropriate and advise the officer of any action required of the officer to avoid or correct the problem.

(d) A public officer is not liable under this chapter for any action carried out in accordance with a determination made under AS 39.52.210 -- 39.52.240 if the officer fully disclosed all relevant facts reasonably necessary to the determination.

(e) The attorney general may reconsider, revoke, or modify an advisory opinion at any time, including upon a showing that material facts were omitted or misstated in the request for the opinion.

(f) A person may rely on an advisory opinion that is currently in effect.

(g) A request for advice made under this section is confidential.

(h) The attorney general shall publish the advisory opinions in the Alaska Administrative Journal, with sufficient deletions to prevent disclosure of the persons whose identities are confidential under (g) of this section.

Sec. 39.52.250. ADVICE TO FORMER PUBLIC OFFICERS. (a) A former public officer may request, in writing, an opinion from the attorney general interpreting this chapter. The attorney general shall give advice in accordance with AS 39.52.240(a) or (b) and publish opinions in accordance with AS 39.52.240(h).

(b) A former public officer is not liable under this chapter for any action carried out in accordance with the advice of the attorney general issued under this section, if the public officer fully disclosed all relevant facts reasonably necessary to the issuance of the advice.

Sec. 39.52.260. DESIGNATED SUPERVISOR'S REPORT AND ATTORNEY GENERAL REVIEW. (a) A designated supervisor shall quarterly submit a report to the attorney general which states the facts, circumstances, and disposition of any disclosure made under AS 39.52.210 -- 39.52.240.

(b) The attorney general shall review determinations reported under this section. The attorney general may request additional information from a supervisor concerning a specific disclosure and its disposition.

(c) The report prepared under this section is confidential and not available for public inspection unless formal proceedings under AS 39.52.350 are initiated based on the report. If formal proceedings are initiated, the relevant portions of the report are public documents open to inspection. The attorney general shall, however, make available to the public an extract of the reports received under this section, with sufficient deletions to prevent disclosure of a person's identity.

ARTICLE 4. COMPLAINTS; HEARING PROCEDURES.

Sec. 39.52.310. COMPLAINTS. (a) The attorney general may initiate a complaint, or elect to treat as a complaint any matter disclosed under AS 39.52.210, 39.52.220, 39.52.250, or 39.52.260.

(b) A person may file a complaint with the attorney general regarding the conduct of a current or former public officer. A complaint must be in writing, be signed under oath, and contain a clear statement of the details of the alleged violation.

(c) If a complaint alleges a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 by the governor, lieutenant governor, or the attorney general, the matter shall be referred to the personnel board. The personnel board shall retain independent counsel who shall act in the place of the attorney general under (d) -- (i) of this section, AS 39.52.320 -- 39.52.350, and AS 39.52.360(c) and (d).

(d) The attorney general shall review each complaint filed, to determine whether it is properly completed and contains allegations which, if true, would constitute conduct in violation of this chapter. The attorney general may require the complainant to provide additional information before accepting the complaint. If the attorney general determines that the allegations in the complaint do not warrant an investigation, the attorney general shall dismiss the complaint with notice to the complainant and the subject of the complaint.

(e) The attorney general may refer a complaint to the subject's designated supervisor for resolution under AS 39.52.210 or 39.52.220.

(f) If the attorney general accepts a complaint for investigation, the attorney general shall serve a copy of the complaint upon the subject of the complaint, for a response. The attorney general may require the subject to provide, within 20 days after service, full and fair disclosure in writing of all facts and circumstances pertaining to the alleged violation. Misrepresentation of a material fact in a response to the attorney general is a violation of this chapter. Failure to answer within the prescribed time, or within any additional time period that may be granted in writing by the attorney general, is considered an admission of the allegations in the complaint.

(g) If a complaint is accepted under (f) of this section, the attorney general shall investigate to determine whether a violation of this chapter has occurred. At any stage of an investigation or review, the attorney general may issue a subpoena under AS 39.52.380.

(h) A violation of this chapter may be investigated within two years after discovery of the alleged violation.

(i) The unwillingness of a complainant to assist in an investigation, the withdrawal of a complaint, or restitution by the subject of the complaint may, but need not in and of itself, justify termination of an investigation or proceeding.

Sec. 39.52.320. DISMISSAL BEFORE FORMAL PROCEEDINGS. If, after investigation, it appears that there is no probable cause to believe that a violation of this chapter has occurred, the attorney general shall dismiss the complaint and prepare and file a confidential summary with the personnel board. The attorney general shall communicate disposition of the matter promptly to the complainant and to the subject of the complaint.

Sec. 39.52.330. CORRECTIVE OR PREVENTIVE ACTION. After determining that the conduct of the subject of a complaint does not warrant a hearing under AS 39.52.360, the attorney general shall recommend action to correct or prevent a violation of this chapter. The attorney general shall communicate the recommended action to the complainant and the subject of the complaint. The subject of the complaint shall comply with the attorney general's recommendation.

Sec. 39.52.340. CONFIDENTIALITY. (a) Before the initiation of formal proceedings under AS 39.52.350, information regarding an investigation conducted under this chapter, or obtained by the attorney general during the investigation, is confidential. The attorney general and all persons contacted during the course of an investigation shall maintain confidentiality regarding the existence of the investigation. A person who violates this section is guilty of a class A misdemeanor.

(b) It is not a violation of this section for a person to contact an attorney or to participate in a criminal investigation.

(c) The subject of the complaint may, in writing, waive the confidentiality protection of this section.

Sec. 39.52.350. PROBABLE CAUSE FOR HEARING. (a) If the attorney general determines that there is probable cause to believe that a knowing violation of this chapter or a violation that cannot be corrected under AS 39.52.330 has occurred, or that the subject of a complaint failed to comply with a recommendation for corrective or preventive action, the attorney general shall initiate formal proceedings by serving a copy of an accusation upon the subject of the accusation. The accusation shall specifically set out the alleged violation.

After service, the accusation is a public document open to inspection. Except as provided in AS 39.52.370(c), all subsequent proceedings are open to the public.

(b) The subject of the accusation shall file an answer with the attorney general within 20 days after service of the accusation, or at a later time specified by the attorney general. If the subject of the accusation fails to timely answer, the allegations are considered admitted.

(c) If the subject of the accusation denies that a violation of this chapter has occurred, the attorney general shall refer the matter to the personnel board, which shall appoint a hearing officer to conduct a hearing.

(d) If the subject of the accusation admits a violation of this chapter, the attorney general shall refer the matter to the personnel board to impose penalties under AS 39.52.410, 39.52.440, and 39.52.-450, as appropriate.

Sec. 39.52.360. HEARINGS. (a) The hearing officer may convene a pre-hearing conference to set a time and place for the hearing, and for stipulation as to matters of fact and to simplify issues, identify and schedule pre-hearing matters, and resolve other similar matters before the hearing.

(b) The hearing officer may administer oaths, hold hearings, and take testimony. Upon application by a party to the hearing, the hearing officer may issue subpoenas under AS 39.52.380.

(c) The attorney general shall present the charges before the hearing officer. At a hearing, the attorney general has the burden of demonstrating by a preponderance of the evidence that the subject of the accusation has, by act or omission, violated this chapter.

(d) The parties to a hearing are the attorney general and the subject of the accusation. The subject of an accusation may be represented by counsel. Each party has an opportunity to be heard and cross-examine witnesses, who shall testify under oath.

(e) The Administrative Procedure Act does not apply to hearings under this section, except as provided in AS 39.52.380.

(f) Technical rules of evidence do not apply, but the hearing officer's findings must be based upon reliable and relevant evidence. All testimony and other evidence taken at the hearing must be recorded and the evidence maintained. Copies of transcripts of the hearing record are available to the subject of the accusation at the subject's expense; however, upon request, a copy of the recording of the hearing must be furnished without charge to the subject of the accusation.

(g) At the conclusion of the formal hearing, the hearing officer may direct either or both parties to submit proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation to be filed within 10 days after the conclusion of the hearing.

(h) Within 30 days after the conclusion of a formal hearing, the hearing officer shall serve a written report on the personnel board and the parties, unless the personnel board grants an extension of time. The report must contain the officer's findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation. The hearing officer shall submit the record to the personnel board.

Sec. 39.52.370. PERSONNEL BOARD ACTION. (a) Within 10 days after receipt of the hearing officer's report, either party may protest the officer's findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation, and, if a protest is filed, shall serve a copy on the other party. Oral argument before the personnel board must be provided only if requested by either party. The board chair shall set the deadline for submission of requests for oral argument, and set the dates for submission of briefs and oral argument before the board, if requested.

(b) The board may issue subpoenas under AS 39.52.380, and may, for good cause shown, augment the hearing record, in whole or in part, or hold a hearing de novo.

(c) The personnel board shall review each report submitted by a hearing officer and shall either adopt or amend the findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation of the officer. Deliberations of the personnel board must be conducted in sessions not open to the public.

(d) If the personnel board determines that a violation occurred, it may impose the penalties in AS 39.52.410, 39.52.440, and 39.52.450, as appropriate. If the board determines that no violation occurred, the board shall issue a written order of dismissal.

(e) The personnel board secretary shall promptly notify the parties and the public officer's designated supervisor of the board's action.

(f) The subject of the accusation may appeal the personnel board's decision by filing an appeal in the superior court as provided in the Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure.

Sec. 39.52.380. SUBPOENAS. (a) As provided in AS 39.52.310(g), 39.52.360(b), and 39.52.370(b), the attorney general, independent counsel retained under AS 39.52.310(c), a hearing officer, the subject of an accusation, and the personnel board may summon witnesses and require the production of records, books, and papers by the issuance of subpoenas.

(b) Subpoenas must be served in the manner prescribed by AS 44.-62.430 and Rule 45 of the Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure. Failure or refusal to obey a subpoena issued under this chapter is punishable as contempt in the manner provided by law and court rule. The superior court may compel obedience to the subpoena in the same manner as prescribed for obedience to a subpoena issued by the court.

Sec. 39.52.390. SERVICE. Service of an accusation must be accomplished in accordance with Rule 4 of the Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure. Service of any other pleading, motion, or other document must be accomplished in accordance with Rule 5 of the Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure.

ARTICLE 5. ENFORCEMENT; REMEDIES.

Sec. 39.52.410. VIOLATIONS; PENALTIES FOR MISCONDUCT. (a) If the personnel board determines that a public employee has violated this chapter, it (1) shall order the employee to stop engaging in any official action related to the violation; (2) may order divestiture, establishment of a blind trust, restitution, or forfeiture; and (3) may recommend that the employee's agency take disciplinary action.

(b) If the personnel board determines that a non-salaried member of a board or commission has violated this chapter, it (1) shall order the member to refrain from voting, deliberating, or participating in the matter; (2) may order restitution; and (3) may recommend to the appropriate appointing authority that the member be removed from the board or commission.

(c) If the personnel board determines that a former public officer has violated this chapter, it shall (1) issue a public statement of its findings, conclusions, and recommendation; and (2) request the attorney general to exercise all legal and equitable remedies available to the state to seek whatever relief is appropriate.

(d) If the personnel board finds a violation of this chapter by a public officer removable from office only by impeachment, it shall report the matter to the Senate, with its finding. The report must contain a statement of the facts alleged to constitute the violation.

Sec. 39.52.420. DISCIPLINARY ACTION FOR VIOLATION. (a) In addition to any other cause an agency may have to discipline a public employee, an agency may reprimand, demote, suspend, discharge, or otherwise subject an employee to agency disciplinary action commensurate with the violations of this chapter. This section does not prohibit the review of a disciplinary action in the manner prescribed by an applicable collective bargaining agreement or personnel statute or rule.

(b) An agency may initiate appropriate disciplinary action in the absence of an accusation or during the pendency of a hearing or personnel board action.

Sec. 39.52.430. ACTIONS VOIDABLE. (a) In addition to any other penalty provided by law, a state grant, contract, or lease entered into in violation of this chapter is voidable by the state. In a determination under this section of whether to void a grant, contract, or lease, the interests of third parties who may be damaged must be taken into account. The attorney general shall give notice of intent to void a state grant, contract, or lease under this section no later than 60 days after the personnel board's determination of a violation under this chapter.

(b) In addition to any other penalty provided for by law, the state may require a state loan received in violation of this chapter to become immediately payable.

(c) Any state action obtained in violation of this chapter is voidable, except that the interests of third parties and the nature of the violation must be taken into account. The attorney general may pursue any other available legal and equitable remedies.

(d) The attorney general may recover any fee, compensation, gift, or benefit received by a person as a result of a violation of nothing in this chapter precludes a prosecution under an applicable criminal statute nor prevents enforcement of any other state law that imposes a stricter standard of ethical conduct on public officers.

(c) The provisions of this chapter are not subject to negotiation by collective bargaining under AS 23.40 or AS 42.40.720 -- 42.40.880.

Sec. 39.52.920. AGENCY POLICIES. Subject to the review and approval of the attorney general, an agency may adopt a written policy that

(1) in addition to the requirements of this chapter, limits the extent to which a public officer in the agency or an administrative unit of the agency may

(A) acquire a personal interest in an organization or a financial interest in a business or undertaking that may benefit from official action taken or withheld by the agency or unit;

(B) have a personal or financial interest in a state grant, contract, lease, or loan administered by the agency or unit; or

(C) accept a gift or benefit; or

(2) requires a public officer of the agency or unit to turn over a gift to the agency or unit.

Sec. 39.52.930. COOPERATION. All agencies and instrumentalities of the state shall cooperate fully with the attorney general and the personnel board in the performance of their duties under this chapter.

Sec. 39.52.940. CONSTRUCTION. This chapter must be liberally construed to promote high standards of ethical conduct in state government.

Sec. 39.52.950. REGULATIONS. The attorney general may adopt regulations under the Administrative Procedure Act necessary to interpret and implement this chapter.

CS FOR SPONSOR SUBSTITUTE FOR SENATE BILL NO. 391

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - SECOND SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to the ethical conduct of governmental activities; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 39 is amended by adding a new chapter to read:

CHAPTER 52. ALASKA EXECUTIVE BRANCH ETHICS ACT.

ARTICLE 1. DECLARATIONS.

Sec. 39.52.010. DECLARATION OF POLICY. (a) It is declared (1) that high moral and ethical standards among public officers in the executive branch are essential to the conduct of free government; and (2) that the legislature believes that a code of ethics for the guidance of public officers will discourage those officers from acting upon personal or financial interests in the performance of their public responsibilities, will improve standards of public service, and will promote and strengthen the faith and confidence of the people of this state in their public officers. It is further declared that holding public office or employment is a public trust and that as one safeguard of that trust, the people require public officers to adhere to a code of ethics.

(b) The legislature declares that it is the policy of the state, when a public employee is appointed to serve on a state board or commission, that the holding of such offices does not constitute the holding of incompatible offices unless expressly prohibited by the Alaska Constitution, this chapter and any opinions or decisions rendered under it, or another statute.

ARTICLE 2. CODE OF ETHICS.

Sec. 39.52.110. SCOPE OF CODE. (a) The legislature reaffirms that each public officer holds office as a public trust, and any effort to benefit a personal or financial interest through official action is a violation of that trust. In addition, the legislature finds that, so long as it does not interfere with the full and faithful discharge of an officer's public duties and responsibilities, this chapter does not prevent an officer from following other independent pursuits. The legislature further recognizes that

(1) in a representative democracy, the representatives are drawn from society and, therefore, cannot and should not be without personal and financial interests in the decisions and policies of government;

(2) people who serve as public officers retain their rights to interests of a personal or financial nature; and

(3) standards of ethical conduct for members of the executive branch need to distinguish between those minor and inconsequential conflicts that are unavoidable in a free society, and those conflicts of interests that are substantial and material.

(b) Unethical conduct is prohibited, but there is no substantial impropriety if, as to a specific matter, a public officer's

(1) personal or financial interest in the matter is insignificant, or of a type that is possessed generally by the public or a large class of persons to which the public officer belongs, or

(2) action or influence would have insignificant or conjectural effect on the matter.

(c) The attorney general, designated supervisors, hearing officers, and the personnel board must be guided by this section when issuing opinions and reaching decisions.

Sec. 39.52.120. MISUSE OF OFFICIAL POSITION. (a) A public officer may not use, or attempt to use, an official position for personal gain, and may not intentionally secure or grant unwarranted benefits or treatment for any person.

(b) A public officer may not

(1) seek other employment or contracts through the use or attempted use of official position;

(2) accept, receive, or solicit compensation for the performance of official duties or responsibilities from a person other than the state;

(3) use state time, property, equipment, or other facilities to benefit personal or financial interests; or

(4) take or withhold official action in order to affect a matter in which the public officer has a personal or financial interest; or

(5) attempt to benefit a personal or financial interest through coercion of a subordinate.

Sec. 39.52.130. IMPROPER GIFTS. (a) A public officer may not solicit, accept, or receive, directly or indirectly, a gift, whether in the form of money, service, loan, travel, entertainment, hospitality, employment, promise, or in any other form, that is a benefit to the officer's personal or financial interests, under circumstances in which it could reasonably be inferred that the gift is intended to influence the performance of official duties, actions, or judgment.

(b) Notice of the receipt by a public officer of a gift with a value in excess of $50, including the name of the giver and a description of the gift and its approximate value, must be provided to the designated supervisor within 30 days after the date of its receipt if the public officer may take or withhold official action that affects the giver.

(c) In accordance with AS 39.52.240, a designated supervisor may request guidance from the attorney general concerning whether acceptance of a particular gift is prohibited.

(d) The restrictions relating to gifts imposed by this section do not apply to a campaign contribution to a candidate for elective office if the contribution complies with laws and regulations governing elections and campaign disclosure.

Sec. 39.52.140. IMPROPER USE OR DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION. (a) A current or former public officer may not disclose or use information gained in the course of, or by reason of, the officer's official duties that could in any way result in the receipt of any benefit for the officer or an immediate family member, if the information has not also been disseminated to the public.

(b) A current or former public officer may not disclose or use, without appropriate authorization, information acquired in the course of official duties that is confidential by law.

Sec. 39.52.150. IMPROPER INFLUENCE IN STATE GRANTS, CONTRACTS, LEASES, OR LOANS. (a) A public officer, or an immediate family member, may not attempt to acquire, receive, apply for, be a party to, or have a personal or financial interest in a state grant, contract, lease, or loan if the public officer may take or withhold official action that affects the award, execution, or administration of the state grant, contract, lease, or loan.

(b) The prohibition in (a) of this section does not apply to a state grant, contract, or lease competitively solicited unless the officer

(1) is employed by the administrative unit awarding the grant, contract, or lease or is employed by the administrative unit for which the grant, contract, or lease is let; or

(2) takes official action with respect to the award, execution, or administration of the grant, contract, or lease.

(c) The prohibition in (a) of this section does not apply to a state loan if

(1) the public officer does not take or withhold official action that affects the award, execution, or administration of the loan held by the officer, or an immediate family member;

(2) the loan is generally available to members of the public; and

(3) the loan is subject to fixed eligibility standards.

(d) A public officer shall report in writing to the designated supervisor a personal or financial interest held by the officer, or an immediate family member, in a state grant, contract, lease, or loan that is awarded, executed, or administered by the agency the officer serves.

Sec. 39.52.160. IMPROPER REPRESENTATION. (a) A public officer may not represent, advise, or assist a person in any matter pending before the administrative unit that the officer serves, if the representation, advice, or assistance is

(1) for compensation, unless the representation, advice, assistance, and compensation are required by statute, regulation, or court rule, or is otherwise customary; or

(2) without compensation, but rendered to benefit a personal or financial interest of the public officer.

(b) This section does not prohibit activities related to collective bargaining.

(c) This section does not preclude a non-salaried member of a board or commission from representing, advising, or assisting in any matter in which the member has a personal or financial interest regulated by the board or commission on which the member serves, except that the member must act in accordance with AS 39.52.220.

Sec. 39.52.170. OUTSIDE EMPLOYMENT RESTRICTED. (a) A public employee may not render services to benefit a personal or financial interest or engage in or accept employment outside the agency which the employee serves, if the outside employment or service is incompatible or in conflict with the proper discharge of official duties.

(b) A public employee rendering services for compensation, or engaging in employment outside the employee's agency, shall report by July 1 of each year the outside services or employment to the employee's designated supervisor. During the year, any change in an employee's outside service or employment activity must be reported to the designated supervisor as it occurs.

Sec. 39.52.180. RESTRICTIONS ON EMPLOYMENT AFTER LEAVING STATE SERVICE. (a) A public officer who leaves state service may not, for two years after leaving state service, represent, advise, or assist a person for compensation regarding a matter that was under consideration by the administrative unit served by that public officer, and in which the officer participated personally and substantially through the exercise of official action. For the purposes of this subsection, "matter" includes a case, proceeding, application, contract, or determination, but does not include the proposal or consideration of legislative bills, resolutions and constitutional amendments, or other legislative measures; or the proposal, consideration, or adoption of administrative regulations.

(b) Nothing in this section prohibits an agency from contracting with a former public officer to act on a matter on behalf of the state.

(c) The head of an agency may waive application of (a) of this section after determining that representation by a former public officer is not adverse to the public interest. The waiver must be in writing and a copy of the waiver must be provided to the attorney general for approval or disapproval.

Sec. 39.52.190. AIDING A VIOLATION PROHIBITED. It is a violation of this chapter for a public officer to knowingly aid another public officer in a violation of this chapter.

ARTICLE 3. DISCLOSURE AND ACTION TO PREVENT VIOLATION OF CODE.

Sec. 39.52.210. DECLARATION OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS BY PUBLIC EMPLOYEES. (a) A public employee who is involved in a matter that may result in a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 shall

(1) refrain from taking any official action relating to the matter until a determination is made under this section; and

(2) immediately disclose the matter in writing to the designated supervisor.

(b) A public employee's designated supervisor shall make a written determination whether an employee's involvement violates AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190. If the supervisor determines that a violation could exist or will occur, the supervisor shall,

(1) reassign duties to cure the employee's potential violation, if feasible; or

(2) direct the divestiture or removal by the employee of the personal or financial interests that give rise to the potential violation.

(c) A designated supervisor may request guidance from the attorney general, in accordance with AS 39.52.240, when determining whether a public employee is involved in a matter that may result in a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190.

Sec. 39.52.220. DECLARATION OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS BY MEMBERS OF BOARDS OR COMMISSIONS. (a) A member of a board or commission who is involved in a matter that may result in a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 shall disclose the matter on the public record and in writing to the designated supervisor. The supervisor shall determine whether the member's involvement violates AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190. If a member of the board or commission objects to the ruling of the supervisor, or if the supervisor discloses an involvement requiring a determination, the members present at a meeting, excluding the involved member, shall vote on the matter. If the supervisor or a majority of the members voting determine that a violation will exist if the member continues to participate, the member shall refrain from voting, deliberating, or participating in the matter.

(b) The designated supervisor or the board or commission may request guidance from the attorney general, in accordance with AS 39.52.240, when determining whether a member of a board or commission is involved in a matter that may result in a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190.

Sec. 39.52.230. REPORTING OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS. A person may report to a public officer's designated supervisor, under oath and in writing, a potential violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 by the public officer. The supervisor shall provide a copy of the report to the officer who is the subject of the report, and shall review the report to determine whether a violation may exist. The supervisor shall act in accordance with AS 39.52.210 or 39.52.220 if the supervisor determines that the matter may result in a violation of

AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190.

Sec. 39.52.240. ADVISORY OPINIONS. (a) Upon the written request of a designated supervisor or a board or commission, the attorney general shall issue opinions interpreting this chapter. The requester must supply any additional information requested by the attorney general in order to issue the opinion. Within 60 days after receiving a complete request, the attorney general shall issue an advisory opinion on the question.

(b) The attorney general may offer oral advice if delay would cause substantial inconvenience or detriment to the requesting party.

(c) The designated supervisor or a board or commission shall make a written determination based on the advice of the attorney general. If the advice of the attorney general provides more than one way for a public officer to avoid or correct a problem found under AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190, the designated supervisor or the board or commission shall, after consultation with the officer, determine the alternative that is most appropriate and advise the officer of any action required of the officer to avoid or correct the problem.

(d) A public officer is not liable under this chapter for any action carried out in accordance with a determination made under AS 39.52.210 -- 39.52.240 if the officer fully disclosed all relevant facts reasonably necessary to the determination.

(e) The attorney general may reconsider, revoke, or modify an advisory opinion at any time, including upon a showing that material facts were omitted or misstated in the request for the opinion.

(f) A person may rely on an advisory opinion that is currently in effect.

(g) A request for advice made under (a) of this section is confidential.

(h) The attorney general shall publish in the Alaska Administrative Journal, with sufficient deletions to prevent disclosure of the persons whose identities are confidential under (g) of this section, the advisory opinions issued under this section that the attorney general determines to be of major import because of their general applicability to executive branch officers.

Sec. 39.52.250. ADVICE TO FORMER PUBLIC OFFICERS. (a) A former public officer may request, in writing, an opinion from the attorney general interpreting this chapter. The attorney general shall give advice in accordance with AS 39.52.240(a) or (b) and publish opinions in accordance with AS 39.52.240(h).

(b) A former public officer is not liable under this chapter for any action carried out in accordance with the advice of the attorney general issued under this section, if the public officer fully disclosed all relevant facts reasonably necessary to the issuance of the advice.

Sec. 39.52.260. DESIGNATED SUPERVISOR'S REPORT AND ATTORNEY GENERAL REVIEW. (a) A designated supervisor shall quarterly submit a report to the attorney general which states the facts, circumstances, and disposition of any disclosure made under AS 39.52.210 -- 39.52.-240.

(b) The attorney general shall review determinations reported under this section. The attorney general may request additional information from a supervisor concerning a specific disclosure and its disposition.

(c) The report prepared under this section is confidential and not available for public inspection unless formal proceedings under AS 39.52.350 are initiated based on the report. If formal proceedings are initiated, the relevant portions of the report are public documents open to inspection. The attorney general shall, however, make available to the public a summary of the reports received under this section, with sufficient deletions to prevent disclosure of a person's identity.

ARTICLE 4. COMPLAINTS; HEARING PROCEDURES.

Sec. 39.52.310. COMPLAINTS. (a) The attorney general may initiate a complaint, or elect to treat as a complaint any matter disclosed under AS 39.52.210, 39.52.220, 39.52.250, or 39.52.260.

(b) A person may file a complaint with the attorney general regarding the conduct of a current or former public officer. A complaint must be in writing, be signed under oath, and contain a clear statement of the details of the alleged violation.

(c) If a complaint alleges a violation of AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 by the governor, lieutenant governor, or the attorney general, the matter shall be referred to the personnel board. The personnel board shall retain independent counsel who shall act in the place of the attorney general under (d) -- (i) of this section, AS 39.52.320 -- 39.52.350, and AS 39.52.360(c) and (d).

(d) The attorney general shall review each complaint filed, to determine whether it is properly completed and contains allegations which, if true, would constitute conduct in violation of this chapter. The attorney general may require the complainant to provide additional information before accepting the complaint. If the attorney general determines that the allegations in the complaint do not warrant an investigation, the attorney general shall dismiss the complaint with notice to the complainant and the subject of the complaint.

(e) The attorney general may refer a complaint to the subject's designated supervisor for resolution under AS 39.52.210 or 39.52.220.

(f) If the attorney general accepts a complaint for investigation, the attorney general shall serve a copy of the complaint upon the subject of the complaint, for a response. The attorney general may require the subject to provide, within 20 days after service, full and fair disclosure in writing of all facts and circumstances pertaining to the alleged violation. Misrepresentation of a material fact in a response to the attorney general is a violation of this chapter. Failure to answer within the prescribed time, or within any additional time period that may be granted in writing by the attorney general, may be considered an admission of the allegations in the complaint.

(g) If a complaint is accepted under (f) of this section, the attorney general shall investigate to determine whether a violation of this chapter has occurred. At any stage of an investigation or review, the attorney general may issue a subpoena under AS 39.52.380.

(h) A violation of this chapter may be investigated within two years after discovery of the alleged violation.

(i) The unwillingness of a complainant to assist in an investigation, the withdrawal of a complaint, or restitution by the subject of the complaint may, but need not in and of itself, justify termination of an investigation or proceeding.

Sec. 39.52.320. DISMISSAL BEFORE FORMAL PROCEEDINGS. If, after investigation, it appears that there is no probable cause to believe that a violation of this chapter has occurred, the attorney general shall dismiss the complaint and prepare and file a confidential summary with the personnel board. The attorney general shall communicate disposition of the matter promptly to the complainant and to the subject of the complaint.

Sec. 39.52.330. CORRECTIVE OR PREVENTIVE ACTION. After determining that the conduct of the subject of a complaint does not warrant a hearing under AS 39.52.360, the attorney general shall recommend action to correct or prevent a violation of this chapter. The attorney general shall communicate the recommended action to the complainant and the subject of the complaint. The subject of the complaint shall comply with the attorney general's recommendation.

Sec. 39.52.340. CONFIDENTIALITY. (a) Before the initiation of formal proceedings under AS 39.52.350, information regarding an investigation conducted under this chapter, or obtained by the attorney general during the investigation, is confidential. The attorney general and all persons contacted during the course of an investigation shall maintain confidentiality regarding the existence of the investigation. A person who violates this section is guilty of a class A misdemeanor.

(b) It is not a violation of this section for a person to contact an attorney or to participate in a criminal investigation.

(c) The subject of the complaint may, in writing, waive the confidentiality protection of this section.

Sec. 39.52.350. PROBABLE CAUSE FOR HEARING. (a) If the attorney general determines that there is probable cause to believe that a knowing violation of this chapter or a violation that cannot be corrected under AS 39.52.330 has occurred, or that the subject of a complaint failed to comply with a recommendation for corrective or preventive action, the attorney general shall initiate formal proceedings by serving a copy of an accusation upon the subject of the accusation. The accusation shall specifically set out the alleged violation. After service, the accusation is a public document open to inspection. Except as provided in AS 39.52.370(c), all subsequent proceedings are open to the public.

(b) The subject of the accusation shall file an answer with the attorney general within 20 days after service of the accusation, or at a later time specified by the attorney general. If the subject of the accusation fails to timely answer, the allegations are considered admitted.

(c) If the subject of the accusation denies that a violation of this chapter has occurred, the attorney general shall refer the matter to the personnel board, which shall appoint a hearing officer to conduct a hearing.

(d) If the subject of the accusation admits a violation of this chapter, the attorney general shall refer the matter to the personnel board to impose penalties under AS 39.52.410, 39.52.440, and 39.52.450, as appropriate.

Sec. 39.52.360. HEARINGS. (a) The hearing officer may convene a pre-hearing conference to set a time and place for the hearing, and for stipulation as to matters of fact and to simplify issues, identify and schedule pre-hearing matters, and resolve other similar matters before the hearing.

(b) The hearing officer may administer oaths, hold hearings, and take testimony. Upon application by a party to the hearing, the hearing officer may issue subpoenas under AS 39.52.380.

(c) The attorney general shall present the charges before the hearing officer. At a hearing, the attorney general has the burden of demonstrating by a preponderance of the evidence that the subject of the accusation has, by act or omission, violated this chapter.

(d) The parties to a hearing are the attorney general and the subject of the accusation. The subject of an accusation may be represented by counsel. Each party has an opportunity to be heard and cross-examine witnesses, who shall testify under oath.

(e) The Administrative Procedure Act does not apply to hearings under this section, except as provided in AS 39.52.380.

(f) Technical rules of evidence do not apply, but the hearing officer's findings must be based upon reliable and relevant evidence. All testimony and other evidence taken at the hearing must be recorded and the evidence maintained. Copies of transcripts of the hearing record are available to the subject of the accusation at the subject's expense; however, upon request, a copy of the recording of the hearing must be furnished without charge to the subject of the accusation.

(g) At the conclusion of the formal hearing, the hearing officer may direct either or both parties to submit proposed findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation to be filed within 10 days after the conclusion of the hearing.

(h) Within 30 days after the conclusion of a formal hearing, the hearing officer shall serve a written report on the personnel board and the parties, unless the personnel board grants an extension of time. The report must contain the officer's findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation. The hearing officer shall submit the record to the personnel board.

Sec. 39.52.370. PERSONNEL BOARD ACTION. (a) Within 10 days after receipt of the hearing officer's report, either party may protest the officer's findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation, and, if a protest is filed, shall serve a copy on the other party. Oral argument before the personnel board must be provided only if requested by either party. The board chair shall set the deadline for submission of requests for oral argument, and set the dates for submission of briefs and oral argument before the board, if requested.

(b) The board may issue subpoenas under AS 39.52.380, and may, for good cause shown, augment the hearing record, in whole or in part, or hold a hearing de novo.

(c) The personnel board shall review each report submitted by a hearing officer and shall either adopt or amend the findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation of the officer. Deliberations of the personnel board must be conducted in sessions not open to the public.

(d) If the personnel board determines that a violation occurred, it may impose the penalties in AS 39.52.410, 39.52.440, and 39.52.450, as appropriate. If the board determines that no violation occurred, the board shall issue a written order of dismissal.

(e) The personnel board secretary shall promptly notify the parties and the public officer's designated supervisor of the board's action.

(f) The subject of the accusation may appeal the personnel board's decision by filing an appeal in the superior court as provided in the Alaska Rules of Appellate Procedure.

Sec. 39.52.380. SUBPOENAS. (a) As provided in AS 39.52.310(g), 39.52.360(b), and 39.52.370(b), the attorney general, independent counsel retained under AS 39.52.310(c), a hearing officer, the subject of an accusation, and the personnel board may summon witnesses and require the production of records, books, and papers by the issuance of subpoenas.

(b) Subpoenas must be served in the manner prescribed by AS 44.-62.430 and Rule 45 of the Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure. Failure or refusal to obey a subpoena issued under this chapter is punishable as contempt in the manner provided by law and court rule. The superior court may compel obedience to the subpoena in the same manner as prescribed for obedience to a subpoena issued by the court.

Sec. 39.52.390. SERVICE. Service of an accusation must be accomplished in accordance with Rule 4 of the Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure. Service of any other pleading, motion, or other document must be accomplished in accordance with Rule 5 of the Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure.

ARTICLE 5. ENFORCEMENT; REMEDIES.

Sec. 39.52.410. VIOLATIONS; PENALTIES FOR MISCONDUCT. (a) If the personnel board determines that a public employee has violated this chapter, it (1) shall order the employee to stop engaging in any official action related to the violation; (2) may order divestiture, establishment of a blind trust, restitution, or forfeiture; and (3) may recommend that the employee's agency take disciplinary action, including dismissal.

(b) If the personnel board determines that a non-salaried member of a board or commission has violated this chapter, it (1) shall order the member to refrain from voting, deliberating, or participating in the matter; (2) may order restitution; and (3) may recommend to the appropriate appointing authority that the member be removed from the board or commission. A violation of this chapter is grounds for removal of a board or commission member for cause. If the personnel board recommends that a board or commission member be removed from office, the appointing authority shall immediately act to remove the member from office.

(c) If the personnel board determines that a former public officer has violated this chapter, it shall (1) issue a public statement of its findings, conclusions, and recommendation; and (2) request the attorney general to exercise all legal and equitable remedies available to the state to seek whatever relief is appropriate.

(d) If the personnel board finds a violation of this chapter by a public officer removable from office only by impeachment, it shall file a report with the president of the Senate, with its finding. The report must contain a statement of the facts alleged to constitute the violation.

Sec. 39.52.420. DISCIPLINARY ACTION FOR VIOLATION. (a) In addition to any other cause an agency may have to discipline a public employee, an agency may reprimand, demote, suspend, discharge, or otherwise subject an employee to agency disciplinary action commensurate with the violations of this chapter. This section does not prohibit the review of a disciplinary action in the manner prescribed by an applicable collective bargaining agreement or personnel statute or rule.

(b) An agency may initiate appropriate disciplinary action in the absence of an accusation under this chapter or during the pendency of a hearing or personnel board action.

Sec. 39.52.430. ACTIONS VOIDABLE. (a) In addition to any other penalty provided by law, a state grant, contract, or lease entered into in violation of this chapter is voidable by the state. In a determination under this section of whether to void a grant, contract, or lease, the interests of third parties who could be damaged may be taken into account. The attorney general shall give notice of intent to void a state grant, contract, or lease under this section no later than 30 days after the personnel board's determination of a violation under this chapter.

(b) In addition to any other penalty provided for by law, the state may require a state loan received in violation of this chapter to become immediately payable.

(c) Any state action taken in violation of this chapter is voidable, except that the interests of third parties and the nature of the violation may be taken into account. The attorney general may pursue any other available legal and equitable remedies.

(d) The attorney general may recover any fee, compensation, gift, or benefit received by a person as a result of a violation of this chapter by a current or former public officer. Action to recover under this subsection must be brought within two years after discovery of the violation.

Sec. 39.52.440. CIVIL PENALTIES. The personnel board may impose on a current or former public officer civil penalties not to exceed $5,000 for a violation of this chapter. A penalty imposed under this section is in addition to and not instead of any other penalty that may be imposed according to law.

Sec. 39.52.450. PAYMENT OF TWICE THE FINANCIAL BENEFIT. The personnel board may, in addition to the civil penalties described in this chapter, require a current or former public officer who has financially benefited a person in violation of this chapter to pay to the state up to twice the amount that the person realized from the violation.

Sec. 39.52.460. CRIMINAL SANCTIONS ADDITIONAL. To the extent that violations under this chapter are punishable in a criminal action, that sanction is in addition to the civil remedies set out in this chapter.

ARTICLE 6. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Sec. 39.52.910. APPLICABILITY. (a) Except as specifically provided, this chapter applies to all public officers within executive-branch agencies, including members of boards or commissions. conflicts of interests that may apply to a public officer of an executive-branch agency and any personnel rules relating to conflicts of interests, excluding nepotism, adopted under AS 39.25. However, nothing in this chapter precludes a prosecution under an applicable criminal statute nor prevents enforcement of any other state law that imposes a stricter standard of ethical conduct on public officers.

(c) The provisions of this chapter are not subject to negotiation by collective bargaining under AS 23.40 or AS 42.40.720 -- 42.40.880.

Sec. 39.52.920. AGENCY POLICIES. Subject to the review and approval of the attorney general, an agency may adopt a written policy that, in addition to the requirements of this chapter, limits the extent to which a public officer in the agency or an administrative unit of the agency may

(1) acquire a personal interest in an organization or a financial interest in a business or undertaking that may benefit from official action taken or withheld by the agency or unit;

(2) have a personal or financial interest in a state grant, contract, lease, or loan administered by the agency or unit; or

(3) accept a gift.

Sec. 39.52.930. COOPERATION. All agencies and instrumentalities of the state shall cooperate fully with the attorney general and the personnel board in the performance of their duties under this chapter.

Sec. 39.52.940. CONSTRUCTION. This chapter must be construed to promote high standards of ethical conduct in state government.

Dear Senator Abood:

Attached to this brief letter are proposed amendments to SSSB 391. All of the amendments, except No. 14, were suggested by the members of the Senate State Affairs Committee last Thursday, April 3rd. The fourteenth amendment reflects a needed amendment that Susan Cox and I neglected to include when drafting the sponsor substitute. We have attempted to respond to the concerns expressed by your Committee in the attached amendments, and look forward to further discussions and continued progress on SSSB 391 this coming Wednesday.

Respectfully sumitted,

(b) [THE LEGISLATURE RECOGNIZES THAT IT MAY BE NECESSARY FOR PUBLIC OFFICIALS WHO MAY HAVE POTENTIALLY CONFLICTING PUBLIC RESPONSIBILITIES TO SERVE ON STATE BOARDS OR COMMISSIONS.] The legislature declares that it is the policy of the state, when a public employee is appointed to serve on a state board or commission, regardless of whether such public service 1) is required of the employee by statute or 2) may have potentially conflicting public responsibilities, that the holding of [TWO OR MORE] such offices does not constitute the holding of incompatible offices unless expressly prohibited by the Alaska Constitution, this chapter and any opinions or decisions rendered under it, or another statute.

Amendment No. 2:

Sec. 39.52.110. SCOPE OF CODE. (a) The legislature reaffirms that each public officer holds office as a public trust, and any effort to benefit a personal or financial interest through official action is a violation of that trust. In addition, the legislature finds, so long as it does not interfere with the full and faithful discharge of an officer's public duties and responsibilities, that this chapter does not prevent an officer from accepting employment outside state service or following other independent pursuits. [THIS CHAPTER, HOWEVER, DOES NOT PREVENT AN OFFICER FROM ACCEPTING OTHER EMPLOYMENT OR FOLLOWING A PURSUIT THAT DOES NOT INTERFERE WITH THE FULL AND FAITHFUL DISCHARGE OF THE OFFICER'S PUBLIC DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES.] The legislature further recognizes that...

[NOTHING IN THIS SECTION PRECLUDES THE ACCEPTANCE OF TRAVEL OR HOSPITALITY GIVEN TO A PUBLIC OFFICER TO AID OR ASSIST IN THE PERFORMANCE OF OFFICIAL DUTIES IF THE OFFICER'S DESIGNATED SUPERVISOR DETERMINES THAT ACCEPTANCE DOES NOT INTERFERE WITH THE FULL AND FAITHFUL DISCHARGE OF THE OFFICER'S PUBLIC DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES.]

CONTINUATION of FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

For Bill/Resolution No. SS SB 391

This bill provides a code of ethics for the guidance of public officers and employees in the executive branch. It establishes procedure to determine if violations exist and requires that the attorney general provide advisory opinions to interpret the Act and recommend corrective action, as may be needed. The bill also requires that the attorney general investigate complaints on suspected violations and bring allegations before the state personnel board, where appropriate. Based on the experience of other states who have implemented similar legislation, we can expect between 200 and 300 requests for advisory opinions during the first year (FY 87) after the bill goes into effect. We have no accurate guide to determine how many complaints may have to be investigated, but obviously there will be more than a few. Consequently, there will be a heavy caseload almost from the day the bill takes effect on July 1, 1986. We therefore anticipate that the services of two attorneys will be needed for at least the first two years. This is the time it will take to deal with a wide variety of conflict issues that will arise when the bill is implemented.

Justification

This is a request for the first of two attorneys that will be needed to implement the executive branch ethics bill. The bill provides that the attorney general will provide advisory opinions to agencies, boards and commissions regarding potential conflicts of interest. The bill also provides that the attorney general will investigate all complaints and, where appropriate, bring allegations before the state personnel board for action. The attorney general would also be empowered to seek civil penalties. Based on the experience of other states, we anticipate between 200 and 300 requests for advisory opinions during the first year that the bill goes into effect. For this reason, we are reporting that this position be established at the beginning of FY 87. The duties of the position will require full working level attorney experience and allocation to Attorney IV is therefore recommended.

Justification

This is a request for the second of two attorneys that will be needed to implement the executive branch ethics bill. This position will assist the first attorney in rendering advisory opinions and will have primary responsibility for investigating complaints. We anticipate a flood of opinion requests beginning on July 1, 1986. Complaint handling will begin on January 1, 1987. Advisory opinion requests must be satisfied within 60 days. Because we expect between 200 and 300 such requests within the first year, and because we must also be in a position to begin investigating complaints by January 1, 1987, this second position should be established by September 1, 1986. Allocation to the Attorney III level is recommended in view of the availability of the Attorney IV, who can handle the more complex issues.

Justification

This is a request for a legal secretary position to provide clerical support for the two attorneys being assigned to handle executive branch ethics work. This work will involve a high volume of written opinions, prosecution of violations, and civil litigation to impose and collect penalties. The position will be responsible for producing all of the written work, including opinions and legal documents. Allocation to Legal Secretary I is therefore recommended.

SB 391

Position Paper

Department of Law

The provisions of SB 391 encompass all executive branch public officials and employees. A "public official" is defined as any executive branch employee at a range 26 or higher, all division directors, all members of state boards and commissions, any person appointed as an assistant to the governor, and the executive directors of some forty-eight boards and commissions.

A "public employee" is defined as all executive branch employees in the classified, partially-exempt, or exempt service. All agencies and departments of the state are covered by the bill, including the University of Alaska, the Alaska Railroad, as well as all public and quasi-public corporations.

Employees at a range 26 or higher and members of forty-eight specifically listed boards and commissions must file financial disclosure statements, reporting their financial or business interests. These disclosure requirements were transferred from the Conflict of Interest Law to the new bill, so that all executive branch officials previously filing with the APOC now file financial disclosure statements with the new ethics commission.

The bill creates the seven-member Alaska Ethics Commission to administer the ethics law. The members are appointed by the governor, subject to legislative confirmation. Only one member of the commission may be a public official or employee.

The bill sets out a code of ethics that prohibits a public official or employee from the following acts:

A. the misuse of one's official position for personal gain;

B. the acceptance of any gift or benefit where it can reasonably be interpreted as an act intended to influence or reward the official or employee for actions taken to benefit the giver;

C. the use of information that has not been communicated to the public ("insider information") or the disclosure of information that is confidential by law;

D. having a personal or financial interest in a state grant, contract, lease, or loan if the official or employee could in any way affect the award, execution, or administration of that grant, contract, lease, or loan;

E. providing representation, advice, or assistance to any person concerning a matter pending before the agency that the official or employee serves;

F. holding outside employment if that work is in conflict with the duties of the state job held;

G. for two years after state service, representing any person for compensation regarding a matter in which the official or employee participated personally and substantially while employed by the state; and

H. knowingly aiding an official or employee who is in violation of the ethics law.

The bill creates procedures whereby officials and employees may seek advisory opinions concerning their particular standing under the various provisions of the ethics code. The bill also sets out procedures for filing complaints and holding hearings concerning alleged violations of the code of ethics.

The bill requires a series of reports to be filed by all officials and employees concerning (1) the receipt of any gift or benefit where the giver could benefit from the official's or employee's actions; (2) the personal and financial interest of any official or employee in any state grant, contract, lease, or loan; and (3) any employment held outside state service while employed by the state.

The bill requires the establishment of an education program by the commission to provide information to the public and officials and employees regarding the ethics law.

The bill staggers the effective dates of the bill. The commission is created in July of this year so that staff can be hired and the commission's education program can be in place by year's end. The sections of the bill providing for the issuance of advisory opinions become effective January 1, 1987, so that officials and employees may seek guidance from the commission in order that any necessary reassignments, transfers, or divestitures that need to occur can be accomplished before the code is actually in force. The provisions of the code of ethics itself take effect July 1, 1987.

The bill provides for the protection of employees who report violations of state and federal law: a so-called "whistleblowers" act.

The bill has been drafted with the following assumptions in mind:

1. A code of ethics is both necessary and desirable, as it supersedes the common law on conflicts of interest, including replacement of the common law standard of "appearance of impropriety" with the specific standards set out in the code.

2. The bill describes general prohibitions in the code of ethics because a bill which attempts to predict every imaginable conflict is not workable and becomes a negative rather than a positive document.

3. Members of boards and commissions pose unique problems because citizens appointed to such bodies are often sought for their expertise in the very areas regulated by the boards on which they serve; therefore, it should be left to the commission to adopt specific regulations concerning the code's interface with non-salaried members of boards and commissions after some history with the law has been established.

4. The bill requires various reports to be made by public officials and employees and gives broad authority to further refine the code through the adoption of administrative regulations. After a period of time, the actual experience of the state's work force, as detailed in the reports filed under the law, will enable the commission to intelligently refine the general prohibitions of the code through the adoption of meaningful regulations based on fact, not fancy.

5. The most significant aspect of the bill is its provisions for the issuance of advisory opinions, which can be sought by any current or former public official or employee. This will provide executive branch officials and employees with the opportunity to seek guidance in matters currently left to choice or doubt and thus contribute significantly to increased public trust in our public servants.

SB 391 reflects Governor Sheffield's commitment to imposing a uniform standard of conduct on the executive branch and its adoption is urged by the Department of Law. Under the current common law regarding conflicts of interests, the Department finds itself having to frequently interpret -- on a case-by-case basis -- the common law standard, a standard which is both confusing and poorly understood. A specific set of standards, as are codified in SB 391, will remove from "ethics" that haze of mystery which currently surrounds it. In addition, the Department of Law is often asked to give advice concerning possible improprieties or conflicts, but we have no enforcement powers. By placing in statute a code of ethics, the new commission will have the authority to compel compliance, thus guaranteeing a higher level of public trust.

FOREWORD

The Council of State Governments is pleased to collaborate with the Council on Governmental Ethics Laws in the preparation of this Campaign Finance, Ethics, and Lobby Law Blue Book for 1984-85. This volume illustrates the variety of approaches that the 50 states, the District of Columbia, and our Canadian neighbors have adopted in reconciling the conflicting, but equally important, goals of improving access to government and continuing to preserve the integrity of public officials and employees.

The Office of the Chief Election Officer of Ontario and his colleagues with the Council on Governmental Ethics Laws have done an admirable job in compiling information on campaign finance, conflict of interest, and lobbying laws from the agencies which are responsible for regulating these areas. We hope that you will find this volume to be a valuable reference work.

PREFACE

The Blue Book, now in its fifth edition, is a compilation of information regarding electoral, campaign finance, and ethics regulatory agencies. In particular, this book contains a summary of campaign finance, public financing, conflict of interest (ethics) and lobbying laws compiled from questionnaires completed by such aforementioned American and Canadian agencies which responded to a survey distributed by the COGEL in the autumn of 1983.

Also included is a synopsis of the structure of the agencies established to interpret and regulate these statutes, along with their names, addresses and telephone numbers. Furthermore, this edition contains statutory references to applicable statutes, and a section of important descriptive notations provided by certain agencies in regard to their current status and interests. For any additional information, please contact tne appropriate agency.

In using the Blue Book, one should be aware of the political-cultural differences between the American and Canadian political systems. The Canadian system, based on the British parliamentary model, does not have conflict of interest and personal financial disclosure legislation comparable to that in the American system. The Canadian system does not have legislation regulating lobbyists; this system does not have judicial candidates, etc.

I wish to thank all the state, federal and provincial agencies which responded to our lengthy survey. Very special thanks must be given to James Whelan and David Johnson; their labor, patience and care made this edition a reality.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

ALABAMA: - State Ethics Commission

Ethics laws amended to prohibit lawyer-legislators from representing prison inmates before the State Pardon and Parole Board.

CONNECTICUT: - State Elections Commission

Significant increase in number of P.A.C.'s registered. Legislation to curb influence of P.A.C. contributions was only partially successful. Ideological P.A.C.'s still have no limits on amount of contributions to any campaign.

Commission is presently appealing a lower court ruling which limits jurisdiction over ballot questions.

- State Ethics Commission

Financial Disclosure:

- debts over $10,000.00 reported;
- leases and contracts with State reported.

Conflicts of Interest:

- illegal gains can be recouped.

Lobbying:

- gifts within six months of termination reported;
- violators of lobbying law may be denied re-registration for up to two years.

FLORIDA: - State Commission on Ethics

Agency authorized by legislature to prepare mailing lists of all public officials required to file financial disclosure statements.

ILLINOIS: - State Board of Elections

The Illinois General Assembly passed several measures affecting compaign disclosure, including public funding of gubernatorial campaigns, and altering dollar limits for disclosure of individual contributions. This legislation was subjected to a Governor's veto; the status quo stands.

INDIANA: - State Election Board

There has been a statutory increase in the amount that corporation and labour unions may contribute to candidates, from $3,000.00 and $1,000.00 to $5,000.00 and $2,000.00 respectively. The Attorney General also issued an opinion which contends that because state law is silent on the subject, P.A.C.'s may make unlimited contributions to any candidate.

IOWA: - Campaign Finance Disclosure Commission

Effective January 1, 1984, chapter 56 of the Iowa Code will be amended, changing Iowa forms and manuals. New forms and manuals are available to interested parties.

MARYLAND: - State Ethics Commission

Amendments were authorized to allow local Boards of Education to enact their own financial disclosure, lobbying, and conflict of interest regulations, if such Boards did not want to be subject to county ethics laws.

MICHIGAN: - Campaign and Lobby Records Division

The Michigan State Supreme Court has refused to hear an appeal on the Lobby Registration Act. The Court of Appeals decision that the law is constitutional was therefore upheld. The Act went into effect September 21, 1983.

NEW YORK: - Temporary State Commission on Lobbying

The Lobbying Act of 1981 was amended in 1983 to, require a one-time $50.00 registration fee for lobbyists, bring public corporations under the law, and extend the life of the Commission for four years. The Commission established the Northeastern Regional Conference on Lobbying in 1982. The Commission increased the tempo of its unregistered lobbyist programme by pursuing those unregistered parties which lobbied the legislature, governor and state agencies.

OREGON: - Government Ethics Commission

An Omnibus Bill was considered during the 1983 regular session, and defeated. The bill would have criminalized the code of ethics, added administrative agency lobbying to lobby regulation laws and referred all complaints to an independent fact finder. The O.G.E.C. opposed many parts of the bill. The bill's sponsors have filed an initiative petition to implement some of the bill's provisions; if the initiative is successful, the measure will appear on the 1984 general election ballot.

CANADA

MANITOBA: - Chief Electoral Office

A new Election Financing Act has been passed. This Act provides for partial financing of political parties and candidates. It will also abolish the Elections Commission, placing enforcement power in the hands of the Chief Electoral Officer. The Act has not yet been proclaimed.

QUEBEC: - Le Directeur general des elections du Quebec

Pursuant to the adoption of the Act respecting the Integration of the Administration of the Electoral System (1982, ch.54) the responsibility of the laws pertaining to the financing of political parties has been entrusted to the Chief Electoral Officer of Quebec. By this Bill, the whole administration of the electoral system came under the authorization of the Directeur general of Elections.

CHAIRMAN

Senate Committee on State Affairs

April 9, 1986

LETTER OF INTENT - SCS CSHB 454 (SA)
BY THE SENATE STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

It is the intent of the Senate State Affairs Committee in adopting the SCS for CSHB 454 (SA) that Sections 1, 2, and 3 of the bill comply with the initiative relating to the compensation for state legislators. These sections are included in HB 454 to bring into one measure related matters pertaining to compensation of state officers.

Some drafting changes were made to conform language of the proposed legislation to existing statutes and to correct errors; e.g., Section 1 of the bill v. Section 2 of the initiative.

A minor change is made in compensation of legislators performing official duties while the legislature is not in session. The initiative provides that actual expenses be reimbursed in lieu of per diem. The bill provides that per diem be paid, as was the practice at the time when the salary of legislators was the same as that set forth in Section 2 of the initiative. Provision of per diem, regardless disincentives to carrying out legislative work, to economizing on expenses, and to using low costs modes of travel and accommodations. The purpose of these revisions in the per diem language is to assure that legislators will be properly compensated for the performance of their constitutional duties and to avoid excessive individual expenses.

Both Sections 3 of the initiative and HB 454 provide for a report covering legislator's compensation to be made by the legislative fiscal officer. Under the initiative, the report is to be filed with the Office of Management and Budget in the Governor's Office. The Committee believes that such filing would be transgressing on the separation of power between the legislative and executive branches.

Therefore, SCS CSHB 454 (SA) provides that the report be filed with the Legislature's Fiscal Office. The basic purpose of the initiative -- providing a report available to the public -- is maintained under this minor change.

CONTINUATION of FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

For SSSB 391

This bill provides a code of ethics for the guidance of public officers and employees in the executive branch. It establishes procedures to determine if violations exist and requires the attorney general to investigate suspected violations and bring allegations before the State Personnel Board where appropriate. The Personnel Board's duties are to appoint a hearing officer in instances where the alleged violation is contested, adopt or amend hearing officers' recommendations, and impose penalties for confirmed violations.

The members of the State Personnel Board serve without compensation but are entitled to receive travel expenses and per diem when convened. The Board would have to retain independent counsel when they required legal advice to ensure the integrity of the proposed legislation.

It is anticipated that questions and determinations of activities which pose a possible violation of the code of ethics will be more numerous during the first twelve to eighteen months after the bill becomes effective. This assumption is reflected in the number of hearings and Personnel Board meetings budgeted for successive fiscal years.

STATE OF ALASKA

BILL SHEFFIELD, GOVERNOR

DEPARTMENT OF LAW

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

POUCH K – STATE CAPITOL
JUNEAU, ALASKA 99811
PHONE: (907) 465-3600

April 2, 1986

The Honorable Mitch Abood
Chair
Senate State Affairs Committee
Alaska State Legislature
P. O. Box V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Abood:

This letter is written to provide the Senate State Affairs Committee with a sectional analysis of the Sponsor Substitute for Senate Bill 391, the proposed ethics law. The primary achievement of this bill is the establishment, in statute, of a code of ethics for all public officers in the executive branch. The bill replaces the relatively unknown and unworkable aspects of the common law on conflict of interests with more concrete standards. The standards have been developed with two somewhat competing goals in mind: the need to clearly establish high standards of conduct for executive branch officers and the desire to allow those officers to engage in personal and financial activities outside the public sector.

As you are aware, several attempts have been made in past years to enact legislation providing ethical standards for the executive branch. Most recently, Senate Bill 501 was introduced in 1984 at the request of Governor Sheffield, but it did not pass during the 13th Alaska Legislature.

The bill before you reflects the combined work of the Senate Special Committee on Procurement and Ethics and the Department of Law. It also represents a significant revision from the original bill, which created a separate commission to administer the law and was, in view of our current financial crisis, simply too expensive to be practical. We believe this revised bill creatively solves the funding problems while maintaining the critical substance of the code of ethics itself.

Hopefully the enclosed sectional analysis will answer many of your committee's concerns regarding the ethics bill; however, the staff of the Department of Law stands ready to assist the committee in its review and discussion of SSSB 391.

We appreciate the time and energy you and the other committee members and staff have devoted -- and will no doubt be devoting -- to this bill.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD M. BROWN

SECTIONAL ANALYSIS

Section 1: This section of the bill amends AS 39 ("Public Officers and Employees") by adding a new chapter called the "Alaska Executive Branch Ethics Act." The proposed new Act contains six articles:

Article 1: Declarations
Article 2: Code of Ethics
Article 3: Disclosure and Action to Prevent Violation of Code
Article 4: Complaints; Hearing Procedures
Article 5: Enforcement; Remedies
Article 6: General Provisions

Because sec. 1 comprises almost the entire bill, we have organized our analysis of sec. 1 by the articles listed above.

ARTICLE 1. DECLARATIONS.

Article 1 of the new chapter sets out legislative declarations. The important public purpose behind the need for and adoption of an executive-branch ethics statute requires a strong legislative statement in the statute itself.

Sec. 39.52.010. DECLARATION OF POLICY. AS 39.52.010 specifically states the legislature's belief in the value of a code of ethics for executive-branch officers as a safeguard of the public trust. ("Officers" is defined as all employees of executive-branch agencies and all members of boards or commissions.)

ARTICLE 2. CODE OF ETHICS.

Article 2 contains the code of ethics.

Sec. 39.52.110. SCOPE OF CODE. To clarify the intent behind the code of ethics, this section describes its scope. One of the major criticisms heard is that it is difficult to get qualified people to serve in public office. This section of the bill makes it clear that the legislature, in enacting the code of ethics, recognizes in a representative democracy, which draws its public officers from society, that those officers cannot and should not be without a personal or financial stake in Alaska, so long as those private interests do not interfere with the full and faithful discharge of the officer's public responsibilities. Additionally, this section clarifies the intent to distinguish between those minor and insignificant conflicts that are unavoidable in our free society and those conflicts that are substantial and material and must be prohibited.

While the code's subsequent provisions set out stern prohibitions on conduct, public officers are encouraged to have and maintain private interests so long as those interests do not improperly benefit the officers through abuse of the responsibilities given to them by their public office.

The code of ethics establishes eight types of ethical violations: (1) misuse of official position; (2) improper acceptance or solicitation of gifts or benefits; (3) improper use or disclosure of information; (4) improper influence in state grants, contracts, leases, or loans; (5) improper representation; (6) acceptance of certain prohibited employment outside of government positions; (7) prohibited representation in matters after leaving state service; and (8) aiding in a violation of the code. AS 39.52.120 -- 39.52.190.

Sec. 39.52.120. MISUSE OF OFFICIAL POSITION. One of the clearest areas of public concern revolves around the conduct addressed in AS 39.52.120. This section prohibits a public officer from using, or attempting to use, an official position for personal gain or to intentionally secure unwarranted benefits for any person. AS 39.52.120(a).

Several types of actions are specifically mentioned as examples of misuse of official position: e.g., the use of one's position to extract other employment or contracts; the use of state time, property, or equipment to benefit the officer's personal or financial interests; the taking or withholding of official action by an officer in order to benefit the officer's personal or financial interests. This section also addresses the supervisor/subordinate relationship and prohibits activities that have in the past caused problems, including a prohibition against close economic associations between supervisors and subordinates, and activities that could suggest possible coercion of a subordinate by a supervisor. AS 39.52.120(b).

Sec. 39.52.130. IMPROPER GIFTS OR BENEFITS. This section addresses another potential abuse: the receipt of a gift or benefit under circumstances in which it could be inferred that the gift or benefit was intended to improperly influence the officer in the performance of his or her official duties. This section creates an objective -- rather than a subjective -- test by which the propriety of soliciting or receiving a gift or benefit can be judged from the viewpoint of a "reasonable person." Travel or hospitality given to aid a public officer in the performance of official duties may be accepted if the officer's designated supervisor (defined in AS 39.52.960) determines that acceptance does not interfere with the full and faithful discharge of the officer's public duties and responsibilities. AS 39.52.130(a).

The bill also sets up a reporting requirement for the receipt of a gift or benefit worth over $25 if the public officer can take or withhold official action that benefits the giver. AS 39.52.130(b).

A designated supervisor may seek advice from the attorney general regarding the acceptance of gifts or benefits. AS 39.52.130(c).

The restrictions relating to gifts or benefits do not apply to campaign contributions to candidates for elected office so long as the contributions comply with the laws and regulations governing elections and campaign disclosure. AS 39.52.130(d).

Sec. 39.52.140. IMPROPER USE OR DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION. One commonly expressed complaint is that public officers are able to improperly benefit themselves or family members through the improper use of information gained in the course of their employment. The so-called "insider information" problem is the issue addressed in AS 39.52.140. This section specifically prohibits the use or disclosure of information that either has not been "communicated" to the public (AS 39.52.140(a)) or is confidential by law (AS 39.52.140(b)).

This section sets a fairly high standard. It requires, before officers (or members of their immediate families) can benefit personally or financially from the use or disclosure of information available, that the information first have "been communicated to the public." This means that the information was not simply "available" to the public, but that in some affirmative way the information was first communicated to others outside the agency, whether by newsletter, legislative testimony, a published report, a press release, a legal notice, a speech, etc. It is believed that more than just simple "availability" is necessary to avoid claims that public sector officers are acting improperly because of their access to potentially very beneficial information.

Sec. 39.52.150. IMPROPER INFLUENCE IN STATE GRANTS, CONTRACTS, LEASES, OR LOANS. Much public scrutiny has recently been focused on the conduct addressed by this provision of the code of ethics. This section prohibits an officer from improperly influencing state grant, contract, lease, or loan procedures. Specifically, a public officer or member of the officer's immediate family may not attempt to acquire, receive, apply for, be a party to, or have a personal or financial interest in a state grant, contract, lease, or loan if the public officer may take or withhold official action that affects its award, execution, or administration. AS 39.52.150(a). There are exceptions listed to this broad prohibition, which focus on the specific conditions under which the grant, contract, lease, or loan is solicited or awarded. AS 39.52.150(b) -- 39.52.150(c).

In addition, a public officer must report to the commission any personal or financial interests held by the officer or an immediate family member in any state grant, contract, lease, or loan that is awarded by the agency the officer serves. AS 39.52.150(d).

Sec. 39.52.160. IMPROPER REPRESENTATION. Another public concern addressed by the code is the issue of public officers using the advantage of their position in representation before public agencies to benefit their personal or financial interests. This section generally prohibits an officer from representing, advising, or assisting any person concerning a matter pending before the administrative unit that the officer serves. AS 39.52.160(a).

This prohibition does not apply, however, to activities related to collective bargaining, such as the processing of a grievance by an employee representative. AS 39.52.160(b).

In addition, this section clarifies, in the case of a non-salaried member of a board or commission, that the prohibition on representation does not preclude a member of a board or commission from taking responsibility for a matter affecting the member's personal business which is regulated by the very board or commission on which the member serves, so long as the member does not participate, deliberate, or vote on the particular matter when the issue comes before the board or commission for its review or determination. AS 39.52.160(c).

Sec. 39.52.170. OUTSIDE EMPLOYMENT RESTRICTED. Although AS 39.52.110 makes it clear that holding employment outside of state service is acceptable, the public interest requires that certain restrictions be placed on this privilege. This section prohibits public employees from rendering services or accepting employment outside of their agencies if the outside service or employment is incompatible or in conflict with the proper discharge of their official duties. AS 39.52.170(a). As is currently required by personnel rules, public employees must quarterly report outside employment to their designated supervisor. AS 39.52.170(b).

Sec. 39.52.180. RESTRICTIONS ON EMPLOYMENT AFTER LEAVING STATE SERVICE. The most difficult area to address in this legislation is the post-employment situation. The public interest requires that some restrictions be placed on the range of activities that former public officers may perform in the private sector. Of course, regardless of whether employment is in the public or private sector, the expertise and knowledge one gains in a job are transferable skills that employees rightfully take with them and that enable the employees to seek more responsible positions. We must also consider that while Alaska has a relatively small workforce, government is the state's largest employer.

The development of a post-employment provision that places legitimate restrictions on the use of one's employment experience is, for these reasons, a difficult task. We believe that the post-employment section of this bill reflects a compromise between competing interests. That compromise protects the state's significant interests but does not unfairly restrict an officer's ability to work in the private sector after leaving state service.

Specifically, AS 39.52.180 prohibits certain types of representation by former public officers for two years after leaving their public positions. The two-year ban is narrowly drawn: an officer is only prohibited from representing, advising, or assisting a person for compensation regarding a matter (1) that was under consideration by the administrative unit directly served and (2) in which the officer participated personally and substantially through the exercise of official action. A "matter" is precisely defined to include a case, proceeding, application, contract, or determination, and does not include activities related to legislation or regulations. AS 39.52.180(a).

This section does not prevent an agency from contracting with a former public officer to act on the state's behalf. AS 39.52.180(b). Additionally, the head of an agency may waive, in writing, application of this section after determining that representation by a former public officer is not adverse to the public interest. A waiver is subject to the approval of the attorney general. AS 39.52.180(c).

Sec. 39.52.190. AIDING A VIOLATION. Finally, the bill simply states that it is an ethical violation for a public officer to knowingly aid another officer in a violation of AS 39.52.

ARTICLE 3. DISCLOSURE AND ACTION TO PREVENT VIOLATION OF CODE.

Article 3 sets out the various procedures that public officers have available to them for the prevention of a violation of the code of ethics. A major aspect of this legislation is its "preventative" posture. Public officers must be able to seek and receive prompt advice in order to avoid actions that might violate the code. It is these preventative procedures that give the bill its true strength, because it provides a positive approach to solving potential abuses and appropriately assists officers before the fact, rather than waiting for violations to occur which the attorney general must then prosecute.

Sec. 39.52.210. DECLARATION OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS BY PUBLIC EMPLOYEES. This section establishes a procedure for handling a potential violation of the code of ethics. A public employee who believes that he or she may be involved in a matter that could result in a violation of the code of ethics is required to immediately disclose the potential conflict to the designated supervisor and to refrain from taking any official action until a determination is made as to a possible conflict or ethical problem. AS 39.52.210(a).

The employee's designated supervisor shall then make a written determination of whether the employee's involvement could or does violate the code of ethics. AS 39.52.210(b). The supervisor shall reassign duties to cure the employee's violation, or direct the divestiture or removal by the employee of the conflicting personal or financial interests. Id. The supervisor may seek an advisory opinion from the attorney general. AS 39.52.210(c).

Sec. 39.52.220. DECLARATION OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS BY MEMBERS OF BOARDS OR COMMISSIONS. This section establishes procedures for handling a potential violation of the code of ethics by a member of a board or commission. A member of a board or commission who believes he or she may be involved in a matter that could result in a violation of a code of ethics must disclose the potential conflict on the record. AS 39.52.220(a). The board chair, as the designated supervisor, rules on whether or not the member's involvement could violate the code of ethics. Id. If a determination is made that a violation would exist if the member continued to participate, then the member must not only refrain from voting on the matter, but must also refrain from deliberating or participating in discussions regarding that particular matter. Id.

The designated supervisor or the board or commission may request advice from the attorney general. AS 39.52.220(b).

Sec. 39.52.230. REPORTING OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS. This section states that any person may report a potential violation of the code of ethics to a designated supervisor for review and appropriate action.

Sec. 39.52.240. ADVISORY OPINIONS. This section covers requests by designated supervisors, or boards or commissions, for advice from the attorney general regarding appropriate conduct under AS 39.52. It is important to note that requests for advisory opinions are confidential. AS 39.52.240(g).

Advisory opinions must be issued within 60 days after the attorney general receives a completed request. AS 39.52.240(a). Because, however, there may be instances where delay in the receipt of an opinion would cause substantial inconvenience or detriment to the requesting party, this section allows the attorney general to give oral advice. AS 39.52.240(b). The designated supervisor or board or commission then makes a determination regarding an ethical problem. AS 39.52.240(c). If the attorney general has suggested more than one alternative, the supervisor or board or commission will select the most appropriate way to avoid or correct the problem. Id.

A public officer is not liable under AS 39.52 for any action carried out in accordance with a supervisor's determination. AS 39.52.240(d). The attorney general can revise or revoke an advisory opinion at any time (AS 39.52.240(e)), but anyone may rely on advisory opinions currently in effect (AS 39.52.240(f)). Attorney general opinions will be published in the Alaska Administrative Journal with sufficient deletions to prevent disclosure of the identities of persons involved. AS 39.52.240(h).

Sec. 39.52.250. ADVICE TO FORMER PUBLIC OFFICERS. Former public officers who need advice regarding their standing in relationship to the code of ethics may request an advisory opinion from the attorney general. AS 39.52.250(a). A former public officer who follows the advice of the attorney general is not liable under this new chapter for any action carried out in accordance with that advice, so long as the circumstances were fully disclosed. AS 39.52.250(b).

Sec. 39.52.260. DESIGNATED SUPERVISOR'S REPORT AND ATTORNEY GENERAL REVIEW. This section requires all designated supervisors to report to the attorney general any potential violations reported to them and the disposition of each matter. AS 39.52.260(a). The attorney general is required to review each of the reports filed, and may request additional information. AS 39.52.260(b). The report prepared by the supervisor is confidential and not available for public inspection unless formal proceedings are initiated as a result of a report filed. However, extracts of the report will be made available with sufficient deletions to prevent disclosure of any person's identity. AS 39.52.260(c).

ARTICLE 4. COMPLAINTS; HEARING PROCEDURES.

Article 4 of the new chapter establishes a complete process for handling complaints regarding violations of the provisions of AS 39.52.

Sec. 39.52.310. COMPLAINTS. This section sets out the procedures for handling a complaint, whether filed with the attorney general or initiated by the attorney general, and establishes the conditions under which a complaint will be accepted and investigated. The attorney general can initiate a complaint or elect to treat as a complaint a matter referred by a supervisor. AS 39.52.310(a). In addition, any person can file a complaint with the attorney general in writing. AS 39.52.310(b).

If a complaint alleges a violation by the governor, lieutenant governor, or the attorney general, the personnel board shall appoint independent counsel who shall act in place of the attorney general in reviewing the validity of the complaint filed and, if sufficient, taking the matter to hearing. AS 39.52.-310(c).

The attorney general shall review each complaint filed to determine whether it is properly completed and contains allegations which, if true, would constitute conduct in violation of AS 39.52. A complaint may be dismissed (AS 39.52.310(d)) or referred to the appropriate supervisor or board chair for resolution (AS 39.52.310(e)).

If the attorney general accepts a complaint for investigation, the attorney general must provide a copy of the complaint to the subject of the complaint for a response. The subject of the complaint must respond within 20 days with full and fair disclosure in writing of all the facts and circumstances pertaining to the alleged violation. AS 39.52.310(f). The attorney general shall investigate to determine whether a violation of the chapter has occurred. AS 39.52.310(g). A violation of AS 39.52 can be investigated only within two years after discovery of the alleged violation. AS 39.52.310(h).

Sec. 39.52.320. DISMISSAL BEFORE FORMAL PROCEEDINGS. If it appears that there is no probable cause to believe that a violation of the chapter has occurred, the attorney general will dismiss the complaint and prepare and file with the personnel board a confidential summary of the matter. The attorney general is required to communicate disposition of this matter promptly to both the complainant and the subject of the complaint.

Sec. 39.52.330. CORRECTIVE OR PREVENTIVE ACTION. This section provides the attorney general with the latitude to recommend action to correct or prevent a violation of the law, if the conduct complained about does not warrant the initiation of formal proceedings. The subject of the complaint is required to comply with the attorney general's recommendation.

Sec. 39.52.340. CONFIDENTIALITY. Information obtained by the attorney general during an investigation is confidential, unless and until formal proceedings are initiated. AS 39.52.340(a). The attorney general and persons contacted during the course of an investigation are required to maintain confidentiality regarding the existence of the investigation. Id. A person who violates the confidentiality provisions of this section is guilty of a class A misdemeanor. Id.

It is not a violation of this section, however, for a person to contact an attorney or participate in a criminal investigation. AS 39.52.340(b). This section also provides that the subject of the complaint may, if he or she so chooses, waive the confidentiality protections of this section. AS 39.52.340(c).

Sec. 39.52.350. PROBABLE CAUSE. If the attorney general finds that there is probable cause to believe that an officer has violated the code of ethics, the attorney general initiates formal proceedings by serving an accusation upon the subject of the complaint. The accusation must specifically set out the alleged violation and, after service, is a public document. Except for deliberations of the personnel board, all subsequent proceedings are open to the public. AS 39.52.350(a).

The subject of the accusation must file an answer to the accusation. AS 39.52.350(b). If the subject denies that a violation has occurred, the attorney general shall refer the matter to the personnel board for appointment of a hearing officer to conduct a hearing. AS 39.52.350(c). If, however, the subject admits an ethical violation, the attorney general shall refer the matter to the personnel board to impose appropriate penalties. AS 39.52.350(d).

Sec. 39.52.360. HEARINGS. AS 39.52.360 establishes the formal hearing process to be followed if a matter is referred to the personnel board for hearing. The hearing officer appointed by the personnel board may conduct pre-hearing conferences, administer oaths, hold hearings, take testimony, and issue subpoenas upon application by a party. AS 39.52.360(a) and (b).

The attorney general presents the charges and has the burden of demonstrating by a preponderance of evidence that the subject of the accusation has violated the new chapter. AS 39.52.360(c). The subject of an accusation may be represented by counsel; each party has the opportunity to be heard and cross-examine witnesses. AS 39.52.360(d).

Hearings held under this section are not subject to the Administrative Procedure Act. AS 39.52.360(e). During the hearing itself, technical rules of evidence do not apply but the hearing officer's findings must be based upon reliable and relevant evidence. All testimony and other evidence taken at the hearing must be recorded and the evidence maintained. AS 39.52.360(f). At the conclusion of the hearing, the hearing officer may direct the submission of proposed orders (AS 39.52.360(g)), and within 30 days after the conclusion of the formal hearing, the hearing officer must file a written report with the personnel board containing the officer's findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation (AS 39.52.360(h)).

Sec. 39.52.370. PERSONNEL BOARD ACTION. Either party to the hearing may protest the hearing officer's decision before the personnel board. Oral argument before the personnel board will be provided if requested. AS 39.52.370(a). The board may, for good cause shown, convene a hearing de novo or further augment the record with additional evidence. AS 39.52.370(b).

The personnel board shall review each report submitted by the hearing officer and any briefs filed and must either adopt or amend the findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation of the hearing officer. AS 39.52.370(c). The deliberations of the personnel board are not open to the public. Id. If the personnel board determines that a violation has occurred, it may impose certain civil penalties. AS 39.52.370(d). If the board determines that a violation has not occurred, it shall issue a written order of dismissal. Id. The personnel board secretary must promptly inform both parties of the board's action. AS 39.52.370(e). The subject of the accusation may appeal the board's decision by filing an appeal in the superior court. AS 39.52.370(f).

Sec. 39.52.380. SUBPOENAS. This section gives the attorney general, independent counsel retained by the personnel board, the personnel board, and appointed hearing officers certain subpoena powers.

Sec. 39.52.390. SERVICE. This section dictates how service of an accusation and other documents must be accomplished.

ARTICLE 5. ENFORCEMENT; REMEDIES.

Article 5 describes the enforcement powers available to both the personnel board and the state when a violation of the ethics Act has occurred. Because we wish the attorney general and the personnel board to be able to take relatively swift action, we have provided for a wide range of civil remedies and penalties, as opposed to providing for criminal penalties for violation of the Act.

Sec. 39.52.410. VIOLATIONS; PENALTIES FOR MISCONDUCT. Under this section, if a public employee is found to have violated AS 39.52, the personnel board has the authority to order the employee to stop engaging in the illegal action; may order divestiture, establishment of a blind trust, restitution, or forfeiture; and recommend that the employee's agency take disciplinary action against that employee. AS 39.52.410(a).

If the personnel board determines that a non-salaried member of a board or commission has violated AS 39.52, it may order the member to refrain from voting, deliberating, or participating in the matter; order restitution; or, in appropriate cases, recommend that the governor remove the offending member from the board or commission. AS 39.52.410(b).

If the board determines that a former public officer has violated AS 39.52, it shall issue a public statement of its findings and seek the attorney general's assistance in pursuing all legal remedies against that individual. AS 39.52.410(c).

Finally, if the board finds the governor or lieutenant governor in violation of AS 39.52, the board shall report the matter to the Alaska State Senate with its findings. AS 39.52.410(d).

Sec. 39.52.420. DISCIPLINARY ACTION FOR VIOLATION. This section states that a violation of the code of ethics contained in AS 39.52 is a valid reason for an executive-branch agency to discipline an employee. AS 39.52.420(a). An agency may initiate appropriate disciplinary action without waiting for the attorney general to file an accusation or the board to complete formal proceedings. AS 39.52.420(b).

Sec. 39.52.430. ACTIONS VOIDABLE. This section describes the actions that may be taken by the state if state grants, contracts, leases, or loans have been entered into or received in violation of AS 39.52.

Sec. 39.52.440. CIVIL PENALTIES. This section provides that the personnel board may impose civil penalties not to exceed $5,000 on a current or former public officer for a violation of the ethics Act.

Sec. 39.52.450. PAYMENT OF TWICE THE FINANCIAL BENEFIT. This section gives the personnel board the authority to seek from a current or formal public officer payment of up to twice the financial benefit realized by a person in violation of AS 39.52.

Sec. 39.52.460. CRIMINAL SANCTIONS ADDITIONAL. This section clarifies that the civil penalties provided for in art. 5 of the ethics Act are in addition to any criminal actions that may be pursued.

ARTICLE 6. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Sec. 39.52.910. APPLICABILITY. This section gives notice that the bill applies generally to all public officers in executive-branch agencies, and that AS 39.52 supersedes the common law on conflicts of interests, including replacement of the common law standard of "the appearance of impropriety" with the specific standards set out in the code of ethics in art. 2 of AS 39.52. AS 39.52.910(a) and (b). This chapter is not subject to collective bargaining. AS 39.52.910(c).

Sec. 39.52.920. AGENCY POLICIES. This section establishes that agencies have the authority to adopt written policies for their employees which are more restrictive than the code of ethics. These agency policies are subject to the attorney general's review and approval.

Sec. 39.52.930. COOPERATION. This section requires agencies in all branches of state government to cooperate fully with the attorney general and the personnel board in the performance of their duties.

Sec. 39.52.940. CONSTRUCTION. This section calls for a liberal construction of the bill's provisions in order to promote high ethical standards in state government.

Sec. 39.52.950. REGULATIONS. Under this section, the attorney general is empowered to adopt necessary regulations to implement AS 39.52.

Sec. 39.52.960. DEFINITIONS. This section of the new chapter sets out definitions for the new code of ethics.

Section 2: This section of the bill amends AS 39.25.060(c) to make the members of the personnel board removable only for cause. The additional responsibilities granted the board under the new ethics law require that the members of the personnel board be free from possible interference in the performance of their duties. Therefore, unless cause can be shown, the governor should be prohibited from freely removing personnel board members from office.

Section 3: This section amends AS 39.25.070, relating to the powers of the personnel board, to add authority to perform the functions granted to the board by the new ethics Act, including authority to appoint hearing officers, review the recommendations of hearing officers, determine whether a violation of the code of ethics had occurred, and impose penalties for a violation of the code.

Section 4: This section of the bill provides for consistency between AS 42.40, regarding employees of the Alaska Railroad, and the new AS 39.52, which covers employees of the railroad as well as directors of the Alaska Railroad Corporation.

Section 5: This section of the bill merely adds attorney general ethics advisory opinions to the list of items to be published in the Alaska Administrative Journal, consistent with the proposed requirement in AS 39.52.240(h) (sec. 1 of the bill).

Section 6: Because the enforcement and remedy provisions in the new ethics law do not take effect until January 1987, this section of the bill clarifies that the attorney general and the personnel board do not have jurisdiction over any alleged violation of the code of ethics occurring before January 1, 1987, unless the violation continues after that date.

Section 7: Under this section of the bill, an agency with an existing policy related to conflicts of interests or the ethical performance of official duties is required to submit that policy to the attorney general for necessary review and approval by January 1, 1987.

Section 8: The sections of the ethics law regarding policy, the issuance of advisory opinions, declarations of potential violations, and the definition section, take effect July 1, 1986.

Section 9: The code of ethics itself, the complaint and hearing procedures, and the law's enforcement and remedy provisions (AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 and AS 39.52.310 -- 39.52.460) will take effect January 1, 1987.

Different effective dates have been provided so that public officers, immediately upon passage of the bill, may seek guidance from the attorney general concerning their standing under the new code of ethics, in order that any reassignments, transfers, or divestitures that need to occur can be accomplished before the code of ethics, as well as the complaint process, is in force.

BILL SHEFFIELD
GOVERNOR

SSSB 391

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

April 2, 1986

The Honorable Don Bennett
President of the Senate
Alaska State Legislature
P. O. Box V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Senator Bennett:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18 of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a sponsor substitute for Senate Bill 391, a bill relating to the ethical conduct of executive-branch officers. This sponsor substitute was necessitated by the substantial costs associated with the original version of SB 391, costs that primarily resulted from the creation of a separate commission to administer the new ethics Act.

While we adjudge the original version of SB 391 to be "perfect world" legislation, the version before you is one of those rarities: a compromise that substantially reduces the level of funding necessary while maintaining the bill's primary goal: the establishment -- in statute -- of a code of ethics for all public officers in the executive branch, and replacement of the relatively unknown and unworkable aspects of the common law on conflicts of interests with concrete standards of conduct.

The sponsor substitute continues to establish in AS 39 a new chapter entitled the "Alaska Executive Branch Ethics Act," but this sponsor substitute removes from the bill the creation of a separate commission to administer the new law. Instead, the bill relies upon two existing entities to shoulder responsibility for enforcement of the code of ethics: the Department of Law and the state's personnel board.

New staff positions in the Department of Law will 1) provide the executive branch with opinions and advice concerning the substance and intent of the code of ethics, 2) accept and investigate legitimate complaints, and 3) take to formal hearing probable cause violations of the code. The state's personnel board, which has already had some limited experience in evaluating allegations of employee misconduct, will appoint hearing officers or independent counsel and act as the final determiner in matters that have gone to hearing, and will, through the provision of new enforcement powers to the board, order appropriate penalties and remedies.

As a result of conversations with representatives of various departments, language has been added to AS 39.52.130(a), providing for acceptance of travel or hospitality by department personnel if acceptance does not compromise an officer in the proper performance of his or her duties.

In this sponsor substitute, under certain conditions, a non-salaried member of a board or commission is not precluded from participating in personal or financial matters that are regulated by the board or commission on which the member serves. AS 39.52.160(c).

Sections 2 and 3 of the sponsor substitute amend existing statutes relating to the personnel board, to reflect the board's duties and responsibilities under this bill.

In addition, this substitute legislation does not transfer any of the financial disclosure reporting requirements from the current conflict of interests law (AS 39.50) to the new executive ethics chapter. Executive branch officials who currently file conflict of interest statements will continue to file their statements with the Alaska Public Offices Commission.

Because no transfer of financial disclosure reporting requirements is contained in this sponsor substitute, the bill's previous extensive amendments to AS 39.50 have been eliminated. While many of the proposed changes to AS 39.50 deserve the attention of the legislature, many of the changes exist in other bills currently before the legislature, and we have, for that reason, and for the sake of simplicity, dropped them from this substitute bill.

Finally, inasmuch as passage of the "whistleblower" legislation currently pending before the legislature appears likely, I have also removed similar whistleblower provisions from SB 391.

Hence, SSSB 391 is considerably shortened and much leaner than the original. A sectional analysis of the revised legislation follows, for the legislature's use in reviewing the proposed bill and for the use of future researchers.

I believe that this sponsor substitute deserves prompt attention by the legislature. Passage of a code of ethics for the executive branch is a priority of my administration and, I hope, a priority of the legislature as well.

SECTIONAL ANALYSIS
OF SSSB 391

Section 1: This section of the bill amends AS 39 ("Public Officers and Employees") by adding a new chapter called the "Alaska Executive Branch Ethics Act." The proposed new Act contains six articles:

Article 1: Declarations
Article 2: Code of Ethics
Article 3: Disclosure and Action to Prevent Violation of Code
Article 4: Complaints; Hearing Procedures
Article 5: Enforcement; Remedies
Article 6: General Provisions

Because sec. 1 of SB 391 comprises almost the entire bill, we have decided to organize our analysis of sec. 1 by the articles listed above.

ARTICLE 1. DECLARATIONS.

Article 1 of the new chapter sets out legislative declarations. I believe that the important public purpose behind the need for and adoption of an executive-branch ethics statute requires a strong legislative statement in the statute itself.

Sec. 39.52.010. DECLARATION OF POLICY. AS 39.52.010 specifically states the legislature's belief in the value of a code of ethics for executive-branch officers as a safeguard of the public trust. ("Officers" is defined as all employees of executive-branch agencies and all members of boards or commissions.)

ARTICLE 2. CODE OF ETHICS.

Article 2 contains the code of ethics.

Sec. 39.52.110. SCOPE OF CODE. To clarify the intent behind the code of ethics, this section describes its scope. One of the major criticisms heard is that it is difficult to get qualified people to serve in public office. I wanted to make it clear in this section of the bill that the legislature, in enacting the code of ethics, recognizes in a representative democracy, which draws its public officers from society, that those officers cannot and should not be without a personal or financial stake in Alaska, so long as those private interests do not interfere with the full and faithful discharge of the officer's public responsibilities. Additionally, this section clarifies the intent to distinguish between those minor and insignificant conflicts that are unavoidable in our free society and those conflicts that are substantial and material and must be prohibited.

While the code's subsequent provisions set out stern prohibitions on conduct, public officers are encouraged to have and maintain private interests so long as those interests do not improperly benefit the officers through abuse of the responsibilities given to them by their public office.

The code of ethics establishes eight types of ethical violations: (1) misuse of official position; (2) improper acceptance or solicitation of gifts or benefits; (3) improper use or disclosure of information; (4) improper influence in state grants, contracts, leases, or loans; (5) improper representation; (6) acceptance of certain prohibited employment outside of government positions; (7) prohibited representation in matters after leaving state service; and (8) aiding in a violation of the code. AS 39.52.120 -- 39.52.190.

Sec. 39.52.120. MISUSE OF OFFICIAL POSITION. One of the clearest areas of public concern revolves around the conduct addressed in AS 39.52.120. This section prohibits a public officer from using, or attempting to use, an official position for personal gain or to intentionally secure unwarranted benefits for any person. AS 39.52.120(a).

Several types of actions are specifically mentioned as examples of misuse of official position: e.g., the use of one's position to extract other employment or contracts; the use of state time, property, or equipment to benefit the officer's personal or financial interests; the taking or withholding of official action by an officer in order to benefit the officer's personal or financial interests. This section also addresses the supervisor/subordinate relationship and prohibits activities that have in the past caused problems, including a prohibition against close economic associations between supervisors and subordinates, and activities that could suggest possible coercion of a subordinate by a supervisor. AS 39.52.120(b).

Sec. 39.52.130. IMPROPER GIFTS OR BENEFITS. This section addresses another potential abuse: the receipt of a gift or benefit under circumstances in which it could be inferred that the gift or benefit was intended to improperly influence the officer in the performance of his or her official duties. This section creates an objective -- rather than a subjective -- test by which the propriety of soliciting or receiving a gift or benefit can be judged from the viewpoint of a "reasonable person." Travel or hospitality given to aid a public officer in the performance of official duties may be accepted if the officer's designated supervisor (defined in AS 39.52.960) determines that acceptance does not interfere with the full and faithful discharge of the officer's public duties and responsibilities. AS 39.52.130(a).

The bill also sets up a reporting requirement for the receipt of a gift or benefit worth over $25 if the public officer can take or withhold official action that benefits the giver. AS 39.52.130(b).

A designated supervisor may seek advice from the attorney general regarding the acceptance of gifts or benefits. AS 39.52.130(c).

The restrictions relating to gifts or benefits do not apply to campaign contributions to candidates for elected office so long as the contributions comply with the laws and regulations governing elections and campaign disclosure. AS 39.52.130(d).

Sec. 39.52.140. IMPROPER USE OR DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION. One commonly expressed complaint is that public officers are able to improperly benefit themselves or family members through the improper use of information gained in the course of their employment. The so-called "insider information" problem is the issue addressed in AS 39.52.140. This section specifically prohibits the use or disclosure of information that either has not been "communicated" to the public (AS 39.52.140(a)) or is confidential by law (AS 39.52.-140(b)).

This section sets a fairly high standard. It requires, before officers (or members of their immediate families) can benefit personally or financially from the use or disclosure of information available, that the information first have "been communicated to the public." This means that the information was not simply "available" to the public, but that in some affirmative way the information was first communicated to others outside the agency, whether by newsletter, legislative testimony, a published report, a press release, a legal notice, a speech, etc. It is believed that more than just simple "availability" is necessary to avoid claims that public sector officers are acting improperly because of their access to potentially very beneficial information.

Sec. 39.52.150. IMPROPER INFLUENCE IN STATE GRANTS, CONTRACTS, LEASES, OR LOANS. Much public scrutiny has recently been focused on the conduct addressed by this provision of the code of ethics. This section prohibits an officer from improperly influencing state grant, contract, lease, or loan procedures. Specifically, a public officer or member of the officer's immediate family may not attempt to acquire, receive, apply for, be a party to, or have a personal or financial interest in a state grant, contract, lease, or loan if the public officer may take or withhold official action that affects its award, execution, or administration. AS 39.52.150(a). There are exceptions listed to this broad prohibition, which focus on the specific conditions under which the grant, contract, lease, or loan is solicited or awarded. AS 39.52.150(b) -- 39.52.-150(c).

In addition, a public officer must report to the commission any personal or financial interests held by the officer or an immediate family member in any state grant, contract, lease, or loan that is awarded by the agency the officer serves. AS 39.52.150(d).

Sec. 39.52.160. IMPROPER REPRESENTATION. Another public concern addressed by the code is the issue of public officers using the advantage of their position in representation before public agencies to benefit their personal or financial interests. This section generally prohibits an officer from representing, advising, or assisting any person concerning a matter pending before the administrative unit that the officer serves. AS 39.52.160(a).

This prohibition does not apply, however, to activities related to collective bargaining, such as the processing of a grievance by an employee representative. AS 39.52.160(b).

In addition, this section clarifies, in the case of a non-salaried member of a board or commission, that the prohibition on representation does not preclude a member of a board or commission from taking responsibility for a matter affecting the member's personal business which is regulated by the very board or commission on which the member serves, so long as the member does not participate, deliberate, or vote on the particular matter when the issue comes before the board or commission for its review or determination. AS 39.52.160(c).

Sec. 39.52.170. OUTSIDE EMPLOYMENT RESTRICTED. Although AS 39.52.110 makes it clear that holding employment outside of state service is acceptable, the public interest requires that certain restrictions be placed on this privilege. This section prohibits public employees from rendering services or accepting employment outside of their agencies if the outside service or employment is incompatible or in conflict with the proper discharge of their official duties. AS 39.52.170(a). As is currently required by personnel rules, public employees must quarterly report outside employment to their designated supervisor. AS 39.52.170(b).

Sec. 39.52.180. RESTRICTIONS ON EMPLOYMENT AFTER LEAVING STATE SERVICE. The most difficult area to address in this legislation is the post-employment situation. The public interest requires that some restrictions be placed on the range of activities that former public officers may perform in the private sector. Of course, regardless of whether employment is in the public or private sector, the expertise and knowledge one gains in a job are transferable skills that employees rightfully take with them and that enable the employees to seek more responsible positions. We must also consider that while Alaska has a relatively small workforce, government is the state's largest employer.

The development of a post-employment provision that places legitimate restrictions on the use of one's employment experience is, for these reasons, a difficult task. I believe that the post-employment section of this bill reflects a compromise between competing interests. That compromise protects the state's significant interests but does not unfairly restrict an officer's ability to work in the private sector after leaving state service.

Specifically, AS 39.52.180 prohibits certain types of representation by former public officers for two years after leaving their public positions. The two-year ban is narrowly drawn: an officer is only prohibited from representing, advising, or assisting a person for compensation regarding a matter (1) that was under consideration by the administrative unit directly served and (2) in which the officer participated personally and substantially through the exercise of official action. A "matter" is precisely defined to include a case, proceeding, application, contract, or determination, and does not include activities related to legislation or regulations. AS 39.52.180(a).

This section does not prevent an agency from contracting with a former public officer to act on the state's behalf. AS 39.52 180(b). Additionally, the head of an agency may waive, in writing, application of this section after determining that representation by a former public officer is not adverse to the public interest. A waiver is subject to the approval of the attorney general. AS 39.52.180(c).

Sec. 39.52.190. AIDING A VIOLATION. Finally, the bill simply states that it is an ethical violation for a public officer to knowingly aid another officer in a violation of AS 39.52.

ARTICLE 3. DISCLOSURE AND ACTION TO PREVENT VIOLATION OF CODE.

Article 3 sets out the various procedures that public officers have available to them for the prevention of a violation of the code of ethics. A major aspect of this legislation is its "preventative" posture. Public officers must be able to seek and receive prompt advice in order to avoid actions that might violate the code. It is these preventative procedures that give the bill its true strength, because it provides a positive approach to solving potential abuses and appropriately assists officers before the fact, rather than waiting for violations to occur which the attorney general must then prosecute.

Sec. 39.52.210. DECLARATION OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS BY PUBLIC EMPLOYEES. This section establishes a procedure for handling a potential violation of the code of ethics. A public employee who believes that he or she may be involved in a matter that could result in a violation of the code of ethics is required to immediately disclose the potential conflict to the designated supervisor and to refrain from taking any official action until a determination is made as to a possible conflict or ethical problem. AS 39.52.210(a).

The employee's designated supervisor shall then make a written determination of whether the employee's involvement could or does violate the code of ethics. AS 39.52.210(b). The supervisor shall reassign duties to cure the employee's violation, or direct the divestiture or removal by the employee of the conflicting personal or financial interests. Id. The supervisor may seek an advisory opinion from the attorney general. AS 39.52.210(c).

Sec. 39.52.220. DECLARATION OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS BY MEMBERS OF BOARDS OR COMMISSIONS. This section establishes procedures for handling a potential violation of the code of ethics by a member of a board or commission. A member of a board or commission who believes he or she may be involved in a matter that could result in a violation of a code of ethics must disclose the potential conflict on the record. AS 39.52.220(a). The board chair, as the designated supervisor, rules on whether or not the member's involvement could violate the code of ethics. Id. If a determination is made that a violation would exist if the member continued to participate, then the member must not only refrain from voting on the matter, but must also refrain from deliberating or participating in discussions regarding that particular matter. Id.

The designated supervisor or the board or commission may request advice from the attorney general. AS 39.52.220(b).

Sec. 39.52.230. REPORTING OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS. This section states that any person may report a potential violation of the code of ethics to a designated supervisor for review and appropriate action.

Sec. 39.52.240. ADVISORY OPINIONS. This section covers requests by designated supervisors, or boards or commissions, for advice from the attorney general regarding appropriate conduct under AS 39.52. It is important to note that requests for advisory opinions are confidential. AS 39.52.240(g).

Advisory opinions must be issued within 60 days after the attorney general receives a completed request. AS 39.52.-240(a). Because, however, there may be instances where delay in the receipt of an opinion would cause substantial inconvenience or detriment to the requesting party, this section allows the attorney general to give oral advice. AS 39.52.240(b). The designated supervisor or board or commission then makes a determination regarding an ethical problem. AS 39.52.240(c). If the attorney general has suggested more than one alternative, the supervisor or board or commission will select the most appropriate way to avoid or correct the problem. Id.

A public officer is not liable under AS 39.52 for any action carried out in accordance with a supervisor's determination. AS 39.52.240(d). The attorney general can revise or revoke an advisory opinion at any time (AS 39.52.240(e)), but anyone may rely on advisory opinions currently in effect (AS 39.52.240(f)). Attorney general opinions will be published in the Alaska Administrative Journal with sufficient deletions to prevent disclosure of the identities of persons involved. AS 39.52.240(h).

Sec. 39.52.250. ADVICE TO FORMER PUBLIC OFFICERS. Former public officers who need advice regarding their standing in relationship to the code of ethics may request an advisory opinion from the attorney general. AS 39.52.250(a). A former public officer who follows the advice of the attorney general is not liable under this new chapter for any action carried out in accordance with that advice, so long as the circumstances were fully disclosed. AS 39.52.250(b).

Sec. 39.52.260. DESIGNATED SUPERVISOR'S REPORT AND ATTORNEY GENERAL REVIEW. This section requires all designated supervisors to report to the attorney general any potential violations reported to them and the disposition of each matter. AS 39.52.260(a). The attorney general is required to review each of the reports filed, and may request additional information. AS 39.52.260(b). The report prepared by the supervisor is confidential and not available for public inspection unless formal proceedings are initiated as a result of a report filed. However, copies of the report will be made available with sufficient deletions to prevent disclosure of a person's identity. AS 39.52.260(c).

ARTICLE 4. COMPLAINTS; HEARING PROCEDURES.

Article 4 of the new chapter establishes a complete process for handling complaints regarding violations of the provisions of AS 39.52.

Sec. 39.52.310. COMPLAINTS. This section sets out the procedures for handling a complaint, whether filed with the attorney general or initiated by the attorney general, and establishes the conditions under which a complaint will be accepted and investigated. The attorney general can initiate a complaint or elect to treat as a complaint a matter referred by a supervisor. AS 39.52.310(a). In addition, any person can file a complaint with the attorney general in writing. AS 39.52.310(b).

If a complaint alleges a violation by the governor, lieutenant governor, or the attorney general, the personnel board shall appoint independent counsel who shall act in place of the attorney general in reviewing the validity of the complaint filed and, if sufficient, taking the matter to hearing. AS 39.52.310(c). The attorney general shall review each complaint filed to determine whether it is properly completed and contains allegations which, if true, would constitute conduct in violation of AS 39.52. A complaint may be dismissed (AS 39.52.310(d)) or referred to the appropriate supervisor or board chair for resolution (AS 39.52.310(e)).

If the attorney general accepts a complaint for investigation, the attorney general must provide a copy of the complaint to the subject of the complaint for a response. The subject of the complaint must respond within 20 days with full and fair disclosure in writing of all the facts and circumstances pertaining to the alleged violation. AS 39.52.310(f). The attorney general shall investigate to determine whether a violation of the chapter has occurred. AS 39.52.310(g). A violation of AS 39.52 can be investigated only within two years after discovery of the alleged violation. AS 39.52.310(h).

Sec. 39.52.320. DISMISSAL BEFORE FORMAL PROCEEDINGS. If it appears that there is no probable cause to believe that a violation of the chapter has occurred, the attorney general will dismiss the complaint and prepare and file with the personnel board a confidential summary of the matter. The attorney general is required to communicate disposition of this matter promptly to both the complainant and the subject of the complaint.

Sec. 39.52.330. CORRECTIVE OR PREVENTIVE ACTION. This section provides the attorney general with the latitude to recommend action to correct or prevent a violation of the law, if the conduct complained about does not warrant the initiation of formal proceedings. The subject of the complaint is required to comply with the attorney general's recommendation.

Sec. 39.52.340. CONFIDENTIALITY. Information obtained by the attorney general during an investigation is confidential, unless and until formal proceedings are initiated. AS 39.52.340(a). The attorney general and persons contacted during the course of an investigation are required to maintain confidentiality regarding the existence of the investigation. Id. A person who violates the confidentiality provisions of this section is guilty of a class A misdemeanor. Id.

It is not a violation of this section, however, for a person to contact an attorney or participate in a criminal investigation. AS 39.52.340(b). This section also provides that the subject of the complaint may, if he or she so chooses, waive the confidentiality protections of this section. AS 39.52.340(c).

Sec. 39.52.350. PROBABLE CAUSE. If the attorney general finds that there is probable cause to believe that an officer has violated the code of ethics, the attorney general initiates formal proceedings by serving an accusation upon the subject of the complaint. The accusation must specifically set out the alleged violation and, after service, is a public document. Except for deliberations of the personnel board, all subsequent proceedings are open to the public. AS 39.52.350(a).

The subject of the accusation must file an answer to the accusation. AS 39.52.350(b). If the subject denies that a violation has occurred, the attorney general shall refer the matter to the personnel board for appointment of a hearing officer to conduct a hearing. AS 39.52.350(c). If, however, the subject admits an ethical violation, the attorney general shall refer the matter to the personnel board to impose appropriate penalties. AS 39.52.350(d).

Sec. 39.52.360. HEARINGS. AS 39.52.360 establishes the formal hearing process to be followed if a matter is referred to the personnel board for hearing. The hearing officer appointed by the personnel board may conduct pre-hearing conferences, administer oaths, hold hearings, take testimony, and issue subpoenas upon application by a party. AS 39.52.360(a) and (b).

The attorney general presents the charges and has the burden of demonstrating by a preponderance of evidence that the subject of the accusation has violated the new chapter. AS 39.52.360(c). The subject of an accusation may be represented by counsel; each party has the opportunity to be heard and cross-examine witnesses. AS 39.52.360(d).

Hearings held under this section are not subject to the Administrative Procedure Act. AS 39.52.360(e). During the hearing itself, technical rules of evidence do not apply but the hearing officer's findings must be based upon reliable and relevant evidence. All testimony and other evidence taken at the hearing must be recorded and the evidence maintained. AS 39.52.360(f). At the conclusion of the hearing, the hearing officer may direct the submission of proposed orders (AS 39.52.360(g)), and within 30 days after the conclusion of the formal hearing, the hearing officer must file a written report with the personnel board containing the officer's findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation (AS 39.52.360(h)).

Sec. 39.52.370. PERSONNEL BOARD ACTION. Either party to the hearing may protest the hearing officer's decision before the personnel board. Oral argument before the personnel board will be provided if requested. AS 39.52.370(a). The board may, for good cause shown, convene a hearing de novo or further augment the record with additional evidence. AS 39.52.370(b).

The personnel board shall review each report submitted by the hearing officer and any briefs filed and must either adopt or amend the findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendation of the hearing officer. AS 39.52.370(c). The deliberations of the personnel board are not open to the public. Id. If the personnel board determines that a violation has occurred, it may impose certain civil penalties. AS 39.52.370(d). If the board determines that a violation has not occurred, it shall issue a written order of dismissal. Id. The personnel board secretary must promptly inform both parties of the board's action. AS 39.52.370(e). The subject of the accusation may appeal the board's decision by filing an appeal in the superior court. AS 39.52.370(f).

Sec. 39.52.380. SUBPOENAS. This section gives the attorney general, independent counsel retained by the personnel board, the personnel board, and appointed hearing officers certain subpoena powers.

Sec. 39.52.390. SERVICE. This section dictates how service of an accusation and other documents must be accomplished.

ARTICLE 5. ENFORCEMENT; REMEDIES.

Article 5 describes the enforcement powers available to both the personnel board and the state when a violation of the ethics Act has occurred. Because we wish the attorney general and the personnel board to be able to take relatively swift action, we have provided for a wide range of civil remedies and penalties, as opposed to providing for criminal penalties for violation of the Act.

Sec. 39.52.410. VIOLATIONS; PENALTIES FOR MISCONDUCT. Under this section, if a public employee is found to have violated AS 39.52, the personnel board has the authority to order the employee to stop engaging in the illegal action; may order divestiture, establishment of a blind trust, restitution, or forfeiture; and recommend that the employee's agency take disciplinary action against that employee. AS 39.52.410(a).

If the personnel board determines that a non-salaried member of a board or commission has violated AS 39.52, it may order the member to refrain from voting, deliberating, or participating in the matter; order restitution; or, in appropriate cases, recommend that the governor remove the offending member from the board or commission. AS 39.52.410(b).

If the board determines that a former public officer has violated AS 39.52, it shall issue a public statement of its findings and seek the attorney general's assistance in pursuing all legal remedies against that individual. AS 39.52.410(c).

Finally, if the board finds the governor or lieutenant governor in violation of AS 39.52, the board shall report the matter to the Alaska State Senate with its findings. AS 39.52.410(d).

Sec. 39.52.420. DISCIPLINARY ACTION FOR VIOLATION. This section states that a violation of the code of ethics contained in AS 39.52 is a valid reason for an executive-branch agency to discipline an employee. AS 39.52.420(a). An agency may initiate appropriate disciplinary action without waiting for the attorney general to file an accusation or the board to complete formal proceedings. AS 39.52.420(b).

Sec. 39.52.430. ACTIONS VOIDABLE. This section describes the actions that may be taken by the state if state grants, contracts, leases, or loans have been entered into or received in violation of AS 39.52.

Sec. 39.52.440. CIVIL PENALTIES. This section provides that the personnel board may impose civil penalties not to exceed $5,000 on a current or former public officer for a violation of the ethics Act.

Sec. 39.52.450. PAYMENT OF TWICE THE FINANCIAL BENEFIT. This section gives the personnel board the authority to seek from a current or formal public officer payment of up to twice the financial benefit realized by a person in violation of AS 39.52.

Sec. 39.52.460. CRIMINAL SANCTIONS ADDITIONAL. This section clarifies that the civil penalties provided for in art. 5 of the ethics Act are in addition to any criminal actions that may be pursued.

ARTICLE 6. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Sec. 39.52.910. APPLICABILITY. This section gives notice that the bill applies generally to all public officers in executive-branch agencies, and that AS 39.52 supersedes the common law on conflicts of interests, including replacement of the common law standard of "the appearance of impropriety" with the specific standards set out in the code of ethics in art. 2 of AS 39.52. AS 39.52.910(a) and (b). This chapter is not subject to collective bargaining. AS 39.52.910(c).

Sec. 39.52.920. AGENCY POLICIES. This section establishes that agencies have the authority to adopt written policies for their employees which are more restrictive than the code of ethics. These agency policies are subject to the attorney general's review and approval.

Sec. 39.52.930. COOPERATION. This section requires agencies in all branches of state government to cooperate fully with the attorney general and the personnel board in the performance of their duties.

Sec. 39.52.940. CONSTRUCTION. This section calls for a liberal construction of the bill's provisions in order to promote high ethical standards in state government.

Sec. 39.52.950. REGULATIONS. Under this section, the attorney general is empowered to adopt necessary regulations to implement AS 39.52.

Sec. 39.52.960. DEFINITIONS. This section of the new chapter sets out definitions for the new code of ethics.

Section 2: This section of the bill amends AS 39.25.060(c) to make the members of the personnel board removable only for cause. The additional responsibilities granted the board under the new ethics law require that the members of the personnel board be free from possible interference in the performance of their duties. Therefore, unless cause can be shown, the governor should be prohibited from freely removing personnel board members from office.

Section 3: This section amends AS 39.25.070, relating to the powers of the personnel board, to add authority to perform the functions granted to the board by the new ethics Act, including authority to appoint hearing officers, review the recommendations of hearing officers, determine whether a violation of the code of ethics had occurred, and impose penalties for a violation of the code.

Section 4: This section of the bill provides for consistency between AS 42.40, regarding employees of the Alaska Railroad, and the new AS 39.52, which covers employees of the railroad as well as directors of the Alaska Railroad Corporation.

Section 5: This section of the bill merely adds attorney general ethics advisory opinions to the list of items to be published in the Alaska Administrative Journal, consistent with the proposed requirement in AS 39.52.240(h) (sec. 1 of the bill).

Section 6: Because the enforcement and remedy provisions in the new ethics law do not take effect until January 1987, this section of the bill clarifies that the attorney general and the personnel board do not have jurisdiction over any alleged violation of the code of ethics occurring before January 1, 1987, unless the violation continues after that date.

Section 7: Under this section of the bill, an agency with an existing policy related to conflicts of interests or the ethical performance of official duties is required to submit that policy to the attorney general for necessary review and approval by January 1, 1987.

Section 8: The sections of the ethics law regarding policy, the issuance of advisory opinions, declarations of potential violations, and the definition section, take effect July 1, 1986.

Section 9: The code of ethics itself, the complaint and hearing procedures, and the law's enforcement and remedy provisions (AS 39.52.110 -- 39.52.190 and AS 39.52.310 -- 39.52.460) will take effect January 1, 1987.

I have provided different effective dates so that public officers, immediately upon passage of the bill, may seek guidance from the attorney general concerning their standing under the new code of ethics, in order that any reassignments, transfers, or divestitures that need to occur can be accomplished before the code of ethics, as well as the complaint process, is in force.

CONCLUSION

Several attempts have been made in past years to enact legislation providing ethical standards for the executive branch. Most recently at my request, SB 501 was introduced in 1984, but it did not pass during the Thirteenth Alaska Legislature. I strongly endorse this bill and urge its serious consideration and passage this session, especially in its now-revised form.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

SUBJECT: Annulment of regulations (SB 401)

TO: Senator Mitchell Abood

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook TBC
Director
Division of Legal Services

You have asked whether the legislature may reinstate a previously adopted regulation rather than just annulling the regulation that replaces it. Under AS 44.62.320 the legislature is specifically authorized to annul a regulation, but has no power to adopt or reinstate a regulation. The section was considered by the court and held unconstitutional in A.L.I.V.E. Voluntary, 606 P.2d 769 (Alaska 1980). The basis for the decision is the failure to follow the constitutionally prescribed method of enacting law by resorting to a concurrent resolution for the annulment, so the legislature retains the power to annul regulations by law. The court in that case stressed the constitutionally defined mechanics of legislation as the form that must be used by the legislature if an act is to have the force of law. The court stated

> Of course, when the legislature wishes to act in an advisory capacity it may act by resolution. However, when it means to take action having a binding effect on those outside the legislature it may do so only by following the enactment procedures. (Id at page 773, emphasis added)

A regulation does have the force of law, in that it has a binding effect. Consequently, while the legislature may delegate to an executive branch agency the power to adopt regulations, it may not adopt regulations itself, because the method whereby a regulation is adopted does not conform to the constitutionally mandated procedures for enacting legislation. If the legislature wishes to preserve the effect of a regulation that has been repealed or amended by an agency, the legislature may always incorporate the provisions it wishes to preserve into statute. A statute, of course, has priority over any inconsistent regulation. (AS 44.62.030)

POSITION PAPER
SB 401

This legislation annuls 34 administrative regulations promulgated by the Alaska Public Offices Commission in accordance with the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62). The specific regulations to be annuled include all long-standing and newly-revised regulations, twenty-nine in number, "[N]ecessary to implement and clarify the provisions of ...." AS 15.13, Alaska's Campaign Disclosure Law. AS 15.13.030(10). The remaining five regulations annuled by the bill are general provisions, procedural in nature, which are also applicable to AS 24.45, Regulation of Lobbying, and to AS 39.50, Conflict of Interest. The latter regulations include the Commission's procedures for handling complaints, preliminary investigations, hearings, and advisory opinions.

These changes would affect approximately 200 state candidates, 350 municipal candidates in 24 municipalities, over 250 political groups, and their major contributors. Candidates, groups, and contributors desiring to comply with AS 15.13 would be unsure of their responsibilities and would swamp the Commission with anxious inquiries. Those desiring to operate unfettered by the requirements of Alaska law would claim they didn't know their actions were improper.

With the 1986 campaigns well underway, the Commission would be required -- in order to assist those campaigns and in order to comply with its enabling legislation -- to publicize its intent to adopt Campaign Disclosure regulations and then to undertake the adoption of emergency regulations. Since emergency regulations are effective only for a short period of time, a notice of intent to adopt permanent regulations would also be undertaken as soon as the emergency action was complete. The process would require 6-9 months and additional funding due to the size of the task and the requirements of the Administrative Procedures Act.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Senator Mitch Abood, Chairman
Senate State Affairs Committee

FROM: Senator Jan Faiks

SUBJECT: Background Information on Senate Bill 412, an Act relating to claims against the state

Alaska Statutes 44.77.010 - 070 establish procedures for a person who wishes to file a claim for labor, services, materials, or supplies furnished to the State.

The claim must first be submitted to an administrative or executive officer. If the officer denies his claim, then the claimant may obtain review of the denial by the Department of Administration.

Only if both the officer and the Department deny the claim, or the latter takes no action on the request for one year, may the person seek judicial review of the State's decision. In that event, the current law says that a person can file a legal action in Superior Court. There, his claim would be governed by the procedures for introducing evidence and all of the other formalities of a civil lawsuit.

Section 1 and 2 of this bill will change this system by entitling the person to a judicial review according to simpler procedures which are now contained in our Administrative Procedure Act. Rather than beginning anew with the issue, the court would be able to review the evidence already presented on the claim and then judge the State's decisions accordingly.

OUT OF SESSION
1024 WEST SIXTH AVENUE, SUITE 302 ANCHORAGE, ALASKA 99501 907-274-6611

These amendments were suggested by the Alaska Supreme Court in order to further judicial economy without significantly impairing the rights of claimants. These persons will still have full court review of their denied claims. However, they will avoid the expense and delay of having to present these claims in the context of a formal, civil lawsuit.

Section 3 deals with the consequences of a November, 1985, court decision. In the case of State v. Dupere, the Supreme Court decided that the claims procedure applied not only to the executive branch, but also to the legislative and judicial branches.

Currently, AS 44.77.070 exempts from this system any department in the executive branch which has adopted its own mandatory claims and appeal procedure.

Section 3 of the bill will extend this exemption to departments of the legislative and judicial branches once they adopt a claims and appeals procedure. By allowing the judicial and legislative branches to adopt their own system and to avoid a review of their matters by a department of the executive branch, the bill will further the principle of separation of powers.

Senate Bill 420
Fiscal Note Analysis
Prepared by Division of Retirement & Benefits
Department of Administration
February 24, 1986

ANALYSIS: Passage of this bill would prohibit members of the Teachers' Retirement System (TRS) from claiming outside service if they joined TRS on or after July 1, 1986.

This bill would decrease the state TRS contribution rate by .025% in FY 87. The state TRS payroll is estimated to be $68,569,578 in FY 87 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter. The TRS state match contribution rate would also decrease by .025% in FY 87. The TRS state match payroll is estimated to be $456,833,417 for FY 87 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter.

The state savings of [$131.3] are calculated as follows:

The decrease in TRS contribution rate (.025%) times the estimated FY 87 state TRS payroll ($68,569,578) equaling:	[$17,100.00]
Plus the decrease in TRS state match contribution rate (.025%) times the estimated FY 87 state match payroll ($456,833,417) equaling:	[$114,200.00]
Total FY 87 savings	[$131,300.00]

In addition to the state's savings above, School Districts' savings would be:

FY 87	FY 88	FY 89	FY 90	FY 91
[$97.1]	[$104.9]	[$113.3]	[$122.3]	[$132.1]

SUBJECT: Background on Senate Bill 423, an Act creating a missing persons information clearinghouse.

The locating of missing persons has been hampered in this state by the lack of consistent procedures for receiving, processing, and sharing information about lost persons. Each law enforcement agency seems to have its own method for handling reports of missing persons, for dealing with relatives of the victim, and for coordinating search efforts with others.

Often, this lack of consistency has resulted in undue expense to the government and needless anxiety for friends and relatives. The problem is is aggravated by the vastness of our state. A body washed up on the shores of the Bering Sea is not matched with a missing persons report filed in Ketchikan. Village officials continue to investigate the disappearance of a teenager long after she has been found by authorities in Fairbanks.

By creating a central repository for collecting and handling information about missing persons, Senate Bill 423 should relieve these problems.

Section 1 establishes the Clearinghouse and requires it to create a statewide system for handling information about missing persons. The Clearinghouse will collect and disseminate this information throughout Alaska. It will communicate with the National Crime Information Center about missing persons cases, and will train officials on how to best to use the Clearinghouse.

This section places a duty on all law enforcement agencies to send to the Clearinghouse all reports of missing persons who have not been found within three days.

It also allows agencies to obtain medical and dental records that will help identify bodies. If relatives of the missing persons are available, family members must file a request for these records before the agencies can acquire them. If no relatives are available, the law enforcement agencies can obtain records on their own initiative. The agencies must send these records to the Clearinghouse.

For failing to turn over reports to the Clearinghouse or records to the agencies, the bill provides a maximum civil penalty of $10,000.

The bill also requires persons to notify the Clearinghouse once persons who are reported missing are located. The failure to comply with this requirement carries a maximum civil penalty of $1000.

Section 2 of the bill amends a current statute which deals with procedures for handling missing persons reports within the Department of Public Safety. This section adds the additional duty of filing these reports with the Clearing-house.

Attached is background material relating to this resolution. The impetus comes from some of my conservative, New Right friends, but I'm sure the intent is to be broad in terms of the spectrum of and participation in this enterprise.

This is a marvelous idea, and I do hope the resolution can be moved along soon.

Thanks.

Hon. Vic Fischer

Dear ~~Senator Fischer~~ Vic,

A number of us citizens, anticipating the two hundredth anniversary of the American Constitution next year, think we should take the opportunity to celebrate our freedom and to reflect on the frame of government that makes it possible. The Constitution is often cited, less often read, and too often taken for granted by citizens who owe their place in a free government to its wise dispositions.

The State of Alaska exists because of the success of the American government under the Constitution in expanding the horizons of freedom toward the west. The Constitution of our State is based on the American Constitution and shares the same spirit. It seems fitting for our State to observe this bicentenary as an opportunity to rekindle and deepen the appreciation that our citizens share for the American Constitution.

This anniversary offers us a splendid opportunity to examine and strengthen the foundations of our democratic republic by encouraging public discussion and observance of the Constitution in our cities and villages, in our schools and universities. The education in the principles of free government which close attention to the American Constitution affords would have a salutary effect on public deliberations in Alaska.

We offer the resolution enclosed and would be very pleased if you were willing to co-sponsor it. The resolution proposes that a commission be named, whose membership might consist of about fifteen Alaskans, one-third to be appointed by each of the three great departments of government--the Legislature, the Executive, and the Supreme Court. Similar commissions have already been formed by many States; and there is also a national commission to observe the anniversary.

The Board of Directors of the Polaris Institute, on which one of us sits, voted unanimously last weekend to make observance of this anniversary its chief project for the coming year, and the Institute has plans for a number of activities in keeping with the occasion. (The Institute is a nonprofit, non-partisan educational foundation incorporated under the laws of the State of Alaska.) A number of programs to celebrate the anniversary are now underway in Alaska, sponsored by the Alaska Humanities Forum, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Department of Political Science at the University of Alaska, Anchorage; but we believe it appropriate for the State of Alaska to take its part as well.

We would be very pleased to talk to you about this proposal and about how the commission might operate. Your support for this idea would help to guarantee that our own respect for constitutional government is passed on to the next generation of Alaskans.

Yours sincerely,

MEMORANDUM

TO: Senator Mitch Abood, Chairman
Senate State Affairs Committee

FROM: Senator Jan Faiks

SUBJECT: Background on Senate Concurrent Resolution 34

Very simply, this resolution will encourage the State of Alaska to award service contracts to Alaskan businesses rather than to non-residents.

Although the resolution addresses professional and service contracts in general, I am most familiar with the situation in our resident advertising industry. There the state has awarded two contracts for advertising and public relations services to companies who are based outside of Alaska. The total dollar value of these contracts is $8.5 million.

In the first instance, the Division of Tourism has awarded a $5.5 million contract to a San Francisco firm. Although the firm has an informal relationship with an Anchorage advertising company, it is my understanding that the actual portion of services and contract dollars going to that company are minimal.

The tourism contract is purely a negotiated agreement, and so the Alaskan firms who presented proposals for it are not being turned away because they are too costly. For the past twelve years, this contract has been awarded to either Honolulu or San Francisco companies.

The other state contract is a $3 million advertising award for the Alaska Seafood Marketing Institute. This contract is currently being held by a Seattle advertising company.

OUT OF SESSION
1024 WEST SIXTH AVENUE, SUITE 302 ANCHORAGE, ALASKA 99501 907-274-6611

I find it hard to believe that our companies are not considered "qualified" for these contracts, since Alaska firms are now being used by all of the major oil companies who do business in the state. If our firms lack a particular skill or capability, I believe that it would be more appropriate and cost effective to award the the general contract to a local firm and allow it to subcontract particular portions to outside specialists.

According to a recent survey in Ad Week magazine, the State of Alaska is the only state government in the Union who sends its advertising dollars to out-of-state companies. I believe that it is hypocritical for us to push "local hire" on the private sector, most of whom do spend advertising dollars locally, and at the same time spend the state's own money on outside services.

Re: SJR 8

This letter is in response to the questions your committee posed to my staff member, Blake Call, during the hearing on SJR 8 last week. I apologize for not being at the hearing. I had previous commitments.

To committee had two questions on the wording and the actions of the resolution.

1. Senator DeVries questioned the wording on page one, line 26. Specifically, she asked why there was no reference to the calling of a constitutional convention for specifically dealing with a balanced budget amendment.

The answer to that is this: the fifth whereas of SJR 8 (which line 26 is a part of) deals with the powers that states have in calling constitutional conventions, not with the specific call for a constitutional convention that is mentioned on page 2, lines 2, and lines 11-12. Line 26, page 1, then, deals only with the powers of states and is not in contradiction to the two other mentions of a call for a constitutional convention.

2. Senator Victor Fischer questioned the ability of a present legislature to rescind a legislative resolve from a previous body and requested a legal opinion. The simple answer would be that the legislature is constantly rescinding the actions of previous legislatures each time that it writes new laws and amends existing ones. My staff contacted legal services regarding the legality of rescinding a previous legislative resolve as per your request. Attached is the response from legal services on that question. The most firm answer that we were able to get was that the question is debatable, and that there is nothing to prevent the legislature from rescinding a previous resolve.

I hope that this answers your questions, I look forward to addressing the committee in person as soon as possible on this very important resolution.

SUBJECT: Request by the state for a Constitutional Convention (SS SJR 8)

TO: Senator Jack Coghill

FROM: Tamara Brandt Cook TBC
Director
Division of Legal Services

You have asked whether the state may withdraw a request for a constitutional convention to consider an amendment to the United States Constitution. The question arises in the context of Legislative Resolve No. 1, SLA 1982 by which the legislature requested Congress to submit to the states for ratification an amendment which would require a balanced federal budget and, in the alternative, requested that a convention be called for the purpose of proposing the amendment.

Article V of the Constitution of the United States provides for the amendment of the constitution as follows:

> The Congress, whenever two thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendment to this Constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two thirds of the several states, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the legislatures of three fourths of the several states, or by conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress: Provided that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth section of the first article, and that no state, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

Thirty-two proposed amendments to the constitution have been submitted to the states for ratification upon the vote of Congress and the convention method has never been used. Consequently, many questions remain unresolved regarding the application of the convention method of proposing amendments to the constitution. (The Constitution of the United States of America, Analysis and Interpretation, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 1973) Among the undecided questions is the one that you ask -- whether a state that has requested a convention may rescind that request.

Although the validity of the withdrawal of a request for a constitutional convention has not been considered, the related question of whether a resolution to ratify an amendment may be rescinded by a state has come up. The Fourteenth Amendment was ratified by Ohio and New Jersey, both of which subsequently passed rescinding resolutions. The legislatures of Georgia, North Carolina, and South Carolina rejected ratification, but new legislatures subsequently ratified the amendment. The Secretary of State issued a proclamation reciting that 29 states had ratified, including the two which had rescinded and the three which had ratified after first rejecting the amendment, and noted that, if all the ratifications were valid, the amendment itself had been ratified. Congress adopted a resolution the next day listing all 29 states which had ratified and concluding that the ratification process was completed, (The Constitution of the United States, supra, 1978 Supplement, pages 572-578).

Based partly upon the Fourteenth Amendment precedent, in a later case six of the eight participating Justices agreed that the power of rejecting states to ratify and the power of ratifying states to rescind presented political questions and that Congress' discretion to decide the issues was final and unreviewable by the courts, (Colman v. Miller, 307 U. S. 433 (1939)). Justice Black with three other Justices would have gone further and held that Congress had the final, unreviewable determination with respect to every step in the process of submission and ratification of a constitutional amendment. The problem was recently presented again during the Equal Rights Amendment ratification process, but left unresolved.

If the United States Supreme Court follows the precedent of the Fourteenth Amendment and the reasoning in Colman v. Miller it would appear that the question of whether a state may withdraw a request for a constitutional convention would be a matter left to Congress to decide, rather than the court. The Special Constitutional Convention Study Committee of the American Bar Association has also concluded that Congress has the power to determine procedures for the calling and conduct of a national constitutional convention. (Amendment of the Constitution by the Convention Method under Article V, American Bar Association, 1974). In any case, the function of a state legislature in amending the federal constitution is derived entirely from the United States Constitution and questions regarding that function cannot be resolved at the state level, (Opinion of the Justices of the Senate, 366 N.E.2d 1226 (Mass. 1977)). Consequently, assuming that is the desire of the legislature, it appears that the only course the state has is to rescind its call for a convention and wait for the federal government to determine whether or not that rescission is effective.

Congress has considered legislation that would establish procedures for conducting a constitutional convention, although none has passed yet. (See S. 215, 1967; S 1272, 1973) The proposals have included a provision allowing a state to withdraw a request for a convention if this is done before two-thirds of the states have requested a convention on the same topic. This suggests that Congress is likely to find that Alaska may withdraw its request in this situation.

In passing I note that questions can be raised regarding the legal effect of Legislative Resolve 1, SLA 1982 itself. The request for a constitutional convention is conditioned upon limiting the subjects taken up at the convention. Otherwise, according to the resolution, "...this application and request shall no longer be of any force or effect...". There is considerable debate over whether a constitutional convention once called can be limited in scope but, since the situation has not come up, the debate has been strictly academic. While the Special Constitutional Convention Study Committee of the ABA concluded that a limited convention may be called, other commentators disagree. If a convention cannot be limited or can be, but isn't, will this request for a convention nevertheless be given effect? Even if the convention is limited in scope, does the fact that the state's request is conditional render the request somehow invalid?

EXPLANATION OF FISCAL NOTE: HB-14

The Territorial Guard was in existence from 1941 until 1947, with about 5,000 individuals on the roster. The members constituted approximately 10% of the population. These people would now be in their mid- to late-70's.

According to Labor statistics, Alaska has approximately 5,000 people over 75 today. If we assume that the Territorial Guardsmen would also number 10% of that population, then there may be about 50 of them left. This figure assumes that none died, moved away, or entered another branch of service with eligibility for the burial allowance. And, of course, many of the individuals in the state over 75 today likely were not here in the early 40's.

You can see that the figure of 50 is a rough estimate, and in all likelihood much larger than it ought to be, but it does represent the Department's best guess as to how many members of the former Alaska Territorial Guard are surviving today. There is no way of figuring the exact number. Therefore, an assumption of four members a year applying for the burial allowance may be high, but the total cost is low, only $3,000, and we can easily make a budget adjustment after the first year.

HB 14: VETERANS BURIAL ALLOWANCE, ALASKA TERRITORIAL GUARD

SUBJECT OF PROPOSED BILL: Amend SLA 1982 Chapter 98 to add members of the Alaska Territorial Guard as those eligible to receive the Veterans Burial Allowance of $750.00.

THIS BILL CORRECTS WHAT APPEARS TO HAVE BEEN AN OVERSIGHT IN THE STATUTES. UNDER PRESENT LAW, VETERANS WHO ARE ELIGIBLE FOR A BURIAL ALLOWANCE ARE THOSE WHO SERVED IN THE U.S. ARMED FORCES, IN THE ALASKA ARMY NATIONAL GUARD, THE ALASKA AIR NATIONAL GUARD, THE ALASKA NAVAL MILITIA, OR IN A RESERVE UNIT OF THE U.S. ARMED FORCES IN ALASKA. ALASKA TERRITORIAL GUARDSMEN ARE OMITTED.

I WOULD SUSPECT THAT THE REASON FOR THE OMISSION WAS CONFUSION OVER THE IDENTITIES OF ALL THE VARIOUS MILITIAS IN THE STATE CREATED IN THE 1940'S. THE SEPTEMBER 14, 1984 ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OPINION CONTAINED IN YOUR BILL PACKETS EXPLAINS THAT THE STATUTES DEFINING WHO IS A VETERAN DO NOT EXPRESSELY INCLUDE MEMBERS OF THE ALASKA TERRITORIAL GUARD. IT APPEARS THAT THE LEGISLATURE MAY NOT HAVE BEEN AWARE OF THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN THE ALASKA TERRITORIAL GUARD AND THE ALASKA NATIONAL GUARD.

WHEN ERNEST GRUENING WAS GOVERNOR IN 1941, HE WORKED WITH THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TO CREATE THE ALASKA NATIONAL GUARD. AT THAT TIME, THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT SAID THAT THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA HAD THE AUTHORITY TO ORGANIZE A TERRITORIAL GUARD. IN 1941, THE TERRITORY APPROPRIATED MONIES TO THE NATIONAL GUARD OF ALASKA, AND IN 1949 THE ALASKA TERRITORIAL MILITIA WAS CREATED, WHICH WAS REFERRED TO AS THE ALASKA NATIONAL GUARD. SO WE HAD THE ALASKA NATIONAL GUARD, CREATED BY THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, AND THE ALASKA TERRITORIAL GUARD, CREATED BY THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA. ALTHOUGH THE FEDERAL ACT CREATING THE NATIONAL GUARD GAVE PERMISSION TO THE GOVERNOR OF ALASKA TO CREATE THE

Rep. Fuller's testimony

TERRITORIAL GUARD, THIS DOES NOT MEAN THAT THE ATG WAS A PART OF THE NATIONAL GUARD, AND SO REFERENCE TO THE TERRITORIAL GUARD WOULD NEED TO BE SPELLED OUT IN THE STATUTES.

IF MY EXPLANATION HAS CONFUSED YOU, THEN YOU WILL UNDERSTAND HOW THE TERRITORIAL GUARDSMEN COULD EASILY HAVE BEEN OVERLOOKED IN DEFINING VETERANS ELIGIBLE FOR THE BURIAL ALLOWANCE. THE TERRITORIAL GUARDSMEN REMAINED IN ALASKA WHEN THE TERRITORY WAS ACTUALLY OCCUPIED BY ENEMY FORCES. THESE PEOPLE DESERVE TO HAVE THE BENEFITS EXTENDED TO OTHER MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL GUARD.

AS YOU CAN SEE, THE FISCAL NOTE ON THIS BILL IS QUITE SMALL, JUST $3,000.

5. The Alaska Territorial Guard was composed of members of the State Defense Force who remained in Alaska during armed hostilities when the enemy forces actually occupied the Territory of Alaska. These people no less than other veterans or members of the National Guard served the State in a defense role and should be accorded the burial allowance accorded other members of the National Guard.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

September 14, 1984

Mr. Al Adams, Chairman
House Finance Committee

Juneau, AK 99811

Re: Territorial Guardsmen; burial allowance provided by AS 26.10.080

Dear Mr. Adams:

In your letter of September 5, 1984, you requested an opinion from this office as to whether former members of the Alaska Territorial Guard (ATG) may be eligible for burial allowances under AS 26.10.080 (.080). The following analysis and historical review of the ATG's status under .080 is submitted in response to your request. In our opinion, former members of the ATG are not eligible for burial allowances under that provision.

The statute in question provides that burial allowances will be paid to a qualifying veteran. The statute then defines a veteran, in pertinent part in AS 26.10.080(d)(1), as a person who is serving or has served in a branch of the armed services of the United States, and in (d)(2) of that section, as a person who had served in the Alaska Army National Guard, the Alaska Air National Guard, or the Alaska Naval Militia, or who had served in a reserve unit of the United States Armed Forces in Alaska. AS 26.10.080. The ATG is not expressly included within the definition of veteran in .080. On the face of .080, therefore, former members of the ATG are ineligible for burial allowances provided by that statute.

The reason for the omission of the ATG is not clear, however, and may have been either intentional or accidental. That the omission may have been intentional is evident when comparing .080 with AS 26.05.225 (.225), which provides credit to former members of the ATG for the purpose of determining eligibility for retirement pay. The provision of a benefit to former members of the ATG through .225 implies that the legislature was aware of the existence of the ATG. and hence the omission of the ATG from .080 appears to be deliberate.

In the alternative, the omission of the ATG from benefits under .080 may have been accidental because the legislature may not have been aware of the distinction between the ATG and the Alaska National Guard. The reason for this confusion will be discussed in the paragraphs following. AS 26.05.225 indicates that it was the legislature's intent to provide at least certain benefits to former members of the ATG. It is therefore possible to imply that the legislature would have included burial allowances as well under .080 but did not only by reason of accident.

:3-C5LH

Mr. Ernest Gruening, the territorial governor of Alaska, notes that when he took office in 1939 there had never been a National Guard in Alaska, that he took steps to organize one and that he requested federal authorization to do so. Gruening, Introduction to M. Marston, Men of the Tundra, at 3, 1972. On December 31, 1941, presumably as a result of Mr. Gruening's efforts, the U.S. Congress approved an act to establish a military code for the territory of Alaska, H. Res. 5822, 77th Cong., 1st Sess., ch. 644, Dec. 31, 1941 (1941 Act). That Act declared that the militia of the territory of Alaska was to be divided into two classes: the Organized Militia, known as the Alaska National Guard, and the Unorganized Militia. 1941 Act, § 1. The Act further provided that the governor of the territory of Alaska had authority to organize a Territorial Guard. 1941 Act, § 6. In apparent support of the federal act, the legislature of the territory of Alaska appropriated certain monies to the National Guard of Alaska. 1941 Alaska Sess. Laws, ch. 60, H.B. 122; 1943 Alaska Sess. Laws, chs. 26, 27, H.B. 55, 56; 1945 Alaska Sess. Laws, ch. 64, H.B. 65. Finally, in 1949 the territory of Alaska created an Alaska Territorial Militia which the territorial legislature referred to as the Alaska National Guard. 1949 Alaska Sess. Laws, ch. 120, H.B. 22.

Confusion may have arisen in the legislature over the separate identitites of the various militias which had been created in the 1940's. If such confusion existed, it may have led to the omission of the ATG in .080. To prevent further confusion, therefore, it is recommended that when a former member of a militia in the territory of Alaska claims burial allowances under .080, it should be ascertained at the outset whether that person was a member of the federally created Alaska National Guard, which is expressly covered under .080, or whether that individual was a member of the ATG organized by the governor of Alaska, which is not covered under .080.

Unless strong evidence to the contrary is found, a member of the ATG does not fall within the purview of .080(1) or (2) on the strength of the 1941 Act. This is based in large part on the fact that the 1941 Act does not expressly state that the Territorial Guard is a part of the Alaska National Guard and does not expressly describe the Territorial Guard either as a branch of the federal armed forces or as a part of the Unorganized Militia. While the Territorial Guard received federal sanction under the 1941 Act, was subject to regulations of discipline in training prescribed by the U.S. Secretary of War and received federal arms and equipment, 1941 Act, § 7, the Territorial Guard was nonetheless a body organized by the territory of Alaska and existed independently of the Alaska National Guard and other branches of the federal armed forces.

In conclusion, whether by accident or by intent, the legislature which enacted .080 did not expressly provide burial allowances to ATG members through that section. Furthermore, a review of the federal act which sanctioned the Alaska National Guard and gave permission to the governor of Alaska to create the ATG does not lead to the conclusion that the ATG was either a part of the National Guard or otherwise a part of the federal armed forces of the United States. The ATG does not therefore fall within the purview of AS 26.10.080(d)(1) or (2) as it is not a part of the National Guard or any branch of the U.S. armed services. A former member of the ATG is therefore not eligible to receive burial allowances under AS 26.10.080.

Dear Representative Adams:

I am in receipt of a copy of the letter dated 14 September from Mr. Delay of the Attorney General's office where he discusses the Alaska Territorial Guardsmen and the Veterans Burial Allowance Program as provided by AS 26.10.080. Unfortunately as presently written, the statute does not include Alaska Territorial Guardsmen.

Prior to Mr. Delay's research and the Attorney General's opinion, Major General Edward G. Pagano, the Adjutant General and Commissioner of the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs, submitted to the Governor the department's legislative packet which contained a bill that would amend AS 26.10.080 to include members of the Alaska Territorial Guard. A copy is attached for your reference.

It is this department's opinion that members of the Alaska Territorial Guard made a significant contribution to the Territory and State of Alaska and should be included along with other veterans in the state's Death Benefit Program.

Sincerely,

This fiscal note was developed on the basis of two elections per year from areas outside municipalities wishing to be annexed. It assumes that one request would be received from a punch card precinct and the other from a handmarked precinct. The cost for a punch card precinct is $5.8 while a handmarked precinct is $2.8. Computer counted (punch card) precincts are generally higher due to the need for computer programming and a Data Processing Review Board to oversee the computer counting of ballots.

We have specified the costs for each type of precinct so that if there were more than two such elections administered by the State within a year, the Legislature could identify the potential costs by multiplying the precinct cost by the number of additional elections beyond two.

RE: House Bill No. 17
"An Act Relating to Multiple Convictions for Motor Vehicle Theft and Joyriding

Dear Representative Uehling,

Alaska Statute 11.46.484 (a)(2) Criminal Mischief in the Third Degree written, causes a person who has been previously convicted of this offense,or the old Title 28.35.010 (Driving a vehicle without owner's consent) to be charged with a Class "C" Felony.

Since the enactment of this Statute[11.45.484(a)(2)] in 1982, several problems have been encountered that have severely limited the felony prosecution for this offense. This Statute fails to take into consideration:

1. Convictions for the like offense of "Joyriding" (Driving a vehicle without the owner's consent). Other states and jurisdictions have Statutes or Ordinances for the offense of "Driving a vehicle without the owner's consent"(Joyriding), but with the restrictive language of AS 11.46.484(a)(2) prior convictions in other states and jurisdictions may not be used in determining an upgraded charge(felony).

2. Convictions of AS 11.46.482(a)(4) Criminal Mischief in the Second Degree, involving a stolen motor vehicle. The only difference between Criminal Mischief in the Second Degree AS 11.46.482(a)(4) and Criminal Mischief in the Third Degree AS 11.46.484(a)(2), is if the owner of the stolen vehicle incurs expenses in the amount of $500 or more the Criminal Mischief in the Second Degree is charged.

3. Convictions of AS 11.46.100-190 Theft in the First-Third Degree. Not all people charged with stealing a motor vehicle are charged under the Criminal Mischief Statutes, depending on what they ultimately do to or with the vehicle, they can be charged under the Theft Statutes.

Position Paper Anch Police Dept.

The Theft Statutes are utilized when it can be shown that the thief had the intent to permanently deprive the owner of his stolen vehicle, such as altering the vehicle identification numbers or dismantling the vehicle out.

Anchorage accounts for 44% of the vehicles registered in Alaska, and 83% of the vehicle thefts.

Registered vehicles (Anchorage)

1982	150,973
1983	172,911
1984	186,744

Auto Thefts (Anchorage)

		Dollar Amount
1982	1120 vehicles	$2,563,800
1983	1433 vehicles (+28%)	3,744,000
1984	1562 vehicles (+ 9%)	4,634,000

In Anchorage, during 1984, your chance of having your vehicle stolen was "1" out of "119". The National average was "1" out of 158 and Seattle only had a rate of "1" out of 335.

I strongly urge your support for House Bill No. 17. I have worked as an auto theft investigator for the past 12 years and I feel that this Bill will help to reduce auto theft in Alaska. HB 17 - JOYRIDING

- This is not a new and different concept. Existing law already provides that anyone convicted of joyriding, who has previously been convicted of a joyriding offense under State law, is guilty of a class C felony.

- This bill amends existing law to close a gaping loophole. Existing law would not allow consideration of a previous conviction for joyriding under municipal ordinances or under another state's law. To allow this situation to continue will result in continued inconsistent treatment of similar offenders. E.g., their penalty would depend on whether they were previously convicted under Anchorage municipal law or state law.

- The significant change in the law is the inclusion of previous convictions for related crimes. That is, a previous conviction for theft of a motor vehicle or a previous conviction of joyriding where $500 or more of property damage was caused will also be counted to incur the class C felony treatment.

- Although the result of the bill will be increased felony convictions, there is no presumptive term for a first time class C felony conviction. The only time the presumptive scheme will come into play is when that person has previous felony convictions (2 years for a second felony conviction and 3 years for a third felony conviction).

REP. RICK UEHLING
TESTIMONY TO HOUSE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE
REGARDING HOUSE BILL 17

MR. CHAIRMAN,

DURING THE INTERIM, IT WAS BROUGHT TO MY ATTENTION BY MEMBERS OF THE ANCHORAGE POLICE DEPARTMENT THAT CERTAIN DEFICIENCIES EXIST IN THE CURRENT LAWS UNDER WHICH A PERSON IS CHARGED WITH AS 11.46.484(a)(2) CRIMINAL MISCHIEF IN THE THIRD DEGREE (INVOLVING THE THEFT OF A MOTOR VEHICLE.)

UNDER THE CURRENT LAW, FELONY PROSECUTIONS HAVE BEEN LIMITED FOR THIS OFFENSE BY ITS RESTRICTIVE LANGUAGE. THE STATUTE DOES NOT ALLOW OUR POLICE AND PROSECUTORS THE ABILITY TO TAKE INTO CONSIDERATION THE FOLLOWING:

1. VIOLATIONS OF MUNICIPAL ORDINANCES FOR THE CRIME OF "JOYRIDING" (DRIVING A VEHICLE WITHOUT THE OWNER'S CONSENT)

2. CONVICTIONS IN OTHER JURISDICTIONS (OTHER STATES) FOR A LIKE OFFENSE

3. CONVICTIONS OF AS 11.46.482(a)(d) CRIMINAL MISCHIEF IN THE SECOND DEGREE, INVOLVING A STOLEN MOTOR VEHICLE.

4. CONVICTIONS OF AS 11.46.100-190 THEFT IN THE FIRST THROUGH THIRD DEGREE, AS 11.46.100-190 INVOLVING THE THEFT OF A MOTOR VEHICLE.

AUTO THEFT IN ANCHORAGE IS GROWING AT AN INCREASING RATE. IN 1983 THERE WAS A 28% INCREASE IN AUTO THEFTS AND IN 1984, A 9% INCREASE. THE TOTAL VALUE OF ALL CARS STOLEN IN 1984 WAS 4.6 MILLION DOLLARS.

WE NEED TO GIVE OUR POLICE THE TOOLS NECESSARY TO DEAL WITH THIS PROBLEM. I UNDERSTAND THAT THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE MAY HAVE CHANGES THAT THEY WANT TO MAKE. I HAVE NO PROBLEM WITH THAT. I AM WILLING TO WORK WITH MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE, THE CHAIRMAN, AND THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE TO SOLVE OUT ANY PROBLEMS. INVESTIGATOR LYLE DAVIS & ANN NEWELL ARE HERE TO TESTIFY AND I AM CERTAIN THAT THEY CAN BETTER ANSWER ANY SPECIFIC QUESTIONS THAT YOU MAY HAVE. THANK YOU.

ANALYSIS

I. Assumptions:

Based upon statistics provided by Anchorage Police Officer Davis, the following assumptions have been made:

1. Anchorage accounts for 83% of the annual arrests for auto theft.

2. The arrests have averaged 100 per year.

3. Of all 100 arrests for all types of auto theft, 15 are for joyriding.

4. Of the 15 arrestees, 3 have prior offenses.

5. Projecting the Anchorage area statistics to the statewide level results in 120 arrests per year for all auto theft crimes with 4 people being subject to this legislation.

6. It is assumed that the number of persons incarcerated under this bill would be 4.

7. It is assumed that incarceration of these 4 persons will require no additional bed space.

8. It is assumed that the cost of living will increase by 5% per year.

II. Program Summary:

A. The annual cost of care is computed as follows:

4 X 365 X 22.28	=	32,500
32.5 X 1.05	=	34.1
34.1 X 1.05	=	35.8
35.8 X 1.05	=	37.6
37.6 X 1.05	=	39.5
Total	=	179.5

III. Economic Impact:

Enactment of this bill will not have a significant impact on the State's economy.

IV. Impact on Local Government:

This bill has no apparent impact on local government units.

This bill amends AS 11.46.484(c) to provide that a person convicted under (a)(2) of that section who has been previously convicted of an offense having similar elements or of an offense involving the theft of a motor vehicle under AS 11.46.100-11.46.190 is guilty of a class C felony. The effect of the amendment is to provide for the inclusion of convictions of similar offenses in other jurisdictions in arriving at the offense level for repeat offenses in Alaska.

HB 17 - "An Act relating to multiple convictions for motor vehicle theft and joyriding."

This legislation broadens the parameters of criminal activity that are to be considered in determining previous convictions involving joyriding.

This wording change will allow more serious charges to be brought against joyriding suspects which should bring the importance of this crime to the public's attention and thus lessen the number of occurrences due to the fear of prosecution as a more serious crime.

Fiscal Note Analysis

CS HB 30

The issue of timely payment for State purchases has been before the Legislature for several sessions. It is clearly desirable that the State pay for its purchases as promptly as possible. This proposal will cause the State to have to choose between verifying invoiced charges to avoid questionable payments, and short-cutting review procedures to avoid penalty interest payments.

Currently, the average payment time for the State is 25 days from the vendors' invoicing date to the paying warrant date. Generally, those agencies which show payment time in excess of 30 days are:

1. Military Affairs
2. Fish and Game
3. Corrections
4. Alaska Court System

These four agencies have a wide network of field locations, causing delays in verification and transmission of invoices.

To decrease the penalties under this legislation, State agencies will incur costs for increased staff to track and pay all purchase invoices within this legislation's time constraints. It is hard to arrive at a definite cost for this legislation, but by using various assumptions, such as that $1,997.2 million of a $4.7 billion dollar budget is for vendor payments and that 5% will fall under the interest penalty provisions, and that all penalty payments are made within 60 days of receipt of invoice, then an estimated interest penalty cost of $1.7 million ($1,997.2 million x .05 x 10.5%/12 mos. x 2 mos.) would occur. It is estimated that additional effort required of the agencies to track and make timely payments for purchases would cost the State about $1.0 million.

It would be difficult to improve payment times under existing payment systems without incurring significant additional costs. The new State accounting system is targeted for July 1, 1985 implementation. This system will improve the ability of geographically disbursed agencies to submit their payments more timely through remote terminals. The system will speed up turnaround and reflect status changes on an overnight basis. These features will allow agencies to be more responsive to their creditors.

All costs of this legislation would be 100% State funds. The U.S. Office of Management and Budget has advised us that the Prompt Payment Act (P.L. 970177) prohibits use of Federal grant funds for payment of interest penalties and disallows the use of any non-Federal funds expended for such interest penalty toward any matching requirement applicable to any Federal grant.

Additional Fiscal Note Analysis - CS HB 30

It appears to us that this Bill is not consistent. In Section 1(c), to pay interest from the date of receipt of the invoice is not consistent with another provision that allows us a period of 30 days to make payment without penalty. The penalty should start accruing on the 30th day after receipt of the invoice.

This same bill has been introduced for the past several Legislature sessions. The bill would require the State to pay interest on vendor invoices that have been held by the State without payment for more than 30 days.

ANALYSIS OF BILL/PROGRAM EFFECTS

See Fiscal Note and Fiscal Note Analysis attached. Projected fiscal impact due to interest and additional administrative costs is estimated to be $2,700.0 annually. The new Statewide Accounting System, which will be implemented July 1, will improve vendor payment times and reduce the need for this legislation.

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to payment for purchases by the state; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 37.05 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 37.05.275. PAYMENT FOR STATE PURCHASES. (a) Payment for purchases of goods or services provided a state agency must be made by a required payment date that is

(1) the date on which payment is due under the terms of a contract; or

(2) 30 days after receipt of a proper billing for the amount of the payment due, if a date on which payment is due is not established by contract and if the billing contains or is accompanied by documents required by the contract or purchase order.

(b) If a seller offers a discount from the amount otherwise due for property or services in exchange for payment within a specified period of time, the state agency may make payment in an amount equal to the discounted price only if payment is made within the specified period of time.

(c) If payment for goods or services purchased by the state is not made on or before a required payment date under (a) of this section, the state shall, upon request by seller pay interest on the unpaid balance from the required payment date at the rate of 1.5 percent a month, unless an agreement exists between the seller and the state that establishes a lower rate of interest or precludes the charging of interest. If the

ANALYSIS OF CSHB 30 (FINANCE)

SECTION 1, PARAGRAPH 3

This paragraph provides that the State shall pay 1½% interest on any billing due a vendor which is not paid by the required payment date specified in paragraph (a) of this section. As with normal business charge accounts or credit card accounts, the interest is computed on the first day after the required payment date and the full 1½% is due for any portion of a month that the billing remains unpaid past the required payment date.

The section further provides that if a billing remains unpaid for more than 30 days past the required payment date, an additional 1½% will be due for each subsequent 30 day period or portion of a period that the billing remains unpaid.

Lastly, the paragraph provides that the interest rate of 1½% may be reduced or the payment of interest precluded, if the contract terms specifically include language to that effect.

BACKGROUND ON HB NO. 30

This bill has been requested by numerous vendors that do business with the State of Alaska. The State has become notorious for late payment of invoices, forcing many private vendors to borrow money to supplement their cash flow. This reduces their profit, and in some cases even eliminates it as the profit on articles is very marginal.

The bill is patterned after a federal law entitled "The Prompt Payment Act--Public Law 97-177". The Prompt Payment Act became effective October 1, 1982 and when it was introduced in Congress, it carried 133 sponsors.

The U. S. Army Comptroller in Fort Greely, Mr. Leonard Lemon, advised the Prompt Payment Act has improved their payment schedule and payment of invoices has become routine and very prompt.

In a poll conducted by the National Federation of Independent Business, 3312 businesses in Alaska were in favor of this bill.

In the past the State has placed a very high fiscal note on this bill and the State Admininstration claims it will have to completely reorganize it's accounting system in order to fulfill the requirements set forth in this bill. If this is so, then it should be done as this is an indicator our State's method of handling accounts payable is inefficient and needs modifying.

Businessmen in Alaska need this bill--they have requested it. Their request is not unreasonable and should be supported by elected representatives of their community.

The Honorable Dick Shultz
Alaska House of Representatives

Dear ~~Representative Shultz~~ Dick:

There is a wide variety of legislation introduced each year which will have a significant impact on small business in Alaska. Normally, when business is effected by a change in the law, the impact on small businesses is much greater than on the medium to large businesses. To ensure that legislators are made aware of how existing law and proposed legislation affects small businesses, the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB) has been working with state legislatures nationwide for several years.

In Alaska, NFIB currently has a membership in excess of 3,700 businesses. Thus, we are representing a significant majority of the businesses in most of the cities in Alaska. Each year we send a ballot to all of our members requesting their input on issues of current interest in Alaska. This ballot permits each member to express their feelings on the issues and provide direction regarding which issues should be pursued legislatively. It is NFIB policy that we cannot take a position on an issue for NFIB unless the members have voted on it and a majority favor the position being taken.

For your information I have enclosed a copy of our 1985 State Ballot showing the vote of the membership on the various issues. The issues which received strong support are ones which I will be discussing with legislators during this and subsequent legislative sessions.

If I can provide you any additional information on NFIB or if you would like to know our position on a particular issue, feel free to contact me.

Very truly yours,

Gary L. Jenkins, Director

Supports HB 30 and will testify for it.

Prompt pay laws require government agencies to pay interest penalties on late payments. The survey in this report shows that prompt pay laws are succeeding. Government executives in states with prompt pay laws say they are paying few or no interest payments and attribute the low figures to dramatic changes in administrative procedures which occurred following adoption of the prompt pay laws.

For example:

- For fiscal year 1983, Federal agencies paid over 99 percent of their bills on time compared to 61 percent on time before the Prompt Payment Act of 1982.
- Arizona has paid no interest penalties since the Arizona prompt pay law became effective July 1982. "Agencies made sure that invoices were processed and did not lie around on someone's desk," reported Don Olson, Assistant Director for Finance.
- California's payment records have improved since the January 1983 prompt pay law, according to Eric Brooks in the Department of General Services.
- "There was an instant positive effect on most agencies and they are now paying bills faster than they used to before the prompt pay law," said Kathy Fletcher, a legislative consultant to Assemblyman Richard Katz in California.
- In Florida, "the statute necessitated improvement in bill paying procedures." George Haynie, Director of Accounting and Auditing, added: "We have not paid that much out in interest penalties — probably less than $5,000 during the last couple of years."
- Maryland's Assistant State Comptroller, Robert Swann said: "...following the law, bills were paid more promptly. Also, agencies have to periodically inform the Governor of interest penalties paid." According to Swann, audit figures this year as compared with before the law, show a significant decrease in the percent of late payments. Before the law, 30-50 percent of the invoices were paid late compared with 2-4 percent of late payments now. The biggest improvement was seen in the larger state agencies such as the Department of Transportation, Department of Natural Resources and the Department of Health.
- In Massachusetts, the prompt pay law dealing with public construction contracts, "meant that payments had to be reviewed and processed in a more timely fashion. Contractors are quite pleased that contracts are paid in a more timely fashion," said Alan Jewett, Director of Contract Administration. Jewett estimates that not more than $10,000 has been paid in interest penalties based on contracts totaling $127 million in the past 2 years.
- Oregon's prompt pay law, effective 1980, has resulted in such promptness that no interest payments have been made, according to Management Analyst Don Seufert. He added: "We have a standing policy of paying our bills in 30 days." Administrator Neil Fisher, who receives regular audit reports, agreed that no interest penalties were reported by any agencies.
- Oregon Chamber of Commerce's Vice President Assistant Counsel, Jack Munro has not heard any complaints about late pay since passage of the law.

PROMPT PAYMENTS BECOMING AN INTERGOVERNMENTAL STANDARD

● Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, paying one's bills on time was such a universal business standard that it hardly deserved to be considered the innovation it was when I called for making it a statutory requirement for Federal agencies through the introduction of S. 30, the Late Payments Act of 1981, on the first day of the 97th Congress. The purpose and content of this legislation is clear and unequivocal: Government ought to pay its bills on time, within 30 days, or face up to interest charges.

Yet, this standard was an initiative. And this initiative, which grew ultimately to be the Prompt Payment Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-177), is yielding more and more results and benefits for those who do business with the Federal Government and State governments, and for those governments themselves.

Kenton Pattie, whose indefatigable efforts as leader of the Slow Pay Coalition—a coalition consisting primarily of small business groups—contributed much toward the enactment of the Prompt Payment Act, recently wrote me to tell me that similar coalition efforts at the State level are producing similar statutes in our Nation's States.

A total of 35 States now have prompt payment laws.

Mr. President, in order that additional information on State prompt payment laws be available for review by my colleagues and others, I ask that Mr. Pattie's letter to me, along with excerpts from an accompanying report, be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

This report of success on prompt pay laws at the State level follows another encouraging report earlier this year from the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). The OMB reported that, following the first full year of implementation of Public Law 97-177, the Federal Government was paying its bills promptly 99 percent of the time. This compares favorably to a 60 percent prompt payment rate reported in a 1978 study by the U.S. General Accounting Office. The latter rate represented a sorry state of affairs, especially when one considered that the majority of the late payments involved small businesses.

Unlike large corporations, small businesses have neither the administrative personnel available nor the cash flow capability required to carry overdue accounts for long periods of time. I should note here, to emphasize this point, that even though the Federal Government now has a 99-percent "on time" rate in paying its bills, the remaining 1 percent represents 180,000 overdue bills. Most of these are owed small businesses.

When the financial practices of the Federal Government affect small businesses so directly, I have a special concern: I serve on both the Governmental Affairs Committee, which oversees Federal financial management practices, and the Small Business Committee, which focuses its attention on the special concerns of this country's small businesses and entrepreneurs.

It is in this context that the objective of the prompt payment standard was, and reamins, two-fold: First, to make certain that those businesses which provide goods and services to Government receive payment in a reasonable period of time; and second, through the prospect of interest charges, to encourage Government agencies to develop and maintain efficient financial management practices.

The improvement from 1978 to 1984 in the rate at which Federal agencies pay their bills on time—from 60 percent to 99 percent—as well as the determined efforts of small businesses in coalition to encourage the enactment of prompt payment legislation by State governments shows that there is substantial progress toward meeting this objective. If such progress continues, I feel confident that the initiative of 1981 will soon become a standard for all levels of government. I welcome such a standard.

Hon. JIM SASSER,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR SASSER: It has been a while since I wrote you about prompt pay laws. A lot has happened:

10 states passed prompt pay laws last year.

8 states passed prompt pay this spring.

Prompt pay is currently pending in 17 state legislatures.

A total of 35 states now have prompt pay laws. By the end of the year, I hope we can report to you on several more.

Meanwhile, in April we published "Prompt Pay Laws Are Succeeding" which documents the fact that prompt pay laws are working. The Prompt Pay Act of 1982, which requires Federal agencies to pay interest penalties when late in paying companies, has been particularly successful.

Of course, there are some problems. Companies still have problems getting paid by the U.S. Navy although Congressman Sisisky is trying to solve the problem. (For more details, call Diane Worthington (225-6365)). Meanwhile, some states with prompt pay laws are passing amendments to tighten up language, raise interest penalties, and strike loopholes.

If you, your staff, or supporters back home need more information about the prompt pay issue, please feel free to contact me. We appreciate your support and encouragement and look forward to continuing to work with you in the months and years ahead.

Sincerely,

KENTON PATTIE,
Senior Staff Vice President.

ANALYSIS: The purpose of this legislation is to encourage state agencies to pay bills on time. It would be contrary to this purpose to appropriate funds for interest payments or related staff costs. It is the House Finance Committee's intent that any funds needed be absorbed within an agency's existing budget.

MEMORANDUM
May 10, 1985

TO: Senator Mitch Abood
Chair, Senate State Affairs

FROM: Representative Mike Miller

RE: CSHB 34 (Finance)

On per capita basis Alaska has over twice the number of licensed liquor outlets as other states. Passage of HB 34 would tend to move Alaska more towards the norm of national exprerience with respect to the ratio of licenses to population.

Additionally, this legislation should assist in stablilizing Alaska's near nation leading per capita consumption rate of alcohol and it's related problems.

Fiscal Impact: Fiscal notes have been provided by the:

Department of Revenue	$0.0
Department of HESS	$0.0
Department of C& RA	$0.0
Alcohol Beverage Control Board	$1.5

I have provided you, in your Senate State Affairs packet, the following:

1. Sectional analysis of CSBH 34 (Finance) prepared by legal services.
2. 5/10/85 staff analysis.
3. 4 Fiscal Notes (listed above).
4. Position paper from the Department of Health & Social Services.
5. House Judiciary Committee minutes (hearings: 3/14, 4/8, 4/13).
6. 2/14/85 staff memorandum regarding liquor license fees.
7. Alcohol Beverage Control Board population census and liquor license data.
8. Information regarding population formula used in HB 150/ Liquor Licenses, Governor's version of bill. This language is incorporated in HB 34 in Section 9 and 10.
9. Other related back-up material.

Thank you for your attention on this legislation.

Section 20. Adds Immediate Effective Date.

MEMORANDUM May 10, 1985

SUBJECT: Liquor Licenses; CSHB 34 (Fin)

TO: Representative M. Mike Miller
Chairman, House Judiciary Committee

FROM: George W. Edwards GWE
Legislative Counsel

This is in response to your request for a sectional analysis of CSHB 34 (Fin) offered on May 1, 1985.

Section 1 AS 04.06.100(b) is amended by adding a new paragraph permitting the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (the board) to adopt regulations that require partnerships that hold liquor licenses, including limited partnerships, to submit reports that include notice of any change of a partnership interest of 10 percent or more.

Section 2 AS 04.11.040(c) is amended to prohibit transfer of controlling interest in a liquor license held by a partnership except with the written consent of the board.

Section 3 AS 04.11 is amended by adding a new section 04.11.055, REPORTS REQUIRED OF PARTNERSHIPS. Subsection (a) requires that a partnership holding a liquor license report a transfer of a partnership interest of 10 percent or more or a change of general partners.

Subsection (b) provides that such a report be submitted to the board in duplicate within 10 days of the change in interest or change of general partners.

Section 4 AS 04.11.100 is amended by adding a new subsection that permits renewal of a restaurant or eating place license only if the licensee provides evidence to the board's satisfaction that gross receipts from the sale of food on the licensed premises constitute no less than 50 percent of the gross receipts of the premises for the preceding license year.

Section 5 AS 04.11.260(a) is amended by replacing the pronoun "him" with the sex-neutral term "applicant's" and by providing that the application for a liquor license for a partnership shall be executed by an authorized general partner.

Section 6 AS 04.11.260 is amended by adding a new subsection that requires partnerships applying for a liquor license to provide information required by the board including the names and addresses of all general partners and all other partners with an interest of 10 percent or more.

Section 7 AS 04.11.310 is amended by adding a new subsection requiring that upon receipt of an application for issuance, renewal, relocation, or transfer of ownership of a liquor license within an area of a municipality under the jurisdiction of a community council established by charter or ordinance to advise the municipality, or within an area adjacent to such an area, the board shall provide notice of the application to the community council and, at least 10 days in advance, advise the council of the date and time of any proposed action on the application.

Section 8 AS 04.11.340 is amended by substituting the term "relocation" for the term "transfer." The change eliminates possible confusion caused by the current usage of "transfer" as applicable both to the sale of an existing liquor license and to the relocation of licensed premises. Since there is a critical difference between the two acts, this section substitutes the term "relocation" for "transfer" with reference to the relocation of licensed premises. The term "transfer" remains applicable to sales of licenses.

Paragraph (2) of the section requires that relocation of a license be denied if prohibited under AS 04.11.400 (a) or (b).

Paragraph (3) of the section requires that relocation of a license be denied if the license would be relocated outside of the established village, incorporated city, unified municipality, or population area established under AS 04.11.400(a) within which it is located.

Paragraph (10) of the section requires that relocation of a license be denied if the license was issued under AS 04.11.400(g), (h), or (j).

Section 9 AS 04.11.400(a) is amended to substitute "relocation" language for "transfer" language.

Paragraph (1) provides for retention of the population requirement, outside a specified governmental unit including an established village and organized borough, at 1,500 or a fraction of 1,500 for each restaurant or eating place license that may be issued and for raising the population requirement to 3,000 or a fraction of 3,000 for each other license that may be issued within a five mile radius of the licensed premises, excluding the populations of established villages, incorporated cities, unified municipalities, and organized boroughs that are wholly or partly included within the radius.

Paragraph (2) provides for retention of the population requirement, inside a specified governmental unit including an established village, organized borough and unified municipality, at 1,500 or a fraction of 1,500 for each restaurant or eating place license that may be issued and for raising the population requirement to 3,000 or a fraction of 3,000 for each other license that may be issued within the unit.

Paragraph (3) provides for a population limitation inside an organized borough but outside an established village or incorporated city within the borough of 1,500 or a fraction of 1,500 for each restaurant or eating place license that may be issued and 3,000 or a fraction of 3,000 for each other license that may be issued within the area, excluding the population of those established villages that have conducted an election under AS 04.11.490, 04.11.496, or 04.11.500 and the population of incorporated cities within the organized borough.

Section 10 AS 04.11.400(b) is amended to provide that when the five-mile radius described in subsection (a) encompasses all of a governmental unit, including an established village, incorporated city, or unified municipality, and the population inside and outside of the unit but inside the five-mile radius is less than 3,000, rather than the former 1,500, the board may deny issuance or relocation of a liquor license.

Section 11 AS 04.11.400(e) is amended to define "population," as used in subsection (a)(1), as persons residing within the five- mile radius not later than the date the application is received by the board and not earlier than 60 days before the application is received.

Section 12 AS 04.11.400(f) is amended to include within the "population" referred to in subsection (a)(2) and (3) only those persons who resided in a specified governmental unit, including an organized borough, as of December 31 of the year preceding the date of application.

Section 13 AS 04.11.400(g) is repealed and reenacted to provide for the issuance or transfer of ownership of a beverage dispensary license or a restaurant or eating place license without regard to subsection (a) population restrictions to encourage tourism. A license may be issued under this section to an airport terminal or to a hotel-type business that has a dining room or kitchen facilities if:

(a) it is within a population area of less than 1,501 and has at least 15 rental rooms;

(b) it is within a population area of 1,501 to 2,500 and has at least 20 rental rooms;

(c) it is within a population area of 2,501 to 5,000 and has at least 25 rental rooms;

(d) it is within a population area of 5,001 to 15,000 and has at least 30 rental rooms;

(e) it is within a population area of 15,001 to 25,000 and has at least 35 rental rooms;

(f) it is within a population area of 25,001 to 50,000 and has at least 40 rental rooms; or

(g) it is within a population area of greater than 50,000 and has at least 50 rental rooms.

Section 14 AS 04.11.400(h) is amended to restate the board's authority to issue a restaurant or eating place license without regard to subsection (a) under certain circumstances.

Section 15 AS 04.11.400(i) is amended to make the license transfer provision of this section applicable to licenses limited under either subsection (a) or (b).

Section 16 AS 04.11.400(j) is amended to provide that the board may approve the issuance or transfer of a restaurant or eating place license in a municipality without regard to subsection (a) if necessary for the public convenience.

Section 17 AS 04.11.430 (a) is amended to include partnerships and limited partnerships among entities that may hold liquor licenses.

Section 18 AS 04.11.504(a) is amended by the insertion of the term "relocation" to indicate the relocation of licensed premises.

Section 19 AS 04.21.010 is amended by adding a new subsection that requires that at least 10 days before a date set for municipal action on an application for the issuance, renewal, relocation, or transfer of ownership of a liquor license, the municipality provide written notice of the time and place of hearing to a community council, with jurisdiction over the affected area, established by charter or ordinance to advise the municipality.

Section 20 provides for an immediate effective date.

The Department remains only remotely affected by this committee substitute bill. Th bill does potentially have an affect on local governments and continues to base administration of liquor licenses on population figures issued by C&RA.

POSITION PAPER/Department of Health & Social Services

POSITION PAPER

CS FOR HOUSE BILL 34 (STATE AFFAIRS)

"An Act relating to the administration of liquor licenses; and providing for an effective date."

Section 1

This section would attempt to require that a restaurant or eating place license derive at least 50% of its gross receipts from the sale of food. This provision is currently in regulation, 15 AAC 104.305. While this idea is laudable it is uncertain how the ABC Board will effectively monitor licensees' receipts. Since the intent of this classification of license is to allow patrons to consume beer or wine with meals, the Department recommends consideration be given to using the pre 1980 title 04 language in this section.

> "A restaurant or eating place licensee may sell beer and wine in a restaurant or eating place with meals furnished in good faith to patrons."

This should assist in avoiding the proliferation of restaurants that are promoting the sale of beer and wine regardless of whether patrons are eating food. In effect, some establishments have a beer and wine tavern in a section of their restaurant. Again, this does not appear to be consistant with the intent of this category of license.

Sections 3 and 4

The Department supports Sections 3 and 4, the population requirement change from 1500 to 3000 for beverage dispensary or package store licenses.

The Alaska State Plan (84-86) indicates that on a per capita basis Alaska has over twice the number of licensed liquor outlets as other states. In 1983 the national average for the ratio of licenses to each 1000 population was 1.18 while the Alaska ratio was 2.65. The attachment is from the Liquor Handbook 1984 and details all states relationships of liquor licenses to population for 1983. Passage of this bill would tend to move Alaska more towards the norm of the national experience with respect to the ratio of licenses to population. Furthermore, this action should assist in stabilizing Alaska's near nation leading per capita consumption rate of beverage alcohol, with its attendant related problems, including driving while intoxicated.

The Alaska Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving is supportive of this bill and the Anchorage Mayor's Task Force on Drunk Driving of 1984 contained the following recommendation:

"The accessibility of alcohol should be limited by reducing liquor outlets (licenses) from 1-1500 population to 1-3000 population."

Additionally, the Governor's Task Force on Drunk Driving heard testimony favoring the concept contained in HB 34, however did not take action on this idea when they were advised this bill would be introduced to the legislature this session.

Section 7

This section more fully defines the number of rental rooms and population ratio applicants for beverage dispensary, or restaurant or eating licensee must demonstrate in order to be considered for a license designated to encourage tourist trade. The Department is supportive of this section since its passage would tend to limit the issuance of additional new licenses.

The Department will be pleased to provide additional information regarding CS for HB 34 and urges its passage.

BILL SHEFFIELD
GOVERNOR

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

January 30, 1985

HB150

The Honorable Ben Grussendorf
Speaker of the House
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Representative Grussendorf:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill primarily relating to the population formula used for issuance of an alcoholic beverage license in an area outside of a city, municipality, or village, but inside an organized borough. The bill would amend existing law to provide that such an area will be governed by the same quota formula now employed inside established villages, incorporated cities, and unified municipalities.

The number of licenses of each type that may be issued inside established villages, incorporated cities, and unified municipalities is limited to one for each 1,500 persons residing in the village, city, or municipality. Under current law, a different rule is applied, however, to applications for licenses to be located outside of these governmental entities, both in organized boroughs and in the unorganized borough. For these applications, the quota is based on the number of licenses and persons within a five-mile radius of the proposed premises; the quota allows one license for each 1,500 persons within the radius.

The five-mile-radius quota worked well when the organized boroughs were relatively unpopulated, and continues to work well in the unorganized borough. Recently, however, the five-mile-radius rule has resulted in the issuance of an excessive number of licenses in populous organized boroughs -- particularly in the Kenai and Matanuska-Susitna Boroughs.

The difficulty in these populous organized boroughs is caused by the fact that the five-mile radii of premises that are within five miles of each other cover much of the same area. This means that a single population can be counted towards several different licenses. The result in a densely populated area for which many licenses are sought can be alarming; in the Matanuska-Susitna Borough, for example, there is now approximately one beverage dispensary license for each 556 persons, and one package store license for each 899 persons, who live in the borough and outside of cities and villages within the borough.

The present result of applying the five-mile-radius rule in the organized boroughs is clearly contrary to the intent of the legislature that created it. It is also contrary to the health, safety, and welfare of the residents of our organized boroughs. A likely short-term effect of the enactment of the attached bill will be that no package store or beverage dispensary licenses will be generally available in the Matanuska-Susitna or Kenai Boroughs in the immediate future, until those areas experience sufficient population growth. The board may, however, continue to issue, in its discretion, special licenses if necessary for the public convenience or if issuance will promote the tourism industry by encouraging the construction of a hotel or motel that would not otherwise be built.

An analysis of the proposed amendments, including several technical and stylistic amendments, follows.

ANALYSIS OF AMENDMENTS TO AS 04.11.400

1. Use of terms, generally. Throughout the bill, the terms "incorporated city," "unified municipality," and "organized borough" are used instead of the term "municipality" as defined in AS 04.21.080(b)(11). The use of the defined term "municipality" was considered too confusing in this context because of the need to distinguish in this bill between "municipalities" that are organized boroughs and "municipalities" that are other entities inside organized boroughs.

2. Changes to AS 04.11.400(a)(1). The phrase "for each 1,500 population or fraction of 1,500 population" has been moved to a later position in the paragraph for greater grammatical clarity.

The added language, "excluding the populations of established villages, incorporated cities, unified municipalities, and organized boroughs that are wholly or partly included within the radius," is drawn from language - currently appearing in AS 04.11.400(e). Placing that language in subsection (a)(1), and deleting it from subsection (e), was considered preferable for two reasons. First, it prevents an important legal requirement from being hidden in a definition section. Second, the change makes the structure of (a)(1), (2), and (3) parallel.

3. Changes to AS 04.11.400(a)(2). The phrase "for each 1,500 population or fraction of 1,500 population" has been repositioned in the sentence for greater grammatical clarity.

The phrase "boundaries of the" is deleted because it adds nothing to the meaning of the paragraph.

4. Addition of AS 04.11.400(a)(3). This entire paragraph is new and contains the most significant amendment to the statute, applying the "one license per 1,500 persons" rule to organized boroughs of the state.

5. Changes to AS 04.11.400(b). This subsection was reworded for greater clarity and simplicity.

6. Changes to AS 04.11.400(e). The deleted language "but outside an established village, an incorporated city, or a unified municipality" has been moved, in slightly revised form, to subsection (a)(1).

Subsection (e), as rewritten, also changes the date for determining population where the five-mile radius rule is applied. Under current law, the relevant date is December 31 of the year preceding the date of application. The use of this date is effective and practical where the quota is based on the entire population of a government entity, because those entities determine their populations yearly. However, where the five-mile-radius rule is applied, government figures are generally unavailable and the applicant will in most cases be required to do an actual count of the number of persons residing inside the radius. A person doing this count in, for example, November has no way of determining what the count would have been on December 31st of the previous year. For this reason, the bill provides that where the five-mile-radius rule applies, the population will be determined as of the date the application is filed with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, or another date not more than 60 days earlier.

7. Change to AS 04.11.400(h)(1). The words "an incorporated" were added for clarity and uniformity.

8. Change to AS 04.11.400(i). The change in this subsection is a technical correction only.

9. Changes to AS 04.11.400(j). This subsection presently uses only the term "municipality," which is defined in AS 04.21.080(b)(11) as meaning "an incorporated city, unified municipality, or organized borough." The specific terms are substituted here for the defined term for two reasons. First, the specific terms are used in the remainder of this section and their use here promotes uniformity. Second, because the specific terms are used elsewhere in the section, their use here will avoid any consequent confusion regarding whether the term "municipality" is intended to mean all three types of government entities or only a unified municipality.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield
Governor

SUMMARY

DO ALCOHOL LAWS AFFECT ALCOHOL CONSUMPTION

Synopsis

In the simplest possible terms, this report indicates that:

- States with "strict," "tight," or "conservative" liquor laws have low per capita alcohol consumption.
- And, states with "permissive," "loose," or "liberal" liquor laws have high per capita alcohol consumption rates.

The factors which apparently most affect per capita consumption are:

- The cost of alcohol.
- The hours in which alcohol is available for sale.
- The number of outlets in which alcohol may be purchased.

Background and Reason for this Research

This report is a small part of an intensive two-year study by the Alaska Council on Prevention of Alcohol and Drug Abuse, Inc., to determine if Alaska's liquor laws and policies were in any way responsible for that state's inordinately high per capita alcohol consumption rate.

Much research has been done on the relationship of individual factors in affecting per capita consumption, and/or attempting to tie in one factor or another with a specific type of health disorder or crime problem.

Only one piece of research attempted to look at the overall liquor policies of a specific state as they relate to per capita alcohol consumption. In 1975, Dr. Reginald Smart of the Addiction Research Foundation in Toronto, developed an "availability score" by assigning weights to a variety of factors. He has proved that states with a high "availability score" (e.g. Alaska) had high per capita alcohol consumption rates. States which had low scores on his "availability scale" (e.g. North Carolina) had low per capita alcohol consumption levels.

The 1975 Smart Study, which was cited as "an overwhelming preponderance of scientific evidence," indicated a direct correlation between availability factors and per capita consumption. However, any attempt to change liquor laws to moderate alcohol availability anywhere is always challenged with the statement that the specific factor under discussion cannot be proven to have any specific effect. This research attempted to find the specific effect.

Methodology

The following factors were considered in an attempt to learn how much each of these factors influences per capita alcohol consumption in each of the 50 states and the District of Columbia.

- Minimum drinking age.
- Per capita income.
- Hours per week that alcohol may be purchased.
- Number of outlets which sell alcohol per population.
- Whether alcohol is sold through licensed, independent retail outlets or a state monopoly.

Baseline data was accumulated for each state, for the year 1980. Regression analysis, a commonly-used statistical technique, was utilized with a formula designed to indicate how much each of these factors influenced per capita consumption.

In the final analysis:

- Minimum drinking age does not seem to affect the per capita consumption rate.
- Having individual licensees rather than a state monopoly does not seem to affect the per capita consumption rate.
- Per capita income does affect per capita consumption. Every $1,000 of per capita income indicates additional consumption of approximately one quart of alcohol.
- The cost of alcohol does directly affect consumption. Each additional dollar of cost reduces consumption by more than a quart.
- The number of outlets does affect consumption. One point of logorithmic difference will decrease per capita consumption by .39 gallons.

Conclusions

There are many demographic variables which influence per capita consumption, that cannot be changed by legislation. For example, per capita income is a variable that would be of little help to decision makers in attempts to reduce per capita consumption.

Should any political jurisdiction wish to lower its per capita consumption level, the three most influential factors to be considered are:

- Cost of alcohol
- Number of outlets
- Hours of availability

POSITION PAPER/Department of Health & Social Services

Position Paper

CS for House Bill No. 35 (Rules)

For "An Act relating to state regulations of fireworks; and providing for an effective date."

The Department of Health and Social Services supports this bill for two reasons:

1) Fireworks contribute to fire losses, as documented by the State Fire Marshal;

2) Fireworks cause injuries, often to children, although no one as yet has systematically documented fireworks injuries in Alaska.

BACKGROUND

In 1984, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, there were 7 reported deaths and over 9,800 injuries associated with fireworks. Over half of the injuries consisted of burns or lacerations and many were suffered by children under 15. Some of these injuries were quite severe, involving loss of hearing, loss of sight, or loss of limb.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta reports that the trend in fireworks related injuries has been generally upward since 1975, when approximately 4,700 persons were treated for fireworks related injuries in hospital emergency rooms.

According to a book on Injury Control, by Dr. Julian A. Waller, bottle rockets, in particular, were associated with high injury rates. These devices are especially likely to cause eye injuries.

The National Fire Protection Association reports that the rate of injuries in states allowing many types of fireworks is significantly greater than in states that ban all fireworks or allow only sparklers and snakes.

POSITION

The Department of Health and Social services believes that restricting the sale of fireworks to persons over 16 years of age,

POSITION PAPER/Department of Health & Social Services

and prohibiting the sale of firecrackers and bottle rockets, will result in reduced injuries, especially among children.

MEMORANDUM

FROM: Representative Pat Pourchot

SUBJECT: CSHB 35 (Rules), Regulation of Fireworks

Last week the House passed the above bill over to the Senate by a vote of 27 to 11.

CSHB 35 (Rules) would:

1) allow the sale of all Class C fireworks currently permitted under federal regulation - except for firecrackers and bottle rockets;

2) restrict sales to persons age 16 years or older; and

3) require supervision of fireworks sales by a person age 18 or older.

CSHB 35 (Rules) has received strong support from the Alaska Department of Public Safety, the Alaska Department of Health and Human Services, and the state Division of Forestry, as well as from most of the municipalities in the state. Additionally, representatives of the Alaska Fireworks Retailers Association have worked on the bill and support its provisions.

Most people who have worked on the bill, including dealers, have agreed that most of the personal injury, fire and nuisance problems can be attributed to the two types of fireworks prohibited by this bill. Ironically, retail profits from firecrackers and bottle rockets are reported by wholesalers and retailers to be small when compared to all other items sold.

Virtually all of our municipalities currently have a total ban on sale and use of fireworks within their jurisdictions. However, numerous problems still occur due to the availability of these items outside a municipality's boundaries.

CSHB 35 (Rules) would not affect public fireworks displays in any way. The bill seeks only to prevent injuries and to restore a small amount of peace to our neighborhoods.

(2) "cylindrical fountain" means a cylindrical tube not more than three-fourths of an inch (19 mm) inside diameter, containing up to 75 grams of pyrotechnic composition, that may be supported on a base or spike or may be hand-held and that, upon ignition, produces a shower of colored sparks and, sometimes, a whistling effect;

(3) "dangerous fireworks" includes all fireworks that are not defined as salable fireworks;

(4) "dipped stick" means a stick or wire coated with not more than 100 grams of pyrotechnic composition, or if containing perchlorate or chlorate salts, not more than five grams of pyrotechnic composition, and that produces a shower of sparks upon ignition;

(6) "fireworks" means a composition or device designed to produce a visible or an audible effect by combustion, deflagration or detonation, and that meets the definition of "common" or "special" fireworks as set out in the hazardous materials regulations of the United States Department of Transportation, but does not include

(A) toy pistols, toy canes, toy guns, or other devices in which paper or plastic caps manufacture, packed, and shipped in accordance with United States Department of Transportation regulations; and

(B) model rockets and model rocket motors designed, sold, and used for the purpose of propelling recoverable aero models;

(11) "Roman candle" means a tube not exceeding three-eighths inches (9.5 mm) inside diameter, containing not more than 20 grams of pyrotechnic composition and not more than 10 balls spaced uniformly in the tube;

(12) "salable fireworks" includes only the following United States Department of Transportation common fireworks:

(A) cone fountains;

(B) cylindrical fountains;

(C) dipped sticks;

(D) flitter sparklers;

(H) skyrockets with sticks;

(I) wheels;

(13) "skyrocket with stick" means a tube not exceeding one-half inch (12.5 mm) inside diameter, containing not more than 20 grams of pyrotechnic composition, with a stick fastened to or contained in the tube for guidance and stability;

(14) "wheel" means a pyrotechnic device attached to a post or tree by means of a nail or string, containing a total pyrotechnic composition of not more than 60 grams in each driver unit or 240 grams in each complete wheel, and that, upon ignition, revolves and produces a shower of color and sparks and, sometimes, a whistling effect.

Sec. 18.72.060. APPLICATION OF CHAPTER. This chapter and fireworks regulations adopted under the fire safety code supersede the provisions of an ordinance adopted by a city or borough, whether before or after May 23, 1969, that [WHICH] are less restrictive than this chapter or the code. However, nothing in this section affects the authority of a city or organized borough under other law to prohibit or regulate more restrictively than this chapter the offering for sale, exposure for sale, sale, use, or explosion of fireworks.

Section 1 prohibits the possession of dangerous fireworks with the intent to sell or manufacture, unless for industrial, agricultural, wildlife control, or public display purposes.

Sec. 2 makes changes to conform to proper drafting style.

Sec. 3 prohibits the sale of fireworks to persons under 16, and prohibits a person under 18 from selling fireworks unless supervised by an adult.

Sec. 4 substitutes the proper term in place of a personal pronoun to conform to proper drafting style.

Sec. 5 changes the penalty for violation of fireworks laws. The maximum fine is raised from $500 to $1,000; the maximum imprisonment is reduced from six months to 90 days. The culpable mental state required for conviction is expanded to include reckless conduct, as well as knowing and intentional conduct.

Sec. 6 retains the current definitions of "dangerous fireworks" and "fire safety code", but removes all other definitions and replaces them with definitions appropriate to the changes made by other sections of the bill. Specifically, "salable fireworks" and "firecracker" are given meanings based on definitions appearing in federal Consumer Product Safety Commission regulations. "Fireworks" is defined in accordance with the definition in the Kentucky Revised Statutes and a model fireworks act. Bottle rockets and firecrackers are, by definition, not allowed to be sold to the general public.

Sec. 7 changes "which" to "that" to conform to proper drafting style.

Sec. 8 creates seven exclusions from fireworks regulation. Specifically, these are: signaling devices for marine, aviation, and highway safety; explosives and signal flares used in business or industry; certain sparklers; toy snakes; certain smoke and party novelties; firearms ammunition; and blank cartridges used for theatrical, sports, or ceremonial purposes.

Sec. 9 provided an effective date of December 31, 1986.

SUMMARY

CSHB 35 (Rules) - Regulation of Fireworks

As you know, HB 35 was up on the Floor several weeks ago, lost narrowly and was returned to the Rules Committee.

Over the past several weeks I have had many discussions with legislators and fireworks dealers on the bill. I am happy to say that we have reached agreement on changes to the bill. These changes have been incorporated into a new Rules CS and provide for:

1) the sale of all fireworks currently allowable under federal regulation except for firecrackers and bottle rockets; and

2) the limitation of sales to persons age 16 or over. Sales must be supervised by a person age 18 or over.

Most people who have worked on the bill, including dealers, have agreed that most of the fire, personal injury and nuisance problems can be attributed to the two types of fireworks prohibited by the new CS. Ironically, these two types contribute only a small part of the dealers' total sales profits. At the same time, some of the types of fireworks left off the allowable list in the original bill contribute substantially to current sales and would continue to be permitted under the new Rules CS.

The new Rules CS is a better bill from both the perspective of fireworks retailers and those of us who seek to reduce public health and safety problems. I urge your support for this bill.

ALASKA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY
Position Paper

(January 28, 1985)

HOUSE BILL 35 - An act relating to state regulation of fireworks and providing for an effective date.

The Department of Public Safety supports this bill and any other measures that would help reduce Alaska's fire losses that keep our state first on the lists of property losses and deaths by fire in the entire United States. However, we believe this bill falls short of what is really needed; that is a total ban on the sale of "salable" or so-called "safe and sane" fireworks. Short of that, we will offer an amendment that will tighten up on the sale of fireworks.

The Alaska-National Fire Incident Reporting System (ANFIRS) indicates that, over the last 5 years, 141 fireworks caused fires occurred, with property losses approaching $700,000. No casualties were reported. Unfortunately, we do not have a burn/injury registry program, so we cannot give you data on the numbers of people who are injured by fireworks and seek treatment at hospital, clinics and doctor's offices. The Consumer Products Safety Commission reported 8,277 fireworks caused injuries nationwide in 1983. 74,000 were injured over the 1975-83 ten year period.

California and Oregon report that 1.5 percent of their fire losses are fireworks related. When you consider Alaska's losses, please remember our small statistical base. There were 130 retail sales permits and 7 wholesale permits issued in 1983 in Alaska. We do not know the quantities sold.

So, what is the answer? It is apparent that local control to enforce bans on the use of fireworks has failed. The following items highlight some of the more graphic incidents that have occurred over the last several years (see also copies of newsclippings, attached):

* Wildlands fire caused by fireworks costs $5,000 to extinguish near Hope.

* 339 acre fire near Soldotna costs $90,000 to extinguish.

* $400,000 plus structure in Metlakatla destroyed by fireworks caused fire.

* 26 "minor" fires reported in Anchorage during a 24 hour period--cause?--fireworks.

* Anchorage couple awakened when bottle rockets shot through window, igniting bed and living room carpet.

Public education will be suggested to teach the safe use of fireworks. The Journal of the American Medical Association (June 15, 1984) reports that "public education doesn't seem to help curtail the burns, cuts, and other injuries resulting from fireworks accidents." When Washington changed its laws in 1982, legalizing fire crackers and some aerial devices, "they had a fair amount of public awareness," with a large fireworks safety education campaign. But, during the July 4 holiday after that change there were 82 injuries requiring emergency care--up from 39 a year earlier.

The National Safety Council says that a total ban on all fireworks--except those used by a professional pyrotechnician under controlled circumstances--is the best way to minimize fireworks-related injuries.

We cannot document any fireworks-related injuries in Alaska, but we have the details on property losses. Is more fire protection the answer? It seems ironic for the state to hand out millions of capital dollars for fire stations and equipment each year and, at the same time, to permit the sale of fireworks. That's like taking birth control pills after you're pregnant.

If legislation cannot be written to effect a total ban on the sale of "salable" fireworks, then we suggest this bill be amended to provide:

1. An increase in the amounts of public and property liability insurance.
2. A prohibition on the retail sale of "salable" fireworks by mail or telephone.
3. A limitation on the period of sales.
4. Sales to children under 16 years of age be prohibited.

Because the state licenses fireworks sales, we can be liable. Wrongful deaths create lawsuits of $500,000; injuries such as the loss of eyesight are being settled for $1,000,000 or more. The current limits of at least $200,000 and $50,000 are grossly inadequate.

The ability to purchase "salable" fireworks over the phone or by "mail order" totally destroys a local community's ability to ban sales and use.

A time limitation on the period of sales, such as from June 15 to July 6 of a calendar year will decrease the availability of fireworks, limiting their sales to the traditional holiday period.

Over 50 percent of the incidents in Alaska are attributable to "children with" as the ignition factor. Limiting sales to those persons over 15 years of age may reduce the number of incidents.

* * * * *

Most of the facts are here. The public (silent majority) seems to regard the use of fireworks as, not only a danger, but a nuisance. The Department of Public Safety is charged with the responsibility of developing ways and means of preventing fires. Give us the tools to do our job, if not a total ban, then a strengthening of the law.

POSITION PAPER/Department of Health & Social Services

Position Paper

CS for House Bill No. 35 (Rules)

For "An Act relating to state regulations of fireworks; and providing for an effective date."

The Department of Health and Social Services supports this bill for two reasons:

1) Fireworks contribute to fire losses, as documented by the State Fire Marshal;

2) Fireworks cause injuries, often to children, although no one as yet has systematically documented fireworks injuries in Alaska.

BACKGROUND

In 1984, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, there were 7 reported deaths and over 9,800 injuries associated with fireworks. Over half of the injuries consisted of burns or lacerations and many were suffered by children under 15. Some of these injuries were quite severe, involving loss of hearing, loss of sight, or loss of limb.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta reports that the trend in fireworks related injuries has been generally upward since 1975, when approximately 4,700 persons were treated for fireworks related injuries in hospital emergency rooms.

According to a book on Injury Control, by Dr. Julian A. Waller, bottle rockets, in particular, were associated with high injury rates. These devices are especially likely to cause eye injuries.

The National Fire Protection Association reports that the rate of injuries in states allowing many types of fireworks is significantly greater than in states that ban all fireworks or allow only sparklers and snakes.

POSITION

The Department of Health and Social services believes that restricting the sale of fireworks to persons over 16 years of age,

POSITION PAPER/Department of Health & Social Services

and prohibiting the sale of firecrackers and bottle rockets, will result in reduced injuries, especially among children.

(x) Cigarette loads, trick matches, and trick noise makers, explosive, must be of type examined by the Bureau of Explosives and approved by the Director, OHMT and are described as follows:

(1) Cigarette loads consist of wooden pegs to which are affixed a small amount of explosive composition.

(2) Trick matches consist of book matches, strike anywhere matches, or strike-on-box matches which have small amounts of explosive or pyrotechnic composition affixed to the match stem just below the match head.

(3) Trick noise makers, explosive, consist of spheres containing a small amount of explosive composition.

(y) Smoke candles, smokepots, smoke grenades, smoke signals, signal flares, hand signal devices, and very signal cartridges are devices designed to produce visible effects for signal purposes. These devices must contain no bursting charges and no more than 200 grams of pyrotechnic composition each (see Note 1); exclusive of smoke composition (see Note 2), unless greater weight of composition is examined by the Bureau of Explosives and approved by the Director, OHMT.

NOTE 1: Pyrotechnic compositions (other than smoke compositions) are defined as chemical mixtures which on burning and without explosion, produce visible or brilliant displays or bright lights.

NOTE 2: Pyrotechnic smoke compositions are defined as chemical smoke producing mixtures, which on ignition burn at a controlled rate, without the production of flame and without the build-up of internal pressure that would rupture or burst the end product.

(z) Explosive release devices consist of a rod or link fitted with means for mechanical attachment to other apparatus or equipment and containing a small electrically initiated explosive charge which will break the rod or link upon functioning. These devices must be so designed that they will not function other explosive devices in the package sympathetically.

(aa) Explosive power devices, Class C, are devices designed to drive generators or mechanical apparatus by means of propellant explosives. Class B. The devices consist of a housing with a contained propellant charge and an electric igniter or squib. The devices must be of a type examined by the Bureau of Explosives and ap-

[38 FR 27012, Sept. 27, 1973, as amended at 41 FR 22934, June 8, 1976; 48 FR 16, Jan. 3, 1983]

§ 1500.15 Labeling of fire extinguishers.

When a substance or mixture of substances labeled for use in or as a fire extinguisher produces substances that are toxic within the meaning of § 1500.3(c) (1) and (2) when used according to label directions to extinguish a fire, the containers for such substances shall bear the following labeling:

(a) When substances are produced that meet the definition of highly toxic in § 1500.3(c)(1), the signal word "Danger" and the statement of hazard "Poisonous gases formed when used to extinguish flame or on contact with heat" are required labeling.

(b) When substances are produced that meet the definition of toxic in § 1500.3(c)(2), the signal word "Caution" or "Warning" and the statement of hazard "Dangerous gas formed when used to extinguish flame or on contact with heat" are required labeling.

(c) Regardless of whether paragraph (a) or (b) of this section applies, any substance or mixture of substances labeled for use as a fire extinguisher that, if applied to an electrical fire, would subject the user to the likelihood of electrical shock shall be conspicuously labeled "Caution: Do not use on electrical wires."

(d) The statements specified in paragraphs (a), (b), and (c) of this section shall be in addition to any other that may be required under the act. All such substances or mixtures of substances shall also bear the additional statements "Use in an enclosed place may be fatal" and "Do not enter area until well ventilated and all odor of chemical has disappeared."

§ 1500.17 Banned hazardous substances.

(a) Under the authority of section 2(q)(1)(B) of the act, the Commission declares as banned hazardous substances the following articles because they possess such a degree or nature of hazard that adequate cautionary labeling cannot be written and the public health and safety can be served only by keeping such articles out of interstate commerce:

(1) Mixtures that are intended primarily for application to interior ma-soiled walls, floors, etc., as a water repellant treatment and that are "extremely flammable" within the meaning of section 2(l) of the act (repeated in § 1500.3(b)(10)).

(2) Carbon tetrachloride and mixtures containing it (including carbon tetrachloride and mixtures containing it used in fire extinguishers), excluding unavoidable manufacturing residues of carbon tetrachloride in other chemicals that under reasonably foreseeable conditions of use do not result in an atmospheric concentration of carbon tetrachloride greater than 10 parts per million.

(3) Fireworks devices intended to produce audible effects (including but not limited to cherry bombs, M-80 salutes, silver salutes, and other large firecrackers, aerial bombs, and other fireworks designed to produce audible effects, and including kits and components intended to produce such fireworks) if the audible effect is produced by a charge of more than 2 grains of pyrotechnic composition; except that this provision shall not apply to such fireworks devices if all of the following conditions are met:

(i) Such fireworks devices are distributed to farmers, ranchers, or growers through a wildlife management program administered by the U.S. Department of the Interior (or by equivalent State or local government agencies); and

(ii) Such distribution is in response to a written application describing the wildlife management problem that requires use of such devices, is of a quantity no greater than required to control the problem described, and is where other means of control are unavailable or inadequate. (See also 1500.14(b)(7); 1500.17(a) (8) and (9); 1500.83(a)(27); 1500.85(a)(2); and Part 1507).

(4) Liquid drain cleaners containing 10 percent or more by weight of sodium and/or potassium hydroxide; except that this subparagraph shall not apply to such liquid drain cleaners if packaged in accordance with a standard for special packaging of such articles promulgated under the Poison Prevention Packaging Act of 1970 (Pub. L. 91-601, 84 Stat. 1670-74 (15 U.S.C. 1471-76)).

(5) Products containing soluble cyanide salts, excluding unavoidable manufacturing residues of cyanide salts in other chemicals that under reasonable and foreseeable conditions of use will not result in a concentration of cyanide greater than 25 parts per million.

(6)(i) Any paint or other similar surface-coating material intended, or packaged in a form suitable, for use in or around the household that:

(A) Is shipped in interstate commerce after December 31, 1973, and contains lead compounds of which the lead content (calculated as the metal) is in excess of 0.06 percent of the total weight of the contained solids or dried paint film; or

(B) Is shipped in interstate commerce after December 31, 1972, and contains lead compounds of which the lead content (calculated as the metal) is in excess of 0.5 percent of the total weight of the contained solids or dried paint film.

(C) [Reserved]

(D) The provisions of paragraph (a)(6)(i) of this section do not apply to artists' paints and related materials.

(ii) Any toy or other article intended for use by children that:

(A) Is shipped in interstate commerce after December 31, 1973, and bears any paint or other similar surface-coating material containing lead compounds of which the lead content (calculated as the metal) is in excess of 0.06 percent of the total weight of the contained solids or dried paint film; or

(B) Is shipped in interstate commerce after December 31, 1972, and bears any paint or other similar surface-coating material containing lead compounds of which the lead content (calculated as the metal) is in excess of 0.5 percent of the total weight of the contained solids or dried paint film.

(iii) Since the Commission has issued comprehensive regulations for lead-containing paint and certain consumer products bearing such paint at the 0.06 percent level under the Consumer Product Safety Act (see 16 CFR Part 1303), subparagraphs (i) and (ii) of section 1500.17(a)(6) are revoked as to the subject products manufactured after February 27, 1978.

NOTE: The effective date of paragraphs (a)(6)(i)(A) and (a)(6)(ii)(A) was stayed by an order published in the FEDERAL REGISTER of August 10, 1972 (37 FR 16078).

(7) General-use garments containing asbestos (other than garments having a bona fide application for personal protection against thermal injury and so constructed that the asbestos fibers will not become airborne under reasonably foreseeable conditions of use).

(8) Firecrackers designed to produce audible effects, if the audible effect is produced by a charge of more than 50 milligrams (.772 grains) of pyrotechnic composition (not including firecrackers included as components of a rocket), aerial bombs, and devices that may be confused with candy or other foods, such as "dragon eggs," and "cracker balls" (also known as "ball-type caps"), and including kits and components intended to produce such fireworks except such devices which meet all of the following conditions:

(i) The fireworks devices are distributed to farmers, ranchers, or growers through a wildlife management program administered by the U.S. Department of Interior (or by equivalent State or local governmental agencies); and

(ii) Such distribution is in response to a written application describing the wildlife management problem that requires use of such devices, is of a quantity no greater than required to control the problem described, and is where other means of control is unavailable or inadequate. (See also 1500.17(a) (3) and (9)).

(9) All fireworks devices, other than firecrackers, including kits and components intended to produce such fireworks, not otherwise banned under the act, that do not comply with the applicable requirements of Part 1507 of this chapter, except fireworks devices which meet all the following conditions:

(i) The fireworks devices are distributed to farmers, ranchers, or growers through a wildlife management program administered by the U.S. Department of the Interior (or by equivalent State or local government agencies); and

(ii) Such distribution is in response to a written application describing the wildlife management problem that requires use of such devices, is of a quantity no greater than required to control the problem described, and is where other means of control is unavailable or inadequate. (See also 1500.17(a) (3) and (8)).

(10) Self-pressurized products intended or suitable for household use that contain vinyl chloride monomer as an ingredient or in the propellant manufactured or imported on or after October 7, 1974. (See also 1500.17(a) (3) and (8)).

§ 1500.18 Banned toys and other banned articles intended for use by children.

(a) Toys and other children's articles presenting mechanical hazards. Under the authority of section 2(f)(1)(D) of the act and pursuant to provisions of section 3(e) of the act, the Commission has determined that the following types of toys or other articles intended for use by children present a mechanical hazard within the meaning of section 2(s) of the act because in normal use, or when subjected to reasonably foreseeable damage or abuse, the design or manufacture presents an unreasonable risk of personal injury or illness:

(1) Any toy rattle containing, either internally or externally, rigid wires, sharp protrusions, or loose small objects that have the potential for causing lacerations, puncture wound injury, aspiration, ingestion, or other injury. (But see 1500.86(a)(1)).

(2) Any toy having noisemaking components or attachments capable of being dislodged by the operating features of the toy or capable of being deliberately removed by a child, which toy has the potential for causing lacering instrument or cartridge does not exceed 3 grams.

[38 FR 27012, Sept. 27, 1973; 42 FR 33026, June 29, 1977, as amended at 43 FR 32745, July 28, 1978; 43 FR 47178, Oct. 13, 1978; 44 FR 42678, July 20, 1979; 46 FR 11513, Feb. 9, 1981; 48 FR 16, Jan. 3, 1983]

§ 1500.85 Exemptions from classification as banned hazardous substances.

(a) The term "banned hazardous substances" as used in section 2(q)(1)(A) of the act shall not apply to the following articles provided that these articles bear labeling giving adequate directions and warnings for safe use:

(1) Chemistry sets and other science education sets intended primarily for juveniles, and replacement components for such sets, when labeled in accordance with § 1500.83(a)(23).

(2) Firecrackers designed to produce audible effects, if the audible effect is produced by a charge of not more than 50 milligrams (.772 grains) of pyrotechnic composition. (See also 1500.14(b)(7); 1500.17(a) (3), (8) and (9); and Part 1507).

(a) The term "banned hazardous substance" as used in section 2(q)(1)(A) of the act (repeated in § 1500.3(b)(15)(i)(A)) of the act shall not apply to the following articles:

(1) Toy rattles described in § 1500.18(a)(1) in which the rigid wires, sharp protrusions, or loose small objects are internal and provided that such rattles are constructed so that they will not break or deform to expose or release the contents either in normal use or when subjected to reasonably foreseeable damage or abuse.

(2) Dolls and stuffed animals and other similar toys described in § 1500.18(a)(3) in which the components that have the potential for causing laceration, puncture wound injury, or other similar injury are internal, provided such dolls, stuffed animals, and other similar toys are constructed so that they will not break or deform to expose such components either in normal use or when subjected to reasonably foreseeable damage or abuse.

(3) Lawn darts and similar sharp-pointed articles not intended for toy use and marketed solely as a game of skill for adults, provided such articles:

(i) Bear the following statement on the front of the panel of the carton and on any accompanying literature:

> WARNING: Not a toy for use by children. May cause serious or fatal injury. Read instructions carefully. Keep out of reach of children.

Such statement shall be printed in sharply contrasting color within a borderline and in letters at least one-quarter inch high on the main panel of the container and at least one-eighth inch high on all accompanying literature.

(ii) Include in the instructions and rules clear and adequate directions and warnings for safe use including a warning against use when any person or animal is in the vicinity of the intended play or target area.

(iii) Are not sold by toy stores or store departments dealing predominantly in toys and other children's articles.

(4) Any article known as a "baby-bouncer," "walker-jumper," or "baby-walker" and any other similar article (referred to in this subparagraph as "article(s)") described in § 1500.18(a)(6) provided:

(i) The frames are designed and constructed in a manner to prevent injury from any scissoring, shearing, or pinching when the members of the frame or other components rotate about a common axis or fastening point or otherwise move relative to one another; and

(ii) Any coil springs which expand when the article is subjected to a force that will extend the spring to its maximum distance so that a space between successive coils is greater than one-eighth inch (0.125 inch) are covered or otherwise designed to prevent injuries; and

(iii) All holes larger than one-eighth inch (0.125 inch) in diameter and slots, cracks, or hinged components in any portion of the article through which a child could insert, in whole or in part a finger, toe, or any other part of the anatomy are guarded or otherwise designed to prevent injuries; and

(iv) The articles are designed and constructed to prevent accidental collapse while in use; and

(v) The articles are designed and constructed in a manner that eliminates from any portion of the article the possibility of presenting a mechanical hazard through pinching, bruising, lacerating, crushing, breaking, amputating, or otherwise injuring portions of the human body when in normal use or when subjected to reasonably foreseeable damage or abuse; and

(vi) Any article which is introduced into interstate commerce after the effective date of this subparagraph is labeled:

§ 1507.1 Scope.

This Part 1507 prescribes requirements for those fireworks devices (other than firecrackers) not otherwise banned under the act. Any fireworks device (other than firecrackers) which fails to conform to applicable requirements is a banned hazardous substance and is prohibited from the channels of interstate commerce. Any fireworks device not otherwise banned under the act shall not be a banned hazardous substance by virtue of the fact that there are no applicable requirements prescribed herein.

§ 1507.2 Prohibited chemicals.

Fireworks devices shall not contain any of the following chemicals:

(a) Arsenic sulfide, arsenates, or arsenites.

(b) Boron.

(c) Chlorates, except:

(1) In colored smoke mixtures in which an equal or greater amount of sodium bicarbonate is included.

(2) In caps and party poppers.

(3) In those small items (such as ground spinners) wherein the total powder content does not exceed 4 grams of which not greater than 15 percent (or 600 milligrams) is potassium, sodium, or barium chlorate.

(d) Gallates or gallic acid.

(e) Magnesium (magnesium/aluminum alloys, called magnalium, are permitted).

(f) Mercury salts.

(g) Phosphorus (red or white). Except that red phosphorus is permissible in caps and party poppers.

(h) Picrates or picric acid.

(i) Thiocyanates.

(j) Titanium, except in particle size greater than 100-mesh.

(k) Zirconium.

§ 1507.3 Fuses.

(a) Fireworks devices that require a fuse shall:

(1) Utilize only a fuse that has been treated or coated in such manner as to reduce the possibility of side ignition. Devices such as ground spinners that require a restricted orifice for proper thrust and contain less than 6 grams of pyrotechnic composition are exempted from § 1507.3(a)(1).

(2) Utilize only a fuse which will burn at least 3 seconds but not more than 6 seconds before ignition of the device.

(b) The fuse shall be securely attached so that it will support either the weight of the fireworks device plus 8 ounces of dead weight or double the weight of the device, whether is less, without separation from the fireworks device.

§ 1507.4 Bases.

The base or bottom of fireworks devices that are operated in a standing upright position shall have the minimum horizontal dimensions or the diameter of the base equal to at least one-third of the height of the device including any base or cap affixed thereto.

§ 1507.5 Pyrotechnic leakage.

The pyrotechnic chamber in fireworks devices shall be sealed in a manner that prevents leakage of the pyrotechnic composition during shipping, handling, and normal operation.

§ 1507.6 Burnout and blowout.

The pyrotechnic chamber in fireworks devices shall be constructed in a manner to allow functioning in a normal manner without burnout or blowout.

§ 1507.7 Handles and spikes.

(a) Fireworks devices which are intended to be hand-held and are so labeled shall incorporate a handle at least 4 inches in length (see § 1500.14(b)(7)). Handles shall remain firmly attached during transportation, handling and full operation of the device, or shall consist of an integral section of the device at least four inches below the pyrotechnic chamber.

(b) Spikes provided with fireworks devices shall protrude at least 2 inches from the base of the device and shall have a blunt tip not less than ⅛-inch in diameter of ⅛-inch square.

§ 1507.8 Wheel devices.

Wheel devices intended to operate in a fixed location shall be designed in such a manner that the axle remains attached to the device during normal operation.

§ 1507.9 Toy smoke devices and flitter devices.

(a) Toy smoke devices shall be so constructed that they will neither burst nor produce external flame (excluding the fuse and firstfire upon ignition) during normal operation.

(b) Toy smoke devices and flitter devices shall not be of such color and configuration so as to be confused with banned fireworks such as M-80 salutes, silver salutes, or cherry bombs.

(c) Toy smoke devices shall not incorporate plastic as an exterior material if the pyrotechnic composition comes in direct contact with the plastic.

§ 1507.10 Rockets with sticks.

A ban on fireworks

ONE OF THESE days all local governments in Alaska will do what most of the cities already have done, and that's ban the private use of fireworks. Maybe the state will have to do the job through a simple bit of legislation that makes the old-fashioned pyrotechnics illegal.

Fireworks have been a part of America's heritage for a couple hundred years. But the fact is they've become too dangerous to be allowed, outside of professionally staged events. Those should be enough.

IN ANCHORAGE, fireworks have been banned for many years and their absence hasn't been all that hard to live with. But they're still permitted in other areas close by. The Kenai Peninsula is a ready example. It was there, near Seward, that a fireworks explosion in a camper took the life of a little girl on the Fourth of July weekend.

Every year, it seems, someone is badly burned or disfigured or fatally injured while playing with fireworks. They just aren't worth the pain and suffering and grief.

THERE ARE THOSE who will argue that making fireworks illegal would be just one more erosion of the rights and liberties of individual citizens. Maybe it would be, but sometimes the greater public good must prevail.

We could still have fireworks — in all the public displays and exhibitions anybody would be willing to pay for. The job could be handled by professionals who know the perils involved.

But for the safety of other little girls -- and little boys and their parents and friends — our Independence Day celebrations can do without people tossing firecrackers around.

Seward boy dies after fireworks explode in truck cab on road

by Earl Swift and Christopher Jarvis
Times Writers

A Seward boy died at an Anchorage hospital Friday after fireworks he and his family were carrying in a truck exploded and set the pickup afire.

Wesley Jones, 5, was declared dead at Providence Hospital at 2:08 p.m. Friday, about 23 hours after he suffered severe burns in the accident on Seward's Bear Creek Road.

Alaska State Trooper spokesman Paul Edscorn said the boy was apparently injured as he, his two siblings, his parents and a family friend rode in a 1979 Ford Club Cab truck after buying fireworks at a stand on the town's outskirts.

Edscorn said Wesley, his 4-year-old stepsister, Camille Castillo, and his 6-year-old brother, Louis, were riding in the truck's back seat while their father, 41-year-old Kenneth Jones, rode up front with their mother, Linda Jones, and the driver, Seward resident Michael Corcoran.

As the vehicle traveled down Bear Creek Road, Edscorn said, the newly-purchased fireworks ignited.

"They have determined that there was a fairly large quantity of firewalks both in the front and rear seats — actually on the floor in the front and rear," Edscorn said.

While the pyrotechnics exploded and flames swept through the truck's large cab, Corcoran and the elder Jones jumped from the truck and pulled the children from the pickup, Edscorn said.

Both men suffered burns to their hands and arms in the process, Edscorn said, and Jones was still hospitalized at Providence late Friday in serious, but stable, condition.

Louis Jones and Camille Castillo — airlifted to Providence with their father and Wesley after they were initially treated at Seward General Hospital — were listed in serious condition late Friday, hospital officials said.

Linda Jones was not injured, he said.

Edscorn said details of the incident remained sketchy Friday, because there were few witnesses to the fire besides its victims.

Still unknown, he said, was the cause of the fireworks' ignition.

"They're all gone," he said. "At this point, we just don't know."

Bear Creek Volunteer Fire Department Chief Len Weimar said his men found the truck burning after the blaze was reported about 4 p.m.

ANCHORAGE TIMES EDITORIAL - December 5, 1985

A deaf ear

IT'S ALMOST unpatriotic to be concerned about the hazards inherent in the use of fireworks. After all, they're part of the nation's heritage — Fourth of July celebrations, state fairs, big festivals, carnivals and so on. Anyone who opposes the unrestricted use of fireworks finds himself in an uncomfortable position.

Yet the nagging thought persists that fireworks are dangerous and, as population increases, it makes more and more sense to limit fireworks to exhibitions staged by professional handlers.

THAT'S OUR VIEW from Anchorage. The view from Soldotna, where the Kenai Peninsula Borough sits, is quite different. Despite an overwhelming October advisory vote to the contrary, the borough assembly decided this week to allow continued public sale and use of fireworks.

In that same election, Kenai voters rejected a compromise that would have imposed a seasonal ban on fireworks — opting, instead, for the year-round prohibition.

THE BOROUGH assembly now has proposed an ordinance calling for a seasonal ban. It will be voted on Dec. 17.

The assembly could wind up doing exactly the opposite of what the people said in those advisory votes two months ago. If nothing else, that may ensure that the fireworks issue on the Kenai Peninsula will remain an explosive one for some time to come.

ANCHORAGE TIMES EDITORIAL - December 21, 1985

Cease-fire on the Peninsula

WITH A FIZZLE rather than a bang, the great fireworks controversy on the Kenai Peninsula apparently has ended. Let's commend those involved for taking final action in a dispute that has been smoldering for years.

The members of the Kenai Peninsula Borough Assembly get the kudos for reversing an earlier decision and voting last week to ban the sale and private use of fireworks, effective Jan. 15.

The issue has been argued for years. Opponents said unrestricted fireworks in the hands of a growing population would bring increasing threat to life and limb. The danger of summer forest fires resulting from careless use of fireworks was seen as another peril.

ON THE OTHER side, the free-spirited mood that treasures liberty and freedom from government regulation makes Peninsula residents, old and new, oppose bans of any kind. Those who fit this mold favored continued permission for the private sale and use of fireworks.

In an advisory referendum last fall, a majority of voters cast ballots in favor of outlawing fireworks. The borough assembly still balked and two weeks ago it voted to continue legalizing them.

IN A DELUGE of complaints, the public bombarded assemblymen by mail and telephone demanding that they reverse their action. The assembly capitulated.

But the new law doesn't mean there will be no fireworks at all next Fourth of July at Seward and elsewhere on the Peninsula. Public displays sponsored by cities, fair associations, amusement parks, charities, churches and civic organizations will be allowed.

That sounds, from this distance at least, like a proper way to go.

Kenai Peninsula Assembly reverses stand, bans fireworks

By RONNIE CHAPPELL
Daily News reporter

SOLDOTNA — After years of debate, the Kenai Peninsula Borough Assembly Tuesday voted to outlaw the sale and use of fireworks on the Kenai Peninsula.

The year-round ban, which will take effect Jan. 15, was a reversal of an assembly vote two weeks ago, when an almost identical ordinance was defeated despite a borough referendum this fall calling for a total fireworks ban.

The assembly had been expected Tuesday to consider only a substitute ordinance allowing the sale and use of fireworks between Nov. 1 and April 1.

A deluge of phone calls and letters from angry voters appears to have salvaged the year-round ban.

"I received 26 letters and postcards," said Assemblywoman Marie Walli. "Phone calls, I couldn't begin to tell you." At one point, she said, the phone in her Anchor Point home was ringing so often she started referring callers to the borough clerk.

"I was leaning toward seasonal" restrictions, Walli said. But because of the calls and letters she changed her mind.

Other assembly members also said they were swamped with calls and letters.

Public fireworks displays sponsored by cities, fair associations, amusement parks, charities, churches and civic organizations will be allowed.

Firecracker sets van afire on Ridgecrest

A 1975 Chevy suburban was the only Bethel victim of fire cracker related incidents over the Fourth of July holiday.

Police said the vehicle caught fire in the post office parking lot after a 17-year-old juvenile tossed a fire cracker bottle rocket into a puddle near the car. The puddle apparently had some sort of flammable liquid in it, and the fire cracker explosion caused it to catch fire.

The car, which belonged to the juvenile's parents, caught fire as well and officials estimated damage at at least $2,500.

The incident, which happened on Saturday, is still under investigation but no charges have been filed, police said.

ANCHORAGE DAILY NEWS - July 6, 1985

Doctors busy with victims of fireworks

By ROBERT FURLOW
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As traditional as July Fourth fireworks, day-after reports of firecracker injuries spread Friday as doctors who try to repair the damage sought greater awareness of dangers involved — and perhaps a national ban.

Dr. Sloane Wilson, a Little Rock, Ark., opthalmologist, commenting during a break in a day of surgery on several accident victims, said: "When children lose their eyes it's a tragedy, and most of them simply aren't aware of the risk."

Wilson said he doubted a federal ban would be forthcoming. But he has begun a national survey on behalf of the American Academy of Opthalmology, hoping to get a better idea of just how many injuries fireworks do cause and whether there is much difference between states that do and don't have laws limiting or banning sales and use.

Estimates by his and other medical groups now put the yearly injury toll at between 14,000 and 20,000, many of them around the Fourth of July.

Dr. Joe Greensher, a Long Island, N.Y., pediatrician who is head of an accident prevention committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics, said, "There should be federal involvement," including a ban on general use of all but the smallest fireworks.

But he, too, said congressional action was unlikely, especially "with the present climate of letting business do things voluntarily."

"It's been a national problem for quite a number of years," he said in a telephone interview. "Here's another July Fourth gone by, and you see the reports," he added, noting in particular a news account he'd just heard of a 4-year-old Yonkers, N.Y., boy who'd lost parts of two fingers when a firecracker exploded in his hand.

Wilson, also speaking by telephone, said he had just been working on a 16-year-old boy who almost surely had lost his sight in one eye after being injured in a playful "fireworks war" in which teen-agers fire little firecracker rockets at each other.

Such little firecrackers, legal in many states, can reach a speed of 50 mph in a few feet, and erratic construction makes aim a guessing game, Wilson said.

This bill amends AS 18.72.010(a) by changing the definition of "salable fireworks" and making some minor changes to the existing statute that regulates the sale of fireworks. There are currently 7 wholesale dealers and about 130 retail dealers licensed to sell fireworks in the state. During the past several years there have been about 12 fireworks sales violations by licensed dealers. By further restricting the types of fireworks that may be sold, most of those that go bang will no longer be salable, this bill could result in some additional misdemeanor prosecutions for violation of fireworks sales regulations. Based upon past experience, however, it does not appear that the increase in prosecution will be significant enough to warrant fiscal note costs. This is the type of bill that, when taken by itself, will not result in a fiscal impact. However, when taken in conjunction with other similar measures, bills of this nature divert prosecution resources from other more serious offenses because of their cummulative effect.

• To determine the frequency and effects of and risk factors for fireworks-related injury, we identified all 146 persons who were injured by fireworks and sought emergency care during the 1983 July 4 holiday in the Seattle area. The mean charge for medical care for the injuries received was $562; 7.1% of those injured required hospitalization. In a matched-pair case-control study, use of either of two fireworks types—firecrackers or aerial devices—was significantly associated with injury (odds ratios [ORs], 3.3 and 2.9, respectively; 95% confidence intervals [CI], 1.2, 8.5, and 1.2, 6.6, respectively). Also associated with injury were several fireworks misuse behaviors, including lack of adult supervision of children (OR, 11.5; CI, 2.8, 100.6). We conclude that fireworks cause serious injuries that theoretically could be prevented by behavioral changes or decreased availability of high-risk fireworks devices.

IN 1982, Washington State changed its law governing the sale of fireworks. Under federal law, fireworks are categorized into three classes: class A and B devices contain more than 50 mg of gunpowder and are illegal for sale to the general public, and class C devices contain 50 mg of gunpowder or less. The sale of individual types of class C fireworks is under state control. Previously, Washington State allowed only the sale of class C ground-display devices (devices that stay on the ground, often emitting sparks). However, in 1982, the sale of class C firecrackers (devices that explode and make noise) and some class C aerial devices (devices that either fly or shoot projectiles into the air) was legalized, but skyrockets and missile rockets remained illegal. During the July 4 holiday that followed the law change, we reported a doubling, from the previous year, in the number of fireworks-related injuries reported by 11 hospitals, from 39 injuries in 1981 to 88 injuries in 1982.[1] In response to this increase, in 1983, we conducted active surveillance to determine the number, circumstances, and costs of these injuries and a case-control study to determine risk factors for injury.

METHODS

Surveillance

We identified all fireworks-related injuries in King County (metropolitan Seattle, population, 1.3 million) by active surveillance of all emergency rooms and emergency clinics open during the legal days of fireworks sale (June 25 to July 6, 1983). A designated contact person, usually the emergency room supervisor, collected demographic and injury information on all patients. Injured persons were counted as cases if they had been admitted to an emergency facility with an injury related to fireworks and the injury they received had occurred during the legal days of fireworks sale. We designated two types of cases: those in active users (persons who were using fireworks at the time of injury) and those in innocent bystanders (persons who were not using fireworks themselves at the time of injury).

After the patients were identified, we mailed each a letter that explained our study and included a picture of fireworks types (for determining which device caused their injury). After one week, we called the patients, verified the age, sex, and injury information, and administered a standard questionnaire about the circumstances and costs of injury, fireworks exposure, and fireworks use behaviors. In most cases, charges for medical care were ascertained directly from medical bills. We interviewed only the parents of children aged 5 years or younger but interviewed all other injured persons directly.

Case-Control Study

We conducted a matched-pair case-control study by telephone. For each active user who was a King County resident, we obtained a control who was a King County resident, had used fireworks during the 1983 July 4 holiday but remained uninjured, and who was matched by sex and age plus or minus two years. Controls were contacted by a modified random-digit dialing technique.[1] The first five numbers of the injured person's telephone number were fixed, then combined with two other numbers obtained successively from a random number table, until a proper match was found. Each control was interviewed immediately after completion of the corresponding injured person's interview. As with the injured persons, we interviewed only the parents of children aged 5 years or younger but interviewed all other controls directly. We obtained informed verbal consent from both the injured persons and controls before administering the questionnaire. When children were interviewed, we obtained consent from both the child and a parent. Injured persons and controls were asked identical questions regarding exposure to fireworks and their methods of fireworks use. The questions on fireworks use were designed to reflect the "customary" use of fireworks and not the circumstance that led to injury. All interviews were performed by one person (L.V.M.), and all interview questions were read in a standard manner.

Data Analysis

Differences in means for the surveillance data were analyzed by Student's t test for unpaired data. The matched-pair data were analyzed in matched fashion, and McNemar χ^2, odds ratios (ORs), and exact 95% confidence intervals (CI) were calculated,[7] and conditional logistic regression analysis was carried out.[8] Differences between the means of matched-pair groups were analyzed with Student's t test for paired data. A significance level of .05 was used for all tests.

RESULTS

A total of 146 persons with fireworks-related injuries were identified in King County during the study period. All 22 hospitals and ten emergency clinics open during the July 4 holiday participated. Of the 146 injured persons, 126 (86%) were initially treated in hospital emergency rooms, and 20 (14%) were initially treated in emergency clinics.

The site and type of injury (Table 1) were available for all 146 persons, while age and sex were available for all but one person. Most common were multiple injuries, followed by single-site burns, eye injuries, lacerations, and ear injuries (usually perforated eardrums). Isolated eye injuries made up 16% of the total injuries; however, nine of the multiple injuries involved the eye, so that overall, 32 (22%) of the 146 injuries involved the eye. Two of the multiple injuries resulted in amputation (one of a finger and one of a complete hand). Injured persons were from 2 to 64 years old; 72 (50%) were younger than 16 years. One hundred six (73%) of the injured were males, and 39 (27%) were females.

We were able to interview by telephone 113 (77%) of the 146 injured persons. Of those not interviewed, 12 refused participation and 21 were lost due to unavailable or incorrect telephone numbers. These persons interviewed did not differ significantly by age or sex from those persons not interviewed. For the persons interviewed, the mean time from injury to interview was 25 days. From the telephone interviews, we obtained information on the race of the injured persons, their county of residence, the charges for medical care they received for their injury, the type of fireworks that caused their injury, and the circumstances of injury. The race of those interviewed reflected the racial composition of King County: 101 (89%) were white and 12 (11%) were nonwhite.[9]

The county of residence information allowed a population-based estimate of the incidence of fireworks-related injury during the July 4 holiday in King County. Of the 113 persons interviewed, 98 (87%) were King County residents. Applied to the total of 146 injured persons, this provided an estimated total of 126 King County residents injured by fireworks. The incidence of fireworks-related injury, therefore, was 126 per 1.3 million King County residents, or 9.7 per 100,000 persons for the nine-day interval from June 28 through July 6. The information obtained on medical care charges included both dollars spent and the type and amount of treatment required. The mean dollar charge for care for all injured persons was $562 (median, $132), and 14% of those interviewed required care that cost more than $500. Eight (7%) of those interviewed required hospitalization, for an average of seven days. For these, the average charge for medical care was $5,431 (median, $4,688). The other 105 (93%) injured persons were not hospitalized but required an average of 2.4 outpatient visits, at a mean charge of $191 (median, $130). Twenty percent of those injured remained under medical care a month after injury.

The type of fireworks device responsible for injury was also determined for all 113 persons interviewed (Table 2). Ground display devices caused 36% of all injuries, 47% of burns, 43% of multiple injuries, and 25% of eye injuries. Firecrackers caused 34% of all injuries, 75% of ear injuries, 42% of lacerations, and 35% of multiple injuries. Aerial devices caused 23% of all injuries, 44% of eye injuries, and 42% of lacerations. Homemade devices, such as lead pipe bombs, caused 5% of all injuries. Hospitalization rates differed by device type, ranging from 0% for injuries caused by public display devices to 33% for injuries caused by homemade devices (Table 2).

We were able to determine the legal status of 88 (78%) of the fireworks devices causing injury (Table 3). If the devices are classified according to the 1982 Washington law, 58 (66%) of the 88 classifiable injuries were caused by legal fireworks and 30 (34%) by illegal fireworks. Nineteen (22%) of the injuries were caused by devices "newly legalized" in 1982. If the devices are classified according to federal law, 66 (75%) of the 88 classifiable injuries were caused by legal devices. The hospitalization rate for persons injured by devices illegal under federal law (18%) was six times higher than that for persons injured by devices legal under federal law.

Information on the circumstances of injury included the date and time of day of injury, the fireworks use behavior at the time of injury, and whether the person injured was actively using fireworks at the time of injury. Seventy-nine (70%) of the injuries occurred over the three-day July 4 holiday weekend. Of the 113 injuries, 81 (72%) occurred before dark and only 32 (28%) occurred after dark. The fireworks use behaviors at the time of injury are given in Table 4. Misuse or mishandling of fireworks was the cause of 75 (66%) of the injuries, while malfunctioning fireworks caused only 17 (15%) of the injuries. Holding fireworks in the hand was the most common misuse behavior.

Of the 113 persons interviewed, 97 (86%) were actively using fireworks at the time of their injury, and 16 (14%) were innocent bystanders. The active users were predominantly male (78%) and older (mean age, 19.1 years), while the innocent bystanders were more commonly female (62%) and younger (mean age, 14.2 years).

Eighty-four of the injured persons were active users from King County and thus were eligible for the case-control study. Injured persons were compared with controls for both their quantity of exposure to fireworks and their fireworks use behaviors. The quantity of exposure to fireworks over the entire July 4 holiday season, as measured by dollars spent and number of days used, was not significantly different for injured persons and controls. Injured persons spent a mean of $41 (median, $24) on fireworks, and controls spent $31 (median, $20). Injured persons used fireworks for a mean of 3.0 days, and controls used fireworks for a mean of 2.7 days.

Injured persons and controls did differ significantly in their use of specific fireworks types (Table 5). Use of firecrackers had the highest risk of injury, and use of aerial devices also carried a significant risk. Use of ground display devices, however, was not associated with injury. A conditional logistic regression model that included all three of these variables yielded similar results (Table 5).

The risks of injury associated with various fireworks use behaviors are given in Table 6. The highest risk was associated with lack of adult supervision (asked only of those aged 15 years or younger). Other behaviors with significantly elevated risk in a univariate analysis were relighting fireworks that do not ignite at first, throwing fireworks, carrying fireworks in one's pocket, bending over fireworks to light them (instead of approaching them from the side), and holding fireworks in the hand. Behaviors that were not found to carry a significantly elevated risk of injury were exploding fireworks inside of containers, accompanying persons who were throwing fireworks, drinking alcohol while using fireworks (asked only of those aged 16 years or older), or accompanying persons who were drinking alcohol while using fireworks. A conditional logistic regression model included the eight behavior questions that were asked of persons of all ages and excluded the parental supervision and alcohol use questions. Results were similar to those of the univariate analysis; however, carrying fireworks in one's pocket was no longer significantly associated with injury in this model.

COMMENT

We carried out active surveillance of fireworks-related injuries via emergency facilities in the metropolitan Seattle area during the 1983 July 4 holiday and found a substantial number of expensive injuries. Our surveillance identified 148 persons who were injured during the nine-day sales period and provided an estimated incidence of 9.7 fireworks-related injuries per 100,000 persons. This incidence is three times as high as the 3.1 injuries per 100,000 persons estimated by the National Electronic Injury Surveillance System (NEISS) during the 1981 July 4 holiday.[5] Although most of the difference between our estimate and the NEISS estimate can probably be accounted for by the fact that some other states have more restrictive fireworks laws than Washington, some of the difference may be due to our more complete case ascertainment. The NEISS reporting network includes only hospital emergency rooms. In our study, 14% of the fireworks-related injuries were reported by nonhospital emergency clinics.

The average charge for medical care required for the injured persons we interviewed was quite high—$562. Even higher was the average cost for hospitalized injured persons—$5,431. If we accept the NEISS estimate of 11,400 fireworks-related injuries in the United States in 1981,[5] then the direct costs of fireworks-related injuries in that year approximated $6.5 million. This estimate includes only immediate direct costs but does not include lifetime medical care costs, or indirect costs, such as time lost from work and decreased productivity. These other costs may be large. Twenty-two percent of the injuries in our study involved the eye. While we did not systematically determine the long-term sequelae of these injuries, Wilson found that 30% of fireworks-related eye injuries in Arkansas resulted in irreversible visual loss.[7]

Our study showed that most persons injured by fireworks were young males. Half of the injured persons were younger than 16 years, and almost three fourths were male. These findings agree with those of earlier studies.[6-9] Our study design did not allow us to determine, however, whether young males are truly at greater risk for fireworks-related injury or whether they are simply more frequent users of fireworks.

As in other studies, most (75%) of the injuries we identified resulted from use of fireworks that are legal under federal law. The NEISS[5] found that 80% of fireworks-related injuries were caused by federally legal class C devices, while McPheeters and Strachley[10] in Hawaii found that 90% were caused by federally legal devices. Injuries caused by legal devices were not as likely to result in hospitalization, however, as those caused by illegal devices.

Our case-control study determined that it was not greater exposure to fireworks in general, but exposure to firecrackers and aerial devices in particular, that was associated with increased risk of injury. The case-control method differentiated between the popularity of devices (ground-display devices caused the most injuries) and the relative danger of the devices (firecrackers and aerial devices had significantly elevated risk associated with their use).

Several fireworks use behaviors were associated with increased risk of injury. Paramount among these was the use of fireworks by children without adult supervision. A surprising result was the lack of association between alcohol use and fireworks-related injury. This is inconsistent with the association between alcohol use and other types of injury.[11] The apparent protective effect of being accompanied by a person using alcohol was a result of confounding by parental supervision.

The combined results of our surveillance and case-control studies suggest legislative and educational strategies for prevention of fireworks related injury. Most of the injuries we found were caused by legal fireworks. In addition, we identified two types of fireworks—firecrackers and aerial devices—that place their users at increased risk of injury. Legislation, on either a federal or state level, to decrease the availability of these two device types may result in a decrease in the number of fireworks-related injuries. The other prevention strategy is education. Most of the injuries we identified were caused by misuse of fireworks, and most occurred in children. The high risk associated with lack of parental supervision of children indicates that increased parental supervision and a consequent reduction in general fireworks misuse might decrease the number of injuries among children. Washington State's recent experience suggests that legislation is the more effective of these two strategies. Sale of firecrackers and some aerial devices was legalized in 1982, and the number of injuries in 1982 was twice that in 1981.[1] Between the 1982 and 1983 seasons, no further law changes were made, but a large fireworks safety educational campaign was undertaken, and the number of injuries did not decrease but increased slightly (authors' unpublished observations).

We will have the opportunity to evaluate further the effect of legislation. In March 1984, Washington's Governor John Spellman signed into law Engrossed Substitute House Bill 1652, which will again make the sale of firecrackers and some exploding aerial devices illegal.

Attention: Mr. Richard Ramsey

Dear Mr. Ramsey:

You recently requested that my office provide you with statistics for wildland fires caused by fireworks. We have consolidated the available data from both the State and federal fire protection agencies for the past three years. This should provide a representative picture of fireworks inpact on the fire suppression effort. Please realize that the data presented cannot be 100 percent accurate because of the difficulty of accurately determining the exact cause of all fires to which these agencies respond. Associated acreages burned and suppression cost data is also supplied for your information.

National Safety Council

National Safety Council Policy on
USE OF FIREWORKS

POLICY

The National Safety Council opposes the use of fireworks by adults and children, except by professional pyrotechnicians under controlled conditions.

BASIS

The misuse of fireworks by adults and children continues to cause several thousand needless injuries and deaths each year. Such accidents occur in spite of legislation banning the sale of certain types of fireworks in many states, as well as recently enacted federal regulations.

Enforcement of these regulations is exceedingly difficult, or lax, and use of fireworks continues to be a common practice.

IMPLEMENTATION

The National Safety Council supports in principle the public displays of fireworks under controlled conditions, but advocates more stringent regulations prohibiting the sale and indiscriminate use by adults and children. It is very evident that present regulations have not achieved the predicted reduction in fires and in deaths and injuries to children and adults from fireworks.

The National Safety Council strongly urges appropriate federal and state agencies to rigidly enforce existing regulations prohibiting sales of fireworks or their ingredients.

And it encourages local and state authorities to more diligently enforce existing legislation banning the sale and use of fireworks by the general public.

The National Safety Council calls upon all organizations and agencies concerned with the safety of the American public to intensify their educational efforts to inform adults and children regarding the hazards inherent in the use of fireworks.

Summary

Firework-related injuries have increased, albeit irregularly, since 1974. The 1981 estimate, 11,400 injuries, equals the previous high of 11,100 estimated for the Bicentennial year.

An annual study conducted during the Independence Day holidays indicates that firecrackers continue to account for a major portion of firework-related injuries. Injuries attributed to the more powerful devices, the federally banned Class B firecrackers, appear to have decreased somewhat in recent years. However, injuries identified with Class C firecrackers, a category which since December 1976 has included both legal and illegal devices, have demonstrated an increase over the last couple of years to a point above that estimated for 1976. (In 1976 CPSC reduced the amount of permissible pyrotechnic charge in Class C firecrackers from 130 to 50 milligrams, but their physical dimensions, historically about 1½ by ⅞ inch diameter, do not necessarily identify the amount of charge). Injuries associated with fireworks other than firecrackers have also increased over their previous high reported during the Bicentennial year.

Fire department data, which was reviewed from four states for years 1977 through 1980 indicates an increase in firework-related fires during this time period. Unlike personal injury cases, which involved firecrackers more frequently than other kinds of fireworks, house fire incidents most frequently involved rocket-type fireworks, which usually ignited roofing materials.

Data from previous years have indicated that most injuries associated with both (federally) legal and illegal fireworks involved misuse rather than product malfunction. Moreover, injuries attributed to permissible fireworks, from either misuse or malfunction, were generally minor, and did not often require hospitalization.

Nevertheless, the upward trend in injuries and fires over the last several years is discomforting. Even if the increase merely reflects production and sales trends, the fact that fireworks continue to be associated with a large number of preventable injuries each year is a problem of continuing concern.

HB 50

The Honorable Mitch Abood
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Senator Abood:

Subject: House Bill #50 - "An Act Relating to Alaska Bidder's Preference"

We recommend that this bill not pass.

The primary reason for opposing this bill is that no preference dollar limit is contained in the bill. On a $10 million dollar project the 10 percent preference could amount to $1 million dollars.

Current Anchorage School District Policy contains a 5 percent local bidder's preference for firms maintaining offices within the boundaries of the Municipality of Anchorage. The maximum dollar preference allowed is $5,000.

Bidder's preferences tend to limit competition in the market-place and therefore, the usual result is higher costs to the taxpayers.

Sincerely,

E. E. (Gene) Davis, Ed.D.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

The purpose of bidder preference for resident firms when the state acts as a market participant using state funds is to encourage local industry, strengthen and stabilize the economy, decrease unemployment, and enhance the tax and revenue base of the state.

* Section 2. AS 37.05.230(1)(B) is amended to read:
(B) a bid shall be awarded to an Alaska bidder if the [HIS] bid is not more than five percent higher than the lowest nonresident bidder's, except that a contract bid of $100,000 or less shall be awarded to an Alaska bidder if the bid is not more than 15 percent higher than the lowest nonresident bidder's; and

SECTIONAL ANALYSIS OF CS HB 50 (Finance):

This bill adds two sections and amends one section of existing law (AS 37.05) as follows:

Section 1. Adds a new section (AS 37.05.225. PURPOSE) to establish in statute a legislative purpose for bidders preference. The purpose is based on economic conditions in Alaska, including continuous high unemployment, underutilization of resident construction and supply firms, and unfavorably high costs which impact the economic health of the State.

Section 2. Amends AS 37.05.230(1)(a), increasing the existing bidders preference from "not more than five percent" to "not more than 10 percent higher than the lowest nonresident bidder's."

Section 3. Adds a new subsection (e) to AS 37.05.315, providing that municipalities using state grant funds, in part or whole, for competitively bid contracts or projects may utilize the bidders preference set out in Section 2.

Except for the three sections above, the other provisions of AS 37.05 would remain as is in existing statutes.

The Honorable BEI GRUSSENDORF
Speaker of the House

Dear Speaker Grussendorf, 21 February 1985

We write in support of HB 50, relating to Alaska Bidder's Preference.

Our organization represents the largest segment of the State's electrical contractors; the Independents. Most of us are long term Alaskans, who have been here winter after winter, surviving the crash after the pipeline completion and the like. We hire Alaskans, pay our Alaskan taxes, are licensed, bonded and insured in concert with State law.

In the past several years we have seen great quantities of "contractors" come up here from areas of dismal fiscal outlook, attempting to make a grab for some big construction money. Many do not bother to apply for registration, licensing or bonding, and numerous are the horror stories associated with their work.

Not only are they injuring Alaskans, both in the residential markets and in the commercial markets, but they are giving a bad name to a trade in which we take pride and try to support. We know of several parallels to the contractor difficulties noted above, involving suppliers doing business here from the states.

We support the increase in the Alaska Bidder Preference as a logical way to attempt to protect the people, companies and industries who are ALWAYS HERE, in bad winters, miserable breakups and poor economic climates.

We would be pleased to work with you during passage of this amendment; thank you in advance,

DON TANNER

ALASKA CHAPTER

ASSOCIATED GENERAL CONTRACTORS OF AMERICA, INC.

POSITION STATEMENT

ON LEGISLATION INCREASING

THE

ALASKA BIDDER PREFERENCE (HB 50)

HB 50

POSITION PAPER ON HB 50

The Alaska Chapter, Associated General Contractors of America, Inc. (A.G.C.) represents more than 900 member companies, including most of the general contracting companies engaged in Alaska's commercial construction.

A.G.C. is opposed to HB 50 which proposes to raise the Alaska bidder preference percentage, contained in AS 37.05.230, from 5% to 10%. Primarily, A.G.C. opposes any local preference for the construction industry including the existing 5% preference. A.G.C.'s opposition is founded on both practical and philosophical considerations.

From a practical perspective, a preference for local contractors:

- inflates the cost to the owner
- increases the uncertainty in the bidding process
- increases construction bidding requirements
- increases the potential for litigation
- delays the awarding of projects

Further, there is a strong likelihood that such a scheme is unconstitutional. In Attorney Robert Goldberg's recent study submitted to the Department of Labor, pages 50 and 51 state in part:

> ". . . While that court has not decided the constitutionality of the five percent bidder preference in AS 37.05.230, two of the five justices (Rabinowitz and Burke) have already announced that they regard the preference as manifestly unconstitutional because: 'A discrimination between residents and non residents solely on the object of assisting the one class over the other economically cannot be upheld under either the privileges and immunities or equal protection clauses.' Irby-Northface v. Commonwealth Electric Co., 664 P.2d 557, 562 (Alaska 1983) (Rabinowitz, J., concurring), quoting Lynden Transport, Inc. v. State, 532 P.2d 700, 710 (Alaska 1975)"

From a philosophical perspective, A.G.C. opposes government regulations of the construction industry. A.G.C. supports the free market, competitive bidding system for awarding construction contracts. This system has stood the test of time as the most economical system for the owner and a fair system for the contractors. Consistency dictates that A.G.C. not seek special regulatory favor for Alaska contractors. Further, a local preference is not consistent with the competition free market system.

Although this legislation has no effect on projects awarded by the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities, it would affect such State agencies as: The Alaska Power Authority, University of Alaska, Department of Corrections, Department of Administration, Pioneer Homes and the Court System. The Alaska Power Authority has experienced bidder preference law suits, including a case that had to be settled by the Supreme Court before the bid could be let. Litigation prior to project award increases the cost and is not in the best interest of the construction industry or the general public.

A 10% bidder preference will unnecessarily and substantially increase the cost of building Alaska's infrastructure. At a time of dwindling oil revenues we suggest that the 10% bidder preference not be approved.

D. Statutory Provisions Governing Public Contracts

Title 36 of the Alaska Statutes, which governs public contracts, includes three chapters granting preferences to Alaskan individuals and businesses. AS 36.10, discussed above, requires preferential hiring of Alaska residents for the performance of public works contracts. AS 36.15 requires the use, wherever practicable, of Alaska forest products in state-funded construction. AS 36.20.010 provides that: "In making purchases or awarding contracts for supplies, commodities or material for an office or institution of this state preference shall be given, whenever practicable, to producers and dealers in the state, price and quality being equal." This provision is implemented in AS 37.05.230(1) which establishes competitive building requirements but provides that "a bid shall be awarded to an Alaska bidder if the bid is not more than five percent higher than the lowest nonresident bidder's..."

The future of these preferences, however, appears uncertain at best. The Superior Court has recently ruled AS 36.10.010 to be violative of the privileges and immunities clause in Francis v. Robison, et al., 3AN 83-9969 Civil, a decision the state is currently appealing to the Alaska Supreme Court. While that court has not decided the constitutionality of the five percent bidder preference in AS 37.05.230, two of the five justices (Rabinowitz and Burke) have already announced that they regard the preference as manifestly unconstitutional because: "A discrimination between residents and non residents solely on the object of assisting the one class over the other economically cannot be upheld under either the privileges and immunities or equal protection clauses." Irby-Northface v. Commonwealth Electric Co., 664 P.2d 557, 562 (Alaska 1983) (Rabinowitz, J., concurring), quoting Lynden Transport, Inc. v. State, 532 P.2d 700, 710 (Alaska 1975).

Conspicuous by their absence from Alaska's public contract statutes are provisions in effect in some jurisdictions permitting or requiring bidding preferences or set-asides for small business and/or minority business enterprises. Nor does Alaska have a statutory requirement that contractors have affirmative action programs, although such requirements are in practice included in some state contracts. As discussed below, measures such as these could serve as constitutionally permissible means of fighting unemployment in Alaska.

E. DOT & PF Affirmative Action Program

One major state agency has made commitments to increase contracting opportunities for minority business enterprises. In 1980, the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities (DOT & PF) entered into a settlement agreement

TONY KNOWLES,

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

Dear Senator:

House Bill 81, relating to motor vehicle inspections, is essential for the Municipality's new vehicle Inspection and Maintenance (I/M) Program, scheduled to begin July 1. The legislation clarifies the authority of the state Division of Motor Vehicles to provide the enforcement mechanism for the I/M Program, as part of the regular license renewal system. It is a simple and effective method.

HB 81 is one of the final pieces necessary for timely and efficient start-up of the I/M Program. Legislation is needed because current statutes are not absolutely clear about the State's authority to withhold vehicle registration for non-compliance with an emissions control program. It would be to no one's advantage to see the I/M Program halted in its first days by a legal challenge.

Failure to pass HB 81 could seriously jeopardize federal highway and sewer funding. The Environmental Protection Agency has already demonstrated its willingness to impose economic sanctions on state or local governments which fail to implement emission reduction programs and show appreciable improvements in air quality.

Anchorage would be vulnerable to such sanctions this year if the vehicle inspection program does not begin July 1, as scheduled. Approximately $50 million of federal highway funds are spent on critical transportation improvements in the Anchorage area each year. Projects from South Anchorage to Eagle River could be affected. In addition, this year the Municipality received an $18 million grant from the EPA for construction of the Pt. Woronzof Sewage Treatment Plant. We anticipate receiving more EPA funds for subsequent phases of the project. We cannot afford to jeopardize that funding, in any way.

Anchorage's I/M Program has been developed through a cooperative effort between the State and the Municipality and adopted by ordinance. But the State does have a responsibility. Anchorage's program is a required part of the State implementation plan (SIP) to improve air quality in certain areas. In turn, SIP is a mandated part of the State's certification for the use of federal highway funds in Anchorage.

Anchorage wants clean air. We want an improved transportation system. We can have both. At the municipal level, we have responded to our challenges by crafting an efficient and effective I/M Program. We seek from you the tool of simple enforcement through an existing system. Without this tool, all of our efforts will have been wasted. The program will not work. Rather than a productive partnership, the Municipality will have no alternative but to leave the program, and the problem, on your doorstep.

I look forward to your support and the passage of HB 81. Together we can help Anchorage continue to make the progress which has made us an All-American City.

Sincerely,

Tony Knowles

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION

Anchorage Vehicle Inspection Program
Information Sheet

NEED FOR A VEHICLE INSPECTION PROGRAM

Since 1977, the Environmental Protection Agency has been after the Municipality of Anchorage (MOA) to reduce carbon monoxide levels. In 1984, CO levels in Anchorage exceeded federal standards (9 ppm) 39 times. Since about 90% of the CO comes from vehicles, the most effective means of reducing CO is to reduce vehicle emissions of CO.

The EPA has the power to impose economic sanctions if Anchorage does not demonstrate a good-faith effort to implement an I/M Program and reduce CO levels significantly by the end of 1987.

Under those sanctions, the EPA could cut off federal funding for highways and sewer projects. Anchorage currently receives $50 million a year in federal highway funds. In addition, failure to implement the I/M Program could jeopardize federal payments for construction of the Pt. Woronzoff Sewage Treatment Plant.

WHICH VEHICLES PARTICIPATE

Cars and trucks, up to 12,000 pounds unladen, registered for street use in Anchorage, 15 years old or newer and gasoline-powered must be inspected. Diesel vehicles will not need emissions inspections but they will require a one-time inspection to verify and record that they are diesel.

Vehicle owners will be notified of the need for an emissions inspection when they receive their annual vehicle registration forms from the state Division of Motor Vehicles. The DMV will not re-register a vehicle without a certificate of inspection.

THE STATE'S ROLE

The DMV plays an essential role in the I/M Program by providing the enforcement mechanism. Some states and urban areas in other parts of the country have used a sticker program instead of the registration system. However, the sticker programs have been much more difficult to enforce and much less successful than the programs tied to vehicle registration.

The problems with a sticker system are so serious that, should the state withdraw from participation in the I/M Program, it might be dropped altogether. At the very least, a change at this point would result in lengthy delays, which could jeopardize federal funding.
