INSPECTION PROCESS (Should take 20-30 minutes)

The Anchorage Assembly opted for a decentralized program, in which private service stations, dealers and garages become certified to either perform the inspection only, or to perform both inspections and repairs.

The inspection process for vehicles 1975 and newer includes a visual and functional under-hood check of emission control devices, and a tailpipe test of the actual emissions. Earlier models (1970-74) will only be tested for the tailpipe emissions, since emission control devices came into wide usage only after 1974.

The emission standards vary according to make and year; the newer the car, the tougher the standard.

The administration is considering recommending the elimination of two components from the program in order to streamline the process. One is a "safety inspection," a walk-around check of lights, windshield, etc. In its present form, the safety inspection is mandatory but repairs are voluntary. The other component that may be eliminated is the "Plumbtesmo" test, which checks for presence of leaded gas in vehicles designed to use unleaded gas. For further information about these components, contact Ken Lauzen or Patty Ginsburg, at the I/M Administration Office (264-4975).

CERTIFICATION

In order to participate in the I/M Program, mechanics and stations must be certified. Certification of mechanics requires either: 1) Passing a challenge test and successful completion of an 8-hour course on the I/M Program, or 2) Successful completion of a 40-hour course offered by the Alaska Vocational Technical Center.

Service stations, car dealers and garages are required to obtain an Alaska certified Test Analyzer System (the computer which actually tests the car) and any additional equipment required. Some facilities are certified to inspect only; others are certified to perform both inspections and repairs.

SUMMARY

This document contains the requirements, specifications, and procedures for a motor vehicle inspection and maintenance (I/M) Program which has been designed for Fairbanks North Star Borough. The information this document contains is relatively technical in nature and is principally intended for use by the operators of Certified I/M Stations and the staff of the Borough's I/M Program Administration Office. Separate publications are available from the I/M Program Administration Office which more concisely describe the requirements of the program for the general public.

Under the I/M Program, owners of model year 1975 and newer cars and trucks are required to have their vehicles inspected for emissions problems each year, or upon initial registration in the State. The model year of vehicles subject to the program changes over time because inspections are not required for vehicles that are more than fifteen years old. Vehicles determined to have excessive pollution levels are required to be repaired prior to renewal of registration by the Alaska Division of Motor Vehicles (DMV).

Inspections required under the I/M Program must be made at a Certified I/M Station, except under special circumstances. A fee may be charged for the inspections, and vehicles which fail the inspection because of defects in their emission control system must be repaired and then retested by a Certified I/M Station.

Repairs required under the I/M Program may be performed by anyone, including vehicle owners. However, incentives are provided for the repair of vehicles by Certified I/M Mechanics working at Certified I/M Stations. Except for certain Fleet Operator owned vehicles, vehicle owners are guaranteed of either passing the retest or receiving a waiver if they have repairs performed at a Certified I/M Station. In addition, there is a ceiling on the cost of repairs required for all work done by Certified I/M Stations (except for vehicles owned by Fleet Operators who also own or operate Certified I/M Stations). Work done or parts purchased and installed by vehicle owners or at uncertified facilities will not count toward this cost ceiling.

The following sections of this document describe in detail how the I/M Program is to be conducted. Section 2 describes the general requirements of the program and defines terms which are frequently used in the program.

Section 3 describes the organization and responsibilities of the I/M Program Administration Office. Included in this section are the procedures to be used for dispute resolution, program enforcement, public information, program evaluation, and quality control.

Section 4 describes the requirements and procedures used by the I/M Program Administration Office for the certification of I/M Stations, mechanics, equipment, and training courses required under the I/M Program.

Section 5 contains the detailed requirements which must be met by Certified I/M Stations.

Section 6 describes the content of the training course which will be available for mechanics who wish to become Certified I/M Mechanics.

Section 7 describes all of the vehicle inspection, quality control, and repair procedures which are to be used at Certified I/M Stations.

Section 8 contains the standards which are to be used during the inspection of vehicles at Certified I/M Stations.

Modification to the information and requirements contained herein may be periodically made by the I/M Program Administration Office to the extent that such changes are necessary to reflect changes in the specifications of available instrumentation or vehicles, and improvements in inspection and repair procedures that are developed based on I/M program experience. In the event that instrumentation specifications are changed so as to effect the hardware that is acceptable for use, stations owning previously certified instruments shall be allowed to use such instruments for a period of at least three years. Software changes to instrumentation may be required upon 90 days notice.

The emission control inspection program will begin on July 1, 1985, in both Ancorage and Fairbanks. The division of motor vehicles has been tasked with enforcement of the program. The Department of Law has decided the current statutes do give us the authority to enforce the program if we adopt regulations, but the regulatory process does not allow the division to recover any funds expended in the enforcement of the program. This proposed statute would allow the division to collect a prescribed fee in addition to the registration fee for those vehicles required to be inspected. These fees would be used to reimburse the General Fund for the expenditures incurred to enforce this program.

This type of approach places the cost of the program only on those affected by the program, and is similar in the approach used by the local governments to recover their costs. The goal at both the state and local levels is to make the program self-supporting from user fees. Between Anchorage and Fairbanks, approximately 180,000 to 200,000 vehicles will be inspected the first year. Together with the $80,000 start-up grant, the $1.00 fee imposed on these vehicles will allow the State to recover its costs.

BILL SHEFFIELD
GOVERNOR

HB 81

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

January 18, 1985

The Honorable Ben Grussendorf
Speaker of the House
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Representative Grussendorf:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill that gives the Department of Public Safety explicit authority to refuse to register a motor vehicle if the vehicle does not meet the standards of a state-operated emission control program or a state-approved local emission inspection program. The bill would also impose a $1 administrative fee, in addition to the annual registration fee, to compensate the state for the cost of this enforcement program.

To implement the state's Air Quality Control Plan, the Municipality of Anchorage and the Fairbanks North Star Borough have recently adopted local vehicle inspection and maintenance (I/M) programs. The most effective way to ensure compliance with local inspection programs is through the state motor vehicle registration process. Before a person can obtain or renew a vehicle registration, the person must show evidence of compliance with the I/M program. This method has been chosen in preference to a "sticker" enforcement program, in which the owners or operators of all cars inspected and found to be in compliance would be required to display a sticker on their cars. National statistics have shown that the sticker enforcement method is 30 percent less effective than the registration method.

The $1 fee is imposed to compensate the state for the costs of the additional administrative burden placed upon the Department of Public Safety. Proceeds from the fee will be placed in the state's general fund.

The quality and cleanliness of the air in Alaska's two largest cities are obviously of utmost importance to the health and well-being of the residents. Strict enforcement of motor vehicle emission standards is a crucial part of our overall efforts to control air pollution. Since this bill will allow more effective enforcement of these standards, I urge prompt passage of the bill.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield
Governor

(a) the vehicle is subject to [AN EMISSION INSPECTION PROGRAM UNDER AS 46.03.190 OR] a state-approved local emission inspection program adopted by municipal ordinance under AS 46.03.210, and the vehicle does not meet the standards of that program. Proposed Amendment to Section 2 of HB 81

Sec. 28.10.423. EMISSION CONTROL INSPECTION PROGRAM FEES. In addition to the annual registration fee specified in AS 28.10.421, a $1 fee is imposed upon every vehicle required to be inspected under an emission control program established under [AS 46.03.190 OR] AS 46.03.210. This fee must be collected at the same time and in the same manner as the registration fee.

Re: House Bill 81 - Motor Vehicle Emission Inspections

On July 1, 1985, the Municipality of Anchorage will begin a Vehicle Inspection and Maintenance (I&M) Program to reduce excessive levels of carbon monoxide. HB 81 will enable the State Division of Motor Vehicles to cooperate with Anchorage and other local governments implementing such programs.

HB 81 will do two things: 1) Clarify DMV's authority to withhold registration for non-compliance with a state-approved local I&M program; and 2) add $1 to the annual vehicle registration fee, to recover state costs incurred for cooperating in local I&M programs. Only local governments with I&M programs will be affected by the legislation.

POSITION PAPER
MUNICIPALITY OF ANCH

VEHICLE INSPECTION & MAINTENANCE PROGRAM

On July 1, 1985, the Municipality of Anchorage will begin a Vehicle Inspection and Maintenance (I/M) Program to monitor and reduce the level of carbon monoxide emissions from Anchorage vehicles.

HOW IT WORKS

If your vehicle requires inspection, you will receive a notice from the State Division of Motor Vehicles along with the annual vehicle registration form. Inspections will be required for vehicles which are all of the following:

* gasoline powered
* registered for street use
* weigh less than 12,000 pounds, unladen
* 15 years old or newer (1970-1985 models)

Under certain circumstances, some vehicles may qualify for waivers. Diesel-powered vehicles will require a one-time I/M registration. About 70% of the vehicles tested are expected to pass the initial inspection. Those that fail must be repaired and retested. Inspection certificates will be issued when either the vehicle passes inspection or when it qualifies for a waiver.

VEHICLES REQUIRING AN INSPECTION CERTIFICATE WILL NOT BE REGISTERED BY THE DMV WITHOUT THE CERTIFICATE.

WHERE TO GO

Inspections must be performed at a certified I/M facility. Look for an official I/M emblem:

Repairs required to reduce emissions may be performed by anyone. However, a free retest and a ceiling on repair costs apply only when repairs are performed at a certified I/M facility.

WHAT IT COSTS

$10	Inspection Certificate
$40 Maximum	Inspection
$150 Maximum	Repairs, if needed, in 1985

Cost repair ceilings in subsequent years depend on whether the vehicle's emission control devices have been removed or altered. Ceilings are higher if removal or alterations have occurred.

All 1986 and later models must meet emission standards, regardless of cost.

AN ORDINANCE ADDING A NEW CHAPTER 15.80 TO THE ANCHORAGE MUNICIPAL CODE ESTABLISHING A VEHICLE INSPECTION AND MAINTENANCE PROGRAM

THE ANCHORAGE ASSEMBLY ORDAINS:

Section 1. A new Section 15.80.010 of the Anchorage Municipal Code is enacted to read as follows:

15.80.010 Inspection and Maintenance of Motor Vehicles.

A. Every owner of a vehicle registered within the Municipality of Anchorage shall have each such vehicle inspected and maintained in accordance with the requirements specified in the document entitled "I/M Program Design, Municipality of Anchorage, Private Garage Option" dated May 3, 1984 and referred to as the "I/M Program Design." The I/M Program Design is adopted by reference as part of this ordinance, as are measures adopted by the Program Administrator pursuant to Paragraph I of this section.

B. Every owner of more than ten (10) vehicles which are primarily used in the Municipality of Anchorage shall have such vehicles inspected and maintained in accordance with the requirements of the I/M Program Design regardless of whether such vehicles are registered with the Municipality of Anchorage.

C. A Certificate of Inspection issued in accordance with the procedures specified in the I/M Program Design shall be required prior to vehicle registration or vehicle registration renewal with the Alaska Division of Motor Vehicles for all vehicles subject to the requirements of the I/M Program Design.

D. The Director of the Department of Health and Environmental Protection shall have principal responsibility for the implementation and enforcement of the I/M Program and shall designate one employee of the Department as the I/M Program Administrator.

E. The I/M Program Administrator shall certify mechanics, vehicle test or service facilities (stations), equipment and training courses meeting all certification requirements specified in Section 4 of the I/M Program Design.

F. All inspections, ~~repair and maintenance~~ required under the I/M Program Design shall be done in a manner consistent with the requirements of Section 7 of the I/M Program Design when performed by certified I/M stations.

G. Certifications shall be suspended or revoked by the I/M Program Administrator for repeated or serious violations of procedures or requirements specified in the I/M Program Design.

H. No facility may advertise itself as a Certified I/M Station unless it is certified as such by the I/M Program Administrator.

I. Upon ~~thirty (30)~~ sixty (60) days' advance notice to certified I/M stations and the public, the I/M Program Administrator shall make such changes to the I/M Program Design as are necessary to:

1. maintain an overall failure rate of 30 percent or less; and

2. require the use of inspection and repair procedures which are cost-effective and which reflect changes in the motor vehicle fleet.

J. The Program Administrator shall sell blank Certificates of Inspection to certified I/M stations for a fee not to exceed $10.00. The same fee shall be charged for Certificates of Inspection issued by the Program Administrator to vehicles qualifying for a waiver under the I/M Program Design. The precise level of the Certificate of Inspection fee shall be established based on the cost of operating the Program Administrator's office and shall from time to time be modified to reflect changes in the Program Administrator's office operating costs.

ATTEST:

Deputy

*K. An average of four (4) random checks per year per inspection station shall occur.

 Section 2. That the referee station as anticipated in this plan shall be offered for operation by the private sector.

1. New APEA contracts call for a 5% pay increase effective July 16, 1985. This will increase first year personnel costs to $170,000.

2. The U.S. Post Office predicts a 15% postage increase in October 1984. Postage costs will be $10,200.

3. The state will begin a system of user chargeback for data processing services in FY-86. The exact amount for DP services will be difficult to assess at this point but $25,000 for programming, file storage, and machine use would be reasonable.

4. With the new computer system started in May, it is not possible to use the old computer terminals. New terminals, printers, and DP charges for the four counter employees will be $40,000.

With these changes the new estimate for the first year charges will be $288,700. Some of these costs, such as the equipment costs, must be incurred in this fiscal year prior to start-up. It will also be necessary to hire the new personnel on April 1, 1985 so they are adequately trained prior to start-up. This will incur approximately $40,000 for salaries in FY-85.

Operational Considerations

1. The mailout renewal notices will be changed from a self-contained mailer to a mail stuffer system so that information on the program will be sent only to applicable Zip Code areas.

2. Renewal notices will be sent out 90 days in advance rather than 60 days to allow more time for inspection.

→ 3. A one digit field in the vehicle record will indicate liability for inspection. Initially this will be determined by Zip Code area, vehicle class, and vehicle year for current records. The records will then be updated as vehicle transactions occur or waivers are obtained.

→ 4. Applications for registration without an inspection or waiver certificate will not be accepted. They will be refused at the counter or returned by mail. Disputes concerning liability will be referred to the municipality or borough.

→ 5. Inspection certificate numbers may be recorded on the registration but will not be placed in the data file. Inspection certificates will not be microfilmed with vehicle records but will, instead, be returned to local government offices.

6. Registration extensions or seasonal registrations will not be considered as part of this program.

Registration Enforcement
I/M Program

Basic Concept

Municipalities will define what vehicles must be inspected under the program. DMV will not permit registration of these vehicles unless they have a valid inspection or waiver certificate. This will be essentially what has been referred to as "Option A" in previous meetings.

Time Schedule

August '84	Draft legislation for Commissioner's approval
September '84	1. Order equipment for mailing process 2. Design and order forms
October- '84 November	Initial programming effort to identify vehicles subject to inspection
January '85	Draft procedures for field offices
February '85	Mailing equipment and forms received and tested
March '85	1. Start hiring process for new positions 2. Test print and production programs
April '85	Train field personnel
May '85	Print and mail July renewal notices
July '85	Begin enforcement

Program Funding

1. DEC or EPA will provide DMV with $80,000 for start-up costs mainly for equipment.

2. Other state costs will be recovered by charging an extra fee at the time of registration for vehicles subject to registration. Legislation will authorize the charge and allow the fee to be used by DMV in the operating budget. Initial estimate is $1 per vehicle.

Cost Proposals

Earlier estimates for Option A enforcement costs totaled $224,300 annually with personnel and contractual costs being valid for the first two years. Since that time it has been necessary to make the following revisions to that estimate:

Dear Senator Abood:

Please read the following statement into the records of the hearing on April 24, 1985, relative to H B 124.

As a person who was a member of the legislative interim committee on concerns of Alaska's seniors, and as one who assisted in the drafting of H B 17 which gave birth to the Older Alaskans Commission, I have a vital interest in the operations of the commission.

The problems that have been and still are evident are basically two fold --

The first is that the OAC has never implemented the fundamental spirit of H B 17, namely that Alaska's elderly are to have maximum involvement in any plans considered for adoption by OAC and the manner in which any plans are carried out. Alaska's elderly deserve a great deal more than a state system which is only the tool for administering the funds, state and federal, under the Older Americans Act. We should have innovative pilot projects (as provided for in H B 17) to meet those needs not funded under the Older Americans Act. One example that comes to mind is the provision of foot care, eye glasses, hearing aids, in order that older people can remain mobile and otherwise functional. Alaska's programs should serve all elderly and not just those who happen to live in the more populated centers. Older Persons Action Group receives dozens of requests from non-urban areas for assistance because their needs are not addressed in any organized fashion by OAC. Nor does the OAC fund OPAG to provide these services otherwise neglected.

The OAC is directed by statute to encourage and assist in the formation of local government senior citizens commissions. The thought was that OAC would address statewide concerns while the local commissions would administer the regional (boroughs or native corporation areas) and local programs. The OAC has done nothing in this area.

hat leads us to the second basic problem and involves che question as to who sets the policies -- the OAC with very rare exceptions, rubber stamps the policies and decisions of the executive director. OAC is kept busy on their six of seven meetings a year in approving grants, participating in training sessions of project directors (not the boards of elderly organizations) and, as I said, merely approving how the director runs the show. What is evident is that the OAC is neither a policy making nor an administrative body. At most, it may be advisory.

A good director knows the fine line between administering programs under the guidance of his board and being the guiding force himself in the whole operation.

In summary, that the state statute is not adhered to either in spirit or entirety, in deed: Seniors have practically nothing to say about how their concerns and needs are addressed -- they are governed by a bureaucracy that sets all the rules and makes all the decisions about what programs are funded and by how much.

Federal and state laws say that older persons shall have maximum participation and involvement in all processes of program development and administration. In Alaska, it's the bureaucracy that makes the decisions.

I recommend that the Older Alaskans Commission get a conditional extension.

I can expand on and give numerous examples of every statement I have made.

Sincerely,

Rose Palmquist

I wish to support the continuation of the Older Alaskan Commission.

I work with low income and in many cases, near low income seniors.

In looking at the services they receive I would say many of our seniors depend upon the network of services available, and upon the effectiveness of this network. This includes: Meal sites, Senior Center activities, transportation and volunteer activities, to name a few.

I feel the OAC, in working with service providers, makes programs accountable. This of course, means state monies spent on senior citizens is made more effective through the coordination, training, and monitoring functions of the OAC.

Our responsibility towards our seniors can be met by funding the OAC at a level which enhances, rather than detracts from the levels of service provided in our community--and throughout the state.

Dear Senator Abood:

I have enclosed a copy of the letter from The Federal Communications Commission, as you requested.

I have discovered a problem which I think is potentially dangerous and so does the FCC. I have discovered that Mable T. Caverly has been going into the homes of clients and either disconnecting my machinery (without my knowledge or permission) or installing their machinery on the same telephone line as the Med-Alert machinery. I think the latter is quite risky, if not dangerous and could lead to the non-rescue or death of a client. I urge you to help me get Mable T. Caverly Sr. Center to stop this practice. Inasmuch as the letter they received is quite similar to mine I think, I enclosed my letter. However, letter or not, it does not seem to have stopped them.

I originally requested an investigation by the FCC in January after discovering the first home where the MTC machinery was "Doubled up" with Med-Alert machinery. Since then I have personal knowledge of at least one other client they "doubled up." I am canvassing the clients right now to see if there are other instances.

An additional note of interest. I am sure that the Older Alaskans Commission is requiring MTC to report monthly on the number of clients they have "on line." It would be interesting to learn how many clients were receiving "double counts", by MTC. It seems unnecessary for the State to be paying twice for the same client., and could cast some doubt as to the credibility of their statistics.

Further, I have sent a bill to Mable T. Caverly Center for the units which they disconnected belonging to me. They were damaged, some ruined.

Thank you for your interest in this matter.

Yours truly,

Dear Senator Abood:

My name is Esther Wehr. I am the Dispatching Supervisor for Guardian Security Systems, which monitors for Med-Alert.

I work the day shift Monday-Friday and deal with the senior citizens who call in to test their medical alarms.

Many of them are concerned and upset over the tactics used by Mable T. Caverly Center.

They feel intimidated and pressured with letters and phone calls apparently from Mable T.

Some of the seniors call just to test their units, many call to be reassured that all is well with their world and just to talk to a voice at the other end of the phone who will say, "hello," "how are you," and mean it. My dispatchers and I are always willing to talk with them if we have the time.

As for myself and my dispatchers, we are concerned. We can't help but each have our favorites and the list of favorites grows daily as we get to know them better.

Each senior is treated with concern and respect for themselves and their years of life. These people were once young productive members of our society, giving us many of our current values and of course the current generation itself.

When a company calls an older person, frightening them and making them insecure, it reflects on us all. To prey on an elderly person for monetary gain is not only distasteful but a cruel, inhumane way to "Make a Bux."

Let us not forget that if we live we must grow old, it is the nature of things. How would we like having our lives turned upside down?

If you have questions and are interested in those people and care like we do, please call and I will be glad to explain particular instances.

Thank you for your attention.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Moyer:

In our investigation into the matter of the potential danger of connecting the equipment of both Med-Alert and the Mabel T Caverly Senior Center to the same phone line, we have been unable to find any confirmed instance of harm to the patient. However, we feel that there may indeed be a possible danger in doing so. Since we know of no regulation that requires units of different manufacturers to be compatible with each other we can only request your help in making sure that such a potentially dangerous situation does not occur.

We request that when someone makes arrangements to take your service you ask them if they already have service with another company. If so, arrangements should be made through the client to have the other unit removed from the line at the same time that the new one is installed. Your cooperation in this matter is greatly appreciated.

PURPOSE AND SCOPE OF THE REPORT

Purpose

In accordance with the intent of Titles 24 and 44 of the Alaska Statutes (sunset legislation), we have examined the activities of the Older Alaskans Commission (OAC) for the past three fiscal years to determine if the Commission has been operating in an efficient and effective manner.

Legislative intent requires consideration of this report during legislative oversight hearings to determine whether the OAC should be reestablished. The law now specifies that the Commission will terminate June 30, 1985, and will have one year from that date to conclude its affairs.

Scope

The major areas of our examination were program evaluation, administrative functions, and commission proceedings. We reviewed and evaluated the following:

1. Applicable statutes and regulations.

2. Tests of files and documents.

3. Interviews with program personnel.

4. Complaints filed with the Attorney General's Office and the Ombudsman's Office.

5. Discussions with Commission members.

6. Minutes of Commission meetings and correspondence files.

The policy and audit approach utilized by the Division of Legislative Audit for Performance Review can best be described as "audit by exception."

This methodology focuses audit effort on areas of an auditee's operations that have been identified by a preliminary survey as having a high degree of probability for needing improvements.

Therefore, by design, finite audit resources are used to identify where and how improvement can be made and little time is devoted to reviewing well-run operations or programs. Consequently, this report highlights those areas needing improvement and does not emphasize those operations and programs that are properly functioning.

Pursuant to Alaska Statute 44.21, the Older Alaskans Commission was created in July of 1981 and was established within the Department of Administration. The Commission consists of seven members who are selected based upon their knowledge and demonstrated interest in the concerns of older Alaskans. Commission members serve overlapping four year terms.

The Commission is authorized to administer and coordinate State programs for the elderly and to administer Federal programs provided under the Older Americans Act of 1965. Together, the provisions of Alaska Statute 44.21 and the Older Americans Act define the purpose, scope of work, and authority of the Commission. In implementing its planning and administrative responsibilities, these legislative acts assign to the Commission four primary roles:

Allocation: To determine the appropriate distribution of state and federal funds to purchase needed programs and services for older Alaskans;

Advocacy: To advocate for the needs and interests of older Alaskans at both state and local levels;

Coordination: To increase the coordination of both state and local resources available to address the needs of older Alaskans; and

Resource and System Development: To develop or expand services to older Alaskans as well as to ensure a more systematic and thorough approach to meeting their needs.

The broad scope of this legislative mandate, opens nearly all the concerns of older Alaskans to the consideration of the Commission. However, AS 44.21 further stipulates that the Commission may not investigate, review, or undertake any responsibility for the longevity bonus program or the Alaska Pioneers' Homes.

REPORT CONCLUSION

This report contains policy issues raised as a result of our evaluation of various Commission practices. The final policy decisions affecting these practices are not within the scope of this report, but requires legislative consideration. In debating these issues, the oversight committees should take into consideration the findings and recommendations presented in this report so the potential impact of policy changes can be evaluated.

Report Conclusion

In our opinion, the OAC should be reestablished. The intent of creating the Commission by the Legislature was to assure the remaining years of citizens over the age of 60 are years of good health, honor, and dignity. The OAC has implemented this mandate by:

1. Providing services in the areas of health, transportation, employment, education, home care, and housing to older Alaskans.

2. Advocating for the needs of older Alaskans in the planning and delivery of state programs.

3. Requiring the participation of senior citizens in the planning and development of programs that benefit older Alaskans.

However, the following findings describe areas where weaknesses were observed. We have made recommendations which, if implemented, will improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the Commission.

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Recommendation No. 1

The Older Alaskans Commission (OAC) should improve the State Plan's objectives in order to better measure and evaluate program performance.

Alaska Statute 44.21 and federal regulations require OAC to formulate a State Plan that identifies the concerns and needs of older Alaskans. This document serves as a work plan for employees through the establishment of state and federal program goals and objectives. The objectives describe what OAC intends to accomplish within a given fiscal year.

In our review of the current state plan we found the objectives were relevant to OAC's established goals. OAC has made progress towards achieving goals and objectives. Nevertheless, it was noted that a number of the objectives were not stated in measurable and quantifiable terms. For example, an objective that is representive of many of the Plan's objectives states, "The Older Alaskans Commission will, on an ongoing basis, work with appropriate home energy agencies to annually increase the number of older Alaskan homes which have been weatherized."

The weakness in this objective is that it states how the program will conduct its business and not the number of homes that will be weatherized. Objectives should describe what the Commission intends to accomplish and be consistent with long-range goals. To be capable of measurement, objectives should be well-defined including a description of methods of measurement.

Measurable and quantifiable objectives enables management to evaluate which programs are achieving predetermined goals. When objectives are not stated in measurable terms, both management and the Legislature cannot adequately evaluate OAC's performance.

Recommendation No. 2

OAC should submit an annual report to the Legislature and Governor as required by law.

The Commission has not followed statutory reporting requirements of AS 44.21. This statute requires the Commission to submit an annual analysis and evaluation of services that are provided to older Alaskans.

To contribute to governmental effectiveness, the Commission should compile the report and forward it to the appropriate parties. The report required by AS 44.21 provides the Legislature and Governor the means to analyze the validity and necessity of OAC's funding requests for an upcoming fiscal year. In addition, the report would provide management a useful tool for analyzing and comparing each year's performance.

ANALYSIS OF PUBLIC NEED

Limited Analysis

The following analyses of the Commission's activities relate to the public need factors defined in the "sunset" law. These analyses are not intended to be all-inclusive, but address those areas we were able to cover within the scope of our review.

I. The extent to which the board, commission, or program has operated in the public interest.

A. The OAC has served the public through planning, coordinating, and providing services to persons who are 60 years of age and over in areas of employment, nutrition, transportation, information and referral, housing, health care, in-home services, legal services, long-term care, advocacy, and outreach.

B. The Commission has held an average of seven meetings a year for the past two calendar years.

II. The extent to which the operation of the board, commission, or agency program has been impeded or enhanced by existing statutes, procedures, and practices which it has adopted, and any other matter, including budgetary, resource, and personnel matters.

A. The Commission has developed an interagency housing task force to prepare recommendations regarding the coordination and efficient delivery of needed housing services to the elderly.

B. A Commission newsletter has been developed which describes important services that are available to older Alaskans.

III. The extent to which the board, commission, or agency has recommended statutory changes which are generally of benefit to the public interest.

A. Since the establishment of the Commission, approximately three years ago, the Commission has not recommended any statutory changes.

IV. The extent to which the board, commission, or agency has encouraged interested persons to report to it concerning the effect of its regulations and decisions on the effectiveness of service, economy of service, and availability of service which it has provided.

A. The Commission has solicited public input on matters affecting senior citizens. This has been demonstrated by the Commission requesting public opinion on the proposed October 1983 State Plan and designating Anchorage as a "planning and service area" for federal funding purposes.

V. The extent to which the board, commission, or agency has encouraged public participation in the making of its regulations and decisions.

A. OAC has advertised in newspapers and distributed notices to interested associations encouraging the public to participate in senior citizen issues.

VI. The efficiency with which public inquiries or complaints regarding the activities of the board, commission, or agency filed with it, with the department to which a board or commission is administratively assigned, or with the Office of the Ombudsman have been processed and resolved.

A. In the past three years, there have been no complaints filed against the Commission with the Ombudsman Office.

VII. The extent to which a board or commission which regulates entry into an occupation or profession has presented qualified applicants to serve the public.

A. The OAC does not regulate any occupations or professions.

VIII. The extent to which State personnel practices, including affirmative action requirements, have been complied with by the board, commission, or agency to its own activities and the area of activity or interest.

A. The Equal Employment Opportunity Office has received no complaints related to the Commission's personnel practices.

IX. The extent to which statutory, regulatory, budgeting, or other changes are necessary to enable the agency, board, or commission to better serve the interests of the public and to comply with the factors enumerated in this subsection.

Please refer to the previous section, Findings and Recommendations.

LEGISLATIVE AUDIT

Dear Mr. Wilkerson:

I have received your performance report on the Older Alaskans Commission (OAC) dated July 31, 1984 in which you recommend that the OAC should be reestablished. You have completed a very thorough and complete review of the Commission and its function. We accept your recommendations with the following comments.

Recommendation No. 1

The OAC should improve the State Plan's objectives in order to better measure and evaluate program performance.

Your recommendation notes "that a number of the objectives were not stated in measurable and quantifiable terms." In reference to this observation you cite Housing Action Plan objective number 3. (page 4-28) "The OAC will "... "On an ongoing basis, work with appropriate home energy agencies to annually increase the number of older Alaskan homes which have been weatherized." We agree that this objective provides no benchmark for measuring the attainment of the objective. The OAC attempted to establish such an objective but found the housing system to be so fragmented and amorphous that the OAC was unable to determine how many weatherized homes in Alaska were owned by senior citizens. Consequently, we were not able to provide a specific number.

Objective number 1 (page 4-27) establishes a Housing Task Force for the purpose of conducting a thorough analysis and developing housing recommendations for the OAC. This work and the recommendations of this and other task forces established under the plan will enable the commission to amend and improve objective measures. The Housing Task Force is currently working and has determined that only 9% of weatherized homes are owned by Seniors. This information will enable the OAC to respond to your recommendation.

OAC should submit an annual report to the Legislature and Governor as required by law.

Your recommendation notes that the Commission has not followed statutory reporting requirements of A.S. 44.21. The complete statute reference in Section 44.21.230 states "(a) The Commission shall

(1) formulate a comprehensive statewide plan that identifies the concerns and needs of older Alaskans and, with reference to the plan adopted, prepare and submit to the governor and legislature an annual analysis and evaluation of the services that are provided to older Alaskans;"

The transfer of programs and staff from the Department of Health and Social Services, Division of Adult and Aging Services occurred on January 1, 1982 as specified in A.S. 44.21. The Commission assumed responsibility for a state plan on that date which had been submitted to and approved by the Federal Government in accordance with P.L. 89-73. This plan was due to end on September 30, 1983. As required under A.S. 44.21 and P.L. 89-73, the Commission commenced development of a comprehensive statewide plan which would become effective on October 1, 1983. We believe that consideration should be made for the date on which the Commission assumed administrative responsibility (January 1, 1982) and the time required for plan development (October 1, 1983). The plan forms the basis under statute for the required report. The Commission is currently developing a report in reference of the plan.

I wish to complement your Division on the professional manner in which the sunset review was conducted.

Sincerely yours,

Lisa Rudd

OLDER ALASKANS COMMISSION
APPLICATION REVIEW

CY'85

APPLICANT: Alaska Legal Services Corporation STAFF: Barbara McPherson

Summary

Alaska Legal Services Corporation (ALSC) requests $151,230 in continuation funding for the Statewide Elderly Legal Services Program. The programs has been funded under AS 47.65 since July 1, 1982 and has served approximately 400 persons each year.

Under current OAC funding, staffing for the project consists of a full-time paralegal with half-time secretarial support in ALSC's Anchorage office, a half-time attorney in Fairbanks, and a half-time paralegal in Copper Center. Attorneys in other ALSC offices have occasionally provided legal services to elderly persons who would not otherwise have been served. In those instances, the attorney bills time spent on the case to the OAC project grant. The Legal Developer provides the grant administration, reporting, and backup services that are necessary. The Legal Developer as grant coordinator also cooperates with the Pro Bono project to recruit and train private attorneys who provide services on a volunteer basis.

Under their CY 1985 funding request ALSC proposes to continue current service delivery with the addition of a half-time attorney based in Juneau to serve seniors in Southeast Alaska. ALSC proposes to serve 355 older persons in CY 1985.

Analysis

ASLC's CY 1985 request represents a 57% increase over the program's current OAC funding of $96,400 although service levels are projected to be relatively the same. In the 12-month period beginning October 1, 1983 and ending September 30, 1984, ALSC served 392 persons. In CY 1985, 355 persons are expected to be served.

During CY 1984, ALSC did not keep statistics according to type of case handled. However, it appeared that the largest proportion of cases were opened for wills, public entitlements or income maintenance (pensions, SSI, Social Security, Longevity Bonus, Medicare, Medicaid). Other issues were the Valley Memory Gardens bankruptcy, housing, land ownership, estates, probate and guardianships. In Anchorage the trend appears to be away from requests for wills and toward more complex cases concerning housing, home ownership, government benefits and pensions. Statistics on case type will be collected during CY 1985 under OAC's new program reporting system.

ALSC has continued to maintain a high level of commitment to services to the elderly. This program has been well received by both clients and referring agencies and has provided leadership and expertise to the aging service network.

Recommendation

Due to extremely limited available funding for senior services Statewide, CY 1985fundi funding for Legal Services. The following special conditions of award are also recommended:

1. Services are to be provided only to persons who are 60 years of age and older.

2. Services must be targeted to persons in greatest economic and social need.

3. Revised objectives and service activities based on the award of funds shall be submitted to OAC on form F-B by February 15, 1985.

4. A revised budget shall be submitted using budget detail pages F-1 through F-10 by February 15, 1985.

5. OAC shall be contacted prior to the schedule of an audit. OAC may contract for the provision of audits. Grantee audits must comply with OAC PI-84-5 and Circular A-102, Attachment P.

6. Grantees must have an equal employment opportunity policy, as well as have implemented and affirmative action plan in all aspects of personnel administration. Discrimination on the basis of race, color, creed, national origin, sex or age handicap is prohibited both within grantee personnel administration and in the delivery of services and/or conducting of grant activities. Grantees must insure compliance by all subgrantees and subcontractors. A copy of the equal employment policy and affirmative action plan shall be submitted to OAC by March 31, 1985.

7. Out-of-state travel under this grant requires prior approval by OAC.

8. Attendance at OAC meetings is not a requirement of funding and grant funds shall not be used for this purpose.

CY'85

APPLICANT: City of Aleknagik STAFF: Ruth G. Browne

Summary

The City of Aleknagik requests $17,355 to continue to provide transportation to the 13 local elders. The van transports the elders. The van transports the elders to Dillingham on Mondays and Fridays to access medical and shopping services. On these days the elders participate in the meal program operated by the Dillingham Senior Citizens Center.

Aleknagik is located 24 miles from Dillingham. One way air fare to Dillingham is $40 and one way taxi fare is $60. Most all the elders are unemployed and most receive Old Age Assistance.

Analysis

The applicant's request equals its CY 84 award plus 70%. The increase is due to:

- raising the drivers hourly wage from $8.50 to $9.50 (the beginning wage for a driver in the City of Dillingham is $8.21)
- the addition of another alternate driver for emergency trips
- facility expense at $3,000 and insurance at $2,000 which was previously provided by the city

As of September 30, 1984 the applicant had only expended 31% of its current award. Consideration should be given that expenditures are reported on a cash basis of accounting.

Recommendations

In view of expenditures OAC staff recommends funding at the CY 84 award of $10,190.

APPLICANT: Aleutian/Pribilof Islands Association STAFF: Howard DeVore

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM:

The A/P Islands Association received funding from the OAC in July 1983 for a six month's Elderly Self Care Project in selected communities at a cost of $23,550. The primary thrust was to select key persons in 11 communities for training in Anchorage and return them to their communities to promote health awareness and methods for elderly self care.

The current Health Maintenance project has taken a different approach. The intent has been to employ a professional nurse to visit the same eleven communities as an outreach and linkage persons between the elderly and local health aides. This more direct service approach provides a very brief stay of the health professional in the community and has not proven entirely satisfactory for long term health maintenance results. "The program approach has undergone continuous evaluation and a tremendous amount has been learned in regard to increasing the effectiveness of the program." The dependence upon the distant health profession in Anchorage suggested a different direction.

The CY 1985 request is to provide for the same professional nurse as coordinator and trainer but to rely again, as in the first project, more upon interested and committed volunteers in six communities, reducing the program to those with the highest number of elderly, and selecting selecting three from each community to be trained in Anchorage. With Health Maintenance Kits developed in 1984 and other training materials, including video tapes on health subjects, the newly trained representatives of each community will return home to train others in the use of the kits and educational materials. A Self-Care Manual is part of the informational program designed for older persons themselves.

Phase I - Indentification of 60 potential volunteers in six communities. Phase II - Selection and Training of 18. Phase III - Local Workshops.

ANALYSIS:

Though a 6% salary increase for the health profession is indicated, the 66.4% increase in the CY 1985 request over current year funding is due to the loss of other funds which paid 50% of the nurse's salary in 1984 with the justification that 100% of a 37.5 hour week is needed in the 1985 program. The request includes $23,550 for travel funds to bring 18 people to Anchorage while continuing to spend $13,060 in trips by the nurse to the six communities for recruiting purposes a total of $36,610 in travel, an increase of $17,234 or 89% increase over 1984 which is offset in part by a federal funds match of $14,380. Training materials found in supplies include the Health Maintenance Kits and 177 T-Shirts at $3 each for program participants totaling $3,000, plus $800 more in printing Self-Care Manuals (200). The distribution of increases is 110.2% in salary costs, 88.9% in travel, 63.5% in facilities, 500% increase in supplies, equipment is -0- in 1985 though a 1984 budget revision has provided $1,200 for video equipment.

Staff recommends funding at this level, a 10% increase over the CY 1984 level to provide for and strengthen the Information and Referral services of the project but not at the requested funding level which would reduce the grantee's maintenance of effort and reduce the grantee's other federal funds currently employed in the project.

Staff recommends funding this type of project in CY 1985, in its third year, as a final effort to bring a self-care health program to the elderly of this region and not as an on-going program. The objectives of the project should be reached by the end of CY 1985. It would seem unnecessary to repeat or continue this project.

SPECIAL CONDITIONS:

1. Servites are to be provided only to persons who are 60 years of age and older.

APPLICANT: Alzheimer's Disease Family Support Group STAFF: Howard DeVore

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM:

The Anchorage based Alzheimer's Disease Support Group has grown out of the need of the families brought together through the programs of the Anchorage Community Mental Health Geriatric Services, particularly the Daybreak Day Care Project which has increasingly focused upon Alzheimer's Disease and related diseases. Families have come to share their resources in promoting information about Alzheimer's Disease and generating support and resources to care for their elderly relatives.

This request for CY 1985 AS 47.65 funding at $29,838 plus match and other resources will provide for one part time coordinator position officed in the new ACMH/SCCC's Daybreak facility on the southside of Anchorage, supported by volunteer's from the ADFSG Board of Directors who will carry out workshops in Unalaska, Sand Point, the Pribilofs, Kotzebue, Sitka, Valdez, Galena, and Upper Tanana. Travel funds are requested for volunteer trainers to these communities where they will organize information on suspected Alzheimer's Disease victims, related them with local agencies, and arrange for transport of the older persons to Anchorage for a period of observation and diagnosis by medically qualified persons. The project will attempt to arrange for care and follow-up.

ANALYSIS:

Linked with Anchorage Community Mental Health and Daybreak Adult Day Care, this project would appear to provide very cost effective education and training in strategic locations of the state through volunteers now experienced in the impact of Alzheimer's Disease victims upon their families and their aging relatives.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION:

Staff recommends funding the Alzheimer's Support Project at the level requested less the amount of $1,000 budgeted for a speaker at the OAC Aging Conference. The OAC Aging Conference planning and budgeting is provided by the OAC Education and Training Consortium.

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM: The Anchorage Senior Center requests continue two programs. The Title III request continues the Information and Referral service through a subcontract with the Older Persons Action Group which places and supervises a full time I & R Worker at the Senior Center. In addition, the Title III request would add a new Outreach Worker on a part time basis. The request, from AS 47.65, would continue the two position health maintenance and exercise program, Active People Over 60. A third physical fitness instructor is provided by Municipality of Anchorage funding as local match. Program objectives for both I&R and APO60 continue much as in the current year.

TITLE III INFORMATION AND REFERRAL

The Anchor AGE Center and Older Persons Action Group proposes to add a new part time position to the subcontract serving the Anchorage Senior Center, an Outreach Worker who would visit homes reaching the frail elderly and homebound and seek to link these persons with agencies and a support system. With the Mabel T. Staff recommends continuing funding under AS 47.65 for the Active People Over Sixty program at the current operating level and recommends not funding expenses requested for computer programming or software nor for a speaker at the OAC Aging Conference for the reasons listed below:

1. Computer programming and software are not necessary to provide either the financial reports or the program statistics required by the OAC for either Title III or AS 47.65.

2. Planning, budgeting, and expenses for the OAC Aging Conference will be provided through the OAC Education and Training Consortium.

Staff recommends funding the AnchorAGE Senior Center Title III Information and Referral program and I & R Coordinator position only and recommends not to fund the new outreach program requested under Title III for the reasons listed below:

1. OAC already funds three major grantees in this area to provide outreach to the elderly to access services and to add another at this time would appear to be a duplication of services and not cost effective.

2. Funds requested for outreach under Title III to fund a new program would require further cuts in the regional allocation for this area.

3. Outreach funding under Title III, as a priority, should be provided for Title III funded programs such as nutrition.

SPECIAL CONDITIONS:

APPLICATION REVIEW

APPLICANT: ANCHORAGE COMMUNITY MENTAL HEALTH STAFF: Howard DeVore

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM: ACMH submitted two grant applications, one for Title III for outreach workers and one for AS 47.65 day care services.

TITLE III/OUTREACH

The Geriatric Services of the Southcentral Counseling Center (ACMH) have been able to play an expanded and more significant role in meeting mental health needs of the elderly because of a history of special funding by the Alaska Office on Aging and its successor, the Older Alaskans Commission. The proportion of older persons served in Anchorage are twice the national average, due in large part to the peer counseling project continued since 1979 and enlarged in 1980 to focus on minority outreach by employing a minority and Alaska Native person in the two positions now OAC funded, together carrying a case load of 36-50 elderly. Though funded in the past by AS 47.65, the CY 1985 grant application seeks Title III monies on the basis of the strong outreach and referral intended. Outreach clients needing escort will be taken to the SCC Center by the two workers who will inform other Anchorage agencies of SCC services and arrange "short trips around the Municipality of Anchorage assisting the elder to find types of assistance commensurate with their needs." (page 8)

1985 Title III objectives are:	WAS UNDER AS 47.65 Performance Oct 83-Sept 84 was:
100 escort trips for 60 unduplicated	59 in home assessment of problems
60 first time outreach contacts	43 in home counseling troubled
60 referral/personal advocacy cases	25 referred to support services
14 information units to agencies	? minority elders to mental h. s.
60 accessed to mental health services	12 agencies contacted
	5 organized groups in institutions
	114 group sessions memory training
	36 van trips for lonely/low self-e.

AS 47.65/DAY CARE

The Older Alaskans Commission funded, in part and for the first time, the ACMH Day Care Project which had narrowed its focus of service to Alzheimer's type clients among the elder with a CY 1984 grant of $41,053 from the OAC and $97,400 from the Municipality of Anchorage, a total of $138,453. Daybreak was the second day care project in Anchorage started by the MOA in June 1982; Chugiak Day Care began the year before. In 1984 Chugiak served 35 elderly, Daybreak 30 Alzheimer's type clients, and the newest, Serendipity of the Salvation Army served 14 day care clients. They and other agencies meet monthly to coordinate services with the Anchorage OAC staff. With Daybreak's clients at risk of institutionalization without day care, the $35 daily cost to the state and local government compares favorably to nursing home care at $130. a day, if space were available. The respite to primary caretakers, the families, is immeasurable in maintaining their mental health. The ACMH request for CY 1985 is to fund, in part, the positions of a psychiatrist, a nurse, an occupational therapists, and a relief worker who will supplement the primary Daybreak staff now funded by the Municipality of Anchorage.

APPLICANT: ANCHORAGE COMMUNITY MENTAL HEALTH STAFF Howard DeVore

ANALYSIS: Title III- OUTREACH

Anchorage CMH Geriatric Project has been funded under AS 47.65 as peer counseling, providing elderly minority and Alaska Native persons with individual and group activities to encourage access to mental health services, increasing the numbers of elderly receiving services from the Southcentral Counseling Center, including minorities and Alaska Natives. The funding issue is not the validity of the services but the appropriate source of funding, Title III, which is proposed for 1985, or AS 47.65 where is has been for several years. "Outreach is an initial, one-time contact with a senior who has not been served by a program to inform him (or her) about services and invited him to participate or avail himself of services," according to OAC Service Definitions attached to the grant application. However, under AS 47.65 Counseling is "the use of a casework mode by a qualified individual to assist an elderly person and/or his family in resolving problems, such as mental health counseling. May be done on a one-to-one basis or on a group basis and may be conducted by paid, donated and/or volunteer staff."

As the new CY 1985 objectives provide for escort trips, first time outreach contacts, referral/personal advocacy, and information giving to agencies, Title III access funding appears appropriate. Whereas CY 1984 objectives providing home counseling, group counseling, and group sessions are absent in 1985, outreach now appears to be the new emphasis while counseling by the two workers, a minority person and an Alaska Native, is to be carried out by other staff.

The question of duplication of services must be raised. With the Mabel T. Caverly Senior Center carrying on a strong outreach and assessment program among the low income and frail elderly of the city, does the new emphasis of Anchorage Community Health in outreach constitute serious duplication of services or can the two programs be coordinated to avoid duplication? If ACMH is funded for Outreach, special conditions for both agencies should require regular meetings of staff and plans for coordination.

Duplication of services may also be the result of funding ACMH for escort which has long been provided by both the Salvation Army of Anchorage and the Mabel T. Caverly Senior Center, now coordinated within the Older Alaskans Transportation Service and OAC Policies. Since all three agencies target the economic and social needy, how much escort is really needed in Anchorage? If funded, special condition should require coordination of escort through the Older Alaskans Transportation Services.

The unknown factor is whether these three agencies are targeting the same unduplicated low income, minority and Alaska Native, frail elderly with both Outreach and Escort services proposed in 1985. If funded by the OAC, close monitoring requiring the confidential lists of outreach and escort clients in 1985 should be required as provided by Title III regulations and made a special condition of CY 1985 grants to these three agencies and any other agency funded for outreach or escort.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION:	State/Federal	Match	100%
TITLE III	$ -0-	$ -0-	$ -0-
AS 47.65	$ 97,072	$ 10,786 (10%)	$ 107,858
TOTAL	$ 97,072	$ 10,786	$ 107,858

Staff recommends funding the Alzheimer's Daybreak Adult Day Care program under AS 47.65 and adding $4,516 to the request and recommends not to fund the new outreach program request under Title III but to carry out such activities as are necessary for outreach for day care under AS 47.65. For the following reasons, staff recommends not funding mental health outreach under Title III:

1. OAC already funds three major grantees in this area to provide outreach to the elderly to access services and to add another at this time would appear to be a duplication of services and not cost effective.

2. Funds requested for outreach under Title III to fund a new program would require further cuts in the regional allocation for this area.

3. Outreach funding under Title III, as a priority, should be provided for Title III funded programs such as nutrition and access services.

4. Outreach for mental health services would be more appropriately funded directly by mental health centers.

5. During this period of funding the Older Alaskans Commission will initiate efforts to develop increased mental health services provided the elderly through Community Mental Health Centers and to coordinate aging and mental health services.

SPECIAL CONDITIONS:

1. Services are to be provided only to persons who are 60 years of age and older.

2. Services must be targeted to persons in greatest economic and social need.

3. Revised objectives and service activities based on the award of funds shall be submitted to the OAC on form F-8 by February 15, 1985.

4. A revised budget based on the award of funds shall be submitted using budget detail pages F-1 through F-10 by February 15, 1985.

APPLICANT: Bristol Bay Native Association STAFF: Ruth G. Browne

SUMMARY:

Bristol Bay Native Association (BBNA) proposes to continue the provision of information, referral, outreach, homemaker, chore, home repair/maintenance/renovation, counseling, congregate and home-delivered meals to the elders of the Bristol Bay region.

According to a needs assessment conducted by BBNA there are at least 248 elders 60+ years of age in the Bristol Bay region. The average age is 70; 25% are over 75; 95% are Native; 53% male and a minimum of 25% are eligible for Old Age Assistance.

BBNA coordinates closely with the school districts, village councils, Dillingham Senior Citizens' Center, and the Village Public Safety Officers.

Letters of support are on file from Dillingham Senior Citizens Center, Bristol Bay School District, Public Assistance and Alaska Legal Services.

BBNA was funded to provide meal service in eight villages during CY 84: Koliganek, Manokotak, Naknek, South Naknek, Newhalen, New Stuyahok; Nondalton and Togiak. By using volunteer site managers, the meal service expanded to Ekwok, Kokhanok and Twin Hills during the last quarter of CY 84. BBNA proposes to begin meal service to Levelock and Portage Creek, again using volunteer site managers. All meals are served three days a week in the local school through subcontracts with the school districts. Transportation to the meal site is provided by the Bristol Bay Borough for the elders in Naknek and South Naknek. Vans were purchased in Manokotak, New Stuyohok and Newhalen through a legislature appropriation to provide elderly transportation. A dietitian travels to each meal site once a year to provide nutrition education.

BBNA proposes to provide home/repair/renovation services to 30 elders. The type of conditions to be corrected are faulty electrical wiring, faulty stoves and repairing dangerous stairs. It is proposed that 15 elders will receive homemaker/chore service. This service is intended to be a stop-gap measure "to take care of those neglected by the current system."

ANALYSIS:

The applicants' Title III requests equals its CY 84 award plus 22%; its AS 47.65 request equals its CY 84 award plus 3%.

The increase in Title III is due to:

- as $13,680 increase in personnel (No new positions were requested; the CY 84 level was reduced by a budget adjustment requested due to prolonged vacancies and late start-up dates)

- increasing the number of meals to be served from 7,500 to 13,920

BBNA has requested $30,810 in access services which is for information, forms completion and referral. As of September 30, 1984 the applicant has not reported any expenditures in access services.

The increase in AS 47.65 funds is due to proposed expansion of home renovation services. As of 9/30/84, BBNA had expended 35% of their current AS 47.65 award.

RECOMMENDATION:

OAC staff recommends Title III funding at the level of $175,590. This equals the applicants request in congregate and home-delivered meals. Access services was decreased by $33,423. It is recommended that BBNA request Title V positions to provide information and referral services in the villages.

AS 47.65 funding is recommended at the level of $50,000. The applicant should help elders apply for Farmer Home Administration grants instead of seeking OAC funds for this purpose.

CY'85

APPLICANT: Captain Cook Jaycees
Foster Grandparents/Sr. Companions

STAFF: Dinah Van Der Hyde

Summary

The Captain Cook Jaycees have submitted a continuing grant request for AS 47.65 funds of $91,454.

This program has been established for 12 years in Anchorage, with programs beginning in Fairbanks in 1980 and Juneau in 1982. The program provides employment/training services to seniors who, in turn, provide services to frail elders in the community, as well as to school children. The program benefits both groups of seniors.

For CY 85 the Captain Cook Jaycees/Senior Companions propose a program administratively supported by OAC for Juneau and Fairbanks, with Federal Action money to pay stipends for the volunteer participants. A total of 213 older persons will be benefited, 83 volunteers and 134 recipients of their volunteer services.

Analysis

The CY 85 request reflects a 40.8% increase over CY 84 awards. Increases requested in the budget for Juneau are for a $4,881 RSVP program, which would add a new component to the OAC program. Increases requested in the budget for Fairbanks are for three additional Senior Companion stipends (meals and transportation) for $14,691. OAC has not previously funded stipends for the program. Doing so at this time would set a precedent and also increase their operating level.

The Captain Cook Jaycees are operating an excellent program, with responsible reporting. The recent implementation of more appropriate reporting forms by OAC will assist in future assessment of this type of program.

Recommendation

OAC staff recommend that, with currently limited OAC funds, the program be funded at their CY 84 OAC operating level, with two separate grants. The grant for Fairbanks is recommended at the level of $31,263. The grant for Juneau is recommended at the level of $36,539.

CY'85

APPLICANT: Catholic Community Services ~~Southeast Senior Services~~ STAFF: Dinah Van Der Hyde

SUMMARY

Southeast Senior Services (SESS) requests $1,239,808 in Title III funding and $205,557 in AS 47.65 funding for CY 85. The program has been funded since 1974, starting with 5 sites serving 783 persons and now serving 1,750 persons for CY 84 at 19 meal sites.

SESS provides all basic nutrition and access services under Title III. Homemaker/chore service and home maintenance and repair are currently provided under AS 47 65. In CY 85, they have requested funds for Day Care Services in Juneau. They hope to provide service to 2,100 seniors in CY 85.

ANALYSIS

SESS is current on reporting requirements and has submitted a thorough and well-documented grant application. Requested funds are 17% higher for Title III and 26% for AS 47.65. These budgeted increases are proposed:

- Salary equity for site managers, cooks and aides. SESS has implemented a salary study recommendation that would increase the lower-level positions to equity but does not affect positions in their central office. Total implementation is costly, but they will step it in with three increments over three years. A 4% increase is the overall effect.

- Skagway requests an additional day of meals, beyond their current 2 days/week.

- Haines' program is growing and needs more hours for meal preparation.

- Mt. View will receive a new (UMTA) van and the operating costs for it will be incurred.

- SESS would like to operate a day care program for frail elderly in Juneau. They operated a volunteer-run program for a short time but found that it was necessary to have more control and responsibility for this level of service. A paid staff is requested.

- The Craig site has started with local funds but can not continue operations throughout CY 85 unless SESS is able to increase its operating level.

SESS program has increased meals over projections by 10% which is consistent with its 10% increase in persons served. SESS has operated below requested operating levels and has limited expansion of services and salary increments for several years. Their program is delivering basic services, Homemaker/Chore, and home maintenance/repair at about $688 per senior per year.

Letters of support from seniors have been received from many of the SESS sites. Skagway and Haines, Sheldon Jackson Museum, and Chilkat Historical Society support the Haines Center.

RECOMMENDATIONS

OAC Staff recommends Title III funding at $1,032,536 which is 97% of the CY 84 award and $172,027 for AS 47.65 which is 5.5% above the current operating level for CY 84. This recommendation is due to limited OAC funds and may cause a reduction in services to Southeast seniors.

APPLICANT: MABEL T. CAVERLY SENIOR CENTER, ANCHORAGE STAFF: Howard DeVore

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM:

The Caverly Senior Center, at a downtown location near population areas of higher elderly and low income density, targets the hard to reach, low income isolated, frail, and minority elderly, providing one or more services to about 1500 older persons or 33,500 units of service in 1984. The Center coordinates transportation and escort in a single access and dispatch service with the Salvation Army, volunteer services with the Retired Senior Volunteer Program and Senior Companion/Foster Grandparents, and counseling services with the Southcentral Counseling Center of Anchorage Community Mental Health. Information and Referral is coordinated with Older Persons Action Group and special dental programs, funded by United Way, with dentists and the Neighborhood Dental Clinic. Craft, arts, and recreational activities are coordinated with the Anchorage Senior Center.

Outreach, as described in the grant application and presently carried on, goes beyond the OAC service definition with multiple contacts for personal advocacy and counseling.

ANALYSIS:

The CY 1985 Budget and Objectives provide for an expansion of the Outreach program with a a full time headed by one with 3 years college in social work and psychology, as well as a half time outreach position. The state/federal Title III CY 1985 request of $216,122 is a 12.6% increase over the allocation in 1984 and in addition new AS 47.65 funds requested are $18,727 for a total 19.6% increase over current year funding. New salaries and increases of 9.09% in salaries add $44,189 in 1985. $6,000 is requested for parking lot paving.

STAFF RECOMMENDATIONS:

Staff recommends funding of the Title III Access, Transportation, Information and Referral/Personal Advocacy, and Outreach programs at a level 7.5% below the current funding level, the amount of available Title III funds after accommodating a reduction of total Title III funds in this region and distributing the decrease equitably.

Staff recommends not funding the proposed new AS 47.65 Social Services program due to the lack of new funding available in this region, the lack of justification for expanding the existing counseling program, the lack of job descriptions and adequate resumes of those who would carry out the program, and that the proposal moves toward case management which may be funded as a special project.

APPLICANT: Chugiak Senior Citizens, Anchorage STAFF: Howard DeVore

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM:

Chugiak Senior Citizens, Inc. proposes to increase services to 784 older persons in their area in nutrition, access, geriatric day care, and transportation in a comprehensive delivery system in order to help individuals maintain their independence and promote a productive life style.

Objectives for 1985 are:	Comparison with Oct 1983-Sept 1984
19,020 congregate meals to 72.	14,981 congregate meals for 75.
2,100 home delivered meals to 8.	831 home delivered meals to 14.

12 units of referral/advocacy.	2,237 information/referral for 11.

7,920 phone reassurance calls to 30.	telephone reassurance for
7,920 hours of adult day care for 30.	7,392 adult day care hours for 15.
528 hours of respite for 2.	1,056 respite care services for 4.

ANALYSIS:

Chugiak continues a unique nutrition program (three lunches/two dinners weekly), expecting the same number of persons to eat more often in 1985 both in the home delivered meals and congregate setting. The Title III requested 1985 funding level, $266,196 is 60% above the 1984 state/federal grant which includes seven new positions, once Title V but due to reduction to 20 hours are currently funded by United Way. Increases in Title III and AS 47.65 due also to salary increases of 7.5% to 16.8% provide equity with comparable positions. Proposal includes a new recreational leader under Title III which is not allowable.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION:

Staff recommends funding the Chugiak Title III Nutrition and Transportation program at 7.5% less than the current operating level due to the reduction of funds available in the Anchorage region with the decrease distributed equitably among the current grantees. The reduction in Title III funds for the Anchorage region is due, in part (63%), to the designation of Older Persons Action Group as an Anchorage Information and Referral Service which has been funded in previous years as a statewide program. The balance of the reduction (37%) came from fewer unused funds available from other regions than in the current year. Staff recommends an increase of no more than 10% in the number of meals or 15,430 congregate and 960 home delivered meals.

Staff recommends funding the Chugiak AS 47.65 Adult Day Care program at the current 1984 operating level in CY 1985.

CY'85

APPLICANT: Copper River Native Assoc STAFF: Fran Toland

SUMMARY

Copper River Native Association is the non-profit arm of Ahtna, Inc. CRNA has been providing congregate nutrition and transportation to seniors from Cantwell to Chitina for several years. There are approximately 220 seniors in the service area with 125 males and 95 females. CRNA serves approximately 120 or 55%. Of those, 54% are Native and 46% are non-native.

CRNA has requested funding for existing services plus funding to initiate home-delivered meals.

Their request for CY 85 Title III is $107,850, a reduction of 11% in their current award of $120,713.

ANALYSIS

Copper River Native Association provides excellent reliable service to the area seniors. The need for the services is well documented. The reduction of this year's grant request is a result of an overestimation of services last year as well as a rearrangement of personnel and reduced cost per meal due to changing restaurants in Glennallen. As a result of a recommendation last year, service to Mentasta has been discontinued by CRNA and begun by Tok. This has further reduced CRNA's request. They deserve recognition for their efforts to provide the same high quality of service with the addition of a new service at a reduced cost.

In figuring cost of meal contracts (600) the total cost was listed as the Title III request with USDA and Program Income added on rather than subtracted out.

Vehicle supplies (400) were miscalculated and are actually $252 more.

CRNA has claimed a match of vehicle and radio depreciation totalling $8,763. In the past they claimed match based on the market rental value for two vehicles obtained through Alaska DOT/PF. This match was disallowed in a Region X opinion. When depreciation is claimed as match, vehicle maintenance costs cannot be charged against the grant.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Staff recommends that CRNA be awarded $107,850 in Title III.

APPLICANT: City of Cordova STAFF: Dinah Van Der Hyde

SUMMARY

The City of Cordova has submitted a continuing Title III grant application for $81,273, a decrease of 6% over their CY 84 award. Population of the area is estimated at 3,000 with about 150 seniors; seasonal variance is high.

Cordova provides service to approximately 130 seniors. The program began in 1979 and provides basic nutrition and access services. The Senior Adjutant position additionally provides telephone reassurance, visiting, and emergency homemaker/chore service. Contracting for transportation with a taxi company continues to be the program's choice for transportation services. There are no new services proposed for 1985; targeted clients are the frail and homebound elderly.

ANALYSIS

Cordova is responsible in submitting quarterly program and fiscal reports. Planned performance compared to actual shows a high degree of variance. Rides are much higher (142%) than planned; other measures are approximately 75% of planned. Home-delivered meals are very close to planned, but Congregate were only 70% of planned. The application does not document a clear assessment of needs other than by declaration. There has been no formal attempt to reassess needs since 1979. The current reduction in grant requests may reflect a more accurate relationship between funding and performance expectations for CY 85.

Personnel requests remain the same with no increase in salary requests.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Staff recommends funding at the level requested and suggests that a cola increase of 4% be implemented and that the "Other (600)" line item be reduced correspondingly.

APPLICANT: Delta Seniors, Inc. STAFF: Ruth G. Browne

Summary

Delta Seniors, Inc. has requested $32,095 in Title III funds to continue to provide transportation, information, outreach, escort, and visiting to the senior citizens of the Delta region. The applicant has also requested $21,226 in AS 47.65 funds to begin providing hot meals two days a week to 20 persons. They intend to contract with a local restaurant that will charge $6.50 per meal.

Delta Seniors, Inc. has acquired a new UMTA van equipped with a wheelchair lift. They intend to expand transportation services due to the proposed meal program and a new crafts program being initiated at Fort Greely Crafts Shop.

According to a census conducted of the Delta region in September 1984, there are 160 persons eligible for Title III services. Of those, 150 are caucasian and "48 are low-income, the balance in the low to middle income range". Over 16 seniors do not own automobiles.

Analysis

The applicant's Title III request equals its CY 84 award plus 22%. This increase is due to increasing the project directors job from 25 hours per week to 37.5 and increased transportation costs due to the proposed start up of a meal program.

The AS 47.65 request is new. The number of meals budgeted assumes the attendance of 20 persons 2 days per week, 52 weeks a year.

The needs of the seniors in Delta have been seriously questioned during past years. Due to questions raised this year, the grantee was required to complete a needs survey. Commission staff developed a survey for the program to use. The grantee chose not to use the survey because it was felt the questions were "irrelevant or too probing". The grantee mailed approximately 100 surveys and received 31 responses. Of these responders, 28 had their own car. Seven needed transportation for shopping and medical visits. The letter transmitting the survey results states:

> " The role of the Senior Lounge... can best be served as ... an information and referral service, an escape from ailing spouses or grandchildren, a place to share joys and sorrows with one's peers..."
> The need statement in the CY 84 grant application states:
> "Those questioned, in surveys, feel the need for socializing, inter-relating with other people and groups and for the lack upon government for the daily wants of a person."

Following is the grantees' problem statement regarding nutrition.

> "The elderly people of the Greater Delta area feel the wish to retain the dignity of self, lack of dependence upon others, and to maintain a separate household. The OAC seems to recognize this state of mind, and it was with this intention that the Program of Nutrition was formed to assist these person in gathering together and to present Information... and Referral..."

Prior to the needs survey conducted by the grantee in June, it had always been strongly emphasized that none of the Delta seniors were in need of a nutrition program. The survey indicates 9 persons would "like the Delta Seniors" to provide meals. The new grant does not indicate how it was determined that 20 persons would be interested in a meal program.

In summary, the applicant's need statement continues to be weak. From information submitted to date, the Delta program appears primarily recreational.

Recommendation

Due to the information outlined above, OAC staff recommends:

1. Delta Seniors, Inc. demonstrate to the Commission that the program and needs of local seniors are not primarily recreational.

2. Data and the source of data used to identify the problems of local seniors and how the proposed services will assist in solving those problems must be given.

It is recommended the above two items be satisfactorily addressed by March 1, 1984 and that $12,500 in AS 47.65 funds and $21,872 in Title III funds be reserved for possible award in March, 1985. The award of funds is contingent upon satisfying the above requirements.

APPLICANT: City of Dillingham STAFF: Ruth G. Browne

Summary

The legislature appropriated $157,800 to continue operations of the Dillingham Senior Citizen's Center. The city has applied for the entire $157,800 and $21,124 in AS 47.65 funds to continue to provide congregate and home-delivered meals, transportation, information, referral, homemaker services, adult day care, advocacy, education and health services. They intend to expand services to those who have not yet used them.

The senior center serves the elders in Dillingham and the village elders who are in Dillingham for shopping or medical reasons. The applicant estimates a target population of 327. Of the potential participants, 5% are non-native, 52.6% are women and 25% are 75+ years of age. 97% of the seniors currently served are below the poverty level in income.

Surveys of the community have shown 72% of Dillingham seniors do not own vehicles and most all consumed inadequate amounts of foods from the fruit/vegetable groups. Transportation is provided Monday through Friday 8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m., Saturdays from noon to 9:00 p.m. and Sundays from 8:00 a.m. to noon. Meals are served five days a week. The elders from Aleknagik participate in the meal service on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Analysis

The applicant's request for the entire legislative appropriation of $157,800 equals its current Title III operating level. Its AS 47.65 request equals its CY 84 award less 22%.

The major reason for the decrease in AS 47.65 funds requested is due to:

- decreasing the activities aide position, previously funded under Title III (now legislative intent), reducing AS 47.65 homemaker hours and transferring those funds to legislative intent funding to add a part-time dishwasher/janitor position.

- using money raised from fund-raising to support program costs.

Recommendation

OAC recommends funding the entire legislative appropriation of $157,800 and $11,596 in AS 47.65 funds. The AS 47.65 request was reduced by $9,528 which equals the amount requested for the relief driver under the legislative intent. This recommendation is based on the fact no other OAC program is allowed to provide weekend transportation with OAC funds. Weekend transportation is not considered needed to access essential services. Weekend transportation may be provided with other resources.

The reduction in AS 47.65 is not intended to cutback on AS 47.65 services. Legislative intent funding should be used to provide AS 47.65 services.

APPLICANT: Fairbanks Native Association STAFF: Ruth G. Browne

Summary

Fairbanks Native Association (FNA) has requested $42,207 in AS 47.65 funds to continue to provide transportation, interpretation, telephone reassurance, information and many other supportive services to the Native elders residing in Fairbanks. Funds are also requested to help support the monthly potluck gatherings.

Studies conducted by FNA estimate there are 226 Native Elders in Fairbanks. The majority of the elders are from rural villages who have come to Fairbanks for an easier lifestyle and to access better medical care. Lack of family, transportation and an interpreter create problems for these elders.

The geriatric social worker has gained the trust and confidence of these people. She assists them with day-to-day living problems. She devotes many of her after-hours tending to a sick person in the middle of the night, bringing wood to someone, going grocery shopping, providing telephone reassurance, etc. She is known by the Native elders throughout the State. Various health clinics keep her phone number on file to assist in patient - doctor communication.

Although Native elders are referred to North Star Council on Aging, most do not avail themselves of the services for the following reasons:

- they prefer to confide in a Native
- the escort service leaves them alone to long
- congregate meals do not offer traditional Native foods
- there is no interaction with Native youth

Analysis

FNA is currently funded under Title III; they have requested AS 47.65 funding for CY 85. FNA's request equals its CY 84 award plus 93%. This increase is due:

- increasing the time worked by the community services aide to assist in the monthly potlucks
- addition of a driver/aide for the new UMTA station wagon and van
- travel to attend elders conferences
- space rental for potlucks
- gasoline for new vehicles
- supplies for potlucks

Many of the costs listed under AS 47.65 should be under Title III access services.

Recommendation

OAC staff recommends Title III funding at the level of $17,696 and AS 47.65 funding at the level of 10,924.

Respite Care
APPLICANT: Fairbanks Rehabilitation Assn. STAFF: Ruth G. Browne

Summary

Fairbanks Rehabilitation Association (FRA) requests $45,476 in AS 47.65 funds to continue to provide respite services to families in the Fairbanks area. The respite program is designed to offer temporary support to families that provide a residence to disabled persons 60+ year of age; it gives the family relief from the responsibilities of care provision. Temporary care is from one hour to 21 days. It may be used for family emergencies, vacations, planned activities or occasional relief from the day to day responsibilities of caring for the disabled person.

The majority of the care is provided within the home of the individual being cared for. Some out-of-home care is provided in the homes of families employed by the program.

FRA coordinates primarily with North Star Council on Aging and Fairbanks Home Health Care.

Analysis

The applicant's request equals its CY 84 award plus 15%. The increase is due to increasing the number of hours of respite service to be provided.

During CY 84, FRA proposed to provide 2200 hours of respite care. As of 9/30/84, 2040 hours of service have already been provided. They propose to provide a minimum of 4,000 hours during CY 85.

Recommendation

OAC staff recommends funding at the level of $42,276 which is a 6.7% increase from CY 84 award.

APPLICANT: City of Ft. Yukon STAFF: Fran Toland

SUMMARY

During the past year, the City of Ft. Yukon has been serving hot meals to approximately 25 low income Native seniors through local restaurants and providing transportation with a vehicle obtained from Urban Mass Transit Act (UMTA). Their grant was written by a consultant and not developed by the city administration.

This year OAC received an application for $102,077 in Title III funds, an increase of 21% over their current award of $84,075.

ANALYSIS

The City of Fort Yukon has been plagued with reporting difficulties. In September the City itself decided to suspend the senior program. Required documents such as a food service contract were not obtained until October. In March the Nutrition Administrator and Associate Coordinator travelled to Ft. Yukon to work with the Program Coordinator. Within a month, a change of staff negated OAC's efforts. In early October the Associate Coordinator again traveled to Ft. Yukon to assist in reopening the senior program, reviewing accounts and discussing the new grant. The senior program reopened on October 8.

In reviewing the grant application as submitted by the city, most of the required information was found to be missing. In addition the detail budget pages and request did not correspond.

The need for this program is documented, though not on the grant application.

RECOMMENDATION

Staff considered this application to be unacceptable for review since so much information was missing or inaccurate. Since there is a need for Title III services in Ft. Yukon, staff recommends that OAC consider setting aside $63,000 to award at a later date if Ft. Yukon desires to submit a completed application.

APPLICANT: City of Galena

STAFF: Fran Toland, Assoc. Coord.

Summary

In 1982 the City of Galena allocated $7,500 in Municipal Funds for a Pilot Project for elderly transportation in Galena. Those funds provided services for 1½ years. In 1982 the City requested funds from OAC for continuation of the program but were turned down. In 1983 Galena was awarded $3,024 to provide 1,008 rides at $3.00 each to 14-16 seniors. The 20 seniors in Galena age 60 and over are primarily low-income ($300 - 500/month); 15 are Natives.

The program is administered through the city offices with transportation provided by local cab companies. Each participating senior is presented with coupons each quarter with the number of coupons evenly divided among the seniors. Cab companies return the coupons to the city offices for reimbursement. Because of city match, all the awarded funds provide direct services to seniors.

Analysis

This year's request is $1,008, or 33% over current award, reflecting an increase in cab fare from $3 to $4 per ride.

The program was originally initiated by the seniors and serves a vital function in helping to maintain their independence. The need for this transportation service is well documented.

Staff Recommendations

Staff recommends funding at the requested level of $4,032.

APPLICANT: Homer Senior Citizens STAFF: Dinah Van Der Hyde

SUMMARY

Homer Senior Citizens requests a Title III award of $157,807 for CY 85. Homer has operated a senior program since 1972 and currently there are 452 area seniors of which 177 (39%) are low income and 38 minority. The goal for CY 1985 is to serve 500 seniors, as Homer is a high growth area and also has many seasonal visitors. In FY 84 Homer served 403 seniors at an average of $362 per person.

Homer Senior Citizens provides all basic access and nutrition services. They also provide health maintenance, physical fitness and visiting services. For CY 85 they propose a volunteer recruitment and training program to supplement their home visiting and meal delivery services.

ANALYSIS

Homer's request is 8% higher than their CY 84 award. They have complied with program and fiscal reporting requirements and have prepared a good application. Homer overestimated CY 84 planned performance. For example, planned meals were 16,000; actual meals provided were 11,294 or 71% of planned; and the number of rides were about 50% of planned. Budget increases in Homer's request were for program assistant and cooks salary increases plus increased facility expenses. Homer decreased their request for "supplies" and "other" line items.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Due to very limited OAC funds, staff recommends funding at 94.1% of the CY 84 operating level for Title III which is $137,465. This funding level will maintain services at approximately their current level.

APPLICANT: CITY OF HOUSTON/MID-VALLEY SENIORS, INC. STAFF: Howard DeVore

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM:

The Mid-Valley Seniors in cooperative relationship with the City of Houston join the city to apply for $20,222 to provide a new program in their area. Mid-Valley Seniors attempted to work through an agreement with the Wasilla Area Seniors, Inc, in 1984, to provide meals in the Houston-Big Lake Area at the Homesteaders' Club and though the Older Alaskans Commission did not directly approve this new nutrition site or provide a direct allocation to WASI to do so, the WASI Board of Directors found sufficient funds in their 1984 allocation to begin delivering prepackage meals to the Homesteaders' Club. A formal agreement with the OAC and with the Mid-Valley Seniors to budget funds for this purpose failed and through disagreements between WASI and MVS, the delivery of meals was discontinued. Since, the Mid-Valley Seniors have continued to meet for potluck lunches and now have chosen to attempt an independent nutrition program.

With in-kind match as administrative and secretarial services provided by City of Houston employees, MVS and the City propose to contract for a cook for six hours, three days a week, costing $9,000, half of which will be paid by voluntary participant contributions, providing an average of 20 meals three times a week or 3,000 meals @ $3.50, a cost of $10,500.

Travel for Board Members to attend the Aging Conference in May are requested as well as travel to Anchorage for the Board Chairman and Project Director.

ANALYSIS:

The Mid-Valley Seniors have explored contracting with schools and resturants in the area without satisfaction and previous attempts to associate with Wasilla were not successful. With necessary approval and clearance for use of the Homesteaders' Club facility by health officials for food services, the project would require at least $15,000 to cover minimum food and preparation costs.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION:

Staff recommends funding this new program at a level to provide for food costs, half of the food preparation costs, the other half of food costs to to be funded by participant contributions, and incidental food supplies, due to the limited AS 47.65 funds available in the Southcentral area. Staff recommends that funding begin only after special conditions of a food service permit, cook job description, and menus have been met.

APPLICANT: Juneau Women's Resource Center STAFF: Dinah Van Der Hyde

SUMMARY

The Juneau Women's Resource Center is requesting $6,270 in AS 47.65 funding for a continuing grant to operate the Widowed Persons Service.

The Widowed Persons Service began in December 1983 with the Title V Older Women's Specialist position coordinating the service. This service provides support to recently bereaved persons in the new situations they face. These situations are loneliness, financial and legal affairs problems, employment, housing arrangements, and even meal preparation.

JWRC proposes to provide service to 100 widowed persons in CY 85, as well as sponsor workshops about organizing a Widowed Persons Service, and to develop information and brochures.

ANALYSIS

The applicant did not provide a well-documented proposal. It is not signed and the procedures specified are not followed. Program and fiscal reporting has been tardy from this project.

The original plan was for this project to be self-sufficient after the first grant cycle. At this time it is unclear whether plans for sufficiency are underway. The application and reports do not show the status of the program's support by the JWRC. Reports do indicate that the WPS is meeting its goals. Community interest and acceptance are high. The Older Women's specialist has been devoting more than 20 hours per week to the program; and participation is higher than the expected 20 third quarter participants, as they report 33 at the third quarter.

The budget primarily requests facility costs, travel to Widowed Persons Services national conference, and a substantial amount for accounting ($1,800) which is 29% of the grant request.

RECOMMENDATIONS

OAC staff recommends funding at $2,570 AS 47.65 funds for CY 85. This funding would be for six months only for transition and to develop and present information about the project.

APPLICANT: City of Kenai
Kenai Senior Services

STAFF: Dinah Van Der Hyde

City of Kenai has submitted a request for Title III funds of $144,554 and AS 47.65 of $23,192. This is a continuing request for a program existing since 1971. The program provides OAC basic nutrition services, access services and community services.

The program proposes to implement a physical fitness program in CY 85 and to assess expanding meal services to Soldotna in the CY 1986 grant.

The target population of seniors for Kenai has seen rapid growth; their CY 84 projection was 282 - actual count 764. Kenai targets 900 seniors for CY 85 service. In FY 84, Kenai served 764 seniors at an average cost of $155 per person.

Analysis

This project has been responsive in reporting and is fiscally accountable.

The request for Title III funds is 22% more than CY 84, the AS 47.65 is 300% more, reflecting the request for administrative costs of a physical fitness program. Justification is provided for requested increases.

The program has received letters of support from the Kenaitze Indian Tribe; Coda C. Hompton, Social Worker, Central Penns. Mental Health; Betty Warren, Margaret Shervanick and Ruth Winteroud, Seniors.

Performance data indicate the program is on target with demand exceeding planned levels in numbers of persons served, congregate meals and emergency homemaker/chore services. The program is very efficiently administered and is one of the most cost-effective in the State.

The Title III personnel budget eliminates a CY 84 request for part-time cook but adds a request for a full-time driver and cola increases. Kenai Borough funds to support the driver position are not as high because of reduced revenue sharing to Kenai. .

Recommendation

Due to limited OAC funds, staff recommends $125,300 in Title III which is 5.7% above CY 84 operating level and $6,193 which is 18% above CY 84. Since OAC cannot use Title III funds to supplant local funds, the driver position is disallowed with funds from this grant.

APPLICANT: Senior Citizens of Kodiak STAFF: Fran Toland, Assoc. Coord.

Summary

The Senior Citizens of Kodiak incorporated in 1973 and have been serving senior citizens since then, providing nutrition, transportation, escort, I&R, shopping assistance, outreach, health maintenance, in-home services including chore and homemaker services, and a variety of social and recreational activities. Excavation has begun for a new senior center which will hopefully be open by July, 1985.

Kodiak has requested $111,923 in Title III, a 20% increase over the current award of $92,967; and $56,109 in AS 47.65, a 1% decrease over the current award of $56,924.

Analysis

Personnel reflects a 4% COLA plus $1500 in the accrued leave account. Kodiak was given a supplemental award in July of $1,147 to open such an account.

Relocation costs to the new senior center, increased operation costs to be incurred with the opening of the center and 6-month repair and maintenance costs were requested.

Expenses relating to maintenance or repair should not be included in this grant as those should be covered under the construction grant. Also requested was $1050 for a new copier and $500 for kitchen equipment.

Program income from meals was figured at $1.00/meal. Additional program income is anticipated from donations for in-home services for a total of $17,400. That money appeared in (600) Other to pay for accounting services, insurance, printing, subscriptions, the KANA contract for meals and the nutrition consultant. Title III regulations require PI to be used for direct or supportive services to seniors. PI used for accounting, insurance, printing and subscriptions is inappropriate.

Recommendations

Staff recommends that Kodiak be funded for $90,000 in Title III, 97% current funding; and $53,699 in AS 47.65, 94% of current funding. This level of funding represents 96% of continuation.

APPLICANT: Lower Kuskokwim School District STAFF: Fran Toland

Summary

A grant application was received from the Lower Kuskokwim School District after the deadline in 1983 requesting approximately $343,000 to serve hot meals to seniors through the village schools. Because of the merit of the proposal, the low overhead cost and the possibility of better serving an underserved area, staff recommended reserving funds for the SW region. In June a second application was submitted and the Commission awarded LKSD $75,000 to provide senior meals in 24 villages. Because of late start up, the program did not officially begin until October, 1984.

LKSD requests $336,594, on annualized increase of 50% over current funding. This proposal continues the program based on unit cost contracting. The cost per congregate meal is approximately $3.10; that of a home delivered meal is approximately $4.60. LKSD proposes to serve a total of 91,530 meals to 559 low income native Yupiit seniors during the 9 month school year.

LKSD is requesting an increase in the percentage of Home Delivered meals to 37%.

Analysis

No figures are available on participation in this program. October's figures should be available by December. The work put into this program may serve as a model for other rural school districts wishing to provide meals to senior citizens.

Recommendation

Because this program serves a here-to-fore underserved area, it is recommended that it be continued. Until figures are available for the last quarter of '84, staff recommends that the funding level not exceed $225,000, a projection based on the current award of $75,000.

APPLICANT: Maniilaq Association STAFF: Fran Toland

Summary

Maniilaq Association has been providing services to seniors in the Kotzebue area for the past 2 years through the Kotzebue Senior Citizens Cultural Center. Title III services provided are: transportation, escort, outreach, shopping assistance. Under AS 47.65 meals 3 days per week are served. Because of the scope of funding for the KSCCC, other services are provided to community seniors beyond the seope of OAC grants.

The Title III request is $41,553, a 241% increase over the current grant of $12,170. The AS 47.65 request is for $80,990. Due to an error in indirect cost, the corrected request is $78,781, a 73% increase over the current award of $45,590. Proposed new services under OAC grants include home-delivered meals and chore services.

Analysis

OAC services to seniors are provided through the Elders Residence in Kotzebue which is funded by the Department of Health and Social Services. The facility houses up to 20 individuals, but maintains four transient beds for seniors traveling from the villages. The OAC program hires its own cook and food service worker for the three days of AS 47.65 meals each week. Food is supplemented by donations of fish and game from local hunters. The center provides a wholesome environment for seniors to congregate. Both OAC and DHSS programs are similar. When similar programs interface it is difficult to distinguish services. Yet, to maintain integrity of each, this effort is necessary.

In August a grant application was received on last year's forms. OAC didn't receive an updated application postmarked by October 15. Following a phone call to Maniilaq, an application was received dated October 22.

Adjustments made to the grant request included moving all of the cook's and food service worker's salaries to AS 47.65; establishing number of meals and subtracting program income, donations and match. Indirect cost had to be recalculated. Travel to Pt. Hope was requested by both Kotzebue and Barrow. Between the 2 programs, one or the other needs to decide which will provide services. Issues of client intake, safeguarding client information, confidential donations, food service permit were not addressed.

Accurate records of nutrition and access services under OAC grants have not been received regularly. Kotzebue plans to serve 7,800 meals. Based on their only reliable report for the third quarter of this year, a more realistic figure for meals would be 3,050. The cost per meal has risen from $3.78 to $4.01. The primary increase in the grant request is in supplies and personnel. As submitted the proposal was undermatched for both Title III and AS 47.65.

Recommendations

Staff recommends that Maniilaq Association be awarded continuation funding of $12,170 Title III. Staff recommends continuation funding of $45,590 in AS 47.65

APPLICANT: Metlakatla Indian Community STAFF: Dinah Van Der Hyde

Summary

The Metlakatla Indian Community requests a continuing Title III grant of $97,869 and a new AS 47.65 grant of $23,727. This program began as a Southeast Senior Services site and has operated independently since approximately 1977 and in FY 84 provided services to 96 seniors at a cost of approximately $933 per senior.

Metlakatla's goal is to provide all OAC-funded basic access and nutrition services to 83 seniors on the Metlakatla Reserve and serve senior tourists during the summer season. They provide a visiting service to 15 seniors and wish to add homemaker/chore services to 13 identified seniors in their CY 85 request for AS 47.65 funds.

Analysis

The amount requested for Title III reflects a 9% increase and the AS 47.65 would be a new grant related to the request for a homemaker/chore worker.

Project performance is difficult to document. Report data reliability is low and often numbers do not total and must be estimated. Cost per senior served is very high and at the requested level would be $1,179 per senior.

This program has submitted reports in a timely manner and complied with most application process requirements with the exception of a sanitation report and poor budget balancing.

Comparison of planned performance with actual shows a significant discrepancy (i.e., 73% of planned congregate meals were accomplished but 520% of home-delivered creating a total 89% of planned attained.) The addition of homemaker/chore services is supported by letters from Metlakatla Social Services; Steven Weems, Health Educator for Metlakatla Indian Community; and Brenda Montgomery, Nursing Student volunteer in Metlakatla Indian Community. If funded, the requested service would provide over 2.5 hrs/week per senior for 13 identified seniors on a year-round basis.

Recommendation

Performance data do not support increased funding for nutrition and access services, as meals are projected beyond what performance would indicate.

Documentation of need for Homemaker/Chores is only by declaration. A Title V request for funds is suggested for a start up and evaluation of level of need. The demand would not seem to justify a full-time staff person considering OAC's limited resources.

Staff recommends Title III funding at $87,103, 97% of the CY 84 operating level. Staff recommends no AS 47.65 grant be awarded, as Title V will support a part-time position for homemaker/chore services. This funding level is at the regional average.

APPLICANT: Minto Village Council STAFF: Ruth G. Browne

Summary

Minto Village Council requests $77,367 in Title III funds to continue to provide congregate meals five days a week, information, referral and transportation to the elders of Minto. The applicant has also requested $9,956 in AS 47.65 funds to begin the provision of homemaker services.

Of the 275 Minto residents, 37 are eligible for Title III services. There are another 10 in Fairbanks who will return to the village when the housing project is completed. All the Minto elderly are income brackets below poverty guidelines.

A major concern of the elders is to have a reliable van for transportation to Fairbanks. The program recently purchased a new van with supplemental funding awarded by the Commission.

Analysis

The applicant's Title III requests equals its CY'84 award plus 25%. The increase is due to:

- Increase in the cost per meal from $5.00 to $7.50.
- Driver position increased by 5 hours/week.
- Elderly Services Coordinator and bookkeeper's hourly wage was raised from $8.50 to $10.00

The increase in meal costs is due to a revised menu plan prepared by the Tanana Chiefs dietitian.

Recommendation

OAC recommends funding at the level of $68,211 which is a 10% increase. It is recommended that meals be budgeted at $6.00 per meal. It is also recommended that the Elderly Services Coordinator be given a salary increase. Currently, this position earns $1.00 more per hour than the Title V enrollees yet has much more responsibility.

Summary

Nenana Tortella Council on Aging (NTCA) requests $26,161 in Title III funds and $37,942 in AS 47.65 funds to continue to serve the senior citizens of Nenana. NTCA proposes to continue to provide transportation, escort, information, visiting, shopping assistance and congregate meals twice a week.

Analysis

NTCAs Title III request equals its CY 84 award plus 10%, its AS 47.65 request equals its CY 84 award less 1%. The increase in Title III is due to:

- addition of an alternate driver for trips to Fairbanks, $1,920
- purchase of a copier
- increased maintenance for the van which is in poor condition
- bookkeeping contract was increased from 1,200 to 1,800 per year

The decrease in AS 47.65 is due to deleting a chore service worker and adding a part-time janitor at a reduced hours.

Recommendation

OAC staff recommends Title III funding in the amount of $25,661 and AS 47.65 funding in the amount of $37,442.

APPLICANT: Ninilchik Senior Citizens STAFF: Dinah Van Der Hyde

SUMMARY

The Ninilchik Senior Citizens Inc. have submitted a CY 85 request for Title III funds of $17,911 and AS 47.65 funds of $13,800. This is a new grant request for starting a senior program in Ninilchik.

The applicant wishes to operate a congregate nutrition program one day per week using the Ninilchik Fairgrounds Building until a proposed Senior Center is completed in late 1985. A two-day-per-week home-delivered meal service will be contracted with a local restaurant. Access services would be provided to meals.

Currently the organization operates a monthly potluck meal and opens a recreation area three days a week for activities.

They have contacted 100 seniors in the area, the majority are low income, and 20% are native. The goal is to serve 75 seniors.

The Fairgrounds building is centrally located and accessible. It would be open three days a week for meals and activities. Transportation services would be provided by volunteers using their own vehicles or a housing project vehicle.

ANALYSIS

The planned activities for services show 1,200 rides to 6 persons - for 200 rides per year per person and a 35-mile-per-ride average. This objective is not realistic in comparison with other projects and needs reassessment.

Congregate meals would be served to 30 persons (1,360 meals). The home-delivered meals would be contracted (3 meals for 2 days a week at a cost of $6.40 meal). Meal contributions are estimated at 37¢ per meal, less than the 50¢ per meal grant stipulation.

Total paid staff will be a 24-hour-per-week site manager position, with volunteers providing the remainder of support. OAC staff doubt that one part-time staff person can manage to do all the activities necessary to operate a nutrition project. Methods as to how the program would do outreach, coordination, access are not well documented. How the site manager would have time to perform all of the required functions, cook, and make 2 trips per month to Soldotna for supplies is unclear.

Community Support letters have been received from Kenai Senior Services Director Pat Porter; Ninilchik Chamber of Commerce; St. Peters Catholic Church. The Borough Revenue Sharing $7,000 and Tribal Council donations are primary financial support, with the Fairgrounds contributing in-kind match.

.ENDATIONS

JAC staff recommends $15,000 of Title III funds be set aside for Ninilchik to be included in the Kenai or Homer project budget as a meal site for the first year of operation. This would allow the Ninilchik seniors time to further research and evaluate their needs and still be able to provide seniors a nutrition program for CY 85.

APPLICANT: Nome Community Center

STAFF: Eran Toland, Assoc. Coord.

Summary

The Nome Community Center has been serving approximately 200 primarily native seniors for the past 10 years, two years of that in the XYZ Senior Center. Specific services include: home-delivered and congregate nutrition, including weekly native meal; transportation, escort, shopping assistance; subsistance gathering; translation and letter writing; home visits; telephone reassurance; in-home support services. In addition, for the past two summers the center has provided chore services at subsistance fish camps.

The request for Title III funding is $130,320, a 28% increase over the current award of $101,790. The request for AS 47.65 is $51,311, a 65% increase over the current award of $31,147. The overall increase requested is 37% above continuation.

Analysis

In 1984 Nome's senior program underwent a major turnover in staff. Resultant personnel adjustments have led to late reporting. This situation is still being worked on. Both area need and service delivery are adequately documented in the grant application, indicating that service records are being kept.

New staff conducted program evaluations and assessments. The decision to discontinue fish camp chore services and was made. Standard center oriented services will be continued and expanded based on documented increases in service delivery. Meals show a projected increase of 13% and rides up 27%.

Service activities describe an ambitious program for 1985. New services requested include: counseling, physical fitness, volunteer program, a crafts shop, evening activities, intergenerational activities.

Many of these activities can be added at no additional cost to the program. Physical fitness is available through community schools and was not adequately addressed as a new program component under this grant. Operation of a craft shop is not an allowable grant expense. Through coordination of the youth and senior programs, intergenerational activities have a great potential without additional cost. Service activities were not broken into nutrition, access, or community services by funding source. Chore/repair was not well defined as a program component.

The single largest addition to the budget is $24,000 for electricity. The City of Nome has been paying both heat and electricity for the center. Funds are requested to supplant local funds. This is unallowable under requirements for maintenance of effort.

Program income was computed at $.24 but should be targeted at $.50/meal. USDA cash reimbursement was recalculated at $.5875. The program is overmatched with the bulk of match appearing in personnel as the Executive Director's and bookkeeper's salaries. Housing is no longer partial compensation for the program coordinator.

Salary request for that position has increased $12,931. Again the issue of maintenance of effort arises. The nutrition supervisor's salary has increased 15%. She was budgeted for a raise for the first time in 8 years.

Recommendations

Staff recommends funding Title III at $105,000, or 3% over current funding. No AS 47.65 funds are recommended. This recommendation represents a 21% decrease in continuation funding.

APPLICANT: North Slope Borough STAFF: Fran Toland

Summary

The North Slope Borough Health and Social Services Agency has been providing Title III services to Barrow's approximately 100 Inupiat Seniors for several years. These services include nutrition, transportation, and escort.

This year's request is $226,300 which represents an 81% increase over current award of $124,950.

Analysis

Since summer Barrow has had three project directors. Despite the turnover there has been no disruption in service.

As with most remote projects the Barrow senior center serves native elders who rely on the center for translating services, help with filling out forms and other services besides nutrition and transportation.

The service activities were not accurately written to reflect the number of specific services to be provided. Access services were grouped together. The number of meals to be served in the proposed service activities does not agree with the number of meals under food contracts in budget category 600.

The budget summary, cover sheet and detail budgets do not agree in terms of total Title III request. The request in personnel increased by 47%. This reflects a 20-30% salary increase for the positions of project director and Outreach worker. In the past the Borough matched salaries which reduced the Title III request. The travel request has increased by 460% over current award. Efforts to establish nutrition programs in other villages is encouraged. In (400) supplies the request for gasoline increased by 61% due to demands of a new vehicle.

Under (600) Other for meal contracts, program income was not included and USDA was incorrectly placed in another budget category. With those adjustments, the amount requested for meals, $41,300, represents a 148% increase over current award. The North Slope Borough paid for half the meals served in past grant cycles. In the new application they have not included that support.

A new senior housing project with senior center is in the early construction stages. By next grant cycle, funds for the center will probably be requested.

Recommendations

Because of shortage of funds, staff recommends Title III funding at $126,575 which includes travel for program development in Anaktuvik Pass, Point Lay, and Pt. Hope ($1,625). This represents an overall increase of 1%.

APPLICANT: North Star Council on Aging STAFF: Ruth G. Browne

Summary

North Star Council on Aging requests $252,980 in Title III funds and $ 59,929 in AS 47.65 to continue to provide congregate and home-delivered meals, transportation, escort, outreach, information, referral, health maintenance, physical fitness and home-visits to the seniors of the Fai nks area.

NSCA intends to improve the quality of service and expand the provision of services through increased outreach efforts. The program plans to provide services to the frail elderly by replacing an old van with a new one equipped with a wheelchair lift. Currently NSCA lacks transportation to bring handicapped seniors to the center.

The applicant has been awarded a grant to put in a physical fitness walking course on their center's site. The City of Fairbanks has included NSCA's request of $560,00 for an addition to the senior center in Programs for Progress.

It is estimated that there are 2,935 persons 60+ years of age in the North Star Borough. It is also estimated that 85% are non-minority and 20% are in economic need. Of the 2,216 seniors registered at the center, 646 are over the age of 75.

NSCA coordinates with Fairbanks Home Health Care, Fairbanks Memorial Hospital, Tanana Valley Community College, Pre-Trial Diversion Program, Foster Grandparents/ Senior Companion Program, the Homemaker Program, Alaska Legal Services, Literacy Council of Alaska and has letters of support from these programs.

Analysis

NSCAs Title III request of 252,980 is an increase of 38%. Their AS 47.65 request of $59,929 is an increase of 9%. The applicant decreased its original request by 20156 eliminating a full-time bookkeeper and contracting with a C.P.A. firm.

The increase in the CY 84 operating level is due to:

- Salary increases for the director, assistant director, community resource coordinator and secretary to bring them in line with comparable salaries in the community
- the addition of a part-time outreach worker
- an employee insurance plan
- proposed increase in transportation
- increase in meals

During the last year the number of persons and meals served has increased substantially.

Recommendation

OAC staff recommends Title III funding at the level of $213,796, an increase of 16% and AS 47.65 funding at $56,201 an increase of 2%.

APPLICANT: Older Persons Action Group STAFF: Barbara McPherson

Summary

Older Persons Action Group requests ~~$70,448 in Title~~ III funds to continue Statewide Information, Referral and Support Services. OPAG currently receives $65,820 in Title III funds for this program. During CY 1984 OPAG was funded for a toll-free Zenith line to expand the Statewide capability of the program. Approximately 400 persons are served each month.

Analysis

OPAG's I & R program is well utilized and its staff is responsive to a wide range of information and referral requests and provides supportive services to persons who have complicated or long term problems. The support services are critically needed in the Anchorage area and work in cooperation with the local aging service network.

Although OPAG targets this program Statewide, service delivery has been predominately to Anchorage and the Southcentral area. Sixty-six long distance calls were placed to OPAG from June 1 to September 30, 1984 via the toll-free Zenith line. These calls originated from 23 Alaskan communities, 18 of which have local senior service programs. Twelve calls were received from the six communities that do not have senior programs.

The application contained omissions which must be resolved prior to expenditure of any awarded funds:

1. Goals and objectives: The proposed objectives and service activities need to be revised to incorporate the number of units of information that will be provided and the total number of persons that will be served. Several activities included in this application are not objectives of this funding and need to be deleted.

2. Matching Funds: As in the SENIOR VOICE application, OPAG addresses in-kind facility space and in-kind advertising as match. The in-kind advertising is unallowable. Ads donated to other agencies are benefits provided by OPAG to other agencies. Ads used as barter for items such as travel result in program income. All matching funds should be addressed to the facility budget category, page F-5.

3. Personnel: Costs addressed under total cost of position are not consistent with total costs addressed to funding sources, page F-3. Salaries addressed here are also not consistent with those listed in OPAG's SENIOR VOICE application or with the position costs resubmitted on November 21 which are attached. Also attached is a comparison of OPAG's 1984 salaries and requested 1985 salaries. Matching funds in the personnel line are inappropriate and should be deleted.

Recommendations

OAC staff recommends funding of $60,712 for OPAG's information, referral and support program for 1985. It is further recommended that the Statewide focus of this project be eliminated and that the project be directed entirely at Anchorage and the adjoining Southcentral area. Although the program has made a commendable attempt to desseminate information Statewide through this project that function is more appropriately addressed by SENIOR VOICE and local senior service programs. Further, OPAG's clientele is primarily local people. The caseload of persons needing more intensive supportive services is currently growing and moving the program toward case management services. This direction should be pursued more intensely by OPAG.

Due to the need to focus the program locally and to end duplication of service, it is recommended that funds be deleted for staff travel to other communities and for the Zenith line. The line is currently underutilized by communities that do not have senior programs. Its use by communities with OAC funded programs is not cost effective.

It is recommended that the CY 1985 award be contingent upon the following special conditions:

1. Grant funds shall be used for services to Anchorage and the adjoining Southcentral area.

2. Revised objectives and service activities based on the award of funds shall be submitted to OAC on form F-B by February 15, 1985.

3. A revised budget shall be submitted using budget detail pages F-1 through F-10 by February 15, 1985.

4. Staff funded under this award shall not be utilized by Older Persons Action Group for activities of the membership organization.

5. OAC shall be contacted prior to the schedule of an audit. OAC may contract for the provision of audits. Grantee audits must comply with OAC-PI-84-5 and Circular A-102, Attachment P.

6. Grantees must have an equal employment opportunity policy, as well as have implemented an affirmative action plan in all aspects of personnel administration. Discrimination on the basis or race, color, creed, national origin, sex or age handicap is prohibited both within grantee personnel administration and in the delivery of services and/or conducting of grant activities. Grantees must insure compliance by all subgrantees and subcontractors. A copy of the equal employment policy and affirmative action plan shall be submitted to OAC by March 31, 1985.

7. Out-of-state travel under this grant requires prior approval by OAC.

8. Attendance at OAC meeting is not a requirement of funding and grant funds shall not be used for this purpose.

Title III Budget Revision Notes:

OPAG's budget request is attached. The budget revision for the information and referral program reflects the following:

1. Personnel: Salaries have been reduced to reflect available funds.

2. Travel: Travel funds have been deleted for travel to other communities. Local mileage may be included in the budget revision submitted by OPAG.

3. Facility Expenses: Funds for telephone expenses are reduced to $1,500 as the Zenith Line is not recommended for continuation in 1985.

CY'85

APPLICANT: Older Persons Action Group STAFF: Barbara McPherson

Summary

Older Persons Action Group requests $123,084 to continue monthly publication of SENIOR VOICE during CY 1985. The newspaper focuses on programs, legislation and issues which directly affect the elderly in the State and strives to provide a forum for seniors, senior organizations and policy-makers. SENIOR VOICE is distributed statewide to 7,500 persons each month. Although it is available without charge, 2,100 are paid subscribers.

SENIOR VOICE staff consists of three full-time positions: a media manager, a researcher/reporter and a reporter. OPAG's director, administrative assistant and secretary positions contribute 12 to 8 hours per week to the production of the paper.

Analysis

In 1984 SENIOR VOICE continued to be a high-quality, well written publication. It has earned the respect of its readers and journalists Statewide. Letters commending and supporting SENIOR VOICE during the past year are on file from Charles Mundorff, Southcentral Counseling Center; Thelma Langdon, Alzheimer's Disease Family Support Group; Mary Carey, Tex-Alaska Manuscripts; Sue McCarty, North Star Council on Aging; Randi Paquin, Home Health Care; Association of Older Alaskans Programs; Mary Johnson, the WGS Connection.

OPAG's CY 1985 funding request for SENIOR VOICE is 116% higher than their CY'1984 OAC grant award.

The budget request contains a number of omissions which must be resolved prior to expenditure of any awarded grant funds:

1. Matching Funds: OPAG addresses in-kind facility space and in-kind advertising as match. The in-kind advertising is unallowable. Ads donated to other agencies are benefits provided by OPAG to other agencies. Ads used as barter for items such as travel result in program income.

2. Program Income: OPAG projects $61,000 in program income during 1985; however, this amount is not shown in the budget summary, page F-1.

3. Personnel: Costs addressed under total cost of position are not consistent with total costs addressed to funding sources, page F-3. Salaries addressed here are also not consistent with those listed in OPAG's I&R grant or with the position costs resubmitted on November 21 which are attached. Also attached is a comparison of OPAG's 1984 salaries and requested 1985 salaries. Matching funds in the personnel line are inappropriate and should be deleted.

4. Travel: Travel funds are requested; however, OPAG was awarded legislative intent funding for travel for SENIOR VOICE staff.

5. Facility Expenses: OPAG is utilizing in-kind match for facility costs. These funds should be addressed to the facility budget category, page F-5.

6. Other: During CY 1984 OPAG provided SENIOR VOICE to OAC projects as a condition of the funding award. OPAG has included $1,000 in this grant request for distribution to OAC agencies. As the paper is produced under OAC grant funds, as well as the program income generated by those funds, and distributed statewide to the elderly, this additional charges for OAC projects is inappropriate.

Currently OPAG has approximately $8,000 in unexpended program income that could be carried forward to the 1985 grant period. It is important that OPAG develop a clearer accounting method for grant funds and program income for SENIOR VOICE. Program income must be applied exclusively to the costs of producing SENIOR VOICE. The revised personnel budget submitted on November 23 indicates that program income is utilized for the accounting technician's salary. This shall not exceed 4 percent of the total salary for this position as that is the percentage of work time allotted to SENIOR VOICE by the accounting position. It should also be noted that a student intern position is included in the revised salary schedule that does not appear in the media application. Funds for this position are also addressed to program income. OAC did not support a reporter trainee position requested by OPAG under legislative intent funding.

Recommendation

OAC staff recommends funding of $47,952 for SENIOR VOICE for CY 1985 contingent upon the following special conditions:

1. By February 15, 1985, OPAG must submit a complete revised budget for the operation of SENIOR VOICE during CY 1985 using budget detail pages F-1 through F-10. This budget must include all program income and funding from other sources for SENIOR VOICE. All revenue and expenditures for SENIOR VOICE must be reported to OAC quarterly by line item in accordance with the accepted revised budget.

2. OPAG shall carry forward any unexpended CY 1984 program income to CY 1985. OPAG shall notify OAC of the amount of this unexpended program income prior to February 15, 1984 and incorporate it into the revised CY 1985 budget.

3. Program income generated by SENIOR VOICE must be used exclusively for the operation of SENIOR VOICE and cannot be utilized for the support of any other program operated by the Older Persons Action Group.

4. SENIOR VOICE may not be utilized by the Older Persons Action Group or any other organization to solicit membership unless such solicitation is incorporated in a paid advertisement.

5. Staff funded under this award shall not be utilized by Older Persons Action Group for activities of the membership organization.

6. OAC shall be contacted prior to the schedule of an audit. OAC may contract for the provision of audits. Grantee audits must comply with OAC-PI-84-5 and Circular A-102, Attachment P.

This application requests $158,137, an increase of 26.2% ($32,856) over current funding of $125,281. The increase is accounted for, in part, by a new 32 hour Administrative Assistant position costing $16,591 and distributed equally between Title III and AS 47.65, and increase of 8 hours in the project director's position costing $5,935, and $6,000 for a computer, typewriter and adding machines.

See page 5, budget notes.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION:

Staff recommends funding Palmer's Title III project at 5.9% of the current funding level, the available funding after equitably distributing the decrease required in the Southcentral Region. Staff recommends funding the AS 47.65 Social Services and Handyman programs at 7.2% of the current operating level, equitably distributing the decrease in available funds for Southcentral and the cost of a new nutrition program at Houston in CY 1985. Staff recommends not funding the proposed new administrative position nor the new social service aide position.

CY'85

APPLICANT: Seward Senior Citizens STAFF: Dinah Van Der Hyde

Summary

Seward Senior Citizens is requesting Title III funds of $17,435 and AS 47.65 funds of $44,150. This is a 63% increase in OAC funding for the program and includes a new grant for Title III.

Seward has a population base of 1,800 with 255 persons over 60. This program has provided congregate meals two days a week, transportation, escort, outreach companionship, health maintenance, and telephone reassurance to 90 seniors.

The CY 85 proposal would increase meals to three days a week, provide home-delivered meals, transportation, escort, outreach, information, referral/personal advocacy, shopping assistance, health maintenance, physical fitness, telephone reassurance, home visiting, and volunteer services. Seward hopes to target the frail by increasing Title V outreach worker hours.

Analysis

Seward's application is minimally documented as to target populations and need for increased service. Program reporting has been timely, but planned versus actual performance has been noticeably varied. Actual congregate meals were 69% of planned, escort 3%, health maintenance 273%, and companionship 136%.

The budget request for CY 85 reflects more dependence on OAC support. The application does not explain the change in support required. Borough funds are $8,000 less; perhaps this reflects decreased revenue sharing. The Director's salary was paid 44% by the Borough in CY 84 and the Bookkeeper 50%. Both are 90% OAC in the CY 85 request.

This program is currently being audited. During the preliminary attempt at the audit, there was insufficient documentation available for the audit to take place. The grantee's current Bookkeeper is now trying to reconstruct the documents for the 1982 and 1983 grants in order to have a complete audit take place.

Recommendation

Due to the lack of OAC funding available and the uncertainty of fiscal accountability, staff recommends funding at the current operating level for AS 47.65 of $30,000.

This project has been encouraged to seek additional Title V funds for their proposed staffing increase for home visiting and health maintenance.

SUMMARY

Tapraq, Inc. is a service organization formed to help prevent alcohol and drug abuse in Stebbins. From July 1, 1982 to December 30, 1983 they provided congregate meals 3 days a week to approximately 16 senior citizens.

In July of 1984 they were awarded a 6-month AS 47.65 grant of $11,096. This year they are requesting $11,629 of AS 47.65 money for six months or $23,258 for 12 months. This represents an annualized increase of 5%.

ANALYSIS

Tapraq first requested and received funding in July, 1982. The site was not inspected by staff until March, 1983. At that time the nutrition administrator discovered that the kitchen in the community center was not certified. In July 1983 they were awarded a 6-month grant with the condition that continued funding was contingent upon their obtaining a food service permit. No money was awarded in January 1984. As efforts were made to certify the kitchen, the project director stayed in touch with OAC staff. In March, 1984 the Stebbins City Council agreed to pay for necessary renovations to the community center. Those renovations were scheduled to be completed in July.

With that information OAC granted Tapraq $11,096 with the condition that no money would be forwarded until we had a copy of the food service permit.

To date, the renovation on the building has not been done. At last correspondence, the supplies were barged to Unalakleet and would be delivered to Stebbins as soon as possible. Weather permitting, construction will begin immediately.

Tapraq's application was one of the most complete and accurate ones reviewed by this coordinator. Every issue was addressed and need was documented. It was received late in this office, having been sent first to the Department of Administration and then forwarded to OAC.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Staff recommends that OAC set aside $23,258 for award to Tapraq upon receipt of their food service permit. The award will be prorated based on when the permit is received.

APPLICANT: Upper Tanana Development Corp. STAFF: Ruth G. Browne

Summary

Upper Tanana Development Corporation (UTDC) requests $211,897 in Title III funds and $31,087 in AS 47.65 funds to continue serving the elders residing in the region. The Upper Tanana region includes the communities of Dry Creek, Dot Lake, Tanacross, Tok, Tetlin, Mentasta, Northway, Eagle City and Eagle Village.

The program provides lunch five days a week at Tok/Tanacross, Tetlin, Dot Lake, Northway; two days per week at Mentasta and three days per week in Eagle. Responsibility for serving the elders of Mentasta was transferred from Copper River Native Association to UTDC during CY 84 for geographical reasons. UTDC did not receive additional funds to service Mentasta.

The program currently operates three vans. One van is used primarily in Northway and travels to Tok once a week for lunch. Two vans are presently located in Tok. One is used daily to transport seniors from Tok and Tanacross and to deliver home-delivered meals. The third van is used to transport seniors from Mentasta and Dot Lake to Tok or Delta Junction to shop or participate in the lunch program. UMPTA funds have been received to purchase a four wheel drive which will be used to service the elders in Eagle and Tetlin.

UTDC also provides escort, information, referral, telephone reassurance and home visits.

Of the approximately 212 persons 60+ years of age in the region, about 40% are Native. About 150 have been served by the UTDC region.

Analysis

UTDC's Title III request equals its CY 84 award plus 7%; its AS 47.65 request equals its CY 84 award plus 5%. The increase is due to:

- addition of a driver to service Tetlin twice a week
- an approximate 3% salary increase
- an 11% increase in number of meals
- equipment requests

An increase is justified due to addition of Mentasta as a meal site and the addition of two vans to expand transportation services.

Recommendation

OAC staff recommends Title III funding at the revised level of $209,047 and AS 47.65 funding at the level of $30,087.

OLDER ALASKANS COMMISSION

APPLICANT: WASILLA AREA SENIORS, INC. STAFF: Howard DeVore

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM: WASI, INC. has submitted a request for funding from both Title III and AS 47.65 funding, as in the past, to continue existing programs in nutrition at the Wasilla and Talkeetna sites, access services to older persons in this area of the Mat-Su Valley, and a handyman home maintenance and repairs service to the elderly frail unable to work on their own homes. New, in this CY 1985 funding request under AS 47.65, is the provision for a social worker who offers information, referral, and counseling services while coordinating with other agencies. The job description fails to mention educational or training requirements but the duties do not necessarily call for a BS in Social Work. New objectives on form F-B for CY 1985 speak only to one objective related to social work services, telephone reassurance to 15 older persons.

Title III services funded at the requested level would increase meals in a congregate setting by 22.5%, from 10,071 served October 1983-September 1984 to 13,000 proposed. Part of the cost is off-set by a suggested donation of $1.50 by participants which Wasilla Area Seniors have been contributing in the current year as well. Meal donations should provide $19,500 and rides $3,000 in a transportation service governed by OAC policies with three vehicles driven by one paid and two volunteer drivers.

Talkeetna will continue as the new nutrition outreach program serving 15-20 elderly at school sites providing meals under contract at $3.50 per meal averaging 25 meals a week for the year. The Upper Susitna Valley Seniors, Inc are involved in advisory management to the WASI Board and staff which includes a site manager now provided by Title V funding but proposed to be assumed in this grant under Title III. Justification for transfering the position to Title III is the need for more than 20 hours a week, according to the grant. Though the program got off to a slow beginning and meals are now served only one day a week, rotating from one school or resturant location to another to serve a widely distributed clientele, the response and appreciation was shown at a recent meal and USVS, Inc. board meeting attended by the reviewer.

ANALYSIS:

AS 47.65 HANDYMAN/SOCIAL WORK

The 81% increase in AS 47.65 funds requested for CY 1985 adds a new dimension to the WASI program and a new position of Social Worker costing $17,322 of the $26,295 increase over $42,400 funded in the current year for the Handyman and Home Maintenance Program. Except for counseling mentioned in the job description of the Social Worker, the information, referral and personal advocacy duties are not allowable under AS 47.65 and more appropriate under Title III but also found in the job description of the Coordinator/Bookkeeper position.

TITLE III NUTRITION AND ACCESS

The CY 1985 request of $151,095 is 29.5% above the 1984 allocation or $34,436 more accounted for in part by transfering the Talkeetna Title V Site Manager to Title III and adding $14,062 for a computer and outdoor exercise equipment. The current 1984 allocation of $116,659 includes excess funds of $10,630 not used at Talkeetna.

APPLICANT: Wasilla Area Seniors, Inc. STAFF: Howard DeVore

STAFF RECOMMENDATION:

Staff recommends funding the Title III Nutrition and Access program at 94.1% of the CY 1984 Wasilla allocation ($96,756) for the Wasilla site in 1985 and of the state share of the CY 1984 Talkeetna revised site budget ($9,373) for Talkeetna in 1985, a total Title III recommendation of $99,773 with $91,047 for the Wasilla site and $8,726 for the Talkeetna site. Staff recommends the continuation of a Title V site manager, 20 hour per week, position for Talkeetna and not to fund this position from Title III.

Staff recommends a maximum of 10,450 meals in CY 1985, 9,150 congregate meals at Wasilla served five days a week and 1,300 meals at a Talkeetna site served once a week. Staff recommends rides be maintained at the current 1984 level of 2400.

Staff recommends funding the AS 47.65 Handyman program at the current operating level, the amount of available funds for Southcentral after accommodating the cost of a new nutrition program at Houston in CY 1985 and distributing the balance to the programs in the Southcentral Region. Staff recommends not funding the proposed new Social Worker position, computer hardware or software, nor the outside exercise equipment proposed by the applicant.

OLDER ALASKANS COMMISSION

BILL SHEFFIELD, GOVERNOR

POUCH C, M.S. 0209
JUNEAU, ALASKA 99811
PHONE: (907) 465-3250

April 1, 1985

Dear Governor Sheffield and Members of the Legislature:

It is a pleasure to submit the Older Alaskans Commission's 1983-84 Annual Report to you. This report describes the Commission's activities and details State and Federal dollars expended for services for older persons who are in need of assistance to maintain quality in their lives.

In its nearly four years of existence, the Commission has addressed the needs and concerns of Alaska's older population through programs designed to preserve their independence and productivity. These programs are critical if we are to prevent unnecessary or premature entry into long term care facilities.

During this time Alaska's older population has increased approximately 24%. Alaskans age 60 and older now number 24,000. We can expect this high rate of growth to continue as more and more Alaskans celebrate their sixtieth birthday and life spans increase.

The Commission has appreciated your dedication to protecting the independence and dignity of older Alaskans. We look forward to our continued, shared commitment to those who have shaped our heritage and our future.

Sincerely,

Peggy Burgin

HISTORY AND HIGHLIGHTS

History

The Older Alaskans Commission was created by the State Legislature in 1981 to ensure dignity and independence for Alaska's elderly and assist them in maintaining useful, quality lives. In creating the Commission, the Legislature gave older Alaskans a voice in the planning and provision of programs of benefit to them. Currently, through State and Federal grant awards, the Commission funds services for 16,000 older persons in 107 communities.

The Older Alaskans Commission plans, coordinates and provides services for the elderly in the areas of employment, nutrition, transportation, information and referral, housing, health care, in-home services, legal services, long-term care, advocacy, outreach and family support. The Commission also acts in an advisory capacity and makes recommendations to the Governor and the Legislature regarding issues that affect the State's elderly.

A New Beginning for Older Alaskans

A comprehensive statewide plan addressing the needs of Alaska's older citizens was developed during 1983. The planning process focused on identifying priority needs of older Alaskans and developing a coordinated approach to respond to those needs. Regional forums, individual interviews and community meetings were conducted in each of six planning regions. This information was combined with a review of existing needs assessments and recent research to provide the basis for the goals and objectives of the three year action plan.

The plan:

* provides basic information about the status and needs of older Alaskans and the available resources to address those needs

* offers a framework to guide the Commission's actions over a three year planning period

* indicates how the Commission will develop a comprehensive and coordinated approach to meet the needs of older Alaskans

* complies with the planning requirements of the Federal government

Alaska Remains a Single State Planning and Service Area

Historically, the entire state has been a single planning and service area under the administration of the Older Alaskans

Commission (formerly the Office on Aging) as the state unit on aging. The Older Americans Act provides for the establishment of planning and service areas (PSA) for the elderly in regions where the total population exceeds 100,000 and for administration of the Title III services in these regions by an area agency.

In response to the interest of the Municipality of Anchorage to be considered as a planning and service area, the Commission announced its intent to plan for the development of a planning and service area for Anchorage.

An ad hoc committee composed of members and staff of the Older Alaskans Commission and the Senior Citizens Advisory Commission of the Municipality of Anchorage was formed to develop guidelines for the designation and administration of a PSA for the municipality. Upon receipt of the committee's report and recommendations, the Commission designated Anchorage as a planning and service area.

The Commission advertised for letters of intent for a $30,000 planning grant to develop an area plan for Anchorage. The municipality chose to not respond to the letter of intent and the Commission rescinded its designation. The municipality gave the following reasons for turning down PSA responsibilities.

* There appeared to be less than adequate support by senior citizens city-wide;

* There was an almost total lack of support by areawide project directors of senior citizens programs;

* It was not possible to assume administrative functions without cutting funds, and thereby services, to local senior programs, and;

* Planning and service area functions would duplicate the areawide social service planning for all community residents which was taking place.

Alzheimer's Disease

Alzheimer's Disease is termed "the disease of the century". The 1984 amendments to the Older Americans Act require that an adequate proportion of Title III Part B funds be expended for the delivery of supportive services for families of elderly victims of Alzheimer's disease and other neurological and organic brain disorders. This mandate makes Alzheimer's disease a national priority and, for the first time, recognizes the family as the recipient of services.

The Older Alaskans has focused their attention on this devastating disease. In November, 1984, the Commission, Day Break Adult Day Care Center and the Anchorage Alzheimer's Disease Family Support Group cosponsored a statewide teleconference on Alzheimer's Disease to educate and inform Alaskans about the disease. Questionnaires were sent to the rural villages to identify the numbers of suspected Alzheimer's victims who may reside in remote areas.

Governor Sheffield proclaimed November as Alzheimer's Disease month and workshops were held in Anchorage, Juneau, Fairbanks and Kenai. Audioconference training sessions about the disease were held in Ketchikan, Kodiak, Dillingham, Bethel, Copper Center, Nome and Kenai.

Elder Abuse

In 1983 the Alaska State Legislature enacted a mandatory elder abuse reporting law to shield Alaska's elderly from physical and economic harm. The Older Alaskans Commission advocated for the passage of this law and for the protection and assistance of older persons who are unable to care for themselves.

Elder abuse has been encountered statewide by Commission funded senior projects and was documented in Anchorage under a 1981 study funded through the Commission by the Administration on Aging. Twenty agencies surveyed by the Anchorage Community Health Center for this study reported contacts with elder abuse cases. Seventy-five cases of elder abuse were reported in all. In 75% of the cases, the abuse had been going on for some time and only 53% of the victims sought help.

Although adult protective services are the responsibility of the Department of Health and Social Services, the Older Alaskans Commission has oversight responsibility for elder abuse services under the mandatory reporting statute. The Commission is responsible for approving regulations for the implementation of the law and for receiving statistical reports on activities related to the protection of elderly persons in the State. Additionally, the law mandates that employees of Commission funded programs report suspected harm to elderly persons

In September, 1984, the Commission conducted a coordinated training for personnel of OAC senior projects, social workers of Division of Family and Youth Services local offices, and hospital and medical personnel. Susan Tomita of Harborview Hospital in Seattle provided training in how to recognize elder abuse and how to deal with victims and their abusers. The training strengthened the ability of the aging network to coordinate effectively and promoted mutual understanding of the issues and procedures that are critical to the protection of older persons.

Older Alaskans Survey

In conjunction with the Pacific Northwest Long Term Care Center, the Commission mailed a survey to 14,300 Alaska longevity bonus recipients in October 1984. The survey will enable the Commission to best meet the needs of Alaska's elderly population. Final survey results will be available in mid-1985.

Housing Task Force

Prompted by the three year comprehensive plan, the Commission designated a task force in late SFY 1984 to study housing and housing related issues facing senior citizens in Alaska. Composed of inter-agency personnel and private citizens, the nine member task force explored public and private housing options, alternative financing, weatherization, energy assistance, institutions, in-home services and the fragmentation of senior housing services.

Through five meetings and two teleconferences, the task force solicited information on housing needs from the general public and housing professionals. After three months of investigation, the task force compiled a series of preliminary policy and legislative recommendations for the Commission's consideration. The Commission accepted these preliminary recommendations and directed the task force to conduct a statewide teleconference to encourage public comment.

Within six months of its inception the task force presented thirteen final recommendations to the Commission which they unanimously adopted. Included among the recommendations were two pieces of draft legislation designed to stretch state dollars for in-home services and housing construction. One bill would allow the Department of Health and Social Services to establish a sliding-fee schedule for recipients of homemaker, home health aide and home-nursing services.

The second piece of legislation would create an innovative builders' incentive program to encourage private contractors to construct rent-controlled senior housing.

Throughout its meetings the task force emphasized the Commission's role as a coordinating agency for senior housing-related services. All of the task force's recommendations reflect the primary goal of the Commission to keep seniors in their own homes as long as possible and to seek alternatives that would prevent or delay costly institutionalization. The task force drafted a final report to summarize its findings and offer an analysis of the recommendations.

Intergenerational Activities

As a natural outcome of visibility in communities, local senior citizen groups around the state have become involved with young people. In many areas, intergenerational activities reassert the position of elders as honored members of the community. This is particularly true in rural Alaska where seniors share their knowledge, crafts and survival skills which school-aged children.

Northwest Alaska has taken the lead in organized intergenerational programs. Kotzebue's Inupiaq Ilitquisiat movement involves seniors in curricula development and training for kindergarten through twelfth grade to supplement western education with traditional Eskimo knowledge and values. Nome's youth program frequently joins forces with the senior center to share in traditional hunting and gathering activities. The vigor of youth augments the skill and knowledge of senior citizens in such traditional activities as berry picking, ice-fishing and seal hunting.

The Foster Grandparents Program also provides intergenerational relationships in three Alaskan communities, Juneau, Anchorage, and Fairbanks. The Foster Grandparent Program assigns a senior to two children who have speical needs. The needs vary from physical handicaps to emotional and learning problems. The senior offers the child the special love and attention that teachers and staff are often too busy to give. The child offers the senior a loving response and feelings of self worth and accomplishment. This intense one on one relationship of child and senior is rarely found in our present transient society. Many Alaskan children have never seen their grandparents and the seniors are especially capable to offering warmth and wisdom. They also bring to their work the time and patience that are needed in teaching children with special needs.

EDUCATION AND TRAINING

Alaska Consortium for Education and Training in Aging

The Older Alaskans Commission is a member of the Alaska Consortium for Education and Training in Aging, a cooperative effort of the Commission, the University of Alaska and the Association of Older Alaskans Programs. The consortium evolved from mutual concerns for the development of educational resources for those who provide services to older persons. Four representatives of each member organization meet monthly via teleconference to coordinate training opportunities and address issues which affect gerontology education in the State. The Consortium, which was catalyst and steering committee for the 1982 Aging Together in Alaska Conference in Fairbanks, will also direct the development of a 1985 conference for older Alaskans.

Linkage

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services awarded the Commission $100,000 in discretionary grant funds for the Advanced Technology Transfer of Gerontological Training: Linkage Project. Linkage was designed to examine the feasibility of using audioconferencing and video communications technologies to provide cost effective training to Commission project directors nd related aging service providers in rural Alaska.

With the Institute of Social and Economic Research (ISER) and the University of Alaska Instructional Telecommunications Center (UAITC), the Commission held two training sessions during 1984. The training sessions were broadcast via the State's teleconference network and Learn Alaska television. Sessions were held in Ketchikan, Kodiak, Dillingham, Bethel, Copper Center, Nome and Kenai. Topics of the workshops included how Alzheimer's disease affects families, the need for family support, exercises and questions for those working with Alzheimer's victims and how to develop family support in rural communities. The Linkage program will continue through part of 1985.

Board Training

All nonprofit organizations that receive funding from the Older Alaskans Commission have a board of directors and/or an advisory council. In order to increase the effectiveness of the boards and advisory councils, the Older Alaskans Commission coordinated with United Way of Anchorage to provide board training to several programs throughout the state. The trainer was provided by United Way; funds for travel, per diem and training materials were provided by the Commission. The training was provided to aging programs in Anchorage, Delta, Kodiak, Chugiak, Palmer, Tok, Juneau, Fairbanks, Kenai and Dillingham.

The Commission also developed a technical assistance packet for the board's and councils of aging programs. This packet contains a sample set of bylaws, sample job descriptions and descriptions of committees.

Project Directors Training Workshops

In July, 1983 and September, 1984 the Older Alaskans Commission conducted five-day training workshops for directors of Commission funded programs, aging service providers, the elderly and other interested persons. These workshops were funded under Federal Older Americans Act grant awards to the Commission for training and education. Under the older Americans Act, the Commission is mandated to annually provide training to program personnel and the State's aging network.

Providing training to personnel of the Older Alaskans Commission's service programs is a major priority. It is also a critical need. Aging services personnel in the State's rural communities are completely isolated from other service providers and training opportunities. The cost of attending national training conferences and workshops is prohibitive for the majority of service providers.

Topics for the training workshops were identified by project directors themselves. During the past two years the training agendas have included meal cost-control alternatives, cutback management techniques, aging service evaluation, elder abuse identification and intervention, the needs of the frail elderly, program development and management and victimization. Each workshop was attended by approximately 150 persons.

ADVOCACY ASSISTANCE

Under the Older Americans Act, states must develop systems of support and provide technical assistance to protect and advocate for older persons. The term "advocacy assistance" is used to describe these activities. Alaska's advocacy assistance program consists of three components: the Senior Citizen Ombudsman Program, Legal Services Development and Elderly Legal Services.

Senior Citizen Ombudsman Program

Alaska's Senior Citizen Ombudsman Program began in November, 1980 and is organized to serve as a resource for all Alaskans over the age of 60 with priority given to institutionalized seniors. The program's main emphasis is to ensure that the elderly get proper care in nursing homes, long term care facilities, boarding homes or residential care facilities and foster care homes. In addition, the Ombudsman investigates and resolves complaints made by and for older persons about agencies or agency actions, and provides information and referral services. An average of 50 persons are served statewide each month by the Senior Citizen Ombudsman Program.

Legal Services Development

Legal Services Development is required under the Older Americans Act to provide technical assistance and training activities which promote and assist the expansion of legal services and the ombudsman program. It does not include litigation or direct representation of clients.

Legal Services Development is provided by the Commission through a grant to Alaska Legal Services Corporation (ALSC). Under this funding legal issues which impact older citizens are addressed through training of senior service program personnel Statewide, the coordination of ALSC staff assistance to the aging network, the provision of advocacy and legal information pertaining to the elderly and the promotion of pro-bono services from private attorneys.

Elderly Legal Services

Direct legal services for persons 60 years of age and older are also provided by the Commission through funding to Alaska Legal Services. It is estimated that approximately 30% of the State's elderly are in need of legal services. This program assists approximately 400 persons each year with legal problems concerning housing, home ownership, public entertainments, income maintenance, estates, probate and guardianships.

Nutrition Services

The Older Alaskans Commission provides funding for nutrition services for persons age 60 and over under Title III-C of the Older Americans Act and Alaska Statute 47.65. Nutrition Services include: nutritious meals which provide at least one-third of the Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances; nutrition information and education; and outreach activities to inform eligible persons about the availability of the services.

The majority of meals are served in congregate settings such as senior centers, schools, restaurants, community buildings, elderly housing facilities, and churches, so participants can benefit from the socialization and supportive services provided as part of the program. The number of congregate meals served increased from 237,498 in calendar year 1983 to 259,644 in 1984; an increase of 9.3%.

Meals are also delivered to elderly who are unable to leave their homes due to illness, handicaps, or extreme weather conditions. The number of home-delivered meals served in 1984 increased to 89,462 from the 78,701 served in 1983; an increase of 13.7%. No participant is required to pay for a meal, but all are asked to make a contribution toward the cost of the meal.

By the end of calendar 1983, there were 24 nutrition program grantees serving meals at 53 sites.

By the end of 1984 this had increased to 24 serving meals at 80 sites.

Grantees funded under Title III - C are required to provide meals at least five days per week, include spouses of persons age 60 and over as eligible participants (regardless of age), and are also eligible to receive commodities or cash-in-lieu of commodities reimbursements from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Grantees who provide meals less than five days per week are funded under AS 47.65. The recipients of AS 47.65 grants for nutrition services in 1984 were:

Grantee	Site Location(s)
Maniilaq Association	Kotzebue
Nenana Tortella Council on Aging, Inc.	Nenana
Seward Senior Citizens, Inc.	Seward

The Older Alaskans Commission also provided a wide range of nutrition program monitoring, technical assistance, and administrative support services to the nutrition program grantees. A nutrition services manual was prepared and distributed to all nutrition services providers in July 1984. Additional materials are also produced and distributed to grantees to assist them in nutrition education, sanitation, food service administration, subcontracts, purchasing, and recordkeeping. The Older Alaskans Commission's Registered Dietitian also reviews nutrition program menus to assure that the meals provide at least one-third of the Recommended Dietary Allowances as required by law.

Future Direction for Nutrition Services

The Older Alaskans Commission is committed to supporting seniors in their efforts to maintain their health and remain in their homes as long as possible. Increasing services to minority and low income seniors in rural areas is a major priority. Expanding nutrition services through contracts with local school districts has been a very successful approach. This coordinated use of existing facilities and staff is a very cost effective means of reaching these previously unserved elders in rural Alaska.

TRANSPORTATION

Transportation to get to needed services was identified as a priority item by participants at the regional forums held in developing the three year comprehensive statewide plan. Transportation is provided by the majority of Older Alaskans Commission service programs.

Vehicles used by local senior service programs have been acquired with funding from local governments, the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 (UMTA), special legislative appropriations or in a few cases a supplemental award from the Commission. The majority of vehicles are received from UMTA. The Commission coordinates with the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities in the award of funds for UMTA vehicles.

A major accomplishment during 1983 was the establishment of the Older Alaskans Transportation System (OATS) which coordinates elderly transportation services in Anchorage. OATS is funded by the Commission and provides door-to-door transportation to the older persons in the Anchorage area. It is collaboratively operated by the Salvation Army and the Mabel T. Caverly Senior Center. Scheduling is through a single phone number. A computerized dispatching system is used to maximize the availability of services.

Other methods of transportation, in addition to the door-to-door system include a fixed route schedule of service. In some communities, the local taxi company is funded to provide elderly transportation services.

During SFY 1983 284,915 rides were provided to 5,017 persons. During SFY 1984 245,611 rides were provided to 4,633 persons. Each year, Commission funded transportation services transport older Alaskans approximately 1,000,000 miles.

Transportation services are provided to access services in the following order of priority:

a. Medical appointments; prescriptions, hospital and essential (non-emergency) health services;
b. Nutrition and other essential support services;
c. Essential shopping, low income development (Title V and other who document low income), and volunteers in services to older person, disabled and children;
d. Job training and career education;
e. Attendance at senior organization meetings; and
f. Nonessential shopping, business, beauticians, cultural, educational.

INFORMATION AND REFERRAL/PERSONAL ADVOCACY

Information and Referral/Personal Advocacy is a gateway for seniors to services that are available in the community. Older persons, who are unsure about where to get help or who have trouble getting it, can contact the Information and Referral service in their local senior programs to receive knowledgeable assistance. Information and Referral staff keep abreast of current information regarding available services and benefits, enabling them to given timely guidance to each individual inquirer.

The Older Americans Act requires state agencies on ongoing to assure the availability of Information and Referral programs that offer reasonably convenient access for older persons. Alaska's Information and Referral services for elderly are organized as a statewide network. Most local programs funded by the Commission serve as satellite service delivery sites, and the Commission serves as the central data collection, training, and technical assistance agency. During SFY 84, the network responded to over 41,500 information requests and handled over 2,600 referral/personal advocacy cases. These represent 27% and 97% increases over the SFY 83 levels, respectively. The Commission considers Information and Referral to be an essential link to help older Alaskans live independently.

COMMUNITY SERVICES

Homemaker/Chore Services

Homemaker services provide help with routine light housecleaning, laundry, errands, meal preparation and other tasks which a senior may require on a temporary basis due to illness or as a routine service. These services assist seniors to continue living in their own homes. Chore services cover more heavy duty, occasional or seasonal jobs such as woodchopping, heavy cleaning, yardwork, snow shoveling, or hauling water.

Home Visits

Home visits are often provided to homebound or isolated seniors to give them companionship or comfort and to see if other services may be needed.

Telephone Reassurance

Providing regular telephone contact, telephone reassurance helps projects check on the health and safety of isolated seniors. It also provides seniors with assurance that help is available if it is need.

Residential Repair/Renovation

Extending beyond the scope of chore services, residential repair/ renovation provides more specialized assistance such as plumbing, minor carpentry or electrical maintenance, weatherstripping, and replacing broken windows in the homes of senior citizens. Minor adaptations to a senior's home for handicapped accessibility are also provided.

Health Maintenance

Health maintenance activities occur in a congregate setting where space is available for such services as blood pressure checks, dental or vision care, foot care, or health education. Services are provided by nurses or other appropriate health care practitioners.

Physical Fitness

Health can be sustained or improved through physical fitness activities. These activities, provided by trained personnel, may include walking, swimming, range of motion exercises, or aerobics all are especially geared for seniors.

Counseling

Counseling is provided by caseworks, either social workers of psychologists, to help resolve personal, family, financial, or mental health problems. Counseling may occur on a one-to-one or a group basis.

Instruction/Training

Instruction/Training provides information or skills to seniors which will help them lead healthier, more independent lives. The training may occur on an individual basis or in a group setting.

Adult Day Care

Health, social, and a variety of related support services are provided in a group setting for extended periods of time to older persons who need assistance with daily living tasks. These services assist the older person to remain at home and enable his caregiver to continue caring for him.

Respite Care

Respite care services are provided in a home or congregate setting for a temporary period of time to older persons who need assistance with daily living tasks. As adult day care, respite services prevent premature institutionalization of the older persons by giving the family relief from the responsibilities of providing care.

SENIOR EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM

The Senior Community Service Employment Program is authorized by Title V of the Older Americans Act. Originally it was designed to provide useful part-time community service employment for low income persons aged 55 years of age or older and to promote the transition of program enrollees to private or other unsubsidized employment. The focus has changed to stress employment and training opportunities with the ultimate goal being unsubsidized employment for the enrollee whenever possible. Correspondingly, the Senior Employment program has increased the emphasis on the importance of enrollees receiving training, for both specific skills and job seeking skills, and securing unsubsidized employment.

During SFY 1983 and FY 1984, 640 persons were enrolled in the Senior Employment Program. All positions were with non-profit agencies with the exception of 10 placements in the private sector. The Commission met on exceeded the Federal required goal of 15% transition to non subsidized employment each year.

Alaska was one of thirteen states in FY 1983 to receive permission to use $25,000 of the total Title V yearly allocation to develop training positions in the private sector which will to unsubsidized employment. Four persons were enrolleed in this "Experimental and Demonstration Project" in FY 1983 and six in FY 1984. These placements provided on-the-job and classroom training to eligible persons whose wages were subsidized during the training period. The participating employers hired these persons at the conclusion of training.

An annual training workshop was held for the Older Worker Specialists in December, 1983. This was a joint effort of Commission staff and the Department of Labor. An Older Worker Specialist Desk Guide was developed and distributed to all older worker specialists and their supervisors.

The Senior Employment Unit received a $23,000 Continuing Education grant from the Alaska Commission of Postsecondary Education during FY 1984 to conduct "Senior Job Preparedness" training workshops in Juneau, Anchorage and Fairbanks. Over 350 persons attended these 2-day workshops and participated in job seeking skills training. Senior Job Fairs, which match older job seekers with private sector employers, were held in Fairbanks, Anchorage, Wasilla, Seward, Valdez, Juneau and Ketchikan. These resulted in immediate employment for many participants and also brought the fact that older workers have much to offer employers to the public attention.

A manual, Older Workers' Guide to Job Seeking Skills, was prepared for the workshops and distribution to State personnel offices, JTPA programs and local job service offices. Other materials developed included a publicity flyer for employers describing the benefits of hiring mature workers and an informational flyer for older job seekers which has been mailed to public assistance recipients and distributed through job service offices and educational resource centers.

Coordination of activities between JTPA Older Worker programs and the Senior Employment Program has also included joint participation in the Job Seeking Skills workshops/Job Fairs and the Barriers to Employment Conference as well as assistance with outreach to eligible participants, cross referrals to between programs for training and employment and general older worker related information sharing.

CSHB 140 (Rules)
Fiscal Note Analysis
Prepared by Division of Telecommunications Services
Department of Administration
April 16, 1985

This bill will clarify the legitimate use of teleconferencing for meetings and hearings held under the Administrative Procedures Act (AS 44.62). Specifically it will permit teleconference use by publically funded bodies for presentations, discussions and testimony at public hearings, and for counting quorum and voting.

The legal clarification of teleconference use will have no direct fiscal impact. Indirectly, however, some fiscal impact may be felt as increased use of teleconferencing could save money currently expended for travel.

Clarification and the resulting increase in use of teleconferencing will allow for greater participation in public policy making. It will also encourage broader circulation of information to and from governmental bodies and the public.

Position Paper

CSHB 140 (Rules)

The Department of Administration supports the passage of CSHB 140 (Rules) (An Act relating to the use of teleconferencing under the Administrative Procedures Act) because it will clarify past and present ambiguities relating to the use of teleconferencing for the conduct of State business. The legality of taking public testimony, establishing quorums and voting will be clarified specifically.

Teleconferencing has proven to be an effective communications medium when used to disseminate or gather information. Legal considerations for meetings have arisen when teleconferencing has been used for decision making requiring quorums for voting.

Passage of this bill will have no direct fiscal impact on State agencies. The potential for cost savings exists because teleconferencing provides a less expensive way for agencies to do business. Although telephone costs would increase, it could still be cheaper to meet by teleconference than to travel to meetings.

Use of teleconferencing will also enable more people to participate in the decision making process. The public and State agencies will have increased participatory opportunities without associated high travel costs as well as the ability to conduct business more quickly and efficiently.

Dear Senator Abood:

Enclosed is a fiscal note, position paper, analysis and a copy of the latest version of HB140, the "Teleconferencing Bill" - CSHB140 (Rules).

Essentially, the Rules version exempts House and Senate sessions from being held by teleconference, deletes the requirement for regulations, deletes the language about listing topics in public meeting notices and deletes language that was felt could cause policy problems. All changes were suggested by Bill Berrier, Director of Legal Services.

We agree with these changes and believe that the bill, in its current form, will do the job. If you have any questions or would like additional information, please call.

Sincerely,

SUBJECT: Differences between CSHB 140(Fin) and CSHB 140(Rls)

There are five differences between CSHB 140(Fin) and CSHB 140(Rls). Four of them involve the bill's amendments to our open meeting statutes, AS 44.62.310 and 44.62.312. The differences were suggested on April 13th by Director of Legal Services Bill Berrier and concurred in by Chairman Boucher of the Special Committee on Telecommunications; Chairman Miller, Representative Gruenberg, and Counsel Kaden of the House Judiciary Committee; and Director of Telecommunications Services of the Department of Administration; as well as by myself.

All five differences are listed as follows with page and line references to the Rules version:

1) Page 1, line 29, after "section." -- the phrase "except for meetings of a house of the legislature" is added. This eliminates the option of teleconferencing for meetings of a house of the legislature.

2) Page 2, line 2, after "teleconferencing." -- the language "according to regulations adopted by the commissioner of administration. The regulations must include a provision that" is deleted. This eliminates any possibility that the commissioner of administration would adopt regulations that could affect the use of teleconferencing by legislative committees. It also enhances flexibility in the use of teleconferencing by all agencies but preserves the commissioner's option under other authority to adopt general regulations on the use of teleconferencing by executive branch agencies only.

3) Page 3, line 13, after "meeting." -- the phrase "general topics to be discusse or considered" is deleted and the phrase "if the meeting is by teleconference" is added. This eliminates the burden on agencies of giving advance notice of every possible topic to be discussed or considered at a public meeting whether it is teleconferenced or not. It also eliminates a possible technical grounds for challenge of action taken on topics not included in a notice. This change was suggested by the Senate State Affairs Committee in response to a concern raised by the City and Borough of Juneau.

4) Page 3, line 3, after "meetings." -- the phrase "and is to provide the broadest input and dissemination of information practicable" is deleted. This eliminates unnecessary and possibly problematic policy statement language.

5) Page 3, line 8, after "[MAIL VOTE]." -- the phrase "if voting in person is not reasonably possible" is deleted. This encourages use of teleconference voting as an option to in person voting by executive branch agencies in administrative adjudication.

Everyone at the April 13 meeting expressed the desire that the Rules Committee substitute of this bill reach the floor of the House as soon as possible. If I can provide any further information or assistance towards that end, please let me know.

2. List of candidates and groups named by claimants of credits as furnished to Representative Martin pursuant to the Supreme Court order dated March 21, 1985.

3. Copy of an AG opinion dated February 5, 1985, to the Division of Legislative Audit advising on organizations for which credits may be claimed.

4. Copy of a letter dated April 9, 1985, to Representative Martin furnishing the information this department may reveal without order of Supreme Court.

Because of widespread interest in the program and in analyzing the administrative response to the February 5, 1985, opinion, the Department of Revenue has sought clarification. We have been informally advised that we may approve credits only for contributions made to organizations for the exclusive use by a candidate or to a group organized to affect the outcome of a ballot proposition or question. Contributions to political parties which support more than one candidate, for example, would not be eligible for a credit.

RECEIVED
ALASKA DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE
JAN 30 1986
OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER

By: Richard D. Monkman
Assistant Attorney General

At your request, this office has examined the question of whether the Department of Revenue can release the 1985 list of "all persons claiming a political contribution tax credit under AS 43.20.13(a), including the dates, if available, and candidates or groups to which the contribution was made." As you note in your letter of January 27, 1986 to Senator Abood, "these lists or parts of them may not be made public except on order of the supreme court of the state." AS 43.20.013(a).

Having examined the statute, discussed the question with the Alaska Public Offices Commission (which keeps the list confidential, in accord with the statute), and reviewed the Supreme Court's Order of March 21, 1985, we conclude that the Department may not release the 1985 lists without an order of the Supreme Court. The statute is clear, and appears intended to protect the privacy interests of those who contribute small amounts to political causes. */

*/ In this light, we note that the Supreme Court's Order allowing partial release of the lists to Representative Martin did not allow release of the names of the contributors who received the tax credit. Rather, it limits disclosure to "a list of all candidates or groups to which contributions were made and for which the tax credit ... was claimed during calendar years 1983 and 1984." Order, March 21, 1985 (emphasis supplied). The Campaign Disclosure Act does not require disclosure of the names of those who contribute $100 or less to a campaign or political group. AS 15.13.040. Thus, an individual contributing $100 or less would expect that his or her contribution would not be made public, either by the A.P.O.C. or by your Department. Our understanding is that the legislators are not seeking the names of contributors, just the names of the groups and candidates to which contributions were made.

The lists of groups and candidates who received contributions reimbursed by the tax credit in 1983 and 1984 has already been "made public" by disclosure to Representative Martin. The Supreme Court's Order does not restrict Representative Martin from releasing the lists to others. Thus, we conclude that those lists have become public information. There is no reason to withhold them from Senator Abood or any other interested party.

The proper procedure for the interested legislators to follow to obtain the 1985 lists, or to obtain more information regarding the 1983 and 1984 lists, is to apply to the Supreme Court. We note that the application should be very specific as to what information the legislators wish to obtain.

Please let me know if we can be of any further assistance in this matter.

SUBJECT: Requirements for organizations under the political contribution credit program

In conjunction with an audit of the political contribution credit program administered by the Department of Revenue, you have asked whether national political parties and national special interest groups qualify under AS 43.20.013(a), which provides for payments to individuals for contributions made to certain political candidates and organizations. We conclude that a national organization may qualify if the purpose for which it is organized meets the criteria set forth in AS 43.20.013(a).

AS 43.20.013(a) provides as follows:

(a) A resident individual is entitled to a tax credit not to exceed $100 for
(1) a contribution made in a calendar year to a person or organization for use exclusively
(A) for a political campaign for a candidate for
(i) President or Vice President of the United States, whether or not the candidate will be voted on in a primary election in Alaska;
(ii) United States senator from Alaska;
(iii) United States representative from Alaska;
(iv) governor or lieutenant governor of Alaska;
(v) the Alaska legislature;
(vi) delegate to an Alaska constitutional convention;
(vii) electoral confirmation as a judge or justice of a court in Alaska; or (viii) municipal office in Alaska; or
(B) by a group seeking to influence the outcome of a ballot proposition or question in Alaska; and
(2) dues paid in a calendar year to a non-profit organization organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections in Alaska.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE ADMINISTRATION
FEB 8 RECD

AS 43.20.013(a) places no geographical limitations on an organization. It does, however, impose requirements regarding the purpose of the organization. Thus, a national organization such as "Mondale for President" would qualify because it is organized for the purpose set forth in AS 43.20.013(a)(1)(A)(i) -- it is a political campaign organization supporting a candidate for the Presidency. On the other hand, a contribution to the Republican National Committee would not qualify, because it is not organized exclusively for one of the purposes listed in AS 43.20.013(a)(1)(A)(i) - (viii). It may support the Republican nominee for President, but it also supports other candidates, such as Republican congressional candidates in other states, who are not covered by the statute.

Likewise, national special interest organizations do not qualify unless they are organized for the purposes set forth in AS 43.20.013(a). Thus, a nationwide organization could qualify if it were organized primarily to influence an Alaskan election. AS 43.20.013(a)(2). A state organization would not qualify unless, like the Alaska Environmental Action Committee, it were organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections in the state. The organizations you list in your memorandum (National Rifle Organization, Audubon Society, National Wildlife Federation, Second Amendment Foundation) would not qualify because they are not organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections in Alaska nor for any of the other purposes listed in AS 43.20.013(a)(1) and (2).

Focusing on the purpose of the organization fulfills, we believe, the legislative intent of the statute. AS 43.20.013(a), like sec. 41 of the Internal Revenue Code (providing for a tax credit for political contributions), was enacted not only for the obvious purpose of encouraging citizens to make contributions to candidates for public office, but also to "compensate" for the fact that contributions to political organizations are not tax deductible as charitable contributions for income tax purposes. See I.R.C. §§ 501, 527 (West 1984). Thus, a contribution must be made to a legitimate political organization in order to qualify as a credit. A charitable organization that incidentally supports a candidate or proposition does not come under the purview of the statute.

Determining whether or not a contribution is made for one of the purposes covered by the statute creates a difficult administrative problem for the Department of Revenue. The purpose of an organization is not always apparent from its name. In addition, it is difficult for the department to identify all the organizations in the state that may be organized for the purposes listed in AS 43.20.013(a). This task, in order to be done accurately and efficiently, will probably require additional personnel, and assistance from the Division of Elections and the Alaska Public Offices Commission (APOC).

The other problem created for the department is a public relations one. An organization, in order to encourage contributions, may "advertise" to the public that it qualifies under AS 43.20.013(a) when in fact it does not. Based on a representation of this kind, the contributor will apply to the department for a refund, which may be denied because the contribution was not earmarked exclusively for one of the purposes listed in AS 43.20.013(a). Persons denied a refund are more likely to voice their dissatisfaction with department personnel than with employees of the organization who made the erroneous representation.

One way of easing the administrative burden on the department may be to amend the current regulation, 15 AAC 20.042, which requires, in effect, that a group supporting or opposing a ballot proposition must be registered with the Alaska Public Offices Commission in order to qualify. This registration requirement could be extended to cover most candidates and groups, except those that are not otherwise required to register with APOC, such as groups supporting candidates for national offices. For those organizations that are required to register, the use of registration as a qualifier would probably help to expedite the processing of applications for refunds.

We hope this provides sufficient information for concluding your audit. If you wish further information, please contact us.

Dear Representative Martin:

As I mentioned in our telephone conversation of April 4, we are providing the statistical information requested in your March 12, 1985 memo as public information. The figures below represent the total checks paid and total amount paid for political campaign contribution claims during 1983 and 1984, respectively. The information for the years 1981 and 1982 is more difficult to extract because of a major change in the system in 1983. We are, however, researching that information and will provide it in the near future.

Dear Mr. Chief Justice,

As was the case last year, I am forced to write and request your assistance in a matter of legislative business. Again, I formally request an Order from the Court ordering the state Department of Revenue to release the names of all candidates and groups to which contributions were made and for which the Political Contribution Credit was claimed under AS 43.20.013, and the amount the State has paid out in the name of each candidate or group. I would like this information for claims filed in 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Unfortunately, under AS 43.20.013 this information can only be made public upon order of the Alaska Supreme Court. In a letter to you dated January 29, 1985 I related the history behind the Political Contribution Credit program, why this problem exists and my efforts to amend the statute to make the requested information accessible to the public.

Last year I made virtually the same request I am making in this letter. However, I was not given the amount of money the state paid out in the name of each candidate or group. I believe I have a compelling interest, in the course of my legislative duties, to know the amount of money the state has paid out in the name of each candidate or group.

Attached please find a copy of the Order issued last year by the Court, and a copy of a statement of non-opposition issued last year by the State.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Terry Martin

Dear Senator Abood:

In connection with our telephone conversation of Friday, January 24, 1986, I want to make clear my concerns about the release of information concerning claims for political contribution credits.

Under the provisions of AS 43.05.085, enacted in 1974 and amended in 1984, the Department of Revenue may furnish to APOC a list of all persons claiming a credit, "including dates, if available, and candidates or groups to which the contribution was made. These lists or parts of them may not be made public except on order of the supreme court of the State." (emphasis supplied).

Representative Terry Martin obtained an order of the Alaska Supreme Court dated March 21, 1985, which contained the following language:

> The State of Alaska is directed to release to Representative Martin a list of all candidates or groups to which contributions were made and for which the tax credit provided for by AS 43.20.013 was claimed during calendar years 1983 and 1984.

As I informed you, I believe it necessary to obtain an opinion from the Office of the Attorney General on the scope of that order. Specifically, my questions to counsel will be:

1. Does the order limit the release to Representative Martin or does the order make release of the lists "public"?

If the answer to that question is that publication to Representative Martin is publication to all, the list provided to Representative Martin will be furnished promptly.

2. Would a list relating to 1985 contributions come within the scope of the order?

3. Notwithstanding the provisions of AS 43.05.085, may the department release lists furnished to APOC to others without a Supreme Court order?

Although the Legislature did amend AS 43.05.085 in 1984 to correct the name of the agency receiving the lists, it made no other change. Since legislative review of that statute is so recent, I believe that the department must take the language in its literal sense, absent a legal opinion to the contrary. However, because of your interest, I am seeking advice on this issue immediately and shall be in further communication with you at the earliest possible opportunity.

SUBJECT: Political tax credit payments to minors

You have requested our opinion on whether the Department of Revenue may deny claims for individual political contribution credits made by parents "on behalf" of minors as young as six months old. The answer is yes.

The individual tax credit may be claimed only for contributions to campaigns for elective office in Alaska (state or federal), for contributions to groups seeking to influence the outcome of a ballot proposition in Alaska, and for contributions to groups organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections in Alaska. AS 43.20.013. Any contribution in these three categories would necessarily fall under the Campaign Disclosure Act, AS 15.13.010.

The disclosure statutes prohibit contributions made anonymously or in the name of another person. AS 15.13.-120(a)(4). Violation is a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment for up to a year and a fine of up to $5,000. Id. Additionally, a campaign or group which accepted contributions made on behalf of another person is subject to civil fines. AS 15.13.125. The Alaska Public Offices Commission has, by regulation, provided:

> If a minor makes a contribution of money or anything of value given to the minor by a parent for that purpose, the parent has made a contribution in the name of another.

2 AAC 50.357(d).

A contribution made by a parent "on behalf" of a minor is presumptively in violation of the Campaign Disclosure Act, and would be an illegal contribution. The Department of Revenue may not grant claims for tax credits based on illegal contributions, and thus these claims should be denied. */

The Audit Division's practice of responding to questions about contribution by minors by stating that (1) the minor must use "their own money and (2) the minor must make the decision to contribute, uses the appropriate analysis. In determining whether contributions are made with the minor's "own money," the department might look to indicia such as the name on the checking account, the name on the receipt for the contribution, or whether the contribution was made with PFD money claimed by the parent.

The question of whether the minor made the decision to contribute, rather than the parent, is likely to be more difficult. You have asked whether the department "[m]ay deny claims made by persons under the age of eighteen" as a blanket rule. While administratively this would be the easiest course of action, AS 43.23.013 states that "a resident individual is entitled to a tax credit" for contributions and does not provide an age limitation. Reading this statute in harmony with the Campaign Disclosure Act leads us to conclude that the department could certainly require claims made by unemancipated minors to be supported by affidavit or other documentation sufficient to prove that the decision to contribute was the minor's, and not the parent's. A blanket ban would probably go too far.

*/ In this regard, we note that parents of unemancipated minors must sign the minor's Permanent Fund Dividend application, and "may claim" the dividend "on behalf" of the minor. AS 43.23.-005(c); AS 43.23(d). A contribution using the minor's PFD money and made at the discretion of the parent would violate the Campaign Disclosure Act.

Re: Political contribution tax credits

Dear Mr. Logan:

As we discussed yesterday, political contribution tax credits may be claimed only for "a contribution made ... for use exclusively (A) for a political campaign for a candidate [...]." AS 43.20.013 (emphasis supplied). The Campaign Disclosure Act defines "candidate" as a "person who files for election [for state, federal, or municipal office]" (emphasis supplied). Thus, only contributions to persons who have filed a declaration of candidacy with the Division of Elections for public office at the time the contribution is made are eligible for the tax credit.

STATE'S STATEMENT OF NON-OPPOSITION TO APPLICATION FOR RELEASE OF INDIVIDUAL TAX CREDIT LISTS

Pursuant to Appellate Rule 404(c), the state files this response to the application filed by Representative Terry Martin for release of individual tax credit lists. The state does not oppose Representative Martin's request for release of these lists, for the reasons given below.

First, Representative Martin is requesting only the names of candidates and groups for whom the tax credit provided by AS 43.20.013 is claimed. Release of this information would not jeopardize any individual contributor's claim to privacy.

Second, Representative Martin is a state legislator. The political contribution program involves the expenditure of public funds. Representative Martin, as a public official, has a legitimate reason for seeking the information requested. His interest would, we believe, outweigh any interest the candidates and groups may have in nondisclosure.

Finally, AS 43.05.085 requires that the information requested by Representative Martin be provided to the Alaska Public Offices Commission (APOC). Other information of this kind in the possession of APOC is public information. There is not a legitimate privacy reason, in our view, for treating this particular information differently. More importantly, the purpose of AS 15.13, under which campaign expenditures and contributions must be reported to APOC, is to enable the electorate of the state to be better informed about funds contributed to and expenditures made by candidates for public office. This public purpose is not served if certain information held by APOC is kept confidential.

Honorable Jay Rabinowitz, Chief Justice
Alaska Supreme Court
303 "K" St.
Anchorage, Alaska 99501

Dear Chief Justice Rabinowitz,

In our democratic form of government, with it's three separate branches, the judicial branch is often called upon by the legislative and executive branches to solve problems between the two. And so it is with this letter that I present you with a set of facts and ask for your assistance.

In 1974 the Alaska legislature enacted a law that allowed state residents to apply for a personal income tax credit of up to 50 dollars. The credit was given if a taxpayer donated money to a political candidate, a candidate for judicial retention or a ballot initiative. Under that system, if a resident could prove that he or she made a donation to a campaign, the state would allow them to credit up to 50 dollars against their state income tax.

In 1980, when the personal income tax on Alaska residents was repealed, the law was changed to allow for a political contribution credit. That is, since the personal income tax was repealed, if a resident made a contribution to a political campaign, he or she would simply be reimbursed by the state. Also in 1980, the amount of the credit was increased to 100 dollars.

In the last year I have become interested in this program and have begun to investigate what types of organizations are being claimed as creditable contributions. Quite simply, I have been trying to find out where the money is going.

AS 43.20.013 (a)(1)(A) is clear, it allows a credit of up to 100 dollars for a resident who has contributed to a campaign in Alaska. Early last year I requested from the Department of Revenue a list of who Alaska residents have claimed as creditable contributions. Officials with Revenue were very cooperative in granting my request. My intent was to determine if the political campaign contribution program was accomplishing its purpose of assisting the average citizen in making contributions to candidates for elective office. I was also interested in how much money was being spent in-state versus out of state.

With that background in mind, on to the problem. With the 1984 elections out of the way, I thought it would be interesting to check and see how much money was spent on campaign credits during the past election season, and where it went. When my office placed a telephone call to the proper revenue official and asked for the list, just as we had done before, we were refused access to the information.

AS 43.05.085 states that the information dealing with the political contribution credit shall not be made public except on order of the supreme court of the state of Alaska. Ms. Sally Smith, the Director of Public Services of the department cited this statute as her reasoning for not releasing the information.

Thus, Mr. Chief Justice, I request your assistance.

I am sure you are aware that "Campaign reform" is the subject of much discussion in the press and the subject of much legislation in the capitol. Without exception the bills introduced thus far are designed not only to limit expenditures, but to make public the origin and the amounts of money being spent on elective office. I expect some form of this legislation to pass soon, simply because the people are demanding it.

When AS 43.05.085 first appeared in section 4, chapter 76, SLA 1974, it was in reference to a tax credit. It was the mood of the day, and maybe rightly so, that information related to taxpayers should remain confidential. However, as this statute applies today, there is no personal income tax debt to be credited. It therefore follows that there is no information relating to taxpayers that can be divulged. Keep in mind that I am not asking to see the names of those who contributed, only the names of those organizations and candidates that have been credited as Alaskan campaigns.

Along the lines of keeping information confidential, I would like to point out that when the program was indeed a tax credit, the state was not expending funds, it was simply deferring them. Understandably, that was between the taxpayer and the state. However, as the program exists today, the state is expending public funds. I for one believe that the final destination of public funds should be public knowledge.

Finally, I would like to point out that I have requested and was given this information once already. Since I received the list, I have not infringed on the rights or privacy of one Alaskan, simply because I did not ask for, and I did not receive the name of any Alaskan.

In conclusion Mr. Chief Justice, I am requesting you to order the Department of Revenue to provide me and the public with the names of candidates and organizations that have been claimed in calendar years 1983 and 1984 by anyone applying for reimbursement of their political campaign contribution.

I await your response.

Also, for your information, I am enclosing a copy of HB144 which will hopefully be passed during this session to correct this situation.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

Representative Terry Martin

Dear Ms. Smith,

During the past few days my assistant, Mr. Mark Hanley, has spoken with you about obtaining a list of names. The names he has requested, on my behalf, are the names of groups and candidates that individuals have claimed credit for under AS 43.20.013., the political campaign refund.

I am sure you are aware that I have been provided with such a list by your department in the recent past. I believe the statutes are clear in granting me the right to this information. AS 09.25.110 states that "Unless specifically provided otherwise the books, records, papers, files accounts, writings, and transactions of all agencies and departments are public records and are open to inspection by the public..."

Further, AS 09.25.100 states that "Information in the possession of the Department of Revenue which discloses the particulars of the business of affairs of a taxpayer or other person is not a matter of public record...These restrictions do not prohibit the publication of statistics presented in a manner that prevents the identification of particular reports and items..."

You stated to Mr. Hanley that AS 43.05.085 prevented you from releasing the information I am requesting. However, this particular statute was repealed in 1975, and AS 43.20.013 makes no provision for the release of such information.

Certainly my request has nothing to do with who requested the political campaign refund, only which group, cause or candidate has been claimed as a creditable contribution.

Therefore, I would like to formally request from you a list of the groups, causes and candidates that have been claimed as creditable contributions during 1982, 1983 and 1984.

As the information I seek is necessary in order to proceed with official legislative business, specifically HB 49 and SB 34, I would appreciate a timely response to this request.

Sincerely,

Representative Terry Martin

Dear Mr. Jones,

As I have for the last 2 years, I am formally requesting information from the Department of Revenue regarding the Political Contribution Credit authorized under 43.20.013.(a).

Specifically, I would like to know what individuals and organizations were claimed for the credit, and the total amount of money the state paid out in each of their names (for instance "Candidate A...$1000" or "PAC B...$2000"), the total number of checks distributed, total amount paid out and Zip Codes of the applicants. I would like this information broken down by fiscal year, beginning in 1980 when the program began, until the present.

I am sure you remember that last year I requested this information from Ms. Sally Smith, Director of the Division of Public Services of DOR. Ms. Smith refused my request, and, as she is permitted to do under 43.20.013.(a), required me to petition the Supreme Court in order to gain access to the information.

Before hearing the matter the Court considered briefs from me, and from the Attorney General. In a statement for the AG, Assistant AG Diane Colvin wrote that the state saw no problem with me gaining access to the information. In fact, sh stated that I had every right to the information. It is, I believe, prudent to assume that my request will again be granted if I am forced to petition the Court.

In the course of my legislative duties I am involved with several projects which require the information I am seeking, in one form or another, before they can be completed.

Your prompt reply will be appreciated.

Sincerely,

Terry Martin

SUBJECT: Requirements for organizations under the political contribution credit program

In conjunction with an audit of the political contribution credit program administered by the Department of Revenue, you have asked whether national political parties and national special interest groups qualify under AS 43.20.013(a), which provides for payments to individuals for contributions made to certain political candidates and organizations. We conclude that a national organization may qualify if the purpose for which it is organized meets the criteria set forth in AS 43.20.013(a).

AS 43.20.013(a) provides as follows:

> (a) A resident individual is entitled to a tax credit not to exceed $100 for
> (1) a contribution made in a calendar year to a person or organization for use exclusively
> (A) for a political campaign for a candidate for
> (i) President or Vice President of the United States, whether or not the candidate will be voted on in a primary election in Alaska;
> (ii) United States senator from Alaska;
> (iii) United States representative from Alaska;
> (iv) governor or lieutenant governor of Alaska;
> (v) the Alaska legislature;
> (vi) delegate to an Alaska constitutional convention;
> (vii) electoral confirmation as a judge or justice of a court in Alaska; or
> (viii) municipal office in Alaska; or
> (B) by a group seeking to influence the outcome of a ballot proposition or question in Alaska; and
> (2) dues paid in a calendar year to a non-profit organization organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections in Alaska.

AS 43.20.013(a) places no geographical limitations on an organization. It does, however, impose requirements regarding the purpose of the organization. Thus, a national organization such as "Mondale for President" would qualify because it is organized for the purpose set forth in AS 43.20.013(a)(1)(A)(i) -- it is a political campaign organization supporting a candidate for the Presidency. On the other hand, a contribution to the Republican National Committee would not qualify, because it is not organized exclusively for one of the purposes listed in AS 43.20.013(a)(1)(A)(i) - (viii). It may support the Republican nominee for President, but it also supports other candidates, such as Republican congressional candidates in other states, who are not covered by the statute.

Likewise, national special interest organizations do not qualify unless they are organized for the purposes set forth in AS 43.20.013(a). Thus, a nationwide organization could qualify if it were organized primarily to influence an Alaskan election. AS 43.20.013(a)(2). A state organization would not qualify unless, like the Alaska Environmental Action Committee, it were organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections in the state. The organizations you list in your memorandum (National Rifle Association, Audubon Society, National Wildlife Federation, Second Amendment Foundation) would not qualify because they are not organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections in Alaska nor for any of the other purposes listed in AS 43.20.013(a)(1) and (2).

Focusing on the purpose of the organization fulfills, we believe, the legislative intent of the statute. AS 43.20.013(a), like sec. 41 of the Internal Revenue Code (providing for a tax credit for political contributions), was enacted not only for the obvious purpose of encouraging citizens to make contributions to candidates for public office, but also to "compensate" for the fact that contributions to political organizations are not tax deductible as charitable contributions for income tax purposes. See I.R.C. §§ 501, 527 (West 1984). Thus, a contribution must be made to a legitimate political organization in order to qualify as a credit. A charitable organization that incidentally supports a candidate or proposition does not come under the purview of the statute.

Determining whether or not a contribution is made for one of the purposes covered by the statute creates a difficult administrative problem for the Department of Revenue. The purpose of an organization is not always apparent from its name. In addition, it is difficult for the department to identify all the organizations in the state that may be organized for the purposes listed in AS 43.20.013(a). This task, in order to be done accurately and efficiently, will probably require additional personnel, and assistance from the Division of Elections and the Alaska Public Offices Commission (APOC).

The other problem created for the department is a public relations one. An organization, in order to encourage contributions, may "advertise" to the public that it qualifies under AS 43.20.013(a) when in fact it does not. Based on a representation of this kind, the contributor will apply to the department for a refund, which may be denied because the contribution was not earmarked exclusively for one of the purposes listed in AS 43.20.013(a). Persons denied a refund are more likely to voice their dissatisfaction with department personnel than with employees of the organization who made the erroneous representation.

One way of easing the administrative burden on the department may be to amend the current regulation, 15 AAC 20.042, which requires, in effect, that a group supporting or opposing a ballot proposition must be registered with the Alaska Public Offices Commission in order to qualify. This registration requirement could be extended to cover most candidates and groups, except those that are not otherwise required to register with APOC, such as groups supporting candidates for national offices. For those organizations that are required to register, the use of registration as a qualifier would probably help to expedite the processing of applications for refunds.

We hope this provides sufficient information for concluding your audit. If you wish further information, please contact us.

PURPOSE OF THE REPORT

In accordance with Title 24 of the Alaska Statutes, a follow-up examination of the Department of Administration, Division of Equal Employment Opportunity was conducted to determine to what extent our prior audit recommendations (made in an April 29, 1983, report) have been implemented.

The Division of Equal Employment Opportunity (DEEO) is responsible for carrying out the State's equal employment opportunity pclicy in the Executive Branch of the State of Alaska.

Specific duties of the agency include the development of affirmative action plans for each Executive Branch department. The agency serves as a coordinator and provider of technical assistance to each department in the implementation of their respective affirmative action plans. In addition to these duties, DEEO is responsible for representing the Executive Branch in discrimination complaints brought by outside agencies and for development of an internal discrimination complaint resolution process within the Executive Branch.

Besides the specific duties listed above, DEEO has become an informal referral source for the State and private sector on the current status of Federal equal employment laws and regulations and their interpretation by the courts. The agency has developed and implemented management information systems to provide better analysis of the applicant screening process and the current utilization of Federally designated "protected classes" employed by the State.

PRIOR AUDIT RECOMMENDATIONS

Prior Audit Recommendation No. 1

The Department of Administration (DOA), Division of Equal Employment Opportunity (DEEO) needs more support and authority from the Governor to increase its effectiveness.

In the prior Audit, we concluded that DEEO had not effectively developed, coordinated, or monitored a comprehensive, widely supported policy of equal opportunity and non-discrimination in the Executive Branch's employment decisions, programs, and activities. DEEO's ineffectiveness was attributed, in large part, to a lack of centralized executive support. Since DEEO has no specific statutory responsibility, the Division derives what authority and responsibilities it has from executive order. Consequently, the effectiveness of the Division depends on the nature and extent of the Governor's leadership.

Legislative Audit's Current Position

The Governor has provided stronger support for DEEO's equal employment opportunity and affirmative action programs. This support, along with that of the Legislature, is evidenced through an increased budget appropriation for Fiscal Year 1985 (See Appendix A). In addition, the Governor's support has been demonstrated through increased attention given to Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) matters in the Governor's cabinet meetings and by increased EEO activity within the Department of Administration. This increased support has allowed DEEO to improve its effectiveness. As shown by Appendix B, significant gains in minority employment were made during the last half of Fiscal Year 1984.

Prior Audit Recommendation No. 2

DEEO should improve affirmative action plan procedures and elicit more cooperation from Executive Branch departments.

The primary analytical tool for identifying problems and promoting EEO is the departmental Affirmative Action Plan (AAP). The method of developing affirmative action goals and time tables contained in the AAP has proven cumbersome. Many departments contacted had expressed frustration with the AAP preparation process.

Legislative Audit's Current Position

For Fiscal Year 1984, no departmental AAPs were prepared. Analytical employment data, required as a part of affirmative action hiring, was provided by the newly implemented data processing "Affirmative Action Internal Audit and Reporting System" (AIRS). Prior to Fiscal Year 1984, this information was developed through time-consuming hand calculations made by individual departments as a part of their AAP. In addition to eliminating some of the burdensome calculations required in the preparation of past AAPs, AIRS also provides a more accurate and timely source of job class minority/female availability information. Although AIRS has replaced AAPs as the source of affirmative action hiring analytical data, AAPs are necessary to establish policies and objectives by which the State's affirmative action progress can be measured. Beginning Calendar Year 1985, DEEO plans to implement a statewide AAP covering all State departments.

Prior Audit Recommendation No. 3

DOA should assume central administrative control over the use and release of expanded certification registers (ECRs).

The 1981 affirmative action report, prepared by DEEO, stated that the State had adopted an expanded certification policy. Under this policy, departments who have identified an "underutilization" of women/minorities in a particular job class may hire for positions in that class from an "expanded" register. That is, under the "5 plus 5" system, they can consider not only the top five candidates on the certified register; but, in addition, they can also consider up to the top five women and/or minorities for an under-utilized position.

Executive Branch departments had largely ignored the use of ECRs. Departments cited the time-consuming, hand-generated informational requirements associated with ECR use, the restriction that ECRs were available only to departments that had submitted AAPs, and the lack of familiarity with ECRs by those responsible for hiring, as impediments to their effective use.

Legislative Audit's Current Position

DEEO has increased administrative control over and simplified the use of ECRs. At the beginning of Fiscal Year 1984, ECR informational requirements no longer required time-consuming calculations. With the implementation of AIRS (see Prior Audit Recommendation No. 2 discussion), ECR use was available to all Executive Branch departments regardless of whether the department submitted an AAP.

However, effective April 1983, the DOA, Division of Personnel revised the "5 plus 5" procedure of considering applicants. The revised procedure required the consideration of all applicants within the top five rankings. Previous to this revision, only the top five ranked individuals were considered. A result of the revised procedures was to require ECR users to consider large numbers of applicants. Although Fiscal Year 1984 showed an increased hiring of minorities (see Appendix B), ECRs were not consistently used during this time period. Personnel officers to whom we spoke complained that the "5 plus 5" ECR system required the consideration of more people than resources would permit.

In late June of 1984, DEEO, in cooperation with the Division of Personnel and the Personnel Council (composed of departmental personnel officers), devised and implemented a simplified expanded certification system. This system requires expanded consideration of only a single member of each under-utilized group for a given job class.

Under the new expanded certification system, it remains up to each departmental personnel officer to notify hiring supervisors when expanded certifications should be used. DEEO does not monitor whether expanded certifications are used. Additionally, in instances in which expanded certifications are used but considered minorities/females are not hired, DEEO does not require explanatory documentation as to why the minority and/or female was not hired.

To provide information through which the effectiveness of expanded certification can be evaluated, DEEO needs to require agencies to document whether hirings made into under-utilized job classes were done using expanded certifications. Such information should be retained by the agency for a reasonable period of time to demonstrate why a member of the under-utilized race and/or sex was, or was not, hired.

Prior Audit Recommendation No. 4

DEEO should develop and use data that analyzes the availability of women and minorities in a more consistent and useful manner.

DEEO's 1981 Annual Affirmative Action Report for the State of Alaska's Executive Branch (the most recent report published) provided extensive data on the number of women and minority workers employed in various segments of the Executive Branch workforce. However, the report did not speak to the availability of women and minorities in the State with the qualifications needed for various State positions. In addition, DEEO's application and determination of availability had been arbitrary, unsubstantiated, and inconsistent. Availability is a key factor in determining if women and minorities are under-utilized (see Note 1).

Legislative Audit's Current Position

Publication of a 1983 DEEO State Annual Report did not take place because there were no 1983 AAPs on which to report (see Recommendation No. 2 discussion). However, DEEO's implementation of AIRS provides an analytical and consistent method of determining availability. During Fiscal Year 1984, AIRS availability data base was taken from the 1980 census figures supplied by the U.S. Department of Commerce. This information, which was available to department personnel officers through "on-line" computer terminals, was used to determine when ECRs should be used.

For Fiscal Year 1985, the AIRS data base was upgraded using a combination of State applicant flow information, University of Alaska availability figures, and the 1980 census figures supplied by the U.S. Department of Commerce. To make AIRS availability data more convenient and simpler for personnel officers to use, DEEO began preparing quarterly reports showing under-utilized job groups (see Appendix C). Executive Branch personnel officers, who receive these quarterly reports, will no longer require computer terminal access to AIRS.

A weakness of the AIRS system is that it does not monitor employee transfers, promotions, or terminations. Chapter 41, Part 60-2 of the Code of Federal Regulations (which regulates all non-construction Government contractors having fifty or more employees) requires internal audit and reporting systems to include this function as a means of measuring the effectiveness of the total affirmative action program. In order to insure that nondiscriminatory policy is carried out, DEEO needs to develop a system capable of monitoring these activities.

Prior Audit Recommendation No. 5

DEEO should establish a comprehensive internal complaint procedure to be utilized by all Executive Branch departments.

Administrative Order No. 59 gave the responsibility to DEEO to establish a uniform complaint procedure which would be available to all persons subject to the order. DEEO had not established a uniform internal complaint procedure.

Legislative Audit's Current Position

Administrative Order No. 75, which included an internal discrimination complaint procedure, replaced Administrative Order No. 59 as DEEO's authoritative mandate. DEEO has handled ten internal discrimination complaints since the current Administrative Order's April 1983 effective date. DEEO plans to improve the procedure outlined in Administrative Order No. 75 in order to provide Executive Branch departments and employees with a more effective means of filing internal discrimination complaints. Appendix E summarizes complaints handled by DEEO which originated from external anti-discrimination agencies, as well as those brought internally to DEEO.

NOTES TO THE APPENDIXES

Note 1 - Definition of under-utilization and factors to be considered when making an analysis of utilization

Chapter 41, part 60-2.11 of the Code of Federal Regulations (which regulates all non-construction Government contractors having 50 or more employees) defines under-utilization "as having fewer minorities or women in a particular job group than would reasonably be expected by their availability." The Code further states that in making a separate utilization analysis of minorities and females, the following factors should be considered:

1. The size of the minority and female unemployment force in labor area surrounding the facility;

2. The minority population of the labor area surrounding the facility;

3. The percentage of the minority and female workforce as compared with the total workforce in the immediate labor area;

4. The general availability of minorities and women having requisite skills in the immediate labor area;

5. The availability of minorities and women having requisite skills in an area in which the employer can reasonably recruit;

6. The availability of promotable and transferable minorities and women within the employer's organization.

7. The availability of women seeking employment in the labor or recruitment area of the employer.

8. The existence of training institutions capable of training persons in the requisite skills; and

9. The degree of training which the employer is reasonably able to undertake as a means of making all job classes available to minorities and women.

Note 2 - Methodology used by DEEO to compute workforce under-utilization report (Appendix C)

The Appendix C quarterly under-utilization report was prepared by DEEO to be used in determining under-utilized Executive Branch departmental job groups (see Recommendation No. 4 discussion). The number of employees under-utilized (see Note 1) per job group was determined by the following formula: $(P \times T) - E = U$ where,

P = Percentage of job group workforce availability by race/sex/ethnic category

T = Total Executive Branch job group employment

E = Executive Branch employment in job group race/sex/ethnic category

U = Number of employees under-utilized in job group by race/sex/ethnic category.

The availability figures for race/sex/ethnic categories per job group were calculated by DEEO. The Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs approved the factor analysis approach used by DEEO in computing these figures as being a reasonable methodology for determining Executive Branch employment availability. To determine the availability of the members of race/sex/ethnic categories, DEEO applied judgemental weighting to the following factors:

1. State labor force statistics from the 1980 census conducted by the U.S. Department of Commerce (45-60% weighting applied to availability calculation).

2. State of Alaska population figures from the 1980 census conducted by the U.S. Department of Commerce (10-30% weighting applied to availability calculation).

3. Executive branch applicant flow data (10-45% weighting applied to availability calculation).

4. University of Alaska availability data (10-25% weighting applied to availability calculation where data usable).

Note 3 - Fiscal Year 1985 DEEO budget

Chapter 122 of the 1984 Session Laws of Alaska designated $150,000 of the $670,500 Fiscal Year 1985 budget to be granted to the Tlingit Haida Central Council for a minority recruitment project.

Note 4 - Composition of permanent full-time employee workforce

The permanent full-time employee workforce consists of those permanent employees and probationary employees in permanent positions covered under the General Government, Supervisory, Public Safety Employees Association, Excluded from Bargaining, and Confidential Bargaining Units.

Note 5 - Availability of permanent full-time employee workforce figures

Permanent full-time employee workforce employment figures provided by DEEO were available for the period November 1983 through June 1984. For this reason, the graphs shown on Appendix B are limited to this time period.

ACTION NARRATIVE

TAPE #21, SIDE ONE Recording

Number 000 Meeting called to order at 3:05 p.m. Representatives Boucher and Miller were absent. Representative Hurley brought HB 147 before the committee for consideration.

Number 050 Representative Boucher arrived at 3:10 p.m.

Number 052 The committee took an at ease at 3:12 p.m.

Number 055 The committee resumed its meeting at 3:15 p.m. Representative Hurley read the transmittal letter from the Governor.

Number 106 Ron Williams, Grand President of the Alaska Native Brotherhood, testified in support of the bill. He read a resolution from the Alaska Native Sisterhood and Brotherhood passed at their October convention supporting legislation creating a Division of Equal Employment Opportunity in the Department of Administration. He also stated that the state may be acting unconstitutionally by not giving Alaska Natives equal opportunity for employment.

Number 149 Mr. Williams commented on the current status of minority employment.

Number 201 Mr. Williams suggested that an amendment should be adopted which expands the responsibilities of the division to identify the barriers which prohibit the state from hiring Alaskan natives.

Number 226 Mr Williams stated that the section addressing an affirmative action plan does not give the division any real authority to evaluate the plan and recommend implementation. Committee discussion on current grievance process, qualification enhancement programs and the effectiveness of the Human Rights Commission.

Number 440 Michael McKennett, Director of the Division of the Equal Employment Opportunity testified in favor of the legislation and explained that the bill is necessary in order to provide statutory authority and responsibility in order to increase the division's effectiveness. He pointed out that the bill does not create a new agency it only breathes statutory life into an existing agency. He stated that the bill has a zero fiscal note attached since the division will not require any more staff to operate under statute than it currently does under administrative order.

Number 551 Committee discussion on the classification of minorities, protected classes and affected classes. Mr. McKennett provided a definition of individuals included in protected classes.

Number 649 Representative Boucher expressed concern that there was a zero fiscal note and that the bill would only be changing the status of the division and not increasing its activity.

Number 670 Representative Hurley pointed out that without HB 147, the division must be reestablished by each governor and that this bill provides for its institution by extending the division statutory authority and responsibilities.

CHANGE TAPE #21, SIDE TWO

Number 021 Mr. McKennett stated that there would be no change in the status of employees.

Number 028 Representative Jenkins asked whether the state would be in violation of federal laws if a future governor were to do away with the division.

Number 030 Mr. McKennett replied that technically the state would not be in violation of federal law but that a system would have to be established to meet affirmative action reporting requirements as well as complaints requirements.

Number 088 Committee discussion on available recourse procedure in filing discrimination complaints.

Number 164 Representative Boucher asked whether or not this bill would assist in improving the effectiveness of the Human Rights Commission.

Number 214 Mr. McKennett stated that it would because the division provides the technical expertise to individual departments to deal with complaints. He stated that the division records and tracks complaints so that it can measure the effectiveness of its program in heading off complaints before they reach the public hearing process.

Number 247 Mr. Earl Ford of the Juneau United Black Community testified in support of HB 147 and stated that UBC has visited several agencies on discrimination cases which had advanced because administrators did not know how to adequately address them. He explained that members in UBC have found it difficult to know who to go to and that HB 147 provides a coordinating entity.

Number 333 Mr. Ford expressed that UBC would like to see some "teeth" in the bill. He suggested that the division's monitoring and compliance role be defined and recommended that the duties of the division listed in the bill action in monitoring compliance. He also suggested that the division have the authority to train and monitor the effectiveness of the program in department recruitment efforts. He recommended that the bill mandate training for supervisors and administrators.

Number 362 Representative Hurley stated that from the information received in today's hearing on the bill, that there was a need to consider strengthening it before moving it along.

Number 374 Representative Boucher expressed concern that the bill would only be cosmetic if it only had a zero fiscal note. He stated that the idea was good but was concerned that it was not realistic without more money.

Representative Hurley pointed out that all state agencies have an obligation under the law to provide for equal opportunity and stated that the division exists for the purposes of monitoring agencies to ensure that affirmative action is being enforced. She explained that more people were not needed to accomplish the job but rather it is a matter of getting the people in the deparments doing the jobs already to be aware. She stated that each department has a personnel officer and is supposed to have an affirmative action officer and that they may not being doing their jobs if there is no system in place. She suggested that there was no need to add dollars to the bill but rather there was a need to strengthen the bill to ensure compliance.

Number 494

Representative Hurley brought HB 132 before the committee for consideration. Representative Szymanski, sponsor of the bill, spoke in its support and explained that the bill would not affect current employees. He stated that the bill would establish an upper limit for salary compensation and define base salary. He introduced the legislation for the purposes of establishing state policy on state employee salaries.

Number 557

Committee discussion on the number of exempt positions this bill would affect and the

to order at 3:07 p.m. and brought HCR 13 and 14 before the committee for its consideration.

Number 020 Representative Grussendorf testified in support of the legislation and explained that the Girl and Boy State programs are sponsored by the American Legion which requires the passage of legislative resolutions in their by-laws.

Number 073 Representative Sato arrived at 3:10 p.m.

Number 081 Representative Miller moved that the resolutions be passed out of committee with a do pass unanimous approval. There being no objection it was so moved.

Number 112 Representative Hurley brought HB 147 before the committee for consideration and noted the presence of Commissioner Rudd. Representative Hurley explained that there was a proposed committee substitute which was the result of testimony and the committee's desire to strengthen the bill.

Representative Hurley briefly explained the changes including the title, repositioning of the Affirmative Action Plan provisions and substantial changes in the powers and duties section. Additionally, She noted that the CS provides for compliance with the Affirmative Action Plan.

Representative Hurley commented that Representative Boucher and herself had been supportive of this strengthening measure.

Number 181 Representative Hurley invited Ms. Terry Cramer, drafter of the legislation, to present a section by section analysis of the proposed committee substitute. Ms. Cramer addressed the committee.

Number 251 Representative Miller expressed concern that the section which enables the Division to review collective bargaining agreements would not be as effective as it could be since it would be too late to influence equal employment opportunity. He explained that once an agreement reached the collective bargaining stage that nothing was really going to change.

Number 270 Ms. Cramer explained that the language has been taken from an Administrative Order.

Number 280 Representative Hurley stated that she believed the intent of the section was to review the agreements and make recommendations for the next negotiations. Ms. Cramer continued presenting a sectional analysis of the committee substitute.

Number 327 Representative Navarre commented on the annual report and suggested that a bi- annual report be required. Committee discussion followed.

Number 462 Ms. Cramer completed her presentation and Representative Hurley invited Commissioner Rudd to testify.

Number 474 Ms. Lisa Rudd Commissioner of Administration stated that she had a personal interest in seeing the bill passed and pointed out that she had sponsored similar legislation when she was a member of the legislature. She explained that Governor Sheffield supports establishing the

Division of Equal Employment Opportunity in statute. Commissioner Rudd proposed the that subsections 4, 5, and 8 under the powers and duties provision be reordered so that they would appear as subsections 1, 2, and 3. Commissioner Rudd stated that the committee substitute places more emphasis on bureaucracy than on action than is desirable. She noted that the immediated calling of the affirmative action plan in the first section illustrates this. She explained that an affirmative action plan is only a tool for the real job which is to get people on the job. She suggested that the emphasis in the bill be shifted to reflect that the Divison of Equal Employment Opportunity's prime responsibility is to ensure that minorities and women get jobs in state government. Commissioner Rudd agreed with Representative Millers concern on collective bargaining. She also suggested that the Division of Equal

Employment Opportunity should not be given formal investigative powers as it may take away from its recruitment and training responsibilities. She noted that the Human Rights Commission already has enforcement powers.

Number 600 Representative Hurley stated that she did not think the bill provided for a full blown investigation. She pointed out the case overload in the Human Rights Commission. Commissioner Rudd replied.

Number 617 Representative Hurley suggested process could be clarified by regulation.

Number 632 Commissioner Rudd expressed opposition to the words "impartial investigation" and suggested it be replaced by "receive complaints."

Number 647 Commissioner Rudd stated that she was very pleased with the bill and the support it had got from the committee and staff.

Number 676 Mr. Earl Ford, representative of the United Black Community expressed support for the committee substitute bill and urged its passage.

Number 726 Mr. Ford testified that he supported wording in the bill which would enable the Division of Equal Employment Opportunity to informally resolve complaints and agreed with Representative Hurley that the process could be established through regulation.

Number 760 Mr. Bob Dawkins of Minority Business Task Force supported the inclusion of some investigative power in the powers and duties of the Division of Equal Employment Opportunity.

Number 768 Representative Boucher expressed concern about the potential for duplication of effort. Committee discussion followed.

Number 840 Representative Boucher stated he would like to see a work session to resolve the two areas of concern.

Number 846 Representative Hurley explained that the committee substitute was a result of several days of participation by Alaska Native Brotherhood, the United Black Community, the Division of Equal Employment Opportunity, Ed Thomas and committee staff at the direction of the committee and that work would be continued on the bill.

Number 882 Mr. Flor Pax, Director of the Filipino Community, testified in support of the bill. He agreed with Representative Miller that the collective bargaining process should include participation by the Division of Equal Employment Opportunity before an agreement is reached. He also expressed concern that a formal complaint resolution process could... further contribute to the complainant's frustration should his or her grievance not be resolved and the complainant would have to start all over through formal channels. He was not supportive of an impartial investigation unless the Division of Equal Employment Opportunity could turnover documents or testimony to the superior court or the Human Rights Commission at the consent of the complainant. Mr. Pax concluded by commending the Division of Equal Employment Opportunity for doing a wonderful job.

CHANGE TAPE #43, SIDE TWO

Number 357 Representative Hurley thanked Mr. Pax and agreed that more work had to be done on that particular section. Committee discussion followed.

Number 424 Mr. Ron Williams, Alaska Native Brotherhood, spoke in favor of the legislation and noted that his concerns had been addressed in the committee substitute. He stated that he agreed with the committee substitute wording regarding collective bargaining agreements and suggested that the Division of Equal Employment Opportunity be given the power to investigate and resolve complaints.

Number 591 Representative Hurley noted that the committee had receive a call from Janet Bradley, Executive Director of the Human Rights Commission who indicated indicated that the Commission was concerned that the committee substitute contained the possibility of the duplication of responsibility between the division and the commission.

Number 617 Mr. Barry Best testified in support of the bill and urged its passage. He commented on the collective bargaining section and stated that the Division of Equal Employment Opportunity input should be on the front end of the process. He pointed out that some of the contracts are for 3 years which was a substantial time to live with insufficiency. He questioned the necessity of investigative powers and suggested that that role was better left to the Human Rights Commission. He expressed concern that time spent towards resolving complaints would take resources way from getting people hired.

Number 708 Senator Fischer former chair of the Senate State Affairs Committee urged passage of the bill.

Number 762 Representative Hurley stated that HB 147 would be held over till Friday. She announced that HB 228 would be held over till Friday.

Number 775 Senator Fischer, prime sponsor of SB 18, spoke in favor of the bill.

Number 795 Representative Miller noted that October 8th was former Governor Bill Egan's birthday.

Number 801 Representative Boucher moved that SB 18 move out of committee with a a do pass recommendation and asked unanimous consent. It was so moved.

The meeting adjourned at 4:40 p.m.

END OF DOCUMENT

Number 187 Representative Navarre moved to adopt CSHB 147(SA).

Number 190 Representative Hurley asked for objections to adoption of the bill. No objections were heard. CSHB 147(SA) was moved out of committee with individual recommendations.

DATE: February 19, 1985

TELEPHONE NO: 465-2910

SUBJECT: HB 180

FROM:
Richard B. Engen, Director
Div. of State Libraries & Museums

As per your request, following yesterday's hearing on HB 180 which brought out a potential concern about this bill's fiscal impact on smaller libraries, the State Library conducted a limited telephone survey. The concensus of the librarians contacted was that the confidentiality requirement would not have a significant fiscal impact, unless very fast implementation/change were required under the law. Remarks included:

"No problem...it involves time not money"
"Just another detail to worry about"
can handle "as long as we have a grace period"
"could be implemented without too much of a hassle"
"might need a little time...agree with law--can't let day to day problems get in the way"
"it would be nice to have an automated circulation system"

Several libraries contacted already used a system that does not have borrower's names written on book cards. These included maintaining registers of books borrowed, patron registration numbers, mechanical book chargers (numerical); and attaching book cards to a throw away patron name card. One point emphasized was need for training and assistance in meeting the requirements of the law and alternatives for charge out systems. This is a part of the on-going State Library service plan.

School and/or Public Librarians were contacted in Nome, Savoonga, Unalakleet, Seward, Lake & Peninsula School District, Ketchikan, Haines, Juneau school libraries, Centralized Correspondence Study, Wrangell, Sutton and Petersburg.

MEMORANDUM State of Alaska

Commissioner
Department of Education

DATE: July 13, 1984

FILE NO: 166-255-84 20

TELEPHONE NO: 276-3550

FROM: Norman C. Gorsuch
Attorney General

SUBJECT: Confidentiality of Library Use Records

By: Jan Hart DeYoung
Assistant Attorney General

You inquired whether the State of Alaska has any laws addressing the confidentiality of state library records. You also asked whether any state law would prohibit the use of the following statement on the patron application form used by Library Services for the Blind and Physically Handicapped:

> Records relating to recipients of Library of Congress reading material are confidential.

A review of the regulations and statutes disclosed no law specifically addressing this subject. However, AS 09.25.110-.120, Alaska's Freedom of Information Act, may require disclosure of the information you seek to protect.

By enacting AS 09.25.110, Alaska has adopted a policy of open access to state records. AS 09.25.110 provides:

> Unless specifically provided otherwise, the books, records, papers, files, accounts, writings, and transactions of all agencies and departments are public records and are open to inspection by the public under reasonable rules during regular office hours. The public officer having the custody of public records shall give on request and payment of costs a certified copy of the public record.

Exceptions to this right of access are few and must be expressed specifically in the law. For example, AS 09.25.120 states, in part:

> Every person has a right to inspect a public writing or record in the state, including public writings and records in recorders' offices except (1) records of vital statistics and adoption proceedings which shall be treated in the manner required by AS 18.50; (2) records pertaining to juveniles; (3) medical and related public health > records; (4) records required to be kept confidential by a federal law or regulation or by state law. Every public officer having the custody of records not included in the exceptions shall permit the inspection, and give on demand and payment of the legal fees therefore a certified copy of the writing or record . . . .

The only exception which may apply here is (4), "records required to be kept confidential by a federal law or regulation or by state law." The Library of Congress apparently endorses a rule of confidentiality for users of Library of Congress materials but leaves the issue of confidentiality to the states to resolve under state law. If federal regulation provided that library use records be kept confidential, those records would be protected under AS 09.25.120(4).

As previously stated, no state statute addresses the confidentiality of library records. The only state law which might allow the Department to protect these records from release to the public is the constitutional right to privacy in the Alaska Constitution, which states: "The right of the people to privacy is recognized and shall not be infringed." Alaska Const. Art. I, § 22. The constitutional right to privacy is not absolute. When confronted with a question whether information is protected under the right to privacy, courts engage in a balancing process, weighing the sensitivity of the information sought to be disclosed against the interest of public disclosure. See City of Kenai v. Kenai Peninsula Newspapers, Inc., 642 P.2d 1316, 1323 (1982).

Tension is inherent in the policy of open access to state records, on the one hand, and the right of privacy, on the other. We have previously stated that the Freedom of Information Act was designed to encourage informed participation of citizens in the process of government, to insure government's accountability, and to increase public confidence in the workings of the political system. It was not intended that the legislation be used as a tool to pry into the private lives of citizens. Thus, we concluded that "any analysis of the extent to which the public may have access to government records, therefore, must necessarily proceed from the hypothesis that the information revealed to the public will assist in accomplishing the legislature's general policy goal. Thus, mechanical application of the literal language in AS 09.25.110 to all requests for public disclosure is inappropriate." 1982 Inf. Op. Att'y Gen. 1 (Feb. 5; J66-314-82) (footnote omitted).

Because the right to privacy is not absolute, you cannot guarantee to a user that library records will remain confidential. At the same time, the Freedom of Information Act will not automatically require that such records be disclosed upon a request. Each request will have to be examined on its peculiar facts before it can be determined whether the records should be released. The following guidelines should apply.

First, it must be determined whether the information requested is of the type that should be protected by the right of privacy. In other words, is the information requested sensitive. Falcon v. Alaska Public Offices Commission, 570 P.2d 469, 479 (Alaska 1977). Certain medical information, financial records, and a person's age previously have been found sufficiently sensitive to be protected from disclosure. Id; 1982 Inf. Op. Att'y Gen. (May 25; J66-513-82); 1982 Inf. Op. Att'y Gen. (Feb. 5). Depending upon the request, disclosure of library use records could reveal the fact that one is blind or physically handicapped and the library or reading material one has consulted. It is our opinion that both of these facts are sufficiently sensitive to be protected by the right to privacy. An individual's physical ills and disabilities are among the most sensitive of personal and psychological sensibilities. See Falcon, 570 P.2d at 478, quoting Rowe v. Ingraham, 403 F.Supp. 931, 937 (S.D.N.Y. 1975) (reviewing constitutionality of legislation requiring disclosure of patients receiving prescriptions for particular drugs). We also believe that disclosing the library materials used by a person would violate this right to privacy. Knowing what a person reads could reveal the most intimate and personal facts about that person. The privacy of ones thoughts should be basic to individual liberty. As the Alaska Supreme Court recently stated, "Article I, section 22 fosters and protects those values and characteristics typical of and necessary for a free society. Some of these are the sharing of thoughts and ideas, personal trust between individuals, free expression, and individuality." City and Borough of Juneau v. Quinto, ___ P.2d ___, Op. no. 2841 at 6 (June 29, 1984) (criminal case). We do not believe those privacy interests can be adequately protected by advising a library patron in advance that use records are public documents. Such a notice could work a subtle form of censorship, influencing the selection of books or library materials.

Second, the public's interest in the information should be examined. Possessing information on who has used certain library materials, for example, could enable the possessor to target certain individuals for harassment. Such use of public records is a clear abuse of AS 09.25.110. It does not further the statute's purpose of opening the conduct of government business to public scrutiny. A legitimate interest, however, would be in opening the administration of the library to public view. That interest would be served by providing the records but deleting all personal references.

In sum, absent special circumstances, we find the balance weighs against disclosure of the names of persons using the library. Disclosing use records, while deleting any references which would allow the library patron to be identified, should, in most cases, satisfy the policies underlying the Freedom of Information Act without interfering with privacy interests. There may, however, be some instances in which the release of names is necessary to accomplish an important public interest. Such requests should be reviewed on a case by case basis with advice from the Department of Law.

You stated in your letter that 21 states have statutes addressing the confidentiality of library use records. You may wish to approach the legislature and request legislation specifically addressing this issue. In the meantime, you cannot provide any absolute assurance that user records will be kept confidential. If library records are requested under AS 09.25.110-.120, I recommend that you respond by providing the records but deleting any personal references. If that response is unsatisfactory, you should refer the matter to the Department of Law to determine whether the interest in disclosure outweighs the privacy interests involved.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE February 8, 1985

For more information, contact: Johnny Ellis 465-3718

House Majority Leader Don Clocksin, D-Anchorage, today introduced House Bill 180, which would protect the privacy of citizens when they check out materials from Alaska's public libraries. Currently, twenty-three other states have passed similar legislation. The American Library Association and the Alaska Library Association strongly support confidentiality of library records to protect individual privacy.

According to Representative Clocksin, the impetus for his legislation was the increasing number of requests nationwide being made of libraries for lists of the people who had checked out certain library materials. The American Library Association has documented cases in which information was requested for purposes other than legitimate police investigations.

Clocksin pointed out that the Alaska Constitution explicitly guarantees an individual's right to privacy. "Alaska's Freedom of Information Act was designed to inform the public and ensure the accountability of government, and not to be used as a tool to violate the privacy of individual Alaskans." Circulation records kept by public libraries are not public records in the general sense but are similar to medical records kept by public hospitals. "These records are strictly between the institution and the individual," Clocksin said.

A July 1984 Attorney General's opinion said no state law protects library circulation records, although the constitutional right of privacy reflects a policy that they should not be disclosed.

"By filing this bill, I hope to implement that policy," Clocksin stated. "I don't feel we should rely on a court to rule favorably. Confidentiality of these records should be explicitly protected in the statutes."

The Washington Post

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

The Rise in Oil Imports

OIL IMPORTS into the United States hit a peak in 1977, when they were nearly half of all the oil that the country consumed. The following year they started to fall as the Alaskan oil pipeline came into full operation. Then came the Iranian revolution, a huge jump in prices and two recessions. Oil consumption and imports fell for five-and-a-half years. But late last summer the pattern reversed itself. The country's dependence on foreign oil is now climbing again.

For the present, there is no great danger. Oil markets are slack and—unless the war between Iran and Iraq suddenly spreads—there is no immediate prospect of shortage or rising prices. But the oil is expensive and adds to a trade deficit already a drag on economic expansion. For the longer future, a rising trend means only trouble.

Oil imports are now up quite sharply, because oil use is up. In January 1983, Americans were burning oil at a rate of 14.8 million barrels a day. Last month the rate was over 17 million barrels a day. The reasons aren't very surprising. It's been very cold, and almost half of that increase was fuel oil. The economic recovery is well under way, and people are driving more. Industrial production is up, which means that industrial fuel needs are also up—although not much. The industrial engineers are the champions among energy conservationists.

It's important to recognize the extraordinary gains in conservation since oil prices started to rise in 1973. American energy consumption is significantly lower now than it was then—although the gross national product has risen almost one-fourth, the population is up by 23 million people and there are some 20 million more cars on the road. But the impact of rapid growth falls most heavily on oil imports, and letting them run up will generate—as Americans have had ample opportunity to see since 1973—its own kind of disaster.

It's time to improve the incentives for conservation. The most conspicuous opportunities, as usual, lie in the use of gasoline. The price of gasoline has been falling for three years now and, adjusted for inflation, is not much higher than it was in 1974. People seem to be moving back to big cars. That swing, if it continues, will create havoc in an automobile industry that has been pushed hard by public policy to build mostly small cars.

How about seizing this moment of declining gas prices to impose a slowly but steadily rising tax on gasoline? Each nickel per gallon added to the gas tax would not only help hold down oil imports but would bring in $5 billion a year. That's a serious contribution to reducing the deficit—if anybody over at the White House is seriously interested in reducing the deficit.

Who Read That Book?

IF YOU GO to the public library and take out a book on how to deal with head lice, improve your sex life or form a new political party, do you want the whole world to know about it? Shouldn't you be allowed to check out a racy novel or the biography of Karl Marx without having to explain your motives to anyone? The American Library Association thinks so and has taken a strong stand against releasing book circulation records. Twenty-two states, including Maryland and Virginia, have adopted legislation specifically protecting these records, and while there is no such statute in the District, it is the policy of city libraries not to release such records.

Did you even think this was a problem? Well, it is. The executive director of the Moral Majority in the state of Washington asked for the circulation records on a sex education film. Persons claiming to be investigators have sought to obtain information on the reading habits of suspected individuals. And, it should be noted, writers and reporters occasionally find items of interest on these lists. In fact, the ALA says that the only people who consistently oppose library privacy legislation in the states are journalists. It isn't right. In a legitimate criminal investigation—did John Smith, whose wife expired shortly after a beef stroganoff feast, take out that book on poisonous mushrooms?—circulation lists can be obtained with a subpoena. In all other cases, they ought to be considered private.

It will be argued that circulation lists are public records and that they ought to be made available to any interested member of the public. Not so. They are only public in the sense that medical records kept by the city hospital are public because they are created and kept by a public institution. While most data about the operation of a publicly funded service should be available—information about administration, operations and budget, for example—other files, such as health records or income tax returns, are personal and should be protected. An individual's choice of reading material falls into this category. Librarians and state legislatures that have adopted protective policies and laws have correctly drawn the fine line between the public's right to public information and the individual's right to read in peace.

Terror:

It is ... that the last article in The Post's series "The Terror Factor" [omit] piece, Feb. 12] could find no "significant information of Soviet involvement in terrorist enterprises," since an earlier article in the same series noted that in June 1980, two of Abu Nidal's terrorists were released from detention in Bulgaria and their weapons returned to them after intervention by the Bulgarian Embassy in Baghdad. Bulgaria is one of the most submissive satellites of the Soviet Union, and its intervention to release the terrorists might reasonably be taken to indicate Soviet support for terrorism, especially in light of the continuing allegations of a Soviet-Bulgarian role in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II in 1981.

Traveling the Beltway

This is in reply to The Post's front-page article Feb. 14 on trucks causing accidents on the Beltway. I am alive to write this because of the skill and courage of a truck driver who avoided running over me after I was forced to brake sharply on the Beltway.

It happened on the infamous stretch leading to the Cabin John Bridge. The car ahead of me suddenly slowed and turned, without warning; traffic was heavy in all lanes. I avoided hitting him, but behind me was another car and a moving van. With split-second reaction, the trucker, a woman, pulled left onto the snow-covered, steeply sloping median and managed to straighten rig. Without her strength, speed and skill, I think both drivers behind me and I would be dead. The only person injured was the truck driver, who saved us all. She got the only citation issued by the police, and the cause of the accident—the driver making the U-turn—got away.

Not all accidents are the fault of truck drivers.

The confessions of a nicotine eater

By Jody Powell

IT'S NOW BEEN 40 miserable days. That's too early to claim victory, though it is the longest I've ever made it without giving up. And, yes, there has been a bit of backsliding, a cigarette or two on a couple of occasions when I forgot my nicotine gum.

Still, I think I'll make it this time. It's not just the 2,400 cigarettes I would have smoked since the first of the year — 2,400 conscious decisions not to do something that had become as natural as breathing. I think it's because I just don't thi[nk] myself as a smoker any more — tho[ugh] knows, I do think about smoking.

Librarians back bill on privacy

by Beth Cunningham
Times Writer

Alaska librarians, saying a person's reading material is private, gave strong support Tuesday to a proposed state bill that would keep library circulation records confidential.

Open records of what libary patrons check out would have a "chilling effect," and keep some people from reading anything but "innocuous material," said June Pinnell-Stephens, chairman of the Alaska Library Association's Intellectual Freedom committee. "What I read is nobody's business," Pinnell-Stephens said.

Pinnell-Stephens testified during a teleconference hearing with the state House Judiciary Committee on a bill that would protect the names of individuals who checked out any library material — books, records, magazines.

Stephens, speaking from Fairbanks to the House members in Juneau, agreed with seven other librarians or former library workers who all spoke in favor of the bill, which was proposed by Rep. Don Clocksin, D-Anchorage. The committee passed the proposal which now will go on to the House floor for a vote.

Rita Dursi, who represented the Anchorage chapter of the ALA, said libraries now must open records to anyone who demands to see them. "Before, libraries didn't have a legal leg to stand on," Dursi said of a library's right to keep records private.

The only negative testimony came from Cam Carlson, who led "Parents In Action," a citizens' group formed to protest a book on homosexuality available in a Fairbanks public school. Carlson said people found out that she had checked out the book, but it did not bother her. "It just runs off your back" if others find out what you're reading, she said. Carlson said "an aura of suspicion" surrounds the proposed bill.

GROUP TURN

These skiers broke Alaska's group turn record for cross country skis Sunday at Arctic Valley. The old record was seven skiers. The new record was accomplished with 57 people. An attempt to break the world record — 106 people — might be tried in April, says group coordinator Bill Mitchell. Prizes were donated by REI and Arctic Valley Ski Area.

Lights return to hau

Associated Press

Uh-oh, they came back. Those eerie amber lights that dotted the city's skies over the weekend showed up late Monday for an encore.

The lights appeared at about 9 p.m. and seemed to float over west Anchorage. Spectators and officials were at a loss to explain the lights' source.

As many as 12 lights appeared in the western sky. Some glowed alone, while others appeared in crude designs or in straight lines of three to four lights each.

"There were a couple lights, be we couldn't tell what they were," said Roger Carpenter, team supervisor at the Anchorage International Airport Federal Aviation Administration control tower. "We didn't see anything on the tower radar."

Federal officials dismissed the lights th appeared over Anchorage late Sunday as h air balloons, but the head of a balloonis group says he doubted the explanation.

Alaska Air Mushers Association Preside Don Reed said the city's hot air balloonis were at a banquet Sunday when the ligh were reported, and he said "nobody in the right mind" would attempt a night flig without proper gear.

"There is only one balloon in town that equipped for night flying, and there's on one set of lights," he said. "And that set isn even working."

The mysterious lights apparently wer visible over the city between 10:30 p.m. an 11 p.m. on Sunday. They were reported to th FAA's Air Route Traffic Control Tower a "foreign" objects, agency spokesman Pa

Confidentiality bill draws key support

Committee chairman Mike Miller, D-Juneau, said the confidentiality bill, or "personal privacy," was entirely separate from any censorship or book-banning issue. Miller, a co-sponsor of the bill, said groups seeking to remove a book from library shelves still would have the means to do so.

Clocksin said the confidentiality bill was specific enough to exlude only a person's identity from public records, so information such as how many times a book has been taken out or whether a book had been returned still would be available.

Clocksin added two amendments to the original proposed bill. One amendment says that any information that could identify the person — name, social security or address — would be excluded from the libary record. The original bill read that only the name would be excluded.

The bill also was amended to say that law enforcement officials, with a court order, could request information on who checked out materials when it was a matter of public safety.

Clocksin said he doesn't feel the library confidentiality bill hurts the public's right to gain access to informatiuon. He said he feels strongly that public records should remain open.

"I'm probably one of the leading proponents of freedom of information," Clocksin said. "That's one of the reasons why I decided to sponsor this bill. I thought it would make the point more strongly. I feel this (library confidentiality) is a legitimate exception."

Dick Engen, president of Alaska Library Association, said 22 states have enacted similar legislation and that Librarians around the country have been requesting library confidentiality. Clocksin said Alaska librarians requested that the state pass a similar law.

Rescuers recover pilot's body

Associated Press

Homer — A civilian mountaineering rescue team Monday recovered the body of a Peninsula Airways pilot whose plane crashed on the slopes of Mount Veniaminof on the Alaska Peninsula, Alaska State Troopers said.

The Piper Navaho, carrying only the pilot, was reported missing Thursday.

Troopers identified the pilot as Leonard Mack, 39, and said his body was taken off the mountain at about 6 p.m.

The aircraft was reported overdue on a flight from King Salmon to Cold Bay. Its emergency locator led searchers to Mount Veniaminof, an 8,200-foot volcano on the Alaska Peninsula.

'Remembrance of Things Past:' Why should anyone want to?

suzan nightingale

Just when you think there's nothing good left to worry about, government comes along and reminds you that paranoia is your friend. I mean, of all the things I've ever thought to worry about — and, let me tell you, few people worry more extensively or more creatively than I do — fretting about Big Brother and The Library Books never entered my mind.

Oh, I remember being a little nervous when, as a precocious adolescent, I checked out a book of Rex Reed interviews garishly titled, "Conversations in the Raw." I blushed 10 ways to Sunday as the librarian wordlessly took my library card and processed the book — full, I was sure, of harsh judgment. But that was nervousness; this is full blown adult paranoia. Now we learn it apparently takes a special bill to guarantee that what we check out of a library is nobody's business but our own.

Now we find out Rep. Don Clocksin has introduced a bill that would make library check-out records confidential. Apparently last summer in Fairbanks, some folks wanted to know just who was reading those books about homosexuality in the library. I have no idea what conclusions they thought they'd be able to draw from such information, but people are funny like that.

Other people, not surprisingly, apparently thought what they read was nobody's business but their own.

Here, the plot thickens. This being a sunshine state, the official state policy is one of open access to public records. Now, I like this policy. I love this policy. This is a WONDERFUL policy that serves the people of Alaska in a bunch of different ways. If the idea of government is really that we elect representatives because we can't all fit in one room, then it clearly follows that we don't need them deciding what's good for us to know.

But just because people have the right to existing government information doesn't necessarily mean the government should keep records about things just because the technology exists. Criminal records, sure, property information, government loans, campaign contributions — all that affects us in a public way. But reading habits? And not even reading habits but checking-out-book habits. Sheesh. There must be other methods of monitoring book usage.

At least it's not a problem in Anchorage. Our librarians not only don't keep permanent records (once you return a book, the card is chucked as a stringent matter of policy), they support Clocksin's bill because they, better than anyone, know that people check out all sorts of books for all sorts of reasons. You start keeping track of what people read, and pretty soon you've got a bunch of uninformed opinions running around because people are too intimidated to go read up on the controversial stuff.

Then the only defense is to start checking out oddball assortments like "Reggie!" and "Remembrance of Things Past" both at the same time. Throw in a few ringers like, "Garfield Gains Weight" and let the gawkers figure out what you really went in for.

So I guess I like Clocksin's bill, as far as it goes. I like the idea that information is public unless it is specifically exempted, and his bill, by its nature, underlines that policy. And I don't think library records are anyone's business, so I have no qualms with telling people who want to know what I check out to get lost.

But I fear Clocksin's bill falls short of the real mark: Once the book is back on the shelf, why should any library keep a record of who's borrowed that book in the first place? So that if an axe murderer runs down Fourth Avenue we can all run to the library and see if he ever checked out any books featuring ax murderers running down city streets and nail him at the trial? Not once in the nine years that Keith Revelle has been Anchorage's municipal librarian have police ever requested to see library records (which, as I said, is just as well, since they don't keep them here).

It's the record, itself, not just the confidentiality that's at issue. Part of the strength of open records — a real policy of open records in any government — is that only legitimate records will then be kept. To maintain inappropriate records, and then call them confidential, strikes me as only half a solution.

Re: CS HB 186 (Res): Anchorage Coastal Wildlife Refuge

Dear Senator Abood:

The League of Women Voters of Alaska supports establishment of the Anchorage Coastal Wildlife Refuge. We have supported this legislation in the House, and continue to do so in the Senate.

This bill would set aside and protect a unique area that is de facto critical habitat for a large population of water fowl and other wildlife, and which should be preserved in its natural state for the protection of the wildlife and the enjoyment of people who wish to view the wildlife. The availability of such an experience is especially important in a location close to a large population center such as Anchorage, where the experience can be enjoyed by many people, including children and the elderly, and not just those who are able to hike and backpack long distances to remote areas.

Thank you for your considering our views.

Re: Background/Intent of HB 186 - Anchorage Coastal Wildlife Refuge

In 1971 the Alaska State Legislature created Potter Point State Game Refuge (AS 16.20.030 (b)) which extends southeasterly along the coastline of Anchorage from Pt. Campbell to Potter Creek. This easily accessible, urban refuge provides excellent wildlife viewing opportunities for city residents, and it enhances the Anchorage economy through its value as a tourist attraction.

In June 1983, the Municipality of Anchorage (MOA) established the Potter Marsh Task Force to address management problems that were developing both within and around the refuge, and to subsequently make recommendations for action. This legislation is one of the task force's recommendations for improving management of the refuge, and it is supported by the MOA, Alaska Department of Fish and Game (ADF&G), Alaska Department of Natural Resources (DNR), and interested public members.

HB 186 would:

1) Rename the existing Potter Point State Game Refuge the "Anchorage Coastal Wildlife Refuge".

Section 1, AS 16.20.031 (a) would establish the Anchorage Coastal Wildlife Refuge to be managed for the protection of waterfowl, shore birds, salmon, and other fish and wildlife species, and their habitat and for the use and enjoyment of the people of the state. Section 3 repeals AS 16.20.030 (b) which is the existing statute establishing the Potter Point State Game Refuge. This new name more accurately reflects the refuge's location and relation to the city of Anchorage.

2) Provide a precise legal description, in surveyable section lines, of the boundaries of the state-owned land and water included in the refuge.

The 1971 legislation reads, "The following described state-owned land and adjacent state water, excluding existing and applied-for highway, pipelines and railway rights-of-way as of May 20, 1971, are established as the Potter Point State Game Refuge: All land and water south and west of and adjacent to the toe of the bluff which extends from Campbell Point southeasterly to Potter Creek." This language does not define any real or measurable limit as to how far the refuge boundary extends seaward, and the inland boundary is open to wide interpretation. Many times this lack of clarity has resulted in confusion for state agencies, private development interests, and the general public. Therefore HB 186 in Section 1, subsections (1) through (7) describes in detail the legal refuge boundaries.

3) Add additional tidelands and near shore upland to the existing refuge.

The MOA has asked that refuge boundaries be expanded northward from Pt. Campbell to Pt. Woronzof to include municipally owned wetlands within the refuge for management by ADF&G. In 1979, under the Anchorage Coastal Zone Management Plan, these lands were identified as Areas Meriting Special Attention and classified as Preservation Wetlands. Inclusion of these lands within the refuge does not afford them any more protection than they already have under the preservation status, but would facilitate the uniform management of Anchorage's coastal lands. The new boundaries (described in Section 1, subsections (1) through (7)) were cooperatively drawn by the MOA, ADF&G, and DNR.

4) Restrict the state and municipality from acquiring property by eminent domain for inclusion within the refuge.

This would protect private property owners by requiring that property to be included within the Anchorage Coastal Wildlife Refuge be acquired through purchase, exchange, or otherwise (Section 1, (e)), and prohibiting acquisition by eminent domain.

5) Provide for management of the refuge by ADF&G and DNR.

Section 1 (b) provides that, as in the past, both ADF&G and DNR would exercise their respective authorities over the refuge, except as provided in Section 1 (d). Management of the Anchorage Coastal Wildlife Refuge will be consistent with a management plan prepared by the ADF&G under AS 16.20.040 - 16.20.060. The plan will be completed within one year of the effective date of this Act (Section 2).

The management plan prepared by ADF&G shall recommend a corridor for transportation and utilities between Fire Island and the Anchorage mainland (Section 1 (c)). This is to ensure access to the island's landowners for future development and would also be of economic benefit to the MOA.

Hunting, as in the past and in accordance with state regulations, will continue to be allowed on state-owned lands within the refuge west and north of the Alaska Railroad.

While the land and water areas of the Anchorage Coastal Wildlife Refuge are closed to mineral entry under AS 38.05.185 - 38.05.275, the boundary extension north of Pt. Campbell was drawn so that all previously issued offshore mining permits were excluded from within the refuge. Oil and gas leasing will not be affected (Section 1 (f)) by this legislation.

MEMORANDUM

DATE: March 12, 1986

TO: Senate State Affairs Committee

FROM: Representative Pat Pourchot

SUBJECT: Senate Committee Substitute HB 218 (State Affairs), Legislative Ethics

The draft Senate CSHB 218 (State Affairs) contains the amendments the State Affairs Committee adopted Thursday, February 27, 1986. A current sectional analysis is attached for your information.

Final Committee action on one issue was deferred pending additional information. The section of the current ethics law describing when close economic associations with "public officials" must be declared is unclear. "Public official" is defined in the ethics law as those "in another branch, if the public official is required to file a financial disclosure statement under AS 39.50." Many municipal officials are required to file financial disclosure statements but they are not considered "in another branch" of government.

The Ethics Committee has issued an opinion that legislators must disclose close economic associations with any municipal official who is required to file a financial disclosure statement. I have attached a listing of people who are required to file financial disclosure statements, including all municipal officials.

If the intent of the Committee is to exclude municipal officials, then the Committee should adopt the attached amendment #1. This amendment would simply exclude municipal officials, even though they file financial disclosure statements.

If the Committee wishes persons covered by this act to make disclosures of close economic association with all public officials who are required to file financial disclosures, then the Committee should adopt the suggested language on attached amendment #2.

At the February 27 meeting several amendments were adopted to clarify who was covered by the legislative ethics law. Because of these changes it appears the Ombudsman, who is currently covered, has been left out. All legislative agencies are established under AS 24.20 which is cited in the new CS. However, it was pointed out by Legal Services that the Ombudsman is organized under AS 24.55.

In order to include that agency's employees in the definition of "employees of the legislative branch", I would suggest an amendment to add the reference "or AS 24.55" to include the Ombudsman. This is suggested amendment #3.

Thank you for your time and consideration to the above suggestions.

FINANCIAL DISCLOSURES

The following people are required to file a financial disclosure statement under AS 39.50:

-- Judicial officers (all judges)

-- Commissioner, chairman or member of a state commission or board specified in AS 39.50.200(b), (see attached list)

-- Head or deputy head of, or director of a division within, a department in the executive branch

-- Assistant to the governor (includes any executive, legislative, special, administrative or press assistant to the governor, and any person similarly employed)

-- Candidates for state elective office

-- Candidates for elective municipal office

-- Governor

-- Lieutenant governor

-- Members of the legislature

-- Candidates for governor, lt. governor, and legislature

-- Public officials include all of the above listed, excepting candidates, as well as the fiscal analyst of the legislative finance division, the legislative auditor of the legislative audit division, the executive director of Legislative Affairs Agency, the directors of the divisions within the LAA.

-- Municipal officers (includes a borough or city mayor, borough assemblyman, city councilman, school board member, elected utility board member, city or borough manager, members of a city or borough planning or zoning commission within a home rule or general law city of borough, including but not limited to a unified municipality under AS 29.68)

AS 24.55.310 states that the Ombudsman, deputy ombudsman and their professional staff are subject to AS 39.50 and as such are required to file financial disclosure statements.

(4) act as an appeals board, hold hearings at the request of an employer, employee, surviving spouse, or a beneficiary on decisions made by the administrator that relate to the deferred compensation program for state employees, and submit its findings to the administrator;

(5) prescribe the policies for the proper operation of the deferred compensation program for state employees and take other action that it considers necessary to carry out the intent and purpose of the program.

(b) In this section "administrator" means the administrator of the deferred compensation program for state employees. (§ 38 ch 146 SLA 1980)

Sec. 39.45.030. Investment authority. The administrator of the state or political subdivision deferred compensation program is authorized, subject to contracts with individual employees, to invest the funds held under a deferred compensation program in fixed and variable life insurance and annuity contracts. (§ 1 ch 40 SLA 1973)

Sec. 39.45.040. Additional benefits. The deferred compensation program established under this chapter exists and serves in addition to any existing retirement, pension, or benefit system established by the state or its political subdivisions and may not effect a reduction in benefits receivable under an existing system. (§ 1 ch 40 SLA 1973)

Revisor's notes. — In ch. 40, SLA 1973, this section contained the phrase "may not affect a reduction." That appears to involve a typographical error, and "affect" has been changed to "effect" here.

Sec. 39.45.050. Tax deferred investments. The administrator of a deferred compensation program under this chapter shall invest only in contracts that allow for deferment of the state and federal income tax until benefits are receivable under the program and shall make appropriate withholding adjustments in each participating employee's payroll. (§ 1 ch 40 SLA 1973)

Sec. 39.45.060. Definition. In this chapter "employee" means a person, whether appointed, elected or under contract, who provides services for the state or a political subdivision of the state for which compensation is given. (§ 1 ch 40 SLA 1973)

Editor's notes. — Section 2, 1974 Initiative Proposal No. 2, provides: "Severability. If any provision of this chapter or portion of a provision is declared by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, for any cause, such invalid provision or portion of it shall be considered to be nonexistent and the remainder of this chapter shall continue in full force and effect."

Section 3, 1974 Initiative Proposal No. 2, provides: "Repeal of Inconsistent Law. In case of conflict between provisions of this chapter and other provisions contained in the Alaska Statutes, the provisions of this chapter shall take precedence."

Sec. 39.50.010. Findings and purpose. (a) It is declared by the people of the State of Alaska that the purposes of this chapter are:

(1) to discourage public officials from acting upon a private or business interest in the performance of a public duty;

(2) to assure that public officials in their official acts are free of the influence of undisclosed private or business interests;

(3) to develop public confidence in persons seeking or holding public office, enhance the dignity of the offices and make them attractive to citizens who are motivated to public service; and

(4) to develop accountability in government by permitting public access to information necessary to judge the credentials and performance of those who seek and hold public office.

(b) The people of the State of Alaska declare that:

(1) public office is a public trust that should be free from the danger of conflict of interest;

(2) the public has a right to know of the financial and business interests of persons who seek or hold public office;

(3) a compelling state interest requires that candidates for office and office holders disclose their personal and business financial interests;

(4) reasonable disclosure requirements do not violate an individual's right to privacy when the individual seeks or holds public office and a compelling state interest in the disclosure exists; and

(5) reasonable disclosure requirements do not have the effect of chilling the exercise of the right of a qualified person to seek or hold public office. (1974 Initiative Proposal No. 2, § 1)

Sec. 39.50.140. Accepting bribe. [Repealed, § 26 ch 25 SLA 1975.]

Sec. 39.50.145. Participation by municipalities. A municipality may exempt its municipal officers from the requirements of this chapter if a majority of the voters voting on the question at any regular election, as defined by AS 29.78.010(14), or a special municipality-wide election, vote to exempt its municipal officers from the requirements of this chapter. The question of exemption from the requirements of this chapter may be submitted by the city council or borough assembly by ordinance or by initiative ordinance. (§ 16 ch 25 SLA 1975; am § 1 ch 211 SLA 1975)

Sec. 39.50.150. Initial filing date for public officials. (a) Every person who is a public official or a public official-elect on December 11, 1974 shall file the statements required by this chapter before April 15, 1975. However, a public official who resigned from office or whose term of office expired on or after December 11, 1974 but before April 15, 1975, need not file a financial statement.

(b) Municipal officers shall file the statements required by this chapter before November 15, 1975. However, a municipal officer who resigns from office or whose term of office expires before November 15, 1975 need not file a financial statement. (Initiative Proposal No. 2 § 1; § 1 ch 2 SLA 1975; § 17 ch 25 SLA 1975)

MEMORANDUM February 28, 1986

SUBJECT: Legislative standards of conduct
[SCS CSHB 218(State Affairs)]

TO: Representative Pat Pourchot

FROM: Richard A. Bradley
Legislative Counsel

I have prepared the senate committee substitute as suggested by Joyce Thoresen; this was done with Senator Abood's approval.

In the draft that we provided to Senator Abood, the addition to AS 24.60.020(a) as (4) was added though in my judgment it adds nothing to the bill. In my view the bill applies only to legislators in their roles as legislators; what a member of the legislator does in a private role is not reached by this bill. The section creates no problems, however.

I should also note the change to AS 24.60.190(2); all the former material after "AS 24.60" is deleted. If it was the intent of the legislature to reach everyone in the usual legislative agencies, committees, and personal staff, the material consisted of ambiguous language that confused the situation. Since that was my understanding, the change is logical and consistent with legislative intent.

Note, of course, that this bill does not apply to the ombudsman; that agency is organized under AS 24.55, not AS 24.20.

I am preparing two amendments to SCS CSHB 218(SA) for your use.

If I may be of further assistance, please advise.

Legislative Ethics Act Establishes Enforcement Procedures

By Joe La Rocca
Part One

In the wake of criminal proceedings against two state senators several years ago, the Alaska Legislature in 1984 enacted a law setting out guidelines for the ethical conduct of legislators and certain legislative employees, and at the same time established a so-called Select Committee on Legislative Ethics to implement it.

The legislature's action was also taken in reaction to a state attorney general's opinion in 1982 saying that unless law governing unethical conduct by public officials were adopted, state attorneys would begin for the first time to enforce harsh common law sanctions in cases of alleged misconduct by public officials.

The Legislative Ethics Law enacted in 1984 establishes a two-pronged process for enforcing the ethical guidelines it prescribes.

One provision enables persons covered by the act, either legislators or certain legislative employees, to ask the Legislative Ethics Committee for an advisory opinion on whether any action they have taken or contemplate taking conforms to the ethics law.

The second provision authorizes anyone to lodge a complaint with the legislative ethics committee against any legislator or legislative employee covered by the act alleging that they have engaged in prohibited conduct.

In adopting the act, the legislature said that it's essential in the conduct of public business that legislators hold the respect and confidence of the public.

And it says that legislators must avoid conduct that even appears to violate the trust the people have placed in them.

The Ethics Committee is composed of three state senators, three members of the State House of Representatives, and one public, or non-legislative member.

Under the act, all of the committee's meeting, deliberations and proceedings pertaining to requests for advisory opinions or complaints against legislators or legislative employees are held in executive, or closed, session.

The act generally governs eight categories of conduct. The first is "conflicts of interest," and prohibits legislators or legislative employees from using public office for private advancement or gain, with certain narrowly defined exceptions.

The second category is "state contracts or leases," and it prohibits persons covered by the act from having an interest in a state contract or lease unless it's under $1,000; is a standardized contract available to the general public; or is subject to a competitive bidding process.

The third category is "state loans," and prohibits anyone covered by the ethics act from participating in a state program, or receiving a state loan, unless such loans or programs are generally available to members of the public, are subject to fixed eligibility standards, and the state agency administering them exercises minimal discretion in determining qualification.

The fourth category governed by the legislative ethics law is "interests between public officials," and while it does not prohibit close economic associations involving financial matters between legislators and other public employees, it does require them to disclose those ties.

The fifth category is "gifts," and it prohibits legislators and certain legislative employees from soliciting or receiving a gift if it was intended as a reward or inducement for an official action.

The sixth category is "nepotism," and it prohibits spouses or relatives of legislators from working for pay in the same chamber in which the legislator serves; or in either chamber during the eight month interim between legislative sessions.

The seventh category of conduct governed by the legislative ethics law is "representation" and it requires legislators and certain legislative employees who represent others before a state board or commission for pay to disclose such relationships.

The eighth and final category is "state property and funds," and it prohibits persons covered by the legislative ethics act from using state property, or funds, for private gain.

MEMBERSHIP

Members of the legislative ethics committee are appointed by the presiding officers of the house and senate, subject to a two-thirds vote of each chamber.

Appointment of the one public member is subject to two-thirds approval by the full legislature.

The chairmanship alternates between the house and senate every year.

Under the act, no more than two of the three members from each chamber can be members of the same political party or of the same caucus.

Currently serving on the Legislative Ethics Committee are Senators Don Bennett, a Republican of Fairbanks, who is chairman; Bob Ziegler, a Democrat of Ketchikan, and Dick Eliason, a Republican of Sitka.

The sole public member is retired State Superior Court Judge Tom Stewart of Juneau, a former state legislator and secretary of Alaska's First Constitutional Convention.

Serving on the ethics committee from the House are Representatives Mike Miller, a Democrat of Juneau; Pat Pourchot, a Democrat of Anchorage, and Walt Furnace, a Republican of Anchorage.

COMMITTEE POWERS

The Select Committee on Legislative Ethics created under the 1984 ethics act to implement its provisions gives the seven-member committee the power to subpoena witnesses, compel testimony under oath, and conducts its inquiries under a strict cloak of confidentiality.

Only persons covered by the ethics act — that is, legislators and certain legislative employees — can ask the committee for advisory opinions, pertaining only to their own conduct.

In other words, one legislator, or a member of the public, cannot ask the committee to issue an advisory opinion about the conduct of another legislator or legislative employee.

However, anyone can file a complaint with the committee alleging illegal and unethical conduct by persons covered by the act — that is, legislators and certain legislative employees.

When a person covered by the act asks the comittee for an advisory opinion on whether he or she has done, or contemplates doing, something that may be illegal or unethical, the committee must issue an opinion within 30 days, subject to a 10-day extension, if necessary.

Complaints alleging violations of the ethics law can be investigated by the committee only if the alleged violations occurred within the two prior years.

Complaints must be in writing and signed under oath.

The committee must then notify the person or persons against whom complaints are lodged, and give them an opportunity to answer the allegations.

If the committee decides that a complaint is unjustified, it can dismisss it.

Under the act, it is a felony for anyone to lodge a false accusation against agone else. That means that anyone filing a complaint with the committee which is dismissed, or investigated and found not to be valid, is subject to criminal prosecution.

GOVERNOR'S STANCE

When the legislature passed the ethics law in 1984, Governor Bill Sheffield refused to sign it, but allowed it to become law without his signature.

One of his objections to it was the provision making it a felony to lodge a false accusation with the committee.

In his letter to legislative leaders explaining why he declined to sign the law, Sheffield said the felony penalty provision is probably unconstitutional, because it may impermissibly abridge freedom of speech.

The governor pointed out tat U.S. Supreme Court rulings strictly limit the basis for litigation by public officials over criticism of their official conduct.

If the ethics committee issues an advisory opinion which concludes that the action taken or contemplated by the person who asked for it violates state ethics law, that legislator or legislative employee is expected, but not required, to abide by the opinion.

But if he or she does not comply, the committee or some other person is free to initiate a complaint which can result in a recommendation to the full legislature that that person be disciplined.

In his letter, the governor also expressed objection to that feature of the ethics law, which allows legislators with a clear conflict of interest to resign their positions; divest themselves of the conflicting interest; or publicly disclose it.

In other words, so long as they disclose the conflict of interest, they can under the law continue to indulge it. Said the Governor in his non-veto message: "This provision, allows legislators to choose simple disclosure of the law, but it probably will do nothing to cure the conflict."

He added: "I can understand why part-time citizen legislators may need this escape clause in the law, but I doubt it will help enhance respect and confidence in the legislature by members of the public."

One important feature of the ethics law is that it authorizes only the legislature to impose disciplinary measures or penalties upon other legislators. That's in keeping with a provision in the state constitution which gives the legislature the exclusive power to judge the conduct of its members and, if it's deemed necessary, to discipline them.

NO COMPLAINTS

It's noteworthy that since the Ethics Act was adopted, and the committee began operations in mid-1984, about a dozen requests for advisory opinions have been filed with the committee, but not a single complaint has been lodged.

One of the ethics committee members, Representative Pat Pourchot, D-Anchorage, introduced legislation earlier this year which proposed, among other things, to reduce the penalty for lodging a false accusation with the committee from a felony to a misdemeanor.

Pourchot contends that the stiff penalty for lodging false accusations with the committee works as a disincentive to lodging complaints, effectively rendering the complaint process inoperable.

While his bill passed the House unanimously, it was buried in a Senate committee by senator who are opposed to another of its main provisions proposing to expand the number of public — or non-legislator — members of the ethics committee from one to three.

That issue was one of the most controversial during the debate over the ethics law in 1984, and that battle continues.

Debate over the 1984 law actually began in 1983, but the failure of the House and Senate to reach a compromise on the issue forestalled the legislation that year.

PUBLIC MEMBERS

The lines of battle were fairly clear-cut.

The House leadership wanted three public members on the committee, while the Senate leadership wanted none.

However, with the attorney general's 1982 opinion threatening to impose common law sanctions upon abuses of public office hanging over their heads, the House and Senate reached a compromise in 1984 providing for one public member on the committee.

Although the six legislative members — three from the House and three from the Senate — were appointed to the committee by mid-1984, the House and Senate could not reach an agreement on the appointment of a public member until 1985.

By that time, the committee had held four meetings and issued five of the nine advisory opinions it has formulated so far.

When the legislature convened last January, it unanimously approved the appointment of retired State Superior Court Judge Tom Stewart as the first public member of the ethics committee.

Since, then, the committee has met four times, and issued four advisory opinions.

Representative Pourchot promptly revived the issue of public membership in 1985 by introducing a measure, House Bill 218, which would, among other things, increase the number of public members on the committee from one to three.

While his bill passed the House unanimously, it never reached the floor of the Senate for a vote, and remains buried in a Senate committee.

The House argues that unless there is a substantial public presence on the committee, it would be perceived as a lapdog, rather than a watchdog, of legislative ethics.

The Senate, on the other hand, contends that giving non-legislators potential control over the decisions of the committee would encroach upon the legislature's exclusive constitutional power to judge the conduct of its members.

JUDGE STEWART

The only person directly involved in the operation of the ethics committee and the implementation of the ethics law who has not commented publicly on the public membership issue so far, is the sole public member of the committee, Judge Stewart.

Besides being a Retired Superior Court Jurist, Judge Stewart is a former state legislator, and was secretary of the first convention which drafted Alaska's state constitution.

Judge Stewart disagrees with those who say additional public membership would encroach upon the constitutional prerogatives of the legislature.

In a recent interview, he pointed out that even if there were three public members, they would still be outnumbered by the six legislative members, so they would not be in a position to control its decisions.

But even if they were, Judge Stewart said, it's clear that the ethics committee can only recommend to the legislature that it take disciplinary action against a legislator.

Any decision, Judge Stewart points out, is up to the legislature as a whole.

With an election year coming up, and in the wake of last summer's failed impeachment hearings involving the governor, the ethics issue is almost certain to be addressed in the upcoming session of the legislature, along with Representative Pourchot's proposed amendments to the Legislative Ethics Act.

So it's likely that the question of adding public members to the ethics committee will be debated, if not resolved, in the legislature next year.

SECRET PROCESS

During the year and a half since the enactment of the Legislative Ethics Law, which created the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics to implement it, both have gotten little attention from the news media or the general public.

Part of that is due to the apathy of Alaska's news media which have failed to take an initiative in dealing with them.

But it also stems from the systemic secrecy of the process, which was expressly designed by the legislature to discourage public access to the ethic committee's activities, or information concerning them, by wrapping them in a statutory cloak of confidentiality.

In his letter to legislative leaders in 1984 advising them that he had allowed the ethics bill to become law without his signature, Governor Bill Sheffield said he objected to, among other things, the detailed restrictions on the disclosure of information gathered by the Legislative Ethics Committee.

Said the governor: "While these restrictions underscore the seriousness with which the Special Select Committee on Legislative Ethics must conduct its business, limited disclosure of information — or misinformation — may fuel public mistrust and suspicion of public officials."

If the governor's prophecy has failed so far to become manifest, it may be simply that the general public is largely unaware of the existence and covert operations of the legislative ethics committee because of the news media's failure to expose them.

The only real exception to the news blackout of the committee's activities arose last January when it issued an advisory opinion requested by one of its members, Representative Walt Furnace, a Republican of Anchorage, pertaining to a perceived conflict of interest on his part.

But the publicity surrounding that incident arose independently of the committee's operations because Representative Furnace's perceived conflict of interest had already attracted the attention of the Anchorage news media.

STATE CONTRACT

Under the ethics law, all identities, or material which could point to the identity of persons involved in the committee's advisory opinions, must be deleted, so it's typically not possible to determine who the subjects are.

However, in Rep. Furnace's case, there had already been media reports concerning his perceived conflict of interest, so that when the advisory opinion pertaining to him was issued by the committee last January, his involvement was already widely known.

It centered around an $85,000 state contract for professional services awarded in 1984 to a non-profit corporation in which Rep. Furnace has, or had, a financial interest.

Under the Legislative Ethics Act, persons covered by it are prohibited from holding state leases or contracts except under three conditions: the exceptions are contracts for amounts under $1,000; contracts which are subject to competitive bidding procedures; and standardized contracts which were developed under publicly established guidelines, and are generally available to the public.

In its advisory opinion, the ethics committee concluded that while the first two exceptions did not apply in Rep. Furnace's case, the third did, and advised him that it would be acceptable for the corporation which he serves, or served, as a member of the board of directors, and as a part-time financial consultant, to be awarded the $85 thousand dollar state contract.

In reaching its decision, the committee equated standardized contracts for professional services, with construction contracts awarded under the state's competitive bidding law when, in fact, they are not the same, and it required a tortured interpretation of the two mutually exclusive contracting processes to purport they are analogous.

Technical inconsistencies aside, the committee also failed to consider in Representative Furnace's case the far more compelling ethical question of whether any state agency would be unduely influenced — when deciding between applicants for a large state grant — by the fact that one of them is a member of the legislature; a ranking member of the majority; and a majority member of the house finance committee, which has a leading role in formulating the budgets of state agencies.

Apart from the substance of the committee's decision in Representative Furnace's case, the method it used to reach its decision clearly violated the very ethics law the committee is charged with implementing.

DISQUALIFIED

Under the Legislative Ethics Act, anyone covered by it — that is, legislators and certain legislative employees — can ask the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics for an advisory opinion on whether any action they have taken, or contemplate taking may be unethical or illegal.

If a legislator seeking an advisory opinions happens to be a member of the Ethics Committee, then under the act, he or she is disqualified from participating in the committee's proceedings pertaining to his or her request.

And when any committee member is disqualified under that provision, the ethics law further requires the presiding officer of that member's chamber to appoint another legislator to sit on the committee for the purposes of that proceedings.

But that requirement was not followed in the case of Representative Furnace, a member of the ethics committee, who had asked the committee for an advisory opinion on a perceived conflict of interest involving himself.

Instead, Rep. Furnace was excused from the meeting at which the committee rendered a decision on his request for an advisory opinion, in the absence of the substitute member required by the Ethics Law.

The committee approved the advisory opinion clearing Furnace of any conflict of interest in the award of an $85,000 contract to a company in which he had a financial stake, with only four of seven members present, since Senator Bob Mulcahey, a Republican of Kodiak, was absent; Furnace was excused; and a public member had not yet been appointed to the committee.

LAST MEETING

That meeting took place on January 13th of this year, the day before the 1985 legislature convened.

It was the last meeting of the Ethics Committee as it was constituted under the 1983-84 legislature, so it was the final meeting for two members who were no re-elected to their seats in the legislature — Senator Mulcahey and Representative Ramona Barnes, an Anchorage Republican, who at that time was the chairperson of the Ethics Committee.

When I asked the committee's chief staff aide why the committee did not follow the law in Representative Furnace's case, he said that appointing a substitute member to sit on that case would have required waiting for the 1985 legislature to convene the following day, so that the house speaker could name, and the house could vote on a replacement for Rep. Furnace.

At the same time, he said, another House member would have to be appointed to replace outgoing Representative Barnes; another would have to be appointed from the Senate to replace outgoing Senator Mulcahey; a newly-appointed public member would have to be confirmed by the House and Senate; and the newly-constituted committee, with four new members, would have to fully briefed on Representative Furnace's case.

So the committee decided, instead, the aide said, to proceed in violation of the legal requirement.

The aide noted that the situation disclosed a mechical flaw in the ethics statute, which does not provide for the appointment of substitute members during the interim when the legislature is not in session in the event of a conflict involving a commitee member.

While the committee and its members are expressly charged by the ethics statute with recommending legislation they consider desireable or necessary, neither introducted an amendment in the 1985 legislature which would remedy that acknowledged flaw in the statute.

In finding that Representative Furnace qualified for the state contract under one of the three exceptions allowed by the law, the committee said in its advisory opnion that it believed that — quote — "The language of this exception does not accurately reflect the intent of the legislature in enacting it."

The legislature is often accused of not knowing what it's doing. But this may be the first time its apologists have admitted it.

arrival from California, and opened pursuant to a warrant obtained shortly thereafter.

The seizure occurred based on the "postive alert" of a narcotics detection dog that indicated the presence of drugs in Pooley's suitcases. The luggage was subjected to the dog sniff search in Anchorage based on a tip from agents of the federal bureau of narcotic enforcement in California, who suspected Pooley of conveying drugs to Alaska.

The Alaska Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Cheif Judge Alexander O. Bryner, held that the exposure of luggage to a drug detection dog is a search under the Alaska Constitution. The search, however, is "minimally intrusive," and is therefore justified if the police have a reasonable suspicion that drugs may be present in the container and that the drugs are being illegally imported to Alaska or are being illegally possessed for distribution.

The Court of Appeals affirmed Pooley's conviction.

Restaurant Lease Dispute Revived

The Alaska Supreme Court has ruled that the buyers of a restaurant business will have another chance to show they did not get the lease they bargained for.

Alfred and Georgine Winn purchased the Country Kitchen Restaurant from Harold and Helen Mannhalter in 1978, through Area, Inc. Realtors. One of the business assets was a lease purported to expire in 1986.

The Hayes-Teekel Partnership bought the building after a nonjudicial deed of trust foreclosure sale in 1980. It eventually informed the Winns it believed the lease expired in 1981. The Winns sued the Mannhalters and the real estate broker and agents alleging breach of contract and negligence.

Superior Court Judge James A. Hanson dismissed the Winns' claims. He entered judgment for the Mannhalters against the Winns' for the purchase price and against Area, Inc. Realtors for its commission. Everyone appealed.

The high court affirmed in part, reversed in part and remanded. In an opinion by Justice Allen T. Compton, the court concluded that the Winns shall have the chance to prove that, although the lease survived the 1980 deed ot trust forclosure, it was not extended to 1986.

The court further ruled that the Mannhalters were under no duty to convey marketable title, provide title insurance, or protect the Winns' right to possession. The Winns' negligence case against the realtor was also revived.

The high court affirmed the Mannhalters' judgment against the realtor but vacated the damage award, concluding that forfeiture of the realtor's commission was not the correct measure of damages.

DWI Conviction Upheld

The Alaska Court of Appeals has upheld the DWI conviction of William Van Wormer. Van Wormer pled nolo contendere to driving with a blood alcohol level of .10 or higher.

Van Wormer argued before Valdez Superior Court Judge John Bosshard III that the police denied him his right to counsel by telling him that he had no right to have "somebody present" prior to taking the breathalyzer test.

Judge Bosshard ruled that the request was not specifically for an attorney and refused to suppress the evidence against Van Wormer. The Court of Appeals affirmed.

In an opinion by Judge James K. Singleton, the court ruled that Judge Bosshard's findings were not clearly erroneous, and that when an ambigunus statement is made it is up to the trail judge to decide whether the statement constituted a request for counsel.

Nine Candidates Throw Hats In Race for Lt. Governor

Not only has the race for governor at this early date become crowded with ten candidates already filed, but the race for lieutenant governor became crowded this week with nine candidates either filed for the number 2 spot or having announced their intentions to file for it.

reported to be waiting in the wings. Some of those in the wing are expected to make their decisions soon on whether or not to throw their hats in the races — to take advantage of gathering campaign funds in two years, while other potential candidates apparently are going to wait until next spring, to see how the races shape up, before announcing their intentions.

No less than six candidates made it official the past week that they were running for the No. 2 spot. Lt. Gov. Stephen McAlpine, who had filed for re-election in 1984, indicated he was going to stick with lieutenant governor and was not going to try for the governorship. Former Anchorage Assembly chairwoman Jane Angvik filed for the lieutenant governor nomination, as did former state legislator Nels Anderson, of Dillingham. Anderson served four terms in the State House and was appointed in 1982 to fill the vacated seat of George Hohman, who was removed from the office after a conviction of bribery. State Senate President Don Bennett, who had told the Farthest North Press Club he would file either for governor or lieutenant governor by Dec. 12, told a press conference Thursday in Anchorage he had opted to run for the No. 2 position. Also filing for lieutenant governor on the Republican ticket was State Senator Edna De Vries of Palmer.

The latest candidate to file for lieutenant governor is State Republican Chairman Ken Stout. He filed Monday, indicating he was stepping down as head of the State GOP, to be replaced by the former mayor of Nome, Leo Rasmussen, the current vice-chairman.

Former State Senator Pappy Moss, of Delta Junction, filed early as a candidate for lieutenant governor on the Republican ticket. A former Democrat, he switched to the Republican party and was defeated in the primary by Jack Coghill, of Nenana, who went on to win the senate seat in the general election.

Michael Beirne, an Anchorage physician and former legislator, also filed earlier this month for the GOP nomination. And Ed Hoch, of Fairbanks, filed earlier this month for the Libertarian nomination.

Two other potential candidates for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor are Perry Eaton,

Little in Ethics Act, Implementation To Suggest Purpose Being Fulfilled

By Joe La Rocca
Part II

During the debate over the legislative ethics law in 1983 and 84, the threshhold issue was whether ethical conduct can, or should, be legislated.

The prevailing conventional wisdom against that proposition held that either public officials are honest, or they are not, and nothing would change that.

In an interview recently, retired state Superior Court Judge Tom Stewart of Juneau, the first and only public member to be appointed to the legislative ethics committee, defended the ethics law.

Judge Stewart, a former Alaska legislator and secretary to the convention which drafted the state constitution nearly 30 years ago, said that — in his words — "the very existence of the law is helpful in making both the legislature and the public sensitive to the deep concern that exists with the legislature and the public . . . that ethical problems can be dimninished."

He added: I think the existence of the act is healthy in terms of keeping that sensitivity alive, and making . . . legislators think twice about what they're doing, to be sure that they are operating within an ethical realm.

Said Judge Stewart: "This isn't to say that (the law) is going to stop people from doing unethical things, but I think it gives them a healthy pause, helps them to do so, and I'm in favor of it."

COMPROMISE

The Legislative Ethics Act of 1984, like most controversial enactments, was a compromise which balanced the interests of those who wanted a tough, open ethics law, and those who wanted none.

The resit, in the opinion of some, was a watered down version which is largely cosmetic.

The major effect at its passage was to remove the attorney general's threat to enforce the much harsher ethical standards embodied in common law governing abuses of public office.

One of the statutory barriers inhibiting public access to the ethics committee's actions is a curious provision in the Ethics Law which authorizes the publication and release of advisory opinions only twice each year — once when the legislature convenes in January, and again at the end of June — even though the committee is required to issue advisory opinions to those who request them within 30 to 40 days.

So far, the committee has issued two semi-annual reports containing nine advisory opinions. There have been no decisions on formal complaints, because, according to a committee aide, no complaints have been filed.

And while the committee is required to issue advisory opinion's upon request, there is no requirement for ions upon request, there is no requirement for it to investigate any complaints lodged, which can be summarily dismissed by the committee in closed session without any public knowledge of the filing, or the nature, of the complaints, or why they were dismissed.

Although early discussion, debate and drafts of the proposed ethics law also encompassed standards of conduct for state public officials in the executive branch, wide differences of opinion prompted the legislature to narrow the scope of the law to apply only to legislators and certain legislative employees.

It was assumed that the Sheffield administration would independently pursue a code of ethics governing executive employees, because they are also subject to the attorney general's 1982 opinio. applying common law sanctions to abuses of public office.

However, that effort soon petered out, although there are now indications that it has been revived in the wake of last summer's failed impeachment proceedings involving the governor.

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

Among the activities prohibited by the legislative ethics act of 1984 are conflicts between a legislator's public and private interests.

Conflicts of interest are generally defined in the act as official actions such as introducing, opposing, or voting on legislation that could substantially benefit or harm a financial matter in which the legislator has a direct or indirect private interest.

In addition to those kinds of conflicts of interest, the act also prohibits legislators from accepting campaign contributions raised at events held in Juneau during the legislative session, except for Juneau lawmakers.

That provision stemmed from a controversial practice initiated in 1980 when, for the first time, local democrats and the democratic leadership in the state house of representatives formed a legislative fund raising committee to support democratic candidates in upcoming legislative races around the state.

That fund raising effort was launched towards the end of the 1980 session, when most of the legislation being considered for action that year was pending in the house finance committee.

The practice came to light when a momber of the press came across a letter from the legislative fundraising committee to the lobbyist for the liquor industry asking him to contribute alcoholic beverages for a fundraising event it was sponsoring.

At the time, the legislature was considering legislation, bitterly opposed by the liquor industry, which would increase the state excise tax on alcoholic beverages.

Among the members of the fundraising committee were the speaker of the house, and several members of the house finance committee, which would be instrumental in the passage or defeat of the proposed liquor tax increase.

Lobbyists in Juneau complained about the events sponsored by the legislative fundraising committee, particularly towards the end of the session, when many bills in which the lobbyists were interested tended to accumulate in the finance committees.

The lobbyists said that the timing of the fund raisera was calculated to compel them to buy tickets to the fundraisers, or risk adverse action on the bills in which they had an interest.

The same fundraising tactics were also being quietly employed on an individual basis by certain influential Republican state senators serving on the Finance Committee, who were holding events in Juneau and other communities during, and especially towards the and of the legislative session.

DEBATE

While the controversy which erupted over the disclosure of that practice curbed it or, in some cases, forced it underground, where it was less effective, it did not halt it completely, and that practice became one of the issues which was extensively addressed during the debate over the legislative ethics act in 1983 and 84.

The result was a provision in the 1984 act which makes it a prohibited conflict of interest for a member of the legislature — except those from Juneau — to accept money from an event held in the capital city during the session, if a substantial purpose of the event is to raise money on behalf of a legislator for campaign purposes, or for other legislative political purposes.

Shortly after the legislative ethics act became law last year, a legislator anonymously asked the select committee on legislative ethics for an advisory opinion interpreting the fundraising provisions of the act.

Among other things, the legislator wanted to know whether that provision would prevent lawmakers or a political organization from selling tickets to fundraisers not held in Juneau, or for raffles held in Juneau, or elsewhere.

In a lengthy and detailed advisory opinion; the legislative ethics committee concluded that the ethics act does not prohibit legislators from selling tickets in Juneau during the session for raffles, or for fundraising events held ourside of Juneau.

The ethics committee ruled — among other things — that a "raffle" is not an "event" under the ethics act, so legislators would be permitted to sell tickets to raffles held in Juneau during the legislative session to raise campaign funds for themselves or other candidates.

In short, the ethics act, in tandem with its interpretation of those provisions by the ethics committee, effectively authorized the continuation of the same fundraising abuses from which they sprang.

"EVENTS" VS. "RAFFLES"

Lobbyists argue that it's immaterial whether the fundraisers for which they asked to buy tickets are "events" such as receptions, dinners or cocktail parties; or merely "raffles." The effect, they say, is the same, since most of those who do purchase tickets to events have no intention of attending those events.

They buy the tickets in order to protect legislation pending before the legislature, in which they have an interest, from action which is inimical to their interests.

And they point out that continuing to allow fundraisers outside Juneau during the session has the same effect. They are still asked by legislators during the session in Juneau, and are compelled to buy, tickets to events outside of Juneau which they have no intention of attending.

Critics say that the principal evil of that fundraising practice, which has now been condoned by the ethics committee, is that it gives certain key legislators the ability to attract campaign funds for themselves or other candidates they support, buy manipulating legislation, over which they exercise a great deal of influence or control, irrespective of the legislation's merits, or lack thereof.

They say that disinterested persons could readily infer from the ethics committee's interpretation of the fundraising provisions of the ethics act that it has abrogated, rather than upheld, its charge under the act to "avoid conduct that even appears to violate the trust that people have placed in them."

COMPLAINTS

Under the Legislative Ethics Act, the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics, consisting of six legislators and one public member, is authorized to investigate questions arising about the conduct of legislators and certain legislative employees covered by the act.

The committee can look into, and issue advisory opinions on, requests filed by legislators to determine whether actions they have taken, or contemplate taking, conform to ethical standards under the law.

The committee is also empowered to investigate complaints filed by anyone else about the actions of legislators or certain legislative employees.

So far about a dozen requests for advisory opinions have been filed with and disposed of, by the committee, but no complaints have been filed.

One provision of the ethics law prohibits the filing or consideration of complaints against legislators within a 60 day period preceding a state election, unless two-thirds of the committee consents.

The express purpose of that provision is to prevent critics or adversaries of incumbent legislators from using or exploiting the ethics committee process as a campaign weapon against them.

But as it is drafted, the ethics law protects only those legislators who belong to the party or caucus which happens to be in power in either the House or Senate.

Since the law allows for the House and Senate leadership to appoint five of the seven members to the committee from the ranks of the party in power, the majority party controls decisions about whether a complaint concerning a minority member could be filed or processed during the 60-day period prior to the elections.

In short, the ethics law protects members of the party or caucus in power from abuse or exploitation of the committe's power to investigate complaints, prior to elections, but not minority members.

CHIEF JUSTICE

One member of the ethics committee, Rep. Pat Pourchet, a Democrat of Anchorage, introduced legislation during the 1985 session which would, among other things, remove the power of the legislature to appoint members to the ethics committee, and bestow it instead upon the chief justice of the state supreme court.

Pourchot's bill passed the house unanimously earlier this year, but has not moved from committee in the Senate, mainly because of opposition in the Senate to another provision which would increase the number of public, or non-legislator members, on the ethics committee from one to three.

The first and only public member appointed to the committee, retired state superior court judge Tom Stewart, said in an interview recently that he supports Pourchot's proposal to increase public membership on the committee.

But Judge Stewart said he disagrees with the idea of shifting the power to appoint the members of the ethics committee from the legislature to the chief justice, becaus of potential constitutional clashes before the two branched of government.

Judge Stewart said he thinks it would be more approrpiate to delegate that authority instead to the goernor, who is already in the business of appointing a wide array of members of boards and commissions, and who has the staff and resources to select and screen prospective appointees.

Judge Stewart's suggestion is not likely to find much favor in the legislature, particularly in the Senate which has jealously guarded against any dilution of the legislature's power to regulate the ethical conduct of its members.

PRIVATE GAIN

One of the main purposes of the Legislative Ethics Act is to deter legislators from using their public offices to enrich themselves at public expense.

The act says that it is a conflict of interest occurs when a legislator takes or withholds official action, or exerts official influence that could substantially benefit or harm a financial matter in which he or she has a direct or indirect interest.

On its face, that provision would appear to prohibit a legislator from voting on the budget of a state agency for which his or her spouse works.

Clearly, voting against, or to reduce, a state agency budget for which his or her spouse works officially influences action (could affect the spouse's job, particularly if it were decided by one vote.

But when that question was brought before the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics for a ruling on whether a legislator who was both a member of the finance committee and the subcommittee which considered the budget of the agency for which the legislator's spouse worked, the ethics committee ruled that there was no conflict, even though their earnings were combined.

More specifically, the ethics committee ruled that it would be appropriate for the legislator to refrain as a member of the finance committee or subcommittee from voting on the particular line item which funded the spouse's position; but there was no reason to refrain from voting on other matters affecting that agency, or from voting on its budget, of which that line item was only a small part.

The advisory opinion issued by the ethics committee does not identify either the legislator, the spouse or the agency involved, as that information is confidential under the ethics act.

In its opinion, the ethics committee pointed out that legislators should avoid situations which might prevent them from participating in the consideration of the state budgetary matters.

But by the same token, it said, "the committee should not impose artificial restrictions on voting in this area merely to protect the sensibilities of those persons who invariably perceive the appearance of impropriety, even when no real appearance of impropriety or conflict actually exists; or when the potential for conflict is clearly outweighed by other considerations."

The committee added that while the potential financial benefit to the legislator would exist, one has to assume that a legislator's judgment in voting on a $2 billion operating budget would not be affected by a potential personal benefit of several thousand dollars contained in it.

To assume otherwise, the committee said, would bring the legislative process to a halt, in that a large number of legislators, like many other state residents, are benefitted to some degree by the passage of the operating budget.

The advisory opinion in this case, like several others similar to it on which the committee has ruled previously, dwells singlemindedly upon the question of whether a legislator's judgment would be influenced by the indirect personal financial benefit which would or would not accrue to him or her as a result of voting one way or the other.

But it appears to ignore the equally compelling ethical question of whether the agency's decision to hire or retain the legislator's spouse would be influenced by the fact that the legislator is in a position to act favorably or unfavorably upon that agency's budget.

NON-BINDING

Soon after the select committee on legislative ethics created by the ethics act became operative in mid-1984, it was asked to address two questions dealing with the status of the advisory opinions it is authorized to issue concerning the ethical conduct of legislators.

One question was whether an advisory opinion pertaining to one legislator is binding on another legislator in similar circumstances.

The second was whether advisory opinions issued by one ethics committee are binding on future ethics committees.

In its response, the ethics committee pointed out that the act does not require even the person seeking an advisory opinion to comply with it, once one is issued.

If an advisory opinion concludes that a violation of ethical standards has occurred, the committee said, the person who sought the opinion presumably will — but is not required to — take steps to rectify the violation.

But if he or she does not, then the ethics committee, or anyone else, is free to initiate a formal complaint triggering an investigation by the committee into the alleged violation.

If the allegations are substantiated, then the committee can order the legislator involved to correct the violation, or face disciplinary action by the full legislature. The committee said its "authority to order a person to rectify violations of ethical standards only arises after the filing of a formal complaint, not after the filing of a request for an advisory opinion."

In short, it ruled, an advisory opinion is not binding on either the legislator who requests it, or another legislator in the same or similar circumstances.

GUIDANCE

In response to the second question of whether the ethics committee's advisory opinions are binding on a future ethics committee, the current ethics panel ruled that they are not.

It pointed out that a subsequent committee may interpret the ethics law differently than an earlier one. Said the committee: "In issuing advisory opinions over the years, the committee will gradually build up a body of decisions which can provide guidance to covered persons in a variety of circumstances. But much as a supreme court can overturn a precedent set by itself in the past, a future ethics committee may issue advisory opinions which overturn the principles set forth in earlier opinions."

At this point, the ethics committee appears to contradict itself. It says, on one hand, that advisory opinions are not binding on the legislators who request them. But on the other hand, it says in response to the second question — that an advisory opinion issued by one ethics committee is binding on future ethics committees as it relates to the specific person for whom it was issued.

For example, the committee said, if an ethics committee appointed by one legislature were to issue an advisory opinion telling the legislator who asked for it that certain conduct was acceptable, the ethics committee appointed by a succeeding legislature could not exercise sanctions against him or her for having relied on the opinion, merely because one committee believed the other committee wrongly interpreted the ethics law.

TEN OPINIONS

During the year and a half since the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics created by the Legislative Ethics Act of 1984 has been in operation, it has issued a total of 10 advisory opinions addressing questions anonymously raised by legislators concerning the ethical implications of certain legislative activities or conduct.

However, there are technically only eight advisory opinions of substance, because two were opinions advising the legislators who asked for them that the committee could not issue opinions to them concerning other legislators.

Under the Ethics Act, legislators or certain legislative employees covered by the act can request advisory opinions pertaining only to themselves.

Of the eight substantive advisory opinions issued by the ethics committee so far, three of them have dealt with questions involving political fundraising; two pertain to state contract awards in which the legislators who sought them had a financial stake; one involved the sale of game-of-chance tickets by the legislator for charitable purposes; one addressed a case in which a member of the Finance Committee voted on the budget of a state agency for which the legislator's spouse worked; and the eighth involved a case in which a legislator-attorney asked whether he could ethically introduce legislation possibly affecting the financial affairs of a client.

In all but one of the eight cases, the Ethics Committee ruled that actions taken or contemplated by the legislators who sought advisory opinions did not constitute a conflict of interest or ethical violation under the Ethics Act.

The sole exception involved the case of the legislator who asked whether he could ethically introduce legislation affecting a client.

In that case the legislator had contemplated the introduction of two bills proposing to change the regulatory authority of the State Dept. of Labor as a result of past litigation between the department and the legislator's client, and asked the committee whether that would be improper.

The committee ruled that the introduction of one of the bills would be inappropriate, but not the other.

NO PUBLIC MEMBER

While the Ethics Act establishing the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics calls for the appointment to the committee of six legislators — three each from the House and Senate — and one public member, it should be noted that the committee operated for about six months, publishing one report embodying four of the eight advisory opinions issued so far, without the required public member.

The first and only public member is retired state superior court judge Tom Stewart of Juneau, who was not appointed to the committee until January of this year, after the 1985 legislature convened.

At that time, the make-up of the committee changed somewhat, as two members were not re-elected to their seats in the legislature.

In general, a comparison of the four advisory opinions issued by the original committee appointed by the previous legislature; and the four issued by the committee appointed by the current legislature does not reveal any compelling distinctions between the two committees' interpretation and implementation of the Ethics Act. It may be noteworthy, however, that the only advisory opinion which identifies a potential conflict of interest on the part of a legislator, and advises against the contemplated action, was issued by the second, or current ethics committee.

Beyond that, both the tone and convoluted rhetorical style of the advisory opinions makes them virtual clones, which appear to have been drafted by the same committee staff person, or persons, probably a lawyer.

CONCLUSIONS AND COMMENTS

Some critics have characterized the legislative ethics law as one which posts the fox to guard the chicken coop, particularly in the absence of a strong public presence on the Ethics Committee.

The advisory opinion issued by the committee in Representative Walt Furnace's case discussed earlier in this analysis betrays the extraordinary lengths to which the committee will go to rationalize a legislator's perceived conflict of interest. And it is more or less typical of the other advisory opinions issued to date. They exemplify the circular reasoning that pervades the committee's decisions, carefully framing questions of ethical conduct so that they conform to preconceived answers which condone the conduct that has been questioned.

Because of the time-consuming analysis required to expose the deficiencies of the Legislative Ethics Act and the emerging interpretations and practices which are further undermining it, the Ethics Committee's activities have been largely ignored by Alaska's news media.

In the meantime, with eight substantive advisory opinions issued so far, a growing body of spurious "case law" is being insinuated into the legislature's ethical portfolio which is fiercely at odds with the stated purposes of the Ethics Act.

It says that "It is essential ... the conduct of public business that legislators hold the respect and confidence of the people. Legislators must avoid conduct that even appears to violate the trust people have placed in them."

There appears to be little in the Ethics Act or its implementation so far to suggest that its high purpose is being fulfilled.

SECTIONAL ANALYSIS - CSHB 218 (JUDICIARY)
LEGISLATIVE ETHICS LEGISLATION

This legislation makes several changes to statutes dealing with legislative ethics and the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics.

EXPANSION OF PUBLIC MEMBERSHIP ON THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON LEGISLATIVE ETHICS
Sections 7 and 8 (pages 3-4)

Public membership on the committee is expanded from one to three people, one of whom would be a former legislator. The three would be selected by the Chief Justice of the Alaska Supreme Court and would be confirmed by a two-thirds vote of each house of the Legislature. Presently, there is one public member on the committee, chosen by two-thirds vote of the House subcommittee and two thirds vote of the Senate subcommittee and ratified by two thirds of the full membership of both houses.

These provisions respond to public sentiment to expand public membership on the Ethics Committee and remove the possibility of charges of "legislative bias" by providing that public members are initially selected by the head of the judicial branch of government.

"FALSE REPORTING" PENALTIES

This provision reduces the penalty for "false reporting" of a possible ethics violation from a felony to a misdemeanor. The current penalty has been criticized as extreme and acting as a deterrent to the filing of legitimate complaints of possible violations.

EXPANSION OF THE ETHICS LAW TO ALL LEGISLATIVE EMPLOYEES
Sections 2 and 11 (pages 1 and 5)

This change clarifies that staff employees of individual legislators and committees, range 18 and above, must comply with the provisions of the Ethics Act. Presently, it has been interpreted that the only legislative employees covered by the Ethics Act are those employed by a legislative agency--for example, House Research or the Division of Legal Services. There is no clear rationale for this discrepancy in the current law.

DELETION OF FAMILY EXEMPTION FOR LOBBYIST DISCLOSURE

The current Act requires the filing of a notice in the Journal if a person covered by the Act has a "close economic association" with a registered lobbyist unless the lobbyist is a member of the person's immediate family. This section removes this exemption for family members. Similar notice requirements of "close economic association" with supervisors, legislators, and public officials currently do not contain this family member exemption. There is no clear rationale for this discrepancy in the current Act.

REPORTING DEADLINE CHANGES
Sections 3, 4, 5 and 6 (pages 1-3)

The deadlines for reporting "close economic associations," "representations before state agencies" and "conflicts of interest" are changed from the first to the fifth day of the legislative session. These technical changes will hopefully avoid the confusion that faced those covered by the Act, particularly new legislators and staff, at the beginning of this session as they hurried to comply with the provisions of the Ethics Act. Several notices were published in the Journal beyond the first day of this year's session.

Section 3 stipulates that the list of specified loans to persons covered by the Act be reported in the legislative journals by February 5. Although agencies are to provide the lists by February 1, there is currently no deadline for printing loan information in the journals.

CLEAN-UP PROVISIONS
Sections 4, 9 and 10 (pages 2 and 4)

Currently aides covered by the Ethics Statute have to report "close economic associations" with legislators, but the reverse is not required. Section 4 corrects this oversight by requiring legislators to report such associations with covered legislative staff.

Section 9 drops the requirement for the Committee's semi-annual reports to print "informal advisory opinions." The Ethics Committee as a matter of policy does not issue informal advisory opinions. Thus, the current printing requirement is unnecessary.

Section 10 would allow a person elected to the Legislature, but not yet sworn in, to request an advisory opinion from the Ethics Committee. This change will help newly elected legislators understand and comply with ethics requirements reporting deadlines.

EXPANSION OF PUBLIC MEMBERSHIP ON THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON LEGISLATIVE ETHICS

Presently, there is one public member on the committee, chosen by two-thirds vote of the House subcommittee and two-thirds vote of the Senate subcommittee and ratified by two-thirds of the full membership of both houses.

The provisions in this legislation accommodate public sentiment to expand public membership on the Ethics Committee and remove the possibility of charges of "legislative bias" by providing that public members are initially selected by the head of the judicial branch of government.

FALSE REPORTING
Section 1

This provision reduces the penalty for false reporting of a possible ethics violation from a felony to a misdemeanor. The current penalty has been criticized as extreme and acting as a deterrent to the filing of legitimate complaints of possible violations. It is also ironic that while there exists a felony penalty for "false" accusation, there is no statutory penalty for legislators violating the ethics law.

EXPANSION OF THE ETHICS LAW TO ALL LEGISLATIVE EMPLOYEES
Sections 2 and 11

This change clarifies that staff employees of individual legislators and committees, range 18 and above, must comply with the provisions of the Ethics Act. Presently, it has been interpreted that the only legislative employees covered by the Ethics Act are those employed by a legislative agency--for example, House Research or the Division of Legal Services. Similar notice requirements of "close economic association" with supervisors, legislators, and public officials currently do not contain this family member exemption.

here is no clear rationale for this discrepancy in the current Act, and section 4 of the bill removes this exemption for family members who are lobbyists.

REPORTING DEADLINES
Sections 3, 4, 5 and 6

The deadlines for reporting "close economic associations," "representations before state agencies" and "conflicts of interest" are changed from the first to the fifth day of the legislative session. These technical changes will hopefully avoid the confusion that faced those covered by the Act, particularly new legislators and staff, at the beginning of both this session and last session as they hurried to comply with the provisions of the Ethics Act. Several notices were published in the Journal beyond the first day of the last two sessions.

Section 3 stipulates that the list of specified loans to persons covered by the Act be reported in the legislative journals by February 5. Although agencies are to provide the lists by February 1, there is currently no deadline for printing loan information in the journals.

CLEAN-UP PROVISIONS

Section 10 would allow a person elected to the Legislature, but not yet sworn in, to request an advisory opinion from the Ethics Committee. Newly elected legislators are most often the individuals in need of conflict advice. This change will help newly elected legislators understand and comply with reporting deadlines.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO CSHB 218 BY REP. POURCHOT

AMENDMENT #1, EXCEPTIONS TO STATE CONTRACT PROHIBITION

The Ethics law currently bars legislators and other covered persons from having an interest in a state contract or lease except in three specific cases: 1) competitive contracts under AS 37.05.230; 2) contracts of less than $1000; and 3) a "standardized contract" generally available to the public at large.

The Ethics Committee has issued an advisory opinion (#84-6) regarding a legislator having an interest in a company which gets state contracts for professional services. In this opinion the Committee found that the language of the first exception to state contracts was ambiguous. The Committee felt that the Legislature intended to except all competitively bid contracts, yet the citation only refers to the competitively sealed bid process used for "hard dollar" contracts. AS 36.98 covers the competitive "Request for Proposals" (RFPs) process used for professional services.

However, the Committee through a rather tortured analysis concluded that legislators could accept contracts for professional services with the state through the third exception involving a "standardized contract."

The issue was again raised later before a court. The case involved the award of a professional services contract to a company owned by another legislator. In this case the court, citing the Ethics Committee opinion, ruled against an unsuccessful bidder and said that a violation of the state's ethics law had not occurred.

Despite the opinions of the Ethics Committee and the court, the issue remains unclear and may again come up. If RFP-type competitive contracts are not to be allowed, then the words of this amendment should be enacted. The rationale is that while competitive, the process is subjective and favoritism could be charged.

If both "hard-dollar" and RFP contracts, such as for professional services, are to be permitted, then the language of the Act should still be clarified to read "by competitive sealed bid or by competitive sealed proposal" with the AS 37.05.230 citation removed. The rationale permitting these contracts is that we desire a citizen Legislature, that the State is deeply involved with many aspects of the Alaskan economy and that legislators may deal with state contracts in their regular business or work.

AMENDMENT #2, DISCLOSURE OF CLOSE ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION WITH PUBLIC OFFICIALS

Under the Ethics Act legislators and other covered persons must declare a close economic association with legislators, lobbyists, certain staff and certain public officials. "Public officials" are defined as those in "another branch" if the official has to file a financial disclosure statement.

The Ethics Committee in an advisory opinion (#85-5) concluded that associations with municipal elected officials must be declared. However, it found that the statute was unclear because while municipal elected officials must file financial disclosures under state law, they are not normally considered officials in "another branch." This term is most often used in reference to the executive, judicial, and legislative "branches" of government. The Committee concluded that it was not the intent of the Legislature to exclude municipal elected officials because they were not in another "branch," but rather to include them on the basis of their financial disclosure requirement.

The amendment would simply remove the reference to "another branch" and make disclosures required for close economic associations with all public officials who are required to file financial disclosures under AS 39.50.

AMENDMENT #3, MEMBERSHIP ON THE ETHICS COMMITTEE

The House Judiciary Committee added an amendment to the original bill requiring that one of the three public members must be a former member of the Legislature. It was felt that this would provide valuable experience to the decision-making process.

However, a concern has since been raised that it might be possible for a recently defeated legislator to be appointed who might not be removed enough from the Legislature to escape criticisms of bias, particularly in potential cases or opinions involving his or her opponent.

The amendment would simply require at least a one-year lapse of time for a former legislator to be appointed to the Ethics Committee from the time he or she served in the Legislature.

AMENDMENT #4, TEMPORARY REPLACEMENT OF MEMBERS OF THE ETHICS COMMITTEE

On January 13, 1985, prior to the beginning of the 14th Legislature, the Ethics Committee met to issue an advisory opinion requested by a current member of the Committee. The requesting member excused himself from the discussion and voted on the advisory opinion (#84-6) pursuant to AS 24.60.130(h). That part of the Ethics law also states that in the case of such a disqualification the presiding officer of the member's house shall appoint a temporary replacement for the particular procedings with the concurrence of two-thirds of the full membership of that house.

The Ethics Committee meets year-round and could have a member disqualified from procedings, as did occur, during the interim when confirmation of a replacement member is not possible. The amendment would allow the Speaker of the House or the President of the Senate to appoint another member of the Committee in the case of a disqualification when the Legislature is not in session. The temporary appointment would require the concurrence of a majority vote of the other Committee members from the respective house.

Dear Representative Pourchot:

Re: HB 218

I am responding to your staff's request for additional information regarding Commissioner Eleanor Andrews' memorandum of January 28, 1986.

There are two main competitive procurement methods: (1) competitive sealed bids and (2) competitive sealed proposals. Competitive sealed bids are utilized to acquire commodities, leases or nonprofessional services. Awards are based primarily on an objective low bid process. Competitive sealed proposals are utilized primarily to secure professional services such as architects, economists or other consultants. The award is primarily based on a subjective evaluation of submitted proposals.

If the purpose of HB 218 is to allow legislators to compete for both types of contracts, then the most appropriate change would be [BY COMPETITIVE BID] by competitive sealed bid or competitive sealed proposal.

I hope this is of some assistance.

Dear Representative Pourchot:

Re: HB 218

We have reviewed your proposed amendment. It appears the intent is to allow applicable persons to have an interest in State contracts or leases if the contract or lease was let through a bid process which is predominantly based on an objective low bid process. If that is true I would suggest you change (BY COMPETITIVE BID) to by competitive sealed bid.

This would not include competitive processes with a large portion of subjective evaluation such as competitive sealed proposals submitted for professional services. This terminology would also conform with the language of the proposed procurement bill--SB 341.

I hope this is of some assistance.

Ethics bill shows good faith to public

Rep. Pat Pourchot's bill to revise the legislature's Select Committee on Ethics may not be the last word on legislative ethics but it's an improvement over current law.

Today the ethics committee, which lawmakers created last year to settle conflict-of-interest and other questions of legislative conduct, has seven members: six legislators and only one member of the public. That's an intolerable tilt toward the interests of the legislature.

Rep. Pourchot's bill would change the makeup of the committee to nine members: six legislators and three public citizens. With three public members, Alaskans would be better ensured diverse representation on the committee and a louder voice in its deliberations. Judge Thomas Stewart of Juneau, the lone public member in the committee today, has excellent credentials for the job but he should not be alone.

Rep. Pourchot's bill does not address provisions in the ethics legislation that allow the committee to meet in secret; nor does it dispense with a noxious provision of the law that labels anyone found guilty of making "false accusation" against a legislator a felon.

But there's an extra bonus: All legislative employees above a range 18 on the pay scale — about the wage paid a secretary — would be required to report any close economic ties with legislators or lobbyists. This is especially important because of the influence legislative staff can have on legislation and legislative deliberations.

Legislators are talking of biting the bullet as they approach the final days in Juneau. They couldn't find a better way to demonstrate their seriousness to the public purpose than by approving Rep. Pourchot's bill.

Tuesday's Daily News editorial on Rep. Pat Pourchot's bill to revise the legislature's Select Commitee on Ethics erroneously stated that under the measure false accusations against a legislator would continue to be a felony. The bill actually specifies that false accusations would become a class A misdemeanor.

In a Daily News story April 16, a chart on local childbirth procedures provided by the Childbirth Education Association did not make clear that the information listed related to Caesarean births only. In addition, the chart did not include the Caesarean rate at the Alaska Native Health Service Hospital, which in 1984 was 12.2 percent, or 97 out of 798 births. In a related story the same day, the word "clinics" was incorrectly used. Native women are encouraged to have their babies at "field hospitals" or the Alaska Native Health Service Hospital.

Ethics bill eases charge on reporting

by Dean Fosdick
Associated Press

Juneau — A measure that would add two public members to the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics and water down the law's false reporting penalties was approved Saturday by the House, but lawmakers doubt there's enough time to deal with the issue this year.

Senate President Don Bennett, R-Fairbanks and a member of the ethics panel, indicated he supports the measure. But Bennett said that with only nine days left in what is supposed to be a 120-day session, the issue probably will be awaiting lawmakers next session.

The House passed the bill 37-1 after more than an hour of debate. The only vote against the measure came from Rep. Walt Furnace, R-Anchorage. Reconsideration was asked on the measure, which means it could be brought up again before being shipped to the Senate.

Rep. Pat Pourchot, D-Anchorage and a prime sponsor, commended veteran legislators for getting an ethics law on the books after three years of wrangling, but he said it had two major flaws.

"One, there's limited public participation. The public thinks the foxes are in charge of the chicken coop," Pourchot said. "And two, somebody tagged on a clause (last year) that made false accusations a felony. That discourages anyone from filing (a complaint)."

Under this year's bill, the crime of false accusation would be changed from a felony to a misdemeanor.

Also, the makeup of the ethics committee would grow from seven to nine, with three public members to be selected by the chief justice of the Alaska Supreme Court and be ratified by two-thirds of the full membership of the House and Senate.

The panel currently includes one public member along with three people from the House and three from the Senate.

The law also would be amended to apply to any legislative employees over range 18. That classification would include administrative assistants and researchers.

Notes on Ethics Legislation

* Sets ethical standards in the law for state agencies, boards and commissions, university and railroad employees.
  - Reduces confusion
  - Makes sure everyone knows the rules and sticks to them
  - Enhances public confidence

* Sets up independent ethics commission.
  - Takes over some of the duties of APOC
  - Seven members
  - Appointed by Gov.; approved by Leg.
  - Only one can be a public official

* Board will be set up in July of 1986.
  - Advisory opinions open up January 1987
  - Actual rules go into effect July 1987
  - That gives people with conflicts time to work them out

* Sets up a process for making, processing and hearing complaints about alleged violations of the code.
  - Information gathering and investigations are confidential
  - Formal proceedings are public.

* If employees are unsure if they have a conflict, they can ask the ethics board for an opinion.
  - Eliminates doubt in the employee's mind
  - Recognizes there are honest or unintended conflicts
  - Sets up an education program on the ethics code for executive branch employees

* The code is flexible.
  - Ethics board will have flexibility to distinguish between unavoidable or insignificant conflicts and substantial ones that deserve action

* The code prohibits:
  - Misuse of position for personal gain
  - Accepting gifts that "a reasonable person" would conclude were given to influence a decision
  - Using "insider information" to get a jump on the public
  - Accepting a loan, grant, lease etc., if you can influence the decision to award it
  - Giving advice or assistance to someone who has a matter pending before your agency
  - Having work outside of government that conflicts with your state job
  - After leaving state service, representing (for pay) anyone on a matter in which you had "personal and substantial" involvement while on the state payroll
  - Knowingly helping someone violate the ethics law

* The code also protects state employees who "blow the whistle" on wrongdoers within government.

Cross references. — For limitation of applicability of this chapter to acts committed after July 18, 1984, see § 4, ch. 36, SLA 1984 in the Temporary and Special Acts.

Sec. 24.60.010. Legislative findings and purpose. The legislature finds that it is essential in the conduct of public business that legislators hold the respect and confidence of the people. Legislators must avoid conduct that even appears to violate the trust the people have placed in them. To ensure and preserve public confidence, legislators should have the benefit of specific standards to guide their conduct. Article II, sec. 12, Constitution of the State of Alaska grants to each house of the legislature the power to judge the qualifications of its members. It is the purpose of this act to establish standards of conduct for state legislators and legislative employees and to establish the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics to consider alleged violations of this chapter and to render advisory opinions to persons affected by this chapter. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.020. Applicability. (a) This chapter applies to a member of the legislature and to a permanent or temporary employee of an agency of the legislature. This chapter does not apply to

(1) a former member of the legislature or to a person formerly employed by a member of the legislature or an agency of the legislature unless the provision specifically states that it so applies;

(2) a person elected to the legislature who at the time of election is not a member of the legislature;

(3) a person employed by the legislature or an employee of an agency of the legislature whose compensation is below Step A, Range 18 of the state salary schedule established in AS 39.27.011(a).

(b) The provisions of this chapter specifically supersede the provisions of the common law relating to legislative conflict of interest that may apply to a member of the legislature, a person employed by a member of the legislature, or to a permanent or temporary employee of an agency of the legislature. They do not supersede or repeal provisions of the criminal laws of the state. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.030. Conflicts of interest. (a) A person to whom this chapter applies may not use public office for private advancement or gain.

(b) A conflict of interest exists when a person to whom this chapter applies takes or withholds official action or exerts official influence that could substantially benefit or harm a financial matter in which the person has a direct or indirect private interest.

(c) Conflicts of interest are prohibited but there is not a conflict of interest if, as to a specific matter, there is no substantial impropriety or appearance of impropriety because

(1) the person's interest is relatively insignificant;

(2) the person's authority is relatively far removed from any official action that could reasonably be affected by the potential conflict of interest, provided that no attempt has been made to remove the appearance of impropriety by delegating responsibility for official action.

(d) A conflict exists if benefits accrue to a person to whom this chapter applies beyond that which may accrue uniformly to members of the profession, occupation or group to which the person belongs, or to the public at large.

(e) It is not a conflict of interest under this section if a person to whom this chapter applies accepts

(1) hospitality at another person's residence within the state, including meals, lodging or transportation;

(2) discounts that are generally available to the public or a large class of persons to which the person belongs;

(3) an invitation to attend a meal or social event;

(4) food and foodstuffs indigenous to the state that are generally shared as a cultural or social norm;

(5) gifts from the person's family; or

(6) gifts of nominal value given by a nonprofit organization in recognition of public service by the recipient.

(f) It is a conflict of interest for a member of the legislature to accept money from an event held within the capital city during the session if a substantial purpose of the event is to raise money on behalf of the member for state legislative campaign purposes or for other state legislative political purposes.

(g) Members of the legislature elected to represent the capital city are exempt from the requirements of (f) of this section. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.040. Contracts or leases. (a) A person to whom this chapter applies may not be a party to or have an interest in a state contract or lease unless the contract or lease is let under AS 37.05.230 or the total annual amount of the state contract or lease is $1,000 or less, or is a standardized contract or lease which was developed under publicly established guidelines and is generally available to the public at large, members of a profession, occupation or group. A person has an interest in a state contract or lease under this section if the person receives direct or indirect financial benefits.

(b) In this section, "direct or indirect financial benefits" means income, profits or other financial benefits under a state contract, without regard to whether the income, profits or other financial benefits ensue to the person as a partner, shareholder, investor, agent, employee, consultant, or joint venturer of the contractor. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.045. Hazardous waste contracts. A legislative staff member may not solicit or receive a contract concerning hazardous waste from a state agency or department other than the legislature during the interim following a session in which the person worked. This section applies to legislative staff members Range 18 or higher. In this section "hazardous waste" has the meaning given in AS 46.03.900. (§ 10 ch 77 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.050. State loans. (a) It is not a conflict of interest for a person to whom this chapter applies to participate in a state program or to receive a loan from the state if the program or loan is generally available to members of the public, is subject to fixed eligibility standards, and minimal discretion is exercised in determining qualification. The committee shall issue a list of those state programs and loans from the state that it considers to meet the standards of this paragraph within 30 days after July 19, 1984. It shall annually issue a revised list.

(b) In determining whether a conflict of interest exists with respect to a state program or to a state loan other than those described in (a) of this section, because a person to whom this chapter applies may be in a position to influence the loan agency, the committee must consider, but is not limited to, the adequacy of existing administrative procedures for granting and reviewing loans to legislators.

(c) Upon application for a state loan by a person to whom this chapter applies, other than loans described in (a) of this section, the person shall send a notice of the application to the Alaska Public Offices Commission, which will incorporate the material into the applicant's financial disclosure statement, if the applicant is required to file a disclosure statement or if the applicant is not required to file a disclosure statement will place the notice in a legislative employee loan file that is open to the public. All records relating to a state loan to a person to whom this chapter applies may be disclosed to the committee.

(d) Each February 1, each state loan agency must deliver a listing of all outstanding loans to persons to whom this chapter applies, except for loans described in (a) of this section, to the presiding officer of each house. The list must include the name of the person, the date of issuance and current status of the loan. The list shall be published in the supplemental journa'.

(e) The division of legislative audit shall annually review state loans granted to or held by persons to whom this chapter applies to determine whether appropriate procedures were observed in granting or reviewing the loans and whether loan conditions imposed by the lending agency are being enforced. The division shall report its findings to the committee by April 1.

(f) In this section "state program" means a program in which tangible assets of the state or a right to use tangible assets of the state are transferred from the state to a private person. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.060. Confidential information. It is a conflict of interest if a person to whom this chapter applies willfully discloses, or knowingly uses, for personal gain or for the personal gain of another, information that by law is not available to the public and that the person acquired in the course of official duties. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.070. Interests between public officials. A person to whom this chapter applies shall disclose in the journal of the appropriate body or if the legislature is not in session to the committee, which shall maintain a public record of the disclosure and forward the disclosure to the respective house for inclusion in the journal for the first day of the session, the formation or maintenance of a close economic association involving a substantial financial matter with

(1) a supervisor who is not a member of the legislature who has responsibility or authority, either directly or indirectly, over the person's employment, including preparing or reviewing performance evaluations, or granting or approving pay raises or promotions;

(2) legislators;

(3) a public official in another branch, if the public official is required to file a financial disclosure statement under AS 39.50;

(4) a registered lobbyist who is not a member of the immediate family of the person. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.080. Gifts. Unless otherwise provided for under AS 24.60.030, a person to whom this chapter applies may not solicit a gift in any amount, or accept or receive, directly or indirectly, a gift, whether in the form of money, services, a loan, travel, entertainment, hospitality, or other form, if the gift was intended as a reward or inducement for an official action by the person. A gift of travel and hospitality within the state received by a member of the legislature in obtaining information on matters of legislative concern is not prohibited by this section, nor are political contributions received and reported under AS 15.13.040. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.090. Nepotism. (a) A spouse or an individual other than a spouse who is related to a member of the legislature may not be employed in the house in which the legislator is a member, by an agency of the legislature established under AS 24.20, or in either house during the interim between sessions. An individual who is related to an employee of the legislature may not be employed in a position over which the employee has supervisory authority. In this subsection, "an individual who is related to" means a child, stepchild, husband, wife, mother, father, sister, or brother.

(b) For purposes of this section an individual is not employed if no compensation is received from the state for the services provided.

(c) For purposes of this section, a legislator is not an employee of the legislature. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.100. Representation. A person to whom this chapter applies who represents another person for compensation before an agency, board, or commission of the state shall disclose the name of the person represented, the subject matter of the representation, and the body before which the representation is to take place in the journal of the appropriate body or if the legislature is not in session to the committee. The committee shall maintain a public record of the disclosure and forward the disclosure to the respective house for inclusion in the journal for the first day of the session. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.110. Action on a conflict of interest. A legislator who knowingly has a conflict of interest or has been notified of a conflict of interest shall immediately

(1) resign the conflicting position;

(2) divest the interest that has resulted in the conflict or potential conflict; or

(3) disclose the conflict of interest in the journal of the appropriate body or if the legislature is not in session to the committee; the committee shall maintain a public record of the disclosure and forward the disclosure to the respective house for inclusion in the journal for the first day of the session but disclosure does not remove the conflict of interest. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.120. State property and funds. A person to whom this chapter applies may not use state property, except property under lease from the state, or state funds for private gain. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.130. Select committee on legislative ethics. (a) There is established within the legislative branch of state government the Select Committee on Legislative Ethics.

(b) The committee consists of seven members, in two subcommittees, as follows:

(1) the senate subcommittee consists of three members of the senate, appointed by the president of the senate with the concurrence by roll call vote of two-thirds of the full membership of the senate; and

(2) the house subcommittee consists of three members of the house, appointed by the speaker of the house with the concurrence by roll call vote of two-thirds of the full membership of the house; and

(3) one public member, who is selected by two-thirds of each subcommittee and who is ratified by two-thirds of the full membership of the senate and two-thirds of the full membership of the house, shall serve on both the full committee and each subcommittee.

(c) No more than two legislative members of each subcommittee may be members of the same political party or the same organizational caucus.

(d) The members of each subcommittee shall elect a chair. The chair selected by the senate subcommittee shall chair the full committee in odd-numbered years and the chair selected by the house subcommittee shall chair the full committee in even-numbered years.

(e) A vacancy on the committee shall be filled under (b) of this section.

(f) The committee or a subcommittee may contract for professional services and may employ staff as it considers necessary.

(g) Each member serves for the duration of the legislature during which the member is appointed.

(h) A member is disqualified from participating as a member in any proceeding before the committee involving a complaint against the member or an advisory opinion requested by the member. When a legislative member is disqualified under this subsection, the presiding officer of that member's house shall, with the concurrence by roll call vote of two-thirds of the full membership of that house, appoint another member from that house to act as a member of the committee in the proceeding. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.140. Authority of the committee. (a) The senate subcommittee has authority over proceedings concerning conduct by a member or former member of the senate or a person employed by a member or a committee of the senate.

(b) The house subcommittee has authority over proceedings concerning the conduct by a member or former member of the house or a person employed by a member or a committee of the house.

(c) The full committee has authority

(1) over proceedings concerning the conduct by an employee of an agency of the legislature;

(2) to review any matter arising under this chapter that would result in action being required by both houses of the legislature; and

(3) to issue advisory opinions under AS 24.60.160. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.150. Duties of the committee. (a) The committee shall

(1) adopt procedures to facilitate the receipt of inquiries and prompt rendition of its opinions;

(2) publish semi-annual summaries of decisions, advisory opinions and informal advisory opinions, with sufficient deletions in the summaries to prevent disclosing the identity of the persons involved in the decisions or opinions that have remained confidential.

(b) The committee may

(1) recommend legislation to the legislature the committee considers desirable or necessary to promote and maintain high standards of ethical conduct in government;

(2) subpoena witnesses, administer oaths, and take testimony relating to matters before the committee, and may require the production for examination of any books or papers relating to any matter under investigation before the committee. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.160. Advisory opinions. The committee shall issue an advisory opinion within 30 days on the request of a person to whom the chapter applies as to whether the facts and circumstances of a particular case constitute a violation of ethical standards. The 30-day period for issuing an opinion may be extended by the committee for not more than an additional 10 days if the person requesting the opinion consents. The opinion issued is binding on the committee in any subsequent proceedings concerning the facts and circumstances of the particular case unless material facts were omitted or misstated in the request for the advisory opinion. Except as provided in this chapter an advisory opinion is confidential but may be made public if a written request by the person who requested the opinion is filed with the committee. (§ 1 ch 36 SLA 1984)

Sec. 24.60.170. Proceedings before the committee. (a) The committee may initiate, receive and consider complaints alleging a violation of this chapter.

(b) The committee may investigate a violation of this chapter in a proceeding begun within two years after the alleged violation occurs and within one year after termination of state service. Nothing in this subsection bars proceedings against a person who intentionally prevents discovery of a violation of this chapter.

(c) Before the committee may exercise power authorized in this section, the committee shall by resolution supported by a majority vote of the full membership of the committee, define the nature and scope of the inquiry. The committee shall investigate all complaints on a confidential basis.

(d) A proceeding is commenced by the filing of a complaint with the committee. A complaint may be initiated by any person. A complaint shall be in writing and signed under oath by the person making the complaint. No complaint, other than a complaint initiated by at least two-thirds of the members of the committee, may be filed within a period of 60 days preceding a state primary or general election. All proceedings pending before the committee on the 60th day preceding a state primary or general election are stayed until certification of the election unless the proceedings are based on a complaint initiated by at least two-thirds of the members of the committee. The committee shall notify in writing a person against whom a complaint has been filed of a stay of the proceeding. If the person objects in writing to the stay the proceedings shall continue.

(e) The committee shall notify in writing each person against whom a complaint is received and afford the person an opportunity to explain the conduct alleged to be a violation of this chapter. If the committee determines that a complaint does not contain allegations of facts sufficient, if the alleged facts are treated as true, to constitute a

* Sec. 5. AS 14.25.150 is amended to read:

Sec. 14.25.150. REFUND UPON TERMINATION. (a) Except as provided in (b) of this section, a [A] terminated member is entitled to a refund of the balance of the member contribution account. A member is not entitled to a refund of supplemental contributions except as provided in AS 14.25.160(a).

* Sec. 6. AS 14.25.150 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(b) A member who is terminated and is a vested member, deferred vested member, or who is entitled to benefits under AS 14.25.125, and who is married at the time of application for a refund or whose rights to a refund are subject to a qualified domestic relations order is entitled to receive a refund of the balance of the member contribution account only if the member's present spouse and each person entitled under the order consents to the refund in writing on a form provided by the administrator. The administrator may waive written consent from the person entitled under the order if the administrator determines that the person cannot be located or for other reasons established by regulation. The administrator may waive written consent from the spouse if the administrator determines that

(1) the member was not married to the spouse during any period of the member's employment with an employer;

(2) the spouse has no rights to benefits under this chapter because of the terms of a qualified domestic relations order;

(3) the spouse cannot be located; or

(4) for other reasons established by regulation.

* Sec. 7. AS 14.25 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 14.25.153. RIGHTS UNDER QUALIFIED DOMESTIC RELATIONS ORDER. In this chapter the rights of a person under a qualified domestic relations order take precedence over the rights of a spouse, surviving spouse, or dependent child to the extent required by the order. A person granted rights under a qualified domestic relations order shall be treated as a spouse or surviving spouse under this chapter to the extent required by the order. Rights under the order do not take effect until the order is filed with the administrator.

* Sec. 8. AS 14.25.155(c) is amended to read:

(c) If the death of a vested member or deferred vested member occurs and the proximate cause of death is not a bodily injury sustained or hazard undergone while in the performance and within the scope of the member's duties of employment, the surviving spouse may elect to receive either the benefits described in (b) of this section or a 50 percent joint and survivor option as provided under AS 14.25.-167(a)(2) based on credited service to the date of the member's termination. If no spouse survives a vested or deferred vested member, or if a person other than the spouse is designated as beneficiary in accordance with AS 14.25.166, the administrator shall pay [,] the designated beneficiary [SHALL BE PAID] the benefits described in AS 14.25.160(b) and (c). Benefits accrue from the first day of the month following the member's death and are payable the last day of the month.

* Sec. 9. AS 14.25.157(a) is amended to read:

(a) If (1) the death of a member occurs before the member first attains eligibility for normal retirement, and (2) the proximate cause of death is a bodily injury sustained or hazard undergone while in the performance and within the scope of the member's duties of employment, and (3) the injury or hazard is not the proximate result of wilful negligence on the part of the member, the administrator shall pay a monthly survivor's pension equal to 40 percent of the member's base salary at the time of termination of employment, divided by 12, [SHALL BE PAID] to the member's surviving spouse. If there is no surviving spouse, the administrator shall pay the monthly survivor's pension [SHALL BE PAID] in equal parts to the dependent children of the member. On the date the normal retirement of the member would have occurred if the member had lived, monthly payments must [SHALL] equal the monthly amount of the normal retirement benefit to which the member, had the member lived and continued employment until the member's normal retirement date, would have been entitled with an average base salary as existed at the member's death and the credited service to which the member would have been entitled. If the member does not have a [NO SURVIVING] spouse or dependent children [EXIST] at the time of death or if the member designates as beneficiary under AS 14.25.166 someone other than the surviving spouse or dependent children, the administrator shall pay the member's designated beneficiary [SHALL BE PAID] those benefits available to a beneficiary under AS 14.25.160(b) and (c) and may not pay a [NO] benefit [WILL BE PAID] to the surviving spouse or dependent children.

* Sec. 10. AS 14.25.166(a) is amended to read:

(a) Each member shall designate the beneficiary or beneficiaries to whom the administrator shall distribute benefits payable under this chapter as a consequence of the member's death. Notwithstanding a previous designation of beneficiary, a person who is the spouse of a member at the time of the member's death automatically becomes the designated beneficiary if the spouse was married to the member during part of the member's employment for an employer

(1) except to the extent a qualified domestic relations order filed with the administrator provides for payment to a former spouse or other dependent of the member; or

(2) unless the member files a revocation of beneficiary accompanied by a written consent to the revocation from the spouse and each person entitled under the order [SHALL BE DISTRIBUTED].

* Sec. 11. AS 14.25.166(b) is amended to read:

(b) Except as provided in (a) of this section, the member may change or revoke the [THE] designation [MAY BE CHANGED OR REVOKED BY THE MEMBER] without notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries at any time. If a member designates more than one beneficiary, each shares [SHALL SHARE] equally unless the member specifies a different allocation or preference. The designation of a beneficiary, [AND] a change or revocation of a beneficiary, and a consent to revocation of a beneficiary shall be made on a form provided by the administrator and is not effective until filed with the administrator.

* Sec. 12. AS 14.25.166 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(d) A person claiming entitlement to benefits payable under this chapter as a consequence of a member's death shall provide the administrator with a marriage certificate, divorce or dissolution judgment, or other evidence of entitlement. Documents establishing entitlement may be filed with the administrator immediately after a change in the member's marital status. If the administrator does not receive notification of a claim before the date 10 days after the member's death, the person claiming entitlement is not entitled to receive from the division of retirement and benefits any benefit already paid by the administrator.

* Sec. 13. AS 14.25.167(a) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(a) Benefits payable under this section are in place of benefits payable under AS 14.25.110, 14.25.125, 14.25.155, 14.25.157, 14.25.160, 14.25.162, or 14.25.164. Upon filing an application for retirement with the administrator, or when a disabled member becomes eligible for normal retirement under AS 14.25.130(e), the member shall designate the person who is the member's spouse at the time of appointment to retirement as the contingent beneficiary. However, if the designation of the spouse is revoked under (c) of this section, the member may designate a dependent approved by the administrator as the contingent beneficiary or may take normal or early retirement under AS 14.25.110 or 14.25.125. The administrator shall pay benefits under the option elected by the member. The member may elect an option that provides that

(1) the member is entitled to receive a reduced benefit payable for life, and, after the member's death, the contingent beneficiary is entitled to receive payments in the amount of 75 percent of the reduced benefit for life;

(2) the member is entitled to receive a reduced benefit payable for life, and, after the member's death, the contingent beneficiary is entitled to receive payments in the amount of 50 percent of the reduced benefit for life; or

(3) the member is entitled to receive a reduced benefit payable during the joint lifetime of the member and the contingent beneficiary, and, after the death of either the member or the contingent beneficiary, the survivor is entitled to receive payments in the amount of 66-2/3 percent of the reduced benefit for life.

* Sec. 14. AS 14.25.167(c) is amended to read:

(c) A member may elect or [,] change [, OR REVOKE] an option without the approval of the administrator if the member's election or [,] change [, OR REVOCATION] is filed in writing with the administrator before the effective date of the member's retirement. A member may revoke a joint and survivor option if the member files with the administrator before the effective date of the member's retirement a revocation and a consent to the revocation signed by the member's present spouse and each person entitled to benefits under a qualified domestic relations order on forms provided by the administrator. The administrator may waive the requirement for written consent from

(1) a person entitled under the order if the person cannot be located or for other reasons established by regulation; or

(2) the spouse if the member is not married, the member was not married to the spouse during any period of the member's employment with an employer, the spouse has no rights to the option because of the terms of a qualified domestic relations order, the spouse cannot be located, or for other reasons established by regulation.

* Sec. 15. AS 14.25.167 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(f) The member and any person claiming to be a contingent beneficiary shall file with the administrator a marriage certificate, divorce or dissolution judgment, or other evidence necessary to determine the applicability of this section and the identity of any contingent beneficiary.

(g) If the administrator determines, based on the affidavit of the member and other evidence, that a member is eligible to elect a form of payment other than a joint and survivor option under this section, and no contrary evidence is presented to the administrator within 60 days after the effective date of the member's retirement, no claim under this section, made by a spouse or former spouse of the member, may be paid if payment would result in an increase in actuarial liability to the system.

(h) If a member fails to elect an option under (a) of this section and no effective revocation is filed with the administrator, the member is considered to have elected the option provided in (a)(2) of this section.

* Sec. 16. AS 14.25.200(a) is amended to read:

(a) Benefits and other amounts held in the retirement fund on behalf of the members are exempt from Alaska state and municipal taxes and are not subject to anticipation, alienation, sale, transfer, assignment, pledge, encumbrance, or charge of any kind, either voluntary or involuntary, before they are received by the person entitled to the amount under the terms of the system, and any attempt to anticipate, alienate, sell, transfer, assign, pledge, encumber, charge, or otherwise dispose of any right to amounts accrued in the retirement fund is void. However, a member's right to receive benefits may be assigned under a qualified domestic relations order.

* Sec. 18. AS 22.25.030(b) is amended to read:

(b) To be eligible for the survivors' benefits, the surviving spouse must have been married to the justice or judge for at least one year [TWO YEARS] immediately preceding the death of the justice or judge. The benefits continue until the remarriage or death of the surviving spouse.

(2) unless the member files with the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs a revocation of beneficiary and a written consent to the revocation signed by the present spouse and each person entitled to benefits under the order on forms provided by the department.

(f) A person claiming entitlement to any benefits payable under this section shall provide the department with a marriage certificate, divorce or dissolution decree, or other evidence of entitlement. Documents showing entitlement may be filed with the department immediately after a change in the member's marital status. If the department does not receive notification of a claim before the date 10 days after the member's death, the person claiming entitlement to the benefits is not entitled to receive from the Department of Administration or Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs any benefit already paid under this section.

* Sec. 26. AS 26.05.227 is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

The administrator may waive written consent from the person entitled to benefits under the order if the administrator determines that the person cannot be located or for other reasons established by regulation. The administrator may waive written consent from the spouse if the administrator determines that

(1) the employee was not married to the spouse during any period of the employee's employment with an employer;

(2) the spouse has no rights under this chapter because of the terms of a qualified domestic relations order;

(a) Subject to AS 39.35.450, an [AN] employee is eligible for a normal retirement benefit at age 55 with at least two years of credited service if the employee also is eligible for a normal retirement salary under the teachers' retirement system (AS 14.25).

* Sec. 32. AS 39.35.385(b) is amended to read:

(b) Subject to AS 39.35.450, an [AN] employee is eligible for an early retirement benefit at age 50 with at least two years of credited service if the employee also is eligible for an early retirement salary under the teachers' retirement system (AS 14.25).

* Sec. 33. AS 39.35.420(c) is amended to read:

(c) If, under AS 39.35.490, a vested or deferred vested member designates as beneficiary to receive nonoccupational benefits someone other than the surviving spouse to whom the member has been married for at least one year, the administrator shall pay [TO RECEIVE NONOCCUPATIONAL DEATH BENEFITS,] the designated beneficiary [SHALL BE PAID]: (1) the balance of the deceased member's employee contribution account; and (2) a lump-sum death benefit. [IF THE DESIGNATED BENEFICIARY IS THE SURVIVING SPOUSE OR DEPENDENT CHILDREN, THE BENEFICIARY SHALL RECEIVE THE BENEFIT DESCRIBED IN (b) OF THIS SECTION.]

* Sec. 35. AS 39.35.440(b) is amended to read:

(b) Upon the death of a disabled employee who is receiving or is entitled to receive an occupational disability benefit, the administrator shall pay the surviving spouse a surviving spouse's pension, equal to 40 percent of the employee's monthly compensation at the termination of employment because of occupational disability [SHALL BE PAID TO THE SURVIVING SPOUSE]. If there is no surviving spouse, the administrator shall pay the survivor's pension [SHALL BE PAID] in equal parts to the dependent children of the employee. On the date the normal retirement of the employee would have occurred if the employee had lived, the administrator shall adjust the monthly payments to [SHALL] equal the monthly amount of the normal retirement benefit to which the employee, had the employee lived and continued employment until the employee's normal retirement date, would have been entitled with an average monthly compensation as existed at death and the credited service to which the employee would have been entitled. If the death of an employee occurs from occupational causes but no surviving spouse or dependent children exist at the time of the death, or if the employee designates as beneficiary under AS 39.35.490 someone other than the surviving spouse or dependent children, the administrator shall pay the employee's designated beneficiary [SHALL BE PAID] those benefits available to a beneficiary under AS 39.35.-420(c) and may not pay an [NO] occupational death benefit [WILL BE PAID] to the surviving spouse or dependent children.

The administrator shall pay benefits under the option elected by the employee. The employee may elect an option that provides that

* Sec. 37. AS 39.35.450(c) is amended to read:

* Sec. 38. AS 39.35.450 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(f) The employee and any person claiming to be a contingent beneficiary shall file with the administrator a marriage certificate, divorce or dissolution judgment, or other evidence necessary to determine the applicability of this section and the identity of any contingent beneficiary.

(g) If the administrator determines, based on the affidavit of the employee and other evidence that an employee is eligible to elect a form of payment other than a joint and survivor option under this section, and no contrary evidence is presented to the administrator within 60 days after the effective date of the employee's retirement, no claim under this section, made by a spouse or former spouse of the member, may be paid if payment would result in an increase in actuarial liability to the system.

(h) If an employee fails to elect an option under this section, and if no effective revocation is filed with the administrator, the employee is considered to have elected the option provided in (a)(2) of this section.

Documents establishing entitlement may be filed with the administrator immediately after a change in the employee's marital status. Honorable Mitch Abood, Chairman
Senate State Affairs Committee
Alaska State Legislature
P.O. Box V
Juneau, AK 99811

Re: CSHB 237(Rls), retirement bill

Dear Senator Abood:

At the committee's March 18, 1986 hearing on CSHB 237 (Rls), the committee instructed me to draft changes to be included in the committee substitute as follows:

1. simplification of language concerning rights under a qualified domestic relations order (QDRO); and

2. addition of language to the bill to allow a spouse "veto power" over only 50 percent of the benefits.

After consultation with the two agencies interested in this bill, the Alaska Women's Commission and the division of retirement and benefits, we recommend that in sections 7 and 39, the following language be substituted for the current language:

> A former spouse shall be treated as a spouse or surviving spouse to the extent required by a qualified domestic relations order. Rights under the order do not take effect until the order is filed with the administrator.

In section 20, we recommend that the following language be substituted for the current language:

> A former spouse who was married to the justice or judge for at least one year and who has not remarried shall be treated as a spouse or surviving spouse to the extent required by a qualified domestic relations order. Rights under the order do not take effect until the order is filed with the administrator.

The committee has also instructed that language be added to the committee substitute to provide that a spouse has "veto power" only over 50 percent of the benefits. This instruction was given after a discussion about the right of a vested member to withdraw the member's contribution account upon termination of employment. However, under this bill, the spouse has other "veto" rights, including the rights to withhold consent to payment of a benefit in a form other than a joint and survivor option and to withhold consent to designation of a person other than the spouse as beneficiary for survivors' benefits.

A. Contribution account. The bill currently provides that, when a vested member terminates employment, he or she may receive a refund of the contribution account only with consent of the spouse and other persons entitled under a QDRO. Allowing "veto power" over only 50 percent of the refund of the contribution account could be accomplished in several ways, none of which is supported by both the Alaska Women's Commission and the division of retirement and benefits. Therefore, the committee must determine which, if any, option it wants to include in the committee substitute, after considering the problems each option presents.

First, if a member has no former spouse or dependents entitled under a QDRO and if the spouse does not consent to withdrawal of the contribution account, the contribution account can be paid out in two checks, one to the member, and one to the spouse. This option is strongly opposed by the Women's Commission. Under the state's retirement systems, the value of the benefits that may be received upon retirement, including the monthly benefit and medical benefits for a member's spouse and dependents, is much greater than the value of the contribution account. The main purpose of this bill is to acknowledge and protect the interest of a spouse in those benefits.

Second, if there are persons entitled under a QDRO, those persons can be paid a portion of the contribution account proportionate to their interest in benefits established by the order. The remainder of the contribution account can be paid to the member or, if the member has a new spouse, half of the remainder can be paid to the member and half to the spouse. In addition to the objections set out for the first option, this option is objectionable due to the fact that it would be very difficult for the division of retirement and benefits to administer. Furthermore, if marital property is divided under a QDRO based on an assumption that a member will receive benefits from a state retirement system, a portion of which will be paid to persons entitled under the QDRO, the member should not be permitted to forfeit the benefits by withdrawing the contribution account without the consent of the persons entitled under the order.

Third, if the member has no former spouse or dependents entitled under a QDRO and if the present spouse does not consent to withdrawal of the contribution account, the bill could provide that one-half of the account would be paid to the member and one-half must remain in the system to provide the spouse with a benefit. New sections would have to be enacted to define what benefit the spouse will receive. Will the benefit be one-half of what the former member's benefit would have been, based on a normal or early retirement benefit or a joint and survivor option? When is the benefit payable to the spouse? Can the spouse select a joint and survivor option? If the member becomes reemployed by the state and wants to reinstate the service credit, can the member reinstate all of the service credit under his or her own account, or only half of the service credit, with the spouse remaining entitled to a separate benefit? If the member and the spouse divorce, is the spouse's benefit subject to a qualified domestic relations order?

Fourth, if there are persons entitled under a QDRO, the bill could provide that an amount proportionate to the share of the member's benefit that is due those persons must remain in the contribution account. The remainder would be refunded to the member or, if the member has a new spouse, one-half of the remainder would be paid to the member and one-half would remain in the system to provide the spouse with a benefit. Again, new sections would have to be enacted to define the benefit the spouse would receive and the questions raised in option three must be resolved. In addition, it could be extremely difficult, administratively, for the division of retirement and benefits to determine what proportion of the contribution account must remain in the system to result in payment of benefits required under a QDRO.

The division of retirement and benefits has indicated that it is strongly opposed to options 2, 3 and 4, due to the extraordinary difficulties it anticipates will occur in administration of those options. The division has further noted that the instances of a vested member even wanting a refund of the contribution account has become quite rare, due to the value of the benefits payable under the state's retirement systems. Because of the division's increased counselling efforts encouraging terminated vested members to leave their contributions in the system, it is expected that even fewer vested members will request refunds of their contribution accounts in the future.

We also note that, because the federal Retirement Equity Act of 1984 applies to our supplemental benefits system (SBS) plan, a married employee who terminates state employment may not receive his or her SBS account in a lump sum payment without consent of the spouse. Furthermore, the only form of payment that can be received under SBS without consent of the spouse is a joint and survivor option. This requirement of the federal Retirement Equity Act also applies to private pension plans.

B. Joint and survivor option. The bill currently requires a married member to choose a joint and survivor option upon retiring, unless the spouse consents to another form of benefit payment. We can think of no way to change this to a 50 percent "veto power."

It should be pointed out that selection of a joint and survivor benefit typically does not result in anything close to a 50 percent reduction in the retirement benefit payable to a member. For example, depending upon which of the three available joint and survivor options is chosen, a member who is age 55 and whose spouse is age 50 could receive as much as 93.466 percent of a normal benefit. Thus, a member does not lose much in terms of benefits paid to the member, but does gain coverage for his or her spouse in the event the member predeceases the spouse.

C. Spouse as designated beneficiary. The bill currently provides that the spouse of a member is automatically the designated beneficiary for survivors' benefits, except to the extent required by a QDRO, unless the spouse consents to designation of some other person as the beneficiary. This could be changed to provide that, notwithstanding the designation of another person as beneficiary and except to the extent required by a QDRO, the spouse is automatically the designated beneficiary entitled to receive one-half of the survivors' benefit that he or she would have been entitled to receive if he or she had been designated the sole beneficiary. Other beneficiaries would receive one-half of what they would otherwise have received. The spouse could consent to designation of someone other than the spouse as beneficiary for 100 percent of the survivors' benefits.

We recommend that the changes suggested in this memorandum to sections 7, 20, and 39 be included in the draft committee substitute. In addition, in accordance with the committee's instruction at a previous hearing on this bill, the word "present" should be inserted on page 5, line 12 of the March 14, 1986 draft, between the words "the" and "spouse." At the hearing on this bill scheduled for April 17, 1986, we will attempt to provide proposed language that we believe will implement the options the committee may choose to add to the bill.

Very truly yours,

Prepared by Division of Retirement & Benefits

February 20, 1985

IV Analysis:

Passage of this bill will; 1) require a married member of the Public Employees' (PERS), Teachers' (TRS) and Judicial (JRS) Retirement Systems to select one of the joint and survivor options upon retirement unless the requirement is waived by the spouse and would require that the spouse be the primary beneficiary of death benefits, and 2) would allow any benefit payable from the PERS, TRS and JRS to be subject to attachment to satisfy orders by divorce or dissolution of marriage orders.

The fiscal impact of this will be due to the research and notification efforts by the Division to inform effected members of the legislation.

BILL SHEFFIELD
GOVERNOR

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

The Honorable Ben Grussendorf
Speaker of the House
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Representative Grussendorf:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill relating to pension reform. This bill amends statutes pertaining to the state's retirement systems to include provisions similar to those enacted by the U.S. Congress in the Retirement Equity Act of 1984 (P.L. 98-397).

The bill amends a number of sections of the public employees' retirement system and teachers' retirement system statutes to require consent of an employee's spouse before the employee may waive a joint and survivor benefit, obtain a refund of contributions if the employee has a vested interest in benefits, or revoke a designation of the spouse as the employee's beneficiary for various death benefits. Consent of the spouse is also required by this bill for revocation of a designation of the spouse as beneficiary for death benefits under AS 26.05.224. Until consent is obtained, the joint and survivor benefit and designation of the spouse as beneficiary are required. The judicial retirement system statute is amended to allow the spouse of a justice or judge to receive survivors' benefits if the spouse was married to the justice or judge for one year before death, instead of the current two years.

The bill allows former spouses to share in survivor's benefits, to the extent provided in a "qualified domestic relations order," as defined in secs. 16, 18, 23, and 39 of the bill.

Prohibitions against assignment of retirement benefits are removed with respect to assignments of those benefits made to satisfy marital property rights, spousal support, and child support under a qualified domestic relations order.

The commissioner of administration is required to inform retirement system participants and their spouses of the changes accomplished by this bill, and effective dates are established to assure an orderly transition to the provisions of this pension reform bill.

This bill recognizes, as does the federal Retirement Equity Act of 1984, that rights to benefits accrued during a marriage are property rights in which both partners to the marriage have an interest. The bill has been drafted to require the joint and survivor option, and spousal consent for revocation of designation of the spouse as beneficiary for benefits, only if the spouse was married to the employee during a period when rights to those benefits were being accrued.

I note that the state's Supplemental Benefits System (SBS) plan has already been amended to comply with the Retirement Equity Act requirements that the plan require a joint and survivor benefit unless the spouse waives that form of benefit, and that the plan require payment of a preretirement survivor benefit to the spouse unless the spouse waives that form of benefit. These amendments to the SBS were necessary to maintain the plan's tax-deferred status under the Internal Revenue Code.

Sincerely,

-fault divorce 'disaster' for women, study says

NGTON — No-fault n force in all 50 f July 1, has turned 'simply an econom- for divorced wom- inor children," a Jniversity sociolo- ednesday.

ılly have reduced ıy and trauma. The is we haven't t the economics of aid Leonore Weitz- reports on more de of research in a "The Divorce Rev- ıe Unexpected So- Economic Conse- Women and Chil-dren in America."

"I thought only good could come out of no-fault," Weitzman said in a speech to the Women's Legal Defense Fund. But, she said, analyses of property division, alimony and child support proved her expectations to be overly optimistic.

Based on 2,500 court cases in Los Angeles and San Francisco, Weitzman concluded that women and minor children experienced a 73 percent decline in their standard of living in the first year after a divorce. The divorced men experienced an average increase of 42 percent in the same period, she said.

According to Weitzman, if a man makes $1,000 a month an average judge will award him $700 and give $300 to the ex-wife and two children. She said older women and former wives of middle-class professionals experience the most deprivation and downward mobility compared with their ex-husbands.

"Our aim should be to equalize the standards of living of men and women after divorce," she said. "I don't see how anybody can be unaffected by these statistics. They're so powerful and so devastating."

In addition to examining court cases, Weitzman said she interviewed divorced men and women; all judges hearing matrimonial cases in Los Angeles and San Francisco; the entire matrimonial bar in San Francisco, and 92 Los Angeles attorneys. She also did a national survey of state laws.

Studies and statistics from other states indicate the California findings are typical of the national situation, Weitzman said. She said her research provides the first data on what has happened under no-fault.

In the area of property, Weitzman said a 1970 California law requiring equal division of property "seemed like a feminist dream come true." Prior to that, she said, when judges had full discretion, women usually received one-third of the property and men two-thirds.

But she said women have been hurt by the equal division law. Before 1970, she said, only one out of 10 homes was sold as a result of a divorce proceeding and women typically received the house. Two years after the law was passed, she said, one out of three homes was being sold to meet the equal division requirement — disrupting the family at a time when stability was most needed.

In addition, Weitzman said, courts do not generally take into account new kinds of property that she calls career assets — future earnings ability based on education and skills, pensions and retirement funds.

Alimony is largely a myth in America, Weitzman said. She said 85 percent of divorced women "don't receive a penny" although lawyers believe 75 percent are awarded alimony and judges put the figure at 50 percent.

Even in longer marriages, she said, alimony is awarded to less than half the women and only to one of three who had never had careers outside the home.

No-fault divorce law falls short continues. "Standards that seem appropriate for a young woman of 25 who has a career and has no children are suddenly being applied to women of 55 who have never had a career and have spent their lives raising children. That seems totally unfair. This has to be in part a backlash. The evidence is just inescapable that some lawyers and judges are saying, 'Well, if women want equality, we'll give them equality.' "

These technical attempts at equality are misguided, Weitzman believes, because of the economic inequalities that marriage creates and the economic inequalities between men and women in the larger society.

"I don't see us in the near future getting the kind of equality among women that would allow the premise of the current law, which is that men and women can be equal — equally responsible for supporting themselves after a divorce," she says. "That's because I assume we're still going to have children in most families. Women are still much more likely to be the primary caretakers. That always disadvantages that spouse's career."

Even in two-paycheck marriages, she notes, the husband's career is usually the center of the marriage. Citing a study of two-career PhD couples, she indicates that 80 percent of the women let the husband take the initiative in the job market. "Even when a woman has invested in a PhD, probably six years of her life in a professional education, she's still moving so he can take the first job. So I don't see this great egalitarian revolution in internal family patterns."

Alleviating some of the injustices in the current system, she says, requires a redefinition of marital property. Instead of counting only tangible assets such as the family home, furnishings, cars, and investments, courts must also consider career assets. These include pensions, health insurance, education, and professional licenses. To exclude these from divorce settlements, she notes, is "like promising to divide the family jewels equally but allowing the husbands to keep all of the diamonds."

Re: CSHB 237(Rls), retirement bill

Dear Senator Abood:

You have requested a section-by-section analysis of CSHB 237(Rls), relating to the rights of spouses to be beneficiaries under the state's pension systems. The sections of that bill provide:

Sec. 1. Amends AS 14.25.110(a). Makes eligibility for a normal teacher's retirement benefit subject to the requirements of amended AS 14.25.167. See secs. 13-15.

Sec. 2. Amends AS 14.25.110(b). Makes eligibility for an early teacher's retirement benefit subject to the requirements of amended AS 14.25.167. See secs. 13-15.

Sec. 3. Amends AS 14.25.125(a). Makes a teacher's eligibility for a normal conditional service retirement benefit subject to the requirements of amended AS 14.25.167. See secs. 13-15.

Sec. 4. Amends AS 14.25.125(b). Makes a teacher's eligibility for an early conditional service retirement benefit subject to the requirements of amended AS 14.25.167. See secs. 13-15.

Sec. 5. Amends AS 14.25.150. Makes current provisions into subsection (a); makes terminated teacher's entitlement to refund of contribution account subject to provisions of new AS 14.25.150(b). See sec. 6.

Sec. 6. Amends AS 14.25.150. Adds new subsection (b) that makes terminated teacher's entitlement to refund of contribution account subject to consent of the teacher's spouse and of each person entitled to benefits under a "qualified domestic relations order" if the teacher is vested, deferred vested, or entitled to a conditional service retirement benefit. Consent of the spouse may be waived by the administrator if the teacher was not married to the spouse during the teacher's employment with an employer; if the spouse has no rights to benefits under AS 14.25 because of the terms of a qualified domestic relations order (see sec. 17); if the spouse cannot be located; or for other reasons established by regulation.

Sec. 7. Amends AS 14.25. Adds a new section 14.25.153 which establishes a person's priority of rights to benefits of under a qualified domestic relations order over rights of a spouse, surviving spouse or dependent child. Establishes right of a person to be treated as a spouse or surviving spouse to the extent required by a qualified domestic relations order. See sec. 17. Provides that the person's rights do not take effect until the order is filed with the administrator.

Sec. 8. Amends AS 14.25.155(c). Makes teacher's designation of person other than spouse as beneficiary for nonoccupational death benefits subject to requirements of amended AS 14.25.166. See secs. 10-12.

Sec. 9. Amends AS 14.25.157(a). Makes teacher's designation of person other than spouse as beneficiary for occupational death benefits subject to requirements of amended AS 14.-25.166. See secs. 10-12.

Sec. 10. Amends AS 14.25.166(a). Makes teacher's spouse at time of death automatically the teacher's designated beneficiary for death benefits, unless the spouse was not married to the teacher during a period of the teacher's employment with an employer. The spouse is the automatic designated beneficiary except to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order requires payment to a former spouse or dependent of the teacher. The designation of the spouse as beneficiary can be revoked if the spouse consents in writing to revocation. A person's entitlement under a qualified domestic relations order can be revoked if the person consents in writing to revocation.

Sec. 11. Amends AS 14.25.166(b). Makes teacher's right to revoke beneficiary subject to requirements of amended AS 14.25.166(a). See sec. 10.

Sec. 12. Amends AS 14.25.166. Adds new subsection (d) that requires persons who claim entitlement to death benefits under AS 14.25 to provide the administrator with evidence of entitlement, such as a marriage certificate, divorce or dissolution judgment, or other evidence. Marriage certificates and divorce or dissolution decrees may be filed with the administrator immediately after the teacher is married or divorced. A person who claims entitlement to death benefits under AS 14.25 is not entitled to receive from the division of retirement and benefits any death benefits already paid by the administrator if the administrator does not receive notification of a claim before 10 days after the teacher's death.

Sec. 13. AS 14.25.167(a) is repealed and reenacted. The new provisions of AS 14.25.167(a) require a teacher who retires or who becomes eligible for retirement under AS 14.25.130-(e) to designate his or her spouse at the time of appointment to retirement as the contingent beneficiary for a joint and survivor benefit, unless the designation is revoked under AS 14.25.167(c). See sec. 14. If the designation is revoked, the teacher may choose normal or early retirement benefits under AS 14.25.110 or 14.25.125.

Sec. 14. Amends AS 14.25.167(c). Permits a teacher to revoke a joint and survivor option only by filing a revocation and a written consent to the revocation signed by the teacher's spouse and each person entitled to benefits under a qualified domestic relations order. See sec. 17. The administrator may waive the requirement of written consent from a person entitled under a qualified domestic relations order if the person cannot be located or for other reasons established by regulation. The administrator may waive the requirement that the teacher file written consent to a revocation signed by the teacher's spouse if the teacher is not married, if the teacher was not married to the spouse during any period of the teacher's employment with an employer, if the spouse has no right to be contingent beneficiary because of the terms of a qualified domestic relations order, if the spouse cannot be located, or for other reasons established by regulation.

Sec. 15. Amends AS 14.25.167. Adds a new subsection (f) which requires the teacher and any person who claims to be a contingent beneficiary to file with the administrator evidence necessary to determine the identity of any contingent beneficiary. New subsection (g) limits the liability of the Teachers' Retirement System if the administrator determines that a teacher may choose a benefit other than a joint and survivor option and no contrary evidence is presented to the administrator within 60 days after the teacher's retirement. Under those circumstances, no claim of a spouse or former spouse may be paid if payment would result in an increase in actuarial liability to the system. Under new subsection (h), if the teacher fails to specify which of the three joint and survivor options is elected, the 50 percent option provided in AS 14.25.167(a)(2) is considered elected.

Sec. 16. Amends AS 14.25.200(a). Provides that a teacher's right to receive benefits under AS 14.25 may be assigned under a qualified domestic relations order. See sec. 17.

Sec. 17. Amends AS 14.25.220. Adds a new paragraph (43), defining "qualified domestic relations order." A qualified domestic relations order is a divorce or dissolution judgment, including an order approving a property settlement, that recognizes the right of an alternate payee to receive all or a portion of a benefit payable with respect to a teacher. The order must set out the names and addresses of the member and of each alternate payee covered by the order. It must set out the amount or percentage (or manner of determining the amount or percentage) of any benefit to be paid to the alternate payee and the number of payments or period to which the order applies.

A qualified domestic relations order may not require any type or form of benefit or option not otherwise provided by AS 14.25, nor may it require an increase, based on actuarial value, of benefits in excess of the amount provided by AS 14.25. A qualified domestic relations order may not require the payment to an alternate payee of benefits that are required to be paid to another alternate payee under an order previously determined to be a qualified domestic relations order. An example of the effect of these provisions is that, since the systems do not provide for any form of partial health benefit for a spouse of a member and since provision of a full health benefit to more than one spouse would require an increase of benefits in excess of the amount provided by AS 14.25, a qualified domestic relations order cannot require that more than one person is entitled to the health benefits provided to the spouse of a retiree.

Sec. 18. Amends AS 22.25.030(b). Reduces from two to one the number of years a spouse must have been married to a judge for the spouse to be eligible for a survivors' benefit under the Judicial Retirement System (JRS).

Sec. 19. Amends AS 22.25.030. Adds a new subsection (f), providing that the rights of a surviving spouse or dependent to JRS survivors' benefits are subject to the rights of a previous spouse or a dependent under a qualified domestic relations order. See sec. 21.

Sec. 20. Amends AS 22.25. Adds a new section 22.25.-035 which provides that a person who was married to a judge for at least one year and has not remarried may be treated as the spouse or surviving spouse of a judge to the extent required by a qualified domestic relations order. See sec. 21.

Sec. 21. Amends AS 22.25. Adds a new section 22.25.-900, defining "qualified domestic relations order." See sec. 17.

Sec. 22. Amends AS 25.24.160. Adds a new subsection (b), providing that, in order to distribute Teachers', Judicial, Public Employees' or Alaska National Guard and Naval Militia retirement or death benefits to an alternate payee, a divorce judgment must meet the requirements of a qualified domestic relations order. See secs. 17, 21, 26, 43.

Sec. 23. Amends AS 25.24.230. Adds a new subsection (g), providing that, in order to distribute Teachers', Judicial, Public Employees' or Alaska National Guard and Naval Militia retirement or death benefits to an alternate payee, a dissolution judgment must meet the requirements of a qualified domestic relations order. See secs. 17, 21, 26, 43.

Sec. 24. Amends AS 26.05.224(d). Makes Alaska National Guard or Naval Milita member's right to revoke designation of spouse as beneficiary for death benefits subject to requirements of new AS 26.25.224(e). See sec. 25. If no beneficiary is designated or if the designated beneficiary does not survive the member, the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs is required to pay the death benefit to the member's surviving spouse, except as required by a qualified domestic relations order. See sec. 26.

Sec. 25. Amends AS 26.05.224. A new subsection (e) is added which makes Alaska National Guard or Naval Milita member's spouse at time of death automatically the member's designated beneficiary, unless the spouse was not married to the member during a period of the member's service. The spouse is the automatic designated beneficiary except to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order requires payment to a former spouse or dependent of the member. See sec. 26. Designation of the spouse as beneficiary can be revoked if the spouse consents in writing to revocation. A person's entitlement under a qualified domestic relations order can be revoked if the person consents in writing to revocation. A new subsection (f) requires persons who claim entitlement to death benefits under AS 26.05.224 to provide the department with evidence of entitlement, such as a marriage certificate, divorce or dissolution judgment, or other evidence. Marriage certificates and divorce or dissolution decrees may be filed with the department immediately after the member is married or divorced. A person who claims entitlement to death benefits under AS 26.05.224 is not entitled to receive from the Departments of Administration or Military and Veterans' Affairs any death benefits already paid by the department if the department does not receive notification of a claim before 10 days after the member's death.

Sec. 26. Amends AS 26.05.227. Adds a new paragraph (4), defining "qualified domestic relations order." See sec. 17.

Sec. 27. Amends AS 39.35.200(a). Makes terminated employee's right to refund of contribution account subject to requirements of new AS 39.35.200(c). See sec. 28.

Sec. 28. Amends AS 39.35.200. Adds new subsection (c) that makes terminated employee's entitlement to refund of contributions subject to consent of spouse and each person entitled to benefits under a "qualified domestic relations order" (see sec. 43 if the employee is vested, deferred vested, or entitled to a conditional service retirement benefit. Consent of the spouse may be waived by the administrator if the employee was not married to the spouse during any period of the employee's employment with an employer; if the spouse has no rights to benefits under AS 39.35 because of the terms of a qualified domestic relations order; if the spouse cannot be located; or for other reasons established by regulation.

Sec. 29. Amends AS 39.35.370(a). Makes employee's eligibility for a normal retirement benefit subject to the requirements of amended AS 39.35.450. See secs. 36-38.

Sec. 30. Amends AS 39.35.370(b). Makes employee's eligibility for an early retirement benefit subject to the requirements of amended AS 39.35.450. See secs. 36-38.

Sec. 31. Amends AS 39.35.385(a). Makes an employee's eligibility for a normal conditional service retirement benefit subject to the requirements of amended AS 39.35.450. See secs. 36-38.

Sec. 32. Amends AS 39.35.385(b). Makes an employee's eligibility for an early conditional service retirement benefit subject to the requirements of amended AS 39.35.450. See secs. 36-38.

Sec. 33. Amends AS 39.35.420(c). Makes employee's designation of beneficiary other than spouse for nonoccupational death benefits subject to requirements of amended AS 39.35.490. See sec. 40.

Sec. 34. Amends AS 39.35.430(f). Makes employee's designation of beneficiary other than spouse for occupational death benefits subject to requirements of amended AS 39.35.490. See sec. 40.

Sec. 35. Amends AS 39.35.440(b). Makes employee's designation of beneficiary other than spouse for benefits payable upon death of employee after occupational disability subject to requirements of amended AS 39.35.490. See sec. 40.

Sec. 36. AS 39.35.450(a) is repealed and reenacted. The new provisions of AS 39.35.450(a) require an employee who retires or who becomes eligible for normal retirement under AS 39.35.400(f) or 39.35.410(h) to designate his or her spouse at the time of appointment to retirement as the contingent beneficiary for a joint and survivor benefit, unless the designation is revoked under AS 39.35.450(c). See sec. 37. If the designation is revoked, the employee may choose normal or early retirement benefits under AS 39.35.370 or 39.35.385 or a level income option under AS 39.35.460.

Sec. 37. Amends AS 39.35.450(c). Permits an employee to revoke a joint and survivor option only by filing a revocation and a written consent to the revocation signed by the employee's spouse and each person entitled to benefits under a qualified domestic relations order. See sec. 43. The administrator may waive the requirement of written consent from a person entitled under a qualified domestic relations order if the person cannot be located or for other reasons established by regulation. The administrator may waive the requirement that the employee file written consent to a revocation signed by the employee's spouse if the employee is not married, if the employee was not married to the spouse during any period of the employee's employment with an employer, if the spouse has no right to be contingent beneficiary because of the terms of a qualified domestic relations order, if the spouse cannot be located, or for other reasons established by regulation.

Sec. 38. Amends AS 39.35.450. Adds a new subsection (f) which requires the employee and any person who claims to be a contingent beneficiary to file with the administrator evidence necessary to determine the identity of any contingent beneficiary. New subsection (g) limits the liability of the Public Employees' Retirement System if the administrator determines that an employee may choose a benefit other than a joint and survivor option and no contrary evidence is presented to the administrator within 60 days after the employee's retirement. Under those circumstances, no claim of a spouse or former spouse may be paid if payment would result in an increase in actuarial liability to the system. Under new subsection (h), if the employee fails to specify which of the three joint and survivor options is elected, the 50 percent option provided in AS 39.35.450(a)(2) is considered elected.

Sec. 39. Amends AS 39.35. Adds a new section 39.35.-455, which establishes a person's priority of rights under a qualified domestic relations order over rights of a spouse, surviving spouse or dependent child. See sec. 43. Establishes right of a person to be treated as a spouse or surviving spouse to the extent required by a qualified domestic relations order. Provides that the person's rights do not take effect until the order is filed with the administrator.

Sec. 40. Amends AS 39.35.490. Makes employee's spouse at time of death automatically the employee's designated beneficiary for death benefits, unless the spouse was not married to the employee during a period of the employee's employment with an employer. The spouse is the automatic designated beneficiary except to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order requires payment to a former spouse or dependent of the employee. The designation of the spouse as beneficiary can be revoked if the spouse consents in writing to revocation. A person's entitlement under a qualified domestic relations order can be revoked if the person consents in writing to revocation.

Sec. 41. Amends AS 39.35.490. Adds new subsection (d) that requires persons who claim entitlement to death benefits under AS 39.35 to provide the administrator with evidence of entitlement, such as a marriage certificate, divorce or dissolution judgment, or other evidence. Marriage certificates and divorce or dissolution decrees may be filed with the administrator immediately after the employee is married or divorced. A person who claims entitlement to death benefits under AS 39.35 is not entitled to receive from the division of retirement and benefits any death benefits already paid by the administrator if the administrator does not receive notification of a claim before 10 days after the employee's death.

Sec. 42. Amends AS 39.35.500. Provides that an employee's right to receive benefits under AS 39.35 may be assigned under a qualified domestic relations order. See sec. 43.

Sec. 43. Amends AS 39.35.680. Adds a new paragraph (40), defining "qualified domestic relations order." See sec. 17.

Sec. 44. Requires the Department of Administration to publish notice of the provisions of the Act and make available the forms necessary to implement the Act within 90 days after the effective date of sec. 44.

Sec. 45. Gives sec. 44 an immediate effective date.

Sec. 46. Makes secs. 1-43 of the Act effective on January 1, 1986. (This date should be changed to January 1, 1987.)

The Honorable Mitch Abood
Chairman
Senate State Affairs
P.O. Box V

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I am writing in response to your request to John Logan of March 18, 1986, in which you asked for an explanation of the payment options from a Supplemental Benefits System (SBS) annuity account.

An employee is eligible to receive his or her SBS annuity account 90 days following termination of employment.

There are nine forms of payment. Payment may be made in:

1) a lump sum

2) guaranteed monthly payments over five years
(to the employee or the employee's beneficiary)

3) guaranteed monthly payments over ten years
(to the employee or the employee's beneficiary)

4) guaranteed monthly payments over 15 years
(to the employee or the employee's beneficiary)

5) a single life annuity
(monthly payments over the employee's lifetime only)

6) a lifetime annuity with ten years certain (monthly payments over the employee's lifetime with ten years payments guaranteed)

7) a lifetime annuity with 15 years certain (monthly payments over the employee's lifetime with 15 years payments guaranteed)

8) a 50% joint and survivor annuity
(monthly payments over the employee's lifetime with monthly payments of half that amount for the employee's surviving spouse)

9) a 100% joint and survivor annuity
(equal monthly payments over the employee's and spouse's lifetimes)

If an employee is married at the time payment is to commence, the Federal Retirement Equity Act of 1984 requires that payment be made in the form of a joint and survivor annuity, unless the employee's spouse signs a waiver. The waiver indicates the spouse's understanding and agreement with the form of payment selected.

If the spouse does not sign a waiver, the employee must select either a 50% or 100% joint and survivor annuity (items 8 and 9 above), or the employee may elect to defer receipt of payment until a later date.

If you have additional questions, please let me know.

Sincerely,

J.K. Humphreys

DRAFT

April 10, 1986

Honorable Mitch Abood, Chairman
Senate State Affairs Committee
Alaska State Legislature
P.O. Box V
Juneau, AK 99811

Re: CSHB 237(Rls), retirement bill

Dear Senator Abood:

At the committee's March 18, 1986 hearing on CSHB 237 (Rls), the committee instructed me to draft changes to be included in the committee substitute as follows:

1. simplification of language concerning rights under a qualified domestic relations order (QDRO); and

2. addition of language to the bill to allow a spouse "veto power" over only 50 percent of the benefits.

After consultation with the two agencies interested in this bill, the Alaska Women's Commission and the division of retirement and benefits, we recommend that in sections 7 and 39, the following language be substituted for the current language:

> A former spouse shall be treated as a spouse or surviving spouse to the extent required by a qualified domestic relations order. Rights under the order do not take effect until the order is filed with the administrator.

In section 20, we recommend that the following language be substituted for the current language:

A former spouse who was married to the justice or judge for at least one year and who has not remarried shall be treated as a spouse or surviving spouse to the extent required by a qualified domestic relations order. Rights under the order do not take effect until the order is filed with the administrator.

The committee has also instructed that language be added to the committee substitute to provide that a spouse has "veto power" only over 50 percent of the benefits. This instruction was given after a discussion about the right of a member to withdraw the member's contribution account upon termination of employment. However, under this bill, the spouse has other "veto" rights, including the rights to withhold consent to payment of a benefit in a form other than a joint and survivor option and to withhold consent to designation of a person other than the spouse as beneficiary for survivors' benefits.

A. Contribution account. The bill currently provides that, when a vested member terminates employment, he or she may receive a refund of the contribution account only with consent of the spouse and other persons entitled under a QDRO. Allowing "veto power" over only 50 percent of the refund of the contribution account could be accomplished in several ways, none of which is supported by both the Alaska Women's Commission and the division of retirement and benefits. Therefore, the committee must determine which, if any, option it wants to include in the committee substitute, after considering the problems each option presents.

First, if a member has no former spouse or dependents entitled under a QDRO and if the spouse does not consent to withdrawal of the contribution account, the contribution account can be paid out in two checks, one to the member, and one to the spouse. This option is strongly opposed by the Women's Commission. Under the state's retirement systems, the value of the benefits that will/may received upon retirement, including the monthly benefit and medical benefits for a member's spouse and dependents, is much greater than the value of the contribution account. The main purpose of this bill is to acknowledge and protect the interest of a spouse in those benefits.

Second, if there are persons entitled under a QDRO, those persons can be paid a portion of the contribution account proportionate to their interest in benefits established by the order. The remainder of the contribution account can be paid to the member or, if the member has a new spouse, half of the remainder can be paid to the member and half to the spouse. In addition to the objections set out for the first option, this option is objectionable due to the fact that it would be very difficult for the division of retirement and benefits to administer. Furthermore, if marital property is divided under a QDRO based on an assumption that a member will receive benefits from a state retirement system, a portion of which will be paid to persons entitled under the QDRO, the member should not be permitted to forfeit the benefits by withdrawing the contribution account without the consent of the persons entitled under the order.

Third, if the member has no former spouse or dependents entitled under a QDRO and if the present spouse does not consent to withdrawal of the contribution account, the bill could provide that one-half of the account would be paid to the member and one-half must remain in the system to provide the spouse with a benefit. New sections would have to be enacted to define what benefit the spouse will receive. Will the benefit be one-half of what the member's benefit would have been? When is the benefit payable to the spouse? Can the spouse select a joint and survivor option? If the member becomes reemployed by the state and wants to reinstate the service credit, can the member reinstate all of the service credit under his or her own account, or only half of the service credit, with the spouse remaining entitled to a separate benefit? If the member and the spouse divorce, is the spouse's benefit subject to a qualified domestic relations order?

Fourth, if there are persons entitled under a QDRO, the bill could provide that an amount proportionate to the share of the member's benefit that is due those persons must remain in the contribution account. The remainder would be refunded to the member or, if the member has a new spouse, one-half of the remainder would be paid to the member and one-half would remain in the system to provide the spouse with a benefit. Again, new sections would have to be enacted to define the benefit the spouse would receive and the questions raised in option three must be resolved. In addition, it could be extremely difficult, administratively, for the division of retirement and benefits to determine what proportion of the contribution account must remain in the system to result in payment of benefits required under a QDRO.

B. Joint and survivor option. The bill currently requires a married member to choose a joint and survivor option upon retiring, unless the spouse consents to another form of benefit payment. We can think of no way to change this to a 50 percent "veto power."

C. Spouse as designated beneficiary. The bill currently provides that the spouse of a member is automatically the designated beneficiary for survivors' benefits, except to the extent required by a QDRO, unless the spouse consents to designation of some other person as the beneficiary. This could be changed to provide that, notwithstanding the designation of another person as beneficiary and except to the extent required by a QDRO, the spouse is automatically the designated beneficiary entitled to receive one-half of the survivors' benefit that he or she would have been entitled to receive if he or she had been designated the sole beneficiary. Other beneficiaries would receive one-half of what they would otherwise have received. The spouse could consent to designation of someone other than the spouse as beneficiary for 100 percent of the survivors' benefits.

Before the committee hearing on April 16, 1986, we will provide proposed language to add to the March 14, 1986 draft committee substitute to implement the options identified in this memorandum. We recommend that the changes suggested in this memorandum to sections 7, 20, and 39 be included in the draft committee substitute. In addition, in accordance with the committee's instruction at a previous hearing on this bill, the word

"present" should be inserted on page 5, line 12 of the March 14, 1986 draft, between the words "the" and "spouse."

Very truly yours,

NOTES TO DECISIONS

"Membership years" in AS 14.25.130(a). — Teachers' Retirement Board erred when it interpreted the term "membership years" in AS 14.25.130(a) as being the equivalent of "years of service" as defined in paragraph (16). (b) If, upon termination of employment, an employee has credited service of less than five years and has less than $1,000 in the employee contribution account, a refund of the employee contribution account must be made unless the employee indicates in writing that future retirement is intended and contributions should not be refunded. Effect of amendments. — The 1982 amendment, in subsection (a), deleted the item (1) designation preceding "the employee contribution account" and deleted "and (2) his employee savings account" from the end of that subsection. In subsection (b), the amendment substituted "the" for "his" preceding "employee contribution account" and the language beginning "must be made unless the employee indicates" for "and the employee savings account must be made" in the first sentence.

Article 4. Contributions by Employers.

Section
250. Calculation of employer's contribution rate
260. Annual calculation
270. Amount of employer's contributions
280. Determination and payment of state contributions
290. Regulations governing transmittal of employer contributions

Sec. 39.35.250. Calculation of employer's contribution rate. (a) An employer shall make contributions to the system in amounts determined in accordance with this section. For the purposes of this section, the past service date for each employer is the entry date of the employer or December 31, 1972, whichever is later. After December 31, 1972, if amendments to this chapter are enacted that substantially affect benefits accrued before the effective date of the amendment, the past service date will be changed to December 31 of the year immediately preceding that in which the amendment is enacted. The contribution rate is the sum of the consolidated employer rate and the past service rate.

(b) As used in (a) of this section, "consolidated employer rate" means the percentage of compensation of all active employees in the system which, if paid over the period of their credited service after their past service date and when combined with all employee contributions, is sufficient to provide the benefits earned after such past service dates. This percentage is uniformly determined for all employers and is applicable to each employer.

(c) As used in (a) of this section, "past service rate" means the percentage of compensation of all active employees in the system necessary to provide the annual amount required to amortize the unfunded obligations of the employer for benefits earned before the employer's past service date over a period not to exceed 40 years. The period of amortization begins at the past service date of each employer. The percentage is separately determined for each employer. (§ 10 a ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 13 ch 1 SLA 1974; am § 24 ch 128 SLA 1977)

Sec. 39.35.260. Annual calculation. The contribution rate for each employer shall be calculated every fiscal year, using the information available at the time the computation is made. The computation shall be completed in time to be considered in the state budget. Each employer shall provide in its budget for the payment of contributions according to its current contribution rate. (§ 10 b ch 143 SLA 1960)

Sec. 39.35.270. Amount of employer's contributions. The amount of each employer's contributions shall be determined by applying the employer's contribution rate to the total compensation paid to the active employees of the employer for each payroll period. This amount shall be remitted by the employer to the administrator in accordance with AS 39.35.610. (§ 10 c ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 14 ch 1 SLA 1974; am § 25 ch 128 SLA 1977)

Sec. 39.35.280. Determination and payment of state contributions. The total amount of contributions required under AS 39.35.250 — 39.35.290 to be made by the state into the system shall be ascertained by the department of administration as soon as practicable after the end of each calendar month and shall be paid from the general fund of the state, except as provided in this section. If an employee is paid wages by the state during the month from a special or administrative fund provided by law, the payment to the system shall be made from that special or administrative fund. If the wages of an employee include both wages for state employment paid from the general fund of the state and wages for state employment paid from special or administrative funds, the amount to be paid into the system shall be prorated among the state funds in proportion to the wages paid to the individuals from each fund. However, payment may not be made from the special or administrative fund if the statute covering the special or administrative funds prohibits it. (§ 10 d ch 143 SLA 1960)

Sec. 39.35.290. Regulations governing transmittal of employer contributions. The board shall adopt regulations to ensure the orderly and efficient transmittal of employer contributions. (§ 10 e ch 143 SLA 1960)

Article 5. Service.

Section	Section
300. Employment with the state	345. Temporary service credit
310. Employment with other employer	350. Reinstatement of credited service
330. Leave of absence	360. Earlier service
340. Military service

Sec. 39.35.300. Employment with the state. (a) An active employee is entitled to credited service for periods of employment with the state after January 1, 1961, regardless of the office, department, division, or agency of the state in which the person was employed. For purposes of this chapter, the University of Alaska is not an office, department, division, or agency of the state. Service credit may not be granted under this chapter for service that is creditable under the teachers' retirement system, AS 14.25.

(b) A permanent part-time employee of the state receives credited service on a pro rata basis to that which would have been earned as a permanent full-time employee. (§ 11 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 4 ch 155 SLA 1966; am § 4 ch 27 SLA 1976; am § 26 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 29 ch 13 SLA 1980)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment added the present second and third sentences in subsection (a).

Sec. 39.35.310. Employment with other employers. (a) An active employee is entitled to credited service for periods of employment with a political subdivision or a public organization beginning with the effective date of the employer's participation in the system. The employee is also entitled to credited service for periods of employment as designated in the employer's participation agreement.

(b) A permanent part-time employee of a political subdivision or a public organization receives credited service on a basis proportionate to that which would have been earned as a permanent full-time employee. (§ 12 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 27 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 30 ch 13 SLA 1980)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment deleted "or quasi-public" preceding "organization" in the first sentence of subsection (a) and in subsection (b).

Sec. 39.35.320. Transfers between employers. [Repealed, § 55 ch 128 SLA 1977.]

Sec. 39.35.330. Leave of absence. (a) A leave of absence with pay authorized by an employer will not be considered as interrupting employment. If the employee is a permanent part-time employee, credited service will be granted on a basis proportionate to that which would have been earned as a permanent full-time employee.

(b) A leave of absence without pay that exceeds 10 working days in any calendar year or layoff status authorized by an employer will be considered as an interruption of employment and no credited service will be granted. (§ 14 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 28 ch 128 SLA 1977)

Sec. 39.35.340. Military service. (a) A vested employee is entitled to credited service for active military service in the armed forces of the United States, either by enlistment or induction, if the employee did not receive a dishonorable discharge. The credited service allowed may not exceed an aggregate period of five years. Benefits are not payable on credited service for military service unless the employee makes retroactive contributions to the system for the period of time that service credit is claimed. However, if the employee was in the employ of an employer on the date of entry into the armed forces and returned to the employ of an employer within 90 days after the date of discharge from military service, the employee is not required to make retroactive contributions under this system for the period of credited service.

(b) In order to obtain credited service under this section, an employee shall make an election to do so and shall verify the period of military service. When eligibility for credited service for military service has been established, an indebtedness shall be determined as follows: (1) the employee's actual compensation, or the calculated annual compensation for those employees working less than 12 months, during the calendar year 1976 or the year in which an employee first becomes vested under this chapter, whichever is later, multiplied by (2) six percent, this product multiplied by (3) the number of years of military service credited under this section. Interest as prescribed by regulation accrues on this indebtedness commencing on July 1, 1977, or one year following the date a person first becomes vested, whichever is later. Any outstanding indebtedness which exists at the time a person is appointed to retirement will necessitate an actuarial adjustment to the benefits payable based upon that military service.

(c) A retired employee on July 1, 1976, is eligible to receive increased benefits based upon military service as described in (a) of this section. To receive credited service for military service, a retired employee must verify the military service. When verified, a retired employee is entitled to receive an increased benefit that shall be actuarially adjusted to reflect the employee's indebtedness for that credit. The indebtedness shall be calculated in the same manner as described in (b) of this section except that it shall be based on the average monthly compensation used in calculating the benefit. The effective date of this increased benefit is the beginning of the month following that in which eligibility has been established.

(d) The credited service granted under this section may not be used to satisfy the credited service requirements for normal retirement.

(e) A deferred vested employee on July 1, 1976, is eligible to claim credited service under (a) of this section. In order to obtain credited service under this section, such an employee must make an election to do so and must verify the period of military service. When eligibility for military service has been established, an indebtedness shall be determined as follows: the employee's actual compensation, or the calculated annual compensation for those employees working less than 12 months, during the calendar year the employee terminated, shall be multiplied by six percent; this product shall then be multiplied by the number of years of military service credit under this section. Interest as prescribed by regulation accrues on this indebtedness commencing July 1, 1978. Any outstanding indebtedness that exists at the time a person is appointed to retirement will necessitate an actuarial adjustment to the benefits payable based upon that military service.

(f) An employee cannot be credited with a period of active military service in the armed forces of the United States under this section if credit for that military service was granted under AS 14.25.

(g) A surviving spouse receiving or entitled to receive benefits under AS 39.35.420(b), 39.35.430, or 39.35.440 or benefits under a joint and survivor option filed under AS 39.35.450 is eligible to receive increased benefits based on military service as described in (a) of this section. To receive credited service for military service, the surviving spouse must verify the employee's military service. When verified, the surviving spouse is entitled to receive an increased benefit which shall be actuarially adjusted to reflect the indebtedness for that credit. The indebtedness shall be calculated in the same manner as described in (b) of this section except that it shall be based on the average monthly compensation used in calculating the benefit. Benefits payable under this subsection are effective the first day of the month following that in which eligibility has been established.

(h) The combined period of military service claimed under this section and under AS 14.25 may not exceed five years. (§ 15 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 1 ch 123 SLA 1976; am § 29 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 6 ch 174 SLA 1978; am §§ 31 — 36 ch 13 SLA 1980; am § 46 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment in subsection (b), deleted "before July 1, 1977 or within one year following the date when the employee first becomes vested under this chapter, if later" at the end of the first sentence, and added a comma following "July 1, 1977" in the next to last sentence; in subsection (c), inserted a comma following "July 1, 1976" near the beginning of the subsection, deleted "before July 1, 1977" at the end of the second sentence, and substituted "that credit" for "such credit" at the end of the third sentence; in subsection (e), inserted a comma following "July 1, 1976" near the beginning of the subsection, and deleted "before July 1, 1978" at the end of the second sentence; in subsection (f) inserted "a period of" preceding "active military service" near the beginning of the subsection, and inserted "that" preceding "military service" near the end of the subsection; in subsection (g) deleted "within one year of the effective date of this act" at the end of the second sentence, and substituted "effective the first day of the month following that in which eligibility has been established" for "payable retroactively to July 1, 1977" at the end of the subsection; and added present subsection (h).

The 1982 amendment substituted "benefits under AS 39.35.420(b), 39.35.430, or 39.35.440" for "a surviving spouse's pension under AS 39.35.440" in the first sentence of subsection (g).

Sec. 39.35.345. Temporary service credit. (a) A vested employee is entitled to credited service for periods in which the employee regularly rendered full-time personal service to an employer but was not qualified to participate in the system because of the exclusion of temporary workers as described in AS 39.35.680(21)(C)(iii). Benefits are not payable on this credited service unless the employee makes retroactive contributions to the system for the period of time that credited service is claimed. The retroactive contribution is the full actuarial cost of providing benefits for the credited service claimed.

(b) To obtain credited service under this section, an employee must elect to do so and must verify the period of temporary service before July 1, 1981, or within one year following the date when the employee first becomes vested under this chapter, if later. When eligibility for temporary service credit has been established, an indebtedness shall be determined as provided in (a) of this section. Interest as prescribed by regulation accrues on that indebtedness beginning July 1, 1981, or one year following the date an employee first becomes vested, whichever is later. Any outstanding indebtedness existing at the time an employee retires will require an actuarial adjustment to the benefits payable based on the temporary service.

(c) A deferred vested employee on July 1, 1980, is eligible to claim credited service under (a) of this section. To obtain credited service under this section, a deferred vested employee must elect to do so and must verify the period of temporary service before July 1, 1981. When eligibility for temporary service credit has been established, an indebtedness shall be determined as provided in (a) of this section. Interest as prescribed by regulation accrues on that indebtedness beginning July 1, 1981. Any outstanding indebtedness existing at the time a deferred vested employee retires will require an actuarial adjustment to the benefits payable based on the temporary service.

(d) The credited service granted under this section may not be used to satisfy the credited service requirements for normal or early retirement. (§ 29 ch 146 SLA 1980)

Revisor's notes. — Enacted as AS 39.35.156. Renumbered in 1980.

Sec. 39.35.350. Reinstatement of credited service. (a) An employee who receives a refund of contributions in accordance with AS 39.35.200 forfeits corresponding credited service under this chapter.

(b) An employee may reinstate credited service associated with a refund by repaying the total amount of the refund. Interest will accrue from the date of the refund until repayment of the refund or retirement, whichever occurs first. Payments will apply first to accrued interest and then to principal.

(c) Any outstanding indebtedness that exists at the time an employee is appointed to retirement will necessitate an actuarial adjustment to the benefits payable based on service reinstated under this section. (§ 16 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 3 ch 235 SLA 1968; am § 2 ch 81 SLA 1976; am § 30 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 84 ch 59 SLA 1982; am § 47 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The first 1982 amendment inserted "credited" in subsection (a). The second 1982 amendment rewrote subsection (c).

Sec. 39.35.360. Earlier service. (a) An employee employed before January 1, 1980, who completes three years of credited service with the state aft. January 1, 1961, for which the employee makes contributions required by this chapter is entitled to credited service for service rendered (1) before January 1, 1961, as an employee of the state and former Territory of Alaska; (2) before January 1, 1961, as an employee of the United States government in Alaska, excluding service in the armed forces of the United States; or (3) after January 1, 1961, as a peace officer, correctional officer, or fireman of a participating political subdivision of the state if the employee is vested and is an active peace officer, correctional officer, or fireman in the system as of July 1, 1980. The retirement benefits payable to an employee under this section shall be reduced by the amount of the retirement pension benefits paid to the employee by the United States government for the same period of service.

(b) An employee who, under (a) of this section, is entitled to credited service for employment before January 1, 1961, is not required to make retroactive contributions under this chapter.

(c) [Repealed, § 41 ch 146 SLA 1980.]

(d) [Repealed, § 2 ch 26 SLA 1974.]

(e) An employee of a detention facility provided by a local government unit to the territorial or state government under AS 33.30.060, who continues in state employment upon transfer of the facility to the state, is entitled to credited service for prior service with the facility if the employee remains in continuous employment with the state until July 1, 1976. To obtain credited service the employee is required to make retroactive contributions for the period of service between January 1, 1961, and the effective date of the transfer of the facility to the state.

(f) A surviving spouse receiving or entitled to receive a surviving spouse's pension under AS 39.35.440 or benefits under a joint and survivor option filed under AS 39.35.450 is eligible for increased benefits for any service credit authorized under (a) of this section, but not claimed or authorized by law before the employee's death.

(g) An employee is eligible to receive up to 10 years of credited service for service rendered before July 1, 1979, as a temporary employee of the legislature of the state or territory during legislative sessions. To receive retroactive credited service under this subsection, an employee must claim the service before July 1, 1980. When the employee claims the service, an indebtedness of the employee to the system shall be established. The amount of this indebtedness is equal to the contributions the employee would have made if the employee had been eligible for membership in the system. The rate used to calculate these contributions may not be less than the rate in effect on January 1, 1961. Interest as prescribed by regulation accrues on this indebtedness beginning July 1, 1980. Any outstanding indebtedness that exists at the time the employee retires will require an actuarial adjustment to the benefits that are based upon retroactive credited service under this subsection.

(h) An employee of the state is eligible to receive credited service as provided under AS 39.35.300(b) for service rendered as a permanent part-time employee before January 1, 1976. To receive retroactive credited service under this subsection, the employee must claim the service before July 1, 1981. When the employee claims retroactive credited service, an indebtedness of the employee to the system shall be established. The amount of this indebtedness is equal to the contributions the employee would have made if the employee had been eligible for membership in the system. The rate used to calculate the contributions may not be less than the rate in effect on January 1, 1961. Interest as prescribed by regulation accrues on the indebtedness beginning July 1, 1981. Any outstanding indebtedness that exists at the time the employee retires will require an actuarial adjustment to the benefits that are based on retroactive credited service under this subsection.

(i) An employee who completes three years of credited service with an employer, for which the employee makes contributions required by this chapter, is entitled to credited service on a year-for-year basis for service credited in the Civil Service Retirement System, rendered as an employee of an Alaska Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) school, other than service as a teacher. Retroactive credited service under this section must be claimed before the employee retires. When eligibility for retroactive credited service under this section has been established, an indebtedness of the employee to the system shall be established. The amount of this indebtedness is determined by multiplying six percent of the employee's actual annual compensation, or the calculated annual compensation for an employee who works fewer than 12 months, for the most recent calendar year in which service is rendered to an employer before the calendar year in which the employee first becomes eligible to claim service under this subsection, by the number of years of service in Alaska BIA schools that is credited under this subsection. Interest as prescribed by regulation accrues on the indebtedness beginning on the date the employee may first claim the retroactive credited service. Any outstanding indebtedness that exists at the time the employee retires requires an actuarial adjustment to the benefits that are based on retroactive credited service under this section. Service may not be claimed under this subsection and benefits may not be paid for service claimed under this subsection if the employee has, at any point in time, enough service credit in the Civil Service Retirement System to be eligible for a retirement benefit under that system.

(j) An employee who has not completed three years of credited service with an employer may claim credited service as an employee of an Alaska Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) school, other than service as a teacher under (i) of this section if, on the date of transfer of the Alaska BIA school to the state, the employee is employed at the school and needs fewer than three additional years of continuous full-time employment for normal retirement in the federal Civil Service Retirement System, and the employee completes a period of service with an employer, for which the employee makes contributions required by this chapter, equal to the additional period of service that would have been required for that employee's normal retirement under the federal Civil Service Retirement System. An employee who claims credited service under this subsection must provide federal government verification of the employee's federal Civil Service Retirement System status when the claim is filed. Revisor's notes. — Subsection (a) of this section apparently has no effect after January 1, 1980, since it applies only to employees employed before that date.

Subsection (g) of this section apparently has no effect after July 1, 1980, since credited service under this subsection must have been claimed by that date.

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment rewrote subsection (a), repealed subsection (c) and added subsection (h).

The 1982 amendment, in the first sentence of item (3) of subsection (a), deleted "or" preceding "correctional officer" and inserted "or fireman" preceding "of a participating political subdivision" and "correctional officer, or fireman" preceding "in the system." In subsection (b), the amendment inserted "under (a) of this section."

The 1984 amendment added subsections (i) and (j).

Editor's notes. — Section 15, ch. 32, SLA 1979 provides that AS 39.35.360(g) applies to a temporary employee of the Eleventh Legislature, First Session, even though he may not be an employee under the public employee's retirement system on July 1, 1979.

Vested benefits. — Benefits under Public Employees' Retirement System are in the nature of deferred compensation and the right to such benefits vests immediately upon an employee's enrollment in that system. Hammond v. Hoffbeck, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2345 (File No. 4742), 627 P.2d 1052 (1981).

The fact that rights in Public Employees' Retirement System vest on employment does not preclude modifications of the system; that fact does, however, require that any changes in the system that operate to a given employee's disadvantage must be offset by comparable new advantages to that employee. Hammond v. Hoffbeck, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2345 (File No. 4742), 627 P.2d 1052 (1981).

Sec. 39.35.370. Retirement benefits. (a) A terminated employee is eligible for a normal retirement benefit (1) at age 55 with at least five years credited service, or (2) with at least 20 years of credited service as a peace officer or fireman, or (3) with at least 30 years of credited service for all other employees.

(b) A terminated employee is eligible for an early retirement benefit at age 50 with at least five years credited service.

(c) The monthly amount of a retirement benefit for a peace officer or fireman is two per cent of the average monthly compensation times the years of credited service up through 10 years, plus two and one-half per cent of the average monthly compensation times the years of service over 10 years. For all other employees it is two per cent of the average monthly compensation times the years of service. An actuarial adjustment must be made for an early retirement benefit.

(d) The monthly amount of a retirement benefit for a deferred vested member shall be determined in accordance with (c) of this section as it was in effect on the date of the employee's termination of employment.

(e) Benefits payable under this section accrue from the first day of the month after which all of the following requirements are met: (1) the member meets the eligibility requirements of this section; (2) the member terminates employment; and (3) the member applies for retirement. The benefits are payable the last day of the month. If payment is delayed, a retroactive payment shall be made to cover the period of deferment. The last payment shall be made for the month in which a benefit is payable under this section.

(f) A member who is vested in the system as a peace officer or fireman at the time the member incurs a permanent disability of at least 33-1/3 per cent under workers' compensation and who (1) undergoes retraining because of the disability; and (2) is subsequently employed with the state or other employer in a position other than peace officer or fireman, is eligible for a normal retirement benefit as a peace officer or fireman under (a) and (c) of this section upon completing 20 years of credited service. (§ 18 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 2 ch 102 SLA 1963; am § 7 ch 155 SLA 1966; am § 5 ch 235 SLA 1968; am § 6 ch 109 SLA 1970; am §§ 6, 7 ch 159 SLA 1972; am § 15 ch 47 SLA 1974; am § 34 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 33 ch 146 SLA 1980)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment added subsection (f).

Editor's notes. — Section 49, ch. 146, SLA 1980, provides: "The retirement benefit payable to a member of the public employees' retirement system who is receiving a normal retirement benefit under AS 39.35.370 on the effective date of this Act, and who at the time of his retirement was receiving a disability pension under the public employees' retirement system, shall be increased by a percentage equal to the percentage of all post-retirement pension adjustments payable under AS 39.35.475 during the period that the member was receiving a disability benefit."

Sec. 39.35.380. Early retirement benefits. [Repealed, § 55 ch 128 SLA 1977.]

Sec. 39.35.385. Conditional service retirement benefits. (a) An employee is eligible for a normal retirement benefit at age 55 with at least two years of credited service if the employee also is eligible for a normal retirement salary under the teachers' retirement system (AS 14.25).

(b) An employee is eligible for an early retirement benefit at age 50 with at least two years of credited service if the employee also is eligible for an early retirement salary under the teachers' retirement system (AS 14.25).

(c) Credited service for which contributions were refunded is not creditable under this section unless the refunded contributions have been repaid. For purposes of (a) and (b) of this section, a member or former member does not have to be reemployed under this system in order to pay refunded contributions. Compound interest at the rate prescribed by regulation must be added to the reinstatement indebtedness from the date of the refund to the date of repayment.

(d) The monthly amount of a conditional service retirement benefit shall be calculated on the years of fully paid credited service in accordance with AS 39.35.370(c), except that the member may irrevocably elect to substitute one-twelfth of the "average base salary" as defined in AS 14.25.220(5) in place of average monthly compensation.

(e) Benefits payable under this section accrue from the first day of the month (1) in which the member meets the eligibility requirements of this section, (2) following the date of termination, and (3) following application for retirement, and are payable the last day of the month. If payment is delayed, a retroactive payment shall be made to cover the period of deferment. The last payment shall be made for the month in which the member dies or is no longer eligible for a benefit under this section.

(f) An employee is eligible for a normal retirement benefit at age 55 or an early retirement benefit at age 50 if the employee has at least 60 days of credited service as a temporary employee of the legislature during each of five legislative sessions. (§ 3 ch 174 SLA 1978; am § 11

Effect of amendments. The 1980 amendment added the present second and third sentences in subsection (c).

The 1982 amendment inserted "(a) and (b) of" in the second sentence of subsection (c) and rewrote subsection (d).

Editor's notes. — Section 15, ch. 82, SLA 1979, provides that AS 39.35.385 (f) applies to a temporary employee of the Eleventh Legislature, First Session, even though he may not be an employee under the public employee's retirement system on July 1, 1979.

Sec. 39.35.390. Deferred retirement benefit. [Repealed, § 55 ch 128 SLA 1977.]

Sec. 39.35.395. Voluntary contribution benefit. The balance of the employee's savings account will be paid in one of the following options as elected by the employee: (1) a lump sum payment; or (2) a life annuity on a full cash refund or term-certain basis; or (3) installments over a designated period of time. (§ 35 ch 128 SLA 1977)

Sec. 39.35.400. Nonoccupational disability pensions. (a) An employee is eligible for a nonoccupational disability pension if the employee's employment is terminated because of a total and apparently permanent nonoccupational disability, as defined in AS 39.35.680, before the employee's normal retirement date and after five or more years of credited service.

(b) The nonoccupational disability benefits accrue beginning the first day of the month following termination of employment as a result of the disability and are payable the last day of the month. If a final determination granting the benefit is not made in time to pay the benefit when due, a retroactive payment shall be made to cover the period of deferment. Benefits shall be continued after one year from the date of appointment to nonoccupational disability only if the disabled employee fulfills the requirements set out in (e) of this section. The last payment shall be for (1) the month in which the death of the disabled employee occurs, or (2) the month in which the disabled employee recovers from disability, or (3) the month in which the disabled employee ceases to be eligible for disability benefits under 42 U.S.C. 301 — 1397f (Social Security Act), or (4) the month in which the disabled employee reaches normal retirement age, whichever occurs first.

(c) If the disabled employee becomes ineligible to receive nonoccupational disability benefits, the employee is entitled to receive a normal or early retirement pension if the employee would have been eligible for the pension had employment continued during the period of disability. However, the period of disability does not constitute credited service.

(d) The monthly amount of the nonoccupational disability pension shall be determined in accordance with AS 39.35.370(c), considering the employee's credited service and compensation before termination of employment.

(e) A disabled employee receiving a nonoccupational disability benefit shall provide the administrator, one year after appointment to disability benefits and once each year thereafter until disability benefits cease, proof of continuing eligibility to receive disability payments under the Social Security Act. If the disabled employee is otherwise ineligible for a social security payment, the employee shall provide the administrator with sufficient medical evidence once each year to demonstrate that disability payments under the Social Security Act would be payable had the employee been otherwise eligible. If the disabled employee fails to provide the administrator with evidence of continuing eligibility for disability payments under the Social Security Act or other medical evidence required by the administrator within 30 days following each anniversary date, the disability benefits from the system shall cease. If that information is subsequently provided to the administrator, benefit payments will resume beginning for the month following that in which the information is provided. When disability payments under the Social Security Act cease, it is the responsibility of the disabled employee to notify the administrator immediately.

(f) A disabled employee's nonoccupational disability pension terminates when the employee first attains eligibility for normal retirement. At that time, retirement benefits will be calculated under the provisions of AS 39.35.370(c). (§ 21 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 9 ch 155 SLA 1966; am §§ 9, 10 ch 109 SLA 1970; am § 10 ch 159 SLA 1972; am §§ 15 — 17 ch 1 SLA 1974; am §§ 4—8 ch 123 SLA 1976; am §§ 36, 37 ch 128 SLA 1977)

Sec. 39.35.410. Occupational disability pensions. (a) An employee is eligible for an occupational disability pension if employment is terminated because of a total and apparently permanent occupational disability, as defined in AS 39.35.680, before the employee's normal retirement date.

(b) The occupational disability benefits accrue beginning the first day of the month following termination of employment as a result of the disability and are payable the last day of the month. If a final determination granting the benefit is not made in time to pay the benefit when due, a retroactive payment shall be made to cover the period of deferment. Benefits shall be continued after one year from date of appointment to occupational disability only if the disabled employee fulfills the requirements set out in (g) of this section. The last payment shall be for the month in which (1) the death of the disabled employee occurs, or (2) the month in which the disabled employee recovers from disability, or (3) the month in which the disabled employee ceases to be eligible for disability payments under 42 U.S.C. 301 — 1397f (Social Security Act), or (4) the month the disabled employee reaches normal retirement age, whichever occurs first.

The period of disability constitutes credited service.

(d) The monthly amount of an occupational disability pension is 40 per cent of the disabled employee's gross monthly compensation at the time of termination due to disability.

(e) [Repealed, § 12 ch 123 SLA 1976.]

(f) An employee is not entitled to an occupational disability pension unless the employee files an application for it with the administrator within six months after the date of the accident, if disability is attributable to an accident, or within six months after the date the disability begins if the disability is caused by an occupational disease. If the disability is attributable to an accident, the employee shall file a notice of the accident with the administrator within 30 days following the date it occurred. This 30-day filing period is suspended for the time the employee's condition prevents filing.

(g) A disabled employee receiving an occupational disability benefit shall provide the administrator, one year after appointment to disability benefits and once each year thereafter until disability benefits cease, proof of continuing eligibility to receive disability payments under the Social Security Act. If a disabled employee is otherwise ineligible for a social security payment, the employee shall provide the administrator with sufficient medical evidence once each year to demonstrate that disability payments under the Social Security Act would be payable had the employee been otherwise eligible. If the disabled employee fails to provide the administrator with evidence of continuing eligibility for disability payments under the Social Security Act or other medical evidence required by the administrator within 30 days following each anniversary date, the disability benefit from the system shall cease. If that information is subsequently provided to the administrator, benefit payments will resume beginning for the month following that in which the information is provided. When disability payments under the Social Security Act cease, it is the responsibility of the disabled employee to notify the administrator immediately.

(h) A disabled employee's occupational disability pension shall terminate when the disabled employee first attains eligibility for normal retirement. At that time, the employee's retirement benefit will be calculated under the provisions of AS 39.35.370(c). (§ 22 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 11 ch 109 SLA 1970; am §§ 18 — 21 ch 1 SLA 1974; am §§ 9 — 13 ch 123 SLA 1976; am §§ 38, 39 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 38 ch 13 SLA 1980)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment substituted "disabled employee's" for "retired employee's" at the beginning of subsection (h), and inserted "disabled" preceding "employee" near the middle of the first sentence of subsection (h).

Editor's notes. — Chapter 205, SLA

1975, which amended this section, was submitted to the voters by referendum and was rejected.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality of 1979 amendment to subsections (d) and (g). — The 1976 amendment to subsections (d) and (g) of this section is not violative of Alaska Const., art. XII, § 7 insofar as applied to public safety employees hired before July 1, 1976, who elect to be covered by Public Employees' Retirement System as amended in 1976 and public safety employees hired on or after July 1, 1976. Hammond v. Hoffbeck, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2345 (File No. 4742), 627 P.2d 1052 (1981).

The 1976 amendment to subsections (d) and (g) of this section has the effect of diminishing the vested rights of public safety employees hired before July 1, 1976, who choose to receive benefits under the system in effect at the time they were hired and insofar as applied to those employees, the amended subsections are violative of Alaska Const., art. XII, § 7. Hammond v. Hoffbeck, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2345 (File No. 4742), 627 P.2d 1052 (1981).

Sec. 39.35.420. Nonoccupational death benefits. (a) If the death of an employee occurs from nonoccupational causes after completing less than one year of credited service, the employee's designated beneficiary shall be paid the balance of the employee contribution account. If the death of an employee occurs from nonoccupational causes after completing at least one year but less than five years of credited service, a death benefit shall be paid to the employee's designated beneficiary. The amount of the death benefit shall be the amount set out in (c) of this section.

(b) If the death of a vested member or deferred vested member occurs from nonoccupational causes and the member designated no person other than the surviving spouse as beneficiary to receive nonoccupational death benefits, the surviving spouse may elect to receive either the amounts set out in (c) of this section or a 50 percent joint and survivor option based on credited service to the date of the employee's death or termination. Benefits accrue from the first day of the month following the employee's death and are payable the last day of the month.

(c) If a vested or deferred vested member designates as beneficiary someone other than the surviving spouse to receive nonoccupational death benefits, the designated beneficiary shall be paid: (1) the balance of the deceased member's employee contribution account; and (2) a lump-sum death benefit. The amount of the lump-sum death benefit is $100 times the years of credited service of the deceased member plus $1,000. (§ 23 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 12 ch 109 SLA 1970; am § 11 ch

Effect of amendments. — The 1982 amendment, in subsection (a), inserted "designated" and substituted "the employee contribution account" for "(1) the employee's contribution account; and (2) the employee's savings account" in the first sentence, deleted "lump sum" preceding "death benefit" and substituted "employee's designated beneficiary" for "beneficiary of the employee" in the second sentence, deleted "lump sum" preceding "death benefit" and substituted "the amount set out in (c) of this section" for "$100 times years of credited service plus $1,000" in the present last sentence, and deleted the former last sentence, which read "The lump sum death benefit is in addition to the balance of the employee's contribution account and savings account." In subsection (b), the amendment inserted "and the member designated no person other than the surviving spouse as beneficiary to receive nonoccupational death benefits" and substituted "elect to receive either the amounts set out in (c)" for "at his or her discretion receive either the benefits described in (a)" in the first sentence. The amendment also added subsection (c).

(b) If (1) the death of an employee occurs before the employee's retirement and before the employee's normal retirement date, and (2) the proximate cause of death is a bodily injury sustained or a hazard undergone while in the performance and within the scope of the employee's duties, and (3) the injury or hazard is not the proximate result of wilful negligence of the employee, a monthly survivor's pension equal to 40 percent of the employee's monthly compensation in the month in which the employee dies shall be paid to the surviving spouse. If there is no surviving spouse or if the spouse later dies, the monthly survivor's pension shall be paid in equal parts to the dependent children of the employee. On the date the normal retirement of the employee would have occurred if the employee had lived, monthly payments shall equal the monthly amount of the normal retirement benefit to which the employee, had the employee lived and continued employment until the employee's normal retirement date, would have been entitled with an average monthly compensation as existed at death and the credited service to which the employee would have been entitled.

(c) The first payment of the surviving spouse's pension or of a dependent child's pension shall be made for the month following the month in which the employee dies and payment shall cease to be made beginning with the month in which there is no surviving spouse or no dependent child.

(f) If the death of an employee occurs from occupational causes but no surviving spouse or dependent children exist at the time of the death or if the employee designates as beneficiary someone other than the surviving spouse or dependent children, the employee's designated beneficiary is entitled to receive those benefits available to a beneficiary under AS 39.35.420(c) and no occupational death benefit will be paid to the surviving spouse or dependent children. If the designated beneficiary is the surviving spouse or dependent children, the beneficiary shall receive the benefit described in (b) of this section. (§ 24 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 13 ch 109 SLA 1970; am § 23 ch 1 SLA 1974; §§ 16—19 ch 123 SLA 1976; am §§ 41, 42 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 39 ch 13 SLA 1980; am §§ 53, 54 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment rewrote subsection (c).

The 1982 amendment inserted "or if the spouse later dies" in the second sentence of subsection (b) and added subsection (f).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality of 1976 subsection amendment to former subsection (a) and subsection (b). — The 1976 amendment to former subsection (a) and subsection (b) of this section is not violative of Alaska Const., art. XII, § 7 insofar as applied to public safety employees hired before July 1, 1976, who elect to be covered by Public Employees' Retirement System as amended and public safety employees hired on or after July 1, 1976. Hammond v. Hoffbeck, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2345 (File No. 4742), 627 P.2d 1052 (1981).

The 1976 amendment to former subsection (a) and subsection (b) of this section has the effect of diminishing the vested rights of public safety employees hired before July 1, 1976, who choose to receive benefits under the system in effect at the time they were hired and insofar as applied to those employees, the amended subsections are violative of Alaska Const., art. XII, § 7. Hammond v. Hoffbeck, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2345 (File No. 4742), 627 P.2d 1052 (1981).

Sec. 39.35.440. Death after occupational disability. (a) [Repealed, § 19 ch 123 SLA 1976.]

(b) Upon the death of a disabled employee who is receiving or is entitled to receive an occupational disability benefit, a surviving spouse's pension equal to 40 percent of the employee's monthly compensation at the termination of employment because of occupational disability shall be paid to the surviving spouse. If there is no surviving spouse, the survivor's pension shall be paid in equal parts to the dependent children of the employee. On the date the normal retirement of the employee would have occurred if the employee had lived, monthly payments shall equal the monthly amount of the normal retirement benefit to which the employee, had the employee lived and continued employment until the employee's normal retirement date, would have been entitled with an average monthly compensation as existed at death and the credited service to which the employee would have been entitled. If the death of an employee occurs from occupational causes but no surviving spouse or dependent children exist at the time of the death, or if the employee designates as beneficiary someone other than the surviving spouse or dependent children, the employee's designated beneficiary shall be paid those benefits available to a beneficiary under

Effect of amendments. — The 1982 amendment, in subsection (b), substituted "the employee's monthly compensation at the termination of employment because of occupational disability" for "his average monthly compensation" and "the" for "his" preceding "surviving spouse" in the first sentence, substituted "the employee" for "he" in three places and "the employee's" for "his" in one place in the third sentence, deleted "his" preceding "employment until" and preceding "death" in the third sentence, and added the fourth sentence.

Sec. 39.35.450. Joint and survivor option. (a) Benefits payable under this section are in place of benefits payable under AS 39.35.370. Upon filing an application with the administrator, an employee may designate a spouse or a dependent approved by the administrator as the contingent beneficiary. The benefit shall be determined in accordance with one of the following options elected:

(1) the employee is entitled to receive a reduced benefit payable for life, and payments in the amount of 75 percent of the reduced benefit shall, after the employee's death, be continued to the contingent beneficiary for life;

(2) the employee is entitled to receive a reduced benefit payable for life, and payments in the amount of 50 percent of the reduced benefit shall, after the employee's death, be continued to the contingent beneficiary for life;

(3) the employee is entitled to receive a reduced benefit payable during the joint lifetime of the employee and the contingent beneficiary, and payments in the amount of $66^2/_3$ percent of the reduced benefit, after the death of either the employee or the contingent beneficiary shall be continued to the survivor for life.

(b) The aggregate of the pension payments expected to be paid to an employee and the contingent beneficiary under the options set out in (a) of this section shall be the actuarial equivalent of the pension that the employee is otherwise entitled to receive upon retirement.

(c) An employee may elect, change, or revoke an option without the approval of the administrator if the election, change, or revocation is filed in writing with the administrator before the effective date of the employee's retirement.

(d) A member, including a deferred vested member, may, regardless of age, elect a joint and survivor option any time before appointment to receive a retirement benefit.

(e) If either the employee or contingent beneficiary dies before the employee is appointed to retirement, the election becomes inoperative. Once the employee is appointed to retirement, the election is irrevocable. If a retired employee is reemployed and is subsequently reappointed to retirement, those benefits earned during the period of reemployment are subject to the initial election made under this section, unless the contingent beneficiary is deceased. If the contingent beneficiary is deceased, the benefits earned during the period of reemployment are subject to AS 39.35.370 or this section if another contingent beneficiary was elected during the period of reemployment. All other benefits earned during prior periods of employment are subject to the election at the time the employee was appointed to retirement. If death occurs from nonoccupational causes during the period of reemployment, those benefits earned while reemployed are subject to AS 39.35.420(b). All other benefits earned during prior periods of employment are subject to the election at the time the employee was appointed to retirement. If death occurs from occupational causes during the period of reemployment, all benefits earned during all periods of employment are subject to AS 39.35.430(b) and (c). (§ 26 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 8 ch 235 SLA 1968; am § 12 ch 159 SLA 1972; am §§ 24 — 26 ch 1 SLA 1974; am § 6 ch 81 SLA 1976; am § 45 ch 128 SLA 1977)

Sec. 39.35.451. Spouse survivor benefits under Public Employees Retirement Act of 1949. A person whose spouse is receiving retirement benefits under the Public Employees Retirement Act of 1949 on July 1, 1972 is entitled to survivor benefits for life in the amount of the retirement benefits received by the retired employee. (§ 13 ch 159 SLA 1972)

Sec. 39.35.460. Level income option. If the payment of a retirement pension begins before age 65, the amount of pension payable before and after that age may be adjusted so that an increased amount will be paid before the time that full social security benefits become available and a reduced amount after that time, so that the employee may receive a more level income for life. The aggregate value of all adjusted payments may not exceed the actuarial equivalent of the value of the pension otherwise payable to the employee. (§ 27 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 56 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1982 amendment substituted "a retirement pension begins before age 65" for "an early retirement pension begins before the earliest age as of which the employee becomes eligible for a primary social security benefit" and "may receive a more level income for life" for "will receive a level retirement income" in the first sentence, inserted "full" preceding "social security benefits" in the first sentence, substituted "may not exceed" for "however, shall not exceed" in the second sentence.

Sec. 39.35.475. Post-retirement pension adjustment. (a) When the administrator determines that the cost of living has increased and the financial condition of the retirement fund permits, the administrator shall increase benefit payments to persons receiving benefits under this system.

(b) The amount of the increase in benefit payments may not exceed the lesser of

(1) the increase in the cost of living since the date of retirement; or

(2) four percent of the retirement benefit compounded for each year of retirement.

(c) If at the time of first receiving a retirement benefit a member was receiving a disability benefit under this system, the administrator shall include the time during which the member received the disability benefit in determining the number of years of retirement under this section.

(d) An increase in benefit payments under this section is effective July 1 of the year for which the increase is granted.

(e) The administrator shall implement this section by regulation. (§ 9 ch 235 SLA 1968; am § 14 ch 159 SLA 1972; am § 34 ch 146 SLA 1980; am § 57 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment rewrote the section.

The 1982 amendment substituted "lesser" for "greater" in the introductory language of subsection (b).

Editor's notes. — Section 49, ch 146, SLA 1980 provides: "The retirement benefit payable to a member of the public employees' retirement system who is receiving a normal retirement benefit under AS 39.35.370, July 1, 1980, and who at the time of his retirement was receiving a disability pension under the public employees' retirement system, shall be increased by a percentage equal to the percentage of all post-retirement pension adjustments payable under AS 39.35.475 during the period that the member was receiving a disability benefit."

Collateral references. — Validity of legislation providing for additional retirement allowances for public employee previously retired, 27 ALR2d 1442.

Sec. 39.35.480. Cost-of-living allowance. (a) While residing in the state, a person receiving a benefit under this chapter is entitled to receive a monthly cost-of-living allowance in addition to the basic benefit. The amount of this allowance shall be $50 or 10 per cent of the basic benefit, whichever is greater.

(b) A person receiving a cost-of-living allowance under this section shall notify the administrator when the person expects to be absent from the state for a continuous period that exceeds 90 days. After that notification, the person is no longer entitled to receive the monthly cost-of-living allowance, except that a person may be absent from the state for not more than six months without loss of the cost-of-living allowance if the absence is the result of illness and required by order of a licensed physician. Upon returning to the state, and upon notification to the administrator, the person is again entitled to receive the monthly cost-of-living allowance, commencing with the first monthly benefit payment made after notification of the person's return.

(c) While residing in the state, a public employee of the Territory of Alaska who participated in the Public Employees' Retirement Act established by ch. 41 SLA 1949, and who retired before the effective date of ch. 102 SLA 1951, is entitled to the cost-of-living allowance equal to 25 per cent of the amount received under ch. 41 SLA 1949.

(d) For purposes of this section, "residing in the state" means domiciled and physically present in the State of Alaska. Being absent from the state for a continuous period of 90 days or less or six months or less when ordered by a physician does not change a person's status as "residing in the state." (§ 29 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 1 ch 109 SLA 1967; am § 27 ch 1 SLA 1974; am § 108 ch 127 SLA 1974; am § 46 ch 128 SLA 1977; am §§ 12, 13 ch 82 SLA 1979)

Sec. 39.35.485. Minimum benefit. (a) An employee who is eligible for a benefit calculated in accordance with AS 39.35.370(c) is entitled to a benefit of at least $25 a month for each year of credited service, not including adjustments made under AS 39.35.340 for military service, AS 39.35.350 for reinstatement of credited service, AS 39.35.360 for credit for earlier service, AS 39.35.370(c) for early retirement, AS 39.35.420 for nonoccupational death benefits, AS 39.35.450 for the survivor's option, AS 39.35.460 for the level income option, AS 39.35.475 for the post-retirement pension adjustment, and AS 39.35.480 for the cost of living.

(b) [Repealed, § 55 ch 128 SLA 1977.] (§ 15 ch 159 SLA 1972; am § 16 ch 47 SLA 1974; am § 24 ch 123 SLA 1976; am § 55 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 35 ch 146 SLA 1980; am § 58 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment substituted "$25" for "$17.50" preceding "a month" near the middle of subsection (a).

The 1982 amendment substituted the language beginning "AS 39.35.340 for military service" for "AS 39.35.380, 39.35.410, 39.35.450, 39.35.475 and 39.35.480" in subsection (a).

Editor's notes. — Chapter 205, SLA 1975, which amended this section, was submitted to the voters by referendum and was rejected.

Sec. 39.35.490. Designation of beneficiary. (a) Each employee shall designate the beneficiary or beneficiaries to whom benefits payable under this chapter as a consequence of the employee's death shall be distributed.

(b) The designation may be changed or revoked by the employee without notice to the beneficiary or beneficiaries at any time. Collateral references. — Rights in survival benefits under public pension or retirement plan as between designated beneficiary and heirs, legatees, or personal representative of deceased employee, 5 ALR3d 644.

Sec. 39.35.495. Time limit for application. If no application for benefits or for refund has been filed with the administrator by July 1 following the date on which an inactive member (except an employee on leave-without-pay status or on layoff status) would attain age 75, or if no application for benefits or for refund has been filed with the administrator within the 50 years following the most recent date on which the employee was an active member, no benefits or refunds may be paid under this chapter and the member's records may be destroyed. (§ 40 ch 13 SLA 1980)

Sec. 39.35.500. Safeguard of employee funds held by the system. Employee contributions and other amounts held in the pension fund are exempt from Alaska state and local taxes. Amounts held on behalf of, or payable to, any employee or other person who is or may become eligible for benefits under the system are not subject to anticipation, alienation, sale, transfer, assignment, pledge, encumbrance, or charge of any kind, either voluntary or involuntary, before being received by the person entitled to the amount under the terms of the system. An attempt to anticipate, alienate, sell, transfer, assign, pledge, encumber, charge, or otherwise dispose of a right to amounts held under the system is void. (§ 39 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 10 ch 235 SLA 1968; am § 48 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 7 ch 62 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1982 amendment substituted "or charge" for "charge, garnishment, execution, or levy" in the second sentence.

Revisor's notes. — As amended by § 7, ch. 62, SLA 1982, this section contained a subsection (b) which has been redesignated as AS 39.35.505.

Sec. 39.35.505. Exemption of employee funds and benefits. Employee contributions and other amounts held in the pension fund and retirement benefits payable under this chapter are exempt from levy to enforce the collection of a debt as provided in AS 09.38 (exemptions). (§ 7 ch 62 SLA 1982)

Revisor's notes. — Enacted as AS 39.35.500(b). Renumbered in 1982.

Sec. 39.35.510. Voluntary waiver of benefits. A retired employee may, in writing, request the administrator to suspend, for any period of time, payment of all or part of the benefits to which the employee is entitled. The administrator shall grant the request and may not require the retired employee to disclose a reason for desiring the suspension. Amounts that are suspended pursuant to the request are forfeited. The retired employee may subsequently terminate the suspension by filing a written notice with the administrator that states a desire to revoke the suspension. Upon receipt of the notice, the administrator shall authorize resumption of the retired employee's regular pension payments. (§ 40 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 49 ch 128 SLA 1977)

Sec. 39.35.520. Adjustments. (a) When a change or error is made in the records maintained by the system, or an error is made in computing a benefit, and as a result an employee or beneficiary receives from the system more or less than the employee would have been entitled to receive had the records been correct or had the error not been made, (1) the records or error shall be corrected and (2) as far as practicable, future payments shall be adjusted so that the actuarial equivalent of the pension or benefit to which the employee or beneficiary was correctly entitled shall be paid. If no future payment is due, a person who was paid any amount to which the person was not entitled is liable for repayment of that amount, and a person who was not paid the full amount to which the person was entitled shall be paid the balance of that amount.

(b) An adjustment that requires the recovery of benefits may not be made under this section if

(1) the incorrect benefit was first paid two years or more before the member or beneficiary was notified of the error;

(2) the error was not the result of erroneous information supplied by the member or beneficiary; and

(3) the member or beneficiary did not have reasonable grounds to believe that the amount of the benefit was in error.

(c) At each regularly scheduled meeting of the Public Employees' Retirement Board, the administrator shall report to the board on all situations since the administrator's last report in which an adjustment has been prohibited under (b) of this section. If the board finds that there is reason to believe that one or more of the conditions set out in (b) of this section have not been met, the administrator shall notify the member or beneficiary that an adjustment will be made to recover the overpayment. A member or beneficiary who receives notice of adjustment under this subsection may appeal to the board for a waiver of the adjustment under AS 39.35.522. An adjustment may not be required while the appeal is pending. (§ 42 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 4 ch 81 SLA 1976; am § 2 ch 15 SLA 1984)

Effect of amendments. — The 1984 amendment added subsections (b) and (c).

Sec. 39.35.522. Waiver of adjustments. (a) Upon appeal by an affected member or beneficiary under (b) of this section, the board may waive an adjustment or any portion of an adjustment made under AS 39.35.520 if, in the opinion of the board,

(1) the adjustment or portion of the adjustment will cause undue hardship to the member or beneficiary;

(2) [Repealed, § 60 ch 137 SLA 1982.]

(3) [Repealed, § 60 ch 137 SLA 1982.]

(4) the adjustment was not the result of erroneous information supplied by the member or beneficiary;

(5) before the adjustment was made, the member or beneficiary received confirmation from the administrator that the employee's or beneficiary's records were correct; and

(6) the member or beneficiary had no reasonable grounds to believe the employee's or beneficiary's records were incorrect before the adjustment was made.

(b) In order to obtain consideration of a waiver under this section, the affected member or beneficiary must appeal to the board in writing within 30 days after receipt of notice that the records have been adjusted. The board shall rule on the appeal in writing within 120 days after its receipt.

(c) The board may, at its discretion, conduct a hearing on an appeal under this section. In reaching a decision on an appeal, the board may issue subpoenas, administer oaths, compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses, compel the taking of depositions and the submission of affidavits, and compel the production of documents and records.

(d) The board may impose conditions on the granting of a waiver which it considers equitable. These conditions may include requiring the member or beneficiary to make additional contributions to the system.

(e) The board may reconsider a ruling under this section upon request of the member or beneficiary or the administrator if the request is received within 30 days after the initial ruling. Any modification of the initial ruling must be made within 30 days after receipt of a request for reconsideration.

(f) Rulings and modifications of rulings under this section shall be by a majority of a quorum of the board.

(g) Rulings on appeals and requests for reconsideration under this section may be appealed by an aggrieved member or beneficiary to the superior court for abuse of discretion. (§ 9 ch 174 SLA 1978; am § 41 ch 13 SLA 1980; am § 60 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment inserted "or beneficiary" following "member" wherever it appeared throughout the section; in subsection (a), inserted "or any portion of an adjustment" following "adjustment" in the introductory paragraph, inserted "or portion of the adjustment" following "the adjustment" at the beginning of paragraph (1), added "or the beneficiary was eligible to receive or was receiving benefits under this chapter before the adjustment" at the end of paragraph (2), substituted "benefits" for "retirement" following "eligibility for" near the beginning of paragraph (3), and substituted "being" for "already" following "reduction of benefits" near the end of paragraph (3).

The 1982 amendment, in subsection (a), added "in the opinion of the board" to the end of the introductory paragraph, deleted "in the opinion of the board" following "adjustment will" in paragraph (1), and repealed paragraphs (2) and (3), which read, respectively, "the member is retired or has submitted notification of impending retirement to his employer to be effective no later than 180 days after the adjustment was made, or the beneficiary was eligible to receive or was receiving benefits under this chapter before the adjustment" and "the adjustment will result in a loss of eligibility for benefits for the member or beneficiary or result in a reduction of benefits being received by the member or beneficiary of $50 per month or more."

Sec. 39.35.525. Limitation on use of credited service as peace officer or fireman. For the purpose of computing benefits for an employee enrolled as a peace officer or fireman, no more than 30 years of credited service may be considered, except for the purpose of computing average monthly compensation and then the three consecutive years during the entire period of credited service which produced the highest total compensation shall be used. (§ 16 ch 109 SLA 1970)

Sec. 39.35.527. Election to terminate coverage as a peace officer or fireman. (a) Any active member may elect to irrevocably relinquish peace officer or fireman status with the system and to retain all credited service as if it had been acquired as a member other than a peace officer or fireman.

(b) In order to relinquish peace officer or fireman status with the system, a person must be an active member and must file a written request with the administrator by July 1, 1984, or within six months after employment as a peace officer or fireman, whichever occurs later. No person has more than one opportunity to exercise this option.

(c) As soon as possible after the relinquishment, the administrator shall refund to a person who relinquishes peace officer or fireman status under this section a refund equal to the amount by which the balance of the person's accumulated mandatory contributions plus interest exceeds the balance which would exist if all service credit had been acquired as a member other than a peace officer or fireman.

(d) A written request to relinquish peace officer or fireman status is irrevocable upon filing with the administrator. (§ 1 ch 27 SLA 1983)

Sec. 39.35.530. Limit on pension. An employee may not simultaneously receive a pension under more than one section of this chapter. However, benefits under AS 39.35.420(b), 39.35.430, 39.35.440 or 39.35.450 shall be paid in addition to the benefits or service credit a person is entitled to receive because of the person's own membership in the retirement system. An employee may not (1) receive duplicate credit under this system for the same period of service, (2) receive more than one year of service credit in the course of any calendar year, or (3) receive a benefit while accruing service credit under this system, except as provided in this section. (§ 42 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 61 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1982 amendment added the second and third sentences.

Sec. 39.35.535. Medical benefits. (a) The following persons are entitled to major medical insurance coverage:

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutionality of 1976 amendment of AS 39.35.410 and 39.35.430. — Insofar as the vested rights of those public safety employees hired before July 1, 1976, who choose to receive benefits under the public employees retirement system in effect at the time they were hired were diminished by the 1976 amendment of AS 39.35.410(d) and (g) and former 39.35.430(a) and 39.35.430 (b), the amended subsections were violative of Alaska Const., art. XII, § 7 as applied to those employees. Hammond v. Hoffbeck, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2345 (File No. 4742), 627 P.2d 1052 (1981).

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment deleted "or quasi-public" following "A public" at the beginning of the section.

The 1982 amendment deleted "created wholly or partly by, or deriving its powers from, the legislature of the state" following "A public organization" in the first sentence.

Sec. 39.35.570. Survey to determine estimated cost. A political subdivision or public organization contemplating participation in this system may request a preliminary survey to determine the estimated cost of participation, the benefits derived, and other information that is appropriate. The political subdivision or public organization requesting the survey shall pay the cost of it. (§ 44 c ch 143 SLA 1960)

Sec. 39.35.580. Effective date of participation. The effective date of participation in the system by a political subdivision or public organization is the first day of any month acceptable to the governing body of the political subdivision or public organization and to the commissioner of administration. (§ 44 d ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 1 ch 63 SLA 1968; am § 12 ch 235 SLA 1968)

Sec. 39.35.590. Designation of eligible employees and agreement to contribute. The political subdivision or public organization shall designate the departments, groups, or other classifications of employees eligible to participate in the system, and shall agree to make contributions each year that are sufficient to meet the normal cost attributable to inclusion of its employees and to amortize the past service cost for its employees over a period not exceeding 40 years. (§ 44 d ch 143 SLA 1960)

Sec. 39.35.600. Eligible employees bound to system. The eligible employees of a participating political subdivision or public organization are bound by the provisions of this system and are entitled to the benefits provided under it. (§ 44 e ch 143 SLA 1960)

Sec. 39.35.610. Transmittal of contributions to administrator. The contributions of an employer and the contributions of its employees shall be transmitted to the administrator as soon as practicable after the close of the payroll period for which the contributions are made. If an employer is delinquent in transferring the contributions for more than 15 days, interest shall be assessed on the outstanding contributions at one and one-half times the most recent actuarially determined rate of earnings for the retirement system from the date that the contributions were originally due. (§ 44 f ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 28 ch 1 SLA 1974; am § 53 ch 128 SLA 1977)

Sec. 39.35.615. Effect of termination by amendment of agreement. (a) A political subdivision or public organization may request that its participation agreement be amended. The request may be made only after adoption of a resolution by the legislative body of the political subdivision and approval of the resolution by the person required by law to approve the resolution, or, in the case of a public organization, after adoption of a resolution by the governing body of that public organization. A certified copy of the resolution shall be filed with the administrator. If a political subdivision or public organization amends its participation agreement so as to terminate coverage of a department, group, or other classification of employees, each employee whose coverage is so terminated, regardless of the employee's employment status at the date of termination, shall be considered fully vested in actuarially adjusted accrued retirement benefits as of the date of termination, unless the employee's contributions have been refunded.

(b) Each employee whose coverage is terminated must, within 60 days after the date of termination, inform the administrator, in writing, whether the employee wishes to obtain a refund or a vested benefit.

(c) Each employee who elects to obtain a refund shall receive a refund of the balance of the employee contribution account. The vesting in accrued benefits for each employee who elects to obtain a refund is voided upon receipt of the refund, and the corresponding credited service may not be reinstated under this chapter. A partial refund may not be allowed under this section.

(d) For each employee who elects to obtain a vested benefit, the amount actuarially determined as necessary to fully fund the benefits to be received shall be transferred first from the employee contribution account and, after the employee contribution account has been exhausted, then from the employer contribution account into the retirement reserve account.

(e) After all of the employees whose coverage is terminated have either received refunds or have been vested in their accrued benefits, the remaining funds in the employer contribution account attributable to those employees shall be refunded to the employer.

(f) Termination of coverage of a department, group, or other classification of employees does not bar future coverage of that department, group, or classification. If coverage of a department, group, or classification is terminated under (a) of this section and the employer later amends its participation agreement to provide renewed coverage of that department, group, or classification, an affected employee may be credited only with future service. (§ 44 ch 13 SLA 1980; am §§ 65, 66 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1982 amendment added the present first through third sentences of subsection (a); and in the first sentence of subsection (c), deleted the item (1) designation preceding "the employee contribution account" and

Sec. 39.35.620. Termination of participation. (a) If the contributions are not transmitted to the commissioner of administration within the prescribed time limit, the commissioner may grant an extension. If the political subdivision or public organization is in default at the end of the extension, participation in the system is terminated, and it shall be sent notice of termination.

(b) All employees of the terminating employer whose contributions have not been refunded, regardless of their employment status at the date of termination, shall be considered fully vested in their adjusted accrued retirement benefits as of the date of termination of the employer.

(c) If the terminating employer has not liquidated past service liability on the date of termination, the accrued vested benefits of all employees of the terminating employer to which the employees are entitled because of service before July 1, 1973, or the date of entry of the employer, whichever is later, shall be reduced by an amount derived by multiplying the accrued vested benefit by a fraction, the numerator of which is the remaining unfunded past service liability and the denominator of which is the actuarially calculated value of benefits earned before July 1, 1973, or the entry date of the employer, whichever is later.

(d) Each employee of a terminating employer must, within 60 days of the employer's termination of participation, inform the administrator, in writing, whether the employee wishes to obtain a refund or a vested benefit.

(e) Each employee who elects to obtain a refund shall receive a refund of the balance, determined as of the date of the employer's termination of participation, of the employee contribution account. The vesting in accrued benefits for each employee who elects to receive a refund is voided upon receipt of the refund and corresponding credited service may not be reinstated under this chapter. A partial refund may not be allowed under this section.

(f) For each employee who elects to obtain a vested benefit, the amount actuarially determined as necessary to fully fund the benefits to be received shall be transferred first from the employee contribution account and, after the employee contribution account has been exhausted, then from the employer contribution account into the retirement reserve account.

(g) After all of the employees of the terminating employer have either received refunds or have been vested in their accrued benefits, the remaining funds in the employer contribution account shall be refunded to the employer and the employer contribution account shall be closed.

(h) Termination of an employer's participation in the system shall not bar future participation in the system by that employer. If a previously terminated employer returns to the system employees may be credited only with service subsequent to the date of return. Adjustments made to the accrued benefits of the employees of the previously terminated employer at the time of the termination may not be altered by that employer's return to participation in the system. (§ 44 g ch 143 SLA 1960; am §§ 29 — 35 ch 1 SLA 1974; am § 109 ch 127 SLA 1974; am § 45 ch 13 SLA 1980; am § 67 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Revisor's notes. — The intent of the amendment made by § 109, ch. 127, SLA 1974, was to bring the former language of AS 39.35.620(b) into conformity with art. I, § 3 of the Constitution of the State of Alaska. As the reenactment of that subsection by § 29, ch. 1, SLA 1974 removed the necessity for the change in ch. 127, the reenacted version contained in ch. 1, SLA 1974 prevails.

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment added "and corresponding credited service may not be reinstated under this chapter" at the end of the second sentence in subsection (e).

The 1982 amendment, in the first sentence, deleted the item (1) designation preceding "employee contribution account" and deleted "and (2) his employee savings account" from the end of that sentence.

Sec. 39.35.630. Distribution. A distribution made as a result of termination of participation by an employer may, to the extent that no discrimination in value results, be paid in cash or in annuity contracts, in the discretion of the board. (§ 44 h ch 143 SLA 1960)

Sec. 39.35.640. Conclusiveness of action taken upon termination. In making a distribution, the determinations, divisions, appraisals, apportionments, and allotments made are final and conclusive and not subject to question. (§ 44 i ch 143 SLA 1960)

Sec. 39.35.650. Refunds to employers. In no event may an employer receive an amount from the pension fund, except as provided under AS 39.35.615(e) and 39.35.620(g). (§ 44 i ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 46 ch 13 SLA 1980)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment substituted "as provided under AS 39.35.615(e) and 39.35.620(g)" for "that, upon termination of participation, the employer shall receive the amount which remains after the satisfaction of all liabilities of the system to the employees of the employer and arising out of variations between actual requirements and expected actuarial requirements" at the end of the section.

Effect of amendments. — The first 1980 amendment inserted "court of appeals or of the" preceding "superior or district courts of Alaska" in subparagraph (C)(vi) of paragraph (21).

The second 1980 amendment substituted "115" for "120" preceding "days of credited service" near the end of paragraph (4) and deleted "or quasi-public" preceding "organization" in paragraph (17).

The third 1980 amendment substituted "person" for "member" following "means a" near the beginning of paragraph (14), inserted "to an employer" following "services rendered" near the middle of paragraph (14), deleted "and who elects coverage under AS 39.35.125" at the end of paragraph (14) and added subparagraph (vii) in subparagraph (21)(C).

The 1982 amendment inserted the language beginning "payments for leave" and ending "employer-sponsored deferred compensation plan," substituted "payments for leave" for "medical leave or annual leave," and added the language beginning "whether those leave payments are scheduled payments" to the end, all in paragraph (8); inserted "who is not eligible for normal retirement and" and substituted the language beginning "is eligible to receive benefits" for "has a minimum of five years credited service" in paragraph (13); substituted the present provisions of paragraphs (15) and (25) for the provisions as set out in the main pamphlet; added subparagraph (21)(C)(viii); and added the provisions of present paragraph (32).

The 1983 amendment deleted "qualified employee of the department of fish and game" following "correctional superintendent" in the definition of "peace officer" or "fireman," and repealed the definition of "qualified employee of the Department of Fish and Game."

Editor's notes. — Section 15, ch. 82, SLA 1979 provides that AS 39.35.680(35) as amended by § 14, ch. 82, SLA 1979, applies to a temporary employee of the Eleventh Legislature, First Session, even though he may not be an employee under the public employee's retirement system on July 1, 1979.

Section 4, ch. 58, SLA 1979, purported to add a paragraph (25). Section 9 of ch. 58 provided that the amendment take effect on January 1, 1980, if approved by a majority of the votes cast in a special election conducted before January 1, 1980, by the Department of Administration among the active members of the public employees' retirement system. The amendment was rejected.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

The thrust of the exemptions in this chapter, the State Personnel Act, AS 39.25.110, and the statutory leave provisions for state employees, AS 39.20.310, is to provide for those public employees who are not susceptible to ordinary recruiting and examining procedures. One member is the chairman of the Public Employees' Retirement Board or the chairman's designee, one member is the chairman of the Teachers' Retirement Board or the chairman's designee, one member is the director of the division of vocational rehabilitation or the director's designee, and two members are physicians authorized to practice medicine in the state.

Sec. 25.24.220. Hearing. (a) After a petition for dissolution is filed under the provisions of AS 25.24.210, a hearing shall be scheduled in accordance with the Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure.

(b) If the petition is brought by both spouses under AS 25.24.200(a), both the husband and wife are required to attend the hearing personally and not through counsel unless the court, for good cause, provides otherwise, or unless a spouse has complied with AS 25.24.200(c), in which case only the spouse filing the petition is required to attend. Either spouse may have counsel at the hearing.

(c) If the petition is brought by one spouse under AS 25.24.200(b), that spouse shall submit proof of diligent inquiry as to the whereabouts of the absent spouse and provide notice by publication, posting, or other means as ordered by the court in accordance with the Alaska Rules of Civil Procedure.

(d) If the petition is brought by both spouses under AS 25.24.200(a), the court shall examine the petitioners or petitioner present and consider whether

(1) the spouses fully understand the nature and consequences of their action;

(2) the agreements between the spouses concerning child custody, child support, and visitation are fair, just, and equitable as between the spouses and in the best interests of the children of the marriage;

(3) the agreements between the spouses relating to the division of property, spousal support, and the allocation of obligations are fair, just, and equitable; and

(4) the conditions in AS 25.24.200(a) have been met.

(e) If the petition is brought by one spouse under AS 25.24.200(b), the court shall examine the petitioner and consider whether the petitioner fully understands the nature and consequences of the action and whether the conditions in AS 25.24.200(b) have been met.

(f) The court may appoint a guardian ad litem to represent the best interests of the child. Appointment of a guardian ad litem or attorney for the child shall be made under the terms of AS 25.24.310.

(g) The court may amend the agreements between the spouses relating to child custody, child support, visitation, spousal support, division of the property, and allocation of obligations, but only if both petitioners concur in the amendment. (§ 1 ch 260 SLA 1976)

Revisor's notes. — Formerly AS 09.55.233. Renumbered in 1983.

Sec. 25.24.230. Judgment. (a) If the petition is brought by one or both spouses under AS 25.24.200(a), the court may grant the spouses a final decree of dissolution and shall provide the other relief as provided in this section if the court, upon consideration of the information contained in the petition and the testimony of the spouse or spouses at the hearing, finds that

(1) the spouses understand fully the nature and consequences of their action;

(2) the agreements between the spouses concerning child custody, child support, visitation, spousal support and tax consequences, if any, division of property, and allocation of obligations are not grossly unfair, unjust, or inequitable and are in the best interests of the children of the marriage, if any; and

(3) the conditions in AS 25.24.200(a) have been met.

(b) If the petition is brought by one spouse under AS 25.24.200(b), the court may grant the spouses a final decree of dissolution and restore the petitioner's prior name, when so requested, if the court, upon consideration of affidavits supplied by the spouse and the testimony of the spouse at the hearing, finds that

(1) the spouse present at the hearing understands fully the nature and consequences of the action; and

(2) the conditions in AS 25.24.200(b) have been met.

(c) The court shall dismiss or continue an action brought under AS 25.24.200 — 25.24.260 before findings are made if

(1) a representative of the minor children objects to a term of any of the agreements between the spouses;

(2) either of the spouses withdraws from any of the agreements required under AS 25.24.200(a); or

(3) the petition alleges that the conditions in AS 25.24.200(b) exist, but the whereabouts of the absent spouse becomes known to the other spouse or the court before findings are made.

(d) The court shall deny the relief sought in an action brought under AS 25.24.200 — 25.24.260 if the court does not make the findings requisite under (a) and (b) of this section.

(e) If the petition is brought by both spouses under AS 25.24.200(a), the court shall restore either spouse's prior name, if so requested, and shall fully and specifically set out in the decree the agreements of the spouses relating to child custody, child support, visitation, spousal support, division of property, and the allocation of the obligations of the spouses; and the court shall order the performance of those agreements. The court shall also state, in the decree, whether child support payments are to be made through the child support enforcement agency. If the petition is brought by one spouse under AS 25.24.200(b), the decree shall state that it does not bar future action on the issues not resolved in the decree.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provisions of AS 25.24.200 — 25.24.260, the court may not award as between the spouses any real or personal property acquired by the spouses before the date of the marriage, unless the spouses expressly agree otherwise or the court determines that such property should be made available, by sale or other conveyance, to ensure that the children's best interests are provided for. If the court determines that the children's best interests require an award of premarital property but the spouses do not agree, the action shall be dismissed or continued. (§ 1 ch 260 SLA 1976)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

(b) A decree of dissolution granted under AS 25.24.200 — 25.24.260 may be modified or enlarged as prescribed by AS 25.24.150 — 25.24.170. (§ 1 ch 260 SLA 1976)

(e) If there are both an eligible surviving spouse and surviving dependent children, but who reside in separate households, the surviving spouse and dependent children will share equally in the benefits payable under (a) of this section. II. DETERMINATION OF CUSTODY.

B. Review.

Custody ruling upheld. — The superior court did not err in failing to award joint legal custody of child. Smith v. Smith, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2764 (File No. 7092), 673 P.2d 282 (1983).

Sec. 25.24.160. Judgment. In a judgment in an action for divorce or action declaring a marriage void or at any time after judgment, the court may provide

(1) for the payment by either or both parties of an amount of money or goods, in gross or installments that may include cost-of-living adjustments, as may be just and proper for the parties to contribute toward the nurture and education of their children, and the court may order the parties to arrange with their employers for an automatic payroll deduction each month or each pay period, if the period is other than monthly, of the amount of the installment; if the employer agrees, the installment shall be forwarded by the employer to the clerk of the superior court which entered the judgment or to the court trustee, and the amount of the installment is exempt from execution;

(2) for the recovery by one party from the other of an amount of money for maintenance, in gross or in installments, as may be just and necessary without regard to which of the parties is in fault;

(3) for the delivery to either party of that party's personal property in the possession or control of the other party at the time of giving the judgment;

(4) for the division between the parties of their property, whether joint or separate, acquired only during coverture, in the manner as may be just, and without regard to which of the parties is in fault; however, the court, in making the division, may invade the property of either spouse acquired before marriage when the balancing of the equities between the parties requires it; and to accomplish this end the judgment may require that one or both of the parties assign, deliver, or convey any of their real or personal property to the other party;

(5) to change the name of one of the parties. (§ 12.14 ch 101 SLA 1962; am § 1 ch 84 SLA 1966; am §§ 2 — 6 ch 160 SLA 1968; am §§ 72, 73 ch 127 SLA 1974; am § 5 ch 251 SLA 1976; am § 3 ch 40 SLA 1985)

Effect of amendments. — The 1985 amendment, effective October 1, 1985, designated former paragraphs (2) through (4) as present paragraphs (1) through (3) and former paragraphs (6) and (7) as present paragraphs (4) and (5), and in paragraph (1) inserted "that may include cost-of-living adjustments."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Quoted in Brooks v. Brooks, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2775 (File No. 6714), 677 P.2d 1230 (1984); Burrell v. Burrell, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2795 (File Nos. 6343, 6737, 6937), P.2d (1984).

II. CHILD SUPPORT.

Hinchey overruled. — The court was not convinced that the legislature intended to provide for post-majority educational support in either an original decree, or in a modification of the original decree, and to the extent Hinchey is inconsistent with this conclusion it was overruled. Dowling v. Dowling, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2809 (File No. 6454), 679 P.2d 480 (1984).

Child support award held inadequate and issue remanded to trial court. — See Hunt v. Hunt, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2927 (File No. S-399), P.2d (1985).

Remand required. — Where throughout the trial, wife argued that $350 per month child support was adequate, while husband maintained that it was excessive, award to wife for more than she asked required remand for a hearing in the absence of anything in the record explaining the award. Smith v. Smith, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2764 (File No. 7092), 673 P.2d 283 (1983).

IV. DIVISION OF PROPERTY.

A. In General.

Property acquired after permanent separation but prior to final divorce should be included in the property settlement if it was acquired with property which would otherwise have been subject to division: if the later-acquired property was purchased with property which would not have been divided, then the new property should remain with the purchasing spouse. Hunt v. Hunt, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2927 (File No. S-399), P.2d (1985).

Property division not clearly unjust. In accord with 1st paragraph in original. See Smith v. Smith, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2764 (File No. 7092), 673 P.2d 283 (1983).

Remand for property disposition modification because of extraordinary circumstances. — See Foster v. Foster, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2850 (File No. 7209), 684 P.2d 869 (1984).

B. What Constitutes Property.

Unused personal leave, which may be used or converted to cash by the person accruing it, is a marital asset for purposes of the court's division of the parties' property in an action for divorce. Schober v. Schober, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2888 (File No. S-265), 692 P.2d 267 (1984).

Sec. 25.24.170. Modification of judgment.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Challenge of an order of support as unconstitutional is not request for modification under this section, but is a request for relief from a prior order of judgment under Alaska Civ. R. 60. Burrell v. Burrell, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2795 (File Nos. 6343, 6737, 6937), P.2d (1984).

Post-majority child educational support. — The court was not convinced that the legislature intended to provide for post-majority educational support in either an original decree, or in a modification of the original decree, and to the extent Hinchey is inconsistent with this conclusion it was overruled. Dowling v. Dowling, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2809 (File No. 6454), 679 P.2d 480 (1984).

II. GROUNDS FOR MODIFICATION.

General rule. — A modification of an alimony order can be obtained only where there has been a material and substantial change in circumstances occurring subsequent to the original order and the change ordinarily must be more or less permanent rather than temporary. Burrell v. Burrell, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2795 (File Nos. 6343, 6737, 6937), P.2d (1984).

Determination of change in circumstances. — The appropriate benchmark from which to consider whether there has been a change of circumstances is the last time the issue of alimony and factors relevant to modification were actually considered. Burrell v. Burrell, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2795 (File Nos. 6343, 6737, 6937), P.2d (1984).

Article 2. Dissolution of Marriage.

Sec. 25.24.200. Dissolution of marriage.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Support of illegitimate children. — Although a husband's support obligation is regarded as extending only to children "of the marriage," a mistake in the determination of paternity is not regarded as jurisdictional error and the superior court can enforce an agreement to support a child even though both parties to the dissolution action later admit that the child was born out of wedlock. J.C. v. M.L.C., Sup. Ct. Op. No. 2724 (File No. 7166), 668 P.2d 1351 (1983).

Sec. 26.05.222. Creation and administration of Alaska National Guard and Alaska Naval Militia retirement system. (a) There is established an Alaska National Guard and Alaska Naval Militia retirement system. The commissioner of administration shall administer the Alaska National Guard and Alaska Naval Militia retirement system.

(b) The commissioner of administration may adopt regulations to implement the Alaska National Guard and Alaska Naval Militia retirement system. Regulations adopted by the commissioner under this subsection relate to the internal management of state agencies and their adoption is not subject to the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62). (§ 17 ch 159 SLA 1972; am § 9 ch 146 SLA 1980; am § 33 ch 137 SLA 1982)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment rewrote the section.

The 1982 amendment inserted "and Alaska Naval Militia" in the first and second sentences of subsection (a) and in the first sentence of subsection (b).

Sec. 26.05.223. Commencement of participation in system. A member of the Alaska National Guard or Alaska Naval Militia shall be included in this system upon commencement of membership in the Alaska National Guard, or on January 1, 1973, whichever is later, or upon commencement of membership in the Alaska Naval Militia or on July 1, 1980, whichever is later. (§ 17 ch 159 SLA 1972; am § 10 ch 146 SLA 1980)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment substituted "system" for "plan" at the end of the catchline and preceding "upon commencement" near the middle of the section, substituted "A" for "An active" at the beginning of the section, inserted "or Alaska Naval Militia" following "Alaska National Guard" near the beginning of the section, deleted "his active" preceding "membership" near the middle of the section, and substituted "or upon commencement of membership in the Alaska Naval Militia or on July 1, 1980, whichever is later" for "Inclusion in the plan is a condition of active membership in the Alaska National Guard" at the end of the section.

Sec. 26.05.224. Retirement benefits. (a) An active member of the Alaska National Guard, or a former member who was an active member on or after January 1, 1969, or a member of the Alaska Naval Militia on or after July 1, 1980, is eligible for a retirement pension

(1) upon voluntary retirement from the Alaska National Guard or Alaska Naval Militia after a total of 20 years or more of satisfactory service in the Alaska National Guard, Alaska Naval Militia, or the armed forces of the United States, and the reserves of them, or any combination of service in these components if at least five years of the service is in the Alaska National Guard or Alaska Naval Militia; or

(2) upon involuntary separation because of federal standards imposed on the Alaska National Guard or Alaska Naval Militia, regardless of length of service, unless the separation occurs as a result of the member's own misconduct, misrepresentation, or unwillingness to satisfy established standards for continued participation.

(b) The retirement pension is $100 a month, payable for the same number of months that the member participated satisfactorily in the Alaska National Guard or Alaska Naval Militia.

(c) An eligible member or former member may elect to receive the retirement pension beginning on the first day of the month in which the member or former member becomes eligible for retirement, or the member or former member may elect to defer payment to a later date. Payment of a deferred retirement benefit may not begin until application for the benefit is filed with and approved by the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs. Deferred retirement payments must be made monthly at the rate of $100.

(d) Upon the death of an active member who has at least five years service in the Alaska National Guard or Alaska Naval Militia or a combination of these components, the member's designated beneficiary is entitled to a lump sum benefit calculated in accordance with (b) of this section. Upon the death of a former member who has at least 20 years service, the former member's designated beneficiary is entitled to a lump sum benefit calculated in accordance with (b) of this section less any retirement benefits previously paid. A member may change or revoke the designation of a beneficiary without notice to the beneficiary at any time. If a member designates more than one beneficiary, each shall share equally unless the member specifies a different allocation. The designation of a beneficiary and a change or revocation of a beneficiary shall be made on a form provided by the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs and is not effective until filed with the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs. If a member fails to designate a beneficiary or if no designated beneficiary survives the member, the death benefit under this subsection shall be paid to the member's estate. (§ 17 ch 159 SLA 1972; am §§ 11, 12 ch 146 SLA 1980; am § 1 ch 140 SLA 1984; am E.O. No. 58, §§ 4, 5 (1984))

Revisor's notes. — Subsections (c) and (d) were redrafted in 1984 to remove personal pronouns pursuant to § 4, ch. 58, SLA 1982.

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment rewrote subsections (a) through (c), and added subsection (d).

The first 1984 amendment, in paragraph (a)(2), substituted "involuntary separation" for "involuntary retirement" and

The second 1984 amendment inserted "and Veterans'" in the second sentence in subsection (c) and in two places in the next-to-last sentence in subsection (d).

Sec. 26.05.225. Earlier service. A person who was a member of the Alaska National Guard on or after January 1, 1969, is entitled to credit for his service to the state and former territory of Alaska as a member of the National Guard and Territorial Guard before and after January 1, 1969, in determining eligibility for retirement benefits under AS 26.05.224. (§ 17 ch 159 SLA 1972; am § 13 ch 146 SLA 1980)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment rewrote the section.

Sec. 26.05.226. Contributions. (a) The Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs shall contribute to the Alaska National Guard and Alaska Naval Militia retirement system the amounts determined by the commissioner of administration as necessary to

(1) fund the system based on the actuarial requirements of the system as established by the commissioner of administration; and

(2) administer the system.

(b) The amount required for contributions from the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs under (a) of this section shall be included in the annual appropriations made to the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs. (§ 17 ch 159 SLA 1972; am § 14 ch 146 SLA 1980; am § 34 ch 137 SLA 1982; am E.O. No. 58, § 6 (1984))

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment rewrote the section.

The 1982 amendment inserted "and Alaska Naval Militia" in the introductory paragraph of subsection (a).

The 1984 amendment inserted "and Veterans'" in the introductory language of subsection (a) and twice in subsection (b).

Sec. 26.05.227. Definitions. As used in AS 26.05.222 — 26.05.228,

(1) "beneficiary" means a person designated by the member in a writing filed with the system by the member while alive to receive benefits that may be due from the system upon the death of a member;

(2) "member" means a commissioned or warrant officer or an enlisted person in the Alaska National Guard or Alaska Naval Militia;

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment rewrote the section.

The 1982 amendment extended the scope of the reference in the introductory language from AS 26.05.226 to AS 26.05.228, substituted " .e member in a writing filed with the system by the member while alive" for "a member" in paragraph (1), and inserted "and Alaska Naval Militia" in paragraph (3).

Sec. 26.05.228. Accounting and investment. (a) The commissioner of administration shall establish, as a special account in the general fund, a fund for the system and maintain accounts and records for the system.

(b) All income of the fund and all disbursements made by the fund must be credited or charged, whichever is appropriate, to the following accounts:

(1) an individual account for each retired member of the system that records the benefits paid under this system to the member or surviving beneficiary;

(2) a separate account for the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs' contribution to fund the system based on the actuarial requirements of the system as established by the commissioner of administration under this chapter;

(3) an expense account for the system; this account is charged with all disbursements representing administrative expenses incurred by the system; expenditures from this account are included in the governor's budget for each fiscal year.

(c) Investment of surplus amounts in the fund may be made as provided in AS 39.35.110. (§ 36 ch 137 SLA 1982; E.O. No. 58, § 7 (1984))

Dear Senator Abood:

The Alaska State Association for the Education of Young Children urges you and the other members of the Senate State Affairs Committee to support passage of House Bill 238.

Alaska has the second highest birth rate of the fifty states, the youngest population of the fifty states and over half of the Alaskan population is in the childbearing ages of 18 to 44 years.

We must do all we can to see that children born in Alaska receive the care necessary to reach their full emotional, physical and psychological potential during the first critical months of development.

Dr. T. Berry Brazelton was the keynote speaker at the Anchorage Association's conference last spring. His years of research support his claim to the importance of the first sixteen weeks of life. When an expectant mother can count on having those early weeks to bond with her infant, she can allow herself the attachment to her baby that is so important. This bonding is the basis for success in parenting in the years ahead.

This legislation will strengthen families and provide a benefit to Alaska's children without costing the state additional dollars. We support the change from maternity leave to parental leave allowing either parent the ability to be involved in the child's early stages of development and care.

Thank you for your consideration of this legislation and the opportunity to express our support.

Sincerely,

Lynn McKinnon

POST OFFICE BOX 10-1571, ANCHORAGE, ALASKA 99510

March 5, 1986

Honorable Mitch Abood, Chairman
Senate State Affairs Committee

Mr. Chairman and members of the committee:

The Alaska Women's Lobby would like to express it's support for HB 237. Pension systems affect women not only as workers but also as wives, divorced spouses and widows.

Only 20% of the married participants of the Public Employees Retirement System have chosen survivor benefits for their spouses. We do not know how many of these married participants have informed their spouses about this decision which affects their financial futures.

Many older persons face economic uncertainty and older women have the highest incidence of poverty in Alaska and in the nation. Older women in Alaska have only half the median income of older men.

We firmly believe that the spouse should be included in the decision to waive survivor benefits. Requiring written consent of both the participant and the spouse to waive these benefits allows both parties to be aware of the options available to them.

We are very supportive also of the protection afforded the rights of former spouses to retirement benefits in this proposed legislation. Pension benefits are sometimes the most valuable asset accrued during a marriage and should be considered as joint property to which both parties have an interest.

By waiving the prohibition of assignment for purposes of satisfying marital property rights, spousal and child support we are recognizing that the support of dependents is a somewhat different category from claims by ordinary creditors.

The amendments to ERISA (Employment Retirement Income Security Act) are an acknowledgement by Congress of the need to provide greater equity under pension plans for workers, their spouses and dependents. These amendments affect all private sector pension plans.

HB 237 would ensure that state and many municipal employees and their spouses are afforded similar benefits and protections and we urge your support of it's passage.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Sherrie Goll

The Older Alaskans Commission urges your support for HB 237 "an act relating to pension reform". The Older alaskans Commission has reviewed this bill and believes it will be of special benefit to older persons and especially to older women who represent slightly more than half of Alaska's older population.

It is a sad fact that being old and a woman is a sure ticket to poverty. According to a recent survey conducted by the Older Alaskans Commission, 70 percent of older Alaskans with an annual income of less than $5,000 are women. 9 percent of Alaska's older women are divorced and an additional 45 percent are widowed. Only 3 percent were never married. Consequently, we can conclude that older women who are now poor were once married. But they do not enjoy an adequate level of retirement pensions and incomes - and many of their male peers do. Policy makers should note that the impoverishment of older women leads to the expenditure of public funds in Medicaid, Older Age Assistance, Supplemental Security Income, and other poverty programs. If we have the opportunity to establish public policy which can lessen the impoverishment of its older citizens we must do so. We have just such an opportunity in HB 237.

This bill would make spouses of public employees the automatic beneficiaries of survivor benefits unless the spouse waives the right to these benefits in writing. The majority of older women are totally unprepared for the death of their spouse. HB 237 would ensure that more older women would have pension benefits in the event their spouse were to die.

In addition, the bill sets up a mechanism for the distribution of pensions to former spouses of employees if they are awarded a portion of the pension at the time of their divorce. This provision will provide an important protection against impoverishment in later life.

On behalf of the Older Alaskans Commission and Alaska's 26,000 older citizens, I urge you give this bill your firm "DO PASS".

ANALYSIS OF HB 237
"An act relating to pension reform."
March 1985

I. Sections 1-16 relate to changes in the Teachers' Retirement System.

Sections 1-3 amend the eligibility requirements for normal and early retirement of the TRS system to stipulate that members must designate their spouse* (which could include former spouses) the contingent beneficiary and select a joint and survivor benefit plan. The member must chose among three options that currently exist in the retirement plan.

Exceptions to these requirements are:

1. if the spouse has signed a consent form waiving the right as the contingent beneficiary;

2. if the spouse was not married to the member during any period of the member's employment covered by the retirement system;

3. if there is no spouse or that the spouse cannot be located or other circumstances described by the administrator by regulation

*Under sections 1-3, "spouse" means the person to whom the member is married at the time of appointment to retirement except to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order, orders otherwise.

Section 5 amends vested members' right to refund upon termination by requiring vested members to obtain their spouse's* (which could include former spouses) consent to the refund, in writing.

Exceptions to this requirement are:

1. the member is not vested;

2. the spouse was not married to the member during any period of the member's employment;

3. there is no spouse;

4. consent cannot be obtained because the spouse cannot be located.

*Under this section "spouse" means the person to whom the member is married at the time of application for the refund, except to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order, orders otherwise.

Sections 6 and 7 amend the designation of beneficiary for non-occupational and occupational death benefits by clarifying the definition of spouse* to include former spouses to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order so orders.

*Under these sections "spouse" means the person to whom the member was married during the member's employment and is married to at the time of the member's death, except to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order, orders otherwise.

Sections 8-10 amend the designation of beneficiary for death benefits from the member's designated choice to the member's spouse if the member is married, becomes married or remarries. Revocation of the designation of the member's spouse can only be accomplished by the spouse signing a consent form waiving the right as beneficiary.

The definition of spouse is clarified to mean the person to whom the member was married during the member's employment and is married to at the time of the member's death, except to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order, orders otherwise. A qualified domestic relations order can establish a former spouse as the designated beneficiary.

Procedures for the claiming of spousal entitlement to death benefits is outlined. A ten day time period, following the member's death, is established for all entitlement claims to be filed with the administrator. If a claim is not received within the ten day period, the person claiming entitlement is not entitled to receive any benefit already paid by the administrator.

Sections 11-13 amend the joint and survivor option of retirement plans by changing the designation of contingent beneficiary to require that a member's spouse (which could include former spouses) must be the contingent beneficiary. The member, however, maintains the choice of which joint and survivor option plan to select. The member must choose among three options currently existing in the retirement plan.

Exceptions to this requirement are:

1. if the spouse signs a consent form waiving the right as contingent beneficiary;

2. if the spouse was not married to the member during any period of the members employment covered by this retirement plan;

3. if there is no spouse or that the spouse cannot be located or other circumstances described by the administrator.

In the case where there is 'no spouse', a member may designate a dependent as a contingent beneficiary or may take normal or early retirement.

Spouse is defined as the person to whom the member is married at the time of appointment to retirement, except to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order, orders otherwise. A qualified domestic relations order can establish a former spouse as the contingent beneficiary.

Procedures for claiming to be a contingent beneficiary is outlined. A 60 day time period, following a member's application for retirement, is established for filing of all claims as contingent beneficiary. No claim, following the 60 day period, may be paid if the payment would result in an increase in the actuarial cost to the retirement system.

Sections 14-15 amend the TRS exemption status from assignments to provide for assignments resulting from qualified domestic relations orders.

Section 16 defines a domestic relations order. Which means a divorce or dissolution judgement, including an order approving a property settlement, provision of child support and spousal support. It also defines surviving spouse as the spouse of a member at the time of a member's death except to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order, orders otherwise.

II. Sections 17 and 18 relate to changes in the Judicial Retirement System.

Section 17 amends survivor benefits by reducing the requirement from two years to one year that a spouse be married prior to the death of the justice or judge in order to be eligible for survivor benefits. This change conforms to PERS definition and ERISA's requirements for eligibility of survivor benefits.

It also allows former spouses who were married for at least one year and who have not remarried to share in survivors' benefits to the extent provided in a qualified domestic relations order.

Section 18 defines a qualified domestic relations order. The definition is the same as described in Section 16 under the TRS plan.

III. Sections 19 and 20 relate to changes in the Marital and Domestic Relations statute. The amendments require that if a divorce or dissolution judgement distributes benefits from PERS, TRS, NGRS to an alternate payee (former spouse), the judgement must be a qualified domestic relations order.

IV. Sections 21-23 relate to changes in the Alaska National Guard Retirement System.

Sections 21 and 22 amend retirement benefits for vested members by changing the designation of beneficiary for death benefits from the vested member's designated choice to the member's spouse if the member is married, becomes married or remarries while employed under this retirement plan. It also allows former spouses who were married to the member while employed under this retirement plan to share in survivors' benefits to the extent provided in a qualified domestic relations order.

Requirements and procedures for revocation of consent of the spouse, proof of a claim to entitlement and a 10 day notification of claim period are the same as for the death benefits under TRS (referred to in Sections 8-10).

Section 23 defines a qualified domestic relations order. It is identical to all other references in TRS, JRS (Sections 16 and 18).

V. Sections 24-39 relate to changes in the Public Employees' Retirement System.

Section 24 amends a vested member's right to refund upon termination by requiring vested members to obtain their spouse's consent to the refund in writing. Definition of spouse and exceptions to this requirement are the same as in TRS (Section 5).

Sections 26-29 amend the eligibility requirements for normal and early retirement under PERS to stipulate that members must designate their spouses as the contingent beneficiary and select a joint and survivor benefit plan. The member must choose among three options which currently exist in the retirement plan. The exceptions to this requirement and definition of spouse are the same as in TRS (Sections 1-3).

Sections 30-32 amend the designation of beneficiary for non-occupational and occupational death benefits by clarifying the definition of spouse which could include former spouses to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order so orders. The change in definition of spouse is the same as in TRS (Sections 6-7).

Sections 33-35 amend the joint and survivor option of retirement plan by changing the designation of contingent beneficiary to require that a member's spouse (which could include former spouses) must be the contingent beneficiary. The member, however, maintains the choice of which joint and survivor option plan to select. The member must choose among three options that currently exist in the retirement plan. Revocation of this requirement, spousal waiver, right to designate a dependent as beneficiary or take normal retirement, definition of spouse, procedures for spousal claim to right of contingent beneficiary and time period allotted for claim is the same as in TRS (Sections 11-13).

Section 36 amends the designation of beneficiary for death benefits from the member's designated choice to the member's spouse if the member is married, becomes married or remarries. Revocation of designation, spousal waiver of the right to beneficiary, the definition of spouse, procedures for spousal claim to right of beneficiary and time period allotted for claim is the same as in TRS (Sections 8-10).

Section 37 amends the PERS exemption status from assignments to provide for assignments resulting from qualified domestic relations orders. This is the same in TRS (Sections 14-15).

Section 38 amends the definition of surviving spouse in the PERS plan to include former spouses to the extent that a qualified domestic relations order, orders.

Section 39 defines a domestic relations order. This is the same definition used in TRS, JRS, NGRS (Sections 16, 18, 23).

Section 40 charges the Department of Administration with the duty to notify members of the state's retirement plans of the changes previously outlined within 90 days following enactment of the legislation. Notification will be provided through the division of retirement's newsletter and publication in newspapers in each judicial district of the state. They will also provide all necessary forms to implement the Act.

Sections 41-42 set out the effective dates of the Act. Notification of the changes to the state's retirement plans will take effect immediately. Sections 1-39 take effect January 1, 1986.

ASSOCIATION OF ALASKA SCHOOL BOARDS
326 Fourth St., Suite 510 • Juneau, Alaska 99801 • (907) 586-1083

TESTIMONY BEFORE SENATE STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE
CS for House Bill No. 238 (Judiciary) am
March 13, 1986

The Association of Alaska School Boards does not oppose the concept of crediting Leave Without Pay (LWOP) toward retirement eligibility. However we are opposed to removing decision-making and control regarding Parental Leaves Without Pay from the local school board and administration.

In our view HB 238 establishes, as a matter of state policy, approval of up to four months of Leave Without Pay for natural or adoptive parents who are certificated employees of school districts and credits that non-working time toward eligibility in the Teacher's Retirement System.

Currently, Leave Without Pay is collectively bargained between a school district and its certificated employees. However, the state's explicit approval of Leave Without Pay for parenting reasons undermines the district's bargaining position and weakens any attempt by school management to control leave useage.

Additionally, sixteen weeks doesn't appear to have any relation to the period of temporary disability connected with childbirth, for which employees are now entitled to use accrued sick leave. It simply represents an additional benefit of being able to count this non-working time for retirement. AASB is concerned that such a benefit may discriminate against non-parents since eligibility depends solely on whether the Leave Without Pay was for child rearing purposes.

We believe that the decline in state revenues will impact significantly on school district revenues. It is imperative that districts maximize their ability to manage and control costs at the local level. We believe this legislation would be detrimental to local control.

We thank the committee for the opportunity to submit this testimony.

TO: Senator Mitch Abood

FROM: Kathy Marshall KM
Executive Director

SUBJECT: Proposed changes to CSHB 238

DATE: March 13, 1986

The Alaska Women's Commission would like to propose the following changes to CSHB 238 in response to objections discussed in Senate State Affairs, March 13, 1986:

1) "Amend the title to "An Act relating to personal leave for pregnancy, child birth and adoption".

2) Eliminate sections 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, and 8.

These changes will remove all references to the ability of employees to purchase back retirement credit while on leave without pay for purposes due to pregnancy, birth or adoption. This eliminates any impact on the retirement systems for PERS, TERS and JERS and subsequently removes the basis of the fiscal note.

The remaining section 4, amends the personnel statute, AS 39.20.225(b)(4) to change maternity leave to parental leave and extend the leave without pay from 9 to 16 weeks. These provisions would affect only exempt employees and not bargaining units.

The Alaska Women's Commission believes this provision will set a state policy which recognizes the importance of parental involvement in the first four months of life without impacting the bargaining process.

Please feel free to contact me if you would like additional information about this proposal. Thank you for your consideration.

Sec. 39.20.220. Requirement that employment be continuous. Notwithstanding AS 39.20.200, an officer or employee is entitled to personal leave only after having been employed currently for a continuous period of 30 days under one or more appointments without break in service. When an officer or employee completes a period of continuous employment of 30 days, an amount of personal leave is credited to the officer or employee equal to the amount which, but for this section, would have accrued under AS 39.20.200 during the period. (§ 11-5-6 c ACLA 1949; am § 1 ch 182 SLA 1957; am § 1 ch 145 SLA 1960; am § 3 ch 136 SLA 1978)

Sec. 39.20.225. Use of personal leave. (a) An officer or employee may take personal leave at any time business permits upon permission by the head of the department or agency for which the officer or employee works.

(b) An officer or employee may take personal leave for medical reasons, regardless of whether business permits, upon permission by the head of the department or agency for which the officer or employee works. A department or agency head shall grant personal leave for medical reasons if the department or agency head is satisfied that the officer or employee is absent for medical reasons. The taking of personal leave for medical reasons shall be reduced by the amount of wage continuation payments made under the Alaska Workers' Compensation Act (AS 23.30). The following constitute "medical reasons" and are subject to the conditions noted:

(1) Medical disability of an officer or employee is a medical reason for taking personal leave. A department or agency head may require a doctor's certificate showing the disability if the absence exceeds three consecutive working days.

(2) Medical disability of a member of an officer's or employee's immediate family is a medical reason for taking personal leave if the disability is such that the attendance of the officer or employee is required. A department or agency head may require a doctor's certificate showing the disability if the absence exceeds three consecutive working days.

(3) A medical condition of an officer or employee that makes presence at work a danger to the health of fellow employees is a medical reason for taking personal leave. A department or agency head may require a doctor's certificate showing the condition if the absence exceeds three consecutive working days.

(4) Pregnancy and childbirth is a medical reason for a female officer or employee to take personal leave. A female officer or employee, otherwise qualified for a leave of absence, is entitled to take a maximum of nine weeks leave immediately preceding and following childbirth. If the officer's or employee's accrued personal leave is insufficient for this purpose, the officer or employee is entitled to take leave without pay for the balance of the nine-week period.

(5) Death of a member of an officer's or employee's immediate family is a medical reason for taking personal leave. No more than five days of personal leave may be taken for this purpose.

(c) Each officer and employee shall, during each 12-month period, take at least five days of personal leave. If the officer or employee does not take at least five days of personal leave during a 12-month period, the difference between five days and the amount of personal leave taken shall be canceled without pay unless the department or agency head certifies in writing that the officer or employee was denied the opportunity to take five days of personal leave during the 12-month period. (§ 4 ch 136 SLA 1978)

Sec. 39.20.230. When annual leave may be taken. [Repealed, § 15 ch 136 SLA 1978. For current law see AS 39.20.225.]

Sec. 39.20.240. Accumulation of personal leave. Except as provided in AS 39.20.225(c) personal leave that is not taken by an officer or employee during a 12-month period accumulates for use in succeeding 12-month periods. (§ 11-5-6 e ACLA 1949; am § 1 ch 182 SLA 1957; am § 1 ch 145 SLA 1960; am § 1 ch 37 SLA 1967; am § 1 ch 31 SLA 1971; am § 1 ch 151 SLA 1972; am § 5 ch 136 SLA 1978)

Sec. 39.20.245. Donation of personal leave. (a) An officer or employee may donate one or more days of personal leave a year to the memorial scholarship revolving loan fund, or to a scholarship account in the fund, under AS 14.43.250 — 14.43.325. The commissioner of administration shall pay to the account of the memorial scholarship revolving loan fund, or to a scholarship account in the fund, an amount equal to the value of the day or days of personal leave contributed by the officer or employee.

Sec. 14.20.330. Position, tenure, and retirement. (a) Unless it is otherwise agreed, a teacher returning from sabbatical leave shall return to the position occupied by that teacher when the sabbatical leave began.

(b) A sabbatical leave is not an interruption of the continuous service necessary to attain or retain tenure under AS 14.20.150, 14.20.155, or 14.20.160. However, the time spent on sabbatical leave may not be counted in determining when a teacher has sufficient service to enable the teacher to acquire tenure rights.

(c) A sabbatical leave is not a break in service for retirement purposes. Payment into the retirement fund shall be made on the basis of full salary. (§ 6 ch 134 SLA 1962; am § 32 ch 98 SLA 1966)

Editor's notes. — Subsection (a) was rewritten by the revisor of statutes under the authority of AS 01.05.031 and in accordance with the directive in § 4, ch. 58, SLA 1982. The revisor also, in subsection (b), substituted "the teacher" for "him" under the authority of AS 01.05.031 and ch. 58.

Sec. 14.20.340. Military service and previous leaves of absence. To determine eligibility for sabbatical leave, tours of military service and leaves of absence granted before July 1, 1963, are not considered years of active service. (§ 7 ch 134 SLA 1962; am § 2 ch 62 SLA 1964)

Sec. 14.20.345. Leave of absence without pay. (a) A teacher may be granted a leave of absence without pay for the purposes which may be approved by the governing body of the district if

(1) the teacher's application is approved by the governing body of the district; and

(2) the teacher agrees to return to employment in a public school not later than the beginning of the school year following termination of the period for which the leave of absence was granted.

(b) A leave of absence is not an interruption of the continuous service necessary to attain or retain retirement or tenure rights according to AS 14.20.150, 14.20.155, or 14.20.160. However, the time spent on leave of absence may not be counted in determining when a teacher has sufficient service to enable the teacher to acquire retirement or tenure rights.

(c) The leave of absence is not a break in service for retirement purposes.

(d) The governing body of the district may agree to continue the teacher's retirement contributions if the teacher agrees to pay the required seven per cent of the salary the teacher would have received during the leave of absence and reimburse the district for the district's required retirement contribution. Each year of leave of absence then would count as a year of retirement service.

(e) The governing body of the district may advance the teacher on the district salary schedule when the teacher returns to employment if the governing body determines that the teacher's leave of absence was educationally or professionally beneficial to the teacher or the district.

(f) A teacher may make contributions to the retirement fund for each year or portion of a year of leave of absence taken. The contribution shall include the required per cent of the salary the teacher would have received had the leave of absence not been taken, plus the required employer and state contributions that would have been made. Compound interest at the rate prescribed by regulation shall be added as computed from the beginning date of the leave of absence to the date the teacher pays the contribution. (§ 5 ch 104 SLA 1965; am §§ 33, 34 ch 98 SLA 1966; am § 1 ch 44 SLA 1971; am § 1 ch 184 SLA 1972; am § 2 ch 99 SLA 1974)

Editor's notes. — The revisor of statutes, pursuant to AS 01.05.031 and § 4, ch. 58, SLA 1982, substituted "the teacher's" for "his" in subsection (a)(1); substituted "the teacher" for "he" in subsections (a)(2), (d), (e), and (f); substituted "the teacher" for "him" in subsection (b); substituted "the" for "his" in subsection (d); and, in subsection (f), substituted "the leave of absence not been taken" for "he not taken the leave of absence."

Sec. 14.20.350. Definition. In AS 14.20.280 — 14.20-350 "teacher" means a certificated member of the teaching, supervisory, or administrative corps in the public schools of the state. (§ 8 ch 134 SLA 1962)

Revisor's notes. — This section was rewritten to eliminate former paragraph (2) which defined "department" by the revisor of statutes under AS 01.05.031 because of the redundancy in light of AS 14.60.010(4).

(b) When a school operated by a federal agency is transferred to or absorbed into a new or existing school district the teachers shall also be transferred if mutually agreed by the teacher or teachers and the school board of the new or existing district. A teacher transferred from a federal agency school, which does not have an official salary schedule or teacher tenure in the same manner as a public school district in the state, shall be placed on a position on the salary schedule of the absorbing district; the salary may not be less than the teacher would have received in the federal agency school. (1) possesses a standard teaching certificate;

(2) has been employed as a teacher in the same district continuously for two full school years and is reemployed for the school year immediately following the two full school years.

(b) The tenure rights acquired under (a) of this section become effective on the first day the teacher performs teaching services in the district during the school year immediately following the two full school years. (§ 1 ch 92 SLA 1960; am § 17 ch 98 SLA 1966)

Editor's notes. — The revisor of statutes, pursuant to AS 01.05.031 and § 4, ch. 58, SLA 1982, substituted "the teacher" for "his" in the introductory language of subsection (a).

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Purpose of tenure laws. — Tenure laws are intended to give job security to experienced teachers and to ensure that they will not be discharged for inadequate reasons. State v. Redman, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 755 (File No. 1431), 491 P.2d 157 (1971).

A system of tenure has as its objective the retention of able personnel after they have undergone an adequate period of probation with the concomitant result that more talented personnel will be attracted to enter the teaching profession. State v. Redman, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 755 (File No. 1431), 491 P.2d 157 (1971).

The law does not require that teachers shall teach every day, or every hour of every day. State v. Redman, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 755 (File No. 1431), 491 P.2d 157 (1971).

The supreme court fails to find any provision of Alaska statutes concerning education which requires, or to perceive of any persuasive policy reasons why, a teacher must work full days throughout the school year in order to attain tenure rights. No legislative intent to exclude a teacher who works less than full days is manifest from a study of the applicable statutes. State v. Redman, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 755 (File No. 1431), 491 P.2d 157 (1971).

Duties regular and substantial enough to afford intelligent evaluation are sufficient. — When a teacher's duties are regular and substantial enough to afford intelligent evaluation, there is little in the way of persuasive policy considerations for excluding such service from the ambit of Alaska tenure laws. State v. Redman, Sup. Ct. Op. No. 755 (File No. 1431), 491 P.2d 157 (1971).

Sec. 14.20.155. Effect of tenure rights. (a) A teacher who has acquired tenure rights has the right to employment within the district during continuous service.

(b) A teacher who has acquired tenure rights may agree to a new contract at any time. However, if the teacher fails to agree to a new contract, the provisions of the previous contract are continued subject to AS 14.20.158. (§ 18 ch 98 SLA 1966)

Sec. 39.35.280. Determination and payment of state contributions. The total amount of contributions required under AS 39.35.250 — 39.35.290 to be made by the state into the system shall be ascertained by the department of administration as soon as practicable after the end of each calendar month and shall be paid from the general fund of the state, except as provided in this section. If an employee is paid wages by the state during the month from a special or administrative fund provided by law, the payment to the system shall be made from that special or administrative fund. If the wages of an employee include both wages for state employment paid from the general fund of the state and wages for state employment paid from special or administrative funds, the amount to be paid into the system shall be prorated among the state funds in proportion to the wages paid to the individuals from each fund. However, payment may not be made from the special or administrative fund if the statute covering the special or administrative funds prohibits it. (§ 10 d ch 143 SLA 1960)

Sec. 39.35.300. Employment with the state. (a) An active employee is entitled to credited service for periods of employment with the state after January 1, 1961, regardless of the office, department, division, or agency of the state in which the person was employed. For purposes of this chapter, the University of Alaska is not an office, department, division, or agency of the state. Service credit may not be granted under this chapter for service that is creditable under the teachers' retirement system, AS 14.25.

(b) A permanent part-time employee of the state receives credited service on a pro rata basis to that which would have been earned as a permanent full-time employee. (§ 11 ch 143 SLA 1960; am § 4 ch 155 SLA 1966; am § 4 ch 27 SLA 1976; am § 26 ch 128 SLA 1977; am § 29 ch 13 SLA 1980)

IV Analysis:

Passage of this bill will allow members of the Public Employees (PERS), Judicial (JRS) and Teachers' (TRS) Retirement Systems to claim and purchase service for periods of authorized Leave Without Pay which resulted from pregnancy, birth of a member's child, adoption or care of the child immediately following birth. The bill also establishes a sixteen week limit on the amount of Leave Without Pay which may be claimed.

To fund this bill, the state PERS contribution rate would be increased by .0133% in FY 87. The state PERS payroll is estimated to be $590,176,728 in FY 87 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter.

The state TRS contribution rate must be increased by .01% for FY 87. The state TRS payroll is estimated to be $68,569,578 in FY 87 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter. The TRS State Match contribution would increase by .01% in FY 87. The TRS State Match salary is estimated to be $456,833,417 for FY 87 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter.

The State FY 87 cost of $131.1 is calculated as follows:

The increase in State PERS contribution rate (.0133%) times the estimated FY 87 State PERS salary ($590,176,728) equals;	$78,500.00
The increase in State TRS contribution rate (.01%) times the estimated FY 87 State TRS salary ($68,569,578) equals;	$ 6,900.00
The increase in TRS State Match contribution rate (.01%) times the estimated FY 87 TRS State Match salary ($456,833,417) equals;	$45,700.00
Total cost	$131,100.00

We have also estimated that Political Subdivision and School Districts costs (TRS and PERS) would increase as follows:

FY 87	FY 88	FY 89	FY 90	FY 91
$102.7	$110.9	$119.8	$129.4	$139.7

BILL SHEFFIELD
GOVERNOR

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

The Honorable Ben Grussendorf
Speaker of the House
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Representative Grussendorf:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill relating to the state's retirement systems. This bill amends statutes pertaining to the teachers', judicial, and public employees' retirement systems to allow credit for service for certain approved leave without pay.

The bill allows for credited service to be obtained for up to nine weeks of approved leave of absence without pay taken in connection with pregnancy, birth, or adoption of a child, and care of a child immediately after the birth or adoption of the child. Once an employee returns to work after such a leave of absence, the employee may obtain credited service by paying the full actuarial cost of providing benefits for the service claimed. Any unpaid indebtedness for the service claimed at the time of retirement will result in an actuarial reduction in benefits.

The bill requires the commissioner of administration to inform retirement system participants of the changes accomplished by this bill.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

To fund this bill, the state PERS contribution rate would be increased by .0075% in FY 86. The state PERS payroll is estimated to be $544,046,592 in FY 86 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter.

The state TRS contribution rate must be increased by .0056% for FY 86. The state TRS payroll is estimated to be $71,490,744 in FY 86 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter. The TRS State Match contribution would increase by .0056% in FY 86. The TRS State Match salary is estimated to be $416,297,654 for FY 86 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter.

Fiscal Note Analysis
Prepared by Division of Retirement & Benefits

April 29, 1985

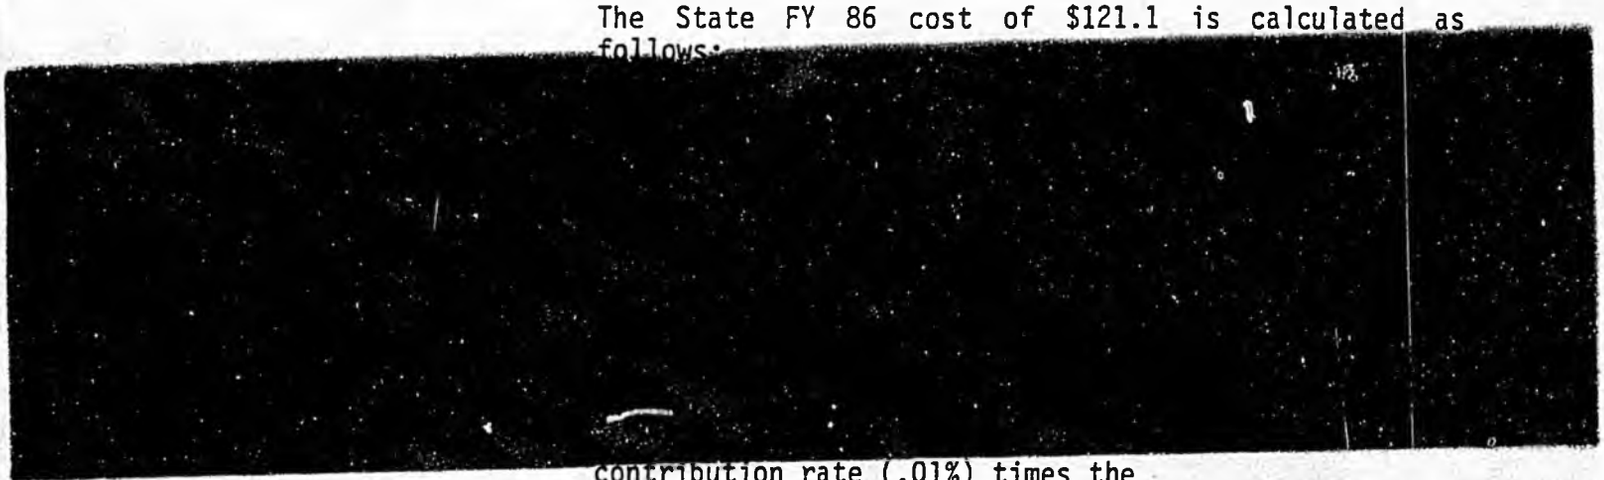
IV Analysis:

Passage of this bill will allow members of the Public Employees (PERS), Judicial (JRS) and Teachers' (TRS) Retirement Systems to claim and purchase service for periods of authorized Leave Without Pay which resulted from pregnancy, birth of a member's child, adoption or care of the child immediately following birth. The bill also establishes a sixteen week limit on the amount of Leave Without Pay which may be claimed.

To fund this bill, the state PERS contribution rate would be increased by .0133% in FY 86. The state PERS payroll is estimated to be $544,046,592 in FY 86 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter.

The state TRS contribution rate must be increased by .01% for FY 86. The state TRS payroll is estimated to be $71,490,744 in FY 86 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter. The TRS State Match contribution would increase by .01% in FY 86. The TRS State Match salary is estimated to be $416,297,654 for FY 86 and to increase by 8% each year thereafter.

The State FY 86 cost of $121.1 is calculated as follows:



contribution rate (.01%) times the estimated FY 86 TRS State Match salary ($416,297,654) equals; $41,600.00

Total cost $121,100.00

We have also estimated that Political Subdivision and School Districts costs would increase as follows:

FY 86	FY 87	FY 88	FY 89	FY 90

Dear Senator Abood:

Suzanne Lombardi, a member of the Alaska Women's Commission, met with you on February 19th to discuss HB 237, Pension Reform, and HB 238, Parental Leave. These two bills were introduced by the Governor at the Alaska Women's Commission's request. Commissioner Lombardi asked me to respond to several concerns you raised about the bills in your meeting with her.

HB 237, The Pension Reform bill is based on the federal legislation, the Retirement Equity Act of 1984. HB 237 reforms the public sector retirement plans to conform to the private sector plans nodified by the Retirement Equity Act. The bill covers three major areas:

1) Spouses become the automatic beneficiaries on retirement plans for death benefits. Under the current system an employee may elect a larger monthly retirement and no survivor benefits. In fact, only 20% of employees elected survivor benefits last year.

2) Consent of the employees spouse is required in writing if an employee chooses to waive survivor benefits. This provision would permit families to waive survivor benefits but would also insure the spouse could prepare before the time of death for no survivor benefits.

3) Retirement benefits become assignable to former spouses if stipulated in the divorce decree. Currently, retirement benefits are frequently considered a marital asset and a portion of the value of the benefits awarded to the spouse. With the passage of this bill, retirement benefits could be assigned at the time of retirement rather than a lump sum value being awarded at the time of the divorce. The former spouses would only be eligible for the portion of the benefits awarded at the time of divorce. If, for example, a state employee was married for ten years and got a divorce and later remarried to a second spouse for five years prior to dying, the first spouse would be entitled to ten years worth of benefits and the second spouse would only be entitled to five years worth of benefits.

This bill at both the federal and state level has received wide support. It has been recognized that many people, especially women, fall into poverty upon the death of their spouse. This bill ensures a measure of protection to women during the retirement years.

The second bill, HB 238, changes maternity leave to parental leave, increases the amount of leave without pay from 9 to 16 weeks and allows employees on leave without pay to purchase back their retirement credit. Under current law only women can take maternity leave. However, there are often circumstances under which the husband may need to take the leave to care for a newborn. Currently this is not possible.

HB 238 increases the amount of leave without pay available to employees from 9 to 16 weeks. A leading pediatrician, T. Berry Brazelton, has argued that children suffer irreparable harm if they are not cared for by either a parent or grandparent during the first four months of life. He states that "only a parent or grandparent can provide the irrational love needed by an infant to reach their full emotional intellectual and physical capacity during the first four months". This bill would at least provide parents the opportunity to be at home, at no expense to the state, during this critical period.

One concern which has been articulated by several legislators in the House was that if this extra time were given to employees, the state would be left with on one to continue the jobs for 16 weeks. However, since this is leave without pay, the state would have the financial capability of hiring temporary employees to replace the employee on parental leave. Another important factor is that less than ½% of the time spent on leave without pay last year was taken for maternity purposes. Not many individuals can afford to be out of work without pay for lengthy periods of time.

In general the bill has reveived good support since it promotes the welfare of Alaska's children and is perceived as pro family.

The Alaska Women's Commission hopes you will support these bills. If we can provide you with any additional information, please don't hesitate to contact us.

MEMO

TO: Senator Mitch Abood

FROM: Kathy Marshall KM
Executive Director

SUBJECT: Proposed changes to CSHB 238

DATE: March 13, 1986

The Alaska Women's Commission would like to propose the following changes to CSHB 238 in response to objections discussed in Senate State Affairs, March 13, 1986:

1) "Amend the title to "An Act relating to personal leave for pregnancy, child birth and adoption".

2) Eliminate sections 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, and 8.

These changes will remove all references to the ability of employees to purchase back retirement credit while on leave without pay for purposes due to pregnancy, birth or adoption. This eliminates any impact on the retirement systems for PERS, TERS and JERS and subsequently removes the basis of the fiscal note.

The remaining section 4, amends the personnel statute, AS 39.20.225(b)(4) to change maternity leave to parental leave and extend the leave without pay from 9 to 16 weeks. These provisions would affect only exempt employees and not bargaining units.

The Alaska Women's Commission believes this provision will set a state policy which recognizes the importance of parental involvement in the first four months of life without impacting the bargaining process.

Please feel free to contact me if you would like additional information about this proposal. Thank you for your consideration.

Representative Red Boucher
Chairman, Telecommunications Subcommittee
Capitol Building, Room 421

Dear Representative Boucher:

This letter contains information relative to House Bill 242.

In April, 1983 the 12th Legislature, in conjunction with the Executive Branch, terminated the major part of what had been functioning as a computing resource chargeback system for the following reasons:

-- The amounts using agencies were budgeting to pay their resource charges were much higher than the amount computing resource providers needed to operate.

-- Chargeback rates established by the Data Centers were artificially high to cover losses from agencies that consumed resources but did not pay their chargeback billings.

Once chargeback was eliminated, it was necessary to establish an operating budget for the Data Centers paid directly out of General Funds instead of Inter-Agency receipts. This was accomplished by taking the total Data Center budget and subtracting the amount of non-General Funded based income that would continue to be received through Inter-Agency transfers. (An additional amount of $3100.0 was added to cover those operating expenses that had been paid from capital funds for a number of years.) As a result, the major portion of the FY84 Information Resources Management(IRM) budget was established and the Data Centers as well as the using agencies lost visibility and, therefore, the means of managing resource consumption.

It can be argued as to whether this loss of manageability or the surge in system's development was the primary contributor, but 1983 and 1984 were the most dramatic years of expanded Data Center load in the history of Alaska. From December, 1982 to January, 1985 (two years) the Data Centers have had to upgrade their computers three times for an increase in capacity of nearly 300%.

This growth does not imply there has been a total abandonment of rational use. A number of excellent systems have been implemented in this period. However, it is felt that some portion of the current consumption level could be reduced through effective management.

For this reason, the idea of resource chargeback as a management tool is still supported by both the Legislature and the Administration in spite of problems with the old system. However, a new system must have new characteristics. Some of which are:

-- Chargeback rates must be auditable directly back to the provider's budget.

-- The system must be able to absorb unpredicted variations in agency usage estimates.

-- The system must allow cause/effect changes in Data Center configurations at times which may be incompatible with budgetary approval schedules.

In July 1983 (FY84), a cost analysis of the Data Centers was commenced and a study of various packaged billing systems was undertaken to select one that would fit the State's needs. After approval of a $74,000 capital project for FY85, a technique for calculating rates was developed and approved by all departments and the Boeing Computing Chargeback System (FACTS) was purchased and installed in the Juneau and Anchorage Data Centers as well as the University of Alaska. Commencing with October,1984, simulated invoices were generated and provided to high-use departments for review.

At this time, the mechanics of a new chargeback system are in place and operating, but two major elements remain to make it fully operational - HB242 and Implementation.

House Bill 242 which will accomplish two things.

-- Establish a non-lapsing account in the General Fund to act as shock absorber between the often incompatible requirements of resource demands and budget schedules.

-- Provide the authority to collect funds from all governmental entities in or out of state government that may be authorized to use state resources.

The non-lapsing account would commence with zero funding and be a repository for all resource-based income from any Data Center user. From this account, the Data Centers would be authorized to pay those expenses which result from providing the chargeback resources. Any excess income would not lapse at fiscal year closing, but would accumulate in the account to defray major up-front expenses that occur as a result of significant changes in system load or technology. The fund would be reimbursed by a fractional change in rates or the actual enlargement in a user's bill where additional resources are consumed. The fund would also serve as a buffer for sudden reductions in user consumption causing a reduction in income. Unfortunately, computing hardware cannot be disposed of as rapidly as a user can reduce his usage.

The other portion of HB242 allows the Data Centers to charge non-state governmental agencies for services and resources consumed. This would cover any user from city-borough through federal level.

HB242 very adequately covers the above subjects, but there are two administrative items relative to the non-lapsing account that should be considered. The first is the establishment of a limit of the account size. IRM recommends that limit be set at $5,000.0 with any excess automatically rolling back to the General Fund at the close of each fiscal year. The second is the management of the account. IRM recommends this be the responsibility of the Office of Management and Budget.

The other remaining major element to make chargeback fully operational is implementation. This involves moving the existing IRM General Fund amounts which are subject to chargeback out of IRM's budget and into the right user budgets so the system can commence operating.

To accomplish this, IRM recommends that the full system be implemented over a two year span. In the first year (FY86), budgets would remain as they have been presented, the new rates would be published and used for new systems justifications, invoices would be generated to the entire user community, but actual payment to the non-lapsing General Fund account would only occur for those agencies that have been making inter-agency payments through FY85 and any new accounts. This would give all other agencies an additional few months to prepare better budget estimates for their resource consumption and include their expected General Fund increases in the FY87 budget proposal. Commensurate with the user's increases in General Fund requests, IRM's General Fund request will go down equally, assuming there are no drastic increases in load. If there are such increases, IRM will be providing a total by agency as to the recommended funding level based on historical consumption. Any deviations will be justified by the consuming agency.

I encourage the committee to look favorably on this bill and will be available for testimony or conversation at any time.

Sincerely,

James R. Shea

Dear Representative Boucher:

In response to your recent inquiry about the Department's fiscal note for CSHB 242(Tele)(efd am), this fiscal note was based upon the Department of Administration's: 1) cost projections in the Fall of 1985, and 2) their sample monthly billings. The information was not available during the last session when the bill was being initially considered.

The Department of Public Safety's position is that the Department of Administration probably has adequate funding to continue present service being provided to the Department of Public Safety. But, since the potential fiscal impact is so substantial, it should be pointed out to legislative decision-makers as a likely cost related to full implementation of data processing chargeback.

Unfortunately, there was also an apparent distribution problem with this fiscal note. Additional copies have been sent out to those who did not receive the initial copy sent to them. Please advise if you have further questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

   Projected 12 months $3,985.1

2. 10-1-85 to 10-31-85

Note

The actual amount needed may be lower due to:

1. Planned downward revision in the rate structure by Department of Administration.

2. Other funds available within Department of Administration.

3. Probable inflationary increase in funding budgeted by Department of Administration over the course of these years.

BILL SHEFFIELD
GOVERNOR

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

The Honorable Ben Grussendorf
Speaker of the House
Alaska State Legislature
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Representative Grussendorf:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill that establishes authority for the financing of centralized data processing services by the Department of Administration. This bill comprises an integral part of the charge-back system that members of the Thirteenth Alaska State Legislature encouraged the Department of Administration to informally implement.

The bill allows the department to reallocate, into a central account in the general fund, and expend appropriations made to state agencies. The account may then be used to finance data processing services for all state agencies. The balance of the account would continue into subsequent fiscal years so that the problems of financing expensive acquisitions of data processing equipment with extended delivery dates can be solved.

Because the need for data processing changes as rapidly as the technology available, a flexible method of financing these services must be found. I encourage you to favorably consider the enactment of this bill.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

MEMO TO FILE FROM: Chris Herberger

Spoke to Mike Wheeler in Dept. of Administration concerning whether the University must procure data processing from the Dept. of Administration under HB 242. He said only with the consent of the President of the University. At the present time, the University has its own computers but there are plans for sharing network costs in the future.

January 18, 1986

Red,

HB 242, "An Act relating to automatic data processing," has a $0.00 fiscal note. The bill originally introduced would have done two things:

1) Require state agencies to procure data processing from the Dept. of Administration and allow the Dept. to charge the agencies for that service.

2) Set up a chargeback account so that the Dept. of Administration could cover immediate costs for purchasing new equipment or software, or to do maintenance work when there is no time for an appropriation. This purpose is according to Jim Shea.

The Telecommunications Committee substitute eliminated the second provision. There was concerned expressed by the members, particularly Rep. Goll, that a chargeback account, or slush fund, allowed the Dept. too much leeway in expenditures. You, and Representatives Goll and Thompson voted yes on the Committee substitute, and Rep. Wallis voted no. She wanted to know other agencies opinion of the bill.

The letter of transmittal from the Governor specifically talked about the usefulness of the slush fund. The Governor said that such an account would help finance data processing services.

The Finance Committee passed the Telecommunications Committee substitute by 9 to 1. Rep. Rieger voted no. He told me yesterday that he had nothing against data processing or against centralizing it, but that he was against the bill because it allows one bureaucracy to charge any amount for a service provided to another bureaucracy.

Automatic Data Processing — HOUSE BILL NO. 212, (see page 366). Reported back to the House March 15 by House Telecommunications recommending adoption of a substitute and that it do pass. Concurring: Boucher (Chair), Goll and Thompson. Not concurring: Wallis has no recommendation.

The Telecommunications substitute would allow the Dept. of Administration to require each state agency to procure its automatic data processing services from the Department of Administration. Administration could also charge a state agency or other geovernmental agency for the cost of the automatic data processing services provided or procured by the Department for the agency. This version excludes section that would have set up a nonlapsing automatic data processing account.

Automatic Data Processing — HOUSE BILL NO. 242, (see page 366). On March 13 the Speaker waived the State Affairs referral. The bill is currently in the House Special Committee on Telecommunications and has a further referral to Finance.

The Honorable Albert Adams
House of Representatives

Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Representative Adams:

This letter contains information relative to House Bill 242.

In April, 1983 the 12th Legislature, in conjunction with the Executive Branch, terminated the major part of what had been functioning as a computing resource chargeback system for the following reasons:

-- The amounts using agencies were budgeting to pay their resource charges were much higher than the amount computing resource providers needed to operate.

-- Chargeback rates established by the Data Centers were artificially high to cover losses from agencies that consumed resources but did not pay their chargeback billings.

Once chargeback was eliminated, it was necessary to establish an operating budget for the Data Centers paid directly out of General Funds instead of Inter-Agency receipts. This was accomplished by taking the total Data Center budget and subtracting the amount of non-General Funded based income that would continue to be received through Inter-Agency transfers. (An additional amount of $3100.0 was added to cover those operating expenses that had been paid from capital funds for a number of years.) As a result, the major portion of the FY84 Information Resources Management(IRM) budget was established and the Data Centers as well as the using agencies lost visibility and, therefore, the means of managing resource consumption.

It can be argued as to whether this loss of manageability or the surge in system's development was the primary contributor, but 1983 and 1984 were the most dramatic years of expanded Data Center load in the history of Alaska. From December, 1982 to January, 1985 (two years) the Data Centers have had to upgrade their computers three times for an increase in capacity of nearly 300%.

This growth does not imply there has been a total abandonment of rational use. A number of excellent systems have been implemented in this period. However, it is felt that some portion of the current consumption level could be reduced through effective management.

For this reason, the idea of resource chargeback as a management tool is still supported by both the Legislature and the Administration in spite of problems with the old system. However, a new system must have new characteristics. Some of which are:

- Chargeback rates must be auditable directly back to the provider's budget.
- The system must be able to absorb unpredicted variations in agency usage estimates.
- The system must allow cause/effect changes in Data Center configurations at times which may be incompatible with budgetary approval schedules.

In July 1983 (FY84), a cost analysis of the Data Centers was commenced and a study of various packaged billing systems was undertaken to select one that would fit the State's needs. After approval of a $74,000 capital project for FY85, a technique for calculating rates was developed and approved by all departments and the Boeing Computing Chargeback System (FACTS) was purchased and installed in the Juneau and Anchorage Data Centers as well as the University of Alaska. Commencing with October,1984, simulated invoices were generated and provided to high-use departments for review.

At this time, the mechanics of a new chargeback system are in place and operating, but two major elements remain to make it fully operational - HB242 and Implementation.

The Telecommunications Committee substitute for House Bill 242 will allow IRM to collect funds directly from other agencies of government that may use state computing resources. For example, there are a number of local police agencies that use various elements of the Public Safety systems and certain agencies of the Federal Government here in Alaska have expressed an interest in using certain services. This is an opportunity to gain additional income for the state through the sale of resources at times that would not interfere with state priorities.

The other remaining major element to make chargeback fully operational is implementation. This involves moving the existing IRM General Fund amounts which are subject to chargeback out of IRM's budget and into the right user budgets so the system can commence operating.

To accomplish this, IRM recommends that the full system be implemented over a two year span. In the first year (FY86), budgets would remain as they have been presented, the new rates would be published and used for new systems justifications, invoices would be generated to the entire user community, but actual payment of funds to IRM account would only occur from those agencies that have been making inter-agency payments through FY85 and any new accounts. This would give all other agencies an additional few months to prepare better budget estimates for their resource consumption and include their expected General Fund increases in the FY87 budget proposal. Commensurate with the user's increases in General Fund requests, IRM's General Fund request will go down equally, assuming there are no drastic increases in load. If there are such increases, IRM will be providing a total by agency as to the recommended funding level based on historical consumption. Any deviations will be justified by the consuming agency.

I encourage the committee to look favorably on this bill and will be available for testimony or conversation at any time.

Sincerely,

James R. Shea
Deputy Commissioner
Information Resources and Telecommunications

Dear Representative Boucher:

contributor, but 1983 and 1984 were the most dramatic years of expanded Data Center load in the history of Alaska. From December, 1982 to January, 1985 (two years) the Data Centers have had to upgrade their computers three times for an increase in capacity of nearly 300%.

This growth does not imply there has been a total abandonment of rational use. A number of excellent systems have been implemented in this period. However, it is felt that some portion of the current consumption level could be reduced through effective management.

For this reason, the idea of resource chargeback as a management tool is still supported by both the Legislature and the Administration in spite of problems with the old system. However, a new system must have new characteristics. Some of which are:

-- Chargeback rates must be auditable directly back to the provider's budget.

-- The system must be able to absorb unpredicted variations in agency usage estimates.

-- The system must allow cause/effect changes in Data Center configurations at times which may be incompatible with budgetary approval schedules.

In July 1983 (FY84), a cost analysis of the Data Centers was commenced and a study of various packaged billing systems was undertaken to select one that would fit the State's needs. After approval of a $74,000 capital project for FY85, a technique for calculating rates was developed and approved by all departments and the Boeing Computing Chargeback System (FACTS) was purchased and installed in the Juneau and Anchorage Data Centers as well as the University of Alaska. Commencing with October,1984, simulated invoices were generated and provided to high-use departments for review.

At this time, the mechanics of a new chargeback system are in place and operating, but two major elements remain to make it fully operational - HB242 and Implementation.

House Bill 242 which will accomplish two things.

-- Establish a non-lapsing account in the General Fund to act as shock absorber between the often incompatible requirements of resource demands and budget schedules.

-- Provide the authority to collect funds from all governmental entities in or out of state government that may be authorized to use state resources.

The non-lapsing account would commence with zero funding and be a repository for all resource-based income from any Data Center user. From this account, the Data Centers would be authorized to pay those expenses which result from providing the chargeback resources. Any excess income would not lapse at fiscal year closing, but would accumulate in the account to defray major up-front expenses that occur as a result of significant changes in system load or technology. The fund would be reimbursed by a fractional change in rates or the actual enlargement in a user's bill where additional resources are consumed. The fund would also serve as a buffer for sudden reductions in user consumption causing a reduction in income. Unfortunately, computing hardware cannot be disposed of as rapidly as a user can reduce his usage.

The other portion of HB242 allows the Data Centers to charge non-state governmental agencies for services and resources consumed. This would cover any user from city-borough through federal level.

HB242 very adequately covers the above subjects, but there are two administrative items relative to the non-lapsing account that should be considered. The first is the establishment of a limit of the account size. IRM recommends that limit be set at $5,000.0 with any excess automatically rolling back to the General Fund at the close of each fiscal year. The second is the management of the account. IRM recommends this be the responsibility of the Office of Management and Budget.

The other remaining major element to make chargeback fully operational is implementation. This involves moving the existing IRM General Fund amounts which are subject to chargeback out of IRM's budget and into the right user budgets so the system can commence operating.

To accomplish this, IRM recommends that the full system be implemented over a two year span. In the first year (FY86), budgets would remain as they have been presented, the new rates would be published and used for new systems justifications, invoices would be generated to the entire user community, but actual payment to the non-lapsing General Fund account would only occur for those agencies that have been making inter-agency payments through FY85 and any new accounts. This would give all other agencies an additional few months to prepare better budget estimates for their resource consumption and include their expected General Fund increases in the FY87 budget proposal. Commensurate with the user's increases in General Fund requests, IRM's General Fund request will go down equally, assuming there are no drastic increases in load. If there are such increases, IRM will be providing a total by agency as to the recommended funding level based on historical consumption. Any deviations will be justified by the consuming agency.

I encourage the committee to look favorably on this bill and will be available for testimony or conversation at any time.

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM

TO: Steve DATE: March 28, 1985

FROM: Garrey SUBJECT: HB 242

In 1974, the Division of Legislative Audit completed a series of reviews of the Department of Administration, Division of Data Processing.

The Legislative Auditor recommended, at that time, that all state agencies be required to budget separately for data processing services provided by the Division of Data Processing.

The Legislative Budget and Audit Committee and the House and Senate Finance committees approved of the concept of "data processing chargebacks" as recommended by the Legislative Auditor.

A system for chargebacks was implemented in FY '76

In practice, the chargeback system became cumbersome for the state agencies to work with and many of the agencies decided that the charges billed by the Department of Administration were too high so they contracted, instead, with private industry for data processing services.

The House and Senate Finance committees became frustrated with the data processing chargeback system because of a scenario that went something like this:

--The budget subcommittees would question the various departments and agencies about their data processing chargeback budget and they would be told "We have no control over that. The Department of Administration tells us what to budget for our data processing work."

The subcommittee viewed the chargeback as just one relatively small part of the agency budget and it was left to the subcommittees who were reviewing the Department of Administration to get the details about data processing budgets from the Division of Data Processing.

--The Division of Data Processing would answer the subcommittees' inquiries by saying that they have no control over the level or need for the services being provided to the various agencies because it is, after all, the various agencies' budgeted funds and if the money was made available, the service requested would be provided.

The level of frustration in the Finance Committees finally reached the point that in 1983 the agencies were directed to discontinue budgeting for data processing chargebacks. Since then, the Division of Data Processing has budgeted for the data processing services to be provided to the state agencies.

Other problems arose while the data processing chargeback system was being used.

For example: It was difficult to force the agencies to pay for services provided when their budgets ran short or they disagreed with the size of the charge or value of the services.

It was difficult to prevent the agencies from contracting with private industry to provide data processing services when the funds were right there in their budget. (Note that a current committee substitute would prohibit state agencies from purchasing data processing services from private industry. I don't know what the ramifications of that are but I suspect that there will be instances when it will not be possible or practical to enforce that prohibition)

It was also a problem for an agency to request any kind of additional services (such as a specially sorted printout) if they didn't have the funds budgeted for the service.

There were numerous disagreements over the rates charged by the Division of Data Processing and the formulas used to determine those rates.

I support the concept of data processing chargebacks but before we implement the program by passing a law, I would like to know that the new system is going to satisfy the Legislature's information needs.

If the chargeback plan is implemented, the Division of Data Processing would again be operating on funds other than General Funds. That tends to remove their budget from the intense Legislative scrutiny that components with general funds get. It seems to me that we need to make sure, somehow, that this is implemented in such a way that the individual agencies will, in fact, be held accountable for their budgeted data processing funds.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Steve DATE: March 28, 1985

FROM: Garrey SUBJECT: HB 242

Eleven years ago, I recommended to the Legislative Budget and Audit Committee that they direct the Department of Administration, Division of Data Processing to implement a data processing charge back system.

At that time, the Department of Administration opposed the concept but it was implemented at the direction of the Legislature.

The charge back system was a colossal failure. The Finance Committees were frustrated by what was perceived as a total loss of budgetary control over data processing expenditures.

After several years of trying to work with the chargeback system, the Legislature directed that the Department of Administration scrap it and budget for anticipated data processing needs in the Division of Data Processing.

If we are to resurrect the data processing charge back system in the operating budget, I recommend that we throughly review it first.

We should determine that the new plan design addresses and resolves all the problems that the Legislature had with the last system.

Before we put it in to law, we should see how well the charge back system meshes with the new state accounting system that is scheduled to go on line on 7/1/85.

I recommend that the House Finance subcommittee on HB 242 take the following action:

1. Draft legislative intent for insertion in the FY '86 budget stating that memorandum billing for data processing charge back should be done during FY '86 with a report to be made to the Legislature on the results by next session.

2. Address the question of whether the Division of Data Processing should be selling services to the Federal Government or others outside State Government as the CSHB 242 would allow.

3. Request that the Legislative Budget and Audit Committee direct the Legislative Auditor to perform a special audit to review the data processing charge back proposal being suggested by the Department of Administration.

   The audit should include a review of memorandum billings prepared by the Division of Data Processing through November 30, 1985.

   The Auditor's report can be available early in the next Legislative Session. The auditor should also be requested to include a review of the ramifications of prohibiting all Executive Branch agencies from purchasing data processing services from anyone other than the Department of Administration.

4 Request that the House Research Agency review and comment on the Department of Administration's charge back proposal by the beginning of the next session.

5. Request that the Director of Legislative Finance review and comment on the Department of Administration's charge back proposal by the beginning of the next session.

6. Request that Senators Sackett and Faiks support this approach and notify the Leadership that the bill must be deleted from the priority list this year.

Jay Hogan is very well versed on the pros and cons of the data processing chargeback concept and we should also ask for his comments on the final proposed charge back system before we completely revise the state budget by law.

CONTINUATION of FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

For Bill/Resolution No. CS HB 242

Fiscal note is using current Department of Administration rate structure and is based on a comparison of :

1.	11 months cost ending 8/31/85 =	$3,653,000.0
	Projected 12 months		$3,985.1
2.	10-1-85 to 10-31-85 Sample Billing	$ 322,676.06
	Straight Projection for 12 months		$3,872.1

Take the lower of the figures (in FY86 dollars) $3,872.1 (A)

DP Chargeback

Budgeted in DPS in FY84; now in Department of Administration (in FY82 dollars) $2,438.6 (B)

Difference: A - B =

2438.6
$1433.5

Note

The actual amount needed may be lower due to:

1. Planned downward revision in the rate structure by Department of Administration.
2. Other funds available within Department of Administration.
3. Probable inflationary increase in funding budgeted by Department of Administration over the course of these years.

The Honorable Bill Ray
State Senator
165 Behrends Avenue
Juneau, AK 99801

Dear Bill:

This letter is in followup to our telephone conversation on November 13, 1985.

I've been asked by the Alaska Associations of Chiefs of Police, Fire Chiefs, Peace Officers, and Fire Fighters to express their concern with the present form of House Bill 252 which currently is in the Senate State Affairs Committee.

As Vice Chairman of the Public Employees' Retirement Board and a former police and fireman myself, I can appreciate the concerns that they have with the bill. On November 5, 1985, the Presidents of the above organizations met in Anchorage with Mr. Ken Humphreys, Director of Division of Retirement and Benefits; Mr. John Logan, Deputy Director; and Mr. Bob Richardson, State Actuarial Consultant. At this time the four organizations presented their concerns to Mr. Humphreys and discussed proposed changes in the bill which would make it more responsive to the needs of the police and fire employees who may retire after this bill becomes effective.

Basically, the bill provides for much needed refinement to the Public Employees' Retirement System; but, unfortunately, there are two areas which cause great concern for state police and fire personnel.

The two basic areas that concern the associations and myself are in the first paragraph where it states that each police peace officer or fireman shall contribute to the system an amount equal to 8 percent of the peace officer's or fireman's compensation. Secondly, on Page 5, Section 39.35.475, Post Retirement Pension Adjustment, the bill as currently drafted allows only for cost-of-living adjustments after an individual reaches age 60 or is disabled.

In its current form, as described above, the bill raises the contribution level for police and firemen but does not provide a cost-of-living allowance until they reach age 60.

WELLINGTON'S LETTER

We would appreciate your initiating an amendment on behalf of the four associations which would change the contribution level to 7 1/2 percent and on Page 5, under Post Retirement Pension Adjustment, Line 17, add the following after the word year: "and to persons who have received benefits from this system for at least five years. On Line 22, change the 75 percent to 70 percent."

I understand from talking with Ken Humphreys and Bob Richardson, these amendments would actually save the state approximately $500,000 a year and provide a realistic cost-of-living adjustment for police and firemen after they have been retired for five years.

As I mentioned to you on the telephone, there was some original concern by APEA regarding any amendments to the bill which would drastically affect the general membership of their organization; however, the Executive Director for APEA supports this proposed change in the bill. Obviously, Bill, the reason that the police and fire services are asking you to sponsor the amendments is because of your long association with their organizations and the many personal and professional friends you have in the active police and fire associations as well as their retired ranks.

On behalf of the associations and myself, I want to take this opportunity to express our appreciation for your taking the time to read our material. Please let me know, at your convenience, whether or not you would feel comfortable in introducing the amendments on behalf of the associations. If you concur, the associations would then be willing to appear at whatever committee hearings you feel would be necessary in order to support their positions on the amendments.

It was good talking with you. I look forward to your response.

Sincerely yours,

RE: Proposed amendment to HB 252 (PERS Retirement) increasing benefits under Territorial retirement system

Bill --

You may remember us discussing last year a proposed amendment to the PERS retirement bill increasing the benefits under one of the Territorial retirement programs.

There now are only two (last year there were three) surviving beneficiaries of this retirement system, and the proposed amendment would increase their monthly benefit by $100. Ken Humphreys tells me that there has not been an increase for this retirement system since 1980, despite the high inflation during the years since. He says that a change of $100 would be about right considering inflation since 1980, and that the benefit increase would have negligible impact on the retirement system.

If you can see your way clear to provide for this amendment on the Senate side, I'm sure that it would be much appreciated by the recipients.

Get back to me if you have any questions or concerns.

Thanks!

IV Analysis: This bill applies primarily to the Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS). It would provide for an automatic, post retirement pension adjustment (PRPA) and an increased benefit multiplier for covered members. It increases the employee contribution rate by an additional 2½% of salary, increases the indebtedness contributions for military service credit by 2½% and provides for the employer to withhold employee contributions before taxes rather than the current after tax contributions to begin effective January 1, 1987. The bill also contains several cost containment provisions which would affect only those members first hired after the effective date. Those cost containment provisions are: a partial pay provision for health coverage for retirees; no COLA before age 65; no military credit shall be granted if the member is eligible to receive a benefit for the same service from the Federal Government and increasing the normal retirement age from 55 to 60. The bill also increases benefits for the two territorial retirees by $100.00 per month.

This is estimated to result in a .27% decrease in the PERS employer contribution rate for FY 87. The PERS state salaries for FY 87 are estimated to be $590,176,728.00 and are estimated to increase at 8% per year.

The state savings of $1,303.0 is calculated as follows:

The change in the PERS employer contribution rate (.27%) times the estimated FY 87 state PERS salaries ($590,176,728) equals	[$1,593.5]
Increased benefits for two territorial retirees per year	2.4
Plus administrative costs displayed on the following page	288.1
Total state FY 87 savings	[$1,303.0]

In addition to the State savings above, this would result in savings in Political Subdivision contributions as follows:

FY 87	FY 88	FY 89	FY 90	FY 91
[$1,296.7]	[$1,400.4]	[$1,512.5]	[$1,633.5]	[$1,764.1]

SCSCS House Bill 252 (State Affairs)

This bill applies primarily to the Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS). It would provide for an automatic, post retirement pension adjustment (PRPA) and an increased benefit multiplier for covered members. Employee contributions would be increased and placed on a pre-tax basis effective January 1, 1987. The bill also contains several other cost containment provisions which would affect only those members first hired after the effective date: a partial pay provision for health coverage for retirees; no geographical cost of living allowance before age 65; no military credit if a member is eligible to receive a benefit for the same service from the Federal Government and an increase in the normal retirement age from 55 to 60. It also increases benefits for the two territorial retirees by $100.00 per month.

The Department supports this bill because it provides for a more fiscally responsible funding method for post retirement pension adjustments and provides for several cost containment provisions which, while still leaving the PERS one of the most generous retirement systems in any state, provide welcome, net FY 87 savings to the State and Political Subdivisions.

IN THE HOUSE BY THE STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

SENATE CS FOR CS FOR HOUSE BILL NO. 252 (State Affairs)

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - SECOND SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to state retirement benefits; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 39.35.160(a) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(a) Beginning January 1, 1987, each peace officer or fireman shall contribute to the system an amount equal to seven and one-half percent of the peace officer's or fireman's compensation. Beginning January 1, 1987, each other employee shall contribute to the system an amount equal to six and three-quarters percent of the employee's compensation. The contributions shall be deducted by the employer at the end of each payroll period. The contributions shall be deducted from employee compensation before computation of applicable federal taxes, and the contributions shall be treated as employer contributions under 26 U.S.C. 414(h)(2).

* Sec. 2. AS 39.35.340(a) is amended to read:

(a) A vested employee is entitled to credited service for active military service in the armed forces of the United States, either by enlistment or induction, if the employee received a discharge under honorable conditions and is not entitled to receive benefits from the United States government for the same service [DID NOT RECEIVE A DISHONORABLE DISCHARGE]. The credited service allowed may not exceed an aggregate period of five years. Benefits are not payable on credited service for military service unless the employee makes retroactive contributions to the system for the period of time that service credit is claimed. However, if the employee was in the employ of an employer on the date of entry into the armed forces and returned to the employ of an employer within 90 days after the date of discharge from military service, the employee is not required to make retroactive contributions under this system for the period of credited service.

* Sec. 3. AS 39.35.340(b) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(b) In order to obtain credited service under this section, an employee shall make an election to do so and shall verify the period of military service. When eligibility for credited service for military service has been established, an indebtedness shall be determined as follows: (1) the employee's actual compensation, or the calculated annual compensation for those employees working less than 12 months, during the calendar year 1976 or the year in which an employee first becomes vested under this chapter, whichever is later, multiplied by (2) the number of years of military service credited under this section, and this product multiplied by (3) six percent for members who are first eligible to claim this military service before January 1, 1987, or eight and one-half percent for members who are first eligible to claim this military service on or after January 1, 1987. Interest as prescribed by regulation accrues on this indebtedness beginning on July 1, 1977, or one year following the date a person first becomes vested, whichever is later. Any outstanding indebtedness that exists at the time a person is appointed to retirement will necessitate an actuarial adjustment to the benefits payable based upon that military service.

* Sec. 4. AS 39.35.360(i) is amended to read:

(i) An employee who completes three years of credited service with an employer, for which the employee makes contributions required by this chapter, is entitled to credited service on a year-for-year basis for service credited in the Civil Service Retirement System, rendered as an employee of an Alaska Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) school, other than service as a teacher. Retroactive credited service under this section must be claimed before the employee retires. When eligibility for retroactive credited service under this section has been established, an indebtedness of the employee to the system shall be determined as follows: (1) [ESTABLISHED. THE AMOUNT OF THIS INDEBTEDNESS IS DETERMINED BY MULTIPLYING SIX PERCENT OF] the employee's actual annual compensation, or the calculated annual compensation for an employee who works fewer than 12 months, for the most recent calendar year in which service is rendered to an employer before the calendar year in which the employee first becomes eligible to claim service under this subsection, multiplied by (2) the number of years of service in Alaska BIA schools that is credited under this subsection, and this product multiplied by (3) six percent for employees first eligible to claim this service before January 1, 1987, or eight and one-half percent for employees first eligible to claim this service on or after January 1, 1987. Interest as prescribed by regulation accrues on the indebtedness beginning on the date the employee may first claim the retroactive credited service. Any outstanding indebtedness that exists at the time the employee retires requires an actuarial adjustment to the benefits that are based on retroactive credited service under this section. Service may not be claimed under this subsection and benefits may not be paid for service claimed under this subsection if the employee has, at any point in time, enough service credit in the Civil Service Retirement System to be eligible for a retirement benefit under that system.

* Sec. 5. AS 39.35.370(a) is amended to read:

(a) A terminated employee is eligible for a normal retirement benefit (1) at age 60 [55] with at least five years credited service, or (2) with at least 20 years of credited service as a peace officer or fireman, or (3) with at least 30 years of credited service for all other employees.

* Sec. 6. AS 39.35.370(b) is amended to read:

(b) A terminated employee is eligible for an early retirement benefit at age 55 [50] with at least five years credited service. An actuarial adjustment must be made to retirement benefits paid under this section for an early retirement benefit.

* Sec. 7. AS 39.35.370(c) is amended to read:

(c) The monthly amount of a retirement benefit for a peace officer or fireman is two percent of the average monthly compensation times the years of credited service [UP] through 10 years, plus two and one-half percent of the average monthly compensation times the years of service over 10 years. For all other employees it is

(1) two percent of the average monthly compensation times all [THE] years of service before July 1, 1986, and for years of service through a total of 10 years; plus

(2) two and one-quarter percent of the average monthly compensation times all years of service after June 30, 1986, over 10 years of total service through 20 years; plus

(3) two and one-half percent of the average monthly compensation times all years of service after June 30, 1986, over 20 years of total service [AN ACTUARIAL ADJUSTMENT MUST BE MADE FOR AN EARLY RETIREMENT BENEFIT].

* Sec. 8. AS 39.35.385(a) is amended to read:

(a) An employee is eligible for a normal retirement benefit at age 60 [55] with at least two years of credited service if the employee also is eligible for a normal retirement salary under the teachers' retirement system (AS 14.25).

* Sec. 9. AS 39.35.385(b) is amended to read:

(b) An employee is eligible for an early retirement benefit at age 55 [50] with at least two years of credited service if the employee also is eligible for an early retirement salary under the teachers' retirement system (AS 14.25).

* Sec. 10. AS 39.35.385(f) is amended to read:

(f) An employee is eligible for a normal retirement benefit at age 60 [55] or an early retirement benefit at age 55 [50] if the employee has at least 60 days of credited service as a temporary employee of the legislature during each of five legislative sessions.

* Sec. 11. AS 39.35.475 is repealed and reenacted to read:

Sec. 39.35.475. POST-RETIREMENT PENSION ADJUSTMENT. (a) Once each year the administrator shall increase benefit payments to eligible disabled members, to persons age 60 or older receiving benefits under this system in the preceding calendar year, and to persons who have received benefits under this system for at least five years who are not otherwise eligible for an increase under this section.

(b) The increase in benefit payments applies to total benefit payments except for the cost-of-living allowance under AS 39.35.480. The amount of the increase is a percentage of the current benefit equal to

(1) the lesser of 75 percent of the increase in the cost of living in the preceding calendar year or nine percent, for recipients who on July 1 are at least 65 years old and for members receiving disability benefits; and

(2) the lesser of 50 percent of the increase in the cost of living in the preceding calendar year or six percent, for recipients who on July 1 are at least 60 but less than 65 years old or for recipients who are less than 60 years old on July 1 but who have received benefits from the system for at least five years.

(c) If a recipient was not receiving benefits during the entire preceding calendar year, the increase in benefits under this section shall be adjusted by multiplying it by the fraction whose numerator is the number of months for which benefits were received in the preceding calendar year and whose denominator is 12.

(d) If at the time of first receiving a retirement benefit a member was receiving a disability benefit under this system, the administrator shall, at the time the member is appointed to retirement, increase the retirement benefit by a percentage equal to the total cumulative percentage increase that has been applied to the member's disability benefit under this section.

(e) When computing an occupational death benefit under AS 39.35.430 or 39.35.440 or a survivor's benefit under AS 39.35.450, adjustments granted to the deceased member or survivor under this section shall be included.

(f) An increase in benefit payments under this section is effective July 1 of each year and is based on the percentage increase in the consumer price index for urban wage earners and clerical workers for Anchorage, Alaska during the previous calendar year as determined by the United States Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics.

* Sec. 12. AS 39.35.480(a) is amended to read:

(a) While residing in the state, a person receiving a benefit under this chapter who is 65 years of age or older or who is receiving a disability benefit is entitled to receive a monthly cost-of-living allowance in addition to the basic benefit. The amount of this allowance shall be $50 or 10 percent of the basic benefit, whichever greater.

* Sec. 13. AS 39.35.535 is amended to read:

Sec. 39.35.535. MEDICAL BENEFITS. (a) If a benefit recipient elects major medical insurance coverage under this section, the [THE] following persons are entitled to [MAJOR MEDICAL INSURANCE] coverage:

(1) a person receiving a monthly benefit from the system;

(2) the spouse of a person receiving a monthly benefit from the system;

(3) a natural or adopted child of a person receiving a monthly benefit from the system, if the child is a dependent child under AS 39.35.680(11).

(b) After an election of coverage under this section, major [MAJOR] medical insurance coverage takes effect on the same date that [AS RETIREMENT] benefits begin, and stops when the member [RETIRED EMPLOYEE] or survivor is no longer eligible to receive a monthly benefit. The coverage for persons age 65 or older is the same coverage available for a person under 65. The benefits payable to [THOSE] persons age 65 or older supplement any benefits provided under the federal old age, survivors and disability insurance program.

* Sec. 14. AS 39.35.535 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(c) A benefit recipient may elect major medical insurance coverage in accordance with regulations and under the following conditions:

(1) a person who is younger than 60 years of age must pay an amount equal to the full monthly group premium for retiree major medical insurance coverage;

(2) a person who is at least 60 years of age but is younger than 65 years of age must pay an amount equal to one-half of the full monthly group premium for retiree major medical insurance coverage;

(3) a disabled member or a person 65 years of age or older is not required to make premium payments.

* Sec. 15. AS 39.35.680(8) is amended to read:

(8) "compensation" means the total remuneration earned by an employee for personal services rendered, including employee contributions under AS 39.35.160, cost-of-living differentials, payments for leave that is actually used by the employee, the amount by which the employee's wages are reduced under AS 39.30.150(c), and any amount deferred under an employer-sponsored deferred compensation plan, but does not include retirement benefits, welfare benefits, per diem, expense allowances, workers' compensation payments or payments for leave not used by the employee whether those leave payments are scheduled payments, lump-sum payments, donations, or cash-ins;

* Sec. 16. AS 39.35.680(13) is amended to read:

(13) "early retirement" means retirement for a member who is not eligible for normal retirement and who is at least 55 [50] years old and is eligible to receive benefits under AS 39.35.370(b) or under AS 39.35.385(b) or (f);

* Sec. 17. The benefits payable under sec. 1, ch. 102, SLA 1951, as increased by ch. 85, SLA 1970, ch. 134, SLA 1975, and sec. 43, ch. 146, SLA 1980, are further increased by $100 per month for each recipient.

* Sec. 18. Sections 2, 5 - 6, 8 - 10, 12 - 14, and 16 of this Act apply only to members first hired under the Public Employees' Retirement System after June 30, 1986. Changes in the Public Employees' Retirement System enacted in this Act that require a reduction in benefits to members of the retirement system apply only to members who are first hired under the retirement system after June 30, 1986. Other sections of this Act apply to all members of the public employees' retirement system, regardless of the date of hire.

* Sec. 19. Sections 2, 5 - 14, and 16 - 18 of this Act take effect

July 1, 1986.

* Sec. 20. Sections 1, 3, 4, and 15 of this Act take effect January 1, 1987.

SCS HB 252 (State Affairs)

First of all, the dates were changed because it is not 1985 anymore.

Pat Wellington's amendments were put in Sections 1, 2, and 11.

Representative Mike MIller's amendment is in new Section 17.

New sections 18-20 are just renumbering due to the insertion of Section 17.

Senator Ferguson would like the inclusion of Cost-of-Living differential into this bill (see attached memo).

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - FIRST SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to calculation of the cost-of-living and pay step differentials for the compensation and retirement benefits of certain public employees; classification system; limiting the state's power to change the cost to the state of compensation for certain positions; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 23.40 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 23.40.075. ITEMS NOT SUBJECT TO BARGAINING. The parties may not negotiate terms contrary to the limitations on state personnel actions under AS 37.07.085 or on pay step differential calculations under AS 39.27.020(d).

* Sec. 2. AS 37.07 is amended by adding new sections to read:

Sec. 37.07.085. LIMITATIONS ON STATE PERSONNEL ACTIONS. (a) Unless the budget specifically provides or the legislature approves, the state may not

(1) reclassify a position to a higher salary range after September 1, 1985 unless the reclassification is consistent with policies established in AS 39.25.150(1) for a position classification plan;

(2) change the salary range of a job class unless the change is required to comply with AS 18.80.220(a)(5), AS 39.25.010 or 39.25.150(2); or

(3) promote a person to the next step of a flexibly staffed position if the person was first hired in the flexibly-staffed position after the effective date of this section.

(b) In this section, "state" means the executive, legislative and judicial branches of state government and includes the University of Alaska.

Sec. 37.07.087. LISTING OF PERMANENT POSITIONS. (a) On or before September 15 of each year, each department shall deliver to the division of budget review in the Office of Management and Budget a list of permanent positions in the department on July 31 of that year. The list shall include for each position the position control number (PCN), title, salary range, pay step, location, time status, bargaining unit if any, and position funding source. A department shall remove from the list a PCN that is not funded and shall revise the listing of other PCN's to be consistent with the positions authorized in the budget. The department shall report to the legislature each year the positions removed from its list.

(b) After conforming the list of permanent positions to the budget, a department may not establish a new permanent PCN or change the salary range, pay step, location, or time status of an existing PCN unless the division of budget review concurs.

(c) A department shall maintain the master list of the department's positions as an automated position accounting control system file in accordance with instructions from the Office of Management and Budget.

* Sec. 3. AS 39.25.010(b) is amended to read:

(b) The merit principle of employment includes the following:

(1) recruiting, selecting, and advancing employees on the basis of their relative ability, knowledge, and skills, including open consideration of qualified applicants for initial appointment;

(2) regular integrated salary programs based on the nature of the work performed;

(3) retention of employees with permanent status on the basis of the adequacy of their performance, reasonable efforts of temporary duration for correction in inadequate performance, and separation for cause;

(4) equal treatment of applicants and employees with regard only to consideration within the merit principles of employment; [AND]

(5) selection and retention of an employee's position secure from political influences; and

(6) classification and pay plans designed to provide pay equity by using judgments and factors free of biases based on race or sex and determining job worth for all job classifications based on a single set of criteria.

* Sec. 4. AS 39.27.020 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(d) If an employee's basic annual salary is no more than $30,000, the pay step differential shall be calculated using the employee's basic salary. Subject: Overview, HB 284, "An Act Relating to Elections"

The statutes governing the activities of the Division of Elections have gradually gotten out of step with changes in the needs of the voters, particularly with regards to absentee ballots and the counting of ballots. Consequently, the Division asked me to submit on their behalf a bill which would provide some housekeeping changes to allow them to operate more efficiently and effectively in these critical areas.

Other legislators have also felt this need apparently, because as the bill has progressed through the House, numerous friendly amendments were added onto the bill. Further, primarily because of a decision to distribute election phamphlets to households instead of to each individual voter, the bill is one of the few pieces of legislation introduced that actually has a negative fiscal note, of $81,100. As a result, this bill received bi-partisan support and passed the House on April 24 on a reconsideration vote of 31 yeas, 4 nays, and 5 absent.

The bill at present covers a lot of different specific areas of election activity, but still primarily focused on absentee and counting problems. The Division, which is fully supportive of these changes, has prepared an updated sectional analysis of the bill as passed by the House, and also an overview guide to the major provisions of the bill. Both of these documents are attached for your consideration.

I would very much appreciate it if you would take the time to read over this material, and if you have any questions or concerns at all prior to the Committee hearings on the matter, could you please contact me on them as soon as possible. This bill is important in that it provides a lot of needed changes in the current election statutes, and I would be happy to talk to you about them in detail if you wish.

SECTIONAL ANALYSIS OF CSHB 284
(AS PASSED BY THE HOUSE)

Submitted By:

Division of Elections
May 1, 1986

The following is an analysis of the recommended changes to Title 15 of the Alaska Statutes proposed by CSHB 284 (RULES):

Section 1 and 2

These sections of the proposed bill relate to the provisions of Title 15 in place to ensure that persons convicted of felonies involving moral turpitude are prevented from voting prior to their unconditional discharge. Under current law upon release of the convicted felon from the authority of the court, voting rights are automatically restored with no action required by the individual. The intent of these sections is to cancel the voter registration of convicted felons, and require them to reregister upon unconditional discharge.

Section 3

AS 15.07.160(a) provides that it is unlawful for a registration official to refuse to register a qualified individual. The proposed amendment stipulates an exception in cases of otherwise qualified individuals who are not yet unconditionally discharged from custody of the court.

Section 4

This amendment to AS 15.07.160(b) which provides that it is unlawful for an individual to register who knowingly lacks the qualifications of a voter, changes the reference citation from AS 15.05.010 (1)-(4), Voter Qualifications, to AS 15.07.030, Who May Register.

Section 5

AS 15.10.180 relates to the appointment of party representatives for participation on state canvassing boards. By specifying the participation of 2 persons from each political party, the current statute limits the size and composition of the board. The proposed amendment gives the director discretion as to the number of teams that may serve, and stipulates that each team must have members from at least 2 political parties. The flexibility offered by the amendment allows the director to accommodate fair party representation for all parties, as the number of recognized parties fluctuates. As the State has grown, and registration rolls have increased, voter turnout has also dramatically increased. The certification process is becoming more difficult to complete in a reasonable amount of time. It is estimated that certification requires the review of nearly 65,000 mathematical calculations over 442 precincts statewide. This proposed amendment would allow the director to appoint additional teams as needed to assure that the process can continue to be completed in a reasonable amount of time, while guaranteeing fair party representation in the process.

Section 6

This section amends AS 15.13.120 relating specifically to campaign contributions and expenditures. AS 15.13 provisions do not relate to the Division administration of elections. Rather, this chapter concerns the functions of the Alaska Public Offices Commission. The Division, therefore, offers no comment on this amendment.

Section 7

This section concerns the posting of public notices in conspicuous places in each precinct. Present law provides that the posters contain the legal boundary description of the precinct. Having legal descriptions preprinted on the posters would be a very expensive process as there are only 2 for each precinct required by law. Therefore, Divisional staff must clip and paste each legal description on 884 individual posters by hand. Additionally, legal boundary descriptions are often confusing, hard to read, and difficult to understand and therefore are of questionable benefit to the voters as used in this application. The division has better methods in place by which to notify of their proper precinct and polling place. Each voter is sent a polling place card before major elections that indicates the precinct in which he or she should vote and where the polling place is located. The list of polling places for all precincts are published in the Official Election Pamphlet. Therefore, it is proposed that legal boundary description requirement be deleted from AS 15.15.070(c).

Section 8

This section provides that if a voter's name does not appear on the precinct register in which he or she seeks to vote, the election worker must affirmatively advise the voter of the right to vote a questioned ballot.

Section 9 (Also see Section 14, 15, 17, 18 and 22)

This section seeks to make a housekeeping change in the start date for state canvass board review, from the 8th day after the election to the 11th day. This amendment relates to the tightening of the deadline for receipt of absentee ballots as proposed in Section 12 of this bill, which provides that the last day to receive military and foreign by mail ballots would be the 10th day. Under the existing statute the state review board is required to begin its canvass before counting of absentee ballots is completed at the regional level because of the extended absentee deadline beyond the 8th day. Regional Boards have been required to submit incomplete precinct data to Juneau. This has resulted in additional counting of ballots received after the 8th day being concluded at the director's level, after the state canvass has begun. The amendment allows time for all counting to be completed at the regional level in accordance with the proposed 10 day receipt deadline, and before the state canvass would begins its audit.

Section 14, 15, 17 and 18 of this bill propose similar housekeeping changes to dates related to the review and counting of absentee and question ballots, and the forwarding of precinct records to the directors office for inclusion in the state review, pursuant to the amended deadline for receipt of absentee ballots.

Section 10

This section relates to absentee by personal representative voting and eliminates the requirement that the disabled voter's ballot must be returned within 3 days of its being picked up by the personal representative. The amendment allows the voted ballot to be returned any time prior to 8:00 p.m. election day.

Section 11

This amendment changes the last day to postmark an absentee application from 6 days to 14 days prior to the election. It also allows a voter register and apply for absentee ballots for all elections within a calendar year, with a single application. Current statutes provide that application may not be made earlier than 6 months before the election.

Section 12

Presently, all absentee by mail ballots may be accepted up to 15 days after the elections. This proposed amendment would require that absentee by mail ballots be received no later than the tenth day after the election for ballots mailed from within the United States.

Concern has been expressed that since current statutes mandate, that "if the ballot is postmarked, it must be postmarked on or before election day", there is a potential for fraudulent or unethical use of the system. Specifically, this part of the statute requires the postal stamp on or before election only if the ballot is indeed postmarked, but does not require a postmark on all ballots. Research shows that requiring postmarks on all ballots is not feasible because of irregularities in the postal systems worldwide. Because of postal inconsistencies candidates or campaign workers could respond to election night returns by soliciting absentee voters who have not mailed in their ballots to do so in the few days right after the election. Because no postmark is required for counting, these ballots cast after the election, but received within the 15 day period, could be included in the totals. In close races, these late votes could impact the outcome. Research shows that 98% of mailed ballots take fewer than 6 days for delivery.

Shortening the deadline for receipt of absentee ballots would enhance the faster announcement of election results. Candidates, particularly in close races, would know the outcome more quickly as certification of election results could be completed sooner.

Section 13

This amendment extends the deadline for receipt of absentee ballots mailed from overseas or any APO or FPO address to the 10th day after the election. Research of such ballots indicates that 98.5% of these ballots are delivered in fewer than 10 days.

Section 14, 15, 17 and 18 (Also see Section 9)

These sections are additional housekeeping amendments making changes to specified days on which regional boards begin and complete review and counting of absentee and questioned ballots and forward materials to the directors office for inclusion in the state review. These changes related to the proposed deadline for receipt of absentee ballots.

Section 16

This amendment to AS 15.20.203(b) eliminates failure of an absentee voter to place the ballot in a secrecy envelope as sole grounds for not counting the ballot, if the ballot is otherwise properly cast.

Section 19

This section eliminates failure of a questioned voter to place the ballot in a secrecy envelope as sole grounds for not counting the ballot if the ballot is otherwise properly cast.

Section 20

Under current statutes, a candidate requesting a recount may select representatives to observe and participate in the recount process. Often candidates choose to represent themselves. These observers and candidates are currently paid for this participation at the same rate as the counting team members. In essence, the candidates pay the nominal fee and are then repaid for participating. The proposed amendment removes the provision for paying recount representatives.

Section 21

The cost to the State for conducting recounts are approximately $1700 per District. This proposed amendment would increase the fees required of candidates for recounts. Additionally, the amendment raises the difference between the number of votes cast between candidates from 10 votes to 20, as a basis for determining if a recount is to be completed free of charge.

Section 22

This section deletes language allowing late absentee ballots received after the deadline for receipt from being included in recounts.

Section 23

The addition of this section formalizes the authority of the Director to supervise punch-card voting and counting procedures as necessary. This formal placement of final authority is critical, especially under emergency situations which sometimes occur during election night counting. As an example, during the failure of the mainframe computer in Anchorage during the 1984 primary election, the decision to go to the backup system had to be made quickly. This addition clarifies the role of the Director in making such decisions while coordinating the work of the Date Processing Review Board as responsible for testing and implementing the actual computer counting of ballots. Timely and responsive decisions by a single authority is required to ensure the counting process continues to proceed as smoothly and efficiently as possible.

Section 24

This amendment alters the method by which a random sampling of ballots is selected to be manually counted and checked against the computer tabulation during the data vote counting. Under current statute, an individual race is manually counted in 6 precincts. The amendment provides that all races are checked in at least one precinct selected at random based on a statistical sampling. Based on recommendation from programmers who have accomplished data vote computations, the Division endorses this amendment.

Section 25

This section provides new language which allows the Director to conduct special elections held at any time other than dates of primaries, general or municipal elections entirely by mail. Registered voters who are eligible to vote in the special election would automatically receive a ballot in the mail and would return it by mail. The purpose of this amendment is to save costs while increasing turnout in special elections.

Section 26

This amendment represents new sections clarifying the role of the Director in reviewing evidence related to eligibility of a candidate, most specifically in terms of claimed residence. The Director is authorized to determine eligibility based on a preponderance of evidence. It also clarifies the rules for determining residence.

Section 27

This proposed amendment seeks to make the filing fees paid by candidates non-refundable. In addition it deletes the provision that these fees be paid to the central committee of the political party of that candidate subject to legislative appropriation.

Section 28, 29, 30, 31, 36, 37, 38, 39 and 46

The proposed amendments to these sections are in response to an Alaska Supreme Court decision in Vogler vs. Miller, 651, P.2d 1 (Alaska 1982), and Vogler vs. Miller, 660 P2d 1191 (Alaska 1983).

In particular, the court held that AS 15.25.160 and 15.60.010(20) are unconstitutional as being unduly restrictive of ballots access and as to other consequences of "political party" status. AS 15.25.160 requires that a petition for nomination of candidates for the office of governor, lieutenant governor, United States senator and representative be signed by qualified voters equal in number to at least three percent of the number of votes cast in the preceding general election. AS 15.60.010(20) defines "political party" as a group of organized voters that represent a political program and that nominates a candidate for governor who received at least 10 percent of the vote cast at the preceding general election for governor.

This bill amends those two sections to reduce the required percentages to one percent and three percent, respectively. The bill also amends other sections to similarly reduce the required percentages in light of the Vogler decision.

Sections 32, 33, 34, 35, 41, 42, 43, 44, and 45

These sections make changes in the deadlines for submission of materials from political parties, candidates, judicial retention candidates and the judicial council, for inclusion in the official election pamphlet. Conforming Amendments are also made to the filing deadlines for judges and justice. These amendments ease the constricted timeframes which currently make publication of the Official Election Pamphlet nearly impossible to accomplish in time to meet the statutory deadline for mailing them to the voters. Under the current submission deadlines the Division is effectively allowed little more than 2 weeks to prepare 5, 150 page booklets for printing. Until the deadline has been reached, the Division cannot even adequately determine the exact number of pages which will be required.

The amendments to these deadlines are very important for efficient preparation of the Official Election Pamphlet. Under current statute, the critically tight time frame has resulted in several unfortunate circumstances. First of all strategic planning and budgeting is seriously hampered. Secondly, the strict time constraints eliminate adequate opportunity to assure quality control and proper proofreading. Thirdly, we have experienced costly overtime changes above and beyond contract award fees to accommodate last minute submissions and required revisions. In 1984 these excess changes were $17,000. With serious budget cuts and shortfall facing State government, we can no longer absorb such increases. The deadline changes offer us greater control in assuring that these additional charges kept at an absolute minimum.

Re: CS HB 288(Jud) am -- subsistence and personal use
Our file nos. 366-375-85
and 377-176-85

Dear Senator Abood:

There appears to be some confusion about my testimony and the testimony of Dennis Kelso, Deputy Commissioner, Department of Fish and Game, on CS HB 288(Jud) am, relating to subsistence and personal use, to the Senate State Affairs Committee. The Department of Law and the Department of Fish and Game support CS HB 288 (Jud) am, because the bill would provide the statutory authority that will solve both the ANILCA and management problems which resulted from Madison v. Alaska Department of Fish and Game, ___ P.2d ___, Op. No. 2911, (Alaska Feb. 22, 1985). In addition, the definition of "subsistence uses" contained in the bill would be defensible against an equal protection challenge.

If you have any questions about this, please contact me at your convenience.

Re: SB 231

Senator Mitch Abood
Pouch V
Juneau, Alaska 99811

Dear Senator Abood:

My name is Cyril R. Wanamaker. I am the President of the Juneau Tlingit & Haida Community Council. I represent the approximately 5000 urban members of the Alaska Native Community who live in Juneau.

We are urging you to support and help to pass SB 231. We urge your support because SB 231 responsibally satisfies the need for a subsistence law for Alaska.

This bill will provide the Boards of Fish and Game the right to make decisions and allocate resources. It will create a personal use fishery for non-rural residents. It defines rural communities so that it allows for the responsible management of the resources and it will put Alaska back in compliance with ANILCA.

In light of these important attributes we think SB 231 should be passed.

Sincerely,

Cyril R. Wanamaker

Cyril R. Wanamaker
President, JTHCC

I would like to testify in opposition to Senate Bill 231. It is quite distressing to see such a flawed piece of legislation even considered for passage. Not only does this bill create an unreasonable and arbitrary classification of its residents but it favors special interest groups that derive a cash livelyhood from a public resource. This public resource is reserved by the State constitution for use by all of the people for common benefit. When those needs have been met other uses in support of commerce and industry are provided for.

The haste with which this bill is being hustled makes me wonder if any of those persons favoring it have taken the time to analyze what they are doing. Having no other definition for the word "rural", and it seems that this one word is their panacea, than Webster's New World dictionary: I see that this bill will exclude all persons living in towns or cities, all persons not engaged in agricultural type pursuits, in essence all persons not living in the country. This encompassees all people in Haines, Hoonah, Juneau, Sitka, Angoon, Kake, Petersburg, Ketchikan, Wrangell, etc. Who does it leave? Those few individuals not living in any of the towns, villages, or cities.

As our population continues to grow, and our industries expand our fish and game resources must not only recieve the highest priority for habitat protection but the resultant reduced per capita allocation of fish and game resources must be equitable distributed to all residents of the State. Special interest users must take a second position to the peoples basic priority ownership of the resources.

The issue before us, the 1978 subsistence statute, and the Governor's current effort to bandaid one of its many legal shortcomings, is one that I have testified on or spoken on almost annually. I expect that many more individuals will agonize over this ill-conceived and fatally flawed concept before it passes into history as one of the most wrong-minded attempts to categorize Alaskans in our recorded history.

Basically I have only one message--it is the same message that I gave to the legislature in 1976 and 1978 and subsequently to then candidate, Bill Sheffield in the summer of 1982. That message is THE ISSUE WILL NOT GO AWAY UNTIL ALL CITIZENS of Alaska are treated equally and fairly in the allocation of fish and game resources. The existing statute fails to do this and the "bandaid" proposal constitutes an even more flagrant violation of fairness.

The 1978 subsistence statute will never function satisfactorily because it is bad social and conservation law. It is bad because it is illogical. The law takes one of the many uses of fish and game resources, uses that presumably fall within the constitutionally mandated "beneficial uses," and accords it the highest priority of use for all time, in every case and in every situation, without regard for other beneficial uses so long as the resource isn't eliminated. Of course, other uses can continue so long as subsistence use is fully satisfied. But in the face of rapidly expanding human populations especially in some of our resource poor regions, the end of other beneficial uses is merely a matter of time.

I submit that the legislature should never have created an absolute use priority for any fish or game population, let alone for all of them.

Without a mandated priority of use the Board(s) of Fisheries and Game managed from 1959-1978 with far fewer altercations over resource use, fewer lawsuits and better rapport among users. Certainly the system was not without problems. But no system responsible for the welfare of Alaska's diverse fish and game populations and their uses will satisfy everyone. However, the current system is on the verge of alienating everyone.

A part of the problem stems from the rather abstruse terminology associated with the statute and its proposed successor. "Subsistence use" has never been satisfactorily defined in spite of the Boards' best efforts. Certainly they have come forth with definitions or characterizations of subsistence but all such efforts contain elements that are, in all probability, unconstitutional in that they almost invariably rely upon one's area (geography) of residence, past practices (length of residency) or other nebulous terminology. We may not like it but we can no longer draw lines on maps or calendars to determine your eligibility to be a fully participating citizen. Perhaps we need a constitutional amendment authorizing limited entry subsistence permits fully patterned after the fisheries limited entry system; certainly such an approach would stimulate our flagging economy. Finding a definition for the term "rural" is at least as problemsome as defining "subsistence" and perhaps fraught with more legal pitfalls.

I wonder if it isn't time, once again, to step back and ponder what it is that we are trying to do? Is this merely an attempt to benefit "rural" people? Does it have anything to do with ethnicity? Is welfare (need) a part of the problem? Are some Alaskan citizens more equal than others? It seems to me that the purpose of the activity has become fuzzy. Are we really trying to perpetuate a life style and if so, is it necessary to gradually eliminate all other uses?

If it should be a life style that is at issue I suggest it has already largely disappeared. "Rural" hunting and fishing today is not a life sustaining activity. Yes, it is important, highly desirable, worthy of some protection, but not indefinitely sustainable given the high technology now employed in the taking of fish and wildlife---do we want to foster as the highest priority of use the taking of walrus from aircraft and from boats with the aid of radios when only the ivory is salvaged--do we wish to accord first priority to the pursuit of flightless waterfowl, caribou, and other game with the most modern all-terrain vehicles---can we perpetuate desirable cultural attributes while fostering multibillion dollar expenditures in the areas that clamor most for subsistence? Has the legislature taken the time and energy necessary to articulate a position that conveys the leadership required to assure the holders of various subsistence viewpoints that all have been considered fully and fairly?

1. The issue is too complex to resolve in the dying days of this session--please don't pass a "rural" bill and thereby force the citizens to once again sue to correct your mistake. Request the public involvement that the administration promised but has denied us.

2. Following extensive hearings throughout the state consider doing what you do best--pass a bill that treats all Alaskans equally and fairly and allow the Board(s) to implement the law. Laws that supplant the Boards' and Department's authority to allocate and manage fish and game rarely are successful because of the rapid fluctuation in animal population numbers and distribution.

3. Problems attendant to defining and administering subsistence will never go away until we build a coalition of supporters whose essential qualifications reek of fairness and equity. Perhaps the very term, subsistence, should be abandoned for a forward looking system that considers all beneficial uses of wild resources whenever allocations are made among the uses. Assigning by law the highest priority of use to subsistence was an error that staggers the imagination. Clearly there are higher uses over time and in certain places. Examples are legion and they change with time and circumstance. In my view a statute directing the Boards of Fisheries and Game to consider all designated beneficial uses whenever allocating fish and game resources comes much closer to the desired goals than does the existing or proposed legislation (the legislature, if it so desired, could spell out designated beneficial uses including subsistence uses, commercial uses, recreational uses, etc.)

Such an approach could also alleviate any potential clash with the federal government as subsistence would be considered with every regulatory action. Of course, it will be necessary to eventually alter federal law in order to lessen the likelihood of expensive suits against ANILCA by citizens. Suits that many legal scholars believe have merit.

TO Chairman and Committee,

I have been an Alaskan resident for the last 6 years and a commercial Fishermen for the last 10 years.

I myself along with the rest of us here in Cordova support House Bill 285 as it now reads.

I feel the management plan by Fish and Game and the Alaskan Fisheries Board over the last 30 years has worked for the Alaskan Fisheries. Limited entry enacted in the early 70's has now returned an abundance of fish TO the streams, creeks, and rivers of Alaska.

The historical subsistence catch on the upper copper Rivers has worked out fairly in the past 50 years. If there is TO be an increased catch of subsistence fish then there should be an income level TO define a subsistence user.

I have no problem with a resident catching subsistence needs as long as that person actually needs the fish or game to survive! I would really question the need of a urban resident that makes over $35,000 a year and drives a Winnebago TO catch fish and game TO survive.

Anyone in the state of Alaska that is a resident can get a low interest loan and become a Commercial Fishermen.

Dont give a priority basis to a user group that could be made up of the TOtal population of Alaska.

All it takes is 30 days to become a resident and once that is known a lot more people will move to Alaska to take advantage of the renewable natural resources that greatly exist in the State.

Thank you

IN THE SENATE

A bill

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to the taking of fish and game for personal and subsistence uses; and providing for an effective date."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

Section 1. FINDINGS. The legislature finds that:

(1) Nonresidents visiting Alaska take fish stocks and game populations primarily for commercial, trophy, and recreational purposes. Alaska residents who take fish stocks and game populations for non-commercial purposes use such stocks and populations for food for personal and family consumption;

(2) because of its importance to the health, safety and general wellbeing of all Alaska residents, the taking of fish stocks and game populations by such residents for personal and family consumption is a priority use of stocks and populations;

(3) because of their local proximity to fish stocks and game populations, their dependence upon such stocks and populations as a mainstay of livelihood, and the lack of alternative food resources, the taking of fish stocks and game populations for personal and family consumption by Alaska residents in rural areas for personal and family consumption by reasonable economic means is essential to the health, safety, and general well being of such residents;

(4) the taking of fish stocks and game populations for commercial, recreational and other uses by both residents and nonresidents is also important to the economy of the State of Alaska and particularly to the economies of communities dependent upon commercial fishing; and

(5) commercial fishermen often use a portion of their catch for personal use.

*Section 2. AS 16.05.251 (b) is repealed and reenacted to read:

(b) Whenever it is necessary to restrict the taking of a fish population to assure the maintenance of such population on a sustained-yield basis, the taking of such population by Alaska residents for personal and family consumption, shall be the priority uses of the harvestable surplus of such population and the Board of Fisheries shall adopt regulations authorizing such taking in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62).

*Sec. 3. AS 16. 05. 251 is amended by adding new subsections to read:

(c) If the harvestable surplus of a fish population is not large enough to provide a reasonable opportunity for the taking of such population by Alaska residents pursuant to regulations adopted pursuant to subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the Board of Fisheries shall adopt regulations in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) that afford the taking of such population for subsistence uses a priority over other consumptive uses of such population. Takings authorized pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to reasonable regulations as to seasons, bag limits, and methods and means.

(d) If the harvestable surplus of such population is not large enough to provide a reasonable opportunity for the taking of such population for subsistence uses, the board shall adopt regulations that establish restrictions and limitations on the taking of such population for subsistence uses on the basis of the following criteria:

(1) customary and direct dependence upon the resource as the mainstay of one's livelihood;

(2) local residency; and

(3) availability of alternative resources.

Subsistence fishing authorized pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to reasonable regulation as to seasons, bag limits, and methods and means.

(e) If the Board of Fisheries denies a petition or proposal to amend, adopt, or repeal a regulation, the board, upon receiving a written request from the sponsor of the petition or proposal, shall in addition to the requirements of AS 44.62.230 provide a written explanation for the denial to the sponsor not later than 30 days after the board has officially met and denied the sponsor's petition or proposal, or 30 days after receiving the request for an explanation, whichever is later.

Sec. 4. AS 16.05.255 is repealed and reenacted to read:

(a) The Board of Game may adopt regulations it considers advisable in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) for

(1) setting apart game reserve areas, refuges and sanctuaries in the waters or on the lands of the state over which it has jurisdiction, subject to the approval of the legislature;

(2) establishing open and closed seasons and area for the taking of game;

(3) establishing the means and methods employed int the pursuit, capture and transport of game;

(4) setting quotas, bag limits, harvest levels, sex, age, and size limitation on the taking of game;

(5) classifying game as game birds, song birds, big game animals, fur bearing animals, predators or other categories;

(6) methods, means, and harvest levels necessary to control predation and competition among game in the state;

(7) watershed and habitat improvement, and management, conservation, protection, use, disposal, propagation and stocking of game;

(8) prohibiting the live capture, possession, transport, or release of native or exotic game or their eggs;

(9) establishing the times and dates during which the issuance of game licenses, permits and registrations and the transfer of permits and registrations between registration areas and game management units or subunits is allowed.

(b) Wherever it is necessary to restrict the taking of a game population to assure the maintenance of such population on a sustained-yield basis, the taking of such population by Alaska residents for personal and family consumption, shall be the priority uses of the harvestable surplus of such population and the Board of Game shall adopt regulations authorizing such taking in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62)

(c) If the harvestable surplus of a game population is not large enough to provide a reasonable opportunity for the taking of such population by Alaska residents pursuant to regulations adopted pursuant to subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the Board of Game shall adopt regulations in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (AS 44.62) that afford the taking of such population for subsistance uses a priority over other consumptive uses of such population. Takings authorized pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to reasonable regulations as to seasons, bag limits, and methods and means.

(d) If the harvestable surplus of such population is not large enough to provide a reasonable opportunity for the taking of such population for subsistence uses, the board shall adopt regulations that establish restrictions and limitations on the taking of such population for subsistence uses on the basis of the following criteria:

(1) customary and direct dependence upon the resource as the mainstay of one's livelihood;

(2) local residency; and

(3) availability of alternative resources.

Takings authorized pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to reasonable regulations as to seasons, bag limits, and methods and means.

(e) If the Board of Game denies a petition or proposal to amend, adopt, or repeal a regulation, the board, upon receiving a written request from the sponsor of the petition or proposal, shall in addition to the requirements of AS 44.62.230 provide a written explanation for the denial to the sponsor not later than 30 days after the board has officially met and denied the sponsor's petition or proposal, or 30 days after receiving the request for an explanation, whichever is later.

Sec. 4. AS 16.05.940 (23) is amended to read:

(23) "subsistence uses" means the customary and traditional taking and use by Alaska residents in rural areas of wild, renewable resources for direct personal or family consumption as food, shelter, fuel, clothing, tools, or transportation, for the making and selling of handicraft articles out of nonedible by-products of fish and wildlife resources taken for personal or family consumption, and for the noncommercial customary trade, barter, or sharing for personal or family consumption. Wild and renewable resources taken for subsistence uses must be used in the same area in which they are taken. For the purposes of this paragraph,

(a) "rural area" means a community or area in which the taking of fish stocks and game populations for personal and family consumption is a significant characteristic of the economy of the community or area;

(b) "family" means all persons related by blood, marriage, or adoption, and any person living within the household on a permanent basis;

Sec. 5. AS 16.05.940 (21) is amended to read:

(21) "sport fishing" means the taking of or attempting to take for personal use or for personal or family consumption, and not for sale or barter, any fresh water, marine, or anadromous fish by hook and line held in the hand, or by hook and line with the line attached to a pole or rod which is held in the hand or closely attended, or by other means defined by the Board of Fisheries."

Sec. 6. AS 16.05.940.(28) is amended by adding a new paragraph to read:

(28) "resident net fishing" means the taking, fishing for, possession of finfish, shellfish, or other fishery resources, by Alaska residents for personal or family consumption and not for sale or barter, with gill or dip net, seine, pot, fish wheel, long line, or other similar means defined by the Board of Fisheries.

Sec. 7. This Act takes effect immediately in accordance with AS 01.10.070(c).

RE: HB 338, Lottery Fiscal Note

The following fiscal note and accompanying analysis give the costs for the initial three and one-half months (3/15/87 to 6/30/87), and the first fiscal year of operation for a lottery as permited by CSSSHB 338(Jud). The funding for FY 87 would provide for establishment of a board of directors and one months salary for an executive director and secretary to implement the corporation.

Figures for FY 88 are predicated on:
1. Gross sale of lottery products of $35,485,300;
2. Prize payments of 50% of gross sales, or $17,742,700;
3. Administration costs of 9% of gross sales, or $3,280,100 (see fiscal note analysis).
4. Commissions to retail sales agents of 7% of gross sales, or $2,484,000.

This results in a net profit of 34% of gross sales, or $11,978,600 to the state general fund.

This gross sale figure is consistant with the low end estimate for probable profits which could be generated by an Alaska lottery, "Replacement Revenues - - a Position Paper in Support of an Alaskan Lottery," pages 27 & 28.

SUMMARY

As the state of Alaska faces the very real prospect of long-term declining revenues from its number one revenue source while the demand for state government services continues to increase, exploration of new revenue generation sources is necessary. The notion of lotteries, specifically state operated lotteries, is far from a new idea, and although over one-half of the U.S. population lives in states operating lotteries, misinformation abounds regarding them. Lotteries offer state governments a proven method for enhancing their total level of revenue receipts. Lotteries are not designed to solve all the financial woes of any state but can help diversify a total package of revenue generation programs.

Government sponsored lotteries have been around from the birth of this nation and have become an integral part of 22 state government's financial support system. Lotteries provide state governments with an acceptable, predictable, voluntary form of revenue generation. Projections for revenue generation in Alaska conservatively range from $15 million to $20 million per year.

Lotteries do not prevail on the "poor" or the "less educated" ... every study conducted to date concludes that the above average income and higher than average educated segments of the populations, in states operating lotteries, buy the lions share of lottery products. Lotteries do not increase the incidence of compulsive gambling and do not disrupt the lives of large prize winners. An Alaska lottery would not negatively affect the economies of the states 262 rural communities.

While a politically conservative approach to drafting legislation for authorization of an Alaska lottery is recommended, the experience of states with successful lottery histories and advice of directors of those lotteries should be utilized to maximize the profit potential for this state. The broadest possible latitude must be given the state agency, and board or commission, for operation of the lottery to allow for the flexibility to operate within and adjust to everchanging market conditions.

Recent surveys conclude that the broad cross-section of Alaskan residents would favor the implementation of a state sponsored lottery by two to one margin.

INTRODUCTION

This report is intended to provide the reader with general information regarding state operated lotteries. Types of customary lottery games are described and the most common questions about lotteries are answered based on validated research completed by numerous state governments and lottery industry organizations over the past twenty years.

Revenue generation in states currently operating lotteries is examined and comparisons are presented to assist the reader analyze those factors affecting projection of revenue that could be expected from an Alaskan lottery. Among those factors examined are the economic and physical, characteristics of the population of our state, marketing area configurations, and tourist impact on Alaska. A projection of probable profits from a lottery is presented based upon most current population figures, tourist influences and conservative expectations of per capita expenditures on lottery products.

State responsibility for the social affects of government sponsored activities must be of paramount concern to all involved in effecting legislation establishing authority for these activities. The social impact from the operation of a state lottery is discussed and the most current research available is presented.

A brief discussion on implementation and operation of a state lottery is presented from recommendations by several recognized authorities with many years of experience in directing state lotteries.

The conclusions of a November 1985 state-wide opinion poll conducted in Alaska are presented for the readers examination.

Part I: LOTTERY BASICS

Nutshell History of Lotteries

Lottery, according to Webster, is "a drawing of lots in which prizes are distributed to the winners among persons buying a chance." The lottery is not an invention of conventional America. Lotteries have been used by kings, emperors and representative governments throughout history to finance building projects or to increase revenues. The first reported government lottery was instituted by Ceasar Augustus to rebuild Rome. In 1612, King James authorized a lottery to help finance the "colonial settlement" which paid the cost of settling Virginia. In 1751 and 1754 Benjamin Franklin helped sponsor a series of "Academic Lotteries" and helped fund the University of Pennsylvania. The Congress of 1776 provided a National Lottery strongly supported by Thomas Jefferson and others of the nation's founding fathers. Some 70 acts were passed by Congress before 1820 authorizing lotteries for the building of schools and roads and other public projects. Lotteries helped erect Harvard, Yale, Brown, Dartmouth, Columbia, Princeton, William and Mary and many of the nations other prestigious academic institutions. Today over 112 countries around the world sponsor government lotteries, including most of Western Europe, Canada, Mexico, and many Central and South American nations. The modern U.S. lottery started in 1964 in New Hampshire.

Thomas Jefferson once said that "Lotteries are a wonderful thing; they tax only the willing." Indeed many states have turned to state-operated lotteries as a means of raising revenue "painlessly." Lotteries are currently legal in the District of Columbia and 22 states - Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, and West Virginia; (Puerto Rico and Guam also have lotteries). Well over 50% of the population of the U.S. lives in lottery states.

Types of Lottery Games

Lottery games can be divided into two category - "active" and "passive." Active games are those in which the player participates in the bet by choosing a number or set of numbers. The winning numbers are drawn completely at random, so the player's choice has no bearing on the outcome of the game. However, many players enjoy active games because they can choose numbers that have some significance to them which gives an added dimension of entertainment and interest. Active games currently offered by the U.S. lottery states include three and four digit numbers games and lotto.

Passive games are those in which the player takes no action to determine whether he has won or lost; a ticket is purchased and the outcome is then revealed. Passive games offered in the U.S. include instant games, traditional "draw" type lottery games and some subscription games.

The games mentioned above are all easy to play, and none involve any skill. Features of the various games can be described as follows.

1. Draw Lotteries
Though rare in the U.S., this was the original lottery game, and remains the main game in overseas lotteries. Players purchase pre-numbered tickets and wait for a weekly drawing, similar to a raffle. Payouts vary among games, but generally start at around $5 and cap off at either $50,000 or in some cases into the hundreds of thousands of dollars and more.

2. The Instant Game
Instant lottery games involve a fixed price for a ticket, usually $1. The ticket normally has a scratch-off spot to reveal whether or not it is a winner. The advantage of this game is no waiting: the player knows immediately whether or not he has won.
Prizes range anywhere from a free ticket up to hundreds of thousands of dollars. Most lotteries hold some type of grand prize drawing for winners of some lower-tier prizes, the winner of that drawing receiving a prize sometimes as high as $1 million or $1,000 a week for life. Most lotteries offer several instant games per year, and grand prize drawings are generally held when a specific game is sold out or otherwise ended.

3. Lotto
A traditional European lottery game in which the player selects four, five or six numbers from a field ranging from 30 to 49, depending on the size of the population of the state.
Payout is parimutuel; i.e. the jackpot is created from money wagered, and the more that people bet, the larger the prize becomes. If no one selects the winning six numbers in any order, the jackpot "rolls over" to the next drawing. If there no winners for a number of weeks the jackpot can become enormous. Prizes can be divided when more than one bet is placed on the same numbers, and many states offer smaller prizes if one chooses most of the correct numbers.

4. Subscription Games
Many lotteries offer subscriptions to their lotto games, allowing the player to select certain numbers, pay a bulk rate, and automatically be issued a ticket for each drawing. The same concept is applied to many draw-type games, and many lotteries offer a stand-alone subscription game that doubles as a weekly draw lottery.

5. Numbers Games
Numbers games have been one of the traditional games of state lotteries since the 1970's. The player selects a three- or four-digit number and places a bet on it, normally starting at $.50.
The winning number is drawn at a preset time, and the drawing is usually broadcast on television and/or radio. Drawings are held daily for three-digit games, and anywhere from once a week to daily for four-digit games. All but one numbers game in the U.S. offer a fixed payout for winning numbers, i.e. the payout ratio does not change when more people bet money. Several options for betting combinations are available to play at a variety of predetermined odds and pay-off formulas. Payouts are determined by the amounts bet.

Questions and Answers about a State Lottery

Are lotteries a good method of raising state revenues?

Not as effective as taxes ... taxation is the most effective way of raising revenues. No responsible person in the industry has ever claimed that lotteries replace broad based taxes. Lotteries are best described as a supplemental revenue source only. Lotteries were never designed to solve tax revenue collection problems - only to assist.

How much revenue will a state lottery produce?

Fiscal year 1985 statistics indicate that total gross lottery sales in the U.S. exceeded $8.8 billion. This means the average annual state lottery gross revenue was about $90.00 per capita. A simplified means of predicting a state's likely gross lottery sales is to multiply this number by a state's total population. On the average, about 35 - 40% of gross lottery sales goes to the state as profits from the lottery. (see Pt. II for complete discussion of revenue projections for Alaska)

Is a state-run lottery the answer to the economic problems currently facing Alaska?

Certainly a state-run lottery is not the answer to all the financial needs of the state. At the same time, in many states the lottery has stabilized some of their problems. Connecticut raised $148,000,000 from its lottery; Pennsylvania, $572,600,000; Michigan, $320,000,000; and little old Rhode Island $18,600,000 in FY 85. All of this revenue is raised voluntarily. Needless to say, there are people who oppose lotteries or gambling in any form. These people are free not to buy tickets.

Are lotteries popular?

Yes. More people participate in state-run lotteries than in any other form of legalized gaming. In present lottery states, 75% of the residents of those states favor the lottery programs. At one time or another 60% of the residents of a lottery state will buy lottery tickets. Recent ballots in four states (California, Oregon, West Virginia, and Missouri) showed an overwhelming acceptance vote (over 60%). Alaskans support the concept of a state operated lottery by a margin of two to one according to a poll completed in November, 1985 by the Dittman Research Corporation of Anchorage (see Pt. V for complete Dittman Research Corporation report). A survey of voters in AK House District 1 A-B by Rep. Robin Taylor, also completed in November '85, concluded the same level of support for a lottery; 66% of the respondents (from a total of 328) would support a "tightly regulated state operated Lottery Program" in Alaska. Polls taken in other non-lottery states such as Nebraska, Missouri, Florida indicate overwhelming support (two or three to one) for state-run lotteries.

Has any lottery in modern times ever failed ... or failed to show a profit? How are sales doing?

No lottery has ever failed ... or failed to show a profit. Sales are soaring! In 1982 lottery ticket sales exceeded $4.2 billion .. with lottery profits exceeding $1.5 billion. In calendar year 1983, sales exceeded $6.0 billion with profits exceeding $2.4 billion. In 1984, sales hit $6.9 billion, generating $2.8 billion in profits; and in FY 85 gross sales were $8.8 billion providing an estimated $3.8 billion in profits for those states with lotteries.

What do states do with their lottery profits?

Most states put their lottery profits into their general funds. However, some states earmark lottery profits for specific purposes. California, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York and New Jersey use their profits to aid education ... Pennsylvania donates its profits for senior citizen programs ... Massachusetts shares its profits with all the towns and cities in the state ... Colorado earmarks some of its profits for parks and recreation.

What happens to the lottery dollar and how does a lottery affect the economy of the state?

Generally, 45¢ to 50¢ of every dollar is returned to ticket buyers in the form of prizes ... 5¢ to 7¢ of every dollar is paid to local merchants as commissions for selling tickets ... about 5¢ to 10¢ of every dollar is used to pay state lottery employees, rent and utility bills for office and warehouse space, to purchase lottery products from established and experienced vendors, to establish a computer system, and promote the lottery ... and the balance, about 35¢, ends up as the profit for the state. Almost all lottery dollars stay in the state.

Are lotteries difficult to administer?

Absolutely not! Modern-day lotteries have been in existence for 20 years (since 1964) and there certainly isn't any "mystery" concerning their operations. Present lottery states are only too happy to share their experiences and their techniques with new entrants into the lottery field. Most states have lottery commissions overseeing their operation. All lotteries have full-time Directors or Executive Secretaries ... people with extensive backgrounds in lottery operations. Few problems have arisen in the lottery industry during the past twenty years. When problems have arisen the industry has been quick to react. Recent studies indicate that a majority of ticket buyers believe that lotteries are well run and honest. Lottery staff can run from 50 to 150 depending on the size of the state.

(see Pt. IV for additional discussion regarding lottery operations)

Where are lottery tickets sold?

Most states license retail establishments that are easily accessible to the public such as drug stores, supermarkets, convenience stores, newsstands and package stores. As a rule of thumb one license is granted for each 1,000 of population. As stated previously, these agents usually receive 5% to 7% of their sales as commissions for selling lottery tickets. In granting licenses lottery agencies will investigate each prospective licensee as to past criminal records ... their financial condition ... their ability to serve the public ... and their general fitness to serve as agents.

Aren't lotteries, for the most part, supported by poor people?

Definitely not! Extensive studies of the state-run lotteries indicate that an overwhelming majority of ticket purchasers are in the middle income ranges. Whereas citizens in the low income ranges buy lottery tickets, they buy fewer tickets proportionately than their percentage of the population. (see Pt. III for complete discussion of social impacts of a lottery on Alaska)

Don't lotteries appeal to the under-educated?

Current demographic information obtained from actual prize claim forms filed with the Washington State Lottery (a perfect sampling of lottery ticket purchasers) show that 65.6% of players are high school graduates or better and that those with less than eight years of schooling play the lottery in far less proportion than they represent in the population. This study's conclusion repeats that of every study of lottery participation conducted in the U.S. over the last twenty years. (see Pt III for complete discussion of social impacts of a lottery on Alaska)

How much money does the average citizen spend on lottery tickets per year?

The "per capita" spending on lottery tickets in 1984 was about $72.02. Since only about 60% of a state's population is expected to buy tickets, actual expenditures for tickets is about $120, or about $2 per week.

How about "organized crime" and lotteries?

There is absolutely no evidence of any state lottery being infiltrated by "organized crime." As a matter of fact some lottery Directors believe that state-run lotteries have taken customers away from illegally-run numbers games. A Connecticut study came to the conclusion that the state's legal games had, in fact, impacted illegal wagering in that state. A 1976 report of the National Gambling Commission stated that 11% of all Americans wager illegally. In lottery states that percentage drops to 6% ... almost a 50% decrease in illegal wagering. Modern day lotteries are run by state governments and there are no avenues available for illegal operators to ply their trade. There is no similarity between state-run lotteries and casino gambling or horse racing. The latter two are usually operated by private individuals or corporations that are licensed by the state. (see Pt. II for additional discussion)

What about the social implications of advocating a form of legalized gambling as a method of raising revenue?

People have been known to gamble for thousands of years and will continue to gamble. Most sociological studies (and there are many) have concluded that state-run lotteries are a "harmless" form of legalized gambling. A comprehensive, independent, state-commissioned study completed in 1981 concerning Connecticut's legalized gambling programs gave the state "a clean bill of health" ... "no increase in welfare cases, no increase in bankruptcies, no increase in compulsive gambling, and no increase in unemployment." Newsweek concluded an article on gambling in its March 3, 1980 issue by stating: "The only games that apparently pose no real threat of addiction are state lotteries. That is because they don't have enough action." (again, see Pt. II for further comment on social implications of lotteries)

PART II: ALASKA LOTTERY INCOME

Alaska Compared to Current Lottery States

Consideration of an Alaska state operated lottery always prompts the question of how much profit could the state generate on an annual basis. A responsible answer to this question is dependent on many factors and requires careful consideration. Because lotteries are businesses operated for a profit, they are dependent upon the same factors that affect other businesses. These basic marketing factors must be studied to determine if Alaska has those characteristics indicative of lottery success. To date there has been no in-depth analysis of the characteristics which are generally present in states currently operating successful lotteries and the degree to which these characteristics exist in Alaska. The following discussion provides, for the first time, this analysis.

Since every state lottery has always produced a profit, it could be said that all are successful. However, as Table 1 indicates, some states are more successful than others; that is some states produce both a higher net profit and a higher per capita profit from their lotteries. A review of the marketing conditions of the lottery states quickly reveals why some are more successful than others. These factors are:

1. The economic characteristics of the population of the state,
2. The physical characteristics of the population of the state (age, sex, education level, etc.),
3. The population concentration/dispersion patterns for the state.
4. Unique conditions usually affecting a particular state or region (neighboring state's lotteries, high volume of non-resident traffic, etc.)

Table 1-II lists the 18 states which have operated lotteries for over one year and the income generated for the years 1981-1985. Gross, net and per capita income has been presented from available sources. Because of the tremendous variation in the size of the population of the states listed a comparison of gross or net lottery income does little to help determine which states are successful and which are not. The key measure of just how successful a state has been in operation of its lottery is the per capita profit to the state. A sound per capita measure will also be of most help to project the possibilities for Alaska. As can be seen, Maryland is the most successful and Vermont is the least successful in per capita income of all 18 states.

Those top five states experiencing the most success with lotteries in 1983 thru 1985 were Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Colorado ('83), Wash. D.C. ('84 &'85), and Massachusetts ('85). Those states with the least successful record with regard to per capita income were Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire, Arizona, Ohio ('83), Colorado ('84) and Rhode Island ('85). Colorado ranked in the top five for 1983 and in the bottom five states in 1984 and 1985.

Table 2-II provides a comparison of Alaska to all states which have lotteries or are in the process of starting lotteries, with regard to income levels and physical characteristics of the populations within these states. These comparisons have been illustrated for those factors generally considered to be indicators of positive characteristics for the operation of a profitable lottery. States are ranked in descend order for each category of economic and physical characteristics of their population. Rankings for Table 2-II have been made from information contained in Tables 3-II and 4-II, for which specific values for rankings can be ascertained.

Columns A-G contain economic comparisons for the 21 states involved in this analysis. The ranking is straight-forward, the state with the highest income figure for each category is ranked first, for each of these columns except for columns D and E. Columns D and E are reversed, with the state with the lowest income figure for this category ranked first. For example, Alaska has the lowest percentage of its population in the $0 to $10,000 household income category. Since lottery participation by the lower income groups is less than their proportion to the population in general the state with the lowest percentage of its population in this group should be ranked first. The same reasoning has been applied to column E.

For all categories of income measures indicating ability to operate a profitable lottery, Alaska ranks first. In addition, those states with a record for operating the most successful lotteries (see Table 1-II) rank with Alaska in the top one-third of states compared in Table 2-II, (Pennsylvania an exception). Those least successful lottery states (see Table 1-II) fall at the opposite end of the spectrum from Alaska.

An analysis of personal, family and household income, comparing Alaska to other lottery states indicates that Alaska should expect to be able to operate a profitable lottery.

Column H compares Alaska and the current lottery states as to how urban their population is. History has shown that state operated lotteries generally are more successful in urban versus rural states. States rank from first, Washington D.C., with a 100% urban population, to last, Vermont, with a 33.8% urban population. The percentage of Alaska population living in urban areas is 64.3%; this is 35.7 percentage points below D.C. and 30.5 percentage points above Vermont.

The rank order in column H is less conclusive than the percentage point differences between the states. This is confirmed by the fact that each of the top five most successful lotteries are represented in the highest, middle and lowest one-third of the order. The closest state (with an income history) to Alaska in its percentage of urban population is the third most successful lottery state Pennsylvania, with 69.3%. Those least successful lottery states, Vermont, Maine and New Hampshire, have the most rural populations by far. Contrary to the belief of many, that we in Alaska live in remote areas, the large majority of our population lives in urban areas, and, according to the Alaska Department of Labor we are becoming more urban each year.

Alaska's population grew by 30% in the 2.25 years between 5/1/80 and 7/1/84 and 90% of that growth was in the Anchorage, Kenai Penn., Mat-Su, Fairbanks, and Juneau Boroughs.[1]

Again, Alaska appears to be in a favorable situation for probable lottery success when considering its percentage of urban population.

Column I of Table 2-II illustrates the ranking of lottery states and Alaska for their population mix of males to females. Numerous studies of lottery players indicate that more males than females play lottery games. (see Pt. III) Alaska leads all states in the number of males to 100 females, with a total of 112 (Table 4-II). A significant point here is that all lottery states, except Washington D.C., have between 90 and 99 males for every 100 females. This large difference between Alaska and other lottery states is a factor in support of being able to implement a successful lottery.

Column J presents a ranking of the percentage of populations over eighteen years of age. Alaska's population is youngest compared to those in lottery states. However, information from Table 4 indicates that the percentage of population eighteen and older for lottery states (excluding DC at 77.5%) ranges from a high of 74.0% (RI) to a low of 70.3% (MI). Alaska's eighteen and older population makes up 67.5% of its total population. Two points need to be made here; first the difference between Alaska's percentage and that of the more normal lottery states is not significantly large; and Alaska, like Washington D.C., is subject to peculiar circumstances. Alaska has the lowest percentage of elderly population in the nation (2.8% compared to a U.S. average of 11.8%[1]), this reduces our percentage of eighteen and older population. This second point is actually a positive characteristic for lottery success in Alaska since the elderly play lotteries in numbers less than their proportion to the total population. Although the total percentage of eighteen and older population is lower than other lottery states, the percentage of age levels that play lotteries the most, is higher than this 67.5% figure. This conclusionWashington D.C. has the highest percentage of female population in the nation due to occupational opportunities there.

Columns K and L of Table 2-II provide a comparison of Alaska and the lottery states regarding the education levels for their populations. Studies of lottery players indicate that the typical player has more education than the average for the total population. (see Part III) Again Alaska ranks first with the highest percentage of its population having more than 12 years of school, and third highest for the percentage of its population with 16 or more years of education.

Alaska's ranking in all of the categories examined in Table 2-II are high and indicate, that from the basis of this information, Alaska would be successful if it implemented a lottery. That is, Alaska could expect to generate for its general fund, a level of revenue per capita on a par with the most successful lotteries now in operation.

So far we have only looked at the first two marketing conditions listed above; the economic and physical characteristics of the population of Alaska in relation to other lottery states. The third marketing condition needing examination is how the population of Alaska is concentrated and/or dispersed.

Alaska is unique in its vastness with over one-half million square miles of land, 3.7 times the area of the next largest lottery state, California, and 541 times the size of Rhode Island, the smallest lottery state (excluding DC). However, as we saw in Table 2-II, Alaska is quite urban; twice as urban as Vermont, and only 36% less urban than Wash. D.C. with 100% of its population living in urban areas. When we examine the degree to which the population in Alaska is concentrated we find that there exists similarities with some of the other lottery states. These states are the relatively large western states of Arizona, Colorado, Oregon and Washington. Table 5-II and maps of these states following Table 5-II illustrate this similarity in population concentration in marketing terms.

As Table 5-II illustrates, each of these states has one marketing area which contains approximately one-half of the states total population. This area has been identified as the primary marketing area for that state. In addition, each of these states has from one to three other major marketing areas within the state which, when combined with the primary marketing area, contain approximately 80% of the state's total population. The conclusion made from this comparison is that these states would be reasonable candidates for use as a comparative model to help predict possible revenue levels for an Alaskan lottery.

The three western states with lottery history at this time are Arizona, Colorado and Washington. Of these states the most similar to Alaska is Colorado, with the same pattern of population concentration (one primary marketing area and two additional major marketing areas). Colorado is also a very close match with its percentages of total population in these marketing areas very similar to Alaska's.

Also included is a map of Vermont, a state often used as an example to compare with Alaska for projections of lottery revenue because its total population size is similar to Alaska's. Three factors should be considered to illustrate why Vermont is not a reliable example for this comparison. Note that although Vermont's population is about the same as Alaska's, there is only one city, Burlington, with over 25,000 people. Also not that 66.2% of Vermont's total population lives in rural settings (Table 4-II); only 35.7% of Alaska's population lives in rural settings (Table 4-II). Vermont lacks the population concentration/s necessary for effective marketing of lottery products. Last, note that Vermont is surrounded by larger lotteries of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New York and Quebec; Vermont residents have until recently been able to easily access all of these high prize lotteries.

The fourth, and last, marketing factor listed above was that of unique conditions affecting a particular market. There are several obvious and some not-so-obvious conditions present in some of the currently operating lottery states which impact their sales.

Small states with large populations in the East have an advantage over large less populated states with regard to the physical marketing of their lottery product.

People in the northeastern states have experienced a long history of exposure to illegal lottery type games and are therefore familiar with the concept. They do not have to be educated about how lotteries are played.

Those least successful lottery states of Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island are surrounded by the neighboring giant lottery states of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York and New Jersey. The convenience of buying lottery tickets from the large lotteries, with large prize structures, is such that many resident players from these smaller states choose to buy out of state. Why spend $1 on a chance to win $500,000, when the same $1 will buy a chance to win several million dollars? This will likely change in the near future with the implementation of the Tri-State Lottery partnership of Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire, and the recent (May '85) reversal in federal law interpretation by the U.S. Postal Service resulting in a ban on subscription lottery sales across state lines.

Alaska is unique in the fact that it experiences a tremendous annual influx of tourists, in comparison to its resident population estimated to reach 533,000 in 1985[2]. This tourist influx is large in the sense of its total volume, 776,600 projected for CY 86[3], and as percentage of the resident population, 147.5%. In addition to the number of tourists, a significant number of airline and cruise ship crews, a total of 6,000[4], are effectively part-time residents of the state. This situation is unique to Alaska, and of the lottery states only Colorado experiences a similar condition, although to a much lesser degree. These additional people would affect lottery sales Alaska in a positive direction.

[2] Alaska Department of Labor, Research and Analysis, (Draft) Alaska Population Overview, 1985: "If the in balance of migration to Alaska during 1984-85 were to be zero, which seems unlikely, the 1985 population of the state should reach 533,000 due to natural increase alone."

Alaska Compared to Colorado

Information contained so far in this discussion provides a basis for reasonable conclusions regarding a method to estimate probable net revenue for an Alaskan lottery. Although Alaska shares similarities with the most successful lottery states (economic and physical composition of its population), our population size does not reasonably allow for a direct comparison with these states. Likewise, although our population size compares with some of the least successful lottery states, other marketing factors; our degree of urban versus rural population, our degree of population concentration, the lack of accessible neighboring lotteries, and the economic and physical composition of our population; does not allow for a direct comparison with these states.

One lottery state, with a three year lottery income history, does have a number of similar characteristics to Alaska and qualifies as a reasonable model for generating revenue projections. Colorado is similar to Alaska in more aspects than any of the other lottery states.

A review of Table 2-II and the discussion pertaining to it illustrates that Colorado provides a basis for conservative comparisons from a per capita, family and household economic perspective. It provides for a very close comparison from the perspective of educational level of the populations. And when including the information from Table 5-II with columns H, I and J from Table 2-II, Colorado is a good match with Alaska regarding comparisons of the urban nature and population concentration patterns of the two states, as well as the male to female ratio and population over eighteen years of age factors.

Alaska Lottery Income Projections

Using an average of Colorado's last three years per capita net income, $17.01 (Table 1-II), as a probable per capita income for Alaska will give a reasonable, conservative estimate for annual profit from an Alaskan lottery.

A second projection, using an average median per capita income from all lottery states for the last three years, $26.07 (Table 1-II), will provide a second, possibly less conservative and more simplified projection for Alaska.

A population factor of 730,000 for Alaska has been determined to be most useful for computing a probable FY 87 net profit, should Alaska implement a state operated lottery by July, 1986. This population factor is based on the assumption that tourists to the state would play a lottery with much more frequency than the average for the state. Tourists are here to be entertained and they have the money to spend (82% of the visitors to Alaska in 1983 had household incomes over $20,000, 25% over $60,000[4]). However, since tourists are in the state for an average of only 16.8 nights (this represents more than 10.8 million person-nights per year spent in the state)[5] a factor must be based on their short duration here. Therefore, an assigned factor of .25 is used as an approximation of their lottery play, compared to residents with a factor of 1.0. Likewise a factor of .50 is used to approximate the frequency of lottery play by crews from the airlines and cruise ships, who spend about one-fourth of the year in Alaska.

We now have enough information to compute a projection for an annual profit from operation of an Alaskan lottery.

Population Base	Number		Factor		Total
Alaska Total Population (Est. 1985):	533,000	x	1.00	=	533,000
Alaska Tourist Volume (Est. 1986):	776,600	x	.25	=	194,150
Cruise Ship and Airline Crews (1985):	6,000	x	.50	=	3,000
Total Effective Population					730,150

Using this "effective population" figure and the two per capita profit amounts, one from Colorado ($17.01) and the other from a national average ($26.07), an expected range of total net revenue for Alaska can be determined.

1. Alaska Total Effective Population	730,150
Colorado '83-'85 Average Per Capita Profit	x $17.01
Estimated Alaska Net Revenue (low)	$12,419,851
2. Alaska Total Effective Population	730,150
National '83-'85 Average Per Capita Profit	x $26.07
Estimated Alaska Net Revenue (high)	$19,035,011

An Alaska lottery could expect to generate between $12.4 and $19.0 million in FY 87.

This low end estimate, $12.4 million, is a very conservative figure when we consider that it is based on the Colorado lottery which is restricted to only operating instant games. A parallel comparison to this restriction would be to restrict a jewelry store to only selling gold jewelry. There is a large market for gold jewelry, but it's only a percentage of the total market.

The high estimate, $19.0 million, is a fairly realistic estimate, and is only dependent on how freely the enabling legislation for an Alaska lottery allows it to respond to the market.

III: SOCIAL IMPACTS OF LOTTERIES

The five questions mosts often asked regarding lotteries social impact are:

1. What affect do state lotteries have on the "poor?"
2. What affect do state lotteries have on the "less educated?"
3. How do lotteries affect the incidence of compulsive gambling?
4. Does winning disrupt the lives of winners of large cash prizes?
5. Do lotteries cause a negative economic drain on rural communities?

Questions 1 and 2:

The most often raised objection to state operated lotteries is that people from lower income households and/or the less educated buy a disproportionate amount of lottery tickets. The implicit suggestion is that a lottery should be prohibited in order to protect the "poor" and "less educated." As a matter of empirical fact, it is simply untrue that the poor and/or less educated buy lottery products disproportionately to their percentage of the population.

Research has been conducted in every state with a lottery operating for over one year regarding these questions (#1 & #2), and the conclusion is always the same; the poor and less educated play the lottery to a lesser degree than their proportion of the population.

Some comments from a sampling of the numerous studies conducted follow. Please bear in mind that every statement to follow is based upon statistical evidence, not opinion.

Colorado: Chart 1-III, below, is comprised of two bar graphs. The top graph represents the income group's percentage of the Colorado population. The bottom graph represents an index of lottery participation by the income group. Where the bar is above zero, that group plays the lottery more than their relative proportion in the population, and vice versa.[1]

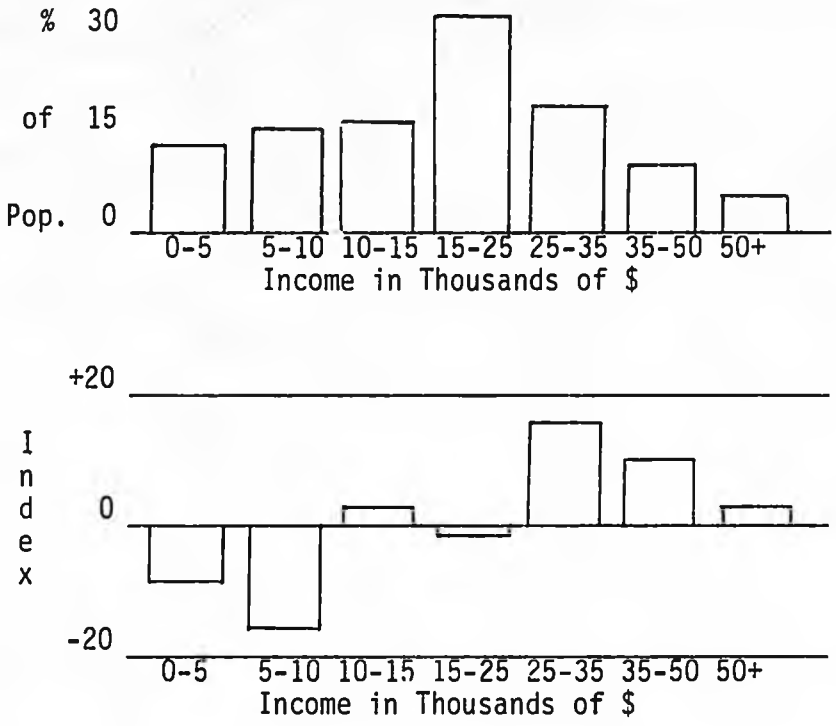
Chart 1-III

COLORADO LOTTERY PLAYER



As the chart dramatically shows, the lower income groups play the Colorado Lottery substantially less than their proportion in the population. The Colorado Lottery explained the methodology of their analysis and also commented generally on this issue.

"Analysis of the winners in lottery games is a statistically perfect sampling of the players. During each year, several state lotteries do research on the profile of their players through analysis of winners' age, income, occupation, sex, residence, and lifestyle. Every study conducted in the legal lottery business in North America has shown that the bulk of the lottery tickets are purchased by middle income consumers. Typically, most tickets are bought by persons between the ages of 35 and 54 although the play of the lotteries ranges in age from 18 to over 65. In addition, although the range of players runs from low income to high income, the majority of the tickets are purchased by persons whose household incomes are between $12,000 and $36,000. Research in Colorado indicates that the average education and income of the players are higher than the national average. Even low income players play the lottery from their discretionary income, low income players play the lottery from their discretionary income, that is to say, even low income persons purchase lottery tickets on a competitive basis with their purchase of candy, movies and softdrinks. An average of 90¢ a week played on the lottery, while being a higher percentage of the discretionary income of a low income person than it is in a middle income person, is still a minor decision..."[2]

The results of the Colorado studies are confirmed by numerous other studies about the income levels of lottery players in other states. For example:

Arizona: An independent study concluded that "the poor are dramatically underrepresented among lottery players."[3]

Deleware; 89% of the buyers of "Daily Numbers" lottery tickets had an annual family income in excess of $10,000. The median family income of players was $19,200 a year, while the median income of non-players was $18,200 a year.[4]

Illinois; People with incomes below $11,000 only participated in lotteries about 75-78% of their percentage of the population.[5]

Maine; Studies "conclusively demonstrate that it is the middle income segment of the population that is the primary market for lotteries... [T]he poor (under $5,000 in income) are extremely underrepresented among lottery players."[6]

Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania; An analysis of the household income profiles of over 6.5 million winners established that "the poor participate in the state lottery games at levels disproportionately less than their percentage of the population."[7]

Average	158	139	109	90	83	75	79
- Ave.	140	94	81	89	111	116	113

The income profile for the areas of the state having above-average sales have a relatively higher representation of high-income households. The same is true for of the areas of the state having average sales. For example; households with an income above the $56,000 (1980 dollars) range have an index value of 158 in the "average sales" level areas. This means that this level income household occurs at a rate 58% higher than in the state as an average.

However, for the areas of the state having below-average sales, the income distribution is bi-modal. It contains the "poor" and it also contains a significant representation of very high income people. The main point, however, is that the lower-income categories are relatively underrepresented in both the average and the above-average sales areas and that the lower-income households are overrepresented only in the below average sales areas.

Thus, using this slightly different perspective, the conclusion is again the same. Namely, that the poor participate in the lottery games at a disproportionate rate as compared to their percentage of the population.[11]

Most analysis and comment from the studies conducted by states operating lotteries include educational levels as well as household income issues. These studies indicate similar conclusions with regard to education levels of those playing lotteries; the less educated play lotteries proportionately less than they are represented in the total population.

The Washington State Lottery found that residents with 1 - 3 years of college were overrepresented in lottery play to a degree significantly exceeding that of any other educational group. Based on an index of 100, those in this category reached index levels as high as 141. Conversely, those with eight years of education or less were severely underrepresented, with indices ranging from 68 down to 43.

Final figures for FY 83 in Washington showed residents with 13 - 15 years of education totaling out at an index of 120, with those with eight years of education or less playing at an index rate of 56, the lowest of any category.[12]

A study of six western counties of Washington state by KIRO Broadcasting, Inc. found that 78 percent of the lottery players had 12 or more years of education.

The Arizona Lottery also tested for educational level of its players. In every case, the median educational level of players exceeded that of Arizona residents overall.[13]

Pennsylvania contracted with Opinion Research Corporation to use the "low, average and heavy play" analysis procedure described above for New York. They found that in the "heavy play" group - the group showing the most interest in the lottery - only 9.8 percent had less than a high school diploma.[14]

Again, these are only a sampling of survey results all stating the same conclusion - the less educated segments of the population in lottery states play lottery games less than they are represented in the total population of their state.

These conclusions are no surprise to those who view lotteries as a business operated for profit. The tremendous growth in both lottery participation and profit to those states operating them could never be generated by a dependency on the poor and under-educated. This segment of our population simply does not constitute a large enough percentage base to target marketing efforts. The majority of the population in most states lives in middle income households and has a higher than median education level. This is the natural market.

Question number 3:
How do lotteries affect the incidence of compulsive gambling?

Studies done thus far have shown the compulsive gambler to be someone who by nature seeks avenues other than state lotteries to satisfy his or her need for gambling; state lotteries do not provide what a compulsive gambler needs for gratification.

Dr. Robert Custer, acting director of mental health for the Veterans Administration in Washington D.C. and medical advisor to the National Council on Compulsive Gambling, has done extensive research into the incidence and treatment of compulsive gambling, and is widely recognized as an expert on the subject. Custer contends that state lotteries do not provide a sufficient outlet for a compulsive gambler to either alleviate withdrawal symptoms or to experience any sustained euphoria generated by most other types of gambling. Custer said that of the compulsive gamblers he has treated at the V.A., 20% have fallen into each of four different categories: addiction to horse race betting, casino games(not casinos in particular, but games associated with them such as craps and card games), illegal sports betting, and stock options and commodities. The remaining 20% is divided among all other forms of gambling, lotteries only amounting to perhaps 2%. Of compulsive gamblers, Custer said lotteries are "not their style," because play is too slow. "The shorter the interval between the time you place your bet and when you collect, the more addictive," adding that, "any game involving a waiting period for the outcome and/or collection of winnings, such as lotteries, does not sustain a compulsive gambler, ..." Two key elements that compulsive gamblers need for satisfaction are some feeling that s/he has an "edge" or privileged information regarding the bet, and that some element of skill plays a part in the outcome. Neither of these exist with state lotteries.

"I think winning is a lot more stimulating than we realize," said Custer. "Particularly winning amounts ranging from a fourth to a half of one's income. That's one of the things about the lottery that I've never been very concerned about, because people don't win big that often. There are a lot of $1 and $2 winners, but very few million dollar winners."

Custer states that no data exists supporting the contention that lotteries increase compulsive gambling.[15]

A study for the New Jersey Lottery, supervised by Dr. Peter Carlton of the New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry, reached basically the same conclusions as did Custer's research; no cause-and-effect relationship was established showing lotteries to cause compulsive gambling, the same physiological changes were noted in gamblers as with the V.A. research. These results show that lotteries simply don't offer enough "action" to satisfy the needs of a compulsive gambler. A totally different environment of lottery-playing, as opposed to other types of gaming, exists for state lottery participation. Lottery playing does not require a contained environment with a high degree of social interaction, as is found with other gaming activities. The decision to participate in a lottery game usually is an afterthought from some other activity.

John D. Quinn, Director of the New York State Lottery, and past president of the National Association of State Lotteries says that during his tenure as director of the N.Y. Lottery over 2 billion tickets have been sold and he has not received one phone call or letter saying a wife or husband "had spent the bread or milk money on the lottery."[16]

[16] "Myths", op.cit., fn. 11, pp 39-41.

Question number 4:
Does winning disrupt the lives of winners of large cash prizes?

The results of a survey by the Ontario Lottery Corporation, updated through November of 1983, indicate that the lifestyles of the overwhelming majority of the lottery's jackpot winners changed little after their windfalls.

This survey of 870 people who won between $7,000 and $1 million in the lottery indicated that the overwhelming majority of the big-money winners kept their jobs and stayed in the same house. Few were bothered by adverse publicity or bothersome requests for donations.

Of the winners responding to the survey, 91.4% of those employed kept their job. Eight of the 25 winners of $500,000 or more continued to work. Most of the winners bank their money, and few indulge in spending sprees. Only 2.2% spent the bulk of their winnings on luxuries. Twenty-five percent bought a new car, and only 22.6% took vacations. More than two-fifths of those winning large prizes, 40.8%, shared their good fortunes with family, friends and charities.

Ninety percent of the winners were not subjected to calls and letters begging for money, and 70% of those who were contacted did not consider the solicitations a problem.

Most of the big winners have not been bothered by media attention. Of those responding to the survey 90.1% said media treatment of their good luck had been fair and courteous.[17]

Surley examples exist which illustrate that lives have been changed by the winning of large amounts of money, some of these changes would be considered positive and some negative. However, the statistics available, when considering broad cross-sections of winners, indicate that the majority of winners are not negatively affected. Ms. Mary Faulk, Director of the Washington State Lottery, puts it very well in her statement, "The lottery by design is open to maximum scrutiny by the public at all times. Our credibility is the first product we sell to the public. Identification of winners is an important responsibility to all our players. We feel that the media has shown responsible constraint in their handling of winners. Our winners have accepted this exposure with grace, because they recognize the public's right to know."

The administration of most lotteries use a prize award structure that makes payments to large winners over an extended time period; i.e., $1,000 per month for life. This is financially advantageous to the state and to the winner, and helps prevent the possible disruption of a winners life with a $1 million dollar check.

Question No. 5:
Do lotteries cause an economic drain on rural communities?

This question is asking if it appears likely that a state run lottery will result in the residents of small remote communities spending an amount of their available cash to a degree exceeding the benefits these same communities would receive from the expenditures of lottery profits. Three additional questions must be examined to provide an answer to this concern of economic impact on rural communities:

1. How many communities and what population base is of concern?
2. What spending level for lottery products is likely to occur?
3. What level of benefits will these communities likely receive from the operation of a state lottery?

A conservative analysis, considering "worst case" possibilities for lottery expenditures by rural community residents and reasonable assumptions regarding benefits received from probable state lottery profits, indicates that a state operated lottery would not cause an economic drain on rural communities. In fact, the opposite is true.

For purposes of this discussion the term "rural community" is defined as a community of 2000 or less people. Alaska has a total of 262 communities of this size with a total population of 70,286, or 13.44% of the state's total population (see Table 2-III).

Individual spending on lottery products will be directly proportional to the degree to which residents of these communities would have access to lottery products. This access would only exist through state licensed lottery product retailers. Only qualified "viable businesses" would be issued lottery sales licenses upon application. A "viable business" is defined as one which would likely meet the qualifications established by a state lottery as necessary to be licensed as a lottery product retailer.

The Alaska WIC Program (Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children) has been selected as a means to identify the number of probable "viable businesses" in rural communities. The WIC program is a state subsidized health and nutrition program for pregnant women, breastfeeding mothers, infants, and young children. The state provides subsidies for foods and other health needs purchases by its participants to the retailers participating in the program. This program has been selected for analysis on the assumption that its retail participants are considered by the state as "viable businesses" meeting WIC's vendor qualifications.

A review of the total number and locations of WIC vendors (see Table 3-III), provides the following items of information. It appears that a community population of more than 100 is necessary to support the operation of a retail store, the most common form of rural business (only 4.55% of communities of less than 100 have WIC qualified vendors). Eighty eight rural communities, comprising .98% of the state's total population or 5100, do not have the population base to support retail enterprises. At least some of the businesses in communities over 100 will not desire to be qualified as lottery retailers or would not qualify upon application. Therefore, it is safe to conclude that less than 100% of the people living in communities of 2000 and fewer will have access to lottery products on a day-to-day basis. However, a total of 84 WIC vendors ("viable businesses") in 83 rural communities with populations of 101 to 2000 would provide a probable minimum level of access to lottery products for 64.8% of the rural residents.

A maximum level of access to lottery products would exist if each rural community of 100 or more persons contained at least one lottery retailer. This is a possibility that cannot be discounted because the WIC program has not been able to consider service to all rural communities, therefore its vendor list may not contain all "viable businesses" in these areas.

The access to lottery products in rural communities, and thus the probable level of spending on these products, can then be anticipated as likely to be within parameters established by this maximum and minimum. The maximum case represents a situation in which 100% of the population in communities 101 to 2000 residents, or 65,186 people in 174 communities, would have access to a lottery retailer. The minimum case represents a situation in which 64.8% of the rural population, or 42,261 people, those living in 83 communities over 100 and served by the WIC program, would have access to a lottery retailer.

A probable low (maximum access) and high (minimum access) economic impact on rural communities can now be projected from lottery sales using an '83-'85 national per capita profit in lottery states of $26.07 and an assumed state total net revenue of $19,035,011 (from Pt. II, page 28). This impact will be a result of lottery expenditures by residents of these communities compared to the benefits received through expenditures by the state from lottery net profits. For this analysis it will be assumed that state expenditures are made on an equal per capita basis in all communities of the state. That is, a community with 5% of the population receives the benefits of 5% of state government spending.

Conclusion:
Both the "maximum access" and the "minimum access" case would result in a positive economic impact in all of the rural communities in Alaska. This positive impact would range from a low of 5.38% to a high of 62.54% in the 174 communities with populations of from 101 to 2000. That is, for every $1 spent on lottery products which leaves a rural community, between $1.05 and $1.63 would return in the form of state government services and grants from lottery profits. This return does not include the 50% of lottery expenditures remaining in communities from retail sales commissions and prizes. Eighty eight rural communities with populations of less than 100, comprising a total population of 5,100 (0.98% of the state's population), would experience even higher economic benefits, a total of $186,543 or $36.58 per capita, because they would receive the same benefits as others from lottery profits but would not be likely to make expenditures in a customary form of lottery.

The following computations corroborate these conclusions.

	AK Total	Max. Case	Min. Case
Population	730,150	65,186	42,221
Nat. '83-'84 Ave. Per Capita Profit	x 26.07	x 26.07	x 26.07

	$29.912,160	$2,670,484	$1,573,920
	$29,912,160	$2,670,484	$1,573,920

$ Leaving Communities	$27,192,873	$2,427,713	$1,573,930
	$27,192,873	$2,427,713	$1,573,930
Less Admin. Costs (15%)	- 8,157,862	- 728,314	- 472,176
Net Profit to Gen. Fund	$19,035,011	$1,699,399	$1,101,744

Rural communities would realize benefits from a return of lottery profits equal to their percentage of the state population times the state net profit, or;

13.44% x $19,035,011 = $2,558,305

The probable maximum and minimum amount of dollars leaving rural communities is $2,427,713 and $1,573,920, respectively. The differences between the negative and positive cashflow are:

$2,558,305 - $2,427,713 (max.) = $130,592 (low); or a 5.38% gain;

$2,558,305 - $1,573,920 (min.) = $984,385 (high); or a 62.54% gain.

Two assumptions which have been made that led to the above conclusions merit additional comment. First is, the assumption that rural and urban residents would purchase lottery products on an equal per capita ratio. As has been illustrated above, a higher ratio of urban versus rural lottery purchases results in a high return to rural communities in terms of benefits received compared to expenditures made. Marketing strategies based on economy of scale will, in all likelyhood, focus on the urban areas of the state, not rural communities. This will result in lottery products and consumer incentives designed to appeal to urban residents and tourists. This will increase the ratio of lottery purchases outside of rural areas compared to purchases in rural communities to a higher degree than the above illustration assumes. The second assumption is that rural communities and urban communities receive benefits from state government spending on an equal bases. This assumption, again, results in very conservative projections with regard to the probable benefits received by rural communities.

PART IV: IMPLEMENTING AND OPERATING A STATE LOTTERY

Enabling Legislation

The experience of the past twenty years of lottery operation in the U.S., and the experiences of other governments' lottery operations, should be reviewed when considering legislation for an Alaska lottery. Most state lottery laws were drafted when the idea of a state lottery was a novel concept and little or no practical experience was available. The resulting legislation contained burdensome language addressing anxiety which stemmed from illusions based on fear rather than actual causes for concern. While this approach may have been justified ten or more years ago, it should have long since been abandoned and enabling statutes should now be drafted in light of the available record of lottery experience.

The operation of a lottery should be insulated, as far as is possible, from the operation of the political process. The following points have been recommended by Edward J. Powers, past executive director of the New Hampshire Sweepstakes Commission, which started the first lottery in the U.S. in 1964, and a founder and past president of the National Association of State Lotteries.

1. A state lottery should be established in the form of an independent authority (public corporation) rather than as a regular state agency. The authority should have its own identity and be responsible for its decisions. This is best from a public relations as well as from an efficiency viewpoint. It should have the authority to issue and present prize checks. It should be able to employ personnel and to enter into contracts, within established state procedures, and issue its own bid specifications. State purchasing statutes were not written with lotteries in mind, and so are not suited to the peculiar requirements of lottery management.
If an authority form of entity is not achievable, then, a separate commission consisting of members from both the public and private sector overseeing a separate department is preferable to a division within an existing department.
However, it should be noted that a number of state lotteries are currently functioning within another state agency.

2. The lottery agency should be treated like a business as much as possible. This is the only way to maximize revenues. It must have the flexibility to launch new programs and change marketing strategy. It should not be in a budget straightjacket that prevents it from making personnel or policy changes.

3. Full public accountability must be required. Periodic reports of revenue and expenses must be presented to the governor and the legislature. An annual report should be published for the public and the press to review. Some lotteries require that an outside accounting agency conduct periodic audits.

4. Security is paramount in every aspect of the lottery. The draft legislation should provide the framework for the internal controls that are necessary to deter and prevent subversion both from within and without. Computer technology permits controls today that were unavailable in the past. Most security problems have arisen from employees and this emphasizes the need for close pre-employment screening. There must be cross-checks and frequent unannounced inspections to eliminate temptation.

5. It must be remembered that a state lottery will return close to 40 percent of total gross revenues to the state, after paying all the prizes and expenses. The lottery agency is completely self-supporting. Its initial start-up costs will be paid back to the state within a matter of months. Details as to lottery operation should not be specified in statutes. Legislation should not specify a percentage of prizes to be paid, the amount to be spent on advertising, the percentage allowed for expenses or the minimum amount to be returned in net revenue. State lotteries have proven they are capable of raising substantial net revenue. There is no need to set minimum acceptable levels of net revenue. Similarly, it is counterproductive to mandate the types of lottery games to be operated. These restrictions can seriously impede decision-making. It is best to charge the administrators of the lottery with the responsibility of raising maximum revenue from the program.

Experiences of operating lotteries have identified some areas that should be addressed in enabling legislation that were not, or if addressed were not adequately detailed. For instance, disputed claims should be clearly appealable only through state administrative procedures and should not be treated as civil disputes where contract law applies. Authority to own, operate and maintain separate data processing systems should be given lest a lottery be required to share time thereby compromising the lottery's security. Criminal offender record information should be available for use in licensing decisions. Failure of sales agents to promptly pay proceeds of lottery sales after reasonable demand should be a criminal offense.

In summary, legislation should be drafted using the store of lottery experience developed in the past and not simply be modeled on existing lottery laws adopted when this store of experience was not available. Maximum flexibility should be obtained in the original enactment as once carved in stone laws are hard, if not impossible, to change. The particular areas where governmental restraints are counterproductive should be identified and specifically modified or waived as to lottery operations.[1]

Interim Funding of a Lottery Agency

Any agency formed to implement a state lottery, no matter what the organizational structure is, must be afforded interim funding. An accepted "rule of thumb" in gauging the amount to be appropriated is $1 for each state resident. A minimum recommendation needed in any state, regardless of its population is $1,500,000. The following paragraphs describe the time frames involved in the establishment of the lottery's first game and where the money will be needed.

If a lottery bill became effective on July 1 in any year, as an example, the appointments to the board or commission and the hiring of a full time director might take place within the next 30 to 45 days. If a bid was prepared within the next 30 to 45 days to purchase tickets for the state's first lottery game and then an award was made to a vendor to provide those tickets by mid-October those tickets could be delivered in the state by early or mid-December. While all of the aformentioned is going on, the board or commission will have time to promulgate lottery rules and regulations and the director will be forming the lottery administration ... who in turn will help license the ticket sales agents throughout the state. By the end of December, or six months after the effective date of the legislation, lottery ticket sales should commence. This is a conservative timeline as has been illustrated by Oregon taking only 135 days to become operative after its law was signed.

Based on the scenario described in the previous paragraph, lottery ticket sales will commence around the first of the year with the tickets for the first game "sold out" by the end of February ... or eight months after the effective date of the legislation. At this point in time a "cash flow" (money and profit coming into the agency from the sale of tickets) will have started and the agency will be in a position to return all of the "borrowed money" back to the state. Also, from that point on the agency will be self-sufficient, requiring no additional funding.

The interim funds provided the agency initially will be used to pay rent and utility bills for office and warehouse space ... for payroll costs for the the lottery employees for at least eight months ... to purchase a small computer or lease time on an existing system for the lottery agency's "accountability" programs ... to purchase vehicles for the agency's field staff ... to advertise and promote the first game ... to print all the necessary forms and pamphlets ... and to purchase millions of instant lottery tickets for the first game. Most of the above items must be paid for before the "cash flow" begins.

If a state with a population of 1,000,000 provided its new lottery agency with $1,500,000 in interim funding, for example, chances are that the state will order at least 10,000,000 instant lottery tickets for its first game and based on prior experiences will sell those tickets out in six to eight weeks. Washington State Lottery sold out its first games 50,000,000 tickets in five weeks to a population of 4.1 million. Therefore by the end of February (assuming tickets were placed on sale at the beginning of January) the state will have sold $10,000,000 worth of tickets and will have realized a profit of $4,000,000. At this point, the $1,500,000 can be returned to the state along with another $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 in profits, with the agency holding on to the balance to carry out its activities with continuing games.

There are two points to remember. First, the longer it takes the state to implement the lottery and its first game, the more dollars would be needed in interim funding. Secondly, if it is the state's desire to have the money "borrowed" by the lottery agency repaid within the same fiscal year, the above scenario sees that occurrence happening with great ease and a good deal of leadway.[3]

Operation of a State Lottery

Most state lotteries are operated in a generally similar way. The majority of the state lotteries are overseen by a Commission (Delaware, Michigan and New York are exceptions). The Commission is responsible for broad policy making decisions, promulgation of appropriate rules and regulations to govern the lottery, and review of proposed contracts between the lottery and outside vendors. The actual day-to-day administration of the lottery is the responsibility of the lottery Director, who is a full time employee and generally has experience in the operation of state lotteries. In turn, the Director will have department heads in such areas as security, administration, marketing, and data processing. There will be a lottery staff of full time employees in each of these areas. Depending on the size of the state, the total number of staff will vary but one can expect between 50 and 150.

Although the lottery is operated by the Director and his staff, lottery tickets are actually sold by licensed agents. These licensed agents are generally retailers such as convenience stores, newsstands, package stores, supermarkets, etc. The Director will accept applications from all those eligible to be licensed agents and, after a background check, the retailers will be licensed and will sell lottery tickets subject to rules and regulations of the Commission. The agents will be compensated for sales of lottery tickets by receiving a commission on such sales. The most common retailers' commission in lottery states is 5%.

After setting up its staff and licensing its agents, the lottery must determine what type of game it will run. There are variety of lottery games available, but the two most common are what are called "instant games" and "on-line games." An instant game is played by the use of tickets which have hidden symbols concealed by a removable covering. The player purchases the ticket, removes the covering, and determines instantly whether he has won a prize and, if so, the amount of the prize. He then redeems his winning ticket in a manner established by the lottery. For small prizes, many states establish a system for the payment of the winning ticket by the licensed agents themselves. Larger prizes are redeemed through claim centers staffed by employees of the lottery. The instant tickets are constructed in such a way so that winning tickets can be validated to prevent any tampering, counterfeiting or fraud.

The on-line numbers games take a variety of forms. A typical game is a 3-digit daily numbers game. In order to run this game, the lottery distributes small computer terminals to its licensed agents which are comparable in size to cash registers. The terminals are connected "on-line" to a large central computer at lottery headquarters. A player selects a 3-digit number ranging from 000 to 999. He then tells the sales agent his selection along with the amount of money he wants to play on that number. The agent enters the number on his terminal (which simultaneously transmits the entry to the central computer) and the terminal issues the player a ticket. That ticket, as with an instant ticket, has various security and validation features which protect against any tampering, counterfeiting or fraud. At the end of the day, the lottery randomly draws a three-digit number and the player who has a ticket with that number wins.

Although all aspects of the operation of a lottery are in-state, the lottery will have to purchase its instant tickets or on-line system from one to the established and experienced vendors in the United States. At this time, there are 3 primary instant ticket vendors and three primary "on-line" vendors. The lottery will generally pay such vendors approximately 2 - 3% of the total lottery gross revenues for the purchase of lottery products. That money is the only money which will be spent outside of the state.

Of course, there will be a "lag time" between the date the lottery law becomes effective and the date lottery tickets are first sold. It is during this period that lottery personnel are hired, the lottery administration is established, and the lottery vendor is chosen. Usually, there will be interim funding of the lottery during this "lag time" and that money is invariably repaid within 6 - 8 months of the effective date of the lottery law.[4]

Part V: ALASKA LOTTERY SURVEY

The following pages contain excerpts from results of a state-wide survey concerning an Alaskan lottery completed by the Dittman Research Corporation of Alaska. This survey clearly indicates that Alaskans would favor the operation of a state lottery by a two to one margin.

Survey Methodology

During the period of November 1 through November 12, 1985, 502 residents of 51 Alaskan communities were personally contacted by telephone by professional interviewing employees of the Dittman Research Corporation. The views and opinions of the Alaskan residents were recorded on a strictly confidential basis.

Research Design: A random sample was featured which provided that all residents of the communities included had essentially the same chance of being interviewed.

Sample Selection: The Anchorage sample was selected through a computer-generated random digit dialing program. This is particularly important in Anchorage due to a 40% rate of unpublished and unlisted numbers.

The sample in other communities state-wide was randomly selected from current telephone subscribers listed in the most recent directory for each community. In these communities, the percentage of non-listed numbers does not exceed 10%.

Findings

Overall, Alaskans on a state-wide basis support the idea of a lottery by well over a 2:1 margin...

"Some people have suggested it would be a good idea for Alaska to have a state lottery, while others have said it would be a bad idea. What are your views -- do you basically favor or oppose Alaska having a state-wide lottery?"

Favor.....65%
Oppose.....29%
Unsure..... 6%

...and the support is basically consistent throughout all geographic regions...

Region	Favor	Oppose
Rural	57%	37%
Central	65%	28%
Southcentral	65%	29%
Anchorage	69%	24%
Southeast	62%	36%

...demographically, upper income residents are slightly more supportive...

Income	Favor	Oppose
Up to $20,000	64%	32%
$20,000 - $40,000	64%	30%
$40,000 - $60,000	65%	30%
$60,000 plus	73%	22%

...and young people are more supportive than older people...

Age	Favor	Oppose
18 - 24 years	84%	13%
25 - 40 years	67%	28%
41 - 55 years	62%	31%
56 years and older	44%	46%

...there is little difference based on gender...

Sex	Favor	Oppose
Male	66%	30%
Female	65%	27%

...and significantly important, the idea of a state-wide lottery has broad appeal across all political boundries...

Party	Favor	Oppose
Democrat	67%	24%
Republican	61%	31%
Non-partisan	67%	30%

Summary:
The support for a state-wide lottery is strong and broad throughout Alaska. Only among residents 56 and over does opposition exceed support, while among other age groups, support exceeds opposition by margins of up to 6;1.

Overall, in terms of political and geographic constituencies, support exceeds opposition by approximately 2:1 in each geographic area, and Democrats, Republicans and Non-partisan voters all support the idea of a state-wide lottery by 30% margins or more.[5]

Passage of HB 373 reflects the Legislature's recognition that provisions contained in AS 08.92 restrict the availability of live entertainment in the State of Alaska, while providing no corresponding consumer protection.

The Legislature expresses its intent to allow municipalities to establish their own regulations in governing live entertainment as a matter of local option and urges municipalities to consider the protection of the consumer as its primary goal.

Subject: Hb 373; Letter of Intent

The Legislative intent of HB 373, "An Act Repealing the Regulation of Concert Promoters", is to allow more avenues of live entertainment in Alaska. The current law is too restrictive and does far more to limit live entertainment than it does to protect consumers, as indicated in witness testimony before your committee.

It is also the Legislative intent to allow each municipality to set their own rules governing live entertainment. As pointed out in the committee dialouge on February 20, many municipalities already regulate these events because most of them are conducted on city property.

SUBJECT: Explanation of the Fiscal Note for HB 373

Please accept the following information in support of our April 23, 1985 fiscal note to HB 373, an act repealing the regulations of concert promoters. This should clear up any discrepancies concerning the cost of licensing concert promoters.

We have developed a zero fiscal note for HB 373 because of the small percentage of time and resources dedicated to this licensing area. The cost of licensing concert promoters is largely reflected in the amount of time the licensing examiner dedicates to this function. Historically, less than 1% of the assigned examiner's time is spent on this area while about 99% of her time is dedicated to other licensing responsibilities. Even with the repeal of concert promoter licensing, the licensing examiner who provided its support would be needed by the division to continue the responsibilities that absorb 99% of her time. We could not reflect the elimination of this 1% cost when, in fact, that cost will still be realized by the department in the continued funding of her salary and benefits.

I think that an explanation of costs assigned to the concert promoters area may be helpful. The original estimate of $21,000 is inaccurate; the costs assigned to that area will be in the range of $500 to $1,000.

Last session when the Legislature was deliberating HB 78, an act authorizing the department to set licensing fees by regulation, the division was asked to quickly provide an illustration of how the cost of each board or licensing area might be determined. The formula used at that time equally distributed the administrative salary and contractual costs of FY 84 to all licensing areas. This resulted in nonboard areas, like concert promoters, being assessed a very heavy share of the division costs in relation to the very small number of licensees in that area.

Since the passage of HB 78, we have done a more extensive analysis of board costs. In fact, this process is still continuing. We have found that the previous formula for determining board cost placed an unfair burden on nonboard licensing areas, especially ones like concert promoters that involve a very small number of licensees.

Now, based on distributing costs in part on the percentage of licensees, the cost of licensing all concert promoters is likely to be in the neighborhood of $500 to $1,000. For the 11 current licensees, this would mean fees in the range of $46 to $92 annually.

In summary, the $21,000 cost figure previously suggested by the division is no longer valid, and the department does support the passage of this legislation with a zero fiscal note.

The statute as written requires posting of a cash deposit or bond in the amount of $5,000.00. This account must be reconciled by an individual other than the person posting the account. At present, there are five licensees which are subject to biennial license renewal, two occurring in FY '85, and three in FY '86.

Department of Commerce & Economic Development / POSITION PAPER

HB 373: "An Act repealing the regulation of concert promoters."

The Department of Commerce and Economic Development, Division of Occupational Licensing, supports House Bill No. 373 repealing the regulation of concert promoters.

AS 08.92.030 requires bonding to protect the public in the event of concert cancellations. Bonding in the amount of $5,000 or the alternatives provided in the statute (cash deposit in the amount of $5,000 or establishment of an escrow account containing 50% of advance ticket sales) provide at least some protection against losses incurred by the public as a result of cancelled concerts.

However, if claims against the bond exceed the limits of the bond, the court determines and orders which claimants will receive proceeds of the bond. There is no guarantee that all claimants will receive full compensation.

In addition, complications are encountered when the escrow account consisting of 50% of advance ticket sales is used. Advance ticket sales under control of the promoter could represent a very small portion of the financial investment of ticket holders.

Currently, there are two complaints on file with the Division of Occupational Licensing. One involved unlicensed activity which was promptly resolved, and the other, currently being handled by the Department of Law, involves an incident in which a licensee failed to provide refunds for a concert not held.

There were only twelve licensed concert promoters in Alaska as of the end of January 1986. Because the number of concert promoters subject to licensure are few, as evidenced by the small number of licensees, the department does not view a rewrite of AS 08.92 as a priority.

Based on the relatively small amount of licensing activity in the area of concert promotion and weakness of the statutes, the department supports repeal of AS 08.92.

Subject: HB 373, Deregulation of Concert Promoters

HB 373 was introduced to alleviate a glaring and ludicrous application of the law. As of this month, there are 7 licensed concert promoters in the state of Alaska. The Department of Commerce and Economic Development estimates that the annual cost of regulating this occupation is $21,000.

Last may, HB 78 was signed into law (Ch. 37, SLA 85) which gave the Department the authority to adjust occupational license fees by regulation. This would allow the State to recoup more of the cost of administering the programs[1]. The Division of Occupational Licensing has not yet revised the annual license fee for concert promoters but estimates that the fee might be around the $400 to $500 range.

This higher fee will probably result in fewer than 7 licensed concert promoters in the State. Thus, in the name of "consumer protection", we will have made it virtually impossible to promote religious concerts or stage performances legally. However, the demand for quality entertainment will not diminish. It will otherwise most likely be provided by those very people whom we seek to protect the public from-- that is, people willing to break the law to provide this service.

On a broader, more philosophical perspective, occupational licensing just doesn't work as it is intended to. In fact, what really happens is just the thing we were trying to avoid in the first place-- higher prices and poorer service. Anything that limits competition will have this effect. The best way to protect the consumer is to maximize competition and to encourage promoters to stand upon their reputations as professionals. As Milton Friedman, Nobel Laureate in 1977 so eloquently states:

> "Perfection is not of this world. There will always be shoddy products, quacks, con artists. But on the whole, market competition, when it is permitted to work, protects the consumer better than do the alternative government mechanisms which have been increasingly superimposed on the market."[2]

From what I have been able to learn, this law is a knee-jerk reaction to a promotion sponsored by the Anchorage Jaycees in which somebody absconded with the money. This has happened twice again since the law has been in effect, which underlines the fact that it doesn't work.

There are currently 14 members of the current Legislature who voted on both sides of the original law. Perhaps they could be contacted for more information.

Passing this bill would provide for more entertainment opportunities as well as saving the State about $20,000 yearly. I urge its passage.

RE: Submarine Ballot

David Teal asked that I send you the attached legislation on Submarine Ballot Act.

This is contained in Suggested State Legislation, 1986, Volume 45, published by the Council of State Governments.

Attachment

Submarine Ballot Act

Four to five million qualified American voters live in other countries and must often cope with complex obstacles in order to exercise their right to vote. In some cases, such as Navy personnel stationed on nuclear submarines that remain submerged for sixty to ninety days at a time, these obstacles can prevent voting entirely.

Many states are unable or unwilling to alter primary dates in order to print absentee general election ballots soon enough to accommodate overseas voters. An alternative that promotes enfranchisement is the "submarine ballot," a special ballot that can be mailed up to ninety days in advance of the election to voters who apply that early and can certify they expect not to be able to vote in the usual absentee manner. The ballot does not have all the candidates' names, only titles of offices and as many names or measures as can qualify before the printing deadline. The absentee voter marks the ballot by writing in a name or expressing a party preference for each office.

This draft bill combines 1984 Washington and Connecticut legislation and incorporates minor changes suggested by the U.S. Department of Defense's Federal Voting Assistance Program.

(Title, enacting clause, etc.)

Section 1. [Short Title.] This act may be cited as the Submarine Ballot Act.

MEMORANDUM

To: Senator Mitch Abood Chairman
Senate State Affairs Committee

From: Representative Terry Martin TM

Date: May 6, 1986

Subject: CS HB 402 Judiciary

"An Act relating to military and overseas voters."

Alaska's overseas and military voters need a simple process and adequate time to apply for and receive absentee ballots. This bill accomplishes both.

First, it backs up in statute procedures already established by the Division of Elections, which a) allow an absentee voter to send in one form to request absentee ballots for all state elections occurring in the following year; and, b) permit the voter to register to vote. All of these actions can be accomplished on one form, in one mailing.

Second, the bill allows a voter to request absentee ballots up to one year in advance of an election. Current law allows ballots to be requested no more than six months in advance, which means that if a voter desires an absentee ballot for both the primary and general elections, then the request can be made no more than three months before the primary, or else it will be more than six months before the general.

Third, the bill sets up a procedure so that absentee ballots can be mailed out to voters earlier, giving military and overseas voters enough time to apply for, receive and return their ballots so that their votes can be counted. As you may know, it is not unusual for overseas mail to require 15 days or more for delivery in one direction. Because of this unique circumstance, we recognize the need to provide overseas and military voters with a mechanism to receive their absentee ballots earlier than other voters.

Under existing law, it would be difficult for Division of Elections to have regular ballots ready for mailing 60 days before an election, especially a general election, since so much time is required to certify the primary election.

Therefore, HB 402 sets up a new system, similar to that used by Washington State and others.

A special absentee ballot will be prepared for each state general election. This ballot will show all ballot propositions or questions. The special ballot will contain party boxes and a blank line with a box, for each race, sort of like this:

☐ Democrat ☐ Republican ☐ Libertarian

The absentee voter may then vote in one of two ways: 1) by marking one of the boxes, thereby voting for the candidate nominated by the party (the primary winner); or, 2) by writing in a candidate and checking the corresponding box. The Division of Elections will provide an enclosure with the special ballot which lists the names of all the qualified candidates that were in the primary race, as well as any candidates who qualify by petition to appear on the general election ballot.

When the regular ballots are prepared, Division of Elections will send one out to each voter who received a special absentee ballot. As this regular ballot will be complete, containing all the candidates' names, this ballot would be counted in preference to the special ballot if the regular ballot is received back in time to meet statutory deadlines. If the second ballot is not returned in time, the first (special) ballot would be counted.

The Division of Elections has given their support to this bill.

It is vital that you give careful consideration to this measure, in the interests of all Alaskan voters. I will be happy to provide additional information or to answer any questions.

Deferred Compensation Overview

The Alaska Legislature now has before it HB-406, which proposes a change in Alaska statutes to clarify that Alaska based financial institutions may develop tax-exempt deferred compensation programs to be offered to public employees through their various employers. Alaska law presently does not prohibit such programs, but additional flexibility is needed in regard to the options of investing funds.

This pending legislation (HB-406) has been brought about by the interest of state Rep. Red Boucher and other lawmakers interested in allowing Alaska financial institutions to compete for Alaska public employee tax-deferred savings. Presently such Alaskan tax-deferred savings have only the option of insurance/annuity investments. This means Alaskan deferred wages must flow out-of-state to insurance company sponsored plans. Presently Frontier Alaska State Credit Union (formerly Alaska School Employees Credit Union) is prepared to offer such an alternative 'in-state' tax-deferred savings program.

The original offering of the program by Frontier Alaska State Credit Union has been to the Anchorage School District, with whom they have had a long relationship. The Anchorage School District tentatively has agreed to the program pending clarification of the law (HB-406).

Frontier Alaska's interest has also stemmed from the interest of employees and credit union members. In many instances these employees have come to the credit union seeking assitance in understanding the variety of insurance/annuity programs for which they are frequently solicited. Like in the case of IRAs, many of these members prefer a plan that is accessible to them at an institution they frequent regulary for a broad variety of financial services. 'Financial institution' deferred compensation programs (as opposed to insurance) are common in many other states.

THE LEGAL PROGRAM

The IRS code presently recognizes and permits financial institutions to develop such programs. The only legal problem is language in state law that has to do with the manner of investment of such funds. Alaska law governing deferred compensation was written in the early-1970s, and at the time only insurance and annuity investment could effectively compete for these programs. Since then deregulation has made financial institutions competitive for long-range investment deposits. An example of this change is the proliferation of IRAs and money market accounts offered by financial institutions in recent years. Viewed from an investment standpoint, IRAs are very similar to deferred compensation. Financial institutions, in fact, can offer greater security since their accounts qualify and are required to be insured by the FIDC and its credit union equivalent.

WHAT IS DEFERRED COMPENSATION?

Deferred compensation is a tax-exempt savings program approved under IRS code. Under this federal authority insurance companies and financial institutions are permitted to develop plans, and with the permission of school districts, municipal jurisdictions, and utility associations, offer these plans to public employees.

The IRS permits two kinds of plans, one through insurance companies and the other through financial institutions. The plans differ mostly only in that the federal government regulates insurance companies and financial institutions differently.

The plan being developed by Fronter Credit Union is a good example of how most plans work. From a functional point, the public employer provides the 'permission,' and therefore the formal relationship required under federal law. However, the plan operator does all the necessary work with the exception of payroll deductions. The payroll deduction is an essential feature, because technically the employee never receives the income, it is channeled to the deferred compensation program (hence the term 'deferred compensation').

The Frontier Credit Union Plan would:

(1) Permit employees to defer from taxes $7,500 yearly, or 25% of income, whichever is less.

(2) Provide safety of investment by federal insurance (National Credit Union Administration) up to $100,000 on each employee account. Accounts that might exceed $100,000 would be covered by additional federal insurance.

(3) Earnings rates would be set quarterly. Balances of accounts and other information would be immediately available on demand. There would also be no hidden charges. Earnings rates would be similar to those in IRAs (10.25% in May, 85 on Frontier accounts). In many respects the only thing different about handling IRAs, and deferred compensation plans, is that the deferred compensation plans must come through public employers and from regularly predetermined deduction of wages.

(4) Frontier plans no special charges or fees for initial set-up or administration.

Entirely Optional

In most jurisdictions municipal employers do not endorse any one kind of plan --or any particular plan. Generally the policy of public employers appears to be that of certifying a number of qualifying plans --both financial and insurance/annuity-- and leave the employee both the choice and responsibility of selecting their plan.

The Anchorage School District now recognizes many different plans and carriers. Frontier Alaska Credit Union will simply be another 'available option' to the employee, although we think it is one with the advantage of (1) local presence and access, and (2) insurability of the account.

It should be noted that there are exceptions where the employer does select and offer only one plan. This, of course, then places on the employer some obligation in monitoring the performance of the plan, and in many cases involves more work and expense on the part of the employer. It is because of this element of 'added obligation' inherent in certifying a sole deferred compensation carrier, that causes most jurisdictions to opt to the 'open policy.' This leaves the burden of choice to the employee and the burden of regulation to state and federal authorities.

State and Local Interest

There is a significant final benefit that has stirred legislative interest in broadening deferred compensation law. The beneficial economic by-product for the state and local areas is that 'savings' will flow to local financial institutions. These local (insured) deposits will then help underwrite the local investments of Alaska financial institutions and the loans of local borrowers. It is important to note that by their very authority deferred compensation deposits are very long term deposits, and tend to be cumulative --growing year-after-year without drawdown. Such a class of deposit would be very valuable to Alaska financial institutions of any type. Some lawmakers have referred to HB-406 as a 'local hire' money bill. While that may be an overstatement, nevertheless it is a fact that the considerable sums in Alaska, now invested in deferred compensation insurance programs, do go straight out of the state. In a sense the state economic structure is drained of these wages.

Persons of various philosophies can argue the finer points of such ideas. However, there is little doubt that access to deferred compensation deposits will greatly increase the ability of Alaska credit unions to underwrite consumer loans for their members. It is also important to note that credit unions are now the 'consumer level' banks in most of our communities.

A COMPETITIVE MARKET

The program being developed by Frontier Alaska Credit Union (the state's third largest credit union) is a pilot effort that others will follow. Alaska commercial banks will develop their program also, and undoubtedly will compete with insurance/annuity carriers for a share of the state employee market.

The Frontier program is simply the first, and therefore they have been an active participant with legislators in seeking clarification of the law by HB-406. This bill passed the House unanimously and is now in the Senate

Preliminary Interest

What Frontier Alaska State Credit Union is now seeking is a preliminary agreement by a number of municipal governments and school districts. Initially this would require only a letter, such as that issued by the Anchorage School District, indicating interest in participation at such time as the state law is amended.

Ultimately participation would require approval of a standard 'Master Agreement,' payroll deduction authorization, and the right to solicit among respective employee groups.

FINAL AGREEMENT

Final agreement would come on passage of HB-406, which will clarify state law so that deferred compensation deposits may be invested in the kinds of invstments that are common to financial institutions.

Tentative agreement by a number of Alaska municipal jurisdictions will be a valuable asset in securing speedy passage of HB-406 in the Senate. These agreements would also assist the program in getting started quickly after passage of the legislation, and in setting the standards for other deferred compensation programs by Alaska financial institutions.

Tom Freeman, Assistant Superintendent
Anchorage School District
Anchorage, Alaska

Dear Tom,

Frontier Alaska State Credit Union has instituted numerous programs over the past year in an attempt to improve relations with our core membership, employees of the Anchorage School District. Our best program has been to have monthly meetings at the credit union with representatives from the various schools and administrative departments. The credit union is looking for new services to offer its members and the Building Reps suggested that the credit union develop a tax shelter program. When we began to understand how much money was put into tax sheltered annuities, we developed a deferred compensation program.

Frontier Alaska State Credit Union is requesting that the Anchorage School District allow the credit union to offer a deferred compensation plan as specified in Section 457 of the Internal Revenue Code. The 457 plan is an alternative to the 403(b) annuity tax shelters offered by many insurance companies. Frontier believes the plan offers district employees the following advantages.

1. Significant Tax Savings. Employees may defer the lesser of 25% of gross income or $7,500. Extra deductions are available during the last three years of employment.

2. Absolute Safety. 457 plan deposits receive $100,000 federal insurance on each district employee's account. This is in addition to other insurance on existing accounts.

✓ Note: The Anchorage School District has tentitively agreed to participation at such time as state law is clarified. The Anchorage District policy is to permit all qualified plans to compete for employee participation. The letter and attached material provide discription re: how such a plan would be implemented.

3. 457 Plans Are Easy to Understand. Rates will be set quarterly. A 457 plan participant may come in the credit union at any time and get the balance in his or her account. There are no hidden charges.

4. Guaranteed Rates. Frontier intends to set the dividend rate quarterly. The rate should be about the same as the IRA rate. Because these will be long-term deposits, employees will earn a relatively high yield.

5. No Charges. Frontier will not charge a service fee or put a front or back end load charge on the plan. There is no early withdrawal penalty. The credit union wishes to reserve the right to set future fees because of changes in the tax code.

6. Deposits Stay Home. Deposits to these accounts will be used by the credit union to make loans to its members.

One disadvantage of a 457 plan compared to the annuities is that the 457 plan cannot be transferred to a district outside Alaska if an employee leaves Anchorage.

Frontier believes that a 457 plan is an attractive fringe benefit at virtually no inconvenience to the district. Existing payroll deduction forms can be used without modification. Frontier is willing to pay for any legal, training, or other charges necessary to implement the program. IRS regulations require that the employer approve any emergency withdrawals prior to retirement or termination of employment.

Enclosed you will find a copy of the proposed plan, a legal opinion on the plan and a copy of the regulation regarding federal insurance coverage.

We have contacted several educator-based credit unions outside who offer a 457 plan and they have reported that the plan is popular with district employees and imposes no additional burdens on their district personnel.

We hope for a favorable decision in this matter and look forward to working on this program with you. Please contact Leslie Ellis, our General Manager, at 563-3766 if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Art Arians

DEFERRED COMPENSATION PLAN AND AGREEMENT

AGREED AND ENTERED INTO this _____ day of _____, 19___, between _____, the "Employer", and _____, the "Participant".

1. Purpose. Employer desires to establish and Participant desires to participate in an "eligible deferred compensation plan" as defined in Section 457 of the Internal Revenue Code. Participant performs services for Employer either as an employee or independent contractor.

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual agreement and covenant contained herein and for other valuable consideration, receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, it is mutually agreed and covenanted by and between Employer and Participant as follows:

2. Deferral of Compensation. Beginning with the first full pay period commencing after execution of this Plan and Agreement and for each pay period thereafter, Employer shall deduct from Participant's compensation as of the last business day of each pay period and shall credit on its books and records in Participant's Deferred Compensation Account ("Account"), the following amount $_____ ($25.00 minimum).

3. Change in Amount of Deferral. The amount of compensation to be deferred and not yet earned may be increased or decreased by the execution of a revised deferred compensation agreement provided that any such revision shall be effective only for compensation which will be earned during the calendar month next succeeding the month during which such revision is executed.

4. Investment of Deferred Compensation. All amounts of deferred compensation credited to the Participant's Account shall be invested in a deposit account of Frontier Alaska State Credit Union. All dividends and other distributions of the accounts shall automatically be reinvested in a deposit account and all earnings shall be credited to the Participant's Account.

Sample Employee Agreement:

Note: While technically all deferred compensation programs are agreements between employee and employer, all administration with exception of payroll deduction is generally carried out by the plan operator.

5. Payments Under the Plan. (a) Upon the Participant's Separation from Service, as defined in Paragraph 11, Employer shall direct Frontier Alaska State Credit Union to pay Participant the value of Participant's Account in the manner specified in the Settlement Agreement. (b) Upon the occurrence of an Unforeseeable Emergency, as defined in Paragraph 11, Participant may submit an Unforseeable Emergency Withdrawal Request on such form supplied by Employer. The request will be approved by Employer for only the amount of payment, if any, as is consistent with the terms of this Plan and Agreement.

6. Distribution to Beneficiaries. If the Participant dies before the entire amount deferred is paid to the Participant, the Employer shall direct Frontier Alaska State Credit Union to pay the value of the Account to the Participant's beneficiary or beneficiaries in the manner and to the person(s) designated in the Designation of Beneficiary and Death Benefit Payment form. If no beneficiary has been designated in the Designation of Beneficiary and Death Benefit Payment form, Employer shall direct Frontier Alaska State Credit Union to liquidate and pay the entire amount of the Account to Participant's estate.

In the event of a distribution to beneficiaries, the entire amount deferred and not yet distributed must be paid to a beneficiary over -

(a) The life of the beneficiary (or any shorter period), if the beneficiary is the Participant's surviving spouse, or

(b) A period not in excess of fifteen years, if the beneficiary is not the Participant's surviving spouse.

7. Maximum Yearly Deferral. Except as in Paragraph 8, the maximum amount of Participant's compensation that may be deferred for a taxable year shall not exceed the lesser of:

(a) $7,500, or

(b) 33-1/3% of the Participant's includible compensation for the taxable year, reduced by any amount excludible from the Participant's gross income for the taxable year under Section 403(b) of the Internal Revenue Code on account of contributions made by the Employer.

A Participant's "includible compensation" for a taxable year includes only compensation from the Employer that is attributable to services performed for the Employer and that is includible in the Participant's gross income for the taxable year.

8. Limited Catch-Up. For one or more of the Participant's last three (3) taxable years ending before he attains normal retirement age under the Plan, the ceiling set forth in Paragraph 7 shall be the lesser of:

(a) $15,000.00, or

(b) The sum of -

(i) The Plan ceiling established for purposes of Paragraph 7 for the taxable year (determined without regard to this paragraph), plus

(ii) So much of the Plan ceiling established for Paragraph 7 for taxable years before the taxable year as has not theretofore been used under Paragraph 7 or this paragraph.

9. All of the terms and conditions of the Deferred Compensation Plan and Agreement contained on the reverse hereof, are incorporated herein and by this reference made a part hereof.

10. Timing of Deferral. Compensation will be deferred for any calendar month only if an agreement providing for such deferral has been entered into before the first day of such calendar month. Compensation may be deferred for the calendar month during which a prospective participant first becomes a Participant, if an agreement providing for such deferral is entered into on or before the first day on which the prospective Participant becomes a Participant.

11. Availability of Deferred Funds. In no event will any amount payable be paid or made available to a Participant or any beneficiaries before the Participant incurs a Separation from Service or an Unforseeable Emergency, which are defined as follows:

(a) Separation from Service shall be determined in the manner prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service Regulation Sections 1.457-2(h)(2) & (3).

(b) Unforseeable Emergency shall mean severe financial hardship to the Participant resulting from a sudden and unexpected illness or accident of the Participant or of a dependent (as defined in Section 152(a) of the Internal Revenue Code) of the Participant, loss of Participant's property due to casualty, or other similar extraordinary and unforseeable circumstances arising as a result of events beyond the control of the Employee. The circumstances that will constitute an Unforseeable Emergency will depend upon the facts of each case, but, in any case, payment may not be made to the extent that such hardship is or may be relieved -

(i) through reimbursement of compensation by insurance or otherwise,

(ii) by liquidation of the participant's assets, to the extent the liquidation would not itself cause severe financial hardship,

(iii) by cessation of deferrals under the plan.

Examples of what are not considered to be Unforseeable Emergencies include the need to send a Participant's child to college or the desire to purchase a home.

It shall be the sole responsibility of the Employer to determine whether an Unforseeable Emergency exists.

12. Settlement Agreement. The Settlement Agreement provides for the time and manner in which the value of the Participant's Account is to be paid. The Participant must elect a payment commencement date prior to Separation from Service. Such an election can only be made by Participant completing and executing the "Payment Commencement Date" portion of the Settlement Agreement and delivering it to Employer prior to Separation from Service.

The Participant may make or change an election regarding the manner in which payments are to be made by completing and executing the "Manner of Payment" portion of the Settlement Agreement and delivering it to the Employer at any time prior to the payment commencement date. In no event shall an election regarding the manner of payments be allowed which will cause payments to be made beyond a date fifteen (15) years from the initial payment commencement date, and payments in any event must be made on at least an annual basis.

If the Participant fails to elect a payment commencement date prior to Separation from Service, the Employer shall cause payment to commence sixty (60) days after Separation from Service. If the Participant fails to elect the manner in which payments are to be made prior to the payment commencement date, payments shall be made in an amount equal to one-fifteenth (1/15th) of the value of the Account in fifteen (15) annual payments adjusted annually for any increase or decrease in the value of the Account. The "Payment Commencement Date" portion of the Settlement Agreement shall become effective when executed by both Participant and Employer. The "Manner of Payment" portion of the Settlement Agreement shall become effective when executed by both the Participant and Employer.

In the event the payment commencement date is changed prior to the Participant's Separation from Service or the manner of payment elected is changed prior to the payment commencement date, the latter date applicable to each respectively shall govern and shall apply to deferred compensation that had already been earned and deferred under the Employer's program of deferred compensation as well as compensation that shall be subsequently earned and deferred.

13. Distribution of Deferrals. Payments of amounts deferred will commence not later than THE LATER OF -

(a) Sixty (60) days after the close of the Plan year in which the Participant or former Participant attains (or would have attained) normal retirement age, defined as the later of age 55 or 8 years of service with the Employer, or

(b) Sixty (60) days after the close of the Plan year in which the Participant Separates from Service with the Employer.

14. Employer's Property. All amounts of compensation deferred under the Plan and Agreement, all property and rights purchased with such amounts, and all income attributable to such amounts, property, or rights shall remain (until made available to the Participant or other beneficiary) solely the property and right of the Employer (without being restricted to the provisions of benefits under the Plan) subject only to the claims of the Employer's general creditors.

15. Employer Obligation to Participant. At any particular time, the value of the Account shall represent the sole obligation of Employer to Participant. With respect to Employer's obligation, Participant shall be a general (not secured) creditor.

16. Non-Assignment. Participant may not assign, anticipate, alienate, sell, transfer, pledge or in any way encumber any of the rights Participant may have hereunder and Employer shall reject and refuse to honor any such purported action with respect to such rights. This Plan and Agreement shall be binding on the assigns and successors of Employer and on the Personal Representative, Executor and Administrator of Participant. The interest of the Participant or any beneficiary designated by the Participant or in any obligation established by the Plan and Agreement shall not be subject to the claims of Participant's creditors or to legal process on behalf of Participant's creditors or be liable for the debts of any beneficiary.

17. Plan to Plan Transfers. If a Participant Separates from Service in order to accept employment with another employer within the state of Alaska that sponsors an "eligible deferred compensation plan" within the meaning of Section 457 of the Internal Revenue Code, and that employer's plan accepts transfers; the amount previously deferred shall automatically be transferred to such plan of the new employer, regardless of any other provision of this Plan and Agreement.

18. Acceptance of Deferrals From Another Plan. Amounts of compensation deferred by a Participant pursuant to another "eligible deferred compensation plan" within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code, will be accepted by this Plan and Agreement. Such amounts shall be credited to the Participant's Account established pursuant to this Plan and Agreement and shall be subjected to all the terms and provisions of this Plan and Agreement.

19. Revocation. A Participant may revoke any and all deferred compensation Plan and Agreements previously executed by agreement in writing signed by the Participant and the Employer. Revocation of the Plan and Agreement will not accelerate payment of amounts deferred. Payment will occur only upon the happening of one of the specific events detailed in this Plan and Agreement.

20. Frontier Alaska State Credit Union is not a party of this Plan and Agreement. Any account established hereunder may be subject to rate schedules adopted by the credit union from time to time.

21. Compliance with Sction 457. This Plan and Agreement is intended to comply with and to be administered in a manner consistent with Section 457 of the Internal Revenue Code. The provisions of this Plan and Agreement shall be interpreted in accordance with this intent. If requested by the Employer, the Participant agrees to cooperate in correcting any inconsistency in the administration of the Plan and Agreement under Section 457 of the Internal Revenue Code.

DRAFT

DRAFT LETTER OF INTENT
BY V. Fischer

April 3, 1986

LETTER OF INTENT - SCS CSHB 454 (SA)
BY THE SENATE STATE AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

It is the intent of the Senate State Affairs Committee in adopting the SCS for CSHB454 (SA) that Sections 1, 2, and 3 of the bill comply with the intitiative relating to the compensation for state legislators. These sections are included in HB 454 to bring into one measure related matters pertaining to compensation of state officers.

Some drafting changes were made to conform language of the proposed legislation to existing statutes and to correct errors; e.g., Section 1 of the bill v. Section 2 of the intitiative.

A minor change is made in compensation of legislators performing official duties while the legislature is not in session. The initiative provides that acutal expenses be reimbursed in lieu of per diem. The bill provides that per diem be paid, as was the practice at the time when the salary of legislators was the same as that set forth in Section 2 of the initiative. Provision of per diem, regardless of where official duties are performed, will eliminate disincentives to carrying out legislative work, to economizing on expenses, and to using low cost modes of travel and accomodations. The purpose of these revisions in the per diem language is to assure that legislators will be properly compensated for the performance of their constitutional duties and to avoid excessive individual expenses.

Both Sections 3 of the initiative and HB 454 provide for a report covering legislator's compensation to be made by the legislative fiscal officer. Under the initiative, the report is to be filed with the Office of Management and Budget in the Governor's Office. The Committee believes that such filing would be transgressing on the seperation of power between the legislative and executive branches. Therefore, SCS CSHB 454 (SA) provides that the report be filed with the executive director of the Legislative Affairs Agency. The basic purpose of the initiative -- providing a report available to the public -- is maintained under this minor change.

Re: Proposed amendments to legislative pay raise
Our file: 663-86-0431

Dear Senator Fischer:

You requested our advice concerning amendments to the material contained in the legislative pay raise initiative. You propose to include the wording of the initiative as amended in two instances in a bill which would also include the provisions of HB 48 and HB 454. You are concerned that these amendments will be considered to conflict with the provisions of the legislative pay raise initiative. In which case the pay raise question will be put to the voters.

You propose to amend sec. 24.15.010(d) of the initiative measure, which provides:

> (d) When the legislature is not in session, instead of receiving per diem a legislator is entitled to be reimbursed for actual expenses incurred while he is on committee business for an interim committee of the legislature in a place which is not his place of permanent residence.

The second amendment proposes the substitution of the legislative fiscal officer as the custodian of expense voucher reports in the second to the last sentence of proposed sec. 24.-15.040. Under the initiative, the office of management and budget is the custodian of voucher reports. The section as amended reads as follows:

> The Legislative fiscal officer shall, by January 31 of each calendar year, file with the legislature's fiscal office [OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET] a report of all vouchers approved for payment pursuant to this section during the preceding > calendar year. The report shall provide, by legislator, the date of each voucher, the amount paid and the basis for approval for payment.

You asked if the filing of legislative pay vouchers with executive officers presented separation of powers problems. We believe the filing required by the initiative measure does not cause a separation of powers problem. All vouchers presenting claims against the state treasury are paid centrally. The Department of Administration accounts for the general fund and the Department of Revenue retains and invests it. Presently, all legislative pay vouchers are on file with the division of finance in the Department of Administration. The amendment requires a report which totals by legislator the amount of public money received in compensation for legislative service. There is no barrier to removal of the initiative from the ballot if the amendment you adopt requires the legislative fiscal officer to collect vouchers and issue the report.

We find it difficult to say that the legislature is powerless to enact other effective means of compensating for expenses incurred while on legislative business or making public the amount of compensation claimed by each legislator. The legislature has broad power to change an initiative by an enactment covering the same subject as the initiated measure. Warren v. Boucher, 543 P.2d 731 (Alaska 1975). This power differs little from the legislature's power of amendment afforded after enactment of an initiative. In Warren, the court stated:

> Upon reflection we have concluded that the legislature's discretion in this matter is reasonably broad. If in the main the legislative act achieves the same general purpose as the initiative, if the legislative act accomplishes that purpose by means of systems which are fairly comparable, the substantial similarity exists. It is not necessary that the two measures correspond in minor particulars, or even as to all major features, if the subject matter is necessarily complex or if it requires comprehensive treatment. The broader the reach of the subject matter, the more latitude must be allowed the legislature to vary from the particular features of the initiative.

543 P.2d at 736. We understand your concern about the poor public policy expressed in subsection (b) concerning reimbursement of actual expenses. The definition of "actual" expenses would be difficult and controversial. This method for reimbursing expenses may lead to artificial inflation of expense accounts. It would also be a disincentive for legislators to economize and use low cost modes of travel and accommodations. The insertion of a reimbursement provision which applies the short-term per diem rate to travel and other expenses incurred for legislative business conducted during the interim is within the discretion of the legislature. It is a close question whether this amendment would prevent the initiative from appearing on the ballot. From the tone used in Boucher, we presume that the court would generally defer to the judgment of the legislature so long as the same general purpose of the initiative is retained. We perceive that purpose to be to return legislative pay to the levels that existed before July 1983. To impose a more limiting purpose would do injustice to the full scope of law making powers accorded to the legislature under article II of the Alaska Constitution.

You have also asked whether the sections enacting the initiative measure are compatible with the provisions of HB 454. Under HB 454, the future pay raises for the legislature and other appointed executive officers would be set by a salary commission. Any pay increases announced by the salary commission would amount to an amendment of the initiative. Because the salary commission would be exercising a delegated lawmaking power, the changes would probably be within the legislature's discretionary power to amend initiative within two years after adoption. See Alaska Const. art. XI, sec. 6 (initiative may be amended at any time).

We urge you to create a good record to support your subcommittee's intent concerning any amendments adopted. The legislative history will prove invaluable in defending any actions brought to contest the lieutenant governor's decision concerning placement on the 1986 primary election ballot.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD M. BROWN

B. determine an equitable rate and form of compensation and benefits and allowances for state officers;
C. submit a report of its findings and recommendations at least once every two years, but not more frequently than every year;

B. do not have the effect of reducing compensation and benefits of:
1. a member of the judiciary who is on the bench on the effective date of the commission's recommendations; and
2. the governor and lieutenant governor who are in office on the effective date of the recommendation unless consistent with a general law applicable to all other salaried officers of the state;

1. the requirements regarding filing and certification of commission final recommendations in the lieutenant governor's office;

2. all other provisions of the bill which provide that the commission sets the compensation of all state officers;
3. Section 13, which provides that all salaries in effect for state officers prior to the effective date of the constitutional amendment shall remain in effect until the commission has made its first final report on January 10, 1987, and the recommendation has taken effect on the first day of the 1987 legislative session (January 19, 1987).
   a. If CSHB 48 (Jud), relating to the compensation of legislators, passes and becomes law, the salary of legislators will be a Step A, Range 22 ($4,095) until January 19, 1987 (the first day of the Fifteenth Legislature). On January 19, 1987, the new commission set salary will take effect.
   b. If CSHB 48 (Jud) passes and becomes law and the constitutional amendment in CSHJR 54 (Jud) fails, legislators will receive their present salaries until the first day of the Fifteenth Legislature. At that time, their salaries will be dropped to a Step A, Range 10 ($1,845).

Sec. 22.05.130. Restrictions. A supreme court justice while holding office may not practice law, nor engage in the conduct of any other profession, vocation or business for profit or compensation, which conduct would interfere with the performance of the judicial duties of the justice, nor may a justice hold office in a political party, or hold any other office or position of profit under the United States, the state or its political subdivisions. A supreme court justice filing for another elective public office other than delegate to a constitutional convention of this state or the United States forfeits the judicial position. (§ 13 ch 50 SLA 1959; am § 1 ch 30 SLA 1971; am § 7 ch 12 SLA 1980)

Effect of amendments. — The 1980 amendment deleted a comma following "the state" near the end of the first sentence, and inserted "other than delegate to a constitutional convention of this state or the United States" in the second sentence.

Editor's notes. — This section was redrafted by the revisor of statutes to remove personal pronouns in conformity with AS 01.05.031(c) and § 4, Chapter 58, SLA 1982.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Sec. 22.05.140. Compensation. (a) The monthly salary of each justice is equal to Step F, Range 30 of the salary schedule in AS 39.27.011(a) for Juneau, Alaska.

(b) No salary warrant may be issued to a justice of the supreme court until the justice has filed with the state officer designated to issue salary warrants an affidavit that no matter referred to the justice for opinion or decision has been uncompleted or undecided by the justice for a period of more than six months.

(c) In addition to annual salary, each justice is entitled to receive a geographic cost-of-living adjustment, based on the location of the primary office assignment, equal to 3.5 percent of his annual salary times the number of pay step increases provided under AS 39.27.020 for a state employee working in the same election district in those districts for which AS 39.27.020 specified zero-to-five pay step increases. In an election district for which AS 39.27.020 specifies more than five pay steps, the number of pay step increases under this section is limited to five. Any retirement benefits to which a justice may be entitled shall be computed only on the annual salary. (§ 14 ch 50 SLA 1959; am § 4 ch 115 SLA 1965; am § 2 ch 83 SLA 1967; am § 1 ch 101 SLA 1969; am § 1 ch 193 SLA 1970; am § 1 ch 34 SLA 1974; am § 1 ch 205 SLA 1975; am § 2 ch 148 SLA 1976; am § 3 ch 263 SLA 1976; am § 4 ch 80 SLA 1978; am §§ 3, 18 ch 3 SLA 1980; am §§ 53, 54 ch 59 SLA 1982).

Effect of amendments. The 1978 amendment added subsection (c).

Compensation of the chief justice or of an associate justice may not be diminished during his term of office, unless by general law applying to all salaried officers of the state." Section 18 of ch. 3, retroactive to January 1, 1980, in subsection (a), substituted "The monthly salary of the chief justice and of each associate justice is equal to Step F, Range 30 of the salary schedule in AS 39.27.011(a) for Juneau, Alaska" for the provisions substituted by § 3 of ch. 3.

The 1982 amendment, effective May 28, 1982, deleted "the chief justice and of" preceding "each" and deleted "associate" preceding "justice" in subsection (a) and in the first sentence of subsection (c). The amendment also, in subsection (c), substituted "a" for "the chief justice or an associate" in the last sentence of that subsection.

SUBJECT: CSHB 454 (Finance)
(State Officers Compensation Commission)

TO: Representative Rick Uehling

FROM: Teresa B. Cramer TBC
Legislative Counsel

You have asked for an explanation of when the first final report of the State Officers Compensation Commission would take effect assuming that CS HJR 54 (Finance) and CSHB 454 (Finance) are enacted into law.

Section 2 of the bill amends AS 39.23.240(c) (which is enacted by section 1 of the bill) by adding the following language.

> A recommendation has the force of law and becomes effective on the first day of the next regular legislative session unless rejected by a concurrent resolution adopted by two-thirds of the members in each house of the legislature.

Section 14 of the bill enacts temporary law which requires the commission to submit its first final report to the legislature by January 10, 1987.

The First Session of the Fifteenth Legislature will begin after that date. Therefore, the first final report will take effect on the first day of the Fifteenth Legislature, which will be January 19, the third Monday of that month.

If I may be of further assistance, please advise.

COMMITTEE COPY

BILL SHEFFIELD
GOVERNOR

STATE OF ALASKA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
JUNEAU

February 14, 1986

The Honorable Ben Grussendorf
Speaker of the House
Alaska State Legislature
P.O. Box V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Representative Grussendorf:

Under the authority of art. III sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a bill abolishing seven non-functional boards, councils, commissions, and centers. The repealers in sec. 2 are the heart of this bill and sec. 1 makes an amendment to correspond with one of the repeals.

Two years ago, the Office of the Governor conducted an inventory of all state boards and commissions. Several of these entities were determined to be nonfunctional, and the following require legislative action to repeal statutes: (1) Alaska International Development Commission (AS 44.-19.064 -- 44.19.072); (2) Governor's Commission on the Administration of Justice (AS 44.119.110 -- 44.19.122), which is dealt with separately in HB 183 introduced last year at my request; (3) Commission on the Conference of the Law of the Sea (AS 44.19.131 -- 44.19.140); (4) Governor's Commission on Transportation Safety (AS 44.19.190 -- 44.19.192); (5) Tourism Advisory Board (AS 44.33.190 -- 44.33.230); (6) Advisory Council on Cultural Facili[illegible] (AS 44.33.401 -- 44.33.430); (7) Rural Development Co[illegible] (AS 44.47.160 -- 44.47.190); and (8) the Alaska E[illegible] Center (AS 46.12).

All of these entities are considered nonfunctional for one or more of the following reasons:

1. their function has been absorbed by another entity;

2. they have lacked funding by legislative appropriations more than two years in a row;

3. the specific need for which they were established no longer exists.

Despite their dormant status, these entities all continue to exist on the pages of the Alaska Statutes. The purpose of this bill is to officially abolish these entities and repeal the statutes governing their operation. The cultural facilities development fund, AS 44.33.401 -- 44.33.417, which was to be handled by the Advisory Council on Cultural Facilities, is also repealed, as are references to the council in AS 44.27.050(5), and to the fund in AS 44.33.020(23). No money has ever been appropriated to the fund, and no grants have ever been awarded from it. In addition, a reference to the Rural Development Council in AS 44.66.010(a)(9) is repealed.

I urge your prompt and favorable action on this measure, to clean up the statutes and to clear up public confusion about these entities.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield

The Honorable Katie Hurley
Chair, House State Affairs
Committee
Alaska State Legislature
P.O. Box V

Re: HB 601 (Abolishing inactive state entities)

Dear Representative Hurley:

At the hearing last week on this bill, your committee requested more information about the inactive entities which would be formally abolished by the repeal of their respective authorizing statutes in section 2 of the bill. On March 11, I provided your staff a February 20, 1985 letter to you from Carol Derfner, former special assistant to the governor for Boards and Commissions concerning HB 122, the predecessor of HB 601. A copy of that letter is also enclosed with this letter. It provides some specific information on six of the seven entities dealt with in HB 601 along with information on the Governor's Commission on the Administration of Justice which is dealt with separately in HB 183.

The Alaska Energy Center (AS 46.12) is the one additional entity that would be formally abolished by HB 601 but which was not mentioned in the February, 1985 letter because it was not included in HB 122. The center was established in 1980 and disbanded in 1982 and has not been funded since. The Department of Commerce and Economic Development, which had responsibility for the wind-down of the center, has recommended that AS 46.12 be repealed now that the last residual court case related to it has been decided by the Alaska Supreme Court. Zerbetz v. Alaska Energy Center, 708 P.2d 1270 (Alaska 1985), concerning the employment contract of the former executive director of the short-lived center, was, for the most part, resolved by the Alaska Supreme Court's May 10, 1985 decision. The center has not been funded since 1980 and the remainder of that appropriation was transferred to the Department of Commerce and Economic Development in 1981 "to be used only to complete projects to pay overhead expenses" (sec. 20, ch. 82, SLA 1981).

A summary of all seven entities which would be formally abolished by sec. 2 of HB 601, along with the statutes to be repealed and the reasons, follows:

(1) Alaska International Development Commission.
- AS 44.19.131 -- AS 44.19.072.
- Functions absorbed by Department of Commerce and Economic Development, Department of Natural Resources and Governor's Office.
- No appropriation since at least FY 1975.

(2) Commission of the Conference of the Law of the Sea.
- AS 44.19.131 -- AS 44.19.140.
- Functions absorbed by Department of Fish and Game and Governor's Office.
- No appropriation since FY 1981.

(3) Governor's Commission of Transportation Safety.
- AS 44.19.190 -- AS 44.19.192 (and mentioned in AS 44.99.001).
- Functions absorbed by Department of Public Safety.
- Never funded since creation in FY 1982.

(4) Tourism Advisory Board.
- AS 44.33.190 -- AS 44.33.230.
- Functions absorbed by Department of Commerce and Economic Development, Department of Natural Resources and Governor's Office.
- No appropriation since at least FY 1981.

(5) Advisory Council of Cultural Facilities.
- AS 44.33.401 -- AS 44.33.430.
- Function accomplished.
- No appropriation since FY 1980.

(6) Rural Development Council.
- AS 44.47.160 -- AS 44.47.190.
- Functions absorbed by Department of Community and Regional Affairs and Governor's Office.
- No appropriation since FY 1982.

(7) Alaska Energy Center.
- AS 46.12
- Functions absorbed by Department of Commerce and Economic Development, Department of Community and Regional Affairs.
- No appropriation since FY 1980.

The reason for the repeal of the statutes creating the defunct entities is to eliminate confusion and to conform the codified Alaska statutes with the reality established by the lack of appropriation by the legislature. According to the inventory conducted by the Governor's Office in 1983 there were 124 Boards and Commissions "on the books." Passage of this bill is a necessary step in the effort to weed out those unnecessary and unfunded entities whose functions have either been absorbed by other agencies or accomplished.

Please let me know if I can provide further information or assistance concerning this bill.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD M. BROWN

The Honorable Katie Hurley
Chair, House State Affairs
Committee
Alaska House of Representatives
Pouch V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Representative Hurley:

Pursuant to your request of February 7, requesting background information on the inactive boards and commissions listed in House Bill No. 122, I have prepared information which the Committee may find helpful.

Because there is confusion in the public's mind as to the existence of these boards and commissions, many people still continue to apply for them. By abolishing the boards which are inactive, the Legislature will assist in clearing up the confusion.

Basic information about the seven boards mentioned in this bill follows.

The bill abolishes the following boards, councils, and commissions by repealing the statutes governing their operation: Alaska International Development Commission, Governor's Commission on the Administration of Justice, Commission on the Conference of the Law of the Sea, Governor's Commission on Transportation Safety, Tourism Advisory Board, Advisory Council on Cultural Facilities, and the Rural Development Council. These entities, although still in existence on paper, have not been active or functioning for some time. They are considered nonfunctional for one or more of the following reasons:

1. their function has been absorbed by another entity;

2. they have lacked funding by legislative appropriations more than two years in a row;

3. the specific need for which they were established no longer exists.

Specific information regarding the seven boards is presented below.

GOVERNOR'S COMMISSION ON THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE
AS 18.65.250; AS 44.19.110-122

When the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration was eliminated at the federal level in 1980 or 1981, the principal source of funding for the Commission and its programs was gone. Following that, the Legislature defunded the Criminal Justice Planning Agency, which was the Commission's planning arm. *IN HB 183

The Commission still has a function under the security and privacy regulations pertaining to the criminal justice information systems (6 AAC). The Commission is also empowered to approve all secondary interim user applications. Because of the Commission's dormant status, the Attorney General has informally assumed this responsibility by virtue of his position as ex-officio chair of the Commission. A separate proposed bill regarding the Commission confers these powers to the Attorney General.

A Criminal Justice Working Group, or COG, as it is called, was formed in the fall of 1983 to examine specific criminal justice system problems and devise resolutions and plans. The Attorney General heads this group, which includes representation from all agencies dealing with criminal justice.

ADVISORY COUNCIL ON CULTURAL FACILITIES
AS 44.27.050(5); AS 44.33.020(23); AS 44.33.401-430

The Advisory Council on Cultural Facilities was created by Chapter 62, SLA 1979, to establish criteria, by regulation, for the purpose of construction or development of cultural facilities under AS 43.18.500, etc. The five-member Council was housed under the Department of Commerce and Economic Development, and was appointed by Governor Hammond from a list provided to him for that purpose by the State Council on the Arts.

The Department of Commerce and Economic Development stated that the Council performed much in-depth research and provided the Department with written documentation regarding their findings. However, the Council recommended to the Administration that approximately $110 million be set aside in a revolving fund for the development and construction of cultural facilities. Neither the Legislature or the Administration implemented that recommendation.

It was stated by the contact agency (DCED) that the terms of the members of the Council were allowed to expire because the Council had presented its findings, there were no funds with which to implement them, and there was no real need for the Council's activities without the funding of the revolving fund. Additionally, the recommendations made by the Council eventually became the responsibility of each community, who would maintain and operate whatever capital project was decided upon by the community and funded by the Legislature.

ALASKA INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION
AS 44.19.064-072

The Alaska International Development Commission was created in the Office of the Governor in 1959. It was amended by the 1961 and 1963 Legislatures. The statute defines its duties as primarily involving planning in the development and use of water, minerals, power, and forest resources near the border of Alaska and Canada.

The Boards and Commissions Office has no documentation on this Board. Research reflects that the Board was dormant and not "on the books" at the beginning of former Governor Jay Hammond's tenure in 1974, nor since then.

The Alaska International Development Commission is not to be confused with the Alaska International Trade Commission, created by former Governor Hammond by Administrative Orders 57 and 66 in 1979 and 1981, respectively. The Alaska International Trade Commission is also dormant, having been replaced in function by the multi-faceted Office of International Trade with the Department of Commerce and Economic Development.

If you desire information regarding the Development Commission, the only source which may have information is the State Archives. Any information or reports emanating from the Development Commission would now be considered property of that office.

COMMISSION ON THE CONFERENCE OF THE LAW OF THE SEA
AS 44.19.131-140

The Commission on the Conference of the Law of the Sea was created October 4, 1972, by AS 44.19.134 to aid the State in developing positions on the Law of the Sea Conference with specific regard to the State's uses of marine resources. The Commission was strictly an advisory board to the Governor and the Legislature.

The Commission is currently dormant because of the shift of Alaska into the Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ).

The Extended Jurisdiction Office of the Alaska Department of Fish and Game monitors the Law of the Sea so that information can be had when matters arise at the federal level. However, ADFG considers the board dormant. No funds were expended for its operation in FY 83, FY 84, or FY 85.

RURAL DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL
AS 44.47.160-190; AS 44.66.010(a)(9)

The Rural Development Council, created on July 2, 1980, was established to promote rural Alaska's economic development and to recommend policies to the Governor and the Legislature in this regard. The Council was defunded in 1982 during the previous Administration.

By its creating authority, the Council was advisory in nature. Its duties have been picked up by other entities since its deactivation three years ago -- the Department of Community and Regional Affairs, the Governor's Special Staff Assistant for Rural Development, and additional public input vehicles created by both the Legislature and the Executive Branch specifically to facilitate communications with rural Alaska.

TOURISM ADVISORY BOARD
AS 44.33.190-230

The Tourism Advisory Board has not functioned for at least four and one-half years, and there are no members attached to it, as their terms have expired.

Small industry and community development outreach is being handled internally by the staff of the Division of Tourism in the Department of Commerce and Economic Development. Additionally, the Division has institutionalized a relationship with the Alaska Visitors' Association. State officials from the Governor's Office, the Division of Parks within the Department of Natural Resources, and the Division of Tourism sit on the board of the Alaska Visitors' Association.

GOVERNOR'S COMMISSION ON TRANSPORTATION SAFETY
AS 44.99.001; AS 44.19.190-192

This board, created by AS 44.19.190, on January 15, 1982, was never activated. Governor Hammond vetoed the legislation when it passed both houses; however, the Legislature overrode his veto. A fiscal note, which was attached to the original bill, got lost in the shuffle and there were no funds attached to the new Commission. Consequently, the prior Administration took no action to activate the Commission.

The Commissioner of the Department of Public Safety in the previous Administration took no position on the bill when it was before the Legislature because it removed the Highway Safety Planning Agency from the Department and placed it in the Governor's Office.

The Department of Public Safety states that the charges of the Commission are being picked up by other offices within the Department and does not feel there is a need for this Commission.

If you have additional questions, please contact me at 465-3651. I have enclosed relevant pages from the November 1982 Boards and Commission Book in order to advise you of previous memberships.

Sincerely,

Carol A. Derfner
Special Staff Assistant to the Governor

DATE: May 7, 1986

RE: Sectional Analysis- CSHB 606 (Finance) am, "An Act relating to Art in public places; and providing for an effective date."

Pursuant to your request I have prepared this sectional analysis of CSHB 606 (Finance) am, referenced above.

SECTION 1

Section 1 amends AS 35.27.020(c):

Sec. 35.27.020(c) ART REQUIREMENTS FOR PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND FACILITIES-- Would bring publicly funded art projects required by this section to a funding level of one half percent of construction costs. Currently, construction of state buildings and facilities other than rural schools require expenditure of at least one percent and rural schools currently require the expenditure of at least one half percent.

SECTION 2

Section 2 amends AS 35.27.020(g):

Sec. 35.27.020(g) ART REQUIREMENTS FOR PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND FACILITIES-- Change is necessary to reflect establishment of art project selection by the committee created in section 3, rather than the current method of artist selection by DOT and the State Art Council. Requires use of state cultural resources and artists to create art in this program. Current statutes mandate that the use of Alaskan artists and cultural resources shall be encouraged.

SECTION 3

Section 3 amends AS 35.27.020 by adding a new subsection:

Sec. 35.27.020(h) Exempts rural school buildings or facilities from percent for arts requirements unless specifically authorized by the school board. "Rural" is defined as communities with populations of 4,500 or less. Current statutes mandate 1/2% expenditure.

SECTION 4

Section 4 adds a new section to AS 35.27:

Sec. 35.27.021. SELECTION OF ART.-- (a) Requires that selection of artists be chosen by an artist selection committee and that artist selected shall be approved by the school board. Committee shall include the architect, the project manager, as well as two representatives from school district, and three members of public who reside in local community who are selected by school board president or designee . At least one of the public members must be knowledgeable in the arts.

(b) Except for (a), artists for projects in other public buildings and facilities shall be chosen by committee. Committee would include the architect, project manager, a designee of the principal user, a designee of the State Council on the Arts, and three members of the public who reside in local community. One public member must be knowledgeable in the arts. The public members are selected by project manager after reaonable public notice that seats are available.

(c) All artist selection committee meetings are subject to open meetings rules.

SECTION 5

Section 5 amends AS 44.27.060(b):

Sec. 44.27.060(b) ART IN PUBLIC PLACES FUND-- This change instructs deposit into the art in public places fund one half of one percent of the construction cost of a building or facility exempt from the requirements of the provisions of the Art Works in Public Buildings chapter (AS.35.27), because construction cost is less than $250,000 or the facility is not designed for substantial public use. Currently one percent of construction cost is deposited in this account.

SECTION 6

Section 6 adds a new subsection to AS 44.27.060:

Sec. 44.27.060(e) Mandates addition of a plaque to all works of art executed under this chapter. Plaque includes name of art, name of artist, and year of completion.

SECTION 7

Section 7 repeals two current subsections of AS. 35.27.020:

Sec. 35.27.020 (e) and (f) are repealed.

SECTION 8

Section 8 exempts projects appproved for construction prior to July 1, 1986 from these changes.

SECTION 9

Section 9 provides for July 1, 1986 effective date.

SECTION 1

Section 1 of this bill amends AS 35.27.020(c):

Sec. 35.27.020(c) ART REQUIREMENTS FOR PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND FACILITIES-- This change brings all publicly funded art projects required by this section to the funding level now required in the case of a rural school facility, at least one half of one percent of the construction cost. STATEMENT OF ANALYSIS RE:
An Act Relating to Art in Public Places

FISCAL NOTE PREPARATION FOR:
House Bill 606
3/25/86

Specific monetary impacts associated with this bill:

Based on an assumption that eligible facility construction within the Department was to remain at its present $35 million level the bill would shift $175,000 from the Artworks program back to the facility construction funds. Similarly, if eligible construction funding was to drop to say $20 million dollars the shift would be reduced to $100,000.

On a statewide basis, and assuming that all other eligible construction costs (including "non-rural" school construction) total $150 million; the anticipated shift from Artwork funding to construction funding would yield $750,000.

The bill will not reduce administrative costs as associated with the program. These costs are fixed costs (representing media advertising, accounting, inspection, selection costs, management, etc.) and remain fairly constant irregardless of the value of the Artwork. As a percentage of the value of the artwork, administrative costs will actually increase.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - SECOND SESSION

A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to selecting and identifying art in public places."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

* Section 1. AS 35.27 is amended by adding a new section to read:

Sec. 35.27.021. SELECTION OF ART. (a) The artist who executes a work of art for a public school shall be selected by the superintendent of the school district in which the public school is to be built, with the approval of the school board. If the department finds in the best interest of the state that the selection by the superintendent of the artist to execute the work of art may result in a cost overrun to the state or delay of construction, the department shall make the selection of the artist in consultation with the superintendent.

(b) Except as provided in (a) of this section, art projects for public buildings and facilities shall be selected by a majority vote of a committee convened by the project manager from the department. The committee shall be composed of the architect, the project manager from the department, a designee of the Alaska State Council on the Arts, a designee of the principal user of the public building or facility, and three lay members of the public. The department shall solicit volunteers in a local project area by public notice, and choose the lay members of the committee by lottery from the volunteers. Before consideration of specific art projects, the committee shall, after public notice, hold a hearing to receive public opinion about potential art projects. The committee shall consider public opinion as expressed at the public hearing, but is not bound by it.

* Sec. 2. AS 44.27.060 is amended by adding a new subsection to read:

(e) A work of art that is to be made a permanent part of a building or facility owned or leased by the state shall be identified by a permanent plaque installed on or near the work of art. The plaque must contain the name or title of the work of art, the name of the artist, the year of completion, and the names of the members of the selection committee.

* Sec. 3. AS 35.27.020(e) and (f) are repealed.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Representative Alyce Hanley
FROM: Scott Sutherland, Staff
DATE: April 3, 1986

RE: Sectional Analysis- SSHB 607, "An Act relating to selecting and identifying art in public places."

Pursuant to your request I have prepared this sectional analysis of SSHB 607, referenced above.

SECTION 1

Section 1 of this bill creates a new section, 35.27.21:

Sec. 35.27.021 SELECTION OF ART -- This section requires art executed in public schools to be selected by the superintendent with approval of the school board. This is already in the statutes. It has been modified slightly at the request of Legislative Legal Services for clarification and grammar purposes only. The last section of the bill would repeal the current statute, AS 35.27.020(f).

This section also requires that except for the art projects in schools covered above, art projects in public buildings and facilities shall be selected by the majority vote of a seven member committee consisting of a DOT/PF project manager, the architect, a designee of the Alaska State Arts Council, a designee of the principal user, and three lay members of the public. Public members would be selected at random from a list of volunteers from the locality where art project is to be placed. The art project selection committee shall hold a public hearing to receive testimony on a potential art project. The art project selection committee is not bound by opinions expressed at the hearing .

SECTION 2

Section 2 of the bill amends AS 44.27.060:

Sec. 44.27.060 ART IN PUBLIC PLACES FUND-- This change would require the placement of a permanent plaque works of art installed under this program. The plaque must contain the name or title of the artwork,the artist's name, the year of completion, and the names of the committee members that selected the work. Currently the statute directs that the artist (not the work) is selected by the DOT/PF architect after consulting with the Alaska State Council on the Arts and the principal user. The last section of this bill repeals the current statute, AS 35.27.060(e).

SECTION 3

Section 3 of the bill repeals the current AS 35.27.020(e) and (f)

STATEMENT OF ANALYSIS RE:
An Act Relating to Selecting and Identifying Art in Public Places

FISCAL NOTE PREPARATION FOR:
House Bill 607
3/25/86

Specific tasks required by the bill which are not presently carried out by the Department or the Alaska State Council on the Arts include:

(1) The solicitation and random selection of three lay members of the public at large.

(2) The holding of a public hearing to receive input and opinion about potential art projects.

(3) Identification of selection committee (through the use of a plaque) on all permanently mounted Artwork.

Anticipated Costs:

The predominant cost associated with items 1 and 2 above is that of media advertisement. The costs are expected to be minimal and should be funded from the administrative contingency presently provided to the Council. Costs for a public hearing should also be insignificant since many of the committee members are volunteers and Departmental costs could be borne by CIP funds. The plaque should be considered a support amenity and ancillary to the cost of the Artwork.

Language Changes:

A modification is needed at line 28, page 1, so as to enable the Department and the Council to better control administrative costs. In cases of projects which have relatively small Artwork budgets (say $2500 to $5000) and are also at very remote locations, the administrative costs can often greatly exceed the price of the Artwork. For such instances the public hearing portion of the bill should be modified to read "the committee or a selected contingency thereof". This would permit a smaller group, most likely the local community members and perhaps a Council representative, to hear the public testimony. Such evidence could then be summarized (or tape recorded) for review by the entire committee prior to making the Artwork selection. Substantial travel savings would result.

Additional language (following line 3, page 2) requiring Departmental review and approval of all Artwork agreements is needed to replace similar language within AS 35.27.020(e) which this bill would delete. The Letter of Understanding between the Department and the Council relies heavily on the Department's approval of the Artwork agreement as a method of "checks and balances". Dropping such approval requirements would result in extensive negotiations and a rewrite of a new agreement.

POSITION STATEMENT - 1% for Art Amendments

State Representative Alyce Hanley has sponsored two bills (H.B. 606, 607) in the State Legislature which would amend the "1% for Art" program in the following ways:

1. Art selection would be restricted to works done by Alaskan Artists.

2. "1% for Art" would become "0.5% for Art" - in other words, the appropriations would be reduced from 1% of the total construction budget to 0.5%.

3. Public hearings to review items selected by the selection committees would be required before the art is paid for or installed.

4. Plaques indicating who selected the art shall be installed on or near the work.

WHEREAS, a great deal of concern has been expressed among students regarding the lack of public input in the selection of major art installation on campus,

AND WHEREAS, expenditures of over one hundred thousand dollars are made with comparatively little public involvement,

AND WHEREAS, Representative Hanley's bills would provide for extensive public input and review of proposed art purchases,

AND Representative Hanley's bill would give preference to Alaskan artists in the selction process,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the student association on the University of Alaska-Fairbanks campus strongly supports H.B. 606 and 607 as legislation long past due, and applauds Representative Hanley and the other co-sponsors in their attempt to provide for increased public involvement.

Dear Chris,

I reviewed the April 5, 1985 memo regarding Art in Public Places - Student Residents. I am not an art critic and not qualified to comment on the piece selected. However, as a regent responsible for the use of State Funds, there are some comments I would like to present.

I believe that state funding, as much as possible, should be targeted toward multi-use projects. This becomes even more important in an atmosphere of declining revenues. With this concept in mind, I feel state-funded public art should also be targeted to enhance our tourism economy. We need to offer Alaska visitors a unique look at our history and culture. I believe our state funded, pulic-art is one way to make that happen.

The average visitor is not likely to be excited about (nor remember) "a contemporary design reflecting the progressiveness of the State of Alaska". However, a visit to the Egan Center in Anchorage opens the mind to things like the Northern Lights and the Aleut and Eskimo cultures as crafted by Hoover and Olanna. This art (to me) is contemporary in a traditional Alaskan way. I believe the Egan Center art offers an experience of great value to both our residents and to our visitors.

Art lovers may question my position because it overlooks the opportunity to enhance our minds through exposure to contemporary, modern art. They also may feel limitations on public art will suppress creativity in our artists. I am sensitive to those concerns. My visit to New York in late September, 1980 to visit the Piccaso Exhibit showed me the value of new expressions in art. However, if Piccaso were here today to design an Alaskan public-art item, I would request that he use an Alaskan theme or native materials, or not submit a design. We have been overlooking the opportunity to invest our public art funds in the revenue-generating tourism economy. Until we fulfill that priority, I feel people will have to be satisfied with The Last Nimbus, traveling Judy Chicago shows and private art funding to meet their modern art needs.

I apologize for using this specific opportunity to voice these broad concerns. Other citizens and legislators have expressed similar views, however no action has been taken. I believe that Regents, Administrators and Employees of the University system can demonstrate their sensitivity to declining revenues and maximum use of existing funds in many ways. Strategic planning for the multi-use of public art is a good place to start. I hope we will consider policy modifications that will help this new direction occur in the University.

Sincerely:

R. F. Williams

State can't afford 1 percent program

Dear Editor:

For a state cost cutting measure, why don't they do away with the 1-percent-for-art policy until they can find someone to approve art that is worth spending thousands of dollars on? Very few of the projects that money has been spent on in the past are worth trashing. Besides paying "Outside" artists mega-bucks, we have to spend more to have it hauled away after not being accepted by the public. What is wrong with having art that looks like something or that you could recognize as being something specific? People, then, might be interested in coming to Alaska to see it as they now go to Europe to see the art treasures there. At least I think our legislators should seriously consider the bill introduced by Rep. Alyce Hanley as a step in the right direction.

Art lacks artistry

Dear Editor:

I have just returned from Anchorage and enjoyed the beautiful snowcapped mountains, glaciers and surrounding areas.

During a tour of the Federal building it was a shock to see the glaring, ugly $80,000 modern art mural which adorns that building. It was depressing to see when there is so much natural beauty available for representation. Without a doubt there are many Alaskan artists who could have painted something in keeping with Alaska's beauty.

Also while on the subject of art, the $27,000 shoeshine stand and the $80,000 red mating spiders hanging from the ceiling at the airport are equally ugly.

Beauty is in the eye of the beholder, but surely the members of the Arts Council could have done better with taxpayers' money at half the price.

Perhaps they could visit the Sheraton Hotel to get an idea of true Alaskan artistry.

Basics in the world of art

Dear Editor:

Gee, golly whiz. I'm certainly overjoyed that someone of Mr. Stephen Haycox's credentials finally dismissed "those legions who actually can't tolereate new and different ideas" with his "One Percent for Photography" letter to the editor.

I used to be ignorant about art, blame it on my middle-class background, I guess. For instance, I used to believe that to have the title "artist," one had to actually be able to draw (can you believe that?) or to be called "sculptor," one had to be able to carve a reasonably recognizable shape from stone, wood or clay, (how mundane!)

An innovative state like Alaska shouldn't be hampered by having to review an artist's qualifications (or lack of same) before allowing them to grab some of that "One Percent for the Arts" money. After all, it's a free country, isn't it? And what do those uncouth "legions" out there know about art, anyway?

Without the guidance of the educated elite, like Mr. Haycox, the "great unwashed" would likely never be exposed to innovative and refined works of art. The sculpture "Nimbus" comes to mind here, along with purple walruses, (Lewis Carroll could've used those.)

Possibly The Anchorage Times will sponsor the "Stephen Haycox Award" for those letter writers who so succinctly "put down" those legions who are threatened by anything but the commonplace.

Arts funding not immune from cuts

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to the article in the Sunday Times April 6, referring to a legislative bill to cut art funding form 1 percent to one-half percent for public buildings, which upsets our former Arts Council director.

First of all, I feel this "mandatory funding" for art should be subject to budget cuts like everything else, considering our present economic problems.

Secondly, much of this so-called "art" is shoved down our throats with the idea that if you don't understand it, can't figure out what it is, or choke when you hear the price tag, than you are just an uneducated slob who is not enlightened enough to appreciate it. I believe "Absurd originality" seems to be the criteria for choice. I believe in being creative, but good taste and a touch of beauty should be in there somewhere too. Especially when its "our" money paying for it.

Thirdly, I take exception to Kuiper's comment that truck drivers are not qualified to be on the committee to choose works of art. I, for one, would like to see more truck drivers and a few garbagemen on the committee also.

At least they will know junk when they see it.

How public art is chosen also important

To the Editor:

The Empire's editorial of February 2nd concerning "public art" was pretty much on the mark. For years, a stream of incomprehensible objects – all publicly financed and having nothing to do with any aspect of community identity – have been installed statewide. Judging them as art and disregarding their relationship within the communities, I think a few of the pieces have merit, others aren't bad, but many are bad. Perhaps in communities where chaos and meaninglessness are the order of the day, some of these works have found appropriate settings; but I believe that in cities and smaller towns which have a discernable history and an intimate relationship with it as well as the future, undecipherable works have a shaky position in the public's consciousness. It's clear that committees which are appointed to select art work should be fully aware of their community's sentiments towards public art and act with care regarding this trust. Not an easy task and one that takes some courage. Unfortunately, for some members, it's merely a means of exercising personal influence; and the criterion for justifying their decisions is the snobbery of a narrow current fashion.

The problems we are having with public art are not isolated local events. Recently, in New York – "birthplace" of most modern American artistic fashions – a similar popular revolt has been taking place. A rusted metal panel sculpture named "Tilted Arc," located in the center of Foley Square, was the focus of common objection. Numerous heated public hearings were held and testimony taken. In the end, it was removed, and as a result of this major controversy as well as a similar one in St. Louis and others cropping up nationwide, William J. Diamond, of the U.S. General Services Administration, the body that pays for these things, admitted that, "We're learning the lessons of the battle of Foley Square." As a result, GSA has been revising acceptance procedures of major art commissions to include public consultation before allowing contracts to proceed.

The piece recently installed at the airport has caused a steady abuse of an earnest and dedicated artist. I feel that the current public outrage is misdirected. After all, Paul was selected by a committee which evaluated many proposals. It's selection was done with full knowledge of what it was going to get – a contract was issued and the artist complied with the contract. The work is well crafted, and whether the public understands or not, it has some nice things happening in it. The play of shape, color, texture and light may be things worth encouraging in the public environment. However, if after a suitable period of time, the public still feels strongly that it should be removed, it probably should be given to an institution of art or sold to a private collector (it would be nice if the artist received a percentage of the sale). But, please, stop picking on the underpaid hard-working artist. The committee which selected the work is allowing the artist to take all the heat; it is they who should be called to task. Maybe it would be constructive if they took the time to issue a press release to defend and explain their selection to the public. The committee should spare us the charge of how "sophisticated" they thought we ought to be in Juneau, as was done by a committee member in the "Nimbus" fiasco.

A suggestion for one policy change on major future projects is the installation of a small plaque with the names of the committee members as well as those of the artists. This would allow all to share a bit in the accolades – or the wrath – but most of all, the responsibility.

Bill would improve public art program

Sir:

I would like to urge those who are interested in constructively affecting the selection of art for the "1 percent for art in public places" program to express their opinions on a bill presently before the Alaska House of Representatives. HB-607 was initiated by Rep. Alyce Hanley of Anchorage, and a number of legislators from many areas of the state.

This bill makes some additions to the existing legislation that would positively affect the participation of the public in that program's art selection process:

1. Paragraph (b) requires that no less than three of the seven members of the Art Selection Committee be lay members of the public. This is not presently required. The other members would be an Alaska State Council on the Arts (ASC/A) representative, the facility architect, the facility project manager and a designee by the principal user of the public building.

This paragraph further stipulates that the lay members will be selected by lottery from a list of volunteers from the general public. This mechanism is intended to maximize the representation of the public without unduly encumbering the art selection process.

I personally favor this structure because it will also inhibit "stacking" of a committee for any purpose whatever.

Another feature of this paragraph is that it mandates public hearings concerning potential art projects. While it would be required to hear the public out, the Art Selection Committee would not be bound by it. This is fine as long as they also take responsibility for the selection.

2. Paragraph (c) requires that a plaque or permanent label be installed at each artwork giving the name of the artist, the title of the work of art (some pieces are in sore need of that) and the names of those on the Art Selection Committee.

I feel that this would do much to assign responsibility where it most needs to be placed when it comes to art that outrages the public, which pays for it.

I'd like to encourage members of the public who feel strongly about many of the pieces of art which are being placed around the state – 70 percent of which are done by out-of-state artists – to let your legislators know how you feel. More specifically, send a "public opinion message" (free) by calling 465-4648 and dictating a short civil telegram to the following legislators on the State Affairs Committee. Don't be parochial about it; send one to them all:

Katie Hurley, Chairperson.
Mike Navarre, V-Chairperson.
H.A. "Red" Boucher.
Bette Cato.
Virginia M. Collins.
Roger Jenkins.
M. Mike Miller.

If HB-607 gets out of State Affairs – and only public support will do it – the next two committee hurdles it'll have to negotiate will be H.E./S.S. and Finance. Then it would have to pass the full House, and then the Senate. There is little time left in this session. A show of public support will expedite this "no cost" bill.

Airport triptych a mystery

Dear Editor:

Ref: $40,000 triptych at airport.

Webster says a triptych is a set of three panels side by side bearing pictures, carvings or the like—"the like" is what I'm not familiar with!

Supposedly, in this case, 1) A long-legged fox with hooves (and big ears); 2) A rooster trying to lay an egg, sitting behind a red-headed camp robber with a half dozen wings; 3) Zebra fish? 4) Pot-bellied humpy; 5) Disgusted bear. Mr. Gentry sounds like an art professor I once had the University of Washington. "Can't give you an "A," Ken, or you would be as good as me!"

In a letter I once wrote about the "Drip Cloth" in the federal building, (still waiting for the art work to show) I suggested an Alaskan artist such as Fred Machetanz be commissioned to maybe do a triptych of his works.

An 'art' museum in Juneau's future?

Dear Editor:

I can just see it – many years from now the city of Juneau opens its own world class "art" museum and proudly displays a collection featuring some of the most bizarre examples ever crafted by man. Ardent connoisseurs rush from Paris, Frankfurt and Rome. No? How about Wrangell, Ketchikan or Petersburg?

Seriously though, which lapse of sanity was it that inspired our assembly members to entertain the illusion that any normal traveler who visits the Juneau Airport would ever be intoxicated anywhere near a level sufficient for sharing even their slightest amount of delirious amusement for this most recently acquired "magnum opus?"

Why not a 'Wall of Fame' for airport?

Dear Editor:

In re Mr. Steve Smith's letter of 5 February 1986, his comments about what he terms "non-representational art" fits conclusively with my earlier expressed comment about pseudo-intellectuals getting their joilies by terming such atrocities as our airport fiasco "art." It ain't.

Now I have a suggestion which will calm the storm and it would be a "Wall of Fame" featuring aircraft representing the history of aviation in Alaska. No place under the flag owes more to Orville and Wilbur than Alaska and I would also urge our city and borough assembly to commission Douglas-born Herb Bonnett to do the honors. Anyone who has seen his paintings of Grumman Gooses and PBYs will get my point here.

Then we should also have, on an adjoining wall, pictures of such early day luminaries in the Southeast Alaska aviation world as Shell Simmons, Alex Holden, Bob Ellis and Bud Bodding. All but Mr. Holden are still, blessedly, with us and as founders of what is now Alaska Airlines (although not responsible for current management) and deserve to be honored. Bodding, incidentally, is one of that long line of airline captains to have graduated from Juneau High School.

There is nothing new about this suggestion. Anchorage International Airport has paintings of famed Alaskan bush pilots (including Simmons and Ellis) hung on the walls of its terminal building. They have also had the good taste to not have "non-representational art" displayed unless one can count graffiti as same.

And, Mr. Smith, I moved to Alaska 44 years ago "to live in a place where everything is real and understandable" and that does not include eating "franchised burgers." Meet me at Taguchi's Tea House, where they display a painting by John Cameron Asp, another local boy who made good in the real world – of art that is.

Name offered for airport's artwork

Editor,

I notice by the story that Betsy Longenbaugh authored under the heading of "Taking flight with airport artwork" that the piece was "untitled." As the one who felt Nimbus was misnamed and should have been entitled, "Bow off of Ferry Grounded at Prince Rupert," I have figured out nomenclature for our latest trauma.

It should be entitled "Sunrise at Sheep Creek," since somewhere in the collage I note what appears to be faint sunlight plus any number of fingerlings. I'm checking with the proprietor of the Sheep Creek hatchery, Ladd Macaulay, to see if he might have lost some prior to turning them loose to fend for themselves.

I'm moved to paraphrase a Supreme Court justice and will by adding that "I can't define art but I know it when I see it." If some of our pseudo intellectuals would please resist getting their jollies by picking such pieces I will promise not to support a bill to repeal the 1 percent for art bit in public buildings.

Like the Nimbus creator, Mr. Gardinier also needs a plumb bob for his iron work. If we must keep this latest artistic folly on the airport premises might I suggest it be placed in the older part of the terminal. My visit on Jan. 18 showed no one but one passenger waiting. Sunrise on Sheep Creek might cut down on the boredom for the air taxi operators as well.

Sincerely,

Nimbus should be a monument

Dear Editor:

The weighty problems described in your Dec. 11 article, "Panel Ponders Nimbus Future," may be easily solved.

For all of the controversy generated over Nimbus, he, she or it may be exactly right and in the exact right place to serve a very useful purpose. After a little thought it becomes more clear.

Nimbus is an ideal monument to bureaucratic bumbling.

The monument should stand adjacent to State Capitol and office buildings to remind both legislators and administrative regulators to re-examine each action for at least a small content of practical common sense. With that objective in mind the general public will gain from the presence of Nimbus.

The saving in capital can be appreciable. We not only save the expense of removal and replacement, but we may also save by avoiding potential future paper Nimbuses from legislative and administrative activities.

The idea seems worth serious consideration. What do you think?

What to do with Nimbus

Editor's Note: The following letter to the editor was written before the state Department of Transportation began work to remove Nimbus.

Dear Editor:

Another year has passed and Nimbus still assumes it's vigilant posture of resembling the likeness of nothing. It seems like about a year ago or so there was some discussion in circulation concerning the removal and disposal of this repulsive piece of junk. If one must assume that such discussion will ultimately be conducted and concluded within the building of which this structure remains a feature, then it becomes quite easy to realize why nothing in this respect has developed.

I may be a dreamer but I guess that what I would most dearly love to see concerning this particular item is a well-insured, full dressed 18-wheeler maxed out with a load of steel and for some reason or the other, finding itself on the upper block of Main Street where it would unfortunately experience a total failure of brakes. The driver would of course jump to safety and receive only minor injuries or abrasions and bruises, God bless him, but not before steering the vehicle into a path of perfect alignment and certain collision with Nimbus.

Naturally, the driver's logical intention would be to prevent the occurrence of a much larger catastrophe. In order to achieve desirable results the rig would reach an optimum speed of 40 mph before crashing into the structure and completely shearing it from the premises of its foundation.

An early Sunday morning would be perfect timing, as no one would be in the area to sustain injury due to such an accident. This would no doubt waste a good Kenworth but the long overdue job of proper landscaping would finally become accomplished and who knows, the public may accept the wreckage as a monument.

Rie Munoz, a longtime Alaskan artist indicated in a Letter to the Editor that she would prefer something more of a representational replacement done by an Alaskan artist to replace the abstract, NIMBUS, crafted in the Lower 48 by outside artist Robert Murray.

Bear statue gets a vote

Dear Editor:

Nimbus is gone. The governor's committee appointed to decide on a replacement has three proposals: (1) a statue of Governor Egan, (2) a war memorial, (3) a life-size bronze sculpture of an Alaska brown bear by Juneau artist R.T. Wallen.

I'm for the brown bear and here's why: The Court Plaza (where Nimbus stood) is an active location year-round. Summers it blossoms with the occasional band, guitar player or impromptu speaker. Now and again dance or exercise groups perform at the small plaza.

The bear sculpture, to be mounted on a wind-toppled spruce, will fit in perfectly with the up-beat spirit of the plaza. People will be able to sit on the windfall alongside the reposing bear, children will be able to pat the animal and touch the salmon held by the bear. Moreover, the bronze bear will add to the lively spirit of the plaza, and indeed, bring it even more life.

Copenhagen has numerous magnificent, heroic statues honoring royalty and statesmen as well as war memorials, but the only statue there that is known worldwide is the "Little Mermaid" statue perched on a rock near the harbor. It has captured the imagination of everyone. I think the Wallen bronze bear will also capture the imagination of Juneauites and visitors alike.

We have the opportunity to express our preference at a meeting to be held early in January. If you can't attend please write a letter with your opinion to Carol Dorner, Board of Commissions, in care of the Office of the Governor, Pouch A, Juneau, 99801.

Nimbus shows weak selection

Dear Editor:

As the lonely dissenting member of the Alaska State Council on the Arts during the Nimbus days, I want to compliment you on your editorial of Dec. 21st.

My protest was against the method and the manner in which the artist was chosen and the elimination of ALL Alaskan artists by the clever phrase "an artist of national reputation." Although Alaska Indian Arts, Inc. has done many fine works of art, we were shut out as "we don't want totem poles" even though the door to the governor's office and the door to the IBM Building in Anchorage showed we could do more than fine totemic art.

The National Endowment convinced the council executive director that it would supply $20,000 if the state would match it. The Art Council was then conned into putting up $10,000 and the Public Works (the Court) the remaining $10,000. Three "nationally known" artists submitted slides of their works, all, almost the same kind of "hard to understand" stuff. Artists like Joe Principone (sp) and Joan Bugbee of Cordova have done great works.

Even when the 17 tons of steel were shipped, it was somehow lost in a Seattle warehouse, rather than have it arrive while the Legislature was still in session.

My last two years on the Council was one which placed Alaska Indian Arts, Inc. on the blacklist and we were written off as a principal grantee. Regulations, most of which didn't exist, were adjusted so that such things as "in kind" assistance could not be used, although it was plainly documented that Alaska Indian Arts, Inc. was being supplied facilities worth over $20,000 a year. Over 5,000 square feet of building, equipment, heat, light, etc. were supplied by this "in-kind" was disallowed.

As long as the elitist concept dominates the Arts Council and the present set-up for selecting the 1 percent public art recipient remains, you and the rest of us are not going to have truly Alaskan artworks.

Sincerely,

Accountability in public art

Legislation proposed by Anchorage Rep. Alyce Hanley could do much to avoid the misunderstandings created by the state's Art in Public Places program.

Currently, 1 percent of the cost of a public building is set aside for artwork. It's a good idea, but needs a little fine-tuning.

Rep. Hanley's bill, which is co-sponsored by 10 other members of the House, may not be the most earth-shaking legislation to come along this year, but it surely would prevent the public from feeling like a victim of its own largesse. Time and again, people find themselves wondering how and why certain pieces of art are chosen for public buildings, be they airports, court buildings or other public areas. Often, a reason for that wonderment is the public is dealt out of the selection process.

What this bill does is mandate that no fewer than three members of the seven-member art selection committee be lay members of the public. It also mandates public hearings on the selection of an artist to do the work.

Further, it requires a plaque or permanent label be installed identifying the artist, the title of the work and the names of the members of the art selection committee.

This bill does two things:

- It involves the public in choosing which artwork it will buy to place at publicly funded buildings. Currently, the public is confronted by artwork – good, bad or indifferent – that is chosen for it, not by it. Then, if the public doesn't like it, certain members of the arts community feel obliged to provide lectures on why the public should like it. The result is many people are plain turned off by art – certainly not the intent of the public art program.
- Second, it provides accountability. Just as accountability is needed in the expenditure of all other public funds, it is needed in public art projects. Providing a plaque with the people responsible for the project provides that accountability.

This bill, HB 607, deserves the consideration of the Alaska Legislature as a means of getting a good program back on track and keeping it there.

Chart from USA TODAY
February 19, 1986

Among the 50 state governments, Alaska ranks first in per capita spending on the arts. The Alaska Legislature indirectly and directly appropriated over $8.00 per Alaskan for art in FY'86 through the 1% for Art program and other arts programs. This is 280% more than Massachusetts, the #2 ranked state spent. Alaska spent more than ten times the 50 state average of 79.6¢ per capita.

State arts grants up 25.2% in fiscal 1986

State legislative appropriations for the arts for fiscal year 1986 were up 25.2% over fiscal year 1985 — the highest increase since 1981 — a recent survey shows. THE NEXT TIME YOU'RE OUT at the Anchorage International Airport, take a minute to look at the art work the state's "1 percent for art" program has paid for with public dollars. The sculpture hanging from the ceiling at the end of the refurbished B Concourse is the work of a Miami, Fla., artist, John Henry, and cost a nifty $80,000. Other artistic attractions in the domestic terminal and their price tags: An untitled prismatic sculpture by Charles Ross of New York City, $130,000; an oil painting, "Welcome to My World," by Alvin Amason, of Kodiak and California, $40,000; an untitled oil painting by Leon Anderson of Anchorage, $19,265; and a functional steel sculpture, "Shoeshine Shop," by Frank McGuire of Warrensville, Ohio, $27,000.

Giving Art a Bad Name

GEORGE F. WILL

The rising sun spreads a rug of light through St. Louis's Gateway Arch and across a less loved artifact 11 blocks away. That object is a "sculpture" called "Twain," named after a Missouri boy who became a master of realism. It covers most of a block and consists of eight panels of rusting steel placed in a formation that resembles a triangle drawn by a quavering hand. "Twain" was perpetrated by Richard Serra, a "postminimalist" entrepreneur who once exhibited, as art, a 97-pound pig in a cage. His arrogance is almost a work of art. He says: "I don't think it is the function of art to be pleasing." He thinks it is the function of the public to give people like him money and space and limitless license. In fine, the public is to pay up and shut up. "Twain" is, in part, your tax dollars at work. The federal government chipped in.

Today there is rising over St. Louis a dark cloud of insurrection, a cloud as impressive as the one that rose over Toledo (Spain, not Ohio) and stirred El Greco, an artist who did not work in rusty metal. Some St. Louisans have seen "Twain" steadily and seen it whole and have seen enough of it. Not since opposition to the Dred Scott decision—Scott's case was tried in a nearby courthouse—has there been such an admirable opposition movement. St. Louisans are hospitable, ready to scale the skies and pluck out stars and strew them at your feet. But when provoked they are as turbulent as the tornadoes that frequent the region. Serra also is finding New Yorkers tiresome. In Manhattan there is a move afoot to junk Serra's "Tilted Arc," 73 tons of rusty steel 12 feet high and stretching 120 feet across the plaza of a federal building. (Yes, more tax dollars.) It is not just an eyesore, it is a nuisance, impeding pedestrians.

Nowhere Is Safe: The natives are restless elsewhere, too. Chicagoans have never been considered among Nature's hamsters—tame—and some of them are up in arms about what they consider graffiti applied to the walls of a library and called a "fresco." In a world gone wonky, nowhere is safe. In Paris, the artist Christo is preparing to wrap the most beautiful Seine bridge, the 16th-century Pont Neuf, in shiny beige nylon, as a "sculpture." This treatment of the bridge is like the treatment of Michelangelo's Pietà at the 1964 World's Fair, where it was illuminated with flickering blue light, presumably to improve it.

Time was when artists wanted to shock the bourgeoisie. Today the bourgeoisie is running around with open wallets, trying to call forth art with cash. But art is not a commodity like pretzels. Strong monetary demand for pretzels increases the supply of pretzel makers. Their products are recognizably pretzels, and the best pretzel makers prosper. The market for art is different because the supply of good art is not similarly elastic. Unless, of course, you suspend all standards. There will be an abundance of fine art if you declare that fine art is anything that anyone calling himself an artist calls fine art. One way to expand the supply of anything is to define it so permissively that limiting standards evaporate and almost anything can be included. But as a 19th-century politician from across the Mississippi River, up in Sangamon County, Ill., once said: If I call a tail a leg, how many legs has a dog got? Five? No, because calling a tail a leg doesn't make it a leg.

> People are trying to call forth art with cash. But art is not a commodity like pretzels.

Such is the docility and gullibility of many city governments and corporations, it is almost dismaying when they decide to commission works of art. Of course, the disproportion between the large demand for art and the small supply of serious artists is not an argument against patronage. Pope Julius II did posterity a favor with his "jobs for the boys" program for artists. His boys included Michelangelo and Raphael. Today, patrons must have considerable prudence and self-confidence when the ratio of charlatans to serious artists is as high as it is.

Some Serra defenders say his First Amendment rights are being trampled. But the issue is not a person's right to "express" his whims in rusty steel. The issue is the public's right not to be saddled with the results forever. Even if the public's hostility were just a whim, so what? Artists who peddle their whims as art, counting on an absence of critical standards, cannot suddenly claim to have standards superior to the public's and incomprehensible to the public. And they cannot hide behind this crashing non sequitur: great innovations in art often have met hostility, therefore whatever provokes hostility must be a great innovation. Joan Mondale says the public should give "Tilted Arc" time to prove its "eternity." Sounds like a long wait.

Deliciously Ironic: Today Philistines often march under the banner of anti-Philistinism. Serra's defenders stigmatize his detractors as a backward mob slow to recognize genius. This is deliciously ironic, considering that abstract art once was defended as "democratic." It was supposed to be art purged of "academicism," art immediately and equally "accessible" to everyone, art "understood" by even the untutored eye. Actually, it is anti-intellectual "art" enveloped by ludicrous intellectualizing.

For example, this is how one critic "understands" Jackson Pollock's canvases covered with drips: "Pollock's strength lies in the emphatic surfaces of his pictures, which it is his concern to maintain and intensify in all that thick, fuliginous flatness . . ." One wishes that critic had reviewed Serra's movie that featured nothing but a hand holding a wad of cloth at arm's length until the arm was exhausted and the cloth dropped. One Serra fan brings his art-Babel to a rolling boil to praise the "savage elegance" of Serra's "resilient" and "insistent" stuff.

The emptiness of postminimalist and other fads of nonrepresentational art has elicited floods of theorizing from a clerisy of critics. They have acquired importance as the assigners of importance to substanceless "art." Theirs is not tiring work. The assigning can be capricious because the critics are not inhibited by the presence of any content in the art they construe. The exegesis of effortless art is effortless. If human beings were dominoes, such critics and the artists they inflate would be double blanks. In their formative years they must have been spanked with rolled-up learned journals of fine arts. How else explain their contempt for mind, and their seeming attempt to give art a bad name?

Reaction mixed to changes in One Percent for Art law

By DIANA BRYSON
Staff Writer

Local reaction to a proposal amending the state's One Percent for Art program is as mixed as the public's response to artwork purchased through that agency.

State law requires that 1 percent of the construction cost of every public building built after June 1975, go to pay for artwork.

Rep. Alyce Hanley, R-Anchorage, is the primary sponsor of two bills that would change that. Hanley wants to cut commissions for art in public places in half, and increase public say in what art pieces are selected. She also wants to post a plaque near the artwork identifying the art and people who selected it, and restrict the program to Alaskan artists.

The selection process and the plaque proposals come in one package, House Bill 607. The other two proposals are listed in House Bill 606.

Dave Nicholls, the visual arts director for the Fairbanks Arts Association, said members of the association's visual arts committee met recently to discuss the bill. In general, he said members of the group support the One Percent for Art program.

"It's a good program. Looking at the bill there was a certain amount of support for using Alaskan artists and there was a certain amount of support for more public involvement in the selection process. Obviously they were dismayed at the amount of money which would be cut."

Nicholls said when it comes down to it, the pair of bills probably would not meet the approval of many local artists. He said while members of the visual arts committee are all for the idea of opening the selection process to the public, they tend not to give blanket support to restricting the program to Alaskans.

Personally, Nicholls would like to see less drastic modifications made in the program so more statewide artists can qualify for commissions. Fairbanks painter Jim Behlke, who testified about the two bills during a statewide teleconference last week, is of the same mind.

According to Behlke, if more commissions were available for artwork done on a small scale, more Alaskan artists could participate in the One Percent program.

"Local artists cannot make proposals frequently because the proposals requested require work which most of us don't do," he said. "And I'm not talking as much about style as I am about scale and format. When I get sent a proposal, it's for something that weighs a ton and goes in front of a building in welded steel."

The painter would like to see more artwork inside buildings instead of those huge, outdoor sculptures which, over the years, have become the One Percent program's trademark. He used the University of Alaska-Fairbanks' most recent art addition, as an example.

Money for the $140,000 sculpture "Cathedral Series VI, Elysian," came from funding designated for three UAF buildings: Duckering, the new addition to the main campus library, and Signers Hall. Elysian was the work of a Florida woman.

"If you walk through these buildings, you'll notice a lot of blank walls. I think they could have spent $60,000 on the sculpture and the rest in the buildings," said Behlke, who donated his large, $3,0.. two-paneled oil painting to the Duckering Building at the request of a dean.

A constituent initially prompted Hanley to introduce the two bills. What started with a request that a plaque identify "One Percent" artwork, developed into the proposals on hand.

"I thought 'That almost seems like a frivolous piece of legislation,' and proceeded from there," said Hanley.

Hanley is aware that her bills likely will gain support from local hire advocates, and that's just fine with her.

"I'm also hearing that instead of a big $100,000 job, the public can enjoy some of the smaller projects Alaskan artists can provide," she said.

"I guess it's been my perception that there are several projects that have been purchased recently with art money that is not creating any kind of appreciation, but are beginning to cause anger among residents," she said.

"I recognize that we're spending millions of dollars on this without much input from the public."

The executive director of the Alaska State Council on the Arts in Anchorage, Christine D'Arcy, thinks that if the proposals become law, they would be harmful, particularly the clause restricting the program to Alaskans.

"I think it's important to have a variety of artwork and I do not favor government dictating cultural values," she said.

D'Arcy estimates 60 percent of the commissions already are given to Alaskan artists.

"My feeling is that the state of Alaska has funds set aside for different programs and no matter what the program is, the state should be trying to make the best investment of its funds, and buying the best that its money can buy, D'Arcy said.

"I think it would be a shame if Alaska took such a parochial view in terms of its public art program."

Hanley disagrees.

"We've had time to absorb and appreciate pieces done by Outside artists," she said. "It's time for Alaskans first, time to start assigning it to Alaskan artists because when we say 'Alaskan artist,' that doesn't mean everybody will be painting a picture of Mount McKinley."

Nimbus gets the boot

Statue put in storage

By The Juneau Empire

Now you see it, now you don't.

State employees today peered out their Capitol and Alaska Court Building windows to watch a crew begin the job of removing Nimbus, a green sculpture placed in the plaza in 1978.

The $40,000 sculpture was ordered replaced by the 13th Alaska Legislature, which passed a resolution saying a war memorial or other piece of art should take its place.

Once uprooted from its cement base, Nimbus will be taken to the Department of Transportation's Switzer Creek area building and stored until a state panel decides where it should be relocated. The cost of removing it is expected to be about $6,000.

The governor-appointed committee met last week to discuss possible replacements for the statue and will have a public meeting in Juneau on Jan. 8 to take testimony.

Among the new pieces of art suggested for the site are a memorial to late Gov. Bill Egan, a war commemorative, a sculpture of a bear by local artist Skip Wallen or a monument to the state's 25th anniversary of statehood.

Other options will be considered at the public meeting in January.

Where to put Nimbus is another question. Among the suggested sites are the downtown or Auke Bay ferry terminals, in front of the Alaska State Museum and at Cope Park along Gold Creek.

Nimbus no more: Eviction started this morning.

Public must be part of its art

The issue of public art seems to be back in the eyes and minds of beholders, prompted by a new, abstract piece of work at the airport.

Some members of the community like it very much. Some don't like it very much. Some wish it were more "real" or more "relevant." Some wish it were more "representational" or more "Alaskan."

An argument could be made that for a piece of public artwork in Juneau to be truly real, relevant, representational and Alaskan, it would require a blinking, high-tech neon sign somewhere in the Capitol flower beds, flashing in alarming colors the minute-by-minute price of a barrel of Prudhoe crude.

Would that be art? Some would say so. Others would no doubt disagree. And that's precisely the point. There will never be a piece of public art that satisfies everyone. For that matter, there will probably never be a piece of privately owned art that pleases everyone who views it. For art, artists and beholders, universal agreement – a last word on what's art, what's bad art, what's good art – would be deadly dull. For artwork, dull is indeed a four-letter word.

Public art, however, particularly those relatively few pieces that are conspicuous in public places, presents a whole set of different issues than privately owned artwork or artwork, say, within a public museum. The issues, by the way, are not confined to Juneau, but are being raised in communities across the country.

Publicly commissioned artwork in public places is the creation of an individual artist, but belongs to the public and becomes part of their world and their lives.

Robert Murray, the sculptor who created the ill-fated "Nimbus," has been quoted as saying that "we cannot have public art by plebiscite." He's correct, even if only for the practical notion that plebiscites on public art would be so unwieldy and possibly so inconclusive that no artwork would ever result.

But that doesn't preclude involving the public to a greater degree in the selection – the crucial steps taken to determine what will belong to the public.

The selection process by the local, state or federal government should involve members from the public, meaning members of the arts community and the population at large. It should, furthermore, allow for public hearings and viewings of proposed pieces, to let artists hear the ideas of the community and give community residents ample opportunity to express themselves.

While the selection process here usually involves a public committee approach, it seems even more of an effort is needed if the community is to consider public artwork as its own, not imposed, but welcomed.

Yet the process also has to allow for artists to be heard, to be given the opportunity to talk about their ideas, why they've chosen a certain theme, or a particular medium, or a specific technique. They also deserve a chance before their work – created in good faith – is dumped upon as somehow coming out of nowhere.

It comes out of somewhere. And somewhere should include a very visible dialogue long before the paintbrush is applied to the palette.

Nimbus: Going but not gone

Nimbus may be out of sight, but some of the questions raised by the sculpture and the public outcry over it should be kept in mind.

Sculptor Robert Murray, interviewed when Nimbus was installed here in 1978, commented that when his artwork is placed in public, "I make my work visible to people who have very closed minds to the whole thing. It's not like a gallery where people come to see art. Some people feel very threatened by the whole experience."

Murray was probably more prophetic than he wanted to be. Many people — at least many vocal people — just don't like Nimbus. Beyond that, however, numerous critics voiced resentment that Nimbus was imposed, it was a stranger, it wasn't really "ours."

"Ours" doesn't have to mean dull like an old warhorse. Public art, abstract or representational, can be lively, humorous, sobering, eccentric or yes, even maddening, and still be "ours."

It might be ours if it grows familiar over time. It might be ours if one of us — an Alaskan or Pacific Northwest artist — creates it. It might be ours if it somehow, some way, depicts something we're somewhat familiar with or that both we and the artist care about.

But all those "ours" factors are elusive, as open to speculation as the question of what art is — ours, theirs or everyone's.

The most obvious and direct way to make sure a community thinks of an artwork as ours is to make sure the selection process is wide open to the public. And by public we mean the local people who will share their home, their community with the work.

A well-publicized invitation for public involvement should start at the beginning, the decision on what specific type of artwork is wanted and where it will go, and carry through all the way to the call for proposals and review of them. Such public participation resulted in the Ed Way statue at Marine Park, which is definitely considered "ours" by many people in town.

No, every piece of public artwork can't be chosen by referendum, just as every controversial political issue doesn't go on the ballot. Someone appointed or elected is going to have to bite the paintbrush and make a final decision, or the debate could rage for the millenium.

Better the public debate rages before the final choice, however, than to drag it on for years after a work is in place, then yank it. The fate of Nimbus — sealed for now — should be seen as a one-time occurrence only, a fluke that taught us a lesson. The sculpture's removal shouldn't be allowed to set a dangerous precedent for what, in the future, could be some pretty capricious decisions to remove public artwork.

One admonition, to indulge a pet peeve. It's hard to sympathize with those who have been invited to speak prior to a decision and instead opt to wait now and condemn later. A Monday Morning Picasso doesn't create much except hot air. And public artwork should be a lot more substantial and lasting than that.

Nimbus, purchased for $40,000 is now lying in a truck and equipment storage yard on the Old Glacier Hwy.

It was removed from its site after several years of public outcry at a cost to the state of $5,000.

Farewell to Nimbus

Nimbus, the artful creation that has graced the front of the Alaska Court Building for nearly six years, today took leave of that location. As workers labored to evacuate that magnificent ode to modern art, a tear no doubt came to the eye of many a Nimbus lover. After all, who in this city hasn't stopped a moment to marvel at its wondrous beauty, its shiny green steel frame?

Alas, Nimbus is bound for a new, albeit temporary, location, a place where it can be better appreciated. The $40,000 Robert Murray sculpture will take up residence where it will be sheltered from the elements. We can think of no better place than the Department of Transportation warehouse at 7 mile Glacier Highway.

But what of the public outcry that is sure to come? The public will inevitably seek — no, demand — the right to view Nimbus. How could the state deny the public the right to see that beautiful work?

We propose that the state DOT set up visiting hours at its warehouse so those lovers of Nimbus may see their cherished objet d'art in all its splendor. Our green friend, who has greeted us at the start of our workday for these many years will be lodged with other, equal works of art — snowplows and truck tires. Perhaps DOT can paint those plows an appropriate color to correspond to Nimbus's green hue. And maybe the tires can be delicately arranged around it in a garden setting.

Soon, we cannot predict when, a committee of those wiser than we will choose a final resting place for our Nimbus.

Wherever shall it be? The Auke Bay ferry terminal, the Alaska State Museum and other locations are vying for the privilege of displaying this masterpiece. Other suggestions have been tendered as well. Channel Sanitation is one of the most popular.

Some people say the role of art is to evoke a response. If that indeed were art's only role, Nimbus has filled it well. But art is more, much more, than presenting viewers with something to cause them to react. After all, people react to car wrecks, too. Does that mean they are art?

Tomorrow, when you venture past that spot along Main Street once occupied by Nimbus, remember all the reactions it evoked. The suggestions that it looked like the bow of a ship after running aground. That it resembled the aftermath of a plane wreck. That it would best be used as an anchor.

Then ponder what it would be like to have a meaningful piece of art there, like a memorial to Gov. Bill Egan, the state's first governor, or to Alaska's war veterans.

Whichever is chosen, it is bound to be an improvement.

'Art' in public places?

COMMENTS

CONTRIBUTING EDITOR

I suspect I'm going to get into trouble with this column ... however, that has never stopped me before. I'il preface by saying that I am not totally unsophisticated.

I appreciate symphony, good poetry, fine wine and other things of the "semi-enlightened" life. I am not down on the arts, nor artists' rights to express themselves.

I am, however, of the persuasion that PURCHASE of art or special efforts to SEE it, are MY option, based upon MY perception of the value of the artform.

I am about to take a potential Art-In-Public-Places process to task, but first some background so you can relate to it, and see I have done some homework.

Art-In-Public-Places, commonly referred to as "1 percent Art," first became Alaskan by State law in 1975. Partly because there was little public construction that qualified in the next several years, little came of it until implementation on buildings constructed beginning in 1980.

The only Municipal/City Ordinance in the State on the subject, Anchorage's, came in 1978 (Chapter 7.40.010 - .080). It also became operative in the 1980 period, most likely given emphasis by ex-Mayor George Sullivan's "Project 80's."

Any time Municipal money is spent on a structure ... even if it's a grant from the State or Feds which is administered by the Muni, and which exceeds $250,000, the Ordinance comes into play.

You can see State & Federal results at the Federal Building, the Sullivan Sports Arena, the Municipal Museum, the ACC Aviation Complex at Merrill and other places.

For broad public acceptance of each of these items, a brief historical look at news stories as each has been unveiled, reveals that they are met with "mixed reviews" at best.

Here in Anchorage, the program is administered by MS MOLLY BJONES, who shared both some history of the program and copies of the current Ordinance and Regulations 7.40.001 - .0013 so I could come to grips with how the program operates, its limits, authorities and jurisdictions.

The ordinance and regulations require that "juries" be selected for qualifying buildings over $1 million, and that they consist of one member each of the Urban Beautification Commission, the Anchorage Arts Advisory Commission, the Project Designer, the User Department and at least one interested local resident (this one also has a member of the Art Selection Committee).

While this does not constitute "ARTS LOADING" by numbers, I'd point out that every member of the panel GETS PAID TO BE THERE, or does so in a planned volunteer program of regular duration, except the PUBLIC MEMBER, whose vote could easily be pivotal.

I also note that the regulations do NOT contain any instructions whatsoever for the following critical areas: a. Investigation and study of the USE of the building; b. Study of the FUNCTION and PURPOSE of the building; c. Study of the HISTORY of the building site and its service area; d. Study of the nature of the BUILDING OCCUPANCY or CONSTITUENCY; e. Study of the proposed vehicular and pedestrian (and Aircraft) traffic flows; f. Determination of the building FOCUS POINT.

In the entire ordinance and implementing regulations, the ONLY review/appeal process noted is the one non-selected (and upset) artists use to appeal selection of the winning artist.

It is to the Mayor. All that aside, I find myself precisely centered in the "mixed review" element of our populace when viewing some of the items placed in the name of art.

I am not qualified to judge the quality of most of it, generally falling back on my sense of whether I like it or not ... much the same as with a new wine or sushi the first time.

I admit that much of what I see in public art forums I find A RIPOFF. That's only MY opinion.

It appears that "artists" have labored long and hard with large, sometimes disgusting colored materials, to create vague things that neither enhance the building, nor draw the passer-by with any desire to learn more about it or art in general.

In other words, for me, many are a big turnoff. Two exceptions are the sculpture in the ACC complex stairway, which I have identified as relating to early, al-beit unsuccessful, flight; and the giant lockwashers in the front yard, appropriate, it would appear, to a Maintenance complex. . .

Many folks with whom I have talked simply ignore the large, obtrusive blobs which generally block snow removal, crowd control and good photographs of the particular structure.

See DESIGNS, Page 13

Designs should follow bldg. theme

I am first to admit that I could learn much about art if I had the time, money and inclination. My questions would be, however, "is it the function of Art in Public Places to thrust 12th generation obscurities down the throats of the masses in some effort to convert them to art appreciation? Are we being given art that is identified, classified and selected for us, the many, by the 'gifted few' so that we may be lifted out of our pig trough of existence in spite of ourselves?"

Let's get this down to specifics, hopefully relating to flying and aircraft: The Public Aviation Facility at Merrill Field is in final design now by McCool-McDonald, Architects.

Design money was a state grant to the Muni, thus the 1 percent requirement. The committee was set up and has met to begin planning how the 1 percent will be used on this one building ($32,000 plus/minus).

The structure (see diagram attached) will be the gateway for many, many people who will either fly in or out of Anchorage, or will gather to view aviation or meet someone who has done one of the above. It is being designed per the Master Plan, as the new "focal point" for the field.

Aviation has a public fascination index higher perhaps even than football! Merrill, and indeed Alaska in general, has a fantastic aviation history.

Because we are still living it, and becomes it is such a fast moving history, we are way, way behind preserving it in photos, art, memorabilia and historical aircraft. Merrill was named for a colorful Anchorage pilot (Russ) who was killed in his plane after taking off from Merrill.

The building is designed to give some impression of flight with its swept back appearance and two large wings. The center glass cylinder will house an historic 1920's vintage restored aircraft.

The walls have many designated locations for photos, art work, displays and dioramas. I anticipate that the many area aviation groups will bring in displays, that perhaps historic films and slides will be available on video monitors.

There is an observation deck on the "air side" for folks to watch planes taxi, takeoff and land — complete with a speaker to listen to the FAA talk to pilots.

There is planning for an aviation theme restaurant/bar for the upper levels, like the famous BLUE MAX or the RED BARON. If that happens, those areas will be decorated like historic aviation facilities as well.

So now comes the Building Art Jury. Though construction money is not yet located for the building, design is under way so the committee must chart the course that the 1 percent will be spent for, and then commission artist(s), make recommendations and direct placement.

There are those close to this development and to aviation

Design follows theme in general and close to the field itself, who see a tremendous opportunity to HAVE THE ART RELATE TO THE BUILDING, THE FIELD AND WHAT IS BEING ATTEMPTED THERE, and not some esoteric blob placed there to somehow broaden the horizons of the great unwashed masses who come there for something else entirely.

The initial meeting was held. The lone public member, aviation history buff Ted Spencer, suggested consideration of expenditure of a portion of the funds on the hanging aircraft, its associated display and tilting.

That was turned down INSTANTLY by the Art leadership. From reading the minutes of the meeting, it appears that the group was then polarized, with "them" and "us." (We're "us"; you know who "them" are!)

One would hope that they would really see the light, and NOT attempt to make this building a shrine to art that has nothing to do with aircraft, history or Merrill Field.

I do not condemn them in advance, though I note the polarization. It will be up to that committee's members to bridge the gaps and come up with a concensus. Let me conclude, however, with a little more information that will delight you: PUBLIC REVIEW AND COMMENT.

When the State or Muni wants to build a road, change zoning, build a building, or other major item, they are required to develop a public input process — they hold hearings, notify adjacent property owners and known interested parties.

In theory, those comments from the public are taken into consideration in final design or decision making processes. If they are not, then the citizenry can approach the next level of authority and bitch about being ignored.

The whole purpose of this exercise is to see that Government, ACTING WITH OUR constituency and, in fact, does what their "boss" wants it to do.

Let me quote the Public Review and Oversight provisions of the Art-In-Public-Places program: ZIP! You got it; if you want to impact how the building will be decorated, you've got to be on that tiny committee.

It's only appeal is for the artists themselves, and not those of us who fund it nor those of us who will be subjected to it or pleased by it in years to come.

There is really only ONE review: The finished product's acceptance in the press AFTER THE MONEY IS SPENT.

Only one other avenue remains: IF you care, if you can make meaningful contributions, either attend their meetings (which must be public) or make written input — or both.

I do not want to condemn anyone in advance, but driving and walking around Anchorage and reading the minutes of the first meeting have prepared me for what may be coming. Hope not!

"derogatory," and "three walruses [illegible]ed in early bathroom vanity." One of the walruses boasted real tusks, which jutted from the center of the canvas, and atop the frame sat a pair of puffins, with a third puffin "flying" in front of the canvas. "I just keep expecting to find a pile of bird doo on the floor," one federal court employee told a Times reporter in 1979.

Amason's present tripartite canvas continues his brash color scheme, showing two salmon with [illegible] ing a foot out from the canvas, chased by a bear splashing multicolored water. A blue fox takes up the left side, and a bald eagle and magpie look on.

Amason flew "Welcome to My World" to Anchorage a week ago to make final adjustments at the Visual Arts Center. He had spent seven months working on it at his Oakland, Calif., studio.

"The people at the airport have responded to Shaindlin's saying 'his daughter could do it,' " said a despairing John Blaine Friday afternoon. "They will take it down on Monday and [illegible] just [illegible] and livid and everything else," Blaine said.

"I have heard of nothing like this," Blaine added. "They are not even giving the piece a moment to find its place there. It's just a knee-jerk response to something new. It's absolutely unwarranted."

According to a Nov. 4, 1979, Times article, Amason is pleased when the public is m[illegible]ved by his work: "If people just pass by and not notice my work, then I've accomplished nothing; it's not a success."

A new One Percent for Art piece titled "Welcome to My World" is scheduled to be removed from its choice spot in Concourse B of Anchorage International Airport on Monday.

According to John Blaine, executive director of the Visual Arts Center, com-his nightly commentary following the 6 p.m. news Thursday on KIMO Channel 13 reportedly caused the removal of Alvin Amason's $40,000 triptych. The 32-foot by 11-foot piece had been installed Fueled by adverse comments from airport employees, Shaindlin's criticism prompted a 1 p.m. Friday meeting at the airport. The news was then conveyed to Blaine by Jim Kulper of the Alaska State Council on the Arts.

This is not the first time that the multicolored, animal-strewn art of Kodiak-born artist Amason has caused local

The painting, which showed three purple walruses adrift in a red and blue sea, was called "an obscene gesture,"

Effect of amendment. — The 1977 amendment substituted "Department of Transportation and Public Facilities" for "Department of Public Works" in paragraphs (2) and (6).

Chapter 27. Art Works in Public Buildings and Facilities.

Section

10. Purpose
20. Art requirements for public buildings and facilities
30. Definitions

Sec. 35.27.010. Purpose. The state recognizes its responsibility to foster culture and the arts and the necessity for the viable development of its artists and craftsmen. The legislature declares it to be a state policy that a portion of appropriations for capital expenditures be set aside for the acquisition of works of art to be used for state buildings and other public facilities. (§ 1 ch 54 SLA 1975)

Legislative history report. — For report on ch. 54, SLA 1975 (CSHB 133 [Finance]), see 1975 Senate Journal, p. 939.

Sec. 35.27.020. Art requirements for public buildings and facilities.

(a) A building or facility constructed after June 30, 1975, or remodeled or renovated after June 30, 1975, shall include works of art, including but not limited to sculptures, paintings, murals or objects relating to Native art.

(b) The department, before preparing plans and specifications for buildings and facilities, shall consult with the Alaska State Council on the Arts regarding the desirability of inclusion of works of art.

(c) At least one percent or, in the case of a rural school facility, at least one-half of one percent of the construction cost of a building or facility approved for construction by the legislature after September 1, 1977, will be reserved for the following purposes: the design, construction, mounting and administration of works of art in a school, office building, court building, vessel of the marine highway system, or other building or facility which is subject to substantial public use.

(d) A building or facility with an estimated construction cost of less than $250,000 is exempt from the requirements of this chapter unless inclusion of works of art in the design and construction of the building or facility is specifically authorized by the department.

(e) The artist who executes these works of art shall be selected by the architect for the department with the approval of the department, after consultation with the Alaska State Council on the Arts and the principal user of the public buildings or facilities.

(f) The artist who executes these works of art in the public schools shall be selected by the superintendent of a school district in which a public school is to be built with the approval of the school board. Should the department find in the best interest of the state that the selection of the artist who executes these works of art by the superintendent may result in a cost overrun to the state or delay of construction, the department shall make the selection of the artist in consultation with the superintendent.

(g) The architect, superintendent, department, and the Alaska State Council on the Arts shall encourage the use of state cultural resources in these art works and the selection of Alaska resident artists for the commission of these art works. (§ 1 ch 54 SLA 1975; am §§ 1, 2 ch 96 SLA 1977; am §§ 1 — 4 ch 176 SLA 1980)

Cross reference. — For the responsibilities of the Alaska State Council on the Arts in the management of the Art in Public Places Fund, see AS 44.27.060.

Effect of amendments. — The 1977 amendment substituted "or, in the case of a rural school facility, at least one-half of one percent of the construction cost" for "of the overall construction cost" in subsection (c) and added subsections (f) and (g).

The 1980 amendment rewrote subsections (a) and (d), substituted "buildings" for "public works" in subsection (b), and in subsection (c), substituted "September 1, 1977" for "the enactment date of this chapter," "a school, office building, court building, vessel of the marine highway system, or other" for "the public," deleted "public" preceding "facility" near the end of the subsection, and added "which is subject to substantial public use" at the end of the subsection.

Sec. 35.27.030. Definitions. In this chapter

(1) "department" means the Department of Transportation and Public Facilities;

(2) "building" or "facility" means a permanent improvement constructed by the department; the term

(A) includes, but is not limited to,

(i) schools, office buildings, and court buildings;

(ii) other buildings which the commissioner determines are designed for substantial public use;

(iii) boats and vessels of the marine highway system;

(iv) transportation facilities which accommodate traveling passengers;

(B) excludes other transportation facilities.

(3) "construction cost" is that cost expended for the actual construction of the facility, exclusive of the costs of land acquisition, site investigation, design services, administrative costs, equipment purchases and any other costs not specifically incurred within the construction contract or contracts awarded for the construction of the facility.

(4) "commissioner" means the commissioner of transportation and public facilities. (§ 1 ch 54 SLA 1975; am §§ 3, 4 ch 96 SLA 1977; am Executive Order No. 39, § 11 (1977); am §§ 5, 6 ch 176 SLA 1980)

Effect of amendments. — The first 1977 amendment inserted "schools, office buildings, court buildings and other facilities which are designed for substantial public use" in paragraph (2) and added paragraph (3).

The second 1977 amendment substituted "Department of Transportation and Public Facilities" for "Department of Public Works" in paragraph (1).

The 1980 amendment rewrote paragraph (2), and added paragraph (4).

Sec. 44.27.060. Art in public places fund. (a) The art in public places fund is established. The council shall manage the fund.

(b) The commissioner of a department responsible for the design and construction of a building or facility shall deposit into the art in public places fund one percent of the construction cost of a building or facility if the building or facility is exempt from the requirements of AS 35.27 and the exemption is because

(1) the estimated construction cost of the building or facility is less than $250,000; or

(2) the building or facility is not designed for substantial public use.

(c) The council may use the money in the art in public places fund

(1) to commission or purchase a work of art which is to be made a permanent part of, or placed on loan in, a building or facility owned or leased by the state which has substantial public use; and

(2) to meet expenses for a commissioned work of art for a building or facility which has substantial public use if the cost of the work of art exceeds the amount reserved under AS 35.27.020(c).

(d) In (c) of this section, "building" or "facility" means

(1) a building or facility of the state, as defined by AS 35.27.030(2), which is designed for and which is subject to substantial public use; and

(2) a building or facility which is leased by the state and subject to substantial public use. (§ 8 ch 176 SLA 1980; am § 97 ch 59 SLA 1982)

Revisor's notes. — Enacted as AS 44.19.942. Renumbered in 1980.

Effect of amendments. — The 1982 amendment substituted "if the building or facility" for "which" in the introductory language of subsection (b).

LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS AGENCY

MEMORANDUM May 5, 1986

SUBJECT: Sectional analysis of SCS CSHB 647(C&RA)

TO: Representative Katie Hurley

FROM: Edward H. Hein EHH
Legislative Counsel

Section 1 states that the legislature's intent in this bill is to ensure the safety of emergency response personnel, permit development of a chemical profile of municipalities, protect the health and safety of state residents and visitors, and inform the public about hazardous materials and wastes.

Sec. 2 requires businesses or government agencies that "handle" hazardous materials or hazardous wastes to post warning placards provided by the division of fire prevention and in accordance with Department of Public Safety regulations. This section also requires the department to adopt the U.S.D.O.T. design for the placards, but allows municipalities that establish hazardous a materials reporting program to use an alternative placard design if approved by the department. Requires the department to adopt regulations for posting the placards and to establish a fee schedule to cover costs of enforcement and of providing placards. Fees collected by the department go in a separate account in the general fund. Defines key terms the same as in sec. 4 of the bill.

Sec. 3 amends AS 29.10.200 so that the reporting and other provisions of AS 29.35 added by this bill apply to home rule municipalities.

Sec. 4 establishes minimum requirements for municipalities that establish hazardous materials and hazardous wastes reporting programs. Sec. 29.35.500 requires businesses and government agencies to submit inventories to the municipality on a form provided by the division of fire prevention, and specifies what information must be contained in the inventory. The section specifies the minimum quantities of materials and wastes that must be reported in the inventories. These quantities can be reduced by the division of fire prevention or by a municipality. The section also specifies a 30-day limit for submitting the report and provides for amending the inventory if there are additions or significant changes in the materials or wastes handled. This section allows municipalities to require businesses and government agencies to submit OSHA Material Safety Data Sheets and to impose requirements outside of municipal boundaries under certain circumstances.

Sec. 29.35.510 provides for municipal inspections and penalties.

Sec. 29.35.520 allows municipalities to impose fees for processing inventories and administering inspections.

Sec. 29.35.530 requires the division of fire prevention to provide inventory forms and summaries or lists of materials and wastes that must be reported. This section also allows the division and the Departments of Environmental Conservation, Health and Social Services, and Labor to obtain copies of inventories submitted to municipalities and to provide educational materials.

Sec. 29.35.540 requires municipalities to make information collected under this bill readily available to the public.

Sec. 29.35.550 makes the provisions of section 4 of the bill applicable to home rule and general law municipalities.

Sec. 29.35.560 provides that the establishment of a municipal hazardous materials and hazardous waste reporting program does not increase the municipalities liability for damages resulting from hazardous materials or hazardous waste.

Sec. 29.35.590 defines various terms used in the bill. A key term, "handles," is defined sc as to exempt the reporting of hazardous materials or hazardous wastes that are in transit and already covered by federal DOT regulations.

Sec. 5 provides a January 1, 1987 effective date.

COMMUNITY-RIGHT-TO-KNOW
FACT SHEET HB 647

Literally thousands of pounds of hazardous substances are shipped annually to communities across Alaska from Ketchikan to Kotzebue via air, rail, barge and road transportation. As Alaska industrializes, the likelihood of dangerous incidents involving hazardous chemicals increases. In 1984, the Alaska Health Project documented over 1300 accidents involving hazardous materials. The recent chlorine episode in Kodiak, the hydrochloric spill in Fairbanks and the Moose Pass situation underscore this fact.

With basic information about hazardous chemicals in their communities, firefighters, health professionals and the public are better able to take preventive measures against the dangers posed to health and safety.

HB 647 gives Alaskans the right to know the amount, location and unique dangers of hazardous substances being used and stored in their communities. As drafted, the bill does not require municipalities to enact ordinances but rather provides them with the authority and uniform guidance should they elect to do so. HB 647 also establishes a statewide placarding system to clearly mark where hazardous chemicals are being used and stored.

HB 647 eases compliance for businesses and government agencies that might otherwise have to contend with varying reporting and posting requirements in different localities.

HB 647 does not include transportation - this issue is being addressed in separate legislation. It also does not include the everyday person who has a few containers of gas and paint in the garage - the bill excludes quantities that do not pose significant public danger or threaten the safety of emergency responders.

There is no fiscal impact to the state associated with HB 647 due to the imposition of fees by the Fire Marshal's Office to cover the costs of enforcement and of providing placards. If the residents in a community elect to enact a Community Right to Know program, costs associated with such a program may be offset by the imposition of fees.

The Fire Marshal's Office in the Department of Public Safety has been designated the coordinating agency in this legislation because of its contact with fire halls and public safety officers across the state.

With the passage of HB 647, Alaska will join 12 other states from New Jersey to Oregon to enact Community-Right-To-Know Laws.

Unless the names and hazardous properties of chemicals in a community are publicly available, government officials charged with protecting property and public health are left virtually blindfolded waiting for a crises to occur. The actual cost of this ignorance can actually be much higher than the price of implementing a local Community-Right-To-Know Law.

May 1, 1986

SUPPORT

SCSCSHB 647 (C&RA) - "An Act establishing requirements for warning placards; establishing requirements and limiting liability for municipal reporting programs for hazardous materials and hazardous waste; and providing for an effective date."

The Department of Public Safety supports SCSCSHB 647 (C&RA).

The bill will provide a common framework for placarding structures housing hazardous materials and wastes which will alert emergency services responders and the public of potential dangers associated with its contents.

Municipalities which establish programs for the reporting of hazardous materials and wastes will receive reports of these on a standard inventory form developed by the Division of Fire Prevention and furnished to the handlers of hazardous materials and wastes.

The bill establishes a uniform approach to allow the recognition and identification of places handling hazardous materials and wastes.

ASSUMPTIONS

The magnitude of the hazardous materials and wastes handled in Alaska is unknown, but estimated to be in the thousands.

The Department of Environmental Conservation estimates that there are between 5,000 and 10,000 hazardous waste producers.

The program will be in position to start up on January 1, 1987.

Persons requesting placards will be charged $10.00 each, in order to recover costs associated with the program.

A 5% inflation factor was used for succeeding years.

Bill No. Committee Substitute for House Bill 647 (State Affairs)

Date March 27, 1986

Title "An Act establishing requirements for warning placards and for municipal reporting programs for hazardous materials and hazardous waste."

Contact: Eileen Plate 465-2700
Richard Arab 465-4856

Committee Substitute for House Bill 647 provides for the placarding of places where hazardous materials and hazardous wastes are located; and further provides that municipalities may establish "community right-to-know" programs with respect to hazardous materials and wastes.

The Department of Labor currently requires employers to provide information to their workers on toxic and hazardous substances to which they may be exposed. However, there is presently no requirement that such toxic and hazardous substances be placarded so that emergency response agencies are aware of the existence of such toxic and hazardous materials. This information could be vital to emergency response personnel because such materials are often volatile and can cause fires to spread faster than anticipated. The placarding requirements of this bill should, therefore, assist emergency responsive personnel in protecting both the public and property.

Further, the opportunity provided in the bill for municipalities to establish hazardous materials and wastes reporting and inspection programs would enable municipalities to inventory such materials and thereby focus action plans, including the proper training and equipping of emergency response personnel, on specific hazardous materials and substances in their jurisdictions.

The Department of Labor appropriately would not have an active role in the implementation of Committee Substitute for House Bill 647. However, because it does afford an opportunity for additional protection for emergency response workers, the department supports its proposed provisions.

The educational and technical assistance that the Department of Labor would provide in designing warning placards, as outlined in proposed Section 18.70.310(b), and in furnishing information on hazardous materials as outlined in proposed Section AS 29.35.530, would not have a fiscal impact on the Department.

POSITION PAPER/Department of Health & Social Services

POSITION PAPER (AMENDED)

HOUSE BILL 647

"An Act requiring Municipalities to establish reporting and inspections programs for hazardous materials and hazardous waste."

This bill requires municipalities to establish hazardous materials reporting and inspection programs to ensure the safety of individuals who may come in contact with the materials. Under the terms of HB 647, individuals who utilize such materials must annually submit a detailed inventory and notify the municipality within 24 hours any changes in the status of the inventory. In addition, such individuals must place warning placards to notify the public of the presents of the materials.

Position

The Department of Health and Social Services supports HB 647 and its intent to protect the general public and inform emergency response personnel regarding the type and location of hazardous materials in a community. The right of public awareness to the presence of hazardous materials is an effective means of minimizing the dangers. Implementation of this bill will be the responsibility of the Department of Public Safety, Division of Fire Prevention and local municipalities. The department will work with the responsible agencies to provide assistance in coordinating with emergency medical services personnel and other appropriate health care providers. The Department of Health and Social Services feels the development of guidelines by the Department of Public Safety relating to placarding will be a positive step in developing a uniform statewide system and has our endorsement.

RESOLUTION OF THE ALASKA MUNICIPAL LEAGUE

RESOLUTION NO. 86-09

A RESOLUTION SUPPORTING STATEWIDE
HAZARDOUS MATERIAL DISCLOSURE LEGISLATION.

WHEREAS, the handling, storage, transportation, use, processing, and disposal of hazardous materials and hazardous waste occurs in all communities in Alaska, and

WHEREAS, the potential impacts of accidents associated with hazardous materials and hazardous wastes can have devastating impacts on the public health and the environment, and

WHEREAS, knowledge of the types of hazardous materials and hazardous wastes are critical and central to a community's ability to recognize potentially dangerous situations, and

WHEREAS, firefighters, police officers and other public safety and medical professionals often lack the information necessary to respond quickly and safely to emergencies involving hazardous materials and hazardous waste, and

WHEREAS, the public has the right to know what hazardous materials and hazardous wastes are in their community;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the Alaska Municipal League supports the adoption of state enabling legislation to allow local governments to establish a Hazardous Materials Disclosure (Community Right-to-Know) Program. Such a Hazardous Materials Disclosure law should address minimum program requirements for a municipality, including:

a. Notification

b. Placarding

c. Transportation Routing

d. Transportation requirements for selected materials

e. Emergency Coordination Procedures

SUBJECT: HB 647 - Hazardous Waste Reporting and Inspection

The Alaska Municipal League supports the concept of HB 647 as another piece of the legislation needed to address a critical and growing threat to the people who live, work and visit in our communities; however, without a financial commitment by the State to fund additional mandates on local government, the mandatory "shall" language referring to municipal action should be changed to "may". The current language appears to place the mandate on municipalities to set up a potentially expensive reporting mechanism. Instead, the language should allow local option by those communities able to implement such a program. The mandatory language requiring the "handler" to report the information should remain. With such a change, the AML supports the program, and appreciates the work of the sponsors of this and other hazardous waste legislation this year. From the attached resolutions debated and adopted by the AML in Fairbanks in November, the Committee can see that hazardous waste and substance issue is a significant one for municipalities.

In addition to the resolutions attached, the following policy language appears on page 8 of the AML 1986 Policy Statement:

"The League supports legislation which would require producers, shippers, distributors, and commercial and industrial users to submit to all affected municipal governments, the Standard Material Safety Data Sheet on all toxic material physical agents being shipped to or through, or stored, manufactured, utilized, produced as a by-prduct , or otherwise found at any time, on the property or rights-or-way of any enterprise or site within the municipal boundaries."

This legislation gives the legislative intent and statutory language needed for the municipalities and the State to work together to begin developing and implementing a "community right to know" program. Many municipalities are faced with problems presented by our advanced, industrialized and often complex society. HB 674 begins to address the problem by allowing information to be collected and posted on the storage and use of hazardous wastes and substances. The legislation is only a part of the solution because we have not adequately address hazardous wastes and substances clean-up, transportation and disposal disposal. Several other bills are before the legislature this session which do attempt to begin addressing these other problems.

I want to reiterate that the solution to the problems presented by hazardous materials in our communities is not for the federal and state governments to mandate additional responsibilities on local governments. Effective laws are part of the solution; individual and corporate responsibility is another part; and, finally, money, whether from fees and penalties on the generator or from society as a whole in the form of taxes.

One final concern in relation to money that I would request the committee address in reviewing this and other legislation is the adequacy of training funds and programs to adequately prepare local emergency response personnel. Whether it is to be provided by the Department of Environmentla Conservation, the Department of Public Safety, Divivsion of Fire Prevention, or the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs, Division of Emergency Affairs, training in emergency response and clean-up needs to be provided statewide.

Again, the AML is in support of HB 647 with permissive rather than mandatory statute language.

Resolution Passed by the Alaska State Medical Association and the Anchorage Medical Society 1985

SUBJECT: COMMUNITY RIGHT-TO-KNOW

WHEREAS, hundreds of thousands of gallons of hazardous substances are released into Alaskan air, lands and water by hundreds of documented industrial and transportation accidents each year (1); and

WHEREAS, residents and entire communities may be exposed to these accidentally released hazardous sustances and physical agents as a result of industrial and transportation accidental release of hazardous sustances or physical agents; and

WHEREAS, several states and municipalities have adopted or are considering for adoption community right-to-know legislation including New Jersey, Cincinnati, San Diego, New York, Connecticut, and Massachussetts (2); Therefore be it

RESOLVED, that the Alaska State Medical Association supports the establishment of statewide and local community right-to-know legislation with at least the following elements:

a. Mandatory reporting by employers in the form of a standard material safety data sheet (MSDS) to a public agency such as the health department or fire department of all toxic material physical agents which may be stored, manufactured, utilized, produced as a by product, transported to or from, or otherwise found at any time on the property or right of way of any enterprise or site; and

b. Full access by the general public, health care providers, and emergency responders to this public information; and

c. An associated educational program for employers, the general public health care providers, emergency responders, and public health professionals and officials; and

ADVOCATING COMMUNITY RIGHT-TO-KNOW LEGISLATION

The Alaska Public Health Association:

Noting that hundreds of thousands of gallons of hazardous substances are released into Alaskan air, lands and water by hundreds of documented industrial and transportation accidents each year [1]; and

Recalling that several states and municipalities have adopted or are considering for adoption community right-to-know legislation, including New Jersey, Cincinnati, San Diego, New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts [2]; and

Remembering that ALPHA and the national organization APHA have already gone on record as supporting the principle of right-to-know legislation [3]; therefore

Advocates, endorses, and supports the establishment of both statewide and/or local community legislation with at least the following elements:

a. Mandatory reporting by employers in the form of a standard material safety data sheet (MSDS) to a public agency such as the health department or fire department of all toxic materials and physical agents which may be stored, manufactured, utilized, produced as a by product, transported to or from, or otherwise found at any time on the property or right of way of any enterprise or site; and

b. Full access by the general public, health care providers, and emergency responders to this public information; and

HB. 647

Presented by

League of Women Voters of Alaska

March 20, 1986

The League of Women Voters is a nationally based organization that has state and local grassroot organizations.. Positions are arrived at by consensus of the grassroots members. Issues to be addressed are determined by consensus and the substantive focus is on good government process and sound public policy.

50,000 chemicals have been created since 1940 The derived products are integrated into our lifestyles and have enhanced our quality of life. The problem we must resolve is how public policy makers can promote accountability for toxic products demanded by the multitudinous needs of our society. A more critical aspect of the cost benefit discussion is how will our policy makers protect the health of citizens and minimize the detrimental loss of human resources who might be victims of accidental exposure. The incidence of accidental exposure is skyrocketing nationally; the consequence is a quiet revolution in the health care community which is forced to play "catch up " in curing exposure victims. Ironically increased incidence of exposure is providing human "guinea pigs" , a pathological record based on the tragic sagas of citizens who have lost health and life.

Nationally public policy makers are seeking solutions that are relatively inexpensive and which minimize onerous regulation. Community Right to Know statutes which insure the availability of critical information in the time of crisis is a widely accepted move toward accountability. HB647 has a sound framework similar to law enacted in other states; Alaskan lawmakers would be undertaking policy that has a legal track record.

The League of Women Voters finds one serious concern with the proposed legislation. Communities should be required to comply with the proposed legislation. Case in point are incidents around the state best exemplified by the 1984 fire which destroyed the water treatment plant in Emmonak, Alaska. Local governmental authorities needed quick access to technical information for determining emergency measures be taken to protect the populace. Despite the ignition of many chemicals which often creates synergistic effects, local residents were not evacuated from the scene. In fact many citizens watched the fire within close proximity. The consequence of future ill health from breathing chemical by-products may never be related to watching the treatment plant burn.

A second area of concern is the question of whether the hazardous materials list cited in the legislation provides the most comprehensive list of chemicals. We would recommend the inclusion of any comparably hazardous chemical listed under the Toxic Substances Control Act and Federal Insecticide, Fugicide and Rodenticide Act if they are not addressed under the Federal Department of Transportation list.

Your willingness to address this public policy problem is commendable. Thank you for the opportunity to testify. We are willing to provide additional documentation.

Testimony on House Bill 647

Presented By

Alaska Health Project

March 12, 1986

Alaska Health Project (AHP) is a private non-profit organization dedicated to providing information and education about hazardous materials on the job and in the community. We appreciate the opportunity to testify in support of House Bill 647, the so called "community right to know bill"

Now, more than ever, hazardous materials management has become a highly charged community issue drawing the attention of community planners and decisions-makers.

Access to information about hazardous materials is central to the development of local hazardous materials management programs. HB 647 provides communities with the mechanism for accessing such information. All Alaskan communities should be required to develop right to know programs. Specifically, HB 647:

* Establishes a workable framework for development of local community right to know programs.

* Prevents conflicting local ordinances by requiring uniform program elements.

The bill needs strengthening in the area of public access to hazardous materials information. While the intent is to allow for such access no provisions have been included in the current version of the legislation.

There Is Alaskan Support For Community Right To Know Programs

* In 1985, the Alaska Municipal League passed a resolution supporting adoption of state enabling legislation to allow local governments to develop CRTK programs.

* A 1983 survey conducted by Hellenthal & Associates shows that over 93% of 500 randomly selected Anchorage residents support the creation of a community right to know law.

* The Anchorage Hazardous Waste Task Force, a multi-representational group of business, labor, health, and citizen interests, recently drafted a local CRTK ordinance (1986). Many of the elements of this ordinance are incorporated into HB 647.

There Is Precedence For The Bill

There have been a number of hazardous materials incidents in Alaska impacting communities and the health and safety of emergency responders. The recent situation in Moose Pass is underscores this fact.

Perhaps best surmizing all of these incidents is a statement by the Fairbanks Hazardous Materials Commission upon investigating the hydrochloric acid spill that occurred in the city in 1983.

> " The fact that the Fairbanks North Star Borough has not had a serious hazardous materials incident resulting in loss of life or environmental quality damage is largely a matter of luck and the activities of individual agencies working on their own to address preceived needs within their own domains."

Clearly it's time to take the "luck" out of hazardous materials planning in Fairbanks and elsewhere in the state. Literally thousands of pounds of hazardous materials are shipped annually to Alaskan ports via air, rail, barge, and road transportation. These ports include both urban and rural Alaska including Nome, Kotzebue, Dillingham, Whittier, and others. Some of the materials shipped such as chlorine, hydrochloric acid, and amonia could quite possibly require community evacuation if accidentally released. Other materials include chemcials such as toluene, and xylene which, at certain concentrations, are considered priority pollutants under the Clean Water Act.

Communities need the guidance and structure provided by HB 647. The public is deserving of this information. Firefighters and emergency responders are long overdue for this vital information in order to protect themselves and the community. Alaska Health Project urges the Alaska legislature to join other Alaskans who who support passage of House Bill 647.

We are available to provide documentation of hazardous materials incidents in Alaska and information on hazardous materials shipped into Alaskan ports. Thank you.

SOLID WASTE SERVICES DEPARTMENT

Representative Peter Goll
House Community & Regional Affairs Committee
P.O. Box V

Dear Representative Goll:

The Municipality of Anchorage has reviewed HB 647 requiring municipalities to establish reporting and inspection programs for hazardous materials and wastes (i.e. Community Right-to-Know program). The Municipality supports the bill as drafted with only a few minor exceptions.

The substance of the bill is consistent with a Community Right-to-Know ordinance now being considered in Anchorage. As a result, we foresee no conflicts between the proposed Anchorage program and the program envisioned in HB 647, provided the Department of Public Safety works closely with us in developing the reporting forms, placarding system, etc. In fact, in developing the Anchorage Community Right-to-Know ordinance many of these issues have already been extensively investigated and by working with the Municipality, the Department of Public Safety can potentially save much time and effort in implementing the statewide program.

The concept of statewide hazardous materials disclosure legislation was supported by the Alaska Municipal League in Resolution No. 85-12. House Bill 647 addresses all the elements recommended for a statewide program with the exception of transportation routing and transportation requirements for hazardous materials and wastes.

Even though Anchorage has been developing an ordinance to provide the type of information required by HB 647, there is a great deal of importance for a consistent statewide program. Otherwise, a business handling hazardous materials may face a myriad of vastly different local programs if each municipality independently adopts a community right-to-know program. House Bill 647 will establish a workable framework for a consistent statewide program.

One of the few concerns we have with the bill as drafted is the requirement that every municipality "shall" establish a hazardous materials inspection and reporting program. In draft legislative language the Municipality had previously submitted, we had proposed that such a program be discretionary. We recommend that the word "may" be substituted for "shall". While it may be true that most municipalities should have a program, it cannot be assumed it is necessary in all cases. Municipalities should be given the choice as to whether this program is a priority in their community.

The only other concern with the bill is in the area of public access to information submitted on hazardous materials and wastes. Provisions should be added to the bill to make it clear that the public can obtain any information on the types of hazardous materials and wastes at a particular location.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on HB 647.

Sincerely,

Jim Sweeney

Dear ~~Representative~~ Katie Hurley:

The Fairbanks North Star Borough has reviewed HB 647, which addresses local reporting and inspection programs for hazardous materials and hazardous waste. We support the concept of the legislation. However, we feel that the bill should not require municipalities to enact these programs, but rather allow local governments to do so if such programs are desired. The mandatory nature of the bill, as written, would require all municipalities in the State to conduct these programs, even though most municipalities have neither the expertise nor the money and many may not wish to do so.

Therefore, we would suggest that the mandatory "shall" used in subsections 29.35.500(a,b,c,d and f) should be replaced with the word "may". The Borough would strongly support a bill which included these revisions and I urge you to lend your support to such a substitute.

Sincerely,

Juanita

Testimony on HB 647 Community Right to Know
By Bill Slayton, Alaska Environmental Lobby

On behalf of our 20 member groups, the Alaska Environmental Lobby commends Representative Hurley and co-sponsors for introducing HB 647. Alaska is in the process of deploying a tough arsenal of hazardous material laws and regulations. HB 647 stresses the vital important need for communities to have access to up to date and accurate information about hazardous materials stored and used within their boundaries.

Less than a month ago, an incident near Moose Pass indicated how important such information is to a community. According to the Anchorage Daily News, innaccurate information about the indentity of the chemicals in the tanker made it impossible for emergency workers to do anything but clear the area and hope for the best. However, residents lived with the noxious mixture for a whole night after they made their initial calls for help. What if the tanker had been carrying a more highly toxic chemical? What if the tank car had exploded, and lit up the two nearbye propane tanks? As it is, the exposed families sufferred nose bleeds, vomiting, and now have to worry about possible long-term health effects to their children.

These people had a right to know that their neighborhood was periodically being used as a storage ground for tanker cars of noxious chemicals. The emergency response personel had a right to know what risks were involved working with the tanker. HB 647 recognizes this right, requiring those who use and store hazardous materials to submit accurate information about type, amount, and location of those materials. With accurate information about the chemical in the tanker, families might have been evacuated more quickly. Emergency response personel might have been able to work with the spill with greater certainty about what was going to happen.

Kodiak clear of chlorine

Leaking tank towed to sea

Daily News

The Associated Press

KODIAK — A four-block industrial area on Kodiak's waterfront was reopened to the public Saturday after a leaking chlorine tank was put on a barge and towed out to sea.

Kodiak policeman Michael Andre said a copper tube was inserted into the tank to allow the chlorine to escape into the water where it would dissipate. He said the tank would be left offshore until the chlorine was gone.

No injuries were reported and the evacuation Friday afternoon was a precautionary measure while officials tried to pump the poisonous chlorine from the leaking tank to a sound one, said Sgt. Tom Culbertson.

When that was unsuccessful, the barge was taken about 2½ miles offshore where it wouldn't pose a threat, said Lon White of the harbormaster's office. The Coast Guard established a safety zone with a 1-mile radius around the barge and ordered all vessels to stay out of the area, he said.

The pressurized liquid chlorine, used as a refrigerant, was on a dock next to the Kodiak King Crab Cannery.

The tank was damaged Thursday and started to leak, Culbertson said. The immediate area around the tank was cleared of people Thursday, and police evacuated the larger area starting around 3:30 p.m. Friday, Culbertson said.

No homes were evacuated. The area has mostly industrial and commercial establishments, he said.

Study finds skills lacking for response to toxic spills

By LINDA WERFELMAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Many police and firefighters do not know how to handle accidents involving transportation of hazardous materials, and the nation lacks standards to teach them, congressional researchers said Monday.

A report by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment said finding an effective way to train police, generally the first to arrive at an accident scene, is "the most pressing national need in emergency response."

Training efforts are uneven, the report said, with local authorities in major metropolitan areas often well equipped to handle accidents.

"However, most first responders in smaller urban or rural areas have not been trained to deal with hazardous materials, despite many existing training programs," the researchers said in a summary of their findings.

"Moreover, no national standards for training programs are currently in place, leading to the independent development of different training programs, some of which are inadequate," they added. "National guidelines or training standards are needed to ensure adequate training."

In many cases, local governments need financial assistance for enforcement and emergency response training and planning, the report said. It suggested the states or federal government pay, or that cooperative programs with industry or user fees might provide the funding.

Safety information included with between one-quarter and one-half of the shipments is incorrect, the report said, and shipping papers are sometimes incomplete or unavailable.

"Emergency crews must assess the risks of the hazardous material and make decisions on how to respond based on information that may or may not be accurate," the researchers said.

Informational placards should clearly state the nature of the hazardous material, they said, and how to respond in case of an accident.

The study found gasoline and petroleum products – t most frequently transport hazardous materials — a involved in the most ac dents. They also account f more injuries and more dar age than other hazardous su stances.

Study: Officials unprepared for waste accidents

by David Goeller
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Three-fourths of the nation's police and firemen are inadequately trained to respond to accidents involving transportation of hazardous materials, a new congressional study says.

And even if a trained team reaches the scene of a ruptured tank truck, improper labeling of the vehicle's contents can produce a wrong, dangerous response, the Office of Technology Assessment said in a study released today.

OTA quoted state officials as saying that from 25 percent to 50 percent of the identification placards required on hazardous material shipments are incorrect and that shipping documents "are sometimes incomplete or inaccessible."

"Emergency crews must assess the risks of the hazardous material and make decisions on how to respond based on information that may or may not be accurate," said OTA, a nonpartisan congressional agency.

"The wrong response to a hazardous material endangers both emergency personnel and the neighboring communities," said the study, which urged adoption of federal training and response standards to replace a mishmash of state requirements.

Asked why so many placards are incorrect, Edith Page, who directed the study, said: "In some cases it's ignorance. In some cases it's carelessness."

'Three-quarters of the first responders are not adequately trained to deal with hazardous substances.'
— Edith Page, director of OTA study

OTA said the most pressing need is to develop better ways of training safety personnel to handle accidents involving the 500,000 daily shipments of hazardous materials on U.S. highways, rail lines and waterways.

"Three-quarters of the first responders are not adequately trained to deal with hazardous substances," Page told a news briefing.

She said that a joke among response personnel is that you bring tennis shoes and binoculars to a toxic or nuclear material spill — using the shoes to quickly get a safe distance away and the binoculars to read the placard.

"Then you call for expert help," Page said. "This is often said in jest, but there's a strong element of truth in it."

OTA said that while some states and metropolitan areas have good response programs, "most first responders in smaller urban and rural areas have not been trained to deal with hazardous materials, despite many existing training programs."

"No national standards for training programs are currently in place, leading to the independent development of different training programs, some of which are inadequate," the study said.

Although it did not specifically urge more federal spending, OTA said continued support for state enforcement programs "is important, since federal inspection forces are shrinking due to budget constraints."

OTA recommended better training and a national license for operators of vehicles carrying hazardous substances in an effort to reduce the average of 11,412 accidents the Transportation Department says occurred yearly between 1973 and 1983.

In most states, Page said, a truck driver needs no special license for hazardous cargoes. "The nephew or son of the owner can drive a gasoline truck," she said.

Page said OTA doesn't trust Transportation Department figures indicating that the incidence of accidents involving hazardous materials is decreasing.

"The data collected is so poor we don't know whether things are getting better or worse."

Bill No. SCS for CS for HB 647 (C&RA)

Date May 6, 1986

Title "An Act establishing requirements for warning placards; and establishing requirements and limiting liability for municipal reporting programs for hazardous materials and hazardous waste.

Contact: Eileen Plate 465-2700
Richard Arab 465-4856

Senate Committee Substitute for Committee Substitute for House Bill No. 647 (C&RA) provides for the placarding of places where hazardous materials and hazardous wastes are located; and further provides that municipalities may establish "community right-to-know" programs with respect to hazardous materials and wastes.

The Department of Labor currently requires employers to provide information to their workers on toxic and hazardous substances to which they may be exposed. However, there is presently no requirement that such toxic and hazardous substances be placarded so that emergency response agencies are aware of the existence of such toxic and hazardous materials. This information could be vital to emergency response personnel because such materials are often volatile and can cause fires to spread faster than anticipated. The placarding requirements of this bill should, therefore, assist emergency response personnel in protecting both the public and property.

Further, the opportunity provided in the bill for municipalities to establish hazardous materials and wastes reporting and inspection programs would enable municipalities to inventory such materials and thereby focus action plans, including the proper training and equipping of emergency response personnel, on specific hazardous materials and substances in their jurisdictions.

The Department of Labor appropriately would not have an active role in the implementation of this bill. However, because it does afford an opportunity for additional protection for emergency response workers, the department supports its proposed provisions.

The assistance that the Department of Labor would provide in furnishing information on hazardous materials, as outlined in proposed Section AS 29.35.530, would not have a fiscal impact on the department.

For Bill/Resolution No. SCSCSHB 647 (C&RA)

ASSUMPTIONS

The magnitude of the hazardous materials and wastes handled in Alaska is unknown, but estimated to be in the thousands.

The Department of Environmental Conservation estimates that there are between 5,000 and 10,000 hazardous waste producers.

The program will be in position to start up on January 1, 1987.

Persons requesting placards will be charged $10.00 each, in order to recover costs associated with the program.

A 5% inflation factor was used for succeeding years.

SUPPORT

SCSCSHB 647 (C&RA) - "An Act establishing requirements for warning placards; establishing requirements and limiting liability for municipal reporting programs for hazardous materials and hazardous waste; and providing for an effective date."

The Department of Public Safety supports SCSCSHB 647 (C&RA).

The bill will provide a common framework for placarding structures housing hazardous materials and wastes which will alert emergency services responders and the public of potential dangers associated with its contents.

Municipalities which establish programs for the reporting of hazardous materials and wastes will receive reports of these on a standard inventory form developed by the Division of Fire Prevention and furnished to the handlers of hazardous materials and wastes.

The bill establishes a uniform approach to allow the recognition and identification of places handling hazardous materials and wastes.

SUBJECT: Title change for concurrent resolution (SCSHCR 58(State Affairs))

TO: Senator Mitch Abood, Chairman
Senate State Affairs Committee

FROM: Teresa B. Cramer
Legislative Counsel

You have asked whether the change to the title made by SCSHCR 58(State Affairs) requires the adoption of a concurrent resolution waiving the Uniform Rules.

It is my opinion that the rules prohibiting the second house from changing the title of a bill after the bill is passed by the house of origin do not apply to concurrent resolutions. Uniform Rules 24(c), 35, 41, and 42, addressing the title change question, each apply specifically to bills and do not mention resolutions. Rule 49(a)(3) sets out the method for adopting a concurrent resolution and does not require the formalities used in adopting a bill. Because the rules dealing with title changes specifically apply to bills and because a concurrent resolution is not treated like a bill under the Uniform Rules, the rules dealing with title changes do not apply to concurrent resolutions.

Although it is not necessary to waive the rules before the second house may amend the title of a concurrent resolution, in at least one instance this session the Senate has chosen to introduce a resolution to do so. See SCR 40, relating to HCR 9.

To avoid any confusion should the issue arise in the future, it may be helpful to note that a joint resolution is ". . . treated in all respects as a bill . . ." under Uniform Rule 49(a)(5), so the rules dealing with title changes do apply to joint resolutions.

SILVER HAIRED LEGISLATURE

A MODEL FOR SENIOR LEGISLATIVE ADVOCACY

INTRODUCTION

This publication is intended to convey two messages. One, the Silver Haired Legislature is an advocacy strategy by older people which has proven successful in the passage of state legislation. Second, the process of conducting a model session is described in detail so that others can replicate it at state or local levels.

In the six years the Missouri Office on Aging has funded the Silver Haired Legislature many changes have occurred to make the event proceed more efficiently and become more effective in the passage of Silver Haired bills. By following this guide, other states may avoid some organizational problems and, as a consequence, more quickly reap the benefits of this unique event.

This manual is divided into sections with headings above each topic so readers can quickly locate the information they desire.

The appendix contains forms used by the Missouri Silver Haired Legislature and the NRTA/AARP Joint State Legislative Committees. The bibliography should prove useful to those interested in aging legislative advocacy and in model state statutes. It should also demonstrate the relative paucity of written materials and research in this area. Certainly, the field is more active than one would conclude from the extent of information which is available.

Missourians are justifiably proud of the record of the Silve Haired Legislature. The program, with assistance from other groups, has led to the passage of at least three of its five priority bills in each of the past three years. Having pass the "show me" test, older Missourians are eager to share wha they have experienced and learned.

LEGISLATIVE ADVOCACY AND THE AGING

The growth of legislative advocacy by the elderly began slow and really achieved its first major advance with the enactmer of the Older Americans Act of 1965. The act accelerated the elderly's identification of themselves as a minority group. Unlike most social or political movements, forces other than the aging themselves were largely responsible for the development of the aging movement. For example, although so aging groups existed at the time, a social movement rather t an aging movement gained the passage of the Social Security Act of 1935. Older persons lacked the sense of group identi and cohesiveness necessary for such a movement. Indeed, retirement itself was virtually unknown to most of them.

With the enactment of the Social Security program more peopl were able to retire and thus help the growth of aging organizations. County councils on aging, senior citizens centers and similar organizations became the spawning ground for the development of aging consciousness. The development of an aging movement and legislative advocacy became possibl as elders gained group identity. One could compare this wit the growth of black pride which sprang from the early days o the civil rights movement. However, the civil rights movement received more of its strength from within.

It is apparent that the aging movement is now becoming a phenomenon of self-development which receives a large share of energy from the aging. Even now, however, professionals in aging and outside forces continue to provide an impetus to the movement.

As a result of the manner in which advocacy has evolved, professionals in aging have experienced a recent shift of their roles. Initially, their activities were oriented toward working for the aging. The increased identity and activities of older Americans have led professionals to take direction from the aging. This shift is healthy and necessary, but has not been readily accepted by some professionals nor, in some cases, by the aging. While the authors hesitate to define words used in this manual, the use of the term "professional" must not be construed to class the aging as non-professional. Rather, the term is applied to persons employed in aging agencies and programs.

A concurrent event which has influenced the structure of present day advocacy has been the increase of grass-roots lobbying. This represents a shift of lobbying strength from professional lobbyists to citizen action. The power and effectiveness of grass-roots lobbying can immediately be recognized by reading advertisements from oil, utility, tobacco, medical and other powerful lobby groups which exhort readers to write to members of Congress about a specific problem or issue. These advertisements recognize the growing awareness of the potential power within the voting public.

It should be noted that this shift is a moderate one, but one which bears recognition and observation. Even the slow reacting Congress has begun discussing which lobbying laws may be imposed on the grass-roots lobby.

As one combines these two events, the development of aging identity and grass-roots lobbying with future population trends, one may predict rather interesting prospects for the future. It has been well documented that the aging population is increasing in number as well as in percentage of the population. We also are aware that the future will bring improvements in health and a better educated older population. This suggests that there will be not only a larger population, but one which is also more concerned and involved in social and legislative issues than are the aging today. Organizations should plan activities which anticipate this increase in the aging lobby. As part of those plans, it will be important for those organizations to provide a framework in which older adults may function cohesively.

It is appropriate at this point to mention the phenomenon of the elderly backlash. This is the growing negative reaction by the younger population to special programs and legislation for the retired persons. This backlash may become a major problem if it grows, particularly if it extends to lawmakers and to the aging themselves. Signs of this may be seen in the reaction of employed persons to increased contributions for Social Security. Ignoring the fact that a large share of Social Security financing does not go to retired persons, workers are questioning how much of the financial burden they should bear. In order to avoid this backlash, the silver lobby must not lose sight of the overall impact of their legislative objectives upon society. If this point is ignored, the backlash could undermine even the most modest efforts.

For the first time in the history of aging organizations, a coalition of national aging groups was formed in 1978 for the purpose of orchestrating mutual legislative objectives. The Silver Haired model offers a similar opportunity at the state level and is also a framework to promote conscientious legislative advocacy. The reader is encouraged to explore numerous applications of this model. For example, municipalities and area agencies on aging have expressed interest in replicating Silver Hair in a Silver Haired City or County Council. Through such a council, older persons would be given an opportunity to have an impact on policy and programming at the local level.

THE PURPOSE OF THE SILVER HAIRED LEGISLATURE

The Missouri Silver Haired Legislature is a three day model legislative session conducted annually in the fall. At this time seniors from all over Missouri come to the state capitol to present and debate legislation which affects the lives of elder Missourians.

The objectives of the Silver Haired Legislature are to inform seniors about the legislative process through actual involvement in it and to serve as a forum in which seniors from diverse interests and backgrounds can reach agreement on priority bills which they will support in Missouri's General Assembly. A major reason for the recognition of the Silver Haired Legislature as a legitimate voice for older Missourians is that it represents a large number of people from different economic groups, organizations, interests and ethnic backgrounds. Seniors who represent the National Retired Teachers Association, American Association of Retired Persons, Gray Panthers, area agency on aging advisory councils and boards meet and come to agreement on the bills they endorse.

Although individual aging organizations are free to pursue their own priorities, there always has been general acceptance of the legislation passed by Silver Hair. The program also provides a legislative voice to retired persons who do not belong to membership groups or belong to groups that do not have lobbying functions. State units on aging are particularly appropriate sponsors of a Silver Haired Legislature because of their advocacy role. Because they tend to be impartial they also can bring various organizations together without threat to their autonomy. Over the years, the reputation and esteem of the Silver Haired Legislature has grown because of its legitimacy. Many State Representatives and Senators now vie to sponsor bills that carry the title of "Silver Haired Priority."

CONTINUATION OF FISCAL NOTE ANALYSIS

for Bill/Resolution No. HCR 58

SUBJECT OF PROPOSED BILL:

HCR 58 requests the Older Alaskans Commission to develop recommendations for the first session of the Fifteenth Alaska Legislature regarding legislation necessary to empower the Older Alaskans Commission to collect funds to support an Alaska Senior Legislature; call a 1987 Alaska Senior Legislature; and report proceedings of the Senior Legislature to the second session of the Fifteenth Alaska Legislature.

SUMMARY/EXPLANATION OF INTENT:

The Older Alaskans Commission currently has the statutory requirement to provide educational programs for senior citizens and to advocate on their behalf. This resolution calls upon the Commission to focus such efforts on the development of an Alaska Senior Legislature. These Legislatures, also known as Silver Haired Legislatures, have been successfully carried out in other states. The first such legislature was held in the State of Missouri in 1973.

This Resolution recognizes the critical need to develop solutions to the problems of aging and the ability of the State's elders to provide those solutions.

ANALYSIS:

The fiscal note is zero for fiscal year 1987. The Resolution requests the Older Alaskans Commission to develop recommendations during FY 87 for legislation necessary to enable the Commission to raise funds to support an Alaska Senior Legislature. This will require the Commission to develop preliminary cost estimates, research the availability of foundation and other resources for private funds, and to determine what statutory limitations may exist as to the Commission's authority to obtain such funds. These activities are compatible with current administrative duties of the Commission. Therefore, they may be accomplished with no additional funding if the Commission's FY '87 budget is funded at the requested level.

The fiscal note for 1988 and beyond cannot be determined at this time. However, the resolution directs the Commission to sustain an Alaska Senior Legislature without state appropriations. General Funds are shown as zero. It will be necessary for the Legislature to approve the Commission's receipt of "Other" funds beginning in FY '88 for the purpose of sustaining the cost of the Legislature.

It may also be possible to obtain Federal Funds for this program. The required expenditures and non-State funding will be included in the Commission's FY '88 budget.

Bob Berry of your office called us requesting our review of this resolution; asking that we comment on any substantial increase in risk or exposure to the state's risk management program.

Based on the limited information of the resolution as proposed, we do not anticipate any measurable increase in risk or related cost to the state's self insurance program. Re: HCR 58 Alaska senior legislature

Dear Representative Goll:

You have inquired whether added insurance liability would result from a senior legislature held at the capitol under HCR 58 and whether HCR 58 can empower the Older Alaskans Commission to collect and hold in trust private funds for the purpose of conducting the senior legislature. We believe that the state's liability coverage contemplates use of the capitol building for uses authorized by the legislature such as model legislatures and youth programs such as Close Up and is adequate to cover use of the capitol by the senior legislature. The concurrent resolution cannot itself empower the Older Alaskans Commission to collect and hold private funds in trust. A concurrent resolution only expresses the will, wish, view or decisions of the legislature, speaking concurrently.

Please let us know if you need further advice in this matter.

Very truly yours,

MEMORANDUM August 26, 1985

SUBJECT: Initiative petition regarding legislative salaries (Work Order No. 14-1355)

TO: Senator Mitch Abood
Chairman, Legislative Salary Commission

FROM: Teresa B. Cramer
Legislative Counsel

You have asked several questions regarding the initiative petition relating to the compensation for state legislators.

1. Is the initiative an appropriation and therefore an improper subject for an initiative?

Article XI, Section 7, of the constitution of the State of Alaska prohibits the use of initiatives to make or repeal appropriations. The Alaska Supreme Court has recognized that generally appropriations may be defined as

> The setting aside from the public revenue of a certain sum of money for a specified object, in such manner that the executive officers of the government are authorized to use that money, and no more, for that object, and no other. Thomas v. Rosen, 569 P2d 793 (1977) at 796. (Citations omitted.)

If the legislative compensation initiative withdrew a sum of money from the general fund then it would be an appropriation and prohibited by the constitution. However, the initiative merely sets the level of a legislator's salary if an appropriation bill is enacted. The initiative does not authorize expenditures and therefore is not an appropriation.

2. If the initiative petition is adopted, when does it take effect and when can the legislature amend it?

The state constitution provides that following an election, the lieutenant governor shall certify the results of the election. An initiated law becomes effective ninety days after the lieutenant governor's certification. The legislature may not repeal an initiated law for a period of two years after its effective date. There are no time restrictions on the power of the legislature to amend an initiated law. Article XI, Section 6.

This raises a question concerning the distinction between amending or repealing an initiated law. In Warren v. Thomas, 568 P.2d 400 (1977), the court considered whether legislative amendments to AS 39.50, the conflict of interest law which was enacted by initiative, were so substantial as to constitute a repeal of the initiative. The court held that although there were considerable language changes made by the amendments, they did not rise to the level of a legislative repeal. The court, citing Warren v. Boucher, 543 P.2d 731 (1975), stated:

> The central issue in the case at bar is whether the legislature has exceeded that broad power (to amend an initiative) by passing an amendment which so vitiates the initiative as to "constitute its repeal." Id at 737. Warren argues that the changes are so drastic that they make a mockery of the law, that the trial court erred in concluding the legislation was merely "housekeeping," and that the amendments to AS 39.50 amount to a repeal of the law. We disagree. "(A)n amendment of an act operates as a repeal of its provisions to the extent that they are materially changed by, and rendered repugnant to, the amendatory act." Meyers v. Board of Sup'rs of Los Angeles County, 110 Cal.App.2d 623, 243 P.2d 38, 42 (1952) . . .; The implied repeal of an act is disfavored and will be limited to that which is necessary to carry out the intent of the legislature. (Citations omitted). In the case at bar, one section and two subsections were expressly repealed in 1975 when the legislature amended the initiated law. Sec. 26, ch. 25, SLA 1975.
> Other sections were impliedly repealed by virtue of inconsistent amendatory provisions. However, this does not necessarily mean that the act as a whole was repealed. When AS 39.50 was amended certain of its provisions or portions thereof were repealed and reenacted > in a modified form. Where it is reasonable to do so, these provisions are considered to be a continuation of the original law which is to be construed with amendments. (Citations omitted.)

> Of course there remains the question whether the amendments so emasculate the law that it is effectively repealed. We conclude that they do not. There are considerable language changes, but these clarify and render the law more precise. The fines for violations of the law have been reduced but the penalties are still significant. See AS 39.50.060(a) and AS 39.50.070. Finally, the amended law still imposes substantial disclosure requirements on public officials and effectuates the intent of the electorate that those in a position of public trust be held to a high standard of financial disclosure. Id at 403.

If the legislative compensation initiative is adopted, the legislature may amend it at any time but must wait two years before substantially changing it. The question of whether a change acts as an amendment or as a repeal of the initiated law would turn on how drastic the change was when considered in the context of the initiative as a whole. Since the initiative in question is itself a fairly short, straightforward document, it leaves less room for amendment than did the more complicated campaign financing initiative which was the basis of the Thomas and Boucher cases.

3. If the legislature enacts legislation establishing a commission to set legislative compensation before the initiative election, what effect will that have on the initiative petition?

Article XI, section 4 of the Alaska Constitution states that

> If, before the election (on an initiative), substantially the same measure has been enacted, the petition is void.

The question, then, is whether legislation implementing a compensation commission is substantially the same as the initiative. The initiative is straightforward. It reinstates the provisions for legislative salaries and per diem that the legislature changed in 1983. Section 1 reenacts provisions for payment of per diem; section 2 reduces legislative salaries from range 22 to range 10; and section 3 requires the reporting of payments to legislators for salaries, per diem and additional allowances.

Creation of a legislative compensation commission would not have an effect "substantially the same as" the enactment of the initiative petition. The commission would presumably be given authority to determine the appropriate level of legislative salaries and allowances.

In Warren v. Boucher, 543 P.2d 731, (1975), the Alaska Supreme Court found that an initiative regarding campaign financing was substantially the same as an act that the legislature passed in the session following the filing of the petition. The court said

> If in the main the legislative act achieves the same general purpose as the initiative, if the legislative act accomplishes that purpose by means or systems which are fairly comparable, then substantial similarity exists. It is not necessary that the two measures correspond in minor particulars, or even as to all major features, if the subject matter is necessarily complex or if it requires comprehensive treatment. The broader the reach of the subject matter, the more latitude must be allowed the legislature to vary from the particular features of the initiative. (Emphasis added) Id at 736.

Boucher was decided by a 3 - 2 majority, with a strong dissent finding that the measures were not substantially similar.

In contrast, the intent of the initiative here is to reduce legislator's salaries to the 1983 level. An act establishing a compensation commission would not intend the same result necessarily. The two measures are dissimilar and therefore the initiative would still be placed before the voters for their consideration.

4. What provisions in the initiative could be changed in legislation adopted next session without removing the legislation from being "substantially similar" to the initiative?

Since the initiative is uncomplicated, very few changes could be made to its provisions to retain "substantial similarity." The legislature could certainly make changes to the language to conform the style to the drafting manual and also could make minor changes (such as adding to subsection (d) of section 1 that in no case could a legislator receive more than the appropriate per diem rate for expenses) or to section 3's system of reporting (changing dates, for example, or the organization of the report) as long as the basic information sought by the initiative continued to be included.

A change of the salary range set in section 2 of the initiative would be riskier. The section could not be less complicated. While the court will consider the entire package of the initiative, clearly section 2 is the centerpiece and evaluation of the complexity and of the intended substance must begin with it. Even a change of one salary range might be found unjustified.

5. If the legislature enacts legislation "substantially similar" to the initiative, thereby removing the initiative from the ballot, what restrictions are there on subsequent legislation concerning legislative compensation.

If the initiative does not pass, either because the legislature enacts measures found by the lieutenant governor to be substantially similar to the subject of the initiative or because the voters decide against the merits of the initiative, then the legislature may act in this subject area without regard to the proposed initiative. There would be no restrictions on subsequent legislation.

If I can be of further assistance please advise.

Enclosed are the draft Committee Substitutes you requested. In SCS CSHJR 54, the committee requested one change that the draft does not include. On page 1, line 24, the committee changed "may" to "shall." The existing clause reads:

> the legislature may by law provide that the committee may establish and revise the compensation of those state officers.

The amended clause would have read:

> the legislature shall by law provide that the committee may establish ...

The effect of the proposed change is to require that the legislature enact legislation for the committee to "establish and revise the compensation of those state officers." This appears to be directly contrary to the committee's intent as reflected in the minutes to the meeting of March 20, 1986. The goal of the amendment, as stated at tape one, side one, number 602, was to ensure > that the legislature should retain the procedures by law to provide that the commission may establish and revise the compensation of other state officers.

I have therefore not made this amendment.

In incorporating CSHB 48 (the legislative salary bill) into SCS CSHB 454 (the state officers compensation commission bill), I removed the dates from the body of the statutes and made the sections effective January 19, 1987. HB 454 has effective dates already so there is nothing to be gained by placing the date in the body of the statute. This change has no substantive effect.

If I may be of further assistance, please advise.

Enclosed is the draft Committee Substitute you requested. Because the scope of the commission's authority has been narrowed to setting the compensation of legislators only, it would be appropriate to change the commission's name to Commission on Compensation of Legislators.

You asked whether it would be appropriate to draft a proposed amendment that asked the voters both whether to amend the constitution and which officers should be under the commission's authority. In my opinion, an amendment that proposed alternatives for the voters to choose between at the same time that they considered whether or not to adopt the amendment in any form would probably be found ineffective to amend the Alaska Constitution under Article XIII, Section 1.

An alternative would be to offer two different amendments to the voters, one that created a compensation commission to consider legislative salaries only, and a second that created a compensation commission to consider the compensation of a list of state officers. This could lead to difficulties if both amendments were adopted by the voters.

A third approach would be to redraft the resolution your committee is now considering to require that the commission address the compensation of legislators and to permit the legislature to include other state officers within the jurisdiction of the commission by law. This is the approach I recommend.

If I may be of further assistance, please advise.

The Honorable Senator Mitch Abood
Chairman, Senate State Affairs Committee
Alaska State Legislature
P.O. Box V

Subject: House Joint Resolution No. 60

Dear Senator Abood:

This letter is being written on behalf of the Baha'i community in Alaska. As you may know, 1986 was designated as the International Year of Peace by the United Nations.

Currently there is a House Joint Resolution, HJR 60 (copy enclosed), which was referred to your committee on February 25, 1986. This resolution resolves that the Alaska Legislature, among other actions, recognizes and endorses the International Year of Peace.

Carol Horos has informed me that of this date HJR 60 has not been calendared, which causes some concern to the Baha'i community with only 19 days left in this session. We believe the matter is important to many Alaskans and request that HJR 60 be calendared and acted on in sufficient time to enable the resolution to proceed to the Senate floor.

I have taken this opportunity to enclose with this letter a copy of a message from the supreme international administrative body of the Baha'i Faith - The Universal House of Justice, Haifa, Israel - to the people of the world, entitled "The Promise of World Peace." Since October 1985, we have met and discussed this message with most of the leaders in the state including 48 of your colleagues in the Alaska State Legislature. We have found all of these individuals receptive and concerned about the issue of world peace.

Thank you for your consideration of this request and any assistance you may be able to provide in this matter. We would appreciate notification of your action on this request. Our local business address is P.O. Box 708, Juneau, Alaska 99802.

RESOLUTION NO. 58

TITLE: Promise of World Peace

WHEREAS, The Alaska Native Brotherhood and the Alaska Native Sisterhood are the organized bodies which were formed in 1912 to represent the Alaska native peoples, and throughout its eminent history have attained human rights, and maintained the dignity for its peoples, such as attaining the status of citizenship through Congressional Act, the right to vote through Congressional Act, the right to attend any school through Congressional Act, and the passage of the Alaska Native Land Claims Settlement Act through Congressional Act, and

WHEREAS, The Alaska Native Brotherhood and the Alaska Native Sisterhood have resolved that world peace is in the highest interest of the native peoples of Alaska and is the attainable goal toward which we, with the body of mankind, are striving, and

WHEREAS, The abolition of war is not simply a matter of signing treaties and protocols, but is a complex task requiring a new level of commitment to resolving issues not customarily associated with peace, and

WHEREAS, The idea that collective security and enduring world peace predicated solely upon political agreements is an unrealistic expectation based on human history in this century alone, and

RESOLUTION OF THE CITY AND BOROUGH OF JUNEAU, ALASKA

Serial No. 1155

A RESOLUTION RECOGNIZING THE INTERNATIONAL YEAR OF PEACE IN JUNEAU.

WHEREAS, the United Nations has designated 1986 as the International Year of Peace, and

WHEREAS, peace is a universal hope, dream, and goal toward which all people of good will can work, and

WHEREAS, the concept of peace must be born anew in each heart to effect change in defensive and belligerent attitudes and policies toward which nationalist governments are inclined, and

WHEREAS, the growing wellspring of grassroots support for peace by people everywhere is demonstrated daily by small and great acts of individual commitment to ending the barriers to peace--hunger, poverty, racial discrimination, religious hatred, and ignorance, and

WHEREAS, the people of Juneau have acted in personal ways and as a community, to further the cause of peace: through giving money to aid the starving of Ethopia, the earthquake victims of Mexico, and many other humanitarian efforts; in advancing racial harmony and honoring the man--Martin Luther King, Jr.--a champion of nonviolence, who raised the consciousness of nation and the world to the terrible injustice of racial discrimination; through developing the New Year's Eve Space Bridge to Moscow to build communication and understanding between our peoples; through efforts of Juneau's diverse religious communities and such groups as World Beyond War, Alaskans for World Peace, and other peace advocates; and cultural sharing through the upcoming goodwill tour to the Soviet Union of the Alaska Performing Artists for Peace, and

WHEREAS, the alternative to peace has become unthinkable with the development of nuclear weapons that can virtually annihilate humankind;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE ASSEMBLY OF THE CITY AND BOROUGH OF JUNEAU, ALASKA:

1. That it recognizes and supports the International Year of Peace and calls on the people of the community to build a new commitment to global peace.

IN THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE - SECOND SESSION

Requesting the United States Congress to establish advanced all-weather satellite coverage of North Pacific waters.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

WHEREAS remote sensing of the ocean is playing an increasingly important role in fishery research, fish harvesting, and marine safety along the Pacific Coast of the United States and Canada; and

WHEREAS satellite sensors give a unique view of the ocean surface and provide extensive and detailed images of sea surface temperature, color, mixed layer depth, currents, and wave action; and

WHEREAS the oceanic measurements taken by the satellite are used in determining variations in ocean conditions that play key roles in causing fluctuations in stocks of fishes and their vulnerability to harvesting; and

WHEREAS this timely information on the changing ocean, rather than on average ocean conditions, is necessary to understand and eventually predict the effects of the marine environment on fish populations; and

WHEREAS up-to-date weather information can provide the fishing fleet accurate weather data that will increase the safety and efficiency of fish harvesting; and

WHEREAS the use of satellite sensors combined with conventional data collection techniques provides a powerful tool toward ensuring the wise use of living marine resources; and

WHEREAS these clues can lead the United States Coast Guard and other enforcement agencies to the precise locations where harmful interception of North American fish are taking place; and

WHEREAS several manufacturers have developed oceanographic color displays designed to receive signals from a satellite and to display, in color, an absolute surface temperature distribution for a large water area; and

WHEREAS in order to provide this information to fishermen, enforcement agencies, and research facilities, receiving stations need to be established in Alaska to monitor the North Pacific region; and

WHEREAS an all-weather satellite is needed to provide this detailed information because it is not dependent on cloud cover conditions; and

WHEREAS the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has abandoned the Gilmore Creek Satellite Receiving Station and this station can be used by the National Weather Service to receive satellite data in Alaska;

BE IT RESOLVED that the Alaska State Legislature finds establishment of all-weather satellite and receiving stations would benefit the fishermen, marine researchers, enforcement agents, and merchant mariners of the United States and Alaska; and be it

FURTHER RESOLVED that the Alaska State Legislature respectfully requests the United States Congress to establish an all-weather monitoring satellite for the waters of the North Pacific Ocean; and be it

Re: HJR 67 requesting the United States Congress to establish advanced all-weather satellite coverage of North Pacific waters

Please consider scheduling a hearing on CSHJR 67 (State Affairs). Attached please find a fiscal note and bill analysis preparded by the department of Fish and Game, and other backup material.

Analysis

The resolution requests congress to establish and fund two elements of a weather satellite system:

1) Gilmore Creek Recieving station (25 miles N.E. of Fairbanks) was abandoned by NASA on October 1st of 1984. Transfer to NOAA of this facility would greatly enhanse the National Weather Service's ability to gather weather data.

2) Fund the placement of a color scanner and other all-weather equipment on the next available satellite with a view of the North Pacific.

The recieving station, and the satellite equipment form a powerful weather forcasting system, providing data on: ocean surface temperature, the depth of the mixed layer of water, ocean color, wind/current direction and speed, and wave hieghts. Computer analysis can produce a chart highlighting the areas where fish are likly to be caught.

My interest in this information comes from an enforcement angle. Data from this satellite system will show us where the foreign fishing fleets are fishing and perhaps targeting salmon of north american orgin. If we know where they are likly to be fishing the Coast Guard or other enforcement agency can consentrate their limited resources to that specific area.

The Gilmore Creek Receiving station can easily used by the Weather Service with little capital outlay. In fact, the data linc from Gilmore Creek to the weather computer in Anchorage is already in place. The station can receive data from foreign satellites like France's ERS-1 thus exanding the amount of weather information availible in Alaska.

The Hawaii legislature has passed a similar resolution (attached). Other back-up information has been provided to your staff.

WHEREAS, the oceanic measurements taken by the satellite are used in determining variations in ocean conditions which play key roles in causing fluctuations in stocks of fishes and in their vulnerability to harvesting; and

WHEREAS, this information on the changing ocean, rather than on average ocean conditions, is necessary to understand and eventually predict the effects of the marine environment on fish populations; and

WHEREAS, the use of satellite sensors combined with conventional data collection techniques provide a powerful tool toward ensuring the wise use of living marine resources; and

WHEREAS, the Japan Radio Company Limited has developed an oceanographic color display designed to receive signals from the satellite and to display in color an absolute surface temperature distribution for a large water area; and

WHEREAS, in order to provide this information to fishermen, receiving stations need to be established in Hawaii, Guam and Midway to monitor the entire Pacific region; now, therefore,

S.R. NO.

BE IT RESOLVED by the Senate of the Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Hawaii, Regular Session of 1986, that the Legislature requests that the United States Congress establish satellite remote sensing receiving stations in Hawaii, Guam and Midway to assist the fisheries industry in locating stocks of fish for harvesting; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that certified copies of this Resolution be transmitted to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the President of the United States Senate, to each member of Hawaii's congressional delegation, to Guam's congressional delegate, and to the Secretary of the Navy.

The Honorable Ben Grussendorf
Speaker of the House
Alaska State Legislature
P.O. Box V
Juneau, AK 99811

Dear Representative Grussendorf:

Under the authority of art. III, sec. 18, of the Alaska Constitution, I am transmitting a resolution regarding Alaska's special relationship with Heilongjiang Province of the People's Republic of China. You will recall last year's Legislative Resolve No. 2 on the friendship and cooperation between Heilongjiang and Alaska. I am also forwarding to you a translation of a letter that I received from Chen Lei, former governor of Heilongjiang Province, along with a copy of the envelope bearing Governor Chen's calligraphy.

As you remember, Governor Chen visited Alaska in February of 1985, at which time he and I signed an agreement establishing a special friendship relationship between the State of Alaska and Heilongjiang Province. Chen Lei retired from his position as governor in 1985 and is presently the chairman of the Provincial Advisory Council for Heilongjiang Province.

Governor Chen is a renowned poet and calligrapher. The letter is written in classical format and poetic style as you can see from the accompanying translation by Linda Dwyer. I have also been informed that Governor Chen has composed a series of poems about Alaska drawn from the experiences of his historic visit. The poetry is still in manuscript form.

I ask the Alaska State Legislature to join with me in extending warm greetings to Governor Chen. Furthermore, I urge that we join together in requesting Governor Chen to provide Alaska with a copy of his poetry so that it can be translated into English, to be more readily understood by the people of this country.

Sincerely,

Bill Sheffield
Governor

January 24, 1986

To Our Esteemed Governor Sheffield:

"Ten thousand li apart are the boundaries of the ocean. Long the time since receiving a letter." Thinking of you at this time, I hope that you are in good health and experiencing good fortune.

Presently, Mr. Coti from your esteemed state visited Harbin and once again we spent some time together. This caused me to instantly recall the time last year that I visited your esteemed state and received the boundless hospitality and cordial reception afforded by you and the friends in your esteemed state. In my eyes, I see again and again the beautiful scenery of your honorable state. From the occasion in which we established the sister state relationship, our two states have passed an entire year.

I extend to you my most sincere greetings, respectfully wish that the friendly exchange between our two states develops continuously.

I hope that in this new year, you experience outstanding achievements in your career and success in ten thousand endeavors.

Chen Lei

Commentary: The first two lines of the above letter are a poetic introduction which sets the mood for what is to follow. Here, the reference to both great distance and the sense of long separation is one that has a long tradition in China. It is used between good friends who are parted to convey the strength of the friendship.
